EDITORIAL

Happy New Year, Readers

The Herald Editors wish our readers a Happy New Year, with abounding peace and prosperity.

It is our hope and determination to make the Herald better than ever, and in reaching this determination we do it in appreciation of the fine support which has been given us by our readers. On this support we are still depending.

So we enter the New Year with hope and courage. Happy New Year, readers!

FREDERICK M. SMITH,
For the Editorial Staff.

New Year Greetings to the Saints

As we enter upon the year 1930 there doubtless come to every Latter Day Saint, besides the usual New Year meditations, additional thoughts which cluster about our own history; for 1930 marks the completion of one hundred years of progress. And very naturally there is, consciously or unconsciously, an effort made to evaluate the progress made in relation to our objectives.

On the whole, we have reasons to be proud of our record, and the progress made is pleasing. Yet when we envisage the work still to be done, we see that our objectives challenge us to greater effort than ever before.

The Presidency extends to the whole church membership wishes for a prosperous and happy New Year. This means wishing that the opportunity for service will present itself to every member to work for the church and its advancement, for no happiness is greater than that which comes from service.

I can not but feel that before us lies our greatest opportunity as a church. Let us move into that field with promptness and stout hearts, each determined to do his best for God and his church.

A happy and prosperous New Year to all Saints.

"Know Your Own Church"

Historical Programs for Branches

The centennial year of church organization is to be celebrated by the general church in a fitting way at the General Conference. Why should not the local churches, as well, celebrate? Why not extend the celebration through the year? Especial attention might thus be given to a review of our church history and a reevaluation of our doctrines and ideals.

It is suggested that the branches devote one evening each month, possibly during the last week of each month, to a historical program. This program may be rendered either on Sunday night, or during the week, as thought best.

It is our intention to print each month a program outline that may be helpful to local branch officers in making out their programs. Our outline may be amplified or curtailed or changed. It will be merely suggestive.

It is intended that each month there shall appear in Vision a short play under the general heading of "Conversations." These "Conversations," deal with prominent events in church history, and may be made a part of the historical program each month. It is suggested that branch officers interest their young people in the work of producing these programs; and that all be encouraged to study church history during the year to fill in the gaps necessarily left between the programs as published. "Know your own church," is a good slogan.

Program Outline for January

Hymn: "My God, how wonderful Thou art."

Invocation.

Music.

Reading: Doctrine and Covenants, section 11.

Ten-minute paper: Biography of Joseph Smith the Prophet.

Hymn: "We thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

Rendition of the play: "The birth of the Prophet." (For the text to this play, or "Conversation," see Vision for January.) Short sermon or address: "The Nineteenth Century Prophet. The place and work of Joseph Smith in the Restoration Movement."

Hymn: "Doxology."

Benediction.

Local churches equipped with projectors may obtain slides to use with their historical addresses and papers from month to month if they will make their needs known in advance to the Graphic Arts Department. Address C. Ed. Miller, Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

We are sure that if the programs suggested are consistently carried out from month to month in the various branches, great good will result. Interest your young people in this endeavor. Urge the older members to review their church history with the aid of these meetings. Give the programs a missionary impetus, as well; invite your neighbors out to get acquainted with our church history and message. Know your own church. Help others to know your church.

Elder Wellington D. Ellis's Death

In the news columns of the Herald for December 11, page 1514, is a short account of the passing of another of the honored aged ministers of the church, Wellington D. Ellis. Brother Ellis was a native of Canada, born at Beauford October 12, 1858. Elder J. J. Cornish baptized him at Reed City, Michigan, September 15, 1893, and on August 15, 1894, ordained him an elder, in which office he was very active, soon becoming a missionary for the church under General Conference appointment. On April 19, 1900, he was ordained to the office of seventy by Heman C. Smith, and in this office he continued to do missionary work until 1923, when he was placed upon the honor roll of superannuated ministers. His death occurred on November 23, 1929, and he was buried at South Boardman, Michigan. By his death the church loses another devoted character and officer.

Work Begins on Centennial Pageant

The White Masque Players have in hand the production of the 1930 Centennial Pageant. This organization feels the responsibility it has assumed, and finds it necessary to commence now to select the cast of more than one thousand characters.

In the news columns will be found a terse write-up of the pageant, from which one gathers the impression that if he lives near enough to Independence and can spare any time to help in its production, he should volunteer his service. The best way to do this is to obtain one of the cards being used by the White Masque Players (you may address a request

MINISTERIAL PROBLEMS

The Discouraged Minister

In the Christian Century for November 27, 1929, Frank Fitt quotes Doctor C. B. McAfee as follows:

"If anything can be done to put new assurance in the hearts of ministers of the gospel, clearing from their voices the note of pessimism, steadying them in the swirl of new knowledge and supposed knowledge, until they front the world every Sunday with a great thrill of the coming conquest of the Master whom they preach, that would be a great service. . . . There can be no mistaking a sense of bewilderment among many brethren, a loss of footing which shows in many ways. . . . Nor can there be any mistaking the restlessness of the ministry and the shortening of the pastoral term. Once in a while one hears of a pastorate that continued too long, but it is distressing to observe how brief are the pastorates in most localities. In addition, many pastors would welcome an opportunity to remove, long before one comes. . . ."

In his comments on this statement, Reverend Fitt presents some stimulating and helpful suggestions, such suggestions that we are justified in quoting at some length as follows:

"It goes without saying that such a mood is a most subtle danger to the church. When a minister is torn asunder in his inner life by misgivings, hesitation, bewilderment, and a sense of defeat, the elements that make for his purposeful service are lowered below the level of effectiveness. If that unhappy mood continues for any length of time it will not fail to transfer itself to the congregation to which he ministers. Anything, therefore, which can contribute to the restoration of steadiness within the ministry will contribute also to the larger circle served by that ministry.

"It should be recognized that this mood of unrest and dissatisfaction is not characteristic of the ministry alone. It is felt among all ranks and professions. It is the inevitable product of the chaotic condition of a time in which many people are questioning the validity of all our customs and institutions. If some ministers are restless and unhappy at their task, there are business men, professors, school-teachers, and housewives restless and unhappy also. If any minister doubts this, let him preach some Sunday morning on the longing for escape as expressed in Psalms 55: 6. He will be surprised at the number of his hearers, men and women, including some whom he supposed to be entirely free from this particular longing, who will assure him that he has preached directly to their own need. Those ministers who question their usefulness in their locality to the degree of enervating morbidity have been overcome by a mood which is found everywhere. Their hope lies in the fact that the quick sensitiveness which has led them into their dissatisfaction can be the weapon of their deliverance in a new phase of personal power.

"In the huge majority of instances the prevalent ministerial unrest is based upon two mistaken assumptions. The first assumption is that the minister's happiness in his work depends upon its locality and not upon his own state of mind. The minister in the rural charge envies his brother who labors in the great city. The minister in the great city refers to the easy time of his more fortunate brother whose pastorate lies in the well-to-do suburban area. The minister in the East longs for a parish in the Middle West. The middle westerner sighs for a field beside the Pacific breezes and under the sunny skies of California. And the brother in California sometimes gives convincing evidence that even California's climate can not banish his own unhappiness. Any minister who is so placed that he is likely to receive the intimate, private appeals of his brethren can bear witness of this mistaken assumption which would be amusing were it not pathetic. Except in the rarest instances, a minister's satisfaction in his task does not depend upon the locality of his parish. To be sure, parishes vary greatly in their externals, but the people of any parish are fundamentally alike in the need of their souls. If a minister can dispense spiritual sustenance in the slums he can do it, although the task will be more difficult, among the wealthy. If he can express the gospel effectively in the city he can also express it in the small town. A minister's usefulness does not depend upon his environment. It depends upon his spiritual experience and expression, his resourcefulness, his courage, all those inner elements of personality which mold his mind and heart as a Christian leader.

"The second mistaken assumption of the restless minister is that he must be freed from the discipline and difficulty which appear to handicap him hopelessly in his present charge. If he could be disentangled from the particular burden that characterizes his parish, all would go well with him. His blunder consists in his failure to recognize that every parish has its set of problems and that a man's adequacy in the ministry is judged by his ability to deal with these problems. Let us admit that, in exceptional cases, there are churches in which certain lay officials are so constituted that the most effective ministry would be nullified. Granting this sort of exception, we can lay it down as a general law that if a minister chafes himself

The Week of Prayer

By the time that this appears every branch in the church should have been notified by its district president of the day or days upon which the members of the branch are requested to occupy the hour assigned to their district in the week of prayer. Any branch president who has not yet received this information should get in touch with his district president immediately.

We are hoping that in addition to participation in the local prayer services the Saints throughout the world will keep in mind the prayer meetings which are being held in other branches of the church and will frequently join their friends at distant points in moments of meditation and petition.

To enable the Saints to sense the continuity of this circle of prayer, our church statistician, Elder Carroll L. Olson, has prepared a table which will be found on pages 4 and 5.

May the Lord breathe the spirit of prayer, of testimony, and of unity upon his people.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,

By F. M. McDOWELL.

into a condition of unrest in one field the chances are that he will do so in any field, and that if he tackles his problem boldly in one place he will do likewise in another. The real crux of the situation is not the nature of the local difficulty, but the nature of the man who faces the difficulty. It may defeat him or he may defeat it. . . .

"It is not the minister's place of work that matters. It is his attitude. There are exceptional ministers who have spent a lifetime of service at one post, growing steadily and creatively into old age, the radius of their influence widening every decade. There are ministers who have achieved this power as they moved from one pastorate to another. In both instances the same principle was at work, a joyous determination to meet their task in all its phases, unpleasant as well as pleasant, wherever it happened to be, pleading no excuses, expressing no longing for escape, asking for no preferment of position, submitting only to the will of God as found in the mystical experience in which heart, mind, and soul seem to unite. Thus they were freed from unrest and pessimism, for the miseries of introspective self-pity had vanished before the absorbing demand of their spiritual vision."

WORLD'S AFFAIRS

Where Our Taxes Go

The Literary Digest for December 28 carries an article stating that seventy-two cents of every dollar of taxes goes for wars, either past or future. The tax-burdened public should remember this when they listen to the talk of jingoists and big navy advocates.

Increasing taxes are a real problem. They make it a heavy burden for the small wage earner to own his home. The ownership of a home involves nearly as much expense as the renting of one of equal quality. The voters of the future face two great problems: the reduction of graft and corruption and the reduction of checking of mounting tax rates. War is one of the most expensive of modern luxuries, and it is one that we can not afford. Any organization that insures world peace, or tends to eliminate war, should have a large measure of support.

Senator Grundy of Pennsylvania

Joseph R. Grundy was, until recently, a professional lobbyist, and has spent something like twenty years as the paid servant of the manufacturing interests of Pennsylvania. He has done much to influence legislation, and, unlike many persons of his profession, he is not ashamed. He believes in his trade and in the high tariffs that his clients wish.

After Vare was denied a seat in the Senate by that occasionally conscientious body, Governor Fisher, of Pennsylvania, promptly appointed Grundy to fill the place. The two men are different in many respects; there is little choice between them. We say nothing against these men save that we disapprove of their methods and disagree with some of their ideas.

A clamor was raised in the Senate to reject Grundy, but it failed and he entered.

There is an important principle involved. The Senate has assumed the right not only to dictate to the State of Pennsylvania as to its representatives, but has, by this action, virtually tried to make itself a self-perpetuating body, which was never intended by the Constitution. The senators have no right, as we understand it, to exclude properly selected representatives. They are not a self-perpetuating body. The Senate really has no right, so far as the State is concerned, to determine what is a proper selection of representatives, so long as the State Government is functioning.

It is good that the move to prevent the seating of Grundy failed. It is too bad that the move to refuse Vare did not also fail.

In Remembrance of Me

By U. W. Greene

For I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered unto you, That the Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed took bread: and when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat; this is my body, which is broken for you: this do in remembrance of me. After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, . . . of the Lord, unworthily, [ye] shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body. For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep. For if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.—1 Corinthians 11: 23-31.

Paul was not present with the apostles when the Lord's supper was instituted, but received his knowledge of it by revelation from Jesus himself; and as he communicates his knowledge to them, we see that it does not vary in any way from the record given by the other apostles. In fact, he makes his message plainer.

The Lord Jesus instituted this sacrament, hence it admits of no change by any man. It was the very night in which he was betrayed, just before he entered on his sufferings, which are commemorated therein. Jesus took bread, and when he had given thanks and blessed it (Matthew 26: 26), he broke the bread and said, "Take eat: this is my body, which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of me." In like manner he took the cup when he had supped, saying, "This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye as oft as ye drink of it, in remembrance of me."

It is here called bread many times; even after the prayer of blessing, it is called bread and symbolizes the body of the Lord, "broken for you," by his sufferings and death. It conveys no thought of transubstantiation; that is an absurdity, not warranted by the language of any of the apostles.

In the same manner he took the cup and said, "This do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me." This language shows plainly that the drinking of the wine was a part of this holy feast. Matthew says that Jesus had them all drink of it. (Matthew 26: 27.)

The things signified by these emblems are Christ's body—his broken body, his shed blood, and all the benefits that come from his death. It is the new covenant in his blood. All the precious promises found in the gospel are confirmed to his faithful children by his Holy Spirit. Our partaking is a necessary step to receiving and enjoying the Spirit; it is to continue till the Lord comes the second time. A disciple who refuses to go to the Lord's table, or who neglects it, is disobeying his command. If we have been worldly minded, if we have committed acts of sin, it is necessary to repent and forsake the sin, make confession to God, seek in this way his forgiveness, and then renew our covenant made in the waters of baptism, by partaking of the sacrament, thus witnessing to God and before his church that we will keep his commandments and that we remember him. Jesus said: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." How can we expect to enjoy his blessings if we willfully neglect to do that which he enjoins upon us.

Some people murmur and feel that they are not used right if they meet adversity or ill health continues with them, yet they persistently neglect to do his commandments.

Jesus commanded that we search the Scriptures, yet multitudes read everything published under the sun, no matter how rotten, but have not time for the word of God.

Jesus said, "Watch and pray." Instead of watching against sin and iniquity, they go around looking for chances to do wrong. Instead of daily communion with God, they never try to pray. What is more interesting than to see man, woman, or little child at prayer? What is more beautiful than the family altar? Yet how sadly it is neglected. The same Lord also said: "This do in remembrance of me." We must come to the Lord; have faith in him as our Savior; have faith in his promises; have faith that there is spiritual power and blessing in coming to the table of the Lord, in his own appointed way. There can be no blessing without faith. We should not partake thoughtlessly and irreverently, but after introspection.

Paul advised, "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves. Know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates?"—2 Corinthians 13: 4.

Self-examination is a good thing. We spend too much time in examining others; their dress; their habits; their pastimes; their home life, or lack of it; their religious life; until gossip takes the place of wholesome conversation. We should remove the beam from our own eyes, permit the searchlight of God's Spirit to search our own hearts and remove therefrom everything contrary to the higher life revealed in the gospel of Jesus, and then we can discern the Lord's body. There are two ways of interpreting his statements:

1. His sacrificial work which we are to bear in mind: "He made him to be sin for us who knew no sin" (2 Corinthians 5: 21); "he bore our sins in his own body on the tree" (1 Peter 2: 24); "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world" (John 1: 29); by "whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins" (Colossians 1: 11). These are some of the statements in the word as to the redemption of Christ. His death was our life. He died that we might live. So it is well to remember his suffering and death, as we come to the table of the Lord.

Thy body, broken for my sake,
My bread from heaven shall be.
Thy testamental cup I take
And thus remember thee.

When to the cross I turn my eyes
And rest on Calvary,
O Lamb of God, my Sacrifice,
I must remember thee.

Remember thee and all thy pains,
And all thy love to me;
Yea, while a breath, a pulse remains,
Will I remember thee.

The other position is this, that if we partake of the sacrament correctly we must discern in the church of Jesus Christ, his body. It is written that according to the working of his mighty power, which he wrought in Christ, when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places. . . . and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church. Which is his body, the fullness of him that filleth all in all.—Ephesians 1: 19-23.

In writing to the saints in Colosse, Paul declares that we should give thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light; who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son: . . . And he is the head of the body, the church: who is the beginning, the firstborn from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence. For it please the Father that in him should all fullness dwell.—Colossians 1:12-19.

Again:

And not holding the Head, [Christ] from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God.—Colossians 2:19.

And unto the saints at Rome he wrote that we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one members, one of another. Having then gifts differing according to the grace that is given to us, whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of faith; or ministry, let us wait on our ministering; or he that teacheth, on teaching; or he that exhorteth, on exhortation: he that giveth, let him do it with simplicity; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that showeth mercy, with cheerfulness.—Romans 5:8.

And unto the saints in Corinth he said:

the body is one and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit. For the body is not one member, but many.—1 Corinthians 12:12-14.

Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues.—1 Corinthians 12: 27, 28.

By these texts we learn they refer to Christ and his church, which are one, the one body. All the members are baptized into the same body; and they are made to drink of the same Spirit: we become members of his body, his church. The outward signs of membership are: Repentance, and baptism for the remission of our sins, and confirmation for the reception of the Holy Spirit; and all drinking into one Spirit which internally renovates us and makes us truly members of this body, his church. The taking of the Lord's supper assists us in maintaining our union with Christ, its object being if we discern the Lord's body, "that we may always have his Spirit to be with us." The church; the collective body of those who have done the will of God, by accepting Jesus Christ as their Savior and the gospel message of life and salvation which he revealed for the redemption of mankind. Some of the distinctive organic features of the Church of Jesus Christ, as mentioned by the apostles, are as follows:

Wherefore he saith, When he [Christ] ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men. . . . And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ; Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ: that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive.—Ephesians 4: 8-14.

These officers as placed in the church by the Lord himself for the preaching of the gospel and the edifying of the church, together with the gifts and blessings of the Holy Ghost as enjoyed by the faithful ones, are the distinctive features of the church as left on earth by our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Paul declared that "a dispensation of the gospel was committed unto him." (1 Corinthians 9:17.) Hence our care in showing what it was, what was required of men, what they received from the Lord, that enabled them to discern in the church the Lord's body. Truly the making of a covenant with the Lord is a serious thing, bringing rich blessings to those who keep it, in this life; and in the world to come, eternal life. On the other hand, those who violate their covenant can not escape misery and guilt, for to all searching, the Spirit of God reveals it in many ways: Men lose their interest in the church work; they stop praying, and as a result lose contact with God; they no longer are found taking part in the prayer meetings; they are more often found joyriding than listening to the preached word. Overt acts of sin impel them still further from God; and they are greatly troubled if present where the Spirit of the Lord is manifested.

Peter declared that if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them.—2 Peter 2:20, 21.

In this way it seems that the apostle was driving home a lesson unto those who had need to know that it would be better to refrain from partaking of the sacrament than to eat and drink of it unworthily, thus bringing themselves under divine condemnation. The Lord's supper should be a feast of solemn thanksgiving, that we are worthy and entitled to the great blessing and comfort of the Holy Spirit. True, while we think of his death, we also think that he is alive for evermore and has prepared a place for us, that where he is, there we shall be also; and that he offers to us eternal life, of which the Holy Spirit poured upon us is the sure testimony. If his Spirit dwell in us, we shall be raised from the dead by its power. It is the germ of eternal life dwelling in us. The Lord's supper is called in the Greek, the Eucharist; that is, the thanksgiving. We give thanks to God, as did Jesus, when he introduced the service; among other things for the spiritual help afforded us in overcoming our sins. God promises us help, and we, receiving his promise, sup together in a covenant of eternal friendship. We bow before him and accept his love, relying on his mercy. Everyone leaves the Lord's table strengthened, determined to lead a holier life. To those who are listening in this morning, who have never learned to love the Lord Jesus, permit me to say, Get right with God, by obeying the blessed gospel; then you can meet with his children in obedience to the commandment, "This do in remembrance of me."

And to those who once have made a covenant to serve and obey him, but have partially failed, who have become sick at heart and discouraged, try again, dear brother; pray to God, make confession to him, then renew your covenant by partaking of the emblems and feel the thrilling touch of the Spirit once more.

And to those who are his children, but live far from the association of Saints, and to others who feel their unworthiness and so have never partaken of these sacred emblems, remember Jesus commanded, "This do in remembrance of me."

It will bring you joy and peace. It will increase your spiritual life. It will add to your faith in his church. Your hope will grow stronger, and the memory of our Lord's death and victory over the grave will inspire you with greater confidence in the ultimate triumph of his work.

The Evolution of the Hymn Tune

By Louise Hills Lewis

The power of music is something basic and universally stimulating to all forms of life. Music appears to satisfy some innate vibrational hunger of the organism as a whole, and seems to have the power to revitalize every living thing which may possess the sense of hearing. It stimulates the body of the savage more powerfully than that of the civilized man. Youth is more easily stirred to action than is old age. The more mature and civilized people become, the less physically demonstrative and the more psychically impressionable they are to the raptures of music. So we can see the importance of teaching people, particularly the young, the appreciation of good and uplifting music and the demoralizing influence of poor music. Walter Damrosch says that jazz excites the nerves without feeding either the head or the heart; and that a monotony or monopoly of jazz threatens to vitiate the musical instincts.

The most psychic and immaterial of the arts, music above all other arts can mirror our feelings and emotions. David Eric Berg says, "Music voices man's noblest ideals and highest aspirations, his deepest feelings and unutterable longings. It expresses his yearnings toward the Infinite, the Absolute, and Source of All. Words can not describe the Creator, a statue or a painting can not portray him, but a great symphony or a noble requiem can express our attitude of mind, the state of our feelings and emotions toward him."

Religion is also psychic, immaterial, and intangible to a large extent; a groping after things unseen, a striving toward the unknown. Gounod, in speaking of the spiritualizing influence of music, said, "It gives a foretaste of the immateriality of the future life." Music seems to establish a communication between the soul of man and his God. To attain a well-balanced, fully developed character and personality, the refining influence of music, if not indispensable, is at any rate immensely valuable. What more natural than that music and religion should be associated together, having a common interest and a common goal.

Instinctively this has been done by all people. The religious ceremonies of savages are attended by music and dancing. The North American Indians have a well-developed ritual of singing and dancing for the observance of their festivals; and their music shows a fine sense of effect and of what is suitable to the occasion. Eleven centuries before the Christian era, the Chinese had invented an elaborate philosophy of music which was associated with their religious rites. The Hindus composed hymns and music adapted to every individual and social act, and music constituted an essential element in their religious ritual.

The chorus is the true voice of the people. It can, as no other medium, voice the sorrows and joys of humanity. The chorus is the voice of the multitude and is unmatched in its power to communicate the feelings of the crowd. The Oratorio, the Passion, the Mass, the Cantata, and other choral forms have been devised to utilize the dramatic powers of the chorus. These have been seized upon by the great composers, from Palestrina, Bach, and Handel to the latest modern, to voice their profoundest feelings and conceptions of religion, of human existence and salvation, of life and death. When we examine the records of ancient civilized nations, we discover such a passionate devotion to chorus singing that we must conclude that it satisfied a powerful and innate craving for self-expression by the people, and that their leaders recognized its immense value for unifying racial and national consciousness.

After the passage of the Red Sea, Moses, deeply schooled in the subtle art of government and leadership, fittingly dramatized the events by means of a colossal pantomime, in which the whole tribe took part. A selected male chorus, led by Moses, was answered by a chorus of women under the leadership of Miriam, while a grand chorus of the people thundered out the refrains of jubilation, accompanied by a huge band of instrument players. Schubert has written a beautiful setting of this scene in a cantata, "Miriam's Song of Triumph."

The Hebrew records show a prodigal and impressive use of music for religious, ceremonial, and social purposes as well. They invested their fervent religious rites with great pomp and magnificence, using trained musicians. A royal chapel, provided with a trained chorus of men and women, was attached to Solomon's court. The building of his new temple is said to have demanded an increase of the singers and players to four thousand, and Josephus tells us that its completion was celebrated with unparalleled opulence and grandeur. "Their greatest artistic expression was their lyrics of religion, and they sang them with a will," says J. B. Reeves in his book, The Hymn as Literature. "Their hymn singing could be heard twelve miles away." "Their collection of psalms, begun in their early recorded life, enjoy today an enormous popular favor, even translated into modern languages, and they have been a powerful influence in forming the tastes and ideals of the western nations." Heine has said that in the book of Psalms are collected the "sunrise and sunset, birth and death, promise and fulfillment—the whole drama of humanity." In the New Testament the words psalm and hymn seem to have been used almost interchangeably. "The distinction in our use of the words seems to have been made arbitrarily and much later," says Reeves. Hebrew song is distinguished from that of all other nations in that it was employed almost exclusively in the worship of Jehovah. The poetry of other nations covers a wide range of subjects, but not so the poetry of Israel. It seems to have been regarded as almost sacred in itself, and therefore might not be prostituted to unworthy uses. For this reason, because its aim was so high, and guided by divine inspiration, the poetry of the Hebrews attained a rank incomparable beyond that of any other people.

In the progress of Hebrew history, song was added to song until a rich and varied repertoire was gathered, which succeeding generations have found inexhaustible. They undoubtedly developed a high form of antiphonal choral singing, perhaps the original inspiration of ancient church music. (The antiphonal form was the responsive or alternating form.)

When Israel was taken captive into Babylon, the reputation of their melodies excited the interest of their captors, who urged them to sing for them the songs of Zion. But the request was declined. For a long generation their harps were left unstrung and their songs unsung. But upon their return from captivity, both the composition and the practice of sacred song were resumed.

The history of Jewish religious and synagogue music may be divided into three major periods: (1) that of the great temple of Jerusalem, of which we have already spoken; (2) the period of wandering and scattering, when as a mark of mourning the services were reduced to the minimum of simplicity and barrenness, which characterized the music of the old synagogue; and (3) the ritual of the modern reformed synagogue. The chant, or ornamented speech song, has been the musical form in all these periods. Whole families have devoted themselves to the music of the sanctuary, and the traditions of the ancient intonations have been jealously transmitted from one generation to another.

Whereas the chant is the foundation of Jewish music, it does not constitute the sole musical resources of the ritual. From the chant was evolved more tuneful and elaborate melodies sung by the cantor with the simple harmonic support of the male choir. For years it was impossible to use women's voices, as the men were seated apart from the women, so the soprano parts were intrusted to the boys. The singing was a cappella, as no musical instruments were allowed in the synagogue. But in the modern synagogue, after a severe contest, the organ was installed, women were allowed in the congregation, and a modern choir was created. The ancient chants and prayers have been cast into rhythmic form, and the musical service thoroughly reorganized. Sufficient work has already been done by gifted composers to assure the modern synagogue a superb body of sacred music from which to arrange beautiful and impressive services.

In the time of Christ and for some time after his death, songs of Jewish origin were used by the church. But soon the church became possessed of songs of its own, distinctly Christian.

The Greeks developed an elaborate system of modes, using the Dorian music as that best suited to state ceremonials and religious worship, and teaching this method to the youth. The choral chant was the favorite musical form of the Greeks, and they developed the art of singing independent themes simultaneously, which would give them a claim to having used in a rudimentary form the art of counterpoint. The Græco-Russian Church was the eastern counterpart of the Roman Catholic Church. Saint John of Damascus was the first significant reformer and systematizer of the vocal music of the church, and numerous hymns and psalms composed by him are still in use. After his death, progress in composition of church music was slow until the latter part of the eighteenth century, when Dimitri Bortniansky became music director of the Imperial Choir, which he brought to a high state of efficiency by radical reforms. Later these choirs were broken up, and it was not until the capital of Russia was moved to Saint Petersburg that the Imperial Chapel was organized. The singers were selected from among the peasants of the Ukraine, greatly famed for their beautiful voices. Adolph Adam, the French composer, says:

"Church music is superior to any other kind of music in Russia, because it alone is typical and not an imitation of other nations, at any rate as far as the execution is concerned.

"The Greek rite allows of no kind of instrument in the church, and a visit to any of the Græco-Russian churches will afford impressive examples of their amazing a cappella style of singing. But what gives the performances a sense of peculiar strangeness is the character of the bass voices, which extend from low A, three lines beneath the bass stave, to middle C, and produce an incredible effect by doubling the ordinary basses at the interval of an octave below them. Those having double basses always remain chorus singers. Their voices if heard separately would be intolerably heavy, but heard in the mass, the effect is admirable." This was noticeable in the Russian Symphonic Choir which visited this country.

The Romans made no contributions to the progress of choral music. In fact, they degraded the art. But while Rome was rapidly developing into a brutal, remorseless empire, a small band of zealots called Christians were meeting secretly in catacombs, squalid huts, and dark cellars. They were people living in highly civilized communities, they possessed their traditions, arts, and knowledge, and whatever elements were deemed valuable were utilized in the organization of the Christian church. Choral music was used to help build up the membership of the new church, but so many elaborate ornamentations and distracting embellishments were added that the church was called upon to curb the exuberance of the musicians in religious worship.

In 314 A. D., Pope Sylvester founded the famous singing school, which led to the organization of the oldest choral society in the world, the Sistine Chapel. From then on until the early seventeenth century, the church exercised a dominating influence on the growth of musical art.

In 590 A. D., Pope Gregory the Great labored to purify the musical service of trumpery and frivolity and ordained a ritual for Rome which was later called the Gregorian chant. The Greek, or Eastern Church, played an important part in the transmission of some of the major elements to the music of the Western Church. From the enormous mass of hymns poured forth by the early Greek hymn writers, a great number were adopted by the Western Church, and they form the backbone of the whole complex ritualistic structure.

In Italy, also, all musical instruments were excluded from church service; but they were permitted entrance in England, France, and Germany. From the ancient clumsy organ is supposed to have originated the idea of simultaneous parts, which developed into the art of organum, or plural melody. Arthur Mees, in Choirs and Choral Music, says "To one singer it occurred that he might sustain a lower tone as a basis to his companions' melody; another found that he could accompany his associates at the distance of a fourth or fifth; while a third one, still more venturesome, dared to proceed in a direction contrary to that taken by his companion who followed the course of a familiar tune. Thus step by step the resources of singing in several parts were discovered. Then came the days of the discant, when every voice tried to go in the opposite direction from every other voice.

During the first part of the fifteenth century a powerful creative ferment was commencing to work in the principal countries of Europe. In England, Dunstable was developing counterpoint and the art of composition. He cast aside organum rules and discant rules and attempted to compose music that sounded well. Many others in France and Germany worked along these lines.

The period of the unaccompanied contrapuntal chorus founded on the model system of the Middle Ages, extends from 1100 to 1600 A. D. The sixteenth century has been called the Golden Age of Music, for it marked the high water mark of the centuries of effort of churchmen and musicians in the development of music of the model type, culminating in the exquisite productions of the English, French, Spanish, and Italian madrigalists, and the sublime works of Palestrina, Lasso, and the Gabriellis.

Palestrina, the illustrious Italian, is called the Savior of church music. His works are all polyphonic (which means that they consist of two or more independently treated parts) and are very numerous. He was the father of the choral tune, and hymn-tunes adapted from his motets and masses are sung today. The Sistine Chapel performs many of his works, among them the Stabat Mater.

Lasso was the greatest of the Netherlands composers, and after Palestrina, the foremost composer of the sixteenth century.

Andrea Gabrieli was a prolific composer and teacher. He wrote many sacred songs. His nephew and pupil was also a composer of note and stood at the head of the Venetian School. He composed fine choruses for two and three choirs. The noted Schütz was one of his pupils. By the end of the sixteenth century choral art in the Catholic Church had reached a high state of perfection. Centuries of accumulated traditions and skill applied to the careful training of choral singers from childhood up, had produced performers of eminent ability. When a body of such musicians performed in the great cathedrals under the direction of such men as Lasso and Palestrina, the effects must have been extremely beautiful and compelling.

It was the medievalist's discovery of the laws of harmony implicit in counterpoint which made possible the appearance of the second great school of church music, the magnificent a cappella choral music. Musicians of the highest rank labored to supply the demand of the great cathedrals for this music. The production of a cappella choruses with four to eight constituent voices delighted the marveling audiences.

Psalms and hymns are not new in religious worship, but the particular form of the psalms and hymns now in use originated with the Reformation. The musical service of the Lutheran Church is peculiarly representative of the individualistic spirit that fomented the schism and animated the organization of the Reformed Church. Whereas the Catholic Church reduced the musical participation of the congregation to the minimum and for centuries based its whole musical fabric upon the priestly Gregorian chant, the music of the Reformed Church was founded on the congregational hymn, which became the especial medium of religious expression in public worship. Again, the hymn was not in Latin, a dead language, but in the vernacular of the people. During the early struggle of the church to attain recognition and indeed to maintain its very existence, the hymn served as a kind of battle cry and marching song of faith. The placing of the choral song within the lips of the people had a great religious and moral influence. It had also its great effect on art, shown in the productions of the North German musicians ever since the first days of the Reformation. The hymnody of North Germany has, for artistic treatment, a strong advantage which is unpossessed by England, in that for the most part the same verses are associated with the same tunes, so that whenever the text or the music is heard, either prompts recollection of the other; whereas in England, tunes were always, and are now, often, composed to metres and not to poems. Any tune in a given metre is available for every poem in the same, and hence there are various tunes to one poem and various poems to one tune.

With the Reformation we come to a most important era in the development of hymnody, and chiefly through the indomitable faith, the untiring labor, and the prophetic foresight of the great Martin Luther. Some one has said of him, "He gave to the people in their own tongue, the Bible, the Catechism, and also the Hymn book, so that God might speak directly to them in his word and that they might directly answer him in their songs."

Luther was the greatest of the German hymnists. While he did not write so many hymns himself—working rather for quality than quantity—he did amass, select, adapt, and create tunes, poems, hymns, and folk songs, and published the Wittenberg Sacred Song Book in 1524. In the publication of his hymn books, Luther enlisted the cooperation of a number of his friends, and some of their productions became as popular as his own. Luther's greatest hymn is his "Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott" (A strong Fortress is our God), both the words and music of which were his own. Twelve others are thought to have been written by him; and as we have said, he wrote or arranged the words of many other chorals. These chorals had a very desirable effect in popularizing good music in Germany. Justus Jonas gave special attention to the versification of the psalms, selecting for his purpose those which had special application to the trying times in which he lived.

Paul Eber's music was more tender and consoling, and he wrote a number of songs for the dying. These hymns were the support of the Protestants during the trials of the "Thirty Year War." Johann Crüger was the composer of a large number of hymn tunes. Hans Leo Hassler, Johann Walther, Ludwig Senfl, Georg Rhau, Luke Osiander, Johannes Eccard, and Michael Prætorius are some of the more talented composers who labored to improve the German choral. Paul Gerhardt, next to Luther, is the greatest of all German hymn writers. The German hymn received at Gerhardt's hands a refinement which had hitherto been lacking. A host of other writers and composers might be mentioned. These great men of the Reformation were undoubtedly inspired for the work they accomplished; and their hymns, conceived during a time of great stress and trouble, have lived through the centuries and still carry a strong appeal to the highest emotions of all God-loving and music-loving people.

The German hymns outnumber those in any other language. The Germans are a music-loving people and not only enjoy listening, but enjoy singing themselves. Manifold as are their hymns, knowledge of the choral tunes is included in the earliest schooling of every Lutheran and every Calvinist in Germany, which thus enables all to take part in performances of the tunes, and hence expressly the definition of choral, which means, pertaining to a chorus.

The word choral is the noun and has reference to the hymn tune of the early German Protestant Church, or one similar in style. Mendelssohn's Oratorio Saint Paul makes use of a number of these chorals. These tunes are a simple, harmonized composition, generally with slow and stately rhythm, constructed upon the old Gregorian models, fitted to sacred words, and written purely for the voice, to be sung unaccompanied. Originally the chorals sung by the congregation were not harmonized, but soon the choir was trained to sing the accompanying parts in the strict contrapuntal style of the day. The custom of giving the melody to the tenor was also modified, because it proved confusing to the congregation, and instead, the melody was intrusted to the soprano and the harmony was placed below. Soon also the rhythmic impulse inherent in secular songs, founded on dance music, asserted itself, and thus was broken the old bondage of plain song. Gradually, also, the subjective, emotional spirit of the secular songs and the newly composed music invaded the choral, and we find a reformation in church music had taken place. Luther's "Ein feste Burg" is a good example of this.

In 1600, however, the organ supplanted the choir in accompanying the unison song of the people. A vast flood of hymns continued to be written and published, even during and succeeding the ghastly Thirty Years War, which, leaving both parties exhausted, almost extinguished the virile, heroic spirit of the Lutherans. Then the enervating influence of the artificial operatic aria crept in, which displaced the vigorous hymns with pretty languishing melodies, closely imitating the artificial strains of the fashionable world; and even to this day this debilitating influence lingers.

However, the influence of the Italian aria was not altogether pernicious, for out of the combination of the secular material, these more buoyant and light-hearted elements which had been absorbed into the church service, and the sturdy German chorals, evolved the glorious works of Johann Sebastian Bach: that supreme and lofty genius. His career was avowedly a lifelong consecration to the perfection of German church music.

As Dante and Palestrina devoted their efforts to the glorification of the Catholic Church, so Bach dedicated the full force of his mighty and prolific genius to the service of the Reformed Church. In his music we observe the rugged individuality and love of personal freedom that characterized the spirit of the Reformed Church; combined, too, with that same probity of character, unswerving faith, and deep humility.

Of his numerous sacred oratorios, cantatas, and similar choral works, we name the so-called Christmas oratorio, the Passion music to the words of Saint John, and that infinitely grander, to the gospel of Saint Matthew, and also his Mass in B Minor, one of the greatest masterpieces of all times. Another cantata is constructed on Luther's Grand Chorale, "Ein feste Burg." His is the last word on contrapuntal art; his church cantatas are unparalleled; his Passions are of monumental attainment; and his choral preludes reach their final perfection at his hands. He built many of his famous works upon the sturdy German chorals, many of which were adaptations of the folk songs.

During the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries all Europe was dazzled by the immense musical achievements of the German composers. Berg says, "One after the other, Titans appeared and disappeared only to be followed by others: Bach, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Wagner, Brahms, Strauss—the procession seems endless. Students and musicians flocked to the great German conservatories to learn the divine secret of kindling the creative fervor of composition. But though they assiduously studied and mastered form and technique, their compositions were insipid and colorless copies of German music." Finally they discovered that the stuff of music lay at their very doors in the form of folk songs, and now we have music of every nation, distinctly national.

With the exception of Purcell and the naturalized Handel, the Church of England can not boast of such renowned composers as those of the Catholic and Lutheran Churches. Reverend Breed says, "Most of the best tunes in common use today are from English composers, but we must go back to Germany for their origin. The Lutheran Reformation was the fountain from which flowed the main stream of song, though it has been greatly enriched by the tributaries, which, taking their rise in the same sources, had flowed on for a time in separate channels."

Nevertheless the English music has maintained a uniformity and continuity of excellence that entitles it to high esteem. The break between King Henry VIII of England and the Pope resulted in the suppression of the great English monasteries and practically destroyed the principal musical schools of that country. This dealt a fearful blow to ecclesiastical music. However, Christopher Tye, Thomas Tallis, Robert Whyte, and others labored faithfully to supply the music for the cathedral services; and England has developed a high state of choral culture. Bodies of amateurs can be called together from almost any part of the British Empire, who are competent to sing without rehearsal, often from memory, the famous oratorios of Handel, Haydn, and Mendelssohn. One significant figure emerged during the second half of the seventeenth century, that of Henry Purcell, a musician and composer of real genius. His church music comprises a great number of anthems and a celebrated work called the "Te Deum and Jubilate in D."

Handel, though born in Germany, later moved to England. He wrote many operas, but later turned his attention to the oratorio, the best known of these being the Messiah. Much of his music has been used as the basis for hymn tunes. So, also, many of our hymn tunes are taken from the music of Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, Liszt, Gounod, Rubinstein, Verdi, Brahms, and others.

The first psalm book with tunes was published in England in 1562, and was known as the Psalms of Sternhold and Hopkins with the apt notes to sing them withal. The music was simple and severe, written in one part only, but it served the English Protestants for one hundred and thirty-four years. The French also took an important part in hymn writing, and the psalms of the Marmot-Beza collection were set to old French tunes as early as 1552. In 1565 a collection of hymn tunes was published in Paris by Goudimel, who was a renowned church composer. "Old Hundred," an arrangement of a Gregorian chant, appears in this collection, set to the 134th psalm. It was afterward used in the Anglo-Genevan Psalter, united to the 100th psalm, with which it has been associated ever since.

Later came a division in English church music. The Anglicans clung to the old forms and followed Catholic precedents, while the Puritans disowned them all and struck out upon new paths. The hymn tune suffered and was long delayed. Then came Thomas Tallis, who arranged many of the old plain song chants for part singing. He was the father of the English harmonized chant. His best work for posterity was his hymn tunes written in four parts. "Old Hundred," and Tallis's "Evening Hymn" are the oldest representatives of two different styles of hymn tunes; the one of massive dignity and the other of flowing freedom.

The old tunes were psalm tunes, the new ones were hymn tunes. The modification of the old syllabic tune commenced soon after Watts published his hymns, and was in full career during the life of Charles Wesley.

The Puritans clung to a severe form of worship both in England and in America, and seemed to have an aversion to artistic music, using only the old metrical psalms and each member of the congregation singing the tune his own way, resulting in an earsplitting ensemble. But about one hundred years later, singing schools and choirs began to spring into existence. Then, like a sunburst on a gloomy landscape, came the Wesleyan movement, and at the same time the hymn lyrics of Doctor Isaac Watts, the Wesleys, and a host of others. The music improved markedly in quality, dignity, and expressiveness. Certain of the longer and more elaborate hymns, written by such men as Dykes, Barnby, Smart, Sullivan, Monk, and Hopkins, for the Episcopal Church, were taken over and used by this new sect. Although most of the best hymn tunes now in use were not the product of Methodism, yet Methodism did more to promote them than any other religious movement except the Lutheran Reformation in Germany. The ruggedness of the old hymn tunes has been softened and the new tunes are more flowing and melodious.

Many of the composers we have just mentioned were contemporaries of Mason. Lowell Mason was an outstanding figure of this time and may be called the founder of the Modern School. He was the successful creator of a style in which the dignity of the old psalm tune is modified and beautified by the color of the period which followed them, but all with the most worshipful intent. He was largely self taught, but became president of the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston, helped establish the Boston Academy of Music, and later received the title of Doctor of Music from the New York University. More than seventy hymn tunes of which he was the author may be found in modern collections. As has been said, he broke away from current forms, supplied the corrective of many abuses, and started upon a path in which others, following his leadership, soon achieved the best results.

He and his contemporaries established a certain form of hymn tune music in which all that is best in sacred song is reverently cherished and employed; in which the blemishes of the experimental stage are removed; in which all needful variety is introduced; and in which the very best in art is made to serve the highest in religion, so that the demands of the most cultivated musician and those of the most devout worshiper are alike supplied.

A hymn poem must be lyrical. This means that it is improved by being set to music. If not, it is not a lyric. There must be indeed an interaction between the words and music that is harmonious and reciprocal. The tune must help the hymn and the hymn must be a help to the tune. It has been said that more converts have been made through hymns than through any other means. If this be true, a hymn must be expressive of religious aspiration, petition, confession, communion, or praise, and (as Reeves says) a song devoted to the fellowship of souls and the worship of God. A good hymn combines in quite remarkable effect the straightest simplicity, clarity, dignity, and melody, rich ideas about the basic matters of life and death, with strong emotion under sure control. Augustine defines a hymn as "praise to God with song," and another writer calls hymn singing "a devotional approach to God in our emotions," which of course applies to both the words and music.

There are many interesting and fascinating books of hymn stories woven about the hymn lyrics, giving the background of the author's life, his spiritual experiences, his conflicts, his sufferings, his victories, sometimes a startling incident, sometimes a soul crisis, sometimes a season of exaltation—these things are woven into the thought and feeling of a great hymn, and undoubtedly give to them a power which they exert upon the hearts of men. These are well worth the reading. But our subject deals with the chorals, or hymn tunes, rather than the poems, or hymn lyrics.

The term gospel songs is applied to a certain class of sacred lyrics, chiefly of an evangelistic character, composed for use in popular gatherings. This song was born in England during the Moody and Sankey campaign. They had been using Phillips book, Hallowed Songs, supplemented by such original pieces as Mr. Sankey supplied. The demand became so great for the publication of these original pieces, that a pamphlet of sixteen pages, entitled Sacred Songs and Solos, was printed in 1873. From time to time additions were made, until finally their combined contents were printed in a single book. Later Major Whittle, a friend and lieutenant of Mr. Moody, and a musician by the name of P. P. Bliss, issued for Americans a book similar to the English book and entitled Gospel Songs (later changed to Gospel Hymns). It was immensely popular and was surpassed in circulation only by Hymns Ancient and Modern.

There has been a good deal of discussion as to the effect of these songs, some contending that they are vitiating the tastes and corrupting the manners of worshipping congregations; and some insisting as strenuously that they have been mightily influential in promoting true praise and positive devotion.

Humphreys says: "The character of piety they cultivate is somewhat superficial, not to say hysterical; but it can not be denied that they stir the heart of the common throng. No doubt the participants are moved by profound and genuine feeling, yet we are unable to approve the introduction of such melodies into church services." Curwen says, "After the musician has vented his spleen upon the degenerate psalmody, an important fact remains: music in worship is a means, not an end, and we are bound to consider how far these tunes serve their end in mission work, which, after all, has not musical training for its object so much as the kindling of the divine spark in the hearts of the worshipers. Without doubt these songs touch the common throng; they match the words to which they are sung and carry them."

Professor Dickinson says it is not profitable for the church to keep its spiritual culture out of harmony with the higher intellectual movements of the age; and thinks the revival hymn is inadequate to the larger task of spiritual development. It might be said they are gospel songs but not gospel hymns. The name should never have been changed. Many of them are beautiful and effective, but they are no more hymns than a drama is a sermon. A hymn is one thing; a sacred song another. A true hymn is worship; a sacred song is not. The better hymn tunes introduce a fundamental harmony with every beat; they move with stately steps and majestic strength; but the lower parts of these gospel tunes are little more than an accompaniment to the soprano. However, congregational singing has been improved by the singing of these songs; and an interacting sympathy between choir and congregation has been established. If the same interest were taken in the proper rendering of our solid church tunes, their great and manifest superiority to the Gospel Songs would quickly appear.

At the present time there is a demand for hymns peculiarly fitting to our day and beliefs. We have spoken of the composers of the Reformation; now it might be well to mention a few of the Restoration. Mr. John Gresty, of Australia, has written an oratorio, The Course of Time, in which is incorporated a beautiful arrangement of Luther's grand chorale, "Ein feste Burg." Arthur H. Mills has written many beautiful hymn tunes which have won a place in our hearts today, among them the ones set to the words of "With thankful hearts we meet, O Lord," and, "How gentle God's commands." Audentia Anderson's music to the words of the "Old, old path" has seemed particularly appealing to the people. The many hymn tunes of Mark H. Forscutt, W. W. Phelps, H. R. Mills, John L. Morgan, and others are a rich contribution to our church music.

The hymn tunes of such men as Goss, Woodbury, Bradford, Marsh, Holbrook, Bradbury, Holden, Hastings, and others have given us the material for our present hymn book. With Berg, we say, "Who can question the dignity, value, and indispensability of music to the human race, society, and the church? Music in its mystic, indefinable action seems to make the mood of prayer more active, deeper, stronger, more satisfying than it would be if shut within the soul and deprived of this means of deliverance. The separate personalities are dissolved in the general tide of rapture, and the common sentiment is enhanced by the consciousness of sympathy between mind and mind."

Graceland Chats

Graceland Basket Ball Season Opens

Graceland's basket ball season opened Saturday, December 14, with Conception, on the local's floor.

Coach Gilbert's inexperienced team upset the advanced plays and held Conception to a 31 to 32 score.

The game was closely fought and was anybody's game until the final whistle. Graceland's team played as a unit and no one was outstanding.

Graceland has a heavy schedule this year, and the inexperienced team has a great deal of hard work before it if it is to have a successful season. JOHN TURNER.

Niketes Girls Win the Debate

The Niketes girls after defeating the Kapforeans in the preliminary debates entered the finals and won over the Pleiades girls with a unanimous vote of the judges. The question under discussion was, "Resolved, that the jury system should be abolished."

The debate was of a high standard, both teams doing efficient and admirable work. The debaters seemed to be equal in polemic skill, and their arguments were equally well organized. At the end of the constructive speeches, neither team seemed to have the advantage.

During the rebuttals, when the important issues were stressed and the plans of both the affirmative and negative were attacked by the opponents of each, one seemed to be persuaded first to one side and then to the other. Not until the last speaker of the affirmative had spoken in her rebuttal was the debate won.

The Niketes' debaters were Edith Van Alstin, Delma Bass, and Aleta Jensen. The Pleiades were Eva Wallace, Harriett Jordan, and Elma Barth.

"Acacia" Staff Pushing Early Work

Graceland's annual, The Acacia, for 1930 is well under way. The individual pictures for the class sections have already gone to the engraver. Gertrude Laird, the editor, has the general outlay planned, and work is progressing. With the aid of her competent art editor, Pauline Siegfried, they should have an attractive book. "Macky" Spinnett is using all of his initiative in collecting appropriate snapshots for the various activities. The staff is planning to have the book ready for distribution at the General Conference in April so that all of the friends of Graceland may have this opportunity of seeing the inside light of their college. Nothing portrays the real life at Graceland better than the Acacia. All of the business houses of Lamoni and a number of alumni and friends out of town have been solicited for advertising in this book. Everywhere the response has been pleasing. Without the financial aid from these outside sources a book of superb quality, as has been edited in late years, could not be published. We are grateful for all of the cooperation which we have. Other members of the staff are: Max White, assistant editor; James Gardner, feature editor; Olive Winegar, associate editor; Margaret Christensen, typist; Albert Fisher, assistant business manager; and Dick Anderson, business manager.

Christmas Vacation Prospects

At Graceland Friday afternoon, December 20, began the annual pilgrimages home for the Christmas holidays. Right merrily rattled the aged Fords down the college hill; eagerly, group after group boarded the train; gayly began the "hikers" their journeys, alone or otherwise. And sadly, oh, how sadly, we of the Christmas vacation family watched them go!

We soon got over that feeling of homesickness, however, and what a busy time we had moving into Marietta! The dormitory began to look quite homelike with all the temporary decorations. With Mother Brook there to see that we have plenty to eat—really, things won't go so bad after all.

With Nell's and Uncle Roy's wedding to start things off, the Christmas parties to come, ice-skating, fudge parties, taffy pulls, and the traditional Rook games, we have lots to look forward to. Call it "sour grapes" if you like, but we who have to stay don't envy the others so much.

MARGARET WILLIAMS.

Caroling in the New Dormitory

Half past ten. Lights out for the night in the new dormitory. All were ready to jump into those soft beds—when listen! Up the stairway floated ethereal-sounding voices. Christmas carols—"It came upon the midnight clear," "Silent Night," and "O little town of Bethlehem."—the voices came nearer. Up the stairs they came, two by two, girls who had been at Graceland previous years, each one in her prettiest night attire carrying a lighted red candle. First to the north corridor they went, then turned their footsteps toward the south hall on the second floor. This procedure was repeated on the third floor in the same heart-warming solemnity. The girls who were being serenaded hovered in the shadows of their doorways, deeply touched by the thoughtful consideration of their upper classmen. Many eyes were misty, and some girls sobbed openly as they returned to their rooms. The new dormitory has begun its career with one of the prettiest rituals ever used to interpret Christmastide cheer. It is sincerely hoped and expected that this will become a tradition in the halls of the new dormitory, to be carried out each year with the same good will and depth of feeling.

VIRGINIA WEBBE.

The New Dormitory Occupied

At last the $135,000 girls' dormitory at Graceland has been completed, and the girls have moved in. What a contrast after living in the old dorms. How lovely it is to walk on hardwood floors when we have been walking on cement all these months.

Each room has a beautiful walnut study table, chest of drawers, a mirror, two straight back chairs, one armchair, and oh, what fun it is to swing out the folding beds each night! An electro-cabinet occupies the space above the lavatory, and the height of modern appliances is obtained by the individual light on either side with a switch and curling iron plug beneath. The rooms are complete to the nth degree.

We girls from Bide-a-Wee especially can appreciate the incinerators in the halls, for now we don't have to run across the campus on warm, cold, windy, or rainy days to empty trash.

There are two baths on each floor, and a linen room—oh, yes, and a service room. In this there are ironing boards and two big sinks in which to wash clothes. This room is also the location of all our so-called "feeds." Fun? I'd say!

And last, but far from least, is the reception room. We knew the dormitory was wonderful, just from reports, but never did we expect such as we saw when in we first walked. Seven overstuffed divans, numerous overstuffed and otherwise chairs, tables, lamps, big "squashy" rugs, and an enormous English fireplace. Won't we have fun when we zip the yule logs in and hear the flames crackle and watch them flicker up the big chimney? The boys are envious of us, and we don't blame them at all.

All in all, the dormitory is the realization of the beginning of a Greater Graceland, and we girls have Mr. Carmichael to thank for his untiring efforts in making this the greatest time of our life.

The Pre-Christmas Program

The spirit and the significance of Christmastide were shown in the pre-Christmas service at the Brick Church last Sunday night.

After the choir had taken its place during the organ processional, the congregation, led by Uncle Roy, read the story of the Nativity. Following this, the choir sang "While all things lay in quiet silence," forming a beautiful setting for the prayer that followed. The response to the prayer was Stainer's "Sevenfold amen," sung by the A Cappella Chorus. The Athenian Male Quartet, composed of Roderick May, Arthur Oakman, Robert Crawford, and Delmar Goode, sang the "Lord's Prayer," in which Arthur Oakman sang the baritone solo.

Brother Prall gave a short account of the first Christmas. He divided the history of the world into two chapters—before and after the birth of Christ.

Mrs. Gertrude White Walden and Arthur Oakman sang Christmas solos, after which Brother Prall told of the spirit of Christmas, which is the spirit of Christ. An appropriate anthem followed in which the A Cappella Chorus sang "Hymn of praise," by Tschaiakowsky.

The climax of the service lay in the closing Christmas hymns sung by the A Cappella Chorus. As the congregation was leaving, the choir sang "Holy Night" to make the program even more impressive.

Des Moines, Iowa

717 East Twelfth Street

December 20.—The Home and Service Group held its November meeting in the lower auditorium of the church. Luncheon was served at 6.30, after which a fine program was given. The theme of the evening, "The lifting power of gratitude," was presented by Elder V. L. Deskin.

The Iyoypta Temple Builders put on a vaudeville November 21 and 22 which netted them the sum of more than seventy-five dollars. Proceeds will go to the building fund.

Pastor C. B. Hartshorn spent Thanksgiving in Independence. Sister Hartshorn was able to return home with him on Saturday. She has been greatly missed from church services, and we are pleased to have her worship with us once more.

The prayer service Thanksgiving morning at 7.30 was well attended. Elder H. Castings and C. E. McDonald had charge. A good spirit prevailed.

November 16 at nine o'clock in the evening occurred the marriage of Miss Ann Maitland, daughter of Sister Carrie E. Maitland, and Mr. Leonard Koehler, son of Bishop and Sister J. A. Koehler, of Independence, Missouri. Preceding the ceremony Lloyd Mussell sang "At dawning" and Miss Ardith Kirkwood sang "I love you truly." The wedding march was played by Mrs. Geneva Calder. Miss Rein Cowel attended the bride as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Vivian Castings, of Graceland College, and Miss Vivian Raschke, of Independence; Addison Brown and Lee Mussell were ushers; and James Maitland, brother of the bride, was best man. Little Jean Marie Finch and Helen Griffin were flower girls. The bride is a graduate of East High School and has been employed as secretary to the president of the White Eagle Oil Company, of Kansas City, for the past two years. The bridegroom is a graduate of the Kansas Agricultural College. The couple will live on a farm near Independence, Missouri.

Home-coming day, December 1, was marked by good attendance for the severe weather. Elder Wilber Prall, president of Lamoni Stake, was speaker of the day. At the eleven o'clock hour he took his hearers back to two home-comings, one at the brick mansion at Fayette, New York, where the six men met who organized the church, the other at Kirtland Temple, where there was such a wonderful outpouring of the Holy Spirit. He told of some of the trials of early-day Saints and their unwavering faith, especially that of Emma Smith. The great task of the church today, he thinks, is to increase the faith of each and every member. At the evening service his theme was, "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God."

The sacramental service at 2.30 in the afternoon was a season of rejoicing. Our hearts were made glad to hear many of the young take part. We feel this is largely due to the efforts of Brother V. L. Deskin, who has had charge of the junior church for the past two years. By his faithful and devoted service he has endeared himself to every junior. He recently resigned, and his place is ably filled by Brother Norman Anderson, who has already won the hearts of the children. Sisters Gladys Barr and Bertha Deskin have given valuable assistance to this work.

Pastor C. B. Hartshorn has recently given us two fine discourses, illustrating with stereopticon slides; one on the subject, "Is Christian industrialism practical?" showing scenes in and around Independence; the other on "Church history," the pictures covering scenes enacted during the past century.

The chicken dinner and bazaar held at the I. O. O. F. Hall December 11, by the Home and Service Group, was a success. An amount of more than one hundred dollars was cleared.

Institutes in Eastern Colorado District

Two successful institutes have been held in this district during the year 1929. The first was in April at La Junta. President F. M. McDowell and Elder O. A. McDowell were teachers. Because of the success of this institute, it was arranged to have the second one.

The last one of the year began Thanksgiving Day, November 28, at La Junta with a big family dinner. All the southern branches were invited, and delegations came from all over this part of the State. Just prior to the dinner an impressive ceremony took place, the burning of the La Junta church mortgage. This was another cause for rejoicing. The local membership had been struggling along under this handicap, until a year ago they made a determined effort to cancel this indebtedness, and did. The spirit of love and thanksgiving was enjoyed by all. It was a family reunion of Saints.

The next day the balance of the teaching department arrived, bringing the total up to three: President F. M. McDowell, Bishop Albert Carmichael, and Apostle E. J. Gleazer. These were assisted by Elders O. A. McDowell and E. B. Hull. For three days class work was had, interspersed with music and recreational features.

At the close of the institute the team divided, holding two-night institutes at Colorado Springs, Fort Collins, and Wray, Elder Ward A. Hougas joining Bishop Carmichael at Wray, and Elder Winegar going with the team to Fort Collins. After these two-night stands, the entire team returned to Denver, where the institute for the central section was to begin the evening of December 6. For two days and one night the members greeted the teachers morning, afternoon, and evening in class work and lectures. The institute was a great success in more ways than one. The teachers specialized on religious education and stewardships. Already we see results of the work of the brothers. A number of stewardship requests are going to the First Presidency from members of the district, and others are making out inventories and paying tithing.

The officers and members of the district appreciate the sacrifices the team had to make, to come into this State at this time, and we trust the impressions made, the problems solved, and the new vision of the work received by those that attended the institutes will repay the workers for their endeavors.

Along with the class work where institutes were held, the local churches provided meals, recreational features, music, etc. Two dramas were given by La Junta and Denver members. The success of the two institutes held at La Junta was the result of the untiring efforts of Elder O. A. McDowell and his corps of assistants. Many that came to this institute had to travel over one hundred miles, and returned to their branches over slippery roads during a snow-storm. When one considers the effort some people have to make to get an education in spiritual things, it seems there must be some force that draws them. At any rate all went home happy, saying that they would not have missed the institute for anything.

Wells, Michigan

December 25.—Wells Branch has lost one of its faithful members. Brother William H. Walker passed to his reward at his home in Gladstone, the cause of his demise being leakage of the heart. He was a retired lumber scaler, who had made Gladstone his home for seventeen years. He was a member of the Modern Maccabees Lodge of Gladstone. The news was wired to Sister Walker who, shortly before, had undergone an operation at Ann Arbor. She arrived home in charge of a nurse in time for the funeral, which was had on Sunday. Sister Walker and those dear to the deceased have the sympathy of the Saints. Our brother will not soon be forgotten, because of the influence he had upon those about him. His sufferings he bore without complaint, and he was a man who took no part in strife or contention. The crowd which attended, the beautiful flowers, and the gentle spirit felt by the writer while imparting words of comfort to the living, gave evidence that our brother was much loved and that God was with us. The subject of the funeral sermon was "The hope of the righteous," recognition being given the efforts and interest of all in the hour of trial and trouble. In this sermon nonmembers were given understanding of the mission of the gospel, and members were given renewed courage.

As we approach the close of the old year and 1930 is near at hand, our earnest wishes are that all who are working for Zion will be heartened and greatly blessed. Let us all give our best in every part of God's work that Zion may be.

A. M. BOOMER.

Fargo, North Dakota

Bungalow Church 1423 First Avenue, South

December 15.—The annual business meeting was held December 12, Elder C. J. Smith in charge. The following officers were elected: Pastor, Elder Thomas Leitch; branch clerk, Courtney Rotzien; superintendent of Sunday school, Sister J. F. Rotzien; superintendent of Department of Women, Sister R. H. Freeman; superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Sister R. T. Walker; auditor, Sister Emily Couey; branch solicitor, Sister Bernice Brown.

Elder C. J. Smith visits the branch occasionally and brings with him a message of encouragement and inspiration which increases faith and zeal in the work. He encouraged the members to avoid the spirit of speculation and gather to Zion, to make our services a real spiritual revival for each one. Restoration, he maintains, is a vital factor of the church. God has restored his gifts and blessings; shall we hear him and apply his word to our lives? Elder Smith left for his home in Sioux City, Iowa, December 16 to spend Christmas.

Elder William Sparling, of Minot, was a welcome visitor December 8. He preached in the evening, reading for his text the revelation to Newel Knight in Doctrine and Covenants. He spoke of early experiences in the church, and encouraged the Saints to keep the faith.

Elder Thomas Leitch and Elder C. J. Smith spent Sunday with Saints at Straubville, North Dakota, December 15, holding services.

Brother Leitch preached to Fargo Saints November 24 from the second epistle of John, the ninth, tenth, and eleventh verses. His text was, "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God."

The Department of Women held another food sale Deember 7 and netted $18.50. The women aim to soon finish the subject, Problems of Industrial Zion, by Elder Koehler and feel they have learned many useful things from this study.

Two Halloween parties were held at the church, one for the younger children, and one for the young people and adults. Games were played, refreshments served, and a jolly time enjoyed.

The Sunday school gave a short Thanksgiving program Sunday, November 24, and the children brought treats for the surprise baskets which were given by the children to some of the poor and sick in the neighborhood Wednesday evening before Thanksgiving.

A Thanksgiving prayer service was held Thanksgiving morning at ten o'clock, Elder Thomas Leitch, pastor, in charge. The theme was, What I have to be thankful for. A good spirit was enjoyed.

A College Day program was given Sunday evening, November 24, consisting of college songs, speeches, and readings.

Let us remember that men and women of enthusiasm are those who move the world. Let us work together throughout the new year.

Duluth, Minnesota

December 24.—J. P. Fetting, teacher of Sandusky, Michigan, and member of Cash Branch, assisted Elder Samuel Case at the morning service October 27.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a Halloween party the evening of November 1.

November 3 members were asked by the pastor to come to service fasting and praying for all who have asked an interest in the prayers of the Saints, the sick and afflicted and those who are downcast and discouraged.

A ready response was given during the Sacrifice Period, one hundred and nine dollars being turned into the solicitor's hands.

Elder Blair Jensen, pastor of Minneapolis Branch, broke the bread of life in Duluth Sunday morning, November 10. Elder Wesley Elvin spoke to the priesthood in the afternoon.

The Women's Department gave its annual chicken supper November 12 in the basement of the church. It was very successful, netting the women one hundred and fifty-three dollars and fifty cents, fancy work forty-two dollars.

Elder Lester Whiting, district president, of Clitherall, Minnesota, was the speaker morning and evening November 17. Always his sermons are appreciated, and encourage us to go forward.

The annual business meeting was held the evening of November 18 in charge of Elder Lester Whiting. Elder A. C. Bundy was reelected branch president; Sunday school superintendent, Robert Zuelsdorf; superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression, Roy C. Tourville; superintendent Women's Department, Sister Mollie Feathers; treasurer and solicitor, P. G. Schnuckle; secretary, publicity agent, historian, and librarian, W. C. Stauty; musical director, Sister Eva Tourville. J. E. Walters was elected teacher of the branch. P. G. Schnuckle and R. C. Zuelsdorf were sustained to succeed themselves as corporation trustees; auditors, J. E. Walters, R. C. Tourville, and R. C. Zuelsdorf. Elder Sam Case was recommended by the pastor as counselor and sustained by vote. The following resolution was presented by A. C. Bundy, pastor: "Resolved that two assistants be elected to serve with Elder P. G. Schnuckle, treasurer, as committee of three with pastor as ex officio member, with full power to weigh and act in all financial matters pertaining to collecting and distributing under one hundred dollars; in matters over one hundred dollars disbursement to refer their decisions back to branch for action." This resolution carried. J. E. Walters and Sam Case were elected as members of the finance committee.

The evening of College Day, November 24, an appropriate program was given. The song, "Onward Christian soldiers," was sung by the congregation, and there was a special song, "Sons of Graceland." A. C. Bundy, pastor, clearly stated the purpose of College Day, and a prayer dedicating the purpose of the day and this particular program to the service of God was offered by J. E. Walters, of Carlton, Minnesota. "Graceland's expanding skyline" was read by A. C. Bundy, and the song, "Forward, Old Gold and Blue," preceded five-minute talks by R. C. Zuelsdorf and Sister Susie Craven, of Two Harbors, Minnesota. The address was by Pastor Bundy, and "Graceland forever" was sung. Offering was then taken up, and a short prayer dedicated it to the purpose for which it was given. The service was dismissed by J. E. Walters.

After prayer service November 27, the night before Thanksgiving, fire broke out in the church from an overheated furnace and damaged the edifice to the amount of more than two thousand dollars. This accident was very grievous to the members after the time, effort, and money spent in remodeling and redecorating preparatory to the dedication service. We were expecting President Smith to be with us for the occasion. The Women's Department had worked zealously that the debt might be wiped out and the building be put in proper shape. The real loss can not be estimated in dollars and cents. We are now going ahead in the work of repairing the damage, installing a pipe furnace in place of the pipeless, remodeling the pulpit platform, replacing the ceiling, and replastering the walls.

Services have since been held in homes except those of the Departments of Recreation and Expression and Sunday School which have been discontinued for a time. A hall is now being rented near the Tourist Hotel on Central Avenue. All services are to be held there until the church building is again in proper shape for meeting. Elders Sam Case and A. C. Bundy are working each day that this may soon be accomplished.

Elder Sam Case was at Ashland, Wisconsin, the week-end of December 21 and 22. He preached and held a communion service at the home of Brother and Sister William Dennis, baptizing the son of Brother and Sister Josiah Perrin, of Bayfield, Wisconsin, in a font in the basement of the home of Brother Dennis. The candidate is a fine lad of seventeen years. This baptism completes our quota of fifteen, but we are not yet satisfied.

Dahinda, Illinois

Members of Dahinda Branch were glad to have Elder E. R. Davis stop here the evening of December 14 to show picture slides illustrating events of church history. It is a great privilege for those who have no other way of knowing what the church is doing to see the picture story of the institution's growth.

The annual business meeting December 15 passed off peacefully, District President E. R. Davis being present. Practically all the officers were reelected. Though we are few, we enjoy the Spirit of God and keep the gospel work going as best we can.

Since last Dahinda was heard from, Bishop C. J. Hunt has been here. He never forgets to stop and visit with the Saints whenever he is near, and his timely advice is much appreciated.

Elder Amos T. Higdon has as yet not been here, but we are hoping he may be able to come in the near future. We read with pleasure of his good work in the district.

Sister Anna Dawson was married November 27 to Dale Poppett, of Galesburg. The best wishes of the Saints and friends are extended to her. She will live in Galesburg.

The Christmas program was given Christmas Eve. Though the exercises were short, they were impressive, and all did well in their parts.

Audrey West, of Dahinda, is now in Chicago employed as a nurse. She has finished her training and is eligible for work of this kind. Sister Audrey is an agreeable and efficient young woman.

Sister Della Dawson was elected branch correspondent to the Herald for the year.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni

A pre-Christmas service was held at the Brick Church Sunday evening, December 15, on account of the closing of Graceland College December 20 for the Christmas vacation when most of the students planned to be away from Lamoni. The musical program was furnished by the Lamoni Graceland Oratorio Society and the A Cappella Chorus. From the opening number, a piano voluntary played by Miss Rae Lysinger, to the postlude hymn, "Silent Night," by the choir, the program was excellent, calculated to inspire the audience with the sacredness of the Christmas season and at the same time emphasize the joy which comes with the correct understanding of the true meaning of this season. Stake President W. E. Prall in his sermonet divided his talk into two parts. The first told the story of the birth of Christ and its influence upon the world in his time, and the second set forth the true spirit of Christmas, the beauty of which, manifested first as the Christmas spirit, causes us to think of others and prompts us to make them happy, and second an ability which helps us to forgive and forget the unpleasant incidents of the past and to retain only pleasant memories. He suggested that in the modern world the great majority of people in their search for the Christmas spirit are unable to get past the department stores and the Christmas trees, back to the lonely hills of Judea, there to learn the true spirit of Christmas.

Sunday, December 22, the Christmas spirit pervaded the air at the Brick Church at morning and evening services. The program at the morning service was furnished by the children of the church school. It was in reality a typical meeting of the primary church except that the numbers given were appropriate to the season. The children took their parts in exercises, songs, and drills remarkably well and showed careful and consistent training. Roy A. Cheville, of the stake presidency, preached the sermonet, talking to the children in terms which they understood and appreciated. He told of the first birthday party which he remembered attending—of the circus in the attic, the doughnuts, taffy, and apples served as refreshments, etc., and of the birthday party which he attended more recently, making the comparisons. Then he told the children of a boy who lived two thousand years ago who had birthdays and of how "he grew in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and man." Brother Cheville had prepared four candles for this birthday party, each representing one of the things to be remembered from this passage of scripture, and upon the elaboration of each a candle was lighted by some little boy or girl.

The evening program was furnished by the young people of the church school. Christmas hymns were sung by the congregation, a solo by Arthur Oakman, and "O little town of Bethlehem" and "While shepherds watched" by a small chorus from the high school department. The invocation was by Apostle J. F. Garver. A reading, "The littlest orphan and the Christ Baby," by Sister Virgil Sheppard, and an instrumental trio played by J. H. Anthony, Lois Garver, and Helen Anthony, were followed by the one-act play, "Why the chimes rang." A cathedral window appeared in the background of the stage setting, before which the priest received the rare gifts of the rich; and as they passed by, each gift was received and with prayer laid upon the altar (all in pantomime), as an individual choir sang Christmas hymns. Following the arrival of the child with the perfect gift (a penny given in faith and humility) late, because he had remained to care for an unfortunate woman who had come to his home sick from cold, hunger, and exposure, the beautiful chimes rang, while all bowed in awe. During the closing scene the audience caught a new vision of faith and humility. Sister M. E. Mortimore directed the play. A committee of Vera Kline, Irma Ballantyne, and Vesta Stevenson planned and directed the morning and the evening programs.

Member of Stake Presidency Married

The marriage of Sister Nell Weldon, daughter of Brother and Sister George Weldon, of Lafayette, California, to Elder Roy A. Cheville, of Lamoni, was solemnized Monday afternoon, December 23, at 3.30 in the Brick Church. An altar in the center of the rostrum was banked with ferns and lighted with yellow and white candles. Preceding the ceremony Arthur Oakman, of England, sang "Oh, promise me," by Reginald DeKoven, and "Ah, sweet mystery of life," by Victor Herbert. A quartet composed of Mr. and Mrs. Evan Walden, Rae Lysinger, and Arthur Oakman sang "Now the day is over," "Believe me if all those endearing young charms," and a prayer response. They were accompanied by Verna Schaar. The Wedding March from "Lohengrin" was played by Miss Mabel Carlile at the piano and Evan Fry at the organ. Mendelssohn's wedding march was used at the close of the ceremony. The bride entered on the arm of her brother, L. D. Weldon, of Iowa City. The bride's sister, Miss Rae Weldon, of Oakland, California, acted as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Ruby Weldon and Miss Beatrice Gates. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Fred Cheville, of Rhodes, Iowa; Frank Parsons, of Lamoni; and Leslie Flowers, of Independence, Missouri. Hillard Cox and Richard Anderson acted as ushers. Stake President W. E. Prall officiated, using the single-ring ceremony.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the lower rooms of the Brick Church, after which the bridal party and musicians were entertained at a three-course dinner which was served by Mrs. W. E. Prall at their home at six o'clock.

Brother and Sister Cheville are spending a short honeymoon in Chicago, after which they will make a visit at the home of his parents, near Rhodes, Iowa. They will be at home in Lamoni after January 6.

Christmas Wedding

A pretty Christmas wedding occurred at the home of Brother and Sister A. McPeck when their daughter, Mildred, became the bride of Dennis M. Midgorden. Preceding the ceremony, Helen Midgorden, twelve-year-old daughter of Brother and Sister L. J. Midgorden, sang "At dawn-ing." Following this Miss Thelma Lane played the wedding march to the strains of which the bride and groom unattended took their places beneath an arch in the living room. Stake President W. E. Prall officiated and used the single-ring ceremony. Following the ceremony a tray luncheon was served to about fifty relatives and close friends.

Christmas Caroling

Christmas Eve two groups of carol singers, one from the high school, directed by Sister Thelma Lane, and another from the Lamoni Graceland Oratorio Society, directed by Sister Mabel Carlile, made a tour of the town singing Christmas carols to those who on account of increasing years or illness were unable to leave their homes. Fifteen of these homes were visited by the two groups of singers, and in each instance they were received with deep appreciation. On the night following Christmas, Sister Carlile took another chorus from the Oratorio Society and went to the homes of conference appointees and sang for them and their families as an evidence of their appreciation of the work of these men and the sacrifice and cooperation of their families. Lamoni is the home of ten of the families of men under conference appointment, and each of these homes was visited by the chorus.

Independence

Stone Church

The worship service preceding the Sunday school class session Sunday morning proved unusually helpful and interesting for the intermediate and adult departments of the school which meet in the main assembly room of the Stone Church. President F. M. McDowell spoke most earnestly on the theme, "What is your shopping list for 1930?" Everyone will have opportunity, he declared, to choose between the few straws which the muckrake can bring together and the beauties of the crown—the low way and the high way of life. Excellent attention was accorded him by the young people.

The important thing for us today is the building of our own temples, making them fit places in which God can dwell, stated Pastor John F. Sheehy in his Sunday morning sermon, for only when our own temples are clean and in them dwells the Holy Spirit will we be able to build Zion. No matter where we are, he continued, we should so live that our lives are pleasing and acceptable to God. We should cherish the sincerity and determination which characterized the Saints of early days. We have accepted the heritage they have passed on to us and are largely the result of their teachings and efforts.

The Stone Church Choir sang the anthem "The earth is the Lord's," the soprano solo being sung by Sister J. Glenn Fairbanks, Paul N. Craig directing, Robert Miller at the organ. Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the service, Bishop B. J. Scott assisting.

"Christmas in Scandinavia" was the theme of Missionary E. Y. Hunker, who addressed the young people's church at the eleven o'clock hour. All were well entertained by the account of the quaint yuletide customs of the people of those northern countries.

The congregation of children and teachers of the junior department at the Campus feel they were richly blessed the last two Sundays of the year. First Apostle R. S. Budd spoke on giving selfishly and unselfishly. His was a sermon long to be remembered. Then Elder R. V. Hopkins talked on "The stewardship of prayer" and brought from experiences in his own boyhood stories of helpfulness and instruction. The return of both speakers is heartily wished for. Music and readings from the children helped to make the services enjoyable.

Sunday evening Apostle E. J. Gleazer chose for the text of his sermon to the Stone Church congregation "Save yourselves from this untoward generation," emphasizing three points: We must save ourselves; we must be saved together; and we must do it now. Our salvation depends upon our part in the work, he asserted. We must prepare to do what God requires of us before we can expect to inherit celestial glory. Salvation is not inherited; we must earn it by joint effort. In saving ourselves we bring honor to Christ.

Special music for the service was furnished by the Wahdemna Male Quartet. Congregational singing was led by John F. Sheehy. Elder H. G. Barto was in charge of the service, assisted by J. E. Kelsey.

Among the People in Zion

"The light bearer," a Christmas pageant of the bringing of the Book of Mormon by the white man to the red man, was given by the young people's class of Englewood congregation, taught by Brother Perry L. Hiles, to the senior church school Sunday morning, December 22, in the Auditorium. The dramatic production, directed by two members of the White Masque Players, proved very attractive to the large group of young people who appreciated the help of the members from Englewood.

The Wahdemna Choral Club has been very much occupied during the Christmas holidays, welcoming home former members who have been in other cities at school or in business. The members met for a Christmas entertainment and tree Sunday afternoon, December 22, and last Sunday held rehearsal in the afternoon, because New Year's Eve fell on regular rehearsal night. The club rooms in Paul Craig's studio, corner of Bowen Avenue and Lexington Street, have with the help of a large, lighted Christmas tree, assumed a holiday appearance.

A Christmas play was presented to the Saints of the Stone Church District on Christmas Eve by members of the intermediate, junior, and primary departments, directed by Sister Elizabeth Cutler Jenkins, and Irving Jenkins, assisted by officers of the departments and members of the White Masque Players. Scenes of the angel's visit to Mary, the shepherds on the hillside, the streets of Bethlehem, and the visits of the shepherds, kings, wise men, and others to pay homage to the Infant Jesus were beautifully portrayed. Music by instrumental soloists and members of the Stone Church Choir pleasingly enhanced the production, which was enjoyed by a large number of the children's relatives and friends.

The brief worship service for the young people December 18 was in charge of Elder W. Wallace Smith. "Peace" was the theme of the meeting, and Elder R. V. Hopkins was present to give the worshipers a helpful talk. They are glad to see their friend back again and able to give them many encouraging ideas and thoughts.

Recent speakers to the Y. P. R. Class which meets each Sunday evening at six o'clock, have been Bishop A. Carmichael and Apostle J. F. Curtis. They talked on themes included in the course the class is taking, "Know your own church." Apostle J. F. Garver will lecture to the class every Sunday evening in January.

Bishop Albert Carmichael is in the Independence Sanitarium with a severe infection in his toe.

Sister T. A. Beck underwent a major operation at the Sanitarium last week and is reported to be getting along well.

Last Saturday two of the nurses in training at the Sanitarium were injured in an automobile accident. Miss Ardys Eckhart, who suffered severe injury, is in the Sanitarium.

Liberty Street

Sunday morning, December 22, a combined junior and adult service was held. The Christmas theme was followed in a beautifully impressive story, "Why the chimes rang," told by Sister S. A. Thiel and in the talk made by Glenn Davis. Dorothy Peek sang a Christmas number.

Dickens' "Christmas carol" was the play given by the Liberty Street young people as their Christmas contribution the evening of December 22. The merits of the production were seemingly anticipated if one is to judge by the completely filled church which greeted the first rise of the curtain. The dramatic abilities of several young people were discovered in the rendition of the play. The cast included thirty-two characters and was directed by Doris Blake.

The last Sunday of the year "Our personal inventories" was the theme followed in the junior service.

At the eleven o'clock hour Elder J. T. Bozarth was the speaker, and in the evening Liberty Street Saints were happy to hear Apostle J. A. Gillen.

Officers elected at the recent branch election are: Pastor, F. A. Cool; associate pastors, Glenn Davis, Harry Blake, and Chester Young.

Enoch Hill

December 18 occurred the business meeting to complete the official roster of the branch. Elder John Blackmore was in charge. The following officers were chosen to support Pastor O. W. Sarratt: assistant pastor, R. E. Whitsett; superintendent of church school, Charles Warren. Brother Warren was sustained as head of the music department; Joe Martin as superintendent of the church in the home; E. H. McKean as publicity agent. Special prayers by Brothers Martin, Warren, and Whitsett followed the business, and Brother Blackmore talked from a chart outline of the church school. The meeting was dismissed by W. H. Brewer, former pastor.

Sister Sarratt, wife of the pastor, underwent an operation for appendicitis December 24 at the Sanitarium, and though for a time her condition was very serious we are glad to report that she is improving. The members will happily welcome her back home.

Christmas brought its share of activities and joy to Enoch Hill. Sunday morning during the church school service the beginners and primaries from downstairs came up to give a program of recitations, songs, and dialogs which was much appreciated. In the evening the choir, directed by Charles Warren, sang the cantata, "The coming of Christ," the Temple Builders, led by Nellie Kramer, assisting.

Monday afternoon the children were given a party at the church, and in the evening an old-fashioned Christmas entertainment was had for the members of the beginner and primary departments in the lower auditorium. The visit of Santa Claus brought happiness to all.

"The open door" was the theme of Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, speaker at the session of the church school Sunday morning. In the evening President Floyd M. McDowell spoke on making choices in the new year.

East Independence

The last Sabbath of 1929 is history. Again we face a new year, this time the momentous 1930 to which we have long looked forward.

Brother Frank McDonald preached an enthusiastic sermon the morning of December 22. The world will fail until it establishes itself upon the bedrock of truth proclaimed by the Messiah, he declared.

At the evening hour came the Christmas entertainment, everyone ready to do his part. The little ones fairly bursting with importance bowed, smiled, and played Santa Claus, boys and girls from other lands, fairies with gauzy wings, and little pages, while gentle Mary looked on and rocked the Baby Jesus and Joseph stood silently by. The wonderful star shone its brightest, and the shepherds and wise men brought their gifts and paid homage. The Rainbow Class gave its gift of song, and everyone was happy to pay tribute to the Christ Child.

Elder W. B. Paul preached to this congregation Sunday morning, December 29, on the text from John 3: 16, and told us that fallen man could not have returned to his original high position except God had shown his great love for him and given his plan of salvation.

In the evening the members were happy to listen to a fervent sermon by Patriarch W. A. McDowell, who expounded the scriptures with old-time missionary zeal, calling his hearers' attention to many prophecies which have been fulfilled and many yet to come to pass.

Players Needed for the Centennial Pageant

Nearly one thousand players and staff members will be needed for the production of the pageant which is to be given in the Auditorium. Every person within driving distance of Independence and Kansas City who is able to participate should respond to the call for help. The pageant, Fulfillment, by Sister Alice Burgess, is a wonderful work, and deserves the best possible production. It will be an honor to those who help to make it a success.

On January 12 it is planned to have members of the White Masque in many of the churches of Independence to recruit actors. If anyone is missed, he or she should get in touch with the White Masque in Independence, or with Brother Mesley in Kansas City.

The White Masque Players, the church dramatic society of Independence, has an honorable record of distinguished achievements. Though it is not a large organization, it has accomplished much good in educational as well as in dramatic effort. To the production of the pageant it brings a staff of experienced and consecrated people who are capable of guiding this difficult production to success. But they can not do it without the united efforts of all who can and will help. Many types and many individual acting parts need to be filled. Merely selecting the cast is an enormous task. It is hoped that large numbers of people will offer their services.

The Executive Committee has just recently made its report. Plans for the stage sets and for the costumes are under way. Sets of the Gordon Craig type are to be used. The plans will fit the Auditorium admirably. No effort is being spared in the way of research to make the best use of resources. Costumes are studied historically, and art sketches of them are being made. The number of workers who are giving endless amounts of time can not all be mentioned here.

The pageant needs helpers. It will probably be the finest spectacle that has ever been staged by church people. Will you help? Will you volunteer?

Turn in your name, or better, get one of the cards for the description of candidates for the cast, fill it out carefully, and you will contribute to making the pageant a success.

Dallas Branch and Fort Worth Mission

Dallas and Third Avenues, Dallas, Texas

Saints of Dallas and Fort Worth are striving to move onward. In Dallas we are handicapped somewhat, because the priests have work which hinders them from visiting to any considerable extent. We hope this condition may soon be remedied. Prospects are encouraging for 1930.

Brother J. A. Wyninger is active in Fort Worth, having the able assistance of our former pastor, H. H. Davenport. Brother Davenport lives much nearer Fort Worth than Dallas; however he finds it possible to help out in Dallas upon occasions. He resigned as pastor of Dallas Branch at the business meeting, held October 7, feeling that he lives too far to be as active as one in that office should be. Elder W. R. Standifer was elected pastor for the remainder of the year.

The time for Religio meeting was changed from Sunday evening at six o'clock to Friday evening at eight o'clock.

Rally day was held October 6. A large crowd attended the communion service, and after the prayer of dismissal they spread dinner on long tables at the church. Brother R. F. Moore was the speaker in the evening.

October 13 and 14 Brother C. W. Tischer, district president, of Houston, was here and preached two splendid sermons.

Team Number One of the church building fund held its Halloween party at Brother and Sister Herbert C. Bleil's home Halloween night for the benefit of the fund. All were in masquerade. Mrs. F. W. Hancock won the prize offered for costume and make-up.

Team Number Two of the building fund held a rummage sale October 26. The members find these sales profitable.

Elder A. M. Baker, missionary to Texas, held a good series of meetings from October 29 to November 10. He gave a timely talk to the children at the close of the Sunday school hour November 10.

Not long ago Sister Ida M. Nicoll suffered injury in a fall down a short flight of stairs. Both her ankles were broken.

An appropriate program for Thanksgiving and College Day was held on College Day by the Sunday school.

The Religio sponsored a party at the home of the assistant president, Sister W. E. Evrett. A large number enjoyed the games and music, after which the young women served refreshments. This party occurred Thanksgiving night.

The Women's Department find doughnut sales very helpful in raising its part on the church building fund.

December 8 Brother and Sister William R. Fasig, formerly of Dallas, now of Independence, Missouri, arrived by auto. These stand-bys in church work were given a hearty welcome.

December 22 the annual Christmas tree was had. The program was successfully presented by the Sunday school, after which candy was provided for the children. The gifts Santa had left were then distributed to the members.

Monday night, December 23, we met in regular quarterly business meeting, electing officers for the new year. Most of the officers for the year 1929 were reelected by unanimous vote.

Oshoto, Wyoming

December 21.—Apostle J. F. Curtis has been here the past week and has organized us into a branch, ordaining Brother Fred Cousins to the office of elder and Brother Horace Hartshorn to the office of priest. The name of this branch is Oshoto Wyoming Branch, and the officers are as follows: President, Fred Cousins, Moorcroft, Wyoming; priest, Horace Hartshorn, Stroner, Wyoming; secretary, Sister Audrey Stubbart, Oshoto, Wyoming; treasurer, Sister Rosabelle Gray, Oshoto; chorister, Sister Lena Nitcy, Oshoto; and bishop's agent, F. V. Cole, Oshoto.

We held all-day meeting and a basket dinner at the Little Missouri Schoolhouse December 15. A good crowd was present, and the sermons contributed to a splendid day. Five children were blessed.

Elder Curtis preached two nights at Stroner, two nights at New Haven, two nights at the Fred Cousins Schoolhouse, and two nights and Sunday at the Little Missouri Schoolhouse. Attendance was very good considering the cold, the temperature being much below zero the last four or five nights.

We are hopeful, now that we are a branch, that the church will see fit to send us an elder at least once a year, and that we may be able to have church services frequently. We ask the prayers of the members that we may let our light shine to the extent that we may be a help to the church and that our branch may grow in numbers.

Lancaster, Ohio

Saints in this branch were made sad by the death of Sister Pearl Friesner's infant son December 16. Elder William P. Vickroy was called December 10 and 11 to administer to the baby, and it rested well until death claimed it. The doctor said it could not have been resting better the day before it died. The mother is a member of the church; and the father, though a nonmember, is a man of great faith in God and the church. In the presence of about eighteen nonmembers Brother Vickroy administered to and blessed the babe. December 18 he preached the funeral sermon at the house, and Brother S. E. Dickson at the church, the same people attending both services.

December 22 the telephone in the home of Brother Vickroy rang, and the sad news came over the wire of the passing of Brother Wasem. Many mourn his loss, for he was a good Saint. Many times he told Brother Vickroy that he never heard a sermon of the gospel until he was about seventy years of age. However, he was glad at that age to obey the gospel. He was a man who had believed the Bible all his life but could find no one teaching it as he thought it should be taught. When he heard his first gospel sermon, he at once said that it was the gospel of Christ, and soon he was baptized. He was a good Saint and many times told his best friends what he would like to do for the church, but his age was against him. Wherever he went he told the beautiful story of the gospel. He delighted in nothing more than to tell the gospel story to the world yet unacquainted with the gospel.

The Saints have had no place in which to meet for about two months, and the lack of meetings has been discouraging, but we trust in God and know that this is his church. We are hoping that the Saints of Lancaster will in the near future have a church home or some place in which to gather to worship the Lord.

It is the writer's greatest desire to be of service to the people of God and to help build up Zion, and his prayer is that the Saints may live in such a way that God will be pleased to bless his people.

We are thankful for the church papers from which comes good news from the members. God has wonderfully blessed us, and we are well again and at work. It is our prayer that God will bless his church and people in the last days and that Zion may arise and shine.

WILLIAM P. VICKROY.

In His Name

By George S. Lincoln

We as a people rejoice in the fact that we are numbered in the Church of Jesus Christ. But I often wonder how many of us realize the glory attached to that name. Think of it! It is the only "name under heaven, given among men, whereby we must be saved." The salvation of all mankind depends upon accepting that name. What is there about it which makes it so important? It is a name that is above "every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come." There never will be a greater name known than the name Jesus Christ.

Paul says: "I bow my knees unto the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named." The family in heaven consists of those who have been saved through the name of Jesus, through obedience to his gospel, through entering into his church, and thus taking upon themselves his name. And those on earth in the same church are part of the same family—who have taken upon themselves his name, and are members of the church of Jesus Christ.

There is only one true church, and all the members of that church, or family, in heaven or on earth, are named in his name, Jesus Christ. In Philippians 2:9 we read of Jesus: "God has highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth."

Jesus is so important and his name so great that in time to come, every knee must bow to it. There will be no exception. It is the only name to which we can look for salvation, now and hereafter. Paul tells us in his first chapter to the Hebrews that Jesus was "appointed heir of all things"; "And when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the majesty on high, being made so much better than the angels, as he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they." View it as you may, there is no grander, no more excellent name anywhere, even among the angels. It is the most glorious name in the celestial kingdom of heaven. How could his church be called by any other name?

We also read that he is the "head of the church, which is his body." And again, "for his body's sake, which is the church." His body of worshippers is his church, and he is the head of that body. What is the name of that body? Jesus Christ. And what is the name of that church? The Church of Jesus Christ.

Peter, on the Day of Pentecost, told all the people gathered there to "repent and be baptized, everyone of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Why be baptized? Because that is the only way to come into his body, the church, as we read, "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ"; and, "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creature." He is a son of God by adoption. For Christ came "that we might receive the adoption of sons, and because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his Son into your hearts. . . . and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ."

The saints at Rome were told: "Ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirits, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ."

Again, God planned that all who would obey the gospel should receive "the adoption of children by Jesus Christ." Paul told the members of the church at Ephesus, "Ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God." They by adoption through baptism, became members of the family of God, of his household.

John says, "Now are we the sons of God. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." They were of the family, of the household, and were sons by adoption. They were members of the church of Jesus Christ. They belonged to the kingdom of God, and were joint heirs with Christ in all the blessings of the kingdom. In consideration of all this is it any wonder that we teach, as Jesus did, that "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God"? All who desire to become members of his church and family must be baptized, and take upon themselves his name and become sons of God by adoption. There is no other way, and no other name by which we must be saved.

Bremerton, Washington

The first two weeks in October Elder A. C. Martin, district missionary, held meetings here. The crowd was small each evening, but those who came out heard wonderful sermons.

Since the branch was organized last September, we have exceeded our quota, and good seed has been sown which we hope will bear fruit in earnest workers.

One Friday evening some of the Saints ferried over to Manette to the home of our aged Brother and Sister Richmond, where prayer meeting was held. Several of the neighbors were there, and all felt spiritually blessed. Through the efforts and faithfulness of these good people we believe it is time to open up the work in this place. Brother Bacher, branch president, plans to hold prayer meeting there twice a month.

Another Friday evening some of the Saints journeyed to Port Orchard to have prayer service at the home of Brother and Sister Gosset. It is about nine miles by road to this place, so it is not expedient to do definite work there at present.

The Sunday school is growing slowly. There is just now considerable sickness among the children, but we hope they will be back in school before many days.

In October Sisters Jones, Richard, and Lundeen gave a Halloween party for the juniors. If noise constituted a good time, they surely had it. These three sisters are working on the Christmas program.

The Women's Department is working steadily trying to do its share of branch work. In this department there are more nonmembers than members. These seem to enjoy the work and occasionally come out to church. October 16 the department had a progressive luncheon. Sister Emma McDole, superintendent of the Department of Women of this district, came over and gave a splendid talk on My job.

A new family has moved in to swell the number in this small group, Brother and Sister Coop, from Portland, Oregon.

Our Departed Ones

McCORMICK.—Marion M. McCormick was born in Valparaiso, Indiana, May 10, 1853, and departed this life at Studley, Kansas, December 14, 1929. He married Martha A. Shull in 1881, and to them three children were born. The eldest child, a daughter, Mrs. Bessie Edith Wells, passed away in August, 1925. Surviving are one son, John McCormick, of Independence, Missouri; one daughter, Mrs. Oscar Hanson, Studley, Kansas; eight grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren. The deceased was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints October 31, 1921. For the last year his health has been failing, and he took to his bed about December 1. Was administered to December 8 by Elder J. D. Shower, and during the administration was told by the Spirit that his prayers had been heard, that he was accepted by the Father. The funeral sermon was by C. E. Stouber, assisted by M. L. Shoemaker. Interment was in Bow Creek Cemetery.

CHRISSINGER.—Olive L. Perry was born March 8, 1850, near Macedonia, Iowa, and when a child eight years old she moved with her parents to Manti, Iowa, where she grew to young womanhood and was married to Charles A. Long, March 19, 1865. To them were born three children: Mrs. Albert Pfander, of Saint Joseph, Missouri; Charles B. Long, of Sidney, Iowa; and Mrs. W. T. Shaw, of Santa Maria, California. Leaving the vicinity of Manti in 1866, she moved to a farm near Shenandoah, Iowa, where she resided until 1893. Her husband preceding her in death, she was again married, this time to Theodore Chrissinger, of Saint Joseph, Missouri, in 1901. He died in 1912. She departed this life December 21, 1929, at the home of her son, Charles B. Long, where she has resided for several years. She is survived by her two daughters and one son, three grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. She was baptized in the year 1863, and lived a faithful member of the church for sixty-six years. Funeral services were held in the Latter Day Saint church in Shenandoah by R. E. Pratt. Interment was in Rose Hill Cemetery at Shenandoah.

The Circle of Prayer

On Monday morning at six o'clock some 332 people assembled in the Stone Church in Independence for a service of prayer. Considering the time of day, with the exigencies and requirements of routine life in a city, this is a remarkably good attendance, and those who came brought with them a spirit of enthusiasm. It has always seemed to me especially fitting that at times the Saints should gather in the early morning for an hour of devotion and worship.

What an inspiring thought it was to bring to mind that as we entered upon that service, a group of Saints in the district of far-away Wales and Southern England would be bringing to a close a meeting of like character! And it was equally impressive to know that as we in Independence rose from our knees and sang a closing song of praise, there was assembling somewhere in Saskatchewan or Alberta, Canada, another band of people with the love of the Restoration in their hearts—to take up the next arc in the "circle of prayer."

Reports from the South Side Branch on the second early morning prayer service in Independence indicate that an unusually fine meeting was had there at six o'clock Tuesday. Sixty-five persons gathered to worship in prayer and song. The pastor was greatly pleased by the attendance, especially in the face of a sharply cold morning, and praised the devotion of the worshipers.

Thus during each hour of each day in this week of prayer a service of praise and petition will be in progress in some part of the church. Now a group in Palestine is praying, soon a little band in Holland or Norway kneels, then voices are lifted in distant Australia and New Zealand—and so the prayers of our people ascend from all around the earth. In other churches and in other lands the hearts and voices of mankind are lifted to a common Father. It is well that the new year should be thus begun.

May we carry from this season of prayer into the coming weeks and months the same feeling of devotion and need of divine blessing. As a people thankful for the mercies of a loving Father, may we continue to present to him our needs and our prayers for guidance. Let us keep the circle of prayer unbroken.

New Type Face for the "Herald"

For more than a quarter century the Saints' Herald has used for its typographical dress the Century Expanded, the most readable and widely used letter of its day. The Herald Publishing House was among the first to procure the Century Expanded, having used it when the office had no composing machines, setting the type by hand from the cases.

The claims made for Century by its designers have proved true, and the Herald Publishing House has worn out considerable foundry type and several fonts of matrices of this style. The matrices used of recent years were becoming badly worn and somewhat troublesome and unsatisfactory. Doubtless they would have been replaced two or three years back if those in charge of the work had been able to satisfy themselves in the choice of a type style which would bid fair to become as useful as the one they wished to discard.

Century Expanded was so easily readable in comparison with others of its day that never have those who selected it wished they had chosen a different type face. It also proved to be very durable, not easily destroyed by careless handling, and sufficiently stylish as to retain its popularity in many quarters up to the present hour.

But progress has been made in the designing of type faces, particularly within the past few years. Ornate faces have been produced which at the same time are quite readable. But the crowning piece of designing, and the one which is sweeping the country because it combines beauty and utility, has just recently been perfected. Early in December the Herald Publishing House purchased a complete outfit of matrices of the new Ideal design, and on January 1 the Saints' Herald, and on January 2 Zion's Ensign appeared in their new dress.

I am very sure that readers of these publications whose eyes are not strong and clear of sight will become great admirers of the new dress. And I believe those who look for beauty and dignity in typography will congratulate the management on having procured the present equipment.

The Intertype Corporation, of New York City, have designed and developed this new type face, and they truthfully say of it:

This new type was developed . . . after tests made by teachers, optometrists, and expert typographers. Tests have shown that the average reader can read more Intertype Ideal with less fatigue than any other newspaper type face. . . . The new type appears much larger and clearer and meets the demands for better print without any reduction in the amount of news matter.

The Herald uses three sizes of Ideal for its columns, the six point, from which obituary notices, minutes of conferences, and some other matter is printed, being the smallest size. The news is printed from the eight point size, and is readable for aged people, and those of considerably impaired vision. The editorial and articles columns, together with some such departments as official declarations and reviews of books, appear in the ten point size, using the eight point size for the quotations contained in them.

The Board of Publication and the management of the Herald Publishing House are to be commended and congratulated on their choice of the Ideal type face. It has required the outlay of more than six hundred dollars for matrices alone in order to make the change, but the comfort and welfare of the readers of our publications is of great importance, and must be secured.

Graceland's Dream Comes True

Since December 14, 1929, all reports from Graceland College have been echoing the "squeals of delight" with which the girls of the school moved into the new dormitory on that day. The "Graceland chats" and the Graceland Record have been bubbling over with the joyous news—that at last the women of Graceland who live on the Hill have a home all their own! And through the excitement and thrills of moving in, there seems to run the refrain of that once popular song, "I must be dreaming!"

For it is just a bit dazzling, just a bit difficult to realize, for those who experienced the pioneer days, as it were, of previous dormitories—Marietta Hall, Patroness Hall, Bide-a-wee. The girls who enroll in Graceland next year for the first time, will indeed comprise a new generation of dormitory occupants. They will never know the frostiness of an early winter morning in the rooms of Patroness, the keen competition for possession of a bathtub in Bide-awee, or the cramped and time-worn walls of the venerated Marietta. But it is doubtful that anyone will pine for the "good old days!"

The new dormitory is a building that would do credit to the campus of any college the size of Graceland and of many larger. As for the interior design and equipment, it is completely up to date, and includes all the furnishings and conveniences of modern college homes for women. The large living room is attractively furnished with soft rugs, overstuffed divans and chairs, settees, tables, and lamps. A large open fireplace completes the picture and gives the last touch to make the room an ideal place for the girls to enjoy their "at home" time, in study, in reading, in "living."

A trip through the building makes one conscious of the pleasure which the girls must take in their new rooms. Each is equipped with a walnut study table, chest of drawers with mirror, two straight-back chairs and an armchair, beds which fold up into the closet, and a sink with hot and cold water. As one of the girls said, "The rooms are complete to the 'nth' degree."

The day of "pages" in the dormitory is now past. In the "good old days," mentioned above, when a fellow went to call on his best girl, she was hailed from her room by the voice of one crying, "Paging Miss Brown!" or the like. Now she will be summoned to the living room by the buzzer in her room, which is sounded from the switchboard at the information desk just inside the front entrance of the building.

Miss Tess Morgan, dean of women, will be in charge of the dormitory. She will occupy the dean's suite, which includes both living quarters and office rooms. When the dormitory is occupied to full capacity, Miss Morgan will have under her direction one hundred and twenty-four girl students, housed in fifty-seven rooms.

The opening of the new dormitory makes way for the use of needed space in other buildings on the campus. The top floor of Briggs Hall, formerly used as Bide-a-wee dormitory, will be partially occupied by the library next year; the remaining rooms being used for classwork, as originally intended.

The location of a permanent commissary and dining room in the new building is a long-looked-for improvement. The commissary has been occupying temporary quarters in the basement of Zimmermann Hall and now relinquishes that space for use as classrooms and by the athletic department. The new dining room is in the north end of the basement floor of the dormitory, is large and well-lighted, and will seat two hundred and seventy-five persons. Adequate facilities are provided for the kitchen and serving counter on the same floor. The students who take their meals on the Hill will fully appreciate their new dining quarters.

The building will be heated by steam, having its own plant located on the basement level. Care of the building will be in charge of E. E. Weddle, formerly superintendent of buildings and grounds. Evan Walden, of Lamoni, has been added to the college staff of administration, and will supervise the maintenance and repair of buildings and grounds.

The erection of a women's dormitory for Graceland has long been the dream of its leaders, students, and friends. The church, as well as the college, may well take pride in the achievement which has made this dream a splendid reality. Much credit is due N. Ray Carmichael, treasurer and business manager of the college, for his untiring ambition and effort in completing the project.

Graceland thus begins the year 1930 with satisfaction in the addition of this new unit to the group of buildings on the beloved Hill. Just now it is a newcomer, still unclad with the memories and traditions which shall come to it, still a bit strange, a bit awing to its appreciative occupants. But soon it shall take its place with the rest—a building whose walls have become a living, breathing part of Graceland. Another step is taken toward the future, the "Greater Graceland." L. E. F.

Council Meetings

In assembling in Independence for the session of Joint Council meetings beginning January 8, the members of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric have this year laid out for themselves a task which it is sincerely hoped will be accomplished. That task is to have appointments made of new and old appointees, division of fields made, and other matters which must be reported to General Conference, ready for report at any moment after the opening session of the conference. These reports in past years have usually come in near the close and sometimes at the very end.

To accomplish the task set, the council members must bring a determination to stick closely to the details surrounding the various problems presented, and to develop the common knowledge of the details concerned which will bring the cooperation necessary. These problems involve a large variety of conditions in fields far flung and of peoples and communities with wide differences of social and industrial habits. To plan our own work with our common goals and objectives in mind to be reached and achieved amidst these varying factors and conditions demands a common wisdom which can be brought into play only by a fine fraternity and the presence of the Spirit of God.

Hence it is encouraging to see the spirit of the men as they come to Independence for these council meetings. Without exception they appear to be lifted up in a hopefulness which springs from happy experiences in their fields and a consciousness that the forces at work are making for distinct progress in the immediate future towards our goals.

With one exception, at this time of writing all members of the council are in Independence, and all seem to be ready for the close application to the task which will assure the end desired being reached. The one absence is due to an emergency which demanded his leaving Independence for a few days, but with the expectancy that he would return early in the session if not at the opening meeting.

May God bless the Joint Council and lend his directing Spirit in power. F. M. S.

Expansion of Independence Sanitarium

Time has justified the wisdom in the word of the Lord which came to the church in 1906 to build the Sanitarium; a place of refuge and help for the sick and afflicted. There were many at that time who could not see the wisdom of this move. Then it was thought unnecessary, but now it is accepted as an indispensable institution, by members and nonmembers alike.

Thousands have registered at the Sanitarium in search of health and relief from pain and suffering. Almost an unbelievably high percentage of this number have been discharged from the institution gladdened and comforted in heart and spirit, and with skillfully mended and rehabilitated bodies have gone out into the world again to carry their full share of individual responsibility.

The institution has served the church at large, and, of course more particularly the twenty thousand or more Saints in the immediate vicinity of Independence. Those not members of the church have likewise sought health service at the Sanitarium, and their patronage, with that of the members of the church, has at times crowded the Sanitarium beyond its capacity. Time and time again this has occurred, until conditions have reached a stage where relief must be given. Sensing the insistent needs for enlarged quarters to care for the increasing patronage of the Sanitarium, and recognizing the need to keep the institution on a plane where it will meet the inspection of medical associations as an accredited institution, the board of trustees faced a situation which necessarily had to be met promptly.

The Board of Trustees, representing the Independence Sanitarium, which is an incorporated institution, has announced plans for building a new unit which may eventually become the center unit of a sanitarium plant that will be adequate at all times to serve the needs of members of the church and others from Independence and vicinity. The new unit will be built on a part of the five-acre plot already owned by the Sanitarium. It will have a west front on Forest Avenue, about two hundred feet from the present Sanitarium Building, and will parallel Van Horn Road, but sufficiently to the south to insure quietude for the patients.

Plans contemplate a fireproof five-story building, modern in equipment, and will include a sun room for convalescent patients. Special attention will be given to equipment for the nursery and children's playroom, and to the department devoted to maternity cases.

The announcement of plans for the new unit have met a very favorable local response, with the result that already a number have voluntarily stated their intention of helping financially with the new building.

The Saints, and particularly members of the ministry who have at one or more times been patients at the sanitarium, will doubtless be made happy in reading this announcement, that the capacity and service of the sanitarium will be increased, not only to meet insistent demands of its present patronage, but also to offer better service and more modern equipment which will contribute to the health and well-being of those who seek its services.

It is possible that eventually part or all of the old building may be converted into a nurses' home, which is much needed at the present time. This move will afford a much needed relief from the inadequate quarters now used as a home for the staff of nurses.

"Journal-Post" Carries Invitation to Centennial Conference

The Kansas City Journal-Post for December 31 carried a special magazine section of forty-eight pages known as the Diamond Jubilee Section, celebrating the completing of seventy-five years' continuous publication of the newspaper established as the Kansas City Enterprise, but later and for many years known as the Kansas City Journal, and since 1928 known as the Kansas City Journal-Post.

A Project for Youth in Business Management

There is being issued from the presses of the Herald Publishing House a very neat, convenient, and practical accounting or business record book, to be known as the Junior Stewardship Record Book. The book has been prepared jointly by the Presiding Bishopric and the Department of Religious Education, as a most practical means of religious education in thrift, in accounting, in wise and unselfish use of money, and in observing the financial law of the church. Very early the youth of the church should be taught and encouraged to be industrious. They must be encouraged to earn, to spend wisely, to share helpfully with others, and to make some consistent saving. They must be taught to play fair in their partnership with God. They must find satisfaction as they share in the program of the church, to help accomplish its task in the world.

The Record Books are 6 by 8½ inches in size, with pages conveniently ruled and planned for a simple but adequate form of accounting. Careful directions are given for keeping the ordinary accounts of childhood and youth, developing habits and ideals which may be carried into adult life. Several pages are devoted to brief but clear defini-of this Diamond Jubilee Section with an invitation to attend the Centennial World Conference to open in Independence at the Auditorium Building on April 6, 1930. On these pages it also announces the resuming of work to further complete the audience room of the Auditorium, and the production of The Course of Time, the oratorio which is the crowning work of Patriarch John T. Gresty, of Australia, the Centennial Oratorical Contest finals, and other special features.

This two-page spread is illustrated by views of some historic buildings of Independence and some recent public building acquisitions to the city which is the headquarters of the church.

Special invitation is given to the Saints of the branch organizations in all the world, and a list of these organizations in America and in foreign lands occupies about one fourth of the space. The lower center is illuminated by an ensemble view of the Independence Stone Church, the Independence Sanitarium, the Herald Publishing House, and the Institute Building on the Campus, surrounding an airplane view of the Auditorium, taken from the northwest at an elevation of one thousand feet.

nitions of terms used, and to the underlying principles of good stewardship and business efficiency. A brief form of youth's annual financial statement is included. It is desired that the experiences gained shall help lead the youth of the church to an intelligent, active, and happy participation in the work of the church and to prepare him for efficient adult stewardship.

To Secure the Record Books

As an investment in the youth of the church, the Presiding Bishopric are having the books prepared in sufficient quantities to supply every boy and girl of our Sunday schools, between the ages of eight and twenty-one years, who will give assurance that the book will be carefully used. Books are to be provided without cost to the boys and girls on the condition that the local Sunday school authorities will cooperate with us in making the project successful. Sample copies are to be mailed to every Sunday school superintendent in the church, with a detailed outline of the plan.

It will then be necessary for the plan to be presented to the boys and girls of the branch to ascertain how many books actually will be used. An adult sponsor should be chosen who can and will give the young folks careful attention and advice in using their money and in keeping their accounts in a businesslike way.

The project will be organized everywhere under the advice and with the cooperation of the bishop, bishop's agent, or solicitor. We shall try to keep in close touch with the movement in every branch through correspondence with those in charge. Immediate action must be had if the books are to be put into use at once and the full value of the year's accounting is to be realized.

For further information address, C. B. Woodstock, The Department of Religious Education, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Atherton Community Church Building

The Herald for November 20, page 1403, tells of the activity in the Atherton congregation of Saints to build a church and community building. Thus far the skilled and common labor needed for the construction of this building has been donated.

The Atherton group is desirous of getting the building inclosed, so that they can proceed with building operations right on through the winter. If this is to be accomplished, this splendid open weather should be used to advantage. The walls are ready for the carpenters, and any who would like to help construct this church should communicate with D. R. Hughes at Atherton, or with J. A. Koehler or Amos Allen, in Independence.

Centennial Conference

Advance Information

The General Conference of April 6, 1930, will probably bring together the largest number of Latter Day Saints ever assembled in the history of the Reorganization. The conference will be comprehensive and will include the entire field of activities through which the work of the church is being promoted.

The business sessions will be held in the main audience chamber of the Auditorium each afternoon at 2 p. m. With two exceptions there will be a program in the same room each week night. Two communion services will be held on Sunday morning, April 6. The first one from 8 to 9.45, and the second one from 10.15 to 12. The final contest of the Centennial Oratorical Contest will take place Sunday night, April 6. Two performances of the Centennial Oratorio, The Course of Time, will be given Sunday and Monday nights, April 13 and 14, and the Centennial Pageant, The Fulfillment, will be given Friday and Saturday nights, April 18 and 19. On week days some thirty-nine class periods have been arranged, between 7.30 and 12 o'clock, in the Auditorium. At the Stone Church on week days there will be two prayer services, two lecture periods, and one preaching service in the morning, and a preaching service each night. Sunday services for the Stone Church will be announced later.

Each institution and department of the church has been asked to provide an exhibit covering the work in its particular field, for which display space has been allotted.

In maturing plans for the Centennial Conference, it has been discovered that the demands for exhibit space by the various institutions and departments of the church are already in excess of the available locations.

Due to this fact, and also for the reason that the conference is to be devoted strictly to religious matters, it has been thought inadvisable to accept any exhibits or displays from private individuals or business concerns, for either exhibition or sale.

The Laurel Club of Independence has been given the task of providing meal service for the conference, and the entire basement of the Auditorium will be used for this purpose, except the space in the center which will be used for some of the larger classes. However, this can be quickly cleared if additional table space is needed.

Readers of the Herald are invited to watch this column each week for announcements regarding the plans for the coming Conference.

What of the New Year?

A radio sermon by U. W. Greene.

(Scripture reading, Proverbs 4: 1-27.)

Our subject may properly be called New Years counsel. We have entered upon another year, but in what spirit and with what purpose have we met its dawn? These divisions of time are apt to make lasting impressions upon our minds, and it will be well for us if these impressions are of a useful character, and if their influence is effective and permanent.

I believe the counsel I have just read is calculated to do us good. It emanates from a man rich in worldly wisdom as well as spiritual experience; but the most of us are loath to take advice. It is doubtful whether any method of teaching other than by experience is not time wasted.

Most of us have learned that it is useless to say: "Son, never shift gears crossing a railroad track; you may kill your engine." Son, being a normal boy, will shift gears on the track to find out why he should not. After he has been bumped or narrowly missed by a train, he will remark in surprise, "Dad was right, after all."

If you tell a boy not to touch his tongue to iron in cold weather, his desire to try it becomes great. I know it to be true by a never-to-be-forgotten experience. Warn the young boy not to skate on thin ice, and he will hunt the thinnest. Tell a small town girl that she must never make eyes at a traveling man, and she'll be riding in his car that evening. People are not convinced by being told; they want to confirm the tale by experience. Parents and educators know this to be true.

The ten commandments have been in force some 3,500 years; yet most of us have to break six or seven of them before admitting from our experience that Moses knew what he was talking about. Some of us have been permitted to solve a few problems in life, and hope to solve a few more ere we cross the Great Divide.

In the dawning of this glad new year, it certainly would be a laudable ambition for men and women everywhere to resolve to lift politics—municipal, county, state, and national—from the degradation into which they have fallen because of graft, as revealed of late years by Congressional exposure. It should be a noble ambition for any man to be above party trickery, wire pulling, graft, and to make politics clean and a blessing to the world. This can never be done without deep convictions, without high moral purpose. Principles should be in the saddle, not graft and greed. There should ever be before our eyes the ideal of good government and improved conditions. What the final outcome of present conditions will be, defies the confident prediction of everyone but a prophet. There must be a change for the better, or national and universal disaster will come.

Another question which demands serious consideration by legislators, educators, ministers, and thinking people everywhere, is that of marriage. There is nothing the matter with marriage. It is God ordained. The trouble comes from the people entering the marriage state. Many are defective, lacking the necessary intelligence to live harmoniously in this relationship.

Judge Saboth, of the superior court, Chicago, Illinois, once said:

Divorce is hitting up a more furious pace than ever. Manifold factors, of course, are involved, such as the swiftness and spirit of the age, the emancipation of women, the economic marriage, husband and wife both working, the rabbit hutch flat with furniture tucked in the walls and meals out of a tin can; the growing non-observance of law, and the drift from old teachings; the decrease of parental influence and the alarming tendency to regard marriage as an episode, rather than a sacrament.

Another symptom is the growth of divorces of persons married less than a year—a matter of deep significance, indicating, as it does a growing disposition toward trial marriages. It is causing much alarm.

This condition certainly was described by the Apostle Paul in 2 Timothy 3: 1-8:

This know, also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, . . . without natural affection, truce breakers . . . lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God.

It is evident to all that we are surrounded by a generation of irresponsible, frivolous, pleasure-loving people who are living life at a rate that would seem incredible to the people of a generation ago. Today, everything and everybody is in a hurry; all is bustle and confusion. There is a passionate craving for excitement and amusement, as if pleasure is the beginning and ending of human life! And pleasure today means "jazz." The people living in this world of jazz are very much like the rest of us; they have brain and heart, but are lacking in conception of a life of service—glowing, glorious, heroic service to humanity.

While people live this rapid life of pleasure, there is a steady increase in nervous troubles and in mental breakdowns, due to this tuning-up process and the dazzling consequences. It is sheer stupidity for people, young or old, who have good homes and good reputations to go in for unconventional pleasures, yet many feel they will be slighted and left out of the good times unless they play the game. It takes courage and shows character well developed to refuse to follow an individual or the gang into the foolish and hazardous follies of this age. What will the New Year mean for you?

How can we make the greeting, "Happy New Year," come true? There are many things for which we long which do not always bring us happiness. Many people are out for money and care but little as to how they obtain it. Some men and women are bootleggers; others are "hold-up" men, bank robbers, kidnappers, murderers, fake business men. But money thus obtained does not bring happiness. The fear of detection and punishment for their sin destroys their peace of mind. Every young man and woman should profit by the terrible experience of those boys who occupy the front page in the papers with a tale of their crimes. What have they gained? A thrill of excitement, stolen autos, a few paltry dollars, a dishonored name, shame and sorrow to their loved ones, the loss of liberty, honor, and the certain knowledge that the outraged law will keep its heavy hand upon them and demand its vengeance.

Others are unhappy in their domestic relationship and by their sensual pleasures destroy their homes and the happiness of those to whom they are bound by every tie of nature. Sin is a tyrant—absolutely heartless. Given an inch, he takes a mile. The quest for happiness in the path of sensual pleasure is hopeless. This is the "way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is death."

There is a heart hunger in all of us which is never satisfied by indulging the body along sinful lines. The soul of man longeth for God as the hart panteth after the water brook. This longing, this thirst is supplied through the gospel of Jesus Christ alone. It brings godliness with contentment. Paul wrote, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therein to be content." If we are willing to pay the price, obtain godliness, with contentment, it will indeed be a happy new year to all. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

During the year that has become history in our country, we have had peace, abundant food supplies, and work for nearly all of our citizens. This has meant general prosperity. Wages were never so high, the style of living so affluent, the clothing so good, the luxuries of life so generally distributed as now. And yet there has been an increase in the violation of law in bootlegging, robberies, murder, crime of every sort. The saddest feature of this is that over 80 per cent of it is committed by people under twenty-five years of age. Crime is on the increase and the laxity of law enforcement, the ease with which bonds are obtained, the wire-pulling and graft by which criminals are pardoned and turned loose upon the public, constitute a daily menace to law-abiding citizens everywhere.

There is still distress of nations at home and abroad, with perplexity, and great suffering caused by war, hurricanes, unprecedented floods, earthquakes, famine, and the selfish rivalry of commercial conflict. Economic strife is a chief enemy of the brotherhood of nations and of the world. Things are in commotion, and the world should be made better by them. Is it better?

None can be more vitally interested in these changes than the church of Jesus Christ—upon her rests the responsibility and the care of souls. She is seeking to present ideal standards of life to the boys and girls, going into the world of business, only to see them disillusioned by the sordid, selfish, mercenary strife. Nothing will save us from the consequences of this situation but the reorganization of business; and it must be along the lines of the social program of the Lord Jesus Christ, around which must be built the economic institutions of the future; and his followers realize that sacrifice and service are demanded of the business world who produce, buy, and sell, as well as of the men who labor in the ministry.

Fret not thyself because of evildoers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity. For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb. Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed. Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart. Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him; and he shall bring it to pass. And he shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noon-day. Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him: fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass.—Psalm 37: 1-7.

There are multitudes who transfer their hatred from the sin to the sinner, and who plot the destruction of the present order but doubtless would accomplish nothing more than has been accomplished in Russia. Then rather let us pause and seek for the old paths revealed by Jesus Christ, walk in them, and we shall find rest and peace for our souls. "God's way is the right way; God's way is the best way." Let us study the divine economic program and give it a thorough test this coming year. Having done this, we can meet the issues of life courageously—let come what may—health, sickness, prosperity, adversity, death itself—and can say with the poet:

When peace, like a river, attendeth my way,
 When sorrows like sea billows roll;
 Whatever my lot, thou hast taught me to say,
 It is well, it is well with my soul.

Though Satan should buffet, though trials should come,
 Let this blessed assurance control,
 That Christ hath regarded my helpless estate,
 And hath shed his own blood for my soul.

O Lord, haste the day, when my faith shall be sight,
 The clouds be rolled back like a scroll,
 The trump shall resound and the Lord shall descend;
 Even so, it is well with my soul.

Let us enter upon this new year optimistically. There is every prospect of abundant crops, excellent business conditions, plenty of work, and good wages. These conditions make for the prosperity of the country and the happiness of its citizens—the hope for peace at home and abroad. This world seems wonderfully beautiful to most of us. People are traveling and enjoying its beauties as never before, and it is certainly worth while. Let us strip our minds of pride and vanity and the foolishness of our self-importance. Let us control our unruly appetites and our hot tempers, and remember that about one in every hundred of us is entering upon his last year. So it behooves all of us to live up to our highest ideals.

Let us be more patient and forbearing with the members of our families, with our neighbors, with our business associates, and with our brothers and sisters in Christ. Most of the things over which we have quarreled in the past are really of no consequence, and in another generation they will appear trivial. Let us look for the true values in our fellow men and appreciate them now, and not wait to put all our flowers around a pine box and speak our orations above dead ashes.

This year let us try to get a true vision of life and its worth, and give of the best there is in us. Then whatever it may have in store for us, we can say: "It is well with my soul."

Louise F. Tarkington has beautifully expressed my thought for the new year in her poem:

The Land of Beginning Again

I wish there were some wonderful place
 Called the Land of Beginning Again.
 Where all our mistakes and all our heartaches
 And all of our poor selfish grief
 Could be dropped, like a shabby old coat, at the door,
 And never put on again.

I wish we could come on it all unaware,
 Like the hunter who finds a lost trail;
 And I wish that the one whom our blindness had done
 The greatest injustice of all
 Could be at the gates, like an old friend, that waits
 For the comrade he's gladdest to hail.

We would find the things we intended to do
 But forgot, and remembered—too late;
 Little praises unspoken, little promises broken,
 And all of the thousand and one
 Little duties neglected that might have perfected
 The day for one less fortunate.

It wouldn't be possible not to be kind
 In the Land of Beginning Again;
 And the ones we misjudged and the ones whom we grudged
 Their moments of victory here
 Would find in the grasp of our loving handclasp
 More than penitent lips could explain.

For what had been hardest we'd know had been best,
 And what had seemed loss would be gain;
 For there isn't a sting that will not take wing
 When we've faced it and laughed it away;
 And I think that the laughter is most what we're after
 In the Land of Beginning Again.

So I wish that there were some wonderful place,
 Called the Land of Beginning Again,
 Where all our mistakes and all our heartaches
 And all of our poor selfish grief
 Could be dropped, like a shabby old coat, at the door,
 And never put on again.

May you all enjoy a happy and prosperous New Year!

Stewards of God

By Charles H. Arven

Certain statements which have appeared in prominent newspapers might lead one to believe that there is something better to be accomplished in the world than the amassing of millions for pleasure. The fact that some of our richest men are gravely considering how best to benefit humanity with their money might be construed by some thinkers as the dawning of a better era.

Certain it is that their millions could be well spent in broadening the restricted environments of the poor, and helping to shape the future of their lives for the better, thus placing humanity on a more equal basis. If this could be accomplished and living conditions bettered, there would be more hope in the hearts of men, less hatred, less envy and jealousy, and far better environments created to encourage men to accept and live a life of spirituality.

Moreover, conditions of the working class could undergo a radical change for the better, and their minds could be made more receptive to spiritual thinking. Low wages and long hours for those who are forced to perform the world's labor, which in many instances contribute a bare existence in the midst of wealth and luxury, never have been and never can be an inspiration to cheerful thoughts and happiness. Bettering the condition of humanity should pay big dividends and leave no sting or remorse on the conscience. Men who have money to spend for this purpose can, if they use it wisely and justly, become unconsciously, perhaps, stewards of God and workers in his vineyard. There is too much sin and poverty in the world, and millions of dollars spent for pleasure that might well be used to lessen the distress of humanity.

Jesus painted a picture of life that shows the world just how to live it. It may not harmonize with the views of modern theologians, some of whom would have us believe, judging by the stress they lay on the word he-man, that Jesus was nearly akin to a roisterer, in spite of the fact that Isaiah says he was a man of sorrows.

That is not the kind of Jesus we have been brought up to believe in. We want the Christ portrayed in the Bible: the man of sorrows; the meek and lowly Jesus; the Jesus that little children were not afraid to approach. Indeed, there is too strong a tendency among modern theologians and writers to strip the lowly Nazarene of his meek and loving personality; to show him up a direct opposite from what the world knows of him. But the world long ago formed its opinion of our beloved Master, and the traits of his character, and the opinion is too deeply rooted to be torn out by the imagination of a few egotistical writers. And in spite of their writings, the true character of our meek and lowly Savior will stand out vividly before the eyes of the world forever.

It is a far cry from the days when Jesus advised the rich young man to sell all that he had and give to the poor, yet it seems that after all the long centuries that have gone by his advice still holds good, and that there are rich men today who are heeding the words of the Master, and giving gladly as truth and light reveal to them the better way.

Moreover, it is true that there are deep thinkers today who may or may not be religious, who are seriously considering the stewardship plan, and groping for light as to the best way to apply it for the best interests of mankind. And thus the regeneration goes slowly but surely on. Out of the depths of sin, poverty, and despair, humanity will rise—clean. Truth and right must triumph, and bring victory in the end.

Not of evil is this world created and maintained. Nothing good can be built from evil, for between the two there is constant war. Good creates life and maintains it, but evil destroys life. Good strives for that which is pure and noble, while evil strives to tear down good, and creates nothing but black misery and desolation.

Life was created for a purpose that is made up of the higher ideals. If there were no hope of attaining these ideals, life would hold but little interest for the thinking man. Perfection is gained only by learning the higher truths and trying to live them in their fullness. Material things are only a side issue, and have no place in our lives except so far as our physical needs are concerned. It is for the better and spiritual things that we must strive. Through them alone can we hope to ascend to a higher plane, for material things like our bodies must soon perish, but the soul will go on till it finds at last that higher plane for which its Maker created it.

So if there is a future life, and we believe there is, we have everything to gain by living the higher ideals, for things that are pure and wholesome need no champion to defend them; they stand clearly revealed of themselves. Should there be no future life, we have lost nothing by clinging to them, for it is better to have lived a clean life than an evil one. No philosopher is needed to demonstrate this truth.

Many men have died martyrs in the interests of humanity, but it has ever been so since the earliest dawn of history. Always has God been able to raise up men to perform his work, when a crisis was impending. The progress of humanity to a state of perfection seems to be long drawn out, and may continue to be till man finds it at last in the rosy dawn of the glorious millennium.

Surely the power of God is working in the hearts of men, urging them to cooperate for the general good, and to bring about a better condition. But humanity is weak. It is hard for man to rise above material things. It has taken long centuries for man to arrive at his present standard of thinking, and the struggle for enlightenment and truth is still going on. Man was not created and placed on earth with a purposeless idea in view, as atheists and infidels seem to think, but with a definite purpose that God has planned and is able to carry out. As yet we are like children in the world's school, but are steadily advancing to higher planes of truth and knowledge; and truth will set man free.

Thus God is raising up men from the various walks of life to be his stewards, lieutenants, and captains. Sending them forth while the harvest is white, to spread his message throughout the world; to gather his people together in bonds of unity and love, that the sheaves may be garnered and ready for that glorious time when his people shall dwell on this earth in perfect peace and plenty.

One of the good and wise sayings of Benjamin Franklin is, "It requires a good strong man to say, 'I was mistaken and I am sorry.' A weak man hesitates and often fails to do the right thing."

The Priesthood from the Beginning

By J. F. Mintun

One of the most important revelations in explanation of the priesthood from the beginning of man upon the earth is the 83d section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, from which I quote as follows:

Verily, this is the word of the Lord, that the city New Jerusalem shall be built by the gathering of the saints, beginning at this place, even the place of the temple, which temple shall be reared in this generation; for verily, this generation shall not all pass away until an house shall be built unto the Lord, and a cloud shall rest upon it, which cloud shall be even the glory of the Lord, which shall fill the house. And the sons of Moses, according to the holy priesthood, which he received under the hand of his father-in-law, Jethro; and Jethro received it under the hand of Caleb; and Caleb received it under the hand of Elihu; and Elihu under the hand of Jeremy; and Jeremy under the hand of Gad; and Gad under the hand of Esaias; and Esaias received it under the hand of God; Esaias also lived in the days of Abraham and was blessed of him, which Abraham received the priesthood from Melchisedec; who received it through the lineage of his fathers, even till Noah; and from Noah till Enoch, through the lineage of their fathers; and from Enoch to Abel, who was slain by the conspiracy of his brother; who received the priesthood by the commandments of God, by the hand of his father Adam, who was the first man; which priesthood continueth in the church of God in all generations, and is without beginning of days or end of years.

And the Lord confirmed a priesthood also upon Aaron and his seed throughout all their generations, which priesthood also continueth and abideth forever, with the priesthood which is after the holiest order of God. And this greater priesthood administereth the gospel and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God. Therefore, in the ordinances thereof the power of godliness is manifest; and without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh; for without this, no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live.

Now, this Moses plainly taught to the children of Israel in the wilderness, and sought diligently to sanctify his people that they might behold the face of God; but they hardened their hearts, and could not endure his presence, therefore, the Lord, in his wrath (for his anger was kindled against them), swore that they should not enter into his rest, while in the wilderness, which rest is the fullness of his glory. Therefore, he took Moses out of their midst and the holy priesthood also; and the lesser priesthood continued, which priesthood holdeth the key of the ministering of angels and the preparatory gospel, which gospel is the gospel of repentance and of baptism, and the remission of sins, and the law of carnal commandments, which the Lord, in his wrath, caused to continue with the house of Aaron, among the children of Israel until John, whom God raised up, being filled with the Holy Ghost from his mother's womb: for he was baptized while he was yet in his childhood, and was ordained by the angel of God at the time he was eight days old unto this power.

In this revelation we are given the definite information,

1. That "this is the word of the Lord."
2. That there are those who became "the sons of Moses according to the holy priesthood."

3. That Adam held the high priesthood, and by command of God conferred it on Abel.

4. That Melchisedec, Noah, and Enoch to Abel all received the high priesthood through "the lineage of their fathers."

5. That Esaias received it "under the hand of God"; and also through the blessing of Abraham; and from him through ordinations it was handed down to Moses, through Jethro.

6. That the high priesthood "continueth in the church of God in all generations."

7. That "the greater priesthood ministereth the gospel, and holdeth the mysteries of the kingdom."

8. That "without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, . . . no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live."

9. That "this Moses plainly taught to the children of Israel in the wilderness"; and

10. That because "they hardened their hearts, . . . he took Moses out of their midst and the holy priesthood also."

The most important of these is

1. That "this is the word of the Lord."
  2. That Adam held the high priesthood, and it was handed down even till Moses.
  3. That this priesthood "continueth in the church of God in all generations."
  4. That "without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, . . . no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live."
  5. That Moses taught this to the children of Israel in the wilderness.
- It is evident from the fourth fact above presented of the important ones, that "Moses, and Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, and seventy of the elders of Israel" held the high priesthood, for the Scriptures say "they saw the God of Israel."

While the high priesthood was yet with Moses and the people, he was commanded to "take unto thee Aaron, thy brother, and his sons with him, . . . that he may minister" unto the Lord in "the priest's office, even Aaron, Nadab, and Abihu, Eleazar, and Ithamar." This was before they entered into the wilderness. The martyr, Stephen, in his memorable and last discourse, said that Moses prophesied, "A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him ye shall hear."

"This is he that was in the church in the wilderness," speaking of Jesus Christ. Since then Christ was in the church in the wilderness, therefore the high priesthood was then in the church, for it "continueth in the church of God in all generations." The law had been given previous to the children of Israel entering into the wilderness, so that he who gave the law, and the law given, were both in existence; and in this case the high priesthood was being ministered and the law was under its authority, and so it continued to be ministered till after they had passed out of the wilderness, and Moses had been taken from them in Mount Horeb, just before they passed over the River Jordan. The ministration of the gospel and the church did not profit the children of Israel, as the Scriptures state, "not being mixed with faith in them who heard." (Hebrews 4: 2.)

There is another statement in this same section in the Doctrine and Covenants which says, in the fourth paragraph:

and the lesser priesthood continueth, which priesthood holdeth the key of the ministering of angels and the preparatory gospel, which gospel is the gospel of repentance and of baptism, and the remission of sins, and the law of carnal commandments, which the Lord, in his wrath, caused to continue with the house of Aaron, among the children of Israel until John.

But it says that this John "was ordained by the angel of God at the time he was eight days old unto this power." This must mean that it continued with those of the posterity of Aaron who remained on the Eastern Continent till John. It has no reference to the seed of Joseph, who were by command of God brought to the land of promise, and we shall see that this is so by an examination of the record of the people on the land of promise as contained in the Book of Mormon.

Lehi and family, of the tribe of Manasseh, and Ishmael's family, who we believe were of the tribe of Ephraim, were brought to the land of promise. The lineage of Ishmael is not given, and had there been an attempt to give it the Scriptures would have been contradicted, for Ephraim was "mixed with the people" and "their glory shall fly away like a bird, from the birth, and from the womb, and from the conception." (Hosea 7: 8; 9: 11.) According to the prophetic blessing of Moses on the tribe of Joseph, he says, "with them shall he push the people together to the ends of the earth; and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh." (Deuteronomy 33: 13-17.) Jacob's blessing on the head of Ephraim and Manasseh contains this statement, "The angel which redeemed me bless the lads, . . . and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth." This to me is conclusive that they would be together, and their work would be together in "the midst of the earth," and that could be found nowhere else than in the land that, going both ways from the land of Egypt, would bring the midst of the earth in the place equal distance from the starting place, which is America. So we conclude that both Ephraim and Manasseh were in the land of promise.

Shall we find the church of God in existence among the people who came here, we must conclude that the high priesthood exists, according to the statement in this 83d section, paragraph 2, which says, "which priesthood continueth in the church of God in all generations."

After Alma had baptized at the "waters of Mormon," "about two hundred and four souls" and they "were filled with the grace of God: . . . And they were called the church of God, or the church of Christ, from that time forward." (Mosiah 9: 38-49.)

Further the history says: "And now Alma was their high priest, he being the founder of their church. And it came to pass that none received authority to preach or to teach except it were by him from God." (Mosiah 11: 17, 18.) This is taken from the account of Alma concerning himself. (See Mosiah 11, preface.)

After the son of Alma, whose name was Alma, ceased to fight against the church, he became a chosen vessel in the hands of God, and it is said that Mosiah took the plates of brass and all the things which he had kept, and conferred them upon Alma, who was the son of Alma.

Yea, all the records, and also the interpreters, and conferred them upon him, and commanded him that he should keep and preserve them, and also keep a record of the people, . . . —Mosiah 13: 2.

Alma was "the high priest; his father having conferred the office upon him, and had given him charge concerning all the affairs of the church." (Mosiah 13: 63.) Remember that this was the "church of God, or church of Christ."

In the sixth year of the reign of the judges on this land, the people were afflicted, and they believed the judgments of God had been sent upon them.

And they began to establish the church more fully; yea, and many were baptized in the waters of Sidon, and were joined to the church of God; . . . they were baptized by the hand of Alma, who had been consecrated the high priest over the people of the church, by the hand of his father Alma.—Alma 2: 4, 5.

In the commencement of the ninth year of the reign of the judges, Alma confined himself wholly to the high priesthood of the holy order of God, to the testimony of the word, according to the spirit of revelation and prophecy. (See Alma 2: 28.)

Again in the words of Alma we have this record:

I, Alma, having been consecrated by my father Alma, to be a high priest over the church of God, he having power and authority from God to do these things, . . . —Alma 3: 3.

Again the record says:

And I would that ye should remember that the Lord God ordained priests, after his holy order, which was after the order of his Son, to teach these things unto the people; and those priests were ordained after the order of his Son, in a manner that thereby the people might know in what manner to look forward to his Son for redemption.

Then follows why they were so ordained, and Alma continues:

Or in fine: in the first place they were on the same standing with their brethren; thus this holy calling being prepared from the foundation of the world for such as would not harden their hearts, being in and through the atonement of the only begotten Son, who was prepared; and thus being called by this holy calling, and ordained unto the high priesthood of the holy order of God, to teach his commandments unto the children of men, that they also might enter into his rest, this high priesthood being after the order of his Son, which order was from the foundation of the world: or in other words, being without beginning of days or end of years, being prepared from eternity to all eternity, according to his foreknowledge of all things. Now they were ordained after this manner: Being called with a holy calling, and ordained with a holy ordinance, and taking upon them the high priesthood of the holy order, which calling, and ordinance, and high priesthood, is without beginning or end. Thus they become high priests for ever, after the order of the Son, the only begotten of the Father, who is full of grace, equity, and truth. And thus it is. Amen.—Alma 9: 68-73.

We further follow what Alma has to say about the priesthood among the people on this continent of the tribe of Joseph:

Now as I said concerning the holy order of this high priesthood: there were many who were ordained and became high priests of God; . . . And now, my brethren, I would that ye should humble yourselves before God, and bring forth fruit meet for repentance, that ye may also enter into that rest; yea, humble yourselves even as the people in the days of Melchisedec, who was also a high priest after this same order which I have spoken, who also took upon him the high priesthood for ever. And it was this same Melchisedec to whom Abraham paid tithes: yea; even our father Abraham paid tithes of one tenth part of all that he possessed. Now these ordinances were given after this manner, that thereby the people might look forward on the Son of God, it being a type of his order, or it being his order; and this, that they might look forward to him for a remission of their sins, that they might enter into the rest of the Lord.—Alma 10: 1-10.

Alma further said in giving an account of the angel's appearance to him, and what the angel said:

But behold, the voice said unto me, Arise. And I arose and stood up, and beheld the angel. And he said unto me, If thou wilt of thyself be destroyed, seek no more to destroy the church of God. And it came to pass that I fell to the earth; and it was for the space of three days and three nights, that I could not open my mouth; neither had I the use of my limbs. And the angel spake more things unto me, which were heard by my brethren, but I did not hear them; for when I heard the words, If thou wilt be destroyed of thyself, seek no more to destroy the church of God, I was struck with such great fear and amazement, lest perhaps I should be destroyed, that I fell to the earth, and I did hear no more.—Alma 17: 7-9.

After Alma had given instruction and a blessing to his sons, the further record says:

And now it came to pass, that the sons of Alma did go forth among the people, to declare the word unto them. And Alma also, himself, could not rest, and he also went forth. Now we shall say no more concerning their preaching, except that they preached the word, and the truth, according to the spirit of prophecy and revelation: and they preached after the holy order of God, by which they were called.—Alma 20: 1, 2.

The history further says:

. . . and there was continual peace among them, and exceeding great prosperity in the church, because of their heed and diligence which they gave unto the word of God, which was declared unto them by Helaman, and Shiblon, and Corianton, and Ammon, and his brethren, etc.; yea, and by all those who had been ordained by the holy order of God, being baptized unto repentance, and sent forth to preach among the people, etc.—Alma 21: 185, 186.

And last of all, Moroni speaks of this holy order of God as follows:

Behold, it was by faith that they of old were called after the holy order of God; wherefore, by faith was the law of Moses given. But in the gift of his Son, hath God prepared a more excellent way, and it is by faith that it hath been fulfilled; for if there be no faith among the children of men, God can do no miracle among them; wherefore he showed not himself until after their faith.—Ether 5: 11-13.

Read further concerning Alma and Amulek, the faith of Lehi and Nephi, and of Ammon and his brothers in this connection. (See Ether 5: 14-16.)

This establishes beyond a doubt, if we believe in the Book of Mormon what Mormon recorded of that which he abridged and what Alma and Moroni had said; which is, that the priesthood after the holy order of God, or the Melchisedec priesthood, was with the tribe of Joseph on this continent, being conferred by the hand of God on Alma, and previously it had been upon Adam and Esaias. Should we yet assume that the Melchisedec priesthood was not with the tribe of Joseph, we place ourselves as those who deny the inspiration found in Doctrine and Covenants, section 83, or the inspiration of the Book of Mormon in many places. We can not deny the inspiration of the Doctrine and Covenants, and we must assuredly accept the Book of Mormon and what it says about the priesthood after the holy order of the Son of God being on this continent before Christ came in the flesh. As a church we have declared our belief in both the Book of Mormon and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, so we are bound by conclusions growing out of what both have said about the high priesthood being conferred upon Alma, and through him in accord to the callings of God, on others, according to the principle of lineal descent.

To deny that the high priesthood was among the people on this continent, as the Book of Mormon claims, is to consent to the erroneous idea that the Levitical priesthood gave to one or more to have authority over the affairs of the church of God, so that no one was given the right to preach or to teach without it was through this one or ones over the church as he received instruction from God. It would make it necessary to claim that some one in the church under the Levitical priesthood has all the right which has been objected to as being the legitimate right of anyone in the church holding the Melchisedec priesthood, in accord to the revelations given to the church through Joseph Smith as recorded in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

Under the Levitical priesthood there was but one high priest acting, but under the Melchisedec priesthood according to both the Book of Mormon and the revelations of God in the Doctrine and Covenants, and practiced by the church organized in 1830, since near its beginning. Among the seed of Joseph on this continent "there were many who were ordained and became high priests of God." (Alma 10: 1.) Alma and his sons, Helaman, Shiblon, and Corianton, were high priests "after the holy order of God," and after the departure of Alma, Helaman, Shiblon, and Corianton "were high priests over the church," and there were other high priests in the church who assisted to "maintain order in the church." (Alma 20: 1, 2; and 21: 34, 73.)

With this order agree the revelations of God in every age when the church of God, or church of Christ has existed, and wherever it existed; and it is so in the church acknowledged of God as his church today, there being three high priests presiding over the church, and other high priests in the church assisting them to maintain order. This is one of the strong proofs that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the rightful church, and they are true believers in the Book of Mormon, and that the revelation in the Doctrine and Covenants is in agreement with the Book of Mormon.

It is universally believed and advocated by nearly all factions of the Latter Day Saints, that the Bible and the Book of Mormon are in agreement. Since from what has preceded in this article, the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants are in agreement in regard to high priesthood being over the church, and that this high priesthood "continueth in the church of God in all dispensations," and that no man can see the Lord in the flesh without that priesthood, and live, so must it be an accepted fact that the Bible agrees with the Doctrine and Covenants in these regards; thus proving that there is an apostolic head over the church, with the twelve apostles as stars in the crown on the head of the church as it was represented in Revelation 12: 1, before it went into the wilderness, and must be the same when it comes out of the wilderness, when completely organized and perfectly represented.

Thus it is proved to be an undeniable fact that we have the threefold cord of proof—found in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants; or in other words, the word and work of God in the church on the Eastern Continent, the word and work of God on the Western Continent (both before and after Christ's appearance in the flesh), and the word and work of God in the church in this "the dispensation of the fullness of times" (see Ephesians 1: 10), that the high priesthood is always in and "continueth in the church of God in all generations," and God's ways are straight and do not vary, but his course is one eternal round.

We are happy to be permitted to present the above facts to increase the faith of God's people, and to remove the effects of some of the darkening counsel that has been and is being given, which has destroyed and is destroying some of the faith of God's people in some of the fundamental doctrines governing the church of God whenever it exists—in all dispensations.

Lord, Give Me Faith

By Bertha Bell Poff

Why should I fear the last day's dawning?

Why should I fear though loud billows roll?

Why should I fear the death angel's coming

When Jesus the Savior has charge of my soul?

O joyous day, O glorious awakening,

When from these fetters my spirit is free.

Then I shall see him, the King in his beauty;

That will be heaven and glory for me.

O for this peace that flows like a river,

Filling my soul with a comfort so sweet;

Lord, I would ask of thee no higher station

Only permit me to bow down at thy feet.

There let me rest while sunshine still lingers,

There let me stay when the storm clouds are low;

Thou wilt be near to comfort, to cheer me,

If through the dark valley you cause me to go.

For I will serve thee though thou wouldst slay me,

And often my heart with anguish is torn,

Yet will I remember thy sufferings and labor,

How the cross to dark Calvary in patience was borne.

So give me a faith that nothing can sever,

God give me a heart that is whiter than snow;

Then if you come at the morn's early dawning,

I will be ready and willing to go.

Prayer

Pray for my soul. More things are wrought by prayer

Than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice

Rise like a fountain for me night and day.

For what are men better than sheep or goats

That nourish a blind life within the brain,

If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer

Both for themselves and those who call them friends?

For so the whole round earth is every way

Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

—Alfred Tennyson.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Apostle Hanson Writes

(From on board R. M. S. Berengaria, December 31.)

My departure for home was taken from Southampton, England, December 24.

Among compensating factors entering into the life of a servant of the Master are kindness, sympathy, and appreciation expressed in words and deeds. Especially is this true in times of loneliness. The compensation lies not merely in being the recipient of such tokens of Christian fellowship, but in beholding the working of the divine mind and spirit in the lives of fellow servants and friends.

All of Christmas Day was spent in bed, owing to a very heavy sea.

The opening of the new brick church at Enfield in the early part of this month was an event bringing joy to all interested in its construction. The building possessing an attractive exterior, with its beautiful interior, colored glass windows, and subdued colors, provides a worshipful atmosphere for all divine services. Elder John A. Judd, president of the branch, has shown real practical progressive leadership in what has been achieved. Where there is unqualified cooperation, well nigh all things are possible in the kingdom of God.

The orchestra and choir, under the skillful guidance of Brother W. T. Goulee, contributed materially to the inspiration of the occasion.

The work of the church the past year in the European field has met with encouraging success in proportion to the labor expended. There is need for definite prayer to God to send more laborers into the harvest field.

We were favored last summer with the visits in London of "Ben" and Audentia Anderson and their daughter Rogene, T. J. Watkins and wife, and Frank Moats and wife and their little boy. My association with those I was permitted to see was joyfully appreciated, and the Saints hold their visits in pleasant memory.

The Berengaria, one of the largest and fastest steamers afloat, one day late because of the weather, is majestically plowing through the rough seas. Seven hundred tons of oil are consumed daily in running the engines. The crew numbers about eight hundred. Among the celebrities on board are General Smuts and Rachmaninoff.

We are now nearing New York. This is my happiest day since embarking.

Des Moines District

December 31.—Missionary work and interest in the district are in a growing condition. Since reunion in August, Elder Kress and I have worked together holding meetings at Metz, Nevada, Perry, and Pershing.

At Nevada we preached three weeks, baptized two, and blessed four children. At this place we were well and kindly cared for in the homes of Brethren Ed Shalley and Bernard Wolf.

October 22 we began preaching in the church in Perry, where Brother E. C. Kibby is pastor, assisted by Brother Mosher. The local editor, Mr. Whitehead, treated us liberally, and we had a daily report of two hundred words on the front page of his paper, The Perry Chief.

The support of the Sunday school children was enlisted, and the children brought their parents and friends out to hear the story of Jesus. After four weeks of meetings here we baptized thirteen.

Operations were begun at Pershing December 4, and for a small mining town with bad weather and deep mud I think a record was set for attendance and interest. After two weeks the mud became stuck fast, and Jack Frost held things together.

On the 19th we went to the mine reservoir for baptismal service. Ice six inches deep covered the pond, but we had a good ax, and we soon learned that ice cuts easier than Australian hardwood. Brother Kress did the baptizing this time, one young man being literally buried in a watery grave. They came out quickly and felt none the worse for the cold.

At the evening service after the confirmation the baby of Brother and Sister Walter Thomas was blessed.

We closed meetings here until after the holidays, when we shall resume services January 5.

December 20 found us headed for Des Moines to attend the district priesthood banquet. A large number of the priesthood of the district met in the basement of the church, and after a well-balanced meal short addresses were given by the missionaries, District President H. Castings, and Apostle Edwards. After Sunday, December 22, spent in preaching at Newton, I came home for Christmas.

We were glad to have with us for Christmas week Elder and Sister Jones, from Australia. Needless to say we were many times in imagination at Tiona in New South Wales, or somewhere round Flinders fishing. We are still fishermen and with the dawn of the new century overhaul our gear, calculate the time of the rise of the tides, and prepare for a long, deep haul; for the kingdom of God is like unto a net cast into the sea which gathereth of every kind of fish." There are better fish in the sea than have ever been caught. Brothers, let us go a-fishing.

ALBERT LOVING.

Orion, Michigan

We are happy to report that Orion Branch has raised the quota assigned it at the opening of the year. Many have made great sacrifices in order to help in God's great work, but they will be blessed for their effort.

The year has been fraught with many pleasant memories of social gatherings, and we have been much blessed by having several of the officials of the church and some of the district officers visit us.

The first of the year Bishop A. Carmichael arrived to help the branch with its financial difficulties and brought the subject, "Stewardships" to us in a very understanding manner. We hope to see this little branch respond to the message by making out inventories and applications for stewardship. The district bishop has also been a great help, meeting with and giving the Saints words of encouragement from time to time.

Apostle D. T. Williams was here for a time and encouraged us. Many others visited us, among them Brother Whitehead, Muskegon, who stayed nearly a week. How we enjoyed hearing him tell of his experiences in the gospel work. His sermons were uplifting and helpful, and he was able to comfort those in sorrow.

We have passed through some sad experiences. Two young mothers have been taken from us by death. Sister Olga Davis, wife of Priest Frank Davis, was called home last June, leaving four children and her husband besides many other relatives and friends to mourn. Her whole life was spent in doing for others, visiting the sick, sending fruit and flowers, helping all. Just one week ago Sister Helen Hall, wife of Branch President Hall, passed away, leaving her companion and five children, as well as many other relatives and friends. Sister Helen was active in all church work, and since the death of Sister Olga had cared for her four children, taking the place of a second mother to them.

The Christmas entertainment under the management of Sister Mona Knight, was a great success. Many songs and recitations from the children were enjoyed, and the young people gave a play, "The Nativity." The poem was read by Miss Anice Gonyon, and the birth of the Savior, the arrival of Mary and Joseph at the inn, the star which led the wise men, the visit of the shepherds—all were portrayed by the young people. Interspersed were beautiful Christmas songs and soft music. On account of bad roads the crowd was smaller than was expected, but those who came were repaid for the effort made.

Mount Vernon, Illinois

Mount Vernon Saints are striving to keep the gospel banner afloat. The members are endeavoring to work together that the branch may progress.

We were made happy to see a Thanksgiving program given by the junior department, Sister R. L. Fulk in charge.

Sacramental service was greatly enjoyed December 1. After partaking of the emblems the juniors were quietly marched to the lower auditorium for their prayer meeting, which Brother Lewis Deselms reports was a one hundred per cent service.

Annual business meeting was held Monday evening, December 2. Brother O. C. Henson was elected branch president; clerk, John H. Rockett; superintendent Sunday school, Arthur Henson was reelected; superintendent Recreation and Expression, Lewis Deselms reelected; Department of Women, Sister Eva Henson; pianist, Sister Avva Lowery; chorister, L. C. Moore. We were glad to have District President R. L. Fulk present at this meeting.

A splendid Christmas program, directed by Sister Grace Burkett, was rendered.

It saddens us to report that another has passed from among us. Sister Bert Wolfe and her infant died December 26.

We are looking forward to the new year with renewed zeal. We are praying that we with the whole church may make this an outstanding year in the experience of all. Full preparations are under way that we may do our part during Prayer Week, January 5 to 12.

Hazel Dell Branch

Weston, Iowa

The year of 1929 will without doubt be long remembered by Saints of Hazel Dell Branch. God's blessings have been with us during the year. Crops were bountiful, and the members have many things for which they should be thankful.

Through the generosity of Brother J. A. Hansen, who gave to the church one acre of ground located on one of the principal roads of the country, we now have a church home in a fine spot high on a hill and visible for miles. General church authorities gave us permission to move the old Boomer Church and use what we needed of our old building to raise a house suitable to the needs of the present time. The Boomer Church was moved about three miles south, a basement made of concrete blocks put under it. A furnace was installed, and during the coming year we are going to beautify the building. It cost us quite a sum of money, but the members were willing to help with money and manual labor.

In this connection it will not be amiss to say a word about the sisters who have done their share in raising funds to help pay expenses. They held one social and one bazaar.

Everyone looked forward to November 3, the date of dedication. Apostle J. F. Garver was present all day and preached the dedication sermon, also receiving the deed to the property in behalf of the general church. Through Brother Garver the Spirit spoke, in answer to prayer, to Brother Hunker, assuring him that his work was pleasing unto the Lord.

June 30 was Children's Day. Four girls and four boys went into the waters of baptism led by Brother James C. Jensen, who was ordained a priest last spring.

Annual business meeting was held December 27. J. A. Hansen will be branch president assisted by Hans Andersen and J. C. Jensen. Able leaders were chosen in all departments of church work, so we are looking forward to 1930 with high hopes for a successful year of work. We hope this church will be a light to the community in years to come. It was encouraging to those in charge to see old and young take hold of the work in this branch, for to us it was a great undertaking. For the older members who found it necessary to give up the old church home, surrounded by almost fifty years of traditions and memories, it must have been somewhat difficult, but everyone realized that it was for the betterment of God's kingdom on earth.

The Christmas program by the young people, given December 29, was a fitting climax for the year. Now we are looking forward to 1930 to greater progress and accomplishment. We extend greetings to all the church.

Iosco Branch

Tawas City, Michigan

December 18.—Attendance is not as large as we should like to see, and there are always discouragements to meet. But in spite of some adversity the faithful few are working, and Iosco Branch carries on.

Brother Marshall McGuire visited this branch for two weeks, arriving here November 24. He preached some good sermons and gave the members many things about which to think.

Good interest and attendance were had on Friday night when we had recreation. About forty young people participated. At the close of the evening, refreshments were served.

We hope that we shall be able to continue the gospel work in this region.

Tulsa, Oklahoma

We have just cause to rejoice; three more sheep have been gathered into the fold, and all through the consecrated efforts of our district missionary, William Bath. During the three weeks from November 10 to November 30 Brother Bath held a series of protracted meetings, two weeks in Tulsa and one week in Medio Station. He expounded the principles of the gospel in a simple yet forceful manner, gratifying the believer and convincing the unbeliever. Special music throughout the meetings added to the beauty and majesty of the sermons.

The Central Oklahoma district young people's convention was held in Tulsa November 29, 30, and December 1. We were fortunate in securing as speakers Apostle F. Henry Edwards and Elder John Sheehy, pastor of the Stone Church in Independence. "Know your own church" was the theme of the convention. The opening service was prayer meeting Friday morning at 8.30. This was followed by class work and discussion until noon. Class work was resumed from 2.30 to 4.30; then came wholesome fun in the recreation and singing until time to depart for the evening meal. Meals were served near the church every day. There were many Saints from surrounding towns renewing and making true friendships so necessary in the kingdom of God. Apostle Edwards preached the evening sermon, after which all departed for the country, where a huge fire awaited the roasting of wieners.

The fathers and sons banquet climaxed Saturday's program. Elder J. F. Sheehy presided as toastmaster. The toast "Our sons" was given by F. Henry Edwards, and Marshall Martin spoke for the sons with a toast to "Our dads." Songs, jokes, and a menu of delicious food made the banquet one of the happiest social functions ever enjoyed in Tulsa.

December 1 sacramental service came at 8.30 in the morning. The church was filled to overflowing as one by one the members quietly took their place to renew their covenants with Christ. "Take time to be holy" was the theme of the beautiful meeting.

Sister F. E. Dillon, of Oklahoma City, was in charge of the children's department during the Sunday school hour and taught the tiny tots. Sister R. Levi Skinner taught the junior and intermediate girls, and Sister Dora Cunningham the junior and intermediate boys. Brother Sheehy instructed the grown "children."

At the eleven o'clock hour Apostle Edwards was the speaker, and Brother Sheehy preached the final sermon of the convention.

The young people's convention proved a great success, all feeling invigorated with the spirit of progress in the work. Each sensed more keenly the part he must play and the necessity of playing that part well in order to portray to the world in his life the precious message he has intrusted to his care; the great condition he must by righteous living establish on the earth—Zion.

Along with the many other branches celebrating College Day, we dedicated the morning hour of November 24 with a program in honor of our much-beloved Graceland. The opening number was a piano prelude played by Mary Gouldsmith. Nellie Curtis told the purpose of College Day. Ida Mae Case gave the reading, "Graceland's expanding skyline." Frances Roberta Skinner sang "Graceland," by Vida Smith; Lloyd Stephens told "What it means to be an alumnus of Graceland"; and Mattie Martin gave reasons "Why I have chosen Graceland as my alma mater." A quartet sang several numbers. The entire alumnus group sang "O come, ye sons of Graceland all" and "Graceland forever." A ten-minute sermon on College Day was delivered by Pastor Falice Cunningham. Hale W. Smith gave the history of the architecture of the buildings on the campus and sketched the life of the designer. The response to the offering is sure to make some young person very happy next year. Benediction was offered by Hale W. Smith.

Again the holiday season is here, and for a time we live in retrospect. Again we view the hills, the shepherds, the star and angels, the inn with its lowly manger, the Mother and Babe, and we hear coming softly from somewhere "Peace on earth, good will toward men." Angels have surely uttered again these words, filling our minds with the greatest gift, his life of sacrifice, and all the scenes so full of love and service.

A beautiful Christmas pageant was presented December 22 by members of the Sunday school under the direction of Sister Hazel Cunningham. The program was very effective, and the children deserve much praise in honor of their splendid work.

The Tulsa Choir rendered the cantata, "His Natal Day," by Edward W. Norman, the evening of December 22. As a Christmas gift the choir presented the church with a baby grand piano. This beautiful instrument added much to the success of the rendition.

Iona Goodwin spent the yuletide vacation at home with relatives and friends. Iona is a talented reader and has a beautiful soprano voice. She favored the branch with a recital Thursday night at the church. Her sister, Mrs. Alma Adams, accompanied, and Mattie Martin assisted with piano numbers.

Another college student home for the holidays was Earl Harder, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Harder. Earl is a freshman at University of Oklahoma.

Tulsa High School graduates, numbering over six thousand, formed an alumnus association last year at the annual home-coming. Among those honored as charter officers for the year 1928-1929, was Frances Roberta Skinner, 1928, chosen as assistant secretary. A graduate from the class of 1916 was elected president. The class of 1917 produced the secretary-treasurer; the vice president and assistant treasurer came from the class of 1927. In the election of officers for 1929-1930, Frances Roberta was chosen to continue in her office.

The year to which we have looked with hope, for which we have prayed in faith and in which we must succeed in action—1930—is here. It holds much for us, but it can give only according to what we as individuals put into it. We hope it will be the greatest year thus far in the history of the church.

South Bend and Mishawaka Branch

827 Dale Avenue, Mishawaka, Indiana

South Bend and Mishawaka look forward to the new year with hope that it will be only a little while before the Saints will assemble in their new church home. As we review the past year we are glad all things were as well with us as they have been.

The annual election of branch officers was held December 8 and resulted as follows: Branch president, V. L. Coonfare; clerk, Clair Galloway; treasurer, F. E. Myers; chorister, Mrs. C. B. Freeman; pianist, Lillian Freeman; musical director, S. E. Mayes; superintendent Sunday school, F. E. Myers; superintendent Recreation and Expression, Orpha Coonfare; superintendent of the Department of Women, Sister C. B. Freeman; solicitor, Charles Ferry; publicity agent, V. L. Coonfare.

The Christmas entertainment held Christmas Eve will be remembered as a pleasant hour. A good program was given, directed by Sister Lydia Myers, and a splendid treat closed the exercises. The branch took advantage of the occasion to remember Mr. and Mrs. Mayes, musical director and wife, who have been a splendid help to the musical department, with a shower. During the absence of Brother and Sister Mayes their home was robbed of all linen, bedding, etc. Sister Mayes suffered with a slight stroke as a result of the shock of the robbery, but we are grateful that she is recovering.

Sister Margaret Tappan has been suffering with an injured hand. She caught it in an electric clothes wringer.

Economic conditions in this region are critical, but we believe the work of the Lord is onward.

Ludington, Michigan

106 South Rath Avenue

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave a Halloween party in the basement of the hall. The Temple Builders had previously decorated the room, making it appear quite ghostly.

The Women's Department has been meeting every two weeks. Recently they purchased linens, made them up, and sent to the Sanitarium.

December 15 Brother and Sister John White, Sister Anna White, Mr. William White, and Sister Nellie Tucker, of Muskegon, attended the evening services here. Elder J. L. Randall occupied the pulpit, preaching a fine sermon.

Elder and Sister John Randall, in company with Elder and Sister J. L. Randall, attended the play, "Queen Esther," given at the church in Muskegon December 22. They report an evening well spent. Each member of the cast played his part splendidly.

Sister Ruth Randall entertained the Temple Builders at a Christmas party December 17. Games and radio music were followed by a light lunch.

The annual election of officers took place Christmas night after the midweek prayer service. The following officers take their place the first of the year: Pastor, Elder John Randall; clerk, Sister Minnie Randall; treasurer, Archie Walters; superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression, Elder J. L. Randall; superintendent Department of Religious Education, Archie Walters; superintendent Women's Department, Sister Blanche Hill; pianist, Sister Mabel B. Foster; chorister, Minnie Randall; music director, Elder J. L. Randall.

District Missionary E. N. Burt, of Traverse City, expects to arrive Saturday, January 4, to begin a series of meetings. We hope much good will be accomplished.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Christmas activities started with a choir concert Friday evening, December 20. The choir presented several secular numbers including the anthems "Hail, bright abode" from Tannhauser, "A Japanese sunset," by Jessie L. Deppen, and "Nobody knows the trouble I've seen," Clarence C. White. A quartet consisting of Lena Wells Jones, Luella Wight, Evan A. Fry, and Fields Jones rendered a number from Rigoletto, Brother Fields Jones also sang a baritone solo, "The prologue from Pagilacci," by R. Leoncavallo, which was highly appreciated by the attentive audience. A ladies' quartet consisting of Marcene Murphy, Amy Blankenship, Dorothy Eden, and Melva Blankenship contributed two numbers, "Under the silent stars," by C. W. Coombs, and "Star of Glory" which also proved inspiring. The sacred part of the concert consisted of selections from The Messiah by Handel, Miss Juanita Hofsess singing the soprano solo, "There were shepherds abiding in the field," etc., followed by the chorus, "Glory to God," "For unto us a Child is born," and the climax of the concert was reached in the rendition of the immortal "Hallelujah" chorus, the audience standing in silent tribute to the birthday of our King.

On Sunday the choir rendered Christmas carols at 9.45, "O come all ye faithful," and "Hark, the herald angels sing," prayer being offered by Bishop C. A. Skinner. Lois Blair gave a splendid reading, "The first Christmas morn," after which Sister Marguerite Johnson Blain sang another of her beautiful soprano solos, "No candle was there, and no fire," by Lehman. She was accompanied at the organ by Hazel Scott. Following this special worship service, the classes gathered in their classrooms and enjoyed the fruits of the Christmas spirit.

Returning from this study, the choir rendered "For unto us a Child is born," from Handel's Messiah, and the morning lesson was in the form of a Christmas story by Sister Blanche Edwards Mesley, which proved very interesting to the listening congregation.

The 7.45 service was beautiful. The Christmas decorations had been so arranged that in the center of the back of the rostrum rested an evergreen tree interwoven with beautiful red lights, while on each side were tiers of cathedral candles which, when lighted, presented a spectacular sight. About the front of the altar were ferns, small Christmas trees beautifully decorated with tinsel. Everything about portrayed the wonderful Christmas spirit, the celebration of the birthday of the Savior of the world. The service blended perceptibly with this array of beauty, and the atmosphere in the church was radiant with joy and happiness. Following several numbers by the choir, Brother Cyril E. Wight delivered a splendid discourse in keeping with the theme of the day.

Four Latter Day Saint basket-ball teams, Bennington, Fourth, Chelsea, and Central, formed the Elliott League, to play fifteen rounds of ball at the Humboldt School gymnasium. In the two games already played, Central team met defeat, but the boys are planning to retrieve their lost estate in the games ahead.

Central was glad to welcome the return of Sister Carlotta Babb, who has been confined to her home for the past three months as the result of being struck and injured by an automobile.

Stake Missionary Arthur Koehler recently administered the ordinance of baptism to four young girls of Central: the Jacob sisters, Nadine Nave, and Margaret Smithy. We are happy to welcome these young women into the ranks of the church.

Growing out of an acute unemployment situation in the membership, the Business Men's Bible Class has formed a company to be known as the "Central Repair Company." Bishop Skinner is the manager, and this company is prepared to accept work in all manner of household repairs, plumbing, painting, carpentry, and paperhanging.

The O. B. K's had their initiatory-sacramental service at eight o'clock New Year's Day.

Tonight there will be held at Central Church the first of a January series of church night study classes. At 7.45 a short devotional service will begin; then three courses will be offered: a course for stake junior workers by Nellie Blackmore; social problems of Zion by M. A. Etzenhouser of the social service bureau; and a course treating Sunday school organization, curriculum, supervision, and training plans for the staff and teachers of the school.

In response to the First Presidency's call for a week of prayer, the loyal support of the members was asked for the six o'clock prayer meeting which occurred this morning.

Next Sunday evening the Wahdemna Choral Club, of Independence, will appear in a sacred concert. This outstanding group of young church singers is directed by Paul N. Craig.

A Sunday evening series on "What do we believe?" will begin January 19.

January 5 activities of the day began with an eight o'clock prayer service. Church school opened at 9.45 and was followed by the service of sacrament. Stake choir rehearsal was had at 3.30 in the afternoon. In the evening Apostle E. J. Gleazer was the speaker.

Quindaro Church

The roster of branch officers is now complete with the choice of Albert Hallin, church school superintendent, who will be assisted by Sister Dora Halverson; secretary, Gertrude Wilson, assisted by Genevieve Burgoon; junior department superintendent, Sister Higgins; Recreation and Expression superintendent, Frank Murrah, assisted by Don Rayborn; secretary, Eva Jenkins; Women's Department superintendent, Sister Charles Scrivener; solicitors, Clarence Penticuff and H. Swart.

LeAnna Fay, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Burton, was blessed under the hands of Brothers Higgins and Palmer.

A Thanksgiving service was held at nine o'clock Thanksgiving morning, the pastor in charge. "What have I to be thankful for?" was the theme, and a good spirit was felt by the worshipers.

A Christmas program was presented by the junior department in charge of Sister Higgins, and a treat and tree were much enjoyed by the children.

Monday evening preceding Christmas a group of carol singers, directed by Sister Foley, made a tour singing to those who on account of increasing years of sickness are shut-ins. They were received with appreciation.

New Year's Eve at eight o'clock occurred a meeting of the priesthood, departmental heads, church school officers, and teachers to discuss ways and means to make the work for the coming year a success. A program of musical numbers, readings, short talks, and New Year's resolutions followed. Everyone took part in the program, even the children voicing their desire to be better during the new year. At midnight the congregation arose and welcomed the new year with song.

After the close of the lesson period Sunday morning, January 5, a consecration and installation service was conducted for the officers and teachers who are to preside and teach during 1930. There was a vocal solo, "My task," by Emily Foley. The charge to the workers was given by the pastor, and a pledge was given by the officers and teachers to consecrate their lives and talents to the cause of the Lord. In response the congregation pledged loyal support.

Sacramental service at eleven o'clock was well attended, and a good spirit prevailed. There were more than a score of testimonies borne in a very few minutes.

At the Recreation and Expression session in the evening a program of welcome was tendered Brother Murrah.

Brother R. D. Weaver, missionary to Far West Stake, occupied in the evening, showing the need for the disciples of Christ to be ready to meet experiences similar to those of the Master. As usual the speaker had the undivided attention of the congregation. Otis Swart played as a violin solo "Andante," DeBeroit.

Grandview Church

The Christmas spirit prevailed in Grandview all through the month of December. Those in charge of the music directed the singing of Christmas hymns at the different services throughout the month.

The primary department opened the Christmas festivities with a drama, "Christmas," Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock service, directed by Sister D. L. White, primary superintendent. At the close of the service Sister Juno Cook read "The angel and the star," by Ralph Connor.

In the evening the choir sang a cantata, "The world's Redeemer," by Fred Holton. Sister Maude Gilmore Evans was director and accompanist. Their offering was gratefully received by a large and appreciative audience.

On Christmas Eve a play, "The story of a Christmas gift," was given, under the direction of Sister Maude Gilmore Evans and Sister C. D. Jellings. At the close of the play Pastor C. D. Jellings conducted a candle-lighting service, which was beautiful and impressive. Santa Claus made his appearance and distributed a large number of gifts, and a treat to the children.

The choir of Central Church, Kansas City, Missouri, favored Grandview congregation with a program of Christmas music December 29.

A business meeting was held December 30, in charge of Elder C. D. Jellings and Bishop C. A. Skinner. The envelope system was adopted as a better way of meeting church obligations. The following officers were elected to have charge of the work for the new year: Sunday school committee, George Hawkins, Sister Mildred Swearingen, and Sister D. L. White; secretary, Fred Brose; assistant, Thelma Hawkins; treasurer, Irena White; chorister, Sister Alma Warren; pianist, Juno Cook; publicity agent, Anna Mae Gress; Women's Department sewing committee, Sisters O. S. Handley, George Curtis, Etta Oberlag; dinner committee, Sisters Ruby Tucker and Ethel Cookley; recreational committee, Joe Cookley, Harry Hawkins, and Sisters Irena White, Mildred Swearingen, and C. D. Jellings.

Fourth Church

After the early morning prayer and family services December 22, which were feasts for the soul, Bishop F. B. Blair spoke to the young people about Christmas and its significance to the children of God. Behind him towered almost to the ceiling a beautiful tree. The Christmas spirit was enjoyed by all in readings and songs.

At 6.30 o'clock a business session was held. Departmental heads were ratified by unanimous vote. Elder R. W. Farrell, of Independence, occupied at 7.45 on the theme, "Meaning of Christmas." His sermon blended beautifully with the previous sessions of the day. The bright lights that shone within the tree behind him seemed to have been placed there for the purpose of giving a picture of the light that should always shine within us, that we may give light to those who seek after it.

At the family prayer service December 29, Brother Norman Carter led in prayer, after which the song, "Sweet hour of prayer," was sung by some young men. The Spirit truly was there to bless, and when the pastor asked the congregation to bow their heads in silent prayer for a few moments, the solemnity of the occasion was felt. Then the audience sang, "Sweep over my soul."

At the young people's service at 6.30 o'clock the group enjoyed being entertained by some young people from other groups.

Tuesday evening, December 24, the children had a Christmas entertainment at the church, and all the little tots had a good time.

The local church has entered a contest, and is equally divided in two parts. One side is called the "Reds" and each has a red tag; the other side is the "Blues," each having a blue tag. The side that has the most members attending every service for two weeks, as well as bringing the greatest number of nonmembers with them, will entertain the other side with a supper. Neither side wants to lose this contest, therefore the members are striving to be the ones to "sit down and be served." The result has been that many nonmembers have attended church during the past week.

Stone Church

The week of prayer and of missionary services at the Stone Church was fittingly introduced by the communion service at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning. Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge and was assisted by Elders H. G. Barto, W. Wallace Smith, G. W. Eastwood, and D. O. Cato. Organ music was played by Robert Miller.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards spoke on the theme, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" What better thing can we do, he said, than to go forward between now and the Centennial Conference in testimony for Christ? Let us carry this testimony and message into the homes of our own people and to others who are in need of ministry.

President Frederick M. Smith was in the stand and spoke concerning the oblation as an opportunity for the Saints to express their love and devotion to the Cause. Later in the meeting President Smith, on behalf of the church in America and the Saints in Zion especially, welcomed Brother and Sister J. H. N. Jones, of Australia, and presented them to the congregation. Brother Jones spoke briefly, after which he was ordained to the office of evangelist by Apostles M. A. McConley and Clyde F. Ellis, in keeping with the action of last General Conference. President Elbert A. Smith offered a special ordination prayer.

Apostle J. F. Curtis spoke at the young people's sacramental meeting downstairs on the theme of the month "Reverence," emphasizing the need for this virtue in the life of every boy and girl. A large per cent of the intermediate department of the church school attended the service and listened to Superintendent Thiel's talk concerning the oblation. Patriarch H. O. Smith assisted in the service, and Sister H. C. Burgess was in charge of the congregational singing.

A count was taken of all who partook of the sacrament of the Lord's supper at the Stone Church, and it was learned that fourteen hundred and sixty-five members had participated in this service.

At the Campus the junior department entered into the new year with an exceptionally good communion hour. Elder William Cowan presided, and the response of the children was marked, there being fifty-six testimonies voicing a universal desire to "do better this year than I did last year."

We must not despise the contribution of a brother but, recognizing its place and worth, give of ourselves that God may be glorified in us even as he was and is glorified in his Son Christ. This was one of the lessons President Frederick M. Smith drew from his scripture reading, John 12, in his Sunday evening sermon "Complete the family circle." Between the two extremes in the field of service—ministra-tions to the appetites of the body and ceremonies which care for the finer tastes—there is a wide range, there is opportunity for everyone to lose his life in service.

A musical program of merit preceded the sermon. The Stone Church Choir, directed by George Anway, sang "The shadows of the evening hour," by R. Spaulding Stoughton, Edward Brackenbury soloist, and "Jerusalem," by Charles Gounod, Lilly Belle Allen, soloist; also the "Zionitic song," the words of which were written by Adrienne Reynolds, the music by John T. Gresty. There was a tenor solo by Edward Brackenbury, and John F. Sheehy led the congregation in a number of favorite hymns. Robert Miller and George Miller were accompanists. In the stand Elder H. G. Barto was assisted by Apostles J. A. Gillen and Myron A. McConley.

If a man would serve, continued the speaker, he must follow some cause. Alone he can not render the type of service Jesus intended he should. Christ came into the world for a cause; he met the test, he made the supreme sacrifice, and he said, "If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be." In the tests of this year, may each Saint have lived so close to the altar of God that in his choice his testimony shall be sealed by the testimony of Christ, may his works bear the fruit of the divine Spirit, may he move forward with the church, doing his part to complete the family circle.

The congregation which crowded the church at an early hour deemed it especially appropriate that President Smith, who has been away from home and has not spoken in the Stone Church for several weeks, should occupy the sacred stand the first Sunday night of the year, at the same time introducing a season of prayer in which the whole church is engaging. Numbers stood throughout the entire service to see the speaker and hear his words.

Among the Saints in Zion

Saints of the nine branches in Independence responded in large numbers to the invitation of the pastor to spend New Year's Eve at the Auditorium and there together greet in appropriate manner the entrance of 1930, the centennial year of the church's organization. By half past eight o'clock the lower auditorium was well filled with members, and the program opened with spirited singing by the audience, led by Elder John F. Sheehy. Following the scripture reading and invocation, President F. M. McDowell introduced Apostle F. Henry Edwards, who delivered an address on "The past one hundred years," reviewing the history of the church since its organization in latter days.

During the intermission a concert was given by the Auditorium Band. Refreshments were sold by the Laurel Club.

"Glorious days," a pageant showing the early days of the church, written by Sister Alice C. Burgess, was presented by the White Masque Players under the direction of Sisters Rosamond Smith, Beatrice McNamara, and Louise N. Jennings. The prologue presented Harold Curtis as Father Time, and Florence Burgess as 1930, Ruth Harder and Sarina Smith acting as pages. The cast of characters was as follows:

Scene I, Living room in home of Joseph Smith, jr.; characters, Emma Smith—Rosamond Smith; Joseph Smith—Reginald Smith. Scene II, Organization of the church. The first sacramental service. Characters, Samuel Smith—Elbert Dempsey; David Whitmer—T. A. Beck; Joseph Smith—Reginald Smith; Oliver Cowdery—W. Wallace Smith; Hyrum Smith—Earl F. Hoisington; Peter Whitmer—Howard W. Harder. Scene III, Departure of Missionaries. Characters, Ziba Peterson—Doctor J. A. Harper; Parley P. Pratt—J. A. Holsworth; Oliver Cowdery—W. Wallace Smith; Peter Whitmer—T. A. Beck; Martin Harris—D. S. McNamara; Mrs. Martin—Mrs. E. C. Withee; Newell K. Knight—William Gard; Hyrum Page—Albert Brackenbury; Hyrum's wife—Helen Brackenbury; Page children, Robert Brackenbury, Helen Robertson, Laddie Brackenbury; William Jolly—George Willis; Elizabeth Jolly—Mrs. George Willis; Thankful Pratt—Mrs. J. A. Holsworth; Orson Pratt—Frank S. Jennings.

Music was directed by Sister Howard Harder, and a string quartet was prominent on the program: Elizabeth Smith, harpist; Irving Jenkins, cellist; and Lillian Green and Frank White, violinists. Costumes were in charge of Aileen Bullard; properties, Jay Weeks and Frank Jennings.

The address of the evening, "The future of the church," was given by President F. M. Smith, who gave in part a sketch of the building plans of the church for the next few years. President Elbert A. Smith offered a prayer of blessing, and the benediction was by President F. M. McDowell. The New Year had come in.

The senior department of the Stone Church Sunday school, which meets each Sunday morning in the lower room of the Auditorium, has many plans for the year. Because additional responsibilities in other fields have compelled some teachers to give up their classes and because others are moving away from Independence, the month of December saw considerable rearrangement of the teaching corps and reorganization of classes. Sister Mansel Williams has taken the class formerly taught by Sister Charles Koehler, and Brother Williams will assist her. Sister Harold Edwards now instructs the class taught last year by Sister J. A. Holsworth. The girls' class taught by Sister O. C. White misses its teacher who has left Independence, but has organized with Olive Curtis as manager. To the number of fifteen the class of Brother Ronald Carmichael is back since its reorganization early in December. Sister Virginia Budd will assist Sister Katie Harder in the superintending of the seniors.

Like their elder brothers and sisters, members of the intermediate department of the Stone Church Sunday school are hopeful of many things for the new year. Into this department three new teachers were welcomed last Sunday, Sister Verna Miller and Brother and Sister Estace Smelser. In the intermediate department there are twenty classes, and the corps of officers and teachers numbers twenty-five.

The Messiah Choir of Independence, which for the past four months has been practicing the oratorio The Course of Time, has closed its enrollment at the three hundred and sixty-six mark in order to begin a period of intensive rehearsals. Because the remaining time is limited, members are urged to regularly attend the Sunday afternoon practice. Sunday afternoon Director J. T. Gresty spent considerable time rehearsing all the choruses, the two choirs into which the Messiah Choir has been divided to give the composition, singing together.

A pretty wedding occurred on New Year's Day in the home of an active missionary of the church, Elder S. S. Smith, when his daughter, Mildred Irene, was married to Charles Alvin Thompson, son of Brother and Sister Paul Thompson, of Independence. The ceremony occurred at four o'clock in the afternoon, Elder James M. Terry officiating, the bride's father offering prayer. Immediately after the wedding the couple left for Tulsa, Oklahoma. They will return to Independence February 1.

Sister W. A. McDowell, mother of President F. M. McDowell, entered the Independence Sanitarium New Year's Day. This dear mother in Zion needs all the Sanitarium can give her in loving service.

The Sanitarium staff is happy in the fact that Bishop A. Carmichael is better than when he entered the church institution. The cause of "blood poisoning" which threatened has been effectively checked.

New Year's Day was ushered in with sadness at the Sanitarium by the death of one of the student nurses. The Saturday evening before she had been thrown from an automobile and very seriously injured. Everything that science and loving care could do was brought to her aid, but God saw fit to gather this lovely life unto himself. Ardys Eckhart was from Marion, Iowa. She would have graduated from the School of Nursing this spring. She had always been an outstanding student, efficient and a girl of lovely personality. She will be sorely missed by officers and teachers in the school as well as by her fellow students. The funeral was held at the Stone Church January 2 at ten o'clock in the morning, Elder John Sheehy preaching the sermon, being assisted by Brother F. M. McDowell. The ceremony of burial was made beautiful and most touching by the fact that she was buried as a graduating nurse, in full uniform with her diploma and hospital pin, a mark of confidence bestowed upon all graduating students. The entire student body honored the departed member of their noble profession by attending in full uniform. The nurses' uniform becomes very dear and symbolical of a life of devotion that a good nurse gives, and it was one of Miss Eckhart's last requests that she be buried in the full uniform of a graduate nurse. The remaining twelve members of the Class of 1930 mourn deeply the passing of this beloved classmate, but in their grief they will find a deeper significance in their service because of her beautiful life. Speaking in behalf of the Sanitarium, Miss Myrtle Grapes, instructor, says, "We feel deeply grateful to the many who were kind and thoughtful during these sad hours."

Sister Sunshine Beck is rapidly recovering from her operation and will soon leave the Sanitarium for her home.

Definite plans for the new Sanitarium, so sorely needed, are afoot. At present the rooms and wards are full, two patients are in the hall, and there are patients wanting private rooms which are not available. The opportunity for service is growing. How shall we meet it?

Saints in the center place were happy last Sunday morning to learn that Apostle Paul M. Hanson had arrived home from his foreign mission. He left Independence last March, and during his stay in Europe visited England, Germany, and Holland, being assisted in the work in those countries by local ministers. He has returned home early this year to participate in the Joint Council of the leading quorums of the church which opened this morning and to attend the Centennial Conference in April. Brother Hanson was joyfully received by fellow members of his quorum and others at a banquet Monday evening at the Auditorium and by the members at the Stone Church following the evening sermon.

Sunday afternoon at four o'clock there occurred the marriage of Miss Lillian Nunamaker, daughter of Sister Mollie Nunamaker, to Robert Ernest Graves, of Decatur, Alabama. Elder John F. Sheehy officiated at the ceremony at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Wesley H. Sheppard. Preceding the ceremony Margaret Gard sang "O promise me" and "I love you truly," accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Myra Haferkamp, of Augusta, Missouri, a sister of the bride. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by Ross Moore. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Zula Sheppard, and Mr. Graves was attended by Alma Nunamaker, brother of the bride. Roger Haferkamp was the ring bearer. For several years the bride has been a teacher in the Columbian School in Independence, and as the superintendent of the junior department of the Stone Church Sunday school at the Campus she has functioned faithfully and efficiently. The church in Independence will miss Sister Graves, who accompanies her husband to their home in the South.

Brother George Netter, sr., a resident of Independence for twenty-one years, passed away at his home January 2. Since last July he has been in poor health, but he was confined to his bed only two weeks. Surviving are his wife, Pauline Netter; four daughters: Mrs. R. C. Martin, Grain Valley, Missouri; Mrs. A. T. Martjn, Chicago; Elizabeth and Martha Netter of the home; two sons, Anthony, of the home, and George Netter, jr., of Toledo, Ohio; a sister, Mrs. Wally Rhor, of Chicago; a brother, Toney Netter, Toledo, Ohio; and five grandchildren. The funeral was held at the Stone Church the afternoon of January 4. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

College students and friends who spent the holidays in Independence have returned to school and to work. Some were able to remain Sunday to attend the sacramental service.

Quarterly conference in Zion will convene Monday evening, January 13, at eight o'clock at the Stone Church.

The Week of Prayer

Independence is in the midst of prayer week. The Saints are praying that the leaders in every field of church activity shall be endowed with wisdom, courage, and power through the benediction of God and the confidence of the members; that the people of God shall be united in mutual faith, in common sacrifice, and in growing spiritual power; that many good men and women and children shall be won to God and the church through the outpouring of the spirit of testimony and conviction; that the Centennial Anniversary shall be a time of church-wide spiritual endowment for the enlightenment, unification, and encouragement of the Saints in preparation for the tasks and triumphs of the Second Century; that many able and consecrated men and women shall join in establishing stewardships and advancing the cause of Zion; that our Father will abundantly bless the many forces which we know not of but which are working to bring to pass His will among men; and that the children of the church shall "grow in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and man."

Auspiciously begun on Sunday, missionary services are being conducted throughout the week at the Stone Church, the theme being "Complete the family circle." President Frederick M. Smith's sermon Sunday evening opened the series; Apostle J. A. Gillen spoke Monday evening; Apostle J. F. Curtis, Tuesday evening; and tonight Apostle M. A. McConley will address the congregation. Remaining speakers for the week are Apostles J. F. Garver and D. T. Williams. On Sunday, January 12, Apostles R. S. Budd and P. M. Hanson will speak in the Stone Church pulpit.

In observance of the Week of Prayer, early morning prayer services are being held in the various branches. The Saints assembled for worship at half past seven Sunday morning at Gudgey Park; at six o'clock Monday morning at the Stone Church; six o'clock, Tuesday morning, Second Church; this morning, at Englewood. Tomorrow morning the members will worship at Liberty Street Church; Friday morning at Walnut Park; Saturday morning, at Enoch Hill; and on Sunday morning there will be services at East Independence and Spring Branch.

Though on Monday a cold wave arrived in central Missouri, causing the temperature to drop more than twenty degrees in a very short time, the Saints are endeavoring to give the call to prayer and the missionary services strong support.

Enoch Hill

"The open door to a closer companionship with Jesus" was the theme of the first communion service of the year at Enoch Hill, and a prelude of the hymns, "How gentle God's command," and "I need thee every hour," created an atmosphere of worship and reverence. Elder R. D. Weaver chose for the central thought of his talk to the Saints, "Walking with Christ," giving special emphasis to the Savior's injunction: "This do in remembrance of me." Associate Pastor R. E. Whitsett and members of the local priesthood were in charge.

Elder J. D. Gault preached the evening sermon to an attentive congregation.

Enoch Hill has suffered severe loss in the death of Elder Victor Rogers, seventy-seven years old, who passed away at his home Thursday morning, January 2. Brother Rogers, a retired farmer, has made this vicinity his home for a number of years and was well known and respected by his neighbors. Faith, loyalty, and sincerity are some of the virtues which made his life attractive and which will cause the church to miss him. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Cora Killen, Topeka, Kansas; Mrs. Cassie Stevens, of the home; and one granddaughter, Clarice Stevens, of the home; two sisters, Mrs. Eliza Clancy, Tulsa, Oklahoma; Mrs. Martha Sterling, Clay Center, Kansas; and one brother, George Rogers, Maxwell City, New Mexico. The funeral was held at the church Sunday afternoon, where the body lay in state from 1.30 to 2.15. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder W. D. Brewer, former pastor.

Englewood

The last Sunday school service of 1929 was the largest of the year. With increasing interest in all church activities, we feel sure the school will advance.

December 22 Bishop A. Carmichael preached at the eleven o'clock hour, explaining to the congregation the making of a steward and inspiring the members to a stronger determination to keep God's law in its fullness. In the evening Apostle Roy S. Budd's sermon, "The Christmas spirit," was ably presented.

The Christmas Eve program was well attended, and all seemed to enjoy themselves.

The young people gave the Christmas pageant, "The light bearer," which they previously gave at the Auditorium for the senior department of the Stone Church Sunday school.

The last Sunday of the year Englewood was glad to have for speakers Apostle J. A. Gillen and Elder W. I. Fligg.

For many weeks the beautiful blending of the morning worship, songs, and sermons has been noticeable, making the services more impressive and effective.

The Saints are called to mourn the passing of Sister Millie Clow, wife of Brother Robert Clow, who passed away the first day of the year at the Independence Sanitarium. Her death was the result of a complication of diseases, and she had been in the Sanitarium since November 29. The bereaved are extended sympathy by the branch, and the Saints and friends pray God will send the comforting influence of his Spirit. The funeral occurred Saturday afternoon at Stahl's Funeral Home. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

The first Sunday of the New Year started with an eight o'clock prayer service, which will be followed by another early prayer service next Sunday. With the opportunity for each to renew his covenant with Christ on the first Sunday of the year and the official call to prayer to continue this week, we are assured of great good being accomplished.

The evening speaker Sunday was Brother Glenn Davis, who talked on "Faith," showing that the redemption of Zion depends not alone on belief but also on faith and works.

Spring Branch

Few changes were made in the personnel of the officers for 1930 in Spring Branch. Brother J. E. Cleveland will be the Pastor J. C. Mabbott, assistant pastor, and Dorothy Mabbott, chorister. The Sunday school has only one change, a new superintendent, Brother Tankard.

The Sunday school went over the goal set for Christmas offering. Our pledge was one hundred and fifty dollars. The total amount received was more than one hundred and seventy-three dollars.

The Christmas program was enjoyed by all. Santa Claus came at the close with treats for all present.

Elder Amos T. Higdon was the speaker at Spring Branch Sunday, December 29, at both services. His sermons were inspiring and greatly enjoyed by the members.

If we are to judge by attendance at Sunday services, the Saints of Spring Branch endeavored to start 1930 well. Sunday school opened with the new superintendent, Brother Tankard, in charge. No officers were absent and only ten scholars. There were twelve perfect classes. With the exception of one teacher, the primary department attendance was perfect.

Communion service at eleven o'clock was in charge of Pastor J. E. Cleveland assisted by Brothers Bozarth, Koehler, Smith, and Farrow. There was no intermission between Sunday school and church. Songs were sung while those who had to go home took their departure. A solo, "Teach me to pray," was sung by Beulah Stuart Donkawich, and two duet selections were contributed by Gladys Smith and Winnogene Boise, "Though your sins be as scarlet" and "I would be true."

Attendance at this service was the largest ever had at a service of this kind in Spring Branch, also the oblation was the largest.

Apostle J. F. Curtis was the speaker at the eight o'clock hour, his subject being "Faith." The service was well attended.

Brother Peer, father of Elmer and Arthur Peer, died at the home of his daughter, Sister Hartley, of Blue Springs, after a short illness. The funeral was held from Stahl's Funeral Home Tuesday afternoon, January 7.

Gudgell Park

Gudgell Park members assembled December 5 and 11 for business meetings, selecting officers to care for the local work during the new year. Those chosen are: Pastor, P. A. Sherman; assistant pastor, C. E. Martin; custodian, O. A. Story; superintendent church school, C. E. Martin; assistant superintendent, John Myers; secretary, Marguerite Sherman; music, Esther Hook; Recreation and Expression, Roy Sherman; bishop's agent, C. E. Martin.

Monday night, December 23, occurred the Christmas program. The church was crowded, and the program proved interesting.

The Religio held on Friday night is doing well. Attendance is good, lessons are interesting, and the programs are varied and entertaining.

December 29 in the morning Brother Ivor Davies delivered a splendid sermon. In the evening Brother Bozarth spoke. Brother Bozarth has been giving a series of gospel sermons on Sunday evening, occupying the last several weeks. We think his efforts here will prove profitable.

The new Sunday school officers took charge Sunday morning. They have many plans for the year and hope to see the department make decided progress.

Holden Stake

Atherton

College Day was observed with an interesting program. C. F. Scarcliff gave a short talk in behalf of Graceland. In the afternoon the branch assembled to witness the ordination of three of our brothers to the office of elder: William H. Ware, D. R. Hughes, and Leonard Koehler. Those who officiated were, Brothers A. E. Allen, J. A. Koehler, C. F. Scarcliff, and F. A. McWethy. In the evening we had the pleasure of listening to F. A. McWethy, of the stake presidency. His theme was "Finding our place in the church and being true to our trust."

Wednesday evening a very large representation of the branch met in the capacity of prayer meeting, and a season of thanksgiving and praise was offered our Maker.

Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, was a demonstration of the thankfulness and the unity of purpose which now characterize not only Atherton Branch but all who are interested in building our new church. A number of bricklayers and other workmen donated labor on the church, besides unloading a car of brick, a car of cement, and a car of lumber. While the men were so employed, the women were preparing a feast, and truly it was a feast with enough left over for supper when all met again. A congenial and beautiful spirit prevailed throughout the day. Brother Macrae of the Holden stake presidency was with us, and he donned overalls, as did Brother Frank Ford of the Holden Development Association; also Bishop J. A. Koehler and Pastor A. E. Allen.

On Thanksgiving Day, at the home of Brother and Sister W. P. Mitchell, their daughter, Alice, was united in marriage to James Scott, of Slater, Missouri. They immediately left by auto for their new home. Brother H. V. Min-ton officiated. We will miss the presence of Alice and "Jimmy" in our services but wish them a long life of happiness together.

December 8 Brother C. V. Hopkins, of Grandview, was present at the morning and evening services. The thoughts of the morning were beneficial to the Saints, causing us to realize that we should strive to labor unitedly. In the evening Brother Hopkins made all thankful for and appreciative of our homes, after telling us of home conditions existing in some States he has recently visited.

Junior service was held the morning of December 15, in charge of Otho Clark. These services are enjoyed by the children as well as the older ones, and are helpful and instructive.

In the evening Brother D. R. Hughes was the speaker.

Grandma Baughman is home from the Sanitarium, slowly improving.

Far West Stake

Stewartsville

In this active branch our aged Brother B. J. Dice has carried on faithfully as pastor. In the face of sorrow and difficulty, having lost his companion early in the year, Brother Dice has persevered. He has had the helpful support of the members, and we believe lasting good and advancement have been made. We hope for still greater progress in the year which is ahead.

November 10 the Saints were pleased to have Brother B. J. Constance, of Cameron, present. At the eleven o'clock hour he spoke on "The gathering," saying that perhaps there was no other thing that makes this people so outstanding as the purpose to gather and to build Zion. He spoke of Moses as a leader in the special work of delivering his people from bondage. When they confronted the Red Sea, the Lord said, "Go forward." Are we going forward in the work of helping to realize our ideals?

In the evening an Armistice program was given, Brother Constance making an appropriate address.

The following Friday evening a fathers and sons banquet was given in the church basement under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression. Church colors were seen in the decorations, and a large American Flag was placed at each end of the room, and two small flags at the head of the table where the Boy Scouts were seated with their fathers. Notwithstanding the unfavorable road conditions fifty-nine fathers and sons were seated at one table, a huge bank of chrysanthemums in the center of the room. Leonard Ehlers, toastmaster, helped to make the program a success. At the close of the meal candles of purple and gold were lighted, and all other lights were extinguished. Then the fathers and sons arose, joined hands, and sang "Blest be the tie that binds." The benediction was by Brother D. E. Powell.

November 17 being the third Sunday of the month, regular prayer service was held at the eleven o'clock morning hour. Brothers J. Piepergerdes and J. C. Hidy were in charge of a meeting which proved highly spiritual, inspiring the worshippers to higher ideals and greater service.

At the evening hour our young brother in the priesthood, E. J. Armstrong, gave an interesting sermon on "Baptism."

November 23 the Department of Women served a chicken dinner in the church basement, nearly fifty dollars being realized. This department has been active throughout the year under the efficient and willing leadership of Sister Carrie Lewis.

November 24, College Day, at eleven o'clock in the morning the following program was had: "Onward, Christian soldiers," by the congregation; prayer; "Sons of Graceland," a quartet, Violet and Cleata Hinderks, Willard Hinderks, and Gordon Hidy; talk, "What Graceland means to the church," Leonard G. Ehlers; "Graceland forever," boys' and girls' chorus; "Graceland's expanding skyline," reading by Madge Head; talk, "What Graceland has done for the church," E. J. Armstrong; "Graceland," a tenor solo, by Willard Hinderks; sermon by Z. J. Lewis. A substantial offering was received. In the evening Pastor Dice spoke.

A beautiful Thanksgiving program was had the evening of November 29 under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression. It was given by the Temple Builders under the leadership of Stella Wood. A good program balance was maintained by two short pageants, "Five kernels of corn" and "Thanksgiving." There were also varied literary and musical numbers. Then all went to the basement for a general good time of games and contests. Pop-corn balls and homemade candy were served.

Communion service for December was in charge of Brothers Piepergerdes and Fred Ehlers. A good degree of the Spirit was felt as covenants were renewed and service to God was pledged anew.

The Wednesday night prayer services are not so well attended as they should be, but the faithful ones who go are ready to give and to receive, and in this way spiritual strength is gained to carry on in our daily life.

At 7.30 December 1 Golden Rule Sunday was observed. The Near East Relief work is finished, and as an outcome we have the Golden Rule Foundation. Sister Madge Head, church chairman, has had the work in charge for the past several years. Gordon Hidy made an appropriate address, and a good offering was taken. We think that we should not only give to our own church but also to other institutions where there is need.

December 8 the branch was much pleased to have Patriarch F. A. Smith, of Independence, come for a week of meetings. He gave some strong and forceful sermons on "Faith," "Repentance," "Coming of Christ," "The church and its purpose," and other subjects. Two especially forceful sermons were "Our present need" and "Charity." Attendance was especially good, even though the weather during the week was rainy and misty and the roads very muddy.

December 11 at eleven o'clock in the morning, Brother Smith was called to preach the funeral sermon of our aged sister, Amelia Hinds, at Maple Grove. Brother J. E. Hovenga was in charge. Sister Hinds's sincere service in life leaves an inspiring memory with those who knew her and must carry on her work. She was one who placed first things first.

The following Sunday Brother Smith was again called upon to preach a funeral sermon, this time the sermon of Brother Charles Householder. Brother Householder was seventy-two years of age. He had been blind since his early manhood. Brother Z. J. Lewis was in charge.

December 22 in the morning Stake President O. Salisbury gave a helpful sermon on "The fool," illustrating his theme with the parables of the ten virgins, the house built upon the rock and upon the sand, the rich man with many flocks and huge crops. He named Job as one able to stand when the test came. At the close of his sermon he gave some interesting and encouraging facts about the annual general church receipts, showing the steady increase of tithes and offerings each year since 1925.

In the evening a beautiful Christmas vesper service was had. The processional and recessional by the choir were impressive, as well as a violin solo, "Largo," by Violet Hinderks, and a tenor solo, "The Star of Bethlehem," by Willard Hinderks. The sermon by Brother Salisbury was "The mission of Christ."

In commemoration of the birth of Christ an entertainment was given at the church on Christmas Eve consisting of two parts. The first half consisted of miscellaneous exercises, readings, and some fine musical numbers, the latter part a Christmas pageant portraying the time and conditions previous to and at the time of the birth of Christ.

The last scene proved especially impressive, a tableau showing the manger with the Christ Child, Mary kneeling, Joseph standing close by, and an angel hovering near. The double quartet of carolers in robes of white added much to the success of the pageant. Decorations were artistic and emblematic of the occasion.

We were glad to welcome home for the holidays Daisy Black, who is attending Graceland, and she graciously assisted in giving the scripture reading for the pageant.

Brother and Sister A. E. McCord will soon be with us again. For the past two years they have been living in Maysville. Sister McCord is active in all church and community work.

Graceland Religious Education Alumni Organized

Several years ago in Graceland College, a class in religious education was formed. Quite a number of the younger people of the church, both men and women, took advantage of this opportunity, as they had a desire to give better service to the church.

To date, over one hundred have attended these classes, and many of them have gone out into the world to make a real contribution to the church. Some have gone to foreign countries, and many to our homeland as missionaries.

Two years ago a number of the alumni met during a General Conference and thought it would be well to organize, which was done at that time.

Having received so much from their Graceland experiences, they began wondering what might be done to help others in some definite way, so decided to give a scholarship to some worthy person to attend Graceland.

We trust that the members of Graceland Religious Education Alumni who are scattered throughout the world are planning on coming to the great Centennial Conference in April. We are planning a "get-together" meeting and hope to see a good representation.—H. E. Winegar, president Graceland Religious Education Alumni, 157 West Cedar Avenue, Denver, Colorado.

The annual conference of Northeastern Nebraska District will be held at Omaha Saturday and Sunday, January 25 and 26. Election of officers and General Conference delegates will take place. We are expecting Apostle E. J. Gleazer to be present.—H. A. Merchant, district president, Omaha, Nebraska.

Our Departed Ones

SMITH.—Mary Minerva Wight was born in Bandera, Bandera County, Texas, October 22, 1864. When a child, her parents, Lyman Lehi and Eliza Leyland Wight, moved with the family to southern Missouri. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Joplin, Missouri, April 21, 1878, by Elder C. W. Short. Later the family moved to a farm near Ridgeway, Harrison County, Missouri. On November 3, 1891, she was married to Hugh J. Smith. During their entire married life they resided in Kansas City, Kansas. She passed away at her home December 27, 1929, after a long, lingering illness of nearly two years' duration. Surviving her are her husband, two daughters, one granddaughter, and a sister. Funeral services were held in the Congregational church. Interment in Argentine Cemetery.

HOUSEHOLDER.—Charles Franklin Householder was born at Michigan City, Laporte County, Indiana, October 29, 1857. Died December 14, 1929, at his home in Stewartville, Missouri. He married Lydia Phillips January 20, 1879, and to them were born two sons and two daughters. The sons died in infancy, and one daughter died November 14, 1917. His wife preceded him in death November 20, 1927. He leaves one daughter, Mrs. Clara Lyddon, of Stewartville, Missouri, and one brother, of Fort Wayne, Indiana. He joined the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, March 16, 1884, and remained faithful to the end. The funeral sermon was by F. A. Smith, services in charge of Z. Lewis. Interment was in Stewartville, Missouri.

A Good Prospect at Minneapolis

Not long since Bishop J. A. Becker visited Minneapolis, and on Sunday morning, January 5, he had an experience which he relates in Ensign Correspondence under the caption, "The church of tomorrow."

The class numbers fifteen boys. They are taught by Harvey O'Hara. They are not just perfunctorily "going to Sunday school." They are trying to keep in touch with the church, its general and its special activities. They are doing their part in supporting the local work. Brother Becker says they have by the aid and example of their parents and their teacher caught the spirit of service and of consecration.

The bishop sees here a prospect for recruits to the army of church workers of the future. And there is more, much more than that. These are today church workers—according to their gifts and endowment. They are exercising power by example which is sure to have its effect upon adults of their communion. They are now tithing payers; they are now possessed of the desire to make offering where help is needed; they have the spirit of pioneers and Latter Day Saints.

Should stumbling blocks and offenses come in the path of these boys, they have already an equipment which bids fair to withstand, overcome, or absorb such. They have made a good start; may they go on to development commensurate with the progress of the church and the talents they possess, all of which are not likely discovered by themselves and their spiritual guardians at their early age.

Let no man offend one of these lest the curse of the Master come upon him: "Woe to him by whom the offense cometh."
R. J. L.

The Herald Publishing House will provide the Herald beginning as a daily with April 7 and continuing each day except Sundays until the conference closes. Send in your subscription today. The price is fifty cents.

What of Your Consecration?

Long before the time of the Psalmist, wise men spoke of the opportunities of childhood, and in the old patriarchal family children were considered supreme blessings. David himself is recorded to have sung as one of the blessings to be given those who feared God: "Thy children like olive plants round about thy table."

The words of Wordsworth, "The child is father of the man," could not have been more true had they been uttered centuries before they were given to the world. The ancients recognized the principle behind the words of the poet. True it is that in the time of Christ people did not gather in committee meetings, in homes, on street corners and discuss in our glib modern terms the elements of heredity, environment, and other factors in the building of habits and attitudes. Nevertheless the forces of heredity, environment, and training were present, and we read that Jesus "grew, waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him."

Fortunate is the church in having many officers, ministers, and teachers who believe

"The childhood shows the man
As morning shows the day."

Happy are the children who count among their friends and helpers, members of the presiding quorums of the church, men who use this principle as the measuring stick of their work. Only a few days ago a busy apostle, returned home to Independence for a few weeks, was approached and asked to devote the preaching hour of one Sunday morning to a band of intermediate young people, between the ages of twelve and fifteen years. Did he think of the adult service which he is seldom privileged to attend with his family? If he did, it did not cause him to hesitate, and his response assured his questioner that he would be "glad to help." A patriarch who does considerable radio speaking is beloved by the children because, unless he has a previous appointment, he is always willing to appear before them with an "experience" talk or a lantern slide lecture. A member of the First Presidency wins scores of new admirers in the ranks of the children every time he comes to them with stories of other boys and girls. These men are availing themselves of rare opportunities and are perpetuating their names in the hearts of the children of the church. Truly there are many who are eager to help the boys and girls learn the fine art of living together, and who in so helping are willing to forego temporary comfort and complacency.

What of your consecration, reader? How strongly do you wish to see the church go forward in the second century of its existence? What are you doing for the children of the church? Are you creating for them conditions which will cause them to grow and to wax strong in spirit, being filled with wisdom and the grace of God? or are you turning down opportunity to help? Are you doing your part to train the young members in your own home or to help in the church school? What are you doing, young people between the ages of twenty and thirty? Are you wisely using your time? And, older people, are your attitudes toward life such as to invite the trust and confidence of little children and young people? or are you so busy finding fault and condemning evil that you forget evil must be "overcome with good"?

Upon the shoulders of the children of today rests the responsibility of carrying forward the church of tomorrow. Do you love the church? What of your consecration?
L. B. M.

"Let Not Thy Right Hand . . ."

In a certain country there dwelt an employer who had in his hire several men, engaged in the performance of a certain measure of toil. And to these men he had promised a standard recompense for their labors. Being worthy hirelings, they labored diligently and well, and at the end of the day the work was finished.

Then came the time of reckoning and of settlement between the employer and his workmen. And lo and behold the employer imparted unto his workmen according to a wage that was a little lower than that which he had promised at the beginning of the day. It was not enough to cause great distress, but the workmen, being human and also not over-rich, murmured against this thing which their employer had done.

Now these men were all followers of the same religious teachings; and the employer was an elder in the congregation of their locality! And they were all therefore brethren in like precious faith.

The elder professed great faith in God and in

Do You Agree?

The following is quoted from Church Management. It contains a suggestion which is interesting if it is true. We are wondering if the conclusion is in accord with the experience of our ministry. A frank discussion would be appreciated.

Look Here for Your Church Losses

"Eighty per cent of the cost of our accounting department is made necessary by twenty per cent of the accounts," a business executive once told me. I imagine that with variations for the line and locality, this is a statement usually true in business. Eighty per cent of the accounts never worry anyone. It is the remaining twenty per cent which must be watched and coaxed to turn business from a financial failure to a success.

Churches will find their membership losses are from about twenty per cent of the enrollment. If this unstable twenty per cent were carefully watched and guarded, the losses could be kept to a minimum. In the average church the minister and his helpers give their attention to the eighty per cent of regulars, and take the losses from the other twenty per cent as a natural course. The leaders of the church ought to devote themselves to the twenty per cent where the losses occur. Spend less time with the saints and help those who are wabbling in the faith.—Church Management.

Reflections of Value to the Minister

The following excerpts from The Preacher, by J. H. Jowett, were brought to our attention by Elder F. Henry Edwards. We pass them on, feeling sure they will be read with interest and profit by the men of our ministry.

The Master First

We shall be tempted to be flippant in tone, to be careless in speech, and sometimes we may be tripped into actual coarseness and vulgarity. The first necessity to a refined pulpit ministry is reverence, and if we are to be reverent our eyes must be stayed upon "the King in his beauty."

But let me mention a second security which is attained when the service is dominated by some great and exalted end. It will defend the preacher from the peril of ostentatious display. He will have power, but it will not be on exhibition. He will have light, but in the glory he himself will be eclipsed. His ministry will be transparent, not opaque. The vision of his people will not be stayed on him, it will gaze beyond him to the exalted Lord. When I was in Northfield two years ago, I went out early one morning to conduct a camp-meeting away in the woods. The camp dwellers were two or three hundred men from the Water Street Mission in New York. At the beginning of the service, prayer was offered for me, and the prayer opened with this inspired supplication: "O Lord, we thank thee for our brother. Now blot him out!" and the prayer continued: "Reveal thy glory to us in such blazing splendor that he shall be forgotten." It was absolutely right, and I trust the prayer was answered. But, gentlemen, if we ourselves are gazing upon the glory of the Lord, we shall be blotted out in our own transparency. If we are seeking the glory of the Lord, there will be about us a purity, and a simplicity, and a singleness of devotion which will minister to the unveiling of the King, and men will "see no man, save Jesus only." Everything in the service will be significant, but nothing will be obtrusive. Everything will meekly fall into place, and will contribute to a reverent and sober setting in which our Lord will be revealed, "full of grace and truth."

Brilliance and Ministry

Brilliance is a dangerous quality. Not that a sluggish intellect is either a symptom of piety or a qualification for spiritual leadership, but the choice is not between brilliance and stupidity. There is a type of mind which one could not with any accuracy define as brilliant, but which possesses other qualities more essential for the task of interpreting, teaching, and exemplifying religion. Other things being equal, that man is the best minister or teacher who thinks as other people think, but better—logically, step by step, rather than by leaps and bounds to unexpected, even if true, conclusions; and by patiently picking his way among data and difficulties rather than impetuously brushing them aside. Brilliant preachers are more likely to evoke admiration than to build solid faith and fruitful repentance. Intelligence, scholarship, intellectual courage and competence, sensitiveness to beauty and moods—all these are useful and even necessary qualities in the ministry. But brilliance is so infrequently found in combination with the more substantial and serviceable qualities that it is often a doubtful blessing and never to be relied upon as the chief means for building the kingdom of God. It is surprising how much of the best work in the world has been done by people of moderate talents with an immoderate devotion to their tasks.

Stone Hammers

What would you think of a carpenter trying to use a stone hammer in these days when steel hammers are so inexpensive? Teachers, officers, and workers in the church who do not subscribe for the Departments' Journal are using a stone hammer. Thousands of capable workers attribute their success to the steady use of the Journal and its materials.

Do you subscribe for the Journal?

Do you recommend it to your friends?

THE ELDER JOHN HOWARD STORIES

XXVI. A Bedtime Story

John Howard paced restlessly up and down the room. "What is the matter, this evening?" his wife queried. "You seem so uneasy."

"I can not seem to settle on a subject for tomorrow's sermon," he answered.

"Oh, you will get one. You always do. One will come to you."

"Probably so. You will be telling me that Elijah fed the ravens—and I will be provided for. But I have preached here so often that finding new themes is getting to be old work."

Presently the phone rang. Sister Howard hastened to answer it, and soon returned to the living room. "It is for you," she said smilingly.

"Who is calling me?"

"Go find out. It is one of your friends."

The pastor took his way to the room where the telephone was kept, and soon the wife heard a telephone conversation, always one-sided to the listener, yet often enlightening.

"Hello! Hello! This is John Howard speaking—what? What? Good! Is that you? Well, well, John Garver—I am tickled to hear your voice. No, I am not busy. Sure, come right down."

It was only a short time until Apostle John Garver was seated in the Howard home. "How long will you be here? Will you preach for us tomorrow?" These questions were fired at him in rapid succession.

"Well, now, I'll not be here long at all," was the smiling answer. "No, I can not preach for you tomorrow. I am going out early to another appointment. I just stopped in for a short visit."

"That is too bad," the pastor's wife said. "My husband has been almost tearing his hair out trying to find a subject to preach on."

"That may be a poor place to look for a subject. Perhaps I can give him one before I leave—I have a number of slightly used subjects."

The evening passed quickly. Almost at once they fell to talking about the one big, important thing that had come into their lives: the church and its message. Why should I talk about pebbles when I sit in the shadow of "the rock that is higher than I"? The church, its news, its problems, its advancements, these themes held them enthralled. Now dipping into the past of their mutual experiences, now glancing into the future, now canvassing the present—the hours sped swiftly, until suddenly Elder Garver looked at his watch. "Why, it is almost eleven o'clock," he said. "I had no idea it was so late. I must go back to my lodgings."

"Why not stay with us tonight?" queried the pastor's wife. "Could we persuade you to stay?"

"Well—now—I might be influenced in that direction, if you would use tact."

"All right; that is settled. I will fix the guest chamber for you. It is cold tonight. Do you sleep in sheets or blankets?"

"I usually do—unless I have eaten a late supper or something like that. Then I lie awake in sheets or blankets."

"You know what I mean. Do you prefer sheets or blankets?"

"Whatever is on the bed."

"Nothing is on the bed—as yet."

"Then make it sheets; but don't go to any extra work. Funny," he added, turning to John Howard, "a man never learns that it is useless to tell a woman not to go to any extra work when she has company."

The two men fell into conversation again. Their talk drifted to past scenes at conference gatherings—legislative action, etc. Elder Garver spread his hands over the warm radiator and smiled reminiscently: "I just happened to think of old Brother John R. Evans," he said. "Do you remember him?"

"I certainly do. He was a fine, wise, dignified old minister. He gave me a lot of valuable advice in a few words."

"He did me, too." The visitor chuckled to himself. "He and I had attended a district conference. That was years ago when I was just starting out and had a lot to learn. The conference had adopted a fine bit of legislation. I do not remember now what it was—but it was very important—or seemed so to me, then. In the evening we sat in the room where we were lodged, and old Brother John R. was sort of hunched up over the fire, warming himself. He was not saying much—he did not need to—I was talking plenty. By and by I said, 'Brother Evans, you remember I introduced that resolution.' Brother Evans did not say a word. He just rubbed his hands together and spread them over the fire. I waited a while; then I said a little louder, 'Brother Evans, you will recall that I introduced that resolution.' Still Brother Evans said nothing. He just sat and rubbed his hands together and held them over the fire. I waited a while longer and again, in a still louder voice, said, 'Brother Evans—I introduced that resolution.' The old man stopped rubbing his hands a moment and looked up at me through his shaggy eyebrows, and said, 'Brother Ga-arver, hit does not greatly matter who introduced the resolution—the himportant thing is that hit was adopted.'"

The speaker paused and chuckled again: "That was all Brother John R. said, but it was plenty. He went back to rubbing his hands over the fire. It was the worst rebuke I ever had; but I needed it, and it did me a lot of good."

"I have my sermon," said Elder Howard. "It does not matter who introduces the resolution, so that it is a good one and is adopted. It does not matter who preaches the sermon, or makes the convert, or baptizes him, or pays the tithing. Paul said, I have planted and Apollos has watered. But who is Paul? It is God that giveth the increase; all working together and forgetting ourselves and trusting God to give the increase."

Elder Garver looked up, with an ironical grin on his face, as of one who betimes gibes at himself as well as others, and replied, "If it turns out to be a good sermon, which is very doubtful, remember that it was I who gave you the subject."

Catching his humor, John Howard replied, "Not at all. Your very story stops you from claiming credit. If the sermon falls flat I will announce that you furnished the theme. If it goes over good—why, that will be different. Naturally when one preaches a fine sermon on forgetting self he desires to have full credit."

"Why not call it a funeral sermon?"

"Why so?"

"Well; we have buried the old man with his deeds. Let him lie."

"But suppose he continues to lie about his deeds?"

They were still chuckling when Sister Howard returned to say that the bedroom was ready for its occupant.

"Joking aside," remarked John Howard as they arose, "you have given me a good subject, and if the sermon is any good, as it should be with such a theme, the credit is yours. I thank you."

"Not at all, not at all. If the sermon is good, the credit goes to old Brother John R. Evans. Strange, isn't it? He has been dead for some years, and yet he is to help you preach tomorrow. Surely our deeds do live after us."

"Well, good night."

"Good night."

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Unless our race is love-lifted and star-led, what hope have we that war will ever end, and the slum be cleansed, and mankind attain to a collective life that is just and merciful and full of joy? There is no valid fact against a great-spirited cooperation of nations and races but this—that we have a childish fear and lack a happy, childlike faith in the impossible things, which are alone worth the doing.
—Doctor Joseph Fort Newton.

The Statistician Reports

The Department of Statistics presents an interesting report again. The church with the close of December had baptized 4,261 people since April 1, 1929. This is 71 per cent of the 6,000 which it had set as a goal.

There remain three months in which to convert and baptize 1,739 if the goal is to be achieved. This is not an impossible accomplishment. For years many have been hesitating at the door of the church. Some have only needed a kindly, solicitous invitation, for these were not sure they would be welcomed. Others have waited to see if the promise that the gospel would make new men from those who had become old in walks of life which were not commendable, would be fulfilled. Still others need reason or evidence upon a point of doctrine not yet made clear to them.

Have you looked around to find any of these types, or others, and then busied yourself in study as to the best method of approach? R. J. L.

During December, 1929, the following number of reports of the various kinds were received by this department:

Baptisms .....	314	Transfers .....	990
Gains from the Unknown .....	187	Blessings .....	184
Deaths .....	109	Marriages .....	163
Expulsions .....	17	Ordinations .....	43
		Divorces .....	8
		Changes of Name .....	3
		Branches Organized .....	2
		Branches Disorganized .....	1

With 314 baptisms during December, the total up to date since April 1 is 4,261. This is 71 per cent of the goal of 6,000 which was set nine months ago. The present standing of the church with respect to the goal is shown by the thermometer at the left.

Inasmuch as 83 per cent of the quota should have been obtained by the end of December, the thermometer shows that we are 12 per cent, or about a month and a half, behind the goal for December.

One should not, however, be discouraged by this fact. Already, during the nine-month period more baptisms have been reported than in any of the past eight years. If the church can obtain even 5,500 baptisms, this will be more than any other year in the history of the Reorganization. The year 1921 established the record toward which the church might strive. In that year 5,477 baptisms were recorded.

Another point we wish to emphasize is the importance of seeing that all baptisms are reported promptly to this office. If they are not so reported, they can not be counted. Shortly after the first of the month following that in which the baptism was performed and reported, the individual should receive a baptismal certificate from this office, together with a letter from President Smith. In case anyone does not receive this certificate, please get in touch with the man who performed the baptism, because it is his duty to see that the same is reported.

Certain districts and missions deserve honorable mention because of the excellent missionary spirit which is being manifested. Several have already exceeded their quotas, and many more are well on their way to achieve their goals. The Honor Roll for December is as follows:

Society Islands Mission .....	141%	Kansas City Stake .....	78%
Northwestern Ohio District .....	120%	Rock Island District .....	78%
Detroit District .....	113%	Eastern Oklahoma District .....	75%
Southern Nebraska District .....	111%	Southeastern Illinois District .....	74%
Western Montana District .....	103%	Northwestern Iowa District .....	72%
Southern Missouri District .....	95%	Des Moines District .....	70%
Hawaiian Mission .....	87%	Independence .....	70%
Southern Indiana District .....	86%	Eastern Montana District .....	70%
Kentucky and Tennessee District ..	83%	Saint Louis District .....	70%
Spokane District .....	81%

We wish also to call attention to the large number of names that have been transferred as gains from the Unknown File. The total of 187 is greater than for any other month, with the exception of June, when 206 names were thus transferred. The response to our request for information about persons listed in the Herald has been gratifying, and we want to thank all who have helped us in making this project a success. We wish to say, however, that the list has not yet been completed, and the balance thereof will appear in two or three succeeding issues of the Herald.

The report on the present total net enrollment of the church will appear in the Herald for next week, together with a summary of all the gains and losses during the year 1929.

Yours sincerely,
THE DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS,
By CARROLL L. OLSON.

WORLD'S AFFAIRS

A New Kind of Nonsense

One of the most recent and incidentally most superficial attacks on prohibition was made by Representative Schafer, of Wisconsin, in the House of Representatives of the United States. His subject was "Prohibition versus Christianity," and he declared that we must choose between the two, that they are "eternal opposites," that "you can not have both." He says that "an unbridgable gulf separates one from the other, with God and Christ standing on one side and the devils on the other." Where do the wets and the Devil come in? One wonders.

To anyone who surveys the situation fairly, Mr. Schafer's arguments are no arguments at all. The philosophy of the Christian religion is at the very heart of such movements as that which finally outlawed the liquor traffic. But for the demand of the Christian religion, that individuals and personalities are eternally worth while and that those things which dwarf and degrade them shall be abolished, such forces as the liquor traffic would still be untrammelled in the earth today.

It will be difficult to convince people who profess Christianity that they must choose between their religion and prohibition, especially in the face of the fact that these same people have been the backbone of the long fight to achieve that prohibition. The gospel of Christ demands that man shall live at his best. Christian people believe that he can not do so and at the same time drink intoxicating liquors, taken either in its individual or its social implications.

There are more people than Mr. Schafer would have us believe who respect the Constitution of the United States, including the Eighteenth Amendment—because they helped to put it there!

Trouble in India

The actual conditions in India are hardly known to American readers, or, indeed, to readers anywhere. The muzzles of censorship, continuing from the war, still bind the news agencies wherever European nations are concerned. Censorship, however, is hardly ever completely effective, and some of the facts leak through.

India is disappointed. Even Ghandi, with his all but interminable patience, has lost hope. India, through her nationalistic congress, and with the approval of her leaders, had sent an ultimatum to Great Britain, stating that, if measures for either independence or a dominion status were not forthcoming by December 31, there would be a strong program of non-cooperation which would result in the failure of British rule in India. England delayed. This time the delay may harm rather than help British interests. India seems to mean business.

Lest Americans get to pointing out England's duty, let us remind them of the Philippines. The situations have many similarities.

Sherwood Eddy's article in The Christian Century of January 8 gives a good and impartial view of the Indian problem. Written from India, it is based on first-hand information.

The World Bank and World Peace

There have appeared in this column from time to time a number of suggestions to the effect that the internationalizing of finance and the greater industries would serve to enforce peace. These suggestions, based on current news reports, are apparently in the way of at least partial fulfillment.

The Outlook for January 8 carries an excellent article on the development and significance of the bank to be known, if the negotiations at the Hague succeed, as the "Bank of International Settlements." We are told that "If the proposed Bank of International Settlement results from their [the delegates'] conference, the greatest force for peace in the history of the world may have been established. Its influence will be incomparably greater than that of the League of Nations." We are told again, in words that express an idea that is now becoming common property, that "War, from the standpoint of the whole world, is very bad for banking, and for commerce and industry." As we suggested before, financial considerations may accomplish for the world what the combined effect of its morals, its ideals, and its humanitarian impulses could not.

Incidentally, it is only fair to give credit to the right parties for the idea of the world bank. Mr. Frank J. Dolan, a citizen of Pittsfield, Massachusetts, residing for the time in France, thought of the plan and, with the help of Colonel E. M. House, sought friends for it among leading European bankers. Repulsed coldly by the British, but winning the approval of Philip Snowden, who was the first to see its possibilities for world peace, Mr. Dolan was openly welcomed by Doctor Schacht of the German Reichsbank. Doctor Schacht immediately proposed complete plans, but the Americans of the Young Committee in Paris had other ideas, and, with the skillful aid of M. de Sanctis, a young Parisian, the present plans were made. They can not be explained here, but if they carry they will probably be explained in the daily press.

Epistle to the Church

To the Saints throughout the World; Greeting:

Eight months ago we joined our brethren of the First Presidency in calling upon the Saints everywhere to devote this last year of the first century of our church existence to a church-wide campaign of convincing testimony for Christ. With but three months remaining before the convening of the conference which shall usher in the new century, we come again to renew our petition for your whole-souled cooperation that this great endeavor shall be carried forward to a victorious conclusion.

The year 1830 ushered in a remarkable century, the most significant event of which has been the coming forth of the restored gospel in preparation for the promised return of our Lord. The multiplied evidences of the intervening years have but strengthened the conviction of the Saints that God is indeed moving upon the hearts of men through his church, and during these past months these evidences have been richly augmented in the lives of those who have caught the passion of Christ for the souls of men. Our God is truly the great I AM.

The past months have been months of reaping. More of our young people have faced the facts of spiritual life than in any similar period and have given themselves without reservation to the service of the Master. More mature men and women than in any like period have exchanged their attitude of friendly interest to one of active identification with the Cause of Christ. Many family circles have been completed, and now stand undivided as units of stable spiritual power, and thousands of the Saints share joy beyond words in contemplation of this fact.

But the past months have also been months of sowing. Many, both young and old, are now freshly alert to the great evangel. The missionary passion which has swept the church has taken the gospel into the lives of thousands who had never before felt its winning attraction, and hundreds of these are now on the brink of decision.

In the spirit of this great hour we therefore renew our call to the church in every land. The wonderful achievements of the immediate past, as well as those of earlier years, challenge us to still greater endeavor in order that none of the harvest of our past sowing shall be lost. We have set our goal at six thousand converts in the year which will end at the opening of the Centennial Conference. More than four thousand of these have already been won. We look with confident expectation to the early baptism of many more truly converted followers of Jesus.

Response to this call need in no way detract from desirable emphasis on other phases of our great work. On the contrary, it must mean the enrichment of every service with an added note of universal significance. Something of the Father's undying hunger for the souls of men should shine through every activity of his church.

Nor must this call be permitted to result in lowering the level of spiritual quality of those who join with us. In view of the tremendous tasks which confront us, it is imperative that membership in the church shall mean actual regeneration. Only reborn men and women can build Zion the Beautiful. But the high quality of converts demanded at our hands is not an excuse for abandoning the enterprise but a challenge to prosecute it the more zealously. The Master can still transform men into his likeness. It is our greatest glory that he is eager to do it through us.

Let every member of the church go to the work of these last months with a spiritual zeal which will not be denied. In fasting and prayer, and in the attractive power of lives wholly dedicated to the service of God and men, let us win still others for the Master. To do this is the best possible guarantee of the spiritual endowment which will send us out into the new century with power such as comes from God alone, and which must be ours if we are to build his kingdom.

Music Contest for 1930 Conference

A second music contest is being arranged under the auspices of the Church Music Board. This contest will take place at the 1930 General Conference at Independence, Missouri. Those who heard the last contest know how interesting and worth while it was. Since that time many young people have expressed a regret that they did not enter. It is hoped that music directors in all localities of the church will encourage their talented young people to enroll.

The contest creates enthusiasm for the study of music and spreads the gospel of music through the church. It causes talented young people to meet and learn to respect each other's accomplishments, who find that it is always inspiring to get acquainted with others working for the same ideals. The church music leaders wish to know and encourage our young people to improve their musical talent.

Advance Information

The Centennial Conference, April 6 to 20, will continue over three Sundays. To get the best out of the conference, both delegates and visitors should plan to attend the entire time, as it is exceedingly difficult to single out either week-end, or any one of the three Sundays, or even some of the week-night programs and say that they are more important than other features.

Activity at the Auditorium is noticeably on the increase. Three gangs of workmen are busy bringing the Auditorium to a further stage of completion. A new heating unit is being installed in the boiler room. Two steam coils have been placed near the east wall of the basement, and workmen are now engaged in connecting the conduits with these two units so that heat may be carried to the upper auditorium. Another group of workmen are constructing and raising the swinging scaffolds from which the ceiling will be hung beneath the steel girders that support the dome.

No anvil chorus ever struck more joyous chords of harmony than this group of workmen whose hammers continually resound through the main auditorium room. Those who are interested in the Centennial Conference, and particularly those who have visited the Auditorium, have anxiously looked forward to the time when the ceiling would be hung, and thus add to the acoustic properties of the room. Less than ninety days are available for this work, but the completed job, except for the decorating, has been promised by April 1.

It is undoubtedly fitting that the first session of the conference should duplicate the service at which the church was organized a century ago. Therefore, a communion service has been planned for the opening meeting at 8 to 9.45 Sunday morning, April 6. In view of the anticipated attendance, a second communion service duplicating the first one will follow immediately from 10.15 to 12 o'clock noon. Both of these services will be in charge of the First Presidency. It is likely that young people will desire to attend the first service of the day, and during the second communion service there will be other services provided for them while the other visitors and delegates at the conference participate in the second service.

On Sunday afternoon at 2.30 in the Auditorium there will be a sacred band concert, and at the same hour there will be a priesthood prayer meeting in the Stone Church. A vesper service in the Auditorium has been planned for the hour from 4 to 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. President Elbert A.

Smith will be in charge. The regular Sunday evening vesper service from 6 to 7 will be broadcast over KMBC from the L. D. S. Studio, and arrangements are being made to relay this service to the Auditorium for those who wish to come early and enjoy the program. At 7.30 Sunday evening the final contest of the Centennial Oratorical Contest will take place. Those who will participate are listed alphabetically as follows:

Olive Curtis, of Independence, representing Region 13.

Flora Delofski, of Rozelle, Australia, representing Region 15.

Howard Elliott, of Saint Louis, representing Region 12.

James Gardner, Graceland College, representing Region 10.

John F. Schofield, of Birmingham, England, representing Region 16.

Frances Skinner, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, representing Region 5.

Other features of the conference will be announced in this column each week, and readers of the Herald are invited to read them carefully, so that they may be informed regarding plans for the coming conference.

his promises. It is said that he bore great testimony and positive of the truth of "the work." In fact, it was reported that he had said he would die before denying the faith which he had professed. And those who heard him before the congregations affirmed that he was indeed mighty in volume and in vigor for the declaring of "the word." But these things were not done in the places of business; they transpired in the houses of worship, in the realm of spiritual affairs.

This elder hath great regard for the gospel, it may thus be concluded. But the workmen were of a mind that his gospel touched not upon matters of business. And they went away saying, "Never again shall we seek hire of this man, who was our brother. For he hath tricked us."

And there came to me the thought, "Of what worth to an employer is the respect and confidence of hard-working men?" What price honor? For this good man hath sold his for ninety cents.

Assurances for 1930

Radio sermon, January 5, 1930, by M. A. McConley

I will use as my text the statement of the Master to his disciples of old, "Have faith in God." No better advice than this can be given.

As we enter the New Year, there is a feeling of expectancy and hope for all. What does 1930 hold in store for us?

Manufacturers and merchants are hoping it will be a good year for business. Stockmen are hoping that markets will be good, thus guaranteeing a profitable disposal of their herds. Farmers are hoping for favorable weather conditions, guaranteeing a good yield and that a firm market will be available.

The professional men, especially those who are young, are hoping an opportunity may come to render some outstanding piece of service to their respective communities.

Others, each in his particular line, are hoping the year may bring success. And probably every family has at least some one thing which they hope to acquire—with many it is a new car; with some it is an electric washer, a vacuum cleaner, or some other item of household convenience.

And doubtless every breadwinner in the world hopes that his employment will be secure, to the end that he may supply the physical necessities of his own family.

These desires appear to be both natural and legitimate.

But it is not my intention to attempt to forecast business conditions or to give assurance of coming material prosperity. Suffice it to say, that it would appear that we are facing a period of normal conditions.

However, the biggest things in America today are not of a material nature. The things which will most contribute to your happiness and mine during the coming year, are not to be determined by the stock ticker or the size of the bank balances. These are but incidental to real life, and whether they shall be used for our weal or for our woe will be determined by our spiritual attitude.

The year 1930 comes to us with a record that is clean, in that it is as yet unused. When the year shall have closed and that record has been sealed for eternity, what shall it reveal?

We do not presume to predict the identical happenings of the coming year. But I do say, unequivocally, that we may definitely decide at the beginning of the year what our policy shall be; that we may decide what the principle shall be that shall govern us; as to what our attitude shall be toward the year's developments. And this decision, if made according to the law of God, shall guarantee to us that 1930 shall be both happy and prosperous. And what better guarantee do we need?

We may confidently expect that the year will bring us times of joy and gladness, and that it will likewise be fraught with periods of difficulty and perplexity, when our souls may be tried to the utmost. But if we shall maintain our integrity before God and man, it naturally follows that all that shall happen shall result in a steady and sure growth of character, making for a bigger and cleaner manhood and womanhood and for a better and happier world.

Every problem solved, every trouble overcome, every difficulty surmounted, if approached with a right attitude, will prove to have been a blessing in disguise and a stepping-stone to our development.

We may rest assured that nature's laws will remain unchanged. They are universal and continuous. The law of compensation will be working. Men will continue to reap what they have sown. Every effect will be the result of a definite cause. And a like cause will continue, under given and specified conditions, to produce a like effect. For the laws of nature are God's laws, and like God are unchangeable. As we understand those laws, to that extent shall we comprehend God. When we have eyes to see, ears to hear, and a mind to understand, we can then join with the Psalmist of old in exclaiming: "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth his handiwork."

With Mrs. Browning we can say feelingly:

Earth is crammed with heaven,
And every common bush afire with God.

As the further truths of science shall be revealed by man's research, we shall find more and more that science and religion are handmaidens.

It is the province of science to explore the field of the physical universe. It is the province of religion to unfold and develop the great truths of the spiritual realm. And as we find that the laws of the physical field are universal and continuous, even so are those of the spiritual world.

Today great spiritual truths challenge our honest and careful and prayerful investigation. The advice of the Master of Men to the disciples of old is still opportune: "Have faith in God." And the promise of knowledge still holds good wherein Christ taught: "He that doeth the will of the Father shall know of the doctrine." After over twenty-five years in the work of the ministry, I can testify, as a result of my experience and observation, that God is at work in the world today. His promises are sure; his laws are dependable; and when we meet the conditions upon which any certain promise is given, the results are assured, for it is the working of divine law.

We reap what we sow in the physical field; even so, we must assuredly reap what we sow in the spiritual realm. "I am the Lord, I change not," may well be remembered today. "God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

God sent his Son Jesus Christ into the world that meaning might be given to life; that purpose might be revealed in the physical universe by which man is surrounded; and that following the example of the Christ, the power and majesty of God might be translated into terms of right human relationships.

There was never greater opportunity for this translation of life's efforts into Christian service than now. No other age in the history of the world saw a greater accumulation of wealth represented by material things. No other age ever saw such an assembly of men and women as are today engaged in scientific research. No other age ever saw such an accumulation of the knowledge of the past as is available in our great libraries, and in our schools and universities.

How shall this power be used? Shall it be turned into the development of that which is constructive and helpful, or shall it be used to tear down and destroy? This is a question which we must meet and which demands an answer. And the answer made shall determine America's future, not alone during 1930, but throughout the succeeding years.

In preparing our garden of life for 1930, we ought to obtain the very best seed possible. We want that which shall bring returns of which we may well be proud—that which shall bring happiness to ourselves and to our friends and associates.

We are here, created in the image of our heavenly Father, the crowning work of his divine love. All that we are or ever can become, we are by reason of what he has made possible. It should therefore be self-evident to all thinking men and women that we are stewards for God, and that we must eventually give an account to him for all that we are and all that we have. That we must account for the use of our time, our talents, and our opportunities. Such a conception of our relationship to our Creator and of our responsibilities under that relationship, lends dignity to labor and gives purpose to life.

If we live solely for self and selfish interests, the result will be a more pronounced and fully developed selfishness. And we may rightly expect that people in return shall deal with us from a selfish standpoint motivated by selfish interests. And our friends will be of that class. If we shall permit petty, trifling, and unimportant things to engross our attention, we shall likewise become petty and trifling, and unable to see or to grasp the big things of life. If we shall sow to the flesh and pander to the carnal appetites, we shall in return become more sensual, and the baser qualities of our natures will become more pronounced. We shall find that the finer sense of our conscience has been dulled and that we are less susceptible to the leadings of the Spirit of God, which always prompts to the higher and nobler and better things of life. And we shall find ourselves associating with and surrounded with that class of people. For the law of affinity is working constantly. Like seeks like. Water always seeks its own level.

If you want to reap the best things in life during 1930, then be sure to plant the right kind of seed. The seeds of righteousness, love, virtue, truth, brotherhood, and charity always bear a crop of good works. The returns are always pleasing and find a ready market.

Determine to make God your partner in life. Stop doing wrong and learn to do right. Make God's church your church, and God's people your people. Regard and observe the Sabbath as a day of rest and of worship. Study the Scriptures daily and seek to become better acquainted with God's law, so that God's ideals shall become your ideals. Maintain touch with God through prayer. Begin the day by pouring out your soul to God in prayer, that you may be guided and protected in your day's activities. At the close of day thank him again for his goodness and love; and as you review the day's activities, when you find mistakes, acknowledge them and try to do better.

Meditate and assimilate and put his law into practice. You will find that it works and is the most practical thing ever presented to mankind. And as the year progresses you will find yourself growing in understanding of life and its purposes, in appreciation of God's goodness and love, and in appreciation of the many noble men and women among our citizenship.

Do not expect to get something for nothing. Thousands of good Americans have been stung by the bee of speculation. Many have been engaged in stock market gambling to their sorrow. Playing the market is dangerous for your pocketbook and is a mighty poor business for Christians to engage in. It is apt to bring, not only financial but also moral and spiritual bankruptcy.

The moral fiber of which real Christians are made is developed by honest industry. Be willing to give an honest day's work for an honest day's wage. Practice thrift and economy. Live within your means. Avoid the extravagance which is sweeping America off its feet. Do not attempt to live like a millionaire on a wheelbarrow salary.

Temptations will come, but keeping in touch with God brings strength to overcome them. Difficulties may arise, but the wisdom of God is equal to their solution. Obstacles will confront your path, but in God there is wisdom and strength to rise above them.

Friends, many of you have not yet come out on the Lord's side. As you take stock of the past, you may find that you have been following the broad way. You may have been letting yourself take the course of least resistance; have walked with the crowd; have drifted with the human tide.

But following a crooked course makes crooked rivers and crooked men. You have doubtless acquired habits in many ways that are not pleasing to God, and many times may have sinned against God and society. But thanks to God's mercy and love, the door of repentance has not closed, and your days of probation are not ended.

The hand of God is extended to you today in love. The invitation is freely given unto you by Christ, "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "Ask and ye shall receive; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you."

Christ has proved his interest in us by the sacrifice he was willing to make on our behalf. Friends, have we appreciated that sacrifice? Have we reciprocated that love? What are we going to do about it?

Could there be a more opportune time than at the beginning of the New Year to come out on the Lord's side? Could there be anything done which would mean more and be more worth while? Could you do anything that would be more conducive to the happiness and welfare of yourself and loved ones? Could you do anything that would be more in harmony with the voice of sanity and reason? My friends, opportunity is knocking at your door. May she not knock in vain.

God's way is the best way because it is the right way. And God's side shall be the winning side, for truth shall triumph, righteousness shall succeed, equity and justice shall prevail. God's way is the straight way. It is the path of duty which leads from where we are to where we ought to be.

Have you the moral courage to make the new start? I believe you have. How many will start today?

If you will write to me, I shall be pleased to try to help you. I will supply you with necessary literature, which will help you to understand the gospel and make plain what the law of God requires. And I will pray for you. And if you will honestly try to do your part, God will most surely do his. We will consider it a pleasure to care for your inquiries and will arrange for a personal visit by one of our ministry, when possible.

Not only will you find God ready and willing to assist you, but there are many God-fearing men and women in the world who will do their part in helping you, too.

But God plays no favorites. The price of favor with God is obedience to law. Christ can not save us in our sins. He came and lived, and suffered, and died, to save us from our sins, on condition of repentance.

When we shall arise in the majesty of our God-given manhood, and determine to overcome the weakness of the flesh to which we are heir, God's power will supplement ours. When we reach the limit of our endurance, he will supply the added strength to battle for the right.

The voice of God comes echoing down the corridors of time from Pentecost:

Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

Except ye be born of the water and of the Spirit ye can not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

Let us be honest with ourselves and with God. If we expect to be forgiven of our sins, we must surely come clean and make full restitution as far as possible for the wrongs we have done.

Where men and women will accept Christ's terms, they repent of their sins and are buried with him in baptism, that they may indeed arise to a newness of life. Thousands are rejoicing today because of finding the truth.

But in the last analysis, Christianity is revealed in deeds more than in creeds. The latter are but a means to an end.

The time is here for an actual demonstration of the practical aspects of Christianity as regards group endeavor. Society needs to be organized on a Christian basis, where all relationships are Christian, where all of life's activities shall be permeated and directed by God's Spirit. This is one of the crying needs of our age.

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is attempting this most worth-while task in social reform. There are problems before us which are as yet unsolved. But, friends, we believe it can and will be done. And towards its success we solicit your humble faith and prayers. Details of this work will be gladly furnished to those interested.

And to those Christians who have sought to do their part, this past year in keeping the banner of King Immanuel flying, I wish to say, Continue the good work. May you all be able, by God's grace, to render a more faithful and consecrated service during the coming year.

I will conclude by reading Ecclesiastes 12: 13, 14: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God, and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man."

To the extent that we shall do so, I assure you that 1930 shall be both happy and prosperous.

Six Principles

By Morris F. Laughlin

There are six principles of mathematics: 1, Notation or writing numbers; 2, Numeration, or reading numbers; 3, Addition; 4, Subtraction; 5, Multiplication; and 6, Division.

The above six principles of mathematics are essential and indispensable to the science, as mathematics is an exact science. No mathematician, author, professor, or teacher of that science can discard any one of the six principles of mathematics. We can not eliminate one of these principles and succeed with any of the branches of the science of mathematics or the sciences in which mathematical calculations are involved.

There are six principles of the gospel of the Son of God: 1, Repentance; 2, Faith; 3, Baptisms; 4, Laying on of hands; 5, The resurrection of the dead; and 6, Eternal judgment.

The principles of the doctrine of Jesus the Christ emanated from the divine wisdom of the Creator. The plan of salvation for mankind excludes elimination or augmentation. "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." It needs neither additions nor subtractions.

We live in an age of distracting and detracting doctrines. Unstable souls are blown about by every wind of false doctrine originating from his satanic majesty, the Devil. The popular churches do not teach or practice the full complement of the principles of the gospel of Christ. They are divided over such doctrines as theosophy, transmigration of souls, Christian Science (so-called), denial of the atonement, agnosticism, spiritism or spiritualism, unitarianism, universalism, modernism, fundamentalism, evolution, theo-evolution, virgin birth of Christ, vicarious atonement, resurrection, inspiration of the Scriptures, the divinity of Jesus the Christ, and the restoration of the church of Jesus Christ.

1. Repentance. Saint Paul says of repentance:

Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance: for ye were made sorry after a godly manner, that ye might receive damage by us in nothing. For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of; but the sorrow of the world worketh death.—2 Corinthians 7: 9, 10.

The burden of the message of John the Baptist was repentance: Repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance. (Matthew 3: 2, 8.)

Saint Mark says that Jesus sent forth the Twelve by two and two; and they went out and preached that men should repent. (Mark 6: 7, 12.)

Then Peter said unto them: Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Acts 2: 38.

And the Father said, Repent ye, repent ye, and be baptized in the name of my beloved Son.—Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 13: 14.

O then, my beloved brethren, repent ye, and enter in at the straight gate, and continue in the way which is narrow, until ye shall obtain eternal life.—Book of Mormon, Jacob 4: 16.

2. Faith. Saint Paul defines faith:

Now faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.—Hebrews 11: 1, Inspired Version.

Saint Jude testifies of the importance of faith:

Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.—Jude 3.

Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ: by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God.—Romans 5: 1, 2.

Faith carries with it wonderful power. Jesus said of faith:

If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you.—Matthew 17: 20.

3. Baptisms. The baptism of the first Adam and his call and ordination to the Melchisedec priesthood:

And it came to pass, when the Lord had spoken with Adam our father, that Adam cried unto the Lord, and he was caught away by the Spirit of the Lord, and was carried down into the water, and was laid under the water, and was brought forth out of the water; and thus he was baptized. And the Spirit of God descended upon him, and thus he was born of the Spirit, and became quickened in the inner man. And he heard a voice out of heaven, saying, Thou art baptized with fire and with the Holy Ghost; this is the record of the Father and the Son, from henceforth and forever; and thou art after the order of him who was without beginning of days or end of years, from all eternity to all eternity. Behold, thou art one in me, a son of God; and thus may all become my sons. Amen.—Genesis 6: 67-71, Inspired Version.

The baptism of the second Adam:

Wherefore, I would that ye should remember that I have spoken unto you, concerning that prophet which the Lord showed unto me, that should baptize the Lamb of God, which should take away the sin of the world. And now, if the Lamb of God, he being holy, should have need to be baptized by water to fulfill all righteousness, O then, how much more need have we, being unholy, to be baptized, yea, even by water. And now, I would ask of you, my beloved brethren, wherein the Lamb of God did fulfill all righteousness in being baptized by water? Know ye not that he was holy? But notwithstanding he being holy, he showeth unto the children of men, that according to the flesh, he humbled himself before the Father, and witnesseth unto the Father that he would be obedient unto him in keeping his commandments; wherefore, after he was baptized with water, the Holy Ghost descended upon him in the form of a dove. And again: It showeth unto the children of men the straightness of the path, and the narrowness of the gate, by which they should enter, he having set the example before them. And he said unto the children of men, Follow thou me. Wherefore, my beloved brethren, can we follow Jesus, save we shall be willing to keep the commandments of the Father? And the Father said, Repent ye, repent ye, and be baptized in the name of my beloved Son. And also, the voice of the Son came unto me, saying: He that is baptized in my name, to him will the Father give the Holy Ghost, like unto me; wherefore, follow me, and do the things which ye have seen me do. Wherefore, my beloved brethren, I know that if ye shall follow the Son with full purpose of heart, acting no hypocrisy and no deception before God, but with real intent, repenting of your sins, witnessing unto the Father that ye are willing to take upon you the name of Christ, by baptism: yea, by following your Lord and your Savior down into the water, according to his word; behold, then shall ye receive the Holy Ghost; yea, then cometh the baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost; and then can ye speak with the tongue of angels, and shout praises unto the Holy One of Israel.—Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 13: 6-17.

Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered him. And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: and lo a voice from heaven, saying: This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.—Matthew 3: 13-17.

4. Laying on of hands. The imposition of hands is for a fourfold purpose: for the gift of the Holy Spirit, for the blessing of children, for healing the sick, and for ordination to the priesthood; and we might add, for patriarchal blessings.

And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him, said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost.—Acts 9: 17.

Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost: (for as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.) Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost.—Acts 8: 14-17.

Stephen and his coworkers were ordained to their ministry by the laying on of hands:

Whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them.—Acts 6: 6.

... now I give unto thee a commandment, that thou shalt baptize by water, and they shall receive the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, even as the apostles of old.—Doctrine and Covenants 34: 2.

... Esaias also lived in the days of Abraham and was blessed of him, which Abraham received the priesthood from Melchisedec; who received it through the lineage of his fathers, even till Noah; and from Noah till Enoch, through the lineage of their fathers; and from Enoch to Abel, who was slain by the conspiracy of his brother; who received the priesthood by the commandments of God, by the hand of his father Adam, who was the first man; which priesthood continueth in the church of God in all generations, and is without beginning of days or end of years.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 2.

Jesus blessed little children by the imposition of hands:

Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them. But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven. And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.—Matthew 19: 13-15.

5. The Resurrection of the Dead.

Now when Jesus was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had cast seven devils. And she went and told them that had been with him, as they mourned and wept. And they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been seen of her, believed not. After that he appeared in another form unto two of them, as they walked, and went into the country. And they went and told it unto the residue; neither believed they them. Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.—Mark 16: 9-14.

Now, verily I say unto you, that through the redemption which is made for you, is brought to pass the resurrection from the dead. And the spirit and the body is the soul of man. And the resurrection from the dead is the redemption of the soul; and the redemption of the soul is through him who quickeneth all things, in whose bosom it is decreed, that the poor and the meek of the earth shall inherit it. Therefore, it must needs be sanctified from all unrighteousness, that it may be prepared for the celestial glory; for after it hath filled the measure of its creation, it shall be crowned with glory, even with the presence of God the Father; that bodies who are of the celestial kingdom may possess it for ever and ever; for, for this intent was it made and created; and for this intent are they sanctified.—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 4.

And again, we bear record for we saw and heard, and this is the testimony of the gospel of Christ, concerning them who come forth in the resurrection of the just: they are they who received the testimony of Jesus, and believed on his name, and were baptized after the manner of his burial, being buried in the water in his name, and this according to the commandment which he has given, that by keeping the commandments, they might be washed and cleansed from all their sins, and receive the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hands of him who is ordained and sealed unto this power; and who overcome by faith, and are sealed by that Holy Spirit of promise, which the Father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true; they are they who are the church of the Firstborn; they are they into whose hands the Father has given all things: they are they who are priests and kings, who have received of his fullness, and of his glory, and are priests of the Most High after the order of Melchisedec, which was after the order of Enoch, which was after the order of the only begotten Son; wherefore, as it is written, they are God's, even the sons of God; wherefore all things are theirs, whether life or death, or things present, or things to come, all are theirs, and they are Christ's, and Christ is God's; and they shall overcome all things; wherefore let no man glory in man, but rather let him glory in God, who shall subdue all enemies under his feet; these shall dwell in the presence of God and his Christ forever and ever; these are they whom he shall bring with him, when he shall come in the clouds of heaven, to reign on the earth over his people; these are they who shall have part in the first resurrection; these are they who shall come forth in the resurrection of the just; these are they who are come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly place, the holiest of all; these are they who have come to an innumerable company of angels; to the general assembly and church of Enoch, and of the Firstborn; these are they whose names are written in heaven, where God and Christ are the judge of all; these are they who are just men made perfect through Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, who wrought out this perfect atonement through the shedding of his own blood; these are they whose bodies are celestial, whose glory is that of the sun, even the glory of God the highest of all; whose glory the sun of the firmament is written of as being typical.—Doctrine and Covenants 76: 5.

6. Eternal judgment.

And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God: and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.—Revelation 20: 12.

And it shall come to pass, that when all men shall have passed from this first death unto life, insomuch as they have become immortal, they must appear before the judgment seat of the Holy One of Israel; and then cometh the judgment; and then must they be judged according to the holy judgment of God. And assuredly, as the Lord liveth, for the Lord God hath spoken it, and it is his eternal word, which can not pass away, that they who are righteous shall be righteous still, and they who are filthy shall be filthy still. . . . But, behold, the righteous, the saints of the Holy One of Israel, they who have believed in the Holy One of Israel; they who have endured the crosses of the world, and despised the shame of it; they shall inherit the kingdom of God, which was prepared for them from the foundation of the world: and their joy shall be full forever.—Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 6: 36-38, 42.

Therefore not leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection; not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, of laying on of hands, and of the resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment. And we will go on unto perfection if God permit.—Hebrews 6: 1-3, Inspired Version.

Do You Know Any of These Names?

In the list which follows are the names of persons who have been reported to this office as being "Unknown." It is our conviction that if we could bring these names in contact with the right persons we could locate a large number of them. It may be that in going down the list you may find only one or two persons that you know. However, your knowledge, added to that of another reader of the Herald, and everyone making his or her contribution, should result in a large proportion of these persons, who are supposed to be "Unknown," eventually becoming located.

According to our experience with the names beginning with the first four letters of the alphabet, we should be able to locate at least 20 per cent of the names on this list. To do this, however, will require the cooperation of all readers of the Herald, and we, therefore, earnestly solicit your support in order that we may be able to properly enroll these names.

If you are unable to give us the individual's present complete address, will you please advise us as to where such information may be obtained? If the individual has since died, will you please give us the approximate date of death? In case a sister has had a change of name by marriage, also give us the full name of her husband, and the date of marriage if possible.

The list which follows contains names on the Unknown continuing the letter "W." In the next issue of the Herald this list will be continued.

The Birthday of the Church

By D. T. Williams

When we celebrate the Golden Anniversary of the church of the Restoration, are we in that act commemorating the birthday of the ancient church founded by our Lord nineteen hundred years ago? This is an interesting question, to say the least. There are very strong reasons to believe that the early Christian Church was born just eighteen centuries prior to the organization of our own church in 1830. If this were proved to be so, then the church of the apostolic age is just nineteen hundred years old this year. Such being the case, our centennial celebration should be possessed of a double meaning.

A strange coincidence this, if coincidence it can be called. We are more apt to feel that such a fact, if fact it be, is rather another demonstration of the long-announced truth that God's hand is in the latter-day work. However that may be Herald readers and all others interested in the Restoration, will be interested in the following quotation from the pen of the editor of The Living Age for May 18, 1929. Under the caption, "The church is nineteen hundred years old," the editor says:

Whitsunday is the church's birthday. Of that there is no doubt, even though we grant that in a sense Judaism was the church before Christianity came. Since the essence of the giving of life to the church was the descent of the Holy Spirit, the Life Giver, Whitsunday can not be robbed of its preeminence as the birthday of the church viewed as an organism.

But in just what year was the church born? Bible chronology is confessedly difficult and is only approximate at best. But the scholarly discussion of the subject by W. K. Lowther Clarke in Bishop Gore's New Commentary is perhaps the most recent review of the general subject accessible to most of us. Doctor Clarke's conclusion, advanced cautiously and subject to change, is that the traditional date, A. D. 29, is the actual date of the crucifixion, and therefore of the descent of the Holy Spirit—the church's birthday. If that is the case, we celebrate this year the even nineteen hundredth anniversary of the occurrence. Lest our satisfaction in having the exact date once more confirmed become too enthusiastic, we hasten to add that in a paragraph interpolated in Doctor Clarke's paper "since the above was written," he observes that Doctor J. K. Fotheringham has made an "overwhelmingly strong" case for the year A. D. 30, in his recent book, The Date of Easter. According to that student of calendars, the actual Easter Day was April 7, in the year 30.

While, therefore, it can not be said to be certain that we celebrate this year exactly the church's nineteen hundredth anniversary, yet according to the scholarly belief of recent years, which had been accepted by Doctor Lowther Clarke as spokesman for Bishop Gore's Commentary on that matter until, after his article was chiefly written, his view was somewhat shaken, that must be accepted as the hypothetical date. If we could be sure of it, very likely the Christian

Independence Sanitarium Patroness Society

By Iva Edgerton

The Patroness Society of the Independence Sanitarium has completed the work of another year and thinks Herald readers will be interested in hearing about the organization and work of the society.

This year the society has had made a beautiful solid gold pin upon which in black enamel are the letters I. S. P. S., the society insignia. Gold and black are the Sanitarium colors. A hundred or more of these pins are in the hands of members scattered in various States.

A great many letters have been received by the president and secretary, inquiring about the society, and we have sent circulars to all who have asked and have been pleased at the results. There are seven units organized in various places: Springfield, Missouri, Sister Mary Sparling, president; Lansing, Michigan, Sister R. A. Frisbie, president; Pittsburg, Kansas, Sister S. S. Boone; Minot, North Dakota, Sister M. Ross; Tulsa, Oklahoma, Sister L. Henson; Detroit, Michigan, Sister Rose Hunter; Central Chicago, Sister Fay McDonald. These are fully organized and have reported, sending the society headquarters, Independence, Missouri, the names of officers and charter members. The Detroit unit is the largest, having sixty-four charter members.

The Patroness Society has an active quilt committee, the chairman being the second vice president. They report twenty-four quilts turned in finished, eleven tops pieced ready to quilt, and sixty-two are out in the hands of workers.

The annual banquet in Independence was held in June, a great majority of the membership being present. Long tables were beautifully laid in the dining hall of the Stone Church, and the color scheme of black and gold was carried out. Miss Gertrude Copeland, superintendent of the Sanitarium, was the guest of honor and gave a splendid talk concerning the national hospital convention, expressing her appreciation for our work for the Sanitarium. She also mentioned the endowment fund the society is sponsoring.

During the past year the society in the center place has not served refreshments at the monthly meeting. We estimate this to have been a saving to the organization of between one hundred and sixty-five and one hundred and seventy dollars.

Besides the quilts above mentioned, we have had sent to us to be listed and passed on to the Sanitarium a box of things from Sister Lundeen in Minneapolis, and Sister Bryant, also Sister G. Garden, Fisher, Arkansas; a quilt from Sister C. D. Gerrish, Maine; a quilt top from Sister Reesman, Illinois; and some holders from Blue Birds at Saint Joseph, Missouri.

The members in Zion have turned in one hundred and world would have arranged an adequate world-wide celebration of the event at the time of this Whitsunday. If, within another year, scholars can convince themselves that Fotheringham has correctly identified the actual year as 30, it is not too late for such an adequate celebration to be arranged for next year.

Be that as it may, we are now, within a range of only a very few possible years, at the nineteen hundredth anniversary of the crucifixion, the resurrection, the ascension and the coming of the Holy Ghost. Strangely little has been said about it where one would have anticipated a really worthy celebration. Let us at least bear testimony to the approximate anniversary before the latest of the dates within that possible range is past.

ninety pieces of linen and have out in the making several linen sets for private rooms. These will be on display at General Conference.

The treasurer reports for the year: Dues, $84; refreshment dues, $20.20; donated from outside the membership, $8.75; a balance from last year of $28.76 makes the year's total income $141.71. Those contributing from outside to the endowment fund were: Mrs. Weed, California; Sister Reese, Canada; Lucy Dalley, Texas; Ada Quick, Iowa; Jennie Stephenson, Illinois; Sister J. J. Kutt, Michigan, Detroit Patroness Society; Sister Sheetz, Emma Flanders, Eben Miller, and Annie Franklin. Total endowment for the year is $136.60. The grand total including interest is $281.04.

We are looking forward to the Centennial Conference. We hope to have a get-acquainted meeting, also to have Doctor Teel, Miss Copeland, and others meet all our members from outside Independence.

The election of officers resulted in the choice of the following: President, Sister H. L. Loosmore; first vice president, Sister Rosa Small; second vice president, Sister Mary Weston; secretary, Sister Iva Edgerton; treasurer, Sister Cora Tonnahill; corresponding secretary, Sister F. Rauh; and historian, Sister E. L. Kelley.

The last three months of the year a membership drive was conducted, and at the close of the period two hundred and sixteen names of new members were turned in. We welcome them and hope to have new members continually coming to us, for all who wish may become members. We have an honorary list of men who have joined the society.

Flint, Michigan

From Flint Tidings

Church officers in Flint are: President-pastor, Thomas L. Clarke; associate pastor, W. E. Alldread; associate pastor, Saul Pittsley; secretary, Emil J. Palmer; statistician, Murial R. DuRose; treasurer, Glenn A. Hardy; superintendent of Women, Lulu E. Hutchins; superintendent of Religious Education, Albert T. Leighton; publicity agent, Leo C. Riegler. And the places of worship are Central, 521 East Newall Street, and North End, 730 East Baltimore Boulevard.

Flint Tidings is published monthly by the following staff: Editor, Clarisa Hardy; business manager, Glenn A. Hardy; general manager, Thomas L. Clarke.

Arrangements have been made with Elder Hubert Case to begin a two-week series of personal and mass evangelism meetings January 19.

Sunday morning, January 12, at 9.45 there was a service of blessing at both the Baltimore Boulevard and Newall Street Churches. Elder Saul Pittsley had charge at the Newall Street Church and Elder Thomas L. Clarke at Baltimore Boulevard. Before the service the parents having children to be blessed furnished the pastor with the name and birth date of the child to be blessed, and the result was an impressive ceremony at the two branches.

Sunday afternoon, January 5, the quarterly union sacramental service of the Flint congregations was held at the Newall Street Church. This service presented wonderful opportunity to the members to witness to God their determination to be true and to do better during the coming year. At the same hour a ceremonial dedication of the new branch officers occurred.

Treasurer Glenn A. Hardy will be assisted during the year of 1930 in carrying out the branch financial system by the group deacons and by a financial supervisor in each group whose duty it is to teach the financial law, solicit local and general church funds, and also help anyone in the group who requests financial advice. The following persons have been chosen to act as supervisors: Group 1, Mount Morris, Robert Luce; Group 1, Flint, Stanley Horton;

Group 2, Flint, Leo C. Riegler; Group 3, Flint, William Tuttle; Group 4, Flint, Milton Steinhouse; Group 5, Flint, Sister Rhodes; group 5, Flint, Sister Poulson; group 6, Flint, Harry Darling; group 7, Flint, George McNamara.

Sister Alma Emery has an infant daughter, born at Saint Joseph Hospital about a month ago. Brother and Sister William Palmer have a little daughter, Jacquiline Joy, born at Hurley Hospital, December 8.

Sister Elizabeth Wood is ill with diphtheria at her home, and Sister Prentiss Decker is in poor health this winter. Sister Robert Leighton is improved in health.

The basement of the Newall Street Church was the scene of a Christmas party for the city Religios the Friday night before Christmas. Sixty-six were present.

The splendid number who attended the church school at Newall Street during the time used in repairing the Baltimore Boulevard Church gives us a vision of what it will be when we will be congregated in one place with one heart and mind.

Under the care of Vera Ingram and Wilma Petty the cradle roll class is fast becoming a reality. Sand-table work is to begin in the near future, and other amusements will be furnished as needed. Mothers are invited to bring the little ones and to fill their own place in the church school.

We are glad to note that the new members are coming along with the older members in the church school. This is the place where we can become acquainted with each other and with the beauties of the gospel work.

Brother Schaar, district Sunday school superintendent, entertained the primary school December 1.

The young married people's class held its Christmas party December 17 at the home of Albert and Levinia Leighton. Although many were ill and could not carry out their committee duties, others carried on for them, and the fifteen present had a fine time.

Missionary Visits in Norway

(From a Letter to the Quorum of Twelve.)

October 3, 1929, I went to Arendal and stayed three days, holding a preaching service and a sacramental meeting. The isolated Saints in places such as Arendal always are glad to have a visit from the missionary, and the entire time is spent in talking of the gospel, singing the songs of Zion, and telling the progress the church is making in its various activities. The Saints here can not read our church papers which are printed in the English language, and the only information they receive about the church is that which the monthly mission paper, Sandhetens Banner, contains. So when the missionary comes he is kept busy answering questions and telling of the wonderful experiences and blessings the Saints are receiving and enjoying in other parts of the world. These things are most interesting to the people, and tears of joy are often seen in their eyes as they listen to some wonderful experience had by one of our members, or hear of the hundreds that are being baptized into the church.

Sunday morning, October 6, I went as far as Kragero, where I stopped over night and held a spiritual preaching service in our hall. The next day I continued my journey to Porsgrund, where I remained for a week and held four services. Friday during that week I went to Larvik to spend the day with an isolated sister whom we had not seen for some time. I had sent word that I was coming, and she had invited one of her neighbors to come in and talk with me. This neighbor had been interested in our work some years ago and since then has been attending church of several different denominations but has not been able to find anything satisfying to her soul. She had told our sister that if any of her missionaries visited Larvik, to let her know as she wanted to come and talk with them. We had a pleasant day talking of God's great plan of salvation. She is still investigating our teachings.

October 14 I went to Oslo and stayed all night, holding a meeting in the home of a family of Saints. They had invited some nonmember friends to the meeting, and we had a good service. One brother who has not attended one of our meetings for many years was present. I visited him at his home several weeks ago. As a result he is taking renewed interest in the work. He enjoyed the meeting he attended and asked when another would be held. The nonmembers also desired more meetings, so I have established a regular appointment in Oslo for twice a month, whenever I am at home at Bon. Bon is just thirty miles from Oslo. I trust my visits to Oslo Saints may arouse an interest among a few nonmembers as well as encourage the members.

The next day, October 15, I returned to Bon, having been away from my family for nearly two months. The local men have kept regular meetings going during my absence, and Sister Ruch has been busy with the departments. She has the Sunday school and Women's Department again built up where it was when we left for America in 1927. Recently we had as many as eighty-seven at Sunday school, and there are from twenty-five to thirty at the women's meetings. The girls' club has an average attendance of from thirty to thirty-five.

We have begun printing a little Sunday school paper with the mimeograph. The Sunday School Department has sent us some Zion's Hopes with just the colored picture printed on them and the rest of the paper blank. We are printing them here. The children are delighted to get them, and especially to have the pictures.

We are delighted to hear of the progress the church is making in America and trust that the blessings of God will continue with his people and come even in greater measure than ever before.

V. D. RUCH.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

First Philadelphia Branch

Sitting in on various local holiday activities proved to be a pleasurable experience for the adults who have joined visiting Saints and strangers in well-earned eulogies. Philadelphia's modest talent came through commendably.

Junior Church Activities

Programs in this important branch of church work are necessarily adapted to existing conditions of local and general nature. Every method that gives reasonable promise of being conducive to increase of knowledge and practice of religious principles and teachings is applied with gratifying promptitude. The schedule of proceedings are astonishing to adults and captivating to juniors. Interest and decorum are usually remarkable, and attendance is mounting.

Ordinarily they have a pleasing variety of sacred numbers by branch orchestra or junior choir, or violin, harmonica, piano or vocal solos by young artists in the making, and appropriate stories by adult residents or itinerants. The visit of our former talented leader of primary and beginner departments, Sister Myrtle Weber, now of Independence, Missouri, was mutually enjoyable. She favored the youngsters with one of her new stories. Following are notes on a typical sermonet (this one by Superintendent Samuel Worrell): Time, thirteen minutes. Theme, "Aim in life." Text, "Know ye not that I must be about my Father's business?"—Luke 2: 49. Meaning of word aim was acted out with imaginary bows, arrows, and targets, references being made to force, arching, steadiness, wind-interference, etc. Christ had an aim as a boy, Luke 2: 49; later on, John 9: 4, and finally, John 18: 37. Paul's aim became God's purpose, Acts 9: 6. Columbus had an aim—"We sail westward; westward is our course!" The story about a little girl artist drawing pen and ink sketch of cat was told. References were made to good intentions (to pay tithing, for instance), connecting this with thought of intending to hit the bull's eye. Assurances were given that each day offers new opportunities to make another try at target, ending with further assurances that God refreshes with new supplies, reading twenty-third psalm and repeating third verse, "He restoreth my soul."

Adult Services

The Christmas sermon, Sunday morning, December 22, by Pastor Henry L. Livingston, was given on the subject, "Love," the text, John 3: 16, "God so loved the world." Briefly, Brother Livingston pointed out that notwithstanding God's attribute of omnipotence, he chose in his omniscience to use love rather than superhuman force to accomplish his high and lofty purposes, because true love is the great dynamic. Saint Paul helps us comprehend something of the potential magnitude of love in 1 Corinthians 13. But, the speaker explained, love does not float into our lives as a cloud floats across the summer sky! It is a positive achievement. We acquire this virtue by practicing it, just as an artist acquires great skill and proficiency by practicing his art. The antithesis of love is hate. We are capable of either, but are commanded by our infinite Creator and Judge to love. (See Matthew 22: 36-39.) For, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."—John 13: 35.

The entertainment in the evening opened with organ prelude, a number from Hymnal, and invocation by the pastor. There followed the world-famous Christmas story of New Testament authenticity, dramatized with attention to details of characters, costumes, and settings. One could hardly fail to register a more acute consciousness of the strange reality of this event upon which the world pivots in its cycle of the ages. There is tremendous power behind an intelligent narration of the old, old story.

Christmas Entertainment

Primary and beginner departments, seventy strong, gave a Christmas entertainment Friday evening, December 27. There were music, puppet show, story-telling (The sleeping beauty and "Hensel and Gretel"), moving pictures, ice cream in molds of Santa Claus, sleds, and other miniature models of the season, and, of course, a large, beautiful Christmas tree. This department has been winning an enviable reputation through efficiency of methods applied and nature of results attained in regular Sunday school studies, and it is no less adept when it comes to play.

Closing Sunday of the Year

The New Year's sermon by John Zimmermann, jr., was a suggestion for resolution makers, Matthew 16: 25: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me." The text was Ecclesiastes 3: 15: "That which hath been is now, and that which is to be hath already been." Brother Zimmermann used history, sacred and profane, to illustrate truth embodied in text. To epitomize: History repeats itself. The opportunities offered to ancient Israel lie before us now—a lesson in the immutability of God, who says, in substance, "Here are seventy years and an agency. [That presupposes freedom of choice.] You may plunge to depths of eternal damnation or climb to heights of immortal bliss." "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life." The end of infidelity is banishment from sight of God. I might recite from the annals of world's history the experiences of great nations, such as Spain, Rome, Carthage, Greece, Persia, Babylonia, and Egypt; or, of great men such as Pershing, Foch, Haig, Napoleon, Nelson, Cæsar, Hannibal, Alexander, Xerxes, Darius, and Rameses; or I might use the Bible itself and quote from Adam to Moses, to the Son of Man, and beyond, and we would find portrayed the natural and supernatural rise and fall of many great nations, also characteristic deeds of nobility and valor, as well as the exploitation and corruption of outstanding leaders. Wise men are still searching for Him, and finding Him, too; not in swaddling clothes, but in an attitude of knocking, calling them higher to realms of eternal life and happiness.

In the evening the cantata, by the choir, was "The Prince of Peace," by John Spencer Camp. Reading the preamble affords aid in appreciating this score. From the heraldic command of the first soloist to the testimony of Saint John, it maintains the necessarily strict continuity of events by scriptural references. Selection of the seven solo voices used was excellent; the interpretation was satisfying, especially in the more emotionalized transitions, which at times, became intense, stirring. One felt like rising to the invitation in "Adeste Fideles," "Come and adore Him," or at least responding vocally to the appeal, "Sing aloud for gladness." The usual attire of black suits and bow ties and white dresses lent to the effective setting in the well-decorated interior of the building. Holly leaves were draped everywhere with care and design. Wreaths, palms, beautified lights, and a large tree with electric ornamentation added to the appearance of the church. The assembly was prepared in spirit to support the performers in the inspiring climax provided by the composer.

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

December 31.—It was with grateful hearts that the Saints of Second Branch assembled for sacramental service the last time in 1929. Each felt a desire to thank the heavenly Father for his kind watchcare and blessings during the year. A beautiful spirit was present to encourage all to greater service in the new year. District President A. E. Anderton preached at the evening hour, taking for a theme "The church of Christ."

District Missionary Jacob Halb preached at both services December 8. The theme for the morning hour was "Called to be Saints," and the evening was "Our ideal and goal."

The Women's Department met December 12 for potluck dinner at noon. Thirty members were present and four visitors. At two o'clock the meeting was called to order by the leader, Sister Nieman. A short business session resulted in the reelection of the staff of officers which presided during 1929: Leader, Rosa Nieman; secretary-treasurer, Edna Jackson; historian, Vassie Sheets. A Christmas party followed, and each received a gift and enjoyed a social hour.

The Tri Sigma Chapter of Temple Builders is preparing a play for Christmas. Eleven members attended the last meeting.

The Blue Birds had a Christmas party which all enjoyed.

December 13 J. E. Matthews preached at the morning hour an interesting gospel sermon. Missionary John R. Grice spoke in the evening on the text from Romans 12: 1: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

Bishop H. E. French preached at the morning hour December 22 on "The birth of Christ and its social aspects."

The evening hour was occupied by the Christmas cantata, "The birth of Christ," given by the combined choirs of First and Second Branches.

The Sunday school presented its entertainment Christmas night. It consisted of short plays, dialogs, recitations, and songs. To Ethel Kirkendall and Lucinda Madden we are indebted for the splendid performances.

Carl E. Turvey was elected superintendent of Sunday school, C. B. Turvey and Fritz Kehlmeier, assistants; secretary, Edna Jackson; treasurer, Vera M. Hunter; librarian, Paul Wemlinger.

At the branch business meeting all former officers were reelected with the exception of the branch president. Brother Robert E. Madden was chosen to act in the capacity of president.

The morning of the last Sunday of the year, Brother G. H. Kirkendall preached, giving a review of the year.

This year the branch boasts a junior and senior basketball team. We hope to see them make a good record. The season opens January 2 at the Washington Park shelter house.

Out of town visitors for the month included J. E. Wildermuth, Aurora, Illinois, and friends from Chicago and Kansas City, Kansas, also members from Dayton and Akron, Ohio.

Kirtland, Ohio

The Christmas entertainment, under the direction of Brother John Collin, was a success.

Elder James Pycock, missionary to Kirtland District, who acted as Temple attendant during the summer and fall months, spent Christmas with his family in Canada, returning to the district after the holidays.

Patriarch G. T. Griffiths spent the holidays at home in Kirtland.

Sister Helen Harvey, an aged member of this branch, had the misfortune to fall and break her collar bone. Sister Harvey is almost blind. Brother and Sister Charles Fry are caring for her.

High Priest George Neville sang Christmas carols in the Temple during the Sundays of the yuletide.

Officers who will preside over the branch during 1930 are President, D. Proper; secretary, E. Davison; treasurer, William Davison; chorister, Lemuel Curry, sr.; publicity agent, Raymond Clough.

The bazaar and supper given by the Women's Department prior to the holidays was in charge of Sister Charles Fry, president of the department. Sister Fry planned a good supper and was assisted by some of the sisters in serving. Because the weather was cold and disagreeable, the crowd was not so large as it might have been.

Patriarch A. E. Stone, who has been critically ill, is still confined to his home. He is improving.

Grand Island, Nebraska

The group at Grand Island was made happy by an unexpected visit from E. J. Lenox, district president, December 13. Brother Lenox arrived late Friday afternoon, but a meeting was arranged and a group of encouraging size was present to enjoy a splendid sermon that evening.

An all-day meeting was held the following Sunday, at which time two were baptized into the church, Brother and Sister E. T. Christy. Brother Christy is no doubt known to some of the readers as the brother of our able missionary, Ward L. Christy. Brother Christy and family have lately moved to Grand Island, where he is engaged in the bakery business. We welcome them among us and feel that they will indeed be a great help to us.

There is a splendid Sunday school in this local; in fact, the school has grown so steadily and persistently that it is becoming impossible to accommodate the members in the homes here. We are making every effort to procure a suitable hall, that we may have room for more efficient work.

It is the hope of the members in Grand Island to some day see an organized branch here. We wish to continue faithful in our work.

MRS. F. W. BLACK.

Hibbard, Indiana, to Have New Church

Happy in the rapid growth of the branch at Hibbard, Brother H. C. Listenberger sends in the following clipping taken from the Culver Citizen under the heading "New church to be built at Hibbard":

"Growing steadily since its organization in 1917, the Latter Day Saints' church at Hibbard has become too large for its present structure, and a new church home is now being built, which will give a beautiful building that will be a credit to that organization and to the community.

"The following history of the Hibbard church has been furnished:

"The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Hibbard, Indiana, is not old in this community, yet representatives of the faith have long resided here and have worked for the welfare of the people.

"The principles of this society were announced in public assembly thirty-five years ago in the schoolhouse which stood north of the village, by Reverend S. W. L. Scott, now of Coldwater, Michigan. Some faithful resident members were workers up to this date, namely, Mrs. Reed, S. S. Reed, Mrs. Wise, and others.

"In 1916 Reverend O. R. Miller made an extended effort in a tabernacle located on the Reed lot. From this time accessions to their number were increased by baptism until January 22, 1917, when an organization was effected at a mass meeting at which Reverend J. F. Curtis, of Independence, Missouri, presided and the pastor, Reverend Miller, acted as clerk.

Future Church Home at Hibbard

"This meeting resulted in the ordination of S. S. Reed, H. M. Taylor, and Harry Listenberger as officers, and these were afterward elected presiding officers. The society chose Mrs. Alice M. Wise as secretary, Sarah Elizabeth Reed as organist, and Levi Fries as chorister.

"At the branch conference at the close of the year, Henry Listenberger was ordained deacon and financial agent for the branch. The official roster varied but little until December 6, 1925, when Harry C. Listenberger was ordained to a higher office, and today the minutes of the church record reveal the following: Harry C. Listenberger, presiding minister; S. S. Reed, assistant minister; Henry Listenberger and L. L. Bennett, deacons; Mrs. S. S. Reed, secretary and chorister; Mrs. John Aley, pianist; Miss Dolly Reed, assistant pianist; and L. L. Bennett, publicity agent and solicitor. In addition there is a relief committee, and the Sunday school is well organized and doing splendid work.

"The local organization has prospered and outgrown its present home. Now it is engaged in the erection of larger quarters, the picture of which printed here shows it as it will appear when completed, and reflects great credit to the moral and religious tone of the community."

Portland, Oregon

East Seventy-sixth and Irving Streets

January 2.—Elder H. W. Savage, who has been working in the district, visited Portland November 17 and spoke at the eleven o'clock hour, using as a theme, "I will not leave you comfortless." Brother Savage was blessed that morning, and he delivered his sermon in a beautiful and impressive manner, leaving a quiet and peace among his hearers which can only inspire all to greater heights.

College Day, November 24, a big crowd received an interesting program composed of a number of three-minute talks by men and women who have glimpsed the vision of "Greater Graceland." Special musical numbers were presented, and I am sure all present had a better knowledge of Graceland and her activities and a stronger desire for her advancement at the close of this day.

Thanksgiving Brother Eli Bronson was called to Myrtle Point to preach the funeral sermon of Hollis Keith Laird. The young man was accidentally killed in a lumber camp near his home. Keith was the youngest son of Brother and Sister Joe Laird, of Myrtle Point. He was popular among the young as well as the older people and took active part in high school athletics. He will be greatly missed by his many friends. Lila Smith Livingston, of Portland, sang the beautiful solo, "Beside still waters." Brother and Sister Hailey Laird and June, of Portland, attended the funeral, Keith being a nephew of Brother Laird.

The Department of Women gave a program December 6 to a well-filled house. Much merriment was had in the pie social following the program. A sum of more than twenty-seven dollars was added to the finances of the branch.

On Friday, December 13, the Blues gave a basket social, and notwithstanding the day, date, and name, much fun was had and a neat little sum was added to the Christmas offering. The Golds have given two suppers which swelled their fund. The contest is under the supervision of the Sunday school, and proceeds are to be used for Christmas offering.

A beautiful Christmas pageant was given Sunday evening at the church under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression, Harley Morris in charge, Leone Bronson assisting. The pageant was directed by Mr. O'Neill, who has had much experience along that line. The Saints greatly appreciate Mr. O'Neill's services, which were generously given. The pageant depicted the pilgrimage to Bethlehem in former and latter days. The tableau scenes between acts of the pageant were very beautiful, and a hidden quartet sang softly while shepherds, wise men, and latter-day youth knelt at the manger holding the Christ Child. Friends of Mr. O'Neill, together with Mrs. O'Neill, gave several musical numbers and one reading. After the program bags of candy and nuts were distributed to the children by the church school. The church was packed to capacity, and many were turned away.

Low Banks, Ontario

We hold Sunday school each Sunday morning, and also have the privilege of hearing some good sermons from Elders Clatworthy and B. Hewitt.

The Christmas entertainment occurred December 21, and the play "The Red Man's quest" was presented by local members. Though the weather and roads were not good, there was good attendance, and Brother Hewitt, the able missionary, along with the other members of the cast did well.

During the coming year this branch hopes to make decided progress, and we wish the Herald success as well as all departments and branches of the church.

Buchanan, Michigan

December 30.—The year 1929 is drawing to a close. Though we have not accomplished all that perhaps we might, we have tried.

Branch President McKnight has not always been able to be with us, but in doing his missionary work he has brought the light to ten souls, baptizing three at Hibbard, six at Battle Creek, and one at Buchanan. The one baptized here is a ten-year-old boy, Tommy Marsh.

We are also rejoicing that Sister Most, who is past her eightieth year, is still with us. Her daughter, Sister Glover, has been ill all fall, and our prayers are for her.

The little band at Buchanan remains intact, the angel of death claiming none as yet. One aged member, Sister Clovia Seymour, who went to Denver, Colorado, for her health, does not improve, and asks us to remember her in prayer.

The Women's Department, which has twelve active members, has been able to help with the auditorium and organ fund, giving fifty and twenty-five dollars respectively. These sums the women earned by their handcraft.

Sister Hoxie's mother, Sister Ellis, fell about six weeks ago and is unable to stand. Let us remember her in our prayers.

The business meeting was held December 30. Brother McKnight was reelected branch president; secretary and treasurer, Sister Meyer; pianist and chorister, Sister Exner; president of the Department of Women, Sister Riley; Sunday school superintendent, Brother Metzger; solicitor, Sister Hoxie; publicity agent, Sister Virgil.

A Christmas playlet put on by the Sunday school was a feature of the Christmas program, and with Santa's help every child was made happy with a box of candy and nuts bolstered up by a pop-corn ball. Old and young were remembered.

Australians Visit Historic Spots

By J. H. N. Jones

Sister Jones and I left Independence for Canada November 12, 1929, intending primarily to visit our cousins in Toronto, the Reverend W. V. Tunnell and his son and family. At the same time it was arranged with the Presidency and Twelve that we visit Cumorah and other historic places on the return trip. For making out our itinerary and introducing us by letter, we have to thank Apostle C. F. Ellis.

We duly arrived in Canada and were met by my cousin and wife and motored to their apartments on Wineva Avenue, where we were most kindly and hospitably entertained during our stay. Moreover our visit was made doubly happy and successful through the kindly consideration of my cousin and the Saints and presidents of branches. He and his good wife accompanied us to our preaching appointment, and he was invited to pray while I preached. Evidently he soon learned to love the Saints and they him.

We ministered to the Humber Bay, the North Toronto, and the Main Toronto Branches, meeting at these points Brothers Gresty and Fligg and also Brothers Prentice, Rowett, and Clark, presidents of branches. Among the Saints we met many warm-hearted people whom we hope to keep as friends.

From that point we came by train to Buffalo, New York, November 29 and were met by Doctor Weegar, at whose hospitable home we stayed. We met here also Apostle R. S. Budd of the Twelve, and he kindly took care of our journeyings in his new Ford, taking us firstly to Niagara Falls where we participated in the ministerial conference, and then to Cumorah. We enjoyed immensely the falls and were kindly cared for there at the home of Brother and Sister Lambert. And we felt it a great privilege to visit that place of great interest to all Latter Day Saints—Cumorah. While in that region we also visited the Joseph Smith Farm and the grove of his first vision.

The attendant at the hill showed us the spot where he thought the plates were discovered. I asked, "Do you really think there were any plates found?"

"Certainly," he replied, "or I wouldn't be here, nor would you."

From there we returned to Buffalo, and after staying Sunday and preaching twice were picked up by Brother Budd and taken to Kirtland. I think we enjoyed this stay as well as any. It was brief, but the old Temple is brimming full of interest. We preached there and were entertained by Brother and Sister Charles Fry. We also met here Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths and his wife, and they entertained us royally.

From that point, owing to Sister Jones's indisposition, we dropped our itinerary by branching off to Columbus, and after spending one Sunday there with Brother and Sister Clarke and assisting in all services, started with Brother Budd on Monday morning for our temporary home in Independence.

The seven hundred miles between these points were safely negotiated—just a few thrills—and we arrived in Independence in time for Christmas, but we were not destined to spend it here, for Brother and Sister John Blackmore gave us another motor ride to Lamoni, and we spent Christmas with our Australian friends, Brother and Sister A. L. Loving.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, January 6.

Tawas City, Michigan

Saints of Tawas City have been made to rejoice over the many various accomplishments of the past few months. As the new year comes bounding in we expect to cast aside all petty faults and to start anew with more vigor and determination to make the year 1930 a year which when ended we can call "Well done."

Our happy fall functions began with a Halloween party in the auditorium of the church the evening of October 31. The guests were welcomed into the spacious room, transformed into a mysterious Halloween scene. The forms of ghosts lurked in dark corners, and pumpkin faces glowed brightly among the shaded draperies. Almost everyone was dressed in costumes which heightened the spooky atmosphere. The entertainment for the evening was in charge of Irene Sommerfield, who proved very capable in keeping the guests occupied.

October 15 Elder F. C. Bevan, missionary to Central Michigan District, and Apostle D. T. Williams came to spend a few days with the members. Attendance at the evening service was so large and interest so great that the apostle decided to return to our branch at the earliest possible date, to hold a series of meetings. It is not very often that we are permitted to have one of the Twelve with us for any length of time, so everyone can be assured that we were grateful when we received word a week later that he had so arranged his schedule that he could spend a week with us during November.

Sunday morning, November 10, dawned bright and clear. An all-day meeting had been announced, and early in the morning the Saints began to assemble at the church. Sunday school opened at 9.30 a. m. with large attendance. At prayer service over one hundred and fifty were present from various branches. A basket lunch was served at noon. Because of the district priesthood meeting in the afternoon more ministers were present than had been expected. They were made welcome and joined with the Saints in the noon meal.

During all the services music was rendered by the choir. Special selections were sung at each meeting. The apostle's services were of high order and were received by a good attendance. His pleasing personality won him many friends in the community.

November 17 Brother F. C. Bevan took up the services where Brother Williams left off. Brother Bevan has been here many times and is known to numbers of the people. Each evening after the special selections by the choir, slides of scenes from the life of Christ were shown for fifteen minutes.

November 23 the young people gave a party. Brother Bevan and our recreation leader, Ervin Ulman, had charge of the entertainment.

November 24 was College Day. Tawas City Branch observed it with a program during the prayer service hour. After the bell had ceased chiming, silence fell over the church. Then a piano voluntary was played by Myrna Sommerfield. The congregation joined in singing "Onward, Christian soldiers," after which Pastor Sommerfield gave a brief talk on the purpose of the day. We were sorry not to have any young person in the branch who had attended Graceland, but Irene Sommerfield, a graduate of the University School of Nursing, gave a short talk on "The value of an education." After another song Elder F. C. Bevan spoke on "What Graceland means to the church." In the evening Brother Bevan gave his closing sermon of the series of meetings.

We express gratitude at having these two men with us to encourage the members and help them to realize more fully the greater things of life. The people of Tawas City are rallying to the missionary call which is the topic of general discussion throughout the church.

2119 Jackson Street

A new year has dawned upon us, the centennial year of the church. During the last one hundred years many have been made to rejoice because of the angel message and being brought into the latter-day light. We hope to see this year the big year for the church, a year in which every member shall put heart and soul in an endeavor to do his best, giving talents as well as finances.

For the last month Brother Amos Berve has been with us much of the time and has preached some splendid sermons. December 8 in the evening he used for a text a phrase in the thirtieth verse of Genesis 1: "And subdue it."

December 1 Brother Clark was the evening speaker, showing how our fathers partook of the spirituality of Christ, associating with it the statement, "We are God's husbandry."

The Department of Women held a food and apron sale during the month which netted about forty dollars. December 17 this department had its annual business meeting at the home of Carl Wirth. Brother Berve, district president, was invited to attend. He gave a talk on the work of the department. Officers elected were: Superintendent, Sister Pratt, sr.; secretary-treasurer, Minnie Carpenter; friendly visitor, Ethel Richardson; cradle roll superintendent, Neva Kuenzi; superintendent of young women, Sister Wirth.

December 20 the branch business meeting was called to order. Brother H. W. Woodstock asked that his name be not considered for branch president, because his work ties him down so much that he is unable to meet with the Saints except on Sunday morning. Brother Woodstock has been president of Madison Branch for eight years and has given good service. In his place Floyd Griswold was elected. Mary Woodstock was chosen branch clerk; financial agent, Carl Wirth; custodian of building, Thomas Johnson; musical directors, Mary Woodstock and Walter Burns; librarian, Thomas Johnson; publicity agent, Leda Colbert; superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Clarence Root; superintendent of religious education, Thomas Johnson. The church school completed its business the following Sunday. H. W. Woodstock was chosen assistant superintendent, and the classes selected their teachers. Jeanette Wirth will be the secretary. The Department of Recreation and Expression held business meeting December 29 before the preaching service.

In the evening Brother Berve preached, using for his text the words of Joshua: "Choose you this day whom ye will serve."

A Christmas tree and program were had at the church on Sunday night.

Plans and announcements have been made in the branch for Prayer Week. We are hoping much will be accomplished.

One member of the branch gave a year's subscriptions to Herald, Ensign, Vision, and Departments' Journal to a family of Saints for a Christmas present, also two other year's subscriptions to another family. We esteem these worthy gifts, and if the papers are read great benefit will come to the families and help to the church.

Independence, Kansas

Members here are happy over a series of meetings held in Independence from December 8 to December 22 by Missionaries J. Charles May and Lee Quick. Five were baptized into the kingdom, and many more were interested and gave good attention to the sermons.

Several cottage prayer meetings were held during the two weeks of meetings.

December 23 we had a Christmas program and tree which Santa Claus had loaded with gifts and treats. The house was crowded with members and friends.

Branch business meeting and election of officers occurred December 2 with the following results: Branch President, G. G. Cadwell; superintendent of Sunday school, E. L. Lantz; president of Recreation and Expression, J. P. Miller; branch secretary, E. L. Lantz; branch treasurer, Sister Anna Miller.

Closing the year of 1929 we feel that we have made some progress. We pray the Father that we may during 1930 merit divine guidance sufficient to enable us to accomplish many things in his cause.

Plano, Illinois

Sister Hazel Vermilye is better and once more able to attend church. Brother Milo Ewing, who has suffered poor health, is better. Some time ago Sister Celestia Sanderson suffered a slight stroke, but she is recovering.

A full house was had at the Christmas program, and the children enjoyed themselves.

Two college students, Irene Johnson and Richard Wildermuth, were home for the vacation, and Kenneth and Marion Blakely were home for Christmas.

At the annual business meeting no change was made except in a few minor departments.

Our College Day program was interesting. We carried out so far as possible the outline printed in the Herald. The offering was good for this small branch.

Sister Gertrude Comly has gone to Chicago to work.

Among Christmas visitors were Brother and Sister J. F. Wildermuth and family, of Aurora, who were entertained in the home of Brother Wildermuth. Brother and Sister R. E. Davey and daughter Edith, of Sandwich, and Brother and Sister Charles Reedy and daughter, of Aurora, spent Christmas at the home of Brother and Sister Walter Sanderson. Brother and Sister J. E. Wildermuth and family spent Christmas with Brother and Sister John Moore.

About seventeen members from Plano attended the Christmas program at Sandwich, some assisting with the singing. The play was splendid.

Brother Marion Blakely is very sick and has been under the doctor's care for the past week.

Chicago, Illinois

Central Branch, Sixty-sixth and Honore

Busy, encouraging, spiritual times have been experienced in Central Branch of late. President F. M. McDowell gave his ten lectures, which were well attended and did much good. A training class was started and meets each Monday evening. Four classes now participate in the session, Parent Problems, Methods in Religious Education, Junior Church, and Story-telling and Drama. Teachers are Brothers Schmid, Norman Hield, and Sisters Schmid and Bell. Interest is good.

November 8 a splendid program opened the district conference. There were instrumental and vocal numbers and readings by the members. On Saturday morning the conference convened, the Saints being fortunate in having present Bishop A. Carmichael and Apostle F. Henry Edwards. Splendid sessions were had, there being excellent sermons, and a round table session which was profitable.

The Sunday evening following the conference the city missionary started a series of sermons which afforded all much food for thought. His theme was "What is man?" and on the opening night he read Genesis 1 and 2 and spent considerable time on the spiritual creation before the physical. At this service "Whispering hope" was sung by Sister Pearl Kerr and Brother Arthur Sherman. Brother H. P. W. Keir offered the opening and closing prayer.

Of late those who have been ministering to the flock are Brothers Rowlett, Eskridge, Keir, Edstrom, McCaig, J. J. Oliver, W. I. Cochran, Clem Evans, and Norman Hield. Many excellent ideas were given expression by these brothers.

A special Thanksgiving prayer service was held at the church, and thanks to the Giver of all good gifts were expressed in prayers, hymns, and testimonies. Each was given encouragement when the Spirit spoke admonishing the congregation to walk closer with God, that all might enjoy the blessings he has for those who live humbly before him and are full of love.

December 10 the women prepared a good warm supper to be served at the church preceding the business meeting. Splendid attendance was had at the supper and the service following. All the officers were reinstated: Branch president, H. P. W. Keir; secretary, Ray Hurst; superintendent church school, Sister H. K. Bell; chorister, Sister Eskridge; tithing solicitor, Brother W. Bell; correspondent, Sister E. Horton; publicity agent, John Thoman. The budget committee and priesthood were sustained by the branch. Central Branch numbers 293 members; during the year there was a loss of thirty-eight with a net gain of nine. Saints on the south side of Chicago are forging ahead, and there is increased interest in the keeping of the laws of God. This makes for spiritual growth.

Several have been baptized in the last few weeks. Brother Roy Healy baptized a granddaughter of Sister Joseph MacGuire, of Hammond, Indiana; Brother J. J. Oliver baptized Mrs. Martin, a sister of our aged Sister Burr. These two sisters live together and are frequently at service through the thoughtfulness of a nephew. December 8 H. P. W. Keir baptized Theodore Spuehler, son-in-law of Sister Horton, and Lawrence Dennis, oldest son of Sister Dennis, thus helping to complete family circles.

Wedding bells have lately rung. Delpha Pershall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Pershall, of Arco, Idaho, and Lawrence W. Kimball, son of Brother and Sister Walter L. Kimball, of Chicago, were married at the home of the bridegroom's parents October 12. Brother C. A. Evans officiated. At the home of H. P. W. Keir, November 30, Miss Loretta Baker and Ralph Everett, young members of the West Side Branch, were married. We wish for these young couples the blessings of God.

Under the auspices of the young people's department a social was held Tuesday evening, November 26. The junior choir, directed by Lina Epperson, sang two numbers, Sister Epperson gave a reading, Robert John Keir a recitation; then games were played by adults and children. Candy was passed by members of the junior choir.

Sunday, November 24, was Graceland Day, H. P. W. Keir in charge, prayer by W. I. Cochran. Graceland songs were sung by the choir, and there was a reading by Brother W. Eskridge, "Graceland's expanding skyline." Elder Roscoe Davey, the speaker, brought out Graceland as a wonderful heritage. His text was "The glory of God is intelligence," and for a lesson he read Hosea 4: 6. The infant daughter of Brother and Sister J. Daalder was blessed by Brothers Keir and Oliver and given the name of Doris June.

Sister Tucker has given some fine gospel talks to the women at the meeting on each Thursday, but of late her health has been poor, and she has been unable to meet with the women. The members are hoping for her speedy recovery. Brother Will Bass has recovered from his recent serious illness.

Still on the sick list are Sister Tonks and Sister Sherman. May God comfort and strengthen them and raise them up to health.

Brother W. Eskridge was the speaker the second Sunday in December. His discourse was helpful. Sisters Pearl Kerr and Ollie Evans sang a duet number.

The following Sunday Brother McCaig spoke. Sister Eskridge sang "My task." In the evening Brother W. I. Cochran preached.

The morning of December 22 Brother Norman Hield read from the American Translation of the Bible the story of the birth of Jesus and preached a Christmas sermon. That evening the choir, directed by Sister Wallace Eskridge, gave the cantata, "Star of the East." The processional was played by Fay Bell Keir, prayer was by H. P. W. Keir. Special work was done by Brother Eskridge, Arthur Sherman, Sister Ed Lowe, Sister Blanch Green, and Sister Wallace Eskridge. The music department has done wonderful work and is an attractive feature of the church work.

On Christmas Eve a tree in all its glory and Santa and his helper made a fitting climax for the holidays. The decorating committee did well, its task that evening being a real winter's undertaking. The program was well planned and the young people gave a playlet. Some of the younger members spoke and the junior choir sang. There were presents and treats for all.

The holidays are gone, many new year's resolutions have been made and broken. May we as a people resolve to do the task before us well.

Grand Rapids, Michigan

January 7.—The eyes of the Saints have long been intently looking forward to the year 1930, and we are now standing on the threshold of the centennial, which marks one of the outstanding events in the world's history—the restitution of the gospel of peace. As we contemplate the significance of the great gathering—all the work it entails and the tasks that follow in its wake—our emotions and thoughts become too deep for expression.

Fortunate indeed are we that those bearing the immediate responsibilities have clear vision and are consecrated to the task of preparing a program that will tend to develop us educationally and spiritually, as well as caring for our physical needs. That as individuals and the church, in turn, may benefit to a maximum as a result of this expenditure of energy, we, too, must prepare and comply as much as possible with the various requests of the general officers.

In order that we may properly evaluate such a celebration, there should be a re-studying of church history, enabling us to better understand the present. We also need a clearer conception of the future program, and this can be better interpreted by being familiar with the past. To carry forward such a tremendous activity, we must develop a stronger conviction of our duty toward the law of tithes and offerings.

We need to begin now to prepare for this great migration to the city of Zion, that we may come with healthy minds and bodies, correct attitudes, and the disposition to meet every adjustment in the spirit of brotherly love. If ever there is to be an opportunity to demonstrate that we believe in being our brother's keeper, it will be at this time. With crowded conditions, service taxed to its utmost, seating capacity at a premium, etc., we need now to ponder over these things and begin the task of weeding out selfishness, planting in its stead a spirit of giving. The Saints of Grand Rapids will adjust themselves gracefully to such emergencies. The deep significance of it all is stealthily growing within our hearts. Now we are in the midst of a Week of Prayer. With the whole church concentrating on a fixed goal, surely we can determine to carry through that for which we are asking the help of God.

With such a background and such a hopeful outlook, Grand Rapids Branch has started the new year's work in peace and harmony. We know of no discord. This alone is a mark of advancement.

We were agreeably surprised to learn that during the last year we forwarded to the general church coffers the sum of $5,625.99, a gain of nearly $2,000 over the previous year. In addition to this we raised $2,178.34 for local expenditures.

Sister M. A. Harper, who is deeply concerned that our church building be completed, succeeded with the help of others in raising over two hundred dollars in a period of about six weeks.

Other departments of the branch are doing as well as can be expected under the handicap of crowded building conditions. Wishing to continue to be a source of help to the general church, we are planning to better care for local needs.

We have profited from and thoroughly enjoyed work done by Apostle D. T. Williams, Elder O. J. Hawn, and Patriarch John T. Gresty, the last named coming in the interest of his oratorio, The Course of Time. Grand Rapids will assist in the rendition of this wonderful work of music.

As in all branches, we have our handicaps; nevertheless we are growing and are hopefully looking for more help that the growth may be faster.

Atherton

December 22 Patriarch W. A. McDowell spent the day in Atherton and occupied the pulpit morning and evening. At eleven o'clock he gave the story of the Christ Child, emphasizing the significance of the star which guided the wise men to him. The Holy Spirit, he said, is our guiding star which leads us to Christ. In the evening he related how in all dispensations there have been those who scoffed at warnings given by the prophets, but that the abundant life was given those who heeded the voice of God. One hundred years ago God pointed us to a promised land and told of Zion's redemption to be accomplished by doing his will.

Brother Harold Buseth, recently of Chicago, spent the day with this branch, entertaining the members with violin and piano music. In the morning Bishop J. A. Koehler sang a solo.

The following evening the Christmas program was held. To Sister Anna Bogue must be given credit for this much-appreciated entertainment.

Bishop Koehler preached a sermon on "Authority" the morning of December 29. That evening Elder Hubert Case delivered an inspiring discourse to arouse within his hearers a deeper appreciation of the gospel.

The brick work on Atherton church was finished the evening of January 4. January 6 fourteen men came from Holden to work on the church. Every man seemed to enjoy his work, though in the afternoon all were compelled to work in the sleet. By evening much had been accomplished. In the number from Holden were Brothers Macrae and McWethy. Bishop Koehler came, and there were a number of local workers.

January 5, at the call of the church, the branch assembled at eight o'clock in the capacity of prayer service. A peaceful hour was had, followed by Sunday school and sacramental service. In the evening Brother Otho Clark preached a sermon on stewardship, clearly setting forth many of its principles. His text was, "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

At six o'clock the following morning the branch again assembled in prayer service in which many fervent prayers were offered.

Marshall

A spiritual sacramental service was enjoyed by Marshall members the first Sunday of the New Year. Pastor H. G. Thayer presided, being assisted by the associate pastor, T. L. McCormick. The talk by the pastor was seasoned with the Spirit, and after a few fervent prayers testimonies were numerous.

A family of Saints by the name of Winslow has been living here a short time, and of late they have been visited by relatives, a man, his wife, and son. All attended church recently, and the young man played most pleasingly on the saw at the Sunday school hour. He was accompanied at the piano by Frankie Thayer.

A radio broadcasting program was given by the young people Sunday night at Religio. Brother Jay McCormick was the announcer. No broadcasting machine was in evidence, but the good program was heard from behind the curtain. Brother T. L. McCormick preached that evening.

Far West Stake

Richmond

Readers of the Herald will no doubt be interested in hearing from the branch of Saints located in this historic place.

The Saints settled at Richmond in pioneer days as early as 1833. At one time Joseph the seer was put in jail here by the mob which persecuted the church.

At least four of the witnesses to the Book of Mormon lived here and are buried here. A large monument has been erected in memory of Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, Martin Harris, and Joseph Smith. It stands just north of the city limits where Oliver Cowdery, Jacob Whitmer, and Peter Whitmer rest. Many of the posterity of the Whitmers live here.

Because of our close proximity to Independence, thirty-five miles on paved road, the economy of living expenses, and the richness of the soil, this is a vantage point for the Saints. We are in Ray County in Far West Stake.

Several groups of Saints live near Richmond. Members of the ministry and their families would be a decided help to the Saints here. We welcome all visitors and prospective residents of this section.

W. G. Hamann of the stake high council directs the work in this vicinity. Elder Oscar Case is now pastor at Richmond.

We started the new year with a series of meetings. Our forces are organized for work, but we expect to continue to improve and perfect our organization in order that we may do our part in building Zion here.

The Saints are quite active, and the officers are busy.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer was a recent visitor and gave a splendid sermon, using as his text, "Save yourself from this untoward generation." He is a forceful and interesting speaker.

Stone Church

Apostle Roy S. Budd was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning, continuing the theme, "Complete the family circle." He emphasized the text from Christ's Sermon on the Mount, "Ye are the light of the world." The final test of this church, Brother Budd said, is in the lives of its people. Christ has placed upon us today the responsibility of bearing light into the world.

The Stone Church Choir sang the anthem, "Divine praise," by Bortniansky. Paul N. Craig directed, Robert Miller playing the organ accompaniment. LeRoy Smith, baritone, sang a solo, "The great awakening," by Kramer, and was accompanied by Robert Miller at the piano. Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the service, Apostle D. T. Williams assisting.

During the worship service preceding the opening of class sessions of the Sunday school, the adult and intermediate departments listened to "The Holy City," by Weatherly and Adams, sung by George Anway.

Apostle J. F. Curtis used as the theme of his address to the young people's church downstairs at the eleven o'clock hour "Tell me the story of Jesus."

"Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven," was the text chosen by Apostle Paul M. Hanson, whose sermon Sunday evening at the Stone Church concluded the week of prayer and missionary services. This text he applied to the theme "Complete the family circle," devoting considerable attention to the ministry of good words. Just as Christ said to the man sick of the palsy, "Son, be of good cheer," so may every man having the cheer of the gospel in his heart, let his light shine to the members of his family, his friends, and neighbors. Among other characteristics of those who are letting their light shine before men for the glorifying of God are a desire to know and obey the laws of God, a disposition to sacrifice, to pay the price for the worth-while thing, a constant striving toward high spiritual ideals, and loyalty to Christ and all the things he held sacred.

In behalf of the church, and especially the Stone Church congregation, Pastor J. F. Sheehy extended the hand of fellowship and welcome to Apostle Paul M. Hanson at the close of the sermon. This is the first time Brother Hanson had addressed the Saints of this district since returning from his mission abroad. Presiding Patriarch Frederick A. Smith was asked to close the week of special prayer with a petition of blessing for the church.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Louise Hills Lewis, sang "O come to my heart, Lord Jesus," by Paul Ambrose, and there were beautiful solos by Lilly Belle Allen, soprano, and Irving Jenkins, cellist. Elder J. F. Sheehy conducted congregational singing, Robert and George Miller accompanying. In the stand Apostle J. F. Garver was assisted by Apostle M. A. McConley.

Among the People in Zion

During the early part of the Week of Prayer, winter in the form of fifteen inches of snow and subzero temperature descended upon Independence. Nevertheless the missionary services at the Stone Church and the early morning prayer services held in various branches in Independence won an encouraging response from the Saints. At six o'clock Monday, Wednesday, and Sunday mornings, the members of the Stone Church congregation met with the pastor to worship God with praise and humility. The Saints in the center place are moved by a deeper realization of the responsibilities which the centennial year of the church brings to them, and they are continuing to seek divine guidance in their services of prayer.

Wednesday morning K M B C radio station was off the air for more than two hours when fire broke out above the ceiling of the broadcasting station in the Stone Church at 6.15.

The cause was attributed to defective light wiring in the building. Damage to the radio equipment, according to A. B. Church, manager of the station, was not serious. The quick response and manner in which the fire was extinguished by the fire department are commendable. The broadcasting equipment of the Midland Broadcasting Company is housed in a second-story room immediately north of the Stone Church auditorium; the studio is in the Aladdin Hotel in Kansas City, Missouri.

The executive council of the Stone Church Sunday school, Superintendent S. A. Theil in charge, met at 8.15 Sunday morning, and took action to present each officer and teacher of the Sunday school a year's subscription to the Departments' Journal. The gift is an expression of gratitude to the workers from the school. More than ninety subscriptions will be ordered by the secretary of the Sunday school.

Brother James Benjamin Farrow, seventy-eight years of age, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Cora Drown, Fairmount, Missouri, early Saturday morning, January 11. He was baptized into the church March 10, 1878, at Black Wolf Creek, Kansas, by George Spencer, and served many years as deacon in the church, his ordination occurring December 5, 1881. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Viola Farrow, of the home; two sons, T. E. Farrow, of the home, and Joseph Farrow, Spring Branch Road, Independence; one daughter besides Mrs. Drown, Mrs. Myrtle Cook, Independence; one brother, Moses Farrow, and three sisters: Mrs. Elizabeth Pooler, Mrs. Julia Singleton, and Mrs. C. W. Bowen, all of Independence. The funeral occurred Monday morning, January 13, at the Stone Church, Patriarch Ammon White in charge. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Ballots were cast by the Saints of Independence for fifty-eight delegates to the coming General Conference Monday evening at the quarterly conference in Zion, but election returns are not obtainable for this issue of Saints' Herald. The ballots were committed to the hands of a committee elected by the conference and composed of R. J. Lambert, H. W. Harder, John Blackmore, Carroll L. Olson, and Amos E. Allen.

The three members of the First Presidency in the chair, business of the nine congregations in the centerplace was taken up by the representative gathering of the Saints assembled through another wintry night to show interest in the progress of the church in Independence. The pastors of the various branches, elected at separate business meetings during December, were approved: Stone Church, John F. Sheehy and John Blackmore assisting the First Presidency; Second Church, A. K. Dillee; Walnut Park, Samuel C. Smith; Liberty Street, F. A. Cool; Enoch Hill, O. W. Sarratt; Englewood, George A. Gould; Spring Branch, J. E. Cleveland; Gudgeon Park, P. A. Sherman; and East Independence, L. W. Moffett.

An extensive building program, to house more completely the fifty-eight hundred and three members in Independence, was submitted by the local bishopric, G. W. Eastwood, T. A. Beck, and H. P. Andersen, and approved by the conference; also the choice of local custodians and bishop's agents was acted upon. A local statistical report and report of the first and second quorums of elders were adopted, and the conference approved the recommendation of the bishops' court to drop from the church records the names of Isabel Nunamaker, William C. Robinson, and Morris E. Johnson.

A memorial service for Independence Saints who have passed away during the last calendar year will be held at the Stone Church Sunday evening, January 26.

Second Church

At the business meeting December 27, after Elder John Blackmore had presented the First Presidency's conception of how our local organization should be completed, Pastor A. K. Dillee presented for the ratification of the congregation the names of the following brothers to be associate pastors: Elder Floyd Mortimore, to concentrate his activities as superintendent of the church school; Elder T. A. Beck, to concentrate his activities on all the church services held within the church; and Elder D. A. Whiting, to concentrate his activities as supervisor over the five groups of the district. Elder William Inman was chosen associate superintendent of church school. It was voted that the selection of the head of the department of music be left to the discretion of Pastor Dillee. It was voted that the appointing of superintendents and teachers of the various departments for the completing of the church school be left to the discretion of the church school superintendent and his associate.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer was the speaker Sunday morning, December 29, and Apostle Clyde F. Ellis in the evening. Both services were well attended, and all who heard these sermons rejoiced and felt much blessed.

At the opening of the church school January 5, Superintendent Floyd Mortimore presented the names of the following departmental superintendents: Adult division, Elder William Inman; young people's division, Lora Weir; children's division, Hulda Hansen. Last year Brother Inman did splendid work as associate to the superintendent of the church school and was the choice for the same office this year, added responsibility being conferred upon him. Sister Lora Weir has been a faithful and dependable worker in the Department of Recreation and Expression. Because of her ability in this department, Brother Mortimore thought her the one to lead the young people's division. For a number of years Sister Hulda Hansen has been superintendent of the primary department, doing a good work in developing the little ones for greater service to the Master.

Attendance at the sacramental service was the largest for a number of months, and a good degree of the Spirit was felt. The members thought it good to be there, and each one was imbued with a desire to make the week of prayer successful. This desire was manifested in the presence of sixty-five at the six o'clock prayer meeting Tuesday morning, January 7.

January 10 Sister T. A. Beck returned home after having been in the Sanitarium since Christmas Day. The doctor says she is doing well.

Bishop G. W. Eastwood was the speaker of the eleven o'clock hour January 12, giving a splendid presentation of stewardships.

Elder H. E. Winegar, whose mission field is Denver, was the speaker Sunday evening, giving a wonderful discourse on repentance. He made clear the need for repentance or readjustment each day of our lives.

Walnut Park

On the last Sunday of the old year the retiring pastor, Elder M. T. Williams, and the incoming pastor, Elder Samuel C. Smith, gave brief talks to the congregation. The Saints of Walnut Park are sorry to see Brother and Sister Williams leave and will miss them greatly. Sister Williams has been a great help to her husband and to the Walnut Park Saints as a teacher in the Sunday school. The new pastor, Brother Smith, expressed his great indebtedness to Brother Williams for the fatherly counsel which he as associate pastor had received from Brother Williams during the past year.

On the first sacramental Sunday of the new year a very good representation of the Saints was present. The church building was almost completely filled. A fine spirit was manifested. In the evening Elder E. A. Thomas gave an interesting address on the subject, "Faith."

The Week of Prayer was observed by Saints of Walnut Park and much appreciated by them. At the opening prayer service at eight o'clock, January 5, a large number gathered together, and a fine spiritual service followed. Again on Friday morning at six o'clock, in spite of cold weather and a heavy snowstorm which made walking and traveling difficult, a group of about fifty gathered together in the lower auditorium of the church. Elder R. D. Weaver gave the opening talk, which made a fine start for the prayer service. About thirty minutes were occupied in prayer and the balance of the hour devoted to songs and testimony. Everyone felt well repaid for the effort involved in arising so early. The early morning prayer meeting on January 12 at eight o'clock was also very good. Brother Haskins, a local elder, was called upon to give the opening remarks.

Elder T. A. Beck, counselor to the bishop in Zion and head of the accounting department of the church, gave the morning address January 12. In the evening, Elder Glenn Davis occupied the stand. Both speakers gave interesting talks, which should result in much benefit to the Saints.

At the church school election, held January 5, the following corps of officers was elected to conduct the affairs of this department during the present year: Albert Chapman, assistant superintendent; Sister F. R. Schafer, head of the adult division; Elder Benjamin Bean, head of the young people's division; Sister W. K. Gard, in charge of the junior department; Sister Lera Logeman, in charge of the primary department; C. G. Closson, secretary; Sanford Downs, chorister; and E. E. Moorman, librarian.

Sister Mabel Smith lectured on "Psychology of color in pageantry" to the White Masque Players at their monthly meeting last Monday night in the Wahdemna Choral Club rooms. A continuation of the discussion of the costumes to be used in the Centennial pageant, this time on "Spiritual and symbolic costumes," was given by Aileen Bullard. Her colored sketches were excellent, and show not only thorough study, but effective artistry as well. At each meeting a dramatic production has been read, and on this night a fantasy was given by Dorothy Williamson and Kathryn Head, Allegra Luff directing.

The resignation of Louise Austin as chairman of the membership committee was accepted by the club, and Leonard J. Lea was elected to the office.

Enrollment for the centennial pageant, Fulfillment, written by Alice M. Burgess, has begun. Last Sunday representatives of the White Masque Players were in every branch in Independence, obtaining names of those willing and able to help in the presentation of the pageant at the Centennial Conference in April.

Enoch Hill

Generous response was given by members on Enoch Hill to six o'clock morning prayer service Saturday. This service was arranged to agree with the schedule of early prayer hours in Zion. Elders John F. Sheehy and John Blackmore were present to worship with and encourage the Saints. Though the week of prayer was not yet closed the spirit of peace and assurance was present, giving promise of accomplishment as a result of the season when the entire church united in prayer.

For the church school service Sunday morning Scripture readings from Psalms 19:7, Proverbs 13:13, 14, Isaiah 1:18, 19, and Doctrine and Covenants 106:2, and 64:7 were read and correlated. They teach the principle that through complete obedience to the perfect law of God we shall achieve Zion, the perfection of beauty. Pastor O. W. Sarratt offered prayer, and the hymn, "Onward to Zion" was sung. A talk by Brother Charles Warren preceded class work. The sermon of the morning was by Bishop R. T. Cooper. In the evening Elder I. A. Smith was the speaker.

Union prayer meeting of the groups included in Enoch Hill District was had at the church Wednesday evening, January 8.

Brother Joseph Martin has been appointed superintendent of the adult division of the church school, and Brother C. E. Beal is in charge of the young people. The pastor and superintendent of young people are planning a separate and varied program for the young people of intermediate age, twelve to fifteen years. Personal experiences will be used as object lessons to the young worshipers, helping them to prepare to meet the problems which come up in the lives of every young person.

East Independence

Sacramental service January 5 was a helpful and comforting service. A reasonable number was present, and the attendants were bettered for having been there.

The first of a Sunday night series of missionary services opened in the evening, Elder D. A. Whiting behind the sacred desk. How long must we preach faith to Latter Day Saints? he asked. There is active faith and there is inactive faith, he explained; active faith causes the members to render great service to God and the church.

Sister Clara Thatcher, fifty-eight years old, died suddenly January 8 at her home. She is survived by her husband, Albert Thatcher, sr., of the home, and a niece, Mrs. Paul Adkins, of Pleasanton, Kansas. She was laid to rest in Mound Grove Cemetery January 10, after the funeral conducted at the home by Elder J. J. Teeter. Sister Thatcher was in ill health for some time, and now that she is passed on, her neighbors feel that she is gone, as she hoped, to a bright, beautiful home.

Elder H. G. Barto spoke in behalf of the bishopric last Sunday morning, urging the members to eradicate selfishness from their lives.

Elder J. D. Gault spoke in the evening, endeavoring to make plain the need for real repentance.

Ionia, Michigan

January 5.—Ionia Branch has entered the new year with zeal, its members praying and working that we may accomplish much of real value in the coming twelve months. Despite the severity of the weather and the scattered location of the Saints, regular services are held and characterized by the spirit of unity and love.

Branch business meeting was held December 27, the following officers being elected: President, J. D. Aelick; secretary, Lottie Edwards; treasurer, Sarah Smith; pianist, Lottie Edwards; chorister, Lena Aelick; librarian, Alfred Herbert; janitor, R. W. Setchfield, Sunday school superintendent, J. D. Aelick; assistant superintendent, Merl Russnell; secretary, Charles Stout.

Several new features are being introduced in the Sunday school to increase interest and attendance.

The lower auditorium soon will be completed. Junior church will be held there, Merl Russnell in charge.

Omaha, Nebraska

South Side Branch

The new year finds Saints of South Side branch keyed up for a bigger and better year than ever before. Considerable progress was made last year, but not enough by any means, and nothing but one hundred per cent advancement this year is going to satisfy. Practically everyone is imbued with the desire to do his best, and if these desires are put into action, marvelous results are sure to follow.

Brother Walter T. Lowe has set a good example, one worthy of emulation. He is always at his post of duty and on time. No duty is too small for his personal attention, which, when it is given, is continued to the consummation of the work. He has the ability to find work suited to the talents of the various members, keeping them busy. It is not to be wondered that Brother Lowe was unanimously chosen president of the branch. For his counselors he chose William N. Hill and George W. Steele. Both have served as presidents of the branch, and should be of considerable assistance to him.

Other officers elected were as follows: Secretary, Fred L. Lang; general treasurer, Jesse R. Steel; chorister, Mary Bourlier; pianist, Rena Steele; publicity agent, Harry Anderson. Sister Anderson was appointed head of the Women's Department.

The Sunday school officers were elected as follows: Superintendent, Sister F. L. Lang; assistant superintendent, Mary Bourlier; secretary, Maxine Lang; pianist, Marjorie Lang; and chorister, Mabel Hill. With the installation of these officers, prospects are promising for the coming year.

The dramatic club's first presentation was a playlet entitled "Thanksgiving Ann," an interesting and instructive little skit emphasizing the advisability of systematic tithing. The cast of characters was: Thanksgiving Ann, Maxine Lang; Susie, Marjorie Lang; Johnnie, Henry Anderson; Mrs. Allen, Lucile Russell; Doctor Allen, Billy Hill; and Mr. Jones, Raymond Moran.

Central Church

Two enjoyable prayer meetings were held at Central during the week of prayer, one on Sunday morning at eight o'clock, when over fifty were present, and the other on Wednesday morning at six o'clock when thirty-two people braved the elements to attend. A severe blizzard swept over Kansas City, and it was quite a task to get about, but those who were privileged to attend these meetings felt well repaid for the efforts put forth. A fine spirit prevailed throughout each meeting.

Despite the fact a rain had fallen Saturday afternoon and night, which formed a solid sheet of ice, rendering it difficult to travel about, there was good attendance at the church school Sunday. Following the prelude, "Meditation" by Haledy, at the organ by Hazel Scott, "Trust and obey" was sung by the congregation, after which the choir sang "The lost chord," Evan Fry directing.

During the class period, the young people's division assembled in the main auditorium, where a round table discussion occupied the usual lesson period.

Patriarch Ammon White was the speaker at the service period, quoting from Doctrine and Covenants 128, touching on stewardships and the dwelling in Zion. He urged the Saints to put into their daily lives those things each day that will prepare them for dwelling in Zion.

Stake Missionary Arthur Koehler officiated at a beautiful baptismal service when he conducted Jay Arthur Cochran and Billy Brewster into the kingdom through this ordinance.

At 3.30 stake choir rehearsal was conducted by Brother J. T. Gresty. Owing to the short period of time until the rendition of The Course of Time, a midweek rehearsal has been called. Kansas City is fortunate to be able to secure Brother Gresty's services on Tuesday evening in addition to the Sunday rehearsal. A fine rehearsal was reported at this meeting.

The Wahdemna Choral Club of Independence made the 7.45 service a musical worship period. A goodly attendance was present. About fifty young singers, assisted by Delta Nace, soprano; Gladys Good, contralto; George Anway, tenor; LeRoy Smith, baritone; Elizabeth Smith, harpist; Gomer Cool, violinist; Blaine Bender, reader; Hazel Scott, organist; and Rosamond Sherman, accompanist, rendered a highly appreciated service. Brother Paul N. Craig directed the chorus.

The Central basket ball boys played two games last week, defeating Bennington twice, the scores being 23 to 20, and 20 to 17. In the Elliott League, of which these teams are members, the Central boys tie for second place. They will play Chelsea next Tuesday, January 14. Of course we are rooting for our boys.

Special study courses will begin Wednesday, January 15, at 7.45 o'clock, when Brother M. A. Etzenhouser will conduct a class in Social Problems of Zion, special topic, "The budget"; Junior Church Methods will be discussed by Nellie Blackmore; and Brother George Mesley will address the teachers and officers of the church school.

ing snow from his walks, dislocating both his hips. While the accident was very painful, and it was necessary to enlist the aid of a physician in replacing the hips, it is hoped Brother Babb will not be laid up long but will soon be able to resume his daily duties. Sister Helen Skinner has also been confined to her bed with a severe case of tonsillitis but was able to attend the musical worship service Sunday night.

Lamoni Stake

On the first Sunday of the centennial year the Saints of Lamoni Branch were especially favored in having with them President F. M. McDowell and Bishop Mark H. Siegfried. Brother Elbert A. Smith had expected to spend the day with the Lamoni congregation but was unable to do so because of ill health. Brother McDowell and family were in Lamoni on Saturday, and the stake presidency persuaded them to stay for the communion service Sunday morning. At this service Brother McDowell spoke to the Lamoni audience in an encouraging manner, and one could not help but feel that the church is moving forward as a result of the devotion of its members.

Bishop Mark H. Siegfried delivered the address at the annual installation of officers and teachers of the branch and the church school. He succeeded in impressing these people with the wonderful opportunity for service before them during the centennial year, and also the responsibility which they are assuming as leaders in the church and community. In addition to the address the following program was given: Piano processional, Thelma Lane; piano voluntary, "Inspirational Hymns," Thelma Lane; announcements; hymn, "The morning light is breaking," congregation; invocation, Elder Roy Cheville; selection, quartet; scripture reading, Roy Cheville; hymn, "God is marshaling his army," congregation; instrumental quartet, J. H. Anthony, Lois Garver, Charles Ballantyne, and Helen Anthony; hymn, "Am I a soldier of the Cross?" congregation; prayer of dedication, Elder W. E. Prall; hymn response, quartet.

Early Service of Prayer at the College

It was an early wintry Wednesday morning in the Administration Building at Graceland, not quite six o'clock. A friendly light outlined the archway of the West Door and invited the comers to enter. Just before the clock struck six students filed in from dormitories and from the town.

The First Presidency set six o'clock as the hour of worship for Zion and her stakes, and Graceland was joining the program in the chain of prayer. In place of the usual Wednesday evening hour, the students were assembling at this early time. It was cold and blustery, yet there came a good representation.

While a piano prelude was played, the Athenian Male Quartet and the ministers in charge took their places on the platform. Arthur Oakman sang in his rich baritone voice, "Holy, Holy, Holy," the familiar morning hymn. Voas Meredith read the Presidency's call to prayer, listing the needs for which supplication should be made. The congregation joined in the Lord's prayer and silent prayer, while soft music was played and the Athenian quartet sang the Lord's prayer.

After the students had sung "Sweet hour of prayer," they knelt while three of the student body offered prayer. These were Viola Firth, of Philadelphia; Almer Sheehy, of Independence; and Arthur Oakman, of London, England. The prayers voiced the needs of the church for the centennial year.

The time was limited, so speakers were selected for very brief talks on the opportunities of service. "What can a minister do?" was a talk by Fred Davies, who will be returning to England this spring; "What can a student do?" Dorothy Elliott, Brooklyn, New York; "What can an alumna do?" Pearl Leise, Lamoni, Iowa; "What can a faculty member do?" Charlotte Condit, instructor in English.

After the talks, the quartet sang a hymn of prayer, "Remember me, O Mighty One." In the quiet spirit of reverence that prevailed at the service, Roy Cheville, who presided, voiced a prayer of supplication.

There was little conversation or hurry as the students left the chapel.

Vesper Service

A vesper service for Lamoni young people was held in the lower auditorium of the Brick Church Wednesday evening, January 8. The rostrum and pulpit had been tastily decorated with the church colors, and the theme "Onward to the Centennial and beyond" appeared in large gold letters on a purple background on the wall back of the pulpit. At 7.45 a chorus of high school students marched into the room and took seats near the piano at the left of the rostrum. Sister Thelma Lane played a medley of hymns on the piano, which was followed by a hymn prelude, "Let us go to the house of the Lord," by the chorus. Lois Barrows played a violin solo, "Ave Marie," after which the congregation sang "Youth's prayer." Mavis Wells and Lois Prall sang "Come, Sweet Comforter," and Bishop G. L. DeLapp offered the prayer. A quartet sang as a response "The prayer perfect," which was followed by a scripture reading by Bishop DeLapp. Other hymns sung by the chorus and congregation were, "Zion Builders," "Onward to Zion," "Just as I am," and "Admonition." Verlyn Stevenson read the poem "Come up higher," written by Brother Elbert Smith; Ella White sang "My task," and Wilber Prall talked to the young people on the theme, "Forward to the Centennial and beyond." In his talk he reviewed the great achievements of the church during the period from 1830 to 1833, setting forth four reasons for its rapid growth and development:

First, The early church believed that as God had done anciently, so could he and would he do for them.

Second, They expected great things of God and were willing to undertake great things for him.

Third, The young people were devoted and active in the work of the church.

Fourth, The early ideals of the church, such as obedience to law, their position against the sale and use of intoxicating liquor, their attitude toward labor and education were conducive to growth and development.

In closing, he spoke on the latter part of the theme and stated that the period suggested as "beyond" meant to him the first fourteen-year period of the second century. He expressed the hope that this period (1930-1944) might compare favorably with 1830-1844 so far as the growth and development of the church is concerned. However, he is of the opinion that this hope can be realized only if the members of the church, like the early saints, believe that as God did anciently, so can he and will he do today, and as they expect great things of God and are willing to undertake great things for him, not forgetting the early ideals of the church.

East Saint Louis, Illinois

Thirty-eighth and Forest Boulevard

Saints of this branch are earnestly engaged in the Master's work. Officers for 1930 remain about the same as in 1929. Elder H. W. Brunkhorst was reelected presiding elder. Frank O'Bryan, John Smith, and Flora Doepke were reelected superintendents of the Departments of Sunday School, Recreation and Expression, and Women, respectively.

A spiritual sacramental service was had the first Sunday of the new year. Many of the young people as well as the veterans of the gospel testified of the goodness of God and their gladness in working for the church.

District President E. A. Curtis is going to start meetings in this church January 12. We are trying to "complete the family circle" in about ten families in this branch. Let us go forward.

Bemidji, Minnesota

January 1.—All services were held in Bemidji Branch during November and December. The local is striving to go forward in the work of the Lord.

Brother George W. Day and a number of Saints motored to Cass Lake and held meetings at the home of Brother and Sister Bosshardt. There quite a good attendance of non-members gave attention, many expressing themselves pleased with what they had heard. If efforts are continued there, we are confident of accomplishment.

November 8 Brother Day was called by telephone to International Falls to administer to Sister Currie. The doctor had given her up. She soon recovered and is strong in the faith of the Restoration.

Brother Day was called to Deerwood November 28, to preach the funeral sermon of Brother A. D. Boardwell. Brother Boardwell and his family are well respected there.

As a branch Saints of Bemidji have been looking to 1930 for improvement and plenty to do. We are praying for the progress of the church.

Contest Events and Regulations

The following events have been arranged for: vocal solo, piano solo, organ solo, violin solo, and various solos in the band and orchestral instruments. The contest will be subject to the following rules:

1. No contestant shall be over twenty-five years of age, except in the organ contest. No age limit is placed for organist, as it requires a thorough piano study previous to organ training.
2. All enrollments shall be made not later than February 1, 1930, accompanied by a fee of one dollar.
3. Each contestant must have the written indorsement of his district or stake chorister, and be a member of the church.
4. The contest will be judged by competent and disinterested judges.
5. Each piano contestant shall play "Prelude" and "Fugue No. 1" from the Well-tempered Clavichord, by Bach, and a number of his own choice.
6. Each violin contestant shall play a composition of his own choice.
7. Cello contestants may play a number of their own choice.
8. Each contestant in the various woodwind and brass instruments shall prepare a number of his own choice.
9. The vocal contest shall include the following six sections, with each contestant singing one number from the list below and one of his own choice.

- a. Soprano: "A spring fancy," by Densmore.
- b. Mezzo Soprano: "Down in the forest," by Ronald.
- c. Contralto: "Pilgrim's song," by Tschai-kowsky.
- d. Tenor: "In the silence of night," by Rachmaninoff (Schirmer).
- e. Baritone: "Passing by," Purcell.
- f. Bass: "The lute player," Allitsen.

10. Those enrolling in the organ contest may play one composition of their own choice.

A gold and silver medal will be awarded in each of the following classes: men's voice, women's voice, piano, organ, string, woodwind, and bass instruments. The board reserves the right to award medals according to the discretion of the judges in classes where only one or two enter. In the latter case, if the talent is of sufficiently high caliber, medals may be awarded, though the competition is not large. The board and judges will select the most outstanding talent to appear before the conference audience at the Auditorium.

This contest should promote much serious study. Enrollment blanks may be secured from Miss Mabel Carlile, Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa.

Choral Music for General Conference

The following anthems have been selected for use at the 1930 General Conference. It is hoped that all choirs will prepare these anthems and be ready to sing in the big conference chorus. You will be admitted to the chorus if you have your own music and have learned it. Plans are being matured to have a choir of eight hundred for the big Auditorium. Work should begin on these anthems immediately. The first one on the list is moderately difficult, and should be sung very fast. The others are of average grade. "Bless the Lord, O my soul" should be sung without instrument, with careful attention to all expression marks.

1. "One hundred and fiftieth psalm," by Cæsar Franck. (J. Fisher, Publishers.)
2. "Bless the Lord, O my soul," by Ippolitof-Ivanof. (The Boston Music Company.)
3. "Appear, Thou Light Divine," by Morrison. (Oliver Ditson.)
4. "New every morning is the love," by Bullard. (G. Schirmer.)
5. "The Lord is my light," by Allitsen-Salter. (No. 1339 Boosey & Company.)

These anthems may be secured through any music house, and should be brought with you for use at the conference.

MABEL CARLILE,
Director of Adult Choral Music.

Western Oklahoma district conference and institute will be held at Calumet Branch, twelve miles southeast of Geary, and about eight or ten miles southwest of Calumet, beginning Friday night, February 21, and closing Sunday, February 23. It is desired that as many Saints as can attend, for there will occur the election of district officers and also delegates to the world conference. This district wishes to send its full delegation to General Conference, and all should be present to support those best qualified to represent us. The institute work will be beneficial. Come, that you may gain spiritual strength.—Roy L. Diamond, district secretary, Eagle City, Oklahoma.

Conference of Central Nebraska District will convene at Inman, Nebraska, 2 p. m. Saturday, January 25. Delegates to General Conference will be chosen at this time, and other important business relative to our district work will come before us. We would like to have a full representation of the priesthood of the district. It will be the effort of the Inman Branch to care for all visitors. We will have special all-day services on Sunday, January 26. The Women's Department will supervise a basket lunch Sunday noon in the ladies' aid parlors.—E. Melvin Russell, district president.

Attention, Detroit District Saints

The Department of Recreation and Expression has secured the services of the following speakers from the University of Michigan. They will be included as principal speakers at the one-day religious institutes which will be held at Pontiac, Michigan, on the following dates, under the supervision of the district presidency. Each lecture will be given at three o'clock, Eastern Standard time. The Saints in neighboring districts are extended a hearty invitation. January 12, Professor Floyd K. Riley, "Dynamic youth"; February 9, Doctor Isaminger, "The lengthening span of life"; March 9, Professor John L. Brumm, subject to be announced later; April 13, Professor E. S. Guckert, "Our problem of increasing leisure"; May 11, Professor W. D. Henderson, subject to be announced later.—Carlisle Whitehead, Pontiac, Michigan.

Marriage

ELLIS-YORKS.—Alvin Ray Ellis, jr., and Vera Yorks were united in marriage at high noon Christmas Day, at the home of the bride's parents, near Evart, Michigan. Alvin R. Ellis, sr., officiated. Both are successful school-teachers, and we predict for them a useful and happy life.

KIRKWOOD.—Mary M. Webb was born July 12, 1854, in England. When a small girl she moved with her parents to Edinburgh, Scotland. January 1, 1873, she married Robert Gray Kirkwood. To them ten children were born, four of whom preceded the mother in death. In 1876 Mr. and Mrs. Kirkwood and their eldest daughter came to America. For a number of years they made their home in the vicinity of Crescent, Iowa. There they became acquainted with the latter-day gospel and were baptized. They moved from Logan, Iowa, to Independence, Missouri, nine years ago. Since the death of her husband two years ago, Sister Kirkwood has made her home with her daughters, Mrs. F. W. Lanpher and Mrs. M. C. Jacobson, of Independence. In April she went to Canada for a visit with her son and daughter. She and her daughter, Mrs. W. D.

Gould, arrived at the home of her son, James Kirkwood, at Logan, Iowa, December 7. On Sunday, December 8, she passed from this life. Left are six children: Mrs. George Vallier, Neola, Iowa; Mrs. F. W. Lanpher, Independence, Missouri; J. A. Kirkwood, Logan, Iowa; Mrs. W. D. Gould, Zealandia, Saskatchewan; R. J. Kirkwood, Calvet, Saskatchewan; and Mrs. M. C. Jacobson, Independence, Missouri; one brother, E. B. Webb, Baltimore, Maryland; three sisters: Mrs. Ed. May, Fort Arthur, Ontario, and two younger sisters in Scotland; twenty-four grandchildren, and ten great-grandchildren. The funeral was at Walnut Park Church, Independence, Missouri, December 11, in charge of Bishop B. J. Scott, assisted by Samuel C. Smith. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

CARLISLE.—Arthur Herbert Carlisle was born at Joplin, Missouri, December 11, 1911. He was killed in an accident on Highway No. 71, December 14, 1929. The deceased and a boy friend in a Ford roadster collided with a seven-passenger car, and Mr. Carlisle was instantly killed, all other occupants of the two cars receiving injury. Left to mourn are his parents, three brothers, three sisters, and a host of other relatives and friends. The funeral was conducted by Elder A. B. Kinney, the sermon being preached by George Jenkins. Interment in Rich Hill, Missouri, Cemetery.

Church Physician Writes

The Herald begins with this number the publication of a series of twelve or more articles from the pen of the Physician to the Church, Doctor A. W. Teel, of Los Angeles, California.

The subject of these papers is the human physical organization, its enemies, disease prevention, and the development of its strength and efficiency. Some of the definite captions are: "Food as related to efficiency"; "Treatment and prevention of diseases; tests"; "Breathing apparatus," under which special attention is given to colds, pneumonia, and tuberculosis, their avoidance and their treatment; "Headaches and heartaches"; "Kidney, liver, and bladder"; "Special senses, throat and nose"; "Hygiene of muscles," an important paper for both sexes; "Systematic physical training"; "Mental hygiene"; "First aid course"; "Sex hygiene"; "Hygiene of beauty," which paper is valuable to men as well as women.

There is not one dull moment for the reader in any one of the papers which have been submitted. They seem to the layman to be both conservative and progressive—to shun nothing important, but to speak with reserve of those things which are still and may always be problematical.

The work of Doctor Teel in these papers is of such a nature that it should be preserved for regular use in the family or by the individual. A glance or a hasty reading of them is not sufficient. The Herald Publishing House is printing an extra number, so that Saints who subscribe at once may secure the Herald of January 22 and each succeeding week. Thus they may preserve the entire series.

I am advising my friends to take an hour each week for the study of this work of the Physician to the Church. I believe this office to be one set in the church in the last days by the Author and Finisher of our faith. It is for the protection of God's people, and it is also for their development. A physician to the church has not been chosen for the purpose of saving its members a few paltry dollars in consultation fees, and the time of this general church officer should not be imposed upon by the membership.

But his talent should be devoted to the church as a body, and the safety and the development of their physical beings should be so precious to him as to call for the best that is in him. When this call is fairly met by the man whom God chooses for the work, the people will profit greatly. They can not profit by this provision of the Lord unless they come in touch with the officers designated to administer it, either through his written or spoken word. It is folly and shame to condemn the officer or the office unless one has given them a chance to work in his affairs.

The laws of God and the privileges he has extended to men are for their good, and they will work. However, it remains for the individual to say whether they shall work with him.

R. J. L.

Legionnaires as Missionaries

For those who have become members of the Tenth Legion movement among the young people of the church there have been three principal fields in which each has been active in order to qualify as a Legionnaire. These are: financial, missionary, and church activity. The Legion movement was started in the summer of 1929, and the executive secretary had recently made a report of the activities of its members from that time to the close of the year.

Legionnaires are all missionaries. They have been playing their part in the missionary program of the church. Their activities have been varied, each doing his missionary work in the way that seemed best to him and best suited to the opportunities around him.

Through the personal efforts of members of the Tenth Legion seventeen persons were influenced to unite with the church, the report shows. One hundred and sixteen nonmembers were taken to our church services by Legionnaires. Doubtless there were others in both these groups, upon whom definite reports could not be or were not made.

Many subscribed to church publications for nonmembers, or sent books by our own writers. The Herald, Ensign, Vision, and Stepping Stones were all represented on the publication list. Among the books sent were: Call at Evening, Two-Story Book, The Minister Who Was Different, A Reasonable Service, The Fourth Relaford, Peter Bosten, and Autobiography of J. J. Cornish. Some sent copies of the Book of Mormon, and others loaned their various books. Still others distributed church pamphlets and tracts.

In a personal way a number of Legionnaires told the story of the Restoration to nonmembers. One explained the beliefs of the church to a high school class of which he was a member; another, a university student, explained them to five of her professors; others to their friends. Some made house-to-house calls.

Other activities of a missionary nature carried on by members of the Legion were: Driving missionaries to their appointments; guiding at the Auditorium in Independence; writing for the Ensign, and publicity agent work.

One of the best ways in which young people can become acquainted with their own church and discover a new regard for it is to endeavor to give to others an intelligent, a dignified, an adequate account of it—its beliefs, its organization and history in brief, reasons for its existence, and its program and ideals for the individual and for society. In this sort of work Legionnaires are engaged. They are anxious to represent the church in an acceptable way in meeting those who are not acquainted with it. And, of course, in the pledge that they take, the members of the Tenth Legion are undertaking their greatest piece of missionary work of all—"to answer daily the call to a quality of living which is in keeping with the ideals of Zion." This, along with the spoken and written word, will go a long way toward revealing to others the light which is in the Restoration.

The Tenth Legion has among its number of slogans, "Every member a missionary."

Bishop Carmichael Recovered

On December 27 Bishop Albert Carmichael entered Independence Sanitarium for a minor foot operation. From this condition an infection ensued which for more than a week seemed to be very serious. Only on January 14 was he able to go to his home on South Crysler Street, having recovered beyond the point of danger. He expects to be at his office and desk again within a few days.

There is a note from Bishop Carmichael published in "Official" of this number of the Herald. Read it, and the letter he quotes, with care.—R. J. L.

What Is Success?

A Parable of Two Kings

Once a powerful king was hunting with his courtiers in the mountain forests that lay at the edge of his domain. They had secured only a little small game. Now they were lost, and none of his handsome fine-clad nobles could tell him the way home. Soon they rode into a clearing, where they saw a leader and his band of retainers, all of them plainly dressed, and each with a fat buck strapped over the back of his saddle. King Charles rode up to the leader and said:

"I am King Charles, and I have lost my way. It grows late. Can you direct us home?" The other answered:

"I, too, am a king, and if you wish, one of my retainers will show you the shortest way home."

"Where is your kingdom?" asked King Charles.

"Beyond the mountain," answered the other. "We came for water at the spring and are soon returning."

"Then because you have done a good deed, I invite you to visit me next month at my castle."

"I will," replied the other king. A retainer showed King Charles the way back to his castle. One month later King Joseph and his plainly clothed followers took their way over the mountain. They passed through a country from which all the trees had been cut, in which the peasants lived in miserable huts. It was an ugly, scarred land. But on the top of a hill stood a marvelous castle. Its heavy gates were guarded by fierce warriors from another land. The walls were hung with fine tapestries, the dishes on the table were of silver, and the chandeliers above shone with bright gold. Beside monster fireplaces piles of logs lay that had, short time since, stood as trees on the land.

King Joseph and his simple retainers stood in silent wonder at the magnificence of the castle. King Charles displayed his treasures with great pride. But King Joseph could not forget the miserable huts of the peasants, nor their poor, starved faces; he could not forget the land stripped of its trees, the countryside devoured by greed. When the visit was over, King Joseph said:

"I, too, have a kingdom, but it is of another kind. That kingdom I should like to have you see. I invite you to visit me next month. My guides will come to show the way thither."

One month later, the guides had come to the palace of King Charles. As he went from his palace, the peasants hid in their huts for fear as he passed. This the guides noted.

Through the forests and over the ridge of the great mountain they went. King Charles paused to look at the sight before him. No palace was in sight. No castle commanded the high hill. There were no temples. But all over the land he could see beautiful trees standing, and tilled fields laid out well in order, crowded with crops that would soon fill to bursting the many barns that stood close to the stanch homes of the people. He could see, by looking closely, that people were outside working, and that children and small animals played about the homes. It was a sight that filled his heart with strong emotion.

The guides brought King Charles to King Joseph. "Where is your palace?" he asked.

"There, among the homes of my people," replied King Joseph, pointing to a house not much greater than those that stood around it. King Charles again wondered, for here was something that he could see, but could not understand.

Inside the home of King Joseph, Charles was met by the queen and her ladies with a sincere courtesy and an absence of formality that was refreshing and charming. He could see that love and not fear dominated these people. After supper, he rested in a bed that seemed, for the first time in his life, to relieve his weariness. He felt all through that night as if he had during many years wandered in strange lands and had just now found his way home.

In the morning, when he was ready to go, Charles thanked Joseph with tears on his cheeks. They looked into each other's eyes, and they both understood without speaking.

"You," said Charles, "are a true king." And he wrung the hand of Joseph and departed over the mountain to his palatial home.

When he was gone Joseph spoke to his followers:

"I would rather worship in a tent with my friends than in a cathedral alone.

"My people are my kingdom. Their happiness is the stronghold of my power." L. L.

The Province of the Church

Of late the Christian church has been under fire for the part which it increasingly plays in attempting to remedy social and political wrongs. It has been told that it had no business to make reports on conditions in steel mills; that it had no business to give advice to legislators; that it had no business to attempt to take a part in regulating social conduct. No churchman need apologize for these attempts to rescue religion from its public impotency. But who will dare to tell the church that it has no business to pray?

It is well for a church praying for peace—for a peace which rests upon justice rather than on might, for a peace which fulfills the solemn pledge of the Pact of Peace—to realize that never were the enemies of peace, the devotees of brute force in national policy, so active as just now. A wide difference obtains between a present-day prayer for peace and all the prayers that for centuries have ascended from Christian altars. In the past nobody expected an answer. Hence, everybody prayed for peace. It was the only decent thing to do! Nobody prayed for war; they just expected war and prepared for it.—The Christian Century, January 15, 1930.

News from the Department of Statistics

The appended article from the church statistician should bring encouragement to the church. It would seem, however, that losses by death have been very heavy.

A clear detailed statement of the conditions and the changes of the year is presented. As a result a net gain to the enrollment of 3,551 is reported. The number of baptisms reported to end of December is 4,665, which has been exceeded by three other years.

Herald readers have had their part in correcting some conditions; namely, in locating many Saints who were recorded on the list of Unknown and who were not numbered in the church membership. A total of 1,605 such were reclaimed during 1929.

I am glad to present this report of the Department of Statistics to the readers of the Saints' Herald.

During the year 1929 the following changes in the total net enrollment of the church took place:

Net enrollment December 31, 1928 .....	103,273
Baptisms during the year .....	4,665
Gains from the Unknown .....	1,605
Gains by correction .....	148
<hr/>
Total Gain .....	6,418
Deaths during the year .....	2,119
Expulsions .....	177
Losses by correction .....	1,255
Total Loss .....	3,551
Net gain during the twelve-month period .....	2,867
Net enrollment December 31, 1929 .....	106,140

The following number of miscellaneous reports of the various types were received by this office during the year 1929:

Transfers .....	9093	Changes of Name .....	31
Blessings .....	1955	Silences .....	26
Marriages .....	1720	New Branches .....	14
Ordinations .....	299	Branches Disorganized .....	13
Divorces .....	71	Licenses Restored .....	8

It is interesting to note that the calendar year 1929 reported more baptisms than any year since 1921, and with three exceptions more baptisms than any other calendar year in the history of the Reorganization. The exceptions are 1915, with 4,907 baptisms; 1918 with 5,195 baptisms; and 1921 with 5,477 baptisms. It is hoped that the twelve-month period from April 6, 1929, until April 6, 1930 (the Centennial Year), will show more baptisms than any calendar year thus far in the history of the Reorganization, and that the goal of 6,000 will be achieved.

This last year has also been significant in the large number of names which has been transferred from the Unknown File. A total of 1,605 has thus been entered as a gain to the total net enrollment of the church. In addition to the names which have thus been transferred, 234 deaths of persons on the Unknown File were reported and 38 duplications corrected. This makes a grand total of 1,877 names cleared from this file.

During the year we have also been checking over the records of the various branches, districts, and missions with the local statisticians, and from time to time have made corrections in the total enrollments thereof. The amounts of such gains or losses by correction have been shown in our monthly reports.

The largest gain by correction occurred in respect to the Australian Mission. We have been attempting to bring the records in this office and in that of the Australian statistician into mutual agreement, and are happy to say that this has now been done, with the exception of a few odds and ends that remain to be taken care of. It has taken a long time and very careful, detailed checking on the part of all concerned. Progress has been hindered because of distance and slowness of the mails. After everything was checked over we found a total of 2,355 names on record with the Australian Mission. In order to bring this into agreement with our previous total, a correction gain of 95 was necessary.

The largest loss occurred in connection with the Disorganized File. In figuring the number of names carried on this file, we have accepted the total shown on the ledger card at the time of our coming into this office, and have simply added the gains to and subtracted the losses from this total. At the end of the year it was decided to make an actual count of the names contained in this file in order to check the accuracy of the total shown on the ledger card. The ledger card showed 7,379, while the count of names, carefully rechecked, gave a total of only 6,222. To offset this discrepancy a loss by correction of 1,157 was necessary. This, of course, operates to cut down the recorded net enrollment of the church, but it is only a loss on paper, because the previously reported totals have been that much too great.

The following tabulation gives a summary of the gains and losses in the main subdivisions of our church membership:

NAME	NET ENROLLMENT December 31, 1928	GAINS BY:			LOSSES BY:				NET ENROLLMENT Dec. 31, 1929
		Baptism	Transfer	Correct.	Trsfr.	Death	Exp.	Cor.
Zion and the Stakes .....	15,379	807	1,381	9	1,232	175	36	16	16,117
Districts of United States and Canada .....	70,727	3,456	6,307	34	5,507	845	92	53	74,027
Unorganized Territory .....	1,793	61	437		238	17	7	4	2,025
Foreign Countries .....	6,010	337	7	101	37	106	41	10	6,261
Sub-Totals .....	93,909	4,661	8,132	144	7,014	1,143	176	83	98,430
The Disorganized File .....	8,539		274		454	964	1	1,172	6,222
Suspense Accounts .....	825	4	940	4	273	12			1,488
Sub-Totals .....	9,364	4	1,214	4	727	976	1	1,172	7,710
GRAND TOTALS .....	103,273	4,665	9,346	148	7,741	2,119	177	1,255	106,140

The above tabulation has been divided into two groups, and sub-totals for each are given. It will be observed that the main part of the church membership, including the members enrolled in the districts and stakes of the United States and Canada, in the branches in unorganized territory or in the nonresident group thereof, and in foreign missions, comprised a total of 93,909 at the beginning of the year. At the end of the year this total had increased to 98,430, a net gain of 4,521. These are the figures to which one should give primary consideration when measuring the growth of the church during the past year.

The Disorganized File at the beginning of the year had a total of 8,539 charged thereto. As we have explained before, this file contains the remnants of branches which have since become disorganized, but at the time of disorganization the names enrolled therewith were not transferred to other branches or nonresident groups. These names have been allowed to accumulate for many years, and when we came into the office this file contained the names of many who were born over ninety and one hundred years ago. Inasmuch as the probability of such persons being alive at the present time is only about one out of a hundred, it was decided to go through the file and remove the names of all those who were born over ninety years ago. These have been treated as "Assumed Deaths" and entered as losses to the Disorganized File and to the counted membership of the church. The number of names thus taken care of is 781.

The district secretaries and district presidents have also been cooperating with this department in an effort to obtain the present addresses of the remaining names upon this Disorganized File. As a result of their efforts, a total of 454 names have been transferred to live branches or nonresident groups, and an additional number of 183 deaths entered upon the records. Several duplications have also been discovered and properly entered as losses by correction.

Together with the loss by correction explained in a preceding paragraph, this accounts for a net loss to the Disorganized File of 2,317, making its present count 6,222 names. It is our purpose to continue diligently in our efforts to have these names properly enrolled with active branches or nonresident groups and to reduce the number carried on this file to a minimum.

The number of names carried on "Suspense" Accounts has increased during the year. This is where we place names that have been reported as unknown since our coming into the office. This is done because we do not believe they should be counted out from the total net enrollment of the church, as has been done in the past. They are still members of the church and should be counted as such. However, since they are not known to the officers of the branch with which enrolled, and the present address can not be obtained after diligent inquiry, upon the branch secretary reporting them unknown, we transfer such names to a suspense account, where they may be held in suspense while further efforts are made to locate them. It is significant to note that for 940 names transferred to these suspense accounts during the year, the addresses for a total of 273 were later obtained, together with the reports of the death of 12 more. We intend to make continued efforts to locate the 1,488 names that still remain on these suspense accounts.

We wish to express our appreciation to all the branch, district, stake, and mission officers and to all members of the church who have cooperated with us in making the various efforts toward up-to-date records successful.

Fraternally yours,

MINISTERIAL PROBLEMS

Righteousness That Exceeds

Our faith, to be serviceable, must become a high tower in the midst of the plain, salt to savor the flatness and boredom of modern life, light amid the darkness of our muddled morality—this is the task of qualitative evangelism.

Quantitative versus Qualitative Evangelism

Apropos to the present church-wide effort to reach a certain goal in baptisms, we present the following from the Christian Century of December 25, 1929. The article is from the pen of Samuel H. Miller, and bears the title, "Christianizing church members."

The author calls attention to the concern of many churches as to the relatively small number of conversions in home missions. According to this author, thousands of converts are reported from foreign missions, while many home missions produce a scant few or none.

There follows a question as to the cause. Is the hunger of the world satisfied by our material comfort and luxury? Do men feel that they no longer need God? Have the men of the day lost their religion because they have made their fortunes?

The author believes that comparing foreign and home missions is unfair, because the circumstances are very different. According to Mr. Miller there is a strict contrast between Christian and so-called heathen in the foreign field on the one hand, and an apparent similarity between the church member and the nonmember in America:

It is this visible margin which gives the missionary a fulcrum by which he can lift men up, and it is the lack of it that makes our revival efforts at home so pathetic and the results so puny. Whenever there is a definite difference between the church and the "world," quantitative evangelism is successful.

To the closing paragraphs of this article we call our readers' special attention. Therein is contained rather clear-cut distinction between quantitative and qualitative evangelism. Certain sentences of the author have been placed in italics by the editor for the sake of emphasis. We urge a careful reading of these paragraphs.

F. M. MCD.

There is only one thing left to do. Negatively, to expect no phenomenal results from quantitative evangelism, thus ridding the church immediately of the false sense of frustration and failure which now attends her ministry and service. Positively, to emphasize the necessity of raising the spiritual level of the churches until we gain a visible margin of character and spirituality by which men may be challenged. A person may be transferred horizontally from the "world" to the church, but he isn't "born from above" in all its possibilities until the church actually attains a higher plane of ethical and spiritual existence than that from which the convert comes. When it becomes the "general average," Christianity loses its dynamic for personal and social improvement. Leveled down as the faith and practice of everybody, it ceases to present a recognizable ideal, embodied in the few, admired and desired by the many. In such circumstances we face the challenge to a new, and yet very old, kind of evangelism. Let us call it qualitative.

Its text is the plain word of Jesus from the Sermon on the Mount: "Unless your righteousness shall exceed that of the scribes and Pharisees (the current standard), ye shall by no means enter into the kingdom of heaven. . . . Ye have heard that it was said . . . but I say unto you . . . If ye love those who love you, what reward have ye? Do not the publicans the same? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others?" More than others! That's the margin, to be expressed in the unselfish service of the second mile and the charitable attitude of understanding and forgiveness, until the Christian becomes a spiritual Saul, "head and shoulders above the crowd," a marked man, above the average, by reason of his margin of goodness and way of life. Our numerical growth will wait upon qualitative refinement. The horizontal penetration of Christianity will depend upon the vertical height of its source of supply for its power and urge.

The field of qualitative evangelism within the church is almost unlimited. The sickening spectacle of petty snobs, garrulous gossipers, narrow bigots, hard-hearted misers, and unforgiving Pharisees, parading in the robe of Christ, is a call for a qualitative analysis of surgical severity. The less disgusting but just as difficult situation is manifest in that army of Christians who are as good as they ever were, but show no signs of ever being any better, amply satisfied in their smug little souls by the minimum requirements of respectability. Then there is that vast host who cling with such sentiment to the "dear old church," crying, "Lord, Lord," but having no understanding of his words and no glad news of good deeds for men. And finally there looms up that church of the spiritually active, whose inner life must be maintained, character "stepped-up" from glory unto glory, and experiences ceaselessly expanded and constantly applied to the problems of ordinary life.

Quantitative evangelism has its place and time, but qualitative evangelism cogs in the circumstances of our day and our need. The kingdom of God will never come by "count alone." Like the silent permeation of leaven in a loaf, it must come as well by accumulated quality. Let the false sanctity of statistical comparisons no longer frighten us. It has produced an inferiority complex of tragic consequences in the church at home without just cause. The very title missionary holds the significance of quantitative evangelism; while pastor and minister suggest a care of those already in the fold. Christianity must be maintained as well as spread.

Certainly when one stands beside the Christ and listens to him preach, the realization quickly comes that the Master was in no way anxious to run an attendance contest or to count his converts as a criterion of success, but rather discouraged the multitudes from an easy discipleship, pointing out the hard and rugged climb for the chosen few, who were to achieve only by a cross-bearing, self-denying discipline that their righteousness might exceed the accepted standard of the day, to be and to do, "more than others." The Master was not a statistical expert; he was Lord of the spirits of men.

I am persuaded that inside the will of God we can not fail, outside of it we can not succeed; that one can not do his best work unless he feels that the sum total of things is backing his will; then he has a sense of divine mission in life.—Stanley E. Jones.

A Mite Offering

Straight from the heart of a real Latter Day Saint, a sister whose testimony and example prove her loyalty, come an offering and an idea.

WAGNER, SOUTH DAKOTA, January 7, 1930.

A. CARMICHAEL,

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI.

Dear Brother: I have been thinking that we were nearing the one hundredth anniversary of the church, and desire to send a little "mite offering." I feel that if each family would do likewise we could help much to celebrate the one hundredth birthday of the work we love so well. When I think of the dear ones who brought this blessed work forth, I desire to help remember this wonderful day by sending five cents for each year I have been a member of this church. I have been a member for thirty-eight years, and my son John has been a member for twenty-eight years, and we hope and sincerely pray every Latter Day Saint may send in like offering. Let us make this week of prayer a week long to be remembered by all rallying and sending our offerings, that the work we all love may be hastened in righteousness. We ever pray for those at the head of this great work, and hope to do all in our power to lighten your burdens.

Very sincerely,

MRS. W. L. COFFMAN.

The suggestion appeals to me because of its sincerity and simplicity. When I finished reading the sister's letter, I felt like making a thank offering in the same way that she did. I immediately did so, five cents for each year that I have been a member of the church.

The idea has helped me to think of God and his work in a new way, and I am happier. It is a modest offering. The money itself will help the church only a little. But I wish that one hundred thousand Saints would read the letter from this sister from South Dakota and then follow her example.

ALBERT CARMICHAEL.

Railroad Ticket Rates to General Conference

Reduced fares to General Conference have been granted by the railroads on what is known as the Round Trip Identification Certificate Plan, instead of the usual certificate plan heretofore applying to General Conference traffic. The Identification Certificate Plan provides for the sale of round-trip tickets at fare and one half of current fares, with minimum of $1 for round trip, upon presentation of identification certificate, which will be issued by the Transportation Department direct to members of the church applying for such certificate. One certificate will suffice for all members of the family. These certificates are now ready for distribution and will be mailed to all members requesting them.

Tickets will be sold going and returning same route, except from stations in Arizona, British Columbia, California, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington, from which territory tickets will be sold going via any direct route and returning via any other direct route. Certain indirect routes will be authorized from this territory at fares slightly higher than those applying via direct routes. Tickets will be sold to Independence or Kansas City, Missouri, dates of sale being as follows: From all points in the United States and Canada, with the following exceptions, dates of sale of tickets will be April 3 to 9, with return limit April 25. The exceptions are: New England, dates of sale April 2 to 8, return limit April 25; Montana, Southern Idaho, Utah, Alberta, dates of sale April 2 to 8, return limit April 26; Arizona, British Columbia, Nevada, Northern Idaho, Oregon (except via California), Washington, April 1 to 7, return limit April 28; California, March 31 to April 6, return limit April 28; Oregon (via California), March 30 to April 5, return limit April 28. Passengers must reach original starting point prior to midnight of date of final limit, and tickets must be validated by ticket agent before boarding train for return journey.

Tickets good for thirty days from date of sale will be sold on basis of fare and three fifths.

It must be understood that these reduced fares apply only to church members and dependent members of the family; and the name of the member to whom the certificate is issued, together with names of dependent members of the family for whom tickets are desired, must be filled in before the Identification Certificate is presented to ticket agent. Arrangements for tickets should be made well in advance of your departure, to avoid any possible delay.

Address Transportation Department, Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, for your Identification Certificate.

TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENT.

What is it in the preacher that makes the people feel that the sermon is different from all other speech, and that the church is the house of God, the very gate of heaven? We read the sermons of the Hebrew prophets, and they stir us today as if they spoke to our own need, while we feel that such men had the right to say, "Thus saith the Lord." They had a divine message, though it might relate to selling goods and hearing lawsuits. Who can miss the power of Amos, Hosea, Micah, Isaiah, Jeremiah? We listen to Jesus and, with the multitudes, wonder at the gracious words that proceeded out of his mouth.—Theodore G. Soares, University of Chicago Sermons.

WORLD'S AFFAIRS

The London Conference on Armaments

As you read this issue of the Herald, the conference for the limitation of armaments will be under way in London. This is another of the long series of efforts to remove from the backs of the people of the world the great and costly burden of competitive armament.

There are many people, and they are the noisiest part of our population, who will cry that the effort is useless and the results vain. But those who realize the seriousness of the situation will do all they can to support our Government in its honest effort to establish world peace with safety. Those who read and think, although they will not expect too much from one conference, will see the inevitable gain in international understanding as a result of the conference.

Changing Taste in Radio Music

Judge Ira E. Robinson, chairman of the Federal Radio Commission, has made the startling statement that most people prefer hymns to 95 per cent of the music broadcast at present. We imagine that the radio audience is widely divided in its preferences, and it would be difficult to make statistics on the kind of music broadcast. Some commentators take Judge Robinson's statement broadly, and think he did not mean literally what he said, but spoke strongly for effect.

When radio programs first became a feature of the national life, the audiences were not critical: it was a novelty and a privilege to hear anything at all on these new machines that drew voices and melodies from the air. Some broadcasters took advantage of this tolerant attitude and assumed that most of the listeners had no taste at all. Lately, however, the number of broadcasters who have been governed by principles and ideals has been increased. The need for new material and for variety has encouraged the inclusion of classical music and high-grade modern numbers.

It has been found that even people who are not musically educated prefer to hear good music some of the time. A good program always attracts a large number of ready and appreciative listeners. It is now possible to hear really excellent programs on Sundays. If one turns his dials carefully, he will come upon some good music during most evenings in the week.

The radio audience, having listened a while, is becoming more discriminating. The fact that some stations continue to deluge their listeners with

Advance Information

The Centennial World Conference will be opened officially at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, April 7, although the communion service at 8 o'clock Sunday morning, April 6, will be the opening service. The business sessions will be held each afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Auditorium, with the possible exceptions of one or two days.

Monday night will be "official night" and will include the formalities appropriate to the occasion. As soon as the plans are completed, the program for the first night of the conference will be published.

Tuesday night, April 8, has been assigned to the Independence Sanitarium. Miss Gertrude Copeland, R. N., superintendent of the Sanitarium and the staff of nurses, has prepared a program which will present the service and needs of the institution. The graduation exercises of the 1930 graduating class of nurses will be included in this program. The Sanitarium Patroness Society, which now has quite a number of affiliated units throughout the church, will present its work at this time. The society has been assigned exhibit space, which will also serve as headquarters for the Sanitarium interests of the church.

Two "international programs" have been planned, for Wednesday and Thursday nights, April 9 and 10. The importance of this type of program is indicated by the plans for repeating the Wednesday night program on Thursday night. This arrangement will permit all conference visitors to attend one of these two programs, which will include a presentation and an interpretation of the customs, usages, traditions, languages, and songs of the countries where the church has congregations. Some numbers will be given in costume. This "international program" is planned to stimulate a better understanding between the Saints in other lands and the church in America, that through this new understanding there may develop a more sympathetic appreciation of the part each must take in sharing the tasks of the church. The fellowship of Saints must reach both ways across the seas.

Saints are invited to watch this column each week for further conference announcements.

By F. M. McDOWELL.

trash is no proof that a majority of the radio audience like it.

Judge Robinson's statement, taken as an indication, points to an upward trend in the public taste which is encouraging.

THE HERALD BOOKSHELF

The Custodian of the Bookshelf tightened his belt this morning. J. F. does that when he is determined to get something done. "It is time now to get our inventories ready," he says, "and I have just unwrapped a stack of the new edition of the Family Budget Book. I have been selling many of them to people who know the value of budgeting. The book is a great convenience, and any person can keep accounts straight if he uses it. It doesn't take much time, and you don't have to be a bookkeeper to use it."

Family Budget Book.

A good thing, whether you use it to make your financial report to the Bishop or merely for your own records. Very inexpensive, when you compare it with other books for the same purpose. It is so arranged that it contains all instructions. Good paper, fiber cover.

Order Number 1008 from Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri. Price 25 cents.

What Is Man? by Elder J. R. Lambert.

This is a standard work, well known and widely used among the older readers of the church publications. But it is probable that many of our younger workers are not acquainted with it. It is a book of backgrounds and fundamental conceptions of belief. All who do any missionary work, or attempt to talk to outsiders, should read it. 249 pages. Cloth bound.

Order Number 821c from Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri. Price 60 cents.

The Departments' Journal.

A magazine for workers in religious education. The Journal comes to you every month with practical suggestions, program materials, and many articles from leaders in all administrative and educational branches of the church work. Every teacher and worker in every church and branch really needs a copy of the Journal. One copy to a branch is not nearly enough. Young leaders will find a world of information and help in it. Workers who have used it for years are heartily enthusiastic about it.

The best plan is to order enough copies of the Journal for all of your workers, to be mailed to your secretary in a single package and to be distributed by that officer. Thus you secure the advantage of a discount, and the cost is met regularly by your budget. Your branch owes it to your workers to buy the Journal for them.

Order from Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

Domestic: Annual subscription, single copy, $1. Annual subscription, in clubs of five or more, 85 cents.

Foreign: Canada, England, or Australia:

Annual subscription, single copy, $1.25. In clubs of five or more, $1.

Your Body.—Chapter 1

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

Object of the Course

This course has been prepared, not to encourage self-medication for the individual, but to educate him sufficiently to assist in the prevention of the conditions tending to disease, especially the degenerative diseases, cancer, acute respiratory diseases, and the like. The problem of health is largely an individual one, for the doctor can not follow the actions of each person and supervise his diet, exercise, and similar matters. It would be impossible.

The care of the body is the most important duty in life, no matter how rich you may be, how intellectual, how ambitious, how capable. Put aside every other plan in order to recover if you are physically unfit. A strong body is fundamental to every sort of success.

Every man feels that his particular formula or manner of living is the perfect one. If a man lives to be one hundred, and has chewed tobacco for eighty years, he is inclined to think that the properties of tobacco have contributed to his long life. Some pious souls are equally confident that their right thinking and right living are responsible for longevity. In any case, you will wish to be rated 100 per cent in any physical examination, in order to meet any standards that an insurance company, or any other company, may require of you. If you can pass their tests you may accept that as an evidence of good health.

If I were to attempt to describe in a sentence how to be well and strong, I should say, Take plenty of sleep in a well-ventilated bedroom, and eat very small quantities of simple food.

Health Desirable above Everything

It is a fact that wealth and position do not represent the sum total of the nation's resources, or the success for which people strive. The lives of the highly successful may proclaim them successes financially and socially, but poor if they are physically out of condition; and we know they would gladly offer a king's ransom to get back their youthful health if it could be purchased. The great object of the wise person is to obtain or retain health.

The peril of middle age is physical decay. This peril is imminent with respect to all who dwell in our great cities. All the conditions of life in the modern American city favor it. Our vastly developed commercial tendency encourages it.

The accumulation of wealth, with which to gratify the desires is the great incentive of our contemporaneous life, and under its fevered stimulation vast numbers of men and women, utterly careless of the body's needs or demands, struggle in the great conflict, and eventually go down, victims of the unchangeable law of nature. Weak persons, working beyond their safe capacity, succumb to the inevitable decay before they have reached the full span of a normal life, and they bear or beget children who are weak in proportion as their parents were weak, and these, thrust in their turn among conditions demanding strength, resisting power, and vitality, succumb more quickly than did their forbears.

The Strenuous Life

The telegraph, the telephone, the airship, the swift-flying mail train, and the ocean liner have quickened the pulses of life and revolutionized the methods of doing business. How to keep pace with this rapid method of doing things is getting to be a very serious problem with a great many people. The difficulty of adapting oneself to new methods of thinking and acting is a very real one, and thousands of persons are breaking down annually in their efforts to do so.

There is a great natural truth, universally demonstrated with regard to the various forms of living organisms embraced in the animal life of the world; and that is, when all the functions of the body work together harmoniously, such as the digestion, the respiration, the circulation, and the excretion, there is found a normal, strong, healthy organism, capable of existing under conditions which would mean the quick dissolution of one in whom there was a derangement of the natural functions.

Body Requirements

The human body is a most intricate piece of machinery. It may be compared with a steam engine which requires fuel, water, and oxygen. It obtains heat by the burning of the fuel with oxygen; the waste products that result from the combustion take the form of carbonic acid gas, urea, etc. To insure a continued harmonious working of this machine, all the parts must be properly developed and adjusted, one to another, and there must be a constant supply of fuel (food), water, and oxygen.

This complex machine has the power of affecting repairs resulting from ordinary wear and tear, under proper or favorable conditions, so that with the proper treatment the span of its existence might be indefinite.

The food fuel is carried to the lungs and other parts of the body to be utilized as heat-producing elements, or to repair some broken-down part of the machinery. The oxygen necessary to completely burn and employ this fuel is taken into the lungs by respiration, or breathing. As the blood circulates through the body, laden with the various elements which constitute the tissues, bones, nerves, etc., of the body, the various living cells select what they need for maintaining their structure, and the residue, or waste, is passed out through the excretory channels as waste products.

Exercise Is Elemental

With a common-sense view of the structure and functions of the human body before us, it is apparent that the only thoroughly natural method of maintaining the equilibrium of health is to exercise—use the various organs reasonably—and to supply the proper proportions of food, water, and oxygen. But the intellectual character of civilization has the tendency to develop the mental faculties of men and women at the expense of their physical strength. This is one of the evils of specialization, for where an individual becomes a mental machine, quick and ready at his chosen work, he often or generally becomes weak in all that goes to make physical manhood. As a result of such one-sided development, there can be nothing but ultimate failure. Care for the physical organization has been left out of the scheme of life altogether by many men and women, or else a too strong belief in self-medication by the use of certain drugs to remedy any manifestation of weakness has led them into the error of artificial stimulation of the overtaxed muscles and nerves. Disastrous results are almost sure to follow living in this manner.

Use of Drugs

Drugs are quite often necessary, but the day has passed for absolute dependence upon them, as formerly, and the advance guard of the new medical profession has for some time past recognized the fact that not only physical development can be attained by exercise which employs the muscular system in regular movements, but by bringing into systematic use the muscles and organs of any affected portion of the body, wonderful curative powers are put into operation.

Many mature and rugged people can remember "the good old days" when sickly, emaciated, anæmic, and cadaverous-looking persons took a kind of sentimental comfort out of the notion that they "looked intellectual." Time was when some even thought that pallor indicated "good breeding," and that the use of a cane or walking stick gave the user an air of distinction. We seem to have taken a long time to discover that much of the bad verse that we once called poetry was inspired by dyspepsia, and that the artistic temperament is only one of the symptoms of indigestion, poor circulation, and incipient liver complaint. We were really slow to find out that golf is almost a specific for those eccentricities of genius, which, in the form of melancholia, asceticism, "a breaking heart," and dietetic reactions, only served to camouflage laziness, lack of exercise, and a mean disposition.

Body Must Be Dependable

The well-ordered body is the only dependable and always effective vehicle for the conduct of a successful and active life. More rapidly in these epochal days we are realizing that 100 per cent mind power is not possible without physical preparedness in the individual builders, fighters, voters, and lawmakers. The world has moved slowly during the piping days of peace. A sound mind in a sound body is now more than ever the great desideratum in the rushing task of making the world a decent place in which to live.

As a man eateth, so is he. Civilization revolves about the stomachs of the human beings who inhabit this earth. Patterned by a Supreme Master Maker, the greatest firebox of the greatest engine ever invented is imperfect and inefficient in comparison to your stomach.

Economy is a help to health, though it may not bring actual joy. It may do the next best thing—it may prevent worry, and thus prevent the bad effects of worry upon the blood, digestion, etc. You can economize in clothing by wearing few clothes. Those who wear few clothes are less likely to catch cold than those who wrap themselves up so carefully; and the washable clothes are often the cheapest.

But the best means toward economy is the diet. It is curious that the very best foods for health, work, and training are the very cheapest and the easiest to regulate. The basis of a good food supply is milk protein which is free from germs of typhoid, etc. It is not stimulating, as meat is, but is very rich in blood-forming elements.

People should eat slowly. Fast eating is a terrible curse in America; and, if you wish to eat slowly, you must begin by masticating consciously.

Habits of Mind

Practice concentration of will in all things; that is also a great source of health. When you brush your hair, think of that, and that only; let your mind, as it were, move into the muscles which you are using. When you bathe, think of that, and that only. When you play a game, you think of the game; when you work, you think of the work; and you should extend this experience to almost all activities of life. When you go through some of the commonest acts, you should think of them; put your whole soul into them. Of course this can be carried too far; but the most common fault is never to try it at all.

Increasing Longevity

Obedience to the laws of health will prolong life considerably for all who practice reasonable living. Longevity, or at least extension beyond the ordinary term of life, is the desire of all rational people. Thomas Parr lived to be 152 years of age; Henry Jenkins, 169; and the Countess of Desmond to be over 140. We know of the Centennarians' Club, of California, which would not have been possible in Europe in the Sixteenth Century, when the average age was 21.2 years and men were old before they were 30. In the Seventeenth Century the average was increased to 25.7 years, and in the Eighteenth Century to 33.6 years. In 1800 the average in the United States was 33 years. In 1855 it was increased to 40 years, and in 1929, to 58 years. There is reason to hope that the reduction of mortality from preventable diseases will further increase the average span of life.

Do you know that there are 3,500 men and women in the United States who are more than 100 years old? About fifty years ago the average length of life in New York City was 43 years. Today it is 58; and there is no reason why it should not be increased to 60 or 70. The death rate among infants has decreased from 241 in every 1,000 to 70 in every 1,000. In the group under five years of age there has been a corresponding improvement; and on up to the time man is 45 years old he has a better chance of living than he had fifty years ago. But the man past forty-five has less chance of living today than he had twenty-five years ago. That is due to the strenuous life the man of today leads. Statistics show that married men live longer than single men. It easily can be seen why that is true. Married people live in better homes and under more normal conditions of living. The married man has his wife to take care of him.

Regular Inspection Advisable

No train leaves a terminus until there has been an examination of its trucks and other equipment, and a test made of the air brakes. Hardly do the wheels cease to turn before a corps of employees is once more inspecting, making sure that all is as it should be. It would not be fair to the public, who depend upon the railways for the safe transportation of both themselves and their properties, to have it otherwise. This being true of the inanimate factors concerned, should not even a greater degree of diligence be required with regard to that greatest of all machines, the human being?

It is obvious that for the varied performances connected with public duties, only men known to be physically fit should be selected. For such selection dependence must be placed upon the physician. Our duty, however, does not cease with examining the applicant for employment, but by frequent re-examinations we should be ever on the alert to detect the advent or development of systemic defects which, if not corrected, might lead to disruption of harmonious function, and to disastrous results.

Not only must the man himself be considered, but every condition affecting his physical and mental being must be given careful and detailed consideration. As most people are usually confined during the working hours of the day, care should be exerted to see that comfortable working quarters, with adequate light and ventilation, are provided, and to prevent the dissemination of contagious diseases. No known tuberculosis subject should be employed, and anyone developing the disease should be removed at once. If financially unable to defray expenses, church and state should take care of them. There should be no compromise with this condition, as the hazard for others is too great. With regard to the other contagious and infectious diseases, those exposed to them should be quarantined so long as the danger of transmission exists.

Posture a Live Question

Until quite recently the question of posture has been brought to apply almost exclusively to school children. Little thought has been given to the adult whose employment requires that he be seated for many hours each day at a desk, or before some sort of machine, without any consideration having been directed toward his manner of sitting, or the adaptability of his chair or stool to his physical requirements. The typical young office worker is pictured as having "a poor carriage, flat chest, and prominent abdomen." Had proper attention been directed to posture, such conditions could not exist.

For one spending the largest part of the working day seated before a desk, typewriter, telegraph instrument, or any other machine or device, the ordinary chair is as unsuitable as would be a full dress suit for swimming. Such chairs are constructed without view to comfort, or to conformity with the anatomical relations of the body. One who would accomplish his daily task with the utmost of efficiency must necessarily work with a minimum of fatigue, both mental and physical. This can be accomplished only by the assumption of postures both easy and natural for his body. If possible, the worker should be enabled to forget his body, so that he may concentrate upon the duties assigned to him, and a position approaching as nearly as possible the anatomical will best accomplish this.

In an abnormal and unanatomical position, the cubical size of the chest is diminished, the lung function reduced, the blood supplied with less oxygen, the abdominal organs pressed upon and protruded forward, and the pelvic organs of the female subjected to undue and more or less constant pressure. The result is languidness, yawning, easy and rapid fatiguing, and general inactivity and incompetence, followed by permanent changes in the contour of the spine, the shape of the chest, the position and abnormal suspension of the abdominal viscera, and, in the female, gynecological complications. The modern high heel shoe is not the least offender.

Marks of Occupation on the Body

Many enter public employment in a physically fit condition and later develop physical and constitutional ailments which, if detected early, may be corrected or at least controlled to such an extent that usefulness will be prolonged. Here a grave responsibility rests upon the surgeon, as failure to recognize these conditions in their incipency will ultimately result in complete destruction of man-power.

Though a total of 125,000 to 200,000 persons are ill in bed every day in New York, the city spends more per capita for sickness, and less for preventive work than Saint Louis, Boston, Cleveland, Cincinnati, or Montreal. The city spends $150,000,000 for treatment and cure of diseases every year, but spends only $8,500,000 for prevention of disease in that period. When the city is prepared to increase its fund for prevention of disease, and the public is educated to the point that preventative medicine means the wiping out of disease, then the fortune now expended on and by the ill can be more than cut by half, and eventually eliminated.

Cooperation of Preventive Agencies Needed

We note rapid progress in the education of the public health, but greater public health education would be necessary before everyone will learn how to apply these lessons. The daily press, the radio, and motion pictures are rendering valuable aid, but this service must be augmented by renewed activity of physicians, social workers, schools, private health services, and the heads of families. An inventory brings into cold facts and figures the exact condition, and reveals forcibly the concrete idea that there is too much sickness, suffering, and mortality.

Great hospitals are being financed in the large civic centers, new asylums for the crippled and ruptured, for the insane, etc., not because physicians desire it, but in spite of them. Physicians are doing all they can to teach the people how to lift themselves out of their degraded conditions of health by giving ample instruction in the laws of health and diet. Noble persons are those who are in the van of progress and doing their duty to humanity in assisting the public health service of the United States, the various States, cities, and counties. Our hospitals are trying to eliminate unhealthy, badly fed, and diseased communities, by offering practical guidance and help.

Examples of the Constructive Power of Faith

By R. S. Salyards, Sr.

The story of the Puritan Pilgrims is well known to readers of English and American history. Ruggedly devoted to their religious convictions, unwilling to conform to all the beliefs, rites, and ceremonies of the Established Church of England, and persecuted while holding firmly to their conscientious faith, they emigrated to Holland, finding asylum there; but not wishing to become absorbed in the nationality, language, and customs of that country, desiring to preserve their faith and traditions as Englishmen, they sailed from Holland; and finally from Plymouth, England; and after a lengthy voyage, landed, in winter, on the bleak shores of Cape Cod Bay; where amidst privation, cold, famine, and decimation by disease and death and battles with the Indians, they secured a foothold and established themselves permanently in the New World.

During the voyage they drew up the celebrated "Compact," which they signed in the cabin of the Mayflower on November 21, 1620, and which some writers declare to constitute the basis of the Declaration of Independence. It reads—note its rugged strength, determination, and manifestation of faith:

In the name of God, amen, we whose names are underwritten, the loyal subjects of our dread sovereign Lord, King James, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland king, defender of the faith, &c., having undertaken, for the glorie of God, and advancement of the Christian faith, and honor of our king and countrie, a voyage to plant the first colonie in the northern parts of Virginia, doe by these presents solemnly and mutually in the presence of God, and of one another, covenant and combine ourselves together into a civil body politic, for our better ordering and preservation and furtherance of the ends aforesaid; and by virtue thereof to enact, constitute and frame such just and equall laws, ordenances, acts, constitutions and offices, from time to time, as shall be thought most meete and convenient for the general good of the colonie, unto which we promise all due submission and obedience. In witness whereof we have hereunto subscribed our names at Cape Cod the 11 of November [date Old Style] in the year of the raigne of our sovereigne lord, King James of England, France and Ireland, the eighteenth, and of Scotland the fifty-fourth, ANO Dom 1620.

The vicissitudes of the Pilgrims have been epitomized in the well-known hymn of Mrs. Hemans:

What sought they thus afar?
Bright jewels of the mine?
The wealth of seas, the spoils of war?
They sought a faith's pure shrine.
Aye, call it holy ground,
The soil where first they trod;
They have left unstained what there they found,
Freedom to worship God.

In the Registry of Deeds are the earliest records of Plymouth Colony, in the handwriting of men who are now held in reverence the world over for their courage in braving the perils of an unknown sea and an equally unknown shore, to face the dangers of savage men and savage beasts, in their constancy to what they believed to be their duty, and for planting on this spot the great principles of a government by the people—

"A church without a bishop,
A state without a king."—Guide to Historic Plymouth.

A description of "The National Monument to the Forefathers," is in evidence:

... The plan of the principal pedestal is octagonal, with four small and four large faces; from the four small faces project buttresses or wing pedestals. On the main pedestal stands a figure of Faith. One foot rests upon Forefather's Rock; in her left hand she holds a Bible; with the right uplifted she points to heaven. Looking downward, as to those she is addressing, she seems to call them to trust in a higher power. On each of the four smaller or wing pedestals is a seated figure; they are emblematic of the principles upon which the Pilgrims proposed to found their Commonwealth. The first is Morality, holding the Decalogue in her left, and the scroll of Revelation in her right hand; her look is upward toward the impersonation of the spirit of Religion above; in a niche, on one side of her throne, is a prophet, and in the other one of the Evangelists. The second of these figures is Law: on the one side Justice; on the other Mercy. The third is Education: on one side Wisdom, ripe with years; on the other Youth, led by Experience. The fourth figure is Freedom; on one side Peace rests under its protection; on the other Tyranny is overthrown by its powers.

Upon the faces of these projecting pedestals are alto-reliefs, representing scenes from the history of the Pilgrims:—the departure from Delft Haven; the signing of the Social Compact; the Landing at Plymouth; and the first Treaty with the Indians. On each of the four faces of the main pedestal is a large panel for records. That in front contains the general inscription of the monument, viz, "National Monument to the Forefathers. Erected by a grateful people in remembrance of their labors, sacrifices and sufferings for the cause of civil and religious liberty."

The total height of the monument is eighty-one feet from the ground to the top of the head of the statue—height of the statue [of faith], thirty-six feet.—Ibid.

Plymouth Burying Ground contains gravestones and monuments to the Pilgrims, with many quaint inscriptions. Passing through Burial Hill in 1911, the writer was confronted unexpectedly by a stone erected to the memory of Elizabeth Savery, an ancestor, of a later generation, with this admonitory inscription:

Remember me as you pass by,
As you are now, so once was I;
As I am now, so you will be,
Therefore prepare to follow me.

On the monument to Governor Bradford is this significant inscription and admonition:

Do not basely relinquish what the Fathers with difficulty attained.

Pilgrim Hall contains many interesting relics of the Pilgrims.

Faith in God, great courage, sublime fidelity, were characteristic elements in the make-up of the Pilgrim Fathers. Resolute, steadfast, uncompromising in adherence to their conceptions of truth, they refused all appeals to do less than what conscience and conviction prescribed as their bounden duty. One is reminded of Saint Paul's statement:

By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country. By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, etc.—Hebrews 11: 8, 9, 24, 25.

Like the fathers of Israel, the Pilgrim Fathers were moved by the divine urge of faith, which led them on and made them strong and victorious over all opposing circumstances. Knowing of the conflicts of their brothers in England, they gave their sympathy to the liberty-loving leaders of Parliament in its struggles against the drastic usurpations of Charles, the king.

The influence of New England in the framing and development of American institutions is well known. The spirit of liberty, with love of free institutions, which the Pilgrims brought from their homeland, they impressed deeply upon America, and aided in having it written large in the constitutions of the States and the Constitution of the United States. They gave to American political and social life a distinct tone of rugged substantiality which has endured as a leavening influence throughout the trying crises through which our Nation has passed. These contributions to our country, and through our country to the world, in the missionary work of America in behalf of universal democracy—their weighty contribution in all this, the Puritan Pilgrims were able to make "through faith." Religion, unflinching trust, inflexible devotion in faith to truth, is the meaning of their genius, their monumental contribution to the world.

As truly as Israel was called through Abraham and Moses to become a commonwealth and to have and to hold the oracles of God in sacred trust for the human race, the Puritans were called and set apart to establish a state whose temple should be a shrine of civil and religious freedom to worship God according to the dictates of conscience. The work of each in its sphere was successful, directed, sustained, brought to completion by the supervising hand of Almighty God, through the operation of faith in him. Thus men through faith have established institutions, laws, governments which have been of immeasurable value in the enjoyment of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

The lesson of achievement by the Pilgrims, like the accomplishments of scriptural characters, clearly portrays the constructive power of the outstanding principle of faith. Faith is basic, positive; it has been and is the moving power by which all mighty institutions for good have been established and continued. By faith alone can they be sustained and preserved. The ten commandments given to Moses in the Mount in the time of the exodus of Israel, are conjoined with later enactments and emphasized to mankind in these later times in the exodus of the Pilgrims from the Old World to the New, in the establishment of free government and religious liberty in America. Israel left Egypt because not free to worship and to act according to their religious ideals; they journeyed to Sinai, where they were constituted a nation under law, and thence onward, through their generations to conflict and final security in Canaan, with Jerusalem their capital, the city of God. The Puritan Pilgrims, descendants of Israel through Ephraim, moving out under the impulsion of divine Providence, left oppression, crossed the Atlantic, their Red Sea, with dangers behind and before, traversed and subdued the wilderness, fought and conquered the decadent inhabitants of their Canaan, and laid the foundations of the great new nation, dedicated to the proposition that all men are free and equal before God. It is the hope of their literal and spiritual descendants that their city of God, the New Jerusalem, will in time be established in their land of promise.

The two leading, outstanding events of the later and great modern period are, the establishment of the American Government, the United States of America, and the Church of Jesus Christ; the one the temporal aspect of the stone kingdom, the body; the other the indwelling spiritual power operating within its realm.

Let us "have faith in God"; "looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

Do You Know Any of These Names?

In the list which follows are the names of persons who have been reported to this office as being "Unknown." It is our conviction that if we could bring these names in contact with the right persons we could locate a large number of them. It may be that in going down the list you may find only one or two persons that you know. However, your knowledge, added to that of another reader of the Herald, and everyone making his or her contribution, should result in a large proportion of these persons, who are supposed to be "Unknown," eventually becoming located.

According to our experience with the names beginning with the first four letters of the alphabet, we should be able to locate at least 20 per cent of the names on this list. To do this, however, will require the cooperation of all readers of the Herald, and we, therefore, earnestly solicit your support in order that we may be able to properly enroll these names.

If you are unable to give us the individual's present complete address, will you please advise us as to where such information may be obtained? If the individual has since died, will you please give us the approximate date of death? In case a sister has had a change of name by marriage, also give us the full name of her husband, and the date of marriage if possible.

The list which follows contains names on the Unknown continuing the letter "W." In the next issue of the Herald this list will be continued.

Graceland Chats

New Literary Officers Elect

January 11 the Graceland literary societies met and elected the following society officers:

Niketes

Pleiades

President, Eva Wallace, Cleveland, Ohio; vice president, Hazel Vanderwood, Independence, Missouri; secretary, John Barber, Glenwood, Iowa; treasurer, Bob Crawford, Independence, Missouri; sergeant-at-arms, Paul Utneher, Antigo, Wisconsin.

Kapforeans

President, Leroy Dick, Traverse City, Michigan; vice president, Joe Hufferd, Independence, Missouri; secretary, Olive Winegar, Buhl, Idaho; treasurer, Hugh Hand, Council Bluffs, Iowa; sergeant-at-arms, Charles Young, Woodbine, Iowa.

Victorians

President, Alice Parsons, Goodland, Kansas; vice president, Margaret Williams, Columbus, Ohio; secretary, Doris Swain, Kaw City, Oklahoma; treasurer, Donald Chesworth, Fall River, Massachusetts; sergeant-at-arms, George Melnyzer, Charleroi, Pennsylvania.

"Cage Men" Meet Chillicothe

The jinx that was responsible for losing the first two games of the season to Conception and Albia by 1 and 3 point margins respectively, was still pursuing the Graceland College basketball team when they lost their third game of the season to the Chillicothe quintet, Friday, January 12, to the tune of 30 to 23. With only a week's practice following the holidays, the team showed a reversal of form from the pre-vacation games. During the early part of the first half, the Yellow Jackets surprised their taller opponents by gaining a 10 to 2 lead, but with six minutes of the half remaining, the Missourians scored 11 points to lead 13 to 11 at the intermission.

The last half was a nip and tuck affair, and not until the closing minutes of play were the Ducks certain of victory. Coach Gilbert started out the basket-ball season without a single letter man and a squad lacking in size.

Following the Chillicothe game, two promising candidates reported, and a third member will report after the Iowa Wesleyan game. These men will strengthen the squad considerably, and the team should get its share of victories on the remaining schedule.

Leroy Dick, Traverse City, Michigan, although one of the lightest men on the squad, overcomes this in his offensive playing, being high scorer of the season thus far. Delmar Jones, Taylorville, Illinois, has been playing an outstanding defensive game.

The team meets the strong Iowa Wesleyan five at Mount Pleasant, Friday, January 17, and a week later plays the Washington Junior College at Washington, Iowa.

CLARENCE LUYAAS.

The "G" Club Initiate

The "G" Club met in the gymnasium Saturday night to impress upon ten new members a few details of initiation necessary to their becoming regular members of the club. All were able to overcome the obstacles of the initiation and stated that they were glad somebody enjoyed the ceremonies. The men received were those who had completed the playing requirements in football. They will probably take vengeance in the spring on the basketball and track "G" men.

FRANK PARSONS.

The School at Mid-Year

This is examination week at Graceland. On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday the regular schedule of classes is replaced by a program of examinations, two hours for each subject. Last week-end was busy with the finishing touches of term papers, the completion of laboratory assignments, the rounding-out of notebooks, and reviews of courses. This week-end finds the faculty in a deluge of papers, a weighing of achievements, and recording of grades.

Next Monday the new semester begins. The four and a half months fall into several periods, according to major events that occur. The first unit lasts until April 5, when the spring recess begins for General Conference. With oratorio, anthems, dramatics, exhibits, and the like to prepare, the students and faculty expect a busy nine weeks.

Boys Return to Marietta Hall

Friday at Herald Hall and Banta Farm, tears were shed in various rooms as family relations were severed and community shares of shaving cream and hair oil were crowded into packing for the moving into Marietta, the hall vacated when the girls moved into the new dormitory. Finally all boxes, trunks, and other contraption containers were loaded with their possessors into a truck and taken toward the college hill. The "industrial men" were assigned to Marietta on account of convenience of dressing for their work. A quartet remained at Banta Farm. "Tex" Cox is dean of the Marietta boys.

An Example for Pastors

By Alvin Knisley

Once a flat tire occasioned my pause close to a Catholic Church. It was Sunday, near meeting time. The people came in ones and twos and family groups rather irregularly but quietly and without audible demonstration. Black and white and Jew as well as Gentile, I recognized among the marchers-by.

Outside the building, not in the vestibule, but on the street and bareheaded, was the priest, convenient to the steps leading to the doorway, his strong, willing hand extending a welcome grasp to all comers seeking admission, and ready to render support to the lame or feeble as they tottered forward. Out went his hand, backed up with a smile, without respect apparently for color, class, or clothing.

I could not help but think of the situation as a good object lesson. I regarded it as a good pastoral example. However unwholesome the fruit this papal ecclesiastic might dish up for his parishioners after he welcomed them in, the act he staged was surely to his credit and one that would impress people with his sincerity, and beget confidence.

I could not help but think of the contrast between the scene described and that created by the modern pulpiteer who keeps himself in hiding, something like a theatrical star, until all is ready and all is set for his professional mouthings. After his essay of thirty-five minutes is tendered, his hand and his company are then briefly given, just long enough to give the people opportunity to say, "I enjoyed your discourse." Ministerial diplomacy.

In the former case, the minister, the priest, presented himself to the individuals of his congregation for their good and at a time that he was able to be of service to them. In the latter case, the minister presents himself to the individuals of his congregation for his own good, and that they might be of service to him—and that perhaps just after drumming them on unselfishness and how we should ever be working in the interests of our fellow men. The one man will be remembered. His grave will be visited, and his monument will be epitaphed with tears. The other will be forgotten as the hum of obsequial exercises dies away.

Theological ministrations has its mechanics and its physics, as well as agriculture and navigation. It is not by any means wholly mental or theoretical, and the gospel messenger who proceeds on such a basis has his bowl of mush and milk upside down.

Sacramento, California

Twenty-fourth and Kay Streets

January 6.—Branch election was held the first Wednesday evening in December. Officers elected or sustained and their assistants since appointed include: Pastor, Elder W. H. Dawson; associate pastor, Elder E. C. Burdick; priest J. L. Bussell, in charge of the sacramental service; clerk, Orah Johnston; superintendent Sunday school, Gertrude Bidwell; assistant, Mary Bussell; secretary, Rose Dawson; superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression, Marion Burton; superintendent Women's Department, Bessie Driggs; superintendent music department, E. C. Burdick; choir leader, Birdie Clark; publicity agent, George C. Price; superintendent junior church, Cora B. Taylor. The following Sunday morning a beautiful installation service was arranged and conducted by District President G. P. Levitt, with suitable charges and responses.

The choir of twenty-one voices, directed by Sister Clark, gave the cantata, King All Glorious, Nolte, the evening of December 22. Sister Gertrude Bidwell was the accompanist. A large and appreciative audience attended. Brother Levitt was present to give the sermonet, "Rewriting the Christmas story," and also sang in the choir. Mr. M. Ridley, tenor, assisted as soloist.

Monday evening, December 23, the Sunday school held its entertainment in the main auditorium. The room was beautifully decorated by members of the young people's class. A prettily trimmed and lighted tree was on the rostrum. Green and red globes in the choir lights back of the rostrum and wreaths of evergreens helped to create a festive atmosphere.

A pleasant surprise just before the program was the wedding of Miss Wilma Jones and Mr. Mansel Fallwell, the pastor officiating. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Howe.

Sister Cora Taylor had charge of the program. At its close all marched to the lower auditorium, while the orchestra, led by Brother Burdick, played. Again seated, the children in the front seats, the audience enjoyed a lively entertainment put on by Santa Claus and his clown assistant, a bag of tricks, magic box-table, and an Eskimo. Later he passed a bag of homemade candy, furnished by the mothers, to each one present. Sister Bidwell secured this latter group of entertainers.

The class of junior boys, E. C. Burdick, teacher, has chosen the name "Volente," which signifies willingness. The boys' and girls' classes in the junior department were combined in a joint service for the lesson hour Christmas Sunday. "Jesus' birthday" was the theme. Sister Cora Taylor, the girls' teacher, furnished the large frosted cake, with thirty-three candles on it. This service was given in Departments' Journal for December.

Late in November a large silk American Flag, with standard, was presented to the Sunday school by Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Bidwell. Their daughter-in-law, our superintendent, Sister Bidwell, was in charge of the service. The presentation was made by members of a local tent of the Daughters of Union Civil War Veterans. The acceptance speech was made by Associate Pastor Burdick. Plans for the new year were made by this department at an officers' and teachers' meeting at the home of the superintendent.

At the last meeting of the Women's Department, the president, Sister Geneva Beebe, who was moving away, was presented with a pretty gift. A program and refreshments concluded the afternoon session. Sister Edna Burdick has undertaken the leadership of the Temple Builders in the place of Sister Beebe. At the December meeting at the home of Helen Sandvick, the Alpha Theta group also commemorated the birthday of Jesus with the cake and candle service. Later in the evening, after refreshments were served, they enjoyed a mock Christmas tree.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, Sister Taylor, superintendent, has given hearty support to Brother Levitt's Sunday evening sermons on the Restoration, presenting tableaux, readings in costume, etc. Splendid lighting effects are secured by our efficient electrician, Ives Honeychurch. A dramatic club has been organized, choosing the name, "The Masquers." The officers are: President, Melvin Howe; vice president, Marion Burton; secretary, Helen Sandvick; director, Naomi Hutchinson; costume designer, Inez Honeychurch; stage manager, Ives Honeychurch; business manager, Rose Ida Dawson.

Elder C. W. Earle, of Rocklin, and Sister Anna Crocker, of Loomis, were confined in a local hospital for several weeks with minor operations. Both are home now. Sister Zayda Hook has also been in a hospital for several weeks. Her leg was badly broken just above the ankle in a fall on a wet sidewalk.

Haverhill, Massachusetts

January 1.—For the most part of late the local priesthood has supplied the branch with spiritual nourishment. The midweek prayer meetings are indicative of the spiritual life of the branch. They are faithfully attended.

The junior church in charge of Brother Andrew Wengel is having interesting sessions. The young boys' class in Religion, under Sister Clara Thayer, is receiving careful instruction in the Book of Mormon.

District President William Patterson gave his interesting lecture on Australia before a house filled to capacity under the auspices of the Groveland Women's Club, in Groveland, during the month of November. Its reception was highly gratifying, as the audience was composed almost entirely of nonmembers.

Through the efforts of one of our young men an opening has been given for the presentation of the gospel message to a group of young men, members of the Groveland H-Y-Club. In the cemetery at this town is a little grave, the headstone of which bears the following inscription: "Charles Boyton died from exposure, being driven from Nauvoo by the ruthless mob in 1844." The introduction of this subject at a club meeting soon carried the conversation to the differences between the Reorganized Church and the Utah Church. Wishing more enlightenment on the subject, the minister of Groveland suggested the next meeting be held at Pastor Jordan's home. Fortunately Brother Patterson was able to stay over Monday evening after delivering two able sermons on Sunday. He met with the boys and their leader, answering questions until a late hour. The attention accorded Brother Patterson made his task a joyous one.

As a result of this talk several of the young men came to the November social and also a Sunday morning service. The young brother who is a member of the club senses his responsibility as a representative of the church more keenly than ever before.

Doctor William Sinclair and wife and son Charles and Sister Emma Dobbins and daughter Lucille were recent guests of the branch. Elder Sinclair preached an instructive sermon Sunday morning.

The socials held monthly are a potent factor in this group. The Halloween party was all that was anticipated. It was held at the roomy home of Brother Randall. The ghost walk added much to the merriment of the guests. Non-members were present, and two young men who were there have attended church quite regularly since that time.

Sleight-of-hand performances varied the program of the social in November and added much to the enjoyment of the children.

The Christmas season was observed with an appropriate pageant in charge of Sister Susie Jordan, depicting the advent of the King of kings and the adoration of shepherds and wise men. Candle bearers robed in white receiving the angel's benediction furnished a fitting climax to the simple but impressive sight.

The December social gathering was held Christmas night, and while there was no tree as of former years because of the lack of employment in the branch, a happy spirit prevailed. Carols were sung, and games were played. Christmas candy bags composed the refreshments.

We miss from our ranks the friendly faces of Brother Fred Blanchard and wife and daughter, but we know our loss is another's gain.

As the call to prayer goes forth, we of Haverhill Branch wish to set our faces Zionward, trusting in the watchful care of a just Father, praying that as we go forward to meet the challenge of 1930 we shall be among those who having once put their hand to the plow never look back.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

Owing to the rainy weather, unfavorable roads, and the scattered condition of the membership, no special services were held last quarter. But Sunday school convenes every Sunday morning, and praise service follows. There is also preaching on Sunday evening.

Saturday evening, November 16, the Saints were pleased to have present Apostle Roy S. Budd, of Independence, Missouri, whose field includes Southern Ohio District; also Elder A. E. Anderton, of Columbus, Ohio, district president. Brother Budd was the evening's speaker. He read Matthew 16, using a portion of the thirteenth verse as the text: "Whom do men say that I the Son of Man am?" The theme of the discourse was building character.

Sunday morning following the Sunday school session, Elder Anderton was the speaker, using the words of the Master: "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

We were glad to have these men with us, for they proved themselves consecrated servants of God. Some sick were administered to, and after the Sunday school Sister Lizzie Jane Hill, who was rebaptized a few weeks ago, was confirmed by Brothers Budd and Anderton.

December 8 was the date for the reorganization of the Sunday school. Few changes were made, and the official corps now stands: Superintendent, Luther Crabtree; assistant superintendent, E. E. Williams; secretary, Ora Altman; assistant, Mabel Hilt; treasurer, Hulda Culp; teacher beginner class, Julian Culp; junior, Emma Culp; intermediate, Charles Culp; senior, Rosa Pollock; adult, E. E. Williams; and librarian, Richard Culp.

We hope to make 1930 a year for much advancement, a time in which each member will strive earnestly to do his best for Christ.

Word comes from Brother Mark S. Crabtree, who for the past year has been doing missionary work in West Virginia, that he expects to return to this region this month. He will probably take up church work here.

Nauvoo, Illinois

The new year opened with every Sunday school officer and teacher in his place when the bell rang. Classes were well filled, and for roll call each teacher was called upon to give the names of those absent from his class and was asked to visit those individuals, and report their reasons for being absent.

Each teacher appointed a class secretary, whose principal duty is to see that the Stepping Stones, provided by the Sunday school, reaches the home of every member. These papers are too valuable to be left lying about or used to start the fire.

Ten members braved a severe sleet storm to attend the special prayer service held Monday evening, and nine prayers were offered.

D. J. Sorden, district president, arranged to hold preaching services Thursday and Friday evening, but the biggest snowstorm for years arrived on the day scheduled, and it was deemed advisable to postpone his visit.

Christmas activities were somewhat varied this year. Sister Page, who has charge of the primary department, and her assistant, Emogene Hudson, had a Christmas tree in their Sunday school room and gave out boxes of candy to each child present. At the close of the Sunday school hour they marched upstairs and entertained the older folks with a nice little program.

Sister Florence Ourth entertained her class of intermediates with a Christmas party at her home, where games, contests, and a treat were enjoyed and gifts exchanged.

Elder Page is planning to entertain his class of young people with a skating party when the ice is skatable.

A pageant, "The Babe of Bethlehem," written by Sister A. L. Sanford, was given Sunday evening. All the members of the intermediate class and the young people's class took part. This pageant was given two years ago and was repeated by request. It was directed by Sister Florence Ourth. The Christmas story, just as it is told in the Bible, was pictured in eight scenes, with solos and choruses, Roderic Lewis being the announcer. L. H. Lewis took the part of Zacharias; Roberta Lewis, the angel; Elder Page, the inn keeper, watchman on the hillside, and one of the wise men; Sister Page, Elizabeth; Mildred Sanford, Mary; Jack Sanford, Joseph; Arnold Ourth, King Herod; John Lee, herald; Paul Fusselman, scribe; Sherman Heady, page; Madeline, Emogene, and Thelma Hudson, Lois Heady, Eudora and Vera Garret, Rosie Kachle, Dorothy Fusselman, and Alma Grotts, court maidens; David Lee and John Williams, wise men and shepherds. The parts were well taken, and the scenes enhanced by Bethlehem scenery which covered the entire wall, a large electric star which shone above the manger and by red and green foot lights constructed by John Williams.

Some time ago it was called to the attention of the Keokuk Dam Company that the river was eating away the lawn in front of the Nauvoo House. They came to our rescue, and tons of rock were dumped in front of the place that was giving way, making a strong bulwark. Brother Wilfred Wood, seeing that a large portion of the lawn had been lost, undertook the long and arduous task of removing the rock, piece by piece, in an effort to replace the lawn. A wall was built twelve or fifteen feet beyond where the rock was laid and the space filled in. The appearance of the lawn was greatly improved.

Mary Lee and Mildred Sanford returned home from Graceland to spend the Christmas holidays. They were each called upon to give a talk on their impressions of Graceland one Sunday evening during the hour occupied by the Department of Recreation and Expression. Although they were glad to come home, they were happy to return when vacation was over. They are greatly enjoying their year at Graceland.

The pastor writes up a different notice for the local paper each week, announcing the program for the coming Sunday and telling what is being done in the different departments. Thus he keeps our work before the people.

Sister Malley Fisher has returned from the hospital, but her home-coming was a very sad one, for little Jesse, jr., was stricken with scarlet fever during her absence, and passed away before her return. He had been left in the care of a kind neighbor, who also cared for the husband and little girl. All that kind hands could do was done for this little one but in vain. While the family was in quarantine the women of the branch took turns sending in dinners already cooked.

San Francisco, California

Eighteenth and Danvers Streets

Eighty persons attended the Sunday school December 8, and forty-four were at the church service. Elder George S. Lincoln was the speaker, choosing for his subject "The kingdom of God." A number of strangers were present.

Consecration marked the activities of the following Sabbath, District President G. P. Levitt in charge. Branch officers for the following year were installed. The spirit of prophecy gave promises to the officers and members. The Religio session at 6.45 was fine, the music being given by the orchestra. Priest H. Hinton occupied the evening hour.

Priesthood meeting was held December 16.

The women's club held a bazaar December 13, the results of which were gratifying to them.

A Christmas tree was had at the church December 20, and an entertainment was given by the Sunday school children. A pleasant time was enjoyed. A Christmas service characterized December 22, being the most spiritual service of the kind ever held here. The church was crowded, the songs were beautiful, and the exercises impressive. Elder J. A. Saxe was the speaker, his remarks being brief in order that the singers might have time for their part of the program. The divine Spirit seemed to inspire the ceremony. Sister Hellen Rood, of San Jose, was director of the program. The program reflected the fine spiritual condition of the branch. Priest John Shipman was the evening speaker.

Ninety-seven were at the final Sunday school of the year, forty at church, and about thirty at junior church. Elder H. W. Savage preached morning and evening. Brother W. Dancer, son of David Dancer, of Lamoni, was in attendance and assisted in the services. His home is in Oregon.

Park-Presidio Branch, 405 Arguello Boulevard

At the close of every year it is customary to take an inventory to ascertain the accomplishments of that period. In looking over the activities of the Park-Presidio congregation we find—

First, that our numbers have supported the general church fund very generously.

Second, that the quota for baptisms was reached.

Third, that the church has received publicity in our community as never before attempted.

Fourth, that our attendance has jumped from twelve or fifteen to seventy-five, two thirds of the congregation being visitors.

Fifth, that the financial support to the congregation has shown a material gain.

This congregation has enjoyed the same spirit of brotherly love and affection which has been predominant since its organization three years ago.

To verify the above statement the assembly gathered at the last annual business meeting, held December 18, and voiced confidence by unanimously reelecting all the officers to their various positions. All the reports submitted testified of the earnestness on the part of each individual to work for peace and harmony and the success of the Reorganized Church in our locality.

The publicity agent's report is worthy special mention and should be of interest to publicity agents scattered throughout the country. He reported the use of eleven newspapers, which gave him sixty-seven insertions, netting 3,521 lines of free publicity during the last quarter. He said that we have never had to pay one penny for publicity since we were organized three years ago, and further stated that this could not have been accomplished without the cooperation of the speakers who submit sermon synopses in advance for publications.

The Sunday school, under the able leadership of the superintendent, Sister R. W. Clegg, has had a successful year.

The annual Christmas tree party, held December 28 in the afternoon at the home of Brother and Sister Holling, was a big success, and Sister Clegg was ably assisted by Sister Holling. Twenty-seven were present to enjoy the program and Santa who distributed gifts as well as the usual bags of fruit, nuts, and candy. Light refreshments were served, and everyone went home happy.

We are looking forward to our third anniversary banquet, which will be held about the middle of February. Surely Park-Presidio members know how to do this, and neither efforts nor money will be spared to make this the best anniversary ever.

Our officers have done well to further the interests of the church.

New Philadelphia, Ohio

January 10.—The annual business meeting of the branch was held January 7, Elder James E. Bishop, president of Kirtland District, in charge. Elder John D. Carlisle was sustained president of the branch for his third year; Sister Minnie Cramer was reelected recording secretary; Sister Marie Graff, branch solicitor; Sister Laura Warner on flower committee; Samuel Mansell, chorister; Charlene Hansel, pianist; Edna A. Howells, publicity agent.

January 5 was promotion day in the Sunday school, and new officers were installed. Brother Richard Watkins is the new superintendent, and Sister Hazel Noble was installed superintendent of the primary department. Our Sunday school is well attended.

This being the first Sunday of the new year, sacramental service was especially well attended.

The Women's Department had a successful year, and plans to go forward into a more successful season. Election of officers was had December 18, all officers retaining their positions: President, Sister Margaret McMillan; vice president, Sister Rose Warner. The society gave a play and social at the church November 30, which proved to be a decided success. The women have been invited to repeat the play sometime this month. They have also formed a Book of Mormon class under the leadership of Sister Anna Cramer, and so far the class has been successful. It meets every other Sunday afternoon at the church.

Saints were much pleased to have the privilege of meeting Patriarch J. T. Gresty last October. He gave an interesting talk on his oratorio. While here he was entertained in the home of Brother Samuel Mansell.

District President J. E. Bishop held a series of lectures on religious education the week of November 3. The lectures were given good attendance.

God has wonderfully blessed New Philadelphia members, and we are hopeful that we shall this year go forward.

EDNA A. HOWELLS.

Active Women's Department in Western Oklahoma

The Western Oklahoma District Women's Department has shown by its work that its members' motto is, "Whatsoever thy hand finds to do, do with thy might."

The district is composed of eight locals, each having assumed the task of keeping up local expenses, saving to build and equip where building has not been done; living and teaching the gospel by consecrated service. None is rich, so we work and pray for the expansion of the cause dear to our hearts. The sisters are doing a wonderful work. They attend and assist in Sunday school, prayer service, and all other meetings in addition to "looking well to the ways of the household."

The work is necessarily governed by locality. It is also a school in that the members learn to bear each other's burdens and failings with patience and harmony. Thus do we gain spiritually.

The membership is small for the territory embraced, and the workers few. Each local has some friends, who though nonmembers, are helpful. By keeping up the social side of the work, we make friends who attend services and who assist in many ways. May God help us to let our gospel light shine that we may win the honest in heart and bring them to his fold.

Alva local has had food sales and served lunches at public sales, raising funds to build a church. It also found time for a class on Thursday afternoon of each week. An attendance contest last spring and summer brought many to the class.

Canton local meets at the home of Sister O. E. Slayton. The women quilt and knot comforts. They recently held a bazaar with a food sale and realized a nice sum. They are watching for an opportunity to build, as their Sunday school meets in the lodge hall, and they have no place to hold services other than Sunday meetings.

So many Saints have moved away from Seiling the past few years that the local has felt much discouraged. But a few are true and loyal and are doing their best. They discuss their weekly lesson in Doctrine and Covenants while they quilt. They have a neat little kitchen furnished in a room in the church.

Woodward local has just a few members, but they are true blue. They have an enthusiastic class. The women feel the loss of Sister Smith, who moved to Missouri, but will no doubt in pursuance of their faithful work find new recruits.

Freedom is wide-awake, has a wagon fitted up in which to cook and serve dinners at sales, etc. The women are also busy in other ways and hope in the future to have the time for organized study class. The loss of their members who have moved to Zion has been felt.

In point of membership Calumet is one of the largest locals. They quilt, serve dinners, put on home talent plays, and have an occasional party to entertain husbands and friends. They help the needy and ill in their community. Their homes being widely scattered, they meet in all-day session every two weeks. Truly a band of valiant soldiers is found here.

Davidson is also one of our largest locals, and is much alive. They did not neglect the poor, needy, and ill while they were busy paying for their nice new church building. One of their money-making plans was this: The local superintendent, Sister Roy Skinner, baked a cake, put it in a box with a small bank, and sent it to another member who ate the cake, put the price of it in the little bank along with some other dainty eatable and sent it on. When the box and bank had gone the rounds and came back to Sister Skinner, the little bank contained a good sum.

Eagle City local is small, but full of zeal for the work in 1930. The women had a cap supper in October which was so successful that the idea should be passed on. A free program brought a crowd. Each woman brought supper for two and two caps. One cap of each pair was sold at auction to the highest bidder, and at the close of the sale, the women donned the caps they had brought, which they had kept hidden while the twin caps were being sold. The men, wearing the caps they had bought, sought out partners amid much merriment. The caps were mostly made at home of crepe paper. They were of varying styles and colors, dunce caps, night-caps, tam-o-shanters. A good sum was realized.

The women are praying for the speedy consummation of the work intrusted to them, and are ready to press onward unitedly and untiringly in the gospel cause. All are looking Zionward.

MRS. A. L. DIAMOND.

Oshoto, Wyoming

January 7.—Oshoto Branch met in its first business meeting January 5, 1930, at the Little Missouri Schoolhouse. Saints from Ewing and Stroner met with the few at Oshoto and together made a good crowd. Sacramental services were conducted by Elder Fred Cousins and Priest Horace Hartshorn.

Principal items of business transacted were plans and preparations for the coming year. The first Sunday of each month we are to have an all-day meeting, sacrament in the morning, lunch at noon, and preaching in the afternoon; and preaching service will be had the third Sunday of each month. If we are faithful and work together to make a real effort each time, we will enjoy some wonderful services. We need the prayers of the church that each will do his part.

Brother F. V. Cole was ordained to the office of teacher December 20, 1929, by Elder J. F. Curtis and was voted in the branch at the business meeting as teacher of the branch. Sister Rosabelle Gray was made branch correspondent; Sister Zada Hartshorn is to have charge of and look after the sacramental emblems. It was voted to send Brother and Sister Fred Cousins to General Conference as delegates for this branch.

Just now the weather is cold. Sunday was extremely cold, making it hard for Saints to come a great distance.

Alva and Spearfish (South Dakota) Saints, take notice of our new branch and meet with us whenever it is possible during the coming year.

San Jose, California

Spencer Avenue and Grant Street

At the close of the Sunday school December 1, a baptismal service was held, Ray, the young son of Sister Bertha and Mr. Ray Elam, being baptized and confirmed by Brother R. E. Cowden.

At eleven o'clock the sacramental service was in charge of Pastor R. E. Cowden, a goodly degree of the Spirit being present.

A music recital marked the Religio session in the evening, Sister Oscar Bradley taking prominent part. Both organ and piano were used in the entertainment.

The Sunday school superintendent, Sister Hellen Rood, spent the holidays with her father's family in San Francisco.

Business meeting of the branch occurred December 4. Officers elected are: President, R. E. Cowden; secretary, Sister Almeda Christopher; treasurer, B. R. Gilbert; publicity agent, C. J. Cady; Sunday school superintendent, Hellen Rood; librarian, Gladys Rood; historian, C. W. Hawkins.

The program of the Religio the second Sunday of December was a review of the programs of the past few weeks. Visitors were present from San Francisco.

December 15 the Sunday school had its Christmas tree and entertainment.

Three days later Elder George H. Wixom, missionary to Arizona, surprised San Jose Branch by making appearance at prayer meeting. The service was changed to a preaching hour, and Brother George gave one of his forceful Latter Day Saint sermons. He kept his hearers wide-awake and thoroughly interested for one hour and twenty-five minutes.

Brother C. J. Cady spoke the morning of December 8, and Brother Cowden December 22.

At 7.30 the evening of December 22 the Religio presented a pageant, Babe of Bethlehem. The beautiful drama was well carried out, and the dramatic club deserves great credit for the production. One hundred people were present that night, many of them nonmembers.

Eagle City, Oklahoma

Eagle City Branch, though a small group in western Oklahoma, entered upon the new year with renewed energy and consecration, all the members ready to cooperate in making this a year of better service in all departments.

Branch officers were unanimously reelected, there being only slight changes in the departments. Branch officers are: President, Lester E. Dyke; priest, Roy L. Diamond; teacher, John R. Dyke; deacon, Raymond Dyke; clerk, W. L. Ward; publicity agent, Sister A. L. Diamond. Sunday school officers are: Superintendent, R. L. Diamond; assistant superintendent, Sister J. R. Dyke; secretary, Rae Luella Diamond; treasurer, Lester E. Dyke; librarian, Iva Pierce; primary department superintendent, Sister A. L. Diamond; pianist, Sister Fern Ward Parsons; chorister, W. L. Ward; president of Recreation and Expression, Sister R. L. Diamond; vice president, Raymond Dyke. Women's Department superintendent, Sister L. E. Dyke; assistant, Sister R. L. Diamond; secretary, Sister A. L. Diamond; treasurer, Sister W. L. Ward; cradle roll superintendent, Iva Pierce; superintendent young women's department, Sister H. F. Ward. Harold Ward and L. E. Dyke are our regular violinists and are assisted at times by other musicians.

Though the population of Eagle City is only about two hundred, we have three churches. The Methodist Episcopal and Christian Churches have no regular meeting on the fifth Sunday of the month, so we "take turns" in having an all-day meeting and basket dinner that day. A program is arranged so that each congregation gives songs, talks, etc. This has made a few friends for us among the unprejudiced. We met with the Canton Saints the first Sunday in December when Brother Howard Harpham, of Seiling, preached at eleven o'clock, assisted by Ed Ballinger. The sacramental service at three o'clock in the afternoon was in charge of Brothers Ballinger and L. E. Dyke. Canton is eight miles from here, and we are proud to call that live group part of our branch. We hope, however, that the way will be opened that they may have a building and branch at home soon.

The all-day meetings spoken of above have resulted in our branch being invited to other small towns to sing at their all-day meetings. No opening has been found at these places for a meeting, but we are watchful and hopeful.

A Christmas program in which all the Sunday school children took part along with some nonmembers was given at the church Christmas Eve, followed by a tree, presents, Santa Claus, and treats. Songs, readings, dialogs, drills, and other exercises made an enjoyable program. The Temple Builders made little gifts for children whose presents were few.

We have preaching every Sunday evening, Elders Lester Dyke and R. L. Diamond alternating in the stand. Sunday school convenes at ten o'clock in the morning. Prayer service is held Wednesday evening, and the Women's Department meets Thursday afternoon.

A program presented by the Sunday school superintendent aided by the Oriole girls and some small boys of the local tended to urge the Saints to our best efforts in making the new year one of notable progress.

Cards are out announcing the birth of a son January 7, 1930, to Elder and Sister Lemuel Dyke, of Minco, Oklahoma. Brother Dyke is bishop's agent for Western Oklahoma District, and also pastor at El Reno, Oklahoma. They lived in Eagle City some years before moving to Minco.

Spokane, Washington

Due to the absence of District Missionary G. G. Lewis, our College Day program was postponed until December 22. On that day a special program was given. Speeches were by Brother George Lewis and Sister Edith Woods Lewis. College songs were sung, and a generous offering was received.

In the evening the choir of thirty members, directed by Muriel Whiting, rendered a beautiful program of Christmas music. The entertainment lasted for one and one half hours. The program included duets, solos, quartet numbers, and choruses. Much praise is due the choir and its untiring leader for the success of the program.

Christmas Eve members of the choir sang Christmas carols to several sick and shut-in members who appreciated the music. Following the caroling all were invited to the home of Brother and Sister Lewis for a social time. Games, taffy, and apples were enjoyed.

The Christmas season was a busy and happy one, with parties, dinners, and other gatherings. But in the midst of it all we were made sad by the loss of two brothers, one a young man, Joseph W. Kennedy, jr., the other an elderly brother, George Kannady. When our ranks are thus broken, more must push forward to carry on.

A recent event claiming much interest here was the marriage of Sister May Bugbee, of Spokane, to Brother W. H. Bronson, of Vancouver. Being well known in this district, the couple are showered with congratulations.

Throughout the week District President R. H. Porter and District Missionary G. G. Lewis have been meeting the Saints at various places, aiding them with special prayer meetings such as are being held throughout the church. Spokane District and Branch are striving to make the coming year outstanding in achievement.

Columbus, Ohio

First Branch

January 8.—The month of December was a busy time for First Branch. Besides the regular meetings we had a Christmas play and cantata.

The evening of December 23, under the direction of the Sunday school, a biblical tableau and play portraying the birth of Christ and the incidents surrounding it, were given. The church was lit only with candles. All did their parts well, and comments indicated the enjoyment of all.

Sunday night, December 29, the combined choirs of First and Second Branches gave a cantata and tableau, The Coming of the Christ. The preceding Sunday this production was given at Second Church. Both churches were filled upon each occasion. Some said they never heard the choir sing better. The singers have been working hard under their able leader, Nathan Weate, and the branch is proud of the progress they are showing.

Surely after hearing the Sunday school play and the cantata given by the choirs, all approached the Christmastide with a renewed and fuller appreciation of its meaning.

The branch was abundantly blessed this month with visiting Saints. Brother and Sister J. H. N. Jones, of Australia, were here over one Sunday, also Apostle R. S. Budd, District Missionary J. R. Grice, and Patriarch Gomer Griffiths. Brother Jones gave a short talk at the close of Sunday school, and at the eleven o'clock hour the Saints heard from Brothers Grice, Jones, and Griffiths.

In the afternoon Brother Grice baptized Durward Perry, who had reached the age of eight years. Apostle Budd preached to us at the evening hour, and his sermon was deeply enjoyed. He has won a warm place in the hearts of the Saints, especially the young people.

The branch has made great progress during the past year. We hope and pray that in the present year we may see even greater advancement.

Coffeyville, Kansas

Washita and Eleventh Streets

January 10.—The old year with all its activities and mistakes and blessings is gone, and the new year is well started, the year to which Saints all over the world have looked forward. Of it they expect great and wonderful things.

A pleasant experience came to this branch early in the year in the splendid communion service of January 5. The Father did indeed pour out his Spirit upon his children. We feel that he sent his servant, Brother S. W. Simmons, to minister here, for blessings have attended his efforts.

Brother and Sister Simmons came to Coffeyville December 29, and he preached each night last week, the Spirit being felt by those who heard his sermons. Last Sunday O. E. Pender, branch president, was spoken to in prophecy, and admonition and instruction were given other individuals and all the branch. This has strengthened and encouraged the group here. Surely with this divine Spirit attending our efforts at the opening of the year, we shall be able to do much in every department.

Officers elected for this six months are: President O. E. Pender; secretary, Sister Reynolds; Sunday school superintendent, James Reynolds; assistant superintendent, Sister Pender; secretary, Elta Yeubanks; chorister, Sister Head; pianist, Ruth Reynolds; president of Religio, Mildred Reynolds; vice president, Elta Yeubanks; secretary, Wilma Walton. Owing to the condition of the weather and other causes, the Women's Department has not met to elect officers. The election will be carried out at its first meeting.

A hearty welcome is extended all members who go through Coffeyville, to stop and visit with us.

Barberton, Ohio

Barberton Branch is again launched on another new year. At the recent annual business meeting the branch joined the general church movement adopting the new church school system, and elected its officers for the following year.

The various departments under their leaders have organized, and the young people are planning a program and box social for January 31. The young members are organizing a study period for each week, to be followed by a social and recreational period. This is to take the place of the Religio service.

On New Year's Eve the Saints of Barberton held a watch party at the church at which time a reception was given for Elder Herbert Rhodes, who has been branch president for a number of years. Brother Rhodes leaves us to join another field of service, and we wish for him even greater success in the coming years than he has had in the past. Nearly all present gave talks in which they expressed appreciation for our brother's service here, and each was able to mention many ways in which he has helped us. While we regret to lose Brother Rhodes, we are also glad to welcome the branch president for this year, Brother W. P. Odom, who is a faithful helper.

We ask the Saints to remember in prayer Brother Crispin, who has been confined to his bed seven months. His family are regular attendants in the branch, and we miss him exceedingly.

Our desire is to study to show ourselves approved and to be able to serve more efficiently than ever before.

GEORGE WARD.

Deloit, Iowa

January 11.—A brief review of the past year's work in Deloit will be necessary to acquaint the church with the present branch status.

Two series of services were held by Elders E. Y. Hunker and M. K. Fry. While they were in Deloit we had no trouble in having front seats filled. Elder Fry baptized ten.

Speakers at the June conference, held here, were Elders J. F. Garver, in charge, H. O. Smith, J. A. Gardner, L. G. Holloway, Gerald Gunsolley, M. K. Fry, E. Y. Hunker, and Bishop Adams.

Other speakers during the year were Brothers J. E. Keck, G. Scott Daniel, and Elder C. J. Hunt, each giving encouragement in timely talks. Elder L. G. Holloway closed a series of meetings at the beginning of the holiday season. Deloit members are always glad to have visiting missionaries present.

The Recreation and Expression Department has been active. Two lake trips were enjoyed and four social evenings.

Sister Abbie Hutchinson and her Sunday school class watched the old year out and the new year in. Pictures obtained through the Graphic Arts Bureau proved very educational. The machine used was borrowed from the public school.

Special day programs were held. College Day a sum of thirty-eight dollars was raised.

The Christmas offering was seventy-five dollars.

The teachers of the Sunday school helped in all special day programs, directing the numbers presented by their classes.

At the annual business meeting Elder M. O. Myers was again elected pastor for the coming year; B. W. Richardson, Sunday school superintendent; head of the department of Recreation and Expression, H. G. Newcom; assistant in both departments, W. H. Rounds; director of the Women's Department, Sister C. W. Winey. Guy R. Johnson, elder, has been chosen to act in the capacity of pastor of the branch in Denison, Iowa.

Elder Warren Oliver and family have moved from Denison to Deloit. In the spring they expect to move to a farm near here.

At present Deloit Branch has four elders, two priests, a teacher, and a deacon. It is the determination of all to push forward.

M. O. MYERS.

Burlington, Iowa

The closing of one year and the beginning of another causes one to pause to examine the path in which he is traveling, seeing in one grand perspective its joys and sorrows, its labors, and its shortcomings. This the Saints of Burlington have been doing this month.

The fall of 1929 added one new member to our ranks, Sister M. Lucy Dixon, of Carman, Illinois. She is a sister of Ralph Stanley, of Burlington, and also of George Stanley, of Akron, Ohio, who with his wife and son, Doren, is visiting her for the winter. They were called here by the death of Sister Dixon's husband.

The departments of the women's auxiliary have found that the harder they work and the more they do, though worries and fatigue are present, the more is the joy in summing up all their activities. Two months before the close of the year they decided to make one hundred and fifty dollars for the building fund before the year was gone. Each department set to work.

The Temple Builders gave a play, Patsy. They painted pictures to sell. The "S" Chapter composed of senior Temple Builders and the women's auxiliary worked in conjunction at the following undertakings. A rummage sale was held for two days in one of the downtown stores. A fried chicken dinner was given at the church, fancywork from both organizations being on display. At this time a traveling basket was going from one member to another, and each time the bank in the basket was opened a happy surprise was received. A stocking had been mailed to each sister, and she was asked a penny an inch from top to toe. At one meeting the women sewed carpet rags for one of the members and were paid ten cents a pound. They went to an auction sale in the country where they sold hot sandwiches, homemade pies, and coffee. It was a cold day, and business was good for the auxiliary. To their surprise when the sum of their earnings was totaled, the women had on hand almost four hundred dollars.

Then came the Christmas program for the Sunday school, which was followed by the cantata, King of Israel, rendered by the choir. The singers surprised the Saints by presenting themselves in long black robes with white collars. They came up from the basement singing "Silent night," marching down the church aisle to the choir loft. The robes were courteously loaned for the occasion by Otumwa Saints.

The first sacramental service of the year was encouraging and inspiring to all. The Spirit was present in abundance. Prayers were offered with such earnestness and humility that the Lord spoke to the members. Assurance was given that he was pleased with the spirit of prayer among them, and they were admonished to continue to pray often, that they might receive all the blessing he has in store for his Saints during the year.

Pastor D. B. Sorden, wife, and daughter Marilyn have returned from their holiday visit with relatives in Oklahoma. Their journey was most pleasant, and their trip was without mishap.

Saint Thomas, Ontario

January 12.—We had our annual Christmas tree Friday, December 20. A good program was provided, after which Santa Claus appeared and distributed presents from the laden tree.

The yearly business meeting met at the church January 6. Encouraging reports were read from various departments. The solicitor's report was particularly cheering, for it showed a great increase in the amount of tithes and offerings received. Although it may be the few who are represented in this report, they, at least, are trying to keep the law. It is still more encouraging to hear that some have filed their inventory and others are about to do so in the near future. The time is hastening toward the redemption of Zion. The branch also showed a surplus materially increased.

Election of officers resulted as follows: President, Elder James Skelding; counselors, Elders Albert Cordery and John R. Shepherd; secretary, Sister Lillie Burger; treasurer, Sister Nelson Kelley; pianist, Sister Emily St. John; assistant pianist, Sister Earl Ford; chorister, Sister Lillie Burger; assistant chorister, Sister Preston Ford; solicitor, Sister Nelson Kelley; deacon, E. Pantling; publicity agent, Sister Earl Ford; auditors, Brother Colin Hammond and Sister E. Ford.

As a branch we have enjoyed a good portion of the Holy Spirit during the Week of Prayer. It has been a time of rejoicing. The special prayer services were well attended, and everyone responded to the purpose of the meetings. We feel good will be accomplished by the church during a year which promises to be eventful.

The annual election of officers for the Sunday school occurred January 12, the following being selected: Superintendent, Nelson Kelly; assistant superintendent, Charles Skelding; secretary, Donald Duncan; assistant secretary, Eva Johnson; treasurer, Sister Harry Rock; pianist, Mae Johnson; chorister, Sister Alvin Mann; librarian, Billy Burger; assistant librarian, Kenneth Duncan; auditors, Sister Nelson Kelly and William Duncan.

Alliance, Ohio

January 9.—Saints at Alliance are striving earnestly to do their part in carrying out the church program. Beginning October 13 they conducted a series of meetings which lasted five weeks. Elder J. C. McConnaughy, of Barberton, Ohio, was the speaker. Our hearts were thrilled, and old truths took on a new meaning as we listened each night as he presented different phases of the old Jerusalem gospel. Elder McConnaughy stated that he had never been given better support, and praised the members for their loyalty. He preached with the spirit, and all said that never before had they such a clear understanding of the scriptures. The attendance of nonmembers was the finest we have ever had. Two were added by baptism, a man and his wife. Their three little children were blessed, and other splendid people are about ready for baptism, besides the many friends made for the cause. We feel much encouraged.

October 23 and during the meetings, Brother Joseph E. Gordon was injured while at his work on the railroad, and died two days later. This was a severe shock to the little band of Saints, but it did not keep them from attending the services, though their hearts were heavy. His companion was at his bedside at the hospital, and when evening came he urged her to attend services. "Surely," he said, "you are going to church." Elder McConnaughy was the speaker at the funeral, which taxed the funeral parlors to capacity. As a beginning for his remarks, he used words to this effect, "From a close acquaintance with our brother, I would say he has made a splendid record while here. That record has gone on before him, and anything I may say will not alter it; so I shall take the liberty of speaking to the living whose records are still unfinished." From this he proceeded to show the justice and kindness of God in preparing the different degrees of reward that all might receive that which they earn. Elder W. C. Neville, of Canton, sang the songs, "I would be true," "The Lord knows why," and "Even me." The service brought much favorable comment and increased our attendance at the meetings. One man who had worked with Brother Gordon came to us and said, "That sermon was the very thing Mr. Gordon was always trying to tell the men at work." He leaves his wife, Mrs. Leafey Gordon, and four sons: Joseph, Frank, Frederick, and Paul. He held the office of priest and was a quiet, unassuming man, absolutely reliable, and a Christian gentleman.

The Women's Department held a bazaar and bake sale in a downtown bank in December, which netted them a nice sum of money. This department has given to the branch funds ninety-six dollars in the year just passed, besides contributing to other things.

Our pastor is trying to get the members to come up to a higher standard by complying with the full gospel law, that we may be a helpful unit in this great church and ready to accept our full share of responsibility for 1930.

Creston, Iowa

December 29, 1929, Creston Branch held its annual election of officers to preside over branch affairs for 1930. Nearly the total membership was present to participate, and the following were chosen: President, A. D. Blair; clerk, H. G. Maxwell; treasurer, Clarence Reese; Recreation and Department head, Clarence Reese; superintendent of the Women's Department, Sister A. D. Blair; Sunday school superintendent, Alfred Taylor; chorister, Elsie Hammer; publicity agent, Merle Savage.

Cherokee, Iowa

Cherokee Branch is very much alive and entering the year with the best of spirit and interest. The members are busy in the Lord's work, and the departments are advancing.

Rally day was observed the second Sunday in November, and a large crowd attended all services from the prayer hour at 8.30 in the morning to the preaching service at night.

Sunday school now has an enrollment of seventy-five and an average attendance of fifty-four for December. We have an excellent corps of teachers, and the children are showing wonderful interest in the lessons studied, also in the song service, which is an interesting feature of the evening study hour.

The priesthood have been holding meetings every two weeks at 8.30 Sunday morning. Every member is active, and at some of these meetings every member has been present. Prayer and ways and means for looking after the spiritual affairs of the Saints have been the subjects of discussion. Much good has resulted.

Brother Charles White was ordained to the office of teacher, and Dewey Hatch, priest, at the institute held at Pisgah the first of November. They are active in the work and are welcome as members of the branch priesthood.

We now have one high priest, two elders, two priests, two teachers, and two deacons to direct and look after the welfare of God's vineyard in this place. God has recognized his people as a reward for much prayer and faithful attendance at services.

The sacramental service in December was attended by seventy-five Saints, who partook of the emblems and enjoyed a spiritual feast in the prayer and testimony service which followed. Every member of the priesthood was present and assisted in the services.

The sacrifice period was quite generally observed by the Saints, and the bishop's agent reported a good offering. We believe the members found other ways in which they can sacrifice besides giving money and property.

The Christmas program was much enjoyed by a large crowd of Saints and friends. The children gave a program under the direction of Sisters Christiana and Lamere Crippen, with the assistance of the choir, which has organized and works under the direction of Sister Hatch.

Election of officers was held December 18, and the Good Spirit was present to assist in the work, peace and harmony prevailing. About one third of the membership of the branch was present. Pastor A. R. Crippen was again elected branch president; clerk, W. W. Reeder; treasurer, A. Ballantyne; pianist, Julia Miller; superintendent of Women's Department, Laura Kudrle; Sunday school superintendent, A. Ballantyne; superintendent of Recreation, Charles White. The Sunday School Department will have charge of the study hour and entertainment features of the Department of Recreation and Expression. Brothers Crippen and Reeder received the entire vote of those present, which is a testimony of the esteem of the Saints. Brother Crippen has had charge of the work here for thirty years.

Brother Dewey Hatch has been chosen to lead the junior church work, and as soon as arrangements can be made a regular time for their services will be appointed. The first junior church service was held the last Sunday in November in charge of Dewey Hatch. A mixed program was given by the young people, and it was decided to hold church once a month until room can be prepared, so as not to interfere with other services.

Sister Ethel Kelly has great reason to rejoice and praise God for his goodness to her. She was suffering with an internal goiter, which was slowly choking her. The doctors had told her that she would have to undergo an operation.

She asked the prayers of the Saints, and after the elders had administered upon three occasions, she began to improve. Now she is rapidly recovering health, and gladly bears testimony of the blessing she has received.

As counselors for the year, Pastor Crippen has chosen W. W. Reeder, W. W. Leonard, and Albert Haynes. It is planned to arrange the work so that some of the priesthood can go to smaller branches or care for other appointments when weather permits. Brothers Crippen and White called on Mallard Branch not long ago and reported successful meetings and a fine reception from the Saints. They will call on Sac City soon.

Of late local speakers have been A. R. Crippen, W. W. Reeder, J. T. Spence, Albert Haynes, C. C. White, and Dewey Hatch. All have been blessed in their efforts to present the word of God to his people.

A business meeting has been called for January 18 to take up unfinished business and arrange for church improvements which are much needed.

Brother E. L. Edwards, of Pomeroy, was the speaker at the morning service the last Sunday of December. He gave one of the best sermons we have heard for some time. He was also speaker for the afternoon service the same day.

Sacramental service January 5 was attended by a large number of Saints who were earnest in prayer and testimony of God's goodness to them.

During the Week of Prayer an average of twenty Saints met every night in prayer in behalf of the church and the men whom God had chosen to lead his people to Zion. Every member of the priesthood had a place to fill on the program of the week, and each did his part well. The members also were active, and the result was one to be remembered for the fruit it bore. A number of children have learned that they too may take part in God's work, and each night new ones were added to those who arose and bore testimony. The prayers were spiritual, all thanking God for his goodness and asking that he continue to direct his people as he has in the past. The quorums of the church, now in session, were remembered, as were the Presidency and all departments of the work. We received help and strength from the Week of Prayer.

Saints in Cherokee expect to work this year harder than ever that we may not fall by the way. Our determination is voiced in the following: Come let us labor together for the common good of the body.

Calgary, Alberta

January 9.—On December 1 and 2 the Saints of Calgary greatly enjoyed the visit of Apostle J. F. Curtis, who preached some instructive sermons and gave words of encouragement to the branch.

The Christmas concert was held December 19, the juniors taking active part, and the well-loaded tree provided everyone with presents and refreshments.

The Saints are observing the Week of Prayer, which has recently been set aside by the church. Monday, at six o'clock in the evening, the time assigned to us, we held a prayer service, and although it was an inconvenient hour for many to attend, a good number put forth the effort to be present to do their part. God's Spirit was greatly manifested at the meeting, and several were spoken to in prophecy.

The annual business meeting was held January 6, and the following officers were elected: Branch President, J. R. Hockaday, reelected; Sunday school superintendent, W. McLeod; branch secretary, Sister Hockaday; Sunday school secretary, Angus McLeod.

There seems to be a brighter outlook in the branch for the new year than has been had for some time. Most of the Saints are regularly attending all services and are moving forward with renewed interest and zeal. May the efforts of those who seek to promote this great latter-day work and of those who are leaders of all departments be crowned with God's Holy Spirit until his work shall move forward rapidly and Zion shall be established.

Stone Church

Evangelist J. H. N. Jones, of Australia, was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service. "Send out thy light" was his theme. He told of the coming of the Restoration teachings to his homeland, and of its victory over the previous beliefs of his father's household—a victory made possible because of the power which accompanied the new message.

Two fundamentals which Brother Jones laid down as basic reasons for the establishment and the present existence of the church were: (1) The Restoration of priesthood by revelation, and (2) Restoration of the gifts and blessings. The ministry of the word today as always must be accompanied by the same witness and the same power that came with it in the beginning of the Restoration, he said.

The Stone Church Choir, Paul N. Craig directing, sang the anthem, "The radiant morn hath passed away," by Woodward. Accompaniment for the musical service was played by Robert Miller, organist, and George Miller, pianist. Elder J. M. Terry was in charge and was assisted by Patriarch H. O. Smith.

Downstairs at the young people's church service the boys and girls listened to a sermon on "Cliff dwellers" by Elder John Blackmore; the story of the beginning of Ammon's work among the Lamanites, as it is recorded in the Book of Mormon, by Gerald G. Phillips; and excellent music by a girls' chorus, directed by Sister H. C. Burgess. This being Book of Mormon Sunday for the intermediate department, the worship exercises of the Sunday school were given ancient American setting.

Baptism is only the beginning of the working out of our salvation, declared Apostle J. F. Curtis to the Stone Church congregation Sunday evening. If we are good Christians, our baptism must be preceded by faith and repentance. Christ set us the example, being baptized to fulfill all righteousness. If we refuse to comply with this part of his law, we reject the counsel of Christ.

Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge of the service, assisted by Evangelist U. W. Greene. A solo was sung by Sister Pearl Crick, soprano, accompanied at the organ by Robert Miller. The subject "Baptism" was discussed in all the congregations of Independence Sunday evening.

Among the People in Zion

Election returns from the quarterly conference in Independence, held Monday evening, January 13, inform us that the following fifty-eight delegates have been elected to represent the center place on the conference floor in April: H. G. Barto, J. A. Becker, Sister J. A. Becker, T. A. Beck, John Blackmore, C. E. Blair, W. J. Brewer, A. Carmichael, Bertha Constance, F. A. Cool, Sister F. A. Cool, J. F. Curtis, A. K. Dillee, G. W. Eastwood, F. Henry Edwards, Sister F. Henry Edwards, C. F. Ellis, M. A. Etzenhouser, Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, J. A. Gardner, J. A. Gillen, E. J. Gleazer, Sister E. J. Gleazer, George A. Gould, Sister George A. Gould, U. W. Greene, Paul M. Hanson, Sister H. W. Harder, R. J. Lambert, F. M. McDowell, Sister F. M. McDowell, Dorothy Maloney, C. Ed. Miller, Carroll L. Olson, Sister R. S. Salyards, O. W. Sarratt, B. J. Scott, W. M. Self, J. F. Sheehy, Sister J. F. Sheehy, P. A. Sherman, M. H. Siegfried, Sister M. H. Siegfried, Elbert A. Smith, Sister Elbert A. Smith, F. A. Smith, Frederick M. Smith, W. Wallace Smith, Sister W. Wallace Smith, Henry Stahl, Emma Stahl, J. M. Terry, Sister J. M. Terry, J. F. Weston, Ammon White, Sister Ammon White, and D. T. Williams.

Another veteran of the church has passed from earthly life. Brother M. B. Williams, seventy-nine years of age, died last Thursday noon, January 16, from pneumonia with complications. He had lived in Independence six years and until the Saturday preceding his death was employed at the Herald Publishing House. Brother Williams was born at Farmington, Missouri, and has for many years cherished the faith of latter days. He leaves one son, Elder

M. T. Williams; and two daughters, Nellie and Nettie B. Williams, Grandview, Missouri. The funeral was held from the Stone Church Saturday afternoon, Pastor J. F. Sheehy in charge. The sermon was by Evangelist U. W. Greene. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Deacon Norman Cox is custodian at the Stone Church for 1930. It was erroneously reported to the conference in Zion January 13, that Elder H. G. Barto would serve in this capacity.

Liberty Street

Deep snow and subzero weather are usually a formidable pair of obstacles, but they proved totally ineffective in keeping Saints of this district away from a mass prayer meeting held at the church Wednesday evening, January 15. The four group elders, W. A. Stevenson, Walter Curtis, Chester Young, and Ed Fender, were associated with the pastor in conducting this highly successful period of worship. A large representation of young people contributed to the activity and interest of the hour.

A crying need has been filled in obtaining the consent of Brother Fred Friend to act as church chorister. If a ready wit and an ability to sing are indications that one is qualified to direct music, we are sure Brother Friend's efforts will be successful.

That the fire of a deep conviction can not be restrained was proved in the sermon by Bishop Richard Bullard at Liberty Street Church Sunday morning, January 19. If Latter Day Saints are to remain a distinct group, they must be cautious in allying themselves with institutions that do not support Latter Day Saint ideals. The Restoration, about which we are hearing so much this centennial year, is made very real and very vital when considered in connection with the experience of our veteran missionary, Brother Bullard.

The outlines as suggested in Departments' Journal are being followed in the junior church. The theme of the last session was "Sharing." As a concrete illustration of the theme, a group of boys dramatized the story of the Good Samaritan. A girls' quartet composed of Dorothy Peek, Ruth Tignor, Mary Ethel Cool, and Louise Cool, has been formed to regularly furnish music for this service.

The interest in the church basement project has been revived by the introduction of pledge cards, the amount promised to be paid weekly. The idea came from Harry Blake, leader of the church school, and if all the membership are as anxious to see this added classroom completed as Brother Blake, it will be done in the near future.

Elder J. A. Bozarth preached the evening of January 19 on "Baptism."

Walnut Park

The Sunday morning speaker for January 19 was Apostle John F. Garver. He gave an effective discourse on the subject: "Discover for thyself the landmarks that make for life." In answering the question, What are the most significant landmarks and achievements of the past century? he brought out the following points: First, the rediscovery of God; second, the rediscovery of man; third, the discovery of the fact that God seeks continuous communion with man (the principle of continuous revelation); fourth, a divinely appointed ministry; and fifth, the ideal of a new and perfected social order.

The worshipful atmosphere of the service was greatly improved through the contribution of the Walnut Park Choir, under the direction of Sister Minnie Scott Dobson. The theme of the morning anthem was "The people that walked in darkness have seen a great light." It was well rendered and fitted in nicely with Brother Garver's sermon as he pointed out in his opening remarks.

The speaker for the evening was Elder William Bath, a seventy, missionary to Central Oklahoma. His subject was "Baptism: is it essential to salvation?" In answer to this question he gave a logical, well-arranged, and convincing sermon as to the necessity of water baptism. The Saints of Walnut Park appreciated his visit.

During the church school hour a feeling of sorrow was cast over those assembled by the sudden passing away of Brother August G. Hoerning, who was quietly seated in the class which he regularly attended. He had been suffering from heart trouble for several months, so his death was not unexpected. Superintendent Barnhardt remarked that it was quite fitting that his time of passing should find him on the job, doing what he could to promote the work of the church. Since his coming to Independence in January, 1922, he has always been a loyal supporter of the Sunday school and other church activities, and has a good reputation as a Saint, a husband, and father. He was baptized at Eldorado Springs, Missouri, in July, 1921. At the time of his death he lacked only eighteen days of being sixty-one years of age. The funeral was held from the Walnut Park Church Tuesday afternoon, with interment in the Woodlawn Cemetery.

The five groups of the Walnut Park congregation have been fully organized, and are doing well in starting off the new year. Group prayer meetings are held in the homes every Wednesday night, with the exception of the last Wednesday of the month, when a union prayer service is held at the church. The elders in charge of the various groups are as follows: C. K. Green, in charge of Group 27, North; George Bullard, in charge of 27, South; John Taylor, in charge of 28; William T. Gard in charge of 29, West; and P. R. Davis, in charge of 29, East.

Enoch Hill

An excellent chalk talk outlining the steps leading from Zion of today to Zion, the new Jerusalem, was one of the church school attractions Sunday morning, Brother J. E. Martin the speaker. Brother Martin spoke of the work of the church school in effecting Zion, emphasizing the part which is being performed by the women, especially the friendly visitor. The sermon of the morning was by Brother J. E. Martin.

In the afternoon the officers and teachers of the church school met with Pastor O. W. Sarratt and Superintendent Charles Warren for a round table discussion of the functions of the church school. Brother Warren talked on the duties of the teachers, stressing the need for training. It is planned to hold these meetings for the workers once a month.

Elder J. A. Taylor, of Walnut Park, was the preacher in the evening, discoursing on "Baptism." His help was greatly appreciated.

From the general church come two more workers to teach in this district. Elder M. A. Etzenhouser is instructing the Saints in a course, "Economic problems of Zion"; and Sister Myrtle Weber considers with them, "Practical problems of the work of the children." The help of Sister S. A. Thiel and Brother John Blackmore, who recently concluded helpful courses of study here, is much appreciated. The study hour opens at six o'clock on Sunday evening.

Sister O. W. Sarratt, wife of the pastor, who has been home from the Sanitarium for more than a week, is up and about. She is not yet able to attend services.

Spring Branch

Considering the cold weather, attendance at services Sunday was unusually good. Elder D. R. Snively, former pastor, was the eleven o'clock speaker, his sermon proving most instructive.

A problem meeting was held by the adult classes of the church school at 6.30. Many problems facing this branch were discussed.

At eight o'clock Elder D. A. Whiting preached on the theme, "Baptism."

A reception was held for the retired pastor, Brother Snively, and wife at the home of Sister Katschowsky last Friday evening.

The young people's class of the Sunday school will have a pie social at the church this Friday evening. The price of the pies will be fifty cents each, twenty-five cents for pies bought by boys under intermediate age. A program has been arranged. Proceeds from the social will go as a flower fund.

The superintendents of departments were appointed Sunday: Primary, Grace Smith; junior and intermediate, Dorothy Mabbott; adult, Sister J. E. Cleveland.

Gudgell Park

The first sacrament of the new year was well attended, and a good spirit prevailed. The local priesthood were in charge.

January 12 Elder Bozarth spoke in the morning, and Elder E. A. Thomas at night. Both gave splendid sermons, and those who braved the cold to be present were repaid for their effort.

Last Sunday morning Brother C. E. Martin preached on "Putting on the whole armor of God." This was interesting and full of instruction to the Saints. In the evening Elder Glenn Davis gave a splendid discourse on "Baptism."

We are glad to report that the small son of Brother and Sister Floyd Sutherland, who has been very ill, is improving.

Holden Stake

Lees Summit

This branch has been strengthened by the arrival of new members from western Oklahoma who have been looking Zionward for many years, Brother and Sister John T. Smith, two sons, two daughters, and Arthur Smith, a brother to John T. John T. and Arthur Smith hold the priesthood. This family comes well recommended by letters sent from two of the officers of the Western Oklahoma District. We are not disappointed. They are fitting in nicely with branch activities. They came to Lees Summit because they felt their opportunities to assist in the church work are better than in a large branch. If there are others who want to share in service, we urge them to come to Lees Summit. We promise one hundred per cent appreciation. This place lies at the crossroads of a fine system of highways in a rich farming and dairying district. It is only twelve miles from Independence.

Christmas exercises were held Sunday, December 22, and consisted of several plays featuring Bethlehem, the shepherds, and the birth of the Christ-child. There was a tableau, and the plays were interspersed with music contributed by visiting Saints: Gladys Silsby, home for the holidays, and Fields Jones, of Kansas City. At the close Santa Claus distributed presents from a Christmas tree to all. He was the first Santa whose identity we succeeded in keeping a secret throughout the entire distribution.

Early last year the superintendent of the Women's Department gave each of the sisters of the branch a "talent" in the form of a dime, requesting her to so use it that an increase could be reported at the close of the year. The week before Christmas, the women met at the home of the superintendent, Sister C. W. Childres. First, she entertained them with a dinner; then business meeting was had, each member reporting how she had managed her talent and the extent of growth. It was interesting to hear the various plans. Some of the dimes started in the garden and made quite an increase; others in the poultry house, others in the needlebasket, and others in the kitchen. Altogether a substantial sum was realized. Some went to the Auditorium, some to Graceland College, some to the Saints' Home, and some for local church needs. The Women's Department had already been a great financial aid in the repairs, redecorations, and landscaping of the church and grounds. The members are looking forward to the day when their main activities as a group will be in study for the making of better homes and parents. At each weekly meeting the women have a short study, led by Sister Amy Silsby, who with her husband and family moved here last year from Iowa. During the warm weather of summer, when the women of other churches in town stopped work as organizations, our sisters continued weekly meetings.

The Week of Prayer was a great benefit to the branch. A number unable to get to the church at the appointed hours observed the call in their homes. There was a distinct spiritual uplift.

Elder C. B. Woodstock, superintendent of religious education, addressed us a few Sundays before Christmas. His effort was well received.

Knobnoster

Knobnoster group is striving to do its bit towards building up the latter-day work. Of late heavy snows have been a hindrance to all services.

Pastor John T. Nutt has been preaching each Sunday evening, presenting the gospel in its beauty. A number of nonmembers are coming.

The Christmas program, sponsored by Sisters Elsie Nutt and Nellie F. Burgess, was a success. A playlet entitled "Wondrous night" was presented with recitations and songs by the primary department.

A dime social was held at the church December 31, at which a short program was followed by refreshments of sandwiches, pickles, and pie, served to about forty guests in the basement. A short time was given to recreation, after which the Saints were dismissed.

Sisters Don Chick, Sarah Nutt, Brothers Null and Moore, who have been on the sick list, are better. Brother R. E. Burgess, who has been confined to his home for some weeks, is slightly improved. He is threatened with a nervous collapse. Brother Harold Perry is slowly improving but is still unable to sit up. It has been four months since his accident. It will be appreciated if the Saints who read this account will remember him in their prayers.

Lamoni Stake

An Evening Service of Worship

The Brick Church observed the closing day of the Week of Prayer with an evening service of worship. This hour had been designated for Zion and her stakes.

On the platform were the members of the branch presidency, three other members of the ministry, and the College Athenian Male Quartet. A soft piano voluntary by Verna Schaar and an evening hymn, "Now the day is over," opened the service. The pastor, W. E. Prall, read the call issued by the First Presidency, with its enumeration of the deeds of the church that should be remembered in the prayers of the people. The congregation joined in the Lord's prayer and then bowed their heads in silent prayer while the old hymn "I need thee every hour" was played softly. The poem beginning with the familiar lines "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire, uttered or unexpressed," was read by Mrs. Noble Kelly.

This church was established by prayer, said the presiding minister as he continued the service, and at this season of prayer, we should do well to hear again the story of that first prayer in the woods of New York. So following a solo by Iris Butts, "Ye shall know the truth," Sister Callie B. Stebbins, one of the oldest members of Lamoni Branch, read from the first volume of Church History the account of Joseph Smith's first prayer. It was inspiring to hear this mother in Israel read the account with assurance and sincerity.

In two old hymns the congregation joined in a common expression, "Sweet hour of prayer" and "Let us pray for one another." To focus the desires of prayer, four ministers presented some of the major needs for which prayer was asked: 1. An adequate corps of efficient leaders and workers, G. A. Platz; 2. Material means and social advancement, G. L. DeLapp; 3. Stable saintly living, G. N. Briggs; and 4. Inspiration of members and endowment of the ministry, W. E. Prall. These brief talks voiced concisely and fervently these phases of church life in a way that had direct application for Lamoni. The first was given by an instructor of the college and department, head of the church school, and his practical experience in these fields gave point to his talk. Bishop DeLapp read "material means" as basis to the spiritual growth of the church. G. N. Briggs emphasized one of the things he stresses before the college group, consistent Christian living as requisite to development and happiness. W. E. Prall, mindful of the pastoral needs of the community, pictured groups of church members who are at present engaged in activities outside the genius of the church and pleaded for a deepening of spirituality among the members and ministry. As if in response, the quartet sang as a challenge "Jesus calls us."

As a climactic close of the services two brothers came forward to each side of the rostrum, Noble Kelly, of the college, and Willard Moon, of the local membership, and they with Roy Chevillie of the pastorate, standing behind the pulpit, made a trio who offered prayers of supplication for the centennial year, for the council, now in session, for the preparation for the conference, and for the spirit of valiant testimony. The quartet sang a quiet hymn of prayer as the service closed, and the worshippers went out quietly.

Cleveland Women Organize for the Year

January 9 sixteen members of the Women's Department of Cleveland met at the home of Sister Saxton and began activities for the year 1930. Pastor and Sister P. E. Farrow were present. The advisability of the department's using a budget system was discussed, another step in the systematization of affairs of Cleveland Branch.

Sister Maude Mason has been reelected president of the department; secretary-treasurer, Sister E. Campbell; in charge of kitchen and dining room, Sister Foster; publicity agent, Louise Goodwin Bradley.

After music and partaking of a delicious lunch, served by the hostess, Brother Farrow offered prayer, and the members separated with an unusual spirit of unity and a strong determination to make this a banner year for the department.

Springfield, Illinois

January 13.—A Christmas program was given Sunday night, December 22, under the direction of the Boosters and Builders. Following the program, the Sunday school gave a treat to all of the scholars.

Christmas Day, at six o'clock, a pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Brother and Sister William Beeby, when their daughter, Florence, was married to Joseph A. Williams, of Detroit, Michigan. To the strains of Lohengrin's "Wedding March" the members of the bridal party took their places under an arch of holly. The ceremony was read by Elder F. O. Prichett. The attendants were Mrs. John Swalley, niece of the bride, and Thomas Beeby, brother of the bride. The wedding march was played by Ethel Sharp. Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held.

Branch President C. H. Martin and family spent the holidays with Sister Martin's sister, Sister George Nowack and family at Ava, Missouri.

At the beginning of this year we were able to organize a new class in our Sunday school, a class of seven junior girls, and we are planning on increasing the number. We hope that this is a good sign that interest is increasing. During the winter we were forced to unite classes part of the time, due to the few in number.

Central Church

Last Sunday evening a series of evening sermons on the theme "What do we believe?" was started at Central Church. Apostle John F. Garver opened the series, presenting our beliefs about God. This series should be interesting to members as well as nonmembers. At the opening meeting Irving Jenkins played two cello numbers.

Members of this branch who desire to take part in the centennial pageant, "Fulfillment," are asked to fill out the enrollment cards which may be obtained from the usher in charge. Tuesday evening, January 21, those registered and interested met in the church for a reading of the pageant. Scenes were outlined and costume plates displayed by their designer, Aileen Bullard. Members of Kansas City Stake have been assigned Epoch 1, "Christ's Message."

If two capable teachers can ride the street cars from Independence to teach the Wednesday evening class series, at least a hundred Saints should be out to attend the lectures. Be one of the hundred tonight at 7.45.

Central Choir sings over radio K M B C Sunday, January 26, at ten o'clock at night.

There will be an adult baptismal service next Sunday.

Quindaro Church

Pastor H. A. Higgins gave the sermonet at the church school at eleven o'clock January 12. The Week of Prayer ceased with the 7.45 service that evening.

Sister H. A. Higgins has charge of the junior department and is doing a good work in its behalf.

Chelsea Church

In spite of severely cold weather, attendance is good. The Women's Department is sponsoring a supper each Tuesday evening with success.

Recent speakers in Chelsea District have been W. S. Brown, Joseph A. Harrington, Pastor A. W. Sears, Daniel E. Hough, George Mesley, Leonard Lea, and C. A. Skinner.

Chelsea is living in high hopes of a new church building in the not too distant future.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, Cecil Conklin director, sponsored a new year's party at the gymnasium at Wilson's Hall.

The junior choir, Sister Jessie Bell Taylor chorister, is enthusiastic over recent success in the rendition of special music for the church services.

Sister Bessie Largent Jarvis, former Sunday school superintendent, who recently underwent a serious operation at Bethany Hospital, is sufficiently recuperated to return to her home at La Cygne, Kansas.

The O. B. K's, Sister Adeline Taylor in charge, are expressing much enthusiasm in their new movement.

Chelsea has adopted the church school morning service, which does not allow for the usual intermission between Sunday school and the eleven o'clock service. This is doing away with the confusion usually attendant at this interval.

Inasmuch as it is in accordance with the will of the heavenly Father, we hope and pray for the success of the great work of latter days. This year we are looking forward to taking great steps in the consummation of God's purposes.

Fourth Church

January 5 at eight o'clock a number of Saints met for prayer service. It being the beginning of the week set for a world-wide week of prayer we felt it a great privilege to meet and talk with our heavenly Father at that hour. How blessed it is to gather and commune with God when all are united in faith and prayer, for this is the time that God meets with us! The whole morning was occupied in songs that were prayers to God, many of which had been composed by members.

The sacramental service was peaceful, and there was a good spirit present. The church was filled far into the annex. To give room for others the priesthood were seated upon the rostrum, and as they sat there the thought came of the time when all Saints throughout the world shall gather to the land of Zion, and when everyone will love his neighbor as himself.

The young people's entertainment at 6.30 o'clock was enjoyed by many. Their program was a semi-pantomime of "What has been done the last year." Patriarch Ammon White, who witnessed the young people's program, preached to the Saints at 7.45 o'clock. His sermon was a strong warning to the members to be careful not to "borrow from the world" things that will leave a bad influence with the young people, as well as with the older ones. His sermon was forceful and to the point.

January 12 a spiritual program was rendered at the family prayer service. Sister Ollie Worden sang the beautiful song, "Evening prayer." Brother Charles Allen gave a talk on "Friendship, and how to keep it." Brother J. F. Wolfe gave a reading, "Prince of Peace." Then all the mothers in the congregation sang, "Pass me not, O gentle Savior." The congregation bowed in silent prayer for a few moments. Elder E. W. Lloyd prayed especially for a certain family that has suddenly had cause to mourn.

At the eleven o'clock hour, Bishop F. B. Blair talked on finance and how to be fair and square with God.

At the eight o'clock service, Apostle J. A. Gillen spoke on the subject "What constitutes the discipleship of Christ."

Mount Washington Church

At Mount Washington Church Sunday evening, January 26, Patriarch J. T. Gresty will speak about his oratorio, The Course of Time, its conception and composition. This oratorio is to be given at the Centennial General Conference, and all those interested in hearing about it may have the privilege of hearing Brother Gresty at Mount Washington.

Topeka, Kansas

Labor Hall, Floor 3, 621 Jackson Street

January 6.—In harmony with the general program for observance of Graceland College Day, Topeka contributed her talent. The service was in charge of Pastor B. F. Deller. The piano prelude, "The shepherd boy," was by Sister B. F. Deller; song, "Onward, Christian soldiers," by the congregation; invocation, L. M. Pitsenberger; reading, "Graceland's expanding skyline," Fern Weedmark; Graceland song, Dorothy Deller, Bertha Brittain, Verna Conard, Virginia Smith, and Fern Weedmark; song by the congregation; talk, "What Graceland means to the church," L. M. Pitsenberger; talk, "The church of today and tomorrow," Orville Weedmark; sermonet, B. F. Deller; song; closing prayer by Orville Weedmark.

Sacramental service for December was a time looked forward to by the worshipers. Pastor Deller was in charge, assisted by G. G. Phillips and Brother Port.

The regular morning preaching services for December 8 and 15 were occupied by the pastor and Brother Port, the Saints enjoying the initial effort of the latter in Topeka stand.

Bishop's Agent Orville Weedmark and L. M. Pitsenberger, district superintendent of Recreation and Expression, accompanied District President Dave Little to Atchison Sunday, December 8, where he occupied at the morning service. They report a splendid time.

December 20 was the occasion for the Christmas party of the Women's Department at the home of Sister Emma Happe. A delicious one o'clock luncheon was served, with lighted candles as place cards. There was the usual exchange of gifts, which added to the enjoyment of the season's festivities.

The regular monthly junior church service was held the morning of December 22. Piano prelude was by Sister Deller; call to worship, Matthew 2: 11; opening song, "O come, all ye faithful"; prayer; song, "The first Noel," Young Crusaders Class; the Christmas story from Luke 2, Clifford Alfrey and Gerald Hays; song, "O little town of Bethlehem," Ardis Deller and Eleanor Phillips; story, "Jean's gift," Dorothy Deller; exercise, primary class; story, "The boy with the box," Vernon Goodfellow; song, "O Christmas tree," Young Crusaders Class; sermonet, B. F. Deller.

In the evening "The Christmas Messenger" was given. The story was read by Mildred Goodfellow, and the musical numbers were sung by a women's chorus and men's chorus. There were a duet, solo, and two songs by the small children. This was a little different from the usual programs and was well received. After the program a treat and gifts were distributed. Appropriate decorations adorned walls and platform.

The Recreation and Expression Department held a New Year's party at the home of Sister Anna Alfrey. Twenty-nine were in attendance and participated in the games and refreshments.

The annual business meeting was held January 2, and the following officers were elected: Branch president, G. G. Phillips; custodian of funds, F. O. Kelley; branch clerk, Sister Cora Killen; musical director, Sister Emma Happe; librarian, L. M. Pitsenberger; superintendent of Women's Department, Sister Helen Hays; superintendent Sunday school, Orville Weedmark; superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Sister Fern Weedmark; Sister H. C. Pitsenberger was sustained as publicity agent and branch correspondent.

The meetings will be held at 621 Jackson Street, Labor Hall, floor three, while the building at the present meeting place, 1116 Clay Street, is being razed. The first service of the year was held there January 5. This was the monthly sacramental service in charge of the pastor, G. G. Phillips, assisted by B. F. Deller and F. O. Kelley. The opening remarks were by Brother Kelley. Brother Leo Lewis, of Kansas City, also assisted.

In harmony with the special prayer week program, a prayer service was held in the afternoon at three o'clock, and the need and object of the occasion were briefly set forth by F. O. Kelley and G. G. Phillips.

What a Latter Day Saint Girl Should Do

By Ethel Gohun

There are many ways in which a Latter Day Saint girl may do good in the community, but her first duty is to live so that she will gain the respect and friendship of her neighbors and all those with whom she comes in contact. She should be in her place in church service and Sunday school, and other church meetings whenever it is possible, and be willing to help in any way she can. She should be honest, and careful of her conduct, so that no reproach may come upon the church through her. She should remember that her church will be judged by the actions and lives of all its members.

A Latter Day Saint girl should be willing not only to help at church, but to take her place in the social life of the community, doing anything she can for any good cause. She should show that she is for temperance, and be unafraid to stand up for that which she considers right. If her companions use bad language, or tobacco, tactfully she can let them know by her conversation and conduct that those things are not a help to any community.

Especially should she be sure that her habits and ways of living are clean. Each day she should strive to be a Christian example to her associates, and in doing this it is well to remember the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you."

Request for Fasting and Prayer

Sister Jewell Harshman writes from Cory, Colorado: "Sunday, February 2, has been designated as a day for fasting and prayer in behalf of Sister Laura Park, Delta, Colorado, who has been under the doctor's care for many months and whose condition has now become almost hopeless. Delta Branch joins with her family in asking all Saints who see this, to observe the above request by uniting with us in fasting and prayer."

Conference Minutes

NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.—The semiannual district conference convened at Fanning, Kansas, January 11 and 12. Business session was held Saturday at 2.30 p. m. District President Dave Little in charge. Minutes of the previous conference were read and approved. Ministerial reports by W. A. Smith and F. G. Hedrick were accepted. Bishop's Agent and District Treasurer O. E. Weedmark presented an itemized report showing general church collection for the last six months of $1,808.90; district fund on hand, $65.94. The auditing committee reported the above as correct, and both reports were approved. The following reports were approved: Statistical report from Atchison and Fanning; summarized report of F. G. Hedrick, district Sunday school superintendent, and L. M. Pitsenberger, district superintendent of Recreation and Expression. The following bills were allowed and paid by the district treasurer; statistician's bill for district supplies, $3.01; district secretary, postage, $2.19; bishop's agent, postage, $3.29. The advisability of holding a reunion in this district this year was taken from the table of the previous conference, and after informal discussion a motion prevailed that we do not hold a reunion, but urge the Saints to attend the larger reunions wherever they feel free to go. The following nominees were selected as delegates to General Conference: Sister H. C. Pitsenberger, Sister Samuel Twombly, F. G. Hedrick, Sister F. G. Hedrick, Samuel Twombly, W. A. Smith, Sister W. H. Dittmore. Delegates were instructed in case of division to cast a yea and nay vote. A resolution prevailed authorizing the secretary to write to each branch president, asking him to make a summarized report of all ministerial work done in the branch and send said report to the district president, so that the report may be in his hands not later than five days preceding the district conference. After discussion, the advisability of requesting the general church to send a full-time man to preside over the district, as suggested by the chair, was considered not opportune. Invitation from Fanning to hold the next conference at that point was accepted. The following items of business were disposed of before the close of the meeting: Recommendation of district president that Netawaka Branch be officially disorganized (the interest of the church property automatically reverting into the hands of the bishop's agent) prevailed. A report was read by Sister W. H. Dittmore, district superintendent of Women, and accepted. The bill of the district president for expenses was allowed and paid from district fund. Conference adjourned to meet in harmony with previous legislation, time left to district president.

HULMES.—Mary Elizabeth Hulmes, eldest daughter of Matthew and Eva J. Smith, who were members of the original church, was born at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, April 14, 1848. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church at Allegheny, Pennsylvania, October 9, 1864, by Elder W. W. Blair, and was confirmed by Elders W. W. Blair and Josiah W. Ellis. On March 1, 1868, she was united in marriage to Elder Edwin H. Hulmes, who died about one year following. She passed from this life on Sunday, December 29, 1929, at her home in Independence, Missouri, aged 81 years, 8 months, and 15 days, leaving one sister, Mrs. Alice J. Hulmes, and a number of nieces, nephews, and other relatives and many friends. She was for a time in charge of the work of the Department of Women. Conscientious, earnest, faithful in her devotion to the cause of Christ, she honored the church by a life of sincere service. Funeral address by R. S. Salyards, assisted by C. Ed. Miller; interment at Mound Grove Cemetery.

ENLOW.—Mary E. Enlow passed peacefully from earth life at her home in Kansas City, Missouri, January 9, 1930, being nineteen years, five months, and five days old. She was baptized into the fold of Christ in 1922. Surviving are her husband, John E. Enlow, an infant son, Charles E., her mother, Mrs. Rose A. Uptegrove, Lexington, Missouri; two sisters, Mrs. Eva Megonnigal, Lexington; and Mrs. Helen Steele, Kansas City; one brother, Charles H. Binger, Independence, Missouri; and many other relatives and friends. The funeral was held from Second Church, Independence, Missouri, January 11, 1930, in charge of Pastor A. K. Dillee, the sermon being by Elder J. M. Terry. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

WILLOUGHBY.—William P. A. Willoughby was born in Henry County, Tennessee, December 5, 1863. There he spent his boyhood and young manhood. When about nineteen years of age he married Miss Lena Owens, of Buchanan, Tennessee. She died in 1899. July 13, 1902, he married Miss Anna Roberts, also of Buchanan, Tennessee, and to them two sons were born. One son, Lowell, passed away in early childhood, the other, Laverne, survives. Brother Willoughby was baptized at Buchanan, August 14, 1888, and later was ordained a deacon. He died October 25, 1929, while assisting in hauling saw timber to the mill at his home near Brumley, Missouri. The funeral was from the Christian Church in charge of Elder L. M. McFadden, sermon by T. C. Kelley. His wife, three children (two adopted), three brothers, four sisters, other relatives, and many friends mourn his death.

KENNEDY.—Joseph William Kennedy, jr., was born April 5, 1905, in Spokane, Washington, and departed this life December 19, 1929, at his home in Spokane. He was baptized when he was eight years old by Elder E. R. Davis. He was a member of the aviation corps and of the Eagle Lodge. Surviving are his father, Joseph William Kennedy, jr., his mother Edna Kennedy, a brother, Melvin, and sister, Elvira Gretchen. The funeral services were held December 21, 1929, Elder W. W. Wood preaching the sermon. Interment was in Greenwood Cemetery.

KANNADY.—George H. Kannady was born June 16, 1858, at Hollawell, Maine. He was for twelve years a resident of Spokane, Washington. Was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints May 31, 1922, by T. C. Kelley. He married Ida Swiggt, August 18, 1903. Passed from this life December 31, 1929, at Spokane. Surviving are his wife, Ida; two sons, Lester Winfield, Chicago, Illinois; and William Henry, Spokane, Washington; six daughters, Mrs. Lillie Bell Robinson, Northport, Washington; Mrs. Lucy Elizabeth Gross, Milwaukee, Wisconsin; Mrs. Ethel May Bridges, San Pedro, California; Violet, Ida, and Julia Kannady, of Spokane; three grandsons, two granddaughters, and many other relatives and friends. The funeral was held from the church at Spokane, Bert E. Hart in charge, assisted by George Leach. Interment was in Fairmount Cemetery.

Historical Program for February

For Local Branches

Subject: The Angel's Message

It will be remembered that in the Herald for January 1, we began publication of monthly historical programs for the local churches. The program for February is built around the story of the first vision given to Joseph Smith, early in the spring of 1820, and the later one, in September, 1823. These initial revelations were the active beginning of the work of restoration. In the first, Christ was revealed and the Father gave to the young prophet this admonition: "This is my beloved Son; hear ye him." In the second the way was paved for the discovery of the Book of Mormon.

These great events may well be made outstanding in the celebration of our centennial year. To assist local pastors and departmental workers to arrange a program at some time during February to commemorate those experiences, the following outline is offered:

Program

Song: "Blest angels, we greet you with gladness."—Hymnal 190.

Prayer: Thanksgiving for the restoration of the gospel.

Reading: Revelation 14: 6, 7; Doctrine and Covenants 17: 1, 2.

Song: "I saw a mighty angel fly."—Hymnal 161.

Short Address: Story of the visions of 1820 and 1823. (May be illustrated with slides if desired.)

One-act Play: "Joseph meets a minister"; or, "The story of the first vision." Text to this play may be found in Vision for February, under the title, "Conversations."

Song by hidden chorus: "What was witnessed in the heavens?" (See words to this song below.)

Prayer: For the successful spread of the gospel during 1930.

Short sermon: "Hear ye Him," the keynote of our message.

Song: "Israel, awake," Hymnal 177.

Prayer: For the success of the local church in missionary work.

Those who desire slides to use in illustrating the historical address should write to C. Ed. Miller, Graphic Arts Bureau, Auditorium. It is our hope that the Saints will give the arrangement and rendition of these programs their prayerful and careful attention.

Help the Saints to "know their own church." Encourage them to study church history. Invite your friends out to these historical programs—make the program serve your missionary interests.

Take note that volume one of the History of the Church may be obtained from the Herald Publishing House for $2.50; it covers the story of the restoration and organization of the church. A brief history of the church in pamphlet form may be obtained in quantities at the rate of four copies for ten cents. The title is The Latter Day Glory—excellent to distribute in the homes of the people in connection with these programs.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

What Was Witnessed in the Heavens?

Tune: "I will sing of my Redeemer," or "Admonition."

What was witness'd in the heavens?
Why, an angel, earthly bound.
Had he something with him bringing?
Yes—the gospel—joyful sound!
It was to be preach'd in power
Upon earth, the angel said—
To all men, all tongues, and nations,
That upon its face are spread.

Had we not before the gospel?
Yes—had sev'ral taught by men.
Then what is this latter gospel?
'Tis the first one come again.
This was preach'd by Paul and Peter,
And by Jesus Christ the Head;
This we Latter Saints are preaching—
We their footsteps wish to tread.

Where so long had been the gospel?
Did it never fall away?
What became of those neglected?
God is just—that's all we say.
Seek no crop where 'twas not planted,
Nor a day where reigns the night;
Now the sunshine bright is beaming,
Let all creatures see aright.

Legionnaires as Church Workers

It is required of every member of the Tenth Legion, church-wide young people's movement, that he be engaged in some form of church activity. Naturally, therefore, there is represented in the ranks of the Legion nearly every branch or phase of church work that is accessible to young people. A Legionnaire is expected to serve his church, local and general, in the best way he can.

Among the membership of the Tenth Legion there are, according to the report of the executive secretary of January 1, 1930, seventeen members of the priesthood, deacons, priests, and elders. These young men are serving in various ways, two as assistant pastors of branches, others in group and congregational work according to their respective offices.

The field in which the greatest number of Legionnaires are serving is in the teaching and administration of the church school. Thirty-five reported service in this department, including teachers, officers, department superintendents, school superintendents, and some district officers. Along with this group go six others who were teaching classes in the "Religio." Twenty-six were active as officers of classes or similar organizations. Others were leading or supervising in the various phases of children's work, and in boys' and girls' organizations, such as the Boy Scouts and the Orioles.

The field of music was well represented. Nineteen Legionnaires were members of choirs or glee clubs. Five were accompanists, two choristers, two members of orchestras.

Other activities represented were: Church librarian, publicity agent, Laurel Club, Auditorium guiding, teaching at Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences, nurse's training, writing for church publications, Pen and Ink Club, helping at the Campus in Independence during summer. A number of the Legionnaires are students in high schools, colleges, and universities. A great many were participating in other activities in addition to those which they reported to the secretary.

For those who are already engaged in such activities as those named above, it is an easy matter to qualify for membership in the Legion on the "church activity" score; for those who are not, it becomes an opportunity and a stimulus to find a place in which to serve. The great number of different activities which Legionnaires participated in last year shows that there is opportunity for service over a wide range of interest and talent. Nearly everyone who is able and willing may find something to do to express his loyalty and devotion to the cause—to help carry out the program of the church. The Legion calls for such an expression.

The watchword of the Tenth Legion is "Fidelity." And to Legionnaires fidelity means activity!

Are We Dependable Stewards?

The peoples of the world, whatever their race, color, or nationality, fall into three classes: Those who do; those who are always going to do; and those who never do. Or they may simply be classified as the people who are dependable and those who are undependable.

If I were asked to draw up a set of rules by which those who profess to be the children of God should regulate their lives, I would turn to the life of Christ, and among the first of the rules I would make would be: A child of God is dependable. And by a dependable person, I mean one who can be trusted to do what he says he will do when he says he will do it, barring accidents. A dependable person, says Webster, is one who is trustworthy.

In Christ we find the essence of dependability. He inspired people with his trustworthiness. Strangers relied on him. Little children trusted him. His followers believed in his promises because they were born of sincerity. Christ was dependable, and he is our pattern.

Occasions arise in the lives of each one when we learn to give our trust to some person, when experience teaches us that he is a doer and can be relied on. On the other hand, we also learn to cease to depend on certain individuals because they are undependable. It is a pleasing thing to trust some one, knowing he is true to your trust, but it is a sorrowful thing to be unable to trust a brother.

Some of the factors which foster dependability are an ability to organize our lives, that we may control our activities; proper planning; determination to be trustworthy; reluctance to make promises when the possibility is that they can not be kept; and after we have given our word, conscientious endeavor to keep it. Let us cultivate these things. On the other side of the ledger of personality we find listed the causes of independability: Thoughtlessness, absent-mindedness, insufficient planning of work, lack of determination to live up to promises, habitual negligence, and laziness.

Before we as a church can expect to carry out our social and spiritual program in its fullness, before we can hope to establish Zion, talk of it, sing of it, and preach of it as we will, each and every member must prove his dependability. It is our privilege, our stewardship, to be true to our purpose as was Christ. The Savior was grieved when he saw independability among the ranks of his disciples. Is he pleased with us? Are we dependable stewards?

L. B. M.

Life of Sacrifice Brings Gratitude

Recently we received from a brother to whom a letter had been written expressing appreciation for some thirty-two years of service in the ministry a letter in which he writes:

Let me express my sincere appreciation for your kindly letter referring to my thirty-two years in the ministry. It certainly brings a feeling of encouragement to know that one's service is recognized, and notice is taken of it. My work to a large extent has been in the pioneer ranks, and a great deal of that time was spent out on the front opening up new places, often preaching in sod schoolhouses, then driving across the bleak prairies of Kansas and Nebraska with the thermometer reading sometimes as low as 36. But in all this labor to the world and to the church it has been a fruitful field and the harvest has been some of the richest experiences of my life. And I would not give those experiences and their value to me and to some to whom I have administered unto and for, for the wealth of this world or the prestige that political influence could bring, although sometimes the financial hardships have been such, both at home and in my ministerial labor, that we could scarcely purchase a stamp to mail in my report. At times there would come the spirit of rebellion against this financial distress. But I thank my heavenly Father for strength to suppress and repress this influence so that it has not to any great extent militated against my ministerial labor.

Perhaps this man's experience has been not uncommon, and we are disposed to think that many in the ministry who have been as many years as has this brother could write very similarly.

It is always a pleasure to know, however, that one who has spent many years in the service of the church has no feeling of disappointment for the sacrifices made, but is usually possessed by a regret that he could not have made even greater sacrifices, and in the words of another that he has "only one life to spend for the cause."

We appreciate the splendid services rendered by the servants of the church in all parts of the world and can not but feel that this ought to bring to us that on which we can build a superstructure which will carry the work rather rapidly forward.

FREDERICK M. SMITH.

More Frauds Abroad

I have before me a report of a fraud working in the church at Saint Louis, Missouri, claiming to be a son of Calvin H. Rich, now of Salt Lake City. Another has solicited and secured loans from Saints at Henryville, Indiana. Saints will do well to re-read an editorial on page 1562, Herald for December 25, 1929, and protect themselves.

From the Abundance of the Heart

In the news columns of this Herald there is printed a letter written December 27, I am told, and addressed with an offering, to the offices of the Presiding Bishopric of the church. The spirit of such an offering as this is what keeps the cause of the church alive. Many a Saint experiences the spirit which this pair of Saints experienced, but far too many permit the unction to pass without having reached the point where action is taken. This death causes putrefaction and detracts from the quality of the person with whom it occurs. Action such as is recounted in the letter to which reference has been made means continued and increased life and quality in the persons who have acted. It also means added life to the body of which they are members.

The writer sees the fact of growth to be natural to all personalities, and to the church. He reasons that he must grow with the church, and he and his companion take steps to induce growth in themselves, but their incentive is that the nurture may be supplied for the support of the growing body.

I hope every Herald reader may see and consider this letter which accompanies an offering made for the support of the body of Christ in the opening of the Centennial Year.

Prepare Your Part

In another column Brother Gresty, who will direct The Course of Time, his own oratorio and a most wonderful and complete production, urges those who contemplate participation to make the most of the few weeks remaining for practice and mastery of their parts. The Herald joins Brother Gresty in this exhortation. It is an opportunity. It may become one of the most pleasant recollections of the life of man or woman from the East or from the West who shall be privileged to participate in the rendition of The Course of Time.

Without enthusiastic effort this creditable production will not be presented so as to contribute to the centennial celebration. With the necessary energy and application the rendition will enhance the reputation of the church, lend dignity to other branches of church activity, and become a source of satisfaction and joy to those who have devoted time and energy to perfecting their understanding and command of their parts of the work.

Read what Brother Gresty has to say. It will be found in the Department of Miscellany, where many important notices to the church appear from week to week.

Christmas Play Is Annual Event

Each Christmas the primary, junior, and intermediate departments of the Stone Church Sunday School tell anew in song and drama the story of the birth of the Christ-child in the humble, little village of Bethlehem, the visit of the angels to the shepherds on the hillside, and the search of the wise men. And though only a comparative few of the more than five hundred children enrolled in these three departments are privileged each year to take part in the play and the music, they have for two years given a creditable and impressive performance.

From the opening strains of "Joy to the world" the drama moves with dignity and appeal through three scenes. Childish voices singing "Hark, the herald angels sing," "Silent night," and "O come, all ye faithful," softly lighted scenes of Mary and Joseph and the Child, the vigor of the boyish shepherds—all serve on Christmas Eve to sway the congregation of parents and friends, making them appreciate more truly the significance of the birth of the Christ to the world of men and women and children. All are moved to repeat with reverence the words of Mary: "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Savior. . . . For he that is mighty hath done great things; and holy is his name."

The accompanying photograph shows the cast of actors and carol singers which on Christmas Eve of 1929, under the direction of Sister Elizabeth Cutler Jenkins, gave the play before a large audience in the Stone Church. Irving Jenkins directed the music, being assisted by instrumentalists and members of the Stone Church Choir.

MINISTERIAL PROBLEMS

The following paragraphs are taken from The Religion of Experience, by Edward Grubb. I am sure our ministry will find that they contain food for thought, especially when considered in the light of our own philosophy. In this connection we call your attention especially to the closing paragraph.

Conscience

"There is," says Doctor Rufus Jones, "an augustness in Conscience which has made men in all ages name it the Voice of God." "Duty," says James Martineau, "involves the discovery of something higher than ourselves which has claims upon us."

But, if this is so, why is Conscience so uncertain and variable in its witness? Why does it teach a Jew or a Moslem that the eating of pork is wrong, while it tells a Christian that "nothing entering into a man can defile him" morally? Why does it teach a modern Christian that to hold his fellow men in bondage as slaves is absolutely wrong, while to the best of the Greeks of old it made no such deliverance? Conscience, as we have it, is obviously the result of education and training, and of the moral ideas that are current all about us. Are we to suppose that the voice of God is thus variable, and says one thing to men today and another thing tomorrow? To assert this would be to make the way easy for the denial that God ever speaks to men at all.

To answer this difficult question it must be recognized that the word Conscience, like many others, has different meanings. There is, first, the perception of the difference between right and wrong (which we may compare with the difference between beauty and ugliness), along with the conviction that the right is better, that we ought to follow it, and that we stand self-condemned if we follow the worse. Purely for the sake of distinction, let us term this the Rational or Formal Conscience.

Secondly, there is the feeling which Conscience arouses in us that some particular classes of actions are right and others wrong: that I ought not to lie, steal, kill, commit adultery, and so forth. Let us call this, again for the sake of distinction, the Empirical or Material Conscience.

It will be found that it is in the second sense only that Conscience varies from age to age and from people to people—that it is in this sense, and not in the other, that it is the product of education and environment, and of the moral standards of the day. The history of human progress is very largely the story of the development and enlightenment of the Empirical Conscience. All of us, in these days, are absolutely sure that slavery is wrong—many of us are becoming convinced that war, and preparations for war, are equally evil. It is to the further development and enlightenment of the Empirical Conscience that we have chiefly to look as the condition of human progress.

How is this development possible, and what are its conditions? Surely it is only made possible by the presence in men everywhere, throughout all human history, of something higher—Rational Conscience. Why is it that the teachings of the prophets and seers of humanity, many of whom have suffered martyrdom for opposing the conventional morality and customs of their day, have been adopted by their successors, and have helped to form a new Conscience among men? Simply because there was in those who heard the new teaching, even if (in support of the customary standards) they opposed and tried to stifle it, something that compelled them, in spite of their prejudices, to see that it was true and good and must be followed. A deeper Light than was clearly discerned by them was at work within them, developing a new and larger and truer Empirical Conscience.

In this higher sense then—what we have termed the Rational Conscience we may still call Conscience, the Voice of God within us. The great prophets and moral reformers of humanity have believed that God was working through them, revealing himself and his will more clearly than it had been known before. It is the great glory of the Hebrew prophets that they, once for all, united religion with morality, and made men sure that no ceremonies apart from righteousness were of any religious significance. Since they have spoken, no new religion that does not call men to higher and real moral duties has any chance of general acceptance among men.

God Is Not Dumb

God is not dumb, that he should speak no more;
If thou hast wanderings in the wilderness
And find'st not Sinai, 'tis thy soul is poor;
There towers the mountain of the Voice no less,
Which whoso seeks shall find; but he who bends
Intent on manna still, and mortal ends,
Sees it not, neither hears its thundered lore.

Slowly the bible of the race is writ,
And not on paper leaves, nor leaves of stone;
Each age, each kindred, adds a verse to it,
Texts of despair or hope, of joy or moan.
While swings the sea, while mists the mountain shroud,
While thunder's surges burst on cliffs of cloud,
Still at the prophets' feet the nations sit.

—James Russell Lowell.

WORLD'S AFFAIRS

The League's Decennial

The League of Nations has been in operation for ten years. It has become something like the patient uncle of an impressive number of nations, large and small. It is consulted or ignored according to the preferences and needs of its members.

Now that it has been so long with us, though we have haughtily refused to recognize it, we wonder where are all the evils that once roused our patriotic statesmen. All their ardor and jingoistic alarm seem to have been wasted.

Once regarded as a menace to America, it has proved to be harmless, and even beneficial. Americans now go to the other extreme and do it the injustice of regarding it as an impotent organization.

It is true that the various limitation of arms conferences have made proposals far more radical than its early timid attempts, without causing a fraction of the excitement. But it must be recognized that these conferences have been only single events. The League has offered a continuous service. During its life we have seen a growing tendency to settle and even anticipate the approach of trouble by conference rather than by threat of arms. The League has settled no less than twelve major disputes which could have resulted in war. Because they were settled, they did not receive much attention from the papers. The public forgets them as if they were minor incidents. Besides these, the League has settled almost numberless smaller troubles of an international nature.

In addition, the League has performed a large number of services in adjusting civil arrangements between countries. In many of these matters there was no question of diplomatic strain. It was merely a service of removing obstacles and facilitating trade and commerce between countries.

After ten years, the League of Nations must be regarded as a success. Perhaps it has not done all that its sponsors hoped it would do. It has been hampered by limitations imposed on it by fearful statesmen. But it has not done many of the other things that we were afraid it would do.

It seems too bad now that the United States could not have participated in bringing to a realization the plan of one of her greatest men, Woodrow Wilson. We repudiated it while the rest of the world accepted it. There is no call for penitence, but those who defeated the League of Nations in the United States should observe and be humble.

The most significant achievement of the League is its demonstration of an efficacy in international ma-

A Book Review

A New Life of Livingstone

Livingstone, by R. J. Campbell, D. D., New York, Dodd Mead & Company, 1929, 295 pages.

Readers who are interested in the career of David Livingstone may wonder, as they survey the shelf of works about him, why there should be another biography of him now. Several very good reasons occur.

New material has been found. From the archives of the London Missionary Society, search has brought to light new facts bearing on his remarkable career. Some of his private correspondence, never before published, has contributed to the new volume. The well-known "Locked Journal" has been opened and examined. These records give the work an authority that supersedes that of other books.

In his own day Livingstone, like other notable men, was idealized, and the books of the nineteenth century created a myth in which much of the man was lost. His character did not need their "white-wash."

In our day the making of biography has been afflicted by a disease known as "debunking." This sort of writing has gone far in the direction of slander, by emphasizing and even manufacturing stories and implications discrediting people who had formerly been held in high esteem.

Happily, that style of writing has now passed, and the writers of it are themselves discredited. We are coming to a new and better manner. No one can be protected by an attempt to conceal the truth, and those are low minds that seek only filth with which to befoul good names.

The better writers now try to tell the truth as it comes to light, without fear or favor.

Doctor Campbell has shown himself to be an able writer, as well as a careful scholar. His selection for this work, and the generous praise given him by critics in leading periodicals serve, among other evidences, to inspire confidence in his work. He is unbiased, and gives space to valuable corrective fact and testimony.

David Livingstone is the archetype of the modern foreign missionary. His struggle against poverty, his education under enormous difficulties, his uncertain beginning, his gallant adventure into the "Dark Continent," his heroism and love of hu-chinery for the preservation of world peace. Its performance inspires the hope that eventually a system can be produced to govern all the nations and races of the world in a spirit of peace and brotherhood.

Advance Information

Those who are planning to attend the Centennial World Conference of the church, April 6, in Independence, are requested to inform the committee which has charge of the housing accommodations. Whether you wish the committee to make arrangements for you, or you have already made reservations with personal friends, you should acquaint the committee with this information. Address the committee as follows:

The Committee on Reservations and Accommodations, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Those who fail to do this will seriously hinder the work of this committee. It is just as important to know that you have made arrangements for a place to stay as it is for the committee to know that you expect them to make arrangements for you.

All questions about transportation by train should be referred to the Transportation Committee, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and those interested in this matter are especially referred to page 86 in the Saints' Herald for January 22, 1930. It will avoid inconvenience and save money if those coming by train will carefully follow out the instructions of the Transportation Department.

The following is a continuation of advance information regarding the evening programs to be held in the Auditorium. For information given previously, readers should consult the Saints' Herald for January 8 and 15.

Thursday night, April 10, has been given over to the Independence Sanitarium. (The article on page 87 of the Saints' Herald for January 22, states that the Sanitarium would give its program Tuesday night, April 8. This is incorrect. Thursday night, April 10, will be Sanitarium Night.) A program representing the hospital and sanitarium needs of the church will be presented, which will include information about the new sanitarium unit, manity, and finally his death that was like a great sacrificial offering, are matters that have stirred the imagination of the religious world.

The contemplation of such a life can not fail to bring strong conviction to those who earnestly believe in the Christian message.

Doctor Campbell's new biography on Livingstone is probably the best single volume to be had on the subject.

which is being proposed, to enlarge the facilities of the present plant. The evening program will also provide for the graduation exercises of the 1930 class of nurses. The Sanitarium Patroness Society will have an exhibit of materials and supplies contributed by various Sanitarium Patroness units throughout the church. This promises to be of unusual interest. The Sanitarium headquarters will be established in the same space allotted to the Patroness exhibit, and those in charge will be glad to meet members of the church from other branches who are interested in the development of our own institution.

Friday night, April 11, has been assigned to Graceland College. A college program will be offered, and due to the fact that former Graceland students are now located in practically all of the branches of the church, this program should have an unusual appeal. Graceland College will also have an extensive exhibit, and will establish its headquarters in the space allotted for the display of college materials.

The Graceland College Players will give two performances of Jerome K. Jerome's three-act play, The Passing of the Third Floor Back. This will be given Wednesday and Thursday nights, April 9 and 10. This play is one well established in the minds of American people, and is of outstanding merit. The cast is making intensive preparation for these two performances.

Saturday night, April 12, has been assigned to the Department of Music of the church for the purpose of a mass rehearsal of the oratorio, The Course of Time. The main auditorium room will be closed to all except those who participate in the oratorio. Aside from this rehearsal feature, Saturday evening has been planned as an "at home night." Independence people will be requested to exchange guests for the dinner hour and for the evening. Many will probably maintain "open house" and invite conference visitors to their homes for the purpose of getting better acquainted and to enjoy an evening of friendly conversation and a program of music. Others will feel like taking a much-needed rest at the close of the first strenuous week, in preparation for the second Sunday program, which, according to the plans now maturing, will be a full day.

Advance information about the Centennial Conference will be continued in the Saints' Herald, and readers are asked to watch this column and read it carefully, so that they may become informed regarding the conference program.

Coming of Christ

By J. J. Cornish

(References are to Inspired Version of the Bible, and to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.)

The Prophet Moses said:

The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken.—Deuteronomy 18: 15.

This was fulfilled in the coming of the Savior.

Isaiah also said:

For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulders; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace.—Isaiah 9: 6.

The third witness:

But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting.—Micah 5: 2.

This was all fulfilled in the first coming of our Savior.

Christ Came in the Meridian of Time

Wherefore, the Almighty God gave his only begotten Son, as it is written in those scriptures which have been given of him: he suffered temptations but gave no heed unto them; he was crucified, died, and rose again the third day; and ascended into heaven to sit down on the right hand of the Father, that as many as would believe and be baptized, in his holy name, and endure in faith to the end, should be saved: not only those who believed after he came in the meridian of time in the flesh, but all those from the beginning, even as many as were before he came, . . . —Doctrine and Covenants 17: 5; see also 36: 9 and 39: 1.

And the Inspired Version of the Bible says:

And God cursed the earth with a sore curse, and was angry with the wicked, with all the sons of men whom he had made, for they would not hearken unto his voice, nor believe on his only Begotten Son, even him whom he declared should come in the meridian of time; who was prepared from before the foundation of the world.—Genesis 5: 43; see also Genesis 6: 60, 65; 7: 53.

Thus we have three references from the Doctrine and Covenants and four references from the Bible. And Genesis 7: 53 says: "It will be in the days of wickedness and vengeance." And when Jesus came, he said: "For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled."—Luke 21: 21.

With that in view, let us figure:

From Creation to Christ Meridian	4,000 years
From Christ until now (I am dating one year ahead; after seven months it will be correct.)	1,930 years
From now until Christ	70 years
The millennium	1,000 years
Season Satan bound, fire, judgment, war, etc., hence Christ coming in meridian of time	1,000 years
Total	4,000 years

This leaves seventy years before he is due to come and set up his earthly government; or, in other words, set up his heavenly government on earth, to reign a thousand years. But we must not forget that there is more than one coming of Christ, as there was in his first coming. We read:

Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem; behold, thy King cometh unto thee; he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass.—Zechariah 9: 9; Luke 19: 38.

But that coming was about thirty years after he came, the Babe born in Bethlehem.

So must we watch for other times of his coming. Luke says:

For, behold, he cometh in the first watch of the night, and he shall also come in the second watch, and again he shall come in the third watch. And verily I say unto you, He hath already come, as it is written of him; and again when he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, blessed are those servants when he cometh, that he shall find so doing; for the Lord of those servants shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them.—Luke 12: 41-43.

More Facts and Figures

"The Lord created the heavens and earth in six days, and rested on the seventh day from all his work which he created and made"; and since the scriptures show a day with the Lord is as a thousand years with man, we will figure up the time the next Lord's day will commence, as that will be the Sabbath rest, or millennial rest with the Lord and his people. Because of transgression Israel could not enter into God's rest.

The Apostle Paul says: "So I swear in my wrath they shall not enter into my [God's] rest."—Hebrews 3: 11. So we see that they "could not enter in because of unbelief." (Verse 19.) "Let us therefore fear, lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it."—Hebrews 4: 1. Instead of "For unto us was the gospel preached," the Inspired Translation says: "For unto us was the rest preached." The Sabbath rest of a thousand years was preached to ancient Israel as well as to the saints in Paul's time, and it is surely time we Latter Day Saints were preaching it, too.

"There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." "There remaineth therefore a Sabbath rest for the people of God."—Hebrews 4: 10 (American Revised).

Evidently the Lord has reference to the Sabbath of rest during the millennium, for the Lord told us the same thing as early as 1831, as follows:

Behold, now it is called to day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming); for after today cometh the burning: this is speaking after the manner of the Lord; for verily I say, Tomorrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of hosts; and I will not spare any that remaineth in Babylon. Wherefore, if ye believe me, ye will labor while it is called today.—Doctrine and Covenants 64: 5.

"Have faith in God." Let us "believe" him. Tomorrow—the seventh thousand years with us—the seventh day with God—the rest. "There remaineth, therefore, a rest." "A Sabbath rest." The millennium of rest for the people of God.

The Apostle Peter says:

But concerning the coming of the Lord, beloved, I would not have you ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.—2 Peter 3: 8.

David says:

For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night.—Psalms 90: 4.

Cruden says:

Sabbath is also taken for eternal rest and felicity in heaven, where the spirits of just men are made perfect . . . "for they will ever be with the Lord and enjoy an eternal Sabbath." (Hebrews 4: 9.) There remaineth, therefore, a rest for the people of God. In the Greek—"a keeping of the Sabbath."—Cruden.

Thus, then, the next seventh day with the Lord will be the millennium—the seventh thousand years with man.

Shall we now figure again:

From creation to Christ .....	4,000 years.
From Christ until now .....	1,930 years.
From now until Christ .....	70 years.
The millennium .....	1,000 years

Agreeing with meridian.

Some claim that Christ came 4,004 instead of 4,000. This may be. We have no positive proof. If so, figure four years more.

Some may ask why am I doing any figuring at all, when we are not sure that those figures are correct? I am not depending upon figures as they are given to us; but, as Christ did come in the meridian of time, I am justified in finding out, with the best figures available, how near it is, and you may figure how far others have gone astray in figuring that he must come in 1843, 1844, 1872, 1875, 1895, 1905, 1924, 1927, 1930, and 1955. And Samuel Ralston, 2106. Also Professor Young's Sun theory, 3314, together with the thousands both in and out of the church for the last century, who have preached, testified, and prophesied that he is now "even at the door." Also that "millions now living will never die."

But millions then living have died; and millions more then living will not be living when the Savior comes to reign.

What the Lord Said to His Church

Before this church was one year old the Lord told the Prophet that they would not understand much about Christ's coming until the New Testament was translated, and in it the time of the signs of his coming would be made known. Ah! then, no wonder the many failures and mistakes!

And now, behold, I say unto you, it shall not be given unto you to know any further concerning this chapter [Matthew 24] until the New Testament be translated, and in it all these things shall be made known; wherefore I give unto you that you may now translate it, that ye may be prepared for the things to come; . . .—Doctrine and Covenants 45: 11.

If in it all these things shall be made known, you can not obtain that knowledge from any other book but the Inspired Translation of the Bible.

As I Showed It unto My Disciples

Wherefore hearken, and I will reason with you, and I will speak unto you and prophesy, as unto men in days of old; and I will show it plainly, as I showed it unto my disciples, as I stood before them in the flesh, and spake unto them, saying, As ye have asked of me concerning the signs of my coming, . . . I will show you how the day of redemption shall come, and also the restoration of the scattered Israel.—Doctrine and Covenants 45: 2.

Then, to obtain this knowledge we must go to the Inspired Translation, where He will "show it plainly":

And as he sat upon the Mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be which thou hast said concerning the destruction of the temple, and the Jews; and what is the sign of thy coming; and of the end of the world? (or the destruction of the wicked, which is the end of the world.)—Matthew 24: 4.

Now what the Savior told his disciples in that chapter down to the twenty-first verse, are the things concerning the happenings at Jerusalem at that time and generation. The verse reads: "Behold these things I have spoken unto you concerning the Jews." And the like will occur in our time and on to the last generation. A repetition such as "false Christs, and false prophets," "iniquity abound," abomination, concerning the destruction of the temple and the city of Jerusalem, etc. All of this will be repeated in the last generation.

And again, because iniquity shall abound, the love of men shall wax cold; . . .

And again, this gospel . . . shall be preached . . . [We have it—came in 1830—see Revelation 14: 6.]

And again shall the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, be fulfilled. [Next destruction at Jerusalem of city and temple yet to be builded.]

And immediately after the tribulation of those days, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken. Verily I say unto you, this generation, in which these things shall be shown forth, shall not pass away until all I have told you shall be fulfilled.—Matthew 24: 31-35.

All still in the future. Mark says the same! (Mark 13: 37-39.) Do not forget that city and temple, the building of which is still in the future.

Joseph, the Prophet, on Sun, Moon, and Star Signs

Joseph the Martyr saw the falling of the stars November 13, 1833, and of it, in part, he says:

Beautiful and terrific as was the scenery, which might be compared to the falling of figs or fruit when the tree is shaken by a mighty wind, yet, it will not fully compare with the time when the sun will become black like sackcloth of hair, the moon like blood (Revelation 6: 13), and the stars fall to the earth—as these appeared to vanish when they fell behind the trees, or came near the ground.—History of Joseph Smith by himself, Millennial Star, vol. 14, p. 583.

That was not the fulfillment then!

Joseph, the Prophet, agrees with Joel, Jesus, Matthew, Paul, John, Revelation, Luke, J. J. Cornish, and others.

And still we find many in and out of the church preaching that the signs in sun and moon were fulfilled in 1780—one hundred and fifty years ago! Over four generations passed since the darkening of the sun and moon. See Herald, volume 65, pages 106-109. In the same article we read:

Thus the last of the warning signs (the falling of the stars) has been fulfilled, and we are now to apply the parable of the fig tree: "Know that he is near, even at the door."

And yet the Lord tells us plainly that the sun, moon, and star signs are all to come to pass, not that they have passed in 1780 and 1833, but "the sun shall be," etc. All in harmony with Jesus' statements in Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, etc.

Do Not Know When the Time Is

I am sorry to think that many of our people who are supposed to be led by the Spirit, have followed along in line with men of the churches of the world to tell about the year when they think our Lord will come, and like them have turned to Daniel and John the Revelator for the principal proofs of their arguments which without the proper key, and depending upon their own faulty interpretation are proved to be the two most unreliable, superficial, and questionable books in the whole Bible. And yet, no doubt, those same books will, when the time of their unfolding shall come, give us the most profound and intellectual understanding of the future. My proof for this is as follows:

Daniel was commanded to shut up the book "until the time of the end," "for at the time of the end shall the vision be." "Wherefore shut thou up the vision; for it shall be for many days." "And I was astonished at the vision, but none understood it." (Daniel 8: 17, 26, 27.)

Again: "For yet the vision is for many days." (Daniel 10: 14.)

Books Sealed till the End

"But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words and seal the book, even to the time of the end." "And I heard, but I understood not." "Go thy way, Daniel; for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end," etc. (Daniel 12: 4, 9, 13.)

Some say when the gospel came was the time of the end. I say the gospel restoration was merely the beginning of the end.

But many who figure and finally settle on a time for the Lord to come are very ready to tell us that "the wise (?) shall understand" (Daniel 12: 10), then go on to tell us when the time will be, but fail every time! The wise Daniel who had those visions did not know himself. Neither do we.

As for the revelations of Saint John, the Book of Mormon plainly says:

Come unto me, O ye Gentiles, and I will show unto you the greater things, the knowledge which is hid up because of unbelief. Come unto me, O ye house of Israel, and it shall be made manifest unto you how great things the Father hath laid up for you, from the foundation of the world; and it hath not come unto you, because of unbelief. Behold, when ye shall rend the veil of unbelief which doth cause you to remain in your awful state of wickedness and hardness of heart, and blindness of mind, then shall the great and marvelous things which have been hid up from the foundation of the world from you; . . . And then shall my revelations which I have caused to be written by my servant John, be unfolded in the eyes of all the people.—Ether 1: 109, 113 (Authorized Edition) Doctrine and Covenants 90: 1.

So, when we read Daniel or Revelation, anything that looks clear to our minds and is in harmony with other writers of the Bible, we may safely teach, but that which we read which seems mysterious, and upon which no other prophet or writer speaks, let it alone. "Because it is yet for a time appointed."

When his work was accomplished, Jesus returned to the Father where he was before, leaving a promise to his dear disciples, "I will come again." (John 14: 2, 18; Acts 1: 1; 1 Thessalonians 4: 16, 17.)

Eleven months after this church was organized the Lord urged us to "hearken" and "listen" to his word upon this very subject. "Hearken, O ye people of my church, to whom the kingdom has been given, hearken ye." "And again I say hearken unto my voice." "Hearken, O ye people of my church, and ye elders, listen together." How can the Almighty call louder and make the request more urgent from his written word? But we were not sufficiently willing to "hearlisten," or "listen," and study. Therefore, we were left in the dark. See how plainly he says he will show it unto us:

Wherefore hearlisten, and I will reason with you, and I will speak unto you and prophesy, as unto men in days of old; and I will show it plainly, as I showed it unto my disciples, as I stood before them in the flesh, and spake unto them, saying, As ye have asked of me concerning the signs of my coming, . . . I will show you how the day of redemption shall come, and also the restoration of the scattered Israel. —Doctrine and Covenants 45: 2.

As a people we must look at predictions of the prophets relative to the second coming of Christ in a way Israel should have looked at them in the first coming, or we may make similar mistakes.

For the second coming we read:

I will come again and receive you unto myself. (John 14: 3-28.) Come as a thief. (1 Thessalonians 5: 2-4; 2 Peter 3: 10.) Come to temple. (Malachi 3: 1.) So come as ye see him go. (Acts 1: 11.) Behold I come quickly. (Revelation 22: 7, 20.)

Of his second coming we read:

I will come again. (John 14: 3.) Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven. (Acts 1: 11.) But again: Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints. (Jude 14.)

This will likely be at another time from "come as ye see him go."

When he comes to Zion will not be the time he stands upon the "mighty ocean," or upon the Mount of Olives. (Doctrine and Covenants 108: 5.)

No one is justified in saying Christ is near, "even at the door," until he sees angels "gathering the remainder of them, one from the bed, the other from the grinding," etc. (Luke 17: 34-38; Mark 13: 46.)

Now, everything the Savior has mentioned from the fifth to the middle of the twenty-fourth verses of Luke 21 refers to the Jews and Jerusalem at the time he was with them and on until their destruction. Do not bring any of those happenings down to our time and generation.

Now take your pen and make a little cross in the middle of the twenty-fourth verse after the period at the end of the word Jerusalem, and what He said from the center of that verse belongs to us in our time and on to the last generation.

And then his disciples asked him, saying, Master, tell us concerning thy coming.—Verse 24.

Now the answer he made is for us, and not to them at Jerusalem at all, nor to that generation, but to us and on to the last generation preceding the millennium.

And he answered them and said, In the generation in which the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled, there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity, like the sea and the waves roaring. The earth also shall be troubled, and the waters of the great deep.—Verse 25.

This the Savior repeats with emphasis:

Verily I say unto you, This generation, the generation when the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled, shall not pass away till all be fulfilled.—Verse 32.

Now can not you see that the signs in the sun, moon, and stars are not to take place until the times of the Gentiles are fulfilled? and their times are not fulfilled while they hold control over Palestine, or the Jews; neither until the Jews have built their city and temple in the Holy Land—the land of their fathers? (Revelation 11: 1, 2.)

To repeat, Jesus said:

Verily I say unto you, this generation, the generation when the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled, shall not pass away until all be fulfilled.—Luke 21: 32.

Oh, how can it be plainer?

There is a difference between the time of the Gentiles and the times of the Gentiles.

There was a time (1830) when the gospel came to the Gentiles, and many thousands obeyed it, and have passed over to their reward, and the time is now when hundreds of thousands are rejoicing in the angel's message; but the time will come when "a light shall break forth among them that sit in darkness, and it shall be the fullness of my gospel; but they receive it not, for they perceive not the light, and they turn their hearts from me because of the precepts of men; and in that generation shall the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." (Doctrine and Covenants 45: 4.)

That generation has not yet come. It will not come until after the sun, moon, and stars signs, when men's hearts fail them for fear. (See Doctrine and Covenants 45: 4; Luke 21: 26.)

To this agree the words of Paul:

For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits, that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fullness of the Gentiles be come in.—Romans 11: 25.

Times and fullness agree.

Two More Prophets Yet to Come

And that blindness will remain until two prophets stand up in Jerusalem and prophesy for three years and a half. (See Revelation 11: 3-12.)

At that time the Gentiles will still tread down the city.

. . . for it is given unto the Gentiles; and the holy city shall they tread under foot forty and two months.—Revelation 11: 2.

Sure! Those prophets will not attempt to deliver their message until there is a sufficient number gathered to receive or reject that message. Their message will likely be the gospel of peace and salvation, with prophetic warnings relative to their destruction if they do not repent and accept the same.

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, until he revealeth the secret unto his servants the prophets.—Amos 3:7.

The times of the Gentiles are not up, then, are they? And the sun, moon, and star signs have not taken place, for that comes after the treading down. They must build that temple and city before it can possibly be trodden down, and after the treading down and destruction comes, the signs will appear in the sun and the moon and the stars. (See Luke 21: 23; Matthew 24: 33, 34; Mark 13: 33, 38.)

After all that has taken place, those who are then living will be in the last generation.

End of the World

The end of the world does not take place at the coming of Christ to reign a thousand years, but after that reign is ended, Satan will be let out of his bondage with all the hosts of hell, and they will go out to deceive the world once more. So the end will not be then! The Lord says:

And again, verily, verily I say unto you, that when the thousand years are ended, and men again begin to deny their God, then will I spare the earth but for a little season; and the end shall come, and the heaven and the earth shall be consumed, and pass away, and there shall be a new heaven and a new earth; . . . and all the fullness thereof, both men and beasts, the fowls of the air, and the fishes of the sea; and not one hair, neither mote, shall be lost, for it is the workmanship of mine hand.—Doctrine and Covenants 28:6.

. . . and Satan shall be bound, that old serpent, who is called the Devil, and shall not be loosed for the space of a thousand years. And then he shall be loosed for a little season, that he may gather together his armies; and Michael, the seventh angel, even the archangel, shall gather together his armies, even the hosts of heaven. And the Devil shall gather together his armies, even the hosts of hell, and shall come up to battle against Michael and his armies: and then cometh the battle of the great God! And the Devil and his armies shall be cast away into their own place, that they shall not have power over the saints any more at all; for Michael shall fight their battles, and shall overcome him who seeketh the throne of him who sitteth upon the throne, even the Lamb. This is the glory of God and the sanctified; and they shall not any more see death.—Doctrine and Covenants 85:35.

Let us then follow the admonition of the Lord:

Watch ye therefore, and pray always, and keep my commandments, that ye may be counted worthy to escape all these things which shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man when he shall come clothed in the glory of his Father.—Luke 21:36.

A thread of beauty there,
And blend them well together
With a shuttle made of prayer.

Food as Related to Efficiency.—Chapter 2

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

Balanced Diets

The most important thing is to learn how to eat. That will teach you how to live long, how to keep thin, or how to get fat. A man fifty years old who is fifty pounds overweight lessens his chance of living by fifty per cent. People will sit up and take notice if they have to begin to measure their fatness in terms of shortened life.

There is a crying need for more knowledge of food values by the public. We need university chairs for the study of nutrition, for the diffusion of knowledge of the vitamins, for instance, and the results of the labors of biochemists: for right foods prevent disease. They not only supply warmth and energy, but produce resistance to infection and the diseases of civilization due to wrong habits of eating, such as constipation, rickets, appendicitis, and indigestion. It is a fact that faulty diet is responsible for the spread of tuberculosis, cancer, and diabetes, though not as an immediate effect.

The vitamin A, found especially in cod liver oil, egg yolk, butter, and the green leaf vegetables or "wholesome herbs," also in fruit, provide resistance to disease. Vitamin B is a nerve tonic and is found in cereals, peas, beans, nuts, liver, etc. The anti-scurvy vitamin C is abundant in oranges, lemons, raw greens, and the like.

Food for the Young

Infants and young children are not provided with organs to digest the same quality or the same quantity of food as adults. When they are fed from the common family table, as is often the case among the poor and ignorant, it is not strange that only the fittest survive. Facts should be known as to the thousands of children who are annually killed by improper food. Food for the young is, therefore, not necessarily appropriate for the mature, and vice versa.

The object of food is the production of heat and vital force. It is quite analogous to the production of heat and force in an engine by means of fuel. Food is not required to the same extent in summer as in winter. In a cold climate the activities of the body are greater than in a warm one; more heat is required and is developed, and hence more food is necessary. It is also necessary to select for cold weather those varieties of food which have great heat-producing capacity and which would be quite inappropriate for warm weather. Hence diet must be modified by climate as well as by age.

Food Demand Varies with Vocation

The work which one must do should modify the diet: the lumberman, the sailor, the miner, require different food and more of it than the shopkeeper, the clerk, the teacher, the physician, or the lawyer. Both the quantity and the quality of the food must also be regulated by the physical condition in a given case. A robust person requires more food than a sick one, and he can eat, without fear of harm or indigestion, many forms of food which the stomach of the sick person would be unable to digest or would reject promptly.

Distributing the Work of Digestion

The stomach digests only albuminoid substances (lean meat, eggs, milk, and certain portions of cereals). The intestines, aided by the liver and pancreas, digest only the hydrocarbons (oils, fats, butter, potatoes, rice, and the greater portion of many vegetables). While it might be possible for a person to live upon food which was digested only by the stomach, or only by the intestines, at least for some time, it would be, to say the least, an unfair distribution of work to impose all upon the stomach or all upon the intestines.

The obvious conclusion would be that a diet should be composed of both albuminoids and hydrocarbons, and this conclusion is fully borne out as a result of physiological experiments. A mixed diet, eggs, milk, fruit, and vegetables of different kinds, is not only the most rational, but the one which is best adapted to secure health and the highest results in the direction of physical and mental work.

The stomach glands produce about three quarts of gastric juice daily. It is mostly water, but it contains a small amount of a sour substance called hydrochloric acid, and of a white substance called pepsin. These two substances eat away or dissolve albumin, so that it becomes soft and finally fully dissolves in the water of the gastric juice. Digested albumin is called peptone.

Processes of Digestion

The stomach has no effect upon starch or fat. Only a small amount of the albumin is really changed to peptone by the gastric juice, for every few moments the opening leading from the stomach permits a small quantity of food to pass out. So food does not remain with the gastric juice long enough to be fully digested. The mixture of food and gastric juice leaving the stomach is called chyme.

When food leaves the stomach it passes into a coil of a thin muscular tube called the intestine. The intestine is about twenty-five feet in length. Its upper four fifths is about an inch in diameter, while the lower one fifth is about twice this size. Both parts slowly squeeze the food along, mixing it with three fluids which act upon the food and change it to a liquid. In the mucous membrane of the intestine are small tubelike glands. They pour out a liquid called intestinal juice. The intestinal juice is small in quantity and does not have much effect upon the food. Behind the stomach is a gland called the pancreas or sweetbread. Each day it pours into the intestine about a quart of a liquid called the pancreatic juice. This juice does most of the work of digesting food. It acts upon the albumin left by the stomach.

Mixed Diet Is Normal

Vegetarianism, a term that is very much misunderstood, and includes vegetables, fruits, nuts, etc., exclusive of meat, is desirable if modified by the use of milk and eggs. The fact is, the human intestine, being of greater length than that of the carnivorous animals, but shorter than that of the herbivorous, is adapted to a mixed diet. Recent studies in anæmia indicate the importance of liver as a medicine to assist in building up a rich blood supply. Dietary theories are followed with enthusiasm by many people. There is, however, no magic short-cut to cure any infectious disease by diet alone, or to get rid of surplus weight thereby.

Important Foods

Milk is first in importance, for it is not only a product which is derived from all mammals, but it is a universal article of food with the entire human race. It is the typical food substance, because it contains water, which is the most essential element in the body; casein, which is the albuminoid element; and fat and sugar, which are the hydrocarbons. These essential elements are always found in milk, no matter whether it be obtained from human beings or from any other variety of mammals.

"All grain is good for the food of man," and perhaps real wheat is next in importance to milk, and has often been termed, in the form of bread, the staff of life. It contains albumen, starch, and mineral substances, and is therefore perfectly adapted to sustain life. One could live indefinitely on whole-wheat bread and water, even though such a diet might be very monotonous.

Eggs consist largely of albumen and are not suited as an article of exclusive diet. They are important and almost indispensable as an element in diet, but the food of the chicken should be sanitary. It should be remembered that eggs cooked are more difficult to digest than eggs uncooked. The error is often made of giving cooked eggs to the sick, or to those who are beginning to convalesce from severe illness. At such a time the gastric juice is deficient in quality and quantity, as a rule, and is unable to attack this concentrated mass of albumen successfully.

Meat Not Indispensable

Meat, or muscular tissue, and fish are considered by some as quite essential as an article of diet. They are not indispensable, for many human beings do not use them and thrive without them. Recent scientific investigators have reached the conclusion that those who insist upon flesh foods should partake of them "sparingly" and only in the extreme winter months. (See Doctrine and Covenants 86:2.) Lean meat is classed among the albuminoids; animal fat is, of course, a hydrocarbon. The digestibility of different kinds of meat varies greatly. Beef, mutton, and the white meat of fowls are the most readily digested and assimilated. Pork, the dark meat of fowls, game, and fish are less readily digested. Soups, when prepared from both fat and lean meats, are naturally less easily digested than those which are made from lean meat alone.

Rice and potatoes in the whole and natural state are the principal articles of diet of the majority of human beings, and its results in vital force, especially among the myriads in China, India, and the tropics, are indeed remarkable. In Ireland and in South American countries in which the potato is indigenous, this substance, though almost exclusively starch, constitutes the bulk of food. The results, especially in Ireland, often show the disadvantages of so exclusive a diet.

Peas and beans contain a large portion of starch, but they also contain considerable vegetable albumen, which gives them great value as food.

The nutritive value of some of the fruits and nuts (for example, coconuts and bananas), though they consist mostly of starch and sugar, is very great. Many other fruits and vegetables consist very largely of water, with some starch, fat, sugar, and very palatable vegetable acids. They give variety to the diet, are often mildly laxative to the bowels, and therefore play a very prominent part in the mixed diet. The fruit of the olive tree is a conspicuous example.

Eat Too Often and Too Much

Most of us eat too much, for we eat three meals a day. There seems to be no more logic for this than to eat two, four, or five meals, but for some reason or other three meals is the stated number. If you eat a good breakfast and a good meal in the evening, there is no reason why the midday meal of the brain worker should be more than a simple lunch, intended to stay the pangs of hunger rather than to furnish nourishment. The actual requirements of the body demand eighteen or twenty ounces of food a day, yet the average person takes two pounds or more. Every ounce of unnecessary food, particularly of the fat-producing foods, is likely to be stored up in the body in surplus fat, and in any case, to impose extra labor upon the digestive tract and other organs of the body.

Garden Foods Are Desirable

Foods as they come to us from the garden are invariably good. The trouble begins when we try to improve on nature. The average chef takes perfect foods and cremates them with over-cooking, or embalms them with condiments. Doctor Wiley places cabbage at the head of the list of health-giving vegetables. It probably deserves a high place for health value until the chef lays his hands on it. Cabbage salad (cold slaw) is served in most eating places.

Methods of Cooking

When vegetables are cooked in water, as they usually are, the vitamin and mineral elements leave the body of the vegetable and go into the water in which the vegetable is submerged. What happens to this water, which contains the calcium, iron, and vitamins—the very things you are eating the vegetables for? You might not have realized it, but they are the elements most needed for health and long life. The cooking water is thrown into the sink. It is a matter of snatching the life-giving elements from our blood streams and feeding them to the fish. Although vegetables can be properly prepared from the health and nutritional standpoint in ordinary kitchen utensils, you will find a newly patented waterless cooker that brings fresh vegetable cookery down to a science. The operation is most simple—just a matter of thoroughly washing the vegetables and placing them on metal trays in the cooker. Nothing can be lost, since they are not cooked in water. You get the same amount of mineral salts that you would get if you ate the same vegetables in the form of raw salads. Of course, any and all methods of cooking will destroy vitamin C, and in that respect it is wise for everyone to eat some raw food daily. One of the best forms of raw food is shredded cabbage. It is made delightfully palatable with lemon juice and olive oil. Cabbage forms the base, but there is added to it raw grated carrots, celery, green peppers, and other succulent greens in season.

Vegetable Diet Neglected

Most people do not eat enough vegetables. At least three fresh vegetables should be eaten every day, fresh meaning, not canned, but in "the season thereof." Fresh vegetables furnish food elements essential to the body, besides the bulk, which is important. They contain vitamins, which are food elements essential to healthy bodies, but as vitamins may be destroyed by too much washing or cooking of vegetables, they should be eaten every day. In the spring, especially, it is well to lead more or less vegetarian lives.

Fruits, lettuce, celery, are among important raw foods to eat. Money spent on spinach is well invested, for in addition to vitamins you get iron. Cabbage, especially raw as in salads, is valuable. Even the homely turnip and carrot are of definite usefulness.

"Word of Wisdom" Advice on Meat Eating

The essential foods which are generally deficient in the diet provided for the growing child are whole wheat bread, fresh fruit, uncooked green stuff, and green vegetables. Beware of too much meat at any season. Animal proteins in excess, especially those of meat and fish, readily lead to putrefaction in the intestines, and to the formation of virulent toxins which are literally "blood poisons." Milk, eggs, oatmeal, cheese, and vegetable proteins should supply a larger proportion of the nitrogenous elements needed for the body in the spring. They not only are more wholesome, but are less expensive than meat, which should be used "sparingly," whether by adults or children, and "only in times of winter, or of cold or famine."

The chief vegetable proteids are vegetable albumin, vegetable casein or legumin, and gluten. The latter predominates in the cereals, and the legumin is principally found in pulses. These proteids are less rich in nitrogen than the corresponding animal albuminates. Many vegetables contain tough cellulose, and at best not over fifty per cent of this material is digested and assimilated in man, although the lower animals derive much more nutriment from it. Cellulose added to meat interferes with its complete digestion.

It is essential for the laboring man to have sufficient nitrogenous substances. He may employ for this purpose milk, cheese, or eggs. Among vegetable foods, oatmeal and beans will furnish him with the largest available proportion of nitrogenous material. Vegetables, except those which are really seeds, such as those of the leguminous or pulse tribe, contain but little fat. Certain vegetables are classed as "green vegetables," meaning the lighter kinds of vegetables which contain chlorophyll and considerable earthly salts and comparatively little starch, like spinach and lettuce, in distinction from heavy vegetables which contain much starch, such as potatoes, beans, etc. The former term is used to describe fresh garden vegetables of all kinds in distinction from those which, like potatoes or onions, may be kept for some days or weeks without spoiling. The name is, however, too vague for accurate description.

For underweight, the diet should consist of bread, butter, cereals, cream, milk, cheese, potatoes, and all kinds of vegetables, fruits, bananas, especially oils and lemon juice in place of the usual salad dressings. The meal might be finished with cakes, syrup, or honey. Sweets should not be taken at the beginning of the meal. Natural sweets are better than candy without mineral salts and vitamins. Molasses, old style, and the darker sugars are more wholesome than the modern refined sugars.

Diet for Those of Overweight

For overweight, it means cutting down on the list offered above. The use of leafy vegetables becomes doubly important, as these vegetables furnish the vitamin A, that is found in butter and cream. Skim milk or buttermilk is serviceable. All the foods of high caloric value will increase the weight if over-eaten. Fats are of extremely high caloric value. It is also necessary to drink plenty of water. Water will operate the proper circulatory system. Also the proper amount of exercise must be taken.

One number of The Practitioner, one of the oldest, most authoritative medical journals of Great Britain, is given up entirely to a study of dietetics, vitamins, and food reform, at the hands of ten of the most prominent medical men of that country. Sir Arbuthnot Lane, famous surgeon and scholar, has recently become editor in charge of this publication, and it is significant that so distinguished a man, after long years of operations and more operations, should be now turning his attention definitely toward prevention of many operable diseases through education of the people in how to select and use such foods as will, from childhood onwards, promote growth of body, maintain health, and insure a hale old age.

Is it not the truth that the most simple, practicable, and fundamental findings in modern dietetics are utterly flouted by most of us, every day of our lives? Depleted, overcooked vegetables, vitaminless white breads with destroying artificial sugars, and iodineless "dead" foods from tins, make up far too large a part of our daily fare. Mankind, especially civilized mankind, has habits of feeding which beyond all dispute shorten life, rendering its latter half, very often, a vale of misery. Yet we are apt to ignore the warnings of those who would tell us how to eat and what to eat. We keep right on heading for the operating table, years of ill health, or the early grave.

Malnutrition a Large Problem

It has been shown beyond all possibility of dispute that malnutrition of children is much more widespread than was ever realized, and that more of it exists among children of the prosperous than among those of poorer people. The latter may be slightly underfed, but they are restricted to more simple, wholesome foods, their worst deficiency today coming undoubtedly from the far too great consumption of white breads exclusively, for, with the poor, bread is still the "staff of life." The children of the prosperous class, on the other hand, are oftener overfed and pampered. Their malnutrition comes from wrong feeding. They get too much spending money. They eat between meals, and their food is mostly trash. They lose their appetites for wholesome foods, and these habits, formed in childhood, bring disturbances that are likely to stick to them in their later years.

Possible Results of Well-chosen Diet

The science of food has today reached a standard opening up almost unlimited possibilities. In the nineteenth century, German investigators into the metabolism of the human body enunciated the doctrine of caloric dietetics which has since prevailed among scientists. Nowadays almost everyone knows something about calories and food values. This doctrine concerns our internal combustion engines just as petrol concerns the motorist. It is all right, so far as it goes. But with the discovery of vitamins, we have made another immense step forward, and with the perception of the relation of iodine to the thyroid gland there has come a further widening of knowledge concerning other mineral and organic ingredients of diet, including by no means the vitamins alone. So that today there is some ground for hope that in the future we may be able to control and regulate processes of growth and adaptation, as well as resistance to disease, and to maintain physical and mental balances as never before.

When the average man is told that he has abused his body, that his body is full of poisonous material, he will tell you that his "lungs can digest meat"; that his insides are as clean as yours; that he has a bowel movement almost every day, etc. Scurvy was prevalent in the old days, due to the fact that its cause, lack of fresh foods, was unknown. Sailors lived on preserved foods, and when their supply of that subtle substance, vitamin C, which was stored in their bodies, was exhausted, they developed scurvy.

In the Middle Ages epidemics of scurvy were quite prevalent in Europe, due, no doubt, to the fact that green vegetables were very little used during that period. The introduction of potatoes, in later days, helped put an end to such epidemics in Europe. Potatoes, as well as tomatoes, supply vitamin C, even when cooked, but cooking destroys this vital property in other foods.

Condiments Are Harmful

We use mustard, chili, horse-radish, pepper sauces, and many other condiments, any one of which, if applied to the skin in concentrated form, will produce inflammation. When these condiments are used, they come in contact with every cell and fiber in the body through absorption into the blood stream. They are destructive to every organ in the body, and their continued use will result in hardening of the arteries.

Lemon juice should be used in place of vinegar, for all purposes. It has a superior flavor, besides having great medicinal value. Commercial mayonnaise and ketchup, as well as many varieties of pickles, contain vinegar, and for that reason should be banished from the diet because of vinegar being preservative and almost wholly indigestible. Anyone who thinks he is going to improve his health by eating salads doused in vinegar has made a serious mistake. The ideal way to dress a salad is with lemon juice and salad oil.

Animal food may be largely dispensed with, to advantage of health and well-being. Pork products are especially indigestible, as are fried foods, doughnuts, pastry, etc. Increased vegetable eating reduces constipation and reduces fermentation of food in the bowels. Certain native races avoid eating animal food of all sorts, and they are certainly robust and athletic to a greater degree than are the bulk of the meat eaters.

Constipation a Real Malady

In connection with diet we come to that widespread malady, constipation. You will readily see how hopelessly foolish and positively injurious it is to expect to cure constipation with cathartics. These, long continued, irritate the stomach and often the whole length of the alimentary canal. The label on the top of a box of pills used to read, "Good in all cases; dose from two to twenty." This tells in brief the indiscriminate way in which patent medicines are taken by those who believe if they have a daily evacuation they are on the road to health, without reference to the means employed. In many cases there are no feces in the bowels, and those remedies merely stimulate a watery exudation. Often the patient is feeble and could not afford this drain. Those who digest but little can not supply the material for a daily evacuation without a sense of prostration. Many persons consider themselves bilious, and medicate accordingly, when their sallow skin is the result of poor digestion, and poor blood induced by nervous exhaustion. The first step toward curing constipation is to give due attention to the stomach and liver.

Voluntary respiratory exercises are also useful in cases of constipation. Friction, deep, slow, steady—across the region of the stomach and liver, given by an assistant, the patient lying on the back, is excellent when the upper section of the digestive organs is torpid; or, if the lower bowels are sluggish, a circular motion corresponding to the direction of the colon is serviceable; also kneading, deep and strong, though not with sufficient pressure to give pain or even a sense of discomfort, is an excellent aid.

Regularity as to time of evacuating the bowels is important. In the morning, soon after breakfast, is best. Remember this physical need, and if inclined to delay, encourage expulsion by quick, deep, and rapid inspirations and expirations. Do not sit and strain at stool, but rather walk briskly to and fro in the fresh air, if possible, for a few moments. Or, if employed, keep the necessity in mind, and send the vital force in that direction by thought and slight effort. This function, as well as any other, requires both nerve and muscular power for its accomplishment. Those of sedentary habits and active minds often fail to supply them. If constipation is owing to a sluggish state of the lower bowel, then an injection of a pint or two of tepid water will secure the evacuation; but if these are long continued, or if the fæces have not reached this point, they are of little avail.

Constipation Throws Strain on Other Vital Organs

When the bowels fail to perform their appropriate duty in freeing the system of waste material, then the other organs of excretion have an excess of work. The kidneys are taxed, the skin is oppressed and discolored by dead and diseased matter, which should have been removed by fæcal evacuations. The odor from the person is fetid, the face sallow, or marred with eruptions. The foundation for permanent invalidism is often laid during school days. A busy brain, inactive body, and want of thought in reference to the needs of the system, all tend to induce torpid bowels. To increase muscular exercise while the mind is overworked will rather aggravate than relieve the trouble.

Constipation is not apt to be considered a serious trouble in its early stages, because other organs struggle to free the system, and hence for a time the person seems very well. But as months and years go on, the whole system becomes involved, more or less seriously, in the general derangement. Pain in the head, sleeplessness, languor, mental depression, and a complication of local troubles which involve the pelvic organs are likely to ensue.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Birmingham, England

"He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall Never call retreat;
He is sifting out the hearts of men before
His judgment seat.
O be swift my soul to answer Him,
Be jubilant my feet.
Our God is marching on."

The Saints of Birmingham send greetings. We are in the midst of the Week of Prayer. We are grateful to be one of the links in that great chain of prayer which is now encircling the world. What power shall come to us as a result of this mighty prayer! We feel without doubt that it will be great and far-reaching.

We were made happy Christmas Day when we met, as did the humble shepherds long ago, to pay tribute to our Lord and King. We had a beautiful service of praise and devotion and returned to our homes happy.

The Sunday school parties were held Friday and Saturday, January 3 and 4. They were each very successful. Those who helped to make these children happy were well repaid. A large majority of the children come from very poor homes, and their parents are not members of any church or creed. We feel that in giving joy to these little ones, we have worked with God. Brother Frank Schofield excelled in providing amusement and fun for the older children. A difficult problem is ours in directing recreation. Sister Nellie Schofield was happy with the primaries, and they had a great time, giving many cheers in mark of appreciation.

Brother A. Kendrick has opened a Bible Study class, which fills a long-felt want. The students meet each Monday night for one hour. This we feel is a forward movement and one which will be attended by great benefit.

The first sacramental service of this year was memorable, a feast to our souls. The testimonies were of a high standard, inspiring to the soul. We met fasting in the morning. There was a good gathering, many testifying to the power of the Spirit. Our president was in charge, and the writer was afterwards told that he had spent the first hour of that day in prayer, that we might be blessed in the services. We were richly blessed and felt encouraged to go forward with greater zeal and determination. It was an experience which will linger in memory.

In the afternoon the annual prize distribution of the Sunday school was had. The children and their friends met at the church and received prizes earned during the twelve-month period, singing hymns lustily, their faces wreathed with smiles.

Sister A. Meredith sails for Lamoni, Iowa, in America, January 18. She will travel with Patriarch R. Baldwin and Sister Baldwin. We cordially wish them bon voyage. Sister Meredith is a great worker in the Sunday school, and she will be sorely missed during her absence.

We seem to have started 1930 with the approval of a loving Father. He has showered his blessings upon us. Our hopes are high. We want to be true Saints, humbly following the pattern of our Lord who went about doing good. We trust the year will be rich with blessings to all, that our ministry may be inspired, that we may do our part to make the work a success, and that many honest-hearted souls may be gathered in.

Redickville (Ontario) Branch

Attendance is not as large as we would like to see, and there are always discouragements to meet. But in spite of extremely wintry weather, the faithful few are working, and Redickville Branch carries on.

During the Christmas vacation we had with us two of the missionary force, Elder Melvin Russell, of Central Nebraska District, and Elder H. A. Dayton, of Owen Sound District, both of whom were at their homes here for the Christmas holidays.

The Sunday before Christmas, we were in the grip of the worst storm that this country has known, and attendance at church was impossible, but the following Sunday we had the pleasure of listening to Elder Russell, who gave an inspiring sermon, taking for his subject "Religious education and Zion." Many new thoughts were presented, which gave the listeners incentive to press on in the redemption of Zion.

January 5 the sacramental and prayer service was in charge of Elder H. A. Dayton. This was also the first day of special prayer, and a day that will be long remembered by those who availed themselves of the opportunity of meeting in God's house. Certainly the Spirit of God was with us in power and much assurance, and all present were made to rejoice under its influence.

The branch is presided over this year by Brother Russel Johnson, a man young in the work but one whom we feel the church will hear from in service rendered.

Nineteen hundred and thirty is here. It holds much for us but can give to us only according to what we as individuals are willing to put into it. May we be willing to work and render to God that reasonable service he requires at our hands.

Saint Writes of Events in San Francisco

January 8.—God has been good to the Saints in San Francisco and has blessed us more than we feel we deserve. Our day for consecration of officers for the coming year was indeed one long to be remembered. A sweet, peaceful spirit was present during the Sunday school hour and in power during the consecration service. District President Levitt was here and conducted the service. The Lord spoke through him, encouraging, admonishing, uplifting our hearts and souls, and cheering us on in the work for the coming year. What a wonderful thing it is to know that God does hear and answer prayer and that he is indeed watching over his church in these last days!

On Thanksgiving Eve the church was beautifully decorated in autumn colors for an important event. Two of our young people, Romla Flood and Herbert Hinton, forsook their ways of walking alone and took up the task and pleasure of helping each other along the road of life. Elder G. P. Levitt performed the marriage ceremony.

Sacramental Sunday for January was another high mark in church experience, the first Sunday in 1930. God did not forget us. A wonderful spirit of prayer and testimony prevailed. Every heart seemed to beat with love for each other and for consecration to God's service. The gift of tongues was manifested, also the gift of prophecy. Again the Father assured his children that our sick should be healed, our blind see, and our lame walk.

Not long ago a sister was entirely healed under the hands of the elders. We feel especially blessed and favored, and all hearts hold the one thought—forward and onward to Zion!

Our young people are greatly blessed. The Happy Hour Club is growing and has started a basket-ball team. The team has won its first game. They hope in this way to bring into the fold those who are willing to accept the gospel, and to keep the members closely associated. The team is hopeful of successfully meeting some of the other teams of this district.

Christmas was happy for this branch. We had a tree and program and the Christmas spirit was shared by all.

Brother Saxe has again been elected pastor. For his counselors he has chosen two young brothers, Herbert Hinton and Caryl Holden. Our pathway seems bright and clear, and although we expect trials, we look forward to our goal—beautiful Zion.

Attleboro, Massachusetts

January 9.—Activities in this branch have been numerous during the past few months. We feel that the young people have done much toward making 1929 a successful year. A rally day Sunday was planned and the day's program was carried out by the younger members. At the Sunday school hour Sister Mary Rogers spoke for the older people and Ralph Power for the young people. Large attendance was had throughout the day. Elder David Dowker and family were present, and Brother Dowker preached in the morning.

A cantata, The Harvest Is Ripe, was given by a quartet Sunday morning before Thanksgiving. This was arranged by Sister Anna Baldwin and was sung by Helen Coombs, soprano; Anna Baldwin, contralto; Raymond Bradshaw, tenor; and Albert Bradshaw, bass. A silver collection was taken for the benefit of the cradle roll department, of which Sister Baldwin is superintendent. Enough money was collected to finance this department for more than a year.

The following week was a young people's convention of the local branch. Saturday night began activities with a social time and refreshments. The age limit this time was forty. Sunday morning at 9.30 o'clock a young people's prayer meeting was held, the age limit being thirty-five years. E. R. Bradshaw was in charge of the fine service. At 10.45 a Graceland program was carried out. This consisted of Graceland songs sung by a double quartet. Papers were read by Harold Cash and Ralph Power on what Graceland can do and has done for the church. A paper, "Graceland's expanding sky line," was read by Myrtie Bradshaw.

At 11.45 the Sunday school was arranged, there being singing by the junior class. George Scown gave a fine talk on "What a young man can do for the Sunday school"; Ralph Spinney, "What the Sunday school can do for a young man"; Ruth Bachellor, "What a young woman can do for the Sunday school"; Gertrude Robbins, "What the Sunday school can do for a young women." These talks brought to view many opportunities for service. A collection for Graceland College was taken.

An hour of music commenced at 3.30 in the afternoon, Sister Helen Coombs in charge. The program consisted of violin, cornet, saxophone, and vocal solos, and instrumental duets. The hour was a treat to all, and the members feel that we have the making of a fine orchestra. Ralph Power was accompanist.

Round table discussion followed at 4.45, keen interest being taken in solving the problems which face the young people of today. Some of the questions had to be held over for lack of time.

The 6.30 service closed the day with a sermon by Pastor E. R. Bradshaw, "Building for the future."

December 22 a Christmas cantata was given by the choir, The Story of Bethlehem. This was conducted by the chorister, Helen Coombs. The church was decorated with ground cedar and crepe paper. A large lighted star was placed over the platform, and several candles stood in the windows about the choir loft, giving the only light used. The candle-light service was impressive. Christmas Eve a pageant was given.

A program by the children and the Christmas tree were also enjoyed during the holidays.

The Women's Department held the Christmas bazaar December 12. Owing to the recent slump in business, this sale was not as successful as usual.

The church building is being redecorated upstairs and down, and all are working to help pay for it. For a long time we have been anticipating beautifying our church, and now after installing a new steam heater and building and equipping a new kitchen, we are in a position to have the redecorating done. All departments are busy arranging projects to help meet the expenses. We hope to have the services upstairs January 12.

It is expected that a series of meetings will be held in the near future by District Missionary William Patterson.

Elkhart, Indiana

2245 Morton Avenue

Elkhart Saints look forward to the opportunities of the immediate future. For the progress we have made we do not praise ourselves but our heavenly Father who has answered our prayers for help and guidance. We know just as we reach the high places, so we must go through the valleys, and we trust that God will guide us.

A beautiful Christmas pageant was presented December 22 by members of the Sunday school under direction of Sisters Champion and Willsey. It was most effective, and the children deserve much praise for their splendid work. A generous treat closed the exercises.

Sacramental Sunday, January 5, was a day to be well remembered by the Saints. There was good attendance. Brother C. B. Freeman was in charge, and the Spirit of the Lord was present.

At three o'clock in the afternoon a number of South Bend and Mishawaka Branch Saints met in Elkhart at the Y. M. C. A., Brother C. B. Freeman leading three precious souls to the waters of baptism: Carol Freeman, Mishawaka; May Newlund and Glen Davis, recently from Independence, Missouri. Then all gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Walter for confirmation. It was a day of rejoicing, and we gave thanks to the Father for the progress of the gospel and for his love bestowed on all humanity.

Class is held each Sunday evening, one hour being taken for the study of Problems of Industrial Zion.

Phoenix, Arizona

Sunday, November 17, after the evening service, Madeline Clark was married to Louis J. Ostertag, Apostle M. A. McConeley coming to Phoenix from Los Angeles to perform the ceremony. A reception was held for the pair later at the home of Sister Clare E. Sturges. Sister Ostertag has been for several years in the office of Graceland College, serving in addition to other duties two years as dean of women. Brother Ostertag has been pastor of the branch for the past year, and the membership welcome this addition to his able ministrations.

Other weddings of interest were performed Wednesday evening, December 18, before the prayer meeting when Sister Elsie Scacchi was married to Percy Dixon, and her daughter, Helen Marie, to Dwight De Busk. Brother L. E. Danforth officiated. Both couples will reside in Phoenix.

Christmas Eve about fifty members of the church enjoyed a supper and program in the church auditorium. Toasts were given by Paul Bear, Sunday school superintendent, and Berdie Coberly, president of the Department of Recreation and Expression. Several musical numbers and readings were on the program, and Louis Ostertag served entertainingly as toastmaster.

Brother and Sister E. J. McIndoo have announced the birth of a son, Donald Edward, January 9. Sister McIndoo was formerly Louise Danforth, of Grandview, Missouri.

The evening service Sunday, January 12, was converted into a farewell program in honor of Sister Clare E. Sturges, who is shortly leaving for an extended tour through the southern and eastern States. The branch presented Sister Sturges a leather portfolio as a token of appreciation for the many years of service she has so willingly given.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

A brave column of smoke is ascending from the little white church on the corner since the installation of the new furnace. It is hoped that the basement will now be available for activities in connection with the Department of Recreation and Expression, boys' and girls' clubs, etc.

The Saints were saddened at the death of Sister Hattie Hovey Phelps, who passed away very suddenly January 2. She leaves to mourn, her husband, three children, her mother, two sisters, and two brothers. Brother Ward L. Christy preached the funeral sermon.

The branch held its annual business meeting January 11. Those sustained in office were Elders Diggle, Christy, and Gendron in the presidency; Sister Grace Beckman as branch clerk and Sunday school secretary; Sister Steves, musical director; Frank Piedt, Sunday school superintendent; and Sister Diggle, publicity agent. Brother Arthur Gendron was appointed president of the Religio, Brothers Noble Harper and Henry Piedt, assistant and secretary; Amy Beckman, librarian; Clifford Moran, assistant superintendent of Sunday school; and Sister Ziegler, cradle roll superintendent. Sister Waugh is the new leader of women, and Brother Waugh was elected usher. During the year the branch built a chimney, installed a furnace, and paid for a new porch on the front of the chapel, which enlarged the building considerably. In addition a fence was placed around the grounds. In spite of these large expenditures, a considerable bank balance was reported.

This week the teachers and officers of the Sunday school are attending classes held under the Sunday School Association of the city. Last year those who took the course reported much benefit.

At Christmas a program was arranged by Sister Christy for the Sunday evening preceding the 25th. The Red Man's Quest was the drama selected. The costumes were true to life, the scenery effective, and a marvelous spirit prevailed. Altogether the members declared it to be the most effective program that has been staged in our branch. Here as in other branches, the Restoration has been continually stressed, with the result that we have learned more of our history and have been given a new appreciation of those who sacrificed to establish God's work in the last days.

The annual Christmas tree celebration was had Friday, December 20. Santa Claus distributed bags of goodies and gifts to all the children. A playlet exemplifying the words of the Savior, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me," was most impressive.

This year the branch appointed a committee to prepare Christmas baskets for the sick and needy. We have often felt that in the rush and excitement of Christmas preparation and gift giving, we forgot to remember Christ's hungry or naked ones.

Elva Beckman, eldest daughter of Brother and Sister J. A. Beckman, left recently for Washington, District of Columbia, where her marriage to Burton B. Asay will take place. A shower was arranged in her honor by Sisters Waugh and Few at the home of the latter. Many beautiful and useful gifts were presented the bride-to-be.

The newly organized Industrial Development Company is making good progress on the construction work of its first building. This company, it is hoped, will serve a threefold purpose: To create work for the unemployed among our people, to provide a means of investment for surplus funds, and eventually to own a pastoral home.

The radio services are at four o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Many favorable reports are received from listeners in. A fine fat turkey was received at Christmas time by Brother Christy from a nonmember, accompanied by a letter which stated that the neighbors were listening in regularly.

Brother J. F. Curtis spent about ten days in Saskatoon, preaching almost every night to a capacity audience.

The Society Islands Mission

During the latter part of November and the early part of December, Elder J. H. Yager baptized twenty-seven persons at the Island of Tubuai, about four hundred miles south of the mission headquarters. This brought our total baptisms since April 1 up to 151, giving Society Islands Mission over 215 per cent of her quota, with three months of the conference period remaining.

Elder Yager also organized the Saints at Mahu, Tubuai, into a branch, this being the nineteenth branch in this mission. The first branch of the church organized in this mission was organized at Mahu in the year of the death of Joseph the Martyr.

The native Saints are taking quite an interest in the International Week of Prayer, which starts today Sunday, January 5, our hour being at seven o'clock each evening, which is eleven o'clock, Independence time.

The Holidays in Norway

By V. D. Ruch

December 1, 1929, found me in Porsgrund, where I went more especially to attend the wedding of our young priest who lives there. At the dinner after the wedding I had the opportunity of making a talk to the assembled guests. I made the acquaintance of several people whom I had not before met, and the way was opened for me to present the gospel to some of them. Later in the week I was invited to the home of the bride's parents to spend the evening. Several other guests had been invited, and during the evening I was requested to preach a short sermon to them. These people seem interested in the gospel, and I hope to follow up the interest when opportunity presents itself.

I remained in Porsgrund until December 16, and held several meetings with Saints and friends. December is a busy month in Norway, there being numerous preparations for Christmas, and under these circumstances I held as many meetings as possible.

December 16 we returned to Bon to be on hand for the Christmas activities of the Sunday school and other departments. December 25 and 26 are holidays, so we had preaching services at the church both nights. The following Sunday we had eighty-five children in Sunday school, and we gave out the Christmas gifts that the junior department of Kansas City Central Sunday school had sent us. We have ninety-five enrolled in our Sunday school, and we received about one hundred presents for children of all ages. So each child received a little gift. They were delighted to get something that came from America. This is the third Christmas in succession that Central Sunday school has sent gifts to our school here at Bon. This year, for the first time, the children here sent gifts to the junior department of Central Sunday school. This exchange of gifts establishes an interest between the children of the two countries.

New Year's Day we had our Christmas entertainment for the Sunday school. There were one hundred and sixteen people present, and the affair was a success in every way. It began at four o'clock and lasted until nine o'clock. As usual much time was spent marching around the Christmas tree singing Christmas songs. We had a program consisting of songs, music, readings, etc. Refreshments were served. Santa Claus visited us and gave oranges, candy, nuts, and figs to all the children.

A watch party was held at the church New Year's Eve. We had a large crowd present, and a good feeling prevailed. Several talks were made. I felt especially blessed presenting the theme "Gratitude for the blessings of the year." A little devotional service was carried out as the old year closed and the new year came in. At twelve o'clock we were engaged in silent prayer, and one of the brothers struck twelve times on something in the back of the church. The building was in semidarkness, only a few candles burning. Then the congregation sang, "Pass me not, O gentle Savior." This proved a solemn and touching moment.

We are praying that 1930 will mean much to the work of Scandinavia and the church in general. We look forward to this year. It is here. We expect great things of God, but he in turn expects great things of us.

Akron, Ohio

January 14.—The annual business meeting of Akron Branch was held Monday evening, December 30. District President James E. Bishop was with us, and it was voted unanimously that he should assist the chairman in presiding over the meeting.

Priesthood and officers' reports were read. In a surprisingly short time, nominations for the various offices were made, elections decided, etc., all with fine decorum and wonderful spirit.

Elder E. M. Knight was sustained as branch president; Edna Rhodes, secretary and historian; J. J. Dildine, chorister; and E. M. Knight, solicitor. No change was made in the priesthood. Akron Branch has made fine financial progress in all lines and is looking forward to making big strides during 1930.

After the various officers had been elected, Brother Bishop gave a blackboard illustration of the coordination plan, and it was unanimously voted that Akron Branch should operate under this plan beginning with Sunday, January 12. William H. Mitchell was elected superintendent of church school, to cooperate with Pastor E. M. Knight. William Brown was put in charge of the young people, Gretchen Knight in charge of adults, and Fern Wolfe in charge of children's department.

In order to derive the most beneficial service from the musical and publicity departments, a staff was selected as follows: Myron Kelsey, choir director; J. J. Dildine, branch chorister; Mabel Dixon, branch accompanist. Akron Choir now has a membership of thirty. The publicity staff consists of J. J. Dildine, supervisor; Alice Kelsey, corresponding secretary; and Mabel Dixon, recording secretary. Both of the above staffs will be conducted under the full coordinating plan.

The Christmas cantata, The Story of a Christmas Gift, was given Sunday evening, December 22. A beautiful moral was contained in this delightful play, brought about by the eagerness of little Betty Miller in search for a gift for the Christ. This search was made more difficult by the fact that the busy Miller family had agreed to make it a "practical Christmas," with no gifts, tree, or the other formalities of a family of five. All ends happily when Betty's father and mother decided to adopt Jane, an orphan and companion of Betty, and the Miller family give their hearts and lives to Christ instead of being so absorbed with the affairs of life and the world. William Brown, Daisy Hartz, Gretchen Knight, and Myron Kelsey supervised the directing of the cantata. The little folks gave some lovely Christmas recitations and songs between acts, Fern Wolfe being largely responsible for their training.

We were privileged to have with us for several days Patriarch F. A. Smith and his companion, who were visiting their son, Doctor F. A. Smith, jr. Brother Smith was the speaker at the morning and evening services Sunday, December 29, and he and Sister Smith joined us in our watch party on New Year's Eve. A varied program of readings and experiences occupied the time until games were begun in the basement and a lunch was served. As the whistles of the near-by factories proclaimed the birth of a new year, Brother Smith offered a beautiful prayer for the advancement of this glorious work, the protection of those upon whom rest great responsibilities and the earnest endeavor of all to strive to make 1930 the year of the greatest accomplishments in church history. We dismissed after singing "Blest be the tie that binds."

Waterloo, Iowa

The year 1930 is beginning with marked increase in attendance and spirituality. The branch is under the supervision of W. H. Wood, president.

The Women's Department promises progress under Phoebe Hinds.

Guy Haynes is giving a series of lectures, Sunday nights, on the Book of Mormon, using the Book of Mormon maps. These lectures are well attended.

Brother David and Sister Amelia Hain, formerly of Moorewood, Oklahoma, have come to take up their home with their daughter, Mrs. F. A. Roosa, and family, and despite their ages are often seen at the morning services.

Floyd Wood, brother of W. H. Wood, died of pneumonia January 10. Elder Guy Haynes preached the funeral sermon at Kistner's chapel. Funeral services and burial took place at Dumont, former home of the deceased.

Mrs. F. A. Roosa has recently received notice of the birth of her first grandchild, a daughter to Brother and Sister Leland Roosa, of Vallejo, California.

We are much pleased to have Brother R. H. Allen out to services again after his sojourn in a local hospital.

Missionary Visits with Saints

By George W. Thorburn

In looking over my work for the year, I think I have come under my record as far as number of sermons preached is concerned. But I can truly say I have done more good for the church, therefore I am better satisfied with my work than with that of any year in my missionary endeavor. When I started out this conference year, I made up my mind that I was not going to specialize in making new openings or holding long series of meetings, but as far as I could I would visit every family of Saints in the State. And I have come very near doing it.

Last fall, while the church was holding rally days in many districts, I was called to Kalispell to preach Sister Knapp's funeral sermon. That was a trip of about five hundred miles. Brother Knapp (the husband) wanted me to go home with him, and that night he and I slept together. We did not sleep very much, for we talked nearly all night, mostly about the hope of the future. He has a large family, all in the church, and three married. All were at home. The next day, while I was alone in the room, I was wondering what I could do (after making such a long trip) that would be helpful to our people in that part of the field, and the Good Spirit rested upon me and left this thought in my mind: Have a rally day.

With this thought in mind, I called the members of the family into the room and stated to them just what I would like to do. They fell in line with the thought, and we set the next Sunday for all to get together. I was to put in the week visiting the Saints and telling them about the meeting. Brother Joseph Minthern had built a nice little house right in the Montana pines, so we agreed to meet there. We telephoned Doctor F. L. Casey, at Polson, and he and his good wife came up, driving about seventy-five miles.

Our program consisted of preaching, social and sacramental service, also much singing. I baptized three. Just before we started home, all gathered outside, so we could take a picture, and when we counted them we had forty in the gathering. A few did not get there; they had no way to come.

Some of those Saints had lived in the valley for a long time but had never met before. It was a joyful day to all. No one in that part of the country holds the priesthood. Brother Casey is the closest to these people, and he promised to come and preach for them.

Things are moving nicely out this way. I can not do much in the way of preaching during holidays. I was at Anaconda last Sunday and preached for them. Had a nice hearing at night. Expected to be in Deer Lodge for this coming Sunday. We have a nice Sunday school here at Race Track. We hold it in a schoolroom close to our home. Victoria (Thorburn) is superintendent. Our average attendance is around thirty-five or forty.

As a family we are in fine health, and we can truly say that the gospel is growing sweeter to us every day. Our two girls are doing well in school. Alta was thirteen this month; she will be in high school next year. Helen was ten last September; she will be in the sixth grade next year. They filed their inventories several years ago, and they take great interest in renewing them every year, and paying their tithing. They are always proud of the letter they get from the Bishop.

Sister Ernest Eliason, who has been so sick for a long time, was administered to about two weeks ago and got a wonderful blessing. She is attending church meetings.

Consecrated Group in San Antonio

By J. A. Robinson

January 18.—I have had a warm welcome from the Second San Antonio Branch with the members of which I have been sojourning since November 1. I came here from the Southern Indiana District for the express purpose of going into a retreat while I had some necessary dental work done. I had planned to put in my time at study and research work.

I soon found, however, that I had miscalculated. Elder R. E. Chrone, pastor of Second Branch, had to go to Mexico on business, for the most of the winter, and in spite of the fact that I had had all my teeth extracted I was pressed into service.

I have been blessed by the Lord's Spirit to a remarkable degree in explaining and expounding Zion and the church program. When in the pulpit I could articulate perfectly, and the loss of teeth was no handicap.

This is a remarkable branch, for there is an absolute lack of petty differences and jealousies which, when extant, interfere with progress. Though few in number, the Saints have a great goal and a determination to achieve it.

The women are particularly active, and while they have a small church, paid for and dedicated, they have ambitions for one more centrally located and have several hundred dollars already raised towards it.

Too much credit can not be given Pastor Chrone, his good wife, and their corps of assistants for their untiring efforts. I have had some pleasant experiences while going around with our aged brother, T. J. Jett, sr., looking up the lost ones and particularly those among the Mexicans with whom he worked so faithfully many years ago. He is determined to renew his work among them.

This church should delight the heart of the missionary arm, as it has the writer, for it is the best small branch for getting out nonmembers that I have run across in many a day. There has never been a service at which I have preached that they have not been able to get out from three to a dozen or more. As the darkie would say, "They jes' natu'ally go an' git 'em."

Three have given in their names for baptism, and we expect three or four more shortly, all fine progressive people.

If this valiant little band continues as it is working, it will be a shining shaft pointing the way to Zion.

I have had the pleasure of occupying once at the south-side branch, which is the First Branch, but have not become as much acquainted with the Saints there as I might have owing to my "pinch hitting" for Brother Chrono.

Mallard, Iowa

January 15.—We know it is God's will that we should all come up higher, and the members at Mallard are desirous of accomplishing a greater work in 1930 than we did in the preceding year. Our thoughts turn frequently to the centennial of the church, and we feel the need for great preparation for the occasion.

Visiting Saints for the month were Brother and Sister Pierson and family, Sister Peterson, and Brother Olson, of Albert City.

A good program and Christmas tree were had, there being treats for all.

Sister Abbott returned home from the hospital December 21 and is getting along nicely. She is able to attend services most of the time.

Brother Benjamin Fish, branch solicitor, gave a talk Sunday morning in regard to his work, and expressed thankfulness to the branch for the money that has been sent to headquarters, $1,009.44.

January 8 at eight o'clock was the hour set apart for the branch to unite in special prayer in behalf of the church and the work that is yet to be accomplished. We had good attendance, and many prayers and testimonies were offered.

Chicago, Illinois

West Pullman Branch 11926 Parnell Avenue

January 18.—During the month of December West Pullman members were treated to good sermons by Brothers H. P. W. Keir, Clem Evans, and A. Eskridge from Central Church at the evening services, Brother Cecil E. Schmid occupying each Sunday morning with special missionary discourses.

Our pastor occupied the evening of December 29, the final Sunday of the year, when we bade the old year farewell and entered a year promising much service and activity, each member desiring to serve more efficiently in the future.

The Christmas program was unusually well attended. A play entitled "The exile" was given, the major roles being carried by Sister Josephine Tripp and Brother Reese. The play was directed by Sister Edna Cotton. Assisted by George Cotton, Santa Claus arrived from the north pole in time to distribute the presents and candy.

Regular branch business meeting was held Tuesday evening, December 28, there being good attendance in spite of weather conditions. The following were selected as officers for the year: Pastor, Edgar O. Byrn; Counselors to pastor, Roy F. Healy and Charles Cotton; treasurer, John Wahlgren; secretary, Roy Healy; superintendent Recreation and Expression, Charles Scribner; superintendent of Sunday school, John H. Wahlgren; superintendent of Department of Women, Sister Josephine Tripp; superintendent Department of Music, Sister Naomi West; John Wahlgren was sustained branch solicitor; publicity agent, Roy F. Healy. Brother Wahlgren reported that this little branch went over the top in its quota for tithes and offerings as well as Christmas offering for 1929, which brought joy to the hearts of all. We are complying with the financial law as far as possible.

In December a son was born to Brother and Sister Freeman.

January with its ice and snow brought added blessings from the Master. Sacramental service the morning of the 5th, E. O. Byrn in charge, brought comfort and assurance. The theme was "Have I any reservations?" Many beautiful testimonies and prayers were offered, and the time sped quickly away. That evening at the Religio hour the organization of a study class in the Book of Mormon under the leadership of Roy Healy was completed. Clem Evans of Central Church again occupied in the pulpit, bringing an enthusiastic message and urging the Saints to greater endeavors in studying the books of the church.

Monday evening the Saints gathered at the church at eight o'clock to participate in the world-wide prayer service, this being the hour designated for us by the general church. The Master poured out his Spirit in such abundance that there was only time enough for prayers as one after another offered humble supplications to the throne of grace.

"The week of prayer and what it means to us," was the theme of Brother C. E. Schmid's sermon the morning of January 12.

During the Religio hour we listened with pleasure to an illustrated lecture on "Africa." We have been promised by Brother Scribner that these illustrated lectures will occur regularly throughout the year. The next one will be at the Religio hour January 26 on war-stricken China.

That evening we were pleased to have as speaker Elder H. A. Merchant, of Omaha, Nebraska, who gave an inspirational sermon. We also had opportunity to welcome Sister Merchant.

The formal opening of the teacher-training classes took place at the home of Brother and Sister Healy Monday evening, January 13. Two periods are spent each night. One class in the Seven Laws of Teaching is taught by Brother Healy and one class in Methods is taught by C. E. Schmid. A number are availing themselves of the opportunity to qualify for teachers' certificates.

The regular monthly meeting of the Fellowship Club of the branch took place Saturday evening, January 18, at the home of Brother and Sister Healy. The speaker was Charles A. Gage, D. D., M. D., LL. B., assistant state's attorney, director of the Youths' Service Bureau of the Civil Law Department of Cook County and director of the Illinois Masonic Hospital. His subject was "Your task and mine." Doctor Gage is one of America's greatest leaders of boys and girls. We were glad to have with us at this service Elder Roscoe Davey, district missionary, and H. T. McCaig, pastor of First Chicago Church. We expect to have as speakers in the future some of the leaders in other fields of human endeavor. Doctor Gage was a Methodist minister until the outbreak of the World War, when he was placed in charge of all the music of the United States Army in France. He is also an author, having written several books on music and youth. The December meeting was held on the 14th at the home of Brother and Sister Charles Scribner, Brother Henry P. W. Keir speaker.

We are planning a get-together social for Saturday evening, January 25. Brother Wahlgren is calling the officers and teachers of the Sunday school together to outline a vigorous campaign to increase its membership. The same is being done in the Religio. Plans are under way to redecorate the church auditorium and make other needed improvements.

The Masque Players have been organized and will start rehearsals January 24 in preparation for their first play, to be given early in February. The play to be given is "Simon's wife's mother," a sacred production. The proceeds will go to the building fund. Other plans are under way for an active recreational program.

We welcome visitors passing through Chicago to meet with us. The pastor's address is 12011 Stewart Avenue, telephone Pullman 7418; the publicity agent's address is 7436 South Michigan Avenue, telephone Vincennes 0999; the branch solicitor's address is 1431 East Sixty-seventh Place, telephone Midway 7972.

Our prayers are ascending in behalf of Brother and Sister Baldwin as they are crossing the water.

A son has come to cheer the home of Brother and Sister West.

Our sick are improving and we are grateful for their relief.

Wiley, Colorado

January 14.—Signs of awakening spirituality in this branch give promise of better things in store for the work in this locality.

The institute at La Junta was a treat for all who were able to attend. Some could not be present because of hindrances, but those who went brought back enough of the spirit of the occasion to promise good local results. Some who never before have paid tithing have made out their inventories. Wiley Branch fully expected to meet its quota financially but to date has not been able to complete it.

The last branch business meeting was harmoniously carried on, C. A. Ralston being sustained branch president for another year. Brother Conley continues as Sunday school superintendent and Sister Conley as superintendent of the Department of Women.

The prayer service closing the week of prayer was held at the home of Brother and Sister George Fletcher and was the best prayer service held for some time in this branch. Truly God does bless when only two or three are gathered together, but if the indifferent could know the encouragement it gives to the "two or three" when others pledge their consecrated service, they would not wait long to do it.

The hand of affliction has fallen heavily upon the family of Brother J. R. Hacker. The wife of our young brother, Joseph Hacker, was called from earthly life on the first anniversary of their marriage. About two weeks later Charles Hacker was severely injured in an accident caused by a run-away team. At last report he was resting as well as could be expected.

Sister Conley had the misfortune to fall and break her shoulder last week. She suffers considerable pain.

Brother C. A. Ralston preached for the Saints at Eads last Sunday. Owing to the extreme cold, not many attended, but a pleasant and profitable visit was had with those present.

Several in the branch are favorably considering entering upon the stewardship plan. The Saints rejoice in the progress that is being made in the development of the stewardship plan. Never before has there been the definite direction that is now given for individual development in Zion building.

San Antonio, Texas

First Branch, 3522 South Flores Street

The new year witnesses some marked changes in local affairs, but in the main finds us on the progressive side of social and spiritual life.

G. R. Kuykendall, having recently moved back to San Antonio where he grew up, was chosen president of First Branch for this year. Brothers Jett and Henderson, who presided here efficiently during recent years, were anxious for a release and helped to bring about the election of their successor.

Jewitt Jackson, a friend to the church, whose wife and brothers are active members, died last month of pneumonia. The branch misses his congenial presence and deeply sympathizes with the bereaved families. Elder R. E. Miller was in charge of the funeral and made comforting remarks.

Sister Ruth Harp, one of our most active members, left the city last month to make her home in Houston. She is now meeting with Houston Branch.

The choir under Flossie Waite, chorister, and Emma Jackson, pianist, kept local Saints merry and wide-awake during Christmas. Added to their usual contributions was the beautiful cantata sung by a group of young women robed in black, whom Sister Jackson had drilled for the occasion.

Brother T. J. Sheppard, who did effective mission work and baptized worthy members in this country a generation ago, has returned at intervals during the past year, stopping with the family of his son-in-law, Elder E. L. Henson. He commands a fatherly influence with the Saints here and often surprises them that one seventy-five years of age can preach so distinctly and convincingly.

A recent branch business meeting again put Sister Emma Jackson in charge of the Department of Recreation and Expression for the year, Floyd Jett and Theo Dorow assistants.

Next Sunday night Elder John Robinson will repeat at the church the stereopticon lecture he gave last Sunday evening at the church of Second San Antonio Branch.

The past year's mission services of Brothers Baker and Gillen remains in our memories and is an incentive to us to keep working to higher goals.

District President Miller announces the convening of our district conference February 15 and 16.

Northeastern Kansas Conference

At the appointed time for the conference, the landscape including the picturesque hills around Fanning were covered with snow and sleet. This prevented many from being in attendance. Some attempted to come by automobile but were compelled to return home. Sister Nora Johnson and son, her father, Brother Shriver, Sister Rhodes, and Mr. Reedy made the trip successfully, reaching Fanning in time for the opening service.

Prayer meeting at 11.30 in the morning was in charge of the local pastor, William Twombly. District Missionary W. A. Smith and Brother Shriver assisted. In the opening remarks Brother Smith stated that we had no reason to be discouraged, because the attendance was "Noah's crowd," for we were met to transact business in the church of God. In harmony with the spirit of the Week of Prayer and the approaching Centennial Conference, petitions were offered, asking that the spirit present in the beginning of our church organization might be with us now and influence us in this year. Activity in the service was one hundred per cent.

Because of weather conditions, Apostle E. J. Gleazer did not arrive until evening.

The business session was in charge of District President Dave Little. After the reading of reports and presentation of bills, occurred the election of delegates to General Conference. The names of those chosen are recorded in the minutes of the business session.

By action of the conference no reunion will be held in the district this year, the Saints attending the larger reunions wherever they choose to go.

The music was in charge of G. F. Hedrick, district chorister. Evening preaching service was at 7.30.

There were two splendid sermons by Apostle Gleazer full of admonition to latter-day Israel. What is true of Israel of former days, he said, is true of us today. God does not intend that we shall remain in modern Babylon. As death and destruction hovered over ancient Israel, so they are with us now. In our hands is power to thwart destruction—the gospel was restored to make possible the kingdom of God on earth. It is our privilege to work out our salvation. We must attune ourselves to the divine will.

At the close of the morning service when the soul had feasted on spiritual things, the physical needs were supplied by a sumptuous basket dinner served in the church by the sisters of Fanning.

A priesthood meeting was held at 1.40 in the afternoon, Brothers Gleazer and Smith in charge. The theme of Brother Gleazer's talk was "Visiting of the ministry essential to branch progress." Brother Smith's theme was "Visiting of the ministry essential to missionary work." Instructive thoughts concerning the duties of the ministry when properly functioning in their respective offices were given. At the close of this meeting, which was open to all, the Saints sang. Then the district president talked on the more abundant life, what it means to us in this district, and the opportunity to build up the branches.

Bishop's Agent O. E. Weedmark spoke on "The law of tithing," expressing in well-chosen terms the benefits to be derived from strict obedience to this law.

The Sunday school was ably presided over by the district Sunday school superintendent, Gilbert Hedrick, assisted by local officers. Attendance was eighty-three.

Because of road conditions, visiting Saints being unable to remain longer than the close of the afternoon service, no meetings were held in the evening. All the branches were represented, making it possible that a measure of the spirit of harmony and peace be carried back by the representatives. District Missionary W. A. Smith went to Blue Rapids, where he will labor.

Hitman, Iowa

Regardless of past experiences members at Hitman are optimistic concerning local work. Election of officers was held December 22, and as a result the following are in charge for this year: Branch President, E. J. Rowley; acting deacon, Dave Smith; branch clerk, Mary Marshall; solicitor by appointment, Nell Smith; librarian, Dave Smith; musical director, Ruth Smith; auditor, Leoma Burke; pianist, Dorothy W. Smith; Sunday school superintendent, Margaret Allison; assistant Sunday school superintendent, Myrtle White; superintendent Recreation and Expression, Ruth Smith; assistant superintendent, Leoma Burke; Women's Department: President, Margaret Allison; assistant, Letitia Clark; friendly visitor, Nettie Barker.

We hold Sunday school at 9.45 in the morning; prayer service at eleven o'clock; Religio, Sunday evening at 6.30; preaching service, 7.30; midweek prayer service at the home of Pastor Rowley; Women's Department at the church on Thursday.

We serve good fifteen-cent dinners, and many attend, school children and grown-ups, and we feel that we are helping nonmembers to have a more friendly feeling towards our faith.

We are planning to have our church building repaired sometime in the near future. Employment here is good. The work is steady, almost every day, at the mine. We feel we have much to be thankful for, that God is watching over us.

Coldwater, Michigan

Workers of Coldwater Branch have been busy, showing commendable enthusiasm in the face of winter's severity and persistency. Many times comfort and ease have been sacrificed to carry out various branch activities.

The pulpit has been occupied several times by Elder S. W. L. Scott, who also has ministered eight miles in the country to interested nonmembers, being assisted by Brother M. A. Johnson. The spirit of gospel ministry has been enjoyed.

Branch business meeting for annual election of officers was held the first Tuesday evening in December, and resulted in the following organization for 1930: President, Starr Corless; priest, H. J. Corless; secretary, Martha Fish; pianist, Ethel Gallagher; chorister, Martha Fish; publicity agent, Alta Stroh. The departments made the following choices; Sunday school, superintendent, Maude Corless; assistant, Edgar Peer; secretary, Ethel Gallagher; librarian, Sister H. J. Corless; chorister, Sister Fish; pianist, Sister Grace Peer. Church school and recreation, superintendent, Mae L. Scott; secretary, Eunice Dexter; chorister, Dorothy L. Scott; pianist, Grace Peer; Maude Corless was chosen to take charge of the seniors succeeding Brother Scott, and Brother Edgar Peer, the juniors, succeeding Sister Mae L. Scott. This organization plus the organization of the Women's Department presents an efficient body of coordinating laborers in the Master's harvest field, the fruits of which should be thirty, sixty, and an hundredfold. These departments have entered the year's work with gladness and determination.

Attention is directed to special work with the young people of the branch. In carrying out the slogan, lessons of sacred import have been gathered in their performance of church work. The young are the future church, state, nation, and civilization. Christ, with his apostles present, "set a little child in the midst" to teach the early church an eternal lesson. The time is near when "a little child shall lead them."

A supper party and Christmas tree was tendered the young people during the yuletide season, and on Sunday morning following a splendid program was given by them. The superintendent of church school has staged some fine expression for the juniors, the most recent performance being "The birth of a Prophet." There is fine talent among the young people of Coldwater Branch.

A brief sermonet by Brother Scott on the meaning of the words of the song, "Earnest workers for the Master," seemed helpful as well as the reading of a collection of news items concerning church and state.

Responses to priesthood meetings called by the president of the branch have set a standard of action which points to success and to the advancement of Zion's cause.

Severe weather before the holidays and since has been a handicap to church work and all other kinds of activity in this part of the country. Snow to the depth of fifteen inches on the level and drifts which left but a few inches of the tops of store doors visible swirled in on a gale sweeping along at the rate of sixty miles an hour. Many days were required to clear the streets of the tons of snow. But through all this we do not recall the failure of the branch to meet its program.

There now exist some ailments among our number, but we learn of nothing severe. Brother Peer's family has the greatest trial, being quarantined for scarlet fever. Ronald, the youngest child, is the patient. Our members desire to be remembered in the devotion services of the church.

January 19 Elder O. J. Hawn occupied the pulpit of the Saints' church.

Love Is Characterized by Service

Love is the tie that binds. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." Are we keeping in tune with that great declaration? Are we so short-sighted that we fail to grasp the above truth, ay, fathom its depth?

When I read in the Saints' Herald about Brother Paul Hanson setting sail for foreign lands, to perform missionary work, my heart thrilled with pride that our church has men with vision plus ability, fired with the spirit that Jesus had when he gave his life as a ransom for many. And I pray that every Saint shall be given a heart full of kindness, each one being willing to serve, humble though his corner may be. There is some place where each member may serve.

Love can not be defined by mere words. Acts, deeds, service speak for it. Jesus gave willing service and humble. Can we not do likewise? How great would be the result if each one should strive harder this year to render real and consecrated service!

Mothers, there is a service that calls for your foresight and time. Do not neglect your little ones. Give them your best efforts, for there is nothing sweeter than to hear grown-ups remark, "My parents did the best they could to make me good." It is a grave responsibility to be a mother. Too much emphasis can not be put upon the sacredness of the task of motherhood. Had Emma Smith neglected the trust given her in her children, what would have been the outcome?

As Saints we must set family standards. Daily the divorce courts are issuing papers which sever home ties. Parents lightly throw off responsibility, leaving children to seek love in the world. Let us keep our homes unbroken, every member happy and undecieved by the Devil. We must be on our guard against the forces which constantly tend to disrupt family ties.

The scriptures bring us good admonition: "Let love be without dissimulation." "Abhor that which is evil, cleave to that which is good."
GRACE SMITH.

Lamoni Stake

Missionary Activities

Creston

Beginning with the home-coming November 24, Creston Branch had a two weeks' series of meetings. Elder James A. Thomas, stake missionary, preached pastoral sermons at the homes of Saints where the membership met together. The most largely attended of these meetings was at the farm home of Brother and Sister James Bowman, about twelve miles from Creston. Most of the Saints took good interest in these meetings, and we believe good was accomplished.

This branch has developed an excellent program for Sunday forenoon services. After a brief devotional period, classes are allowed time for individual study of lessons before class discussion. Pastor, chorister, and pianist quietly appear in their places as a signal for closing class work, a piano interlude allows opportunity for the departure of those who can not remain for the continued service. There is no dismissal, and no confusion is experienced between sessions. The people besides having a short pause for quiet meditation get valuable experience in following a quiet and orderly leadership. With such discipleship Zion may become more easily and surely realized.

Allendale

Allendale Branch renewed on December 10 the missionary effort interrupted in September by illness of the stake missionary. Local Saints, the missionary, and the stake presidency feel that this community holds good missionary promise; and this feeling refuses to give way under the pressure of some adverse circumstances.

The first week of the meetings a dense fog, which auto lights could not penetrate, held down the attendance. However, interest was good. A sudden change in weather dispelled the fog and froze country roads so rough that many places were impassable.

Christmas week, with its program and preparations brought a recess in preaching, but weather and roads were good. The program was of high order, and being enthusiastically received by a packed house it did much to enhance community interest in our church. The Christmas pageant, "Wondrous night," was hailed by several as the best thing they had ever seen.

The meetings were resumed on Sunday after Christmas, new faces appearing in the audience. A treat of the week was composed of a sermon Friday night by Brother Wilber Prall and solos by Brother Oakman, accompanied by Sister Verna Schaar. These Gracelanders manifested a helpful missionary spirit gratifying to the missionary.

The main theme announced for a series of eight sermons the next week, "Bugbears of Mormonism," aroused considerable interest and curiosity. Storm, cold, and snow-drifts quieted the ardor of the curious, but the interested ones braved these and at the time of writing are bringing their Bibles each night for the study of their questions and problems in class sessions, which now have replaced the evening sermons. The number attending is small, owing to illness and weather and road conditions, but the interest we believe justifies the effort.

The Sunday school continues to draw more nonmembers. Already one new class has been formed and another is needed.

Earnest and repeated efforts during the past three years have finally made this branch as the city set upon a hill in this community. We labor and pray to the end that it may maintain this strategic position.

Lamoni

A service of unusual interest was presented at the Brick Church last Sunday evening when foreign students of Graceland College discussed the needs of the foreign missions. Brother Arthur Oakman, of London, England, took charge of the music, and Mrs. Clark, voice instructor of the college, sang.

Brother Edward Larsen, of Denmark, representing the Scandinavian Missions, told of the need for missionaries in his native land. The staunch faith of some of the older members of the church has helped to keep the church spirit alive. He spoke highly of the present program of the church of bringing young men from the various foreign countries to Graceland to be educated in the church doctrine and giving them an opportunity to become acquainted with young people of like faith. He is of the opinion that young people who are thus educated and sent back to their own countries as missionaries will furnish the most effective means of carrying the gospel to their nations.

Sister Clara Williams, who taught in the public schools of Honolulu during the missionary appointment of her father to the Hawaiian Islands, told of the needs of the church in these islands. She mentioned a dearth of funds and of missionaries and stated that some of the converts made by Apostle Myron McConley had not been visited since he left the islands about ten years ago.

Brother Fred Davies, of Wigan, England, was the last speaker and summed up the expressions of the preceding speakers by relating some of the difficulties he found in his own country. He suggested that people in this country and especially in Lamoni Stake do not appreciate their opportunities nor their responsibilities. Brother Davies also believes that the opportunities of spreading the gospel to other lands lie with the church in America.

To Nourish the Church

While lying upon my bed on Christmas morning, my mind running back to the birth of the Babe in the Manger, I thought of the three wise men, and the question presented itself, In what sense were they wise above others? Here is a question for the consideration of all.

I thought, We have made our contribution to the Christmas offering every Sunday just as have the rest of the Sunday school pupils, those who believe on the Babe in the Manger. But is the newborn King always to be the Babe? Will he never be to us anything but the Babe? Paul tells us that when he was a child he thought, did, and in reality was a child, hence he saw as a child. But later he reached the stage of maturity and became a man. Then the Babe in the Manger was to him a full-grown person, a Doer, a King, a Lord, a Commander, Leader and Builder. Paul came in contact with the Son of God and was conscious of his being. Convinced that Jesus Christ was no longer a Babe, he breaks forth in adoration, "Know ye not that ye are the Body of Christ?" Christ had grown to the stature of a man.

The church is the visible body of Christ. It needs support. We are members, drawing our spiritual nourishment from either a well-supplied body or an impoverished body. Is it possible that I can be a member of that body and stand by and not contribute to its support?

The above were my reflections. My decision was reached and conveyed to my wife. We were agreed that we would here make an offering for the benefit of the body of which we are members. The offering we are inclosing.

Graceland Chats

Friday Chapel

Last Friday Miss Carlile prepared us for the harp concert to be heard the following evening.

Miss Lysinger's piano voluntary followed by a scripture reading by Anna Lynn VanSkike preceded the prayer. A splendid setting for the main theme of the morning lay in the soprano solo, "Love never faileth," beautifully sung by Mrs. Clark.

Miss Carlile, after expressing appreciation of the musical setting, gave some of the mechanics and facts about harp playing. She then told us how to appreciate the numbers printed on the program.

As a result of Miss Carlile's lecture, each student felt more enthusiastic and appreciative of the harp and its technique.

Quintet of Harpists on Artists' Course

In spite of the severe cold and deep snow, most of the students and a great many townspeople betook themselves to the Brick Church Saturday night, January 18, to hear the concert presented on the artists' course, by the Lawrence Harp Quintet. Each of the five performers was a splendid harpist and played a number of difficult compositions with such grace and skill that the audience was held enthralled, scarcely breathing for fear some melodious chord be missed. The five large harps placed on the stage, each accompanied by its young musician dressed in flowing folds of chiffon, presented a beautiful picture, much in keeping with the music which seemed to rise from the very souls of the harps.

The first part of the program was a suite of four classical numbers played by the quintet. These numbers included "Allemande," by Johann Sebastian Bach, and "Gavotte des Moutons," by Martini. The director, Lucille Lawrence, played the second group, and her excellent display of technique and variation in tone color won the audience so completely that she was induced to play an encore. To me the encore was the most beautiful number on the program. It was "The last rose of summer" and was played with feeling. A group of duets was played by Marietta Bitter and Grace Weymer, in which was a number by Debussy, "Clair de Lune," a piece very difficult to play on the harp because of the many modulations.

All of the performers showed skill in tone coloring, technique, and beauty of performance. The pleasing personality of the director was outstanding during the entire performance, and the concert ended leaving with one the feeling that he had experienced something very lovely and unusual in the realm of music.

Needs of Foreign Missions

Sunday evening, January 19, at the Brick Church members of different foreign missions brought to us the needs of their respective countries. Denmark was represented by Edward Larsen; Hawaii by Miss Clara Williams; and England by Fred Davies. The Lamoni-Graceland Orchestra supplied appropriate orchestral music, and Mrs. Marcella Clark sang beautifully.

All three speakers pointed out the need for two things in their respective fields. First, missionaries. People have been converted to our philosophy, but, owing to lack of sustained attention have not been able to survive. The second need is money. Denmark has only one of the church books translated into her language, the Book of Mormon. In all three countries there is a lack of adequate church buildings. Fred pointed out the fact that the responsibility of promulgating the gospel rests primarily with the Saints in America. An appeal was made for a greater appreciation to be manifested by the people of America for the privileges and opportunities which they enjoy.

Lambda Delta Sigma Reviews Lamoni's Recreational Life

A committee consisting of Miss Sodersten, Arthur Oakman, and Voas Meredith laid an astonishing view of Lamoni's use of spare time before the Lambda Delta Sigma Society at its last meeting. The information was gained through the research work of Miss Sodersten and her class in "The family." This group gave much time and effort to collecting and tabulating the statistics.

We thought at first that we might get lost in the sea of figures we saw Art putting on the board, but they straightened around nicely after he started to explain them. When he had finished, Miss Sodersten conducted a round table. After the discussion we came to the following conclusion: In spite of the fact that there seems to be "something going on" every night in Lamoni, there are really only a few who can be classed as oversocialized, while a large majority have very little social life. We also learned that the women far outbalanced the men in church attendance, which, of course, was very interesting.

"Number Seventeen"

Graceland students and Lamoni townspeople were once more well entertained by the College Players when they presented "Number seventeen." The play, a mystery story, full of thrills, intense moments, splurges of laughter and heart throbs, was perfectly cast with—Wayne Briggs playing the role of Smith, the villain; Edward Traver as Eddie Scott, a stuttering lad who always came in at the right time. Gilbert Fordyce, the great detective, was none other than our own Hugh Hand. Ben, the comic strip of the play, was played by Fred Davies. Rose Ackroyd, beauty and keen wit combined, by Frances Whitcher; Henry, the questionable fellow of the play, by Mortimer Fisher. Mr. Brant by Arthur Martin; Nora, Mr. Brant's niece, by Alice Chap-pelow; and Mr. Ackroyd by Ross Cole. Outstanding parts were played by Gilbert Fordyce and Nora and, as one could guess, ended with a happy love affair.

Special credit and appreciation go to Miss Florence Thompson, sponsor of the College Players and director of the play.

Winter Scene on the Campus

Coming up the hill to an eight o'clock class on a cold winter's morning is no easy task, but to one who has not had the opportunity of seeing many snow scenes it is a real pleasure to take a walk just to get a picture of the campus. All of the buildings are banked with snow. The Administration Building stands in the center not seeming to mind it at all. To the left is the Girls' Dormitory standing out prominently. At night its lights welcome us into its comfortable and cheerful rooms, away from the cold. A little to the right of the Ad Building we can see students hurrying through little paths made to shorten the distance to Briggs Hall. There is no lingering now as there used to be in the fall.

Sitting in room 108 of Briggs Hall, we notice the heating plant. The edge of its roof has a trimming of icicles and its foundation is white drifted snow. A path extends from the Ad Building to the Gym which saves time in getting to either building in freezing weather. The campus is white, the tall ice-clad trees pierce the gray of the winter sky.

Graceland Loses by Small Margin

Graceland opened her basketball season this year December 14, with Conception Junction at Lamoni. The game was interesting throughout and was well played by both teams. In spite of the fact that Graceland lost by a one-point margin, 32 to 31, the game was by no means a loss. Through the entire game Graceland's squad played like veterans. Some might say that Graceland is handicapped, having no letter men in basketball back, but as the season goes on the squad improves in form. At present Graceland has played five games, losing them all in a sportsmanlike way. These losses have all been by a small margin and have not served to dampen the spirits of the Yellowjackets, who are working with renewed vigor on plays and formations, that they may yet give a favorable accounting of Graceland in the games still to be played.

Hammond, Indiana

1153 Monroe Street

January 20.—A good program was enjoyed by a crowd of encouraging size, and there was a treat.

Together we are starting the new year, hoping to make more evident our progress in the future than in the past. Many are making plans to attend the General Conference in April.

Elder William Osler has been here the past week, presenting some helpful sermons. We intend to have a series of meetings the latter part of January or the first part of February.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Sunday brought with it a full program of activity, church school in the morning, Bishop M. H. Siegfried delivering the sermon, centennial choir rehearsal at 3.30 in the afternoon, and in the evening the choir assisted the speaker, Apostle F. Henry Edwards. "Our belief in Jesus," was the theme of the second sermon of our "What do we believe?" series.

At the close of the service Central Choir drove to Independence to sing over K M B C, supplying music for the ten o'clock studio service. Miss Hazel Scott played the organ.

Tuesday evening, January 21, Central basket ball boys won from Fourth Church with a score of 27 to 13. This game places Central second in the Elliott League and two games behind Chelsea team, which holds first place.

Tomorrow night the choir will meet for rehearsal at the home of Sister Ross Moore, 433 West Sixty-seventh Street. The practice will be followed by a social hour.

The I. X. L. Class is sponsoring a dinner and social evening for the adult division Monday evening, February 3, at the Ricardo Hotel Tea Room, 811 East Armour Boulevard; tickets are fifty cents and can be obtained from class members.

Argentine Church

The morning speaker was Pastor Roy E. Browne, and at 7.45 Apostle Clyde F. Ellis discoursed on the theme "I will build my church," the authority of Jesus Christ and the need for a church being given consideration.

Recent speakers have been Patriarch Ammon White and Ralph L. Gould.

Helping to Keep Missionaries in the Field

What is probably the most outstanding example of what a few interested members of the Sunday school can do to swell the Christmas offering fund, which fund is devoted to maintaining the missionaries of the church in the field, has recently been brought to the attention of the writer. The remarkable showing has so impressed him, that he sought permission to place this extraordinary record before the Sunday schools of the church, hoping to stimulate and encourage like activity on the part of every Sunday school of the church throughout the world.

The following record was made by two classes of the Hammond (Indiana) Sunday school. The two classes were the Church History and the Doctrine and Covenants classes. In order to be able to compare the work done in 1929 with that done by the school in 1928, it will be necessary to give the total amount of the Christmas offering for 1928 as eighty-eight dollars.

The school has a total enrollment of fifty-five members, and the first quarter of 1929 showed a total collection of $10.94, or an average of $1.75 per Sunday for the first quarter. This showing if kept up for the remaining three quarters bids fair to fall considerably below the previous year's offering. To the members of the Church History and Doctrine and Covenants classes the showing for the first quarter of 1929 did not look good. A friendly contest was proposed to be inaugurated beginning with the second quarter on the following basis: Each class was to contribute as liberally as it felt it was able during the second quarter, without either of the classes letting the other know the exact amount paid in to the offering fund. At the end of the quarter the class contributing the smaller amount would be taxed twenty-five cents for each member as a penalty to be put into the fund. At the end of the year the class which had contributed the larger sum was to entertain with a turkey dinner free. All who attended and who did not belong to either of these two classes were to pay thirty-five cents, to be put into the 1930 Christmas offering.

For the second quarter the Church History class, with only seven members, paid into the fund $26.97. The Doctrine and Covenants class, with an equal membership, paid in $24.46, making a total for these two classes of $51.43. The balance of the school paid in $7.59, making a grand total of $59.02 for the second quarter.

The third quarter showed even greater amounts from the two rival but friendly classes. The end of this quarter showed the Doctrine and Covenants class determined not to be outdone by the Church History class in the good work of spreading the gospel. The account stood, Doctrine and Covenants class $47.28, and Church History class $44.81, making a total of $92.09. The balance of the school gave $4.26.

The fourth quarter showed a slight decline in the amounts paid in by these two classes. But be it said to their credit that if they had contributed only an average of their first contest quarter, which was the second quarter of 1929, their showing would still stand out as a remarkable achievement. The amounts for the closing quarter were Church History class $36.22 and the Doctrine and Covenants class $30.60, making a total for the two classes of $66.90, while the balance of the school paid $5.46.

The total amount sent to the Bishop by Hammond Sunday school for the year 1929 was $238.73. Total amount sent in by fourteen members comprising the two classes, Church History and Doctrine and Covenants, $210.48.

The whole school is to be worked up into a consecrated body of earnest workers for the Christmas offering fund for 1930, and we will watch with interest the record which will certainly be made by these earnest workers. Why cannot every school in the church organize like this one?

Stone Church

Patriarch J. T. Gresty, of Australia, was the speaker at the morning service, taking for a scripture lesson the twenty-first chapter of Revelation. He admonished the Saints to set their affections on the things of God and to build for eternity; for the fashions and customs of the world change and pass away. Jesus, the perfect example, showed us how to live and how to die. We are called with a high calling; and having set his hand to the plow, he who looks back is not fit for the kingdom. We must live celestial lives if we are to be in a celestial condition in the world to come, he said.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by George Anway, sang the anthem, "Sing to the Lord," by Haydn. Elder Frank McDonald presided in the stand and was assisted by Patriarch F. A. Smith.

Sunday morning the young people's church downstairs reached its climax of interest for the month. It was the fourth Sunday special attention had been given the theme "I will be reverent." Brother George Gates brought to the young hearers a new understanding of the meaning of reverence, mentioning the twelfth Boy Scout law: "A scout is reverent." Miss Grace Edwards, member of the Stone Church Choir, sang a solo which was deeply appreciated, being accompanied by George Miller. Music is usually supplied by members of the department and several girls who graduated into the senior department last fall, Sister H. C. Burgess in charge. A story, "The search for the beautiful," was told by June Gault.

By appreciating their ideals and having a determination to carry out their purposes and reach their goals may we honor our dead, asserted President Frederick M. Smith in the memorial service at the Stone Church Sunday evening, his theme being "Honoring our dead." We honor those who have gone ahead of us into eternity, we honor God, when we accomplish the tasks before us. Our predecessors dreamed of Zion the Beautiful. It is our privilege and joy to build Zion.

Special memorial ceremonies were announced for this evening at the conference in Zion January 13, and assisting in the stand were President Elbert A. Smith who read the scriptures, and Pastor John F. Sheehy who offered a prayer in memoriam. The names of members of the nine congregations in Independence who have passed away in the calendar year just closed, were read and given loving thought.

A beautiful musical setting for the brief address hallowed the hour. "Remember now thy Creator," Carrie B. Adams, was sung by the Stone Church Choir, led by George Anway. A solo, "Going down the valley," J. H. Fillmore, by Gladys Good, contralto, with organ accompaniment by Robert Miller, added to the thoughtfulness of the occasion, and a quartet, Ina Hattey, Sister J. D. Gault, Hazel Moler, and Sister Ruth Holman, accompanied by Lillian Pope Cross, sang "My task." The response by the congregation was "I would be true." The benediction was by President Elbert A. Smith.

Among the People in Zion

Considerable interest and enthusiasm is being manifested by the young people of Independence and their youthful-minded elders in the movement to equip the lower hall of the Auditorium as a gymnasium room and recreational center for all the church young people in Independence. In less than a week two mass meetings have been held for the purpose of acquainting the membership with the project and ascertaining the response of the people. The first of these meetings occurred January 21 in the lower assembly room of the Auditorium, where the equipment will be installed. Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge, and President F. M. McDowell made a short talk. Several hundred dollars were contributed. The second meeting convened Monday evening in the Stone Church. Organization is being effected in various branches to push the movement.

President Frederick M. Smith celebrated another birthday January 21, and his friends did not allow him to let the day pass unnoticed. The evening of January 20 the Laurel Club entertained about a hundred friends and church officials in President Smith's honor at the home of Brother and Sister T. J. Watkins. A program of music and talks brought the evening to a point when President Elbert A. Smith presented the birthday cake. The Frederick Seminar, a group of young people which under the leadership of President Smith is studying youth's problems, went to the President's home in Kansas City, January 21, and spent a joyful evening with him. The following evening brought yet another treat, a birthday dinner in the home of Brother and Sister J. W. Luff, of Independence.

When the list of delegates to represent Independence at the General Conference in April was published last week an unintentional omission occurred. The name of Sister Nellie Blackmore was overlooked. It should have appeared with the other fifty-seven names, Sister Blackmore being chosen by the quarterly conference of Independence, held January 13.

Games led by Miss Hazel Clow, and refreshments of chili and crackers after an evening of hard play helped more than one hundred boys and girls between the ages of twelve and fifteen to enjoy the annual party of the intermediate department of the Stone Church Sunday school last Thursday evening. The dining hall was the place of gathering for the young guests.

Every Sunday evening during the month of January the Y. P. R. Class met with Apostle J. F. Garver in the Y. K. T. room to continue its course "Know your own church." The four lectures of Brother Garver, "Church organization and administration," "The executive department," "Legislative functions," and "Judicial functions," proved engrossing to the class members, who gave good attendance through the severe weather of the month. Next Sunday evening Apostle F. Henry Edwards will present "The missionary work of the church."

The junior department at the Campus has been especially fortunate in its choice of speakers for the last two Sundays of the month. Apostle J. F. Curtis spoke on the theme "The open door to companionship with Jesus." The delight and safety with the Holy One as companion were clearly understood by all. Apostle M. A. McConley talked on "The open door to greater service to others." After having heard these speakers, the children feel they can give the answer as did the little girl to the last speaker. When asked what was the greatest thing, she said, "Just to keep agrowin' and agrowin'." Sister Alice Burgess has organized a junior choir, which made its first appearance last Sunday morning.

Second Church

A union prayer meeting was held at the church January 16, Brother J. F. Sheehy, pastor in Zion, in charge. He was assisted in the stand by the five elders in charge of the local groups.

Sunday, January 19, started well with a prayer service at eight o'clock. Church school session was profitable. The preacher scheduled for the morning was unable to be present because of a severe cold, and an emergency call brought one of the hard-working assistant pastors, T. A. Beck, to the pulpit as a substitute. Although he had had practically no time to make special preparation, Brother Beck gave a fine sermon to the congregation. At the same hour junior services were held in the basement.

In the evening Elder J. D. Gault gave the third sermon of the Sunday evening missionary series on the subject "Baptism." We are hoping to see attendance improve at these meetings as better weather is had.

The Saints of Second congregation mourn the death of one of our charter members, a woman who believed and lived the gospel all her life, Sister Charles Street. The funeral services were held at the Stone Church January 19, Elder T. A. Beck in charge. Prayer was offered by Elder D. A. Whiting, and Apostle Paul M. Hanson delivered the sermon. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

An exceptionally good prayer hour opened activities of January 26. Many testimonies encouraged the members, and a number of young people actively participated.

As the morning speaker the Saints were happy to have Pastor A. K. Dillee. The service was in charge of Assistant Pastor D. A. Whiting and Brother Groff, music being directed by Sister Floyd Mortimore.

Downstairs junior church was being conducted by Assistant Pastor T. A. Beck and Sam Inman, priest. Music was directed by Sister Jennie Willis. Another record attendance was established.

Elder W. L. Chapman that evening discoursed on "The laying on of hands," continuing the missionary services. His discourse was instructive. Pastor A. K. Dillee was assisted in the stand by Elder Arthur Whiting. A ten-minute song service was led by Sister Floyd Mortimore.

We are happy to report that Sister T. A. Beck is improving. She is up and about in her home but not yet able to attend church.

Second Branch is glad to welcome back home Brother and Sister E. E. Weir, who have lived for a time at Grandview.

Enoch Hill

Home with our help is the Lord's workshop, declared Brother Charles Warren, superintendent of the Sunday school at the opening of the Sunday morning session. Patience, love, virtue are His tools. The result is an abiding place for the Holy Spirit, a wonderful influence for good in the community. And the product of holy homes is godlike men and women.

In keeping with the morning theme "The home and the priesthood," soft music was played, and a dramatic sketch was given by Brother and Sister E. H. McKean, their son Laverne, Gertrude Beal, Charles Warren, and John Quick, showing the home and family and their relation to the priesthood.

Scripture readings gave emphasis to the need for patience and virtue among those who are the disciples of Christ, that they may stand in holy places with the Master.

A profitable class session was then introduced, followed by the sermon from Pastor O. W. Sarratt, which added to the lesson of the morning, relating more closely the home with the calling and function of the priesthood.

In the evening Elder N. Carmichael spoke to the congregation.

Enoch Hill is interested in the movement to equip the lower room of the Auditorium as a recreational center for the young people of Independence. It has sent representatives to the two mass meetings of the week, also to the pastors' and supervisors' session Sunday afternoon. Brother C. E. Beal is in charge of the undertaking in this branch, assisted by Glenn Cox and E. H. McKean.

Walnut Park

The morning speaker Sunday, January 26, was Apostle D. T. Williams. His text was: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." The main emphasis was placed on the spiritual meaning of the first part of this text, "If I be lifted up." The anthem presented by the choir fitted in well with the general theme of the service, "My faith looks up to thee."

An event of interest which formed a part of the morning service was the blessing of Richard Duane Andersen, son of Howard P. Andersen and Carol Andersen, formerly Carol Williams. The child was ten weeks old at the time of blessing. Those officiating were Apostle D. T. Williams and the grandfather, Elder M. T. Williams. Both Howard P. Andersen and M. T. Williams were formerly pastors of Walnut Park, so it was quite fitting that they should come to Walnut Park for the blessing of their son and grandson. The Saints were happy and honored at this manifestation of their continued interest, and appreciated the opportunity to renew old friendships.

A priesthood meeting was held between six and seven o'clock in the evening, with a very good representation. Twenty-five were present. Plans were laid for the present year for a complete visiting of the homes of the district. A fine desire to cooperate in this project was shown.

The evening service was also well attended and much appreciated. As part of the song service, the quartet presented a beautiful number, and the choir also rendered a fitting anthem. This is the first time for several months that the choir has been able to assist in the evening's service, and the Saints hope it will continue its good work. The speaker of the evening was Elder James D. Gault, his subject being "The laying on of hands."

Englewood

In spite of bad weather attendance is good. January 12 a short business session was held, Elder John Blackmore in charge. Departmental heads were nominated and ratified by the group. Then followed an interesting sermon by Brother Blackmore on the financial obligations of every individual to the support of the most wonderful agency for law and order in the world today—the church. The evening hour was occupied by Brother J. A. Bozarth. The subject "Repentance" was given to the second sermon of a series of Sunday evening discourses. This series will continue through February and March.

Sunday morning, January 19, the branch was very happy to have President Frederick M. Smith, who spoke concerning our birthright as individuals and groups, pointing out the danger of losing or selling it for worldly and selfish desires. The church was well filled, and showed plainly our need for the upper auditorium for the addition of which plans are being made.

In the evening Elder George Jenkins talked on "Baptism."

One hundred and forty attended the dinner which preceded a play given by Stark Acres Group on Friday evening. The entire evening was enjoyed by all.

Last Sunday was another wonderful day. The morning sermon was by Apostle J. A. Gillen. "Following the Christ" brought divine food to all who desire to be true followers of the Master.

And that evening Elder D. A. Whiting preached on "The laying on of hands." The two discourses of the day blended well.

Spring Branch

The Sunday school was well attended last Sunday morning. All teachers were present, and only seventeen pupils were absent.

The pie social, held by the young people's class Friday evening, was well attended and the program was immensely enjoyed. A sum of almost twenty dollars was taken in. The money will go to a flower fund. The young people's department is under the leadership of Brother Farrow.

Pastor J. E. Cleveland was in charge of the eleven o'clock service. Elder W. Wallace Smith was the speaker, and in the evening Elder Glenn Davis used for a theme "The laying on of hands."

The young people of this branch are happy thinking of the prospects of having a gymnasium room in the lower

Des Moines district conference will convene at Des Moines, Iowa, 719 East Twelfth Street, February 7, 8, and 9. J. F. Garver and D. T. Williams will be in attendance. The first meeting of the conference will be a district banquet at the Des Moines church, 6.30 p. m. Friday, February 7.—Margaret Wilkinson, district secretary, Melcher, Iowa.

Asks Cooperation of Officers

All branch and district presidents and branch and district choristers are especially requested to urge upon all singers coming to the Centennial Conference to take part in the oratorio, The Course of Time, the necessity of much diligent practice and enthusiasm in their work so as to be able to give a perfect performance of the work.—John T. Gresty, Composer.

Singers and Instrumentalists of the Church

An urgent appeal to all choir singers and instrumentalists coming to the Centennial.

As only ten weeks remain until the Centennial performance, I especially urge all singers whom I recently visited, east and west, to make every effort to thoroughly master each individual part. Do not be discouraged because of the difficulties. Master each part, by slow practice at first. It can be done. Practice twice weekly, as they are doing here in Independence, or even more. Get together as much as possible in the homes. One practice weekly will hardly be sufficient unless you have already learned the parts well. Be enthusiastic over the memorable performances and do your part willingly to contribute with your voices to the great performances we expect, remembering the advice of Schumann, the great composer: "Without enthusiasm nothing ever is gained in art."—John T. Gresty, composer of the oratorio, The Course of Time.

Des Moines District Banquet

Des Moines District will have a banquet as the first meeting of the district conference which convenes Friday, February 7, at 6.30 p. m. The theme for the evening is, "Give your best to the Master." We will have Apostles J. F. Garver, D. T. Williams, and perhaps F. Henry Edwards for the banquet and conference. The supporting topics are (1) "Loyalty to high ideals," (2) "Win one to Christ," (3) "I would be true," (4) "Christian citizenship," (5) "Partnership with God." The principal address will be by Apostle D. T. Williams. Joe Johnson will serve as toastmaster, and musical numbers will fill out the banquet program. At the conclusion of the banquet, a good short play will be given. Send your reservations to Stephen Robinson, 1812 East Thirty-second Street Court, Des Moines, Iowa. The charge is fifty cents a plate. The conference and program will be in the Des Moines Church, 715 East Twelfth Street.—Stephen Robinson.

Detroit District Institute

Detroit District Institute, February 9, 1930, Pontiac, Michigan, 19 Front Street: 10.30 a. m., Sunday school. 10.30 a. m., general priesthood meeting; topic, "Some things that our young ministers can and should do"; speaker J. Charles Mottashed. 1.45 p. m., election of delegates to General Conference. 2.30 p. m., songs from Gray Book, directed by A. E. Glockzin, for recreational programs; 3 p. m., lecture by Doctor Isaminger, University of Michigan; topic, "The lengthening span of life." 4 p. m., recreational leadership class, a new group of games to be taught for immediate use in locals; topic of Discussion Period, "Points a recreational leader should know"; Miss Ruth Kimball, of Pontiac City Recreational Department, in charge. 7.30 p. m., preaching service.—Carlisle Whitehead, for district presidency.

Conference Minutes

NORTHWESTERN IOWA.—Annual conference was held at Logan, Iowa, December 13, 14, and 15. Weather and road conditions were unfavorable, nevertheless attendance was fine, there being a good representation from the district. The order of the conference was the reading of reports, election of officers, and choosing of delegates to General Conference in April. Friday evening, 7.30, the opening session was given over to the missionaries who related interesting experiences, Brothers Garver, Holloway, Fry, and Hunker participating. Saturday morning at nine o'clock the prayer service was presided over by Brothers Hunker and Fry. At 10.45 business session was in charge of Brothers Garver and Gunsolley. Reading of minutes and reports occupied the remainder of the morning session. Statistical reports showed a membership in the district of 2,676. The total number baptized thus far is 125, Sioux City taking the lead. Bishop Adams reported tithes and offerings for eleven months $18,330.25. Eighteen branches were represented in this report, showing approximately 327 tithe payers, about one eighth of the district membership. If one half the membership could be converted into regular tithe payers at the same ratio, this district could contribute about $80,000 tithes and offerings a year. The report on oblations for the same period made a fine showing over last year; paid in, $821, approximately $500 more than last year. The goal this year is $1,000. Apply this to the financial law of the church—"Wisdom is knowing what to do next" (pay your tithing). "Skill is knowing how to do it" (file your inventory). "Virtue is doing it" (go to, for 1930). The ordinations of Brothers Howard Reynolds and Elvin Baughman to the office of elder were provided for. The following were chosen to occupy as district officers for this year: Bishop, W. R. Adams; counselor, E. L. Edwards; president, Gerald Gunsolley; counselors, W. R. Adams and M. O. Myers; secretary, Sister W. R. Adams; district chorister, Sister Ruth Gunsolley; superintendent department of religious education, Howard Reynolds; superintendent Recreation and Expression, J. E. Keck; superintendent Women's Department, Bertha Van Eaton. The following delegates were chosen to represent the district at the April, 1930, conference: William Chambers, Mary Chambers, George Meggers, Sister George Meggers, Gerald Gunsolley, Ruth Gunsolley, W. R. Adams, Sister W. R. Adams, Joseph Lane, Arnold Adams, George Hansen, Unice Johnson, Guy Johnson, Marvin Fry, E. Y. Hunker, L. G. Holloway, Chester Davis, Sister Chester Davis, Bertha Van Eaton, J. L. Butterworth, E. L. Edwards, J. F. Garver, Mark Jensen, Mrs. J. J. Killpack, G. M. Vandel, and J. E. Currie. Bishop Adams asked the conference to ratify his choice of Brother John Hansen as counselor. The appointment was unanimously ratified. Missionaries in the district the past year report a successful period of work, the Lord abundantly sustaining their labors. A peaceful and unifying spirit prevailed throughout all sessions of the conference, giving the district a splendid beginning for the new year.

Our Departed Ones

HINDS.—Amelia P. Hinds was born February 26, 1846, at Saxony, Germany, and passed away December 8, 1929. At the age of four years she came with her parents to America and married Frederick H. Diem when she was twenty years old. To them eight children were born, six sons and two daughters. One son preceded her in death. Those surviving are: Frederick H., of Cushing, Iowa; Edward R., Carsonville, Michigan; Herman O., Hamilton, Missouri; Mrs. George Schoff, Stewartville, Missouri; Robert W., Hamilton, Missouri; Bruno A., Crosswell, Michigan; and Mrs. Richard Schoff, Hamilton, Missouri. In 1880 Mr. and Mrs. Diem were among the first people in Michigan to unite with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. In the year 1881 Mr. Diem was killed by an explosion in a sawmill owned by Elder J. J. Cornish. Left alone with eight children, the oldest thirteen years of age, in those early days Mrs. Diem had a great struggle to rear her family. But she succeeded, and by her faithful life brought them all into the church. Six years after the death of Mr. Diem she married Elijah Hinds, and to them three children were born, one son dying in infancy. Remaining are Mrs. B. J. McWilliams, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma; and Mrs. Claud L. York, Drumright, Oklahoma, with whom Sister Hinds was making her home at the time of her death. She is also survived by thirty grandchildren, ten great-grandchildren, one brother, one sister, and many friends. She died as she lived, a true and devoted Saint and mother. The funeral sermon was by Frederick A. Smith, assisted by John Hovenga, Stewartville, Missouri, was the home town of the deceased. Interment was in Maple Grove Cemetery.

CHAPMAN.—Heber William Chapman was born in Wiltshire, England, July 7, 1854. He came with his parents to America when he was seven years old. They lived in Utah for about three years; then they moved to Harrison County, Iowa, near where Persia now is located. He was married to Miss Frances M. Legan November 14, 1875. To this union ten children were born, seven of whom survive him: Mariah Howard, Robert E. Chapman, Elsie Woods, Mabel Sherwood, William J. Chapman, Eva Mowers, and Elvin Chapman. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints June 19, 1887. He moved with his family to Hood River, Oregon, in 1920, where he engaged in business until 1923, when he moved to Vancouver, Washington, where he lived until the time of his death. His first wife preceded him into the future life in February, 1920. He was married to Sister Callie Tucker, November 20, 1920, who survives him. He was ordained an elder February 25, 1910. It may be said of him, that he was faithful to his church, honorable in life, and died strong in the faith. He died December 23, 1929. Funeral services were conducted by Elders Eli Bronson and M. H. Cook, M. H. Cook preaching the sermon.

HOPKINS.—Mary Levira Hopkins was born in Akron Township, Peoria County, Illinois, April 22, 1855, and departed this life January 4, 1930, after a short illness. She was married to Julius H. Hopkins, at Princeville, Illinois, May 26, 1872, and with the exception of a few years, spent her life in Princeville. For the past forty years she lived in the home where she passed away. To this happy union were born Mrs. Agnes Beardsley, of Richmond Hill,

Long Island, New York, who was unable to be present at the funeral on account of illness; Mary Geneva, who died in the bloom of womanhood, July 20, 1892; Nina Adeane Dawson, Dahinda, Illinois; Alice Maude Dawson, Kingston, Missouri; Roy Victor, Independence, Missouri; Henry Burt, Princeville, Illinois, who has tenderly cared for his mother for the past twenty-three years, since the death of her companion March 6, 1906; Bessie Lee Farquer, Dahinda, Illinois; and Harriet Lue Hopkins, East Moline, Illinois. She united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in youth, being reared in a Christian home, and has ever been faithful to her trust in the gospel of Jesus Christ. She was a patient, uncomplaining mother. She was most happy in her own home. Surely her children can rise up and call her blessed. By her bright, cheerful, pure, sweet life she contributed much toward the happiness of her husband while he was with her, and toward her children. Between her and them was an unusual devotion and love. The funeral service and interment were at Princeville, E. R. Davis in charge.

ARD.—Elizabeth Cooper was born in Baldwin County, Alabama, December 7, 1860. She died December 20, 1929. Married Philip Ard in 1875 and was the mother of nine children, seven girls and two boys. Two of her daughters preceded her in death. She was a good mother. Was baptized a member of the church by Elder W. J. Booker, at Robertsedale, Alabama, September 19, 1909. It was in her home that Brother Booker passed away. Left are her husband, four brothers, two sisters, five daughters, two sons, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and a host of friends. The funeral was conducted by Elder H. M. Aebli. Interment was in the Cooper Cemetery.

SKANK.—Frances Elizabeth McClenahan was born at Traders' Point, Mills County, Iowa, October 11, 1850. Departed this life December 5, 1929, at her home near Henderson, Iowa. In her early youth she united with the church and lived a consistent Christian life. She married George F. Skank in 1868. To them were born one son and three daughters. Her husband preceded her in death in 1912. She is survived by all her children: G. Fred Skank and Mrs. Ethel I. Stephens, of Henderson; Mrs. Ida L. Castor, and Mrs. L. May Cater, of Des Moines, Iowa; fifteen grandchildren; ten great-grandchildren, and one sister, Mrs. S. I. Gifford, of La Harpe, Kansas. The funeral sermon was preached by Patriarch Joshua Carlile, and interment was in Farm Creek Cemetery, at Henderson.

MOSIER.—Charles V. Mosier was born December 26, 1857, at Byrneville, Indiana. Died December 21, 1929, at Independence, Missouri, of Bright's disease. He married Laura Foote April 21, 1882, and to them seven children were born. A son, Orville D., passed away some time ago. Remaining are his wife, Laura Mosier, of Independence, Missouri; his children: Mrs. Ethel Schwab, Mrs. Nellie Bingham, Knoefel Mosier, Arco R. Mosier, of Independence; Mrs. Myrtle A. Smith, Los Angeles, California; Mrs. Cleatie M. Baker, Bradford, Indiana; and nine grandchildren. A short funeral talk was given by George Jenkins. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence.

CHIVINGTON.—Lauretha Smith was born February 15, 1863, at Des Moines, Iowa. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in February, 1886. She devoted her time in service to the church. Was united in marriage to John Chivington September 25, 1880. Left to mourn are her husband; a son, J. W. Chivington, of the home, Rich Hill, Missouri; a daughter, Mrs. Helen Leaveridge, Kansas City, Missouri; three sisters, Mrs. Elmira J. Neal, Rich Hill, Missouri; Mrs. Mary Libergan, Independence, Missouri; and Mrs. Anna Seavers, Newton, Iowa; and many friends who will miss her kind words and deeds. The funeral was by Elder George Jenkins. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence, Missouri.

ROBERTS.—Harriet Sullaway was born in Wales, August 25, 1856. When three years old she came with her parents to America, and they located in Saint Louis, Missouri, where she remained until her marriage to Arthur Roberts, December 31, 1881. To them four children were born, Arthur in 1882; May Belle, 1885; Joseph Marion, 1888; and Harry Elmer, 1896. She was baptized a member of the church September 29, 1890, by Ivor Davis. After the death of her husband she spent some years in Independence, Missouri, at the home of her daughter, Sister J. M. Lloyd; she also lived in California, with her sons at Los Angeles. There she passed away December 25, 1929, as the result of an attack of heart failure. Surviving are her children; six grandchildren, one great-grandchild, one brother, Joseph Izatts, one sister, Mrs. W. R. Wiedman, and many friends. The body was brought to Independence, where services were held December 30 in charge of Elder John F. Sheehy, sermon by Elder J. M. Terry from the text, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Report on Joint Council Meetings

The Joint Council of Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric closed a lengthy series of meetings at noon, Friday, January 31. The men of the council are quite agreed that this was in many ways the best series of meetings that we have held in many years. There was a very marked degree of unity and light. Questions submitted were discussed with the utmost freedom, and in practically every instance decisions reached on important questions were by unanimous vote.

Good Fellowship Prevails

The marked degree of fraternity made the meetings very enjoyable. At noon each day the members of the council dined together in the Auditorium dining room; and the experience of breaking bread at a common table so many days in succession promoted their bonds of friendship.

Early in the meetings a reception was given to Apostle Paul M. Hanson, recently returned from his foreign mission. His return completed the circle of apostles—all members being in attendance at the council meetings. We found Brother Paul to be looking fine in point of health, and in splendid spirits. Three members of the council celebrated birthdays during our sessions: Frederick M. Smith, John F. Garver, and J. Frank Curtis. In each instance the event was taken note of by the council in ways suitable to the occasion.

So far as practicable the pre-conference work of the council was gotten out of the way. Never before, to so great an extent, has the slate been cleared before conference, in order to give the members of the council freedom to attend the conference meetings and to render their contributions in the various educational, devotional, and business sessions.

Mission appointments were made, so far as practicable. A goodly number of new names was added to the list. Programs were mapped out and agreed upon in the missionary, financial, and other departments of the church. Steps were taken to put the Auditorium in better shape to receive conference visitors. Work is now in progress putting in the permanent ceiling in the upper auditorium, which should greatly improve the acoustic properties of the building. Work is also being done to improve the lower auditorium. Details of these enterprises no doubt will be reported from time to time.

Bishop Reports Fine Showing for 1929

The Bishop reported that the year 1929 had excelled all previous years in tithes and offerings. He reports in round numbers the tithes and offerings for the year were $570,000, as against $524,000 in 1928, and $441,000 in 1927. The figures given for 1929 do not include offerings to certain special funds, amounting to some $90,000. Drives for special funds may come and go; but tithes, offerings, and consecrations furnish the steady income and are fundamental in principle. The record for 1929 is a wholesome and hopeful portent.

In point of baptisms the later months of the year, beginning with the missionary campaign launched in May, showed, month after month, new high records in number of baptisms. In many ways the year 1929 was a memorable year, and leads, we trust, to greater endeavors and greater achievements in 1930.

Good Record for Independence

In Independence, where many interests focus, the year 1929 was very successful. It was a banner year for Independence, financially. Considering all that has happened, and more that has been rumored that never did happen, this showing is very significant. Tithes and offerings in Independence amounted to $49,049.60. Offerings to local expenses $12,647.57.

Peace and harmony have prevailed in our congregations to an extraordinary degree. At the annual elections in the various congregations in Zion, at the close of the year, the action in each instance was practically unanimous. When the congregations met in the conference in Zion, again unity and harmony prevailed.

At that conference, too, was launched a forward-looking and unified plan of church building for the entire city of Independence. This plan commits all of the congregations to the centering of their forces upon one building project at a time, in an order to be determined by general and local authorities in consultation, until all of the congregations shall be suitably housed in church edifices free from debt. This is no small matter, as we are constantly building for those who are gathering in to Zion. The growth of membership in Independence during 1929 (a net gain of 480) in itself would make one large branch, far above the size of the average local branch.

We trust that the good will typical of the council meetings and the meetings in Zion, and typical also of district and stake conferences being held, will be gathered up and find its full expression in the General Conference of 1930.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

The White Masque

With the Centennial General Conference coming on and the presentation of the pageant, Fulfillment, in prospect, the White Masque Players of Independence are for the moment before the eyes of the people of the church a great deal. The pageant will be staged under their sponsorship and by their membership, with the help and cooperation of hundreds of other people in Independence, Kansas City Stake, and surrounding territory.

At this particular time some mention of the meaning and significance of the name, "White Masque," will not be amiss. The name was taken by the club in April, 1923, after it had been organized for one year under the name, "The Independence Dramatic Club," and had presented several public performances.

White being the natural and historic symbol of purity, and the masque being the symbol of the drama, "White Masque" stands for "purity of the drama." This the club had in mind when the name was chosen nearly seven years ago. And the matter of purity in drama is an important consideration, especially at this time, when there is so much discussion publicly and privately concerning censorship of both the screen and the legitimate stage.

It is not intended that the White Masque Players shall be prudish in their efforts to encourage wholesome drama. They have no program or campaign of censorship, no channels of propaganda through which to work negatively at the problem of a cleaner stage. Their ideal is to work constructively in the direction of superior dramatics by selecting and presenting those productions that develop and cultivate the finer appreciations of man. They are particularly interested in the field of the religious drama, and in the use of drama to inspire and build strength of character.

Some people will contend that the matter of morality should not enter into the presentation of dramatic productions, that "art for art's sake" should not be reduced to the level of "drama for propaganda." We shall grant that plays can and often are made tedious and inartistic by the insertion of material that is merely undisguised propaganda. On the other hand, we are not convinced that drama, even in its most artistic moments, is either above or outside the moral law. Be the drama what it may within and of itself, once it is presented to an audience, it has a certain effect on the lives of those people, and in that moment takes on a moral aspect. For things are moral or immoral in that they exalt or debase human personality, human life.

With this conviction in mind, such organizations as the White Masque Players may continue their efforts for wholesome drama with assurance that they are laboring in a useful field of activity. There are great possibilities in a demonstration that the "purity" for which they stand is not a purity of repression, abstinence, and restriction, but an aggressive achievement in the creation and production of the best in dramatic art.

Encouraged in His Ministry

One of our younger ministers who has had experience in foreign mission fields and also in the States, recently gave expression to his feelings in a letter to President Frederick M. Smith, from which the following is quoted:

It may interest you to know that some of my work in the past few months has been very encouraging to me. What I mean is that my experiences have been of such a nature that I feel they have been among the richest blessings of my ministry thus far. I have been permitted to labor in conjunction with a very fine young man, Brother _____, and our mutual efforts have borne some fruits. This has been beneficial to me, and I believe it has been good for the people where we have labored.

If my observations are correct and unprejudiced, I find that there is more unity of purpose and a better understanding of the real program of the church among the people where I have been serving than at any time during the past nine years. There is a greater willingness on their part to study the Zionite phases of our work and a greater desire to comply with the financial requirements than at any time I have been among them. The spirit of fellowship is growing. A more intelligent vision of what is expected of both individuals and groups is growing in the general comprehension of our people. The growth has been slow, but I believe it will be sure and consistent. Such growth means progress, and finally will bring victory to those who continue to carry on faithfully.

Personal acquaintance with the brother who is the writer of this letter and the note of conservatism contained in the communication would indicate that his conclusions and his impressions are legitimate fruits of a study of his experiences. The brother is neither pessimist nor optimist, according to the meaning usually accepted for these terms. For this reason there should be encouragement in his letter—encouragement for all who may read.

The belief that the growth in comprehension of saintly duties is sure and consistent contrasts sharply with the statements of those who are making a business of adversely criticizing and condemning as apostate, the Reorganized Church.

Legionnaires as Tithe-payers

There comes to us from the office of the Presiding Bishopric a statement of the financial contribution of the members of the Tenth Legion up to November 30, 1929. This young people's movement was started in the summer of 1929 and on the date given had a membership of only sixty. Yet this group had paid in to the general church $1,196.85 in tithing and $238.53 in offerings.

As one of the primary requirements of his eligibility for membership, each Legionnaire has demonstrated his loyalty to the church by complying with the principles of its financial practice. This means the filing of an inventory, the making of an annual financial accounting, the payment of tithing, and the making of a sacrifice offering. The Legion does not make the financial requirement any more fundamental or necessary than the others, but does give that phase its proper place in an intelligent, balanced devotion to the church. Legionnaires believe that the financial law of the church provides for an equitable distribution of the temporal responsibility among the membership. They therefore subscribe to its observance.

We quote from the letter from the Presiding Bishopric:

Considering the short time the Tenth Legion has been in existence, we feel that it has made a creditable showing. Undoubtedly there comes to you at times the feeling that you are not accomplishing as much as you should, but we believe that the Legion is laying a wonderful foundation for the young people of the church. Of course the pioneers of any movement or business always meet the greatest discouragements. We feel that as the younger generation keeps coming on, your Legion will grow in numbers, which will then mean a larger number complying with the law that the Master has given to his church. When this time comes the church will go forward in leaps and bounds, and there will

A New Chief Justice of the Supreme Court

Illness and fatigue have conspired to force the resignation of William Howard Taft, Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. After a public life of forty years, in which Mr. Taft has served in a number of eminent positions, he finds himself today, at the age of seventy-three, too badly worn and tired to continue the heavy labors that he has undertaken. Since his appointment as Chief Justice in 1921 he has done much to clear up the cluttered condition of the court, and to provide means for the speeding up of its work. It is this effort which has cost him his health.

Mr. Taft has occupied the offices of Solicitor General of the Supreme Court, President of the United States, Governor General of the Philippines, and that office from which he is now forced to retire. In all these offices he conducted himself worthily and patriotically, not sparing himself the severest labors in order to facilitate the work of his offices. Perhaps the most trying time of his life came during his occupancy of the Presidential chair. He became a candidate for the presidency reluctantly, knowing that he was temperamentally better qualified for other work. The criticism that he suffered at the time cut him deeply, but it never halted his efforts to do good, nor did it embitter him. Those who know him best, and are best qualified to judge his abilities, know that the country lost by failing to bring him to the office of Chief Justice at an earlier time. One of the best effects of the uncertain Harding administration was Mr. Taft's appointment.

As Chief Justice, Mr. Taft brought to the country the ripest maturity of his unusual judicial powers and a high devotion to his task. That was

be found larger groups of busier and happier people. We want you to know that you have the whole-hearted support of the Presiding Bishopric.

If every member were contributing his part through the regular channels of revenue, the church would be in a position to do many of the things we have been talking about for years. The Legion's program looks toward the day when every young person, particularly, and therefore eventually every adult, shall be observing the financial gospel.

Every member a missionary; every member a church worker; every member a tithe-payer! This is the call of the Legion.

Those who wish to join the Legion in 1930 should get in touch with the Executive Committee, at The Auditorium, in Independence.

January, 1930, Makes Good Record

Another record-breaking month in number of baptisms recorded, is just come to light. January reports are in, and baptisms number 303.

The total membership of the church is now 106,473, because of a net gain for the month of 333. The number of deaths reported for January was very low, only 96, and the total losses numbered only 110.

The goal of 6,000 baptisms for the year to close

April 1 is not at all impossible of achievement, though it would mean that 1,436 baptisms must be reported within the months of February and March. Decision Day has been set out by the leading quorums of the church as March 16. It would be well for all to read the Official which contains the announcement. Working together in the conservative manner suggested there, and filled with faith and righteous zeal, the goal of 6,000 baptisms for the year may be achieved.

R. J. L.

During the month of January the following numbers of the various types of reports were received by this office, resulting in the indicated changes in the Total Net Enrollment:

Net Enrollment of the Church January 1, 1930 .....		106,140
Transfers .....	804	Gains from Unknown .....	125
Marriages .....	154	Gains by Correction .....	15
Blessings .....	126
Ordinations .....	27	Total Gain .....	443
Silences .....	10
Divorces .....	7	January Deaths .....	96
Expulsions .....	12	Expulsions .....	12
Changes of Name .....	2	Loss by Correction .....	2
License Restored .....	1
January Baptisms .....	303	Total Loss .....	110

Net Gain During January .....

Net Enrollment February 1, 1930 .....

The total of 303 baptisms establishes another record for the Centennial Year. This is the largest number of baptisms that has been reported during any January in the history of the Reorganization as far as is shown by the records in this office.

The total number of baptisms for the ten-month period since April 1 is 4,564. This is 76.7 per cent of the goal which has been set for the church during these twelve months. As shown by the thermometer reading at the left the church is about 10 per cent below the percentage that should have been achieved by the end of January. However, this represents a gain because at the end of December the church was 12 per cent behind what it should have been at the end of that month. We are hoping that with everybody working together the church will be able to overcome the present handicap of 10 per cent and finish very close to its goal for the year. It will mean, however, that everyone will have to work very hard during the next two months.

The Honor Roll for the month of January is as follows:

Society Islands Mission .....	224%	Kentucky and Tennessee District..	83%
Detroit District .....	135%	Des Moines District .....	80%
Northwestern Ohio District .....	120%	Kansas City Stake .....	78%
Southern Nebraska District .....	113%	Rock Island District .....	78%
Western Montana District .....	103%	Northwestern Iowa District .....	76%
Hawaiian Mission .....	100%	Saint Louis District .....	76%
Southern Missouri District .....	95%	Southeastern Illinois .....	76%
Southern Indiana District .....	88%	Eastern Oklahoma District .....	75%
Spokane District .....	84%

The achievement of the Society Islands Mission in more than doubling their quota during these ten months should be noted. At the present time the Society Islands have reported a total of 157 baptisms, whereas their quota was set at 70.

The Detroit District has also been doing exceedingly well in the last few months. During November, December, and January a total of 105 baptisms has been reported. This brings their grand total for the ten-month period up to 260. Since the quota set for the Detroit District was 193, this means that they have obtained 135 per cent. The example of the Detroit District and Society Islands Mission should be followed by other districts in the church.

Decision Day—March 16, 1930

The Joint Council of Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric, which has just closed its meeting, has set apart Sunday, March 16, 1930, as church-wide Decision Day. It is hoped that by setting our endeavors toward this specific date it will be possible to reap the missionary harvest for which the entire church has been working.

The results of the missionary emphasis which has been placed upon our church work during the past ten months has been most gratifying. The total baptisms in five of the ten months have exceeded similar months in any preceding year. Yet in spite of this splendid showing we are not up to the quota which we have set for ourselves, and more than fourteen hundred baptisms must be reported to the statistician during the next two months if we are to reach our baptismal quota by the beginning of the Centennial Conference.

In preparation for the Decision Day which has therefore been appointed, we are calling attention to the following methods of preparing for the conversion and baptism of people who need the church and whom the church needs:

Convert the children. Every branch president and every director of the church school should seek to enroll unbaptized Latter Day Saint children in classes especially organized to prepare them for church membership. The Church Statistician has made a careful estimate of the number of children below fifteen years of age who are connected with Latter Day Saint families and places the total at about six thousand five hundred. We do not wish to overpersuade the young people before they are ready for church membership, but we are sincerely anxious that they shall make an early decision for Jesus Christ and that they shall grow up thereafter with a definite consciousness that he has a rightful place in their lives. There can be no more stabilizing spiritual experience than this.

Complete the family circles. In spite of the splendid church-wide response to our suggestion that the ripest field of missionary endeavor is in the families of the members of the church, there still remain many thousands of good men and women who know of the church through their relationship with church members but who have not yet decided to join with us. There should be a church-wide campaign of personal invitation directed toward the completion of as many Latter Day Saints' family circles as possible.

Revise and work over the prospect list. Many of our most progressive branches keep a list of prospective church members to whom they feel definite and immediate responsibility. These lists include friends in every stage of approach to the church, and will reveal many who are near the kingdom and who will be eternally grateful for the help given them in making their decision. Without doubt an invitation to join the church should go to every desirable prospect who is ready for this invitation.

The pastor of every branch will of course take the lead in missionary work within the confines of his branch. The Saints who are in touch with prospects will keep the pastor apprised of the work they are doing, and in addition he will seek to arrange for cottage preaching services, visits by the priesthood, continuous Sunday evening missionary services, etc., as may be necessary and desirable.

Whatever method may be used in winning these good people to the church, the background upon which success will be predicated will have to be provided by the personal lives of the Saints. We are therefore making a special appeal that the Saints throughout the world will continue to be active in prayer and personal testimony, in the distribution of church literature, in taking Ensign subscriptions, and in all other methods which will aid in the achievement of our great purposes.

We believe that by mutual cooperation throughout the entire church, Decision Day, March 16, 1930, can be made a day of great spiritual achievement such as shall be remembered for many years. We do not want to overpersuade our friends and so bring them into the church before they are really converted, but we are eager that the many thousands who are considering church membership shall be baptized into the church and become assimilated into the working forces which are joined with the Master in the building of Zion.

Begin to work right now. Keep on working till the last man has been won. The church rightfully expects that every man will rise to his great opportunity and do his full missionary duty.

F. HENRY EDWARDS.

Advance Information

The installation of an additional heating unit in the Auditorium is fast nearing completion. When this work is finished, it will mean that the April conference will be practically insured against any unusual "cold snap."

Construction work for placing the ceiling in the Auditorium is being pushed. This will be of interest to the musicians of the church and to those who will speak at the Centennial Conference, as the acoustic properties of the Auditorium will be greatly perfected when the ceiling is in place.

Up to the date of this issue very few have sent in requests for reservations, or notified the committee that they have already secured accommodations. This delay is causing the committee considerable worry and indicates that last-minute reservation will have to be made. This will be exceedingly difficult to do. The committee again requests that those expecting to attend the conference will communicate with them immediately and either request reservations, or inform them if they have already secured accommodations. Mail should be addressed to

*The Committee on Reservations and Accommodations,
The Auditorium,
Independence, Missouri.*

A preliminary report from the Presiding Bishopric indicates that over $28,000 has been contributed to the Auditorium Fund this year. This is a very definite indication that a considerable number are remembering their Auditorium pledges and paying the balances due. Individual members know whether their original pledges to the Auditorium Fund have been paid or not, and those who have not paid their pledges in full can help very materially if they will pay the balances due. Now, while the work is in progress, it is much easier to keep it going and do additional necessary work than it would be to start the work anew.

There has been a steady demand for copies of the oratorio, The Course of Time, which is to be sung at two performances at the Centennial Conference. It may be years before another edition is printed, and those who wish to secure this Centennial Edition should send their order to Bishop Carmichael at once. A copy of this souvenir edition will be of permanent interest, and whether you sing in the Oratorio Choir or not, you should have a copy of this musical masterpiece. The price is $1.25 each, mailed postpaid.

Evening Programs at the Conference

Two performances of the Oratorio, The Course of Time, will be given Sunday and Monday nights, April 13 and 14. The oratorio will be conducted by the composer, Evangelist John T. Gresty, of Sydney, Australia. This event has long been anticipated by the members of the church, as well as by the musicians. Practice has been going on steadily in the larger choirs of the church, and the two performances at General Conference will very likely bring together the largest group of musicians ever assembled at one time in the history of the Reorganization.

The music contest, sponsored by the Department of Music, under the direction of Miss Mabel Carlile, will be held Tuesday evening, April 15. Details of this contest are given on pages 55 and 78 of the Saints' Herald for January 15. This should be read carefully, and it is hoped that a large number of musicians in the church will take advantage of this opportunity and participate in the contest.

There will be a "song fest" in the Auditorium Wednesday, April 16, from 7.30 to 9 o'clock. Those who have attended like events at former conferences will remember the very enjoyable programs on these occasions. It is desired to fill the main Auditorium room to capacity, and the Conference Committee looks forward to a great experience when 7,000 or more Latter Day Saints participate in this program.

Thursday evening, April 17, has been given over to a reception for the entire conference crowd. Each general church officer and department head will be in his office for the purpose of meeting friends and visitors to the conference. This will afford an opportunity to get better acquainted with the general officers of the church. Due to the heavy schedule of class work, business sessions, preaching services, and evening programs, but little time will be available for social purposes. But Thursday night of the second week, the Conference Committee feels that it will be a welcome break in the steady routine of the conference to have the general church officials and department heads in their own offices where the conference visitors may have a special opportunity to get acquainted, renew old friendships, and form personal contacts which will better enable them to carry out the work in which they are mutually interested.

Other features of the Centennial Conference will be announced in this column each week, and readers of the Herald are invited to follow them carefully, so that they may be informed regarding plans for the coming conference.

The Centennial Conference Institute

Among the many plans being perfected to make the great experience of the Centennial Conference an outstanding event in the history of the church, attention is called to the list of institute classes to be held each forenoon of the twelve week-days. These classes will run on a one-hour schedule in four class hours, from 7.30 to 12 each forenoon. At the same hours there will be lectures and devotional and preaching services scheduled, so one may secure a varied program as may best suit his need or desire.

Institute Credits

Credits counting toward a certificate in Religious Education and Leadership will be awarded those who comply with credit requirements. One point per class hour will be allowed for attendance at not less than ten of the twelve sessions in a class. This will permit of a total of forty-eight points being earned if four classes are attended regularly. This means one must enroll at the opening of the conference and remain through to its close.

Helpful outlines are being prepared in most of the thirty-six classes, and in some cases a booklet is being printed, summarizing the lectures.

We list, below, the subjects to be treated, grouped by class hours. It may be noted that there are many courses planned for each of several groups of church workers. Every student should be able to find what he wishes, whether one desires general or specific courses in religious education, the work of the priesthood, music, parenthood and home-building, or fundamentals of our faith, belief, and church policy.

A folder of the classes is being prepared and should be ready for mailing by February 15. This will include a brief statement by the instructors of the ground to be covered in each class, and the time-table from which those who are coming may plan their selection of studies and make enrollment beforehand. To cover cost of class outlines and the expense of sending out credit cards, a uniform charge of twenty-five cents will be made for enrollment in each class.

In order that the membership of the church may be fully informed of the nature of the class work and able to plan their attendance, a supply of the institute folders will be sent to each branch president for distribution. Additional folders may be had on request.

The selection of classes should be made at the earliest possible date and application made for enrollment. Advance notification is imperative if adequate provision is to be made for conference attendance.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,

By F. M. McDOWELL.

If one takes religion seriously enough to believe that it makes a difference with character and conduct, it is impossible not to "discriminate" in some fashion in favor of persons who profess a type of religion which one considers indicative of intelligence and conducive to sound character. But such discrimination need not involve bitterness, hatred, or bigotry.—The Christian Century.

"Send Out Thy Light"

*A sermon of J. H. N. Jones, of the Australian Mission, delivered at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, January 19, 1930.
Mrs. A. Morgan, Reporter.*

Editor's Note: Elder Jones made a few interesting introductory remarks and delivered some personal messages which we do not find room available to reproduce. He then said:

I want to draw your attention to a well-known Psalm. I was almost wishing that the choir had sung that song, though it sang one with which I am very well acquainted and love very much. I wish they could only sing the one that is set to these particular words: "O send out thy light and thy truth. Let them lead me; let them bring me unto thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacle." (Psalm 43: 3.)

I desire to associate with that, one over in the New Testament which says: "And be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds." (Romans 12: 2.)

The Psalm which I have read, or the verse from the Psalm, to me indicates what we may term missionary activity. I do not know whether David would quite agree with the application I am making of his words, but he is not here, and in my judgment the Psalm absolutely, or admirably, suits my talk: "Send out thy light and thy truth."

Last Sunday night I listened to a very fine discourse by Brother Hanson, wherein he said, "Let your light shine." He laid emphasis on the word let. The Psalmist here says, Send it out. "Send out thy light." That seems to me to be equivalent to saying, Go into all the world and preach the gospel. Jesus Christ has been revealed unto us as the Light of the world, and this church has always been, I am proud to say, a missionary church; a church that believed it had something worth while; a church for which men were called to sacrifice, and they went joyously out into the different parts of the world, leaving their families behind them, without hope of financial reward, to be socially ostracized, knowing that that would be the result when they went out. Yet their love of the truth led them out, their love of souls, their love to carry the light, to be light bearers. And then I think of that beautiful Psalm, or it is from Isaiah, where it says, "How beautiful are the feet of those who bring good tidings of good things." And so we regard the light-bearing of the gospel, or the missionary work of the gospel, as being a blessed thing. And I, this morning, desire to speak just a little concerning our experiences of the gospel in Australia, and also to point out to you what I consider to be some of the fundamental things of our faith; some of the peaks, shall I say, the high places, that we must ever occupy if we desire to be true to our foundational principles.

We had some light before this gospel came to us. Most of us, I suppose, have been gathered from one church or another. We were walking, to a degree, I should say, in the light of the Reformation. In fact, in my own father's home there had been a conflict, a struggle between the two, the Reformation light, and the light of the Catholic Church. But when the Restoration came we had the triangle. There was a struggle then among the three, and I am pleased to say that the Restoration idea conquered, and that is why I am here today. I would not be here if it were not for that fact.

What was there in the Reformation and in the Restoration that brought conflict, and what was there in the Restoration that brought about a victory? And I should say that whatever brought about a victory in our lives in favor of our present faith must be something that is worth while holding.

The old church to which my mother belonged was supposed to have come right down uninterruptedly from apostolic time; supposed to hold the keys of the kingdom which were given by our Lord to Peter. The Reformation was a breakaway from that. The Reformation was really a reaction against the priestly tyranny of Rome. The Reformation arose at the time modern scholasticism arose. It dates from that time—the translation of the Bible from the original into what we might term the common, everyday language; the spreading of the Bible throughout the whole civilized world, so far as it could be sent; the right of private interpretation of the Bible. The Reformation gave, then, to the world, as its supreme gift to mankind, the Bible, but every man interpreted the Bible just to suit himself, and therefore the Reformation gave rise to a multiplicity of sects.

We belonged to one of these sects; and I can remember the cogitations of my mind in early years, when I was brought up in the Methodist Sunday school. I read my Bible and found that there were many things in the New Testament, or new covenant, which were not being taught there in the schools, or in the pulpits of that particular faith, and I oftentimes said to my parents, "Why are things not the same today? If things were as they were in the days of Jesus Christ and the apostles I could become a Christian; but I can not follow present-day teachings with the Bible in my hand."

I little thought at that particular time, when I made these comments to my father, who was a Methodist preacher, that the day would come when that same old gospel, or a people professing to have that same old gospel, would come knocking at our door, and that I would ever receive any knowledge of that same gospel by that same Spirit that I had read as being manifested in Bible times. I never thought such a thing could ever occur.

We were told that all these gifts and blessings which had anciently followed the Christian church were confined to the apostolic times, and that we must not expect anything of that kind now. But the church here in America, the place where God had spoken to that young man and given him a message to this generation, endeavored to send out the light of the gospel to other hands, and what a task, what a task those messengers had!

There had preceded their testimony rumors that had spread, as it were, on the wings of the wind, and everybody knew of that dark and murky stain that had come into the stream of truth. I have heard it said that the Americans say Evil will travel from Maine to Georgia while Truth is getting her boots on, or before Truth gets her boots on. And so it can travel right across the great Pacific Ocean, or the Atlantic Ocean. It can encircle the globe before truth can get a start; and so, before the messengers of the Reorganization came to Australia, people were very, very well prejudiced against it because of the evil doings of some who claimed to be its spot lights. That was the condition when the work came to Australia; and though the sectarian world could not deny the principles taught by the elders of the church they could speak truthfully concerning some who had represented the church. They could throw calumny over the name of the church and prejudice and inflame the minds of the people against the message. That was the condition in Australia, just as it was in America, when the light bearers came. I refer now to Brothers Wandell and Rodger.

I will tell you one or two stories of their missionary activities, or one, particularly, about Glaud Rodger, which will give you an idea of what I mean in relation to the difference between the reformation idea and the restoration idea. The reformation idea was one of scholasticism. The restoration idea was one of revelation. Now catch that and remember it. Faith in God was the reformation idea, backed up by scholasticism of worldly men.

Faith in God was the restoration idea, backed up by revelation, by inspiration. And so we were asked to believe that God had actually spoken again to men. But how was the matter to be proved? How get a message coming into a land so well prejudiced by rumor of the character that we had? How could he bring the light and truth of the gospel to prejudiced minds, unless some power accompanied him which we had not hitherto known?

Glaud Rodger went down into a place called Westonport to visit a relative. He lived with them out in the foothills. He went down to the seacoast where there was a little village. In that village was a man named McIntosh, and his wife and family, who kept a kind of hotel, where people could come and lodge, dry their clothing if they were wet, and refresh themselves, and always find a welcome. Glaud Rodger used to walk from the foothills down through swamps, so I was told (not by himself but by those who entertained him), up to the knees sometimes in water, to preach in a little place in that town. He came to McIntosh's home. McIntosh heard he had been there and he said, "Wait until I catch him. Wait until I catch that Mormon coming to my home. I will give him all he wants from the Bible." And he said to his wife, "Don't go out to hear that man preach, whatever you do. Don't go near the place." He was preaching in a little ramshackle building which was of such poor construction that you could see through the chinks. Mrs. McIntosh said, "I didn't obey my liege lord; I sneaked out at night and had a peep in through the chinks—curiosity in a woman—and I heard him preach. And when he came to my home he used to talk to me about this message, until the time came that he was about to depart. He was going away to another part of the field. This particular day he was in there talking to me while my husband was out in the field, and while he was talking I heard a Voice say to me, 'This is your last chance.' I turned to him and said, 'Did you speak, Mr. Rodger?' He said, 'No, ma'am. What did you hear?' " She said, "I heard a Voice say, 'This is your last chance.'" He said, "That is the voice of the Spirit"; and she was so excited about it that when her husband came in she told him about it, and he said, "Mother, while I was out sawing the log of wood, I heard the same Voice saying to me, 'This is your last chance.'" And that meant that these two people went out the next morning about day-break, about five o'clock in the morning, to where there was a tidal stream—the tide was in at the time—and were baptized by Glaud Rodger. And that Scotchman, that Presbyterian, and his good wife, remained, to my knowledge, faithful to the Restoration up till the end of their lives. They bore testimony. Why? Because this work carried with it the Spirit of God, the witness of the Spirit, which is the most important thing; and associated with our propaganda work as we go forth, there must be that power of God, without which we can not succeed in putting this work across.

Some people believe that we should swerve toward scholasticism. I am not one of these. I love learning; but all the learning that could be crammed into my shallow brain could never drive out of it the witness of God's Spirit. Learning I think to be all right, provided I can classify it in the light of the truths that God has revealed to us. But our danger arises when we begin to classify the truths that have been revealed to us through the telescope of human education. That is where our danger lies. I say it boldly; I know it.

Even since I came to this land I have met young people who came out from church schools who are really perplexed concerning some of the things that they have been taught in the schools. One thing I shall mention: that man was one time a fish or a serpent or a mammal or an amphibian. It strikes at the very root of the Biblical revelation. That is what is termed the higher criticism. We are in danger from that viewpoint. Why, I ask, do we abandon the old paths wherein is the good way, in order to slip onto a position that can not be maintained even by those who propose it? It is time enough for us to accept the conclusions of science when scientists agree upon them, and when they are proved absolutely. But to yield our position that God created man in his own image for a position that says he created him as a fish, then as an amphibian, then serpent, or something of that kind—came up out of the sea into a tree, came out of a tree down on to the earth—it can not be proved at all! And yet that is what is being taught in the schools!

What I say is this, that we, as a people, are sent out to teach the principles of the gospel as they are revealed in the books of the church. The elders are commanded to teach the principles of the gospel that are revealed in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants. Those are our standards, and I find that the Doctrine and Covenants agrees with the Bible in that relationship. The Doctrine and Covenants says that God created man in his own image. The Bible says that after creating him in his own image, he gave him dominion over all these other lower creations, and I find it so today. I believe it ever has been so.

There are certain basic things I want to point your attention to that we must stand by, and one of the basic things that we must stand by is the revelations that have been given to us as a people. In the formation of every society there are certain basic principles that are observed. There are certain things that have arisen which make the formation of that society a desirable if not an imperative thing. And I say that in the formation of this great latter-day work certain things had arisen, certain conditions among the religious bodies of the world, that made the formation of a new society, a new witness for God, if you will, imperative. And just as soon as any society or church or organization of any kind proves to be untrue to its basic principles, that society is gone. It is gone. And so, when we review the past of religious history in the world, even the past of Christianity—why are we here today as a people? What was the reason for our existence? What is behind it all? Why are we just a little bunch of 100,000 people, standing out and witnessing for Jesus Christ in our own peculiar way? Well, I will tell you why: Because of the tendency on the part of humanity to depart from the laws of God. That is why we are here, and if we want to stay here and continue our witness faithfully, then we will have to stand by our fundamentals.

I will prove that. We are here because of the instability of man, or because of the delusiveness of the forces against which he fights in the spiritual world; because of the insidious character of evil which oftentimes comes in like an angel of light. And why did God give unto us the restored gospel? Why was it necessary to restore the gospel? There is only one answer to that, and that is, because there had been a great departure from the truth. You didn't have the Reorganization then. The light came and swept abroad throughout the world. The impact of light and darkness created quite a great deal of trouble, as it always does. There took place another apostasy, another breaking away from the truth, and up came the Reorganization. Can not you see that the reason why we are here today as a people is because other people have not been true to the foundational principles of religion, the principles upon which they were based? Then it remains for us to take heed that we be true to that which we have received. And I will say that one of the basic things of this organization, one of the key positions of this organization, which it must stand by or go down, is the restoration of the priesthood by revelation from God. You can take that and see if it will not stand the scrutiny of all the intelligence you can place upon it and apply it to the revelations.

What was wrong with that which preceded it? Just that very thing. They had lost the authority of God. They had lost the gifts of the gospel, which grew out of the use of authority. They had abandoned the ordinances that were placed in the church. These ordinances, when applied by those in authority, brought forth certain results.

You remember what was said by the Lord when he commissioned the disciples in ancient time, to "Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned," or condemned. And he went on and said, "These signs shall follow them that believe." The account goes on to say, "And the apostles went out everywhere and preached the word, and the Lord worked with them and confirmed the word with signs following." There was the difference. That is the vital difference between the Latter Day Saint body and sectarianism; because that involves the witness of God's Spirit to the world, and that witness of God's Spirit to the preached word is what is termed by John the "greater witness." If we have received the witness of man, the witness of God is greater; and so soon as revelation moves out of this church, so soon is the witness of God's Spirit moved out of it. Well, then, I may as well move out of it for all the good it will be to me. And I know there are thousands of others who stand where they do today in the church because God has spoken to them, and they know the movement to be divine.

I say, therefore, that one of the big points or spot lights in the history of this church is the restoration of the priesthood, and with that restoration, the restoration of the gifts and blessings of the gospel. I know that these gifts and blessings have been—what shall I say—misused. You all know that. I know it, too. Notwithstanding the fact I know that these gifts and blessings have been misused, I never can get away from the fact that God revealed the truth to me directly by his Spirit. Shall I tell you about that? Have I time?

I would not be here today were it not for the revelation of God's Spirit to me, individually and personally, concerning this work. I had drifted away from religion, from the religion of the Reformation. I had gone because there was no power in it, so far as I could discern. Other people might find power in it or consolation in it. I thank God if they can. I have no fault to find with that. But for me there was nothing. I had been down to the penitent form, and come away, as I thought, converted. But there was no sticking power in it. As soon as I struck the world, with all its evils and fascinations, I was swept away. I had nothing to hold on to.

And when these light bearers came from overseas to our home and brought the gospel there, I was absolutely indifferent to it. I wanted the playground, the dance hall, or any other worldly pleasure. They held me. I saw my father persecuted, heard him maligned, and saw our family go through persecutions, and I wished that this message had never come to our home. But a good life tells. I say this for the benefit and blessing of my brethren; to those who are disappointed in their children who go out in the world, feeling the prayers of a good father or a good mother have been wasted on them. I never went to the church where my father preached; never heard him preach in my life, I was so stubborn. But when my father, who was the president of a branch, lay on his deathbed just before he died, or passed on, I stood there at his bedside, and from his dying body there came to me this message, If your father could have uttered his dearest wish, it would be that you should take up his work where he lays it down.

I was outside the church; didn't know what it was that came to me. I told the people around me what came to me. That went on until I went to a meeting of the Saints, a sacrament meeting. One well-known brother stood up and prophesied to a sister in another portion of the hall from where I was sitting, but nobody knew but myself what message came to me through that means. He spoke to the sister over in the right-hand corner of the building. I was on the left-hand side, and God spoke to me through that man's message given to the sister. I recognized it was the same Spirit that had spoken to me at my father's bedside. It now said, "If you will join the church, if you will submit and become a member of this church, it will alter the whole course of your life."

Finally I submitted, and the prophecies given me when I joined the church indicated that which was told me at that bedside, that I was to follow in the footsteps of my father, to fulfill his dearest wish. I was to do that; and my stubborn heart was broken down, and I was ready. I remember what people said to me who knew me before I had that experience. They said, "Oh, you one time belonged to the sectarian church, and you then believed that Jesus Christ was the Son of God. Now, what is the difference between then and your position now?" I said, "The difference lies here: At one time I believed that Jesus Christ was the Son of God, but now I know, and can go forward as a witness, for I know that he lives, because he has spoken to me."

I was ordained to the office of elder three months after I came into the church. And I came into the position my father had held. From that time to this I have been doing all I can to build up this cause.

That grand old man, Alexander H. Smith, when you sent him to Australia, never saw our family until two days before he gave blessings. He told me exactly the same thing which had been told me at the bedside of my father, and further confirmed me, not only in the work, but prepared me for the office to which I have now been ordained. I believe in the divinity of this office or I would not have accepted it.

I want to get back to my text. The exhortation to Zion is, Send out thy light. What light? The light of God. The light of the gospel. There are any number of other people sending out certain kinds of light through education. Send out the light that has been revealed to you, the big points of which are the restoration of the priesthood; the revelation found of the Book of Mormon, the coming of the angel. Be true to the sentiments that have been expressed in the hymnology of the church; that "angels from heaven and truth from the earth have met, and both have record borne; thus Zion's light is bursting forth to bring her ransomed children home." Look at your hymnology, your books, and you can not fail to see that we must be true to these principles.

This morning I heard our brother speaking on the church, up in the radio room; the church which will stand the test of the future. I will tell you the church which will stand the test of the future, in one sentence. It is the church which carries most efficiently the message of love to mankind, and displays that love in actual deeds.

That is a complete answer. It is in harmony with what Paul said. Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am as sounding brass and tinkling cymbals. And he said, There are faith, hope, and charity, but the greatest of these is charity. And the church which will stand the test of the future is the church which has the most love of Christ in it.

I have not said half what I wanted to say. I may not ever get another opportunity of speaking to you, but I trust I may yet be enabled to let you know just a little more of what I think constitutes the genius of this movement into which we have been called.

May God bless you is my prayer. I thank you.

After all, perhaps the most terrible error of our smart and giddy-paced age is that we have mistaken knowledge for truth, and cleverness for wisdom, and have forgotten to distinguish between the "childish things," which Saint Paul said should be put aside, and the great childlike things, which abide, and to which we owe the strength and sanity of life.—Doctor Joseph Fort Newton.

Disease; Bacterial Infections.—Chapter 3

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

TREATMENT, PREVENTION, AND TESTS OF DISEASE

The Gospel of Disease Prevention

Bacteria of disease grow in dead matter everywhere, and produce decay. They change dead bodies to a form which plants use as food. A point of a pin may carry many thousand germs into the skin. They grow in the lymph, where they produce millions of new bacteria. Typhoid fever, diphtheria, erysipelas, and cholera are due to these organisms.

Propagation of Germs

When a cut discharges matter, or when a person takes a cold, it means a lot of active germs. The object of the physician and surgeon is to keep bacteria out of the lymph. Inflammation is due to the white blood cells beginning to stick to the sides of the finest blood tubes and passing through their sides into the lymph spaces, when more of the watery parts of the blood leave the capillaries, which produces a swelling. It is well to take care of cuts and bruises, and prevent inflammation and the entry of disease germs.

After bacteria gain entrance to the system through the skin, mouth, or other way, they may find a proper surface for development in the albuminous tissue, where, like yeast cells, they rapidly propagate. These bacteria produce noxious toxins and ptomaines, to which the various symptoms of disease are due, according to the specific microbes that spread into the tissues.

The field of disease-producing bacteria is so vast that only an outline can be given. The micrococci comprise spherically formed bacteria; the bacilli are oval or rod shaped, and the spirills are curved or twisted, as seen under high magnification.

Which, with you, are stronger—muscles, or ideals? Do not imagine that ideals have any right to absorb you, leaving your muscles to wither away. You will not begin to know what health means until you chuck overboard for good and all the symptoms and aches, fears and despairs, and wrong habits of diet and exercise. Be wise in choosing your doctor. Perhaps you need exercise; perhaps you need raw food; perhaps you need re-education of the brain cells. But whatever you need, use those things which are essential. You must fortify the whole physical body so as to master its numerous enemies and resist invasion.

The Microscope and Its Help

An influence which has helped the advance of scientific study and the progress of medicine, is the increasing perfection of the microscope. With each development of this instrument a greater range has been given to our researches, and, with the assistance of chemistry, it is continuing to reveal to us fresh facts, which have created new branches of science. Electricity has revealed to us the mode of action of nerve and muscle, which would have been impossible to obtain in any other way. Though the hopes at first entertained, of its value in the treatment of diseases, have not been altogether fulfilled, it is still of much service in this respect, and perhaps it is still more valuable as an aid in diagnosis.

The ophthalmoscope, introduced by Helmholtz, has enabled us to understand diseases of the interior of the eye, which, without its assistance, was impossible. The laryngoscope has given precision not otherwise attainable to the diagnosis and treatment of diseases of the throat. The sphygmograph and the cardiograph have enabled us to ascertain the exact condition of the circulatory system, and are of the greatest service not only in studying problems of normal and abnormal physiology, but in the recognition of disease and its tendencies and in the influence of remedies. Nothing, from the time of Harvey, gave such an impetus to the study of exact medicine as the introduction or discovery of listening to the heart, or auscultation, by Lænnec, in 1816. Percussion of the chest, along with auscultation, enables us to understand diseases of the chest to a degree of precision unequalled in any other department of practical medicine. We are now able not only to recognize disease of each of the valves of the heart, but to estimate its degree, and the influence of the lesion on the greater and lesser circulations.

Defense of Nature

Our knowledge of diseases of the lungs is nearly as complete as that of the circulatory system. When disease germs grow in the body, they produce toxins, which are carried through the body in the blood. A little group of tetanus germs in a small wound or a small patch of diphtheria germs growing in the throat, may produce enough toxin to kill. When disease germs grow in the body and begin to poison it with toxin, the body begins to produce antitoxin, which saves the cells from being poisoned.

Red corpuscles carry oxygen through the body. The white corpuscles are the soldiers who kill disease germs. When the corpuscles are victorious, the germs are destroyed and the disease is stopped. But if the germs are too numerous and too powerful, the corpuscles are killed, and the disease goes on until the body dies.

There is another great defender of the body, the germicidal substance of the blood, and when disease germs attack the body, more of the germicidal substance appears. While some people are naturally immune to all contagious diseases unless inoculated, and can even swallow germs, the majority of us have to keep our physical resistance high, so as to ward off germ developments, and also use prophylaxis, which is the avoidance of the poisons of infectious disease and of local infections. The use of antiseptics in washing the nose, mouth, teeth, and throat, is indicated.

Attacks of Bacteria—Immunity

If the body is successful in its struggle with its enemies, the germicidal substance and the white corpuscles get the upper hand. After a patient recovers from some diseases (for example, smallpox, measles, and whooping cough) a large amount of protective chemicals or substances remains in the blood for years, or even for life. A person is seldom attacked by one of these diseases twice. After other diseases (for example, pneumonia, influenza, and colds), the increased powers of the body to kill the germs quickly disappear.

Some of these bacterial attacks, as for instance measles, smallpox, scarlet fever, or typhoid, are followed by a period of immunity. It appears that the bacteria of disease have developed in the blood a substance, or anti-toxin, and this is Nature's method for prevention of recurrence of the same disease. This period of immunity varies with the individual, as it does with the type of disease. It is encouraging also to know that we have within us special defensive forces against disease. Nature is the great preventer, if given a chance, and if we live aright, and nature is self-healing if we provide the right living.

The foci, or centers of inflammation, cause various symptoms of disease as they spread to various parts of the body. The adult may complain of rheumatism or suffer from pains in the joints. The fouled content of the small intestine may send infecting organisms into the gall bladder, and then gallstones may form, which cause much pain and danger to life. Bladder and kidneys may become infected from foul intestinal organisms, sent to these organs for disposal, or excretion from the system. The circulatory system then carries these waste products, full of toxins, or poisons, which help produce excessive or abnormal blood pressure.

Occasionally the germs are present in oysters which have been grown in polluted waters. For this reason cooked oysters are safer than raw ones. In a large number of cases the typhoid germ has been carried in milk, where some one having the disease has handled the milk, or where the milk vessels have been washed in water containing the germ. In many other cases typhoid is contracted from water.

A considerable number of persons who have recovered from typhoid carry the germs long after they have recovered and are called "typhoid carriers." These germs usually locate themselves in the gall bladder and keep on passing into the intestine. Typhoid fever is one of the most easily prevented of all diseases. The great preventives of it are pure drinking water, a safe method of disposing of human sewage, destroying carefully the germs that come from the bodies of typhoid fever patients and others who are carrying typhoid germs, and removing the breeding places of flies.

The carriers of disease may be a clinical case of the disease, as a mild case of unisolated smallpox, or a lower animal; as for example the dog in rabies or the mosquito in malaria. Typhoid may spread when feces and urine are not properly disinfected; and certain persons are carriers of typhoid because their discharges contain the specific organism. The specific mode of transmission is usually direct contact, as in venereal infection. Respiratory diseases may be spread by coughing, spitting, or even by talking. Food may be contaminated by flies, or discharges may get into the food.

The Limitations of Vaccination

It is possible by vaccination to suppress smallpox in the United States if everyone would submit to this mild treatment and renew it periodically. Typhoid fever, diarrhea, and dysentery are spread by germ contact, but in these types vaccination has not been developed.

Other types of disease are numerous, but are rather for the physician to consider. The causative organisms are being gradually isolated and studied under the microscope, and their deadly secretions are being chemically analyzed for antidotes.

Some of the thousands of forms of bacteria rarely get some of us, as for example the spirocheta pallida, the specific of syphilis. This germ is from one to six times the diameter of a red blood-cell, and in width varies from immeasurable thinness to half a micron. Metchnikoff and Roux have demonstrated this organism in acquired syphilis of man and in experimental tests in the ape. Since acquired syphilis originates only by inoculation, it is obvious that a break in the skin or mucous surfaces is essential to infection, such as a slight abrasion, fissure, or laceration, particularly of the genital surfaces, and also possibly the lips and hands. Susceptibility to the virus is universal, and no age is exempt.

Pancreas Extract and Its Use

The use of pancreas extract in the relief of diabetes sufferers has been known for some time, and successful work with it has been reported from Toronto University, where experiments have been carried out. The use of this extract would seem to be one of the most important discoveries of recent years. Renewed administrations are necessary in order to assure the permanence of the good results. The fact that a disease hitherto considered incurable has been checked, even if only in a few cases, is not only a triumph of medical science, but also a new token of the marvelous strides made during the last half century in mastering the ills of the human flesh.

In certain kinds of kidney disease, as in diabetes, the organic substance which is chiefly at fault, being eliminated in excess, is the one which is most injurious when supplied to the organism in excess as a food, namely albumen or proteid in the one case, sugar in the other. So complex is the metabolism of such food that the appearance of albumen in the urine is regarded as a sign that proteid food can not be completely assimilated, and to add it to the dietary is to add to the proteid waste direct and endanger the system.

Diabetes and Diet

"There is no such thing as a diabetic diet." In other words, a routine dietary for this disease may beget more harm than good, and each case constitutes a separate dietetic study. It may be best to prescribe total abstinence from starch, and, of course, from sugar for a week or two, with the promise that as the symptoms abate a measured quantity of bread or potato will be again allowed. Otherwise the diabetic is apt to rebel against the hardship and help himself indiscriminately, with disastrous results.

The condition known as "stone in the bladder" is much benefited by diabetic treatment. The patient, usually in middle life, after leading an indoor or sedentary life, or after passing through a period of excessive mental strain and anxiety, complains of headache, insomnia, irritability, and lassitude. Constipation and a furred tongue are observed, the pulse is often small and hard, and the urine, somewhat diminished in quantity, is overloaded with proteid waste.

The term rheumatism covers a large number of diseases. Catarrh is confined to affections of the mucous membranes, and rheumatism is limited to diseases characterized by pain about the bones, joints, and other structures than mucous membranes.

Focal infections are due to disease-producing bacteria somewhere in the body. The original lodging place of infection is the focus for the spread or escape of bacteria, thus causing secondary foci or infection. These pour toxic substances into the circulation, causing neuritis, rheumatism, various pains and aches, etc.

Scarlet fever is caused by streptococci. The bacteria may escape into the blood stream and lodge in the capillaries of the heart, causing endocarditis. When one or more joints are involved, we have arthritis or rheumatism. Such foci of infection are found in the roots of the teeth, in the tonsils, nasal sinuses, middle ear, abdomen, joints, heart valves; so it is evident that they are contributing a cause to half of humanity's ailments.

I have outlined in this brief review a number of human ailments worthy of closer study. Authorities differ much in the details, yet there are surely fundamental principles which if properly mastered should make the art of prevention of at least equal value with the art of prescription, in taking care of diseases arising from infection, or bacterial poisoning.

Mortality from Influenza and Pneumonia

The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company reported influenza and pneumonia recently as responsible for 10.8 per cent of all death claims paid, and that tuberculosis of the lungs is responsible for 10.1 per cent of all cases. The common cold is a widespread, communicable disease. Bacteria that are present on the mucous membrane of the nose and throat may gain a footing as a result of lowered resistance. Bacteria may be present on the nose and throat membranes, causing only a mild catarrh if the body is strong, but on the lowering of resistance may be the beginning of a long strain of colds, and even pneumonia. To avoid catching cold it is necessary to avoid lowering resistance by avoiding chilling, wetting of clothing, and infection by contact with infected persons.

Tuberculosis costs the United States 150,000 people each year, and the annual cost in money is over a billion dollars. This is all due to the tubercle bacillus, that slow-growing germ so difficult to kill. In tuberculosis, any part of the body may be attacked, but consumption of the lung is the worst type of this disease. The germs of this disease enter the body either by being inhaled or by being swallowed. They withstand drying and are scattered in many ways. The sputum of consumptives is full of germs, and it should be burned or disinfected. A careless consumptive is dangerous, but a careful one is not to be feared.

Public health sanitation has stamped out the bubonic plague and typhus fever, and even smallpox has largely been reduced, while the mortality from diphtheria has been diminished by the use of anti-toxin. One by one the enemies of mankind have been conquered by the microscope and the biochemist. But when we come to tuberculosis, the difficulty is due to the germ carrier being man himself. We can not destroy him, as we would mosquitoes or rats. But then, man has acquired to some extent an immunity. This immunity wards off the ravages of the disease, provided the defensive forces have not been broken down by overwork, exposure, and dissipation.

Questionable Treatment

Some tell us that by auto-suggestion we can accomplish anything that is reasonable, or within reason. Is it to cure fibroid tumors, or cancer, or heal broken bones, or remove congenital defects and deformities? There are various cults that preach against any form of medical care or antiseptics, and that laugh at germs.

All these things if and when apparently accomplished by means of self-suggestion are beyond reason, and have invaded the domain of faith. It does not seem to me they are accomplished by such means as self-suggestion, or in the case of surgical involvements, by prayer. Not all the sick who go to Lourdes are healed.

Prevention has a lot to do with keeping fit. The way to keep well is to do the things a wise doctor would tell us to do. A physician is either a teacher or nothing. And the work of the teacher is to anticipate, not to probe or to mend.

The study of symptoms is made necessary by the neglect of causes. Some of the current modes of drugless healing are freakish, some are fanatical, and some are positively dangerous. But they have, together, done this one thing: they have shown that a man is a complex being, and that no amount of tinkering with his body will satisfy his heart, calm his mind, or heal and empower his soul.

Health is physical, mental, emotional, and psychic.

Do You Know Any of These Names?

In the list which follows are the names of persons who have been reported to this office as being "Unknown." It is our conviction that if we could bring these names in contact with the right persons we could locate a large number of them. It may be that in going down the list you may find only one or two persons that you know. However, your knowledge, added to that of another reader of the Herald, and everyone making his or her contribution, should result in a large proportion of these persons, who are supposed to be "Unknown," eventually becoming located.

According to our experience with the names beginning with the first four letters of the alphabet, we should be able to locate at least 20 per cent of the names on this list. To do this, however, will require the cooperation of all readers of the Herald, and we, therefore, earnestly solicit your support in order that we may be able to properly enroll these names.

If you are unable to give us the individual's present complete address, will you please advise us as to where such information may be obtained? If the individual has since died, will you please give us the approximate date of death? In case a sister has had a change of name by marriage, also give us the full name of her husband, and the date of marriage if possible.

The list which follows contains names on the Unknown completing the letters "W," "Y," and "Z."

NEWS AND LETTERS

Christ's Yoke

By J. R. Hockaday

Among the many invitations extended to mankind by our blessed Master, none ever excelled in thought and value the words: "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls; for my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

If only humankind would seek to be yoked with Christ and learn of him, then put into practice the things they have learned, Zion would be established; wars would be ended; man would be at peace with his neighbor and his God! To learn and practice the ethics of Jesus Christ is indeed the whole solution to the problem of getting man right with God.

The path of learning is one of continuous effort and seeking. Often we give up under the strain. Life takes faith and perseverance, a continuous effort on the part of each individual.

Many times our Savior, seeking to show us the pathway to God and eternal life, had to meet with hours of trials and discouragements. Under the great pressure of agony of body and spiritual darkness, he uttered on the cross the words: "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Yet he knew that it was necessary for him to go through the pangs of hell itself, being a partaker of the bitter and suffering all things, that a perfect atonement might be made.

Often when we look at our experiences and hear the experiences of others, we realize the truthfulness of the hymn:

"Through the furnace, through the heat,
There beneath the hammer's beat,
Through temptations manifold
Comes my soul like burnished gold."

The dross must be separated from the gold before we can turn it into a beautiful ring or any article of value. So must we in seeking to learn of the Savior of mankind start from where we are, forsake sin, seek God in earnest prayer, asking him to pilot us by his divine Spirit, trusting him when we can not see the intent of his workings. We must seek to be willing workers well yoked with him and our coworkers, each functioning in his place and helping God's church to move forward. Then will the Father send his divine Spirit upon us in more abundance, and by that power we shall learn of him until we fulfill the statement: "And this is life eternal that they may know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

Temperature Rises in Rock Island District

It seems that the cold weather must have affected our district thermometer for a time, as it remained at a standstill for a month; but the gospel temperature is rising again in spite of the continued cold weather. Today, January 26, three were baptized at Rock Island Church, where a tank heater has recently been installed, Pastor T. S. Williams officiating. Two adults and one child were baptized, representing three different families. This brings the Rock Island Branch contribution in baptisms up to nine; equal to that of Moline. Each of these two branches has one more to get in order to reach its quota of ten.

We feel that this district has made a good record during the past year, perhaps the best record ever made in this field during the same length of time. During the calendar year we contributed a little over $9,000 to the general church budget, and during the same period, it took about $5,700 to carry on local activities of the nineteen branches. The Saints of this district have done well, having paid about $2,800 more in tithes and offerings than during 1928. The record in baptisms has already surpassed all other records for this field, and we have two months yet in which to make our quota of one hundred twenty during the conference year. The record stands now at ninety-six. Surely in the next two months with Centennial Harvest Week (March 2 to 9) before us, we can raise our number.

The year 1929 has been the most active year in my ministry, but in spite of the strenuousness of the work I have enjoyed it. One enjoyable thing about my work is the true fellowship manifested on the part of the brothers with whom I have worked. I have found Brother Amos T. Higdon, district missionary, a consecrated, hard-working, loyal supporter of the gospel, a gentleman at all times, respected by all who know him, a true brother, friend, and servant of God. In the person of Bishop C. J. Hunt I have found a congenial associate, always ready to give fatherly counsel when he feels it is best to do so, always careful of the feelings of others. Being a hard worker, Brother Hunt has written hundreds of letters by way of encouragement to Saints during the year. While Brother Thomas S. Williams has not been long with us and has been absent on account of sickness and operations at the Sanitarium a part of the time since his appointment to this field, I have found him a congenial companion and a faithful pastor, who has endeared himself to the people he has tried to serve.

Aside from my associations with the general church representatives, my task has been made easier by the fellowship and counsel of Brothers Edward Jones and C. A. Beil, my counselors in the district presidency; and added to this is the kindly association of the nineteen branch presidents, who have cooperated with me in their particular fields; as well as the help of a number of the other local brothers. Especially do I wish to express my appreciation for the help of the branch presidents who have retired from office with the close of the year, and the confidence I have in the men who have taken their places.

I have visited all of the nineteen branches two or more times during the year, besides visiting two or more times at Princeville, Farmington, and Galva, Illinois, and once at Crabtown, Iowa. Wherever I have gone the Saints have treated me with the greatest respect, have made me feel at home in their homes, and have tried at all times to make things comfortable for me. I appreciate their fellowship and shall always have a warm place in my heart for the Saints of Rock Island District, as well as the many friends I have met outside the church.

Surely 1930 should be a still more successful year in this field, and to that task I trust we shall all set our hands.

E. R. DAVIS.

Los Angeles, California

Central Branch

Elder John F. Martin has continued his Sunday evening missionary sermons during the month of January. We feel confident that these services have done much good and will leave a lasting impression in the community. Partial evidence of the good done was the baptism on Sunday, January 5, of Sister Grace Bell and her two children, Claude Bell and Arvilla Bell, also Brother James P. Hepburn and Brother Cyrus N. Sparks. The baptismal service was conducted at the close of Sunday school, and the confirmation took place during the communion service. In the evening Brother Martin's subject was "Outward bound," and while this talk was primarily for the new members, it was a lesson to which all Saints should give heed.

November 24 was Graceland College Day, and Los Angeles Central Branch had a very impressive service. Apostle Myron A. McConley gave the College Day address. We were glad to have with us Brother Louis Ostertag and his wife, from Phoenix, Arizona. Brother Ostertag is pastor of the branch in that city.

November 26 the Idola Class held its regular monthly business meeting at the home of J. F. Martin. At this meeting the old organization was done away with, and the Idola Club was formed. This was done due to the fact that while the Idola Class was ostensibly organized to promote Sunday school attendance by adult members of the church, we found many in Los Angeles who desired to belong to the Idolas, but who were members of other Sunday school classes. The Idola Club was formed in order that all adult members might join in case they so desired. Election of officers for the new year was held at this meeting, the following being chosen: President, J. Arlie Austin; vice president, Frank A. Gregg; secretary-treasurer, Nelle E. Crum.

December 7 the Idola Club sponsored an indoor carnival in the recreation hall of the church. The ladies' aid members held their annual bazaar at the same time; while the event was not as well attended as we should have liked, a fair sum was raised to be turned over to the branch for expenses.

The branch business meeting was held Wednesday evening, December 11, and the following officers were elected for the year 1930: Glaude A. Smith, pastor; Raymond T. Knowlton and L. L. Sutherland, associate pastors; trustees, W. B. Badham, Doctor Joseph Mather, and Doctor A. W. Teel; custodian, Frank A. Gregg; financial committee, Wilber D. Gillen, chairman, W. B. Badham, Doctor Joseph Mather, Doctor A. W. Teel, and Albert H. Knowlton; branch clerk, Albert H. Knowlton; secretary-recorder, Bertha E. Austin; librarian, Pearl E. Crum; historian, Viola Bogue; publicity agent, J. A. Austin; superintendent of Sunday school, Sister Billie Carpenter; superintendent Department Recreation and Expression, Maenard D. Hall; superintendent department of music, Stella Kelley Hodges; superintendent Department of Women, Sister Joseph Mather. At the Sunday school election on the following Sunday, Brother Herbert Blakeman was elected as assistant superintendent, and Lois Neese secretary.

In our last letter to the Herald we stated that Sister Stella Kelley Hodges had taken a position out of the city and would not be with us any longer. Choir members were glad that Sister Hodges did not make this position permanent but has returned to us and is again in her old position as superintendent of music and choir director.

At the close of the business session December 11, Sister W. J. Menzies was baptized in the church font by Brother W. J. Nuckles. The confirmation took place at Lennox Mission Sunday, December 15.

Sunday morning, December 22, the choir rendered the Christmas cantata, "Chimes of the Holy Night," under the direction of Sister Stella Hodges. Mildred Mather Collings was at the organ and Nelle E. Crum at the piano. Special parts were sung by Sister Vera Martin, soprano; Sister Mildred Nesser, contralto; Glaude A. Smith, tenor; A. B. Crum, bass; an incidental trio: Mildred Nesser, Pearl Crum, and Bertha E. Austin. The Christmas message was given by Brother M. A. McConley.

In the evening an impressive Christmas pageant of the Nativity was given. This pageant was written by Sister Irene Stearns and directed by Sister Stearns and Sister Laura Freie.

The Sunday school Christmas program was given Monday evening, December 23, and it was indeed a delight to all who attended to see and hear the little children take their parts in the program.

Tuesday evening, December 31, there was a special prayer service at the church. This was followed by a watch party sponsored by the Idola Club. There were about seventy-five present, and everyone had a gay time. Games had been arranged by Frank A. Gregg and Bertha E. Austin, and every moment of the time was used. Refreshments were served at eleven o'clock in order that we might be ready for a time of community singing and a word of prayer before the New Year was ushered in.

New Year's parties had been arranged to take care of all members of the branch from Temple Builder age up. The younger Temple Builders, under the leadership of Sister L. B. Shippy, united with the younger members of the boys' group, Knights of the Living Triangle, and had a party at the home of Sister Armstrong. The Idola Club invited the Mizpah Chapter of the Temple Builders, which is the older group, and the older members of the boys' group to join in their party. All these ages were thus cared for at the two parties.

Thursday and Friday evenings, January 2 and 3, Bishop David B. Carmichael and his counselor, Brother Jack Milner, held meetings at the church explaining the tithing system by the use of charts. These meetings were instructive to those who attended.

Tuesday evening, January 7, a special prayer service was held at the church at eight o'clock in order that the Saints in Los Angeles could do their part in forming the "chain of prayer" which was made during the week of January 5 to 11. A good number attended this service, and the Los Angeles link in the chain was thus completed.

Brother and Sister Fred Himmelgarn are the proud parents of a little girl, Dixie Ellen, born November 2, 1929.

Betty Gene Gardner, daughter of Murray and Betty (Crayne) Gardner, bears the distinction of being the first baby born in the Good Samaritan Hospital in Los Angeles in the year 1930, arriving January 1, 1930.

Herbert Blakeman and Cora Condit were married Sunday, November 10, 1929, Brother John F. Martin officiating.

Clarence L. Tindall and Erma Poort were united in marriage by the pastor, Glaude A. Smith, Sunday, November 17, 1929.

Linaus G. Parr and Nellie M. Hamm were married Sunday evening, December 8, 1929, Brother John F. Martin performing the ceremony. We wish these young people happiness.

Omaha, Nebraska

Central Branch, Thirty-sixth and Burt Streets

For Central Omaha Branch the fall and winter months have been busy ones. Everyone must help in the work of the Master of men, and it seems that with the coming of frosty weather we have had an added impetus and desire to do our parts.

October, the month for rally days, was remembered by both Omaha Branches. October 6 Central Branch dismissed its evening services and worshiped with South Side Saints. The following Sunday our good friends returned the call and helped us celebrate our rally day. District President H. A. Merchant was the morning speaker, and the evening hour was given over to a pleasing musical program by the choir.

October 23, chicken dinner! We had a chicken dinner, which was served under the direction of Pastor John L. Cooper. We had a capacity house of over two hundred people, and the branch treasury received the proceeds.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards gave an excellent sermon October 27, entitled, "The need of the church."

The first Sunday in November Presiding Patriarch Frederick A. Smith came to pay the Omaha Saints a visit. This was more than just an official visit, as Brother "Fred" was pastor of Omaha Branch some thirty years ago. He gave us some food for thought at the sacramental meeting, and the following four nights were well spent in preaching services.

November 24 was the annual College Day and Thanksgiving Sunday. Brother Walter Badham, former student of Graceland, presented an interesting talk on some of the historical events of the college and the progress of the institution. Elder R. W. Scott followed with a short discourse on "The thankfulness of Thanksgiving." Special services were held at the church on Thanksgiving morning.

We numbered among our December speakers Elder J. F. Mintun, of Council Bluffs, and Patriarch J. T. Gresty, who came December 4, at which time a reception was held at the church. Brother Gresty stayed the balance of the week and spent several hours in rehearsing the combined choirs of Council Bluffs and the two Omaha Branches in the Centennial Oratorio, The Course of Time.

The evening of December 12 the annual branch business meeting was held. Apostles E. J. Gleazer and J. F. Garver assisted in the stand. With but a few exceptions the corps of officers were sustained.

Sunday evening, December 15, the combined choirs, of which mention has before been made, rendered the Christmas cantata, "The Christ-child," at the Council Bluffs Church. The 22d this same group favored Omaha with this cantata.

December 18 and 19 the Women's Department, which is ever working to increase our bank account so that we might in the not too distant future realize our aim of completing our church edifice, held its annual Christmas bazaar at the county courthouse. This endeavor netted something like a hundred dollars.

Santa Claus arrived Monday evening before Christmas and left a box of nuts and candy for each Sunday school scholar. Needless to say the recitations and dialogs of the children were much enjoyed by the grown-ups and the "growing-ups."

Two of our priesthood were honored at surprise birthday parties in the recent past. Brother B. M. Anderson was presented a leather-bound volume of Doctrine and Covenants, and Brother C. T. Self was given a brief case. We feel that when our priesthood are brought together in this way it can not but tend to promote the spirit of fraternity and good fellowship.

It was with a spirit of reluctance that we wrote finis to our work in 1929; yet who in the church could not but rejoice that the first half of our slogan—Forward to 1930—had been realized? The prevailing theme of the testimonies at the midweek prayer meeting, held on New Year's night, was that each one felt it a good way to start the centennial year.

Services the first Sabbath of the New Year were well attended. At the Sunday school, which is under the direction of Brother Marion F. Cooper, promotions were taken care of, pledges were made, and class officers were elected. Sacramental service was particularly well attended, and each one was edified and strengthened to press on, as were those who met at the cottage prayer meetings during the Week of Prayer.

Little Visits in Zion

By J. M. Terry

Since the last time I wrote of our travels about the city of Independence, my companion and I have visited the flock at Mount Washington, Missouri, where we enjoyed the fellowship of kindred spirits and tried to encourage them in the precious faith as revealed in 1830 and perpetuated in the Reorganization.

September 29 by invitation I preached at Buckner. A happy congregation greeted us, and the people were delighted with the recital of her prize-winning oration, "The Restoration," by Olive Curtis, of Independence. In speaking of the marvelous work I was given freedom, and the reception by the Saints was whole-hearted. That night we were greeted by a zealous band of Saints at the Liberty Street Church. These Saints are enjoying the liberty of the gospel, being made free from the bondage of sin and death.

As her health permits, my companion is with me in my visits, a present help.

October 6 at the invitation of the Chelsea Church in Kansas City, we occupied the sacred desk, being taken to the church in the car of Brother Thomas McKevit. Brother Harrington made us welcome and gave us something to do. A group of members who love the Lord's work worship in Chelsea Church.

We enjoyed a pleasant visit with the author of the music to the song, "God is marshaling his army," and many other pieces, Brother H. R. Mills, who came to Independence from Pittsfield, Illinois, in 1884. Brother Mills is still vigorous in mind and with his active companion is firm in the faith.

In August we visited Spring Branch to meet with a faithful congregation then under the pastorate of Elder Snively. They worship in a well-equipped stone building which in time will serve as the lower auditorium of a fine church building. Spring Branch is an important part of Zion, united and progressive. Farther east we find the East Independence Church cared for by Brother Thatcher, whose father I knew some years ago in Stewartsville. Here is another faithful flock, a unit of Zion sharing the same spirit. The home of worship resembles the one at Spring Branch, they too awaiting the superstructure to complete the building.

Recently we were reminded of the days when we started our life's work as a missionary when we were invited to visit the Sugar Creek Mission cared for by Brother and Sister Clutter. We tried to encourage them to press on. Our first mission was in Saint Joseph, where we started the Aspey Mission, which has grown into the South Saint Joseph Church. Sister Josie Isleib, a beautiful singer, helped with her musical voice. My companion was at my side, and the moral and spiritual support of the Saints sustained me in the work. Brother and Sister Clutter are doing splendid work in their mission. This is their second undertaking of this kind.

We were gladdened in the receipt of some four score Christmas greetings, one from our beloved missionaries in Norway; they came from many points ranging from Alaska to the South, from the Isleibs in the East to the Pacific coast and even from Millersburg, Illinois, our birthplace. We thank all who remembered us, for we appreciated every word breathing kindness and love.

At midnight last night, when the year of 1930 was ushered in, we were seated in the Auditorium in a congregation of about two thousand Saints, listening to a splendid appeal to the church made by President Frederick M. Smith. This appeal closed the watch meeting. Brother John Sheehy had general charge and led in singing many of the favorite hymns. The musicians did excellent work.

This New Year's morning as the snow is falling and the mercury hovers about the thirty-four mark, I wish for the happiness of all in the most blessed cause the earth has ever known, the great latter-day evangel.

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Rhinehard and Twenty-second Streets

January 27.—Sacramental service for January was in charge of District President A. E. Anderton, assisted by Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith and Bishop H. E. French. At the opening of the service Brother Robert E. Madden was ordained an elder under the hands of Brothers F. A. Smith, J. E. Matthews, and H. E. French. The Spirit of the Master was present throughout the meeting, and the members felt encouraged in the work to be accomplished this year.

In the evening Pastor R. E. Madden preached on the theme "Prayer."

Sister Helen Neiman Skeer underwent an operation for appendicitis January 6 at Grant Hospital. At this writing she is able to be out.

The Women's Department met January 9 in the social room of the church; potluck dinner at noon. The meeting was called to order at two o'clock by the singing of the department song, "Consecration." Twenty-one members and four visitors were present. A new member was added to the department, Sister Edith Feller.

The Blue Birds, under their guardian, Lepha McMillin, are meeting twice a month. The Orioles, under their monitor, Leah Turvey, will meet twice each month. The Tri Sigma Chapter of Temple Builders, led by Lucinda Madden, are doing handwork at their meetings each Tuesday evening.

January 12 at the morning hour Bishop H. E. French read for a lesson Isaiah 29, choosing for a text, "I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder."

J. E. Matthews, in the evening, preached on the text from John 1:9: "That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world," and in connection with this John 8:12: "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." District President A. E. Anderton met with the branch that evening.

January 13 in the evening the officers and teachers of the Sunday school met in the social room of the church to enjoy a delicious potluck supper. The committee in charge had left nothing undone and at the appointed time twenty-four were seated at the well-laden table. Following the supper, discussions were had in charge of Superintendent Carl E. Turvey. Some promotions were arranged for in the classes, and a teachers' training class was discussed. This will be decided upon at the February meeting to be in the form of a Valentine social. It was decided to hold a similar meeting once each month. The Sunday school is growing, and new interests are arising each week.

At the morning hour January 19 G. H. Kirkendall preached on the theme "Preaching." That evening another precious soul was added to the kingdom; Sister Kathryn Stratton was baptized by J. E. Matthews. She was confirmed later in the evening by J. E. Matthews and H. E. French.

January 26 in the evening Doctor W. B. Reeves preached on "Vision," selecting for a text Proverbs 29:18: "Where there is no vision the people perish."

Nowata, Oklahoma

The faithful few are endeavoring to keep the spark of interest alive in this community. We have entered the new year with renewed energy and consecration.

A spiritual prayer meeting and communion service marked the first Sunday of January.

The annual business meeting was held in December, the following branch officers being elected: President, A. J. Bly; branch clerk and treasurer, Sister Louise Hayworth; pianist, Elinor Hayworth; chorister, George Hayworth; publicity agent, E. J. Lumm; Sunday school officers: Superintendent, O. A. Duncan; assistant, W. T. Hayworth; secretary, Mida Bly; treasurer, Louise Hayworth; librarian, Nolen Duncan.

Some friends are investigating the work. One woman asks an interest in the prayers of the Saints that she may know where the Lord would have her work.

It is hoped that the members of Nowata Branch who have not been attending will receive new interest, and present themselves ready to help. We wish to show our friends that we have the light and that we are striving toward higher things. Everyone hopes that the missionaries will be with us this year.

Vancouver, British Columbia

Vancouver held annual business meeting December 16, 1929, J. E. Johnston in charge. Brother Johnston spoke of the good fellowship that has been noticeable among the Saints during the past year. All other officers in their reports supported the president's remarks. The financial report also was good, and the branch is looking forward to progress. All branch officers were reelected to their respective offices.

Vancouver Saints started the year as one big family. Once more was held the annual New Year's dinner at the church. About ninety members and friends sat down to turkey, beef, pudding, and mince pie. The food was donated by the members, everyone bringing what was needed as his portion. An enjoyable program followed the meal, after which everyone went home feeling cheered. This was a real home gathering of the Saints.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has changed to Friday evening. More activity is expected with the passing of cold weather.

January 12 the branch added to its numbers a young man recently elected Sunday school superintendent, Norman Morrison. We heartily give Brother Morrison the hand of fellowship. We also have the pleasure of having back once more Brother Isaac McMullin, who will be an able assistant.

Brother J. E. Johnston is branch president; Sunday school superintendent, Leonard Quance; president of the Women's Department, Sister John Dallyn; president of the Department of Recreation and Expression, Edwin Spargo.

Kirtland, Ohio

At the branch business meeting all officers were sustained, or rather reelected for 1930. The old year ended with the young people singing carols on Christmas Eve, a fine play or cantata at the Kirtland Auditorium Christmas Eve, and a young people's New Year's Eve party. At this party the old year was rung out and the new year rung in by the Temple bell.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, for several years under the direction of William F. Webbe, district superintendent, is striving to promote the interest of all and to develop talent in the various branches. The executive committee decided to make 1930 a banner year for Kirtland. Our Auditorium is much improved. The stage is more complete, with curtains, drop scenes, and other equipment, and now that the dramatic club is organized for study, will be further completed. This year the Auditorium will be re-seated.

We have a forum class Thursday evening preceding the program. There are also a troop of Boy Scouts, Temple Builders, Orioles, Blue Birds, and young people's clubs. The scouts made wooden toys to distribute among the needy neighbors. The girls helped by dressing and upholstering some of the toys, distribution being made Christmas Eve. This seems to have become an annual event, so the superintendent of boys is striving to have a place in the Auditorium basement fitted with a work bench for the boys to do manual training. The branches appointed a committee to provide a suitable place for the boys to work and develop useful talent.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

Sunday, January 5, was a fine sunny day in this region, and Sunday school opened with fifty-seven present, everyone filled with zeal and ambition for the year. Balancing his books, the secretary finds that fifty sessions of the school were held during 1929; two were missed, one because of home-coming exercises October 20, the other a two-day meeting July 27 and 28. The financial side of the record was good. We hope to do better in every part of this department during this year.

Sacramental service opened in charge of Brothers Walter Culp and Donald Bealor. The influence of the Spirit was experienced to a marked degree.

January 12 a friend, J. C. Leonard, came to Sunday school and taught a singing class. He is well acquainted with music, and his help was appreciated.

A son was born to Sister Zella Bealor at Mercy Hospital January 11. He lived three hours. Was laid away in the Rushtown Cemetery the following Monday. Sister Zella is better.

Because the Saints here live far apart and the change of weather abruptly took the mercury down to zero, attendance at Sunday school January 19 was slight.

Muskegon, Michigan

The regular quarterly business meeting was held December 30. Most of the old officers were retained. Elder Whitehead still continues as branch president. Brother E. E. Loomis succeeds Brother H. D. Osborn as superintendent of Sunday school. Knowing he will maintain the high standard set by his predecessor, we wish him success. Brother H. D. Osborn succeeds Brother Charles Sheffer as superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression. He is particularly fitted for this work, his field of labor having been among young people since his ordination.

The priesthood, under the leadership of Elder Whitehead, have been pursuing a new course of study. At each session one member is asked to prepare a twenty-minute talk to be given at the next meeting. At the close of the address the pastor gives a constructive criticism. It has been helpful in training younger members of the priesthood to speak in public.

Sunday evening, December 22, the Sunday school gave a three-act play, "The dream of Queen Esther," instead of the usual Christmas program. The play was again presented January 3. The church was well filled both evenings. Several members attended from Ludington.

A watch party was held at the church New Year's Eve. The early part of the evening was spent playing games. At 11.30 all assembled in the auditorium for a song service and a short address by the pastor. As the new year entered all stood with bowed heads while Elder Whitehead offered prayer.

Fargo, North Dakota

Bungalow Church, 1423 First Avenue, South

January 21.—The Week of Prayer was observed in Fargo Branch in spite of cold weather. Meetings were had at different homes through the week and at the church on Sunday. Many earnest prayers were offered for the progress of the work. There were times, when singing the hymns together, that song seemed a real prayer to God. The Spirit of the Father is enjoyed when there is harmony among the members.

The Sunday school has a new corps of teachers: Beginners, Vera Stowell; primary, Ina Freeman; junior, Blanche Farley; intermediate, Leola Hennamen; young people, Courtney Rotzien; adult, Laura Freeman. The theme for the first Sunday of 1930 was "The open door," as suggested in Departments' Journal. A short program was given. On the platform a framework to represent the open door was erected. Colors were white and green, and cotton and artificial icicles helped to add wintry appearance. Over the door was inscribed "The open door." It is hoped all may feel to sense the meaning of entering this door of golden opportunities with humble hearts and a new zeal for service.

A teachers' meeting was held January 15. It was decided to start a teachers' training class. Plans were suggested for Christmas offering in the school, and it was decided that each teacher should have access to the Departments' Journal.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, Sister R. T. Walker, superintendent, met for the first meeting Sunday evening. It was decided to meet on Wednesday evening hereafter unless some other evening during the week would be more advisable. The study of drama and recreational leadership was advised. It is hoped to use dramatics in a practical way more than theory, in order that all ages may find expression therein. We hope in the field of religious education to be workers together with God throughout the year.

The Department of Women met at the home of Sister W. G. Couey for the business session, Sister R. H. Freeman superintendent. It was decided to have the first two weeks of the month for study classes and one week sewing demonstration. Sisters Minnie Peterson and William Shackow were appointed friendly visitors. Sister Thomas Hunter was chosen assistant superintendent at the council meeting. Sister W. G. Couey was appointed leader of the Temple Builders, and the girls' first meeting occurred January 17.

A Christmas program and tree were had by the Sunday school on Christmas Eve, Santa Claus assisted by his son distributing treats. The entertainment was well attended.

Pastor Thomas Leitch has been feeding the flock with sermons from Matthew 20: "The kingdom of heaven," also Daniel 2: 44, 45, and Matthew 24: 29-31, "Christ's second coming." He visits and encourages isolated Saints from time to time.

Elder Charles J. Smith, who is district president and missionary, gave two inspiring sermons Sunday, January 19. At the eleven o'clock hour he used for his theme, "The open door," reading Revelation 3: 8: "Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." The open door, he stated, sets before us the effectual opportunities and privileges basic to social and spiritual development. Zeal, he added, properly combined with wisdom, produces knowledge. There are many agencies at work of which we do not know for the accomplishment of God's work. Let us be willing to take good from any source. As visitors at the morning hour, three Utah elders were present.

Montrose, Iowa

January 22.—The year 1929 has left Montrose Branch fewer in number. Some of the most active and faithful members are gone. Brother and Sister B. F. Strange and family moved to Fort Madison to be near Brother Strange's work. Brother and Sister La Matty and family moved to Keokuk, Brother La Matty having employment there. Sister Nora Glassford moved with her family to the country, taking a farm near Donnellson, Iowa. Since the branch was small when it included the above-named members, it feels the loss of them greatly. However, the few left are endeavoring to carry on the work of the Master, hoping some day, since they are located just across the Father of Waters from Nauvoo, to be ready to become a part in the restoration of Nauvoo District to a corner stake of Zion.

The branch and Sunday school recently elected officers for the centennial year. Branch officers are: President, Orval T. Miller; clerk, Eva I. Miller; treasurer, Joseph H. Reed. Orval T. Miller was recommended to the publicity department as publicity agent. President of the Women's Department, Beulah G. Smith; R. N. Smith was chosen acting deacon. Sunday school officers are: Superintendent, Raymond N. Smith; assistant, Eva I. Miller; secretary, Lillian Shuster; treasurer, Joseph H. Reed; librarian, Yvonne Smith; janitor, James Bunker.

Some of the members will attend the centennial conference of the church, two being delegates.

London, Ontario

The branch and its departments began the new year under favorable conditions. At a largely attended business meeting the following officers were chosen to take care of the branch activities: President, J. E. MacGregor; counselors, W. A. Hardey and J. Winegarden; secretary, Arlo Hodgson; financial secretary, J. Judkins; treasurer, H. Ward; superintendent of department of music, Fred Heddington; organist, Dorothy Abell; bishop's solicitor, W. A. Hardey; superintendent of religious education, Frank Gray; superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression, J. Winegarden; superintendent of Women's Department, Cynthia Vasbinder; finance committee, J. E. MacGregor, J. Vasbinder, J. G. Timbrell, J. Winegarden, C. W. Alford, H. Ward, J. Judkins, W. A. Hardey. The officers are again working under the group system.

Elder William I. Fligg, district missionary, who was here a couple of weeks, did efficient work among the Saints in their homes.

The dramatic club, under the presidency of Brother J. Vasbinder, has been active. The members put on an interesting play in the schoolroom several times and at the Byron Sanitorium. The branch and other departments have been helped by the proceeds of the club.

Sister Lillian Winegarden is convalescing after a couple of weeks of illness.

Sister Blodgett, of New London, Connecticut, who has been in poor health of late, is improving. She is with her parents, Brother and Sister C. W. Alford.

Speakers at the sacred desk during the past month have been Elders MacGregor, J. Winegarden, Bishop J. C. Dent, F. Gray, W. A. Alford, A. Hodgson. Their discourses were interesting and encouraging. One Sunday evening a month is given to the choir. They rendered a good program last month, being assisted by the Sunday school orchestra.

The Women's Department, Temple Builders, and Oracles are busy. There is some talk of organizing a Tenth Legion, and we hope the plan materializes.

The Religio also is coming to the fore under the direction of Elder J. F. Winegarden and his assistants. This promises to be a banner year for our branch.

Birmingham, Alabama

January 27.—We are having interesting Sunday school sessions, Brother Marvin Salter superintending and teaching the adult class. Because of the smallness of the school, it is necessary at times to double up on the work. We are keeping active, and the interest in class work is good.

The members who have served during the past year were reelected to preside over the Sunday school, one new officer being added, assistant superintendent. The corps is: Superintendent, Marvin Salter; assistant superintendent, Lyle D. Flynn; secretary-treasurer, Sadie Chandler; pianist, Vida Booker; chorister, Wilbur Chandler. The election of officers for the group resulted in Brother V. R. Chandler as group leader; Lyle D. Flynn, assistant; Doctor G. G. Booker, secretary-treasurer; pianist, Vida Booker; chorister, Wilbur Chandler; publicity agent, Elbert Chandler.

The program we are endeavoring to carry out consists of preaching service every other Sunday morning following the Sunday school, and sacramental service the second Sunday of each month.

We have endeavored to make our programs as varied as possible in Sunday school and church service, giving everyone something to do in order to make it as interesting as possible.

We would appreciate the addition of Saints to our number. Anyone desiring to locate in Birmingham may obtain information from V. R. Chandler, 1618 Fifty-first Street, Central Park, Birmingham. We would advise, however, that anyone contemplating moving here should have a trade or profession with employment guaranteed in advance. While business seems good here, there is much idleness.

Visits from the missionaries are always appreciated.

Hutchinson, Kansas

C and Plum Streets

This is the first time we have written to the Herald since the flood last summer almost wrecked our church home. The Saints here are getting back on their feet, and everything seems to be going well. We have the seats which were ruined by the water fixed up again, a new piano, and a live, enthusiastic group of members. What more could we ask?

A short time back election of officers to preside throughout 1930 was had. Brother T. C. Turpen was elected pastor, Brothers J. N. Madden and E. P. Sanders counselors. Brother E. P. Sanders was elected Sunday school superintendent; Brother C. C. Peters, president of Religio; Sister Juanita Peters, head of the Women's Department. Each of these departmental heads has a corps of able assistants. We hope to move forward this year.

During 1929 we baptized thirty people and grew to a total membership of eighty in spite of the flood. Attendance at all services was good, and fine interest was shown.

We have a boys' department in charge of Brother Oscar Seley, and a girls' department directed by Sister Margaret Turpen, and the boys and girls are growing under this leadership.

We hope general church officers passing through Hutchinson will take time to visit us. We are urging all of the members who can possibly do so to attend the Centennial Conference in April. Hutchinson is supporting the church and its entire program.

E. P. SANDERS.

Fisher, Arkansas

January 28.—It is said in Arkansas that if it rains the first day of the month, it will rain fifteen days. This month the forecast has proved true. For this reason business meeting to elect branch officers did not convene until January 12. There was a short talk from the pastor, and upon his recommendation A. E. Ziegenhorn was elected presiding officer of the branch for the year. Brother Gordon immediately gave way to his successor, wishing to give him the benefit of the opportunity to direct. This no doubt is uncommon but practical. The new pastor, desiring a little time to prepare a creditable program, asked the meeting to adjourn until the following Sunday.

The following meetings brought out some remarkable incidents, which it is hoped will produce new mileposts and an expansion of the work. Upon the advice of the pastor several committees were appointed. A need for research is felt, which is being cared for. Committees and commissions seem to be in line with the trend of the times. A short talk by the pastor indicates that it is a part of everyone's business to have an efficient branch.

The enthusiasm manifested at present seems to indicate such a motto as this: "Calm, deliberate judgment and a resolution to work hard to accomplish what we set out to do."

Mobile, Alabama

The latter part of November, 1929, a departmental institute was held in Mobile. Some very profitable lectures on phases of departmental work were delivered by Brother and Sister J. A. Gunsolley and Sister Frances Booker. Sunday evening, as a closing feature of the institute, a Graceland College program was rendered and an offering taken for the scholarship fund.

December 5 at seven o'clock in the evening a banquet was given the men of the church by the Women's Department in recognition of their willing and untiring service in building the new church. The speakers for the evening were Apostle James A. Gillen, Missionary N. L. Booker, and District President Franklin Steiner. Pastor G. E. Burt acted as master of ceremonies. The banquet was served in the little church building, which was prettily decorated in church colors. About fifty men attended, and there was a marked spirit of friendliness.

The formal opening of the new church was held December 8. Promptly at 9.45, the Sunday school hour, the congregation arose and with one accord sang "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." The opening prayer was offered by Elder N. L. Booker; then "The old, old path" was sung. As the march was played the children quietly passed out, going to their little building for the class period, after which junior church service was held. The opening sermon at eleven o'clock was ably delivered by Apostle J. A. Gillen, who commended the Saints for the splendid spirit of willingness, friendliness, and cooperation which made possible the new church in this city, a building reared almost entirely by donated labor, modern in every respect and one of which the Saints can justly feel proud. We were, however, admonished that though our task of building the church is about completed, our work has only begun, and our responsibilities are more than doubled. May the Father bless us and help us, that we may not fail but with faith and courage as a united band of workers carry the work forward. Special music for the day was rendered by the choir. The church was decorated with palms, ferns, and flowers. About three hundred were registered in attendance on the opening day.

At the evening service Apostle Gillen was again the speaker, opening a series of meetings to continue ten days. Good crowds attended during the week.

Bishop Albert Carmichael was the speaker the following Sunday morning and at the round table discussion in the afternoon. That evening Apostle Gillen gave his closing address to a large audience. Every seat in the house was filled. Bishop Carmichael continued the meetings three nights, teaching the temporal law, especially calling attention to the making of a steward. While attendance at these meetings was not large, we think much good was accomplished. Surely those who were present have a clear understanding of the law.

December 30 the branch met in business session to elect officers for the year. Those chosen were: Pastor, G. E. Burt; associate pastor, Franklin Steiner; clerk, Irene Day; treasurer, R. E. Scarcliff; superintendent of Sunday school, Franklin Steiner; assistant, J. W. Hancock; superintendent of Religio, Oran Cochran; head of Women's Department, Irene Day, assisted by Winona Miller; musical director, Verna Burt; pianist, Elsie Smith.

Brother Albert Miller, who has been confined to his home for two months, is again able to meet with us. Brother Miller has been suffering with a broken leg sustained in an automobile accident.

We begin the year with a hope born of determination that we may contribute our part in making this year the greatest in the history of the church.

Aurora, Illinois

January 28.—Aurora Branch has entered the new year with zeal, its members praying and working that we may accomplish much of real value during the next twelve months. Despite the fact we have no church building, meetings are held regularly at the home of J. E. Wildermuth.

New officers have been elected: Brother Clement Malcor, branch president; assistant, Brother Lon Williams; superintendent of Sunday school, Sister Erma Wildermuth; assistant, Irvin Luke.

Brother and Sister Clement Malcor have opened their home to the young people's department, Brother Irvin Luke leader, Sister Erma Wildermuth assistant, Brother Clement Malcor, Sister Laura B. Atkins, and Sister Mable Reedy teachers.

J. F. Wildermuth, district president of Northeastern Illinois, who has been away from home for the past three months on account of business, was with us Sunday. He is an earnest worker in the church and is greatly missed when away from us.

Elder Roscoe Davey, district missionary, spoke during the Sunday morning service. His subject was "Stewardship." His sermon was so convincing that some are giving it more consideration.

Ezra Dutton and family visited here during their stay with Brother and Sister J. E. Wildermuth.

Sister Ruth Hankin's baby, Ruth Bordwell, was blessed last Sunday. Sister Hankins and children left for Peoria this week, where her husband is employed.

Beryle Wildermuth is attending college at Bozeman, Montana, this winter.

Rolney Wildermuth, who has been away for the past two years in charge of his father's wheat farm in Montana, made Aurora a short visit. He is at present with his grandmother at Janesville, Wisconsin.

The Women's Department meets at the home of Brother and Sister Malcor every other week. Sister Clement Malcor is leader and Sister Ava Wildermuth teacher. They are studying the guidance of childhood and youth.

The Kirtland Auditorium

The Kirtland Auditorium

Because of the tangible evidence of the activities of the early Saints in and around Kirtland, that little village will always be of historic interest to Latter Day Saints. Kirtland Temple stands today as a symbol of loyalty, consecration, and sacrifice and is evidence of the heroism and undaunted courage of the early Saints.

Oncoming generations seeking for trace of the activities of the early Saints will find in Kirtland Temple that evidence which symbolizes the ideals of the first Saints of the church—a century ago. No small amount of confirmation will come to those who review the past when they realize that the same fundamental ideals which motivated the members of the early church still live and command the loyal support of Latter Day Saints.

In the future more than in the past, Kirtland will serve the church as a center or a gathering place midway between Nauvoo and Palmyra. The Saints in the districts immediately surrounding Kirtland have planned to make it suitable for accommodating larger gatherings of people. For several years in the recent past, the annual Kirtland reunion has attracted an increasing number. It is well that this is so. Under the spiritual atmosphere of reunion services many have been reborn to a more faithful observance of their church covenant, with the result that they have rededicated their lives to God and reconsecrated their time, their talent, and their money to the service of the church.

A few years ago the Saints in that vicinity authorized the building of an auditorium at Kirtland which will relieve the Temple of any activities which more appropriately might be conducted elsewhere. The total cost of this investment is approximately sixteen thousand dollars. The Saints in the Kirtland Branch have paid three thousand dollars of the amount; the remaining indebtedness is but eight thousand dollars at the present time. The general church has a vital interest in seeing this auditorium completed and will assist in liquidating the debt, provided Saints in the six districts immediately surrounding Kirtland will pay one half, or four thousand dollars, of the remaining debt. The districts included in this area are: Northwestern Ohio, Southern Ohio, Kirtland, Pittsburgh, Wheeling, and West Virginia. It ought not to be difficult for the Saints in these six districts, which have an enrollment of approximately fifty-three hundred members, to raise this amount.

Year after year many hundreds of people have received benefit at the annual Kirtland reunion. The Kirtland auditorium serves a distinct purpose and is adapted for mass meetings, entertainments, special programs, lectures, classes, commissary and meal service, and recreational activities. When the indebtedness on the building has been cleared, attention will be given to improving the property and making it even more adaptable for the purposes for which it was built.

There are many Saints outside the districts above mentioned who have enjoyed the facilities which the Kirtland Auditorium has offered on many occasions. We are very sure that many of these will be glad to contribute to this fund. Their offerings may be sent through any bishop, bishop's agent, or branch solicitor. The receipts should be marked, "Kirtland Auditorium Fund." Credit will be given on the general church books for all such contributions as "Special Offering."

Mass meetings will be arranged for the branches in these districts between the dates February 16 and March 2. At these meetings the proposition will be explained by special speakers, and pledge cards will be offered to the Saints, on which they may state the amount they are willing to contribute to clear the Kirtland Auditorium of its indebtedness. The pledge cards call for the payment of the amount pledged in six monthly installments.

Many of the Saints in these districts who have recently discussed the plan feel that the amount can be raised and paid in less than this time if every member having an income will do his full share. In fact, the sentiment seems to be growing that the amount can be and will be raised quickly, and a very large percentage of it paid in a much shorter time than the six months allowed by the committee.

The Saints in these six districts have a first interest in the Kirtland Auditorium, and plans to raise the present indebtedness should need but little encouragement to bring about a unanimous response. The general church officers are watching the progress of these plans with interest, and are ready to fulfill the agreement of the general church to share in raising the amount needed. We believe it is well within the ability of the Saints to raise this amount, and we also feel that the willingness and interest in the Kirtland Auditorium will result in a hearty response.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By A. CARMICHAEL.

Independence

Stone Church

We should be servants to all, declared Apostle Roy S. Budd who gave the principal talk at the communion service Sunday morning. A servant is one who looks into the hearts of men and sees therein opportunity to render service to mankind. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was given us that we might be enabled to forget the failures of the past and adjust ourselves to the tasks before us, having in our hearts the love of the Savior.

Elder H. G. Barto was assisted in the stand by Elders G. W. Eastwood, M. T. Williams, R. S. Budd, W. Wallace Smith, R. T. Cooper, and Frank McDonald. Organ music was by Robert Miller.

The service of the sacrament for the intermediate department in the lower auditorium was well attended, the young people listening to Pastor John F. Sheehy's talk on the happy month of February, the great people it has given to the world, and the standard by which their greatness was achieved. In the stand with the pastors were Brothers S. A. Thiel, Roy McNeil, Oral Andes, and Kenneth Morford.

Among the great Christian affirmations is the statement of Christ: "I am the resurrection, and the life." It is like God to create man in his own image, to give him opportunity to develop Christlike characteristics, and to conserve in him beauty and strength, asserted Apostle F. Henry Edwards in his sermon on "Resurrection" Sunday evening, but it is unlike God to permit all this to sink into oblivion at the close of man's mortal existence. Too frequently are we given to considering resurrection in terms of the dead, not in terms of the living. The resurrection of Christ and the completing of his ministry among men have been established in the mouths of many witnesses.

The significance of resurrection is that it applies to all men. Each day we are building for eternal life, we are being resurrected from the old to the new, Christ our example and helper. With his divine idealism he comes to us, testing us, inspiring us, assuring us, "I am the resurrection and the life."

"Appear, thou light divine," C. P. Morrison, was the contribution of the Stone Church Choir, Paul N. Craig directing. Robert Miller at the organ and the choir led the congregation in singing favorite hymns. Elder H. G. Barto was assisted in the stand by Apostle E. J. Gleazer.

Apostle J. F. Curtis had been scheduled to speak to the congregation, but illness prevented the carrying out of his Sunday program.

Among the People in Zion

Captains, assistants, and helpers have been appointed among the young people in the Stone Church groups to see that the gymnasium equipment movement for the lower room of the Auditorium is pushed to a successful conclusion. A meeting of the captains with the pastor occurred Sunday afternoon, and it is hoped as a result that intensive activity in this undertaking will characterize the young people during this week and next. Everyone is to be given opportunity to participate in the undertaking to equip an adequate gymnasium for the young people of Independence.

Patrons of the big dinner and variety program given Thursday and Friday nights in the dining hall by the Wahdemna Choral Club were pleased with the entertainment. Guests were served by members of the club while Blaine Bender as master of ceremonies conducted the program. A small orchestra, in charge of Miss Lillian Green, had a prominent place in the entertainment, and there were song novelties, burlesques, and a one-act play. The performance was continuous from 7.30 to 10 o'clock. Miss Vera Redfield, assisted by Paul N. Craig, director, was in charge. The proceeds from the two nights' entertainments will be applied to the purchase of robes for the club.

On the last day of the month the Pen and Ink Club of Independence held its January meeting, assembling in the Wahdemna Choral Club rooms to elect officers for the year. The business was in charge of President L. E. Flowers, and the following members were chosen to serve the club during 1930: President, Inez Smith Davis; vice president, Roy Davey; secretary, Clarice Hanson; treasurer, Virginia Budd; and historian, Alice McBride.

Walnut Park

Sunday, February 2, began with a spiritual and helpful prayer meeting at the church at eight o'clock. Elders Fred Lanpher, George Bullard, and George Jenkins were in charge of the service, Brother Jenkins giving an interesting and inspiring opening talk. During the course of the meeting the Saints were blessed with a spiritual manifestation, giving admonition and encouragement, urging them to put their trust and confidence in the Lord.

The sacramental service was a continuation of the spirit had in the prayer meeting. The Saints were fortunate in having Apostle Clyde F. Ellis with them to give the introductory remarks concerning the sacrament, and in having Bishop B. J. Scott to point out the meaning and importance of the oblation. Brother Scott has recently moved out of the Walnut Park District, being now in the vicinity of the Stone Church, so all were glad to have him back again on this occasion. Brother Ellis is, of course, always welcome when he comes to his home congregation after his travels and work in the Eastern States Mission.

In this service Rolla John Pennell, six-weeks-old son of John and Laura Scott Pennell, was blessed by his grandfather, Elder W. W. Scott, and Elder Samuel C. Smith.

The pastor, Brother Smith, with two of his associates, Brothers Lanpher and Barnhardt, presided over the service. A few modifications in the manner of serving the sacrament were introduced, which should result in noticeable improvement. Members of the priesthood are requested to hereafter take places on the platform rather than remaining in the congregation.

During the hour preceding the evening service a special meeting of the young people of District Three was held in the church, in the course of which Elder John F. Sheehy explained the proposed plan for equipping a gymnasium in the basement of the Auditorium for the benefit of the young people of Independence. Captains are to be appointed in each of the groups for the purpose of soliciting funds for the project.

"The resurrection" was the subject of the evening sermon by Elder J. A. Holsworth. A quartet composed of choir members gave an uplifting contribution, "Somebody is praying for you." Those in the quartet were: Sister Ethel Schwab, Sister Carletta Norman, K. R. Mosier, and C. A. Closson.

Union prayer meeting at the church on Wednesday evening was well attended and marked by a high degree of activity. Almost one hundred were present, a good representation.

Announcement was made concerning the appointment of Brother C. A. Closson to be in charge of the young people's prayer meetings during February. These meetings are held Wednesday night at the church.

Enoch Hill

A church school service impressive in its order and purposefulness preceded the hour of sacrament last Sunday morning. The theme of the service of the Lord's supper was "The purpose of the sacrament," and the talk of Elder W. J. Brewer was based on this topic. A special duet number was given by Brother and Sister Charles Warren who sang "Come, sweet Comforter." Pastor O. W. Sarratt and the local priesthood were in charge.

In the evening Elder L. W. Moffett, pastor at East Independence, came to Enoch Hill with a helpful and assuring message on "The resurrection." The members were happy to listen to this brother.

The young people's worship service occurred at the home of Verla Alexander last Wednesday evening. Following the regular worship program, talks were made by President F. M. McDowell and Elder H. G. Barto concerning the work of the young people, emphasis being given the movement to equip the lower room of the Auditorium as a gymnasium. Teams to support the undertaking have been organized in each group on Enoch Hill.

Spring Branch

A good prayer service was held Sunday morning at 8.15, in charge of Brothers McLees and Jesse Smith.

There was no intermission between the Sunday school service and the eleven o'clock service. Brother Cleveland was assisted at the sacramental service by Brothers Smith, Tankard, Bozarth, Farrow, and Peer. Several numbers were sung by the quartet, Beulah Stewart Donkawich, Dorothy Mabbott, Robert Hampton, and Jesse E. Smith.

Attendance at the church school at 6.30 in the evening is growing. The programs are improving.

Under the leadership of Sister Dorothy Mabbott, the junior choir sang two numbers Sunday at the eight o'clock service. The musical contributions of our young people are deeply appreciated.

A Valentine party will be given by the young people's class of the Sunday school February 14 at the church. There will be a post office where valentines can be mailed, the postage being the cost of the valentine. Proceeds will go to the flower fund.

Sister W. A. McClain has been seriously ill at her home. Her son was called home from Chicago and daughter from Michigan. We are hoping it will not be long before she is again well.

East Independence

The Saints who came together Sunday morning, January 19, felt well repaid for their effort to come as they listened to Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith, who chose as his text, "What good thing shall I do that I may have eternal life?" Much good instruction was imparted.

"Baptism" was the evening theme, and Brother E. A. Thomas, the speaker, left no doubt in the minds of his hearers concerning water baptism as an essential.

East Independence Church School is an important factor in the lives of the children and young people, if one may judge from the earnest faces and animated participation of class members. The older people are much interested in stewardships under the tutelage of Brother Roy Young.

Brother T. W. Thatcher, who preached January 26, gave his attention to a consideration of our own home problems, of which there are always many. What have we gained during the year that is gone? he asked. Can we see that we have made progress toward unity of purpose? Are we able to work harmoniously? He named some definite problems yet to be solved, making his sermon particularly applicable and helpful.

"The laying on of hands" was discussed by Brother J. A. Taylor that evening, its various uses being made plain.

Sacramental service February 2 was well attended in spite of the roads, which a continued thaw has rendered unfavorable to travel. The meeting was characterized by peace and calm.

The members were happy to greet Elder N. Carmichael in the evening. He talked on "The resurrection," emphasizing a phase not frequently noted. We are daily preparing for our part in the resurrection, he asserted.

Lamoni Stake

Special Service

The service at the Brick Church Sunday evening was given over to the subject of music, its mission and place in the church and its influence toward the redemption of the world. This meeting was one of a series of interesting and educational programs which the presidency of the stake are sponsoring this winter. The service opened with fifteen minutes of congregational singing, led by Arthur Oakman. Sister Rae Lysinger then played Bronn's "Intermezzo."

Sister Mabel Carlile, of the Graceland department of music, and member of the general church music department, was the first speaker. She took for her subject "The musical program for 1930." A short history of the organization of the department under one general director, Brother Albert N. Hoxie, about 1912, to the present preceded her future outline. This original organization gave away in 1928 to a musical board. This idea was conceived by the musicians assembled at that time, because there seemed to be no one available who could devote sufficient time to the work to do justice to all departments, and the various divisions were placed under different directors as follows: Paul N. Craig, hymn directing; J. H. Anthony, band and orchestra; Sister Luella Wight, junior choir work; and Sister Mabel Carlile, adult choral work. Sister W. N. Robinson is president of the organization, and Arthur H. Mills is secretary.

In outlining the work for 1930 Sister Carlile mentioned the new hymn book which is soon to be inaugurated for use in the church. It is a combination of selected hymns and songs from the Saints' Hymnal and Zion's Praises, together with a large number of other selections chosen from other sources, and will also contain a section devoted to junior songs. Sister Carlile gave a prominent place in the 1930 musical program to the oratorio, The Course of Time, to be presented at the April conference, and which represents the lifetime work and devotion of its composer, Brother J. T. Gresty, of Australia.

Sister Carlile sees as the greatest need of the department at the present time, the placing of some capable director in the field who can devote entire time to work of traveling among the branches and giving aid. She said one can hardly realize the need of such a director as is expressed in letters received and the eagerness with which she is received in smaller branches where some inexperienced person is doing his best to direct the work of the choir.

Brother J. H. Anthony, general director of the band and orchestral department of the church, was the next speaker. He pictured more or less humorously the struggles for recognition of this particular branch of church service, the rebuffs and discouragements it met in earlier years. People have always been educated to the value of song as a part of church service, but the introduction of instruments was more or less of a diversion. In contrast, however, he told of a number of incidents where the influence of the orchestral work in Sunday school had been of lasting and far-reaching benefit, stating that the only question now seemed to be the exact place which such music should occupy in the church service and the selection of the correct type of music. The latter is a most difficult task, since there is a variety of opinions. Brother Anthony fittingly closed his talk by relating an incident in the life of his devoted mother, during the early and trying days of the church when the life of a missionary's wife was fraught with hardships and discouragements. A strain of music proved a spiritual buoy, and the memory of it lightened her burden during the remainder of her life. Brother Anthony's devotion to the church and the musical education of the young people is founded on the firm belief that it has a prominent place in the divine plan, and he shares with Sister Carlile the hope that our church may some day take its place in the world as a musical church.

Brother Arthur Oakman gave an excellent talk on the subject, "The ministry of music." He gave a brief review of the use of music by the churches at an earlier time. Early Christians sang to maintain their courage; the Catholic Church recognized the holding power of music, carefully selecting the songs the sentiment of which represented the truths which they wished to instill into their members; during the Reformation Luther wrote hymns with the same regard as to the inculcation of correct sentiment; John Wesley followed in his footsteps. Bringing the history down to the founding of the church, he said God recognized the power of song when he commanded Emma Smith to compile a hymn book. He quoted: "My soul delights in song; the song of the righteous is a prayer unto me." He thinks music should have a prominent place in the missionary work of the church.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Associate Pastor George Mesley delivered the talk during the worship period of the church school session February 2.

The sacramental service from 10.50 in the morning till noon was marked by excellent program arrangement and attendance. Prayers, talks, and soft music combined to create in the hearts of the worshipers the spirit of brotherhood and peace. The sacramental message was spoken by Apostle Paul M. Hanson.

In the evening Patriarch J. H. N. Jones, of Australia, spoke on "Our belief in the Holy Spirit." This sermon was a continuation of the sermon series "What do we believe?" The evenings at Central are proving sociable and interesting. Come next Sunday and bring your friends. Always the branch musicians have prominent place on the programs, and their services are much appreciated.

More than one hundred and twenty people were at the pageant rehearsal Monday. Blanche Edwards Mesley directed. More men of all ages are needed to take important roles. Adult and young women also are needed. Members of the stake chorus will be enrolled next week, when the group will be cast for suitable roles. This is a splendid opportunity for worth-while and enjoyable service.

There were over sixty-five reservations for last Wednesday's dinner and only fifty present. Some canceled their reservations in time, but those who did not were responsible for the profit of fifty-three cents after many hours of work. If we are fair, we will either cancel our reservations at least a day before the dinner, or pay for the reservation we make.

Looking ahead to interesting services we find: Sunday, February 9, morning speaker, John Blackmore; evening, President Elbert A. Smith on "The atonement"; February 16, morning, John Sheehy; evening, J. W. Teener, professor of Bible Department, Park College, and Park Trianon Ensemble.

Those in charge have given Central Church a budget for the year 1930 amounting to $8,081.02. The budget for the church school for 1930 is $743.

Quindaro Church

Snow and subzero temperature have not decreased the number at church school. There was an attendance of one hundred and twenty-four January 26, our enrollment being one hundred and three. The junior department, which has an enrollment of forty-four reported present fifty pupils.

Brother Ernest Hawkins was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, giving a splendid discourse on "The Restoration."

The program at the Recreation and Expression hour was given by the children under the direction of Sister Eola Hawkins. Some fine talent was displayed.

Pastor H. A. Higgins occupied the eight o'clock hour, using as a theme "The reward of friendship." The anthem,

"I would go to him for rest," was sung by the choir, and there was a violin solo by Otis Swart.

The music department, under the leadership of Otis Swart, is greatly improved. It is an asset to the services.

Our hearts were made glad Wednesday night after prayer service January 8 when Frank Schneider, husband of Sister Schneider, was baptized by Brother Higgins and confirmed by Brothers Higgins and E. N. Palmer.

A dinner was served at the church Wednesday night preceding the prayer service, a good sum being realized.

The various departments under their leaders are organizing, and we look forward to a year of success.

Fourth Church

January 19, following the morning prayer service, the family service was edifying. Brother Norman Carter from Utah gave a talk on "How to make friends." If friendship is desired by us, he said, we must be friends. Not only should old friends be cherished, but new friends should be made. Sister Wilson gave a beautiful piano selection.

New signs, made by Brother Allen Tannehill, were hung on the walls. The one "Silence," was hung under the picture of Christ as he is kneeling in the Garden of Gethsemane. It reminds one as he enters that silence should be observed at the time of prayer. The other sign, "Reverence," hangs under the painting of Jesus as he stands knocking at the door. Surely every Saint should revere the moment that Christ knocks at the door of our hearts.

Sunday school classes have entered a contest, "A tour around the world." Each class gets credit for five hundred miles on this tour every time all the members are present, and two hundred miles each time all the members send in their collection, other details concerning class discipline being considered. The tour is limited to a certain number of thousand miles. The car in which each class is taking this tour is pinned to a wall map of the world. Each Sunday every class watches to see which one is in the lead. The class called Zion Boosters was in the lead this Sunday.

At eleven o'clock Elder George Jenkins, of Independence, spoke on "Faith and repentance." Elder J. H. N. Jones preached on the theme "Saved by hope," from Romans 8: 24, in the evening.

January 26 a beautiful program was given at the family service. The congregation sang "I'm pressing on the upward way" and "Take time to be holy." "The open door" was the topic of Brother Marion Sneed's talk, and the congregation sang "Onward to Zion." Three members of the priesthood sang "Pass me not, O gentle Savior."

Stake President C. E. Wight occupied the eleven o'clock hour on the theme "Character." His sermon was forceful in denunciation of covetousness, one of the factors which destroys character.

At 7.45 in the evening Apostle M. A. McConley preached on the text "Have faith in God." Beginning with the visions of Joseph Smith, the Prophet, he related all the periods that tested the faith of the Saints, yet the church, through faith, has kept on spreading the gospel throughout the world.

The young people are preparing themselves to help redeem Zion. The year 1930 will be a great year for the church.

Mount Washington Church

Sunday, January 26, Patriarch J. T. Gresty, composer of The Course of Time, gave an interesting description of the composition of his wonderful oratorio. It was started twenty-two years ago. During the period of its development he endured many discouragements and trials. He at one time gave it up. The Lord directed him in his work, promising aid in its development. After coming to America he took the completed work to Hill Cumorah, where the plates of the Book of Mormon were found, and there in the cool quiet of the early morning presented it to the Lord and dedicated it to the heroic men and women of the church who have wrought the achievements of the past, to those who are maintaining its ideals, and to the future generations who shall forge its victories in a new century.

The O. B. K's had as speaker last Sunday afternoon at their good fellowship meeting President F. M. McDowell.

Far West Stake

Stewartsville Branch

The new year witnessed several changes in the officers and curriculum of this branch. Our aged pastor, Brother B. J. Dice, has labored faithfully and unselfishly for the upbuilding of the branch in Stewartsville during the past year. Although discouraging at times, we feel that progress was shown, and Brother Dice was well worthy of the vote of thanks which he received from the branch business meeting assembly.

Brother T. A. Ivie was elected pastor for the current year, with Brothers D. E. Powell and Gordon Hidy as associates.

It was voted to amalgamate the various departments of the branch, having a common treasury for all, each department to present a budget commensurate with its needs. It was also voted to have a music committee to take care of the various branches of music instead of the usual way of electing officers to serve throughout the year. We anticipate thus to have a greater amount of interest shown in the junior and young people's musical activities.

The first Sunday in the month in the new year was observed in the morning by partaking of the sacrament, in charge of Elders John Piepergerdes and T. A. Ivie. This being the beginning of the centennial year, we feel that we must evince a deeper faith, a fuller consecration, and a more unselfish service.

Sunday, January 12, junior church was inaugurated with Mrs. A. E. McCord superintendent. Much more interest was shown than before by the juniors, and continued interest can be expected throughout the year under the efficient leadership of Sister McCord, who with her husband and nephew, Glen Thomas Crossan, has again made her residence here after an absence of over two years.

The final Sunday of January was marked by a union service of the Maple Grove and the Stewartsville Branches at Stewartsville morning and evening, Bishop Milo Burnett as the speaker. Brother Burnett dwelt on the antiquity of the financial law at both services. He especially pointed out that the financial law is as old as the gospel, that our father, Abraham, paid one tenth of all he possessed to Melchisedec, that Christ recognized the same law, and that the observance of the financial law must go hand in hand with the rest of the gospel provisions, or we shall fail.

East Saint Louis, Illinois

January 29.—A two weeks' series of meetings has just been held here by District President E. A. Curtis. Although there was much snow and temperature hovered around the zero mark practically the entire time, attendance was good and much interest was shown. Brother Curtis explained in his pleasant way the first principles of the gospel. His efforts bore fruit in the baptism last Sunday of five young people: Dessie Neudecker, Ruth Avery, Dorothy Anderson, Manford Richardson, and Carmen Scranton. Thus have we completed the family circle in four families and started another family in the gospel.

Monday evening a number of young people of the branch met at the home of Brother and Sister Richardson for a farewell party. The Richardsons are moving to Chaffee, Missouri, this week.

Sister Belva DeLany, who is quite ill, has been unable to attend church for some time. Sister Barraclough had the misfortune to fall and break her arm. She, too, has been kept from church.

Sunday morning, January 26, Brothers Edgar Boren and Eddie Nicholson, of Belleville Branch, were with us in the interest of the Sunday school work. They also occupied the pulpit at the preaching service.

Holden Stake

Lees Summit

The last Sunday of January the evening service consisted entirely of the program outlined in Herald to present the first of the "Know-your-church" series. The sketch, "The birth of a Prophet," was presented by the local dramatic club. E. F. Brace took the part of Joseph Smith; Sister Lucio Larsen, the part of Lucy Smith; and John T. Smith represented Mr. Cutler. The audience was larger than usual and appreciative. Owing to unforeseen difficulties the cast was limited to one rehearsal. Everyone is enthusiastically looking forward to the next program. It is planned to present every one of the twelve sketches, one the last Sunday night of each month. Visitors are welcome.

The first Sunday of February the pastor, Brother Wells, was called to Holden in connection with his work as director of religious education in the stake. Brother John T. Smith preached the evening sermon.

Lexington

We have just finished a two weeks' series of gospel meetings in which the stake missionary, Elder H. V. Minton, was the speaker. We feel that Lexington has received a wonderful blessing. Attendance was regular and good, considering the cold and snow that prevailed throughout the series. Four were baptized and two babies blessed by Brother Minton. These new members will be a great help to this group. All are looking ahead to the return of the missionary. The appreciation of the Saints was in a measure shown by the splendid offerings given him.

Marshall

William Arthur Ridge, son of Brother and Sister Will Ridge, passed away January 25. Elder W. S. Macrae, of the stake presidency, preached the funeral sermon Sunday 26, at the church. The boy was only a little over four years of age, and he will be sorely missed by the parents and two sisters.

While here Brother Macrae had a conference with the heads of branch departments Monday night and held a round table discussion Tuesday night.

Atherton

We are glad to report progress on the new community church at Atherton. Work was stopped by freezing weather early in January. The first open day was January 30, when a crew of five men from Lees Summit, headed by their pastor, met a similar crew from Atherton and finished putting up the remainder of the rafters in about five hours. If the open weather continues as it is at this writing, over Monday, February 3, a crew of a dozen men from Holden and a number from Lees Summit will again swarm onto the roof to make an effort to completely inclose it, and wire the building. We can then feel assured that the inside will be sufficiently finished to hold stake conference there in March. At this time another attendance competition will be put in motion, and several prizes awarded to the groups sending the best representation, distance and size of branch considered.

Holden

At a conference of all departmental workers today, after listening to an explanation of the new unified type of branch organization by the stake director of religious education, Brother G. R. Wells, the meeting voted unanimously to ask the branch in business capacity to adopt the plan and start it as soon as possible.

A male chorus has been organized, under direction of one of our high schools boys, Brother Richard Macrae. The stake presidency is hoping this will be the nucleus of a stake male chorus. This chorus is practicing and will occupy on the program of the coming stake conference.

Conference Notices

District conference for Utah District will convene in Salt Lake City, Utah, February 15 and 16. In addition to regular business to come before the conference, the matter of election of General Conference delegates will be taken care of. It is expected that there will be general church representatives present, and that this will be a splendid conference for all to attend, coming as it does just prior to the Centennial General Conference. Branch secretaries should have their statistical reports made out and in the hands of the district secretary prior to date of conference.—Calvin H. Rich, district president; Roy F. Hewes, assistant district president.

The Eastern Colorado conference will convene in the Denver (Colorado) church, Speer Boulevard and Logan Street, February 21 to 23. Special session on Friday evening. Business session begins Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Delegates to General Conference will be chosen at this time, therefore it is necessary that the district secretary, Ralph Vincent, Otis, Colorado, receive all branch statistical reports, together with their credential lists prior to the convening of the conference. Apostle E. J. Gleazer is expected to be in attendance and conduct classes.—E. B. Hull, district president.

Central Texas district conference convenes at Houston, Texas, February 21, 22, and 23. There will be a special program at 8 p. m., February 21. The church address is 516 East Tenth. Houston Saints are looking for and are ready to entertain all who may come, so let us make this a conference to be long remembered.—Mrs. Etta Smith, publicity agent.

The Idaho district conference will be held at Boise, Idaho, February 21 and 22. Apostle Myron A. McConley will be present.—Ella Dillenbaugh, district secretary, Meridian, Idaho.

Minnesota district conference will convene February 15 and 16 at Minneapolis. The regular business session will be held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Delegates to General Conference will be selected at this time. There will be services in the morning, afternoon, and evening on Sunday. Visiting Saints who expect to attend, please communicate with Wesley Elvin, 805 Beacon Street, Minneapolis.—Lester Whiting, district president; Mrs. Blair Jensen, district secretary.

Conference Institute Notice

Clinton district conference will convene for institute work February 21, 22, and 23, at Nevada, Missouri, church, corner of Elm and Ellison Streets, one block west of Highway 71, opposite Shell Oil Station. President F. M. McDowell will be instructor. This will be an accredited institute which will make it possible for each person attending full time to earn ten credits towards a teacher's certificate. One hour of credit will be given for each session attended, provided this is not less than seven sessions. There is a great opportunity to hear a great teacher on the biggest and greatest work in the world. You are not only invited, but urged to attend this institute, that each may be instructed in the program of the church, so that working together in an intelligent way, we each may assist Clinton District in making its best contribution to the general church. Saints of Nevada will entertain conference visitors and are anxious for a good representation of the district. There will be one business session Saturday evening at 7.30, for election of delegates to General Conference. The order of the institute will be: Suggested subject, "The religious education program of the church." Program: Friday evening, 7.30-8.20, first class period; 8.30-9.20, second class period; Saturday, 9 a. m. prayer service; 10.15-11.05, first class period; 11.15-12.05, second class period; 2 p. m., class period; 3 p. m., recreation; 7.30 p. m., business session; 8 p. m., lecture or class; Sunday: 9.30 Sunday school, adults in one class for lecture; 11 a. m., sermon or lecture; 2.30 p. m. to 4, class and round table discussion.—Birch Whiting, district president.

All-day Service

There will be an all-day service for Eastern Michigan Saints at Crowell Branch, February 16, commencing at 10 a. m. There will be a special conference session at 2 p. m. for the appointing of delegates to General Conference. All are invited to attend.—Myron A. Carr, district president; Herbert Swoffer, district secretary.

Request for Prayers

Sister Mary Andrews, Dinuba, California, sufferer of an affliction of many years' standing, requests the prayers of the Saints.

Correction—Church History Quarterly

The preface to current Church History Quarterly, subject, "Stewardship," in the twelfth line contains this clause: "We should not be motivated by the highest ideals." The word not should not appear, as is obvious.

Our Departed Ones

WILLIAMS.—Mary Elizabeth McHarness, daughter of Moses and Susannah McHarness, was born August 3, 1848, at Lincolnshire, England, and passed from this life December 10, 1929, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fannie Post, Davis City, Iowa. With her parents she moved to America in 1856, the family locating at Gaines, New York. About five years later they moved to Van Buren County, Michigan, where they made their home for nearly twenty-eight years. February 28, 1863, she was united in marriage with George Washington Williams. To them were born eight children, namely: Moses Williams, of Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Nellie Cook, Saint Joseph, Missouri; Mrs. Fannie Post, Davis City, Iowa; Francis David William, Saint Joseph, Missouri; Mrs. Winnie Park, Kansas City, Missouri; and Pearl, Clyde, and Fred, who preceded her in death. With her family she moved to Lamoni in 1884, where she made her home until 1899. Since that time she has lived with her children in Saint Joseph and Kansas City, Missouri; Lamoni and Davis City, Iowa. Her husband passed from this life in 1893, when their youngest child was but four years old. When sixty-seven years of age, she returned to Lamoni, where she cared for her aged mother for a period of nine years. Early in life she became a member of the Disciples Church, but later united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. She lived an exemplary Christian life, always looking on the bright side. She often remarked that this world is so beautiful that she could not understand how anyone could be unhappy for any great length of time. She leaves one brother, Edward McHarness, of Kansas City, Missouri; one sister, Mrs. Rose Wiley, Colony, Kansas; five children, twenty-four grandchildren, eighteen great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild. She had unusually good health until about four months ago, when she was taken ill. During the last five weeks of her life she was a constant care, making it necessary for her three daughters and a granddaughter, Mrs. Ruth Brenizer, to give her constant attention. Funeral services were held at the Latter Day Saints' Church in Davis City. Sermon by Elder W. E. Prall. Elder John Lane in charge. Interment was in Rose Hill Cemetery.

CONYERS.—John Willis Conyers was born March 27, 1871, and passed from this life December 30, 1929, after an illness of eight weeks. He married Miss Maggie S. Bishop, of Onawa, Iowa, October 31, 1890, and to them were born six children of whom five survive: Mrs. Bruce Vittetoe, Modale, Iowa; Mrs. Russel Nelson, Missouri Valley, Iowa; Lum F., Missouri Valley; Winn S., River Sioux, Iowa; Clinton H., Woodbine, Iowa. Glen S. died April 8, 1914. Besides his children, he leaves to mourn his mother, Mrs. Sarah Conyers, of Little Sioux, Iowa; three sisters: Mrs. Will Davison, of Pappillon, Nebraska; Mrs. Otis Gardner, Fremont, Nebraska; Mrs. W. A. Wyant, Missouri Valley; four brothers: David, Wagner, South Dakota; Mark, Custer, South Dakota; Frank and Fred, of Little Sioux, Iowa. Three brothers and two sisters preceded him in death. There were twelve grandchildren, two of whom died in their infancy. July 11, 1880, he was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church and was faithful till death. Many other relatives and friends are saddened by his departure. He spent most of his life in Harrison County, Iowa. The funeral sermon was by E. B. Purcell; interment in Little Sioux Cemetery.

CONYERS.—Sarah P. Patterson was born on a farm near Memphis, Tennessee, September 30, 1842, and died January 6, 1930, at her home in Little Sioux, Iowa. She married Mathew M. Conyers April 24, 1862, at Little Sioux, Iowa. To them thirteen children were born, six having preceded the mother in death, four boys and two girls. Her husband died September 2, 1921. The deceased was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints November 28, 1875, and was a faithful member. For several weeks she had been in failing health but was confined to her bed one day. She is survived by four sons and three daughters, thirty-five grandchildren, sixty-two great-grandchildren, and eight great-great-grandchildren. The children left to mourn are: David Conyers, Wagner, South Dakota; Mark Conyers, Custer, South Dakota; Frank Conyers, Little Sioux, Iowa; and Fred, of Little Sioux, who has cared for his mother a number of years; Mrs. Elba Davison, Pappillon, Nebraska; Mrs. Elsie Gardner, Fremont, Nebraska; and Mrs. Emma Wyant, Missouri Valley, Iowa. Sister Conyer's entire life was given in service to others and to her God. The funeral was held in the Saints' church in Little Sioux, Iowa, by E. B. Purcell, assisted by M. K. Fry. Interment was in Little Sioux Cemetery.

TANETERAU.—Taneterau a Faarere a Tefau was born at Avatoru, Rairoa, Tuamotu, Society Islands, in the year 1855. He was baptized by Apostle T. W. Smith at Panau, Kaukura, Tuamotu, in the year, 1885, and in the same year ordained an elder. He was several times under General Conference appointment as a missionary. He died October 3, 1929, at Avatoru, Rairoa, Tuamotu, and was buried in the Saints' Cemetery, William Manua Bennett conducting the services.

BATTEN.—Eleanor Leavore, daughter of James and Margaret Batten, was born December 16, 1912, at Hiteman, Iowa, and died at Albia Hospital January 14, 1930, age seventeen years and twenty-nine days. She resided with her parents in Chariton, Iowa, since October, 1919. She united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Chariton, March 9, 1924. She took great interest in her school, being in the eleventh A grade, and would have taken her State teacher's examination January 16 of this year. She leaves her father, mother, four brothers, and two sisters, also her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Parley Batten, of Chariton, and Mr. and Mrs. Adam Marshall, of Hiteman, Iowa, besides many other relatives and friends. Funeral services were held at the Saints' Church in Chariton, Friday afternoon, January 17. J. C. Cackler, of Chariton, took charge of the service, and the sermon was by Wilber Prall, of Lamoni.

He is the only man who has served the country as President and as Chief Justice. It is fortunate for him, in the estimate that posterity will make of him, that he occupied these offices in the order named, for as a Chief Justice he has shown true greatness.

Shortly after the resignation was made public, it was also made known that the position had been offered to Charles Evan Hughes, and that he had accepted. The careers of three important men of recent times have been strangely involved. Both Hughes and Taft have been defeated in contests for the Presidency by Woodrow Wilson. Hughes and Taft have long been friends, and Hughes served on the Supreme Bench as the result of an appointment by Taft in 1910. ### Prophets of Despair

We seem always to have with us those who feel that the world is in a hopeless condition, and that people, the younger generation in particular, are rapidly going from worse to worst. This may be a result of the fact that we often find the things we are "looking for." It may indicate that the person making such an estimate is either out of step with the march of things or uninformed on present conditions or on history. At any rate, such "prophets of despair" are perennial.

In his book, Frontiers, written in answer to those who condemn wholesale the young people of today, Doctor A. B. Hulbert has this to say:

Those witnesses of old heard the same groanings and outcries that assail our ears; the country was always "on the brink of ruin"—always "going to the Devil." . . . The road was always rough. Did not Increase Mather bemoan the fact, two hundred and fifty years ago, that "conversions are becoming rare," just as we do today? You who writhe today over the fretful "Charleston"—did not the Albany Patriot say, a century ago, that it would not trust the moral purity of any woman who would waltz with a man to whom she was not married? . . . Was the road smoother or the ship more staunch in those polite Victorian days of 1843, when the Boston Bee said "robberies, murders, rapes, suicides, and perjuries are as common as marriages and deaths"? Was the ship likelier to be piloted safely by the oncoming generation of sedate and pious youth one hundred and one years ago, when the leading American educational journal said of a great university, "to attempt to stem the torrent of vice and immorality there would be considered by the students a freakish innovation"? Or, when, also a century ago, one sixth of the prisoners in the Massachusetts State Prison had been thieves at sixteen years of age, and one half had been accustomed to strong drink in their teens?

Doctor Hulbert is echoed by The Literary Digest in reviewing news articles which appeared in the New York Sun:

Talk about juvenile delinquency today! In the middle of the last century juvenile crime flourished in New York and London to a degree that would be appalling even to our own Jeremiahs. One investigation disclosed that one time 6,000 boys, trained and proficient in stealing, were colonized in 200 "flash houses" in London alone. In 1854 approximately 14,000 boys served time in various prisons of England and Wales. Of these, 60 per cent were between the ages of fourteen and seventeen; 46 per cent had been convicted more than once; 18 per cent had been convicted four times or more. Its juvenile crime was the most loathsome detail of the Five Points of New York. . . . Bishop Herbert Shipman of New York . . . in a recent address . . . said that the youngsters born into the present time are about the same as those in all preceding generations. But, he pointed out, as The Sun quotes him, they have been "catapulted into conditions vastly and tragically different without the example that the older generation had at their inception." He is inclined to think that blame for the conditions so loudly complained of now rests mainly upon the elders instead of the youngsters.

It is very doubtful that anyone will be able to show by statistics that the boys and girls of today are actually worse than those of previous generations. Of course the existence of crime and delinquency in the last century by no means excuses it now. Everything possible must be done to correct the situation of today. But we must not allow ourselves to be depressed and hampered in our efforts by the gloom cast by prophets of despair.

As for this matter of deciding who is to blame, that has become a sort of favorite "indoor sport," and as a result the blame for each of the many social ills has been laid first at one door and then at another. In the meantime we may be continuing the very practices in which these ills are bred. Infinitely more important than blaming is the matter of understanding, and having understood, a sincere attempt to proceed from where we are now in the direction of a better day.

L. E. F.

Decision Day and That Goal of 6,000

In May, 1929, there began a definite missionary movement throughout the church. Consideration was given by the leading quorums, and they saw fit to announce that in their opinion 6,000 souls should be added to the church records before a year's time should elapse.

It was pointed out that there were thousands of men, women, and children in our own families who should be members of the church. This field is one of the most important to church advancement, and to it has been directed a large part of the special effort of the year.

Many husbands and fathers had postponed the decision of one of life's principal problems, permitting the stress of business or other activity to crowd out a consideration of their responsibility to God and their chance to help in his great work. Many wives and mothers had been victims of circumstances which prevented the consideration of the religion of the home, and as a result the home had no religion, while possibly the husband or some other prominent member of the family was a member of the church. There were reported to be literally thousands of children of eligible ages, yet not members of the church to which father and mother, or father or mother had given their support.

Recognizing the possibility of much greater efficiency in religious life where the family is united and devoted to the same great purpose, the campaign during the entire year has continued in the same general direction. Many family circles have been completed by the baptism of a father, a mother, or a child or children, and for this reason there is basis for the belief that another year of missionary effort will reach new fields and produce greater results than the past has done.

But the goal of six thousand baptisms has not been reached, and if it is achieved much effort must be put forth, and at once. There is a discrepancy of 1,436 baptisms to be overcome.

The Joint Council of First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and the Presiding Bishopric, recently in session for several weeks, has set apart March 16 as Decision Day. The effort will be made to bring about a decision in the mind of every person to whom the gospel has been presented. Decision generally means a uniting with the church; lack of decision is what keeps people out, not a negative decision.

The secretary of the Joint Council appeared in a splendid article on page 149 of the Herald for February 5, in which he suggests three lines of preparation for Decision Day. These are: Convert the children; complete the family circle; revise and work over the prospect list.

It is universally recognized among ministers and members that no man, woman, or child should be unduly hurried to a decision to enter the church. There is just as grave danger of mistake in being so fearful of bringing a hasty or immature decision to enter the church, that we fail to bring our friends or loved ones to any decision whatever. It is often more wrong to neglect to press men, women, or children to decide this great question than it is to reason with, instruct, and then insist on the necessity to decide.

Five months during the year have been recorded as record breakers in number of baptisms; that is, July has exceeded any previous July in its record. The year is quite likely to yield more baptisms than any previous year. But it is not enough that this be true, unless all has been done which can be done to bring others to a knowledge of the truth and to cast their lot with us for the spread of the gospel.

General Conference Problems

Independence Saints and their friends among the citizens have always been able to care for the General Conferences in a satisfactory manner, so far as entertaining the visitors is concerned. Public buildings for meetings of various bodies of church workers have also been at the disposal of the officers, though at times these have been disadvantageous as to location. The community is desirous of making the city a satisfactory place for the General Conference gatherings.

Since the Auditorium Building has been available for conference uses, no public meeting has lacked for capacity, but there does threaten just such a condition during the coming conference. Good management, planning far ahead, and working to the plans, will handle the matter to the satisfaction of all. The officers located in Independence are active at this work.

Feeding the Visitors

The Laurel Club has undertaken the responsibility of feeding the conference—a huge undertaking. In the Miscellaneous department of this number of the Herald they are saying something of how they intend to accomplish the task. The Laurels mean what they say, and they will do what they have promised, but you who can help them should do so. Get into communication with them as directed if you can help.

Lodging the Visitors

Instructions to those who are coming to the conference have been issued in the advance information, under heading of Centennial Conference. Prospective visitors are not responding to these instructions as they should, and the committee is hampered in its work because of this failure. It is necessary that the committee know where you are going to be, no matter if you have made your own contract for room.

Much effort is being made to provide the accommodations sought by prospective visitors to Independence for the term of the Centennial Conference, or a part of the term. Those in charge will be able to accomplish the best of results if all will hear and heed their requests and instructions.

If those who contract to entertain visitors to the conference will report the names of their proposed

"Mite" Offering Wins Unexpected Response

It is very gratifying to know that the suggestion of Sister Coffman, of Wagner, South Dakota, has appealed to quite a number. It was her suggestion to make a special offering to the church of five cents for each year she has been a member. Her idea appealed to me as a unique way by which to again express some measure of our appreciation of all that the church has meant to us; and, therefore, I sent the letter to the Herald for publication.

Immediate responses were received from more than a score of States. Not only is this offering assuming substantial proportions, but it is pleasing to note that without exception the responses express gratitude for God's blessings, and for the spiritual experiences which the making of this modest offering in this particular way has brought to those who have followed out the suggestion. A sister from California sends in her offering, which represents a membership of fifty-two years in the church.

In all my religious experiences I have found that giving helps the giver. It lifts him up toward God, and as a result he experiences a rededication and a reconsecration of his time, ability, and means to the service of the church.

How many will respond to this suggestion in the months of February and March?

guests, together with their home and conference time addresses, to the Committee on Reservations and Accommodations, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, it will aid in the work.

Coming in March

Vision, the young people's magazine of the church, offers some good features in its March number, which will be in the mails February 25. Two short stories: "White Flower," by Annie Ivie McCord; and "The mountain doctor," by Charles H. Arven. The final installment of the short serial, "And the children led them," by Charlotte Pearson. Elbert A. Smith's "Conversations" continue with "Coming of the Book of Mormon." "Seville and its cathedral," by Audentia Anderson. An interview by Madge Craig Siegfried—"Business is good." If your subscription is behind, now is the time to renew.

Advance Information

All branch pastors are asked to request members of their congregations who expect to attend the Centennial Conference to inform the committee at once, regardless of the fact that they have made reservations with personal friends. This request has been broadcast throughout the church through various channels of publicity, but it is quite evident that the members have not taken the matter seriously. Those who expect to attend should communicate with the following committee immediately:

*The Committee on Reservations and Accommodations,
The Auditorium,
Independence, Missouri.*

In addition to the new work on the interior of the Auditorium, work has started to waterproof the dome, so that the ceiling on the inside, which is now being put in place, may be protected. The work which is now in progress is being rushed to take advantage of the favorable weather which now prevails in Independence. The progress of the various items of work which are now in the process of completion brings satisfaction to those who are interested in seeing the Auditorium completed, for it brings the building just that much nearer to making it usable for the many purposes for which it was built.

Evening Programs at the Conference

The Centennial pageant, Fulfillment, will be given Friday and Saturday nights in the Auditorium. This is the biggest production of its kind ever attempted by the church. The pageant was written by Mrs. S. A. Burgess and will require a cast of from 800 to 1,000 people to produce it.

As a literary work, the pageant has more than ordinary merit. Within its limits is comprehended a sweeping interpretation of history. It is a narrative of great events reduced to its simplest and most powerful outline, expressed in a select combination of realistic scenes and symbolic interpretations.

Mrs. Burgess has brought to the creation of this pageant her scholarship, and a natural ability in dealing with words that has produced a smooth and charming style. With a true instinct she selected significant and dramatic facts and welded them into a harmonious progression of scenes that never break nor falter. Her conception has been truly inspired and enriched by an imaginative power that has triumphed over the stubborn difficulties of the material she had to use.

It dates from the time of the ministry of Christ to and including the year 1830, and features "The Restoration" as the fulfillment of prophetic anticipation regarding the church of Christ to be restored in latter days. The pageant interprets three epochs of time and is divided into nine episodes. The White Masque Players, as an organization, has been entrusted with the task of organizing and producing the pageant, cooperating with the general church authorities and under the direction of the Centennial Conference Program Committee.

This group has called to its assistance all available talent, and the response that has been made thus far is very encouraging. Approximately seven hundred people have enrolled and will be cast in the scenes for which they are best adapted. The forty principal characters have already been cast, and preliminary try-outs will be held in the next few days. It is expected that the entire pageant will be cast by February 15. Rehearsals are already in progress in some of the smaller groups, and the group in Kansas City, which will produce one entire epoch, has been at work since January 20. The sets for staging the pageant have been built under the supervision of the production committee of the White Masque Players, and have been built with a view to their future use in other pageant and dramatic productions.

The second performance of the pageant, Saturday night, April 19, will be the closing evening program of the conference, as it is expected that the dedication service Sunday afternoon, April 20, will be the closing service. There will be no meetings Sunday evening, April 20, which will permit conference visitors, who find it necessary to hurry home after so long an absence, to take evening trains to their destinations.

The conference program includes a full schedule of forty-one preaching services. The speakers, subjects, and dates will be announced.

The devotional services have been made a prominent feature, and will include twenty-four general prayer meetings, two communion services, two priesthood prayer meetings, two young people's prayer services, a total of thirty.

Thirty-seven classes will be held each morning from 7.30 until 12, as announced on page 151 of the Saints' Herald for January 5, 1930.

Two special lecture courses will be conducted at the Stone Church from 8.40 to 9.40 each morning. The first course of six lectures will be given by Walter Daykin, subject, "Religious Utopias." The second course of six lectures at the same hour during the second week of conference will be given by John W. Rushton, subject, "The ministry of beauty."

Young people who plan to attend the conference should carefully review the class work offered and select the subjects which will help them in their local branch work. The two special young people's prayer meetings are scheduled as follows: The second Sunday morning, April 13, 7.30 to 9.15, in charge of President F. M. McDowell, Eugene Closson, Blair Jensen, and Roy Cheville. The second one is a sunrise prayer meeting on the third Sunday morning, April 20, from 6 to 7.15.

Other features of the Centennial Conference will be announced in this column each week, and readers of the Herald are invited to follow them carefully, so that they may be informed regarding plans for the coming conference.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,

New Work on the Auditorium

Those who have not been privileged to visit the Auditorium at Independence have at least seen pictures of the inside and outside of the building. Those who have been through the building will be particularly interested in knowing what items of new work are now being performed.

Materials are assembled and work has actually begun in making the dome waterproof. Work on this one item is proceeding at a rapid pace, and waterproofing materials will be applied next week. The material used is guaranteed to be waterproof for a period of twenty years, and will take the place of the expensive copper roof as first planned. The flat deck surrounding the dome will also be made waterproof, as well as the vertical side walls extending from the flat deck roof to the base of the dome, including the column heads.

Up to date of Saturday, February 8, the first coat of plastering has been applied to one third of the ceiling surface, and the finished coat has been applied to one fourth of the area. This finish coat is in a light buff tint, pleasing to the eye, and will softly reflect the light from the row of windows at the base of the dome.

Work on the heating plant continues, and conference visitors are assured that it will be in operation well before the time for conference.

The rooms at the front of the building; that is, the three floors at the northeast and northwest corners of the building, will be temporarily inclosed and will house most of the exhibits of the depart-

An Interesting Book Published September, 1929

A Review by John Blackmore

The Bible from the Beginning, by Simms. Publishers, The Macmillan Company. Price $2.50.

This book is of special interest to the members of the church because the author recognizes the Inspired Version of the Holy Scriptures, and its place in the development of the Bible. A brief review of the book is given here, as we believe many of our people will want a copy.

The author commences his work with a survey of how the Bible was written. In this chapter he reviews the methods of ancient writing and the development of the Hebrew written language. This discussion leads us through the Old Testament on into the New Testament as the written language of the Hebrews changes in its development. The difficulties of translators are pointed out: the oldest Hebrew was a language written in consonants, the vowels were handed down by the methods of oral tradition. In the Greek there were no punctuation signs and no separation between words, and all letters were capitals.

The second chapter deals with the chief sources of our biblical text. The original manuscripts have all been lost, so translators have access only to manuscripts written long after the originals. The author discusses these source materials, their relative values and possible dates of writing. Comparisons are made where differences in manuscripts exist.

The section of the book that will be of most interest to our people is that which deals with development of the canon of the Bible. The history of the formation of the canon is one of a gradual and some-ments and institutions of the church at the General Conference.

Practically all of the work mentioned above has been secured at a very reasonable figure, and the contract price places the total investment involved well within the amount appropriated for this work in the 1930 budget. Members of the church, we are sure, will be pleased to know that the Auditorium is being further completed, and as soon as the present work is finished there is no question but that the building will bring an ever-increasing revenue, to be applied toward its upkeep, from the receipts from concerts, lectures, and large regional gatherings, whose management has already applied for its use.

Is your Auditorium pledge paid in full, or is there still a balance due?

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC.

times painful process. The author, after discussing the Palestinian and Alexandrian canons of the Old Testament, reviews the growth of the canon of scripture up to the present time. This review gathers both the Old and the New Testaments into the treatise. On pages 145, 146, and 147 the author has in a fair manner recognized the Inspired Version in the formation of the canon. Under the caption, "The Reorganized Latter Day Saints' Bible," the author gives a very fair statement of the origin of the church and the Reorganized Group. He then introduces the Inspired Version as the chief Bible of the Reorganized Church, devoting one whole page to quotation comparisons. The review is closed by this statement of the author:

This much, at least, may be said of many of the changed readings found in the Bible of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints: Its author had the courage deliberately to alter the text, and make it say clearly what many Bible students succeed in getting by theological legerdemain. This Bible contains the usual (39) books of the Old Testament, and the usual 27 books of the New. No apocryphal books are admitted, but the Book of Mormon is accepted as inspired equally with other books of the Bible.

It is very interesting that the author places the Inspired Version in the treatise on the canon of the Bible.

On page 293 the author again in a short paragraph pays attention to the Version. Under the heading of "Secretarian Bibles" he has this to say:

One of the most puzzling Bibles in print is that published in 1867 by the Reorganized Latter Day Saints, at Lamoni, Iowa. The Utah Mormons do not use it. It has many additions to the usual text, Joseph Smith having claimed a special revelation for the changes he made. Had these changes favored the doctrinal position of his church, the explanation would have been easy, but they do not seem to serve any denominational or sectarian purpose.

The whole book is full of valuable material. The book also contains a discussion of the various early translations of the Bible into English, the different Bibles of the nineteenth century, and the Modern Speech translations. It covers a great deal of ground and will be valuable in your library. We recommend this book for your collection of reference books.

We appreciate the very frank and fair statements referring to the Inspired Version made by the author, Reverend P. Marion Simms.

(We would point out that there are only 38 books in the Old Testament section of the Inspired Version. The Song of Solomon has been eliminated.)

Has Christianity Helped You?

Radio address of A. B. Phillips, November 24, 1929, from station K M B C.

I wonder if you would prefer a more impersonal title to what I am to present? Or should I have asked: Has Christianity hindered you? But perhaps this would suggest an unpleasant train of thoughts, and I want to present something more constructive than unpleasant thoughts. Indeed, I greatly prefer to suggest thoughts that will prove distinctly pleasant.

There are two factors, which may decide this matter for us, in a sense. Is Christianity a pleasant subject to you? Or, is your concept of Christianity a pleasant one? Upon reflection, I believe I will ask you to excuse me if I do not, at least directly, state what the second factor is, to which I have just referred. I will try to consider it in due course.

I do not think I will attempt to state what Christianity is; at least not in so many words. Perhaps the average person will substitute the word church for Christianity, and will make the application accordingly. But as the church is called of God to be the exponent and example of Christianity, this ought not to lead us very far from the real purpose of my subject. And I do want to say a few things about Christians.

The Christian covenant obligates us to support all good work and purposes, whether it may concern our private interests and preferences or not. Christ started out upon his mission in order to make the world a better place in which to live, and as Christians we are enlisted in that great cause; it is our business. I came near to saying our religious business, but perhaps it is just as well stated as it is. This being the Christian's business, and the group of Christians being known as the church, probably no one will object if we declare that the church has accepted the responsibility of representing Christ as the most mighty spiritual and moral force the world has ever known.

Imperfection in the Church

The church could not be too strong in the loftiness of its aims, or in the wisdom of its activities. And it is probably safe to say that no one will accuse it of having been so, though it is possible that some will think quite otherwise, and will feel to suggest that it has been distinctly lacking in both of these valuable qualities on certain occasions in the past. Perhaps we should frankly admit that there was a time when the churches to a great extent sought salvation through a strict observance of outward forms, doubtless hoping to acquire inward grace by this means.

However, we believe experience has been profitable, even to the church, and has proved the truth of the old saying that "The only way to be good is to do good." It might have learned this by precept, instead of by the more laborious and expensive method of example, for it was pointed out ages ago by the Apostle James that "Faith without works is dead." And surely no one wants a dead faith, for it would become only a putrid burden to carry, and would hinder instead of help its unfortunate possessor. The church does not appear to obtain inward grace by observing outward forms, or else it obtains so little of it that few people note the improvement. But perhaps it would be better to suggest that the outward forms were but the expression of the inward grace already possessed.

Whatever may be our conclusion concerning this matter, we think history will sustain the fact that much of the past efforts of the church stressed the negatives of life. And doubtless we can all agree that life should be so full of constructive activities that there will be little room—little need for negative factors. Our glorified leader has shown us the way to live by affirmation and action.

How Much Religion in Life

There have always been a number of people who have desired to protect Christianity from contact with the world. Their motives were excellent, no doubt, and sometimes their efforts were put forth with unquestioned zeal. But it takes more than motives and zeal to make a person right, and they seemed not to realize the significance of the sacred word which says:

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.—John 3:16, 17.

The fact is, that the religion of Jesus was something more than an abstract theory of ethereal ethics. One who will observe his teachings and also his example closely must note that he dealt with the everyday affairs of the people. He told them how to give faithful service, how to be considerate of employees, how to aid the needy, how to use their temporal possessions, how to forgive trespasses, how to be just and equitable toward others, how to set good examples, how to settle their disputes, how to treat an enemy, how to make friends, and how to lay up treasures in heaven and qualify for the great gift of God: eternal life.

If we will make a practical application of all these precepts and examples of the faultless Master, it will become apparent that the required spiritual qualities can not be developed or acquired without a corresponding development in moral, social, and ethical virtues. And these virtues are all applied by the great Teacher to the daily affairs of life. He was interested in making men and women see the folly of doing wrong; of being unjust, unkind, selfish, deceitful, unsocial, irreverent, or unbrotherly. Sin was condemned in a business deal as fully as in a church matter.

In the light of the instructions offered us by Christ, we can easily understand that the business of Christianity is to transform sinners into saints, to lift the world up to the plane of right conduct, right ideals, and right objectives in life. Hence the true Christian has the whole world for his field of action, and should engage in whatever will help to achieve the divinely given ends to be reached. There is nothing that can properly belong to his life that should not be regulated by Christian rules of conduct.

Christian Leadership

The Christian should be both a follower and a leader. He should follow the path which the Lord has designated, but in doing so he should be a leader in the progress of the world. If his access to the light of God does not make him zealous in advancing human welfare, then the message of Christ has failed to accomplish its intended purpose in his case. He should therefore take part in the constructive activities of his State, city, town, and community. In this day of graft it behooves upright men and women to work for better and cleaner conditions.

Adverse forces are united to prey upon the common welfare, to combat which the church should unite in its effort to promote the prosperity of all. This united effort is needed in all the departments of human activity, whether in the world of business, philanthropy, society, politics, or what not. United effort is essential if we shall succeed in raising higher the standard of human relationships.

The curse of special privilege is almost constantly being extended over the land. The legislatures, public officials, heads of departments, and various other officers in responsible places are being sought for special favors, for which a price is offered. If such officials are men of sterling character we have nothing to fear through them, but if we support unprincipled or weak-principled men for responsible positions, both we and our posterity may suffer more than now seems possible. Perhaps few things are more destructive to ideals and moral standards, and the future of our country, than are the various forms of graft which today sap the moral and material resources of the land. We need a moral atmosphere in the daily affairs of life which will be an inspiration of noble qualities to our growing youth.

The enforcement of law is a problem which grows constantly with our enlarging activities. No nation can long endure which permits extensive lawlessness to go unchecked and unpunished. We have the right to work for the repeal of laws which we believe are detrimental to the people, but we do not have the right to become a law unto ourselves and disregard the laws which have been enacted. So long as a law is in force it should be respected, and will be respected by all right-thinking people—those who have the stability of our Government at heart. The power of example is tremendous, and if we do not respect the law, we shall lead others to disrespect it and us as well. Thus our influence for good is undermined by our own example.

Rights of the Group

We have come a long way in recent years toward recognizing that the rights of the public, the community, or group, are superior to the claims of any individual within it. It is largely upon this basis that our public service corporations are supervised, and their rates of operating profit are regulated, because the public has an interest in their activities and the purposes for which they are formed. The common welfare demands that protection against unjust profits, improper service, and other unfair methods, be furnished those who are served.

These principles are the very foundation stones of the religion exemplified by Christ. Unity of purpose and action for the maintenance of equity, brotherhood, and uprightness, will go farther toward bringing the kingdom of God in human hearts than religious forms alone can ever accomplish. The Christians of any community should stand together for spiritual, social, moral, and material betterment; not for themselves alone, but for the entire body of God's creatures. Professor Rauschenbusch says:

The ideal society is an organism, and the Christianizing of the social order must work towards a harmonious cooperation of all individuals for common social ends.

The common good, that is, the good of humanity, is an essential function of the Christian religion. In its very nature it is unselfish. One can test the quality of his own religion by observing the character of his motivations. He who works for his own selfish desires rather than for others does not put himself in condition to know and experience religion in its higher sense. To understand the religion of Christ he must be sympathetic toward the feelings and needs of others as well as of himself.

Another feature of religion as taught by Christ is designed to aid men to work together for worthy ends. This may be termed the socializing of human aims and ideals. History shows that the world's most rapid advancement has been made under the social impetus of unified purpose. Perhaps the most fervent prayer ever recorded of Christ on behalf of his disciples was uttered when he prayed that they might "all be one." The power of unity in a righteous cause is beyond our ability to estimate.

Influence of Christian Principles

Some of these influences we may trace along the milestones of past centuries. In exerting them the church has come up through much tribulation, but the many blessings enjoyed so richly in the world today would not exist, if these great sacrifices had not been made. In many instances the struggle has been a long one, but the benefits finally enjoyed have been correspondingly greater, as a rule. We note only a few of them briefly.

A few centuries ago women were considered little if any better than chattels. They were bought in marriage, and had no civil status of their own. In the Middle Ages, also, accused persons were tried by "ordeal," a horrible method of torturing innocent and guilty alike, to determine their case. Disputes were settled by the "wager of battle," an almost equally barbarous custom. Not very long ago piracy was protected by the so-called civilized nations. The poor debtor was sold for debt, and more recently was kept in filthy jails if unable to pay the extortionate charges against him.

The abolition of slavery, together with many other customs which now would be classed with some age of savagery, have all been accomplished as a result of the light of Christ shed upon the world. These remarkable reforms were the outgrowth of a foundation principle of Christianity. Professor Ely states its meaning as follows:

The second commandment, which is like the first, means that in every act and thought and purpose, in our laws and in their administration, in all public as well as private affairs, we—if indeed we profess to be Christians—should seek to confer true benefits upon our fellow men.—Social Aspects of Christianity, p. 7.

The Task of Today

But the work that lies before us is still great. For we must work for the establishment of equity, justice, and equal opportunity among all peoples. We must win the confidence of those who are suspicious, by the establishment of just conditions for all. We must make vice and its consequences so distasteful that none need be entrapped by its deceitful allurements. Our prisons should be equipped to deal with each class of lawbreakers according to the defects of their character, rather than according to the act itself. The incorrigible should be restrained so long as necessary to protect against them, and punishment should be designed for effecting reformation.

Some of our large corporations have discovered the power of a little Christian spirit in business. Such examples should be encouraged until it dominates business life. The stability of our Government, the prosperity of our Nation, the security of our homes, the health, happiness, and freedom of our posterity, as well as the attainment of our ideals, are more, much more, dependent upon the devoted efforts of Christian societies than probably most people imagine. We owe Christ our allegiance for what we now enjoy, and for what our children's children shall enjoy after our work is done.

The Breathing Apparatus and Its Ramifications.—Chapter 4

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

1. Colds.—How not to catch them.

The common cold is the great pandemic. It is a most communicable disease, which is today receiving extraordinary attention because of its widespread harm. A large life insurance society a few years ago reported that influenza and pneumonia were responsible for over ten per cent of all paid death claims, while tuberculosis fell slightly behind both. The cold is less serious, but it leads to these other complications. In addition, it causes immense loss of working time and keeps piling in the toxins which one has to fight as the years advance. Bacteria, normally present on the mucous membrane, gain a foothold, and with lowered resistance these enemies succeed in lighting up a catarrh and then spreading to throat and bronchial tubes and lungs with increasing virulence. The specific organism has not been found as yet, but we know that care will diminish its foothold.

The breathing and associated apparatus is attacked by so many ailments that I consider the subject deserving of a volume. I will emphasize the matter in this one lesson. I include the nose and throat, which are the gateways to the lungs and to the rest of the body. They are particularly prone to germ diseases.

Microbes give rise to bronchial and nasal catarrh, causing symptoms with which most of you are familiar. These germs can not survive in air or sunlight. Men living entirely in the open air are free from colds, in spite of hardship and exposure.

During a cold, and indeed at all times, there are great numbers of bacteria growing in the air passages. It seems certain that the pneumonia and influenza germs often cause colds. It is thought also that the pneumo-bacillus, which sometimes causes pneumonia, is a common cause of colds, and that a small micrococcus catarrhalis, which is often found in catarrh, is sometimes the germ which is causing the trouble in a cold. It attacks the nasal chambers and the throat and causes inflammation. Catarrh is a chronic cold, and bronchitis is a cold of the lining of the trachea and bronchial tubes. The small coccus which are sometimes present in the pneumonia and influenza germs, are common causes of bronchitis. A chronic catarrh is difficult to cure.

To breathe through the nose is to lessen the harm done by dust. Therefore one should breathe habitually through the nose. If there are any obstructions, have them removed. Avoid indoor crowds and other polluted air. The city contains a tremendous amount of dust which has to be filtered through the nasal cavities and passages if the lungs are to be kept clean, instead of grayish.

When a person is hoarse, all the air passages become affected unless the disease is checked. We reach for consideration the larynx, or Adam's apple, the organ of the voice. It lies between the trachea and the base of the tongue, and its upper opening is closed during swallowing by a cartilaginous flap, the epiglottis. The trachea, or windpipe, is a cartilaginous and membranous tube which extends downward about four and one half inches from the larynx to its division into the two bronchi, one of which goes to each lung. The right bronchus is larger and shorter than the left. The bronchi subdivide and give off branches, at the same time gradually losing their cartilages, until they terminate in a sack, the walls of which are studded with air cells, a terminal bronchus, and its air cells resembling a bunch of grapes.

Bronchitis is a particularly common disease which is quite chronic.

2. Taking care of coughs.

In order to ward off colds one should avoid the use of damp habitations, with windows shut at night; the breathing in of a lot of dust from carpet sweeping, instead of using the moist method or the vacuum cleaner; overheating the house in winter, with dry heat; wearing heavy underclothing which can not be removed indoors. Colds are contracted by overeating, even if appetite fails; also by neglect or avoidance of proper bathing, which permits the pores to become clogged. Loss of sleep, together with worry or mental depression, bring about favorable conditions for the contracting of colds. If the feet become wet and shoes are not removed, it takes but a little draft on the back of the neck to rivet the cold. Drafts are not themselves dangerous, except under these conditions. A lowering of resisting power disturbs the marvelous heat regulating mechanism of the body. It takes first the germs, then the causes, such as chilling, wetness, dry heat, etc., and finally the lowered resistance, to promote a cold. It is advisable to treat chronic catarrhal conditions every day, for growth of germs is favored by a poor soil. Therefore practice daily antisepsis with some reliable alkaline wash.

The lungs are the essential organs of respiration, and with the heart they fill the entire chest cavity. Each is covered by a smooth, shining serous membrane, which also lines the chest cavity and is called the pleura. Ordinarily the lungs are everywhere in contact with the chest walls. In the ultimate air cells the venous blood of the pulmonary arteries, circulating in the capillaries, is brought in contact with the air in the cells, and the interchange takes place which results in the blood receiving a supply of oxygen and becoming arterial, while the air becomes charged with carbonic oxide and waste organic matter.

Of the millions suffering from tuberculosis, pneumonia, typhoid fever, and diphtheria, some regain full health and strength; others are weakened for life, and still others die. Tuberculosis alone kills about half a thousand of our countrymen every day, and in its deadly work consumes more money than is spent on all the public schools of the country. Almost as many people are killed by pneumonia, and it causes even more intense suffering. Coughs, colds, and catarrh are considered homely and harmless diseases, but severe attacks of them often cause great discomfort and weakness.

These diseases are due to special bacteria, which make their way into the body and live upon its tissues. Certain bacteria destroy lung tissue and cause pneumonia; other bacteria develop in the small intestine and produce typhoid fever; others develop mainly in the respiratory organs, such as the nose, throat, and pharynx, and cause influenza.

Our objective should be to keep down dust as much as possible. Dust trades are exceedingly unhealthy. In due time, even the air of homes will be filtered and renewed hourly and properly moistened, as is done in large theaters. Dust is a carrier of disease and is a menace to the lungs. Hard floors, rugs, plain furniture, and a minimum of hangings are desirable, as is the use of vacuum cleaners. Indoor air holds numerous impurities in suspension; and also gases, carbon smoke, etc. An ideal system of ventilation employs the water filter system.

Do Not Overfeed the Body

During colds, it is desirable not to overfeed the body. A laxative is helpful in clearing the body of waste by way of past excesses. It is not necessary to be stuffed with bedding and clothes and to stay indoors. The home remedies: hot milk and hot lemonade, the hot gargles and sprays, the quinine if desired, and hot mustard footbath, are not exactly scientific remedies, but they dilate the capillaries of the body and cause sweating. If the cold is severe, go to bed at once. If ears or sinuses are infected, a physician should be called at once.

During the winter months people have a tendency to shut themselves up in stuffy, overheated rooms, where infective germs are given more powers by virtue of the polluted air and absence of sunlight. Throat, and mucous membrane of the nasal passages, are so closely connected with the lungs that by care of the throat and nose, much lung trouble can be avoided. Nearly one third of the total deaths result from lung trouble.

Our houses should be kept light and airy; blinds should be raised, even if carpets do fade. Kitchens and pantries in particular should be thoroughly lighted. Bed clothes, rugs, and clothing should be exposed to the sunlight frequently, for there is no better safeguard against bacterial disease than light. In a sick room sunlight is especially valuable.

3. Pneumonia and influenza.

Pneumonia is an inflammation of the lungs, as the result of exposure affecting principally the air cells. Bronchitis affects the large bronchial tubes, while pleurisy is an inflammation of the outside wrappings of the lungs, or pleura. Pneumonia is found principally among the tenements and crowded warrens of the poor, where light and air and working conditions are unfavorable, while in comparison the chances of its attacking the rich and favorably located are one in twenty. The disease runs a rapid course, usually from one to three weeks. The thing to do is to destroy the sputum, keeping the patient by himself. The first symptoms are a cold, then a chill that is extreme, and then a stabbing pain, with short, sharp cough. High fever is attended by rapid breathing. However, seventy-five per cent recover. The lungs that are swollen and enlarged, also the pleurisy, subside. The sudden change for recovery is miraculous. However, the heart has to be watched, for the muscle is weakened.

The terminal stage of most diseases is pneumonia. It is usually a complication of other diseases, such as influenza, measles, and the common cold, causing much mortality. The United States Army during the World War had as its principal disease pneumonia, causing 83.6 per cent of all deaths. Save for one type of lobar pneumonia, there is no specific treatment. The outcome depends on the resistance of the patient to the virulent organisms. The important thing is to avoid colds and influenza. All forms of vaccination are at present in the experimental stage. It is better to avoid cold and wet, particularly during winter. Keep up the body resistance by suitable diet, rest, sleep, and outdoor exercise. Avoid fatigue and exposure. These are the chief preventive influences. Pneumonia may be caused by a number of different germs, but 95 per cent of all cases are caused by the pneumococcus germ, which grows not only in the lungs but also in the nose, mouth, throat, and air passages.

It is not advisable to expose oneself to germs from a pneumonia patient, for a person who may be holding in check a race of weak pneumonia germs may very readily fall a victim to a stronger race of the same germs. During pneumonia epidemics, make a special effort to keep up the general health, and wear sufficient clothing to protect you from cold.

By many it is believed that the large number of pneumonia cases in February and March is to be accounted for on the theory that we have been weakened by living indoors all winter, often in houses that are not sufficiently ventilated. Physicians and boards of health are more and more recommending fresh air as a means of keeping up health, and in treating pneumonia some of the most successful physicians carry the patients outdoors even in the coldest weather, as is done in the treatment of consumption.

The germ of influenza is one of the smallest disease-producing bacteria known. It grows in the mouth, the throat, the trachea, the bronchial tubes, and occasionally is the cause of pneumonia. Influenza germs linger for a long time, sometimes for more than a year, in the air passages of those who have had the disease.

A bad feature of influenza is that other troubles, such as pneumonia, consumption, eye and ear disease, bronchitis, and colds, often follow it, and it may leave a part of the body, as the stomach, the kidneys, or the nervous system, in a weakened condition. Because it is so widespread, because its after effects are so serious, and because a person may have it again and again, influenza is a much dreaded disease.

Influenza germs are therefore spread everywhere, and great numbers of persons are attacked by the disease. Every care should be taken to avoid the germs, and the hands, dishes, and handkerchiefs of an influenza patient should be carefully disinfected.

Aged persons and persons who are weak should be guarded with especial care from the germs.

4. Tuberculosis and its universal prevalence.

The Germans say that "everyone is a little bit tubercular," and this is almost the truth. Even in the lungs of most grown persons there are scars showing where tubercle bacilli have started to grow and have been checked. If consumption is taken in hand before the germs have gained a secure foothold, it yields to treatment much more readily than many other bacterial diseases. One who has symptoms of consumption, therefore, should not try to persuade himself that his symptoms have no existence, for this will not stop the growth of the germs. He should not lose valuable time experimenting with patent medicines, for there is no medicine known that will cure consumption. The only sensible thing to do is to be examined at once by a physician who thoroughly understands the disease.

A consumptive should have an abundance of nourishing food, especially of fatty food. Meat, eggs, milk, and any other good food that he can eat, and digest, should be taken. Lunches should be eaten between meals and on retiring. The foods must be well prepared and served in different ways, or the patient will become tired of them. "Stuffing" a patient, however, may cause indigestion, and the diet should be looked after carefully. Nothing in the treatment of consumption is more important than fresh air, and the disease has been most successfully treated when the patient has lived and slept in the open air, summer and winter.

Tuberculosis selects its victims especially from those who are in the active working years of their lives. It is a lingering illness, which costs us far more in money than does any other disease. It is difficult to calculate the cost of sickness in dollars and cents, but one estimate that has been widely accepted places the cost of tuberculosis to our country at a billion dollars a year.

The germ of tuberculosis is a slow-growing bacterium, but often it resists all attempts of the body to kill it and grows steadily on until it causes death. Outside the bodies of men and animals, it does not grow at all in nature, and light and drying kill it. Tuberculosis of the lungs, or consumption, is the best-known form of the disease and causes by far the most deaths. Tuberculosis of the bones is also a common trouble, and most of the lame and crippled people that we see have been deformed by tuberculosis of the spinal column, the bones of the hips, legs, or feet. Tuberculosis meningitis, which causes more deaths than any other form of tuberculosis except consumption, is more common among children than among older persons. The skin, kidneys, intestines, larynx, and other parts of the body also may be attacked by this germ.

5. Hay fever and asthma.

Autumnal catarrh is hay fever, more common to the male, especially over twenty years of age. Often some abnormality of the nose acts as a source of reflex action. Dwellers in cities are more liable to this than rural people. When the catarrhal process invades the bronchi, the cough and asthmatic seizures become distressing. Permanent removal from the district, or immunization with some specific, is the cure.

Asthma is more serious. Heredity has something to do with it, and males are more subject than females. Duration of the attack is from a few minutes to several hours, or even longer. An overloaded stomach calls for an emetic. Of stimulants, coffee is the best, and seizure may be arrested by its use, as also by removal of the source of irritation or inhalation of certain fumes. General hygiene is also indicated.

Hay fever and asthma have some relation to the respiratory system. The asthmatic paroxysm is due to a dilation of the blood vessels of the bronchial mucous membrane. There is pallor and sense of coldness in the extremities. The local application of cold to the bronchial mucous membrane brings relief, especially by sitting near an open window, or relief may be obtained by the inhalation of certain fumes. A hot bath rarely fails to give relief. In hay fever, certain pollens to which the patient is susceptible produce swelling of the mucous membranes. A serum is made of such pollen and applied by physicians to the skin with a needle.

In Touch with Common Things

There is a loss in having one's life refined until it no longer touches common human experiences. It was well that Watt did not live too far from the kitchen, since it was in watching a boiling teakettle that he found the principle of the modern steam engine. It was well that Lilienthal, some fifty years ago, was able to see clothes on the line, for in watching the line he discovered "that tablecloths and sheets and other normally flat pieces lifted in a strong breeze above the horizontal position which it would be natural to suppose they would assume when borne out by the wind." According to Lindbergh, Lilienthal's patient observation of such things as washings on the line and the wings of birds was the beginning of the airplane.—Charles H. Sears, in The Crowded Ways; Missionary Education Movement.

The Meaning of Priesthood

By Henry L. Livingston

Do people really understand the importance and place of priesthood in God's work? This question comes to us as we view the attitude of indifference on the part of many people in regard to priesthood work. This is perhaps due to the fact that many members of the priesthood fail to function as they should in their offices and callings.

Just what is the purpose and meaning of priesthood? Paul tells us, "God hath set in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers." (1 Corinthians 12: 28.) And we have learned that whenever God does anything there is always an important purpose behind it. In finding out God's purpose in priesthood, we shall be made able to understand its significance and meaning.

In latter-day revelation Jesus says:

And this greater priesthood [Melchisedec] administereth the gospel and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God. Therefore, in the ordinances thereof, the power of godliness is manifest; and without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh; for without this, no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 3.

Continuing, Jesus says that the lesser priesthood (Aaronic) holdeth the key of the ministering of angels and the preparatory gospel, which gospel is the gospel of repentance and baptism, and the remission of sins.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 4.

God has chosen priesthood as the means and the only means of administering the gospel, that the power of godliness and salvation might be manifest unto man. Priesthood is, then, of vital importance to man, and it is important that we should understand its meaning, and it is important that the men who hold offices in the ministry, function as God intended, for the salvation of the human race depends upon it.

Priesthood Responsibility Demands Serious Consideration

Men who contemplate the acceptance of divine calling into the priesthood should certainly give the matter most serious consideration, for it is indeed a high and holy calling to be a representative of the eternal God—to administer the ordinances of his kingdom. It does thrill one to think of being called to occupy in positions held by the ancient worthies such as Peter, Paul, or John, having the same rights, privileges, and duties. All this is splendid, but we must not overlook the fact that priesthood is not given to men because they who are called are favorites in God's sight. It is rather because God has given them the ability to work in this capacity for the salvation of mankind. It is responsibility rather than honor that should be considered when accepting offices in the ministry, for the real honor comes in "magnifying" one's office and calling. We should not be so much concerned about holding the priesthood as we should be in how the priesthood can be used for the salvation of men and for the honor and glory of God, the Father.

The Priesthood Is Forever

Not only should the men who accept the calling of priesthood understand its purpose and seriousness, but they should also understand that it is enduring in its nature. "Whatsoever God doeth, it shall be forever," says the writer of Ecclesiastes. (3: 14.) Jesus, in speaking of one who accepts the priesthood, says that he accepts an oath and covenant of my Father which he can not break, neither can it be moved; but whosoever breaketh this covenant, after he hath received it, and altogether turneth therefrom, shall not have forgiveness of sins in this world nor in the world to come.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 6.

There can be no turning back after one accepts the oath and covenant of the priesthood, unless he forfeit his right to salvation, and that price is too great to pay! There is, on the other hand, a beautiful part to the everlasting nature of this covenant, and it is, that so long as men function in the priesthood in the way God intends, he has pledged salvation to those to whom they administer. If we who are called to occupy in the ministry could only appreciate the seriousness of the responsibility we accept, perhaps not so many would start and then be unwilling to continue when trials, problems, and perplexities confront us.

The Work of the Helpmate

It is an important thing, too, that the wives of the men of the priesthood understand their husbands' calling, for they can either help or hinder them materially in their work. We have seen the husband who is anxious to discharge his duties but can not do so well because of the wife's complaints. If he spends more than one evening out in visiting among the people, she feels that she is being neglected and does not hesitate to tell him so. It must be very discouraging to a man who senses his obligation to God and the church to be hindered because of complaints from the one who should be a help to him in his work.

We have seen, on the other hand, the wife who is interested in her husband's work and who is deeply concerned about the success of the church. She prays for him, she encourages him, she offers constructive suggestions, and she is willing to go all the way, not only for his sake, but also for the sake of the church. Fortunate is the man that has that type of companion.

If we, the children of men, wish to have a rich and significant fellowship with Jesus, and God the Father, if we wish to enjoy the privileges and benefits of God's kingdom, we are able only to do so through the administrations of the priesthood, for it is by this means that we have access to heavenly things. Jesus tells us through his latter-day prophet:

All they who receive this priesthood receiveth me, saith the Lord, for he that receiveth my servants receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth my Father, and he that receiveth my Father receiveth my Father's kingdom. Therefore, all that my Father hath shall be given unto him.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 6.

Priesthood the One Medium

The hope of heavenly blessings, also the hope of salvation, depends upon the function of priesthood. This is not difficult to understand when we realize that only the priesthood is authorized to preach the "good news" of the gospel. They alone are authorized to administer the saving ordinances, and it is through the medium of priesthood that the gifts of healing are manifested. God has also placed upon the ministry the tremendous responsibility of watching over and feeding the "flock." They are to be to his people as shepherds to the flock. They are to lead the people into green pastures where they can be fed upon spiritual food. Jesus emphasized the importance of this task to Peter: "Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He said unto him, Yea, Lord: thou knowest that I love thee. He said unto him, Feed my lambs." Jesus again said unto Peter, "Lovest thou me?" and Peter answered, "Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee." Jesus said unto him, "Feed my sheep." The third time Jesus asked Peter, "Lovest thou me?" Peter was grieved. He was deeply disturbed because Jesus had asked him the same question three times, and he replied, "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee." Jesus' only response was as before, "Feed my sheep." (John 21: 15, 16, 17.) Here Jesus was trying to impress Peter with the fact that his love for him could be measured only by the supreme efforts he put forth to feed the people of God on the spiritual food that would enable them to grow.

If this was true in Peter's case, then it is likewise true in the case of every minister of Christ. Our love for him can be measured only by our willingness to feed the people he loves and whom he has intrusted to our care. David, the Psalmist, was a shepherd in his youth, and he knew that the duty of the shepherd was to search for new pastures for the sheep. This required weary hours of toil and searching, but the life of the sheep depended upon it. As David was led by the Lord into green, spiritual pastures where he fed and his soul was satisfied, he was no doubt inspired to write the famous twenty-third psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters."

Priests of God Must Be Diligent Men

Sheep do not have the ability to go out in the morning to find new pastures themselves and return to the sheepfold in the evening. It is the duty of the shepherd to find the pastures and lead them there. We wonder if we, the ministers for Christ, who are shepherds of his people, keep them down in the valley, in the same pasture week after week and month after month, nibbling on dead grass stubs of our own notions and hobbies, or do we lead them into green pastures? Can the people say of us, "Christ's servants, the priesthood, are our shepherds. We shall not want. They make us to lie down in green pastures; they lead us beside the still waters."

Green pastures in spiritual things can be found only by diligent searching, by hours of toiling, and by gigantic mental effort, supplemented by the help of the Spirit of God. Men who are mentally lazy shall never be able to satisfy the hunger of God's people for spiritual things. How many times do we send the people away unfed and hungry? The Lord admonished the ministry "to give diligent heed to the words of eternal life; for you shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God." (Doctrine and Covenants 83: 7.) We should, then, be diligent in studying God's word, for therein is our distinctive message and the spiritual food necessary for the proper growth of God's people.

The shepherd not only feeds his flock, but also watches over the flock, to protect them from the encroachment of the enemy. Paul, in his time, sensed the necessity of watching the flock.

Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. . . . Therefore watch.—Acts 20: 28, 29, 31.

God has placed certain officers in the church, whose special duty it is to watch over the church to see that there is no iniquity therein; to see that the members do their duty. It is also the duty of all the priesthood to watch against the enemy, sin, to keep it from entering in amongst the flock. Vigilance is the price of a peaceful and undisturbed people. Wise is the servant who climbs up into the watchtower to watch for the approach of the enemy so that he can protect his people. Unless the watchman enter into the watchtower, sins will enter in the midst of the people and scatter them in panic. Broken hearts, injured feelings, time, and expense can be avoided if the servants of Christ are diligent in their watching.

Love for the People a Necessity

In understanding the meaning of priesthood, there is another lesson to be learned in the shepherd and sheep story, and it is one told by Jesus, referring to himself. He tells us that he is the Good Shepherd and that he would lay down his life for the sheep because he loves them. Priesthood means, if it means anything, a passion and love for the souls of men. The minister must have a sacrificial love for the human race that approximates the divine love, or else his work shall be ineffective. It was God's great love for men that has made salvation possible, and if he, the servant of Christ who administers the ordinances of salvation, fails in love, he fails in everything. The man who understands the true meaning of priesthood is the man who, because of his great love for men, is willing to lay his life on the altar of service, that these men might live.

"Rise up, O men of God!
Have done with lesser things;
Give heart and soul and mind and strength
To serve the King of kings.

"Rise up, O men of God!
His kingdom tarries long:
Bring in the day of brotherhood
And end the night of wrong.

"Rise up, O men of God!
The church for you doth wait;
Her strength unequal to her task;
Rise up and make her great."

The Herald Bookshelf

"Perhaps it is not too late," says J. F., the Custodian of the Bookshelf, "to remind our readers of the beautiful Scripture Text Calendar. We have sold a large number this year, but have a number left from a rather heavy order." J. F. reached across the long counter that you will see when you come to conference. He opened a box and drew out one of the loveliest calendars that you may ever see.

We remind our readers of this calendar at this time for its value as an aid to the worker with young students in the Sunday school. For each month there is a beautiful picture on a Bible subject, in full color, and of large size. Each picture could very well be used as supplementary lesson material to hold the interest of the children. Almost any teacher can make a good talk of from ten to fifteen minutes on each picture. The subject could be continued from Sunday to Sunday. Besides, there are good daily Scripture quotations, and special reading assignments for Sunday.

Order from Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri. Each 30 cents. Four for a dollar.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Cleveland, Ohio

January 30.—The first Sunday of the new year brought an instructive talk on astronomy by Bishop Charles Fry, of Kirtland District. Bishop Fry has a comprehensive understanding of the subject. We were amazed at the greatness and grandeur of the sun, moon, and stars as pictures on the screen.

We too had a good visit from District President James E. Bishop, who spent the week of January 12 to 19 here, giving instruction in a religious training class. This instruction will prove helpful to those who wish to serve humanity more efficiently.

At the annual business meeting of the year the officers were elected. Missionary Appointee Percy Farrow was re-elected pastor; branch clerk, Sister E. Campbell; deacon, Brother H. Wilson; organist, Sister M. Mason; musical director, Sister Percy Farrow. We created a finance and trustee board consisting of three members from the branch: Elders E. Webbe, J. H. Talbot, and C. Bennett, one from the Sunday school, C. Thomas; Department of Recreation and Expression, H. Campbell; and the Department of Women, Sister M. Lindsay. The Sunday school superintendency, J. H. Talbot and Ed. Cooper, were reelected; primary superintendent, Sister Shirley Talbot. The Department of Recreation and Expression made a change in the election of E. Webbe as superintendent; assistant, Orville G. Loeding. The Department of Women reelected Sister M. Mason superintendent; Sister E. Foster, assistant. We have adopted part of the coordination plan, that of a finance and budget system, and are happy to report that all departments have fallen in line with the plan. We hope the new system will be an incentive that we may realize our objective—our Cleveland Church dedicated in 1935.

Weekly prayer meetings are increasing in number, a good spirit prevailing. Attendance at church services is also gaining.

We have met with gain in the membership of Sister Percy Farrow, who came to this branch last November, the bride of our missionary appointee and pastor, Elder Percy Farrow. By her sweet personality, humility, and love toward all, we are sure to benefit. She is willing to serve in any capacity. She has started a junior choir, which adds much to the morning worship hour, also a senior choir for evening worship.

January 26 a new form of service was begun. The meeting opened at the regular Sunday school hour, 9:30 in the morning, organist and chorister in charge of the music, the superintendency in the stand. The opening song was announced, the prayer offered, introductory remarks given concerning the nature of the new service by Superintendent Ed. Cooper. This introduced a twenty-minute prayer and testimony meeting. Following came the teachers' and officers' roll call, music, and class assembly for thirty minutes. At the first bell the junior choir members assembled, and at the second all classes gathered in the main auditorium while the church organist, Sister M. Mason, played a march on the organ. Then came the church school review by the superintendent, music while the offering was received to aid the building fund. The secretary read the report, the choir marched in, announcements were read by the one assisting the speaker, offertory played, the choir sang, and the speaker delivered a forty-minute sermon followed by the closing exercises. We are happy to say the new program was carried out with the cooperation of the branch.

Because of a change in his business hours the bishop's solicitor, E. A. Mehlisch, has resigned his office. He has served faithfully many years, always ready to give assistance. His successor is Brother Clark Bennet, a recently ordained priest.

Elder and Sister J. A. McNeil's daughter, Florence, who is attending Graceland College, spent the Christmas vacation at home.

Historic Branch at Mahu Reorganized

By J. H. Yager

I have just finished four weeks of very intensive work in the island of Tubuai, the island where our missionaries landed in the year of 1844, and where the first sermon on the restoration of the gospel was preached to the people of this mission. This island had not been visited by a white missionary for more than six years, and the way the native Saints held on there in spite of that fact is indeed commendable.

Tubuai is about fifteen miles in circumference, and the means of travel are by foot, horseback, or bicycle. The last named was the most preferable, for I am not an expert horseman, and walking was warm work and slow. The climate was delightfully cool after three years of the extreme heat of Tahiti and the Tuamotus, and I was able to finish considerable work in my short stay there.

The following will give Herald readers an idea of the amount and character of work that was completed during my four weeks there: Sermons preached, thirteen; total services attended, forty-seven; baptisms, twenty-seven; branches organized, one; elders' courts, nineteen; house to house calls and visits, fifty-three; and numerous other kinds of work that do not appear in a report of this kind.

The branch I organized at the village of Mahu is a remnant of the first branch organized in this mission, July 29, 1844, by Addison Pratt. It was then called the "Tooboui" (Tubuai) Branch. See Church History, volume 3, page 100. We have two other branches in Tubuai, one at the village Mataura, the other at Taahuaia. I was indeed happy to reorganize this historic branch of the church. It now has a membership of thirty-four.

I was permitted to see the site on which stood the house where the first gospel sermon was preached in this mission. The house itself has long since been removed, but Apostle Clyde F. Ellis succeeded in purchasing a piece of ground two meters square (about seven feet square) where the house once stood. A suitable marker is to be placed there in due time.

Among the twenty-seven persons baptized were several from the Utah Church ranks. A number of other Mormons are near the kingdom. One young man, a priest in the Utah Church, returned his license to their missionaries before I left. I presume he has been baptized before this date. Zion and the standing of the Reorganization in Zion appeal most strongly to the Mormon membership here. They were strongly impressed with my illustrated lecture on Zion, in which I drew a map of that portion of the city of Independence surrounding what is commonly called the "Temple Lot," showing the holdings of the Reorganized Church in contrast to the holdings of the Mormon Church in what was formerly the "Temple Lot." I was wonderfully blessed with the Spirit in my lecture on Zion.

I feel that my visit to Tubuai was most successful and profitable to the work in that island, and I regret that I could not have remained for at least three months.

Lillian, Nadine, and I sail for America March 4. We are looking forward to a grand meeting with the church at General Conference and with our friends and relatives in the homeland.

May we be prospered in the rapid strides the church is making these months.

Centennial Thoughts

By Poul S. Nielson

One hundred years—only a short span in the life of the world—can bring about many changes in the lives of men. The past century has seen initiated more improvements than any other like period of time in the history of the world. Almost all of the great inventions, with the exception of that of the steam engine, were made in the century which is just closed.

The question may be asked, Why have so many things been done in the last century? Many will be the answers given. Some claim it is because man has reached a very high level of civilization and must invent more and more things to improve his standard of living. Be that as it may, the writer can not help but think there is a better reason to be given than a purely material one. We are living in the last days, and God is preparing mankind for the fullness of the earth, or in other words, the end of the world.

In this one hundred years untold sufferings have been endured by almost all the peoples of the earth. Wars have followed wars; famine, pestilence, and disasters have followed closely one upon another. There have been many hardships and troubles which have never appeared on the surface, and the struggle for existence seems gradually to have grown sharper. Industrialism rules, and one man can scarcely be out of a position before many are ready to take his place. The fear of insecurity is among men as never before. Everyone is looking out for himself and those intrusted to his care. The spirit of Christianity is hardly found outside the church building, and sometimes it is not found inside.

We Latter Day Saints should be especially thankful for what has happened in the last one hundred years through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith. Do we rejoice in the way we should at being able to witness the centennial year of the life of the church in latter days?

The Scriptures tell us that where there is no vision the people perish. Let us, then, have vision to see ahead the task which is ours, as a church and as individual members. None are too old to serve, none are too young. Everyone has a niche to fill. We can not all be in the pulpit (who would then be the congregation?), but we can help those who are called to preach the word, to take it to the world. If we can not lead, we can follow. Always we can be supporters of those who must press forward.

Criticism may at times be all right, but as a rule the critic is addressing himself to those who do not need his criticism, and the ones who do need it live in ignorance of it. Sometimes we may in ignorance do things which we would not do if a friend had the courage to tell us in a kindly way and to point out our mistake. Here is where adverse criticism is helpful. It is easy for us to see that which is faulty in our brother; but the quickest cure for the habitual critic is to strive honestly to put himself in his brother's place and to look at things of his own through the eyes of another. Everyone will profit by trying this.

Now, as never before, those who are in authority need the help and support of all loyal members, that the church may move on to the place God has designed it should occupy in the affairs of men, helping and leading a straying world to find that which is the most important—eternal life.

Duluth, Minnesota

January 22.—Elder and Sister Robert Gunlock, of Minneapolis, visited during the holidays at the home of Sister Gunlock's parents, Brother and Sister J. E. Walters, Carlton, Minnesota. Brother Gunlock occupied the pulpit at Duluth morning and evening December 29. Sister Mildred Walters, who is attending Graceland, was also at her home during the vacation and told us how nice it was to have a room in the girls' new dormitory at the college.

Brother and Sister A. S. Davis and family with their daughter, Marie Senna, and her husband, left the day before Christmas for Ava, Missouri, where they have purchased farm lands.

We are now holding Sunday services in the Cosmopolitan Clubrooms at 307 North Central Avenue, while the church edifice is being repaired since the fire. The work is progressing nicely, and the upper auditorium will present a better appearance than it did before the disaster. A new pipe furnace has been installed, hard maple floors are being laid, a more spacious rostrum is planned, and the walls are to be newly plastered and given new doors and woodwork. New glass is to be put in all the upper windows. In ten days or two weeks the decorating and varnishing will be done, and again we will meet in our church home.

Sister Eva Tourville has had serious trouble with her ear but is improved.

Sister Mahala Bundy, for some time confined at the Nopening Sanitarium, visited with her son, Elder A. C. Bundy and daughter, Sister Lottie Zuelsdorf, during the holidays. Sister Hennaman, of Moorhead, Minnesota, another daughter, also visited at these homes. They were in attendance at several meetings of the Saints.

The Sunday school perfected organization during its hour December 29, Robert Zuelsdorf superintendent. The following officers were chosen: Assistant superintendent, Cyrus Stauty; secretary, Brother Jewell; assistant secretary, Sybil Bundy; Christmas offering superintendent, Samuel Case.

January 2 the Women's Department perfected its organization, Sister F. J. Feathers superintendent. Those elected are: assistant superintendent, Sister Martha Schnuckle; secretary and teacher, Sister Lottie Zuelsdorf; organist, Sister Sybil Bundy; scripture reader, Sister Julia Case.

Sacramental service January 5 was attended by the good Spirit. Many earnest prayers and testimonies were offered. The theme of the service brought out the thought that the centennial anniversary shall be a time of church-wide spiritual endowment for the enlightenment, unification, and encouragement of the Saints in preparation for the tasks and triumphs of the second century. A week of prayer followed at the homes of the Saints, the themes suggested by the district president being used. There was good attendance throughout the week. Prayer is that which places us in communion with the heavenly Father. It opens the gates of heaven to us. We feel we have gained much through the avenue of prayer, and our desire is to press forward to the high calling which is in Christ Jesus, to strive to build securely as we move toward Zion the beautiful which beckons us on. Christ is our leader, and his assistants are leading us forward. The church which was restored in latter days will accomplish the work assigned to it. Let us do our part.

Gus Holmstrom, of Knife River, Minnesota, passed from this life January 5. The funeral services were held from the Holliday Mortuary at Two Harbors, Pastor A. C. Bundy officiating. Interment was beside his wife, who died a year ago, at Forest Hill Cemetery, Duluth.

A bridal shower January 14 was given in honor of the marriage of Sister Esther Braddon at the home of Sister W. C. Stauty. The rooms were decorated for the occasion with streamers, cupids, and hearts. Many appropriate gifts were received by the bride. A mock marriage ceremony was had, Sister Lottie Zuelsdorf acting as bridegroom, Sister T. J. Feathers, the bride, Sister Sybil Bundy officiating, Sister Eva Tourville singing and playing the wedding march. Sister Esther Braddon's marriage to Reginald H. Edlund will be solemnized at the Elim Lutheran Church by Reverend Carl H. Olson January 29.

Pastor A. C. Bundy has occupied the pulpit on recent Sundays along with other members of the local priesthood.

Lincoln, Nebraska

January 31.—Owing to the absence of Pastor E. J. Lenox, who has been confined to the Sanitarium at Independence, the annual branch business meeting has not yet been held. The officers of last year are holding their places until Brother Lenox is again able to be with us. We are glad to report that his health is gaining rapidly and we expect him home soon.

Elders W. E. Poague and Lawrence Brockway, counselors to the president of the branch, with the aid of the other officers, have kept the work moving along as best they could, but we miss the pastor and eagerly look forward to his return.

The Sunday school presented a Christmas program the evening of December 22. There was a tree with candy and nuts for the children. The junior department of the Sunday school presented the program, which was in charge of Sisters Poague and Schrunck.

Elsie Hale, who is teaching school in western Nebraska, visited at home and worshiped with the branch one Sunday during the Christmas vacation. Sister John Hunt and daughter, Dot, of Atkinson, Nebraska, were guests at the home of Sister Hunt's daughter, Sister Schrunck, during the holidays. They were seen at church while they were in Lincoln. Marcia Omev visited with her parents and friends here during the holiday recess of her school. Jimmy Chapple spent two days in Lincoln, December 26 and 27.

The Department of Women gave a supper at the church on New Year's Eve. After the meal the dining room was cleared, and a good program was presented, followed by games in which all ages participated. All went home feeling well paid for attending.

The Department of Women met at the church January 2 to finish the business of 1929. A splendid feeling of cooperation has been manifested in this department, and a good amount of money contributed to branch expense.

There has been much sickness in the branch. Brother Fike is still in poor health, and Sister Fike, who suffered a stroke of paralysis early in the winter, is very ill.

A number of young people have been absent from our meetings. We look forward to a revival of interest among them.

The cottage prayer services of the midweek are proving a success. Lincoln observed the Week of Prayer early in January. These services were in charge of Priest Grover C. Wall.

District conference will convene at Lincoln March 1 and 2. The evening of February 28 a three-act play will be given if present plans are worked out.

Woodbine, Iowa

February 4.—This year we are hoping to see each member do his best, giving his talent along with his financial assistance. Officers for the branch are: President, F. A. Fry, who has chosen for counselors, George Young and Howard Reynolds; superintendent of religious education, K. C. Harder; assistants, George Young and Joe Hamer; superintendent of music, Irvin Rosenberger; head of Women's Department, Sister Belle Brewster, Sister Fannie Deal in charge until Sister Brewster is able to return to her duties. Sister Brewster, who has been in Mercy Hospital for some time where she underwent a serious operation, returned to her home in Woodbine Sunday. Charles Cushing was chosen leader of the Department of Recreation and Expression. The new officers are busy, and the work seems to be progressing.

There is a teachers' training class at the evening study hour, Brother K. C. Harder instructor. From this the teachers are gaining valuable training.

New Year's Eve we had a hard time party in the basement of the church. This was well attended, the people coming dressed for the occasion. First prize was given to Sister Ella Rosenberger; second prize to Brother Frank Fry, and third prize to Brother Dick Young. The program and stunts given were entertaining. The young people attended a carnival at Logan Friday evening the latter part of December.

The Blue Birds meet tonight with Florence Deal. The little girls have met regularly throughout the year and are deriving good from their association. The Department of Women have purchased some new furnishing for the church.

A goodly number attended the February sacramental service, the members being benefited by assembling to partake of the Lord's Supper.

Saint Thomas, Ontario

The sisters met at the church January 16 to transact business. Reports were heard from the various officers, each giving retrospect of a fine year. The following officers were elected: President, Sister Ira Kinsman; vice president, Sister A. Cordery; secretary, Sister Lillie Burger; assistant secretary, Sister E. Ford; treasurer, Sister A. Mann.

This branch has had a pleasant and profitable visit from Missionary William I. Fligg. His sermons always are uplifting, and we are encouraged. During his stay here the young people under the convenship of Sisters Burger and P. Ford and Brother Charles Skelding held a tally-ho party the evening of January 30. About sixty young people met at the church and went in sleighloads around the city. After two hours out in the invigorating weather they returned to the church for another hour, where a bountiful repast was prepared for them by the older members. All thoroughly enjoyed themselves and after singing "Blest be the tie that binds" were dismissed by Elder Fligg.

Elkhart, Indiana

2245 Morton Avenue

Elkhart Saints look forward to the coming months of this year with hope. Opportunities are opening to us and all have been brought to a realization of achievements to be made in the near future.

December 22 a beautiful Christmas pageant was presented by members of the Sunday school. The children deserve much praise in honor of their splendid work. A generous treat closed the evening.

Sacramental service January 5 was well attended and will be long remembered by all who were present. The spirit was there in abundance. The assurance was given that the work in Elkhart is opened up, and this makes us feel that our earnest prayers are heard.

In the afternoon a number of South Bend and Mishawaka Saints met here at the Y. M. C. A., where Elder C. B. Freeman led to the waters of baptism three precious souls, Carol Freeman, of Mishawaka, May Newlund and Glenn Davis, who recently arrived from Independence. Then the Saints gathered in the home of Brother and Sister Walters for confirmation. This was indeed a day of rejoicing, and we are thankful to our heavenly Father for the progress of the everlasting gospel. For the things we have done we do not praise ourselves but our Guide and Protector who has answered our prayers.

Buffalo Prairie, Illinois

Buffalo Prairie Branch was organized April 28, 1862, with Wentworth Holmes, sr., in charge and eight members, two of whom, Wentworth Holmes, jr., and Ellen W. Hutchins, are still members of the church. Since that time the work has been carried on by such men as Eli Epperly, J. F. Adams, David S. Holmes, Ezra Bryant, and Charles L. Holmes, and others. Among the ministry who have from time to time visited the branch and helped are J. T. Kinnamon, F. G. Pitt, James McKiernan, J. S. Patterson, M. T. Short, C. E. Willey, and many others.

The chapel was one of the first built and dedicated in the Reorganization, being erected in 1868 and dedicated September 6 of that year by Joseph Smith and Mark H. Forscutt. It still stands in a fair state of repair. In August, 1929, a meeting was arranged at which a collection was taken sufficient to shingle, paint, and repair the house. A part of this work was done.

Because of the recent decrease in numbers in this local due to the moving away of some members and other causes, District President E. R. Davis has recommended that we join Joy Branch for worship. Plans have been made, however, to hold at least one union home-coming service yearly, this to be in our branch in the autumn.

Christmas Eve we met with the Saints at Joy, where a pleasant program was presented under the leadership of Sister Marjorie Holmes.

Brother and Sister Thomas Hartnell, of Independence, have been visiting their daughter, Mrs. W. V. Holmes, at Joy, for several weeks, and the brother has greatly helped in the preaching. Sister Hartnell gave a fine talk at the Christmas program. It is a treat to enjoy the services of such able workers.

Davidson, Oklahoma

February 1.—Christmas Eve found the church adorned with Christmas decorations and a gayly lighted Christmas tree. The large crowd of people very much enjoyed the program presented by young and old. Nothing more beautiful than the play "Wondrous night" could have been presented. It was given by the young people of the branch. Then Santa Claus made merry with the distribution of gifts.

The old year closed in Davidson with a rush of activity, and now the new year is well under way. The annual business meeting was held, officers elected, books balanced, and all made in readiness for the biggest year in history. For another year our beloved president, E. B. Stafford, senses the heavy responsibility of the branch upon him.

With a complete corps of officers the branch is ready to move forward to accomplish great things. This spirit was exemplified the morning of January 5, when ninety members gathered for Sunday school, there being unusually fine interest. A few visitors were present, District President M. Crownover, wife, and son Elmer, of Calumet, and others. The spirit of peace prevailed in the sacramental service at the eleven o'clock hour. The meeting was characterized by unity, love, forgiveness, and a desire on the part of each that spoke to become more humble this year than ever before. A like testimony could be sensed as one looked at the faces of the members who sat in quiet meditation. The Spirit assured the Saints that they had done many pleasing things in the past year, and they were admonished to come up higher, being comforted with the thought that if they are humble God will care for them and heal their sick. Much greater are the blessings of God for his people this year if we heed his admonitions.

The Saints are trying to do those things which have been advised by the heavenly Father, and January was a busy month.

Tawas City, Michigan

The Christmas season was observed with an appropriate program. The playlet, "The most precious gift," was sponsored by Sisters Olive Davison and Mabel Frank, and there were songs and recitations by the children.

The semiannual election of officers was held in the church December 28, the following being elected: President, M. A. Sommerfield; secretary, B. C. Bowen; treasurer, Sister E. L. Pringle; organist and chorister, Sister Florence Ulmon; solicitor, Sister E. L. Pringle; Sunday school superintendent, Sister Olive Davison; secretary, Evalyn Frank; librarian, Violet Bowen; treasurer, Dorothy Davison; organist and chorister, Myrna Sommerfield; leader of Recreation and Expression, Olive Davison; assistant, Ervin Ulmon; leader of the Department of Women, Sister E. L. Pringle.

The Women's Department has been busy during the year giving suppers, holding baked-goods sales, quilting, and engaging in other activities to assist in lessening the debt of the church.

On a recent Friday evening Sisters Davison and Ulmon gave a party for the young people of the Department of Recreation and Expression. About thirty attended, all enjoying a feeling of good fellowship. Games were played, songs sung, and lunch served. The increase in attendance at Sunday school shows that the young people appreciated this effort in their behalf. This Friday evening they are to debate the question, "Resolved that George Washington was a greater man than Abraham Lincoln."

Sunday evening, January 26, the program outlined in the Herald was fully enjoyed by the large audience. Two papers by Sisters Ulmon and Davison on Joseph Smith and his life's work and the Restoration were followed by a sermon by the pastor, who spoke along the same line.

Fulton, Iowa

January 27.—What have we accomplished in the year which is gone? In checking up the activities through which we have recently passed, we have resolved to do our utmost this year to further the Master's work.

District President E. R. Davis was in Fulton at the business meeting December 28. John Heide was sustained president of the branch. Brother Heide has occupied this office since 1888. Ethel Campbell was elected clerk; superintendent of Sunday school, Elvin Heide, Brother Clarence Heide, holder of this office, planning to move to Lamoni with his family March 1. The office of solicitor will be filled at a later date.

January 5 new officers took their places, and that morning a very good sacramental service was had. All expressed a desire to follow the Master.

Amos Heide is conducting meetings at Crabtown, a place not on the map, about nine miles from Fulton. They have Sunday school, and this last fall Brother Higdon held a series of meetings there. Fifteen persons were added to our branch but do not attend here.

We are praying that the General Conference will be a great force for good and that the divine Spirit will be felt throughout the whole church and the endowment be had by every honest member. May we let our light shine, that God may be honored and the work advanced.

Sister Heide has been ill and unable to attend services this month. This is unusual for this faithful helper.

Ribstone, Alberta

The Christmas concert on Christmas Eve proved to be an enjoyable event for all. Our prairie church was crowded, no standing room being left. The program was of a more sacred nature than most concerts in this region. We tried to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of Jesus rather than the expected visit of Santa Claus. Sister Whalley acted as the good man who brings the presents, and did very well.

New Year's Eve was the regular prayer meeting night. After the service Brother Whalley announced that it was also Sister Whalley's birthday and that she was going to serve us turkey sandwiches and tea to celebrate the occasion. But we gave her a little surprise also. The news had leaked out, and the members brought some cakes among which was a birthday cake.

Several nonmembers are regularly attending church, more in number than have ever before attended at the same time. Surely some good will come of their interest.

Extremely cold weather has been our lot, the thermometer having dropped below fifty for three mornings, and one morning it was sixty-two.

Brother Whalley is planning a trip to the different branches with his counselor, Brother Bates, sometime the latter part of January and the early part of February.

The Women's Department is planning a social for Valentine's Day, and the Department of Recreation is planning a play for this winter.

Parkersburg, West Virginia

January 27.—Of recent months much has taken place in this branch. The Saints met at the home of Sister Florence Williams July 8 in a farewell party for Sister Isabel Booker, who was leaving for Canada. The branch regretted to see her leave, for she was always ready to help in church work.

Brother and Sister Guy Hammond, of Akron, Ohio, visited July 14, Brother Hammond preaching that evening. Brother and Sister G. W. Lawson and daughter, of Clarksburg, West Virginia, were here July 21. Brother Lawson is district Sunday school superintendent, and this was his first visit to our school. He preached a fine sermon in the morning on stewardships.

During the summer the branch held several lawn socials at the church, also at the Cooper and Griffin homes. They were sponsored by the women, the profits going to help pay the church debt. The Women's Department is doing well in this line of activity.

Only a few were able to attend the district reunion at Indian Creek Branch August 4 to 11. Harry and Martha Smith, Laura and Burns Wilson, Florence Williams and family attended part of the week. Attendance was poor. Sister Bunner and daughter, Dolores, and Sister Griffin and Sister Reese came out the last Sunday, good attendance being enjoyed that day.

Brother Hubert Mitchell and family and Mary Cross, of Akron, were in Parkersburg August 4. Brother Mitchell preached at night. It was our first time to hear him.

Brother C. W. Germon and family were the only ones from here to attend the Kirtland reunion.

Quarterly business meeting was held October 7. Parkersburg's enrollment was seventy-one, a gain of five during the year. Several interesting reports showed progress in the departments of the work. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Branch president, Harry Smith; Sunday school superintendent, May Griffin; superintendent Recreation and Expression Department, C. W. Germon; superintendent Women's Department, May Reese; secretary-treasurer, May Griffin; chorister, C. W. Germon; pianist, Shirley Germon; publicity agent, Burns Wilson. Harry Smith was sustained solicitor and historian.

The branch took another forward step the first of October when it started to use a limited number of collection envelopes as an experiment. The branch operates on the budget basis, and this and payments on the church require considerable money. It is almost too soon to decide about the success of the envelopes, but we hope the results will be encouraging.

Elder J. E. Vanderwood and Apostle C. F. Ellis came September 12 and started a series of meetings September 15. Handbills and much visiting had been used the previous week to prepare for the opening of the meetings. Brother Ellis preached on Sunday. We rejoice to have Brother Ellis with us, for he seems to be one of the branch. The meetings continued two weeks, interest fair. A few nonmembers were present, but some of the Saints were in attendance very little. Brothers Vanderwood and Frank Minton followed up the meetings with visits in the homes.

A chicken supper was held November 14, and about eighty-five were served. Many nonmembers attend our suppers and comment favorably. We feel these events will benefit the branch by creating a social and friendly interest in the church. The proceeds go to the church debt. The last two quarters we paid $150 on the debt in addition to interest, a total of $300 cut off the debt.

Sister Belzora Barr died at her home in Vienna November 16 following a lingering illness. She and her husband, Brother J. A. Barr, did much to help the work start here in the fall of 1917 and succeeding years. The funeral was held at the church November 18, Brother Minton speaker. Interment was in the Odd Fellows Cemetery.

Departmental heads met with the branch president at his home November 22 to talk over problems of the branch and the program for the year. Brother Minton met with them. It was planned to continue these meetings in the future.

Observing College Day Brother Minton was the speaker November 24. "Education" was his theme. He told some interesting things about Graceland. Following Brother Minton's talk, Harry Smith gave a short talk on the history of Thanksgiving Day.

Several members gave a birthday surprise party on Brother C. W. Germon December 2. An enjoyable evening was had, and refreshments were served.

Because the street car service to the church is poor and attendance was slight on week nights, it was decided to discontinue the Wednesday night prayer services during cold weather. Brothers Germon and Minton started holding services at the home of Brother Withee, a short distance from here, on Friday nights. Interest has been only fair.

A good Christmas program was had Sunday night, December 22, at the church. Brother Germon in the role of Santa Claus had a treat of candy for all, and there were gifts. Sister Minton had charge. The two missionaries, J. E. Vanderwood and Frank Minton, were not overlooked, but Brother Vanderwood's present had to be sent to him in Independence, Missouri. Some Clarksburg Saints also remembered him.

The branch entered upon the centennial year of the church with hope. The special week of prayer was observed with good interest. We are trying to have a balanced program in the branch in order that the needs of the members will be supplied.

Since coming here last June Brother Minton has been a great help to the branch. He has done much preaching and is well liked by all. Many friends are his who are not members of the church. He and Sister Minton have visited several who are interested and reading our books. The branch hopes the conference will see fit to return Brother Minton to Parkersburg another year in order that he may follow up the interest he has created. Our local is short of laborers, especially members of the priesthood.

Brother Minton left January 18 to meet Brother Vanderwood in the southern part of the State to visit and do some work among the scattered members. At one time we had branches down there, but a few isolated members are all that remain.

The branch solicitor has been teaching tithing and stewardships since the first of the year. He used the blackboard in a study class at 10.45 the morning of January 19, working out an inventory, and January 26 the annual tithing report. The branch is doing well observing its financial obligations. For 1929 it paid more tithing and oblation than any other branch in the district. Its contributions were $594.68 to the Bishop. For local purposes were raised $213.61, and for church interest and debt, $601.82, making a grand total of $1,410.11.

The Saints here are anticipating General Conference. Some hope to attend.

Missionary Experience at Scammon

By J. Charles May

I left my home in Independence January 25 to spend the week-end somewhere in my appointed field of labor. I boarded the train at Kansas City for Joplin, Missouri, undecided as yet at which branch I would spend Sunday. Everything seemed unfavorable for meetings, snow and ice, roads blocked by winter, and continued threatening of the weather. I began to think I might have as well remained at home. Immediately there came to me a very strong impression to spend Sunday with the Scammon, Kansas, Saints and friends.

I was not able to reach Scammon until Sunday school had commenced. This was my first visit here, and I had never met but two or three of the members living at Scammon. I found the faithful few at church and, coming unannounced, took them all by surprise.

I preached morning and evening. In the evening besides the Saints we had about forty nonmembers present. Interest was so good it was thought best to announce meetings for over Tuesday night.

Monday night came with mist, and the roads and sidewalks were very slick. But that evening we had one hundred and twenty-five out, about ninety being nonmembers. And Tuesday night there was an attendance of one hundred. Interest was of such a nature that I decided to remain over Sunday, preaching Saturday night, too. There was an average of fifty nonmembers at each service. Sixty were present at the sacramental service including twenty interested friends. At the noon hour three persons, two adults and a boy, were baptized. Some of the members who have been rather indifferent are showing renewed interest.

Elder John Bath, brother of Missionary William Bath, is pastor here and is a faithful servant.

Many others are deeply interested in the gospel message, and we are hopeful that before these meetings close they too will unite with us.

It was decided last night to continue another week, as we felt with such excellent interest shown it would be folly to close the meetings. Thus my week-end visit here is stretching out over three Sundays.

This has been a very busy year in missionary work. I have labored in Spring River and Clinton Districts. I note the following items by going through my missionary diary: Though I have had the pleasure of visiting at home often on week days between series of meetings, I have been in my field of labor every week-end since a year ago the 23d of last December. I have been engaged in twenty-one series of meetings, sometimes by myself, and at other times with other missionaries in my field. Since April 1, 1929, sixty-four have been baptized in these meetings by the local ministry, the other missionaries, and the writer. Though there has been no unusually large ingathering at any one place, we feel grateful for the success that has attended our efforts. A large number of subscriptions to the church papers have been taken and many books sold. It has been a great pleasure to be associated with the missionaries of the two districts, Elders Jenkins and Quick and the district presidents, Elders Whiting and Harrington. We have felt happy in presenting the old Jerusalem gospel.

As we look forward to the Centennial Conference celebrating the one hundredth birthday of the church, we should be happy indeed that during the closing year of the first century of church work, thousands are uniting with us, desiring to participate in the great task that lies before us—the redemption of Zion.

Flint, Michigan

From Flint Tidings

For more than a year the general church officers have been recommending that the larger branches of the church introduce a unified Sunday morning service, with but one opening and one closing; thus conserving at least thirty or forty-five minutes, and also making possible a more inspiring and beneficial service for old and young. Flint Branch has decided to make this change in service form the first of February. The service will be divided into four periods as follows: Opening exercises, 9.45 to 10 o'clock; upper auditorium, sermon or devotional for adults, 10 to 10.35, lower auditorium, story hour or pictures for juniors; 10.35 to 11.25, class study period; 11.25 to 11.40, announcements, offerings, and benediction. One of the many advantages of this new form of service is, that it permits the parents and children to come to church together, and return home together. We are sure everyone will like it.

It is inventory time. The bishop's local representatives whose duty it is to teach the financial law of God, are William Tuttle, 1224 Campau Street; Lewis McNamara, 525 East Newall Street; and Robert Luce, Clio, Michigan, Route 1. Local members should confer with these brothers.

Another class of candidates will be admitted to church membership through the ordinances of baptism and confirmation Wednesday evening, February 19, 7.45 o'clock. The ceremony will take place at the regular midweek prayer service at Newall Street Church.

The first Wednesday evening and the third Sunday morning of each month have been given to the young people for devotional services.

The annual fathers and sons banquet will be held in the lower auditorium of the Newall Street Church, Thursday evening, February 27. A program is being prepared for the enjoyment of everyone.

There will be an old-time box social and entertainment February 14. The Valentine social is being sponsored through the united efforts of the Women's Department and the Department of Recreation and Expression.

At least fifteen have volunteered under the leadership of Harry Hall, one of our new members, to join the new orchestra. They meet for practice on Tuesday evening at Newall Street Church. They will appear in the near future in the church services.

A cottage prayer service will be held in six different parts of the city each Thursday evening. The group leaders have these services in charge, and will announce where they will be held. We urge the Saints to attend.

On account of bad industrial conditions in the city, the officers of the church have thought it wise to postpone the new church building fund drive.

January 6 a meeting of the priesthood of the branch was held at Newall Street Church, thirty-four present. The spirit of unity and cooperation was manifested to a remarkable degree. The pastor handled the business as expeditiously as possible, and changed the order of the meeting to prayer and testimony.

The following have been added to our membership of late: Kathryn Barker, Mary Forsythe, Francis Hickox, Lurena Papple, Alice Walters, Marjorie Pavola, Irene Duke, Alonzo Gunsell, Oren Beck, Aleta Gane, Orville Kitelinger, Dorothea Phillips, Virginia Woodin, Elizabeth Barker, Cecil E. Rogers, Alta Diehl, Harry Hall, Bettie Little, Gracie Stockwell, Carroll Pavola, Ruth Barker, and Mae Rogers. Arvilla McNeal, Lizzie Bordner, and Pearl Wright have been added by transfer.

January 12 a beautiful service was conducted at both churches in which the following babies were presented to the Lord for blessing: Floyd Robert Corwin, Lawrence P. Barker, Gerald A. Slater, Albert Clarence Hoschna, Delmare J. Lawrence, and Arthur E. Sears.

A little son, William Lee, was born to Lee and Emma Alley, January 8, at Hurley Hospital. Brother and Sister Chapman also have a baby, a boy named David. Carlton Glenn was born to Theo and Ruth Bush at Hurley Hospital January 16. The stork played Santa Claus at the home of Brother and Sister Russel Little, bringing them Jack Lee one day before Christmas.

Brother Macklin, who moved his family to Clare just before Christmas, has requested the prayer of the Saints. He is afflicted with cancer and an enlarged heart.

Miss Verna Reagan was married January 11 to Markwood Walters at the pastor's home. They were attended by Lottie Hodges and Clyde Walters. They will be at home to their friends at 2094 Begole Street, where they have built their new home.

The Temple Builders are having fine times every Monday night. Already they are planning for reunion next summer.

John W. McNeal, seventy years of age, passed away the last day of the old year, at the home of his son, Leon, in Davison Township.

Lametta Surbrook, Cecil Junior Rogers, Edith Tree, Mrs. Allanson Cheney, and Junior Phillips are on the sick list.

Doctor E. B. Guile, family physician of many of our people, sustained an injury to his left elbow recently when he fell on the ice. It was necessary for him to have an operation at Hurley hospital. He is home again now.

George J. Rhodes, son of Brother George Rhodes, met with a serious accident at a railroad crossing when he was hit by a train. He is in the hospital in a critical condition.

Everett Commons, who has been in the hospital for the past four weeks, following an accident on a toboggan, is reported improving.

The department of religious education reports three home department classes started at Sister Laura Smith's home in charge of group officers.

The Newall Street Sunday school reports the amalgamation of the five adult classes which seems to offer solution to the problem for more room. Pastor Clarke is the teacher. An effort is being made to form a young people's group of the younger set. All young people between the ages of fourteen and sixteen are invited to be present.

Sister Burrows has been unable to take charge of her class for several weeks because of the illness of her little daughter. Sister Putney is caring for the class during her absence.

Brother Albert Leighton, the new superintendent of religious education, will be glad to help any of the Sunday schools or Religios.

'Neath the Southern Cross

By W. J. Haworth

The Australasian Mission has had a very good year from many points of view. There has been great spiritual activity in almost every corner of the commonwealth and in such places in New Zealand as have been opened to our work. At last we have done some work in the island State of Tasmania and a missionary is en route to an appointment there.

Up to the end of November, the evangelical campaign had resulted in one hundred and thirty-seven baptisms; and as the work of four more months will be added to that number before the centennial, we have every prospect of our quota of two hundred baptisms being reached. Our workers will do their best.

We regret that finances have not been as satisfactory as we would wish. A coal strike lasting almost the whole year and involving the bulk of the workers in this branch of industry, together with a lumber workers' strike for half of the year, has had a generally depressing result. However, many faithful Saints have set a wonderful example by meeting their financial obligations. May others be inspired to follow.

The mission conference and reunion, held conjointly at Tiona, has just closed. The weather was good, the attendance the largest on record, and the social spirit better than ever. Good educational meetings were held. The preaching was good. The prayer meetings were well attended and spiritual. A young people's prayer meeting presided over by our junior officers, Brethren Colin Ferrett and Walter N. Johnson, was a season of great spiritual rejoicing. The young people helped wonderfully to make the gathering a success. At the final sacramental meeting the gifts were in evidence and an uplifting time was had.

The oratorical contest for this region had been decided at Balmain a few weeks prior to the convening of the reunion, and we had four of the finalists and a few of the other contestants with us. Oratory, therefore, had a prominent place on the program. It is a pity that America could not enjoy hearing the orations of these devoted young people. However, they will have a fine representative in Sister Flora Delofski, the regional winner, who will sail for the Centennial Conference with the Australian delegation, February 20.

Readers may be interested in knowing that sixteen Australians have tentatively booked to sail on the above date, via Tahiti, where they will be joined by Elder Yager, wife, and child. We expect to arrive in San Francisco March 14. We look forward with pleasurable anticipation to the privileges of renewing old acquaintances and of participating in the big doings at the centennial. Two things Australians can do well are "Look and listen." Perhaps we learn it at the railroad crossings.

The company which cares for the reunion grounds decided to apply to the Presiding Bishopric for acceptance as a group stewardship. It was also decided to erect a concrete tank of thirty thousand gallon capacity, with pipes and taps along the avenue. This will supply a long-felt need. We have never been absolutely out of water since the first year, but do not relish being too close to the danger line. A concrete tennis court is also slated for erection. With a view to financing these improvements more stock is being offered for subscription.

We believe it is safe to say, on behalf of the mission, generally, that there is more devotion, loyalty, and energized desire to press forward in the present year than I have witnessed during the whole of my experience as a member of the church. May God bless the church and prosper the efforts of its children to build it up and purge it from every unseemly thing.

Logan, Iowa

January 31.—The activities of the departments of Logan Branch have been many and varied since the first of the year. Branch business meeting resulted in the choice of the following corps of officers: Branch president, Gerald Gunsolley; Sunday school superintendent, Ruth Gunsolley, with Belle Miller in charge of the primary department; Women's Department superintendent, Myrtle Crabb; superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Leila Gamet; financial agent, C. W. Keairnes.

The first Sunday of the month was the outstanding spiritual experience, when the membership met fasting for sacramental service. A beautiful prelude of quiet music, prayer, and response in song preceded the passing of the emblems and the period of testimony. A spirit of deep peace pervaded the assembly, and the gifts of the Spirit were manifest. Such experiences as these give hope and courage to those of earth's children who, with groping, finite hands outstretched toward the stars, reach for the Infinite.

The Week of Prayer was observed, the special hour given to the branch occurring at eight o'clock on the regular mid-week prayer meeting night. The quorums of the church in session were especially remembered, also the church in general.

Elder L. G. Holloway was a welcome visitor and speaker January 12. At other times the stand has been ably filled by the pastor, Bishop W. R. Adams, and other members of the local priesthood.

January 16 occurred the passing of Sister Ann Crandall McCord at the home of her daughter, Sister Mary Yeaman. She was eighty-six years of age, one of the pioneer women of western Iowa, and the head of several five-generation groups. She was a faithful member of the church for more than seventy years and will be greatly missed in our gatherings here and by her family and friends. The burial was in the old Gallands Grove Cemetery, in the same locality where she was born and lived the first years of her life.

The 6.45 hour each Sunday evening is given over to class work in stewardships, dramatics, teacher training, and junior classes. The young people of the dramatic class gave the first of the historical plays, "The birth of a Prophet," the last Sunday evening of the month. The characters of Emma Smith, Joseph Smith, sr., and Eben Cutler were well taken by Louise McKain, Edgar Salts, and Dale Gamet, respectively. The other plays are to be given later, one each month.

Feeling the need of means to finance these and other plays, the dramatic club stages a carnival in the church basement January 24. The usual carnival array was in evidence, shooting gallery, fishpond, beanbags, cherry pie booth, "hot dog" stand, etc. Monsieur Fixem presided over "Ye Beaute Shoppe" and sent his patrons forth with rosy cheeks, carmine lips, and delicately penciled eyebrows, as well as strange, mystic tattooing on noses and foreheads. Probably the most thrilling moments were experienced in the booth of Madame Marveleski, the fortune-teller, where an electric shock was applied to the chair just after the trusting victim sat down and gave his or her hand to the gentle madame. After the crowd had been given time to appreciate these attractions, an invitation was extended to come up to the main room, where an entertaining program was given by the young people, with the kind and efficient help of friends from Woodbine and Missouri Valley.

The choir, under the direction of Harrison Peyton, has begun work on an Easter cantata, "Life eternal." Its melodious numbers give promise that the time and effort to be spent upon it will be well worth the effort.

The Department of Women is engaged in the study of various subjects that have to deal with home making. As a change from the study of food for the family, which has engaged the attention of the members most of the past year, another phase of home building will be taken up, "Budgeting the family income"; also work on home decoration, furnishings, etc.

Altogether the membership of the Logan Branch is looking forward to a year of uplift and progress.

"Conquering Now and Still to Conquer"

By Mrs. Edwin H. Davies

Although the church looks forward to the establishment of Zion, we can look back and see that it has progressed wonderfully, and that much has been accomplished.

One hundred years ago the gospel was restored to earth in its purity and grace, and April 6, 1830, a living church was organized to go forth with the power of God to conquer "the world, the flesh, and the Devil."

One great conquest was over the Book of Mormon. The great majority of us are acquainted with the fact that certain wicked men planned to steal the manuscript and make alterations which would destroy the book, and thwart the purpose of Him who caused it to come forth at that time. But God is mighty and strong, and "God is not to be mocked"; so their efforts were frustrated and the Book of Mormon was printed in due time. Although it is evilly spoken of by the prejudiced and ignorant, it now has many friends in many countries. It is to convince Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, for so he has decreed, and "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

The church grew rapidly in numbers and spirituality, but it suffered much persecution. Many of the Saints were compelled to leave their homes, and finally opposition ran so high that Joseph the Seer and his brother Hyrum, the patriarch, were martyred for the faith.

After this, Brigham Young, then the president of the Twelve, led many of the Saints to Utah, rebaptized them, and introduced polygamy along with other false doctrine. Others also were led away into various paths till it became necessary for the church to be reorganized with Joseph, son of the Martyr, as Prophet and Leader.

Despite the terrible persecutions, law-suits at different times, and debates with all denominations, the church went forward "conquering and to conquer." It grew to such an extent that auxiliaries had to be organized to cope with its growing needs and responsibilities. Sunday school, Religion, (now known as the Department of Recreation and Expression), the Women's Department, Temple Builders, and various other helps for the young were duly inaugurated. The gospel was spread to different nations, and many church buildings erected to accommodate the numerous congregations of Saints.

Other buildings have been purchased or built to meet the demands of the church in its onward march, the most notable of which are Graceland College, the library, Independence Sanitarium, the Children's Home, general church office buildings, Independence storehouse, and the Herald Publishing House. And now, under the leadership of President F. M. Smith, grandson of the Martyr, the Auditorium is being erected and will mark the centennial of the Restoration, and provide accommodation for the ever-increasing attendance at General Conference.

Surely the church has grown and has done something towards conquering the world, the flesh, and the Devil! It has not only raised up many buildings of note and admiration, but it has also brought joy to many thousands of people who were honestly and earnestly seeking the Lord. It has brought a song to their lips that wells up from the heart with tender sincerity and gratitude to God. It has brought to them the desire to render loving and faithful service to their Creator. Also it has developed an army of splendid men and women, who have sacrificed their all and dedicated their lives to the service of God. Their noble characters must of necessity have impressed those not of the faith, as well as those of the kingdom of God.

It has been said that "The light that shines the farthest shines the brightest nearer home." This we know from observation and experience is true. So we who love the gospel are earnestly striving at times against great odds to let our light shine brightly, that it may shed forth a heavenly influence and set the spark of love aglow in hitherto dark and dreary places. We look forward with a yearning to the establishment of Zion and the coming of the Lord, and we are encouraged along the way by the blessings he bestows upon us. He has said that Zion will be redeemed, so we go onward and upward, conquering now and still to conquer, until our Lord comes and makes the final conquest over the last enemy—death, hell, and the grave.

Onaway, Michigan

February 3.—The Saints in Onaway Branch are rejoicing because of the condition in their branch. They are like one large family.

Elder J. J. Ledsworth and Brother M. J. McGuire held five weeks of meetings and had very good interest. Their sermons were constructive, and the power of the Spirit that attended their preaching caused the Saints to rejoice.

Sunday, January 19, Elder J. J. Ledsworth led six into the waters of baptism. The temperature registered fifteen below zero, and when we reached the river it looked very cold. But as the Saints gathered around the hole cut in the ice in the river and sang the first stanza of "Jesus, Mighty King of Zion," they forgot the cold. In the evening confirmation service was held, and everybody was made to rejoice.

Onaway Branch has another group of about twenty members fifteen miles from Onaway.

When Brothers McGuire and Ledsworth left the branch to go to Cheboygan, the Saints said they had been strengthened and encouraged.

May the Spirit abide with the Saints in Onaway, that they may make their contribution to Zion.

Colorado Springs, Colorado

The Colorado Springs Saints were busy during the past holidays. After the fall activities of rally and college days, came a few special days. Then Christmas was upon us. The Department of Recreation and Expression gave evidence of having worked out some of the theory learned during the past six months. The drama, "The Red Man's quest," being well rendered by this organization.

The new year brought but a few changes in the branch personnel. Elder Joseph E. Ebeling was sustained as president, also the superintendents of the church school, Recreation and Expression, and Women's Department, were reelected.

In the forepart of the month of December Bishop A. Carmichael addressed the members of the church, showing our great responsibility in making preparation to become stewards and the building in ourselves Zionic principles. The next night President Floyd M. McDowell taught a class in "Religious education," further inspiring us to make sure that preparation so needful if we are to be dependable stewards for God in these latter days. These lectures were greatly appreciated.

We are glad to again have with us Elder J. E. Lalonde. He underwent a serious operation during the forepart of the month of December.

Nauvoo, Illinois

Complying with the wish of the presidency for branches to "know your own church," the program as outlined in the Herald of January 1 was carried out on the last Sunday of the month by the Department of Recreation. Arnold Ourth read from Doctrine and Covenants 11; John Lee gave a ten-minute talk on the "Biography of Joseph Smith," which was followed by the play, "The birth of the Prophet," given in the January number of Vision. Roberta Lewis took the part of Lucy Smith; Myron Wood, Joseph Smith, sr., and Paul Fusselman, Eben Cutler. This was well carried out and enjoyed by all present. Elder J. C. Page then gave a short address on "The nineteenth-century Prophet" and enjoyed good liberty.

Last Sunday evening, Sister Page, dressed in Spanish costume, gave a lecture on her work in the Isle of Pines, concluding her talk with a duet in Spanish, Florence Ourth assisting, and Jack Sanford playing guitar accompaniment.

The pastor has made out a schedule for three months, listing the membership of the priesthood, when they are to preach, take charge of Wednesday night prayer meeting, and assist at these services. This list has been posted so that all may know in advance when they are to take part and make the necessary preparation.

There has also been placed in the hall a table on which is displayed the various tracts published by the church, so that strangers may help themselves. A rack is also there in which members may place church papers that they have read and wish passed on to others.

At a recent business meeting it was voted to adopt the envelope system of collections, and each member has been given a number and supplied with a package of envelopes for weekly offerings.

The Women's Department has set as its goal the furnishing of the church with new seats. The members purchased one thousand church seals to dispose of at Christmas time and have been meeting once a month during the winter, taking their own sewing until other work can be provided. While they sew Irene Layton reads to them from the church books which they are discussing. Each member pays dues of ten cents and brings something which she has made to sell for ten cents.

The funeral of Mrs. William Koechle, daughter of Sister Anderson of Keytesille, Missouri, was held in the church January 22, in charge of Elder J. C. Page. The church was filled with relatives and friends. Mrs. Koechle has been a sufferer for three years with abdominal cancer but had continued to mother the children entrusted to her care. Although but forty-two years of age, she had raised two sons by an early marriage, two sons of Mr. Koechle's by a former marriage, two of her sister's children, five children by her second marriage, and was caring for two grandchildren. She was a mother indeed, and it was a hard blow to the children to be deprived of her loving care. Brother and Sister Page were called upon many times to administer and pray with her, and she expressed a desire that she might recover sufficiently to be baptized. Sister Page stood by her bedside during her last hours and mothered the little children, explaining death to them in a way that took away much of its sting. These children are now all regular attendants of the Sunday school. The sister's girl, Goldie Coon, a young woman of twenty-one, was baptized two years ago. She is taking the mother's place and caring for the family.

Elder Page was called to Carthage last week to preach the funeral sermon of Brother Horace Daugherty, who was working for a Mr. Fricks. His death was presumably from heart disease, as he was found in the barn, lying between two horses.

Brother Robert Fairclough and Sister Elsie Williams have been confined to their homes since Christmas on account of illness.

J. W. Layton, our oldest member, celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday January 12. The Sunday school arose in a body and wished him a happy birthday. At the eleven o'clock hour he gave us a fatherly talk.

Brother Page held a skating party for his class of young people one recent Saturday evening. The skating was excellent, and when the young people grew tired they went to the Nauvoo House and before the open fireplace toasted marshmallows and were served with sandwiches and cocoa.

Oakland, California

In the near future operations will commence on the new church building to stand on the south side of Ashby Avenue between Adeline and Shattuck Avenues, Berkeley. This forty thousand dollar structure will be the new home of the congregation of the Reorganized Church in Oakland and Berkeley adjacent to this vicinity. For about a year the building committee under the chairmanship of Cecil Hawley, of Berkeley, negotiated for the construction of an edifice to house the congregation, which has outgrown accommodations and equipment at Sixteenth and Magnolia.

According to Mr. Ed. R. Beebe, of Berkeley, designer and constructor, the new church will be a two-story building of characteristic California style, cement foundation, art brick, stucco superstructure, with modern steam-heating plant, lighting, and ventilation. The main auditorium and balcony will have a seating capacity of 450. There will be six classrooms, a council chamber, and the pastor's study. The platform will have a baptismal font, pulpit, and communion table. The lower auditorium will be used for banquets and social gatherings, dramatic and concert programs, and will have gymnasium apparatus. It will have seating capacity of 350. There will also be three classrooms, two club rooms, a kitchen, and rest rooms.

The building will be a splendid addition to the architectural and cultural beauty for which Berkeley is outstanding. This church is the beginning of an extension program to be developed in the Bay Cities region.

Mr. Beebe says that he expects to have this church ready for occupancy about the end of May. In it will be conducted divine worship, religious education work, and the several church activities under the pastorate of John W. Rushton, of Berkeley.

In the Oakland Bulletin, the branch publication, the Department of Women announces a Valentine dinner to be held in February.

One Sunday evening recently the orchestra, under the leadership of Brother Walter Davis, rendered an attractive program of classical music, which was much appreciated.

Brother J. E. Carmichael was in Santa Rosa not long ago and reports a good time with the church there and at Windsor. Brother Cecil Hawley was the preacher at the San Francisco Church.

Lately the Sunday evening was occupied by a dramatic feature concerning the Prophet Joseph Smith, and Pastor John W. Rushton gave an address on "The nineteenth century prophet." Sister Ruth Bricker will prepare one of these church dramas each month to emphasize our denominational distinctive features.

Among the shut-ins of the congregation who appreciate the sympathy and prayers of the members are Sisters Bettie Smith, Hannah Brown, Bettie Brown, Sister Montgomery, and Sister Buswell, the last named having for ten years been confined to her room a victim of arthritis.

Boys' Clubs Entertain

Last Friday evening, two of the boys' clubs, the Royal Thirteens and the F. N. P's, entertained lady guests.

Several alumni came back to Lamoni for the Royal Thirteen annual banquet, which was held in the American Legion Auxiliary Hall. The decorations in purple and gold, the improvised throne, and the regal headgear of the guests carried out the royal traditions of the club. A three-course dinner was served by the Patroness Ladies. An interesting after-dinner program was given in which "Willie" Gilbert reviewed the history of the club under the subject of "The book." "The roll call," which dealt with the present, and "The paddle," which revealed the future, were presented by Ed Traver and Tex Cox. The singing of the club song at the end made it indeed a royal banquet.

The F. N. P's were entertained at the home of Stanley Barrows. The first game, "Throwing the laugh," brought out the powers of Paul Utnehmer as a comedian, although Virginia Webbe and Roy Mortimore were able to withstand his terrific onslaught. Anne Morgan should be commended on her ability to play "The Prince of Paris." Refreshments of sandwiches, olives, pie, and ice cream were served. It was all over too soon, but the girls reached the top of college hill just in time to see the lights blink.

A Cappella Chapel

The A Cappella Chorus furnished the program for chapel at Graceland Friday, January 31. The first group of songs consisted of two musical settings of the English poems by Shakespeare and Shelly. "How sweet the moonlight sleeps" (eight parts), the theme of which was suggested from The Merchant of Venice, was composed by Eaton Fanning. Granville Bantock's "On Himalay" (eight parts) told the story of a mountain shepherdess tending her flocks. The song gradually dies away as the shepherdess disappears over the mountain crest. The melodies of these two numbers were dreamily soft and full of expression, producing a beautiful harmony.

Vivian Castings played a spirited piano solo, "Caprice Espanol," by Moszkowski.

Two Negro spirituals, arranged by Burleigh, made up the second choral group, "Nobody knows de trouble I've seen," and "My lord, what a mornin'."

The students appreciate the opportunity of having this talented group and always welcome them on the chapel programs. The chorus is just beginning to round out its annual concert material.

LULA ROMIG.

The New Semester Begins

The new semester has begun at Graceland. It bids fair to be a busy one, with only nine weeks until conference time. Grades are not out yet, but the relief that semester exams are over has expressed itself in the light-hearted spirit of students and faculty and the week-end parties of several of the social clubs.

In athletics, too, this feeling seems to have been expressed, because Graceland won the first home game it played this semester. The literary societies have elected and installed their new officers and are ready for another semester of entertaining the educational programs. Those athletically inclined are helping their society by conscientiously getting in three practice periods of basket ball each week in preparation for the final intersociety games. The Oratorio Society is busy with special practices during the week, which are to help in getting Brother Gresty's Oratorio in the best shape for conference.

A few students who started the year left at the end of the semester for various reasons. Three who were previously students have returned, and two new ones have been added to our student body, in some measure taking the place of those who have left. With spring and the 1930 conference coming, this ought to be one of the best semesters that Graceland has ever known.

DOROTHY MESLE.

Graceland Wins from Creston

The experience squad of Creston Junior College received a good drubbing from Graceland January 28. Although Graceland's 14-point margin was quite a surprise to Creston, it only served to satisfy the secret opinion of many Graceland students, who have firmly believed that the fight shown by their squad throughout the early season games would bring them victory.

Whether the victory was due to the conscientious practice of the squad, or the addition of new members, is difficult to say. There remains in our minds only the fact that we can depend on either one of these to bring us through the season with a high total score. Due to the fact that all of our previous games lost by only a scant margin, the 14-point lead in last Tuesday's game gives Graceland a total point average only 8 below that of her opponents.

The Laurel Club Reports for 1929

It has been the custom of the Laurel Club to report its activities at the end of each year. Ever since the Auditorium was proposed, some ten years ago, the Laurel Club has steadily worked toward the accomplishment of its purpose; namely, to furnish the equipment for the kitchen and dining room of the Auditorium. Over a period of years they have held a number of banquets and entertainments, and have managed many banquets for both church and non-member organizations. The profits from these ventures have been accumulated, and during the last five years several thousands of dollars have been realized. The net profits from the activities of the Laurel Club during the year 1929 amounts to $2,425.49, and the club had a cash balance on hand, December 31, 1929, of $6,700.75, a large part of which will be spent within the next sixty days for installing needed kitchen and dining room equipment in order to provide meals for the church's largest conference.

The following activities represent the work of the club during the past year, and it is from these undertakings that the revenue has been derived.

On January 4, 1929, the Laurel Club served the annual dinner for the pastors and associate ministers in Independence. About sixty were present. Following this was a dinner for the officers and teachers of the Sunday schools in Independence. Later in the month a banquet was served for those interested in religious education, for which plates were laid for 270 guests. On January 21 the Laurel Club and its friends were hosts at a birthday dinner given for President Smith, to which were invited members of the First Presidency, Presiding Bishopric, and other friends.

The Laurel Club served the annual priesthood banquet to 294 on April 5, and on May 16 the annual Mothers and Daughters Banquet was served to 450 people. The annual Fathers and Sons Banquet on October 4 accommodated over 400. October 11, the occasion for celebrating the opening of the Independence-Liberty Bridge, the Laurel Club provided a banquet for 350 people of Independence and vicinity. This banquet was attended by the leading officials of the city, county, and State, including Governor Caulfield and other officials from Jefferson City; also the city officials from Liberty and the surrounding towns. On November 7 the Laurel Club furnished the banquet for the teachers in the public schools in Independence. This was served in the dining hall at the rear of the Stone Church, but all other banquets were held in the basement of the Auditorium. A rummage sale was held December 1, in charge of Mrs. New-comb, a member of the club, which netted a profit of $45. The annual bazaar was the closing activity of the club for the year 1929.

The Laurel Club has arranged to publish a cookbook, which will be on sale during General Conference. This is a compilation of choice recipes and will prove to be a valuable aid in the management and preparation of meals in homes where the housewife takes a personal interest in preparing a well-balanced diet for the family.

The Laurel Club has established its headquarters in the Auditorium, which is the center and objective of its activities, and during the year the club has held nineteen meetings, each of which was well attended. The Laurel Club is maintaining a lunch room in the kitchen of the Auditorium. This is a great convenience to the office force in the church offices, and is also patronized by others whose employment is near the square in Independence, and still others employed in industries near the Auditorium. This patronage has averaged about fifty per day in recent months, and the revenue from this venture has been added to the Laurel Club fund. The lunch room is in charge of Mrs. W. C. Harvey, assisted by Mrs. Addie Matthews.

The officers last year were as follows: President, Mrs. T. J. Watkins; vice president, Mrs. W. H. Williamson; second vice president, Mrs. W. C. Harvey; secretary, Mrs. R. A. Harder; treasurer, Mrs. M. T. Williams; historian, Mrs. M. T. Short; publicity chairman, Mrs. Robert Kemp.

The members of the club desire to thank those who have so willingly and liberally supported them during the past year, and in advance extend their greetings to the conference delegates and visitors. They promise to do their utmost to take care of the meal service during the coming conference in a way that will contribute to the comfort and convenience of the visitors.

A New Home Every Year

By E. C. J.

Better Homes and Gardens says that each one of us may have a new home the coming year. "Though it is not literally true, in the sense of building, it is universally true regarding the betterment of that which we already have.

"The making of a home is an intimate part of life itself. Every time we look out of the windows of our dwellings we are stimulated to new deeds and new ideals. The home is just like another self, with lovable and human attributes. The striving for self-preservation and self-improvement is a natural law working through all living things.

"The homemaker seeks beauty in other homes. . . . He visualizes what beauty may do for himself. He resolves that he will enlarge his dwelling, literally or spiritually, or both, by adding those caresses of toil, of grace, of wholesomeness, which indicate a constant striving upward and a growth outward into sunshine and air."

Beauty, comfort, usefulness are the three things to equalize in a home. A right amount of each must be visualized by the home builder.

Beauty is not necessarily found in expensive furniture and pictures, but can be attained by a combination of pleasing effects in plain, good carpets, cretonne covered furniture, which can be as comfortable as velvet, but is far less expensive, and plain wall paper. The bright colors in the furniture coverings combine best with plain carpets and walls.

Comfortable, restful chairs, with footstools, plenty of reading lamps, an oil burner which will keep the house comfortable with a minimum amount of attention, small desks in the guest rooms and children's rooms, all combine comfort and usefulness.

Beauty should be enhanced by a few flowering plants and green ferns. "Why not have blossoms every month in the year, and use them to comfort those who are in pain and sorrow?"

"A real home is a place where children feel at home."

"If the lowly nautilus may have a better and larger home each year, so may the human being, gifted with imagination, enterprise, the power of reasoning, and a deep realization of beauty, reach out in the making of a new home the coming New Year."

Holden Stake

Marshall

The good Spirit prevailed at the sacramental meeting the first Sunday in February. Elder T. L. McCormick presided, being assisted by Priests Cecil R. Walton and Ralph M. Ridge. A goodly number of Saints was present. The young people were active in their share of the meeting.

Brother Walton, assistant Sunday school superintendent, has a class of twenty-one young people. He was the speaker Sunday night. The men's quartet sang "Take time to be holy," and Brother Jack Winslow contributed a solo.

A treat was given the Religio Sunday night, Pastor Thayer's picture projector being used. Sister Frankie Thayer adjusted the pictures, part of which belonged to Jack Winslow, while he read the descriptions. There were scenes of Colorado and cliff dwellers.

Elder H. V. Minton is expected soon to hold a series of meetings.

Independence

Stone Church

Christ set us the example when he prayed to the Father, said Pastor John F. Sheehy Sunday morning and read the Lord's prayer from Matthew 6. He gave us this prayer that we might come closer to the heavenly Father. Prayer will help us to become Christ-like, to be our brother's keeper, to live always doing for others as did Christ.

The Stone Church Choir sang "Psalm 150" by Cesar Franck, Paul N. Craig directing, Robert Miller at the organ, George Miller at the piano. Elder W. Wallace Smith had charge of the service, being assisted by Elder Ralph Farrell.

An excellent church service drew the intermediate young people and their friends downstairs. "I will be loyal" is the month's theme, and the topic of the day, "A loyal person is truthful," was carried out in the program. A story, "The man who was honest to himself," was told by Vera Sheehy, and Duane Miller played a violin solo. Elder R. J. Lambert talked interestingly on "The irreverence of a lie." Sister H. W. Harder directed the music.

Eternal judgment is one of the principles of God's plan of salvation. It is universal; it includes every man; it is inescapable, declared Apostle E. J. Gleazer in his sermon on "Eternal judgment" Sunday evening. But the big thing for us to realize is that God is a just Judge and a loving Father; he is very willing to give us that which we merit. By our daily lives we are determining what our eternal judgment—the means by which we obtain assignment according to our needs to eternal life—shall be.

In observance of National Boy Scout Week, members of Troop 223 and their officers: Committeemen H. W. Harder and Henry Stahl, Scoutmaster A. E. Bullard, and Assistant Scoutmaster Paul Dalberg, attended the service in a body.

Organ music was furnished by Robert Miller, and Paul N. Craig led the congregational singing. A pleasing solo was sung by Harold Pearson. Elder Fred Wilkinson assisted Elder H. G. Barto in the stand.

Among the People in Zion

For a five-week period the groups of the several divisions of the Stone Church District are taking turns meeting in union prayer and worship service in the lower auditorium.

of the Stone Church. The opening of this series of services occurred January 29, and the meetings will continue, according to the pastor's plans, into the latter part of February. Some excellent services are being reported.

Monday night the captains and assistant captains of all the groups in Independence active in the gymnasium equipment movement banqueted with President F. M. McDowell and the pastor. Reports of accomplishment were made, and plans laid for the furtherance of the campaign throughout the month of February. The meal was served in the dining hall to the workers, who wish to see the lower hall of the Auditorium equipped as a gymnasium for the young people of Independence.

The annual banquet of the deacons and solicitors of Independence and their companions occurred January 31 in the lower room of the Auditorium, Bishop G. W. Eastwood in charge. Encouraging talks were made and commendation given by President F. M. McDowell and Pastor John F. Sheehy.

The interior of the upper and lower auditoriums of the Stone Church has in the past ten days been redecorated, and the woodwork on the outside of the church has received a new coat of paint.

Independence singers and instrumentalists are giving intensive practice to the oratorio The Course of Time. The combined choirs of the branches in the center place rehearse the choruses of the composition from three until 5.30 o'clock each Sunday afternoon. The orchestras practice on Monday and Friday evenings and give special time to it on Sunday morning.

At the White Masque Players meeting Monday evening, "An hour in Liberty Jail," a play by Elbert A. Smith, was presented by the following cast: Joseph Smith, Harold Curtis; Hyrum Smith, Verle Jamison; jailer, Paul Gould; General Doniphan, Reginald Smith; George Washington Davis, Monta Parrish; Emma Smith, Blanche R. Farrar; little Joseph, Tommy McNamara. The play was directed by Mrs. Beatrice McNamara. Frank S. Jennings gave a talk on the properties, sets, and colors to be used in the staging of the Centennial Pageant, illustrating his remarks with sketches and color charts. Mrs. S. A. Burgess reviewed the eight years of the club's history, mentioning the principal productions staged in that period. Mrs. Gladys Six, director of the pageant, gave a report of progress and announced that parts were being cast and that rehearsals would begin soon. Refreshments were served by Mrs. M. H. Siegfried, hostess, and her associates, Mrs. Henry C. Smith, Earl Page, Leonard Lea, and L. E. Flowers.

The people of Independence are happy to see work on the Auditorium resumed. At present the work includes the laying of a cork brick floor in the pit of the lower auditorium, so that this may be used for gymnasium purposes. In connection with this a fully-equipped shower bathroom is being fitted out. An additional boiler of 250 horse-power capacity is being added to the heating facilities of the building with the installation of two additional steam coils in iron case-ments. The skylight well connecting the upper dome with the ceiling of the main auditorium is being plastered. The ceiling of the main auditorium is now being built. It is suspended from the dome structure on steel rods, and is composed of steel framing supporting metal lath as a base which is now receiving the first coat of plaster. Heavy protective surfacing is being added to the dome.

Because of improvements being added to the lower room of the Auditorium the fifteen classes of the senior department of the Stone Church Sunday school have temporarily returned to their old meeting place, the band room. Though the present quarters are crowded, the young people are glad to see the work progressing on the room which will be a gymnasium for them and for all the young people of Independence. The superintendent reports an attendance last Sunday of one hundred and seventy-nine.

Walnut Park

The morning speaker Sunday, February 9, was Elder Earl F. Hoisington, formerly of Boise, Idaho, but at present working in the church offices as assistant to the general church auditor. He gave an effective address, his theme being taken from the text, "What good thing must I do in order to inherit eternal life?" In answer to the question, "What lack we yet?" he pointed out some of the important things necessary for us to do in order that Independence may in reality become the City of Zion and in order that the church may carry out the program assigned to it. The Saints of Walnut Park appreciated his visit.

The anthem of the morning, "Lead on, O King Eternal," fitted in nicely with the spirit of the service and was very well rendered.

In the afternoon a special meeting of the Walnut Park group elders, and their associate elders, together with the pastors, was held at the church, during which the statistician in Zion, Sister Dorothy Maloney, explained the card system in use in the groups and what is necessary in order to keep the records up to date. Several different points which had caused difficulty to the elders were explained. It is believed that hereafter the records of the groups will be kept up to date as far as is humanly possible. This, of course, requires cooperation on the part of the Saints.

The evening speaker was Elder M. A. Smith, formerly of Council Bluffs, Iowa. His subject was "The eternal judgment." It was well developed, and the sermon caused the Saints to leave the meeting bearing away the thought that there is a great deal involved in this gospel and that each one has a big responsibility to discharge.

Enoch Hill

Miss Lilla Beryl Warren, daughter of Brother and Sister Charles S. Warren, and Fred Ballinger, son of Brother and Sister Samuel Ballinger, were married last Saturday night at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was read by the bride's father, Priest Charles S. Warren, in the presence of immediate relatives. For the present the pair will make their home with the bridegroom's parents. Sister Ballinger is secretary of the church school on Enoch Hill, and Brother Ballinger is assisting her.

Elder T. A. Beck, speaker at the church school session Sunday morning, devoted his attention to the work of the Boy Scout organization, associating it with the program of the church.

In the evening Troop 227 of Enoch Hill opened National Scout Week with a candlelighting service at the church. Attendance of parents and friends was large. The invocation was asked by Pastor O. W. Sarratt, and President F. M. McDowell gave a short address. Then came the candlelighting ceremony. Investitures were made to the following scouts: Tenderfoot, Wallace Smith, Roy Hight, Kent Scott, and Frank Horn; second class, Wallace Smith and Roland Chappelow; first class, Roland Chappelow; merit, Joseph Dooley, Donald Bullard, and Roland Chappelow; patrol leader, Joseph Dooley, Roland Chappelow, Kent Scott, and Wallace Smith. Glen Cox was made assistant scoutmaster. The troop committee is made up of O. W. Sarratt, Don Cox, William Worth, C. E. Beal, and E. H. McKean. Badges to the troop committee were presented by Hilton Hartley. The scout badges were awarded by John Pennell, scoutmaster. The pledge of allegiance to the American flag followed and the scout benediction. This troop on Monday placed a display of scout work in the window of the J. C. Penney Company on the south side of the square. It includes badges won by the different members, pennants, flags of all kinds, scout knots, and other articles made by the members.

A surprise party was given Sister S. A. Thiel one night last week as a mark of gratitude for her recent work in this district. For a period of a number of weeks Sister Thiel taught those interested in the art of story-telling. More than a dozen participated in the games of the evening. A pleasing program was presented, two solos by Opal Hansen and a story by Nellie Kramer. Those who wished double credit for the story-telling course availed themselves of the opportunity to pass in their papers.

The funeral of Sister Alice Behnke was conducted at the church at 11.30 Sunday morning, Elder W. D. Bullard in charge. Sister Behnke, whose maiden name was Alice Southwell, was born December 25, 1852, at Jacksonville, Illinois. She married Israel Brush October 1, 1887, and to them four children were born. For more than forty years she was a member of the church. Her death occurred February 8.

Central Church

Pastor C. E. Wight delivered the talk during the worship period of the church school February 9; and in the service period, from 10.50 to 11.45, Elder John Blackmore, of Independence, gave the sermon.

The Sunday evening series on "What do we believe?" continued last Sabbath, President Elbert A. Smith preaching on "Our belief in the atonement."

Regular week-night events should be noted by the local members: Centennial pageant rehearsal, Monday, 7.45 p. m.; centennial choir rehearsal, Tuesday, 7.45; special family prayer meeting, Wednesday, 8; choir rehearsal, Thursday, 8.

Central basketball boys defeated the previously unbeaten Chelsea team Tuesday, February 4, with a score of 41 to 17. It was a good game.

Next Sunday morning John F. Sheehy, pastor of the Stone Church, will be the speaker, and in the evening Professor J. W. Teener, of the Bible Department at Park College, will preach. At this service the Pauline Hawley Trianon Ensemble, a group of talented college musicians, will give a half-hour concert. Park is a Presbyterian college with ideals similar to those of our Graceland.

Gladstone Church

This small band of workers, headed by its pastor, C. A. Selbe, reports gains in attendance as well as spiritual growth. The church school last Sunday had eighty present. The members anticipate even greater attendance between now and General Conference.

Patriarch Ammon White was present at the sacramental service. He, assisted by Elder C. G. Lewis, blessed the child of Brother and Sister Leaman, giving him the name Jack Edward.

Brother L. C. Connelly proves an able helper to the pastor. Elder C. G. Lewis has charge of the church school and is supported by a consecrated corps of teachers.

A young people's choir is part of the organization here, and the members are doing good work under the directorship of M. Tanner.

The group will move to its new church home on the corner of Van Brunt Boulevard and Anderson Avenue in the Masonic Building, March 2. The entrance is on Anderson Avenue, and the Saints will occupy the ground floor.

Cottage prayer meetings are well attended.

Grandview Church

The Wahdemna Choral Club, of Independence, under the direction of Paul N. Craig, rendered a splendid program January 24.

Pastor C. D. Jellings has been forced to take a leave of absence from church duties on account of ill health. He is greatly missed by the entire congregation. We hope he will soon be able to once more be with us. The work is in charge of Assistant Pastor L. W. Hayes.

Hyrum H. Hedrick, grandfather of Brother J. H. Coakley, passed away January 20. Funeral services were conducted by Elder H. A. Koehler.

Sister Susan Fleck died January 26 at the age of eighty-two-years. Her funeral was conducted from the Long Mortuary by Patriarch Ammon White.

Sister J. H. Coakley is recovering from a sinus operation and an attack of quinsy.

Recent speakers have been Elders L. W. Hayes, H. A. Koehler, Apostle Myron A. McConley, and Patriarch Ammon White.

Far West Stake

With its spacious territory of sixteen counties and eighteen churches, totaling an enrolled membership of about twenty-four hundred people, Far West Stake offers to the church a most fertile field for missionary endeavor.

At Richmond, one of the most promising branches in the stake, signs of church growth are becoming more and more evident. With the advent of the new year, Elder Oscar Case, lately of Decatur, Nebraska, took over the responsibilities of branch president, and with his previous years of experience as a district president, this bids well for the consolidating of the gospel forces in Richmond. His entry to the presidency of this branch enables Elder William G. Hamann, one of the stake overseers, to devote his time and interests to other fields in need of a shepherd.

Cameron likewise is pushing steadily ahead, strengthened by a very successful series of missionary services recently held by Elder G. T. Richards. With the spirit of personal evangelism penetrating every fiber of his being, Brother Richards followed up his sermons with visits in the homes of Saints and friends, thereby establishing a contact that will ultimately terminate in further additions to the church. During his labors in this branch five splendid young people were baptized, with the possibilities of more following in their footsteps before long.

Elder Robert E. Jones is working in double harness in Saint Joseph, combining pastoral and missionary work throughout the branch as occasions demand. Though his efforts have more or less been restricted through lack of close cooperation on the part of some of the local ministry, Brother Jones has succeeded in bringing many souls into the church, and has established contacts that are valuable. His Monday evening classes in "Church Doctrine" are not only indicative of much preparation and efficiency, but are gradually winning over to the church a high type of truth seeking people.

Elder Richard D. Weaver has spent several weeks with the Saints of the Second Saint Joseph Church, preaching each evening, and visiting among the membership as wisdom directed. Recently as a climax to his efforts, over eleven souls were inducted into the fold of Christ. Surely God is abundantly mindful of the consecration of his servants and the needs of those who continually seek him in meekness.

Elder O. Salisbury, and Bishop Milo Burnett, as president and bishop of the stake respectively, are devoting their spare time to the demands of their spiritual stewardships in an admirable manner; and though frequent demands are made on them during business hours, they are always ready to minister in the interests of the church. But few people can fully appreciate their contribution and sacrifice.

Thus, in brief, is presented a word picture of achievements and possibilities in Far West Stake. A deeper conviction

Conference Notices

Southern Nebraska district conference will convene at Twenty-sixth and H Streets, Lincoln, Nebraska, March 1 and 2. E. J. Gleazer will be with us to conduct class work Saturday morning; business session at 2 p. m. A play will be given Saturday night by Lincoln Branch. This conference will be the annual election of officers. Please try to attend.—E. J. Lenox, district president, 3071 S Street, Lincoln, Nebraska.

A special conference of the Southeastern Illinois District will convene at Mount Vernon, Illinois, March 8 and 9 for the purpose of electing delegates to General Conference. The electing of delegates will be the burden of the business Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, and all intending to attend General Conference please be present or communicate your intentions to the district secretary, Mrs. Myrtle Choate, Marion, Illinois, or Elder R. L. Fulk, Mount Vernon, Illinois. It is important that we have the information of your intention to attend the General Conference if you expect to be placed on the delegation. If you are not sure of the essential function of the gospel in our lives as individuals and as a group will enable our Master to work mightily through us.

New London, Connecticut

February 4.—Christmas was celebrated here with an interesting program. A miracle play, "The Christmas Guest," was dramatized by a group of children. Their enthusiastic work at rehearsals well repaid them with effectiveness and beauty of rendition. The adults put on a play entitled, "The Light of Bethlehem." The special lighting effects, including rich shadings, were creative of the mystic atmosphere woven in the story of the birth of Christ. Violin numbers filled in.

Brother William Patterson, district missionary, visited the branch during the holiday season. The lantern slides of this native of Australia were of interest, and Brother Patterson supplemented with many facts concerning the various pictures.

With the new year we find few changes in branch officers. Elder Alma T. Whipple was reelected pastor. Brother Willard M. Blodgett, teacher, was elected treasurer.

Brother Herbert Floyd, with a group from Providence Branch, was with us a few weeks ago. He related during the course of his sermon experiences of his life which were helpful and encouraging to those present. Brother Floyd has been here twice. His humility and sincerity make his work effective.

The Women's Department has scheduled a supper for February 7. A musical program is to be included.

A Valentine party is planned for the children and youth, with a program of happy promise.

March 17 Saint Patrick's Day offers an opportunity for an Irish play and music.

A musical cantata, dramatizing with song the setting prior to the crucifixion and carrying it through to a grand climax of praise, rendered by a choir of angels, is being worked up for Easter. The committee consists of Sister Florence Simmons, dramatic chairman; Sister Willa Maynard, music; and Mrs. Stanley, costumer.

Music is attaining a high order under the direction of Sister Maynard. A large proportion of the members here are studying music.

you are going, do not report that you are. If you do go, we shall be glad to try to place you as one of the delegates. Please be prompt in your report to or attendance at the district conference.—District president, R. L. Fulk; secretary, Myrtle Choate.

Holden stake conference will convene with Atherton Saints March 14, 15, and 16. Delegates to General Conference will be selected Saturday, the 15th, at 10.30 a. m. The committee in charge of the new church building at Atherton is pushing the work on the building so as to be ready for the conference. Atherton may be reached from any part of the stake by hard-surfaced roads.—W. S. Macrae, stake president.

Kansas City Stake will hold a special stake conference March 14, at 8 p. m., at Central Church, 2917 Tracy, Kansas City, Missouri, for the purpose of selecting delegates to the coming General Conference.—C. E. Wight, stake president.

The annual conference of the Kirtland District will be held at Akron, Ohio, March 1 and 2. First meeting 10 a. m. Saturday, March 1. Election of officers and delegates to the Centennial General Conference. Send all reports to the district secretary, Mrs. Royal Rhodes, 751 Longview Avenue, Akron, Ohio. Member of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles in charge of the field is expected to be present.—James E. Bishop, district president.

Florida district conference will meet with the Alaflo Branch near Brewton, Alabama, February 15 and 16. All who can are urged to be in attendance. The election of officers will take place at this time. Business session Saturday, February 15, at 10 o'clock. All members of the priesthood are urged to have their reports in promptly.—A. D. McCall, president Florida District.

Laurel Club Needs Help During the General Conference

In order to serve meals to the thousands of delegates and visitors to the Centennial Conference, the Laurel Club is organizing for the work well in advance. The cafeteria plan of serving will be used, and to expedite the serving of food in the Auditorium dining room, six steam tables will be placed advantageously. Extra men and women will be needed to assist in serving. A lunch room also will be conducted in the room at the left of the lobby at the main entrance. Meals will be served also in the dining room at the rear of the Stone Church.

The force will be organized in shifts, so that those who are thus employed may participate in as many of the conference sessions as possible. The Laurel Club will furnish meals free to those who desire to assist in this way, and this arrangement will lessen the expense of those attending conference who are willing to give a part of their time for this work. Arrangements should be made now, and requests for assignments sent to Mrs. T. J. Watkins, 701 North Union Street, Independence, Missouri.

Notice to Nurses

Will all nurses who are expecting to attend the General Conference of 1930 please get in touch with Miss Ina Hattey, R. N., 208 South Fuller Avenue, Independence, Missouri, before March 15? Important.—Ina Hattey, chairman Nurses' Banquet Committee.

Our Departed Ones

OLTVEDT.—Thora M. Holm was born at Olso, Norway, October 9, 1884. Early in life she came to Minneapolis, Minnesota, at which place she was united in marriage to Helmer Oltvedt in 1912. With her companion and two daughters, in 1926 she united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, to which faith she was true until her demise at a hospital in Minneapolis December 26, 1929. Her passing brought to an end an affliction of seven years' duration. Funeral services were conducted in the church at Minneapolis, being in charge of William Shakespeare.

of Saint Paul. The sermon was preached by her pastor, Blair Jensen, of Minneapolis. Interment was at Crystal Lake Cemetery. Our sister has left her companion, Helmer Oltvedt; daughters, Helen and Irene; sons, Thoralf and Carl; all of Minneapolis; a brother, Carl Eugene, of Duluth, and a brother, Chris J., and an uncle, J. T. Holm, of Minneapolis, together with a host of friends.

JONES.—Elizabeth Gordie, daughter of Enoch and Elizabeth Jones, was born January 18, 1915, at Hiteman, Iowa, and passed away October 24, 1929, at the Miners Hospital in Albia, Iowa, after an illness of seven weeks following an operation for appendicitis. Her mother preceded her in death eleven years ago. For the past four years she has made her home with her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Griff Thomas. She was a member of the Chariton Junior High School. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in July, 1925, and has been a faithful worker, helping in the Sunday school and doing whatever she could find to do. She leaves Mr. and Mrs. Griff Thomas, of Chariton, Iowa; her father, Enoch Jones, of Albia, Iowa; and two brothers and one sister, also her aged grandfather and grandmother, Mr. and Mrs. James Wilkinson, of Melcher, Iowa, besides many other relatives and friends. Funeral services were held at the Saints' Church in Chariton, Iowa, October 27, 1929. Parley P. Batten, of Chariton, took charge of the service, and the sermon was preached by W. E. Prall, of Lamoni.

BAIR.—Oscar Bair was born at Bourbon County, Kansas, September 25, 1888. He was united in marriage to Miss Mabel Harrison August 16, 1908, and to this union were born five children, four of whom survive, Mrs. Fred Madsen and Charles, Sadie, and Frankie Bair, of La Junta, Colorado. An infant daughter preceded him in death in 1912. Five years ago Mr. Bair and his family located in La Junta, where he has since been engaged in the transfer business. His death January 15, 1930, followed an operation. He leaves to mourn his departure, his wife, his children, an aged father and mother, three brothers; and three sisters. Although not a member of the church, he was an ardent supporter, unusually regular in attendance at all church services. Funeral services were from the Mayer Mortuary Saturday, January 18, O. A. McDowell officiating, assisted by E. B. Hull. Interment was in La Junta, Colorado, Cemetery.

MAEDEL.—Ida Loeding was born September 5, 1877, in Casco, Saint Clair County, Michigan. At the age of nineteen she married John Maedel, and three children were born to them. One died in infancy. About thirty years ago the deceased and her husband located on a farm in Cash, Michigan, where she spent the remainder of her life and the family now resides. Brother and Sister Maedel united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints May 20, 1901. She and her husband are highly respected in the community and have contributed freely of their time, money, and talents to the church of their choice. She passed from earth life January 8, 1930, leaving to mourn her husband, a daughter and a son, Ella and Irwin; five grandchildren, one sister, two brothers, and many friends. The funeral was in the Saints' church at Cash, Michigan, Elder C. A. Winters in charge, sermon by Elder William M. Grice. Interment was in Watertown Cemetery.

PLANT.—John Plant was born in England June 28, 1857; died January 6, 1930, at Rock Island, Illinois, following an illness of about eight months' duration. Death was due to blood poisoning, which had its beginning in a slight scratch. He married Sarah Tully July 6, 1897, at Runnells, Iowa. His wife survives him. Mr. Plant never joined the church, but is remembered by the Saints at Hiteman, Iowa, and Rock Island, Illinois, as one who was very friendly. Funeral services were held in the Rock Island church, the sermon being by T. S. Williams, assisted by E. R. Davis. Interment was in Chippiannock Cemetery, Rock Island, Illinois.

RASMUSSEN.—Mads Rasmussen was born October 4, 1853, in Denmark, and died December 19, 1929. He came to this country in 1878 and settled in Council Bluffs, where he was united in marriage to Matilda Jensen, April 17, 1882. They located in Hazel Dell Township in 1887, where they made their home until 1911, when they moved to a farm in Keg Creek Township. They resided there four years before coming to Council Bluffs, where they made their home until his death, which occurred after two weeks' illness. He is survived by his wife and ten children, four sons and six daughters: Rasmus Rasmussen, of Lacona, Iowa; Herman, Walter, and Artur, of Council Bluffs; Mrs. Hans C. Hemmingson, of Honey Creek; Mrs. John A. Hansen, of Weston, Iowa; Mrs. Louis C. Larsen, of Omaha; Katie, Mabel, and Tilda at home; twenty-eight grandchildren, two brothers and one sister. He became a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in March, 1882.

HALL.—Helen May Sage was born in Syracuse, New York, April 7, 1897. When she was one year old her parents moved to Detroit, Michigan, where her girlhood was passed. She united with the Reorganized Church when eight years of age and was a faithful member, one who was actively engaged in Sunday school and all church activities. She married John L. Hall, of Detroit, June 15, 1915. She passed several years of married life in Detroit. In January they moved to Lake Orion, Michigan, where her husband has been president of the Orion Branch, and she has been a helpful worker. She died December 15, 1929, leaving her husband, five children, her parents, three brothers, and a host of friends. The funeral was held from the Allen Funeral Home December 19, Elder A. H. Case in charge, assisted by the Reverend F. R. Walker, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Interment was in the Orion vault, and later the body will be laid to rest in East Lawn Cemetery, at Orion.

CORSON.—Alice R. Corson was born February 17, 1854, at Burlington, Bradford County, Pennsylvania. She was baptized a member of the church December 27, 1899, at Richmond, Virginia, Henrico County, by J. L. Goodrich, confirmed on the same date by Elder Goodrich. She died January 27, 1930, at Ashland, Virginia, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. F. P. Starke. Surviving are six sons: L. B., M. S., C. E., F. E., F. W., and R. S. Corson; three daughters: Mrs. Bertha Newton, Mrs. Jennie Rettburg, and Mrs. P. P. Starke. Interment was in Woodland Cemetery, Ashland.

MARTIN.—George W. Martin was born November 5, 1853, in London, England. He came to the United States at sixteen years of age, where he lived the remainder of his life. Died July 4, 1929. He was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints September 19, 1897, by Elder W. P. Robinson, of Madison, Dane County, Wisconsin. Surviving are his wife, Emma, two daughters by a former marriage, Mrs. Alda Wagoner, and Mrs. Ida Kimball, of Chicago, and several grandchildren. The funeral was held in Chicago, Illinois, J. J. Oliver in charge, assisted by C. E. Smith.

MAYMON.—William Abel Maymon was born July 2, 1925, at Sulphur, Indiana. As Jesus blessed the little children, so he was blessed in September, 1926, at Mount Vernon, Illinois, by R. L. Fulk and Chester Henson. He died January 26, 1930, leaving his father and mother, Brother and Sister W. G. Maymon, his brother, Paul H., and a host of relatives and friends. He was a spiritual-minded child and seemed to have great faith in prayer, especially praying for his afflicted mother. The real cause of his death is not clearly known. The funeral was held from the Christian Church, sermon by J. O. Dutton. Interment was in the cemetery close by the church.

SEARS.—Clarence Snow Sears was born November 26, 1851, at West Brewster (Cape Cod), Massachusetts. He died at his home in East Dennis, Massachusetts, January 21, 1930. Services were conducted at his late residence before a large gathering of relatives and friends in whose esteem he was highly held. The sermon was by William Patterson, who was assisted by David E. Dowker. The deceased was preceded in death by his wife, Teressa Tamson Sears, who died June 5, 1929. He united with the church August 7, 1928, under the ministry of Elder Patterson. His children, Lucy H., of New Bedford, Massachusetts; Warren C., New York City; and Calvin C., Branford, Connecticut, mourn the passing of a devoted father; a number of relatives the passing of a beloved kinsman; the community a respected citizen and neighbor; and the church an honorable member.

MOORE.—Isaac Reed Moore was born in Cherokee County, Texas, February 20, 1852. He married Miss Mildred Ann Conn January 20, 1873, and to them were born four children, all of whom survive: Mr. and Mrs. Moore settled in Orange County about forty years ago. He became a member of the Baptist Church at the age of twenty-one, continuing fellowship with that organization until about 1890, when he and his wife were baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He passed away February 11, 1929, at Wintersburg, California, leaving his wife, Mildred Ann Moore; two sons, Isaac O. Moore, of Imperial, California; Lee R. Moore, Kansas City, Kansas; two daughters, Mrs. Lydia Calloway, Arcadia, Los Angeles County, and Mrs. Oella Morgan, Irvine; eighteen grandchildren; five great grandchildren; one brother, David Pierce, Modesto; two sisters, Mrs. Allie Rhodes, Dinsmuir, California, and Mrs. Mattie Bishop, San Antonio, Texas; besides other relatives and friends. The funeral sermon was by D. B. Carmichael.

FLECK.—Susan Fleck was born at Booneville, Missouri, in 1847. She was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints June 24, 1923, in Kansas City, Kansas, by L. W. Hayes. Passed away January 26, 1930, in Kansas City, Kansas, leaving one daughter, Mrs. Minnie Jones, of that city, four grandchildren: Wallace Jones, Leonard Steiner, Mrs. Mabel Lang, and Mrs. Gladys Morrow. The funeral was held in Long's Funeral Home, Kansas City, Kansas, January 28, in charge of Ammon White. Interment was in Hiland Park Cemetery.

PRINCE.—Sarah Amanda, wife of John Henry Prince, was born September 27, 1864, at Bald Knob, Arkansas, where she died February 2, 1930. She first married Frank Moss, who died about forty-three years ago. Married Mr. Prince in 1889. She was the mother of five sons and four daughters, two by the former marriage. Five children survive her and were present at the funeral. She united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in 1894, being baptized by Heman C. Smith, and was a faithful member. The funeral was from the Christian Church in Bald Knob, in charge of Branch President Thomas W. Emde, sermon by S. S. Smith. Interment was in Bald Knob Cemetery.

WESTERVELT.—Emma F. Craig was born in Defiance, Ohio, April 28, 1855. She married W. E. Westervelt November 24, 1872, and to them seven children were born, five boys and two girls. Two have preceded the mother to the beyond. She was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in the spring of 1893. Died January 30, 1930, leaving her husband, five children, thirteen grandchildren, five great-grandchildren. She was highly esteemed by her neighbors. The funeral was held in the Baptist Church at Altmont, Kansas, sermon by Lee Quick, prayer by G. D. Gray, of Parsons, Kansas. Interment was in Mound Valley Cemetery.

BREITHAUPT.—Margaret Ann, eldest daughter of George and Sarah Blackburn, was born at Rock Island, Illinois, February 9, 1854. She married William Breithaupt February 16, 1873, and to them eleven children were born. Two died in early infancy. Frank, May, and Nettie (Mrs. Henry Pollock) also preceded their parents. Mrs. Breithaupt was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ October 18, 1908, at Flora, Wisconsin, by G. J. Brookover. Her husband passed away in 1925. She died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Taylor, Lancaster, Wisconsin, December 29, 1929, having been a patient sufferer for many months. She was a quiet and unassuming neighbor and friend, a woman of faith and kindness. Surviving are the following children: Sadie, Mrs. John Taylor, Lancaster; Mabel, Mrs. Wallie Garthwaite, Milwaukee; Cora, Mrs. John Place, Waterloo, Wisconsin; John, Lake Mills, Wisconsin; Archie, Watertown, Wisconsin; two sisters, Jane, Mrs. Orville Brimmer and Ida, Mrs. Treloar, of Independence, Iowa; five brothers: John and Tom, of Lancaster; Jesse, of Pennimore; Albert, Minneapolis; Fred, of Pittsville; and fourteen grandchildren, eleven great-grandchildren, and a host of other relatives and friends. The funeral was held at her daughter's home, the sermon by Elder Amos Berve. Interment was in Hillside Cemetery.

SEMLER.—Orin O. Semler was born at Uniontown, Ohio, February 6, 1869. Died January 30, 1930, at Akron, Ohio. He married Mrs. Rachel Bush November 24, 1916. United with the church twenty years ago and has lived a clean, consistent, Christian life. He was respected by all who knew him. His last thoughts were of the church and his wife, and he made provision for both so far as it was possible. Surviving are his wife, one stepson, Ernest Bush, of Doylestown, Ohio; one stepdaughter, Mrs. Ethel Labadis, Barberton, Ohio; and nine grandchildren. Interment was in Chestnut Hill Cemetery, Doylestown.

WATERBURY.—David A., son of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Waterbury, was born December 19, 1872, at Earlville, Illinois. Died January 31, 1930, at his home in Plano, Illinois. He spent most of his life in Yorkville, Illinois. At the age of eleven he united with the Baptist Church, later joining the Odd Fellows at Plano. He was a machinist by trade. Married Pearl Howard, of Sandwich, in 1900. Was baptized into the Reorganized Church July 3, 1909. Left are his wife, one son, father, mother, three sisters, and one brother, as well as many friends and neighbors. The funeral was held at the Burkhart Funeral Parlors at Sandwich, Illinois, Earl D. Rogers in charge. The sermon was by J. M. Brakely, of Plano. Interment was at Oak Ridge near Sandwich, Illinois.

DUNLAP.—Lafayette Dunlap died January 11, 1930, at a hospital in Los Angeles, California, at the age of eighty years, lacking one day. He was born in Peoria, Illinois, January 12, 1850; was married to Miss Harriett Cook, by whom he became the father of five children. Two of these, with his wife, had preceded him in death. He was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in 1876, remaining a member till death. He was a resident of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and vicinity more than fifty-four years. After his death he was brought to Council Bluffs for funeral and burial. He led a quiet and unassuming life. The funeral was conducted by J. F. Mintun, using as texts for the sermon, 1 Corinthians 15: 22, and Romans 15: 4.

FARROW.—James Benjamin Farrow was born in Marion, Illinois, March 21, 1851. He married Miss Viola Stitt January 11, 1874, and passed away on January 11, 1930, the anniversary of his marriage, having spent fifty-six years in union. The pair were blessed with six children, two having passed on in death. Left are his wife; children: Mrs. Cora Drown, Fairmount; Joseph A. Farrow, and Mrs. Myrtle Cook, of Independence, Missouri; and Ted R. Farrow, of Kansas City; six grandchildren; and one great-grandchild, also one brother, Moses Farrow, of Independence; and three sisters: Mrs. Elizabeth Pooler, Mrs. C. W. Bowen, and Mrs. Julia Singleton, of Independence. He became a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints March 10, 1878; in Kansas, being later ordained to the office of deacon, which he held at the time of his death. The funeral occurred January 13 at the Stone Church, Patriarch Ammon White in charge, assisted by J. F. Sheehy. Interment was in Mound Grove.

YOUNG.—Samuel D. Young was born May 14, 1860. He lived in Kansas for a number of years, but later moved to Oregon, then to Idaho. He was baptized April 23, 1895. For the past twelve years he was a member of Filer (Idaho) Branch. Nearly a year before death claimed him, Brother Young suffered a severe attack of neuritis. He never fully recovered. He was taken to Portland in September, at which place he died November 28, 1929. Left are his wife, a daughter Freda, an adopted daughter, Ula, Portland; three sons, Claud, Portland; Samuel W., Hagerman; and Edwin F., Los Angeles, California. Interment was in Portland, Oregon.

MONTGOMERY.—Paul C. Montgomery, son of Robert R. and Matilda Montgomery, was born at Deloit, Iowa, March 31, 1877. When a small boy he accompanied his parents to Denison to life for a number of years. August 8, 1899, he married Emma E. Brewster in Denison, and to them were born two children. Ruth E. and Clifton D. He passed away November 14, 1929, near his home at Guthrie Center, Iowa, leaving his wife, his daughter and son, one brother, Ninus Montgomery, Stromsburg, Nebraska; two sisters, Mrs. Flora Winey and Mrs. Edith M. Oliver, of Deloit. The funeral was held at the Methodist church at Guthrie Center, and interment was at that place. Mr. Montgomery was baptized into the church August 13, 1918, and was enrolled as a member of the Perry (Iowa) group.

March 16 Is Decision Day

The Joint Council of the three leading quorums of the church have named March 16 as Decision Day. They have recommended that the church work together for the purpose of bringing every eligible prospect to the point of decision as to joining the church by that date.

In addition they have called attention to the various places where prospective eligibles may be found, and part of their number have been very busy in arranging and participating in the conducting of special services to close on Decision Day. President McDowell writes of this particular activity for this issue of the Herald. You will find his article in the "Official" column.

These movements among the leading men and quorums have brought the matter down to the great body of missionaries throughout the world, and to the rank and file of church membership. The leaders have not slackened their efforts, and they do not wish to throw down their work because they have brought it to the point where every member of the church may take hold. But have the members greeted this opportunity joyfully, and have they avidly taken up the suggestions of working with the missionaries in bringing every possible attraction to the series of special services? Have they also vigorously launched out in the individual work suggested? And have they conjured ways not mentioned and formed plans not dreamed of by their leaders, but which specially fit the needs of some whom they know should make his decision to enter the folds of the church?

What have you done? What are you doing? What do you plan as your contribution toward bringing some one or many to the point of decision before Decision Day shall have passed?

Book of Mormon in Print a Hundred Years

In the winter and early in the spring of 1829-30 the mechanical work on the Book of Mormon was completed, and a new book of sacred writings made its advent.

The copyright privileges had been applied for by Joseph Smith to R. R. Lansing, clerk of the Federal Court of the Northern District of New York, on June 11, 1829. It was about two months later, early in August of 1829, that a printer was engaged to get out an edition of the Book of Mormon. Mr. E. B. Grandin, of Palmyra, New York, was the printer thus engaged, and Mr. John H. Gilbert, Grandin's compositor, claims to have set the type from the cases.

It can be said truthfully that the printers were exceptionally painstaking and faithful to their trust. They prosecuted their work with vigor, also.

There are not a large number of these books of the first edition still extant. Most of them have been worn out by much handling, or have been lost because of the vicissitudes through which the people of the early church passed. The possessors of well-preserved copies of the first edition value them highly. They will not part with them quickly or easily.

My own copy of this edition is quite worn, the binding being broken and the sewing almost useless. But I can use it by being very careful in handling it, and I expect to retain possession, at least for many years.

The book has gone through a large number of editions, and it is a heavy seller today by the church publishing house. The last edition is printed from eight point type slugs, and is known as the authorized edition, being a popular book size, and bound in cloth or leather, and also in the style known to publishers as flexible morocco.

There has not been any severe or destructive criticism of any recent edition of the book. It is remarkable how faithfully the present authorized edition follows the original manuscript and the first printed edition.

The paragraph marks of the current authorized edition indicate the division of the original manuscript into paragraphs. The short verses of the current edition and of the large type edition have been executed only in recent years.

Thus the mechanical history of the Book of Mormon is now finishing its first century, and the book which came forth from the earth through the power of God and the work of a very few of his servants among men, is firmly established in the faith of more than half a million people now living upon the earth.

It has fulfilled its mission to many, having been of great worth in producing an increased faith in God and in his Son, Jesus Christ, of whom the book itself states it is for "the convincing of the Jew and the Gentile that Jesus is the Christ, the Eternal God, manifesting himself unto all nations."

As we finish the first one hundred years of the distribution of the Book of Mormon to all who desire to investigate its contents, let the church highly resolve to know it more fully, and to heed the counsel of God which it contains. If this be done, the day of Christ's coming will be brought near, and when he comes he shall find faith on the earth.

What About a National Referendum?

Leaders of antiprohibition and pro-liquor organizations are doing a lot of talking just now before the judiciary committee of the House of Representatives of the United States Congress. A great deal is being said, and even "demanded," in regard to the proposed repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, and the idea of a national popular referendum on the question. This is not the first time such a hue and cry has been made.

These speakers have endeavored to establish in the first place that conditions have grown worse instead of better under prohibition. They have pleaded for a return of the local self-government for which our forefathers stood; they have asked for a regulated liquor traffic (but without saloons!) on the one hand to "outright, unequivocal, repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, free from modification, compromise, or substitute" on the other. Repeal they must have—let Congress work out the details!

It is doubtful that many of the assertions made with regard to conditions under prohibition can be substantiated. But aside from that—the particular point at issue here is the method of amending the national Constitution and the repeal of such an amendment. The Eighteenth Amendment was brought into being in exactly the same way that every other amendment has been—proposed by Congress on a two thirds vote and ratified by the legislatures of three fourths of the States of the Union. There are other ways in which amendments can be brought about, according to the Constitution; but a national referendum is not one of them.

The repeal of an amendment to the national Constitution must be brought about through the same means by which it was enacted. Either this or the provisions of the Constitution with regard to amendments must be altered. As the Constitution now stands, an amendment could not be repealed by national referendum.

One of the speakers mentioned above said, "We have no desire to evade any of the duties laid on us by the Constitution, but we refuse to be bully-ragged and browbeaten by a text out of the Mohammedan Koran simply because it is labeled a constitutional amendment." The speaker is going through a process sometimes called "howling at the moon." Regardless of where it came from or how little this speaker agrees with it, the Eighteenth Amendment was made a part of the Constitution (and as much a part of it as any other article) by the methods which were used at the inception of this Nation, and from then until now. If this be "bully-ragging" or "browbeating," it is at least what we have ourselves accepted and used for years and years.

If these are not the methods we wish to use, then our line of speech and action should be toward changing those methods of amendment. To talk about the failures of prohibition and the invasion of personal liberty is merely befogging the issue.

Wait for the Facts

We are never more fortunate than at those times when we have the good judgment to wait for the facts and verify them. Waiting for the facts will save many heartaches, prevent misunderstandings, preserve confidence, and strengthen friendships.

Rumors are frequently conscienceless lies or inexcusable mistakes. Perhaps at the start they were not intended to be malicious, but that innocent beginning does not ameliorate their destructiveness.

Nothing is more unhappy than the following typical instance: Mr. A hears that his friend, Mr. B, has made some disparaging remarks about him. Hurt and inflamed, Mr. A makes some counter remarks about Mr. B, which the diligent peddler of tales kindly carries to Mr. B as soon as he can. A few days later Mr. A learns that the rumor was entirely false. But he has already uttered the savage words that have destroyed a friendship. The breach can never be completely healed. A little patience, a little restraint, waiting until the rumor could be brought to face the facts, would have saved that valuable friendship for Mr. A.

It is not only individuals that suffer from the idle, floating rumor and the malicious tale. The church

THE ELDER JOHN HOWARD STORIES

XXVII. Idealizing the Real and Realizing the Ideal

The overland train hammered its way steadily westward, counting the rails that, like unbroken steel ribbons, unite New York with Los Angeles, representing in themselves great expenditures of human effort and mentality, and the triumph of brain and muscle over inanimate nature. The weird desolation of New Mexico whirled steadily past the car window, vast regions of sandy wastes broken by black reaches of lava beds from old volcanoes and rendered even more desolate by grotesque desert growths. This world was so unlike the level prairies and green forests and well-kept fields of the Middle West that it might have been a section of another planet; or, seen by moonlight, it might have seemed the figment of a dream, or a fairy scene conjured up by the waving of a wand, soon to dissolve into nothingness when the spell of the enchantress was spent. And so it was to the travelers, for soon it frequently suffers from them. A story is told concerning some office or officer of the church. Probably there is no word of truth in it, but it is told and retold, and amplified in the telling. It does great harm. But those who so carefully spread the story take no pains at all to ascertain the facts or to give them the publicity that they honestly demand.

It is impossible to estimate the amount of damage that is done to the reputations and credit of people, or to the prestige and power of the church to do good, by these idle rumors and malicious tales. Once started, they never stop until harm is done.

Church officers and private individuals can not go about tracing these tales to their sources and proving them false. As officers, they are too busy in the performance of their duties. They have neither time nor energy for such a thankless and profitless task. They must rely on the passing of time to justify their works, and on their friends to contradict current errors. To the world at large they may seem indifferent about what is said of them, but those who know the circumstances understand the burdens that cause them to preserve silence.

Sometimes even those who know the facts, or part of them, do not understand. There are often purposes unexplained which future events will reveal. Even these people should be guided by Christian charity in making their judgments.

There is a lesson for all of us. Let us try to know the facts before we judge, and then let us make our judgments charitably and mercifully.

would melt into the emerald and gold and perfume of California orange orchards and the riotous coloring and beauty of California roses, still another section of this old world so different from the two already named that it, too, might seem to belong to another planet.

The porter passed through the car announcing: "Last call for luncheon is now being served in the dining car in the rear." Elder John Howard nudged his traveling companion, Elder —, and called his attention to the fact that "the call" was "now being served," and that probably "the call" was all that they would get. So, ignoring the comforts of the dining car, not from choice, perhaps, but from necessity, the two proceeded to arrange their own repast.

Having requisitioned a folding table from the porter, they spread upon it a white cloth and arranged thereon sandwiches prepared by the good people at home, preserved strawberries, a bottle of unfermented grape juice, and the inevitable cakes and cookies that so soon pall on the taste of the overland traveler. They promised themselves that when the journey was a little older and the lunch box in a more advanced stage of disorder they would fall back upon the dining car for warm and attractive meals.

Having finished their luncheon, the two elders fell into conversation. Their talk drifted from one topic to another, as conversation will, touching upon a point here and a point there, pursuing a direct line for a time and then going off at unexpected tangents into new fields. Who can predict the course that a conversation will take when once started? No one can make such a prediction successfully, unless it be when two cranks meet, in which case probably the bigger crank will dominate the situation and direct the conversation along the groove in which his mind always travels. But neither Elder Howard nor Elder — were monomaniacs. And their conversation covered a wide range, now "spiritual," now "practical," now poetic, now humorous.

By and by, through a course the sequence of which neither could have retraced, they arrived at the topic of marital happiness and the ideas of "affinity" and "soul mates" so prevalent and dangerous, now finding expression in companionate and like "marriages." And presently Elder — was relating the following story:

"I am now beginning to acquire a few gray hairs, but the time was when I was younger and more impressionable." Elder Howard, studying the handsome, intellectual face of his companion, realized that the speaker might have added that he had been and was yet capable of creating an impression, but he forbore comment, and the elder continued: "I have learned that a man's safety lies in disciplining his mind. Thoughts always precede actions. One who can resist the sweet illusiveness of daydreams on forbidden subjects need fear no flesh and blood temptations.

"Men and women make the mistake of overlooking the ideal and beautiful in the life that is open to them, and legitimate, in the things that belong to them, and look far afield for it in the unlawful and forbidden. A man will overlook the beauty and goodness of his own wife and fancy that he sees in some other woman his ideal and his affinity. If he were thrown with the other woman a month or a year, he would be looking elsewhere for his soul mate. As it is, he soon finds some woman who will listen to his plea that he is a poor, 'misunderstood' man whose wife is no mate for him. Pity paves the way for affection, and the foundation is laid for a cheap and sordid 'romance' that finds sanction in the pseudo religion of 'divine affinity' and dares to think that God has sanctified their unlawful love.

"That which I am about to tell you occurred some years ago, when I was just starting out in my work as a missionary.

"I was staying at the home of a certain sister who was both refined and beautiful, but of a discontented and melancholy temperament. The fact that her husband was of a lower type mentally, besides being careless and unattractive, gave her some just ground for discontent.

"For this woman I felt a strong natural friendship, for she was witty and attractive, and her presence seemed to stimulate me to be my best in conversation and thought. I did not realize how strongly this feeling was returned until something occurred that opened my eyes.

"The husband was gone for the day. The wife then sent her two little boys to a distant neighbor's home on an errand, and told them they need not hasten to return. She then seated herself across the table from me, where I was reading, and took up her sewing. By and by she began to talk to me, presenting a hypothetical case, and I noticed that as she talked her face was as white as death and her eyes shone with feverish brilliancy.

"'In this town,' she said, 'there lives a woman who is unhappily married. Her husband is coarse and uncouth. He is beneath her intellectually. At times he is cruel to her. She has come to abhor him. She loves the beautiful in art and literature and the good and pure in life. In this town there is another man who is fine and noble in every way. He loves the things that she loves. The two are congenial. They were meant for each other. Now I wish to ask you if you think that this woman is doing wrong to love this man.'

"There was no mistaking the meaning and application of this appeal. A hundred past tokens unnoticed at the time came flooding back to my mind to confirm the quick understanding that had come to me. I looked at the woman's bent head. She was beautiful and attractive. The full force of the appeal that surged from her being thrilled through me. It was not coarse and bestial. That would have repulsed me at once. It assumed a high plane and was the more dangerous to a man of my temperament. She was naturally a good and clean woman. It gratified me to think that only I could have stirred in her heart such sentiments and wrung from her soul such a veiled confession. Yet I realized what my position would be if I were to respond. It would mean the end of my ministerial career, the breaking up of my family, the disgrace of my church.

"I knew that I must save this woman from herself. I must resist her appeal, yet do it in such a way as not to betray to her that I had suspected its personal application.

"So I said to her: 'I certainly think that this woman would be doing wrong to yield to the love that you mention. Advise her that if she can not realize her ideal in life to at least try to idealize the real.'

"I watched the woman closely and saw the red color come flooding back to her white cheeks; and it seemed that a gleam of anger flashed into her eyes. It was the resentment that the eternal feminine feels at a rebuff, even when carefully disguised. She flung her work to the floor and went into the kitchen without a word and began the preparation of the noonday meal, though it was still early in the forenoon.

"I had passed the test, and the unexpected ordeal was over. I trembled. Picking up the morning paper I glanced at its pages. The headlines of the very first column told the story of a truant minister, two ruined homes, a broken church. I thought: 'But for the grace of God, that were my story.' And I thanked him that by his help I had made a different record."

The climax of the conversation had been reached. After a little silence the talk began again, a new suggestion diverting it to inconsequential matters. The news agent passed through the car crying his wares. A halt was made at a little station where clustering "doby" houses sheltered dark-skinned, indolent aborigines. The diners returned to their respective seats, picking their teeth and wearing the sleek and complacent air of the cat that had eaten the canary. The thousand and one details of such a journey followed each other in their turn. But in his subconscious mind Elder Howard pondered long

Missionary Series

February 16 to March 16, 1930

Missionary services will be held in the following branches during the month ending with Decision Day, March 16, 1930:

The Saints of these branches are planning to give the missionaries eager support by making their church homes attractive, inviting their friends and neighbors to attend, financing advertising, distributing literature, furnishing suitable music, etc.

We come now to urge also that members of the church who have nonmember friends in the cities represented write to these friends, giving their personal testimony regarding the work and urging them to attend the services, while the Saints everywhere are also requested to add their prayers for the success of the meetings.

Here is another suggestion: You may have friends in the branches where special missionary meetings are to be held who are now members of the church. Be sure to write to them and by letter send your personal testimony. It will encourage them to support the branch pastor and the missionary who may be conducting the meetings.

There are over sixty special missionary meetings planned in as many branches in the next thirty days, and there is no reason why hundreds of letters should not be exchanged on this occasion. Your friends will enjoy hearing from you and be lifted up through your personal testimony. For instance, meetings are being held in Des Moines. Why not write to Brother C. B. Hartshorn, telling him you are praying for him and for the success of the meetings. Also, if you have friends in Des Moines or in any other of the branches where meetings are being held who are not members of the church, send them an invitation to attend the meetings. If you know some of the Saints, write to them. You may not be sure of the addresses of your friends, but letters may be sent in care of the branch president, whose name and address is printed below.

By F. M. MCDOWELL.

This church-wide Decision Day can be made a time of great ingathering for the church, and those who participate directly in offering their service in the special meetings planned, or those who assist indirectly by writing letters of encouragement and invitation, are very definitely assisting to build the kingdom of God.

Will you be counted as one of the helpers?

Courage

By Leonard Lea

A radio sermon used Sunday, January 26, 1930, from Stone Church studio in Independence, Missouri, over K. M. B. C.

It is my purpose to say something about the courage that is necessary to do good.

I speak not alone of courage for private affairs, but more especially of that quality of character which prompts a man to do good for his family, for his community, and for his country, even in opposition to a determined and dangerous foe.

Christian people the world over, together with all others who labor under a divine discontent with things as they are, bear a heavy responsibility. They need strength and courage to produce the world as it ought to be.

I speak of that courage.

The children of Israel stood near the banks of the River Jordan, ready to go into their inheritance: the promised land. Moses, their old leader, could not enter with them. Advanced age withheld him, and the command of the Lord forbade him.

Moses said to them, as he made ready to resign the command of the host to Joshua:

Be strong, and of a good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the Lord thy God, he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.—Deuteronomy 31: 6.

In that promised land the enemies of the children of Israel were strongly established. Many among them were afraid and unwilling to cross the Jordan into the dangers which awaited them in a strange country.

Looking Back to Egypt

They were the children of people who had been led, almost unwillingly, out of captivity and bondage. They were the children of people who, on the way to the land of promise, had looked back with yearning to the fleshpots of Egypt; children of those who worshiped the golden calf. They were of the same people who had suffered in the heat of the desert, who had fed on the manna, and who had drunk of the water that had gushed from the rocks at the touch of Moses' rod.

Now, at the door of the promised land, when all their hopes were about to be realized, and all the promises were about to be fulfilled, they hesitated and doubted. Before the unknown enemies across the Jordan they hesitated.

Therefore it was that Moses, their old leader, said to them: "Be strong and of a good courage; fear not, nor be afraid of them: . . . he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee."

Do We, Also, Look Back?

In this simple story there is an important lesson for the people of our own time.

We, like the children of Israel, have been on a long pilgrimage. We are of a race which has long been on the way of an intellectual and a spiritual journey. It is long since we left our bondage, and we have spent years in the wilderness until we could make ready to enter the promised land. We have not yet found the uses of our freedom. We, too, are on a threshold. We, too, stand ready to cross another and a greater Jordan, into another land of promise.

Now we find among our numbers those who long for the things we thought we had left forever. There are faultfinders, and the deep-voiced, solemn prophets of gloom. They warn us that we can not succeed; that our efforts must end in failure; that we can not enter into the land of promise of better things.

It is time that some leader should arise among us, as Moses did among the children of Israel, and say to us: "Be strong and of a good courage; fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the Lord thy God, he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee."

The Wish Fathers the Statement

Those people who would like to see the enforcement of prohibition made a reality look with some hope upon the changing world. With all of the evils that we suffer now, they are less than those that we suffered before. With all that it costs the Nation to attempt the enforcement of prohibition, it costs the Nation at large much less than it did before for an enormous liquor bill.

Those who clamor most loudly that prohibition has failed, are those who would profit most by its failure. They are biased witnesses, prejudiced judges. We can not accept their words as truth.

There are always buzzards in the air, birds that feed on carrion, looking for something to die. There are members of human society, too, who make their profits by the destruction of human life. They are the parasites, the vandals, the exploiters. Those who wish to see the breakdown of prohibition are akin to this kind.

Other Issues

But prohibition is not the only issue in which the welfare of the human race is at stake. There is the question of world peace.

There was a time when war was the normal relation between separate peoples and governments. Now peace is the normal relation, and war abnormal. Christians and idealists everywhere hope that war may not only be made an abnormal relation of peoples and governments, but that it may be eliminated altogether. At the very suggestion that we can outlaw so old and strongly entrenched an evil as war, the pessimists and prophets of gloom swarm down upon us. They tell us that we can never succeed. They tell us that man is a fighting animal, and that we can not change human nature.

Thus with a composition of ignorance and deception, they try to frighten the world away from its constructive effort to obtain a safe and lasting peace.

Man Is Fundamentally Peaceful

They are wrong when they say that man is naturally a fighting animal, for most men naturally prefer peace, and they enter conflict unwillingly and only when they can not avoid it. It is a belligerent minority that takes the world to war. It is an irreconcilable and lawless minority that makes necessary the heavy and expensive machinery of justice. The large majority of men, in their private lives and in their public acts, demonstrate their preference for peace by remaining peaceful and obeying the law, by inoffensively minding their own business.

They tell a lie when they say that you can not change human nature. Human nature is the one thing in this world most subject to change and modification. Climate changes it, social customs change it, social and family life modify it until there is not one single person living who can say with certainty what a man would be like if he were to grow up naturally and alone, uninfluenced by other men and their ways. There is no greater fallacy than the thought that you can not change human nature.

Then, if man is not essentially or necessarily a fighting animal, if human nature can be and actually is vastly changed, there is no truth in the idea that we can not abolish war. There is every hope, if all men want peace, or if even a large majority of them want peace, that they can have it. There is every hope that war can be brought under control, that man's instinct for fighting can be conditioned and regulated, as law and custom condition and regulate every other instinct in human nature.

Is There Cause for Fear?

We stand on the threshold, we are ready to cross a new Jordan, and enter into a promised land of a better world. The prophets of gloom and destruction, the social cowards, the exploiters, the buzzards and beasts of prey—they are a motley crowd—stand together in a little knot and predict failure and warn us away from our goal.

Must we heed them? Are we to take them seriously? Is there any real meaning in their warning? Let us see. Let us look briefly at history and see if their statements are true.

Substantial Gain Has Been Made

The prophets of gloom and failure tell us that there is no such thing as progress. They say that from the beginning of recorded time there have been no essential changes in human life. Let us see if they speak truly.

If we carry our investigation back over no more than four or five centuries, we see a definite trend. In every country where there have been any changes at all, the bulk of those changes have been for the improvement of human life. The rights of private property are more precious, and the majority of humanity can now keep what belongs to it without having to maintain a private army to defend it. Individual rights and liberties are safer. Human life is more sacred, and there is a strong and growing sentiment against the violation of it. Women in the leading civilized countries have very nearly made good their claim of the right to a total equality with men; and in the backward countries their emancipation must follow with the acceptance of civilization. Children are increasingly guaranteed better parentage, better treatment, better education, better opportunity.

As much or more than this is another very important but less tangible gain: the improvement of the consciences and ideals of men. There is an increasing consciousness of justice and right, and a corresponding resentment of wrong. There is an increasing tendency to "play square."

An examination of any long period of recent history will show a gain, we believe, in the things that make life worth while.

Progress Still Before Us

We must admit the existence of distressing conditions. We do admit them, and we wish to remedy them. But they are not as bad as they used to be. Let the skeptical auditor search the newspaper files of fifty and seventy-five years ago, and read of the actual conditions that existed then. Let him go to the records and find the facts for himself. We must admit that there is political corruption. But it is certainly no worse than it has been in the past, and quite probably not as bad.

The World Has Survived Many Shocks

The prophets of gloom and destruction are not a new phenomena. Every generation has its share of them. At every tidal wave they predict the end of the world. At every earthquake they tell us to prepare for the great and final catastrophe. At every eclipse they whisper their old, old stories. Ever since the time of Christ they have gathered their followers to prepare for the end of the world, but it has never come. They are left, pathetic and ridiculous figures, making weird and meaningless gestures into empty space.

Our critics tell us that there is an increase all over the world in crime. To state the truth, they scarcely know what they are talking about. Their statistics are made meaningless by the fact that never, until recently, has crime been reported with even approximate accuracy. We do not pretend that it is reported accurately now, but the story is more nearly complete. There is no possibility of comparing this age with any other on the basis of quantity of crime. We know, however, that the apprehension and punishment of criminals is improving. Those who say that the world is growing rapidly worse are ignorant of history, or else they misrepresent it.

Improvement in World Conditions

Just before his death, J. M. Dent, the great publisher whose little volumes have made his name famous throughout the English-speaking world, said: "There are more men minded to do good than when I was a boy."

We believe that this statement is true. The number of voluntary contributions to the welfare and happiness of humanity is increasing. The inclination of people to preserve and benefit by these contributions is improving. We could not begin to name even the leading benefactors without starting a list that would be too long to consider.

The number of people who are willing to make a concerted and determined effort to preserve justice and improve the conditions of life is increasing.

Unity of Forces for Good Is Necessary

We should like to rid our country entirely of the curse of liquor. Some believe that it can be done, and are determined to see it done. Some wish it could be done, but are afraid it can not. Opposed to them are those who will try to defeat it at any price. They plan, if they can defeat prohibition, to make millions of dollars out of human degradation and misery. They buy up the venial presses and newspapers to tell the people that it is doomed to failure. There is no one to buy up newspapers to tell the people that it ought to succeed and can succeed. We must depend on the honest papers for that.

We should like to help rid the world of the cursed shadow of war. It can be done if enough of the world are determined to have it done.

On our successful curbing of liquor and war depend the future happiness and security of the human family.

All persons and forces that turn their efforts to do good, to try to better the world, should unite in a common bond of cooperation and sympathy for a united effort on these and other great projects of outstanding importance. It is fitting that, under the principles of the plain and beautiful teachings of Christ, the constructive forces and movements of the world should draw together for the achievement of their common goals.

There will be those who doubt, those who scoff, and those who obstruct. But having no program except the defeat of a good work, they will fail and die, and their names and memories be forgotten.

Jesus, walking on the water, said to his disciples in the storm-tossed boat: "Be not afraid: it is I." And the tumultuous sea became calm. At this uncertain time we should not be afraid.

Moses, getting ready for his end, saw his people, the children of Israel, standing on the banks of the Jordan, hesitating to cross over into the promised land.

He said: "Be strong and of a good courage, fear not, nor be afraid of them: for the Lord thy God, he it is that doth go with thee; he will not fail thee, nor forsake thee."

Headaches, the Thyroid, and Heart Trouble.— Chapter 5

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

In this lesson I am grouping three unrelated matters, though they are alike in causing discomfort and pain. All reveal symptoms that point to deeper things. Headaches are present in a long list of diseases.

"Your headache is migraine. You will have it until you are forty or forty-five. It should disappear then." This was not very cheerful information for a young man struggling to earn his expenses and suffering with an interminable dull headache. Twenty years more of that leaden, stupefying burden!

I recall the case of a recent patient who had been a long sufferer from an intense headache. He was unbelievably constipated, had a perpetual burning sensation in his throat, a most disagreeable catarrh, and his eyes were inflamed and sore. Frequently he was afflicted with nausea and extreme lassitude. The cause was found to be in faulty diet and lack of sufficient oxygenation. Appropriate treatment promptly alleviated this condition.

Headaches, if due to pelvic disturbances in the female, are usually located at the top of the head and are accompanied by soreness of the scalp; if due to digestive disturbances they are occipital (back of head and neck), or frontal; if due to a disease of the pharynx they involve the entire vault, as though the pharynx were expanded and extended upward; if due to migraine, they are usually one-sided, local, and accompanied by soreness at the supra-orbital foramen (situated just above the eyes); if due to eye strain, generally superciliary (just above eyebrows) or frontal, sometimes occipital; if due to disease of the nose, between the eyes and extending backward.

Headache may arise from disturbances of air pressure in the accessory sinuses of the nose. Any closure of a natural sinus outlet leads to diminished intrasinus pressure owing to the absorption of oxygen by the blood vessels of the mucous lining, and as a result the latter swells. Later there may result a serous outpouring into the sinus and an engorgement of its lymph channels. In other words, the condition is analogous to non-suppurative inflammation of the middle ear (otitis) from closure of the Eustachian tube. The symptoms vary according to the time the sinus remains closed, the prominent one being headache.

There are some who attribute much languor and headache to modern street conditions, when much carbon monoxide is developed from auto exhausts. I doubt if at this time many people feel the after effects of the influenza epidemic or of the World War, as one physician has warned in a speech before the American Medical Association recently, and as for alcoholic liquor, this has something to do with malaise and lack of pep and headache, if we stop to think of it. It is, however, true that the air of cities is becoming poisoned by the exhausts of auto engines, though the amounts mixing with air are relatively small. There is little question, however, that the over-use of automobiles to the detriment of leg power has its penalties. The air in an unventilated closed car and the cramped posture are unnatural, even if not perilous or menacing to public health. Then, too, the bad effects of noise are to be noted, and even though the well person may not think so, it affects the system.

It is interesting to note that only forty-four per cent of the men, but seventy-five per cent of the women complain of headache. Among the males the commonest decade for headaches was the third, while the second, fourth, and fifth shared practically equally with one another. In the first ten years of life, and after fifty, headache was almost never complained of by the males. Among the females the third and fourth decades showed the preponderance. The second decade had about half as many, while the first, fifth, and sixth decades each contained about one fifth as many as the third and fourth. Sixty-five per cent are due to refractive or muscular troubles. An analysis of the other thirty-five per cent indicated that the largest number of cases are undoubtedly due to nasal disease; some were apparently digestive, some from high blood pressure, an occasional one from low, some were typical migraine. The nasal cause ranks high in cities on account of the frequency of naso-pharyngeal disturbance due to smoke and dust irritation, and in our climate, to instability of weather during the winter months. Living conditions, as factors in headache, are important, and must not be overlooked.

The types of errors of refraction chiefly associated with headache are hypermetropia (far-sightedness) and hypermetropic astigmatism. Astigmatism is a refractive condition where the eye is not the same in all its parts, causing the eye to focus the light at different points.

The next most frequent cause of headache was imbalance of the extraocular (outside) muscles, but this occurred scarcely one fifth as often. Here there was a ready possibility of error because the muscle imbalance was usually associated with an error of refraction, and this may have been more responsible for the trouble than the muscle imbalance.

One reliable authority classified two hundred cases of non-migrainous headache and attributed thirty-five per cent to poisons and poverty of the blood, such as anæmia, dietetic states, infections, uræmia, lead, alcohol, tobacco, etc., twenty-five per cent to reflexes from the digestive organs; ten per cent to other reflexes; five per cent to local organic disease, and twenty per cent to neurotic states.

The character of the headache doubtless indicates to some degree the causation; for example, the throbbing headache, aggravated by the jarring of the body, is more likely to be migraine, while the dull, steady pain is more likely to result from dyspeptic disturbance and toxæmia. The hot, burning sore headache is often alleged to be due to anæmia, but frequently results from neurotic conditions incident thereto, and to uterine disorders. The intense, boring pain (clavus) is nearly always a hysterical symptom; while the occipital pain is often caused by eye-strain.

Each year fresh evidence develops of the manifold headaches due to eye-strain from various optical defects of the organs of vision, the variation of hypermetropia and astigmatism being the most common. Defects of the extra-ocular muscles probably also cause headache. Observers differ as to the proportion of cases due to these causes, all the way from a modest figure up to seventy-five per cent, or more. A misleading circumstance is the fact that in some of the worst of such cases there are no ocular symptoms of pain or discomfort.

There are various remedies that are used extensively by physicians for temporary relief from the agonizing condition, until the cause can be ascertained. Various secret and proprietary preparations, which are mostly compounds of some of these medicines with various modifying agents, have also been extensively employed. So common has the use of this class of agents come to be in the United States that many people purchase and use them on their own responsibility as freely as quinine is used for malaria. Occasionally a large dose of these preparations will produce a sense of prostration, evidence of heart weakness, or some skin eruption, and I have known of some fatalities. But in general it may be said that in tentative quantities these drugs are safe in the hands of a physician. A headache relieved by a certain dosage for a particular patient may be expected thereafter to yield, to some degree, to the remedy, but migraine patients have found that they acquire a tolerance for the drug that makes it, after repeated trials, ineffectual except in large quantities; so that many, after a year's trial of it and more or less benefit, have rejected it as unsatisfactory. This has been, however, the experience of such patients with every drug known to affect the disease.

The nervous system is one of the last parts of the body to register the effects of migraine or any abnormality of the system, epilepsy, etc. It often gives invaluable signals of a misused physical system, and is a most useful pain, having little to do with the condition of the brain. Nerves of the face and head being the most sensitive in the body, they register first the cry of poisoned and overworked or starved nerves. The thing to do is to endeavor to eliminate the toxins from the blood stream after finding out the cause.

Bad air, fatigue, lack of sleep, sleeping with windows shut, or night dissipation, say in an atmosphere of smoke, plus possibly bad drink produce a condition where one is not getting sufficient oxygen into the blood to eliminate the toxins. Constipation and indigestion are familiar causes for this reason.

The first signal of a cold in the head is registered in the cranial nerves, or even by some more serious disease, for which a physician should be called. These nerve pains may be the result of misuse of tobacco, alcohol, or absorbed poisons, like lead. Mild cases of influenza or scarlet fever may attack special nerves elsewhere than the head and cause partial paralysis.

Let us not attack brain work as the cause of nervous depression. Such work under proper conditions is wholesome. It is only the lack of outdoor life and exertion and play that induces languor and nervous aches. Most of the conditions that affect the nervous system arise from poisons in stomach, liver, muscles, and other parts of the body. All sorts of mental work, if not overdone, are healthy and stimulative, and never lead to insanity. It is the infectious disease, bad food, and bad living which are the primary physical causes.

Keeping Heart in Good Condition

Not all heart pains, or pains that seem located there, are cardiac, for pain is also located in the spinal nerves following the course of the ribs around the chest. If awakened from sleep by palpitation or paroxysmal rapid beating of the heart, the sensation may indicate poor circulation or trouble with the stomach or in the abdomen. Sensations in the diseased heart are few, except in angina pectoris, which is too agonizing to describe, and this is due to long-continued irritation of the heart nerves, producing a sympathetic reaction. There are no sensory nerves in the heart.

Patients with heart disease may take moderate, carefully planned exercise in the open air, such as moderate hill-climbing and walking. At the same time nature is assisted by good food to build up and strengthen the heart muscles. Thus cardiacs may live on with reasonable care to beyond their expected term. Two thirds of average heart symptoms are due to excitement and overstrain and are a sign that digestion is not going on perfectly. Much overwork and overstrain, whether by muscles or brain, induce rapid beating, which is a danger signal to relax. Or palpitation may be due to excessive stimulants taken, too much of "good tobacco" or "good coffee and tea." Or digestion may be out of order. Hence avoid poison, or after sickness seek to eliminate all poisons, or prevent auto-intoxication due to food wastes uneliminated, and your heart will keep working on faithfully.

To save the heart, rest must be balanced with labor. Many have toiled, using mind and body unceasingly and ardently, until the desire to live seems spent and the joy of effort has all gone out. "Stop and rest!" is the command of the heart. The need is for conservative, constructive rest and ease, so that the heart will continue pulsing on rhythmically and unrebellingly. Then statistics will not show heart disease to be at the head of the list of causes of death—with an army of over 200,000 in the United States going the cardiac route.

Of itself the heart does not go wrong. There is a list of degenerative diseases responsible for its malfeasance, with acute rheumatic fever topping it, and then in turn tonsillitis, carious teeth, syphilis, scarlet fever, and diphtheria. These diseases are due to focal infections back of heart diseases. Even though the primary diseases have been reduced, the amount of heart disability has increased, which means there are other factors at work, such as diseases of the arteries and of the kidneys.

With the advance of time, the arteries or vessel walls lose their elasticity. This gradual hardening or rigidity is a normal process, and is common to all aging organs, due to the increase of connective tissue. The inner coat of the artery begins to resist stretching under tension. But this is not arteriosclerosis, which is one playing a large part in the mortality rate today. This is due to high blood pressure, and such pressure is caused by alcohol and tobacco, as well as toxic products evolved in the body; also overeating, obesity, and an array of more or less accepted other causes, such as syphilis.

Let me state that heart disease is easily at the head of the list of the causes of death, with over 209,000 deaths in the United States in one recent year, or of some 200 per 100,000 population. There seems to be an increase in this disease, with its allies of Bright's disease and apoplexy. These deaths fall particularly on the age groups over forty years. Too often we give no thought to the circulatory system until it has been damaged beyond repair. If we realized the enormous work it is doing for us constantly, we would take more care of our foods, exercise, and rest periods. Would that we gave it the same care that we give a machine! In the heart there is no stretching of muscle wall. Damage to the valves makes for incomplete closure of the openings and backward leakage of the blood current. In rheumatic fever involvement, the heart is often damaged irreparably; influenza has also a severe reaction on the heart muscle. Then we have the related diseases of the kidneys.

We are nourished by our blood stream. The liquid part of the blood is called plasma. It is water in which a little albumin and mineral matters are dissolved. The albumin and the mineral matters are the real food of the cells. The tubes which carry blood to the cells of the body are the arteries. Their sides are strong and tight, so they can not burst or leak. In them are muscles which can make them larger or smaller so as to let the right amount of blood pass through for the use of the cells of the body. Each capillary has sides so thin and soft that the liquid parts of the blood easily soak through to reach the cells, and even the white blood cells burrow through its sides without harming the tube.

The capillaries unite to form the veins. These carry blood away from the cells. Veins have valves which permit blood to flow toward the heart, but keep it from flowing back to the cells. If we follow the arteries back, we shall see that they unite and grow larger until we reach the artery of the heart. This, the aorta, has at the end, a pump. The heart pump lies just to the left of the middle of the body, and just below the level of the armpit. It is a bag about the size of the fist. The lower part of each side of the heart is a ventricle, and the upper part an auricle. There are two openings in each ventricle. When the ventricle is full of blood, all at once it squeezes the blood. This pressure closes the opening to the auricle, and the blood is forced into the artery.

Lymph is thin blood without its red cells. Only a little lymph can go back to the capillaries; so, to take away the rest, there is another set of tubes, called lymphatics. Pressure closes the opening to the auricle, and so it passes into the artery. The heart keeps the arteries full of blood and passes it through their branches and through the capillaries and veins. Food is gathered from the intestine by the blood, which is pumped by the left half of the heart, but in man only the right half of the heart sends blood to get air. The left half of the heart sends blood through the arteries to all parts of the body. It takes twenty seconds to send a drop of blood through the left ventricle, then through the arteries, capillaries and veins, and then to the lungs and back to the left ventricle. All the blood in the body passes through the heart every two minutes.

During severe work the heart works harder, so as to provide food for the cells. This soon wears out the heart, so that it can not send enough blood even for light work. When the heart beats with little force, or stops beating, the cells suffer at once. The brain suffers sooner than any other part. Then the mind stops acting and the person is faint.

When a person faints he should be placed in a horizontal position, with the head lowered so that the blood will go to the brain. Rubbing the arms and legs toward the body will assist in driving the blood to the heart. Cold water on the face will cause a nerve stimulus that will assist the heart action. In a moment or two the patient will revive and be as well as before. Sometimes a useful cardiac stimulant is necessary, but should not be taken unless under the direction of a physician.

During convalescence those who neglect cautious but regular and systematic exercise out of doors are apt to do indifferently. It would be a wise precaution for everyone who had begun to take the downward course after broken compensation, to place himself under constant medical supervision, even though apparently well. By the too free use of heart stimulants the energy of the heart itself is taxed, and there is only a definite amount of such energy available. Digitalis is a remedy of value in all valvular lesions, but its use is not to be recommended unless under the supervision of a physician. It strengthens the systole (contraction) and prolongs the diastole (dilatation). There are also other remedies of value, having a similar action.

In the case of organic murmurs, a careful physical examination is necessary for the formulation of a correct prognosis. The history of rheumatism is of great value, and the rhythm and point of the murmur are important. If the heart beats forcibly and well, the lesion is a small one; a weak, intermittent pulse is a danger signal. Cardiac valvular disease is more serious in children and old people than in adults. Habits, mode of life, occupation, and temperament are important factors.

Valvular disease of the heart in the first half of life, if properly compensated for, is not usually especially dangerous, but the opposite is true in later life. In organic disease of the heart the patient should know without apprehension just the significance of the particular affection of the heart from which he is suffering. Plenty of sleep and fresh air, and habitual light eating are important factors in keeping up good health in such persons. Alcoholics should positively be avoided. Very hot baths, including the Russian and Turkish bath, are exceedingly dangerous, as is also swimming. Bathing is largely a matter of personal peculiarity. To condemn a person with heart disease to a life of inactivity is the height of bad management; such persons should have moderate exercise in the fresh air, but no violent muscular exercise should be allowed. The important thing is to insist upon moderation in everything, mental and physical exercise, eating and drinking.

The thyroid is a highly vascular gland. It consists of two lobes lying on each side of the trachea, or windpipe, like an old-fashioned pair of saddlebags, and joined by a band of thyroid tissue called the isthmus. It is located just below the Adam's apple and above the breastbone. It is located just beneath the skin and therefore can be easily felt. It is about two inches long and about three quarters of an inch wide; is about one inch thick at its thickest part, and weighs one and one half or two ounces.

Little has been known about its function until recent years, probably on account of its being a ductless gland and its secretion being directly absorbed into the blood stream. A gland without a duct is not so easily tapped.

In the early days of Grecian art, their sculptors and painters knew of it, for their pictures and statues show it plainly. Parselsus, about the year 1500, was the first medical man to describe a diseased thyroid and cretinism. Paracelsus, the Swiss scientist of the sixteenth century, was rickety, and had a smooth skin and a beardless face on account of being deprived of one of his ductless glands. The rickety condition was attributed to having a diseased thyroid at an early age.

The thyroid may well be called the Master Gland, for in addition to its own particular work to do, its other liabilities are to cooperate and help out with the tasks of the other glands. The other organs have practically only one kind of work to do. While the thyroid has its own specific duty to perform, it helps the others to do theirs.

Anything which interferes with the function of this gland, such as a general infection from any cause, indigestion, and pelvic troubles peculiar to women, may cause it to enlarge. If its regulative function is interfered with sufficiently, it may cause the heart to beat too fast or too slow and irregularly. Tremor of the hands and shallow breathing may also be produced. If the secretion should be scanty, the mind becomes dull, the skin is thickened and dry, and the hair falls out and is lifeless.

Doctor Hertoghe found by experimenting upon small, young animals that it had a great deal to do with their size and weight. When their thyroids were removed, their growth was slackened; then by the use of thyroid their growth would be resumed. It has been observed that when children are abnormally small, they have a deficiency of thyroid secretion. If they have an excess, they are quick to learn, nervous, and grow rapidly.

The treatment and management of a case of goiter is important. It may be divided into dietetic, medical, and surgical. There is a close relation between goiter and the function of the thyroid gland. Any kind of food that is liable to cause a toxic condition, such as meat, must be avoided. Iodine containing foods should be selected, such as lettuce, tomatoes, turnips, melons, beets, radishes, French beans, carrots, green peas, potatoes, and parsley. Kidney beans, pumpkins, cucumbers, and spinach contain only a small quantity of iodine. Those suffering from the simple form of goiter should partake freely of agar and irish moss, as they are rich in iodine. The iodine content of water is important. In the Southeastern States simple goiter is seldom seen on account of the abundant iodine content of the water, while in the northern half of the United States its content is very low, and fifty per cent of the school children have evidence of thyroid enlargement.

If the nerves are poisoned by the goiter, and the pulse becomes rapid, the heart palpitates, with tremor and protrusion of the eyeball, you have a case of exophthalmic goiter to deal with, and the sooner surgical intervention is taken advantage of the better. Delays are dangerous and may result in the case becoming inoperable. Medical treatment should be undertaken only by a competent physician.

What Is Liberty?

By Arthur E. Stoft

Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free. John 8: 31, 32.

Undoubtedly, the innate desire for liberty and freedom that resides in the breast of everyone, is born of God. People resent being called slaves. The people to whom Jesus addressed the above language resented the implication that they were not free. "We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man: how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?"

Men always have and always will, no doubt, fight for what they think will bring them liberty, or freedom. The tendency today (it might be called a demand) for a democratic form of government by practically all of the countries of the world indicates the struggle men are making for what they consider more liberty. About fifteen years ago there were a number of the countries in the east that had at the head of their government a king, but today what few kings there are have lost much of their power. It is quite true that the king of England exercises less authority over his own people than does the President of the United States over the people of America. The movement now on foot by the people of India, some three hundred and twenty millions, ninety-four per cent of whom are illiterate, to gain their independence, illustrates the tendency of all mankind. The French Revolution was but an outburst of that deep-seated demand on the part of man to be free from bondage. The American Revolutionary War might be sighted as another very prominent illustration of the struggles of man to free himself from taxation without representation, or from what he considered servitude.

Men can not stand the thought of being tied or bound. Inmates of prisons and penitentiaries risk their lives and frequently forfeit them in an attempt to free themselves. Many instances of this character have come to our attention in the recent attempted jail breaks and prison riots. I visited a young man who was in one of the city jails of the East some few years ago. He expressed himself to me with tears in his eyes, between sobs, in the following language: "This confinement is killing me." I believed him. He wanted to get out. He wanted me to help him get out. He appreciated his freedom when he was released far more than he ever had before. He has kept out of prison since.

Any institution or set of laws or boundary lines which seems to curtail one's liberty, is shunned. A number of years ago, I was associated with a group of young people of the church in the city of Omaha, Nebraska. We had a young people's organization, but we had no rules or by-laws to govern us. We desired to be free from those things which might have a tendency to bind us or keep us from expressing ourselves fully. In one of the business meetings, we discovered that the very things we felt would hinder us from expressing ourselves freely were the things that would have enabled us to carry on our business in an orderly fashion. We at once adopted a set of rules and regulations which enabled us to give fuller expression of our wishes.

Personal expression or group expression seems to be the criterion as to whether the individual or group is free. One who is free can express himself far more than one who is bound. The athlete wears very little clothing while on the field, in order that he may be free to use his muscles. The racing automobile is built so that the wind resistance is cut down to the minimum. Every possible incumbrance is removed, so that speed is acquired. A story is told of a young man who expected to run in a foot race. He was employed on a farm. While he was plowing corn, he fastened some iron weights upon his ankles, making his feet seem very heavy, but when he entered the race he removed not only the heavy iron weights, but every other article of clothing, so that he might be free to use every ounce of energy to win the race. He burdened himself with the weights for the time being in order that he might feel more light and free after removing them.

The good citizen who is loyal to the laws of his country enjoys the liberty of moving about among his friends and associates, going to and from his work unmolested, taking pleasure trips, enjoying the beauties of nature, while the man who is serving a term in prison is compelled to stay within the prison walls and can not do as he pleases. This is so apparent that it almost seems useless to express it; however, it is just as apparent that none of us are entirely free from some sort of bondage.

Our thoughts, plus our expressions or actions, make us free or bind us. How is it that the athlete can express his physical powers more than an ordinary man? He can run faster, run a longer distance, jump higher and farther, and endure more strenuous exercises. Our bodies are governed by certain physical laws with which the athlete is quite well acquainted. He eats certain things; well-balanced meals at certain times, and certain amounts; he gets a certain number of hours sleep under certain conditions; he exercises a given amount daily. He refuses to indulge in certain habits, such as the use of tobacco, liquor, tea, coffee, and meat. He does not expose himself to the elements, nor indulge in overexertion or overstimulation of mind or body.

Does he feel that he is binding himself by refusing to indulge in these harmful habits? If it is a sacrifice to him to refrain from indulging himself, is it wise for him to sacrifice? It is true that he needs to keep constant guard of himself. He must exert his will power always. He must control his appetite, govern his passions, and subdue self.

In thus living according to the laws of health, physically and mentally, he sets himself free from weakness and sickness and is therefore more able to express himself to a fullness. I may have the permission to compete with the athlete on the field, but it is certain that I would lose the race, because I have not been living as the athlete has, according to the laws of physical life. I am therefore not able to express myself as fully as he. I am limited. Or in other words, I am bound just to that extent. It is a form of slavery. Weakness of body, or sickness, is the result of transgression of law, and one readily sees that sickness does not liberate one to express himself fully, but is a hindrance to expression.

The chorister of the branch might be kind enough to me to permit me to sing a solo, or the branch president might offer me the opportunity to give a musical recital, but no one would have a desire to hear me sing the second time, nor would anyone come out to hear me give a recital, because those with whom I am acquainted know that I can not sing well nor play any musical instrument. I may be permitted, but not being able to do these things, I am limited in expressing my full self. However, the trained singer, after sacrificing many other things, spends his time and energy in developing his talents and holds audiences spellbound because he is able to express himself musically. He, like the athlete, has lived according to the laws that freed him to give fuller expression of himself than can the one who is untrained.

If the degree of physical or musical expression is due to the obedience of the laws governing in these fields, then it is reasonable to suppose that since the whole of life is controlled by the laws of life, the greater degree of obedience to these laws will produce the fuller degree of expression.

The Literary Digest for September 22, 1928, contains an article, the title of which is "The new freedom versus the old." Doctor Robert E. Brown, pastor of the First Congregational Church of Oakland, California, answers some of the objections raised by the younger generation against the attacks of the older generation. He says, in part:

Your critics say that you are the victims of a false philosophy. You have been told that you are creatures of desire; that to repress these desires is evil and to express these desires is good. In my judgment, the psychoanalysts, with their emphasis upon sex, their one-sided view of desire, and their blindness to the necessity of ideals of self-control, will have more to answer for in the day of judgment than any other class of blind guides that are ditching our youth. They have hung the millstone of their vicious philosophy upon your necks. Libertinism has never produced either happiness or character. All our human experience proves the necessity of the gospel of restraint and obedience to the ideals of chastity and self-control.

This false philosophy will reap a terrible harvest in the days to come. It is utterly bankrupt in any power to lead us into the fields either of achievement or idealism. Broken homes, broken hearts, broken hopes, broken lives follow in its wake. With centuries of human experience behind us, with the facts of indulgence before us like an open book, it seems impossible that men could be found to advocate a philosophy which makes sexual expression a god and restraint a crime.

Doctor Brown continues by having youth ask:

Must I be a slave to my ideals all my life? Will following the ideals of Jesus not cramp my spirit, deny my liberty, and run me into a stiff, solid mold of killing conventionality?

Doctor Brown replies:

I do not think so; for "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty." I know of no man so truly free as the man consecrated to God. He submits to limitations as a river to its banks, but the limitations are the channels of life. The artist, the musician, and the poet—all recognize the necessary limitations of form and color, melody and harmony, rhyme and meter. These very limitations are grounds for their highest achievement. To live nobly is the highest art. Sin is ugliness, vice is distortion, crime is discord and death. The very restrictions inspired by our ideals only challenge our originality and open new doors of joy, service, and character.

We can heartily agree with Doctor Brown. Restraint, self-control, obedience, are the seeds of true liberty. In contrast, let me illustrate: I have a strong desire to acquire things; the instinct of acquisition. This is perfectly normal, for every child is born with this instinct. But since I am told that to restrain this strong desire would be bad and would develop a complex, I proceed to gratify this desire by taking things which belong to other people. When I am arrested and brought before the judge, I explain that since I have such a strong desire to acquire things I just can not help stealing, and therefore, since it is wrong for me to restrain myself by not giving full expression to all of my desires, I am justified in taking other men's property. How far would this explanation satisfy the judge, or the one from whom I stole the goods? If men and women would not control these God-given instincts, soon we would all be destroyed.

The teachings of Jesus Christ and his church upon earth are the means of setting people free. The "Thou shalt nots" are merely the markings of the dangerous rocks and the shore lines along the stream of life. The "Thou shalt" are much more numerous and will keep us busy all of our lives, thus avoiding the rocks and shoals which hinder our progress. The religion of Jesus Christ is not merely a palliative measure to meet certain emer-

The Blessing of Death

The pedigrees—only a few of hundreds traced—quoted in my last article show beyond reasonable doubt the hereditary character of pauperism, and its connection with the still more grievous afflictions of mental defect and instability. They do not, however, show the full picture; for there is scarcely an instance of crime among them. In other pedigrees of a like nature crime is constantly reappearing. There are plenty of English examples of this, but the American "Kallikak" and "Jukes" families are probably the most notorious, even among the English lay public. Crime itself is not a stock character in the sense, at least, in which Lombroso imagined it. His picturesque "science" was exploded twenty years ago by Goring's exact and famous study of the English convict. The criminal, Goring found, was mentally and physically below the average. (The average physique taken as his standard was probably a little too high. Nevertheless, there is little doubt that his findings were substantially correct.) He concluded, therefore, that the general inferiority of the convict and his constitutional inability to adapt himself to his environment were the causes of his taking to crime. He only found it possible, in short, to earn a living by dishonesty. This conclusion has been confirmed by various psychological studies—notably those of Professor Cyril Burt—of delinquents, and also by pedigree and statistical studies.

Crime, pauperism, mental deficiency, insanity, epilepsy, are all different manifestations in various degrees and circumstances of one and the same disease—a general deficiency, both mental and physical. The high death-rate from tuberculosis (vide tredgold, amentia, and reports of the Board of Control) of the definitely defective and the generally poor physique, and strong susceptibility to disease of the socially inadequate, are a good illustration of this general deficiency. It is, after all, no very revolutionary idea—to a biologist, at least—that an egg which lacks vitality should produce a body and brain of equally poor quality.

The converse is familiar to us all. With very few exceptions, most of the great men of the world have been of unusually fine physique, and, with no exception, have sprung from very vigorous if not also talented families.

To take either side in the "heredity versus environment" controversy would be unscientific. In similar circumstances the sound individual will develop more fully than the unsound. Both will develop better in good surroundings, in decent houses, say, than in slums. The point is that men and women do differ inherently from one another, and that native inadequacy is more often the cause of disease, pauperism, and slums than they are of it. This general law of heredity is fairly widely acknowledged. The natural law which is not usually recognized and which is the very heart of this subject, is that of natural selection.

That all animals in a wild state are healthy and efficient because only the fittest survive, is almost a commonplace, yet one which is seldom applied to human affairs. Men, of course, are naturally selected for death or survival in precisely the same way as are animals, but in a much less degree. The cause, for instance, of our comparative immunity from smallpox, one of the great scourges of past generations, is debated with much vigor by the pro- and anti-vaccinationists. Yet the real cause is much more probably a natural immunity, our birthright as the descendants of those who passed unscathed when the plague ran riot.

Why, again, did the Black Death, which once ravaged all Europe, die out without the aid of either sanitation or vaccination? The Plague, which we associate with the Fire of London, was in reality no isolated event. It came several times in a lifetime for centuries on end. (Queen Elizabeth, acting on thoroughly sound natural selectionist principles, made it a capital offense for anyone suffering from the Plague to come near her court at Windsor!) Yet this, too, died out long before modern medicine and sanitation were introduced. Scarlet fever, once the terror of parents, has now become a very minor affliction in most cases. But measles, a comparatively new disease, has grown more and more dangerous as the child death-rate from other causes has declined. Venereal disease twice nearly wiped out the Maoris. Today they are immune. In gencies of life, but is the creation of perfect freedom and liberty. The followers of Christ are called upon to sacrifice, to deny themselves, to control self, to govern their appetites, and to restrain their desires, but the followers of Christ have more to do than simply to sacrifice, to deny, to control, to govern, to restrain; they have the whole law of Christ to obey; they have a constructive and creative program to put into operation in their lives; they have the truth to learn, and doing these things, they are made free. It is putting into operation the laws of life that brings freedom, not so much the denials and sacrifices we make. "Obedience to Law Is Liberty."

Algeria the same disease is endemic, but in a mild form.

From these particular instances one can see how beneficial to the race, if ruthless to the individual, natural selection is. It is over a hundred years since it ceased to be really ruthless in this country. Prosperity was already rising before the industrial revolution, but it then proceeded by leaps and bounds. The population consequently increased, not, as used to be said, because the birth rate rose, but because the death rate fell. Larger numbers than before of the least well adapted to live were enabled to do so. Modern medicine and sanitation brought powerful aid. That thoughtless, indiscriminate philanthropy of state and individual which is a feature of modern life assisted further to lower the death rate at the wrong end of the population.

The alteration of the death rate would by itself have been enough to slow down or even to stop the evolution of the race. The alteration in the birth-rate which started some time after 1830 (until then for certain the most capable individuals had the largest families) has completed the actual reversal of the evolutionary process. As I tried to show in my first article, not only the absolute numbers, but also the proportionate numbers, of the defective and dependent have risen and are rising. Better wages and cheaper food, better housing and more effective sanitation, more out-relief and medical assistance—these, it is true, have aided them a little, but have also enormously increased their survival and, consequently, reproductive capacity. Their families average eight-nine, the normal laborer's four, and the professional man's one-two. Probably the mysterious "influenza" epidemic of 1918, which was markedly selective, has been our greatest benefactor of recent years. Without it the burden of pauperism might be far heavier than it is. Even excluding all those on the Guardians self-described as "unemployed," that burden is already the growing one of 2-3 per cent.

The financial aspect is less disturbing than the human. All such changes in the quality of the population as are now going on are cumulative, increasing at compound interest. The human stuff of a great nation is deteriorating. Nature may suddenly right things in her own way, and leave a purged, depopulated England gasping with humility at the feebleness of man.

We can not, for obvious reasons, willingly return to the ruthless, if effective, methods of natural selection. There are, therefore, two methods for preventing the increase of the definitely defective—segregation and sterilization. . . .—Eldon Moore, The Spectator, January 28, 1928.

A Penny Which Was Blessed

One bright Sunday morning as I went into the little church on the seashore, to see if all was in order for the early morning service, I saw Josefa already in her place. In her hand she held an envelope, and by that I knew she had come with her regular weekly offering.

Often I had said to myself, "Where does she get that money?" It was as small an amount as one could give in a coin, but for her it was much. Her earthly possessions were so few that it made one wonder how she managed to keep her family together. It meant a little forethought on her part to have a penny every Sunday for her offering to the Lord. As she was alone in the church I went to her and said, "I see you have brought your usual Sunday gift." "Yes," she answered with a smile, "I have brought my penny." "Would you please tell me where you get it?" I asked.

"Oh, I said at first, 'I have nothing to give so I need not promise any definite amount for each Sunday.' Then the thought came to me, 'But we keep the Sabbath now, and we do not work as we did before on that day. We go to church and we receive so much there. We do not eat as much on that day. You know we have no place to keep bread in the house, so when I get the bread on Sunday morning I get only a penny's worth instead of two as all other days.' That gives me the penny for my envelope, and I, too, can give a definite amount for the Lord."

As I looked into her pale thin face and realized that she never went home from church to a table laden with a special Sunday dinner, I asked, "Do you not feel the need of that extra piece of bread on Sunday?"

"Oh, no," she hastened to answer. "The bread I buy on Sunday morning seems to go as far as that which I buy on other days." Then in a whisper she said, "I believe the Lord blesses it."

Is there anyone who can doubt it?—Selected.

Reflection

By Ruth McNickle Kirby

A doubt expressed, however lightly spoke,
May plunge some timid soul in dark despair;
A hope expressed, a smile, a cheery word
May answer some blind pilgrim's anxious prayer.

It thus behooves us to consider well
Before each act, each trivial word or thought;
The sin of sin is sin produces sin,
True kindness is by love and kindness wrought.

Through Christ was born the love of Christendom;
The noon reflects the glory of the sun;
Cold hate produces enmity and hate—
Pure, golden friendship is by friendship won.

Enfield, England

Lancaster Road and Lavender Road

During the past year the Saints of Enfield have enjoyed great spiritual blessings. God has indeed been good to us, enabling us to accomplish much for the progress of the work. The greatest endeavor of the year was the erection of a splendid building to house the increasing congregation, the room at 317 Baker Street having become far too small. This room has served the branch well for seventeen years.

The opening of the new church was an auspicious event. The conference business meeting for southern England District was advertised for December 7 at six o'clock in the evening at 317 Baker Street, and the new church opening service occurred at 7.15 in the evening, Elder Paul M. Hanson, President of the European Mission, presiding, assisted by Elder Richard Baldwin. The event aroused considerable interest and marked a milestone in the history of Enfield Branch. Following the conference on Baker Street, Pastor J. A. Judd preceded the members of the church to the New Church Home, where he welcomed Elders Hanson and Baldwin. The procession entered the church to the accompaniment of orchestral music, and the choir sang "Come, let us join our cheerful songs." Pastor John A. Judd gave a short history of the progress of the church in Enfield, which dates back to 1885, when the first meetings were held at various addresses at Enfield, Bush Hill Park, and Ponders End.

A local paper prints the following history of the branch:

"In 1903, a few members met in the home of Joseph Kemp, fifty-six, Churchbury Road, Enfield, where branch organization was completed. After a short time a small upper room was secured at the corner of Churchbury Road, where meetings were continued until 1912, when larger premises were secured at 317 Baker Street. Here the Saints continued to meet with good success, at length finding the room all too small for their ever-growing numbers. Arrangements were entered into to secure a plot of ground for a frontage in Lancaster Road and a side view to Lavender Road, where the work of building a church was begun. This work steadily went on until the church was completed, which presents a fine, attractive structure. The church was designed by John A. Judd, and the work of the building was carried out by the firm of John A. Judd and Sons. Many useful suggestions have been included, not the least attractive of which is the inclusion in the cement rendering of crushed glass of various colors, which gives a beautiful finish. The interior work and design are very attractive, the back of the rostrum being paneled with fine oak, and curtained in old gold. This, together with the beautiful colored window and the admirable lighting arrangements, adds to the pleasing setting of the building.

"The church in Enfield has been in charge of Pastor John A. Judd for upwards of twenty-five years, assisted by many worthy officers and members who look forward to a successful and enjoyable time."

Addresses by Brothers Paul M. Hanson, Richard Baldwin, A. T. Trapp, John W. Worth, and W. H. Greenwood commemorated the opening of the building. Then a social hour was enjoyed by the company. The orchestra, under the direction of W. T. Goulee, assisted by D. A. Judd, added much to the enjoyment of the company.

Sunday opened with prayer meeting at ten o'clock. At the morning preaching service speakers were drawn from local and visiting members: H. Hailstone, of Basingstoke; Dover A. Judd, of Enfield; and Mr. Meadows, of Gloucester. The Oriole Girls sang "Joy—Love—Peace." In the afternoon an open service was held in connection with the Sunday school. The Blue Birds were featured on the program, and the superintendent of the Sunday schools of British Isles Mission, J. A. Judd, talked. Sister Alice Baldwin gave a talk on the subject of "Teaching by demonstration," exhibiting some fine work done by the pupils.

A consecration service was conducted in the evening by Elder Judd, the sermon by Apostle Hanson.

The Saints are pressing forward with renewed energy, and many nonmembers are interested. Four were baptized by Elder John A. Judd Sunday, October 20, being confirmed in the evening.

We have been blessed by the labors of Apostle Paul M. Hanson and Elder and Sister Richard Baldwin. We were sorry when the time came for them to leave us. We appreciated also the visit of Brother and Sister B. M. Anderson and their daughter. A hearty invitation is extended to all Saints coming through England to pay a visit to Enfield, which is ten miles north of the city of London.

Missionary Journeys and Gospel Work in Eastern Montana

By Lester O. Wildermuth

In the latter part of September Elder George Thorburn visited the Saints and friends living about ten miles west of Opheim and a few miles south of the Canadian line. Brother Thorburn came Sunday morning with Brother and Sister O. C. Spangler, who came from their home some fifty miles southeast. There was large representation at the meetings—Sunday school at 10 a. m., preaching at eleven, picnic dinner at noon, and preaching in the afternoon. The meetings were held in the schoolhouse where the Sunday school regularly convenes except in the coldest weather. The weather at times is very severe, temperature falling to forty and fifty below for weeks, and there being much snow.

Five were baptized just at sundown and were confirmed at the evening meeting, held at the home of Brother Albert Floyd near where the baptisms were performed.

Meetings were continued in the homes during the week, and the next Sunday another all-day service program was had with larger attendance, good interest, and a fine spirit present.

We wish to mention the kindness of Saints and friends. We enjoyed the association and hospitality of several families of members, though some of the families are located many miles apart. Sister Floyd, of Jerusalem, Palestine, is visiting and living with her son and family, and we enjoyed the conversations with her and learning her experiences in the Holy Land and the church work. There were also fine visits with Albert Floyd and family, Walter Vick and family, John Baldry, William McMurdo, Sister White, and their families and others. These homes were characterized by typical western hospitality and the love of the gospel.

Sister Vick is Sunday school superintendent, a faithful, energetic worker, respected by all. The attendance at the Sunday school in some seasons is light on account of severe cold and heavy snowstorms common to Montana winters. Under such conditions long distances to travel make it difficult to attend. But under Sister Vick's guidance the school is enthusiastic and is paying tithing. In observance of the one hundredth birthday of the church a special offering of one dollar a member was taken and sent to the Presiding Bishop, this in spite of the fact that crops were a failure in this region on account of drouth and hailstorms. We think this a wonderful example of sacrifice and devotion.

In November District President Arthur Ritter and the writer made a journey some fifty miles by auto (a new Ford). We stopped overnight some ten miles on the way over with Brother Tonnuean and family. A fine visit was enjoyed, the gospel theme being discussed from many angles.

Several inches of snow fell that night and on our journey next day, the snow being driven by a stiff west wind. To start on a journey of miles in the snow and cold over the bleak prairies at an altitude of about three thousand feet, the roads not the best, was a dubious undertaking. We arrived, however, near noon at Vida, a little town some fifty miles from a railroad.

By inquiring we were directed to the home of Brother and Sister Dick Nefyger and their large family of boys and girls. Another family of Saints lives near, and we visited with them. Cottage preaching services were held evenings during the week, and gospel talks during the day made a full program. On Sunday a special meeting was had. A Sunday school was organized and literature for the school—quarterlies, Zion's Hopes, and Stepping Stones—ordered. Also other church publications were ordered, Heralds, Visions, and Ensigns.

Sunday evening preaching services were held at the schoolhouse nearby, there being large attendance and fine attention. Because a revival service was advertised for the coming week at Vida, our meetings were not continued. While there we had a day or two of twenty or more below zero weather and a blizzard, then a chinook wind from the west. The snow melted, the roads dried and were fine on our trip back to Andes.

At one time there was a branch at Vida and many church activities continued over a term of years. Sister Bertha Constance with her parents lived here, as well as other families.

The writer returned to Andes in time for the community gathering Thanksgiving Day. This is an annual affair. There was a good meeting. After dinner it was suggested that patriotic songs be sung, led by Elder Sam Andes. After thirty minutes of song the writer read the Thanksgiving proclamation of President Hoover and followed with a short talk concerning our country's need to thank God for blessings enjoyed.

Several denominations of religious faith were represented at the dinner, and all seemed happy in the association.

In December Brother Ritter with the writer started in the Ford car to visit Saints south and west of here, traveling some one hundred and fifty miles and back.

The first night we enjoyed the hospitality of Brother and Sister Scott and family, formerly of Nebraska. The next day we visited two married daughters living in Savage, Montana. The second night we stayed with Mr. and Mrs. Brown. These are fine people, and while they do not belong to the church they are friendly to our cause and take the Saints' Herald. A good visit was enjoyed, and the gospel theme was the subject of the conversation until near midnight. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are fine citizens. May the Lord bless these fine, intelligent people with still further light. They made us welcome in every way.

Our journey was again started the first and second day in a snowstorm; then the weather cleared. Going west after leaving Glendive, Montana, we arrived at Miles City and were domiciled at the home of Brother and Sister Frank Ingalls, old-time Saints who have the real spirit and genius of the work at heart. The Lord will surely bless them in the future as he has in the past for their love of the work and effort to impart the knowledge to others. A Sunday school is held at their home. Just a few members live there, but we held meetings on each evening and Sunday. Two were baptized during our stay there, a young man and young woman. These we believe if faithful will be blessed in their work. Others seem interested. We had to cut eighteen inches of ice in Tongue River on two different occasions. The candidates went bravely into the water and came up smiling and happy in obeying the gospel.

The day we started, early in the morning, a hard snowstorm with an east wind made travel hard. But with some shoveling and the use of chains and after getting off the grade once, we arrived safely in Fairview, our starting point. The sturdy little car had plowed through eighteen inches of snow all day. Next morning the temperature had fallen to forty below zero, and for six weeks we had it very cold and more snow. Auto traveling was over for a time. Brother Ritter's Ford is a real gospel car, and its initial trips were made for the gospel cause. We thank him for his help and association. Always he is ready to sacrifice and help in every way in the gospel work.

February 2 a fine program was given, including the play in regard to the birth of Joseph the Seer, as suggested in the Herald. There was special music. Both play and music were given by the young people and were well received.

Elder Ritter read excerpts from church history in harmony with the theme of the program. The writer followed with a lecture on the subject of the program.

Brother T. J. Sheppard will be in the Lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas for a few months and would like information concerning the location of Saints and friends in that region. He wishes to get in touch with members of the faith, that he may visit them. He has found a few in his present location. Please write him, T. J. Sheppard, Care of Specialty Bakery Company, McAllen, Texas.

Springfield, Missouri

February 10.—Members in Springfield are looking forward with great interest to the Centennial Conference. Not many will be left in our city to carry on the branch work during the first dozen days of April. They expect to return with more zeal and will make greater efforts than ever before.

Three family circles have been completed since the last letter to the Herald. Brothers Silas Stark and W. A. West and Sister Maud Huttler have entered the fold. We are hoping Elder Haden, district missionary, will be in Springfield to hold some meetings before the month of April. We feel the need of the spirit Brother Haden brings among us.

The young people of the branch are giving a Valentine party in the church basement. We are planning a good time Friday evening.

The latter part of November Sister Pearl Ogden and Brother Lawrence Hornocker, of Indianapolis, were married. Sister Pearl had served a number of years as branch clerk and recorder. Sister Janet Bootman was elected to succeed Sister Pearl.

Visitors in Springfield are invited to meet with the branch.

Sault Sainte Marie, Ontario

Owen Sound District

A letter from our branch has not appeared for a long time. We wish to assure the members that the small number here love the gospel and are interested in the forward movement of the church.

At present District Missionary H. A. Dayton is here. For the last month he has been holding a series of meetings. The weather has been severe, and that accounts for the many empty seats in the church, but the sermons are inspiring and have caused many nonmembers to commence investigations of our work.

Though the crowd was small, at every meeting the nonmembers outnumbered the Saints. This seems not to speak well for the members, but we have some very faithful Saints here, some who attended every meeting.

This is Elder Dayton's second trip to the Sault Branch, and from the talk of the Saints and friends we can see that he has made a good impression upon many. We feel that there is an awakening among the members. Surely if every one of us give greater support much good will be accomplished.

As a result of the meetings, two more members have been added to our number. Elder Dayton led them into the waters of baptism January 31. The new members are young married women, one the wife of Brother R. Sagle, and the other Mrs. William Routledge, a promising young sister.

February 2 at the morning prayer meeting the confirmation took place, Elders Dayton and G. A. Edwards officiating. We partook of the sacrament together, and all were made to rejoice, for the spirit of love and fellowship was present.

Others seem interested in the work, and we expect to see them come into the fold.

We can not tell just how long Brother Dayton will be with us. Of this we hope to write later; then we will give a full report of the labor of the priesthood and the work of the different departments.

Columbus, Ohio

First Branch, Tompkins and Medary Avenue

The first thing of note to happen in this branch in 1930 was a marriage ceremony at the home of Elder and Sister F. C. Welsh. William Welsh and Miss Eddena Wigton were married by the bridegroom's father before twenty guests. The young people have the best wishes of all.

The next event of 1930 was the midweek prayer meeting in charge of High Priests A. E. Anderton and C. W. Clark. A large number was present and the gifts of the gospel were enjoyed.

The building committee continues its remodeling program. At present activities are centered in the kitchen, enlarging it and installing new equipment. When the next district conference convenes there will be more facilities and better arrangement for caring for the crowd.

Sunday workers held their first sacramental service of the new year, C. H. Foster in charge. This was a spiritual meeting.

The Basketeers opened their season with a victory.

The first Sunday school of the year was a large one. It included visitors from Springfield, Ohio. And the initial sacramental hour of the year was largely attended. Elders Gray, Clark, and Welsh were in charge.

On the evening of January 5 Patriarch F. A. Smith was the speaker, his topic being "The purpose of the church." Two anthems were given by the choir, Nathan Weate conducting. There was also a solo by Sister Mildred Ferguson. The church had a capacity crowd. Elders Clark and Anderton assisted.

January 7 the annual business meeting was held. Branch President C. W. Clark was sustained, and Elder F. C. Welsh was sustained as Sunday school superintendent. He in turn reappointed his assistant, Homer Owens. Mildred Weate Ferguson was sustained secretary; Homer Owens, treasurer. Brother Zieschang was elected president of Recreation and Expression; and Nathan Weate was sustained as chorister.

The Week of Prayer was observed by First Columbus Branch with prayer meetings January 6 and 7, hours allotted us by the general church.

January 12 the Sunday school sustained its secretary, Irvin Smith, and assistant, Ellen Ferguson, also Nathan Weate, chorister, and all sections of the music department of the Sunday school. Our Sunday school orchestra has given good service during the past year, and the appreciation of the school was expressed by the superintendent. The preaching service that morning was by the district president. Elder F. C. Welsh spoke on "the pearl of great price" in the evening.

The following Friday the Basketeers won their first league game of the season. This makes two victories, one exhibition, and one league played and won. Brother W. T. Lewis is again the coach.

Treasurer Homer Owens gave a talk to the Saints and stated that they were responding well to the building fund.

The choir held a social and practice at the home of Sister Carter January 13.

The Gleaners Class held its first monthly meeting of the year at the church. Ervin Smith was elected president; K. Wilson, secretary; C. H. Foster, teacher. Other business was conducted. An active program was outlined for the year.

January 16 C. H. Foster spoke in central Columbus on "Achieving Zion." This was followed by a testimony meeting.

T. S. Williams, coworker of C. H. Foster, is now attending Dayton Branch because of his employment in Dayton. He is missed in the Central Mission and in First Branch.

The basketball boys won their third straight victory 29 to 17 January 17. And the following week the score was 29 to 14 in their favor.

Sunday school assembled January 19, a zero morning, but according to the secretary's report attendance was scarcely affected. "The water of life" was the morning theme of C. H. Foster, and in the evening "The return of authority" was the theme of A. E. Anderton. The anthem by the choir was well given.

Brother and Sister Joseph Weate announce the birth of another son. Sister Minnie Weate is the daughter of Elder James Schofield, of the James Street Church, Manchester, England.

The following Sabbath the Sunday school again flourished, everyone filled with enthusiasm. Brother Ellwood spoke well on "Love and law." In the evening C. W. Clark outlined his program for 1930.

During the zero weather Wednesday evening prayer services were well attended. Various members of the local priesthood have been in charge, and there have been outstanding testimonies. At the last meeting in January the young people were very active.

Elder C. Schafenberg is in a grave condition. He has desired to be taken to his reward. He needs the prayers of the church.

Brother C. H. Foster spoke in central Columbus on "Order of Enoch." F. C. Welsh also has been busy in cottage preaching.

Columbus Saints regretted to learn of the death of the eldest son of Elder A. B. Kirkendall. Brother Kirkendall has a warm place in the hearts of the members here. He was one of the big factors in the establishing of the work in this city. The deepest sympathy of Columbus members goes to the Kirkendall family.

The ball team finished the month without defeat, winning the final game with a score of 37 to 13.

Cheboygan, Michigan

January 27 Elders J. J. Ledsworth and Marshall J. McGuire, missionaries, visited this branch and held a series of meetings, which were well attended. We enjoyed an outpouring of God's Spirit.

Sunday afternoon, February 2, at 2.30 o'clock Elder Ledsworth conducted a meeting for the young people. There was a fine gathering, and nearly everyone pledged himself to file an inventory and pay his tithing.

The visit of the missionaries was greatly appreciated by the Saints. We are encouraged to make a greater effort Zionward in the future.

January 21 Sister Lillian Emerson entertained the Saints at her home with a potluck supper. The event celebrated her birthday. After supper games and music were enjoyed. Sister Emerson received many useful gifts.

The Sam Lalone home is quarantined for smallpox. Their daughter, Dorothy, is very sick with the disease. There is considerable illness among the members here. Sisters Lince and Elizabeth Braham have pleurisy. Brother Elmer Braham is recovering from an attack of sinus trouble.

Sister Hattie Sheffer returned Thursday morning from Ann Arbor with her baby son John, who has been at the hospital under treatment for a deformed foot. John's foot is quite a little better, and we hope for a complete recovery.

Brother Harvey Sheffer returned from Saginaw, where he has been employed for several months for a brief visit with his parents, Elder Irving and Sister Hattie Sheffer.

Attendance is good at Sunday school. Only two pupils were absent last Sunday.

Brother Fairman and daughter Nora, of Onaway, accompanied by Sister Bertha Ledsworth, motored to Cheboygan Thursday.

Tuesday evening, in spite of cold and stormy weather, three cars of Saints, from Afton, motored to Cheboygan and attended the services conducted by Brother Ledsworth.

North Manchester Branch, England

Organized in September of last year, the junior department is in a healthy condition and happy in service.

Saturday, December 14, 1929, the leader, Sister Olive Heywood, invited her juniors to a tea party. The table was packed with goodies that children enjoy, and the center of the table was adorned with a big cake, decorated with icing, sweets, and candles (the same number of candles as juniors). After tea the candles were lit and the other lights put out, and the children were delighted at the pretty sight. After the candles had been allowed to burn for a little while, each junior blew out his own candle. Then games were organized, crackers were pulled, and while the guests were busy lighting sparklers, a visitor was announced, and in walked Father Christmas. Great excitement reigned when each junior received a present.

At 7 o'clock the juniors were made ready for the concert at 7.30, when the senior members had been invited to be present. The first half of the program consisted of songs and recitations, and the concluding item caused much amusement among the audience. It was a song from Jubilate entitled "Tick tock."

For the second half of the program, the lights were dimmed. A little girl with a tinsel star on her head sang, "If I were a beautiful, twinkling star," and the curtains were drawn disclosing the shepherds abiding in the fields. The first verse of the hymn, "Whilst humble shepherds," was sung, and then one of the boys dressed as an angel appeared and delivered his message, and the lights were turned on full at his appearance. The last verse beginning "All glory be to God on high," was sung by little girls dressed as angels grouped behind the first angel. The next scene commenced with one of the boys reading the first ten verses of the third chapter of Matthew, and then the three Wise Men appeared in the desert and sang the carol "We three kings of Orient are." The last scene was of Joseph, Mary, and the Holy Babe in the stable in Bethlehem. As the curtains were drawn, Joseph sang "Once in Royal David's City." The shepherds came in, bowed on one knee to the Babe, and sang "Gentle Jesus." Then the wise men came in one by one, offered their gifts to the Babe, and sang "Away in the manger."

Refreshments were served after the singing of the Doxology. The entertainment then took the form of a social. Father Christmas again appeared and distributed sweets, apples, and oranges to each child and sweets to each adult.

The services on Sunday were largely given by the juniors. The morning service at 10.30 was in charge of the pastor. The little girls were dressed in white frocks and white caps and the little boys in blue suits. They filed into their places at the front of the altar to the tune of "Onward, Christian soldiers." A solo, "Holy Spirit, hear us," was sung by one of the juniors, and four of the tiny boys sang

"Gentle Jesus." The speaker for the morning was Sister Castle, district supervisor of Sunday schools. Her subject was "Prayer and service." Each child can be a missionary if he is so inclined, she affirmed. At each service, two juniors, under the supervision of the deacon, took up the collection while the others sang "Hear the pennies dropping."

The afternoon service at 2.30 was wholly contributed by the juniors. One junior opened the meeting with prayer and another closed with prayer. Four of the juniors in turn spoke on the first four principles of the gospel. "Faith" we were told is belief in God that our prayers will be answered, but not always in the way we want; and when we are ill we have faith that God will make us better. "Repentance." The little speaker cited the instance of the prodigal son, and said repentance was not just being sorry, but making up our minds not to do the same wrong thing again. "Baptism" is for remission of sins. We go down under the water and come up clean. Babies are not baptized, because they do not sin, but are held in the minister's arms and blessed.

"Laying on of hands." We were told of various instances where this was practiced. For confirmation after baptism, to bestow upon the candidate the gift of the Holy Ghost, for ordination, for patriarchal blessing, and for consecration.

The evening service in charge of the pastor was again largely contributed to by the juniors, with solos: "Soldiers of Christ, arise," "Jesus bids us shine," and "God, make my life a little light." The lessons were read by juniors, and the speakers were Sister Doris Gallop, of Warrington, and Priest Harold Barrington, district secretary.

We are eager that the little ones will come to a knowledge of the gospel and grow with its influence. May God help us to care for and nourish these tender plants.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

The branch held its business meeting Saturday evening, February 1. Elder A. E. Anderton, district president and resident of Columbus, Ohio, was in charge. New business included the budget system for raising money for repairing the church and other necessary expenses. Some changes were made in the official corps: Branch president, Walter Culp; secretary, Sister Ora Altman. The branch president was made branch treasurer. At this meeting Brother Anderton was shown that Brother Walter Culp was called to the office of elder. Brother Culp is a priest at present. Brother E. E. Williams, one of the teachers in the branch, was called to the office of priest.

Sunday morning at nine o'clock the members were assembled for Sunday school thirty minutes earlier than usual. Sixty-six were present. At ten o'clock Brother Anderton was at the organ and sang a beautiful hymn. He also preached at this hour. The scripture reading was from Romans 10, and many good thoughts concerning our lives and conduct were brought from Isaiah 53. A goodly number was present to hear this message, many McDermott Saints being present.

Sacramental service opened at eleven o'clock, Brother Anderton in charge assisted by eight other members of the priesthood. The baby daughter of Brother and Sister Donald Bealor was blessed, and Sister Walter Culp was administered to. Following the service Brother Anderton was called two miles away to administer to Sister Zella Bealor. We are thankful to the Father for sending this wonderful servant into this part of his vineyard.

February 9 found a good number at Sunday school and at prayer and praise service. Some have become imbued with new zeal in the gospel work. We pray this year will be marked by local achievement as well as general church advancement.

Akron, Ohio

February 5.—A fine spirit was present at the first sacramental service of the new year with a goodly number of testimonies. Starting Sunday, January 13, and each Sunday following, Akron Branch services have been conducted under the coordination plan. Thus far no one has been heard to say he preferred the old way, as this plan is the acme of order, eliminating the usual confusion between sessions.

Under the management of William Brown and Frank Ebeling, we have a fine basketball team, and to date it has won equally as many games as it has lost. Each game seems to improve the teamwork. There is always an enthusiastic crowd of fans to encourage the boys each time they are scheduled to play. They are entered in the City Church League, sponsored by the various churches and the Y. M. C. A. Each game is played at Central High School gymnasium, and occasionally our boys secure out-of-town engagements.

All departments of the church are active at this time. The Women's Department, headed by Gretchen Knight, has been meeting every two weeks at the home of one of the sisters. This department has not yet held its annual business meeting, but is expecting to do so this week, at which time it will be decided just what particular line of study will occupy the time at future meetings. Each Thursday before sacramental Sunday the ladies meet to make the house of the Lord clean and orderly for this sacred day.

Brother Shook is endeavoring to make this a record year in birth offerings, having had the largest collection yet on record for the past year.

Lou Dildine was elected monitor of Temple Builders at their business meeting and has planned some worth-while activities for the coming year.

A surprise gift party was held January 21 at the home of Mabel Dixon for her sister, Daisy Hartz, who recently was married by Elder J. C. McConaughy to Harold Shaffer. Forty-five were present to wish the pair success and happiness. Some of Frank and Josephine Ebeling's college games composed the evening's entertainment. We were happy to have with us the Kirtland district missionary, Elder James Pycock, who is conducting a series of sermons in Akron and Barberton Branches.

On Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evening, Brother Pycock is in Akron, and Tuesday and Thursday in Barberton, and he has had fine support despite unfavorable weather conditions. He said he was glad Akron Saints were not just fairweather Saints. Local newspapers have been most liberal in their advertising of notices and sermonets by Elder Pycock, and although no immediate results have been registered in the way of baptisms, we know that the word of God will not return unto him void.

Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania

February 11.—Four more have been added to our number by baptism, making seven since the latter part of July. These are fine people and should make real Saints on receiving the testimony of the Spirit which comes through earnest prayer, faith, and living the gospel law. Brother George Robley has been working in Bloomsburg for some time, and all have profited by his excellent sermons and kindly counsel. With his help we have put in a new font, which is a fine improvement and makes the rite of baptism doubly pleasant to perform.

The Sunday school is growing in number and interest, and we are encouraged in our endeavors to advance the kingdom of God on earth. Let us do our best in this year, which closes the first century of church endeavor in latter days.

San Francisco, California

Eighteenth and Danvers Streets

February 11.—The year began very nicely January 5, there being ninety-two at Sunday school, forty-six at the church service and thirty-six at junior church. On this sacramental Sunday the good Spirit was present, and the gifts of the gospel were enjoyed. In the evening Priest H. Hinton was the speaker. A playlet, "Lighting the candles," was given by the Religio.

Large attendance marked the Sunday evening session the following week when a play "The telegraph office" was given. Telegrams from the leading members of the branch were read and proved instructive and amusing. Priest C. Holden was the evening speaker.

Bishop Cecil Hawley was the morning speaker January 19, and Elder George S. Lincoln in the evening.

February arrived and with it another sacramental service. At this time we had present District President G. P. Levitt. He was assisted in the stand by Bishops Edward Ingham and Cecil Hawley and Elders J. A. Saxe and J. Carmichael. The sacrament was served to the members by Priests Steele and Hinton. In the afternoon Elder John W. Rushton addressed the Saints, and in the evening Elder G. P. Levitt was speaker. Brother Levitt preached for us the three following evenings, the sermons being instructive and beneficial to the Saints.

Never was the branch in better spiritual condition than now. We are rejoicing in the latter-day work, and the Father is working with us, confirming the word with signs following the believers.

Topeka, Kansas

621 Jackson Street, Floor 3

February 9.—The theme for the morning sermon January 12 was, "Put first things first," by F. O. Kelley. The scripture reading was Luke 10: 38-42. A special number on the program in the evening at the session of the Recreation and Expression Department was a solo by Sister Tousley, of Kansas City.

January 19 was the occasion for an all-day service with basket dinner at the hall. Apostle E. J. Gleazer and wife, of Independence, Missouri, and District President Dave Little, of Burlingame, Kansas, were present. Brother Little spoke in the morning on the origin of the church and what we must do when we become a member of it. If we expect to go to Zion, he declared, we must get ourselves into a heavenly condition; we must do things on earth as they are done in heaven; we must be builders. Because of road conditions and train service, Brother and Sister Gleazer did not arrive until time for the afternoon service. He delivered a splendid sermon on "Patriotism of God and humanity." Following the sermon some suggestions as to the building program were made, and the call of Brother O. E. Weedmark to the office of priest. Brother Weedmark was ordained under the hands of Brothers Gleazer and Little before the close of the service.

Preceding his sermon in the evening Brother Gleazer gave a short talk to the adult class in Recreation and Expression Department. Topeka Saints enjoyed Sister Gleazer's visit. "The beautiful garden of prayer" was a duet number by Sisters Anna Alfrey and C. J. Sheets in the morning, and a reading was given by Ardis Deller in the evening.

Brother G. G. Phillips delivered his first sermon as pastor of the branch January 26. The success of the church and our contribution as a branch occupied his attention and found scriptural foundation in Joshua 1: 8.

The Women's Department is starting the year with much enthusiasm shown in the weekly study class attendance. A quilt is being made for the Sanitarium. The monthly social hour for January was held at the home of Sister Emma Happe. A chili supper netting thirteen dollars for the building fund was held at the home of Sister Helen Hays January 31.

Sacramental service for February was in charge of Brother O. E. Weedmark. That he was recognized by the heavenly Father in his new line of duty was manifested by the comforting influences of the Holy Spirit enjoyed throughout the service. Brother F. O. Kelley assisted him in the opening remarks by calling attention to the things that are transpiring and shaping themselves for the welfare of the branch and urged us to keep on praying and working, doing our part in order to carry on to success.

Brother Deller, former pastor, and family visited Kansas City February 2. Pastor G. G. Phillips and family visited Second Saint Joseph Branch and returned much enthused and encouraged as a result of the fine meetings there. His morning theme February 9 was "Serving self." No work is truly Christian, said he, unless promoted by the motive to help others. In the evening his subject was "Opportunity."

Cottage prayer meetings, in charge of O. E. Weedmark, are being held this winter. Two meetings already held were good in attendance and interest, one at the home of C. J. Sheets and the other at the home of Sister John E. Killen.

A piano duet by Sister Mildred Goodfellow and Verna Crooker was enjoyed by those in attendance at the Recreation and Expression Department Sunday evening, February 9.

We quote from the Monthly News of the Recreation and Expression Department edited by Sister Fern Weedmark: "We feel that the move from the old building at 1116 Clay Street was one step forward, and better still the razing of the old structure. This will keep us from slipping back that one step, even though we do not know just what our next step will be."

Toronto, Ontario

February 10.—At this the gateway of the centennial year, 1930, we can think of no better time to take a retrospective view of the branch activities and, incidentally, to dream a little for the future. It is indeed gratifying in looking back almost a year to the time when we vacated our Soho Street Church, although we have assembled in crowded halls, in conditions far from conducive to the growth of any organization, to feel that in none of the departments has ground been lost.

Dreaming, as we suggested before, a little, we are inclined to be enthusiastic over the prospects for the future, and hope that we may be pardoned for an honest pride if we say, "Toronto is definitely on the Latter Day Saint map of the world."

With a lot procured and our new church home on paper, each department is vying with the other to make possible the realization of our fondest hope. Which department is leading we could not hazard a guess, but to the Women's Department, which during the past year with an aim of twelve hundred dollars, doubled its objective, we must go for the watchword of the year "All together."

In review, we find the Sunday school, while taking care of the gospel education of both little children and adults, with a surplus in the treasury, which speaks for itself. Within the Sunday school we see the Young Men's Bible Class well organized with competent officers, the nucleus of an organization of which any church could well be proud. Their ideals may be sensed by a glimpse at their crest. At the top are the letters Y. K. U. (You'll Know Us), thinking back, of course, to the quotation, "By their works ye shall know them." Below these letters on a banner are the words "Semper fideles," always faithful.

The usual good work is being done by Brother Frank Clifton in the Friday evening meeting of the Department of Recreation and Expression, with classes for all and after the study hour always a program of excellent entertainment.

The young women's class orchestra is turning surplus energy into dollars for the new church pipe organ, by playing at different concerts throughout the city. They also make an occasional visit to the Christie Street Disabled Soldiers' Hospital. This does not net them money, but we can guarantee it brings them joy not to be estimated in dollars and cents.

The Toronto Branch of the future, our young men under eighteen years old, on Friday evening last, gave an account of their talents in no uncertain manner, and their brothers and sisters and guests enjoyed a two and one half hour program of unexcelled entertainment, the proceeds again swelling the pipe organ fund.

Then, too, we have joys of a different nature. Our district president, Brother James Wilson, who has been very ill for several months, is much improved. The little daughter of Brother and Sister Oswald Moore, who lay at death's door, since the prayers of the Saints at three o'clock Sunday, January 26, has made a remarkable recovery, and none of the after effects of the dreaded disease have appeared.

Cash, Michigan

February 10.—The month of January will long be remembered in this branch. A pleasant experience was ours when early in the year Elder C. Harpe came here to help the members over rough places in life. He has been holding meetings here for four weeks. For the last two weeks the little church has been filled every night in spite of snow and bad roads. Those who come drive through fields in their cars, any way to meet with the Saints. The heavenly Father has indeed blessed our brother, and the good work is coming up to a higher plane. Some fine music has been heard during the meetings.

Three souls have been added to the fold by baptism, and many others are investigating the truths expounded by Brother Harpe. All have been encouraged.

The Women's Department has met twice. Both times Brother Harpe made fine talks, and the women were glad to have his help. His admonitions will help all to become better workers for the cause of Christ.

Dinuba, California

The Saints of Dinuba are greatly encouraged. We are organized into a mission under Fresno Branch. The officers for the year are: Pastor, J. F. Wiles; counselor, R. W. Hurley; secretary and publicity agent, Sister R. W. Hurley; treasurer, R. L. Andrews; Sunday school superintendent, R. W. Hurley; assistant superintendent, A. B. Heinrichs; secretary, Sister A. B. Heinrichs; organist, Sister Hazel Gentry; chorister, A. B. Heinrichs; superintendent of Recreation and Expression, R. L. Andrews; assistant superintendent, A. B. Heinrichs; secretary and organist, Sister Hazel Gentry; program committee, A. B. Heinrichs, Hazel Gentry, and Sister R. W. Hurley; in charge of Women's Department, Sister R. W. Hurley.

The first Sunday of the New Year two young brothers, A. B. Heinrichs and R. L. Andrews, were ordained to the office of Aaronic priest.

Dinuba Saints were made happy when eleven were baptized into the fold during last year.

Brother G. P. Levitt delivered a spiritual message the evening of January 24. We do not often have the opportunity of listening to members of the traveling ministry.

Saturday evening, February 8, a pie social was held at the home of Sister Ed. Cook, where a happy time was enjoyed and received good response.

A fine program and Christmas tree were had and treats for all. We are looking forward to a prosperous year. Our desire is to press onward until we reach the goal—Zion redeemed.

Battle Creek, Michigan

Elder O. J. Hawn was here in the fall and held a series of services, resulting in twenty baptisms. After the services were over, the branch held a reception for the new members and for Elder Hawn. This occurred in the G. A. R. Hall, and dinner was served to about two hundred.

New Year's Eve the Saints met at the home of Brother and Sister Rizor for an oyster supper. Everyone reported a good time, and as the hour drew near midnight a hymn was sung and Brother Davis offered prayer.

Patriarch James Davis and Sister Davis are spending the winter in Battle Creek.

The Women's Department, under the welfare leader, Mrs. Ella Ribble, has done about seven hundred dollars worth of charity work since the first of last March. This has consisted in giving of clothing to those in need, food and shelter to worthy individuals out of work and those just out of the hospital. Thirty-five hats were donated by one of the millinery stores. Other articles were given by members of the church and their friends. A sewing machine was given to one family where there are five children to sew for. Sister Ribble took in some work in her own home and paid for the machine.

Church attendance has been very good this winter in spite of cold and deep snow. At times the roads and even some of the streets were almost impassable.

A number are looking forward to attending General Conference in April.

Bradner, Ohio

February 12.—At Christmas the Sunday school closed its Hustlers and Boosters contest with a banquet. The Saints were pleasantly surprised to have as guests Brother and Sister O. J. Hawn. It happened to be their wedding anniversary, and Brother Ulrich, superintendent and toastmaster, was prepared with a toast in their behalf. He also commended the officers and teachers of the Sunday school for their fine work of the year. A large Christmas tree and gifts for everyone composed a part of the evening's program.

Brother Hawn's son William is residing at Bradner and is taking active part as leader of the Department of Recreation and Expression. This department is planning a Valentine party for next Friday night.

The Women's Department meets regularly under the leadership of Sister Oria Smith.

The Sunday school orchestra is rehearsing each week under the direction of Brother Church, whom we are glad to have among us.

The first sacramental service of the year is indicative of what will be our lot this year. It was a season of peace and spiritual growth.

New officers are seeking to carry on the program outlined by the church.

The Week of Prayer was observed by us.

Because of the lack of work many among us are needy and some have been sick, but whenever the bell in the tower rings for church, the faithful few meet, no matter what the weather.

February 9 District President William Grice paid us a short visit. This brother is faithfully and cheerfully sowing the seed of truth, sometimes under trying circumstances. He has been holding meetings at Toledo, where some have given their names for baptism. Many Saints there are also sick. He is now holding services in Sylvania.

A departmental convention will be held in Toledo the first and second of March, and we have just received word that the district Sunday school convention will convene May 31 and June 1.

Reaching Forth

It was Saint Paul who advised the Saints desirous of attaining perfection in the gospel to forget those (unpleasant) things which are behind; and reach forth unto those things which are before, pressing towards the mark for the prize. (Philippians 3: 13, 14.) Excellent apostolic counsel.

There is an old familiar saying that "many covetous men place pennies so close to their eyes that their vision of dollars in the road to wealth is obscured." The same principle of self-imposed interrupted vision will apply in religious life. The Savior said (Matthew 7: 13, 14): "Straight is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, . . . and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction." Now it is evident in numerous instances people hear the message of life and salvation directing them in the narrow way, preached by missionaries of the Reorganized Church, but oftentimes a misstep or faulty speech by a member is harbored so closely to their hearts and eyes that their former beautiful clear sight of the church militant, fellowship with the Saints, and in time, association with the church triumphant is lost sight of, and they are now a weary traveler on the broad way. My friendly reader, are you one that has brought the faults of Latter Day Saints so close to your own life that you are traveling a road outside of the narrow way, the Christ way, where the prize, eternal life, is sure?

Observation also assures us that several church workers and members during the past few years who had traveled long distances in "the narrow way" turned from their divinely appointed road, accepting closed visions and untried passports from agents in "the broad way," thus checking themselves out of the Lord's authorized church and gospel covenant. Saint Paul was right in advising to constantly reach forth unto those things that are before us, not turning aside because of a real or supposed mistake of a member. Saints, we should be sturdy oaks, not sensitive plants.

"But This Is That"—the Restoration

All New Testament readers know that the first and second chapters of the Acts of the apostles are inspirational and strong in faith of Christ the Lord. In these chapters the Apostle Peter was the chief spokesman to the assembled multitude on that memorable Pentecost day, and he inspired confidence in his hearers by showing familiarity with Old Testament prophecies. He pointed to several with strong assurance, and in verse sixteen of the second chapter of Acts he used four words, "But this is that," to show and emphasize the position and faith of the church of his choice, established by Christ and his apostles.

Now let us be assured that during the past century of the Latter Day Saints Church, the Restoration of the gospel, thousands of our ministers have faithfully followed the example of Saint Peter by fearlessly pointing to many Bible prophecies that have been and are being fulfilled in the rise and progress of our own blessed church. We thank the Lord that we can name many specific prophecies fulfilled in and for this latter-day "stone kingdom," and with gospel pride name "the sealed book" of Isaiah chapter twenty-nine, and all the church offices, organization, doctrine, and gifts, blessings, etc., and say in the words of the inspired apostles, but this is that. This "marvelous work and a wonder," the message of divine truth, has inspired many talented men to willingly devote their lives in active service in home and foreign fields, that this glorious light and truth might find fruition in the lives of peace-loving, devoted men and women.

Ceasing to Grow—Cold Storage

You surely have observed that when members cease to study the three standard books of this church; that when they are not readers of the Saints' Herald and other church periodicals; that when they with unreasonable excuses absent themselves from church services; and when they fail to show a deep interest by faith and works in paying tithes and offerings, then in one or all the above cases, those Saints are not "growing in grace and the knowledge of God" as they should. Such members are unconsciously "cold storing" themselves, experiencing a cold, faultfinding, darkened mental and unhappy life; while the church is prospering spiritually, financially, and numerically as never before for many years. Dear Saint, are you a probable prospect for a refrigerator life imprisonment? If you are determined to go into cold storage of faultfinding, etc., do not take your children and friends with you.

Paragraphs of Interest

Unofficial estimates from Washington state that about one hundred and fifty million dollars worth of liquor was smuggled into the United States last year.

The late William R. Nelson, founder of The Kansas City Star, said, "As I go on in years I have seen man after man of unusual ability destroyed by whisky. I never have known it to do anybody any compensating good."

Henry Ford wrote, "Some of the best men I have known have lost all their personal liberty through alcohol."

The late William J. Bryan paid a tribute to water. He said, "Water—the daily need of every living thing. It ascends from the earth, obedient to the summons of the sun, and descends in showers of blessing. It gives of its sparkling beauty to the fragrant flowers; it is the alchemy that transmutes base clay into golden grain; it is the canvas on which the finger of the Infinite traces the radiant bow of promise. It is the drink that cheers and adds no sorrow with it. Jehovah looked upon it at creation's dawn and said 'It is good.'"

There were 37,430 million cigarets manufactured in the United States in 1920. The annual increase has been so large, it is estimated that the production for 1929 was one hundred and twenty billion. The tremendous increase in the use of cigarets is probably due to the war and to women smokers. Eight hundred girl smokers attending the University of Iowa are reported as using 40,000 cigarets a week, buying them openly over the counter. The male students at the same university smoke more cigarets than the girls.

Reverend J. L. Fenderich, jr., wrote, "A girl plus a cigaret equals loss of self-respect. A girl plus drink equals danger. A girl plus danger might equal anything." Will Mr. Fenderich's analogy apply to boys?

"English women are earning the reputation of smoking more than the women of any other nation.

"They are estimated to spend fifty million dollars on cigarets every year."

The French Government has announced that since 1914 the consumption of cigarets has risen from two hundred per capita to more than eight hundred a year. The increase is estimated to be directly due to women smokers.

"According to the figures, approximately four thousand women disappear from Paris every year. Fifty per cent of these are tracked down within a few weeks after, but the other two thousand are never heard from again."

A magazine writer said, "There will be more than 200,000 divorces granted in the United States and Canada during 1929, and at least 700,000 lives will be affected, as more than 300,000 children are dependent upon the divorced couples."

Figures just made public by the Federal Department of Commerce are to the effect that Americans spent about $237,000,000 while touring Canada in 1928. During that same year Canadian tourists spent approximately $86,000,000 in this country.

Graceland Chats

The Grades Are Out

Last week the grades of the first semester were given out. The mid-year examinations were completed January 25. Two weeks were occupied with recording grades and figuring accounts. The grade cards are distributed from the office of the treasurer, being receivable after all accounts are paid or arranged for.

There is always an air of anxiety in the halls as students eagerly scan their reports and compare with classmates. This year the casualty list was remarkably low.

Students Worship in a Reflective Prayer Service

Last Wednesday evening brought a banner attendance at the midweek prayer service. At 7.30 Verna Schaar played a quiet meditation on a piano at the rear of the room. Miss Charlotte Condit, of the English Department, read some selected stanzas from Whittier's "Eternal goodness," the simple trust of the Quaker poet being enhanced by the frank faith of the reader. In accordance with the custom, the students knelt while Noble Kelley offered the evening prayer. "Sweet hour of prayer" brought a splendid participation.

Roy A. Cheville gave one of his informal talks in presenting the theme of the service, "Our inner thoughts." In the inner sanctuary of our lives are thoughts into whose presence we do not admit everybody. They are the things that are most distinctive about us. We do not tell them, because they are sacred. We can not tell them because our experiences and dreams are beyond our means of expression. These are the things of which we think in our inner thoughts—whom we aspire to be; whom we would love; and whom we would worship. In closing he asked three questions: About what do you think when alone? Do these thoughts have a refining influence? Do they expand your spirit?

Two Gracelanders Ordained

At the Lamoni stake conference held at the brick church February 1 and 2, two young men from Graceland were ordained priests. They are Richard Anderson and Addison Brown, both sophomores at Graceland and members of Lamoni Branch. The ordination of these two young men increases the already large number of students who are members of the ministry.

The Week Breaks Even in Basket Ball

Tuesday of last week the Graceland team journeyed to Creston to meet the junior college of that city. The boys returned with a favorable score of 32-25. On Thursday they matched Penn College at Oskaloosa. After a hard tussle that held the score in Graceland's favor until the last five minutes, the game closed 30 to 25 in Penn's favor. On the list of players were "Sprat" Turner, Woodward, Iowa; "Dick" Anderson, Lamoni; Leroy Dick, Traverse City, Michigan; "Dick" Wildermuth, Plano, Illinois; "Art" Martin, Saint Charles, Missouri; "Wendy" Gillen and "Bud" Parker, Independence, Missouri.

Lambda Delta Sigmas Hear Proposed Plan of Religious Education

The Lambda Delta Sigma Society meets on the first Thursday of every month. At each meeting there is given the report of some investigation conducted by committees of the members. These problems of research are selected for their worth to the church and college.

At the February meeting was presented the system of organizing programs of religious education as outlined in the Departments' Journal. The general nature and purpose of religious education were presented and the relation of all this to the method of administration. Several students interested in the proposed scheme were invited to attend. Good interest was evidenced. The interpretation was presented by the instructor in the Department of Religion at Graceland.

Anniversary of the League of Nations Observed

A truly cosmopolitan air characterized the chapel program February 7. Phrases of a Russian hymn supplied a piano prelude; Fred Davies, of England, read some of the choice themes of peace from Isaiah; and Edward Larsen, of Denmark, offered an invocation for understanding, cooperation, and good will. From the balcony a quartet sang a hymn of peace.

A concise talk on the ten years of the League of Nations was presented by Roy Cheville of the History Department. Tribute was paid to Woodrow Wilson, honored as the founder of the League. At the close of the discourse, the student body sang two verses of "America."

Music Students in Recital

The third of a series of joint recitals was held Tuesday night in the college chapel. Students in voice were presented by Mrs. Marcella Clark and by Miss Rae Lysinger on piano. These early evening recitals are open to the public. At the last recital the Voice Department was represented by Robert Crawford, Independence; Irene Johnson, Plano, Illinois; and Verba Parker, Des Moines. From the Piano Department were Anne Morgan, Seymour, Iowa; Virginia Frances Jeffries, and Erma Ballantyne, Lamoni; Beatrice Gates, Philadelphia; Dorothy Gunsolley, Lamoni; Thelma Ingram, Berwyn, Illinois; Florence McNeil, Cleveland, Ohio; Eva Cook, Des Moines; and Arthur Oakman, London, England.

Lamoni Stake Conference

The annual conference of Lamoni Stake was held at the Brick Church in Lamoni, January 31 to February 2, inclusive. Attendance was the best for many years; in fact, all but four branches of the stake were represented. Some of the branches, such as Andover, Bloomington, Davis City, Evergreen, and Oland, had nearly a full attendance of their members.

The first session of the conference was the annual business session, which was held on Friday evening. The stake presidency, Wilber Prall and Roy Cheville, were in charge.

There were a number of things in the report of the presidency of importance and of special interest to the conference. Speaking of conditions in the stake, the presidency reported the membership as a whole in a better spiritual condition than at any time during their administration, which has extended over a period of nearly five years. Tithes and offerings showed a substantial increase over last year's, and last year's report showed an increase of more than four thousand over the previous years. A number of recommendations were made, one of which was as follows:

"In our judgment the time has come in the experience of the stake when action should be taken to merge the stake departments concerned principally with religious education, that is, the Sunday school, the Department of Women, and the Department of Recreation and Expression, into one department known as the Department of Religious Education. For the present we recommend that this work be left under the supervision of the stake presidency and that they be given the authority to choose assistants as they may decide necessary."

The above recommendation was carried by a unanimous vote.

In harmony with a recommendation made by the presidency at a previous conference the method of nominating delegates to represent the stake at the next General Conference was changed. Nominations were made by acclamation, each member of the stake present having the right to nominate one or more delegates. This resulted in thirty-eight being nominated. Following the nominations, ballots were prepared by use of a mimeograph machine, and distributed to all members present, and each indicated his choice of delegates to represent the stake at the Centennial Conference by placing a cross before the names of the candidates on the ballot. The stake has a membership of 2,116 which entitled us to twenty-one delegates. The following individuals received the highest number of votes and were declared delegates by the committee: Oscar Anderson, Sister Oscar Anderson, Russell Archibald, Parley Batten, G. N. Briggs, G. W. Blair, C. F. Church, G. L. DeLapp, Sister G. L. DeLapp, H. H. Gold, Sister J. F. Garver, Elsie Hammer, L. G. Kelley, Sister J. M. Lysinger, W. E. Prall, Sister W. E. Prall, W. T. Shakespeare, David Taylor, James Talbot, James A. Thomas, and A. J. Yarrington.

In harmony with spiritual direction and with the concurrence of the Lamoni Stake High Council and the branches concerned, Richard C. Anderson and Addison W. Brown, Lamoni Branch, and Fred N. Ballantyne, of Bloomington Branch, were recommended by the presidency for ordination to the office of priest. This recommendation passed by a unanimous vote.

The conference also approved the action of the teachers' quorum with reference to its reorganization with Robert Campbell as president and Jacob Cole counselor.

Reports of Stake Bishop G. L. DeLapp, such as the Bishopric's report proper and his report as treasurer of the reunion committee and treasurer of relief committee, were read and approved. Reports from Elder James A. Thomas, stake missionary, and from Sister Esther France, treasurer of the Women's Guild, were read and approved. Brother A. J. Yarrington's report as secretary of the budget committee was also read and approved.

The stake presidency (Wilber Prall and Roy Cheville); the stake bishopric (G. L. DeLapp and A. J. Yarrington); the stake high council (Oscar Anderson, R. A. Ballantyne, G. W. Blair; G. N. Briggs, N. Ray Carmichael, H. H. Gold, J. A. Lane, John Midgorden, and A. J. Yarrington) were sustained by a unanimous vote. The following officers were then elected: Secretary and recorder, Sister E. L. Bedwell; stake chorister, Sister W. H. Blair; and stake auditor, Brother Martin Hynden.

Saturday

Saturday was a very busy and profitable day. The institute sessions conducted by the stake officers were preceded by a thirty-minute devotional program conducted by Stake President Wilber Prall. The service opened with the congregation singing two hymns, "Let us go to the house of the Lord" and "You may sing of the beauty of mountain and dale." Sister Verna Schaar played a medley of hymns, and Brother Arthur Oakman sang "Come, Sweet Comforter," written by President F. M. Smith. Bishop G. L. DeLapp offered the invocation, and a prayer response was sung by a quartet. Sister Verlyn Stevenson then read the poem, "Come up higher," written by Brother Elbert A. Smith, which was followed by another quartet number, and the service was closed with the singing of "O reapers of life's harvest" by the congregation.

The morning institute session was devoted to an address by Brother Roy Cheville of the stake presidency on the subject, "The function of the church school." Following his address Brother Cheville gave opportunity for questions and discussions.

At noon a cooperative dinner was served by a committee consisting of Sisters J. H. Anthony, J. F. Garver, and Ralph Wicker, together with other helpers. The dinner was well attended, well supervised, and a splendid menu was served. A good time was had by members from all branches in attendance.

The afternoon was devoted to a program of talks and round table discussions, all of which were well prepared and the discussions heartily entered into by those present. The speakers and subjects were as follows: "Stewardships and church finance," Bishop G. L. DeLapp; "The missionary task of the branch," Apostle D. T. Williams; and "Organizing the branch for missionary services," Elder James A. Thomas.

Sunday

The regular church school session at 9.30 a. m. was followed by a communion service at 10.45 and the primary church service. President F. M. McDowell and Apostles J. F. Garver and D. T. Williams attended the Sunday's meetings and officiated at the communion service. A large attendance and a deep spirit of consecration were manifest at this time. At 2.30 an ordination service was held, with Wilber Prall, stake president, in charge. The service was opened with a medley of hymns played on the piano by Sister Verna Schaar. Hymns of a suitable nature were sung by the congregation, and there was a number by a male quartet. Apostle J. F. Garver delivered an excellent charge to the men to be ordained; and Roy Cheville, of the Presidency, offered the dedicatory prayer. Brother Arthur Oakman sang a solo. Brothers F. M. McDowell, J. F. Garver, D. T. Williams, G. L. DeLapp, and James A. Thomas officiated in the ordinations. A wonderful spirit accompanied the ordinations and the entire service. At 7.45 the Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society gave a thirty-minute concert, during which time they sang two anthems from the Oratorio The Course of Time, by J. T. Gresty. At 8.15 Apostle J. F. Garver was introduced and preached an interesting sermon. Brother Garver made some comparisons showing the numerical and financial strength of the church when he was baptized thirty-two years ago compared with its numerical and financial strength today. He also discussed the work of the church in the next century compared with its accomplishments during the first century of its experience.

Many, if not all who attended the conference, went away feeling it was the best one held in Lamoni Stake during late years.

Nebraska City, Nebraska

February 13.—The experiences of the year have been many to gladden the hearts of the Saints, and all feel like doing more for the work during this centennial year than ever before. We feel the church can count on Nebraska City Saints to do their part in the program the church adopts in the opening year of a new century.

Missionary O. L. D'Arcy has been making his home here since the first of November, occupying a three-room apartment at 1320 Central Avenue. He has continued here except on two occasions when he was called out in the district, one to preach the funeral sermon of one of Clay Center's prominent citizens, Mr. Edward Orr, who has been a business man of that city for thirty-five years. Mr. Orr, at the time of his death, was not a member of the church, but had become much interested in the work and planned to be baptized at a later date.

The Women's Department, under the supervision of Sister Parr, held its annual bazaar Saturday, December 14, at the office of the Central Power Company and raised approximately one hundred and twenty-five dollars towards branch expenses.

The Sunday school held its Christmas program the evening of December 23. A short pageant of the birth of Christ, dialogs, and songs constituted the program. At the close of the evening Santa Claus distributed gifts from the tree to the children.

On New Year's Eve a watch party was held in the basement of the church. The time was spent in games and songs, and a short devotional service was held at the close.

The branch business meeting was held December 7 for the election of officers for the new year. Missionary O. L. D'Arcy was elected pastor, Elders Frank Higgins and Peter Rasmussen, assistants; branch recorder, Sister Hazel Goff. Elder Frank Higgins was sustained as musical director. publicity agent, Sister Violet Goff; Sunday school superintendent, Elder Peter Rasmussen; leader of Women's Department, Sister O. L. D'Arcy; leader of Temple Builders, Sister James Bush; branch treasurer, Brother Byergo.

The Women's Department met the first of the year at the home of Sister Bush as a surprise on Sister Parr, who was leaving to spend the winter in Kansas City, and presented her with a bathrobe as a token of love and appreciation for her services over the many years. Thirty-three guests were present. A short business session was held, and the afternoon was spent in a social time and exchange of gifts. A delicious lunch was served by Sister Bush. The department is busily engaged at the present time making three sets of linen for the Sanitarium. All sets are being hand embroidered.

Prayer week was held at the church, and a good spirit was present at each session.

We are called to note that life does not run smoothly at all times. In the midst of life we are sometimes in death. In the gay, playful days of childhood our little friend and Sunday school scholar, Marietta Pope, while coasting down hill, was hit by an auto which crushed her lungs and took her life. She was taken immediately to Saint Mary's Hospital, but nothing could be done to save her. She never regained consciousness. The spirit of one of our beautiful children passed on as we believe to the paradise of God. May God bless the father and mother in a special manner in the hour of their great loss is the prayer of the Saints.

Dunlap, Iowa

We are a mission of Woodbine Branch in charge of Elder Elvin Baughman. Some years ago a half dozen sisters of Dunlap united their efforts and prayers in behalf of the work in this portion of the Lord's vineyard. They took up the study of the Sunday school quarterlies and held midweek prayer meetings. It is interesting to hear them tell how fervently they prayed that a member of the priesthood would come to assist and direct the work. It is evident that their efforts were recognized and their prayers answered by the Divine One. Now there are two elders here and a Sunday school of about thirty-five. A Recreation and Expression organization has been effected, and the work of the women continues.

The first Sunday in each month at eleven o'clock is sacramental service; the second Sunday is junior church. At the same hour the older people, feeling the need of a better understanding of the law which comes directly to us as a church, have taken up the study of Doctrine and Covenants. Other Sundays at the morning service, preaching is had.

We feel somewhat handicapped in reaching nonmembers, for all the services are held in private homes. But we hope if this is a fruitful field for the Master's work we may soon have a church building.

We very much miss one faithful and devoted Saint, Sister Irene Baughman, who was called to her eternal home December 22, 1929. Surely when the Sower went out to sow, some of the seed fell on good ground and brought forth an abundant fruitage in her life.

May every member strive to follow with full purpose of heart the meek and lowly Jesus, that his example may be of such a nature as to reflect the gospel in all its beauty to a benighted world.

Mrs. C. V. Bryans, 219 Spring Street, Chevy Chase, Maryland, would like the Saints in Washington, District of Columbia, to call on her and let her know where they hold services. She wants to attend church and get acquainted with the members.

Independence

Stone Church

Zion must be builded of regenerate materials, asserted Patriarch J. H. N. Jones Sunday morning to the Stone Church congregation, and the means of regeneration will be the spiritual life. The spiritual life of the builders is the foundation of Zion. We must grow spiritually, rising above the peoples of the world, becoming in ideals and practices the children of God, and endeavoring to establish his kingdom on earth. If we press forward, our hearts filled with love, striving to keep all his commandments, Zion will be builded.

Music for the hour was furnished by the choir, which sang the anthem, "O gladsome light," Paul N. Craig directing, George Miller at the piano. A soprano solo "Repent ye," by Scott, was sung by Sister Marcella Clark, of Graceland College, accompanied by Jeanette Craig. Elder W. Wallace Smith was assisted by Elder John Blackmore in the stand.

The young people of the intermediate department in their service in the lower auditorium enjoyed an illustrated lecture on "The coming forth of the Book of Mormon." This being Book of Mormon Sunday for the department, the young congregation was privileged to see pictures of many outstanding South American ruins. Evangelist U. W. Greene was the speaker, selecting his material from his lecture "A marvelous work and a wonder." A pleasing trio number was sung by Irene, Evelyn, and Mildred Shupe.

"Apostasy and Restoration" was the theme of Elder S. A. Burgess in the evening, and the speaker took occasion to give his hearers many scriptural citations of prophecies foretelling the apostasy of the early Christian church from Christ's teachings, the gropings of mankind for light and truth, and finally the restoration of the gospel, the authority, and the priesthood.

Soloists assisting in the service were Sister Nina Grenawalt Smith and LeRoy Smith. Organ music was by Eva Voelpel Brocaw, accompaniments were played on the piano by Paul N. Craig, and congregational singing was led by John F. Sheehy, who was in charge of the service.

Among the Saints in Zion

Every Thursday during the winter season a group of women of the Stone Church congregation meets in the Y. K. T. room and spends the day quilting. During the summer the group assembles in the dining hall. There were fifteen members in the Stone Church Aid Society last year, with an average attendance of nine. Some of the sisters are quite elderly, two of the most faithful being eighty-one years of age, Sister Ella Whitehead and Sister Deborah Chapman. They have regularly attended during the year except when kept at home by illness or when out of town. The society paid one hundred dollars to the Auditorium fund, fifty dollars to Stone Church expenses, and fifteen dollars tithing of its earnings for 1929. The group is eager to enroll more good quilters, because receipts could have been doubled had the membership been larger. At the January business meeting Sister Lanham was chosen president; Sister Craig, assistant; Sister Savage, secretary; Sister Brown, assistant; and Sister Weston, treasurer.

The general church office force at the Auditorium began last Saturday's work in mourning. At eight o'clock while on his way to his desk in the office of the Presiding Bishopric, Brother Frank W. Chappelow, bookkeeper for many years, passed into the beyond. Brother Chappelow was fifty-eight years of age, and his sudden death is attributed to apoplexy. As he was walking up one of the ramps in the building to the office on the fifth floor at the southwest corner of the Auditorium, he expired. He had lived in Independence ten years. Surviving are his wife, Sister Martha Chappelow, of the home; three daughters: Alice Chappelow, a student in Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa; Mrs. Helen Hall, Independence; and Florence Chappelow, Chicago, Illinois; two sons, Robert, of the home, and Francis, Harrison, Ohio; three sisters: Mrs. Florence Rudicil, Middletown, Ohio; Mrs. Minnie Werner, and Mrs. Effie Cox, Independence; two brothers: Walter Chappelow, Independence, and Edwin Chappelow, Buckner, Missouri. The funeral was held at the Second Church Tuesday afternoon, February 18, Patriarch F. A. Smith preaching the funeral sermon. The deceased was baptized a member of the church August 11, 1888, at New Trenton, Indiana.

Liberty Street

The dream of added classroom for the junior department is about to be realized. To those who first conceived the idea of enlarging the church basement for this purpose go our thanks as we view the almost completed unit. A breadth of vision was required to induce men to forego the pleasure and relaxation of summer holidays to dig in this basement while the project was yet young. Some of the most valuable work done recently has been donated labor, and for this Liberty Street Saints are appreciative and thankful to those who have given assistance. The personal pledge project introduced by Harry Blake, church school superintendent, four weeks ago has proved quite successful. The response from the children has indicated that they are eager to help in any way they can.

Competent teams of young people have been organized and are working in their assigned groups on the Auditorium basement drive. The reaction on the part of the members has been good considering the other requests that have recently been made for financial aid. The leaders of the teams are: Stella Whitehead, George Fender, and Raymond Wrigley. By consistently working together and untiringly keeping at the task, they have made Liberty Street show up as well as it could.

Communion service February 2 was a joint meeting for the adult and junior people. The necessity of the children worshipping with their parents is quite obvious, so these meetings are planned to be as attractive as possible to the children.

Since the advent of Fred Friend in this local, a remarkable change can be seen in the music of the church. The choir has been revived, and now rehearses faithfully each week. Its contribution at the eleven o'clock service is inestimable.

Recent evening speakers, preaching on the assigned missionary subjects, were E. A. Thomas, Earl F. Hoisington, W. J. Sherman, and D. A. Whiting. These men have given much to Liberty Street, and we hope the influence of their sermons may bear fruit in completing some of our family circles.

A Valentine party for the junior department was held at the church February 14, at which about fifty children enjoyed themselves. The same night the young people's class celebrated the day at the home of Stella Whitehead, their president. Two young men playing and singing Hawaiian music gave novelty to the entertainment.

Enoch Hill

An excellent sermonet, "What lack I yet?" by Brother C. E. Beal, formed the climax of the church school session last Sunday morning. Music was supplied by a quartet of our choir singers and by the congregation. The scriptures read were John 9: 4, 1 Corinthians 3: 9, and Doctrine and Covenants 76: 2. Opening remarks centered about Abraham Lincoln as a boy, then as the man, and finally the President, and there was mention of the energy and work of Theodore Roosevelt, another of February's great men.

Sunday afternoon the teachers and officers of the church school assembled in monthly meeting at the church under Superintendent Charles Warren. These meetings are proving helpful in the administration of the religious education on Enoch Hill.

The evening speaker was Brother Frank McDonald, and his theme was "Apostasy and Restoration."

A group of fourteen workers of this district motored out to assist the Saints at Blue Springs, Missouri. A playlet was presented, there was music, and a talk was given by Brother Charles Warren. Enoch Hill members were glad to find an alert and progressive group in Blue Springs. Elder Harold Hattey, of our district, is pastor there.

Last Wednesday evening, under the leadership of Brothers C. E. Beal, E. H. McKean, and Sister Nellie Kramer, the young people to the number of thirty met at the church and organized themselves to carry on the social and recreational work of the church school. Officers were elected and two standing committees appointed, one to care for the social phase of the undertaking, the other the recreation. Through this organization the younger members of the congregation hope to give the church school generous support.

A Valentine party for the boys and girls of the intermediate department February 14 at the church concluded a contest of several weeks' duration in the church school. The six classes of the departments, the girls against the boys, have carefully checked themselves in regard to lesson preparation, class attendance, and deportment, and the boys won. The party was the girls' treat, and much fun was had by the thirty-five children directed by five of their teachers. Wafers, punch, and candy composed the refreshments.

Englewood

The first Sunday in February established a new attendance record for Englewood church school. One hundred and eighty-two were present. Sacramental service also had the largest attendance numbered since this local was organized. The Spirit of the Master was there to bless.

The Wednesday evening prayer meetings are better attended and very helpful to all who avail themselves of the opportunity to worship with the members.

February 16 was another big Sunday for the branch. There were no special features to attract the attendance, and the response to the regular services was encouraging to all who are interested in the advancement of the cause of Christ.

We are fortunate in securing Brother Arthur H. Mills as musical director to fill the place of our faithful Sister Alma Hougas who is unable to longer continue that work, and we are also happy to have the help of Brother Fred Mollison, who has offered his services as orchestra leader and teacher. With the material in hand and Brother Mollison's help, Englewood hopes soon to have a fine orchestra.

Friday night of each week the junior and intermediate girls have an interesting art class. Sister Willis is the teacher, and all seem eager to follow her instructions. The class is growing.

From the recent speakers, W. B. Paul, H. P. Andersen, Earl F. Hoisington, W. I. Fligg, and J. M. Terry, have come wonderful words of life, giving us encouragement and joy. We feel sure the work is moving forward everywhere.

Spring Branch

Two special numbers were given in the Sunday school hour, a solo by Donald Mabbott and a reading by Bernard Davis.

At the eleven o'clock hour the program was given in honor of the Boy Scouts. A reading "An hour on the beach" was given by Brother Hall, from Bennington Heights. A short talk was given by our Boy Scout leader, Mr. Farmer, and a talk by Mr. Farmer's son, who is assistant Boy Scout leader. The troop then gave the scout oath, and Elder George Gould talked. "America" and the scout benediction closed the service.

A Valentine party was given Friday evening at the church by the young people's class of the Sunday school. This was followed by a birthday surprise on Pastor Cleveland. The evening was greatly enjoyed by everyone.

Brother and Sister George Bilquist, who live on Dickinson Road, are the proud parents of a baby girl. Also Brother and Sister Leonard Curtis are happy over a baby girl born last week.

Louise Hopper, who had her tonsils removed last week, will soon be able to be back in school. Grandma McClain is some better, and Gladys Peer is improved, but both are still confined to their homes.

Gudgell Park

Saints of Gudgell Park were made to rejoice at the sacramental service the first Sunday of this month. Attendance was above the average. The local priesthood had charge, and the spirit of unity and peace that prevailed was encouraging.

For the past few Sundays attendance at Sunday school has been fine. We can scarcely find room for the classes, and in the near future are looking forward to more room. There are seven classes in our school, two of which need to be divided, and there is no place to put the divided classes. Our urgent need is more room.

Speakers so far this month have been Brothers Bozarth, Holsworth, T. C. Kelley, J. A. Gardner, and W. J. Sherman.

Last Friday evening the Religio, under the direction of Brother Roy Sherman, spent a pleasant, social evening. A Valentine box was greatly enjoyed by all. Refreshments were served. There were ninety-three present. We hope to have more of these get-together meetings. They help to promote a feeling of fellowship.

Pastor P. A. Sherman and wife have been confined to their home the past week on account of sickness. We hope soon to see them out again.

Far West Stake

Second Saint Joseph Church

This branch has been favored with the presence of Elder R. D. Weaver, who has been conducting a series of meetings here during the last few weeks.

Brother Weaver opened his series January 12 and from the first had good attendance, even when the weather was very stormy and cold. With the rise in temperature the attendance has grown steadily better until we were having a full house.

During this effort Sister Weaver has been with her husband, and to her we think should be given some of the credit for the success of the meetings. Sister Weaver has won the regard and confidence of all by her stanch faith and confidence in the message of the church and her fidelity to the work in hand.

Brother Weaver's sermons have been unusually good, have had the old-time gospel ring to them, and have been crowned by the old-time success.

Sunday, February 2, a beautiful and impressive baptismal service was held at the church. An audience of one hundred and thirty filled the little church at Ohio and Pryor Avenues. The font beneath the pulpit was opened and lined with ferns and flowers, making a beautiful sight as eleven people, mostly adults, were led into the watery grave to rise to newness of life.

The meetings closed Thursday, February 6, and on that day three others were inducted into the kingdom. Those baptized are: Delbert Goben, Alma Lorene Goben, John Pettit, Warren Flowers, Mrs. Warren Flowers, Vernon Flowers, Virgil Sturgis, Donald Sturgis, Mrs. Nellie Peterson, Mrs. Ethel Sturgis, Mrs. Mildred Acord, Mrs. Hazel Ruoff, Mrs. Lena Vandawalker, and Pauline Blevins.

They were confirmed under the hands of Brothers R. D. Weaver, R. E. Jones, J. L. Bear, F. R. Gist, and the pastor, T. E. Hale. This makes a total of thirty-five persons baptized into the Second Church since June, 1929, exceeding our quota by nine.

All the members of the church are to be commended for their assistance in furthering the success of the meetings, both by faithful attendance and active participation in the work of the meetings. The music was of a high order under the direction of Sister Lorene Whitlow.

All join in thanking Brother and Sister Weaver for their effort, and look forward to having another visit from them at some future time. As a fitting close to the meetings, sixty-five persons gathered at the home of Brother and Sister Robert Spillman at a farewell party in their honor, sponsored by the Upstreamer Class of the Sunday school.

Kansas City Stake

Of General Stake Interest

The monthly priesthood meeting was held in the I. X. L. room at Central Church, Stake President Cyril E. Wight in charge. A visiting priesthood, a teaching priesthood, a responsible priesthood whose task is to arouse the Saints to a sense of their duty, is the present pressing urge. Owing to activities incident to getting ready for General Conference, there will be no priesthood meetings for March and April. In consequence the study of the book, Religious Education in the Home, by Copely, will not be taken up until in May.

The stake meeting to elect delegates for General Conference will be March 14, at 7.45 p. m., at Central Church.

Assistant pastorates not provided for at the November stake conference have been filled as follows: Stark Acres, assistant pastor, Joseph Curtis; Gladstone, assistant pastor, L. C. Connelly; Armourdale, Ralph L. Goold; Second Church remains in charge of the stake presidency until a pastor may be supplied.

Argentine Church

Patriarch W. A. McDowell was the speaker at the morning hour Sunday, and Elder Daniel P. Cooper occupied at night.

Armourdale Church

Elder Ralph Goold occupied the sacred desk in the morning, and Patriarch W. A. McDowell discoursed at 7.45 p. m.

Grandview Church

The morning speaker was Assistant Pastor L. W. Hays, and Stake President Cyril E. Wight delivered the evening sermon. Pastor Charles D. Jellings, who has been in failing health for some time, is reported as improving. It is hoped he will soon be able to again take up his duties.

Stark Acres

A series of special meetings will be conducted by the assistant pastor, Elder Joseph Curtis, to last two weeks or longer.

Modesto, California

February 13.—Herald readers may think the branch at Modesto is not doing anything, for it has been some time since we have written, but this is not so. The branch is improving a little all the time.

In November the branch officers were elected, and an installation meeting was held with a good spirit prevailing.

The Christmas program was splendidly rendered, portraying the woman at the well and the birth of Jesus.

New Year's Eve a successful party was held and a general good time enjoyed. A program was first given in the upper auditorium; then refreshments of cake and cocoa were had, after which games were enjoyed by all. The party was dismissed as bells and whistles announced the arrival of the new year.

The Department of Recreation and Expression held a banquet January 31. About sixty-five guests assembled for the evening, sixteen driving from Stockton, a distance of thirty miles. Speeches and community singing composed the program. The dining room was decorated with red streamers,

Conference Notices

Conference of Wheeling District will be held with the Wellsburg, West Virginia, Branch, March 1 and 2. The first session will be at 2.30 Saturday afternoon, largely occupied by Bishop Curry. Entertainment at 7.30 Saturday evening; priesthood meeting 7 or 7.30 Sunday morning; election of delegates to General Conference at 2.30 p. m. Sunday, and preaching Sunday evening. Class sessions will occupy a prominent place in the conference, and the sacrament will be served. All who expect to attend General Conference should inform District President William Richards, 216 Edgar Avenue, Steubenville, Ohio, or the undersigned. Visiting ministry expected to be present include Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, Patriarch G. T. Griffiths, and Bishop L. F. P. Curry.—Samuel A. Martin, district secretary, Box 267, Bridgeport, Ohio.

Our Departed Ones

SHOWER.—Ralph R. Shower was born January 15, 1849, at Etna, Ohio. He departed this life February 8, 1930. He married Susan R. Friddell July 7, 1870, and to them two children were born. Josie L. Morrow, of Pataskala, Ohio, preceded her father to the beyond March 12, 1918. His wife died July 5, 1873. October 15, 1874, he married Margaret J. Stitch. To them were born three children: Eliza Dessa, who departed life in infancy; Katie E. Smith, Julesburg, Colorado; James D. Shower, of Independence, Missouri. In early life the deceased united with the German Reform Church, later joining the Methodist Episcopal Church. December 21, 1925, he was baptized by his son, Elder J. D. Shower, into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. In 1887 he with his family moved to Kansas, where he resided until September, 1928, when with his companion he moved to Independence, Missouri. Left to mourn are his wife, three children, nine grandchildren, ten great grandchildren, one brother, three sisters, and many friends. The funeral was held in Independence, conducted by W. D. Tordoff. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

NOWACK.—Minnie F. Nowack was born November 18, 1869, at Berlin, Germany. She died January 29, 1930, at Huber Memorial Hospital, Pana, Illinois. February 5, 1900, she was baptized a member of the church at Pana, Illinois, by J. D. Stead. She lived a Christian life, always trying to encourage others to live faithful to the Master. Her home was a home for the elders who labored in that part of the country. She was loved and respected by all who knew her, their esteem being evidenced by the large attendance at the funeral held in the First Baptist Church on February 1. She passed away strong in the faith. Surviving are her husband, eight children, and seventeen grandchildren, as well as other relatives and friends. The funeral sermon was by W. A. McDowell, assisted by the Reverend McMinn, of the First Baptist Church. Interment was in Mound Cemetery, Pana, Illinois.

SMITH.—Mary Barr was born December 15, 1843, at Peckhinham, Ontario. Married Alexander Smith July 22, 1862, at Milverton, Ontario. To them eleven children, five boys and six girls, were born. Two of the sons died in infancy, and two daughters preceded the hearts, and candles. The last course was served by candlelight, each guest having a red taper at his place.

A party is being planned by the Recreation and Expression Department for February 28.

The Sunday school is being successfully conducted, all officers and teachers busy. Sister Eva S. Stark directs activities of the department.

The Department of Women is studying and working.

A number expect to attend a departmental convention next Saturday and Sunday at Stockton, each department to assist in the program.

The members are looking forward to a visit next week from District President G. P. Levitt, who will be here for three evenings. A tomale feast will follow one of the sermons. The idea is "The more we get together the happier we'll be."

The branch is presenting the short plays that are being published in Vision by Brother Elbert A. Smith. The first installment was given last Sunday evening. The second chapter will be given the last Sunday of February.

All are working to make activities in Modesto successful. The district conference will be held in Sacramento March 1 and 2.

mother in death. There remain: David and Thomas, of Stratford; Samuel of Rostock, Ontario; Elizabeth Withrow and Edith Eastwood, of Stratford; Ellen Moore, of Rostock; and Rebecca Armstrong, London, Ontario. The husband and father passed away some nineteen years ago. Also surviving are twenty-three grandchildren and six great-grandchildren. Sister Smith was baptized about forty-eight years ago by Arthur Leverton. She passed away January 30, 1930. She was loved by all for her goodness in service and her upright life. Her children and many grandchildren are active in the church. Funeral service was in charge of and sermon by William I. Fligg. Interment at Stratford.

BROLLIAR.—Florence Idell Garton, daughter of William and Katherine Garton, was born at Vinton, Iowa, June 6, 1859. In early childhood she moved with her parents to Peoria, Illinois, and in 1865 they moved to Nebraska, homesteading on Turkey Creek, four miles south and one mile west of Wilber. She married Samuel Brolliar January 5, 1879, at Wilber. Seven children were born to them, five boys and two girls. One son, Sammy Floyd, died in infancy; another, Ernest, passed away in Portland, Oregon, in 1920. Surviving members of the family are her husband, Samuel Brolliar, of Wilber; three sons, Walter, Frank, and Earl Brolliar, Wilber; and two daughters: Mrs. Henry White and Mrs. Robert Hawes, of DeWitt; thirteen grandchildren, five sisters, and three brothers. She was baptized and confirmed a member of the church in March, 1895, by Thomas Butt, and was a faithful worker in the church. She lived a life of usefulness and was ready to perform any act of kindness and service. Died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Henry White, DeWitt, December 23, 1929. At her request the funeral was held from the church where she worshiped forty years, the sermon by Elder D'Arcy, assisted by Reverend H. C. Cordts and Reverend K. O. Zavadiil. Interment was at Sunnyside Cemetery.

McCORD.—Anna Crandall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Pat Crandall, was born in Buena Vista County, Iowa, in 1844. She married William McCord January 6, 1861, and four children were born to them: Will and Alec, of Denison, Iowa; Pat, of Malvern, Iowa; and Mrs. Mary Yeaman, of Logan. Her parents moved to Gallands Grove, Shelby County, when she was six years old, and there she grew to womanhood. Her husband preceded her in death, January 24, 1891. In 1859 she united with the church and remained a faithful member. With the exception of one year spent in Texas, she lived all her life in Shelby and Harrison Counties. She was the head of three five-generation groups. She passed away at the home of her daughter, January 16, 1930. The funeral was held at the W. L. Yeaman home January 19 by W. R. Adams. Interment was in Holcomb Cemetery, southeast of Dunlap, Iowa. Thus another of the old settlers of western Iowa has passed from earthly life.

JOHNSON.—Minerva Heath was born near Maquoketa, Iowa, March 7, 1855. She died at Farnam, Nebraska, January 28, 1930. Married James P. Johnson in 1872 and was the mother of five children, one girl and four boys. One son, Winston Kenneth, her only brother, Matthew Heath, and other relatives mourn her passing. She became a member of the church March 11, 1900, at Farnam. Interment was in Moorfield Cemetery, near Moorfield, Nebraska, January 30, 1930.

Historical Program for March

For Local Branches

Subject: The Book of Mormon.

The program for March celebrates that wonderful event, the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, and incidentally the remarkable experiences and testimony of the three witnesses to whom the angel appeared and bore witness to the divinity of that work. These were reputable men who bore a very noteworthy testimony, and though in later years they became estranged from the church, no one of them varied from his original testimony. They died reaffirming it.

It is to be hoped that the local branches have laid their plans and are carrying out from month to month the historical programs projected for their use. Thus throughout the entire centennial year of 1930 we shall have a constant celebration of the outstanding events of our history, accompanied by a systematic study of that history, and of the ideals, doctrines, and purposes of the church. Such a program will certainly be helpful to the Saints and may well lead toward the conversion of nonmembers.

Program for March

Opening Song: "Book of Mormon, hid for ages."—Hymnal 94.

Prayer: Thanksgiving for the Book of Mormon.

Scripture readings: Preface to the Book of Mormon; and book of Moroni, chapter 10, paragraphs 4, 5.

Music:

Ten-minute Address: "The story of the finding of the Book of Mormon plates." (If desired, illustrated with slides.)

Song: "God is marshaling his army."

Ten-minute Address: "The three witnesses; their testimony." (Illustrated with slides if desired.)

Two-act Play: "The three witnesses testify; the Book of Mormon goes to the printer."

Text to this play may be found in Vision for March, under the title, "Conversations."

Prayer: That the Book of Mormon may be prospered in its mission.

Short Address: "The Book of Mormon as a witness for Christ."

Song: "Voices from Cumorah's hill."—Hymnal 163.

Benediction.

Branch officers, or others superintending these programs, may well interest their young people and assign them to places on the program. This is particularly true of the plays or "Conversations," which are designed to vividly reproduce or describe prominent events in church history.

These programs should be given careful attention, as they will serve to celebrate from month to month, throughout the year, the centennial of our church organization. Moreover, they should encourage a more careful study of our own church history. "Know your own church."

The testimony of the three witnesses is most remarkable. Lucy Smith tells us that Joseph was overjoyed when the angel visited them and their testimony was added to his own. The placing of the manuscript of the Book of Mormon in the hands of the printer marked a distinct forward step in the development of the work in those early days. The record of those events may with great profit be studied, and the events themselves be celebrated in fitting manner.

Again we remind you that slides illustrating these subjects may be obtained from the Graphic Arts Bureau by addressing C. Ed. Miller at the Auditorium.

"Herald" to 1,650 New Subscribers

The Saints' Herald is mailed each Wednesday to 8,350 subscribers, at the annual subscription price of two dollars. The price is not enough to bear the expense of making the high quality thirty-two page journal which the editors and publishers feel they must create. But they hesitate to raise the price to what other like publications are demanding, for they would not like to see one person stricken from the list of subscribers because of inability to pay the price. There are numbers getting the Herald who must sacrifice other comforts of ordinary life in order to continue on the list.

If the subscription list were to be increased to fifteen thousand, the cost of manufacture would be lowered sufficiently to show a small but safe margin of profit to the church's publishing house. Surely the 106,473 Latter Day Saints should subscribe for 15,000 Heralds.

But the publishing house is anxious to make progress and sees an opportunity to increase the subscriptions in one month to 10,000. Only 1,650 subscriptions will be required. It is being asked that during March each agent and each subscriber to the Herald look around him and strive to find the Saints who do not have the Herald in their homes, and convince these that they can be of real help to themselves and to the church by becoming regular readers of the official organ.

Special Offer for March Only

In order to make it easy to interest these people, the publishing house is offering an attraction to new subscribers who are secured during March, 1930.

The Centennial Conference is to be reported in a daily edition of the Saints' Herald which is selling for fifty cents for the period of the conference.

This is now offered to new subscribers paying two dollars for the Herald for one year at no additional cost. Or, new subscribers received during March will be sent the regular weekly Herald for one year and the daily edition during the Centennial Conference for the regular price of the Herald, two dollars.

There are several reasons why this special offer is being made. Among them are:

1. To obtain a more nearly universal reading of the Herald by the Saints.

2. To mark the opening of the Centennial Year with ten thousand subscribers on the Herald list, which would mean a satisfactory development.

3. Those who become readers generally continue, and the publishing house expects to receive patronage over a series of years from each subscriber taken at the special March offer.

Will each Saint try to get one or more to subscribe at once? Will each agent send in a large or small sheaf of subscriptions, according to the size of his field of operation?

Give the Herald a list of 10,000 with which to open the Centennial Year. The Herald will give much in return.

Get a new subscriber today while pre-conference matter is being published weekly and while you can secure $2.50 for $2.

News and Opinion

"Does your newspaper want peace?" is the title of a recent editorial in The Christian Century, bearing upon the relation of our newspapers to the London naval conference. The writer says that this is a good time to study the newspaper, to determine whether or not it is really in favor of world peace.

The thesis of the editorial is that the newspaper which is actually anxious for peace will treat the events of the conference sympathetically, hopefully; that it will declare itself editorially in favor of the limitation of armaments; that it will give its support to the purposes for which the conference was called; that it will rejoice in every indication of progress toward the goal desired.

That there are those who scoff at the attempts of such important events as the naval conference, in a feeling that such forces should come out in the open and openly espouse either one or the other—peace or war. If they do not care whether the conference succeeds or not, let them say so, instead of crying "Peace" on one hand and disparaging endeavors toward peace on the other.

The Christian Century quotes a paragraph from a London dispatch as an example of the purported news story, in which the correspondent by his very attitude colors the account of events. The writer seizes upon a trivial incident in the opening of the conference and magnifies it to the importance almost of obstruction. This renews the question of whether a reporter is justified in injecting into news material his own personal opinions.

May we recall the statement of President Herbert Hoover, made before the annual luncheon of the Associated Press in April, 1929; referring to the press, he said:

I need not repeat that absolute freedom of the press to discuss public questions is a foundation stone of American liberty. I put the question, however, to every individual conscience, whether flippancy is a useful or even legitimate device in such discussions. I do not believe it is. Its effect is as misleading and as distorting of public conscience as deliberate misrepresentation. Not clarification but confusion of issues arises from it.

Skepticism and sneers have no more place in the news columns than has flippancy. As of law enforcement, so may it be said of such issues as the limitation of armaments and world peace—editorial opinion and news reports on them should be presented as two distinct and separate departments of the newspaper. If the paper has no faith in cooperation among nations, let its editorials reflect those beliefs. If it is for peace, let it support editorially every move that offers hope for the advancement of international good will. But in the recording of news events, there should be no place for the speculations and personal reactions of news correspondents.

It is well for us to examine closely all reports of such important events as the naval conference, in order to separate the actual happenings from the particular slant given to them by the reporter. It is his business to give us the news; it is our business to form our opinions of that news. L. E. F.

Why Not Something Else?

Recent trends in the advertising of tobacco products have met with protest from a number of different quarters. Objection has been made to the claims of some advertisements, and it has been charged that the manhood and especially the womanhood of America have been falsely represented on billboards and posters and in newspaper displays. These objections no doubt are prompted by varied motives, some economic in basis (such as those by manufacturers of sweets), others representing those who disagree in principle or practice or both with the use of tobacco in general.

Whether as a result of this wave of protest or not, new advertisements have contained such footnotes as this: "We do not represent that smoking — cigarettes will bring modern figures or cause the reduction of flesh. We do declare that when tempted to do yourself too well, if you will 'Reach for a —' instead, you will thus avoid over-indulgence in things that cause excess weight and, by avoiding over-indulgence, maintain a modern, graceful form."

Cigaret smoking is thus represented, not as being itself of any particular help in keeping down flesh, but as merely a substitute activity, something to deliver one from the temptation of over-indulgence in fattening sweets. This is indeed a new role for the cigaret! One wonders why it would not be possible to go for a walk, read a book, eat a raw carrot, or anything else instead of eating the too-rich food; since it is just a matter of doing something else. Why should it be smoking?

If a man or woman wants to smoke, I should not care to advocate measures to deprive them of that pleasure; although I do not agree with them and in a way feel sorry for them. But when smoking is represented as being something that it is not, as doing for the smoker something that can not be demonstrated in fact, then the smoker or the manufacturer or whoever makes the claim has gone beyond the province of his individual rights and freedom. He has invaded the liberties of other people. Such invasion is rightly protested and opposed.

If over-indulgence is to be avoided, there are a thousand and one other (and in my opinion better) ways to do it than reaching for a cigaret.

General Conference Railroad Tickets

The Transportation Department, Auditorium Building, Independence, Missouri, appears again in this issue of the Herald, this time in the Miscellaneous Department, with information to the Saints who are going to attend the Centennial Conference, which will be the seventy-fourth General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

In order to obtain favorable rates in the purchase of your tickets to Independence or Kansas City, Missouri, certain stipulations made by the railways must be followed. Dates of purchase and length of life of ticket are determined, but the rules are liberal to the purchaser.

O. W. Newton, in charge of the clerical and some other portions of the work of the Transportation Department, fears there may not be complete understanding of the rules made by the passenger associations. If there be Saints who are not certain as to the rules they should ascertain definitely, allowing plenty of time for inquiries and answers passing through the mails.

The Publishing Interests

Now is the time for the church to remember its obligation to the Herald Publishing House, its principal and long established institution for the production of journals, books, tracts, leaflets, in furtherance of the interests of the church. Six or more new books are offered for publication, and getting these to the market will mean an investment far in excess of $10,000. Are you a delinquent subscriber? Do you have use for anything now published and for sale? Support the publishing interests by remitting for past favors or for new materials.

A Note on Dictatorships

All Christians are interested in the matter of the dictatorships that exist in Europe, because religious liberty depends directly on civil liberty. Whatever may be said in favor of the dictators by their partisans, it is quite certain that religious liberty is not likely to prevail long in countries where they rule.

The great opposition in governments these days is not between democracies and monarchies, but between democracies and dictatorships. The monarchies have become, in many cases, largely altered and modified, until some of them, like the British Government, are more democratic than the republican governments themselves. They are no longer a threat against human liberty.

The great threat against democratic government is the dictatorship. It exists in Russia under Stalin; in Italy under Mussolini; in Turkey under Mustapha Kemal; and it existed in Spain until very recently under Primo de Rivera. They all rule by force.

We are glad to see Primo de Rivera go, not because of any animosity against the man, but because we must be opposed to the political philosophy that he represents. We would be glad to see all dictators go for the same reason. In reality, Rivera and all the others named are but a new line of kings, obtaining power and office by force rather than by lineage. They are products of the weakness of their countries, not of strength. They appear strong, but they can not endure, because they are built on false foundations. They should learn the lesson which England learned under Cromwell. Cromwell was a dictator. He was, at the same time a good man. But he failed to build an enduring power. As soon as he died his government fell to pieces and the monarchy returned, with worse excesses than before.

Hints have appeared, even in the American press, that democracy is far short of proving a success. There have been authors who have looked with favorable eyes on the military governments of the dictators. But, with even the strictest of censorship, they have not been able to keep from the world the news of the unrest seething below the surface of their operations.

We feel that the dictatorship, as a form of government, is and can be only a transitory stage. Development will bring their downfall, just as it brought them into existence. They will serve their purpose, but the people, longing for liberty, will turn again to democratic government as the best

Appointment of Transportation Agent

Notice is hereby given of the appointment of R. F. Healy, 7436 South Michigan Avenue, Grand Crossing Station, Chicago, Illinois, as agent of the Transportation Department in Chicago during the coming General Conference. Brother Healy will be glad to lend all the assistance possible to the Saints and ministry passing through Chicago en route to the conference. Please advise him time of your arrival in Chicago and by what route. Brother Healy will furnish, upon request, information touching trains and schedules, automobile routes, etc.

Your Opportunity

There have been offered to the Board of Publication manuscripts for the publication of eight new books for different departments of church work, including the long-anticipated songbook.

The preparation and publication of these books will require the expenditure of several thousand dollars. The publishing department is not asking for donations, but merely that all whose subscriptions have expired to the different periodicals, renew them now, and those who owe accounts for books or printing, send remittances in settlement.

We should be "colaborers together," and here is "your opportunity." Delinquent notices to subscribers for the Saints' Herald are being mailed now. Please let us have your renewal by return mail, that the Lord's work may not be hindered.

expression of their combined will and choice.

That government rules best which rules by consent, not by violence. At present there is only one man in Italy who is allowed to live according to his notions of life; that man is Mussolini. All others are shadows and imitations of him, clerks, servitors, and rubber stamps. If they are anything else, they quickly find lodgment in prisons, or become fugitives.

We look for better times and better conditions to restore the confidence of men in democratic forms of government, in republican principles. Democracies have their faults, and the administration of their governments may be difficult and costly, but they will give more satisfaction than any others that have so far been tried.

Advance Information

Anticipating a larger attendance than at any previous General Conference, the committee in charge has made preparations to increase the usual organization in order to expedite the work of the April conference, care for the increased number of visitors, and provide satisfying programs that will cover the wide field of activities in which the church is now engaged.

The General Conference Committee which is planning the activities of the conference consists of President F. M. McDowell, Apostle F. H. Edwards, and Bishop J. A. Becker. The following committees will handle special assigned work: Administration, Class Work, Credentials and Registrations, Decorations, Accommodations and Reservations, Pageant, Oratorio, Information, Reception, Recreation, Transportation, Traffic and Parking, Police and Meal Service.

The exhibits will not be in the main Auditorium room, as at the previous conference, but will be located in the northeast and northwest rooms of the building, which will be inclosed and made easily accessible from the front lobby. The following departments and institutions will have exhibits: Church Architect, Foreign Missions, Graceland College, Graphic Arts, Herald Publishing House, Department of History, Library, Music Department (headquarters for Music Department will be in Paul N. Craig's studio west of the Stone Church), Publicity Department, Religious Education Department, Sanitarium-Health Department and Sanitarium Patronesses, Statistical Department, and Tenth Legion.

Word received from our missionaries abroad states that they are bringing some very interesting material to add to the foreign missions exhibit. There may be others who expect to attend conference who have traveled abroad in the interest of the church and who have pictures or articles that they would be willing to place in the foreign missions exhibit. The Conference Committee would be glad to hear from those who are willing to do this. The exhibit will be in charge of competent people and will be protected against loss or damage. Letters referring to this matter should be addressed to F. H. Edwards at the Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

There are in the possession of the Department of History, the Library, and the Graphic Arts Department many articles of historic interest which are prized very highly. Some of these will be brought to the Auditorium and displayed in one of the rooms off the fifth corridor. A number of show cases have been secured, so that they may be seen to advantage without being handled. Dependable people will be in charge of this exhibit. It is quite possible that some of the Saints may have rare and valuable pictures or old books or letters which they would like to add to this collection. If so, they are invited to place these properties in the museum at the General Conference.

The fair weather in Independence has permitted construction work on the Auditorium to go forward very rapidly. The scaffolding has been removed from the south half of the main Auditorium room, where it was raised to the necessary height to permit workmen to plaster over head. The graceful curved lines of fully one half of the ceiling may now be seen, and as soon as a photograph can be secured a picture of it will be run in the Herald.

The new work now being done on the Auditorium has stimulated some to pay their pledges. Many have said that when work was continued they would send in the unpaid balance on their pledges, and it is evident that some are remembering their promises. The recent Joint Council, in ordering the new work, believed that this is what the Saints wanted done, and in the belief that special offerings would cover the additional investment, and that the average income would be maintained to care for the current operating expenses of the church, they authorized the additional work. The church will need approximately $50,000 for this new work. Bills for this labor and material can not be paid by expressions of satisfaction that the Auditorium is being further completed. It will take that much real money to meet these obligations. Money is needed on or before April 1. Members desiring to make special offerings to the Auditorium fund may receive credit as special offering and their receipts should be marked "Auditorium fund." Money received under this designation will be used to pay for the new work on the Auditorium. However, such offerings should not interfere with the payment of tithing which may be due, for the tithe should always receive first consideration.

It is only thirty-nine days until the conference will open. Those who expect to attend and have not yet made their reservations should do so at once. Some are sure to be disappointed if they wait until they reach Independence.

Other features of the Centennial Conference will be announced in this column each week, and readers of the Herald are invited to follow them carefully, so that they may be informed regarding plans for the coming conference.

On the Eve of a Revival

By F. Henry Edwards

The Christian Herald, published in New York City, is one of the most outstanding Protestant periodicals in the English-speaking world. For half a century it has occupied a continually more enviable place among the Protestant people of the United States, and under the present editorship of Daniel A. Poling (who is also head of the Christian Endeavor movement), and of Stanley High, a young but brilliant leader, it is doing more and more to achieve the purposes stated in its masthead: "To carry forward a practical ministry to those who are in need. To champion those forces . . . wherever they appear . . . that bid fair to aid in the effort to make a Christlike world."

The Christian Herald is by no means a Latter Day Saint paper. There is hardly an issue but what contains something with which we disagree rather fundamentally. We would rather have the members of the church subscribe to the Herald or the Ensign or Vision or the Departments' Journal than to the Christian Herald. But nevertheless we are delighted with some of the editorials which appear there from time to time, and particularly with one in the issue for February 15, 1930, under the caption which heads this article. I am taking the liberty of reprinting this editorial in full:

Two months ago Christian Herald announced that during 1930 evangelism would have a larger place than ever before in our editorial program. We meant that. We mean it more than ever now. For day after day the evidence accumulates of a great and unsatisfied hunger among church people—preachers and laymen—for the rediscovery, in their personal lives, of a vital religion.

Professing Christians, in these very modern, very liberal times, have tried all manner of things as a substitute for religion—and found them wanting. And now, disillusioned with substitutes and weary of cynicism, they are saying to the church:

"Sirs, we would see Jesus."

A simple request, that. But it sums up the deepest and most ancient of man's yearnings. And it can be granted! We can show men Jesus when we, ourselves, have seen him. To do that—to see him and to show him to others—is, we believe, the first business of the Christian church and of a paper like Christian Herald.

And to that task we desire, here, to dedicate ourselves.

We are told, from many places, that our country is on the eve of a great religious awakening. We believe that. We believe, moreover, that that religious awakening waits, at this moment, for men and women who are dedicated to bring it to pass. The beginning of that dedication is not a public matter. It is a personal transaction between the individual and his God. But it will become a public matter—simply because surrendered and dedicated lives are, and always will be, contagious. A genuine religious experience —and that, precisely, is what we are talking about—is, and always has been, too good to keep. It is likely to be epidemic.

To the spread of such an epidemic Christian Herald stands committed. We offer no apologies that, in the months ahead, there will be more and more of the "old-time religion" in its pages; more insistence upon Christianity as a life-changing enterprise; more constant effort to make certain that each week's issue will have in it something for men and women who feel, today, that ancient longing to see Jesus. If we can do that, no apologies will be necessary. If, in some way, we can make religion vital in these pages, folks won't want to argue about it; they will want to try it for themselves.

Finally, we desire that the readers of Christian Herald shall share in this dedication. There are a million of us. We come from every section of the land, from every church. Joined in the fellowship of such a task as this, the revival of religion that men look and hope for will come, with certainty, to destroy our spiritual lethargy, to cleanse our lives, revitalize our faith, make us contagious Christians to whom those will come who wish to meet our Lord.

DANIEL A. POLING.
STANLEY HIGH.

Please note the following affirmations in this editorial:

There is a great and unsatisfied hunger among church people for the rediscovery of a vital religion.

Men have tried substitutes and found them wanting. They now wish to see Jesus.

It is the first business of the church to help people to see Jesus.

We are on the eve of a great religious awakening which awaits out dedicated support.

Our personal religious life has tremendous public significance.

These men expect to preach more and more of the "old-time religion."

If a vital religion can be presented, people will not take time to argue about it; they will want to try it.

These outstanding statements of these two great editors are true. There is a spirit of revival in the air. For years it has been the prevailing fashion to disparage "old-time religion," but earnest men who have tried other things are now leading the way back. They realize that there are tremendously important spiritual verities gathered up in the great doctrines of the church which they had previously thought were worn out. Inside and outside of the churches men are hungry for God.

We believe that Doctor Poling and Doctor High and many of their associates are good and noble men, but we do not think they have such a transforming experience of Christ and of his gospel as is possible through obedience to the restored gospel. They have caught a glimpse of the tremendous significance of Jesus in the life of our modern world, but the complete satisfaction of their soul hunger is awaiting the preachment of the gospel by representatives of this church.

We believe that God is, that he loves men, and that he speaks to us in direction and inspiration to—day. We believe that men can be saved by obedience to the gospel proclaimed by the Lord Jesus Christ and centering in him. We believe that those who are to become the partners of God in the rebuilding of the world must be born again from above. We believe that the kingdom of heaven is the divine ideal for human society, and that the people of this church are committed to the practical realization of this ideal as an example for all men. We believe that the church is even now moving forward under the guidance of our Lord and Master into ever richer fields of conquest.

In the light of these great and fundamental convictions the people of the church should lead the way in this coming revival. We should do this by careful cultivation of a vital faith, such as shall be evidenced in everything that we do. We should do it by developing and manifesting deep concern for the spiritual well-being of our friends and neighbors.

We are on the eve of a great revival. Let us move forward together to usher it in.

Highway Builders? or Good Samaritans?

By J. A. Koehler

The Latter Day Saints Church claims to exist in fulfillment of prophecy. In the face of such a claim, the active mind will ask at once, What is the test of the truth of such a claim? How may one know that the church exists in fulfillment of prophecy? And the answer comes back to us at once, because it is so obviously true, "By its fulfillment of prophecy."

One reason for asking this question at the outset is that the text which forms the basis of this discourse is one of the stock arguments used by the ministry of this church to prove its divine origin. Surely you will agree with me that if this is the church the prophets said God would raise up in the latter days, then this church can make good with God, and, I believe, with good-thinking men, only by doing the work which the prophets said the people of God would do. At any rate, a church which claims to exist in fulfillment of prophecy imposes upon itself the duty of fulfilling that prophecy. A people which claims to be "the called of God," can justify its claim only by doing the work which God calls his people to do.

The text I have chosen is found in the 58th to the 62d chapters of Isaiah. These five chapters are one prophecy; they should be contemplated as a whole; and the stipulations of any given verse should be interpreted in the light of the evident theme of the prophecy as a whole. When this is done, it will be seen that the "work before him" is the building of the highway of God for the people—a highway of economic justice, as we shall see. Verse 10 of chapter 62, and the three following verses, sum up the message of this prophecy and raise the question that I purpose to discuss. It reads: "Go through the gates." That is to say, Enter into this field of endeavor; set yourselves to this task: "Cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people."

Now, what is a highway? And everyone will answer: A highway is a course of travel. True. But what is the essential difference between Highway number 40 and number 1? In answering for the purposes of this discussion, it should be remembered that the language of this prophecy is metaphorical; it is illustrative; and, therefore, deals with or connotes only certain limited facts of state highways which are conceived to be parallel with or analogous to a highway of a people. Just one truth is sought to be illuminated in this prophecy, and that is that different highways lead to different destinations. And this is the essential difference in Highways number 40 and number 41. One leads from Kansas City to Saint Louis, let us say, while the other leads from Kansas City to Canada. In this prophecy, however, the destination is not a position in space; it is a state of circumstances; it is the outcome to a people of its way of behaving.

Isaiah, then, makes choice of a very apt metaphor; for the highway of "a people" is the course a people travels to reach its ends. The highway of a people is the means a people employs to achieve its purposes; it is the direction a people gives to its affairs; it is the whole body of laws, institutions, and customs which marks its civilization. The highway of a people is its group behavior; its social order; its political and, particularly, in this case, its economic system. And this prophecy sets out, first, the ends, or fates, or consequences, to both the individual and the group, of the direction that is being given to economic concerns; and, second, contrasts this outcome with the blessings that issue from a just system of administration of economic affairs.

The Forces Which Control

Every student of history should know something of the workings of the forces which control human destiny. Anyone, student of sociology or not, should know something of the factors which make for social solidarity or for social disintegration. All of us feel the effects of the characteristic or distinguishing features of our present industrial system. And everyone should know that peace, prosperity, and happiness, which are ends or destinations sought to be reached by every people, are conditioned in the character of its social highway; its group behavior. These are destinations to be reached only by traveling a highway of just, orderly, and efficient government. And if there is one lesson more than another that Latter Day Saints, in common with other church peoples, need to learn from this prophecy, it is the truth that God will save the world as peoples; he will save the world through government; and government, too, which has to do with giving direction to and setting up a control of the essential activities of life. And these are all fundamentally social. "The government shall be upon his shoulder: . . . to order it, and to establish it, with justice and with judgment." This is the duty which this prophecy imposes upon the called of God.

Observe the truth of this as I read a few verses:

None calleth for justice, nor any pleadeth for truth. . . . Wasting and destruction are in their paths. The way of peace they know not; and there is no judgment in their doings. They have made them crooked paths, and whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace. Therefore is judgment far from us, neither doth justice overtake us. We wait for light, and behold obscurity; for brightness, but we walk in darkness.

Thus runs the whole story. A life of economic confusion. A group misbehavior that worked present injustice to the individual and ultimate disaster to the people. A government devoid of the stuff of which the highway of God is builded; a government not grounded in justice and judgment.

Erroneous Organization and Method

When one contemplates the anarchy of our own modern economic highway; its scheme of property rights which is calculated by its nature to exploit the earnings of the masses—the social income; its income tax laws; its tariffs; and the whole mass of political jugglery which marks our business life; and when we read in this prophecy an accurate statement of the outcome to the men of today as individuals and as peoples of the workings of this system, it seems that Isaiah was talking about the world in which we live today. And a careful reading of that prophecy tends to confirm us in that conclusion:

Behold, the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world. . . . His reward is with him, and his work before him.

It is of the men of the church today; the men of the Latter Day Saints Church, if you please, that Isaiah, by the authority of God, demands an adventure in community building that will "loosen the hands of wickedness"; that will "undo the heavy burdens" of taxation, or toil, or what not; that will "break every yoke" and "let the oppressed go free." "Behold!" saith the prophet, "the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world"; a time when the crookedness of our economic paths turns the blessing that should arise naturally from the advancements made in the arts and sciences almost into cursings. This is the age to "say to the daughters of Zion"—that is, the several nuclei of peoples which have grown up under the Restoration Movement, the cause of Zion: "Prepare ye the way of the people." This is your calling; to "lift up a standard" of right behavior for peoples. This is your task; to order and to establish the government; to build the kingdom—Zion, in preparation for the coming of the Son of God. "There must be an organization of my people . . . to advance the cause which you have espoused." The cause of righteousness, which comprehends economic justice.

Attitude of the Church

The resistance from within the very body of the church to the social attempts which the leaders of the church seek to put forward, justifies the plainest kind of talk on the question of building the highway of God—the highway of economic justice. Note how Isaiah speaks out on this subject again and again throughout this whole prophecy:

The Lord hath sworn by his right hand and by the arm of his strength, Surely I will no more give thy corn (i. e., the products of your labor) to be meat for thine enemies; to become the property of others for possession and use as if it belonged to them by some private right.

And the sons of the stranger shall not drink thy wine for the which thou hast labored. But they that have gathered it shall eat it, and praise the Lord; and they that have brought it together shall drink it in the courts of my holiness.

It seems impossible to me that any man of God, anyone who is fit for the kingdom, should resist the social attempts of the church which seek to embody these principles of social justice in a law of the group; i. e., to build the highway of God for the people.

This restored church, through all its prophets, has proclaimed to the world that this is the purpose for which this church exists: to build a highway of God and to make it a standard for the people. What is the theme of the official communications of the founder of this church? I ask, What is the theme? the subject he seeks to develop? In the opening paragraph of an article from his pen written for the "History of All the Religious Denominations in the United States," Joseph Smith says this:

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was founded upon direct revelation, as the true church of God has ever been, according to the Scriptures. And through the will and blessing of God, I have been the instrument in his hands, thus far, to move forward the cause of Zion.

"Zion," that is the theme. True, he speaks on questions of theology, education, and governments in general; and gives direction concerning the organization of the church and the administration of sacraments and ordinances, etc., but these are incidental to the theme and contributory to the purpose. His message was a message of social justice; of economic and domestic and political righteousness. The great body of rules of conduct which he gave to the church, relate to economic righteousness. And to achieve these he sought to inspire the church (1) to purchase lands as groups; (2) to gather together to form communities; (3) to mobilize their resources in man power and capital; and (4) to build a civilization, a Zion, a highway for the people, which even the nations of the world which "stumble at noonday as if it were night" will be "constrained to acknowledge is in very deed the kingdom."

The Use of the Things of This World

And each prophet in succession has sounded the same call; though of course they had not the same occasion to give again to the church the body of laws which were to govern the people in this enterprise. Our second leader, in speaking on this subject, made devotion to this task of highway building a moral duty. "It is incumbent," says he, in relation to this task of community building, "to use the things of this world in the manner designed of God"; that is, to set up the Christian mode of economic behavior; so "that the places where the Saints occupy may shine as Zion, the redeemed of the Lord." "Zion"; a new social order; a Christianized industrial society, a community life, which implies a government, grounded in justice and judgment. And this is the stuff, I repeat, with which the Government of God, the kingdom, is builded.

As for our present leader and prophet, his warnings of the fate that will attend us if we fail to make good at this task are so numerous, so emphatic, and so constant, that all who have ears to hear know that "Zion," the beautiful, which beckons us on, is the one hope of his accomplishments. And to our present social attempt he lends the full strength of his prophetic office. Thus have our modern prophets, together with the prophets of ancient times, set out the call of God to this people, which is to build the highway of the people.

The Good Samaritan

That brings me to the second phase of my talk, the story of the Good Samaritan. You know it. You learned it at your mother's knee. A traveler was on his way from Jerusalem to Jericho. As he journeyed on this highway, he fell among thieves which stripped him of his clothing, took away his goods, wounded him bodily, and left him lying at the roadside, half dead. A priest, traveling the same highway, looked upon this mass of flesh and bone, and passed by on the other side. Likewise, a Levite, when he came that way, looked upon an object in the ditch, and passed by on the other side. Then a man came along. And being a man, he saw a fellow man in need of help. And being a man, this Good Samaritan was moved with compassion toward him, and went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him. You know the story.

And that Good Samaritan was rated as a social outcast; an inferior being; a kind of humanity not in favor with God. Not even some religious people of today have outgrown the childish and pitiable notion that they have a monopoly on the good will of God. And, like the priest and the Levite of yesterday, they shun the tasks which deal with the practical problems of human living, and betake themselves to devotional seclusion, and pray for the misguided Good Samaritans of the church who desecrate their pulpits with doctrines of social justice, and who seek to make the church an instrument of freedom to the oppressed, an instrument of safety from the wounds of ungodly customs, and to "break every yoke"—they pray for these, I say, that God may have pity on them, and win them away from such interests, and cause them to "pass by on the other side," and to hasten to honor God with prayers in the sanctuary. It is still true with some present-day priests and Levites, that the Good Samaritan who seeks to become a builder in the kingdom is a social outcast.

But I have a few questions to ask concerning this Good Samaritan. In what way, I would ask, did such righteousness (for righteousness it was) improve the road from Jerusalem to Jericho? Did this Good Samaritan righteousness make that highway any safer? Were the liabilities of being beaten and of having one's goods taken away again any less the day after than they were the day before? Did this Good Samaritan righteousness make opportunity to pursue the tasks of life on this highway any freer? or more equal? or universal? Did this righteousness promote the cause of justice on this highway? Or was this Samaritan's goodness an act of mercy? or of charity?

Will Good Samaritanism Establish Government of God?

Let us come a little closer to home. Would 100,000 Latter Day Saint Good Samaritans, healing the wounds daily of unfortunate victims on a Babylonish highway, convert that highway into the government of God? One step further. Suppose that instead of each Latter Day Saint Good Samaritan going about single-handed, individually, privately, to extend mercy and to heal wounds, all Latter Day Saint Good Samaritans should band themselves together to combine their resources and to dispense charity publicly or as groups of peoples, would that establish the government? Would that build Zion? Would that kind of righteousness reshape the kingdoms of this world and mold them into the kingdom of our God and his Christ? Would that goodness build the highway? And yet, that is almost the measure of the kingdom-building righteousness of almost any church that exists today.

Today, the story of the Good Samaritan is being reenacted on our own highway of life—our economic highway, which we ourselves have builded and which we travel daily in our endeavors to achieve prosperity and to secure ourselves against want from the loss of goods or of opportunity. As a group, one of our latest Good Samaritan stunts, if such a noble act it is, is an enactment by a group of self-styled Good Samaritan Congressmen, supposedly designed to heal the wounds of a whole mass of travelers—farmers, who have been stripped of their property, in traveling this highway, with business weapons which society itself has put into the hands of its citizens privately for so-called lawful and legitimate uses, in exploiting the social income.

Today, we, ourselves as peoples, by our own choice of highways, have put ourselves under the necessity of asking a few of our citizens privately for the privilege of mobilizing our man power and using our wealth to build roads, for example. We call it issuing bonds. And then, in our corporate capacity, we make one Good Samaritan gesture after another, such as the passing of income tax laws, in a fruitless attempt to restore to our wounded citizenry some of the goods taken from them on our own financial highway with business weapons of our own choosing. Thus runs the story on our modern economic highway.

(To be concluded.)

What Is a Successful Man?

A successful man might be described as one who makes his own way in the world; one who gains and holds the respect, confidence, and affection of those with whom he works, and with whom he plays. One who learns to work hard, play hard, and fight hard. One who is willing to take a reasonable chance, who is neither a coward nor a quitter. One who puts more into his job than he takes out of it, and gives to humanity the best that is in him without due regard for return.—James S. McCulloh.

Kidney, Liver, Bladder, etc.—Chapter 6

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

1. Kidneys

The kidneys are associated with Bright's disease, or nephritis, which is responsible for over a hundred thousand deaths in the United States; a figure approaching to that of heart mortality and also pneumonia deaths. It is believed by some that even moderate meat eating has something to do with nephritis, and it is well known that coffee and tea in excess stimulate the kidneys because of the ingredients they contain.

The more chronic type of focal infections which breed streptococci (a pus germ) are causative, and gout and diabetes contribute.

Self-medication is one of the reasons for toxic action on the kidneys: the use of proprietary or patent medicines, prescribing by the druggist, or the passing of doctor's prescriptions from one person to another without the physician's consent. In any event, Bright's disease does not suddenly insult the individual without lengthy reasons.

We are unaware of the existence of our kidneys in health. Kidney disease is intimately connected with the condition of the heart. Prevention here depends on removing or preventing the poisons of the infectious diseases or focal infections. Constipation and faulty eating is another prolific cause. Moderation in diet is important, especially reduction in protein foods. It is important to drink plenty of water, not necessarily bottled, at least six glassfuls a day. Any safe drinking water is splendid.

All oxidation within the body produces carbonic acid gas and water. The carbonic acid gas is of no use in the body but passes off as waste through the lungs. A great deal of water must pass off from the body, so as to wash away the waste matter. The oxidation of albumin produces, in addition to the water and carbonic acid gas, urea, or a poisonous waste substance, and urea must be removed as fast as it is formed. Urea and all substances like it are given off by the perspiratory glands, and also by the kidneys. The waste mineral matter of the body also passes off by the skin and kidneys. Each kidney is made of coils of very fine tubes lined with epithelial cells. These cells separate the urea, mineral matters, and water from the blood, and pour the whole into a single tube which goes to the bladder. The kidneys get rid of many times as much urea and mineral matters as the skin, but the skin gives off nearly as much water as the kidneys. If the kidneys can not get rid of the urea, then the whole body is poisoned, and Bright's disease comes on. Then the skin may give off much more than its natural amount of urea.

The waste stuffs of digestion, urea and urates, are formed in the liver and brought in the blood to the kidneys. The blood reaches the kidneys from the aorta, and then a large vein carries the purified blood back to the heart. Waste from the kidneys is conducted by means of the two excretory ducts or tubes, the ureters, to the bladder. As filter glands, the kidneys contain a spongy mass of capillaries, and keep working all the time, pouring out each twenty-four hours from three to four pints of urine into the bladder. Therefore the need of supplementing the labor of the kidneys by bathing and frequent washing of perspiration products from the skin, rather than the suppression of perspiration. Plenty of water, say six to eight glasses, plus green vegetables and fresh fruits, keeps the cells of the body flooded with water and keeps them healthy. The blood stream is thus diluted and not overloaded with poisons.

When we realize that from two thirds to three quarters of the entire weight of the body is water, that most of our food is water, it becomes a matter of decided importance to know that it is pure and potable. Potable water is reasonably free from noxious germs and from harmful ingredients of all kinds, whether in solution, in suspension, or in sediment.

Importance of Urinalysis

Urinalysis is important in the examination of patients. Detection of the diabetic subject is of particular importance, owing to the sudden onsets of unconsciousness to which he is subject. Anyone known to be diabetic should be kept under regular and frequent observation, and should he show an increasing amount of sugar, or manifest any serious symptoms, he should be treated until the condition is improved. Trivial injuries, particularly to the feet, sustained by diabetic persons, are very likely to lead to a prolonged disability. Consequently any wound failing to heal in a reasonable time should be an indication for urinalysis and for the suspicion of diabetes.

The urine contains blood, much albumin, and many casts. There are no distinctive renal symptoms to be separated from those of the primary disease. But the kidney lesion is so extensive that it seems as if it must have much to do in causing the death of the patient. There are seven different kidney lesions, each one of them frequently associated with heart disease. With chronic congestion of the kidney, the cardiac symptoms are not very severe; more or less dropsy is often present, the quantity of urine is somewhat diminished, its specific gravity is normal or high, the proportion of urea to the ounce of urine is increased, albumin is present in small quantities, and there are but few casts.

2. Liver

Liver troubles are various. It is the largest organ, or gland, and weighs three pounds, or more than the brain. It branches off just below the stomach exit. Receiving blood from all parts of the body, it acts on the toxic materials in the stream and gets rid of them, particularly of disease germs, it being the great poison filter. But if the strain is too great, we become bilious, as from eating tainted meat or spoiled food of any kind, and then loss of appetite, and dull and feverish conditions arise. To the under side of the liver is found the pear-shaped pouch called the gall bladder, in which bile is stored before exit to the intestines. If the gall bladder becomes inflamed, gallstones will form. If these stones pass out into the duct, they give much trouble, blocking up the duct; and passing into the blood are poisons which produce a jaundiced condition. Fatty degeneration of the liver cells arises from overeating, from want of proper exercise, and from wasting diseases. Exposure to great heat causes functional disease and congestion. Active exercise in open air and baths should be indulged in daily, with proper diet regulation.

In discussing the liver, formerly all abdominal troubles were referred to the liver, were they intestinal indigestion, autointoxication, constipation, or diarrhea. It was such a handy thing to say it was "the liver." Cathartics were used, and with benefit. Flushing the bowels expelled the bacterial invasion. Today we are able to make correct diagnoses, and only in a few instances are we obliged to resort to operation.

Cirrhosis, or hardening of the liver, is always the result of the action of a poison, in small doses, long continued. A cirrhosis once begun soon becomes a definite disease with its symptoms, its complications, its evolution, and its termination. When one has a very complete idea of his condition and takes into consideration the anatomical and functional condition of the kidneys, then, with proper instruction from his physician and proper medication, the general condition will improve to the point of apparently perfect health. The patient seems actually to be cured.

In dyspeptic cirrhosis, the liver is large, smooth, remarkably hard, without increase in volume of the spleen. The duration is very long, even ten years. As a cause of this we may suspect the action of acetic acid, which is so frequently formed in the stomach of dyspeptics. Among the poisons from without which cause cirrhosis, are lead and alcohol.

The thing to do is to give suppleness and free play to the internal organs of the body. Any kind of displacement or congestion is remedied by special motions of the abdominal muscles. Those whom exercises around the waist tax freely, need it most. The matter of exercise is reserved for a special chapter, but must be referred to here for freedom of the vital organs. Hence tight belts are an abomination. Exercise freely the torso, and make it flexible. Turn the hips vigorously one way as far as possible and then the other. This gives a vigorous twist through the center of the body. It affects the stomach, liver, and all the vital organs. If the chest is expanded, if a full breath is retained at the same time, it affects the diaphragm. Sudden jerks are unnecessary. A certain flexibility of torso is beneficial to the circulation of the deep vital organs. Certain manipulations are helpful to the dyspeptic or to those suffering from congestion of the liver.

3. Bladder, Prostate, etc.

Urinary calculi, or stone in the bladder, are due to infection in the urinary tract as well as to stagnant flow of urine. To reduce the concentration, more water drinking is essential, as is also the use of fruit juices, vegetables, etc., which have more value than drugs advertised for that purpose. Blood in the urine is associated with calculi in the urinary tract, and sometimes it occurs from tumors of the bladder which, if neglected, show a marked tendency to become malignant.

It is upon the internal abdominal organs that the marks of misuse are impressed, though invisible. Where there is a misuse, there follows a gradual deterioration of organs and tissues, with reduced functioning. Premature decay begins in the blood vessels, the heart, and the kidneys. Chronic kidney disease brings on high blood pressure. Meat in excess is harmful to the kidneys under these conditions, as also are forms of alcohol, the use of tobacco, the constant use of condiments, and excess of the usual beverages of the dinner table.

Then there is the pancreas, which, if out of order, resembles hardening of the liver, with symptoms of emaciation, excess of fat, and indigestion. The spleen may be enlarged, when there is steady pain in that region, and shortness of breath. These organs are each essential to the individual's health, and each plays a part dependent on the cooperation of the other organs. For this reason good health and sound condition of the parts are a matter of general health. Were we conscious of our complex internal machinery, we could have no time to live. Health regulates internal anatomy to the unconscious workings of nature, but sickness gives each organ affected a sensibility which is disagreeable.

There are young persons who, for months or years, have a little albumin and a few casts in the urine, with a moderate secondary anæmia. It is very difficult to tell whether or not they have a true nephritis. As a rule they get entirely well. The secret in managing them is to give them good dietetics and out-of-door exercise. There is a group of cases of primary nephritis which run a sub-acute course from the outset and occur without discoverable cause in persons whose health previously has been good. In some persons at first there are only loss of appetite, headache, and an increasing pallor of the skin and mucous membrane.

Just when the variations of the normal bladder have fallen below par is often difficult to determine. The muscular framework of the bladder, when there is any hindrance to micturition (urination), must do more work than formerly. The effort the bladder must make, to expel its contents, in cases of stricture of the urethra or enlargement of the prostate gland, is in an increasing ratio. The normal bladder has an extraordinary vitality for the resistance of micro-organisms, but when there is a congestion of its walls, or a hindrance to urination, it becomes receptive to the invasion of bacteria. However, the intolerance of the bladder is in proportion to the extent of the changes. With patience and perseverance all the details of the inflamed bladder can be studied and reduced.

In the bladder the concretions are produced by parts of the mucous membrane of the urinary passages, occurring preferably where inflammation has caused collections of mucous and epithelial cells in the bladder acid. If the urine decomposes in the bladder, producing triple phosphates, concretions or stones can be formed of this.

In ageing men the prostate gland, situated at the neck of the bladder and about the size of a chestnut, may enlarge. Then there is frequent desire to urinate, and sometimes this is prevented by inflammation. Medical assistance is necessary. The disturbance in men from hypertrophy (enlargement) of the prostate gland is more serious than that of the menopause in women. Frequency of urination increases and becomes more difficult, with bladder distention, with the necessity of using a catheter, which while a temporary necessity will likely increase the infection. Early treatment and diagnosis is important if operative procedure is later to be avoided.

Hernia, or rupture, is a condition in which some part of the contents of the abdomen, particularly the intestine, escapes and forms an external tumor. It is usually caused by violent muscular effort or straining, and is especially apt to occur in the tropics, as a result of loss of flesh and general muscular relaxation. Though it develops gradually, its appearance is often sudden. Inguinal hernia appears as a swelling just above the fold of the groin,

NEWS AND LETTERS

Brooklyn, New York

Schenectady Avenue and Park Place

The annual election of officers resulted in almost the same corps of officers being sustained for the coming year as was had last year. Brother Archie Hawkins, formerly superintendent of the Sunday school, was given charge of the Department of Recreation and Expression, while Charles R. Hield, formerly superintendent of Recreation and Expression Department, was given the place vacated by Brother Hawkins. Brother Charles W. Harris, branch treasurer, was able to report a good balance on hand to begin the new year activities. The branch has recently adopted the envelope system for contributions. Brother Howard Mousley was appointed presiding deacon. The year with Pastor T. J. Elliott has been a happy one full of progress. We look forward to a great year this 1930.

A fine sacramental service was held February 2. It is gratifying to note the earnestness and the progressive tone of the testimonies. Thankfulness for past blessings was noted, and more than that, a determination to prepare for future service in the church. Practically all the seats in the church were occupied at this service.

For the first time in some years New York Branch has three young people in Graceland, Frances Hartshorn, Dorothy Elliott, and Billy Nichols. Each of the three, though far away, had a touch of home at Christmas time. Billy spent the holidays with his parents; Dorothy's mother, Sister T. J. Elliott, wife of the pastor, made the trip to her old home in Saint Louis and met Dorothy there for a holiday visit; and Frances had a chat with her parents by long distance telephone. All give the customary report of Graceland, that it is a fine school full of fine young people.

The choir meets every Friday night to study the oratorio The Course of Time, and finds it beautiful and full of inspiration. Chorister Roy Squire has passed the baton to Sister Amy Glassford for this work. Sister Glassford, who for the past two years has been a student of voice in the city, has been chosen to sing two soprano solos in the oratorio at which may pass on down alongside the testicle, becoming scrotal.

In femoral hernia the swelling is just below the fold of the groin, and usually much smaller than in the inguinal form. The swelling is soft and elastic, and at first goes back, or can be pushed back when the patient lies down. Sometimes it will not go back, and it is then said to be irreducible. If the hernia becomes so tightly caught in the ring through which it passes that the circulation is arrested, it is said to be strangulated, and gangrene of the intestine will result soon, unless a surgeon is consulted immediately.

The temporary treatment of hernia consists in the application of a truss. Before the truss is applied, however, the hernia must be put back or reduced; if this is not done, the truss will press on the delicate intestine and cause severe pain and inflammation.

Those having hernia, especially if strangulated or irreducible, should immediately consult a physician.

General Conference, and the choir feels fortunate in having her help in the study of this difficult work.

Wednesday night, February 5, about twenty members attended the recital debut at Carnegie Hall, of Brother James R. Houghton, of Boston, Massachusetts. They report an enjoyable evening. The following is taken from the critic's report in the New York Times of February 6: "A full and rounded baritone voice of velvety richness and ample range and power."

Brother Edstrom, from First Chicago Branch, preached for us Sunday night a few weeks ago. We are looking forward to a visit from Brother and Sister Richard Baldwin in the near future. They recently passed through New York on their way to Boston from their mission in England.

Sister Mildred Chatham, who is attending art school in Brooklyn, recently received a scholarship from Pratt Institute of Arts and Sciences, the school in which she is enrolled. She will graduate in June.

The cradle roll has received an addition since last report in the baby daughter of Brother and Sister Charles W. Harris. She has been named Janet Ruth.

Christmas was observed in this branch with a play depicting scenes from the first Christmas. It was given by the junior and intermediate members under the direction of Sister Paul Belleisle. The parts of Joseph and Mary were taken by Walter Seydam and Jeanette Deane. A playlet was given by the primary children, under the direction of Sister Ada Schenk.

Several from Brooklyn will attend the district conference in Philadelphia, February 22 and 23, also a number are planning to attend General Conference. Some will go by automobile and some by train. So great is the enthusiasm that some know already the day and hour they will leave for Independence.

Our faith and prayers have been extended in behalf of the sick and afflicted on occasions during the past few months. Sister Eva Swanker, who was very ill, is much benefited. Brother Moore is still in poor health. Sister Hazel Jack, of Peekskill, suffered an operation about Christmas time and is still confined to her bed. She is much in need of our continued prayers.

Choir Sings General Conference Music

February 14.—A packed house greeted the singers from Council Bluffs, South Omaha, and Omaha Branch Choirs at Omaha Central Church Sunday evening, February 9. The musical program was taken from J. T. Gresty's oratorio, The Course of Time, and while it was the first public appearance of the local choirs with this Simon pure Latter Day Saint oratorio, the whole presentation had the characteristics of a well-seasoned choir giving regular numbers from a much less difficult and older musical composition. Much comment and praise and many congratulations were given at the close of the service, and Saints were loath to leave the little church, so spirited and happy were they.

This but illustrates once again what true consecration and personal sacrifice will do in a worthy cause, especially when it is the cause of our Master. All who sang in the choir came from various walks of life, and no inconsiderable distance in attending rehearsals, besides having other church duties with which to keep pace. We congratulate Brother Gresty and rejoice with him in knowing that he has faithful and willing workers who together with him under the grace of God are helping to lift this department of the Lord's work to new levels. I feel that the success of any cause is largely dependent upon leadership. To have power to gather people to a common cause under adverse circumstances and to get them to work is the test of faith and ability. In this, the local leader, Sister Audentia Anderson, proved the rule, and we of this community feel indebted to her and her loyal workers for this splendid foretaste of General Conference music. We will meet you, Brother Gresty and all, April 6, at the Centennial Conference. JOHN L. COOPER.

Louisville, Kentucky

Saints of Louisville Branch are holding their own. Elder H. W. Burwell is the pastor and is supported by his two counselors, Elders W. H. Hanner and G. H. Ferguson. Other members of the priesthood are two priests, one teacher, and two deacons. All are busy men, but they find some time to devote to church work along the lines of their several callings.

January 26 it was arranged for District Missionary J. O. Dutton to begin a series of meetings. During the first week the weather was bad, and Brother Dutton was called to Sulphur to care for two funerals. One was the funeral of Abell Maymon, five-year-old son of Brother and Sister W. G. Maymon. The other was that of Doctor Abell, Sister Maymon's father. Doctor Abell was eighty-five years old; was not a member of any church. However, in the latter part of his life he liked to talk about the faith of the Saints and became somewhat favorable toward it.

The first week of the meetings the weather was bad and the interest not the best, but the last week showed a marked improvement. Several desired Brother Dutton to continue the third week, but he had arranged to begin meetings in the group at New Albany in the hall, and the request could not be granted.

The group is doing well under the general direction of Elder Burwell, and is faithfully served by Priests W. O. Robertson and E. A. Jaegers. Brother Jaegers has long been associated with the Saints at New Albany, and Brother Robertson is district bishop's agent. The group now has about as many active members as the main branch at Louisville. During this first week of their meetings they have done well at turning out, and a goodly number of nonmembers have been attending. After another week Elder Dutton is going to Byrneville to conduct a two weeks' meeting there.

The Louisville members are hopeful that some time in the near future the upper story may be put on their large basement where meetings are now being held. May they be prospered to this end and the work be more firmly established.

New Philadelphia, Ohio

Saints of this branch were pleased to have Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths, of Kirtland, with us February 9. He is the father of this branch, having organized the church here in 1885, and his many friends were glad to again welcome him. This was the second Sunday of the unified services that are being tried out here in the hope of interesting the young people in the church.

Brother Griffiths was the principal speaker of the morning services, and his talk was directed to the young of both the church and Sunday school. He gave an instructive lecture from his charts in the evening. Under his leadership a priesthood meeting was held at 2.30 in the afternoon. His instructive talk and fatherly advice were greatly appreciated by the members of that body.

Immediately following the above meeting, Brother Griffiths conferred patriarchal blessings upon Brother S. B. Mansell and Sister Edna A. Howells.

Monday and Tuesday evenings, Brother Griffiths held preaching services, and also on Wednesday evening at the home of Brother and Sister Charles Hensel, in Uhrichsville. He departed for home on Thursday.

The Women's Department has been busy. The members meet each Wednesday at the church to quilt and enjoy a pot-luck dinner at noon. The department has recently accepted two invitations to repeat its play, "How the ladies earned their dollar." The third Thursday of each month is regular business meeting and social gathering.

The Book of Mormon study class is progressing splendidly, even though we have a rather small attendance.

The members of the priesthood have been preaching some wonderful sermons the past month, and attendance has noticeably improved.

The branch was saddened by the death of Sister Margaret Gardner, of Uhrichsville, February 1. Elder William Goudy preached the funeral sermon, Elder John Carlisle assisting. A large number of the Saints from this local attended the funeral.

A Boy Scout Troop has been organized under the leadership of Brother Richard Watkins. The troop gave a social and entertainment February 1 to secure funds for its equipment.

Coldwater, Michigan

Unity of thought and action of the departments has characterized the winter's work in Coldwater, and as a result progress has been enjoyed. This is one of the oldest branches of the Reorganization, having had an uninterrupted existence since 1860. It is composed of members who wish to pass on to their friends the light and hope which are theirs.

February 11 the City Daily Reporter came out with the following write-up:

"The young people's church school at the Saints' chapel was supported by the seniors last Sunday evening in a splendid program memorializing Lincoln, the 'Savior of our Country.' After a brief, but very interesting lesson on the subject, 'Prehistoric North and South America,' sixteen of the school participated in the exercises. A sextet of girls rendered patriotic musical numbers, with Mrs. Gallagher at the piano. Papers to the number of ten were read depicting the attributes of Lincoln's life and character, taken from his biographies—from birth to death, from poverty to the White House. There was woven a rich mosaic of the wonderful career of the man who presided over the mightiest Republic on the earth in the hour of its greatest danger. The papers were so classified as to form successive steps in the development of the life of our martyred President, to the time he was claimed by the ages.

"The school was in charge of Mrs. S. W. L. Scott, and the program enlisted the close attention of the audience from start to finish. Many fine lessons were seen, and everyone was enthusiastic."

The pulpit has been blessed from Sunday to Sunday. The Sunday school is bright and cheerful. All departments are diligent, and when they fraternize and function decorum is prominent.

The subjects from pulpit and before the church school have been enthusiastically considered from the following rallying points: "And of Joseph he said, Blessed of the Lord be his land, for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, and for the deep that coucheth beneath, and for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon, and for the chief things of the ancient mountains, and for the precious things of the lasting hills, and for the precious things of the earth and fullness thereof, and for the good will of him that dwelt in the bush: let the blessing come upon the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren. His glory is like the firstling of his bullock, and his horns are like the horns of unicorns: with them he shall push the people together to the ends of the earth: and they are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and they are the thousands of Manasseh."—Deuteronomy 33: 13-17.

While we have closely adhered to the record of Joseph as the chief textbook, the lessons have included information from other sources, and all have combined to teach us that Joseph's land is great and growing greater, that her resources are many, that her products excel, and that her people are progressive. As a result of the things we have heard and studied, our faith in "the God of this land which is Jesus Christ is great."

For what purpose has God consecrated Joseph's land?

For a beautiful Zion. Listen to England's greatest Commoner, John Bright, apostrophizing America in 1862: "I have a bright vision before my gaze. I see one vast Confederation stretching from the frozen North to the glowing South and from Atlantic's wild billows westward to the calmer waters of the Pacific main. I see one people, one law, one language, and one faith, and all over that wide continent the home of freedom and the refuge for the oppressed of every race and of every clime. From this bright spot shall be proclaimed the peace that shall soften the world and assure happiness through the union and love to all God's people."—Speech in Birmingham.

Again, a senator of the United States Congress from an Illinois district has seen a vision of future America: "I see America enthroned in her virtues, presiding as the mistress of the fates of the world, vanquishing force by scorning its use. About her heart is the shield of honor, in her hands neither spear of power nor the scepter of military authority. She will but sway her wand of love, and beneath this will appear the geni of trust and faith to lead the nations of the world to justice, liberty, and peace—the mission of America to mankind."—Speech in the Senate, 1920.

We think these ideals prophetic. We should remember Jesus Christ the God of this land and "fear God, give glory to him."

Beardstown, Illinois

February 18.—Central Illinois district conference was held at Beardstown February 1 and 2. Prayer meeting was held Saturday morning at ten o'clock and the business session in the afternoon. A few visiting Saints arrived for the Saturday services, and more came for Sunday.

The following delegates were elected to General Conference: Frank Corcoran, L. C. Jones, Leah Denton, Jennie Thomas, Lena Shoemaker, Nora Williams, and Pearl Jones.

District President F. T. Mussell preached Saturday night, and at this service Ernest Thomas, of Beardstown, was ordained to the office of elder. Brother Thomas has served the branch as deacon for the past six years, and his efficient work warrants this higher calling.

Sunday afternoon Brother Edward Williams, of Macomb, Illinois, occupied the pulpit, and Brother William Vanhoosier, of Taylorville, preached Sunday night.

Brother Mussell remained here since conference and held a two weeks' series of meetings. The interest has been good; from three to twelve nonmembers attended each service.

Santa Barbara, California

February 17.—The Saints at Santa Barbara are enjoying a good spirit in the church of God. We are making progress in spreading the gospel story. A goodly number of our attendance are nonmembers, but they have expressed their desire to work with the Saints.

The Women's Department is making great progress. It has organized the girls into four groups: Blue Birds, Orioles, junior Temple Builders, and senior Temple Builders. Supervisor of young women, Hattie Newkirk, is in charge. Brother Clarence Lant has organized his boys' class into a Junior Legion.

Recreation and Expression Department Superintendent Paul Reed has encouraged a dramatic club, in which Harry Pederson will supervise. The Saints are working one with the other, and the pastor in charge, Elder Herbert Pederson, and his associates.

In times past we have enjoyed visits from Missionary George H. Wixom.

We had District President Teagarden for an all-day session. He delivered two splendid sermons and a solo. "In that beautiful garden of prayer." Elder Jack Milner, counselor to the district bishop, gave a talk on "The duty of the bishop."

Sunday, February 16, Elder Glaude Smith, from Los Angeles, was the speaker morning and evening. Saints of Santa Barbara enjoyed hearing these brothers, and we hope that we may in the future enjoy the presence of more of the officers. We extend a hearty invitation to all that pass through Santa Barbara to stop and see us.

Brentwood Branch

Saint Louis, Missouri

Brentwood Branch is again accomplishing a number of undertakings. The first Sunday of the new year we had home-coming, and the church was almost filled. February 9 was Family Day and proved a great success. It was encouraging to see so many complete family groups worshipping together. Brother B. S. Lambkin, of Burksville, Illinois, was the morning speaker and gave good advice to us as families. Every seat in the church was occupied. Every service was attended by some one who has not been present for some time. It was good to see these humble souls again taking their places in branch work.

February 13 at 8.30 p. m. a beautiful wedding occurred at the church when Eldora Mizell and Ralph N. Remington were united in matrimony, Elder C. J. Remington performing the ceremony. Again the church was taxed to capacity, and a most enjoyable time was had by all. A program and feast were prepared for the congregation.

The primary department is constantly increasing, and we are acquiring equipment to meet the demands. We now have an enrollment of forty in the primary department.

A most enjoyable time was had Friday evening at a Valentine party at the church.

Stonington, Maine

This winter has been a fairly busy one for the Saints of Stonington and of the district of Western Maine.

We were glad to have a short visit from Apostle R. S. Budd at and after the district conference in October. His sermons and personal influence at the conference were educational and uplifting.

After the conference, a hastily arranged swing round the district was made in company with the district president, Elder E. F. Robertson, Brother Budd having opportunity to preach to Saints at Stonington, Vinal Haven, and Rockland as well as at Little Deer Isle where the conference was held. Brother Robertson has also since visited all points in the district except Dixfield and held meetings. He has found opportunity for effective work almost everywhere.

At Stonington the Saints have been busy in regular church and departmental work. Attendance in all departments is good and, we believe, generally on the increase.

In November the dramatic club gave a play in the opera house, from which they realized more than fifty-five dollars. In December the Women's Department had a sale, supper, and social in the Odd Fellows' hall. This netted ninety-seven dollars.

The younger married women, and a few single ones, have recently organized a Loyal Workers Club, which seems to be in a position to do a great deal of good for the church in a social way. Not only are some women of the church there finding an opportunity for service, but several nonmembers are also active participants.

Wednesday evening, February 12, there was unusually large attendance at the prayer meeting. At the close of the service one of the sisters took the pastor's wife by the arm and led her into the large room which had been decorated for the occasion and stopped her before a beautiful birthday cake. While she was counting the candles (sixteen of them) the Orioles came marching in, singing an improvised version of a popular song, and surrounded her. By that time the entire prayer meeting crowd, considerably augmented by new arrivals, had found its way into the room.

An appropriate program followed, and Sister Robertson was made the recipient of several birthday presents, including a gold coin presented by one of the sisters on behalf of the branch and departments. Ice cream, cake, and fudge were served and a short time spent in social enjoyment.

A few weeks ago Brother Robertson exchanged pulpits with the minister of the Congregational Church. Both congregations seemed to enjoy the change.

Western Maine District has not reached its quota of baptisms, and we fear it will not do so, but we are making friends. Some of our members who have not been attending the services for a long time are becoming active, and we believe there will be new members brought into the fold after a time.

Reunion of Midland District

Midland District, England, held its January reunion in Leicester Branch January 11 and 12. Though it was unfortunate that the program as outlined could not be carried out in detail, arrangements were happily made to care for all who came, and the association together was pleasant.

At 5.30 Saturday evening refreshments were served the visitors. By this time some had arrived from Sutton-in-Ashfield, also Brother W. H. Greenwood, from Manchester. Brother Greenwood is the British Isles missionary.

For a time the reunion was unavoidably held up. Shortly after seven o'clock a telegram arrived from the district president saying that he could not arrive on time because of a mishap to his car. Other visitors arrived during the delay, including Brother J. Schofield, counselor to the district president.

The time allotted to the various departments was passed, and the time given to the Leicester Religians had arrived. Though some services had been omitted we were ready at eight o'clock to open the reunion. High Priest J. Schofield, of Birmingham, presided. A good crowd had assembled for the concert given by the Leicester Religians, and there was little variation in the program from that given November 9 and 10 at the Leicester Branch Rally. Under the direction of E. R. Chappell the entertainment was full of interest to the audience. All admitted that a most enjoyable two hours had been spent.

The Sunday sessions opened with prayer service at ten o'clock in the morning, T. W. Newport, president of Leicester Branch, in charge. Several prayers petitioned God for his blessing upon the day's services, also that the blessing of heaven might rest upon the objectives to be obtained by the church.

This was followed by a preaching service in charge of High Priest J. Schofield. During this hour District President Joseph Holmes and his family arrived. Two young members of the priesthood were speakers at this meeting. Both gave interesting talks. A solo, "How lovely are thy dwellings," was sung by Sister Ida Norton.

At two o'clock in the afternoon the Sunday school was presided over by Franklyn Schofield, district Sunday school superintendent, who addressed an interesting short talk to the young scholars on "Forward during 1930." This was followed by E. R. Chappell, who gave an attractive talk to the adults on the same topic.

An uplifting fellowship service in charge of the district president followed the Sunday school, the testimonies being encouraging to all.

At six o'clock in the evening the service was conducted by the district president, W. H. Greenwood, of the seventy, speaking from his text, Ephesians 14:12: "But unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ." A quartet selection "Let the lower lights be burning," was given by Sisters Ida Norton, E. R. Chappell, T. J. Norton, and W. B. Arrowsmith, of Birmingham.

Adelaide, South Australia

The Centennial Oratorical Contest is now finished in Australia, and we are pleased to know that our candidate came second, a bare margin behind the winner. South Australia did very well, and we are pleased with the wonderful response the young people made when called upon for such work.

Wedding bells have finished ringing for the present, and the bridal parties are settling down to a life of love and labor for the Master. Elder Charles Davies and his bride, formerly Elsa Alberts, are domiciled not far from the church in Kensington, but Elder Colin Cornish and his bride, formerly Evelyn Turner, are leaving January 16 for West-garth, Victoria, where they are to work together for the Lord. We wish these two young couples success in the sphere of work they have entered.

Our beloved pastor, Elder Velt, and his wife have been away from us for nearly two months and soon will be leaving Australia altogether for another field of labor in America. May they ever be willing workers for Christ, that when the time comes they will hear that "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." We wish them a safe voyage to and happy sojourn in America.

Many more souls have been added to the little branch here, and we hope to have more in the near future. The young people are gradually going on and the children advancing and taking their places in class work.

We were recently gladdened in having a visit from one of the young men of the young people's senior class, Brother Victor Alberts. He has been working in Sydney for a few years in the Standard Office, and we think it a credit to us to hear the good work he is doing.

All departments have been working well together, and much love and harmony prevail throughout the various meetings. All are anxious to do something for the Master.

EILEEN M. MCGRATH.

Commends Life of Coworker

February 11.—It was with much sorrow that we received the report last Saturday morning of the passing of Brother Harry C. Listenberger, president of Hibbard Branch. Because of sickness I could not respond to the request to officiate at his last earthly rites, but I wish to say that I was associated with Brother Listenberger locally for a number of years in the great cause of latter days, and to me his unswerving desire for its establishment seemed unsurpassed. He was a young man and gave himself to the restored gospel when quite young in years. His life was so dutiful as to affect every chapter in the history of Hibbard Branch, and his resolute and dauntless attitude caused many to venerate God and his work through the ideals of the church, and brought him confidence and esteem from far and near. Harry was a praying young man, and his life was a testimony of the assurance of a fairer land beyond mortal realms.

The beckoning of opportunities for wealth did not turn him from the sense of right, and when he began his undertakings he remained true to the end. Men said, "Harry is a rock, unshaken." Though his sacrifices for the work in which he was enlisted were many and great, they were not known abroad. Measuring the services of Brother Harry by the atmosphere in which he lived, the times in which he acted and spoke, the conditions he met, the remedies he offered, and the results of his contributions in the hour of need, we can say that the church and society never had a truer son, a nobler champion of the brotherhood of man, nor a purer advocate of right and justice.

The branch over which he presided stands with solemn spirit before Him who "hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with a span, and comprehendeth the dust of the earth in a measure, weighed the mountains in scales and the hills in a balance." We deeply sympathize with Hibbard Saints and the bereaved family in the loss sustained by Brother Listenberger's death.

S. W. L. SCOTT.

"Know Your Church" Sermons

Sunday evening, February 9, began a series of weekly sermons that will continue until the opening of General Conference. This series has a double purpose: Developing an appreciation of Latter Day Saintism among the membership, and drawing nonmembers toward the church. The pastor and his associate are preaching the sermons.

On the first night, W. E. Prall followed the subject, "The rise of the New Testament church." The Athenian Male Quartet and congregational singing added much to the spirit and the tone of the service. On the second Sunday evening Roy Cheville spoke on "Centuries of darkness," tracing the gradual decline in the Christian movement after the opening centuries. A girls' trio contributed music of appealing and worshipful nature.

Blair Golden Wedding

Brother and Sister G. W. Blair celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary by receiving one hundred and thirty guests at the Coliseum Monday evening, February 17. At the entrance was the receiving line of "the bride and bridegroom," and their children: Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Yonker, Washington, District of Columbia; Mrs. Hazel Hart, Omaha, Nebraska; and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Blair and daughter, Rosalie, Lamoni, and a nephew and wife, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Nicholson, Des Moines, Iowa.

The dining room was beautiful in a profusion of green and gold festooning, candles, chair coverings, bouquets of jonquils, acacias, and fuchsias.

A quartet composed of Mr. and Mrs. Evan Walden, Beatrice Gates, and Roy Cheville sang old-time classics between courses. Roy Cheville acted as toastmaster and introduced three friends of the family as speakers. J. F. Garver pictured "The Lamoni of the bride and bridegroom," the village of 1880 to which the young couple came one week after their marriage. The railroad had been constructed only a few months before, and the town consisted of a few buildings in the midst of a cornfield. Oscar Anderson, of Des Moines, was assigned the subject, "Fifty years in Lamoni." He reviewed the half century of public service and religious spirit of the Blairs in civic offices and church work. W. E. Prall expressed for the guests the appreciation of the mutual devotion, marital loyalty, and friendly spirit of the Blairs. He commented on the inspiration and exemplary influence of such homes.

Arthur Oakman sang "O promise me" and "Ah, sweet mystery of life." Then came the strains of Lohengrin's "Wedding march" as the bride and bridegroom, attended by their son and two daughters took their places in a corner of the dining hall. While "Home, sweet home" was played very softly, Roy Cheville in a quiet ceremonial retold the beauty and fidelity of the marriage pledge made a half century ago and offered a benediction upon their golden wedding. As a fitting climax, Arthur Oakman sang "Blest be the tie that binds" as the bridal party exchanged family greetings.

Mr. and Mrs. Blair were married in Sandwich, Illinois,

February 17, 1880. They came to Lamoni the following week and have lived here practically ever since. In church circles he is known as the son of W. W. Blair. At present he is a member of Lamoni Stake High Council, of the Lamoni Development Association, a teacher in the church school, and a member loyal to the church in its local and general program.

The many friends of these good people throughout the church will join in good wishes on this fiftieth anniversary of their wedding.

"The Second Milers"

Last fall the leaders of the church school launched a movement for the religious education of the young people of the church who were not college students. The movement has taken the form of an organized class, meeting for study and conducting social and expressional activities during the week. Recently they have selected as their name the term of Harry Emerson Fosdick, "The Second Milers."

Their president, Pearl Leise, and sponsor, Fred Condit, have been pushing the Tenth Legion movement, and by general publicity and personal interviews have been enlisting several young people to meet the requirements of being a Legionnaire.

Last week the young women of the class entertained the young men at a Valentine party at the J. A. Lane home. There were more than forty members of the class present, and the pastors of the church were guests.

South Bend and Mishawaka Branch

827 Dale Avenue, Mishawaka, Indiana

The year was ushered in with a new year's party for the Oriole Girls at the home of Brother and Sister Freeman. Eleven girls were present. The early evening was spent playing games. Lunch was served at ten o'clock, after which the girls sang hymns, taking turns accompanying at the piano. Just before twelve o'clock prayer was offered, and as the whistles blew the girls were taken home, feeling that they had spent a happy evening.

January 5 the branch opened the Week of Prayer at the sacramental service. Attendance was splendid, and a good meeting was enjoyed. In the afternoon two carloads drove to Elkhart to meet with the group while two precious souls, Mary Newland, wife of Brother Newland, and Glen Stanley, Sister Newland's brother, entered the waters of baptism. Elder C. B. Freeman officiated. Carol Freeman, of Mishawaka, was also baptized. Thus were two family circles completed.

January 11 at ten o'clock in the morning a group met for prayer at Brother Freeman's home. At the same hour a group met at the home of Brother Walters at Elkhart. An hour was spent in earnest prayer, followed by another hour of testimony. Sunday morning at eleven o'clock the week was completed, and the Saints felt strengthened.

Elder William Osler, district president, preached morning and evening. He also preached Tuesday and Friday evenings, and again the evening of January 26. He explained the Apostasy and Restoration and gave emphasis to the principles of the gospel. The historical play, "The birth of the prophet," was presented that evening.

The Department of Recreation and Expression closed the month with a penny social at the home of Brother and Sister F. E. Myers. A happy time was enjoyed. This department has organized study classes at the Sunday evening hour and finds interest and attendance better. Half the time is spent in entertaining features and half in study. The hour is followed by preaching.

The Sunday school and Women's Department have splendid attendance, and we believe their work tends decidedly forward.

Hammond, Indiana

1153 Monroe Street

February 18.—Apostle D. T. Williams was in Hammond February 10, 11, and 12, presenting "The history of the early church" and "The history of the Reorganization" by means of a series of slides. The Saints responded in a whole-hearted manner, helping to make the meetings successful. Many brought their friends with them to enjoy the gospel message. Several from West Pullman were here to worship with us. Surely it would be beneficial to all to have slide pictures of subjects from the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants with which to teach God's laws to the members, especially those laws pertaining to moving to Zion.

February 2 a very good sacramental service opened the month. The meeting was in charge of Pastor R. W. Smith, and attendance was gratifying. A beautiful spirit was present, and all were made to feel our responsibility in renewing our covenant.

The Women's Department is meeting regularly at the various homes. However, one week recently the regular meeting was suspended, and the members met in the evening to work on their play, "Sewing for the heathen." This production will be ready for presentation February 28. The proceeds will go to the Women's Department.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has a full program this year. It is planning to present one good program a month, this to include among other things the play "Conversations," by President Elbert A. Smith, which is being printed in Vision. This month a diversion from the regular order will occur, and the play will be given on Sunday night. The program given January 31 was well attended and proved a success.

February 8 a good representation from Hammond journeyed en masse to West Pullman to see the White Masque Players present "Simon's wife's mother." Such experiences engender a friendly feeling and greater fellowship between Saints of neighboring branches.

The choir practice movement has taken on new impetus under the leadership of D. H. Smith. The choir meets every Tuesday evening at the different homes and usually closes the evening with a bit of refreshment. We feel that besides learning to sing together we are learning to know each other better.

Brother and Sister D. H. Smith are happy over their new son, Robert Wayne, born December 31, 1929.

In order to have enough money for supplies at the close of the year, the Sunday School Department and Department of Recreation and Expression have joined a Christmas Saving Club large enough for this purpose. The venture is a new one for the group as a whole, and we hope it will prove adequate for our needs.

Elder William Osler stopped here on his return from his home in Canada, after spending the holidays with his family. We were glad to have him with us, even if it was for only a week. He is optimistic in the gospel work.

The business meetings held at the close of 1929 were a credit to the branch. Much the same corps of officers was elected for this year. Elder R. W. Smith was reelected pastor, and his associates have pledged themselves by their actions to make 1930 a banner year.

Many in this group are looking forward to and planning with interest for the General Conference.

Elder C. B. Woodstock was here February 16 at the eleven o'clock hour and gave an interesting discourse in regard to our fitness to redeem Zion.

A vote of thanks has been extended the Herald Publishing House by the newly organized Sunday school at Groton, New York, for literature sent them. Of the organization meeting of this group, Sister Grace Parker, secretary and treasurer, writes: "A meeting for the purpose of organizing a Sunday school was held in the State Road Schoolhouse Sunday, February 9, at 9.30 a. m., there being eighteen persons present. The meeting was called to order by Robert Dawson chairman, Ethel Dawson at the organ. 'Rock of Ages' was the opening song, followed by prayer by Robert Dawson. The following officers were elected: Superintendent, Robert Dawson; assistant superintendent, Bert Nobles; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Grace Parker; janitor, Ernest Dawson; primary teacher, Ethel Dawson; young people, Mrs. Bert Nobles; adult teacher, Mrs. Robert Dawson." The school will send for other supplies as soon as arrangements can be made.

Holden Stake

Atherton

The play written in Vision was given in our branch by some of the young folks and was very much enjoyed by all. About thirty of our young members attended the meetings held in Sugar Creek, and furnished the music for the evening. Brother H. V. Minton is holding meetings with much interest.

Brother A. E. Allen, pastor, has started a series of sermons on stewardship in which he is giving definite information. Brother J. M. Terry recently gave a good old-fashioned missionary sermon.

Since last writing Brother D. R. Hughes has preached here. He said, Just as there are stop signs and traffic laws on the highway, so are there stop signs on the highway of life. In the hustle and bustle of life we must stop for prayer, to bow at the family altar, to ask a blessing at the table, to worship God in various ways, or we must suffer the consequence of disobeying laws.

Last Sunday Elder R. D. Weaver gave two most encouraging sermons that make for renewal of courage and energy in God's work. His text was "I sat where they sat." He made us conscious of the fact that Christ so suffered while here that he understands all our trials.

The new church building is rapidly nearing completion.

Warrensburg

The work at Warrensburg is progressing, thanks to the impetus given by Brother Voas Meredith during his stay here, and the faithfulness of our leader, G. W. Hancock, in following the program laid out for him, and the assistance received from the members, especially the young people.

Following is an outline for February and March made by our efficient young workers, Otis Athey and Clyde Johnson:

Stewardship

Young People's Division. Subject: "The origin of stewardship." Reports or talks based on the three church books.

Adult Division. Subject: "The nature and purpose of stewardship." 1. Plan for stewardship; 2. Persons who may become stewards; 3. How to become a steward; 4. The purpose of stewardship.

Children's Division. Subject: "The children's part in stewardship." 1. Obedience to parents and teachers; 2. Kindness and other virtues.

Adult Division. Subject: "The church's present group stewardship project at Atherton." 1. Purpose of the movement; 2. Plan of the work; 3. Progress of the movement; 4. Its future possibilities.

Children's Division. Subject to be decided by the head of the children's division.

Young People's Division. Subject: "The response of youth to stewardship." 1. Moral service; 2. Personal service; 3. Financial aid; 4. Youth's vision; 5. Personal attitudes.

Marshall

The pulpit both morning and night February 16 was occupied by Brothers Will and Ralph Ridge.

The Blue Birds held a social the night of Valentine's Day at the home of their leader, Sister El Marie McCormick. A sum of $8.50 was added to the church budget, which comes in very helpfully since the branch funds are behind the closed doors of a local bank.

Boone, Iowa

February 15.—Boone Branch is not large, but several members have been gained in the last year and are proving a great help in the branch. All the different departments are had here, and they are actively functioning. The young people are alert and helping more than ever before.

Elder C. A. Kress, district missionary, concluded a ten-night series of meetings February 5. To the meetings he drew a large crowd.

The red and blue contest was initiated to encourage attendance, and the result was that we got many nonmembers to attend who otherwise would not have been attracted to our meetings. One woman who had not been to church for twelve years attended quite regularly. The crowds grew each night until the last night, when the church was packed.

Thursday evening we had a social evening and invited everyone who desired to come. The church parlors were full of old and young, members and nonmembers. All took part in the games in charge of Brother Kress. At the close of the evening, refreshments were served by the losing side of the contest.

While he was here Brother Kress preached three funeral sermons and administered to several sick people. We have no elder in our branch.

Branch President Frank Walters has been ill but is improving at present.

We are expecting Brothers Albert Loving and C. A. Kress here February 23 to hold a three weeks' series of meetings, and we are hoping and praying that much good will be accomplished in this place. Several are ready to come into the fold.

A number are going from Boone to General Conference.

The work moves forward, each one trying in his way to serve the Master.

Onaway, Michigan

Northern Michigan District

Onaway Branch is pressing on. After being without a missionary for some time, we were greatly pleased when Brother J. J. Ledsworth was sent into Northern Michigan District. He came to Onaway in the early part of November, remaining a week, during which time he proved himself an able speaker. Not only did he win the favor of the Saints but of those not members of the faith. When he left he intended to return about the middle of December, but owing to his mother's illness he was unable to come until January 3. His assistant, Brother Marshall McGuire, came about two weeks before Christmas and conducted services. He too proved a good speaker and under the power of the Spirit preached some excellent sermons. After Brother Ledsworth's arrival they continued services here for another week, then went to Afton, another part of this branch, conducting two weeks of meetings there. From Afton they went to Cheboygan for a week, then back to Onaway for another week. As a result of their labors six were baptized here January 19.

The Spirit of God has been in our midst. At one of the Sunday morning prayer meetings the members experienced an unusual outpouring of the gifts of the gospel. The Spirit commended the members for their consecration and admonished the group to live more in unity. Brother Fred Truax, branch leader, was told that the Father was pleased with the way he was leading the branch and that he should be called to greater responsibility. Again at the confirmation service January 19 were we given great blessing. Spiritual meetings have been experienced, and we pray that we may live so that God's Spirit can always be with us.

At the annual business meeting the following officers were elected: President, Fred Truax; associate elder, Max A. Kramer; clerk, Katherine Gagie; treasurer, Owen Wood; pianist, Doris Kramer; assistant pianist, Nora Fairman; chorister, Ruth Wood; publicity agent, Mary Wilkinson. Sunday school officers: superintendent, Elder Max Kramer; assistant superintendent, Ruth Wood; secretary, Mabel Wood; pianist, Doris Kramer; assistant pianist, Nora Fairman; chorister, Sister N. Fairman.

The women's auxiliary is trying to do its part to help God's work along. The officers for 1930 are: President, Cora Truax; vice president, Adelia Fairman; secretary, Mary E. Wilkinson. We meet every two weeks. At present we are making a friendship quilt of unbleached muslin, embroidered with red. We are planning a Valentine social. There are only a few active members in this organization, and for this reason the amount of work accomplished seems sometimes to be small. We are glad, however, to be able to say that we have paid our tithing for this year, and we know God will bless every member who puts forth honest effort to serve him.

February 9 the evening service closed the series of meetings in Onaway, and it was with regret that we saw our brothers leave. Nevertheless we realize that there are others who need them as well as we. Brother Ledsworth was the speaker Sunday evening, and he was endowed with the Spirit.

We desire that we may live in unity and according to the wonderful lessons that have been taught us. We wish to be steadfast and willing to do our part in redeeming Zion.

Central Church

February has proved to be a very mild month; in fact, it has established a remarkable weather record extending over a period of a number of years. This extremely mild weather has brought about a good attendance of the membership at nearly all meetings. Last Sunday was no exception. The church school worship period was ushered in by the prelude "Willows," by Roland Diggle, Hazel Scott at the organ. A hymn from Zion's Praises was sung, after which Brother James Curtis offered the invocation. The all-inspiring anthem, "Beautiful Savior," by Christiansen, was reverently sung by the choir and served as the beginning of a spiritual service.

The morning story was told by Brother George Mesley, who is capable of arousing the enthusiasm of the children. Each Sunday they look forward with eager anticipation to this story. A recent examination in the various departments covering a period of four or five stories proved that the stories had reached the hearts of the children and there found lodging. The winners in this examination in the primary department were Dickie Thutchley, Lynn Sandy, James Curtis, jr., Birdie Cochran, and Alta Young; in the junior department, Iris Rush and Glenn Scott, jr.

Following the lesson study, with the return to the main auditorium, a hymn was sung, after which Elder Leonard Lea, of Independence, occupied the sacred desk, delivering a splendid discourse.

At three o'clock the stake choir met for rehearsal of the oratorio The Course of Time, and was given a thorough practice by Brother Evan Fry, conductor.

The 7.45 service was in charge of Bishop F. B. Blair. Two beautiful quartet numbers, "The prodigal son" and "Cast thy bread upon the waters," by J. A. Parks, were given by members of the choir, Alice Smeeton, Irene Wolfe, Estelle Moore, and Velma Nunn. The continuation of the sermon series, "What do we believe" was competently handled by Elder R. J. Lambert, using for his theme "The principles and ordinances." This series has been put forth in an effort to acquaint our neighbors with the doctrine of Latter Day Saintism.

Recently the choir met at the home of Brother and Sister Ross Moore for a short rehearsal, after which the gathering was turned into a general get-together meeting. Light refreshments were served, and the choir members departed with a feeling of a much closer communion with each other.

The dinner given by the I. X. L. Class to the members of the adult division of the church school was well patronized, and a good time was reported by all. The adult division is entering whole-heartedly into the social gatherings prepared in behalf of its members, and much good is being derived; a closer fellowship prevails throughout this department.

Thus far the Central Basket Ball Team has played ten games of which eight have been won and two lost. Chelsea has won seven, lost three; Fourth Kansas City won four, lost 6. Bennington won one, lost five. Five more games are to be played, and the winner will play the winning team in the Elliott League. Of course we are rooting for Central boys. Tuesday our boys will play Chelsea boys at Humboldt School.

After an illness lasting over a period of months, Sister Minnie Swanson departed this life February 22. Sister Swanson has been a faithful member of Central Church for a number of years, having worked in various departments. She was a member of the Ladies' Opportunity Class, having been its president for several years prior to the illness which culminated in her death. Funeral services were conducted by Bishop Blair from the home on Benton Boulevard on Tuesday afternoon. The sermon was delivered by Pastor Cyril E. Wight. Surviving are her husband and one daughter, Sister Cathrine Smasson, of Wichita, Kansas. She was laid to rest in Mount Washington Cemetery. Her many friends extend sympathy to the family at this sad hour.

Central was happy to recently welcome Sister Mable Bowser and Sister Caroline Bowser into its ranks through the ordinance of baptism. Both have been active in the church school and choir. They are the wives of Brothers George and Jay Bowser, respectively, and we are happy that they are one with us.

Quindaro Church

Sunday, February 2, Everett Hoffman, husband of Sister Loretta Beggs Hoffman, was baptized by Elder E. N. Palmer and confirmed by Brother Palmer and Pastor Higgins.

Four more candidates will be admitted to the church next Sunday through the ordinance of baptism.

Elder Leonard Lea was the speaker Sunday, February 16, at the 7.45 o'clock hour, using as his text Psalm 116:9: "I will walk before the Lord in the land of the living."

"The nineteenth century prophet," written by Elbert A. Smith, was given by the senior Bible class in Recreation and Expression. Characters were Brother and Sister Ernest Hawkins, Baby Joseph, and Brother Albert Hallier.

Tonight from six o'clock to 7.30 a chili supper will be served at the church under the auspices of the Hi-Moon Chapter of Temple Builders.

A special program consisting of a reading, "Titus, a comrade of the cross," read by Mrs. Samuel L. Adair, and musical numbers was given last Sunday evening at six o'clock under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

Fourth Church

The vision of Zion redeemed, faith to accomplish this great and stupendous task, and a touch of God's love within the souls of the Saints combined to produce within the hearts of all who worshiped together from the early morning prayer service to the close of the sacramental service February 2, a feeling of reverence and deep consecration.

A splendid program was given by the young people at 6.30 in the evening. Brother A. R. Tannehill read a paper "My appreciation of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." The members listened to well-prepared sketches on the lives of the Prophet Joseph Smith and Emma Hale Smith by Brothers Norman and Mitchel Carter, Vada Allen, and Tyra Lueking. Norman treated the visions of Joseph Smith and the organization of the church, also the publication of the Book of Mormon; Mitchel the events from the organization of the church to the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. Vada Allen gave the early history of Emma Hale Smith, describing how she acted as scribe for her husband as he translated the Book of Mormon and her fidelity to God and her family. Sister Lueking continued with the story of the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum to the death of Emma. She related with feeling the great faith of Emma in her God and in the church and her love for God and her children.

A rabbit supper was served at the church Friday night, February 7. Many from other local churches were present.

Two days later during the family service Brother L. E. Babcock talked on "What the church means to me." Sister J. O. Worden read an article from one of the papers published at Independence about the work on the Auditorium. Elaine Smith talked to the young people, and there was a duet by Marion and Fay Sneed, "The little white church on the corner."

Brother Worden preached at the eleven o'clock hour, and Patriarch Ammon White in the evening. The subject of the latter was "The organization of the church and the doctrines thereof."

Missionary H. A. Koehler spoke the morning hour of February 16.

Bible stories in pantomime composed a new feature at the young people's service in the evening. The group was equally divided into four parts, and each section chose a story from the Bible and gave it in pantomime.

Second Nephi 12: 1-16 was read by Pastor J. O. Worden at the eight o'clock hour, and his theme was "Faith." It seemed that the church was filled by the influence of the Spirit of God. The church has been filled every service for the last month, and many outsiders have been present.

The Wednesday night prayer services have been well attended and a good spirit is present.

Gladstone Church

Under the supervision of Sister Myrno Tanner, choir director, and Sister L. C. Connelly, musical director, the choir is practicing regularly, and as a result the music shows much improvement.

Pastor C. A. Selbe and Elder C. G. Lewis have been recent speakers, their instruction being enjoyable.

Brother E. Day is a great help to the boys' basket-ball team.

Last Sunday was the last of the church services at the Gladstone Theater, 4648 Saint John Avenue, as our group is moving to its new location, 4801 Anderson Avenue, in the Masonic Building. The entrance will be on Anderson Avenue. Four meetings will be held on Sunday, instead of two as at the other place. A cordial invitation is extended for all to worship with us.

Argentine Church

The O. B. K's occupied the services of the day with an address of welcome by their president, Brother Harry Hays, at eleven o'clock. There was a response by the pastor, Elder R. E. Browne, and sermon by Elder George Mesley. After the close of this service, a luncheon was served which proved to be an enjoyable social event.

At 7.45 Pastor in Zion John Sheehy made a splendid effort in refreshing the memory of his audience on the history of the church and telling the program of the Centennial, which takes place commencing with April 6 this year at Independence.

Stone Church

The Jews gave Christ to the world; another nation must give the world to Christ. God permitted the Latter Day Saints to give to the world the doctrine of stewardships, the program of Christian living. Must another people give the world to stewardships? We must first accept and practice stewardships ourselves before the world can be brought to see the divinity of it. This was the substance of the morning sermon by Pastor John F. Sheehy. For a scripture lesson he read the story of the Day of Pentecost, the nineteen hundredth anniversary of which will be observed this year.

Robert Miller, organist, and George Miller, pianist, played as an offertory the Overture from Handel's "Messiah," following which the Stone Church Choir sang the opening chorus, "And the glory of the Lord," under the direction of Paul N. Craig. Elder E. A. Thomas was in charge of the service and was assisted by Elder Fred Wilkinson.

For the four Sundays in the month of February the congregation of the young people's church, which meets in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church at eleven o'clock, has listened to sermonets presenting various aspects of the theme "I will be loyal." On the closing Sunday the talk "Loyalty," by Earl Page, presented in review Loyalty to self, to home, to family, to church, and to God. Under the leadership of Sister H. C. Burgess, the music gave harmony and emphasis to the service. Elder T. A. Thiel was in charge.

If the church takes to itself the form or plan set down by Christ, it is Christ's church, declared Elder C. Ed. Miller in his sermon "Church organization," Sunday evening, and proceeded to prove how the form of a thing in this world determines what it will be. The rock upon which the church is built is composed of truths which are everlasting.

In keeping with the theme of the evening, George Anway sang "Organize my church and kingdom," from the Saints' Hymnal. Before the invocation Sister McPherson, soprano, sang "Prayer." Elder H. G. Barto was assisted in the stand by Elder W. A. McDowell.

Among the People in Zion

About fifty young people, members and friends of the Y. P. R. Class (Young People's Research), listened to an excellent lecture on "The literature of the church" by Elder Richard J. Lambert at six o'clock Sunday evening. Each Sunday evening at this hour the class assembles to hear lectures in its course of study, "Know your own church." Thus far speakers have been Presidents Elbert A. Smith and F. M. McDowell, Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael, Apostles F. Henry Edwards, J. F. Curtis, and John F. Garver, Sister Inez Davis, and Elders R. J. Lambert and J. A. Gardner. Next Sunday evening Bishop J. A. Koehler will discuss with the young people "Zion, its meaning and philosophy." All young people interested in the church and its program are invited to meet with the class in the Y. K. T. classroom.

For two hours and more each Sunday afternoon the Messiah Choir of Independence practices on the oratorio The Course of Time, under the leadership of Brothers J. T. Gresty and Paul N. Craig. Intensive work is under way, and many private rehearsals are had each week in the homes of Independence. It was announced Sunday that the entire chorus will assemble with the orchestra and band in the lower room of the Auditorium March 9 for the first combined rehearsal. Now that progress is evident in the rehearsals of the various difficult choruses, the singers are becoming enthusiastic in their work.

The intermediate department of the Stone Church Sunday school and a number of older juniors, under the leadership of Sisters H. C. and S. A. Burgess, are beginning rehearsals on a cantata which they, assisted by young singers from Kansas City Stake, will give at General Conference. The boys and girls are pleased to be included on the General Conference program.

Wedding bells have been ringing for a trio of graduates of the Independence Sanitarium School of Nursing. February 18 Miss Vida Aurilee Spence was married to Everett Edward Landon at the home of Elder C. I. Carpenter, the marriage service being read by Elder Carpenter. The couple were attended by Miss Jennie Gunlock and John Horn. Only a few close friends witnessed the ceremony, which took place at 7.30 in the evening. Brother and Sister Landon will make their home in Independence.

Miss Minnie Rasmussen was recently married to Mr. Roscoe Cornell, and Miss Vida Hemstock is now the bride of Mr. Busch.

Friends and relatives gathered at the home of Sister J. B. Gunder February 18, to give a bridal shower in honor of Miss Madge Nesbitt soon to become the bride of C. James Hoskins. The couple surprised their friends by having the marriage service solemnized that evening, Elder R. J. Lambert reading the ceremony. Miss La Rena Bullard, niece of the bride, sang "At Dawning" and "Beloved, it is morn," and Miss Kathryn Haberlein played the wedding march from "Lohengrin."

Walnut Park

Sunday, February 16, the morning speaker was Patriarch F. A. Smith, who gave an instructive and edifying sermon on the subject, "The resurrection." The evening speaker was Elder W. D. Tordoff, whose subject was "The Restoration."

Sunday, February 23, the morning speaker was Elder Earl Hoisington, whose theme was "Seek to bring forth and establish my Zion." The choir contributed a fitting anthem, "More love to thee, O Christ."

The regular monthly priesthood meeting was held at the church from six to seven o'clock in the evening. Important matters relating to priesthood work were discussed.

Patriarch J. T. Gresty, formerly of Australia, who is in America for the purpose of training the Centennial Choir for the presentation of the oratorio, The Course of Time, gave an interesting lecture in the evening, discussing the oratorio. The Saints of Walnut Park were pleased to have him explain this wonderful musical production, and because of his explanation they will appreciate its presentation all the more. The choir also gave a fitting number as part of the worship service in the evening. Brother Gresty was much pleased with the singing of the choir and its individual members, and paid them some fine compliments.

A visitor from New Westminster, British Columbia, Sister Samuel Pope, was also present at the evening service. Sister Pope intends to remain in Independence until after General Conference. The Saints of Walnut Park hope she will enjoy her visit.

East Independence

The pie supper sponsored by the young people February 14 proved a social and financial success. The entertainment provoked much merriment, and everyone exerted himself to make his neighbor happy. The children who had to stay at home because of chickenpox felt that they missed a good time. Proceeds of the evening have been turned to the fund to be used in equipping the lower hall of the Auditorium as a gymnasium and recreational center.

Sermons of late have been much appreciated by those who have been able to be present. Some have been hindered in attendance because of sickness at home. Sister Eunice Scofield was recently summoned to the bedside of her aged mother, who seems likely to pass away at any time. Sister Scofield made the journey to Stockton, California, accompanied by her brother, Hiram Kinney. They found their mother alive and able to greet them with happiness after the long span of years of separation. Little David Friend, who has been very ill with pneumonia, is up and about the house. He hopes soon to be back in school.

A farewell party was given Friday evening, February 21, to David Spease and family and William Stowell and family, who are leaving in the near future. We suppose they will meet with the Blue Springs, Missouri, congregation, but we hope it will be possible for them to meet with us at times.

Brother J. J. Teeter, who seems one of us, having formerly made his home in East Independence, was the speaker last Sunday morning. He spoke of the lives of service given to their country by Washington and Lincoln and drew many lessons from their illustrious examples.

The annual community sing, which is quite an event to the people around Fairmount Church, occurred Sunday night. Fairmount church people, East Independence members, and Spring Branch and Dekalb schools joined under the leadership of Mrs. F. T. Frazier to honor the illustrious people whose birthdays occur in February. The Reverend Williams, pastor of Fairmount Church, gave the invocation and offered a few words of welcome and invitation. Brother Roy Young led the congregational singing, which was interspersed with numbers from various groups, classes and organizations. The evening was closed with the singing of "Good night, ladies" by the congregation, and Pastor of East Independence L. W. Moffet gave the benediction.

Des Moines District

A banquet for the members of the priesthood of the district, with their wives, was held in the church dining room in Des Moines Friday night, December 20, 1929. The committee on arrangements was composed of Stephen Robinson, C. B. Hartshorn, and Clyde McDonald. Elder C. E. Chapman was toastmaster and rendered excellent service in this capacity. His quick wit and fund of good stories kept everyone in good humor, and the time passed pleasantly for the fifty or more banqueters. Sister J. W. Rudkin presided over the kitchen and had charge of the entire program of preparation and serving. She had a splendid group of helpers, and the work was done efficiently.

The theme of the service was presented from various angles by the speakers. Elders A. L. Loving and C. A. Kress spoke from the viewpoint of the missionary, Brother H. Castings for the district, Brother Hartshorn for the branch, and Apostle F. Henry Edwards for the general church. Each talked from his own experiences, and many good things were said.

The district conference began with a young people's banquet the night of February 7 under the direction of Stephen Robinson, Sister Rudkin, and William Robinson, departmental superintendents for the district. Brother Joseph W. Johnson was toastmaster and served well on this occasion. "Give of your best to the Master" was the theme. Brother N. V. Anderson decorated the dining room.

The prayer of blessing was by Lowell Carlson, one of the young people, and the program consisted of songs, music, and readings, talks being made by Herbert Germer, B. M. Grey, John F. Garver, D. T. Williams, and Lola Harvey. A play entitled "Renting Jimmie" was given under the direction of Masile Dalbey. This was a special feature, which received the applause of everyone.

Herbert Germer has just graduated from East High and is about to enter Drake University. His talk, entitled "Sail on," was very good and showed careful preparation, as also did that of the other young man on the program, Brother Grey, whose theme was "I would be true." Brother Garver's toast was "Win one for Christ," and he emphasized that we must all be missionaries. Sister Harvey talked on "Loyalty to high ideals," stressing the necessity of aiming high if we reach the heights. "Partnership with God" was ably presented by Brother Williams.

It is impossible to chronicle all of the evening's events in the small space allotted us, and so we let it suffice to say that an enjoyable evening was spent despite the fact that many came who had not made reservation for the banquet. Because of this, some were disappointed, the women who served were overtaxed, and Stephen Robinson was perplexed. There were enough "loaves and fishes," however, to serve most of those present, although there were not any baskets left.

After a good prayer service which began at 9.30 Saturday morning, the business of the conference was taken up at 10.45. After the adoption of the printed report, the delegates were elected by nomination and ballot to General Conference. At two o'clock in the afternoon the election of district officers was held, and the personnel of the official corps remained unchanged. Apostle D. T. Williams delivered the charge to the officers.

The funeral service of Sister Andrew Wicker was held at Hartford, Iowa, in the community church at the same hour of the afternoon business meeting. Sisters Germer, Pratt, and Morey sang, and Sister William Kaestner played the piano. Brother McDonald preached the sermon to a large congregation of relatives and sympathizing friends.

Brother Garver preached at 7.45 a powerful discourse on some of the fundamentals of our philosophy. He lectured to the priesthood at 8.30 Sunday morning, there being twenty-five present.

The district officers had charge of the Sunday school, Des Moines teachers in charge of classes. At eleven o'clock Brother D. T. Williams preached to the largest congregation that has ever assembled in a conference in the new church. The sacrament was had at two o'clock, when a two hours' season of spiritual enjoyment was had.

A program of entertainment was furnished at 6.30 in the evening under the direction of the district superintendent. It was thoroughly enjoyed by those who furnished it and those who listened.

Brother Williams's sermon at 7.45 was delivered to a large and attentive audience. The appeal was strong that we turn our attention now to the tasks that must be done. Reference was made to the poem "Columbus," by Joaquin Miller, as the closing thought, "Sail on, sail on and on."

A lasting impression was given the Saints by the visit of these two members of the Quorum of Twelve to Des Moines. We are expecting a greater effort from all the Saints to result from their assistance.

Inspiration

By Ruth McNickle Kirby

I feel the thrilling touch of fire divine—
 'Tis but a trembling spark, I know—
 And yet it lights the shadowed, smoldering mind
 And makes the embers ebb and glow.
 I feel again the pulsing, pregnant joy
 Of life's vast, surging, onward flow.

It penetrates the utmost bounds of earth—
 The universe doth tremble at its power.
 Each atom leaps with joy in praise of God;
 Death holdeth vengeance only for an hour—
 Life's too forceful, too magnetic, too divine
 To yield for death to ravage and devour.

I see! The veil is lifted and I see
 A higher path, rough-hewn, tear-washed, but sweet
 With fragrance, subtle, beckoning the way
 Where lie, undimmed, the prints of martyr's feet,
 Deep crimson, pleading silently to heaven,
 To Him who died to make their lives complete.

Railroad Ticket Rates to General Conference

Reduced fares to General Conference have been granted by the railroads on what is known as the Round Trip Identification Certificate Plan, instead of the usual certificate plan heretofore applying to General Conference traffic. The Identification Certificate Plan provides for the sale of round-trip tickets at fare and one half of current fares, with minimum of $1 for round trip, upon presentation of identification certificate, which will be issued by the Transportation Department direct to members of the church applying for such certificate. One certificate will suffice for all members of the family. These certificates are now ready for distribution and will be mailed to all members requesting them.

Tickets will be sold going and returning same route, except from stations in Arizona, British Columbia, California, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington, from which territory tickets will be sold going via any direct route and returning via any other direct route. Certain indirect routes will be authorized from this territory at fares slightly higher than those applying via direct routes. Tickets will be sold to Independence or Kansas City, Missouri, dates of sale being as follows: From all points in the United States and Canada, with the following exceptions, dates of sale of tickets will be April 3 to 9, with return limit April 25. The exceptions are: New England, dates of sale April 2 to 8, return limit April 25; Montana, Southern Idaho, Utah, Alberta, dates of sale April 2 to 8, return limit April 26; Arizona, British Columbia, Nevada, Northern Idaho, Oregon (except via California), Washington, April 1 to 7, return limit April 28; California, March 31 to April 6, return limit April 28; Oregon (via California), March 30 to April 5, return limit April 28. Passengers must reach original starting point prior to midnight of date of final limit, and tickets must be validated by ticket agent before boarding train for return journey.

Tickets good for thirty days from date of sale will be sold on basis of fare and three fifths.

It must be understood that these reduced fares apply only to church members and dependent members of the family; and the name of the member to whom the certificate is issued, together with names of dependent members of the family for whom tickets are desired, must be filled in before the Identification Certificate is presented to ticket agent. Arrangements for tickets should be made well in advance of your departure, to avoid any possible delay.

Address Transportation Department, Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, for your Identification Certificate.

EDITORIAL

Finish the Auditorium

In the Official column is an article signed by Bishop Carmichael, to which our readers and all Saints should give attention. The Auditorium at Independence is taking its place among the great buildings of the country, and there is a growing pride among Latter Day Saints in this their greatest building so far erected. Money spent towards its completion becomes a permanent asset. Besides this, each job completed is a move towards the finished structure, and our people with their record for completing tasks well begun will not be satisfied till they can say, "And this task, too, is finished!"

I am quite sure that the Saints who will assemble at our Centennial Conference will sense the great need for such a building to meet the demands which our church progress has developed for such a community building. Already the capacity of present finished quarters is being pressed, and as rapidly as possible other portions should and must be put into use.

To call for money to finish this fine building is but to ask the Saints to advance their own cause and welfare. It is their building, designed to meet their needs, and promote their welfare.

To help finish the great Auditorium is an opportunity for everyone who can contribute to serve a good cause, and every Saint who has money or other means to contribute should rejoice because opportunity is afforded to help in a material way towards our church progress.

The work which is now under way is considered essential to care for the needs of this conference, and I should have been greatly disappointed should we have been under the necessity of going into this conference with the building no farther towards completion than it was at the time of the conference of 1928. In faith we have moved towards getting the building in better condition, and this faith encircles the Saints as well as Divinity. And I can not but believe we have well-placed our faith.

Here let it be said, that our people should make their donations and offerings to the Auditorium fund without permitting them to interfere with their regular responsibilities towards the budget of the year, their tithes and offerings upon which the regular work of the church, missionary and local, depend.

Baptisms for February

In another column will be found a report made to the Presidency by the Statistician. These reports are always of interest to those who like to see analyzed the signs of progress. Of particular interest at this time is what the report shows relative to the progress made towards the goal set for baptisms for the conference year. With only about eighty per cent of the number fixed reached by March 1, it puts before us the task of securing such a large number of baptisms in the few remaining days that the hopes of reaching the goal are slim.

However, we have no need for discouragement, for the work accomplished in the year has been a good one, and the results achieved bespeak an awakened interest and activity. To keep this zeal alive is a present task, and this can be done by at once fixing another goal towards which to work, and then carry on.

The "Honor Roll" is of interest. We congratulate the workers of the Society Islands for their success in heading the list. Even Detroit tags the Islands. What will the returns for March be?

John Barleycorn Attempting a Resurrection

The determination of the "wet" element to break prohibition completely is now coming to a head. The subsidized press is doing everything it can to discredit prohibition and to make people believe that it has failed, and enforcement has been made more difficult than ever. The "wets" have stirred up a demonstration of some size in the East to convince the country that we must allow at least light wines and beers.

Against everything of that sort we must resolutely set our faces. The forces of evil will make no effective compromise, and they recognize no agreement. If they are allowed light wines and beer, they will be selling "hard" liquors over the same counters. At the present time all places where liquor may be sold are, by process of law, forbidden. Why should we legalize such places again? This retreat would be an acknowledgment of defeat. "Regulation" is a pathetic fallacy. The "drys" have no confidence in it, and the "wets" are not sincere when they propose it. They have a determined minority who will make as much noise as possible. They are a wealthy minority, and their money not only talks but shouts. But they can not prove that the furor they are producing is the voice of the people. This is no time to give in to their demands.

Let us see some of the encouraging facts:

A young Australian who has visited our country recently for observation said, before he embarked for home, that he believed the stories of the drunkenness of American youth were greatly exaggerated, and that he believed that prohibition had produced a cleaner and better type of young people than we ever had before. If prohibition is aiding America to produce a better type of young people, then it is worth all the trouble and money it costs. These young people, the citizens of tomorrow, are the only really effective wealth that the country has.

Readers will be interested to learn, as we are told in an editorial in the Kansas City Times, March 1, that various movements are on foot in Germany to restrict the sale of liquor. A special committee has recommended that the Reichstag prohibit the sale of liquor on pay days and certain other days. Moreover they recommend that no liquor advertising be allowed in any public conveyances, places, and buildings. Beer, supposed to be the solace of workmen, is under suspicion in its native land.

What we need to do now is to stand by our guns, and to fight for what we want. There is no possibility of compromise, for to compromise is to give the enemy an advantage which he will use to our harm. We know that the liquor interests are identified with all the lawless, disorderly, and vice-promoting elements, and that they will, if allowed to follow their way, bring about the ruin of our country and society.

Prohibition is costly, but it is much cheaper than the burden of liquor was. We have reaped many advantages which make it worth while. It has cleared our towns and streets of the filthy stench, and the ugly presence of saloons. It has made the streets safe for women. The blind pig is a menace, but because it is hidden it is taken out of the path of many people who would have walked into the open trap of the saloon.

Christian people should rally to the defense of prohibition. Do we so easily forget the benefits it has conferred on us? Can we not remember the shameful conditions that existed before it went into effect?

W. H. Chandler En Route to America

The president of Northern District, England, Elder W. H. Chandler, writes from the S. S. George Washington in high spirits that he is enjoying his voyage to America. He anticipates pleasant experiences and receiving much benefit and knowledge from his contact with the church and her men in America. He says he hopes by these experiences to become a more effective ambassador for the Master and for the church.

4,772 Baptisms to Date

The Department of Statistics has presented its report for the month of February. The number of baptisms reported is 208, which brings the total of baptisms for the eleven-month period to 4,772, or just eight baptisms less than eighty per cent of the goal of 6,000 for the year.

There are only a few days remaining in which to reach the goal, and the Statistician expresses himself as thinking it hardly probable that the desired mark will be reached. But there is an unknown element—that of the person who is conservative in the extreme, postponing final decision until fully convinced he is taking the right step, and satisfying himself that he is not overlooking anything. This element could easily be of sufficient magnitude to change a failure to reach the goal into a glorious achievement.

March 16 has been set as Decision Day. It should be the endeavor of each person, child, youth, or adult, who has been considering the question of joining with the organized church for the promotion of the gospel in the earth, to decide by that time. A decision without sufficient consideration would be unfortunate and should not be encouraged. A failure to decide after sufficient consideration is also unfortunate and tends to weakening of character. Let the Saints not fear to bring their dear ones and their acquaintances to the point of decision, but let them carefully and wisely present to these their duty to decide.

If this be done by all the Saints throughout the church, it is likely the best year for baptisms will be the one closing with the present month.

R. J. L.

Statistics for February

During the month of February the following reports were received by this office, resulting in the indicated changes in the total net enrollment of the church:

Net Enrollment of the Church February 1, 1930 .....		106,473
Transfers .....	685	February Baptisms .....	208
Blessings .....	155	Gains from Unknown .....	102
Marriages .....	119	Gains by Correction .....	8
Ordinations .....	25
Divorces .....	4	Total Gain .....	318
Branches Disorganized .....	4	February Deaths .....	88
Silences .....	2	Expulsions .....	38
Released .....	2	Loss by Correction .....	8
Change of Name .....	1
		Total Loss .....	134
		Net Gain during February .....	184
		Net Enrollment of the Church March 1, 1930 .....	106,657

Unfortunately February did not quite measure up to expectations in the number of baptisms reported, and therefore the grand total for the eleven-month period is considerably less than we hoped it would be by the end of February. The total up-to-date is 4,772. This is almost 80 per cent of the goal of 6,000 baptisms which has been set for the church during this twelve-month period. As shown on the thermometer reading at the left, the church is about 12 per cent below what it should be at the end of February.

While it is not probable that the church will achieve the goal of 6,000, nevertheless we should not relax our efforts in order to obtain new converts and in order to achieve as great a portion of the goal as possible. If the church will only get as many baptisms as were reported in either June or July of the past year, the total will be greater than has been obtained in any previous year. The emphasis which has been set during the month of February and March and the Decision Day of March 16, if it is emphasized as much as it should be, will undoubtedly yield more baptisms than any other month of March so far. If everyone will do his or her part, the church can achieve a very large proportion of the goal which has been set.

The Honor Roll for February shows the following districts, stakes, and missions having obtained 75 per cent or more of their quota:

Society Islands Mission .....	224%

Morals and Common Sense

Samuel Crowther, writer, has a new book called, Prohibition and Prosperity, published by the John Day Company, which is a reprint of two articles which appeared in the Ladies' Home Journal. Mr. Crowther's conclusions are that prohibition is an unqualified economic success, that it is the greatest blow to poverty that has ever been struck, that it has diverted between two and six billion dollars from the purchase of liquor to savings accounts and to the purchase of articles and property for the betterment of living conditions. In short, prohibition has made the Nation prosperous. These conclusions he bases on an investigation in the leading industrial cities of the Nation and on the personal expressions of business authorities and manufacturers.

Many people, this particular author included, claim not to be concerned with the morals of the prohibition question. "Many American citizens do not believe that the drinking of alcoholic beverages is of itself immoral. But they do want to know whether prohibition is good or bad for the country, not as a matter of morals but as a matter of plain common sense," says Mr. Crowther.

We shall have no quarrel with the gentleman. He has confirmed our suspicions that national prohibition pays in dollars and cents. But he will pardon us for being amused at his "leaning backwards" in an attempt to steer clear of a "moral issue!" (Of course there is nothing immoral about drinking of itself—it's what happens afterwards!) Well, anyway, Mr. Crowther has shown the folks that prohibition is good for the country; and we shall expect the ranks of prohibition supporters to be increased by the addition of these firm believers in "common sense," even if they don't care anything about morals.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Crowther has shown that it is immoral to drink alcoholic beverages, at least for a lot of people. It is immoral that men and women and children should live in poverty, ill-fed, ill-clothed, impoverished both physically and spiritually. It is a great moral victory that much of this poverty has been removed through prohibition. Good morals and good common sense are coincident.

Material prosperity has no meaning except in the degree to which it supplies both increased physical comforts and higher levels of cultural and spiritual life. To say that prosperity has nothing to do with morals is to disregard the things which that prosperity has made possible. Anything which in any way affects the tone and quality of human life has a moral aspect.

From the very first, agitation toward the curbing

Advance Information

The general church authorities have endeavored to sense the expectations of the Saints in regard to what should occur at the Centennial Conference. They have tried to arrange a schedule that would reflect the essentials of the church's program, and at the same time draw on the experiences of the century for wisdom and guidance in order that the Saints might courageously and confidently move toward the accomplishment of the new and larger tasks in the new century.

To build such a program and organize the conference in a way that the delegates and visitors may receive the most good from it has been the first consideration of the general officials. Since advance information has been released in the columns of the Saints' Herald during the last six weeks, many helpful suggestions have been offered which have enabled the committee to round out the program to meet the needs of the people and to perfect the organization so that plans for the comfort and entertainment of conference visitors may run smoothly.

How to finance the conference has been a matter of consideration from the first. During the last conference, in October, 1928, there developed quite a sentiment in favor of a nominal registration fee which would permit the conference to be financed in a businesslike way. The expense of previous and abolition of the liquor traffic has arisen because of the existence of definitely immoral conditions. Men were debauched, women and children neglected, home life degraded—all because money and manhood were swallowed up in drink. Even Mr. Crowther and his friends of the business world testify that these conditions have been alleviated. What is it but a moral issue? Moral standards have to do with the very fundamentals of human existence and preservation. They say that it is wrong for man to grovel in the mire; they say it is right that man should climb to the heights. What is this but common sense?

Whatever you wish to call it then, ten years of prohibition have made the United States prosperous, this writer says. And included in that prosperity are: better home conditions, more opportunity for the education of children, stabilization of family life through increased savings and added comforts. Even the noise issuing from the hearings held by the Congressional Judiciary Committee can not obscure the importance of these achievements!

conferences has been met by appeals at conference sessions for voluntary contributions. By this method the "willing few" paid for the conference. The general church authorities believe that it is only fair that those who attend the conference and receive its benefits should pay their share of the expenses. A number of church men who have been consulted have been enthusiastic for a nominal registration fee. The plan that has been worked out is, we believe, a step in the right direction, and will work a hardship on no one. If the Saints respond to the plan suggested it is hoped it will eliminate the necessity for making the usual appeal at its business sessions for contributions for financing the conference.

On arrival at the Auditorium, which is to be the headquarters of the conference, each delegate, ex-officio, and visitor will be requested to register and deposit the registration fee of $1.50. He will then receive his official centennial souvenir badge, attached by ribbon from a name plate carrying his name and address. For delegates the badge will be hung by a gold ribbon, for ex officios by a purple ribbon, and for visitors by a red ribbon. The official badge will be metal of a special design significant of the Centennial Conference, and will be valuable as a souvenir of this event. The one registering will also receive the official conference program, carrying an outline of the conference and a schedule of all its sessions, meetings, and programs. He will also receive the official Centennial Year Book, beautifully bound and profusely illustrated, which is of more than usual interest and quite different from any booklet previously published by the church. The person registering will also receive a coupon admitting him to one performance of each of the following major events during the conference:

The rendition of the Centennial Oratorio, The Course of Time, the performance of the Centennial Pageant, Fulfillment, and the Graceland Players' three-act play, The Passing of the Third Floor Back.

There will be two performances of each of these three events named above, and the coupon which the one registering will receive will entitle him to admission to one each of these events.

If the Saints will unanimously respond, registration fees will not only help to finance the conference in a businesslike way, but this plan will also enable the committee to regulate the attendance at these special programs. Those who wish to attend a second time, or nonmembers or visitors who do not register, may secure admission to these three events by paying the following prices: The College Players 25 cents, and the Oratorio and Pageant each 50 cents. All receipts from registration fees and

OFFICIAL

For the Information of the Church

The Auditorium will be ready for use at the Centennial Conference. Of course, the building is not finished, but the main items of work mentioned in recent issues of the Saints' Herald are fast nearing completion. The plastering of the ceiling in the main Auditorium chamber has been done, and this week will see the last of the scaffolding taken down. A 250-horsepower boiler has been installed, and the main connections with the steam coils and hot air conduits are made, so that the heating equipment is now adequate for April weather. The dome has been covered with the first layers of insulating and waterproofing material, so the new ceiling is amply protected.

The general church authorities have proceeded with this work in good faith, believing that it is the will of the members to have this work done before the Centennial Conference. The tentative budget, which the Board of Appropriations and the General Conference will be asked to approve, contemplates an average monthly income of approximately $58,000. The month of January did not reach this average, and we do not know what the February income will be, but in addition to this average monthly income we should have not less than $50,000 surplus on hand before April 1 to meet our obligations for the new work now being done on the Auditorium.

The Bishopric will gladly issue receipts for contributions to be applied on the Auditorium, for payments on uncompleted Auditorium pledges, for tithing that is due, and for general offerings for the good of the church. The money is needed now.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

paid admissions to these three special programs will be used to pay the expenses of the conference.

The task of getting together an organization to handle such a huge affair as the Centennial Conference has been a heavy one; but, in our opinion, the results will justify the investment of time and money. We believe that the plan for financing the conference will appeal to all as a fair and businesslike one, and when whole-heartedly supported by the Saints, will make it unnecessary to ask publicly for contributions at conference sessions.

There will be no charge made for admission to any meetings or events on the program except the three mentioned above.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,

By Frederick M. Smith.

The Centennial Conference Institute

As a part of an extensive program of business and other sessions to be held during the two weeks of the Centennial Conference, attention is here called to the class work of each forenoon which has been organized on the basis of an institute.

The institute classes are open for the attendance of all who wish to prepare studiously for more efficient service in the work of the church. Floating about, and "visiting" in the classes, is to be emphatically discouraged.

At the time of the classes there will be other services available, different in their nature, but perhaps having equal claim upon our time and attention. One should consider carefully the best use of his time. Selection of classes should be made on the basis of one's major interests and needs. It would seem especially desirable that preparation be sought in the lines in which personal service may be rendered in the work of the church.

An enrollment fee of fifty cents for the person will be asked to cover the cost of mimeographing outlines, and the office expense of maintaining credit files. The fee will be paid on enrollment at the opening of the institute.

Mimeographed outlines are to be available in a large number of courses. One may enroll in from one to four classes, and is entitled to such outlines as are provided for the classes in which he enrolls. Outlines in additional courses may be purchased at twenty-five cents each subject.

A number of texts and manuals in particular fields of religious education are to be ready for sale at conference time. These may be purchased for class work by the students.

Certification Credit

Credit toward a Certificate in Religious Education and Leadership will be awarded on a basis of consecutive class attendance in each class as follows:

For attendance at 10 to 12 sessions, 12 credits

For attendance at 7 to 9 sessions, 8 credits

For attendance at 4 to 6 sessions, 4 credits

Payment of the enrollment fee will entitle one to pursue class work for credit. An attendance card will be provided on which each student will keep a record of his class attendance which he will present at the close of the institute as his claim for certification credit.

The enrollment card will be made out in duplicate, one part being left with those in charge of certification by Tuesday evening, April 8.

Transfer of enrollment from one class to another should be made only after notifying those in charge.

Advance Enrollment

It is not necessary that money for fees be sent in advance, but it will greatly assist in making provision for the class work if those who are to attend the classes will mail at the earliest possible date a statement of the selections made, to The Centennial Conference Institute, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Classes Meeting 7.30 to 8.30

Beginning Conducting

Mabel Carlile

An essential course for those desiring to master the correct fundamentals of all conducting. The material used in this class will be taken from the best-known hymns and easy quartets. This material will be conducted with careful attention to flexibility of arms, elbow, and shoulder; good baton grasp; correct conducting figures; and definite attacks and releases. A course of this nature is especially recommended for men of the ministry and all music directors of the church who have been working under the handicap of no definite method in their time beating. The great directors of the world all use a definite system; so should you.

Budgeting Church Finance

J. A. Becker

To attain success in any field one must have clear ideas as to what constitutes success in that direction, what goals are to be obtained. It is just as essential in church finances as in any business enterprise to have a thorough knowledge of the work to be performed and to use proper business methods in its accomplishment.

This series of lectures will attempt to deal with the question of Church Finances on that basis.

Keeping Fit

A. W. Teel, M. D.

A thoroughly practical presentation and discussion of human health problems by the Church Physician. Balanced diet; the nature and treatment of important diseases; the breathing apparatus and its care; headaches and heartaches; the nose, eye, ear, and throat; hygiene of muscles, bones, and nerves; mental hygiene; first aid; the hygiene of comeliness. These are among the topics to be discussed.

The New Plan for Religious Education

F. M. McDowell

The purpose of this course, as the name implies, will be to present in some detail the proposed new program for the organization of religious education in the church.

During the first periods consideration will be given to the nature and purpose of religion, the function of the church, and the objectives of religious education.

Other periods will be devoted to a brief history of the departmental activities in our own church and the various attempts that have been made to coordinate such efforts. The new program will be presented in some detail with a discussion of how such may affect the functioning of the local organization. Opportunity will be given for questions and discussion with a view to making the entire plan as clear as possible.

The information contained in this course will be vital to those responsible for organizing religious education in the various branches and districts of the church.

Pictures and Art in Religious Education

Nelle Sampson

The function of pictures in religious education is to illustrate facts, reveal truths, present ideals, awaken thoughts, stir emotions, soften, recreate, and mold character.

Picture selection, interpretation, and appreciation.

Principles involved, source material, actual practice in the use of pictures in religious education for all ages.

Principles of Salesmanship

C. A. Skinner

"I don't care who you are, or what you are, or where you are, you have something to sell, and so have I, and the degree of success we meet with in making other people want what we have to offer absolutely and positively governs the returns we gain from life. Whenever we have dealings with anyone, whether in matters of business, religion, or anything else, the natural laws of salesmanship are in operation.

"The fundamental principles of salesmanship taught in this course, if properly applied, will make you a more successful salesman, business man, or minister of the gospel."

Recreation in Religious Education

E. E. Closson

This course will deal with recreation as a possible and effective method of stimulating right conduct. It will also point out the great value that recreation has as a factor in the process of education. Possible types of recreation suitable for the smaller branches will receive special consideration.

The Significance and Use of the Doctrine and Covenants

F. Henry Edwards

This is a course in the understanding and use of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. It is suggestive rather than final, and will include discussion of the nature of revelation, the compilation and publication of the revelations, their general credibility, the devotional use of the book, its outstanding teachings, etc. We anticipate considerable directed discussion in the class and shall welcome both those who wish to learn and those who can make a contribution to our discussions.

Working with Children

Bertha Constance

For all workers in the Children's Division of the church school. Within the childhood of the present lies the undeveloped future of our church. To reach the great objective, Zion, what must childhood be taught? What principles must underlie the teaching? Are handicaps the result of teacher problems? What type of organization will function most effectively? What shall we consider as our standards for the various departments?

Possible projects for use in local churches will be demonstrated, and practical problems discussed.

To know the church program for children, the cradle roll, beginner, primary, and junior workers should attend this course.

Classes Meeting 8.40 to 9.40

Advanced Conducting

Mabel Carlile

Music directors who have mastered the materials listed in beginning conducting should enroll in the advanced course. Here the elements to be studied will be those of artistic finish. All the attacks, releases, fortes, and pianissimos of musical fineness will be considered with reference to the technique of the left hand as well as that of the right.

Effective Speaking

O. Salisbury

The art and science of constructing and effectively delivering a message, whether in public address or private conversation.

It is a wonderful achievement to know how to construct and deliver a speech that will entertain people and lead them to see, to feel, to believe, and to act.

In part one we study to choose and develop a speech, including the purpose and the end to be obtained.

Part two is devoted to the human voice. How to become an easy, fluent speaker, and to secure attention and to hold interest.

How to overcome hoarseness and develop a well-modulated voice.

Essentials of Stewardship M. H. Siegfried

This course in Essentials of Stewardship will discuss the primary and essential backgrounds of the stewardship plan as interpreted from our church history and as related to present economic and social conditions. The method of stewardship administration will be discussed in terms of the gathering and the accomplishment of the objectives of the church. Stewardship is primarily a matter of spiritual attitude and growth expressed both in personality and in material things.

The question of who shall become stewards, how, when, where, will be fully discussed; also the relation of the ministry to stewardships, and of the stewardship program to church finances.

Personal Evangelism F. Henry Edwards

Personal Evangelism is a new name for the individual missionary work in which our fathers participated and found so much joy, and which has won so many good people to God and the church. In this class we shall discuss its merits and demerits, the qualifications and rewards of those who practice it, its place in our advancing program, etc. In view of the inevitable reemphasis on missionary work during the years ahead, and of our awakening consciousness of the need for evangelistic emphasis in our religious education, the course should prove of interest to a wide range of church members.

Practical English Irene Layton

The purpose of this course is to correct some of the common errors in everyday speech, such as those occurring in verb forms, in prepositional phrases, and in various uses of the case forms.

Principles of Worship John Blackmore

Emphasis is now being placed upon the worship experience. We are discovering, as the ancients discovered, that the subtle atmosphere of the worship service is a potent factor in religion. Churches everywhere are experimenting in the building of desirable worship services. It is imperative that leaders of devotionals should be well versed in the principles of worship.

This course will cover such types as the significance of worship; the relationship of sight, hearing, etc., to the worship experience; elements of the environment inducing or inhibiting the mood of worship, such as form, content, the setting in worship, will be discussed. All factors in the worship service will be closely analyzed.

Story-telling in Religious Education

Nellie Blackmore

The recent developments in the practice of religious education have stressed the value of the story. Religious educators appreciate the value and power of the story in education. It is essential that workers in the children's division should know the principles of story-telling.

This course will cover the following topics: What is the story and its structure; The story-teller's preparation; Types of stories; Grading the story; The story interests of various age groups; Use and power of the story and source material.

The art of story-telling involves a knowledge of the technique in selecting stories for the different age groups. It also demands a knowledge of the technique of telling the story. This course covers that ground.

Working with Young People E. E. Closson

A study of the practical problems confronting young people of the church in everyday life. The aim of the course will be to determine some of the fundamental urges of youth, and to see how these can be directed into powerful agents for good, instead of being ignored and left to find expression in unwholesome channels. The course will be conducted especially for young people and those interested in the leadership of youth.

Zion's Social Ills and Suggested Remedies

M. A. Etzenhouser

Our church is essentially a social organization, and its chief function is to establish Zion. We will have Zion when our membership can live together in harmonious relationships. To do this the conditions that make for maladjustment must be corrected: there shall be no poverty, no crime, no divorce, no desertion, no disease, no delinquency, no unmarried mothers, no unemployment. Any condition that handicaps any member must be changed. Each member should discover the causes of these social ills and then seek to remedy them. This course will attempt to do that, namely, point out these causes and suggest how they may be remedied.

Classes Meeting 9.50 to 10.50Bible Appreciation John Blackmore

Out of the past the Bible comes to us. That past not only bequeathed to us this book, but it also bequeathed to us our attitude toward the book and the status of the book in society. Some are beginning to seriously question the value of the legacy. This course will constitute a brief study of the origin of the sacred library and the history of its development, together with the devotional use of its inspired contents.

The discussions will include such topics as, The ground out of which the Bible grew; The authority of the Scriptures; Formation of the canon; Methods of Bible study; The use and value of the Bible in church and home.

A broad course on the Book of Books.

The Church Home and Those who

Worship There

M. A. McConley

A course of suggestions for definite improvement in church worship especially emphasizing the relationship of the Aaronic priesthood thereto. Will discuss advantages of better locations, well-kept grounds, better-planned and equipped buildings, newer style church signs, use of flowers and plants in interior decorations, preparation for worship and care of worshiper, administration of gospel ordinances, and conduct of church worship with a view to their beauty and dignity. Special illustration with lantern slides.

Doctrinal Fundamentals

J. F. Garver

This course will be an endeavor to think through the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints from a few basic premises, and to justify the doctrine in a new age, as gathering up laws of life necessary to growth in the kingdom of God.

Dramatization in Religious Education

Florence Thompson

This course is intended for leaders in dramatic production. In this series of lessons, the use of drama as an effective teaching method in the church school is discussed. The manual for the course is planned as a practical reference book for the director. Definite directions are given for carrying on dramatization with different age groups. The work of the director, both in the spontaneous dramatization with children and in the formal play with adults, is briefly outlined. The problems of directing, such as casting, rehearsing, stage designing, costuming and make-up, are discussed.

It is the aim of this course to give to the student a new insight into the possibilities of dramatization in our church.

Handcraft in Religious Education

Lenoir Woodstock

The purpose of this course is to help teachers and leaders of girls to better appreciate the wonderful opportunities for religious education which lie in carefully conducted handcraft projects.

To the wide-awake leader, handcraft offers an opportunity to teach the girls many valuable lessons which may carry over into other life activities. It opens up avenues for self-discovery and self-development; it offers a splendid avenue for self-expression, and it provides an opportunity for wholesome, happy, social contacts with the church.

Ways in which handcraft may be used to correlate with other phases of the girl's program of religious education will be discussed, and there will be actual class work in handcraft, either by demonstration or participation.

The New Plan for Religious Education

F. M. McDowell

Same course repeated as given at 7.30.

The New Saints' Hymnal; Its Content and Use

Evan Fry

A course of special interest to choristers, branch presidents, missionaries, and any others of priesthood or laity who have frequent occasion to select hymns for coordination with other portions of the worship service. Some general consideration of hymnology; more specific emphasis on the unfamiliar hymns of the new Saints' Hymnal, and their selection and arrangement in the book with respect to the peculiar and especial needs of Latter Day Saint congregations. Designed to supplement and coordinate with, not to repeat or overlap—the two courses in conducting offered by Miss Carlile.

Poetry in Religious Education

Irene Layton

The purpose of these lectures is to increase the appreciation of such great poems as Browning's "Saul" and "Andrea del Sarto," and to interpret them in terms of our present religious needs.

Preparation for Marriage and Parenthood

Ida Etzenhouser

"The home is the foundation of Zion," therefore, when our young people make proper preparation for marriage and parenthood, a much needed step will have been taken in Zion building.

We are offering this course first to young people, then to those who work with young people from the pulpit, in church schools, or in the homes.

That they may have a proper evaluation of the social institution of marriage and the family, we are treating our subject under the following headings:

The evolution of the family; The evolution of marriage; The evolution of the marriage rite; The evolution of divorce; Ill-advised marriages; Petting; The engagement period and the choice of a life companion.

Science and Religion

M. E. Mortimore

First week only.

When men like Doctor R. A. Milliken, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, for 1929, name as the three fundamental principles upon which civilization is being built, the Golden Rule, the universality of law, and the law of growth, we feel that it is time for us to think seriously upon some of the points that science and religion have in common.

The theme of these lectures, "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free," has, we feel, a deep, lasting, and meaningful relation to both science and religion.

Freedom and happiness for all mankind is the hope of our church. We shall try to show that to attain this purpose, science must go hand in hand with religion.

Young People's Problems

Ray Whiting

Second week only

In this class will be discussed the more pertinent problems of adjustment, social, educational, economic, and religious which must be met and solved by our young people in the light of the high idealism of the Restoration Movement.

Classes Meeting 11.00 to 12.00

The Book of Mormon in the Light of Today

A. B. Phillips

The twelve lesson course on the Book of Mormon includes testimony concerning its origin, theories and opinions compared with the author's claims. It deals with factors of its production, the witnesses, plates, scribes, translation, and characters used. Its Scriptural import is discussed, including its purpose, relationship with the Bible, and nature of its message. Its credibility, objections urged, and other internal features are dealt with; also its historical features, modern investigations, and the traditional factors involved. Its literary characteristics and scholarship, and its theological features are discussed; and its evidences of political, social, and industrial life, with its government and social achievements are presented.

Community Stewardships

J. A. Koehler

Community Stewardships deals with the last great task of the Christian movement, which is to embody its ideals in social institutions; to make them the foundation principles of human governments; and in this way to apply them to the problem of human living together.

It is a discussion of the limitations placed upon moral freedom, personal righteousness, and the power of one to succor others by the circumstances of group behavior; the present attempt to develop the stewardship idea, and its relation to the removal of personal limitations and to the peace, prosperity, and happiness of the peoples of the church.

Fundamentals of Teaching

C. B. Woodstock

Under this title we shall attempt to discuss the underlying principles and fundamental processes of the teaching-learning activity. It will be a practical course in the principles and methods of religious education, especially as applied to present-day teaching in the educational program of the church.

This course should be distinctly helpful as an introduction to religious pedagogy for those who have not had college training.

Pastoral Administration

Ray Whiting

The purpose of the course in Pastoral Administration is to stimulate and to direct discussion, out of which may be developed a technique of Pastoral Administration which will meet the ever-increasing demands being made upon the local church.

Among the subjects to be discussed are: The Function of the Branch; Branch Organization; Choosing Workers; The Educational Task of the Church; Worship; Visiting; Card Files and Reporting; Ministerial Etiquette; Pastoral Contacts, and others. Emphasis will be placed, not upon organizations and forms, but upon meeting the needs of individuals.

Principles of Junior Church

Nellie Blackmore

An important trend in church practice has been the development of the junior church. It has grown out of the realized fact that the child needs a devotional service adapted to his own interests and powers of appreciation. This course is designed to assist workers with juniors in the methods and procedure of these services.

Methods of stimulation and control of the service will be exhaustively discussed. The course also involves a study of the junior and his problems; the setting of the service, materials and methods in building the service. Type services will also be studied. A valuable course for all Junior workers.

Missionary Administration

E. J. Gleazer

In this course we plan to emphasize the missionary responsibility, opportunities, and possibilities of the branch. Organizations best suited for missionary endeavor. How to create, stimulate, and direct these organizations will be among the questions discussed. This course is being arranged especially for the benefit of pastors and missionaries. However, it should be beneficial to all who are interested in heeding the divine admonition, "It becometh every man who hath been warned, to warn his neighbor." (Doctrine and Covenants 85: 22.)

Music in Religious Education with Junior and

Intermediate Ages

Luella Wight

The chief purpose of this course will be to increase ability to use music as a means in the religious education of youth. There should be created a real love for sacred music and an appreciation of the great hymns of the Christian faith through

Systematic Physical Training.—Chapter 7

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

The Right Choice of Exercises

In coming to this discussion, one hesitates where to start and when to finish. The type of exercise needed depends on the individual. Some like to belong to gymnasias, while most have no time for organized gymnastics, with or without apparatus. Some people think they have sufficient vigor to dispense with all regular exercise; a condition which with professional and indoor workers never exists.

It is possible to outline a group of technical exercises at great length, for the various parts of the body. There are exercises for the neck, for the shoulders and arms, for the chest and lungs, for the waist and abdomen, and for pelvic region and legs, and exercises for the internal organs. These exercises might be prepared with charts in great detail, but probably would not be carried out. For this reason, I have made certain generalizations, sufficiently elastic to accommodate all who need physical training. As it is, we have a variety of actual participation of the children in well-planned worship service. Means and methods will be presented and demonstrated. Each day a new song will be taught.

The care and use of the child voice will be discussed. Emphasis will be placed on the use of the junior chorus in the total program of the church for youth.

Religious Education in the Family

Lydia A. Wight

The course, Religious education in the family, introduces the student to the unlimited opportunities family life offers for the stimulation and development of religious personalities.

The course endeavors to set forth the real meaning of religious education. It deals not only with those activities which are usually thought of as religious, but also seeks to establish the spiritual significance of every phase of family life.

The subject matter concerns actual home experiences, but the author endeavors to interpret them in terms of the best information offered by educators today. The spirit of the course is one of earnest endeavor to understand God's purpose in making the family the unit of society and to discover how parents may help accomplish that purpose.

competent radio instructors putting people through their paces every morning—people who often listen without following the instructions with physical movements. We also need exercises of gentle nature before retiring, relaxing exercises, via radio if possible. Accompanying graceful motions to musical accompaniment is valuable.

Care of the body is not a matter of vacationing strenuously on the mountains or in the woods or on the seashore, and wrecking diaphragms and hearts by overindulgence in swimming or mountain climbing. Such forcing of the muscles to capacity by those not used to such effort leads to bone-aching weariness and physical pain. For we do not normally lead the lives of loggers and lumbermen, and when returning to city life must feel the strain.

Safe advice must be obtained by people according to their needs. Physical directors of gymnasiums are somewhat qualified to offer such advice if the subject be not diseased in heart or other internal organs. There is no system or course for getting into condition that need not be varied to suit the individual.

There are those who are of sparing, lean constitution, like the famous Senator Evarts, who said he avoided every avoidable exercise. Such a type of framework is the result of eating sparingly, maintaining a balance between demand and supply, since their physical labors are slight. Artificial methods are required by most of us to make up for the lack of muscular effort in our business or professional lives, and these methods can be made effective if repeated fifteen to twenty minutes daily before or after hours of employment. Thus the disadvantages of automobiles, machinery, and telephones, instead of walking, working, and doing, are overcome, and the muscular and bony framework is given a chance to function properly.

Watching an exciting game, or sitting in the easy chair reading a he-man story of adventure about the ranch, or sitting at the movies, is no substitute for real exercise.

Exercise Is Indispensable

The body is like a furnace, which has to have air before it can burn its fuel and create energy. Exercise is a necessity for the seeker after long life. Most people do not know what exercise is for. Every time you take exercise your heart beats faster and sends your blood to all parts of your body. Some people do not need much exercise, if their daily work is interesting and stimulating to them. But one who is doing routine work that makes no call upon his heart, needs real exercise.

The only way to tone up the muscles is to contract and relax them. New muscle cells are thus formed, and the fibers are increased in size. These voluntary muscles are increased in size, but the effect is apparent on the involuntary muscles as well, such as those of breathing, of digestion, and of the heart. The lungs expand, for exercise develops the air cells, enabling them to consume more oxygen for the nourishment of the blood and to throw off more waste gaseous substance. There is a general effect of one muscle upon all the other muscles by reflex action. There is also such a thing as coordination of muscles brought about by training, whereby feats of skill are made easily possible, or one may exert himself over a longer period without fatigue.

Simple Exercises of Great Value

A group of elementary exercises without apparatus has been suggested as being natural and easily practiced, without strain. It is the way these exercises are performed which renders them valuable. Directions are given with sufficient clearness. These exercises are suited for folks of all ages, even for the robust male, for they have been tried out by military instructors and at colleges. The individual may modify or exaggerate these exercises and extend them according to inclination, but will benefit by following general instructions. These exercises cover such elementary processes as standing, lifting, climbing, walking, running, jumping, stretching, throwing, all of which movements are performed naturally and so may be modified for rhythmic exertion to the benefit of the individual. The rhythm of these primitive movements calls into activity all the muscles of the trunk and limbs and neck.

Some Erroneous Notions

One can not with assurance contract a few muscles, breathe deeply a few times, and obtain organic strength. Other factors must be considered, such as a healthful attitude of mind, the choice of proper recreation, the intelligent selection of food, the adjustment of work and play, and the care of the body functions. One can not misuse mind and body, and then breathe a few times, take a pill, and remain vigorous.

Health exercises as a rule have been devised to produce effects which could be felt by the person taking them. The idea that an exercise must be felt in order to be valuable is similar to the idea that medicine must have a nasty taste and a mysterious color in order to be potent. The most desirable sort of physical training will not produce soreness and will in no way strain the muscles, and yet will exercise large effects as a tonic. Exercises based upon the violent and unnatural movements of the Swedish or German systems, are not like the usual movements which man has made in developing from a lower form of life into the more perfect human being that he now is. There are definite exercises more suited to his needs than movements which are wholly unrelated to his phylogenetic inheritance. Breathing exercises which have no relation to physiologic needs of the body are often injurious.

Exercises should be performed on arising in the morning and should be followed by the morning bath. Such exercises will produce wholesome effects upon circulation and respiration, and they will aid digestion and elimination. As a rule they are devised to secure an uplift of the body in all the movements. The accent should be upward, and also the trunk muscles are vigorously worked with the correct use of the foot.

Standing Exercise: One should seek an erect position without rigidity, thus insuring healthful functioning of abdominal organs, proper use of joints, and efficient use of the whole body's musculature. In standing exercises, stand with the feet parallel to each other somewhat apart. Have weight on both feet disposed to their outer edges. This position of the feet produces balance, pivot, and control. Push the trunk upward and lift the abdominal wall upward. Retain a feeling of relaxation in the shoulders, but secure a sensation of extension and lengthening of the body without contracting or tensing the muscles. Avoid rigidity, and secure straightening of the spine, but keep the shoulder muscles relaxed; also keep the weight off the heels; pull the abdominal wall upward and keep the lower half of the abdominal wall constantly flattened.

Running: This is a natural exercise performed on the balls of the feet with vigorous thrusting upward of the knees and free and vigorous swinging of the arms. The right arm is forward when the left knee is forward. This opposition in walking and running is compensation in the movement of the body to secure balance, direction, and control. This exercise vigorously stimulates the circulatory and respiratory systems, and will aid in improving all the functions of the organs which supply the body with energy. It should be possible for one to run and enjoy the movement, windows being open for circulation.

Jumping: This is a natural movement and it should be performed naturally. The first part of the movement uses the muscles of the entire body, and in the second part the body is thrown into the air by the vigorous contraction of leg, back, and arm muscles. In the continuous jump, the landing position serves as the start for the next jump. Bend the knee and hip joints and incline the body forward. Swing the arms downward and backward, elevating the heels slightly. Note that the trunk is inclined and not held in an upright and unnatural position. Then swing arms forward and upward, and spring into the air. The landing follows as a result of the movement. Before trying the jump, the movement of preparation should be practiced. Land with the knees bent and the heels off the ground. Secure lightness in the movement and avoid landing heavily.

Lifting: This is a natural movement used in lifting an object from one side of the body to the other, or from a low level to a higher one. It is an exercise of the back and legs and may be made very vigorous by reaching low and lifting high. In the exercise of low lifting, bend the right knee and reach with arms to the right of the right foot about twelve or fourteen inches from the floor. The left leg is straight, the back is flat, and the movement occurs in the hip and knee joints. Then transfer the weight to the left foot and lift the object secured on the left and into the same relative position. Then the left knee will be bent, the right leg straight, and the arms will be to the left of the left foot about twelve or fourteen inches from the floor. In the exercise of high lifting, the hands reach the floor and there is greater bending in the right knee and hip joints. The back remains flat. Lift the object to the left and place it high above the head. Vigorous muscular extension should occur in this part of the movement while the weight is being shifted to the left foot, and the right leg is relaxed with the right heel off the ground. Avoid tenseness in the movement, seek smoothness, and constantly adjust the body in the different parts of the exercise by comparing the movement with the illustration. Secure uplift of the body in the high lifting, and get the complete extension that would come in placing an object on a high shelf.

The Climbing movement has always played a prominent part in the history of man. This movement is a powerful exercise for the legs and secures strong contraction of the abdominal muscles. It represents reaching upward and grasping an object, as a limb of a tree or ladder rung, and pulling up one leg to obtain support preparatory to pushing up the body. Reach upward with the arms, raise the right knee forward, and push the body upward on the ball of the left foot. Secure vigorous stretching upward. This is to be the accented part of the movement. Then return to standing position. The movement may be performed rhythmically, but the rhythm should be slow and the accent always on the upward movement.

Stretching is a natural movement that straightens the spine, lifts the chest, and overcomes the sagging of the abdominal muscles so commonly seen in adults. Push the arms easily upward and rise on the toes as far as possible. Reach up as far as possible, as if trying to get an object from a high place. Then let the arms sink and the heels touch the floor, but retain as long as possible the sensation of extension. Do not let the body droop. The development of the proper muscle sensation is important. Avoid tenseness and rigidity, and also angular movements of the arms. Do not swing them up; push them up. You will then perform with a feeling of relaxation rather than contraction.

Throwing is a natural movement used by man in hurling at some object. These movements involve complex coordinations, and are a powerful trunk exercise which uses the back and side muscles and brings into play the large muscles of both arms and both legs. Stand with feet about twenty-four inches apart and with the left foot about six inches in front of the right. Clasp hands lightly, waist high, shift weight to the right foot, bend the right knee, draw both hands to the right, twist the trunk to the right, and turn the head to the right. The left leg is straight and relaxed, and the left heel is off the floor. The trunk is inclined forward. Then throw with the right hand, twisting the trunk sharply to the left. The left knee is bent and the right knee is straight, with the heel off the floor. The body forms a straight line from head to right heel. The weight has been transferred to the left leg. Avoid angles and sharp tensions in the movement. Make all movements flowing, smooth, and harmonious. Avoid conscious muscular contractions. Perform the movement and the muscles will contract to carry out your desires.

The Common Sense of Exercise

We ought not to make work of our exercise. The average person is not competing for some event on the athletic field. The exercises of the man or woman of middle age are to be moderate and generally pleasant. This is essential if we are to keep young in spirit as well as body. One may not seem to feel the need of well-regulated exercise, but after all, as the years advance, the benefits of such practice will be apparent. The soggy and soft must get into physical condition if they are to add years to their lives and the momentum of youth to their ventures. But this duty can be made agreeable and varied, not a forced routine.

We allude to "rigid" or "reflexed" muscles. To produce this condition the muscles of the hands, wrists, and arms are made rigid by clinching hands and throwing your will into movement, as if lifting or pushing a heavy weight. The muscles of legs and body may be "flexed" or made rigid by assuming attitude as in supporting a weight. Get in the habit of flexing your muscles or making them rigid, at intervals during the day. Great benefit is derived from stretching or "flexing" the muscular system, during leisure moments, in your office, or when you change from sitting to standing position. Attention to this will gradually make the muscles firm without much apparent effort. If muscles become sore after two or three days' exercise, continue the movements gently, but do not attempt to make the muscles very rigid for a day or two. Allow five or ten seconds to elapse between exercises, and during this interval allow muscles to thoroughly relax.

The individual who would gain strength rapidly will continue breathing exercises at intervals during the day, and gradually accustom himself to a habit of proper breathing. This is only arrived at when one has so schooled the various muscles employed in breathing that they perform their functions involuntarily. To attain this object, one should cultivate a correct habit of walking and carrying the body. Walk with head erect and shoulders thrown back. Then, as you start off, inhale through the nose all the air the lungs will hold, breathing abdominally or diaphragmatically. When the lungs have thus been filled to their utmost, retain the air while you take a stride, and then exhale quickly, emptying the lungs as completely as possible. At the start never attempt to forcibly expand the chest. Simply breathe naturally. When you have acquired the habit of taking full, deep breaths, you will find that your chest will expand naturally.

A word of caution is needed as to the weight of the bells used. Do not go in for very heavy bells. More harm than good follows the persistent use of very heavy bells. For a healthy man, of fair physical powers, a pair of five- or six-pound bells will be found heavy enough. For the weak, and for women and children, bells of two or three pounds each are the most appropriate. For the benefit of such persons as may desire to pay particular attention to the development of a certain part of the body, the exercises used are designed to develop such, so that the person may practice those movements which will most quickly develop the deficient part.

1. Grasp the dumb-bells firmly in the hands, stand erect, heels about four inches apart, with the arms hanging at the sides. Then bend the arm, flexing the muscles, till the bell is brought above the shoulders, and the arm is bent at the elbow as far as possible, and the elbow is raised until it is level with the shoulder. Return to the first position, and repeat.

2. Grasp the bells firmly, heels together, body erect. Let the arms bend at the elbows and the bells rest lightly against the shoulders; then, holding one arm in this position, thrust the other upward straight over the head. Let that arm drop to the first position and thrust the other up; and so continue using the arms alternately, until the movement is repeated twenty times with each arm.

3. Stand erect, with heels together; grasp the bells with the arms bent. Then straighten both arms horizontally simultaneously, at the sides, using force, returning quickly to the starting position. Repeat twenty times.

While in the bathtub certain exercises and movements are helpful. Stretching at full length, lying on stomach in reverse position, knee bending and leg elevation, lying on side, all give internal organs a chance of weight-position. There may be little room in a tub, but the physique at such times may be helped by contracting and relaxing positions, such as suggest themselves, such as grasping sides of tub to sit up and then recline a number of times. Then, too, vigorous rub downs with towels are immensely helpful to many muscles, and also in toning up the skin. In other words, the occasion for bathing, as a number of other duties, can be made a period of exercise, just as lying in bed, or when seated at desk, or in spare time when standing, etc., to relax and contract the chest, muscles, or limbs, to limber up the neck that is stiff, etc. When lying in bed, one can stretch full length, to the great benefit of the viscera, yawn and relax much as we see our canine friends do when nature bids. When lying abed it is serviceable to lift legs and go through the motions of bicycle riding at a good pace. This exercise stimulates abdomen and leg muscles. One may also lie on chest and stomach, then elevate self on all fours, gradually, then down flat again, and up, till there is a distinct muscular reaction. Such exercise may be informal and private, but is attended with as great good as gymnasium drill.

Exercises to Help Overcome Constipation

There are abdominal exercises which help prevent constipation. These muscles of the abdomen are as a rule the least used by people in their daily work, and for this reason, it is desirable to practice specific exercise for the strengthening of the muscles about the waistline, the muscles that control bending at the hips, twisting of the torso at the hips, the muscles that control the act of evacuation, or that help deep breathing.

One's carriage is the first characteristic that impresses. If it is upright, buoyant and graceful, good carriage will to a large extent hide any defect of form. The women of the stage, credited with being the possessors of Mercury or Venus-like forms, owe their position in popular estimation to the great attention they pay to carriage. If any man or woman can stand properly, hold body properly poised, and walk gracefully, he will certainly be set down as well-formed. Proper carriage, the physiologist will tell you, is impossible without proper muscular development. And so it is; yet, a long stride has been taken when one decides to make an effort to stand and walk naturally. If improper methods have been habitually employed, the effort will quickly tire you; but persistence, and a brief period devoted to practice of movements, will make it easy.

The right way to stand: The weight should be evenly distributed on the ball and heel of the foot; the limbs should be held straight, and slightly—very slightly—inclined forward from the perpendicular; the abdomen should be held in; the chest should form a graceful curve from waist to neck; the spine should be perpendicular; the shoulders should be thrown back until the space between them is flat and straight, and the head should be held firmly erect—not allowed to drop forward, or incline to either side. In this position the internal organs are permitted free play, and no difficulty is encountered in breathing deeply. Assume this position, hold it for a few moments, and inhale several slow, deep breaths before commencing your exercises every day.

Daily exercise pays. It puts and keeps you in cheerful, sunny spirits—a pleasure to all whom you meet. It gives not only fine muscles, but, far more important than in getting these, exercise makes heart and lungs, stomach and digestive machinery, and all the other vital organs larger and stronger. It makes it harder for disease to get in. It makes better blood; sending it to every part of the body, and the brain and the nerves share in the general wealth. That life blood makes the brain enjoy hard work, and makes work seem light. The man now not only thinks more clearly; he can think longer and more effectively. In sport, as in work, staying power is a great help in efforts of every kind.

There is a certain capacity for self-improvement in every human being, and even if supplied with a weak heritage, much can be done to improve it. Indeed, a man can lift himself by his bootstraps. Many a weakling, such as Theodore Roosevelt in his early years, succeeded in making a robust person out of himself with the formation of new habits of exercise, and outdoor living. This improvement is a sort of over-all benefiting that comes from the expansion of the living cells. The tonic instead of being administered from without in the form of medicinal stimulation, is derived from the will in the form of muscular stimulation, which thus affects the whole physical person, through every cell and capillary and nerve root.

Special exercises for women without apparatus are recommended. Women and men are so different in physical attributes that simpler forms should be utilized. Body bending and touching the floor is serviceable if done without violence. Or with feet fourteen inches apart, one may swing arms up and down between the legs. While standing erect, one may slowly straighten the arms and raise them until brought as high as possible, turning the backs of the hands to the front as the movement is made. Then reverse and repeat the movements. Various positions may be assumed on the floor for the exertion of the waist line. Indeed, the same positions or exercises as for men, but to a more gentle degree of effort. Too strenuous exercise must be avoided by the older woman.

Woman is not inherently a frail and delicate creature, as imagined, and she can resist fatigue and pain. Many women have a scanty knowledge of physiology. They are rarely as happy, as long lived, and as continuously well as they ought to be. The premature ageing of women is a consequence of unhygienic living from puberty onwards, and many women suffer numerous disorders and ailments. Nervous strain, wear and tear, can be diminished by suitable exercise that tones up the system.

Highway Builders? or Good Samaritans?

Misdirection of Effort and Power

But our concern as church men is the fact that we, too, both as individuals and as groups, have contented ourselves with expending energy in Good Samaritan stunts that we ourselves say we are in duty bound to spend in highway building. Instead of gathering up our resources; instead of purchasing lands as groups; instead of gathering to centers of a civilization of our own building; instead of building the highway of God—Zion: the government, to insure universal and equal opportunity for men to engage in the proper pursuits of life; we, too, make charity drives to acquire funds to be used in attempts to lift one unfortunate member after another out of the ditch of financial ruin, or find for him some temporary employment to tide him over till tomorrow.

Instead of building God's highway; instead of building Christianized industrial communities; instead of making our social ideals real; we go about privately and single-handed to live where we will, scattered from Dan to Beersheba, to do what we will; and then individually and collectively we attempt to counter the blows of those who wound us with the weapons of Babylon, and, in that way, to recover some of our losses. And, instead of being free to promote the welfare of man in peace, we find ourselves enmeshed on every hand, and under the necessity always of trying to pull ourselves out of some kind of financial or economic mudhole. And the fruits of kingdom building, the fruits of social righteousness; the fruits of godly government, the fruits of highway building, which are peace, prosperity, and happiness, we have yet to taste.

God has said that the righteousness of the builders of his kingdom is distinctive; it is superior; it exceeds the righteousness of others. How, then, can a people attain to the heights of celestial glory, where they will challenge the admiration and command the respect of the nations (as such) of the world, by traveling the low levels of an economic highway of the world's building? Is the government of God, which is ordered and established with justice and with judgment, to be builded by the mere payment of tithes and offerings, of one sort or another, into the treasury of the church? No! "There must be an organization of my people to advance the cause which you have espoused." A social organization which deals with secular problems; an economic society; a Christian social order; a government of the people. And this is a more excellent righteousness than Good Samaritanism.

Can You Participate in Kingdom Building?

No mere Good Samaritan can be a builder of the highway—the government of God, in separate and independent action. No mere soloist can be a Messiah chorus. Not even a million soloists, each doing his solo stunt separately, nor all doing their solo stunts in unison, can be the Messiah chorus. The Messiah is infinitely more than a mere melody in unison. The kingdom is more than a mass of men in mass action. It is a differentiated mass, with organs performing their functions unitedly and as a whole, and with a control that insures the lawful and orderly performance of the functions which are essential to the life of the group. Mere Good Samaritanism is not that. It is not kingdom-building righteousness. Nevertheless—mark what I say—nevertheless, the church that builds the highway, the church that builds Zion, the church that builds the kingdom, must proselyte its membership from the Good Samaritans of the world; for these are the only potential highway builders there are—men whose concern for the welfare of their fellows move them to the service of God. And these, if they would build the kingdom, must first see the kingdom. They must see the church as something more than an instrument of charity; a giver of alms; a healer of wounds; a dispenser of doctrines and the like.

In 1832, when instructing the ministry in its work of proselyting, this test of fitness for the kingdom was set up:

Whoso receiveth you, receiveth me; and the same will feed you or clothe you, or give you money. And he that feeds you, or clothes you, or gives you money, shall in no wise lose his reward; and he that doeth not these things is not my disciple; by these things you may know my disciple.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 16.

Who, then, are fit for the kingdom? These Good Samaritans of the world who are able to glimpse the Government of God, and who find their chief pleasure in spending themselves with their substance, according to their opportunity, to further movements which promise to advance the interests of mankind.

And in this instruction we also have a rule by which each one of us Latter Day Saints Church members may judge his own candidacy for a stewardship in Zion by the choices he makes in his expenditures of time, of talent, and of substance. And whoever would qualify for membership in this kingdom-building church should endeavor to discipline himself until he will find positive pleasure in spending himself with his substance to advance the concerns of the church.

Making Kingdom Builders out of Good Samaritans

It is the task of this church; it is its duty; yes, it is the salvation of this church, to bring together the Good Samaritans of the world and organize them, and make of them builders of the kingdom of God. And in this relation I wish to call attention to the relation between numbers and kingdom-building goodness. Let me read a bit of scripture which deals with this question:

Go forth into the regions round about, and preach repentance unto the people; and [on condition of faithfulness] many shall be converted, insomuch that you shall obtain power to organize yourselves . . . that you may be enabled to keep my laws.—Doctrine and Covenants 44: 2.

Do you see the point? One person may be a soloist. Two persons may form a duet. Four may form a quartet. But how many does it take to form a chorus to render The Creation, with its complex forms of musical expression? It is silly for a group of four men to imagine themselves producers of The Creation, which has several times as many musical functions to put forth in unity as four male voices can possibly put forth. And yet any number of little isolated and unrelated and uncoordinated business and social enterprises have been put forth by a few people here and there and called "Zion," the government of God, the highway of life. Is it any wonder that, with such misrepresentations of fact, the belief of men in the task of the church should be destroyed? What does "First let my army become very great" mean, except that there is a relation between the number of Good Samaritans who are willing that their individual lives should be swallowed up, lost, if you please, in a great social enterprise, and the building of this highway of God—Zion?

Biding Time for Highway Building

It is true, that a group of "bass voices" in some corner of the church, may make some preparation for taking their part in The Creation. But why call them a "Messiah Chorus"? Let it be said, as it ought to be said, that the men of the church who live in isolation should make such preparation as their circumstances permit them to make to take part, when the opportunity comes, in the highway-building task of the church. But "until" Christian men are gathered together in sufficient numbers and their righteousness organized for the task of highway building, the best they can be is Good Samaritans, acting separately or in unison, doing the kind of goodness that a few men in their individual or united strength are able to do.

Behold I say unto you, that you must visit the poor and the needy, and minister to their relief, that they may be kept until ["until," mind you] all things may be done according to my law. . . .—Doctrine and Covenants 44: 3.

Until the righteousness of Latter Day Saint Good Samaritans is organized, the best they can do is to heal wounds and escape as best they can the financial and moral ruin that Babylon visits upon men who travel her highways.

There are many Good Samaritan societies in the world. The Red Cross Society. The Salvation Army. Sisters of Charity. Provident Associations. Welfare Boards. And what not. All healing wounds. All dispensing charity. And all leaving the highway of life in the same condition as they find it. They leave untouched the social order, the industrial system, the behavior of the group, the government of the affairs of the peoples, which inflicts the wounds they try to heal. Recently the people of Kansas City gave more than a million dollars to charity. They did the same thing last year. They will do the same thing next year. And they will need to do the same thing all the years that will follow, for the highway, which yields this annual crop of financial tragedies, has not been touched by these Good Samaritan stunts. And no one expects this year's charity drive to relieve the pressure of future wants.

In spite of the claims of Christian apologetics, there are many who maintain that it requires no intervention of God or angels to supply the world with Good Samaritan institutions. It needs no revelation of the truth, no restoration of the gospel, to enlighten us in the ways of almsgiving. No priesthood; no governments; no purchase of lands as groups; no gathering of the peoples; no instruments of accountability; no organization of industrial communities on the stewardship principle is necessary to give to the world such men as Cornelius and Grendfel by the thousands.

But to make Cornelius, Grendfel and Company, the "light" of the world; "a city set upon a hill"; to lead these Good Samaritans into the task of highway building, to establish the government of God as the government of the peoples of the world does seem to require the revelation of the truth; it does appear to need the church with its oracles and doctrines and institutions and governments.

What Is Our Goal?

The Good Samaritan societies of the world have outrun our church in the business of dispensing charities. We can scarcely trail their dust. We have not even matched the world in this kind of good-doing; much less have we commanded their admiration by the superior quality of our wound-healing. And I have asked myself again and again: Why this disparity? And the answer seems to be that that is not our calling; the dispensing of charity is not our goal. God is holding us to the responsibility of performing a superior task. Men whose "lights" are measured by tasks of almsgiving find inspiration in such enterprise and satisfaction in such achievement. But men whose "lights" can be measured only by the task of building a highway of the people that is safe for all travelers; that imposes no injustices, and inflicts no wounds; that displaces charity with justice; that dispenses judgment in accordance with the kingdom concept of right; such men, I say, with such "lights," are saddened and their spirits are broken by the very disappointments and loss of hope that grow out of their failure to make good in their calling.

The conflict within the souls of those who do not fulfill the demands of conscience is demoralizing; it destroys in the "highway builder" the very qualities which insure success to others in the performance of tasks of lesser import. This is the fate of men who "have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come" and have turned back in a fruitless attempt to content themselves with tasks that belong to men of lesser understanding. Our claim to divine origin, to prophetic calling, puts us under a positive and unescapable obligation to build the highway of God.

We haven't builded that highway yet. And we men of the Latter Day Saints Church have yet to prove that we are the kind of men it takes to build the kingdom. But God is in the business of saving this world. And this world must be saved as "peoples." And some day he will raise up in his church a generation of men who will accomplish that task. And when that day comes, we will no longer be under the necessity of trying to prove our prophetic calling by artful interpretations of scriptures, for "The Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory." The glory of a people is the peace, the prosperity, and the happiness which arises from its just, its orderly and efficient government. Until that day, we must suffer some of the evils of those who would have found refuge in Zion if we had been faithful to that trust.

My fellow Latter Day Saints, think of the human wreckage that marks the highway we now travel, and tell me how the men of this church can fail to be moved with a desire to build the highway of God? And my fellow men of the ministry, who must bear the sins of the world, are not the emaciated bodies; are not the dwarfed intellects; are not the degraded morals, the broken hearts, and the bitter spirits which are the products of an ungodly economic system enough to drive us to an endeavor to redeem Zion? to build the highway? to establish the kingdom?

In the language of the prophet: "Behold the Lord hath proclaimed to the end of the world." This is the day. "Say ye," therefore, "to the daughters of Zion, prepare ye the way of the people." For this is your calling. This is your task. "Lift up a standard to all peoples." "Gather out the stones." Not stones of marble or of granite, but the foundation stones of a brotherhood of man—the stipulations of right conduct for men in association; the rules of proper group behavior. And with these stones "cast up the highway," the government of the people. And if you will do this, you shall be called "the redeemed of the Lord"; "the chosen"; "the sought out"; "a city not forsaken." And for the natural reward of just, orderly, and efficient government, you shall have peace, and prosperity, and happiness. And when the Lord shall come, he will bring his personal reward with him.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Des Moines, Iowa

717 East Twelfth Street

February 20.—The year 1930 finds this branch well organized with the priesthood working under a finer spirit of cooperation than ever before. All seem very enthusiastic and willing to give of their time and talent in the Master's service. A splendid spirit prevails among the membership also, and we find them willing to do all within their power to extend the gospel. We are encouraged over the prospects for the future and feel confident that this will be a banner year in the history of Des Moines Branch.

December 20 at 6:30 in the evening a priesthood banquet was held for all the priesthood of the district and their companions. Apostle Edwards was guest speaker and remained over Sunday and delivered two splendid sermons.

A very good Christmas program was given by the junior church in the lower auditorium December 22, at the morning service, and on Christmas Eve a beautiful pageant sponsored by Bertha Deskin, was presented by members of the Sunday school. There were several other numbers on the program also and all deserve praise. After the program Santa appeared on the scene with a generous treat for all.

Elders F. T. Mussell and John Blackmore spent the holidays here, and each gave a fine sermon December 29.

Members of the Whatsoever Class entertained their husbands at a watch party December 31 at the R. D. Williams home.

Installation service of officers and teachers was held January 5. Pastor C. B. Hartshorn presented the officers and teachers. Elder H. Castings delivered the address and charge. The following officers were elected at the annual business meeting:

Pastor, C. B. Hartshorn; associate pastors, C. E. McDonald and V. L. Deskin; secretary, R. D. Williams; treasurer, Stephen Robinson; director of religious education, C. B. Hartshorn; church school superintendent, Verne L. Deskin; superintendent of Home and Service Group, Mrs. J. L. Dalbey; superintendent of Recreation and Expression, George Orr; junior church pastor, N. V. Anderson; dramatic director, Bertha Deskin; chorister, Lloyd Mussell; pianist, Lucy Longan Orr; librarian, W. J. Anderson; publicity agent, N. V. Anderson.

Special prayer week was observed by the branch. January 5 a special prayer meeting was held after the evening preaching service. Wednesday evening was assigned to this branch, and services were held at the church and also at the homes of Bishop E. O. Clark and Elder George Orr. Since that time cottage prayer meetings have been held each week at various homes. Elder C. E. McDonald has charge of this work.

The annual budget meeting was held January 12 with Stephen Robinson in charge. Prayer by Doctor G. F. Hull. A quartet composed of Sisters Carrie Germa and Elva Pratt and Brothers J. B. Gordan and William Robinson sang "Give of your best to the Master." Short talks were given by Pastor C. B. Hartshorn and H. Castings and then a call for pledges. Although attendance was below normal, approximately $4,500 was pledged by those present. Cash receipts were $644.35. The branch business meeting approved a budget of $5,290 for 1930, and the treasurer thinks this amount will be raised without difficulty.

Elder J. L. Parker delivered a series of four missionary sermons on four consecutive Sunday evenings beginning January 12. His subjects were "A wonderful courtship," "A broken engagement," "A royal wedding," and "A beautiful home." Attendance and interest were good. Brother Parker was assisted by a men's chorus which was greatly appreciated.

The Dorcas Class gave a surprise party for its teacher, Sister Myrta Shoemaker January 10.

The Home and Service Group held a doughnut sale January 15 and another last Saturday. Proceeds from these two sales amounted to over $140 and will be applied on the budget fund.

The district conference February 7, 8, and 9 was started off with a young people's banquet Friday evening at 6.30. Nearly two hundred attended the banquet. The theme was "Give your best to the Master." Joseph Johnson acted as toastmaster. Apostles D. T. Williams and J. F. Garver were guest speakers. A two-act play "Renting Jimmy" was given by the Cofrilos under the direction of Maisile Dalbey. Attendance was large throughout the conference and a good spirit prevailed.

We are happy to report that Sister Ruth Mussell who underwent a major operation at the Mercy Hospital last month is now at home and recovering nicely. Others of our number who are sick are Sister Carrie Maitland at the Iowa Lutheran Hospital and Brother William Evans, orchestra leader, at Mercy Hospital.

Fireside talks are being conducted at the home of Doctor and Sister G. F. Hull on Monday evenings. About eighteen young people are taking advantage of this opportunity of obtaining a knowledge of the gospel. As a result of these meetings, two young women were baptized last week after the Wednesday evening prayer service, Doctor Hull officiating.

The branch presidency is arranging a series of missionary services to begin March 2 and continue up to Decision Day, March 16. John F. Sheehy, of Independence, will be the speaker.

Dayton, Ohio

West Third and Olive Streets

Officers for this branch for 1930 are: President, Floyd Rockwell; assistant, G. W. Stephens; publicity agent, Francis May; department of religious education, George Hunter; Department of Recreation and Expression, John Stultz; department of music, Edna Williams; Women's Department, Bertha May.

Elder J. G. Halb was here January 12 and gave two fine discourses, one being entitled "Looking for the beautiful and true," the other "The more abundant life." He was clear in his argument, vigorous in style, and happy in his illustrations. May the visits of Brother Halb in his mission, Southern Ohio, bless others as they have blessed us.

On this date the Department of Recreation and Expression met to consider plans for the new year. The program adopted includes dramatics, athletics, literary and social activities. The socials are to be emphasized with birthday celebrations for every member of the church, one social each month in honor of those whose anniversaries fall in that period.

The first social was January 28 at the home of Sister Hill. Thirty-six were present, and four were given tokens of appreciation and good wishes. All responded to the speeches of presentation. Sister Sturgille, eighty-three, easily and quaintly gave the outstanding response. The musical director, Edna Williams, was present and greatly assisted in the program of music and readings. A neighbor, Mr. Round, was present and gave two fine readings.

We are looking forward to the next birthday social.

The Sunday school is progressing. The Christmas offering goal of one hundred dollars has been chosen, and the workers are well started.

Pastor Rockwell has occupied for six evenings on "the restored gospel." He presented the Apostasy in convincing style and is now taking up the Restoration. During this series of sermons attendance has increased. Favorable comment is heard on all sides.

Encouraging Outlook in Southwest

By G. H. Wixom

Tularosa, New Mexico, February 24.—The outlook for church work in Arizona and New Mexico is very encouraging, and the missionary has many calls and demands made upon him.

The new year came to us all with a challenge and a demand that we do our best. It has dawned upon us that 1930 is here. From January 1 to 18 I labored in Southern California and occupied at San Diego, Long Beach, Los Angeles, and San Bernardino, where I found the Saints alert and responsive to the message of life and salvation.

I left home January 18, and my first stop was at Phoenix, Arizona, where I was the speaker at both services Sunday, January 19.

The pastor, Elder Louis J. Ostertag, and wife were at the train to meet me at 6.30 in the morning, and a full and busy day was experienced. It was a pleasure to again meet the Phoenix workers and to note their expression of faith and their desire to do their best in the Master's cause. My next stop was at Bisbee, and I was greeted there by a band of wide-awake Saints who bring cheer and encouragement to the heart of the missionary. Sister Hester Somers, who was so miraculously healed of tuberculosis of the bone and throat when administered to December 1, 1929, by Apostle M. A. McConley, Elder Henry Goldie, and the writer, after being confined to her bed for over eight months, is one of the outstanding workers, whose faith and zeal is an inspiration to all.

While in Bisbee I was asked to take part in a program to be given by the Department of Recreation and Expression of the branch before Douglas Branch February 7, and the crowd was provided cars to take them over the twenty-four mile drive to Douglas. A pleasant evening was spent together. These two branches are enjoying a friendly cooperation in an endeavor to build up this department in the two cities.

After leaving Bisbee and Lowell, I arranged for a series of services in the Globe and Miami district, where we have a membership of sixteen under the direction of Elder F. B. Higgenbotham, who is one of our own capable young elders. While in this district I spoke at the Methodist Church on Sunday evening to a fine audience and also addressed the Ministerial Association at Miami in the Y. M. C. A. Monday at 10 a. m., where ministers from Globe and Miami held their meeting.

At the close of this series I conducted three into the kingdom of God through the waters of baptism, two men and one woman, and in so doing two family circles were made complete.

Sister Rose Peck joined her husband, Brother R. T. Peck, of Tulsa, Oklahoma, who is a member of the church, and Brother Charles Carpenter joined his wife who is a member. They are from Kansas City, Kansas. The third to be baptized was Brother Albert Saddler, of Idaho, a piano builder and tuner by profession.

Saints of Globe-Miami district are much encouraged and feel that the present outlook is promising.

I arrived in Tularosa, New Mexico, Sunday morning, ready to begin a series of services in the union church Monday, February 24. Brother A. H. Richter and two daughters, Sister Marie Richter and Sister Hattie St. John, live here, and are assisting me in every way possible. On arrival I met Mr. Chapman, who is a seventy in the Utah Mormon Church. After I had explained our message to him, he said he was much interested and wished to learn more about our peculiar position, as it differs from the Utah Church. I am pleased to find a number here who are anxious to hear and consider our message. The Lord is opening the way for his servants to enter in and occupy.

Sioux City, Iowa

February 16.—Over a month of the new year has gone, and we find ourselves wondering if we are accomplishing what we hoped to. We have renewed hope here and feel that this present year is going to show marked progress in the branch.

The membership is so scattered over the city that attendance at the Wednesday prayer meetings was small. So instead of a midweek meeting we now have a service at nine o'clock on Sunday morning. Since the change in time of meeting, attendance has increased considerably, and we are having very good meetings. We feel that so far at least the change has been for the good of more people. In connection with this change, the priesthood now use Wednesday for visiting night. Though the number in our priesthood is small, they are determined to visit in the home of every Saint in the branch. The members meet at a central place for prayer and instruction, then go in groups of two to the homes.

The unified service plan suggested in the Departments' Journal is being given a trial at present. Though it is too early to judge the success of the plan here, much favorable comment has been heard.

The young people continue to hold their social gatherings every two weeks. These meetings are usually held in the church basement. During good coasting weather, one evening was spent in a coasting party. A Valentine party was held February 14 at the church. This group plans to put on three one-act plays very soon. We have a splendid group of young people here.

We expect to present the historical programs outlined in the Herald each month. Though late with January's program, we hope to have one ready for the last Sunday night of each month for the rest of the year.

It seems that each department has set out on this year's work with a spirit of enthusiasm and a determination to accomplish more than perhaps was accomplished last year and other years. Indeed that must be our aim if we are to make the progress we hope.

Clay Cross, England

The year 1930 finds the latter-day work in its one hundredth year, and still the cry is "Onward." We are looking to Zion. To some people Zion is something elusive, intangible, even impossible. It may be that the church in its present state is not ready to realize Zion, and yet who knows when that sifting time will come leaving the church as a whole on Zion standards? The highest hope of every Saint is to some day live in Zion, and yet how far do the best of us fall short of the example set by Christ.

Clay Cross Saints, though handicapped by the prolonged illness of Pastor Cousins together with a lack of members of the ministry to take charge, are interested in the progress of the gospel and in their testimonies express a desire to help each other on to Zion.

Few of the Saints are able to attend the meeting on Thursday night, owing to business and work, but the few who have been able to attend have, according to the promise of the Master, been blessed by the presence of his Holy Spirit.

At Christmas the usual presentation of prizes to the scholars of the Sunday school and Religio took place, being followed by a good entertainment provided by the scholars and teachers.

The Recreation and Expression Department has been fortunate in securing the services of an expert lecturer on ambulance work. Lectures are given at each meeting of the department.

The branch was happy to have the presence and help of Apostle Paul M. Hanson during the last year. His talks and sermons have been very beneficial. Brother Hanson has impressed upon us the growing need for training of church men and women, that we may keep pace with the rising standards in education and culture. A person without an aim never becomes a man of importance. Let every member have as his ambition the attaining of the high standard of Zionian efficiency.

Clay Cross Saints enjoyed the visit of Missionary Greenwood, who, during his stay here of one month, held a series of special meetings. His sermons were of high merit and special interest.

Coldwater, Michigan

The Coldwater daily paper is liberal with press notices of activities enjoyed by the branch of that city. Not long ago it contained the following story:

"George Washington's natal day was enthusiastically celebrated Thursday night at the Saints' chapel by a large gathering under the auspices of the church school, sponsored by Mesdames Scott, Corless, and Fish. A Washington Supper Party was a prelude, with tables and room decorated in the national colors, and flags and hatchets tastefully arranged. Invocation was pronounced by Reverend Starr Corless, and the assembly faced a beautiful cherry tree with the proverbial hatchet near its trunk. At the conclusion of the repast, Reverend Scott was announced as toastmaster, and crowded into one hour the boyhood, manhood, and closing period of the patriot's life, 'First in war,' 'First in peace,' and 'First in the hearts of his countrymen.'

"There were fourteen responses setting forth George Washington's power in the adoption of the Constitution, his glory in the chief magistracy, and the halo of the paragon of the Government at his death. Five girls rendered, 'The grand old flag,' and the resolution of Congress as to how Betsey Ross should make it, was read. The gathering repeated 'Thou, too, sail on, oh, Ship of State,' in concert."

San Jose, California

Spencer Avenue and Grant Street

Peace and quiet prevail in San Jose Branch. The opening Sunday of the year Pastor R. E. Cowden had charge of the sacramental meeting, being assisted by Elder C. J. Cady and B. R. Gilbert. At 6.30 in the evening the Religio was in charge of Brother George Thompson. The department was merged into one class taught by Elder R. E. Cowden. After classwork the program was composed of a drama "The old year out and the new year in." This was an original play by Sister Leah Harris Thompson, which was very appropriate for the occasion.

The meeting of the Women's Department this month was held at the home of Sisters E. S. Chase and Juanita Hallen.

January 12 was a stormy day characterized by thunder and lightning in the night. Attendance at the meetings was not large. Sister Verne Cowden was in charge of the Sunday school session, and Elder C. J. Cady preached in the morning. Brother George Thompson presided over the Religio, and Elder R. E. Cowden was teacher of the Religio class. The program was attractive in variety, partaking of the nature of a fashion show giving the dresses of past and present. The entertainment was presented by the dramatic class.

The following Sabbath the Religio gave its time to the W. C. T. U., which held an oratorical contest for the gold medal given as a prize for the best oration by a member of the W. C. T. U. Class. Sister Mabel Gilbert, daughter of Brother and Sister B. R. Gilbert, a member of the San Jose Branch, was the winner. She is now going to try for the diamond medal. That morning the sermon was by Pastor R. E. Cowden.

Superintendent George Thompson was in charge of the final Religio session of January. Elder R. E. Cowden taught the Religio class, and at the close of the meeting the superintendent gave an outline of prospective programs for spring and summer evenings producing living moving pictures to emphasize what the activities will be.

Elder B. R. Gilbert was the morning speaker.

January 29 District President G. P. Levitt was here and preached a sermon calculated to stir up our minds to remember past blessings and the covenants we have made.

Brother C. W. Hawkins, who is acting as solicitor for the Bishop among scattered members, reports $205 collected for the first month of the year.

To Win—Loyal Recruits Needed

A son of a veteran of the Union Army said, "A battle can not be won by use of dead soldiers, or those who are disabled, incompetent, and disheartened. New recruits are always available."

The foregoing is true in the history of world wars, expressing a fundamental exactness in the winning powers of our church during the past century. Loyal men and women have during all these years demonstrated the abiding beauty, grandeur, and worthwhileness gained and retained by keeping unbroken the gospel covenant made when baptized, and reaffirmed ever afterwards at sacramental services. These earnest, faithful soldiers of the cross, knowing the true value and justness of their cause, kept the glorious gospel banner shining bright, won new and capable recruits, marched steadily forward, and of necessity left the spiritually disabled and disheartened by the wayside. We believe our attractive slogan used for five years, "Forward to 1930 and Beyond," has been noted with interest by all believers in the Restoration movement, and the church is demonstrating to all its superior blessings and strength by adhering more closely to Zion's principles, and other gospel requirements, so much so, that we hope all lovers of perfected lives will soon be consistent members and workers with us in the true fold of Christ; for membership and devoted service in it insure joy, peace, happiness in this life and sweet communion with the Lord and the redeemed of all ages throughout all eternity. Permit the following lines by a gifted poet to help you:

"If you were busy being kind,
Before you knew it you would find
You'd soon forget to think 'twas true
That some one was [ever] unkind to you."

Making It Easier or Making It Harder

The Prophet Jeremiah (17: 10) tells us the Lord searches the heart, tries the reins, "even to give every man according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings." In the commercial world, legacies of farmers, manufacturers, merchants, bankers, and other enterprises left to families or corporations are in a condition representing "the fruit of their doings." If their work was well done, it will make it easier for successors to perpetuate the business, but if damaging mistakes have been made, then the reverse. Will the same analogy apply in the work of Latter Day Saints? Parents, one or both, in their conduct make it easier or harder for missionaries to build the church and gain new members in their localities. They can by careful living encourage their children to devote a life service of honor and usefulness to the church, or by evil fruit of their doings hinder, embarrass, discourage, and in some instances cease to affiliate. Again the wrongdoings of children have greatly depreciated the usefulness of capable, consecrated parents. Sometimes children reared and carefully indoctrinated in the gospel, do, however, under new environments and vascillating influences permit their earlier motives to be changed, hence "the army of the Lord" loses capable recruits for active members, musicians, teachers, tithe payers, some of whom should be ministers, officers, or missionaries. Infrequently ungrateful husbands hinder their wives from doing local church work, and some women have habits so reflective on the church that husbands must forego missionary or other responsible labors. The Israelitish Prophet expressed a truth forewarning all that they must, in time, answer to God for the fruit of their doings.

Why Conferences Are Prolonged and the Previous Question Moved

Paraphrasing a politician's temper, a delegate to conference may say, "Mr. President, I rise with diffidence to a discussion of the important resolution before us, because I know rather less about it than any of the other subjects before the conference of which I am ignorant. I have not time today to list all of the great questions about which I know nothing, but I will admit, to begin with, that this matter now under discussion before this grand assembly, is one of them."

It is estimated the 26,562,713 automobiles now in use in the United States can carry all its population of 120,000,000 people at one time.

"The United States leads its nearest competitor, Germany, nearly ten to one in the number of telephones, according to figures comprising five countries, which are the greatest users of telephones. Figures for the end of 1928 are: United States, 19,341,000 telephones; Germany, 2,950,430; Great Britain, 1,759,686; Canada, 1,341,319; and France, 965,519."

"The Canadian post office carries 600,000,000 letters, 350,000,000 newspapers, and 400,000,000 parcels a year."

Bread making may soon be a lost art in American homes. According to United States Government estimates the amount of bread daily consumed in our country is over fifty-three million pounds, an average of one half pound per day for each person. More than sixty per cent of this amount is prepared in town and city bakeries. The mixing, kneading, shaping, and placing the loaf in the oven is all done by machinery. The great change has taken place in the last twenty-five years.

In 1865, William Booth, who died recently, founded the Salvation Army. His mother was a Jewess. The Army was first started in London as a Christian Mission. In 1878 it received the name of the Salvation Army. Its headquarters is in London, and its 30,000 employees operate 14,719 posts in 82 countries. Eighty-two periodicals are published by the Army.

But it is the chief business of man, the origin and foundation of all accomplishments."

Graceland Chats

Graceland Remains Accredited

Graceland is still accredited. Within the past week President Briggs represented "the college on the hill" at a meeting of the Iowa Accrediting Commission at Iowa City. At this meeting, Graceland was once more retained unconditionally as a fully accredited college, having been proved capable of meeting the utmost needs of modern youth.

Several important factors have served to prove Graceland's capability in providing yet a higher education for the young people of the church, and the most outstanding has been the record that her graduates are making in universities throughout the country, especially at Iowa City and at Ames. Also other factors that are taken into consideration are the high rating of the professors of Graceland and the standard of conduct maintained by the student body. And yet, there are other things within her walls that can hardly be judged by persons who are not privileged to know Graceland better. Nowhere can there be found a "greater tie that binds" in school life than is proved by the splendid cooperation and interest shown toward each individual student by the faculty members of Graceland. Under no other conditions can there be found a student body so intent upon gaining that higher goal, for in striving to accomplish we must work together. While still within her walls we find these things that seem only of minor importance, yet it is the little things that count, and due to her traditions and high standard Graceland is permitted to turn page upon page, each being marked with even greater success than the one before.

NEAL DEEVER.

New Dormitory House-Warming

Friday, February 14, the new girls' dormitory was opened to society at large. For the big opening event, the dormitory was well prepared. Little completion touches were added, and the girls organized for the afternoon and evening.

At three o'clock the crowd began to wend its way toward College Hill. Among the first to arrive were the young gentlemen of Graceland who had waited so long and patiently for this unusual opportunity of examining the upper regions of the new dormitory.

The girls in the dormitory had been divided into reception committees. As the guests entered the building, one of a waiting committee greeted them in the living room, showed them where to lay their wraps, had them register, and then unfolded the glories of the faculty living quarters to them. After the inspection of the first floor, the guide handed her guests over to a guide on second floor, who after showing the guests all the rooms in her corridor, in turn relayed the guests to the reception committee on the third floor.

After the upper part of the building was inspected, the guests descended to the dining room. There such interesting things were observed as the electric potato peeler, the electric bread-cutter, the private dining room where our honored guests were served, and the big bowl of punch.

As each guest completed his inspection, he returned to the living room. There, caught by the spell of the crackling fire on the hearth, he sat in one of the comfortable chairs and visited with his neighbor. The glow of the lamps and the richly splendid colors of the room gave joy to all.

At ten o'clock, the guests from all around, including such points as Des Moines, Independence, and Kansas City, departed, leaving behind them a group of tired but happy girls. They were content because their home had received the benediction of staunch friends.

VIVIAN CASTINGS.

Trustees Entertained at Dinner

The college entertained the board of trustees and those who had a major part to do with the construction of the new dormitory at a dinner February 14. Knowing that they were to be served in the dormitory, some of the guests must have wondered where they might eat dinner, away from the noise of the chattering of numerous students. At 6.30 Mr. N. Ray Carmichael brought the guests to the private dining room. Upon entering the room they found it much smaller than the dining room where the students are served. This room contained six carefully set tables made colorful with vases of red carnations, dainty place cards, and brightly colored salads. As soon as everyone was seated, two college girls, acting as waitresses, served the first course of the dinner. The guests conversed happily during the meal. After they had finished eating, the guests returned to the parlor. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carmichael, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Siegfried, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Becker, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Weeks, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Short, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Briggs, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Garver, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Prall, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hayer, Mr. and Mrs. Evan Walden, Miss Tess Morgan, Miss Fern Roberson, and Mr. and Mrs. N. Ray Carmichael.

Gresty Directs Oratorio Society

Isn't Brother Gresty the most energetic old man you ever saw? The Lamoni Oratorio Society thinks he is. Brother Gresty met with the chorus last Sunday to direct the rehearsal of his wonderful composition, The Course of Time.

This rehearsal was far from dull, as he often introduced personal experiences and rare bits of humor which made the practice hour particularly interesting. Everyone listened eagerly to the account of his twenty-three years' work in composing the oratorio and also to the compliments which have been paid him on its merits.

The Oratorio Society felt complimented when Brother Gresty told them they sang the two choruses, "Babylon is fallen" and "Harp, lift up thy voice," better than any other he has thus far rehearsed. He commended Miss Carlile very highly on the accomplishments of the chorus with respect to shading and enthusiasm.

Track Training Begins

As the symptoms of spring grow more abundant around the Graceland campus, much enthusiasm is shown toward the coming track season.

The prospects for a winning team are a little below normal this year, but with the unquestionable track ability of Coach Gilbert, we will no doubt uncover some good material in the new men. We especially need men in the weights, runs, and hurdles, there being only two men back from last year, Parsons, a dash man, and Barrows, a pole vaulter.

We have an unusually hard schedule this year, competing in dual meets with Chillicothe Business College, Missouri Wesleyan, Central, and Drake Freshmen. In addition to the dual meets, we have arranged a triangular meet with Penn and Iowa Wesleyan, both "top-notchers."

One factor which may prove fatal to our opening season is the ten-day spring vacation which ends just before our first meet.

Professor Trowbridge Visits Lamoni

For some time it has been the wish and hope of Doctor Morris Mortimore, geology instructor at Graceland, to bring to Lamoni his university professor and friend, Doctor Arthur Trowbridge, of Iowa University. This last week, Doctor Mortimore's dream was realized, for Doctor Trowbridge arrived in Lamoni Friday, February 14 for the week end.

All of the present geology students and a great many former students turned out to hear the professor's first lecture, Friday afternoon. His subject was "The geography and geology of Iraq," a small country in Mesopotamia. He explained the oil possibilities of this small country, the mode of living of the people, the chief industries, and the rock structure of the land. That Iraq may become a great country in time is Doctor Trowbridge's prediction. Sunday morning during the Sunday school hour the doctor talked to the high school and college departments on "The principles of progress." We acquire education and character. We do not "get" religion, neither do we "fall" in love, as is commonly believed; these also must be acquired. In order to progress we need all of these things. At the eleven o'clock hour Professor Trowbridge talked about the Holy Land, its past, its present, and its future. Although he is not a preacher by vocation there is certainly no doubt as to his possibilities along that line. Everyone who heard the lectures was well repaid, and is thankful to Doctor Mortimore for making it possible for him to hear Professor Trowbridge.

Progress in Western Oklahoma

By A. H. Christensen

Seiling, Oklahoma.—I am to begin a series of meetings at Canton, March 2. We will continue there two weeks. Earnest Crownover, of El Reno, will be associated with me in the meeting. Also Deacon Howard Harpham, of Seiling, will occupy his regular appointment there Sunday night, which will be the first session of this meeting. These are two young men of the district who give fine promise for the ministry. Having a few days to utilize before the beginning of this meeting, I came to Seiling to do some visiting. Our object was to look up some that we thought ready to unite with the church. One has requested baptism. Therefore, we have appointed a meeting for Seiling March 16. The district president will be asked to attend. If there are any in the district who desire to unite with the church within this the first century of our church in latter times, please come to one of these meetings.

Mallard, Iowa

February 16.—There is considerable sickness in this part of the country, and yet in our branch we have been fortunate. Only one person has been ill, little Benitta Fish, who was threatened with pneumonia. But she is getting along fine and will soon be able to be out.

Brother Edwards and family spent two Sundays with us during the last month, he being the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour January 19 on "The atonement," and on February 16 "Merits."

Sister Ethel Fish gave an interesting talk on diet during the Sunday school hour February 16. She has studied a great deal along this line during the last few years and is much interested in caring for her health and helping others. This was her farewell talk to us. Elder Robert Fish preached his farewell sermon Sunday evening, speaking from Matthew 5. His aim was to encourage the Saints in spiritual welfare. Brother and Sister Fish are leaving for Independence, Missouri, February 18. It is hard for us to give them up, for Brother Fish has been the shepherd of the little flock here for eighteen years. They will be missed in every department, because they have been very active members. But we are glad to know they have complied with the laws of the church, and the members of Spring Branch congregation will find them ready to do their part. Their friends and neighbors gave them two surprises, gathering to their home with baskets of food to spend the day with them.

A purse of money was given them each time to buy something for their new home. February 11 the members of the branch gave them a surprise. It being Religio night, we gathered at the church, and after the opening exercises the superintendent stated that all would go over to Sister Ward's home, where a party was planned for Brother and Sister Fish. The evening passed with games and refreshments. Branch President Benjamin Fish presented Brother and Sister Fish with a brief case as a token of remembrance from the branch.

Oshoto, Wyoming

February 16.—We should love the Lord our God with all our hearts and our neighbor as ourselves, was the principal thought underlying the first sermon preached to Oshoto Branch by Brother F. V. Coles. It would have been good if all members of the branch could have heard Brother Coles, but considering the road conditions he spoke to a good assembly.

February 2 the sacramental service was splendid. Following it was a basket dinner. Brother Fred Cousins spoke on "Organization," giving some excellent thoughts. A women's auxiliary was organized, Sister Clara McElroy president, and Sister Zada Hartshorn, secretary.

Every two weeks a Wednesday evening prayer meeting is had. At the last meeting the Saints met at Brother John Stubbart's home; next meeting will be at the Vaughn McElroy home.

The weather is warmer, and snows are going. No rivers are as yet reported out of their banks.

Genoa, Colorado

Genoa Branch about a year and one half old is alive and active. Among some of the factors which are not favorable to close association of branch members is the fact that it is fully one hundred miles from the home of the pastor, Brother J. R. Sutton, to the home of his farthest parishioner. Nevertheless we meet to worship and can report growth among us. The Saints at Burlington are now numbered with our branch. It is about sixty miles from Genoa to Burlington; and scattered chiefly over a strip of country perhaps forty miles wide, between these points, live the Saints of our branch. Elder Sutton has the assistance of Elder Shumate in the eastern part of his territory and of Elder Page Bruce at Genoa.

Since organizing a number have been added to the branch by baptism. Most of these live in Brother Sutton's immediate neighborhood.

Regular services are held each Sunday at Genoa in the public school auditorium in a schoolhouse north of Seibert, and at Burlington.

We were unable to hold rally day last autumn until later than the time suggested, but when we did meet we enjoyed a profitable day. Some of the Saints drove about seventy miles and reached here in time for services. Upon leaving they expressed themselves as feeling well repaid for the effort. We were told during the sacramental service that day that our coming together was pleasing to our heavenly Father.

The Women's Department held its first bazaar at Genoa last fall. Financially the undertaking was a success beyond their expectations, and the good will shown by the patronage of the nonmembers of the community was deeply appreciated by the women.

A few from here attended the institute held at Wray, Colorado, by Bishop Carmichael and his assistants and reported an educational and inspiring occasion.

Lately Brother Sutton has been called to preach three funeral sermons, one for a nonmember at Genoa, another for a brother at Otis, and on February 23 he preached the funeral sermon of a member of our branch, Brother Ignace Walters, at Arriba. Brother Walters has been an isolated Saint living some twenty miles north of Arriba for a number of years, and the high esteem in which he was held in his community was plainly evidenced by the great number who gathered to pay tribute. His departure was sudden, and he leaves a wife and three children. Sympathy is extended the bereaved.

The Saints are talking of General Conference and wishing they could go, but we do not know of anyone who has fully decided to attend. It is a difficult matter for farmers to leave their work at that season of the year.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

February 21.—In compliance with the plan of the church to make a concerted effort to win new Zion builders to our group, Brother William Bath is holding a series of meetings for the Oklahoma City Branch. A fine spirit of cooperation is manifested among the Saints, and the Lord is blessing the work.

Sunday, February 9, was the day designated by the Sunday school superintendent for the Saints to make their five-cent offering for each year of membership in the church, as suggested by the Herald correspondent. Brother Ed Dillon, president of the district, reports an offering of about thirty dollars collected on that occasion.

A business meeting was held the first Tuesday in February. Plans were completed for an addition to be built to the church building. It was voted that the plans be submitted to the bishop, and that action on the project be postponed until after General Conference.

The young people's department of the work is active and progressive. An old-fashioned pie supper was a social event of February. This was also a fund-raising project. Fifteen dollars was added to the class treasury to be used in the church work.

Other branches of the work are progressing. Throughout the membership is a spirit of cooperation. The Saints are looking forward to and working toward General Conference. The Sunday school is offering expenses to the General Conference as a prize to the member who brings some one to church with him the most times. Several are contesting for first place in this project.

We know that the Lord is with this great work, and we pray together for the day when we shall come to a unity of the faith.

Madison, Wisconsin

2119 Jackson Street

The January sacramental service was very spiritual, the time being mostly devoted to prayer. This was the first day of the Week of Prayer. The priesthood were given special topics for prayer. Also the prayer hour Wednesday morning was most beneficial in a spiritual sense. That morning Brothers Berve and Houghton were in charge of the service and they asked for a continuation of prayers.

Sister Lula Kuppenhaver, of Northern Wisconsin District, is making her home with Sister Leonard Houghton this winter. Sister Lula has been isolated most of her life in the church, and it is a privilege to her to be where she may attend regular services.

January 12 Elder Leonard Houghton was the speaker morning and evening. In the evening his subject was "Does it pay to be a devout follower of Christ?"

Brother Burns is an able chorister for the branch. He has special singing at each service, which adds much to the meeting. We have much musical talent among our young people.

Elder Peter Muceus has dropped in upon Madison Saints at intervals, preaching to us on Sundays.

The historical program of the month occurred January

26. There were three songs by the choir in addition to a duet and violin solo with organ accompaniment. Brother Clark read Doctrine and Covenants 11, after which he gave a brief history of the life of Joseph Smith and organization of the church. When he was finished, the congregation sang "We thank thee, oh God, for a prophet." Three young people presented the play, "The Birth of the prophet." Brother Clark delivered a sermon on "Was Joseph Smith a prophet of God?"

February 8 at the home of Sister Walter a birthday party and handkerchief shower were given for Sylvia Dennis. The young people had a Valentine party at the home of Brother and Sister Berve.

The local ministry have of late done much preaching, Brother Woodstock in the morning and Brother Clark at night.

A number of the Saints are planning to attend General Conference.

The sacramental service for the month of February was well attended.

Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania

February 20.—The Saints met in business meeting at the church December 9. Brother George W. Robley, one of the district presidency, presided over the meeting. The following officers were elected for the incoming year. Walter Lewis was elected branch president; secretary, Sister Iva Sheffer; treasurer, Brother Clark Pealer; pianist and chorister, Sister Ann Cunningham; publicity agent, Brother John Shaffer. The priesthood of the branch were nearly all sustained. It was agreed that we put in a baptismal font. When the church was built, it was intended that one should be put in, and a place was left for it. The font was completed at once, and there was not much expense attached to it, as the brothers gladly gave their services in its construction.

The Christmas entertainment was good. All aided in celebrating the birth of that wonderful Gift to man, Christ Jesus the Lord.

New Year's Eve we gathered at the home of Pastor Walter Lewis for prayer and thanksgiving to God for his goodness to us in the year just passed, and to ask divine direction in regard to the work for the year at hand. A beautiful spirit was present, and we all felt to say: "O man of Galilee, count on me." Refreshments were served, and all left feeling well repaid for the time spent together.

January 19 we again took up our missionary effort, our Brother George W. Robley returning after a few weeks visit at home and with friends. Each Tuesday and Friday found us meeting at the homes of Saints and friends, to listen to the wonderful message of the restored gospel full of gifts and blessings to those who will obey. Our brother has preached with power and much assurance, and we are glad to say that four precious souls have entered the kingdom of God. Others are at the door, and we feel that they will soon come in. This is God's work. There is work to be done here, but it will take a persistent effort. However, it will be worth while. Those who have just obeyed are intelligent and gifted people; better still they are ready to use their talents for the glory of God. One young lady is gifted in singing, and each service finds her ready to help. Those baptized were Brother and Sister Thomas Hyde, the mother and father of our young brother Jack Hyde, and Brother William Hyde and wife.

We have appreciated the efforts of Missionary Robley. The Saints have been built up in the faith, souls have been reached, and we feel that a continuation of his labors will bring many to a knowledge of the truth in this place. Each week he makes an attractive church bulletin, which is placed in the rear of the church, and each Wednesday evening at prayer service we are given a weekly paper edited by our brother. This is very interesting and enjoyed by Saints and friends.

Activities at Allendale

Saints and friends at Allendale, Missouri, are working diligently to continue the gains secured through recent missionary efforts there. Though no baptisms have as yet resulted, some excellent people are seriously considering baptism, and it is the hope that they may be brought into the church before General Conference. Though deprived of the help of the branch president, Brother John Neal, and his wife, because of sickness, both of whom teach classes in the Sunday school, the other workers are pressing on, determined to do all they can to build up the Master's work.

With the help of several interested friends, a play was recently prepared and given at Redding, Iowa, and at Allendale. The first two nights, one at each place netted a sum of forty dollars, most of which will go into the church improvement fund. The play was to be repeated at Allendale, but we have not as yet heard what the returns were. It was enthusiastically received by all present, and we believe will add to the favorable impression created upon the minds of nonmembers by our Christmas entertainment.

Work on the play gave the stake missionary, who directed it, opportunities for contact with several worth-while young people, some of whom he fully expects will shortly join the church. At times he wondered if he should be justified in staying so long in the community after closing his series of meetings, but before he left he had the definite statement of three members of the cast that they are about ready for baptism. There are still others here near the fold.

Centerville Branch Starts Meeting

Since their successful rally day last October, Saints at Centerville, Iowa, have been looking forward to a series of missionary meetings. Their energetic pastor, Elder David Taylor, took the lead in making arrangements for a meeting to begin February 23, the earliest date for which they could secure missionary help. He secured from the Publicity Department at Independence newspaper copy which was given kindly reception by the local daily paper. Window cards were printed and placed in twenty-four business houses. Letters of invitation were mailed to all families represented in the branch, to Saints in near-by branches, and to non-member friends both in and out of the city. Many personal invitations were given, and the pastor with his wife visited all the homes of Saints save four in Centerville and Mystic, urging and encouraging them to help with the meetings.

The series opened with an all-day meeting, with meals served at the church. At all services except Sunday school the attendance surpassed that of the rally day last fall. The only disappointment of the day was the inability of Brother Wilber Prall, stake president, to attend and preach the two sermons for which he had been announced. The membership at Centerville and Mystic was well represented, and Saints were present from Albia, Chariton, Dean, Hite-man, Lovilia, and Seymour. A large number of nonmembers attended, several bringing baskets.

The day's program was full and well received. Brother Robert Zimmerman, of Lovilia, with his four-piece orchestra, gave concerts in the afternoon and evening, and the Chanters, a local organization of eight male voices, including Brother Russell Achibald, sang two special numbers at the evening service. The stake missionary preached at eleven o'clock on "Sharing the gospel," applying the parable of the rich man and Lazarus to those who through the gospel are made rich and those who without it are spiritually poor and afflicted. His afternoon sermon dealt with the invitation, "Come unto me and I will give you rest," pleading with the people to share the peace that can come only through working with Christ. At night the sermon on "The abundant life" strove to show that full and eternal life comes only through correspondence with God and that which is godly and eternal in our environment.

Omaha, Nebraska

Central Branch, Thirty-sixth and Burt Streets

The second Sunday of each month is observed by the Sunday school as Missionary Sunday. Missionary songs are sung preceding the Sunday school hour, and following the lesson a short talk is given by one of the priesthood. Pastor J. L. Cooper fittingly gave the first of these talks January 12. We feel that great good can be accomplished among the children in this manner, and that a closer contact may be established by keeping the missionary project of the church constantly before them. The sermon for the morning service of January 12 was given by Elder R. W. Scott.

January 19, Go to Church Sunday, found a goodly number of the Saints in their accustomed places. On the front wall of the church was hung an enlargement of the cover of the Ensign for January 2. This was a beautiful study in black and white, and was made by one of our young men, Brother Burt Bryant. During the church hour the congregation rose while a special prayer was uttered for the peace conference by R. W. Scott. The thought that Brother Cooper brought in his sermon was that the challenge of the church is the challenge of the Lord.

Northeastern Nebraska district conference convened at Omaha January 25 and 26. The conference was opened by a prayer meeting, and a department meeting followed. The business session was held in the afternoon and the fore part of the evening meeting. In the main, the corps of officers was sustained. The district quota of fourteen delegates to the Centennial Conference was selected. This was not a difficult task, as there are a great many who have already made plans to attend the conference. Apostle E. J. Gleazer was the guest of the conference and brought to us the two Sunday sermons. At the eleven o'clock hour two numbers were rendered by the choir, and a beautiful postlude solo, "Ave Maria," was sung by Sister Nell Kelley, with a violin obbligato by William Hill, junior. The thought of the morning was that freedom from drudgery can be realized only through recognizing our relationship with God, and the problem of happiness is more concerned with spiritual values than with material. For his evening sermon on "Stewardships," Brother Gleazer used as a supplementary text, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Two quartet numbers were sung by Sister Nell Kelley, Sister Chloe Fleming, Brother R. W. Scott, and Brother Harry Greenway. An ordination was taken care of, that of Brother R. Shockley, of Columbus, Nebraska, to the office of teacher.

On the evening of January 28 Anne Self, daughter of Brother and Sister C. T. Self, was presented in a piano recital at a local music store. This young lady does all the accompanying for the oratorio rehearsals, and Omaha Branch is justly proud of her. John Cooper, Frances and Marjorie Campbell, Ardis and Marion Merchant, Alice Murphy, and Anna Mae Fitzgerald were also presented in a recital that week.

At the prayer meeting January 29 the subject, "Faith of our fathers," was fittingly given by a young member of the priesthood, Brother Merle Grover, and as a sequence, "Hope of our fathers," was presented the following Wednesday night by another young man of the priesthood, Brother Marion Cooper.

At the sacramental service Sunday, February 2, the Saints were encouraged by the voice of the Spirit.

Sunday, February 9, was again Missionary Sunday, and Elder David Lewis told the children of the great missionary, John the Baptist. Elder B. M. Anderson, at the eleven o'clock hour, reminded us of the power and inspiration of Abraham Lincoln's life, and admonished us to read our church books and magazines. Being our district bishop's agent, he also requested that we do not forget our tithes and offerings.

The evening of February 9, those of Council Bluffs, Omaha, and South Omaha Branches, who have been rehearsing under the able direction of Sister Audentia Anderson, gave a portion of the centennial oratorio, The Course of Time. Soloists were Sister Nell Atkinson Kelley, Sister Doris Waterman, of Council Bluffs, Harry Greenway, and R. W. Scott. Omaha Saints appreciate the cooperation of both of the neighboring branches, and feel particularly fortunate in having heard Sister Kelley in her solo work.

February 12 a missionary prayer meeting was held. Preparations were made, talks and testimonies were given in support of the missionary project, which the general church is sponsoring, and in which the Omaha local is to have a part.

The church was the scene of a wedding February 15, when two of our young people, Sister Verda Bilger and Brother Burt Bryant, were united in marriage by the pastor. The Saints as a unit join to wish them much happiness.

The hymn, "Hail to the brightness of Zion's glad morning," was sung with more than usual zest by the congregation at their morning worship hour February 16. Doctor H. A. Merchant was the speaker and told us that we could, by the asking and the proper living, be rebaptized in that spirit of 1830—sacrifice, and the spirit of pioneering, such as was characteristic of the old missionaries.

Haileyville, Oklahoma

Elder C. G. Smallwood held a series of meetings in December. Unfavorable weather conditions made the attendance smaller than was anticipated, yet we feel that good was accomplished. Four were baptized at the close of the series, making a total of nine baptisms for Haileyville Branch since last General Conference.

During the latter part of December Brother Smallwood conducted some fine meetings in Wilburton, which several Haileyville Saints attended.

A surprise party was given Sister W. E. Parham on her sixty-second birthday. After spending a pleasant social evening, refreshments were served.

The Sunday school celebrated Christmas Eve with a Christmas tree and a short program. Treats were distributed to the children of the school and to visiting children.

Sister Ora Dollins is attending the State teachers' convention at Oklahoma City this week.

Election of officers for the Sunday school was held January 5. Brother W. E. Parham was reelected superintendent and Brother H. J. Hampton assistant. Although attendance is small on account of bad weather and much sickness, we are hopeful for the future.

Brother John Sills has been seriously ill but is able to be up now. Sister H. T. Hampton is improving after several weeks of sickness. Brother W. E. Parham has been in poor health this winter. We hope he will improve as the weather becomes warmer.

Elder H. C. Davidson was killed in a mine explosion at North McAlester December 17. Brother Smallwood preached the funeral sermon at the home of the deceased in North McAlester December 18. Interment was in Oak Hill Cemetery at McAlester.

Death again visited our branch, calling Sister Emily Thompson, or "Grandma" Thompson as she was called, to the beyond. She was nearly seventy-four years old, and she and Mr. Thompson had been married fifty-five years. On account of a fall resulting in a broken hip, Sister Thompson had been on crutches for over a year. She will be missed by the Saints as well as by her children, grandchildren, and husband. The branch extends sympathy. Elders S. W. Simmons and H. R. Harder were called to conduct the funeral services. Sister Simmons accompanied Brother Simmons. He is preaching a few nights for us on his way to the district conference at Fanshawe, February 23 and 24. His sermons are much enjoyed by the Saints and neighbors.

Any elder who can help us in Haileyville will be given glad welcome.

Chicago, Illinois

Central Branch, Sixty-sixth and Honore Streets

January 5 the house was well filled for the first sacramental meeting of the year. The hour was characterized by fervent prayers and lively testimonies interspersed with hymns. Brothers Keir, Olliver, and Tucker were in the stand, the last named giving the opening remarks. Brother Tucker spoke feelingly of his gratitude for the many blessings given him, and his desire to show his thanks to God by devotion and loyalty to the work reestablished on earth. He admonished the members to live closer to the Father, that all may be fit temples for the dwelling of the Holy Spirit. Prayers were offered for the sick members, Sister Tucker, Sister Tonks, Lois Bell, Ollie Evans, Mr. Graff, Bob McCormack. At present all these are improved, some being able to attend services. The baby boy of Sister Zelda Wadman was blessed by Brothers Keir and Olliver and given the name Karl Lewis. This baby is the great-grandson of Brother and Sister A. Sherman, sr.

The evening speaker was Brother J. J. Olliver, the theme being based on the question: What is man that thou art mindful of him?

Wednesday evening, January 8, was the hour set for the branch around the world prayer circle. Chicago was experiencing real winter weather at that time, but in spite of the blizzard a goodly number presented themselves for worship. Humility and deep concern for the program of the church were especially manifested by all, and the bond of Christian fellowship was strengthened in Chicago.

Brother Tucker gave the members a simple and direct talk the following Sunday morning, urging the members to become in every sense collaborators with God and partakers of the more abundant life he has promised. A vocal duet by Brothers Tucker and Eskridge was enjoyed.

Brother Phil Pement was the evening speaker, choosing for his text Isaiah 55.

The theme for the month of January at the Sunday school morning worship was "The open door to more efficient work." We have a splendid church school, there being good attendance at all class work and the young taking their places with gladness.

Of late there has been a movement in the branch to set Wednesday apart as a holy day on which one can fast and pray for the spiritual uplift of the group. The prayer hour in the evening is a fitting climax to the day. May we each one be a valiant soldier in the army of the Lord.

January 19 Brother C. E. Schmid, the speaker, discussed from the sacred desk how we may sell the gospel and serve Christ.

Several have been baptized since our last letter. Brother Keir baptized Miss Lavina Compton; Brother C. E. Schmid baptized Mrs. L. J. Burgess, Miss Ruth Smith, and Earl Blakeman. Mrs. Burgess was formerly a member of the Utah Church. The last two named are from families having no church affiliations.

That evening subzero weather lessened attendance. Brother Roscoe Davey preached from the text, "Hitherto hath God helped us."

With the temperature ten below zero, thirty-four were at the midweek prayer service. At the Women's Department meeting seventeen were present. We have thirty-six members of the Patroness Society, and we were glad to send our first box of material for use at the Sanitarium. A splendid dinner was enjoyed at this session, and there was a short business meeting.

The adult department held a social at Hamilton Park field house the last Tuesday in January. Such occasions are the means of cementing us closer together.

January 26 Brother H. P. W. Keir was the speaker on the theme, "I saw another angel fly." Brother Steve Lester preached in the evening from Jeremiah 29: 15

February's sacramental meeting was in charge of Brothers Olliver, Pement, Cochran, and Schmid. Good attendance was had, and under the quiet, gentle influence of the Spirit, each was made to sense more deeply his responsibility to God. The evening sermon was by W. Eskridge, who talked from a gospel chart, reading Matthew 6:23 and the poem "Truth never dies."

The Monday evening classes are well supported. Interesting subjects come up in the Parents' Problem Class, Brother Norman Hield teacher. We had our first examination on the textbook by G. E. Coe, What Ails Our Youth? Brother C. E. Schmid is teacher for the class in Methods in Teaching Religion, by Betts and Hawthorne. Sisters Schmid and Bell are equally interesting teachers for junior church and story-telling and drama classes.

The week's services under the auspices of the young people, Apostle F. Henry Edwards speaker, were indeed successful. Brother William Keir had charge of all services, being assisted by one or more of the young men of the branch, some members of the priesthood, others laymembers, each doing his part well. We were also favored with the presence of President F. M. McDowell and Elder C. B. Woodstock. Many rich and precious truths were brought out each evening in the talks of Brother Edwards. Brother McDowell spoke Sunday evening to a crowded house.

Under the direction of Sister W. Eskridge the choir has done a splendid work rendering anthems and special numbers. A number from West Side Branch were present to help with musical selections.

One hundred and four were present at the banquet held at Central Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening. We feel that altogether this was a week of remarkable work and profit.

As General Conference approaches, plans are growing in the branch for a building fund service, also a historical eve the last Sunday of the month. We are looking forward to a new church building before 1933.

Central Michigan District

February 19.—Work in the district to date this year looks fine. During the month of January, six were baptized, and two so far in February. There was a big increase in tithes and offerings in January, more than double that of January a year ago. Brother F. C. Bevan says that a number are filing their inventories this year and arranging to pay their tithes.

Elder G. Burt held two weeks of meetings in January in Midland. This was followed up by the district missionary, Elder Bevan, for another ten days. Now Elder J. W. Peterson is there for two weeks. Two adults were baptized by Brother Bevan. The attendance and interest at the services are good, the Saints have given full support. The young people there are anxious to help. The Sunday school, under the direction of Brother Loyd Jones and Sister Esther Syckle and a band of good teachers, is growing every Sunday. Sunday, February 16, there were ninety-one present. Midland holds opportunities for some good work to be done.

A district priesthood meeting was held at Midland February 16, Elder J. W. Peterson read a paper on the duties of priesthood, and Elder Bevan one on inventories. The priesthood have promised to comply with this law, a number had already done so, and the few who are left are seeing to it that they also comply. We want a one hundred per cent priesthood in this regard.

A series of meetings is being held at Saginaw, commencing the evening of February 16, Elder Bevan the speaker.

A special conference is to be held March 15 and 16 at Beaverton, to consider changing the place of reunion or if we will unite with another district in this work.

A number of the Saints from this district plan on going to Independence in April to attend General Conference.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Sunday evening Elder William I. Flegg, one-time missionary in Kansas City Stake, talked on "The resurrection." This service was a continuation of the "What do we believe," series.

Beginning next Sunday morning the pastor will be heard in a series of morning pastoral sermons. All members are invited to plan to stay during the third period of the church school session each Sabbath.

During the month of March there will be held a series of special Wednesday evening church night services. Different groups will serve supper at 6.30. There will be committee meetings at seven o'clock and at 7.45 an organ concert. The concert will be followed by a prayer meeting, each with a special theme. The F. L. C. Club sponsors the dinner tonight.

Among interesting services in the near future are Book of Mormon and Central America illustrated lectures by Paul M. Hanson, the pastor's morning series, and a sermon by Evangelist J. F. Martin.

Bennington Church

Patriarch Ammon White is in the midst of a splendid special series of meetings begun two weeks ago. An unusually fine interest is found among members and nonmembers. The speaker and other workers are much encouraged as to the outcome.

Mount Washington Church

A series of meetings commenced today and will continue until further notice, Patriarch Ammon White in charge, assisted by Elder W. I. Flegg.

Heathwood Church

Sister John Tucker, who has been seriously ill for some time, was recently brought home from Chicago unimproved. She should be remembered in your prayers.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

February 24.—We can assure the readers of the Herald that we are all very enthusiastic in the gospel, and are putting forth a great missionary effort.

The priesthood have been divided into groups with an elder, and two or three priests, teachers, and deacons, and they have missionary meetings in the homes of the people in their respective districts. This we think has proved satisfactory. The Women's Department has also been doing its part in this phase of the work.

A series of meetings was held in Riverside Mission in the west part of the city. Brother Hunker and Brother Fry were here about two weeks, and the work of the two brothers was very successful. We are anticipating a series of missionary meetings when Brother F. Henry Edwards will be with us, and we are sure he will do much good in this branch.

Everyone is working hard preparing for the Centennial Conference, and much practice is being given to the orator. A part of this composition was given in Omaha by the Council Bluffs and Omaha Branches, under the leadership of Sister Audentia Anderson. A big crowd was there, and we know it was appreciated by all. The solos were sung by Sister Nell Kelly, Brother Harry Greenway, and Brother Scott of Omaha, and Sister Doris Waterman, of Council Bluffs.

We were sorry to lose our choir leader, Sister Doris Waterman, who was married February 14, to Mr. Franklyn Weddle, who teaches in high school in Letcher, South Dakota. They will make their home in Letcher. The work was taken up by Sister Wilda Currie, who, with the cooperation of the choir, will be able to do a great work.

We are looking forward to a prosperous year. Our desire is to press onward until we reach the goal—Zion redeemed.

Stone Church

Evangelist U. W. Greene made the principal talk at the communion service Sunday morning at the Stone Church, stressing the need for preparation before we come to the sacramental service. We must be humble and work together in order that we may become one to receive a spiritual endowment from God. This can be accomplished through fasting and prayer.

Elder H. G. Barto in charge, was assisted by Elders C. Ed. Miller, G. W. Eastwood, M. H. Siegfried, D. O. Cato, and R. T. Cooper. Organ music was by Robert Miller.

Missionary J. W. Davis addressed the young people at their service of the Lord's Supper downstairs, explaining prayer as one of the guideposts to happy, wholesome, and helpful manhood and womanhood. At the close of the communion service the more than one hundred and fifty worshipers devoted attention to a brief rehearsal of the cantata "The Child Jesus," by Mary Houts-Flagg, which is to be presented by an intermediate chorus to the General Conference in April.

Christ is the central figure in the Book of Mormon, stated Elder C. Ed. Miller in his sermon, "The Book of Mormon," Sunday evening, reviewing the claims made for and the criticisms of the book. Christ dominates the story throughout the book. In the Biblical World, a publication for ministers, an editorial on Easter asks the question: "Does anyone really know if Christ is alive, or does he go back to some impersonal whole?" The Book of Mormon, said Brother Miller, answers that question by recording the visit of Christ after his resurrection to the American continent. Here he showed himself to the Nephite people and preached the gospel.

There is an abundance of material to prove that Christ did visit the American Continent. De Roo published a book in 1900 on evidence he obtained in the Vatican Library that Christianity was in America before Columbus. Clara D. True, Indian agent in southern California, believed the Son of Man also appeared to the Indian. Slides were thrown on the screen showing a Mexican painting, antedating Columbus, of Eve being tempted by a serpent and Cain killing Abel. The Nephites had the history of the Bible-recorded event, and brought it over with them.

Christ is the good Shepherd, averred the speaker. In connection with his work of visiting "other sheep" not of the fold at Jerusalem corroborative, archaeological evidence was produced. A picture was shown of a temple containing a little room in the rear, the Holy of Holies, on the back wall of which was a carving of two priests officiating at a central figure of the Cross, surmounted by the Quezal bird, the sacred bird of the Mayas. Quetzlcoatl was the cultural and religious leader of the ancient people of Yucatan. He dominated their thought, their architecture, and their traditions; their capital city was built in his honor. The Lindberghs in their flight over these ancient ruins, flew over the city of Chichen-Itza, containing the temple of the feathered serpent. Lord Kingsboro connects Quetzlcoatl, the feathered serpent, with Christ, and there is an abundance of evidence to substantiate this claim.

As is its custom on the first Sunday of each month, the Stone Church Choir, led by Paul N. Craig, assisted in the program of the evening, singing the anthem "The Lord is my light," the words from Psalm 27, the music by Frances Allitsen. Miss Lilly Belle Allen sang the soprano solo. An organ-piano number by Robert and George Miller, "Meditation from Thias," was deeply appreciated by the congregation, and the singing of favorite hymns was conducted by Elder John F. Sheehy. Brother Earl F. Hoisington, lately of Boise, Idaho, assisted Elder Sheehy in the service.

Among the People in Zion

Those who are coming to conference will be glad to know that plans for the pageant, "Fulfillment" are being worked out according to schedule. The officers in charge seem to have thought of everything and to have arranged all of the unbelievable multitude of details necessary to the production of such a work. Beside this, the work has been aided by the enthusiasm and willingness of the people who have been asked to participate in the production. For the cast of more than seven hundred and fifty people who will appear in the pageant, costumes are now being made. Most of those who get the costumes will give them, after the pageant is presented, to a permanent stock which will be used in future productions for the church. It is impossible to describe the effects that the pageant will produce. It will surpass anything previously attempted by the church, and conference visitors may well look forward to a production of high merit and unusual power.

While upstairs in the Auditorium there is the bustle of putting up the vast ceiling and applying of plaster, work progresses downstairs which is going to result in a splendid gymnasium room for the young people of Independence. The floor is cemented, and shower rooms and lavatories are being installed. This work is being made possible by the drive for funds sponsored by the young people in all the groups in Independence. A sum of several thousand dollars already has been raised and paid in, and there is yet some to collect, according to Elder T. A. Beck, one of the counselors to the bishop in Zion. The captains in each group have marked the month of February with activity, reporting to Brother Beck at stated times their accomplishments. The young people want a real gymnasium, and their friends are helping them. The members of the young people's department of the Stone Church Sunday school are presenting in behalf of the gymnasium movement three one-act plays Friday, March 14, at 8.15 in the evening. Tickets are now on sale, twenty-five cents each, and can be obtained from any member of the department.

The Laurel Club voted a sum of one thousand dollars to the gymnasium, and at once set about raising it. February 21 the Laurels gave a five-dollar dinner in the lower room of the Auditorium, raising by ticket receipts and donations more than half their pledge. More than one hundred guests were served at the banquet, which was a George Washington affair. A happy social time was enjoyed, and the food was excellent. Talks were made by President F. M. Smith, Architect Henry C. Smith, and Lyle Weeks, builder.

Programs for the month of February at the Campus, where assembles the junior department of the Stone Church Sunday school, centered about the birth dates of two outstanding Americans—George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. February 9 was Lincoln day, and following the class sessions, the juniors in their chapel in the Institute Building, witnessed a dramatization of scenes from the life of Lincoln given by Sister A. B. Phillips's class. A beautiful story was told by Sister S. A. Thiel. The following Sabbath was Washington Day, and there were appropriate songs and recitations. Sister S. A. Burgess told a story from the life of Washington. A good citizenship program marked the closing Sunday of the month, Brother Frank McDonald presenting a very acceptable address. The superintendent of this department of one hundred and eighty-five boys and girls, Sister Hazel Moler, reports an excellent sacramental service last Sunday in charge of Junior Pastor Will Bollinger, assisted by Brothers Livingston, Stonger, S. A. Burgess, and William Cowan. The response of the juniors was good.

The Pen and Ink Club of Independence met in regular session last Friday night in the radio room of the Stone Church, the principal talk of the evening being "The short story," by Roy Davey, vice president. There was a brief talk by Leonard Lea on "Journey's end," a play written by R. C. Sherrieff, which is returning to Kansas City.

The class of 1930, the "Centennians," has placed The Sanilog in the hands of the printers. This annual is a fine piece of work, showing an appreciation of the opportunities for service in the nursing profession, also various abilities, artistic, literary, executive, and business. It is a yearbook which anyone interested in the Sanitarium and its fine student body will want to own.

Pansy Watson, a junior student at the Sanitarium, has been called home to Savanna, Illinois, by the illness of her mother. Pauline Roberts, laboratory technician, is on a two weeks' vacation.

There will soon be some changes in the supervising personnel at the Sanitarium, as Ina Cockerton, night supervisor; Fay Franklin, public health nurse; and Myrtle Grapes, instructor of nurses, have resigned.

The Sanitarium is maintaining the crowded conditions it has had. Everyone is looking forward to the new building when better service can be given the sufferers who enter the institution.

Two weddings of interest to Independence people occurred Saturday evening, March 1. Miss Naomi Hill, daughter of Brother and Sister George P. Hill, of Independence, became the bride of George Klinkenberg, of Basehor, Kansas, at the home of the bride's uncle in Omaha, Nebraska. The couple will make their home in Kansas.

Kenneth I. Fligg, son of Elder and Sister William I. Fligg, of Independence, and Miss Catherine Muehlschuster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Muehlschuster, of Kansas City, were married at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was read by the Reverend T. B. McDonald, and the bride was given in marriage by her father. A small reception followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Fligg left for a honeymoon in the East. They will live in Kansas City.

Second Church

February 2 brought out the largest attendance Second Church has had for some months. The eight o'clock prayer meeting was a spiritual feast. The session of church school at 9.30 proved unusually interesting and was well attended. There was a fine talk by one of our young men, Ivan Dillee.

At the communion service the main auditorium was crowded, the members of the priesthood occupying the choir loft in order to make room on the main floor for the laymembers. The service was beautiful and inspiring. Several babies were blessed. In the evening Elder John F. Sheehy was the speaker, giving a fine sermon on "The resurrection." The best of attention was given him by a large crowd.

Bishop J. A. Becker was the morning speaker the following Sabbath, giving a fine sermon containing much good news in regard to church finances. That evening Elder L. W. Moffet, pastor at East Independence, was the speaker. His subject was "Eternal judgment."

Elder W. D. Tordoff was the morning speaker February 16, giving one of the most forceful and direct discourses it has been our good fortune to hear for some time. He admonished the Saints in no uncertain terms to maintain their faith and live their religion. "Apostasy and Restoration" was the theme of Evangelist U. W. Greene Sunday evening, which he handled in a masterful way. This veteran of the church with fifty years of active service to his credit is always welcome and his sermon was much appreciated.

Junior service was held in the basement of the church February 9 and 16. Attendance and interest were splendid.

Several of the young people have been acting as solicitors in the raising of funds to help finish the basement of the Auditorium. They have enjoyed their undertaking.

February 15 Second Church lost a faithful member when Brother Frank W. Chappelow, bookkeeper in the general offices of the church, died very suddenly at the Auditorium. Brother Chappelow was fifty-eight years of age and his death was due to appoplexy. He leaves to mourn his wife, three daughters, two sons, three sisters, two brothers, and many friends. The funeral occurred at the church February 18.

"Reconciliation" was the topic of Patriarch J. H. N. Jones the morning of the last Sunday of February. The infant son of Brother Sam and Sister Mary Edmunds was blessed by the two grandfathers, S. H. Fields and Charles Edmunds; and the little son of Brother Lawrence and Sister Maggie Lee Parks was blessed by Brothers A. K. Dillee and J. H. Miller.

At the same hour a fine junior service was held in the basement. The sermon was by Ivan Dillee and the story by Florence Willard.

In the evening Brother J. H. N. Jones again spoke, this time discussing "The organization of the church."

Enoch Hill

An entertaining program was given the branch last Friday evening in the upper auditorium of the church by the beginners, primaries, and juniors of the church school. Following the prayer of dismissal, the children and their guests went downstairs to eat ice cream, cake, and candy. The proceeds from this undertaking are to be applied to Sunday school equipment for the departments, superintended by Sister Charles Warren.

A happy time of worship and communion was enjoyed by the Saints on Enoch Hill at the service of the Lord's Supper Sunday morning, Pastor O. W. Sarratt and the local priesthood in charge.

In the evening the members listened to an excellent discourse by Patriarch J. H. N. Jones, lately of Australia.

A shower was given a newly married couple, Brother and Sister Fred Ballinger, Monday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Brother and Sister Charles Warren. Sister Ballinger, formerly Beryl Warren, was remembered by her sister Temple Builders with many pretty and useful gifts. A number of friends were present to wish the couple much happiness.

Spring Branch

The 8.15 prayer service on Sunday morning is well attended and proves spiritually uplifting to those who attend.

Attendance at Sunday school is good. Each session is made attractive by special numbers. Sunday morning Dorothy Mabbott gave a reading.

The sacramental service at the eleven o'clock hour was in charge of Pastor J. E. Cleveland assisted by Brothers Mabbott, Fish, Farrow, and Smith. This meeting was well attended. There was no intermission between the Sunday school and church.

Pastor J. E. Cleveland was the speaker at the eight o'clock hour.

Helen Anderson, daughter of Brother and Sister J. E. Cleveland, and Guilford Mabbott, son of Brother and Sister J. C. Mabbott, were married Saturday, February 22, by Bishop B. J. Scott. Mr. and Mrs. Mabbott are living at the Watkins Apartments on North Liberty Street. The Saints of Spring Branch wish the newly wedded pair much happiness.

We are glad to have as new members of this congregation Brother and Sister Fish from Iowa. They are having a new house built on East Mechanic. Always we are happy to have new members move into our group, for there is plenty for all to do in the great latter-day work.

Conference Minutes

CENTRAL OKLAHOMA.—Annual district conference of Central Oklahoma was held at Tulsa, February 15 and 16. Saturday a prayer service was held at 10.30 in charge of Brothers Dillon, Renfrow, and Cunningham. Business session opened at 2 p. m. F. Ed. Dillon, district president, associated with Apostle E. J. Gleazer, being chosen to preside. Minutes of the preceding conference were read and with technical correction approved. Reports from the district officers followed; F. Ed. Dillon and W. P. Rumsey of the presidency reported. Earl D. Bailey, bishop's agent, reported $12,000 tithes and offerings for the district for 1929, an increase of $2,000 over 1928. Rodilla Dillon, president of the Women's Department, reported 8 locals, 6 reporting. Anna Rowland, Sunday school superintendent, reported 10 schools, 8 reporting, with an enrollment of 885. Earl D. Bailey reported as treasurer, and William Bath, missionary. The numerical report for the district is as follows: High priests, 2; elders, 15; priests, 13; teachers, 2; deacons, 2. The reunion fund of the district, amounting to $200 was transferred to the district and made available for district expenses. A motion prevailed to pay the indebtedness of the district, which amounted to $86 district presidents two years expense; $4.68 for district secretary's expense; and $9.47 to the statistical department. A motion prevailed that the district presidency with the bishop's agent budget the expense of the district and appoint a committee to raise money. Election of officers resulted as follows: President, F. Ed. Dillon, he nominating W. P. Rumsey and Rex Rowland as counselors, who were elected; secretary, Anna Rowland; treasurer, Earl D. Bailey; chorister, Jessie Mae Norris; Sunday school superintendent, Pearl Greenwood; president of Recreation and Expression, W. N. Goodwin. Rodilla Dillon as superintendent of the Women's Department, and Earl D. Bailey as bishop's agent were sustained by motion. The following delegates to General Conference were chosen by ballot: Falice Cunningham, Belle James, W. P. Rumsey, F. Ed. Dillon, Rodilla Dillon, William Bath, Katy Bailey, Edith Hopkins, Maud McComb, Pauline Arnsen, Riley Cunningham, J. L. Lancaster, Alma Adams, Maud Moore, Winnifred Goodwin, Bertha Snow, Isabelle Lancaster, Bertha Renfrow, Lena J. Meyer. A motion prevailed that the district meet the transportation expense of Frances Skinner to Independence to take part in the final oratorical contest. Time and place of next district conference were left to district officers. Sunday was a busy day with priesthood meeting at 8.30 in charge of Apostle E. J. Gleazer; Sunday school at 9.45; preaching at 11 by Patriarch Samuel Twombly; problem meeting at three o'clock also in charge of E. J. Gleazer.

ARKANSAS.—District conference was held at Bald Knob, Arkansas, February 22 and 23. The conference opened Saturday at 10 a. m., with the district presidency in the chair. The organization of the conference was effected by placing the district presidency in charge; Fern Harbour was elected secretary; chorister, P. S. Harbour; organist, Neva Emde. Minutes of last conference were read and approved. Statistical reports were read. Ministerial reports were had from S. S. Smith, Thomas Emde, H. M. Daniel, and F. O. White. The following officers were elected for the coming year: District president, F. O. White; vice president, Giles Turner; secretary, Fern Harbour; assistant secretary, Alme Clements; chorister, A. E. Ziegenhorn. The question of permanent reunion grounds at Hot Springs, Arkansas, was discussed. The following were elected delegates to General Conference: F. O. White, Thomas Emde, S. S. Smith, A. E. Ziegenhorn, and Charles Hardy. The conference was then adjourned until 7 p. m. At this session it was voted that the conference favor and recommend the annexation of the Louisiana District to the Arkansas District. A letter of condolence was sent to Sister J. T. Riley. Report of the bishop's agent was had. Saturday evening Brother A. E. Ziegenhorn, Fisher, Arkansas, was the speaker. Sunday at 9.30 a. m. a short business session was had. The next conference will be the last Saturday and Sunday of the reunion at Hot Springs. It was voted that the reunion committee be empowered to proceed with the purchase of permanent reunion grounds at Hot Springs, Arkansas. At 10 a. m. Sunday, Sunday school; at 11 a. m. preaching by S. S. Smith, of Independence, Missouri. At 1.30 p. m. prayer meeting; at 7.30 A. E. Ziegenhorn again preached.

Decision Day

Every day is a decision day in that we must decide the various questions affecting our daily activities and existence; but the momentous questions are often postponed to some other day, probably because we await the uncovering of factors for the time being concealed. To have circumstances or even some persons who are interested in our welfare set a day or an hour certain on which we will or must make decision in a vital question is of value and hence a help, as it forces us to array the factors in view and evaluate them. And after all, we find that emotions prove to be a factor which looms large in reaching conclusions—we decide because we “feel” it is right.

So the Decision Day set for the 16th of March may and probably will be helpful to many who have before them the task of determining one of the most important steps in our lives, namely, that of choosing church affiliation and erecting a standard of ethics and moral conduct based on religion as interpreted by a system of theology and philosophy. It is well, therefore, that those guiding the missionary activities of the church have suggested a “Decision Day” on which investigating friends and those close to the church by association though not yet affiliated by rite and ceremony shall decide to join us in our march which we believe to be leading us to the levels and plateaus of higher achievement in religious and social betterment.

To the Great Being whose name we revere and adore, whose majesty is apparent, and by whose grace and mercy we live and move, we plead for guidance and wisdom for those whose task it is to decide on the great step! And may our ministers be wise, gracious, and farseeing in helping those persons to a decision.

Fast Day

The General Conference this year is outstanding in historical significance, and it is well that we shall continue a custom of having a fast in which prayers shall be offered for the success of the conference. The opening session of conference this year is a sacramental service, and the Presidency suggests the wisdom of the Saints observing a fast period culminating in the Sunday morning sacramental services on the 6th. We suggest the period be from the morning meal on the 5th to the close of the sacrament on the 6th. And may our prayers center about our thankfulness for the progress of the church and for divine guidance in the great work yet to be done, that courage and strength may be given us to carry on our great tasks.

May we come to the Lord's table with due preparation of prayer and consecration.

The Lord's Supper on April 6

April 6 is an important date in our history, and the coming sixth day of April has especial significance because it marks the one hundredth anniversary of the church. It will also be of importance as the opening day of a conference to which we have long been looking forward, for which we have long been laboring in preparation, and at which it is likely there will be a larger number of Saints in attendance than ever before. And the day comes on the first Sunday of the month, on which it has become our custom to celebrate the Lord's Supper by the ceremony of the sacrament. It is quite fitting to the day and the occasion that the first meeting of the great conference should be one in which is celebrated one of the great moments in the life of Jesus, the ceremony of which has become one of the sweetest and most deeply spiritual of all our ceremonials.

At the Auditorium, our greatest assembly building, though not completed, preparations are being made to celebrate adequately the Lord's Supper as the opening meeting of conference. In fact, two services are planned, so as to provide for all who may wish to sit at the Lord's table. The first will be at eight o'clock in the morning, especially for the children and young people; the second, at 10.15 o'clock, the services at both being similar.

Sacrifice has always been a strong factor in spiritual refinement, and the Lord has ordained that when we approach his table we shall come to the altar with our spiritual and material offerings in hand. On the occasion of the sacramental services in the Auditorium the oblations may well be considered in the nature of thank offerings as temporal tokens of thanks for the one hundred years of progress which have brought us to the verge of the church's greatest development. When we bring to the altar on that day our oblations it will be a moment pregnant with spiritual power and uplift, and it will be well for us to come with unreserved devotion, with generous expression of appreciation for God's goodness, mercy, and grace. Let our conduct be worthy the occasion.

And here we think of the thousands of the Saints who will not be with us in our great conference, of the hundreds of sacramental services which will be held about the same hour in the church homes of the Saints throughout the world. They will be one with us in spirit, for the ceremony will unite us. And we feel sure the Saints in all these meetings will join with us at the Auditorium in making it an occasion to contribute to a great thank offering fund which will become a factor in contributing to the welfare and relief of the needy.

It will be well for the local authorities to arrange for appropriate sacramental services on that day, with particular emphasis laid on the opportunity to express the thanks of the Saints in unison with the thousands who will be at the Lord's table in the Auditorium meetings, that by our mutual prayers we may support one another, and that those who are not privileged to meet with the Saints in Zion on that occasion may still be one with them in spiritual unity and the uplifting thought that we are one in purpose. Let us pray, and give, and from the table of the Lord receive the strength, courage, and spiritual uplift which come from communing with God in one of his appointed ways. F. M. S.

Have You Neglected This Matter?

From inquiries coming to this office with reference to reduced rates to the General Conference, it is apparent that many have not read the notices published from time to time in the Herald, outlining the arrangements made with the railroads for this conference. This is to call attention to the fact that the Identification Certificate Plan, which will be in effect this year, is different from the certificate plan in effect in previous years. Identification certificates can not be obtained from railroad agents. They are furnished only by the Transportation Department, and will be mailed promptly upon request. Please read carefully notice from the Transportation Department on page 325 of this issue.

A Study of the Movies

In January and February Doctor Fred Eastman, professor of religious drama and literature in the Chicago Theological Seminary, had a series of five articles in The Christian Century on "The menace of the movies." Doctor Eastman has evidently made quite a thorough study of the situation involved, and his articles have evoked considerable comment and discussion.

In the closing article of his series, Doctor Eastman makes six definite suggestions or proposals. As stated by an editorial writer of The Christian Century, they are:

1. A final relinquishment of all expectation of adequate reform of the movies from within under the auspices of Will Hays or his organization.
2. National agitation for legislation to end the evils of the block-booking and blind-booking systems, together with the monopolistic control of local theaters by the big film producers.
3. National agitation for legislation making the movies a public utility, to be controlled as are other utilities, by a Federal commission.
4. Review by the State Department of all pictures offered for export.
5. Reform in movie advertising.
6. An increased parental responsibility for the supervision of attendance by children at the movies.

The systems of booking referred to in Number 2 are those by which movie house managers, in order to secure a picture that they want, are forced to accept under the same contract a number of much less desirable films. This makes impossible the selection of a program of films in keeping with the manager's own best judgment. We are told that these systems are gradually being broken down.

The Brookhart Bill, now on the calendar of the Senate, was framed to accomplish this end.

Proposal Number 4 is made as a result of unfavorable impressions of the United States that have been spread abroad by American-made films.

Number 5 is intended to reduce over-sensationalism and to promote both wholesomeness and honesty in the advertising of moving pictures.

The last proposal is quite generally agreed upon as the most immediate and effective means of meeting the present situation. This places upon parents the responsibility not only of deciding what pictures their children shall or shall not see, but also of training them to make intelligent and wholesome choices for themselves in the field of recreation.

Mr. Eastman's articles have been reprinted in pamphlet form and can be secured from The Christian Century, Chicago. Although we may not endorse all of his opinions, it is well worth while for every adult, especially every parent, to consider his findings.

On Disrespect of Law

In writing some articles for publication on the relation of national prohibition to prosperity, Samuel Crowther, author and economist, interviewed a great number of the leading manufacturers and business authorities of the United States. From one of these he quotes a significant paragraph:

The argument that prohibition has led to a disrespect of law has never had any weight in my mind. The people who have used it the most are those whom I used to meet on the steamers planning to smuggle in all the stuff they could against a tariff law which favored them more than anyone else and taking a good deal of keen pleasure in telling that they were going to break it and just how.

In other words, prohibition leads to a disrespect of law on the part of those who choose not to regulate their conduct in keeping with the rules of society. This is hardly reason for repeal of the law, however. Such people, as the above quotation indicates, have usually been disregarding some law or other—they make a habit of it. They are the ones to work on, not the law.

Mr. Crowther says that "the professional dries want to prevent people from drinking because they think it is wrong to drink. The wets want to give people the facilities to drink, not because they might be better off drinking than not drinking, but largely because they resent being told what they may or may not do." Whether or not this represents all the wets fairly, it at least represents the group about whom we have been talking—the "disregarders." They are not sincerely interested in whether prohibition makes for prosperity, social well-being, or anything else; their principal interest is in contending that they can do as they please!

Prohibition was enacted because a great many people believed it was wrong to drink—admitted. And they believed it was wrong because of the things they saw follow in its wake—poverty, degradation, suffering. Prohibition is resisted by some people "because they resent being told what they may or may not do." I leave you to choose between the two.

WORLD'S AFFAIRS

Beasts That Prey

A few days ago a man was released from the penitentiary. He was known as "Yellow Kid" Weil, due to his habit of dressing luxuriously and in gaudy colors. So far as is known, he has had only one career in recent years: that of swindling. He was known to be a regular worker in questionable deals, but with his glib talk he had been able to get out of punishment. A few years ago he was caught, however, in a tangle from which he could not talk himself free, and received a heavy sentence.

He returned lately to his old haunts in Chicago, a little less jaunty, perhaps, but apparently with nothing but his old business, his old attitude toward life, his old ethics to guide him. It is quite certain what will happen. He will probably find some person with money who has not read of him, and in a few months there will be trouble, with the victim looking for his money and the police looking for the "Yellow Kid."

Lately, also, Doctor Frederick Cook, erstwhile discoverer of the North Pole, erstwhile discoverer of the profits to be obtained by fraudulent operations, erstwhile discoverer, also, of the long arm of the law, was released on the public. Other uninformed and unsuspecting people will be jeopardized as a result of his release.

These men will have a difficult time rehabilitating themselves, even if they wish to try. Reliable and informed firms will have nothing to do with them. Their only opportunities will come from ignorant and credulous people. They are always in danger of being discovered. The temptation to get large sums by swindling is great. Their chances of reforming are slim.

But meanwhile two predatory characters are turned loose upon the public. The public had better leave its money at home and refuse to talk to affable strangers.

The Nation Loses Two Men

As Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the Supreme Court was celebrating his eighty-ninth birthday, two of his friends and associates were taken in death. Justice Edward T. Sanford, and William Howard Taft, former Chief Justice, passed away.

It had been hoped that Taft, who has served the Nation both as President and as Chief Justice, would rally sufficiently to recover. But it is evident that his resignation did not come in time to save him

MINISTERIAL PROBLEMS

A short time ago a number of church officials representing several phases of church work were called together to discuss the objectives of religious education for our church. One of the objectives presented and discussed at some length read: "Religious education seeks to develop the disposition and the ability to share in the building of a Christian social order." One of the members of the group became so interested in this task and the relation of religious education in general to it that he has prepared the following article on "Preparation by doing."

To those of us who are especially interested in the field of religious education and have tried in various ways to express our convictions in the field, is both interesting and helpful to have some one whose interests are in a slightly different field and who approaches the problem from a different angle express himself frankly regarding this problem. Certainly this is what Bishop Koehler has done.

In view of the present church-wide interest in the new program of religious education and the special emphasis now being given to community stewardships, we recommend a careful study of the following article.

F. M. MCDOWELL.

Preparation by Doing

The late Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, William H. Taft, has recently called our attention to the manner in which education subordinates scholarship to sports. The inducements which colleges and universities hold out for patronage, the mass of activities which are featured, the achievements for which the individual is given social esteem, leave the mass of men with little or no concern in the improvement of the behavior of their fellows, either as individuals or as groups, except as their behavior may affect them privately or adversely. And few there are who find satisfaction, or even pleasure, in devotion to the essential tasks which satisfy the wants of the race.

Religious education has to reverse this order. Its task is to cause men to love righteousness, the

from the consequences of the years of work under a heavy strain.

For this loss the Nation mourns, not only because it will no longer enjoy the services of these great citizens, but because we realize, as we often do, that we have probably been deficient in the expression of gratitude that we have felt for their work.

good, more than pleasure; and, therefore, to find their chief joys in the personal parts they take in enterprise which promotes the welfare of men generally, and therefore pleases God. Instead of teaching men to acquire means of acquiring, as secular education does, religious education must seek to give men the means of giving.

The basic principle of true religious education is set out in this statement: "You must prepare yourselves by doing." This we men of the church have not done. We have sought to prepare ourselves for doing. And we have failed to make the preparation for Christian living, which can be made only by doing. We have talked to the youth of the church about catching the vision of the task, but we have not given them the task in the doing of which they are enabled to catch the vision.

It is the business, it is the duty, it is the one hope of success of religious educators, of born-again men, of the saviors of the world, to be exemplars; to be lovers of the life they would teach others to live. Follow me is the true method of religious education. "Let your light shine in this manner before men; that they, seeing your good works, may be lead to glorify God." How shall men, who themselves have not experienced the Christian life, teach others to live it? We have yet to show our faith in the purposes of the church, which are summed up in the one word, Zion, by determining ourselves to the task of Zion-building. We have been too contented with mere verbal expositions in classrooms. And, in consequence, the task of building the kingdom; the task of making the governments of the world the government of God, has yet to be undertaken. My fellow ministers and teachers, it ill becomes men who, with an open door of opportunity before them to actually share in the ongoing work of God in the world, have not themselves shown the courage to make the adventure, to put such responsibilities upon the shoulders of boys or men of lesser lights.

The envisagement of a God-willed world by the mass of men is conditioned in leadership, in example, in adventure in ordering and establishing the affairs of the world in accordance with the will of God by those who are called to be "The Light of the World," and in this way, "The Salt of the Earth."

If the church would win the world to Christ, it must reveal Christ in its own life; it must make the Word flesh, that men may have opportunity to see and to understand it. This is the message of the Prophet of the Restoration. This is the task of the teachers of Christian religion. "To seek to establish the cause of Zion." Zion, the Ensign to the Nations. Zion, the Standard for the Peoples. Zion, the Highway of Life, the Christian Way of Living, which the nations of the world, some day, "will be constrained to acknowledge is in very deed the kingdom . . ." This is the obligation, the self-imposed obligation, of the teachers of religious education in this kingdom-building church. This is the reason for the important place that doctrines of economic justice, with their explicit demands for the building of a social order that will dispense economic justice, have in the work of the church.

We have said that religious education must center in personality. But what is the sum of the qualities or characteristics that we wish to arise in individual men? And what are the conditions for the development of those qualities? "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets": love of God; and love of fellow men. That is to say, that religious education seeks to arouse or awaken within the individual a feeling or emotion that will cause him to appreciate his fellows as men; to find delight in the unfoldment of their manhood; to desire to live with his fellows as companions—in a state of true fellowship; and to please God by working at the tasks which promote the well-being and the happiness of the race. This is the love of God.

Now the conditions for the development of these qualities are not to be found in mere verbal discussions in classrooms; in the pursuit of knowledges, many of which are not capable of being applied to the purposes of promoting the welfare of men universally—though they can be applied by the individual or small groups of individuals to achieve certain private ends, often at the sacrifice of the welfare of men generally; neither are these conditions to be found in the subordination of the essential tasks of life to social activities which center my interests in me.

To develop world-saving qualities in the individual, his thoughts and his endeavors must be made to center in questions or problems of human living together; the stage must be set for playing the Christian game of life, in which, as the individual takes his part, he develops the qualities which fit him to discharge the duties of Christian living. "You must prepare yourselves by doing." If our present circumstances prevent the doing of these things in fact, then they must be done in fiction; the drama, like field practice, or what not, must be employed to prepare men for the real situations of a Christian social order. But do not sadden the hearts of men, when the hour for the actual playing of the game has struck, with fruitless attempts to satisfy their longings by indefinitely extending the time of batting practice.

THE ELDER JOHN HOWARD STORIES

XXVIII. When the Sunday School Superintendent Swore

The day at the Nauvoo reunion had been hot, but now a cool breeze blew in across the broad sweep of the Mississippi River, and the little waves broke softly on the beach at the foot of Main Street close by the old Nauvoo House. Elders John Howard and John Sheehy stood in silence and enjoyed the wonderful scene, each wrapped in the spirit of reflection that comes so naturally upon one in Nauvoo, where into every imaginative Latter Day Saint mind inevitably comes the pageantry of early church history.

Finally John Howard spoke: "There was a time," he said, "when to come here was like a visit to the Garden of Gethsemane—a visit to the Garden of Gethsemane the day after Christ was crucified and buried." He paused a moment, then added, "I suppose the disciples did revisit Gethsemane. They probably would point out this spot as where their Master prayed, and then would say, 'Yonder was where we slept—when we should have watched.'"

He continued: "All these streets and premises along the river front were grown up to weeds and brush. The old historic buildings were falling into ruins. Here was where the bones of the Martyrs lay in an unmarked grave. And not one Saint lived in the city, for the church, too, was dead in this place. Many times we came here and preached, and often prayed that the Master might say to the dead church in Nauvoo, 'Arise and come forth.' Well, he did say it, and the church came forth, and we loosed her graveclothes and let her go. It is different now to come here and find a living branch of good Saints, the church respected, and a large body of fellow Saints to commune with."

The notes of a bell interrupted the monologue, and John Sheehy said, "Almost time for service; we had best go to the tent." They took their way up the little rise of ground, past the old Homestead, first home of Joseph Smith in Nauvoo, past the graves where Joseph and Hyrum lay, a mute reminder of past days of sacrifice and tragedy.

But as they neared the big tent, a bit of comedy interjected itself upon the scene. A small boy passed them rather hastily. He was muttering to himself, and his face was sullen, and from time to time he quickened his step abruptly. Yet as he passed, he shot a swift grin at John Sheehy, like a flash of sun from behind a black thunder cloud. After him came his father, switch in vigorous hand; and its vigorous application to the urchin's legs accounted for his periodical increase in speed.

John Howard stooped and felt of his own legs. "Hum," he soliloquized, "that takes me back a good many years. Nothing like the sight of a good switch to restore youth."

John Sheehy was more serious, for once: "There goes one of our problems," he declared. "How will we work it out? He may be a potential criminal or a potential apostle."

"Or both?" queried Howard, his revulsion from former melancholy making him a bit flippant.

"I mean it," declared Sheehy. "That boy represents our biggest problem today."

"Well, his father seems to be working on the problem."

"Perhaps so, but is that the best way to instruct children in religion? Let me tell you a story—we have a few minutes yet. The sight of that boy some way reminds me of it."

"Certainly; I would as lief hear you tell stories as to hear you preach," smilingly replied John Howard.

So the two sought a place under a big maple tree, and John Sheehy continued, "Years ago in the little Sunday school down East there was a class of boys in their teens. I often say that a class of boys of that age is the most interesting and vital thing in the world, unless it be a class of girls of a similar age; but they are trying at times. This class often put the girl teacher to her wits' end. And there was one boy in particular, Billy Watson, who could always be counted on to keep things moving. The girls in the class in front of him wore sashes, in those days. And what were sashes for if not to tie to the back of the seat so that when the girl got up she would sit down again? And what was paper for if not to chew up and make spit balls? And what were other boys' heads for if not to shoot at? Finally one day, after an outbreak, the superintendent came back and shook Billy up and said, 'Now you get out of here, and don't come back until you have learned how to behave.' Hum—what is Sunday school for? Don't go to it until you have learned how to behave. Well, Billy was deeply humiliated and very angry. He bounced out of there, never to return, he thought, and started on the road to the Devil.

"Years passed by, and he grew up, but he never went back to the church—until one year he went to a reunion. Something about one sermon stirred him up and reminded him of his old Sunday-school teacher, whom he had really loved, and he recalled the things she had tried to teach him. When he went back home, he hunted her up and told her all about it. Tears came to her eyes, and she told him how badly she had felt when he was so roughly expelled, and she urged him to come back to church. He responded to her personal appeal and went back.

"Time passed on and finally Billy himself was superintendent of that Sunday school. And one day some teachers came to him. They were having trouble with two boys, trouble all the time. They said, 'Next Sunday we will expel them. We will put them out until they learn better.'

"All the past came back to Billy. His face flushed up, and even the old vocabulary came back—the one he did not learn in Sunday school. You know most of us have two vocabularies, one of which we do not use in church?"

"Speak for yourself, John," replied the listener.

"Well, I will, and for Billy, too. He just forgot where he was, and he said, 'I'll be damned if you do.' And then he remembered and apologized for his language. But perhaps it was not so bad. He meant it. And he resigned as superintendent and took that class as teacher and taught it for years. He gave himself to those boys, and they learned to love and respect him. Today those two boys that the teachers wished to fire out of the school are fine fellows. One was in Graceland College last year. Both will be there this year. One of them is an ordained man. Where would they be now had they been fired? They were a problem, but fortunately Billy Watson knew how to solve the problem."

At that point Dan Sorden came hurriedly from the tent, "John Sheehy," he exclaimed, "it is time to open service, and you are to lead the singing. Come on in."

"Thanks for the story," said John Howard. "It is a good one, and I will remember it when problems arise. If we work our problems out, we shall be saved; but if we merely fire them out, quite probably, as your Sunday school superintendent said, we shall be damned." ELBERT A. SMITH.

The Carpenter

If I could hold within my hand
The hammer Jesus swung,
Not all the gold in all the land,
Nor jewels countless as the sand,
All in the balance flung,
Could weigh the value of that thing
Round which his fingers once did cling.

Yes, but his hammer still is shown
By honest hands that toil,
And round his table men sit down,
And all are equals, with a crown
No gold or pearls can spoil.
The shop at Nazareth was bare,
But brotherhood was builded there.

Centennial Conference

Advance Information

The accompanying picture is taken from the top of the balcony at the south looking north toward the three double doors which open into the lobby at the front of the building. This interior view of the Auditorium shows the big improvement which the plastered ceiling has made in the appearance of the audience chamber. The gracefully curved lines of the balcony conform to the general contour of the dome, and are also in harmony with the elliptical shape of the main floor and balcony. The finished coat of plaster has been done in a buff color, which is both pleasing and restful to the eye.

Registrations

All delegates, ex officios, and visitors are requested to register, according to the plan outlined in the Saints' Herald for March 5. The specially designed official Centennial badges have been ordered. They are to be worn by all who register. Additional quantities can be secured if ordered in time, but it is exceedingly difficult to estimate the number that will be required. It has been suggested that registrations be made by mail, and an official badge will be reserved for those who will do this; also that Independence and Kansas City people register well in advance of the opening of conference in order to expedite the registration of visitors who arrive on the opening day. To register by mail, address Credentials Committee, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and inclose check or money order payable to Bishop A. Carmichael with your name and address written plainly, and state whether you are registering as a delegate, ex officio, or both, or as a visitor.

Those registering by mail will not only be assured that an official badge will be reserved for them when they arrive in Independence, but this plan will help the committee to know how many badges to order.

Requests for Reservations

Letters asking that rooms be reserved during the conference are being received in increasing numbers every day. The committee is finding it difficult to keep up with this flood of mail and has increased its force to handle the situation. Those who are planning to attend the conference and expect the committee to reserve accommodations for them should report at once. It will be impossible to secure rooms at the opening of conference if reservations have not been made in advance. Mail requests to

*The Committee on Reservations and Accommodations,
The Auditorium,
Independence, Missouri.*

The committee will make assignments in the order in which reservations are received.

Post Office

Mail for those attending the conference should be addressed, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, and may be called for at the post office, which will be established in the room now used as the Guides' Headquarters. Outgoing mail will also be received here and dispatched.

Telegraph Service

The Western Union will furnish an operator and install equipment with direct wire connection with the distributing station in Kansas City. Telegrams may be sent and also received from this station. Messages intended for conference visitors should be addressed, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Telephone Service

Public service and long distance pay stations will be installed by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company for the accommodation of conference delegates and visitors. This arrangement will augment the intercommunicating system now in use in the Auditorium, and will make it possible for those wishing telephone service to get direct connections, and will relieve the trunk lines of some of the additional traffic occasioned by the conference.

Missionary Chorus

At recent conferences a chorus of missionaries has sung for the conference, and it is desired to arrange for music by this chorus at the Centennial Conference. Brother John F. Sheehy requests that the missionaries who enjoy singing will secure the following pieces of music, as these numbers will be used at the conference:

"Supplication," Johncea Gilligham.

"My Master and my Friend," Lyman F. Brackett.

"Holy art Thou," air by Daniel Prothero.

"Where Jesus lives," J. A. Parks.

These four copies can be purchased at Gamble Hingel Music Company, Chicago, Illinois.

A Warning

Every year in the United States thousands of dollars are lost through speculation and unsound investment, and Kansas City and vicinity are by no means free from this sort of thing. Our people are being constantly asked by various sorts of salesmen to put money into all kinds of stocks and bonds, oil lands and leases, oil royalties, and similar projects which are in most cases purely speculative. Occasionally they turn out well, but usually such deals result in loss and regret to the people who risk their savings in this manner.

Many times in the past the officers of the church have called attention to this situation and have urged our people to investigate and to advise before investing. Consult with some one in whom you have confidence and who has helped you before, before you let your good money get away from you.

Another thing: Times without number our people from all over the country have been urged that when they come to Independence with the intention of buying real estate they would do well to consult some of the Bishopric. This coming General Conference will be no exception. We urge that if you are coming to conference with the idea of buying a home in Independence you do not do so without consultation with some member of the Presiding Bishopric or the local bishop. We have a number of our members engaged in the real estate business. They are honorable men and will not hesitate to have you consult with us before buying. In addition thereto, the church has a number of houses in Independence and vicinity which they are offering for sale. The local bishop will be glad to show this property to you, and if you are interested in any of it you can buy through him.

We are issuing this statement once more, hoping that through it the Saints will be helped, and above everything else will not permit their money to be taken from them in such speculative ventures as abound in Kansas City and Independence and elsewhere.

Our Missionary Responsibility

By John R. Grice

Behold, the world is ripening in iniquity, and it must needs be that the children of men are stirred up unto repentance, both the Gentiles, and also the house of Israel.—Doctrine and Covenants 16: 2.

The fact that the above was given almost a hundred years ago does not lessen its force or rob it of its truthfulness today.

One needs only to spend a short time in the world to discover that it is truly "ripening in iniquity" and that men need to be "stirred up unto repentance, both among the Gentiles" and those of "the house of Israel."

Jesus admonished the twelve in his day, "Preach the gospel to every creature." (Mark 16: 15.) And further said to them, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations" (Matthew 28: 19), making the church of that day a missionary church. God being unchangeable, according to Malachi 3: 6, and Ecclesiastes 3: 14, 15, and Jesus also remaining unchangeable, in harmony with Paul's statement (Hebrews 13: 8), makes the church of today also a missionary church, and as such it is responsible for the souls of men.

Fifty-eight years after the opening paragraph of this article was given, God again spoke to the church saying:

Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad. . . . let him that laboreth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.—Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8.

Again:

Let your preaching be the warning voice, every man to his neighbor, in mildness and in meekness.—Doctrine and Covenants 38: 9.

This, obviously, puts the responsibility on every child of the kingdom, and the purpose was for the interest of mankind in general, viz:

Every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God.—Doctrine and Covenants 81: 4.

Everyone interested in another emulates the Christ, who said: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

That the church may be able to carry out the design of God it will require that every man, woman, and child become missionary minded, having a passionate desire for the souls of men.

For reasons that are obvious, the forces of the church are divided into two groups, or divisions.

(1) Missionary. (2) Local.

The missionary group includes those who are under church appointment traveling under direction of the Twelve. However, they are not the only ones responsible for doing missionary work.

The local group consists of those laboring under the immediate direction of the Presidency of the church, both those under general church appointment, and all those laboring in branches.

The dividing line between these two groups of persons should be more imaginary than it oftentimes appears to be. There is no reason whatever that there should be any clash between them, but rather should there be a disposition, always, to "labor together with God" for it is a "work intrusted to all." Therefore local men must become more missionary conscious, taking advantage of their every opportunity to reach out after and to save the souls of men.

When all of our pastors become more missionary minded, together with their helpers, then will the church move forward by leaps and bounds. This possibility has been demonstrated, beyond peradventure of any doubt, since last General Conference while we have been stressing "personal and family evangelism." While not all, by any means, have heeded the call to service, still those who have responded have been permitted to see the results of their efforts in a constant increase towards the goal as set by the Joint Council and concurred in by vote of the delegates in conference assembled.

Not only has this extra activity on the part of missionaries and others been instrumental in an increase of members, but we see an attendant increase of tithes and offerings exceeding any other year in the history of the Reorganization. This proves positively that a successful missionary effort in any branch has the greatest heartening effect of anything that could possibly happen.

If our elders and priests (and it is surprising the number you can find) who carry a periodical grouch because they claim they "are not being used by the pastor in preaching, consequently have nothing to do," would get busy and secure places to preach, commencing a constructive effort to carry the gospel to honest-hearted people, they would soon lose the grouch and carry instead a smile and cease to find fault with the church.

The statement I am about to make may be challenged by some, but if anyone who disbelieves it will get busy and try it out I'll guarantee it will be proved true, viz:

One will not have to go more than ten or fifteen miles at most, east, west, north, or south from the corporate limits of any village or city in these United States (not even excluding the stakes of Zion) to find people who have never heard of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

I will further say, that we have a number of men holding priesthood, living in isolation in small towns, who have never tried to tell their neighbors and friends the story of the great Restoration. What a wonderful opportunity they have let slip past them to do good and save souls, at the same time saving their own. Such will some day have to pay bills that will make for a lot of suffering because of neglected opportunities.

Beloved, does it never trouble you that there are many honest-hearted souls groping in darkness, seeking for light? But we keep them in ignorance because we fail to take advantage of our opportunity to relieve them of spiritual blindness through the message of the restored gospel.

Every local department of the church should recognize its opportunity to do missionary work and organize accordingly.

How many Sunday school superintendents and helpers canvass the church neighborhood for prospective scholars? How many leaders of young people are doing the same thing?

To the extent that we fail to use the forces, powers, and opportunities at our command, we are failing in the task of helping the Master in saving the world. The branch that does missionary work only when the missionary, or general church appointee is in their midst, perhaps once a year or less, is not doing real missionary work.

It is not the sporadic growth which counts, but the steady, persistent effort that is going on three hundred and sixty-five days in the year. Only by a gradual, persistent, personal, and family evangelism can we hope to achieve the condition we call Zion among our people.

Show me a branch that is missionary conscious and I will show you one that is ever increasing in numbers and attendant spirituality. On the other hand, the branch that does not have the missionary spirit is bound to fail and will finally die of "dry rot."

Definite methods, with every member a participant, makes for a live church.

The church is the kingdom of God as the tree is in the seed. It may have every potentiality of the mighty giant of the forest, but can reach its objective only by the pathway of growth and development. The church that is growing numerically shows evidence of life, which best manifests itself when the members show interest in the souls of other people.

To have the form of the church is not enough; there must be present that vitalizing spirit and power which reaches out after and draws men continually into its fold. A gas engine may have a good ignition system, but is absolutely useless without gas, oil, and water. So, also, is a church useless without the vitalizing power of the Spirit of God, no matter how fine it may appear from the outside.

What distinguishes the church we are proud to call our church from every other church? Is it not its organization, doctrine, and attendant power? If, then, it is the peer of all, and any of its branches fail to function according to divine law, does it not suggest that something is wrong with those who make up its organization?

We dream of the endowment of spiritual power to come, failing to realize that it is already here to the extent that we recognize our potentialities and develop them, each one, into a germ of life. God has endowed us with intelligence and is willing to lavish upon us his gifts, but we many times fail to recognize them. Only when we develop the powers and gifts we have, can God give us greater.

Spiritual power is made possible only through humility, hence we must be a band of humble men and women "doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God." If we utilize all our power, using every department as an agency for recruiting men to be used and developed in the army of the Lord, we shall prosper. Would every branch employ definite methods in its missionary work, we could soon reach many thousands who are not now interested in the gospel.

He who would aspire to become a successful gatherer of sheaves for the kingdom of God must possess the power of introspection in order to evaluate the needs of others. Introspection—means self-measurement, or self-discovery. Seeing, then, that we judge the thoughts and acts of others largely by our own thoughts and acts, it is necessary that we observe ourselves in order to determine the needs and desires of others. To reach men with our message is our job.

We possess powers of achievement commensurate with our ability to look in on ourselves and develop the talents we possess. The world has a missionary need. To find that need and develop the ability to supply it is the task of the church.

Men of the ministry, who should be the outstanding workers of the church in setting a good example before others, must build up against base passion by developing good habits and proper attitudes, thus acquiring character which will be the basis for reward in the world which is to come.

Praying as we ought, because we are interested in the saving of souls, will develop the spirit of humility; without which we can not be successful.

Doing the thing that needs to be done at the proper time; taking advantage of every opportunity to sow the good seed of missionary endeavor, will bring a harvest in due time.

The responsibility of the church, with reference to gathering in the honest in heart from among men, is truly great.

Behold, the field is white already to harvest, therefore whoso desireth to reap, let him thrust in his sickle with his might, and reap while the day lasts, that he may treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God; yea, whosoever will thrust in his sickle and reap, the same is called of God; therefore, if you will ask of me you shall receive, if you knock it shall be opened unto you.—Doctrine and Covenants 12:2.

The words which were spoken to Peter Whitmer in the month of June, 1829, might well be said to every man among us holding ministerial responsibility today, viz:

And now, behold, I say unto you, that the thing which will be of the most worth unto you, will be to declare repentance unto this people, that you may bring souls unto me, that you may rest with them in the kingdom of my Father.—Doctrine and Covenants 14:3.

God give us more men, who are great because they are humble! Men who will be willing to make every necessary sacrifice that the world may be warned of judgments to come; that the church may prosper because of such labors and Zion become a reality. Then shall we see the fulfillment of the prophecy long since given that "The knowledge of God shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea."

For the Hygiene of Muscles, Bones, and Nerves.—Chapter 8

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

The Value of Retaining the Play Instinct

For the proper coordination of these three elements of the physical system, the general rule is to keep fit the entire physique, or person, by encouraging proper habits of work and play. It is well not to lose the play instinct. One should have the leisure to live; to be in certain ways as children are; to go after pleasure without being directed toward a directly useful object of business or professional value, and just to play.

It is not all of life to work, even though work may be pleasurable. There is mountain climbing, bicycling, walking exercises, and digging in garden, all of which are not compulsory. Many a hobby hunter and sportsman is benefiting his physique and nervous organization, as for example by fishing or golfing or butterfly chasing.

Muscles Should Be Used

Muscles should have a certain normal length and power of relaxation to rest. On account of abnormal positions, certain muscles become unduly elongated and others too short. To restore the balance of proper proportions, those shortened need extension and the elongated need shortening. The so-called extensor muscles of the body need frequent action. The effect of these stretches is to harmonize the muscular forces.

Muscles form one half of our weight. They do the physical work, while the brain does the mental work. The stomach, heart, lungs, and other parts are needed to feed and to keep the muscles and brain functioning. A muscle is large at one end or in the middle, and is made fast to a bone by a strong cord, called a tendon. Each muscular bundle is made of cells, like strings, bound in small bundles by connective tissue. Each large bundle of muscle is covered with a thick woven skin of connective tissue, and all the bundles of a limb are bound together.

A nerve thread touches every muscle cell. When it brings an order to act, the whole muscle becomes shorter and pulls upon and bends a joint. The messages come from the cells of the spinal cord, either in a reflex way or when ordered by the cells of the conscious brain. Muscle and brain cells are the only cells of the body which can be made to act voluntarily. Involuntary muscles, as the spinal cord, keep in action in a reflex way. Such muscles are found in the stomach, intestine, arteries, and skin, and also those muscles which aid the digestion of food and the flow of blood. It is well that nature has put these muscles beyond our correct and direct control. These muscles are cells with long pointed ends, which form thin leaves around tubes.

Effect upon Circulation

The stretch also equalizes the circulation, and affects the veins where is an indication of congestion, so that the bad blood flows away, and the good blood from the arteries where the pressure of blood is strong, flows in. The flexor muscles, on account of the position in sitting and because of a lack of expansive activity, often become short. They can be extended by activity of the extensor muscles, by the stretch. The instinctive action of the extensor muscles in response to a demand for freedom of the organs is closely connected with the circulation.

Certain aches and stiffness in the muscles and bones are attributed to rheumatism, as in the knees, shoulders, and back. Rheumatism so called may arise from autointoxication, caused by purins in fecal matter, as well as living in damp houses or prolonged exposure to cold. Lumbago, sciatica, and rheumatoid affections of the joints are preventable by right diet and care of the teeth. Massage of the aching bones and joints, as well as gently exercising the joints, has a good effect. Judicious exercise, such as cycling, is a preventive, for it breaks up and distributes the joint accretions.

Importance of Chest Expansion Exercise

Observe the structure of the torso. The chest has no prop from below. The ribs are placed at an angle with the spine, sloping downward as low as forty-five degrees, while at times they may be lifted seventy-five or eighty degrees or more. The expansion of the chest lifts the ribs. If we study a skeleton, we see that it must be suspended, that it can not be propped up. Man, accordingly, stands and walks primarily on account of the active expansion of his muscular and bony system. The lungs, the heart, the stomach, all these depend for their normal action upon the expansion of the chest. When a man stands, the tendency for the chest is to sag, for there are no bones to elevate it.

In the fingers, toes, wrists, ankles, elbows, and knees, the surfaces of the joints are like a hinge, and can open and shut in one direction only. If you bend the limb in the wrong direction you will break the bones or else put them out of joint. The shoulder and hip are enarthrosis joints having a ball and socket that permit these joints to move in any direction.

Bone and Joint Repairs

The bones of children are springy and softer than those of old people. An old person's bones will break from a slight fall. When a bone is broken, its ends must be put in place, or "set," and kept there by splints and bandages. Lime is mixed with the new cells and the bone repairs itself in about a month. If the ends of the bones are not put in their proper places and set there until healing begins, the bone will grow crooked.

When a joint is bent too far, or in the wrong direction, its ligaments are sprained. A sprained joint is very tender and painful and gets well slowly. You should put it at once in hot water for an hour or two. This will relieve the pain and the swelling. Then you should keep the joint at rest for a few days. When the bone is out of joint, movements of the limb will be painful or impossible. The ligaments become badly torn and will heal slowly. This is as bad an injury as a broken bone. It will be necessary to put the bone in place and keep it there by splints and bandages.

When a bone or joint is bent and kept bent in one direction a large part of the time, it assumes that shape. If you always lean to one side while sitting at your desk, the backbone will finally become curved. If you sit round-shouldered, you will have small lungs and be apt to be short-winded. Tight shoes will cramp toes and make them misshapen. The big toe of a baby points forward in a line with the inside of the foot, but it points forward in very few men or women. The ends of the toes should be square with the sides of the feet. A tight shoe causes the epithelium to thicken and form a corn, or it forces the big toe inward, harms its joints, making it swell and forms a bunion. The cure is to wear loose shoes of the shape of the foot.

Development of Muscle

Great rolls of muscles on chest, arms, and abdomen are not demanded under our conditions of living, and we need not become Sandows, or Greek gods and goddesses. An hour or two of violent exercise is excessive. Physical jerks are rather drastic. Exercises that can be performed in bed have their uses in increasing the size, strength, and elasticity of the muscles. To acquire enormous, bulging muscles is possible even for some weak people, but they are unnecessary and even in the way. One need be no circus thrower or specialized high jumper to be physically fit, but should have just a well-coordinated muscular, bone, and nerve system. Physical culture may become a fad, an obsession, the value of which may be overestimated. It is necessary just to be physically energetic enough to have a surplus of strength with which to take care of one's routine habits, and not musculature which is fit for a gymnast, and thus unfit for indoor occupations.

Simple Forms of Beneficial Exercise

Outdoor sports are best for any age, from the health standpoint. Follow your choice of amusements, horseback riding, walking, etc., and find time to play if you are not to become mentally atrophied. Enthusiasm and interest are quickly rewarded in improved nervous tone. For the older folk, angling and fly fishing is an ideal recreation. Walking is the exercise par excellence, for those over fifty, say. Go slowly and far, and have some object on the way, such as some form of nature study.

The brain is helped by vigorous, rational thinking, and mental effort. A persistent neglect of the brain leads to premature enfeeblement. Intellectual indolence leads to tedium and then to atrophy, just as with unused muscles. An active brain is an aid to physical vigor, for it is known that zest in life depends on various interests and studies that keep one young. Symptoms of dotage are warded off by work and activity. The mind need not stagnate even in old age.

Brain Exercises Beneficial

Such effort of brain, daily repeated, will prevent neurasthenia and melancholia, with depression and exhaustion of nerves. Some attribute this to mental overwork or strain, but this is not a sufficient cause. In many instances nerve exhaustion is the result of auto-erotic impulses, producing feelings of shame and guilt, and fear of injury to health. Such practice leads the subject away from healthful mental and physical occupations, being depressing in its after effects. Then there is the fear of illness, many times imaginary, when there is no organic malady. He may be a prey to fears that he has cancer, stone in the bladder, or other sickness, and thus become a victim of hypochondria; a faddist who takes to commercialized propaganda, salt-free diet, or exclusively milk, etc.; takes to drugs, intestinal lavage, and the like. It is desirable to have the will to be well, to be assertively and positively well, if the brain and body are to stay under good conditions.

Nerves which carry messages from the brain to the cells are called motor nerves. The mind sends messages to the cells for each to do its own kind of work—say to move the arm or leg, or to the salivary glands to pour saliva into the mouth, or to liver cells to change digested food to blood. The cells can function automatically, but if the nerves do not bring the messages from the brain, the cells will waste away as in a paralysis. These messages are continually coming and going, and when they stop, life ends. Each cell also sends word when it is tired and needs rest. A nerve which carries messages to the brain is called a sensory nerve, because we feel many of the messages of pain, hunger, or thirst.

Brain Structure

The two halves of the brain are alike, and each receives impulses from its opposite side of the body, the left half of the brain controlling the right side, as is evidenced when hemorrhage occurs, resulting in paralysis of the right side. Small damage will produce extensive paralysis. The injury is to the lower portion of the brain, the cerebellum, which is filled with nerves and cords and ganglia. The upper brain is a department of superintendence, wherein the higher powers of mentality and spiritual life reside: memory, judgment, reverence, etc., but we know little about the particular parts of the brain where these thought processes are carried out. Therefore we have the ignorance of the phrenologists, who would tell us what powers are most developed in us by the shape of our skulls. It is the gray matter in the convolutions all over the brain that contain all the functions of spirit, of memory, for example. This gray matter is found chiefly in the cortex or outer convolutions of the brain and in the parts of the nervous system where most of the work is done.

Our nervous system, or bodily telephone, is as extensive as the circulatory system. Its chief artery runs through the bony tube formed by the arches of successive vertebræ, and gives off and receives branches through openings in the little sections of bones, which are known as spinal nerves. The sciatic nerve is the largest nerve cord in the body, running down the middle of the back of the thigh, and is as thick as a heavy lead pencil. A very, very bad case of sciatics will sometimes demand the surgeon's cutting into the nerve and stretching it.

Properly speaking, a discussion of anatomy and physiology of the brain has no place in a course of "keeping fit." And yet we ought to know more about our intricate anatomy, so that we may respect it, and give the body greater care, and preserve a state of mind which is more favorable to preservation of our delicate machinery.

Mental influence has much to do with a physical condition, as of the nervous system, for example. Worry, fatigue, fright, may do severe damage as well as actual physical trauma or injury by bruise or tear or shock. Self-preservation ought to lead us to more self-control and calmness, which will result in an atmosphere of power.

Insomnia an Indication and a Physical Vice

Want of sleep is not a problem with those who keep fit, for the healthy, toxin-free system will find its proper rest. The fear of insomnia is itself a prolific cause of its own condition. One need not be keenly alive to impressions of dreams, the ticking of the clock, or too alert and distraught over noises in the night. Sleep which builds up and lets us rise in the morning with a youthful feeling, can not be attained by effort. If we produce the favoring conditions, such as relaxation of limbs, sufficient covering, darkening of the lights, and proper easeful state of mind, then the goddess of sleep will be won. Then can it be said, "When thou liest down, thou shalt not be afraid; yea, and thy sleep shall be sweet."

No fixed rule can be formulated for all, for constitutions differ. Some people thrive on six hours. The sleeping habits of the individual are sometimes developed, and one can get along with less, and not lose so many hours of consciousness in a lazy indulgence, or the sloth of ten hours or sometimes more. Insomniacs will be helped if they avoid cold feet, the use of too high a pillow, the drinking of stimulating beverages at night, and by combating the fear of a sleepless night by retiring with an easy mind, free from unnecessary thoughts. Soporifics produce drug addiction at times, and eventually more and more of the medicine must be used. Hence the need of a little self-suggestion or applied psychology by these victims. One should sleep in a cool, well-ventilated room, without too weighty covering. Night clothes should be loose, such as pajamas.

Repentance: the World's Greatest Need

By Hubert Case

First, It makes all wrongs right, and gives us the true vision of life, as well as it helps us to see others as God sees them and assists us in properly evaluating life and all its opportunities.

No one has ever set us such an example of a pure heart in his treatment of others as did Jesus. In his life there was no guile. In the prayer he taught his disciples to pray, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us," repentance is made a part of our daily vocation. In fact, it is our best equipment for a life of real service, for with it we can conquer; without it we lose all the battles of life. By it we are prepared to enter the kingdom; without it we are not in a condition to enter. And after we enter, we are not real citizens if we do not practice it every day, as we never get the righteous perspective of a life with God.

So by our treatment of this very wonderful principle in life, we are left to our worldly carnal mind to go down in defeat before the light of God's revealed truth, or we are actuated in divine love to nobility of purpose and a life of very happy association in his church and kingdom. Therefore, our choice to practice the law of God or ignore it, must determine our destiny.

It makes all wrongs right if two individuals, groups, or nations ever put it into their treatment of each other. So no one can be worthy of the kingdom without it. No one is worthy to partake of the sacrament except after careful examination of self, and the operation of the principle.

"No one can assist in this work unless he be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity." (Doctrine and Covenants 11: 4.) A humble heart is always made so by repentance, which brings divine love. No one can see God without being pure in heart, and repentance is the lens through which we see your own hearts daily in making and keeping them clean. It is our check-up on our own actions, as well as our thoughts, and its value is beyond that of rubies and diamonds. It brings "peace on earth and good will toward men," and the Spirit follows in its pathway everywhere as a light, as a cherishing fountain, as a means of reconciliation between men, groups, and nations, and man to his God.

You may ask, Then why do we spurn it? Because of our pride, our selfishness. Usually it is the last effort at peace, but it should be our first, for it is our only sure success. That is why God gave it to us.

Then what is repentance? It is recognizing that God is right and that we might be mistaken—it is an acknowledgment of that great fact. It is seeing ourselves as God sees us. It is God's means of reconciliation of man to Himself.

It clears the way. By faith we do all our building. Repentance made Paul a new man and changed the whole world to him, and his vision was made clearer. "The Jews," Paul said, "read the scriptures with a veil over their eyes," because they have never learned the lesson of repentance. If Jews are affected by it, then it will surely affect others the same way—and it does.

Hate and love never mix, and repentance always brings love to the fore. Thus Satan loses his control of anyone who uses God's means of bringing peace, harmony, happiness, and contentment. No one is ever happy who hates himself and others. Repentance is the cure.

We are told, "They polluted their inheritance by jarrings, contentions, lustful and covetous desires which were among them." Repentance was the cure.

Nineveh repented not at the preaching of Jonah; the world repented not at the preaching of Noah; and the Jews repented not at the message and life of Jesus—the results are always the same. Saints repented not, but were selfish, and they were scattered.

Then let us make it our friend and companion and use it to our salvation and the building of characters which will stand the test of the trying day.

This whole church has seen its mistake in their jarrings and contentions, and since we went to work in 1925 to rebuild confidence, rebuild our treasury, and build the Zion of God in peace and in unity, greater power has attended our efforts in the preaching of the word. The vision of the people has been enlarged. Our Doctrine and Covenants is becoming more interesting to us. Our program for Zion and progress is largely revealed in that book. There has been an awakening along some lines.

Our necessity of understanding each other and our needs, is more in evidence. A real baptism of the Spirit to the whole church awaits us when we decide we can humble ourselves before God. Under the spirit of repentance for our sins of omission as well as commission, we may receive from God some of the assurances of acceptance with him, and our progress will be assured. We shall love and respect one another. Then, and not until then, will the endowment be given.

Are we ready for the 1930 conference? If not, why not get ready for it and what awaits us beyond that date and event? Can we come to that conference in love and humility, or shall we come there with a contentious spirit and defer the day of Zion's redemption?

"Say nothing but repentance to this generation," was a command to this people. Our whole message is one of repentance, because it is to all the world. (Revelation 14: 6, 7.) The coming of the angel was to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people.

Again, in Doctrine and Covenants 1: 3 it says, "Wherefore the voice of the Lord is unto the ends of the earth, that all that will hear may hear; prepare ye, prepare ye for that which is to come, for the Lord is nigh; and the anger of the Lord is kindled, and his sword is bathed in heaven and it shall fall upon the inhabitants of the earth."

So we should realize the scope of our message. He also says that "judgment shall begin at the household of faith," and if the righteous scarcely escape, wherein shall the ungodly appear? John came preaching the baptism of repentance, and so should we; no one is ready or worthy for baptism without repentance.

Can we really pray every day: Lord, forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us? Repentance is our guardian angel to guard and keep us true to ourselves, our fellows, and our God.

The Men of Great Faith

By E. F. Robertson

The men of great faith: who are they? Are they men who have never experienced a doubt or a fear? Are they men who are always on the mountain top, where it is clear and light? Or do they also at times descend into the valley, where the mists hang low and uncertainty prevails?

Many years ago I heard one of our grand old men—one who had been with the church in the days of the first Joseph, and in the early days of the Reorganization, make an admission that surprised me and which I then thought indicated weakness. He said, "I have never come to the time, and do not expect to see the time while in mortality, that I am free from fears and doubts." I was greatly surprised to hear him make such an admission, for I had heard him relate wonderful experiences and tell of many blessings.

Years later, at a time of stress in the church, when the faith of many was being tried to the uttermost, and when some of those to whom I had looked as examples of fortitude and courage were losing heart—some even dropping out of the ministry—I was in conversation with a brother who had been many years in the church, and who was now an old man. He told me of how the gospel had appealed to him when he first heard it, and of how he had accepted it as truth, and declared he had never been troubled with any doubt concerning the divine origin and ultimate victory of the church.

Then I thought of the other brother whom I had heard confess with tears that with all his experience, and labor of love, he could never get beyond the realm of doubts and fears. I tried to analyze the faith of the two, to see which was the greater.

The brother who had never been troubled by a doubt had spent his life in the shelter of his own home, surrounded by his loved ones. He had tilled his big farm, and year after year had increased in wealth. He had always enjoyed a respected place in the community where he lived, and had been surrounded by loyal friends. The other brother had spent his life in the mission field. For years at a time he had been separated from home and loved ones. He had met persecution and opposition of every sort from without, and had sometimes known the greater trial of unappreciation, indifference, or even hostility, in those to whom he had looked as brothers, and from whom he had looked not only for sympathy and understanding, but also for actual succor and help. He had waded through deep afflictions, and sacrificed all but life for the cause. Yet when he considered the greatness of the work of redeeming Zion, building up the kingdom, and saving the world, and how all this depended on the efforts of men so weak and so often undependable, he could not always suppress the feeling of uncertainty and discouragement as to the outcome; and this feeling of uncertainty grew into what he called "fears and doubts."

In the one case we have a man whose faith, though untroubled by doubt, permitted him to pursue the even tenor of his way, serving self, accumulating wealth, and gathering worldly honors; and in the other, one whose faith was often assailed with uncertainty, discouragement, and doubt, but it urged him on to the extremes of sacrifice, toil, hardship, and suffering.

It is recorded that after John the Baptist was cast into prison, at a time when it seemed that his enemies had completely triumphed over him, notwithstanding his having been sent from God, and all the blessings that had attended his ministry, he was so filled with uncertainty and doubt that he sent two of his friends to find Jesus and ask him, "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?"

The grandeur of God's servants in both ancient and modern times lies not in the fact that they knew no hours of darkness, nor ever experienced a doubt, but in the fact that they possessed a faith which held them true to their course in spite of discouragement, doubts, and fears.

Paul, in describing his early work in Corinth, writes, "I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling." He proved the quality of his faith, however, by continuously and aggressively working on in spite of his fears.

Peter declared, "We have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord, Jesus Christ, but were eye-witnesses of his majesty. For he received from God the Father honor and glory, when there came such a voice to him from the excellent glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And this voice which came from heaven, we heard when we were with him in the holy mount."

Yet, it was after the wonderful experience on the Mount of Transfiguration that Peter was so overcome with fear and doubt that he denied the Master, who only a few hours before had admonished him to pray that his faith fail not. However, we are able to forgive him for his temporary lapse of faith under such great stress when we see him afterward so courageously and aggressively pushing the work in the face of all sorts of hardship, persecution, and personal danger.

On the mountain top it was light; and Peter could see and was sure. In the garden was darkness, deep and oppressive. On the mountain top he heard a voice from the excellent glory; but in the garden he heard only the command to "Put up thy sword into the sheath." He could not understand the attitude of his Master in yielding so unresistingly to the power of his enemies. There, in the night and in the darkness, filled with apprehension and uncertainty, his faith and his courage deserted him. But, when again it was light, when the vision of the mountain top and the voice from heaven revived in his memory, faith and hope and courage revived also in his soul; and he set his face resolutely to the task that was set for him in the divine mandate to "Feed my sheep," and to "Feed my lambs."

No; a great faith is not necessarily a faith that never for a moment knew a doubt, a fear, or a disappointment. But a faith which holds on, goading its possessor to unflinching effort in the midst of trial and difficulty; a faith that yields not to the allurements of ease and worldly security, nor to the inevitable doubts and fears that beset the pathway of God's worthies in all ages.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Columbus, Ohio

First Branch, Tompkins Street and Medary Avenue

February opened with sacramental hour in charge of Elders Clark, Gabriel, and George Ferguson. Elder C. W. Clark spoke on "Generalities" in the evening.

Brothers Joseph Weate and Lewis Foster worked hard in an attempt to complete the painting and decorating of the basement of the church for the district conference. Several others contributed their services in the remodeling program.

The Sunday workers' sacramental service proved to be a spiritual hour, and the gifts of the gospel were experienced. Some nonmembers were present who stated their pleasure in the meeting and promised to be with us again. After the meeting Brother and Sister Ayers, Sister Sensabaugh, and C. H. Foster took the sacrament to Grandma Gallagher, who is confined to her bed.

Elder F. C. Welsh and wife are busy with cottage meetings, there being good attendance. According to the conditions at this time the labors of Brothers Welsh, Myers, and Foster point to a fruitful garnering in the near future.

Our basketballers opened this month continuing their winning career. It begins to look as if the boys will be the city's champion team in placing of being runners up.

The second Sunday of the month Elder George Ferguson preached on the theme, "To obey is better than sacrifice." At this time the organist, Sister Elsie Weate, was back with us after being ill for two weeks.

Brother Welsh chose for his Sunday evening discourse, "What must I do to be saved?"

The Gleaners Class held its annual banquet in the basement of the church. Twenty-two sat down to dinner. Sisters Bennington, Perry, and Olive Westfall volunteered services, cooking and serving. After the meal a happy, social time was experienced.

February 14 the early arrivals of the Southern Ohio district conference attended the basket-ball game at the junior high school. The boys gave them a treat, winning thirty-eight to eight. From there we went to the church, where Brother Zechang with his Department of Recreation had made provisions for the evening's entertainment. Valentines were included.

February 14, 15, and 16 First Columbus Branch was host to the conference. Spiritually the conference was successful.

The following Friday the basket-ball boys completed their league games without loss or tie, winning 32 to 16, making themselves the league champions.

Sunday morning Elder Charles Ferguson delivered a splendid sermon on "Unity." In the evening Patriarch J. E. Matthews preached to a crowd of interested listeners. Brother Matthews was the first branch president in Columbus.

Members of the ministry have been generous in their help at the Wednesday evening prayer meetings, and as a result of these meetings together the local members have been blessed.

Brother Gersham Myers preached in Central Columbus, being assisted by C. H. Foster. This was followed by a spiritual prayer service. Nonmembers present expressed their enjoyment of the evening.

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

Sacramental service February 2 was in charge of Pastor Robert E. Madden, assisted by E. C. J. Swanson. A pleasing spirit was felt, and many earnest testimonies were given. Bishop H. E. French preached at the evening hour, reading for a lesson verses from Matthew 17.

For counselors Pastor Madden has chosen Doctor W. B. Reeves and E. C. J. Swanson.

February 9 at the morning hour J. E. Matthews preached from his scripture lesson, John 5. C. W. Clark, pastor of First Branch, preached at the evening hour. For a lesson he read from Joel 3, associating with it Matthew 17:9: "And as they came down from the mountain."

The Temple Builders gave a Valentine party at the home of Opal Standard February 11.

The Women's Department met February 13 to share a luncheon at the Fort Heyes Hotel. Thirty-two were present. Ethel Kirkendall was toastmistress. Hazel Gribben sang "The nightingale has a lyre of gold tonight" and "The World is mine." Miss Dorothy Clingbiel sang "My lover is a fisherman," "The old road," and "Trees." Speakers were Sister A. H. Nieman, leader, and Sister J. E. Matthews, our leader for a number of years. Laverne Whetsel played on the cello "Traumarei," "Mother Machree" and "Tiptoe through the tulips." Lucinda Madden sang "Because of you," "Four-leaf clover," and "Icicles." Hazel Gribben closed the program by singing "Perfect day," being accompanied by Vera M. Hunter at the piano, and Laverne Whetsel with the cello.

There was no service at Second Branch the morning of February 16, allowing time for the branch to meet with First Branch in district conference. Missionary John R. Grice preached an interesting sermon in the evening.

Mr. Fred Kehlmeier and Miss Beatrice Guess were married February 22 at 7.30 o'clock by Elder Gard H. Kirkendall, the couple being attended by Miss Helen Kehlmeier and Mr. Tom Kempf. Brother Fred is assistant superintendent of the Sunday school and a member of the senior basketball team. The happy couple went to their own furnished apartment on Parsons and Mithoff Streets.

February 23 at the morning hour G. H. Kirkendall preached on the text from Romans 1:16: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

The officers and teachers of the Sunday school will meet February 28 to arrange work for the coming month. They expect to have another potluck supper.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Thrash are the proud parents of a baby girl, Dolores Ann.

Southern New England Conference

Sewall Street, Somerville, Massachusetts, was the location, and March 1 and 2, 1930, was the date of one of the finest conferences we have reason to believe these splendid States of New England have ever seen.

Boston Branch, under the leadership of Pastor David E. Dowker, entertained as Boston always can be depended on to do.

This district always seems to be able to stage a conference with much life and snap. Its business meetings are always marked by jingle, enthusiasm, and earnest endeavor. Its devotional services are filled with that deep-seated spiritual urge which knows no denial of expression.

"Onward to 1930" has been our motto, with the entire church. We are now within the portals of that year, and our vision extends beyond the centennial. We feel confident that the church in all the world share this same spiritual fire with which southern New England is aflame.

At the preconference priesthood meeting, Apostle Roy S. Budd spoke on, "We must feel the burden of priesthood." The Spirit of God was with us, making its presence known in no uncertain terms. The Eastern Quorum of Elders met in official session, while the priests, teachers, and deacons went into their respective sessions, and as a result we are confident that we are pressing forward.

While our business meetings always are interesting, this was full of action. We have a people who are not bashful with questions and who will fearlessly and ably contend for that which they feel to be right.

Some changes were made in the official roster, which is as follows: President, William Patterson; first vice president, Daniel F. Joy; second vice president, David E. Dowker; secretary, Frank S. Dobbins; treasurer, Bishop M. C. Fisher; historian, Audrey Hardy; auditors, John W. Foster, Everett York; advertising committee, Doctor W. A. Sinclair, David E. Dowker, Arthur Beveridge; departmental officers: Religious education, Sanford L. Fisher; Recreation and Expression, George Sinclair; Women's Department, Jennie Dowker; health, Doctor W. A. Sinclair; music, Beatrice York. Delegates to the Centennial Conference are: Susie E. Sinclair, Jennie Dowker, Rebecca Carter, Sarah Fisher, Ruth Patterson, Mary Rogers, Blanche Reynolds, John Rogers, Wallace Carter, Alena Cook, Emma T. Dobbins.

Sunday's sacramental service was one to be remembered. With God's Holy Spirit brooding over his people, Sister Susie Sinclair came to the altar and Apostle R. S. Budd and Elder J. W. Foster administered, the Saints joining in prayer.

Brother Budd used "Spirit and purpose of the Restoration" as his theme, and we feel that these are the kind of sermons we should cultivate.

A sermon "Achievements of our century church," by William Patterson, came to us with force and power of those who blazed the trails and are now waiting for us to finish the work.

The closing sermon by Brother Budd was one of counsel, and at last the hour had come when hand clasped hand, good-byes were said, and the Southern New England conference had become history.

Good Interest in Tennessee

By Thomas Newton

Paris, Tennessee, February 26.—On January 3 I visited Lyles, Tennessee, where I remained about three weeks preaching every night the weather permitted. The people of the Christian Church were very good to us, giving the use of their church building for our services. Good interest was created. Some are reading the Book of Mormon and the Saint's Herald and are asking for the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. This is a new opening where our message has never before been presented. I had splendid liberty in presenting the message and am sanguine that seed was sown which will bear fruit in the near future.

The semiannual conference of the district took place January 8 and 9. Many were prevented from coming by impassable road conditions. Nevertheless a good number was present and the Lord blessed the sessions. General Conference delegates were chosen and other business was transacted. Speakers at the services were High Priest T. Thomas, Elder Curtis Ross, and the writer.

January 20 we were favored with a visit by our missionary in charge, Apostle J. A. Gillen. During his stay he preached six splendid sermons. Everyone was edified and made to rejoice at the progress the church is making. We wish it could have been so that our brother could have remained longer.

Thursday we had the pleasure of baptizing a young man into the church. This makes thirty-four baptized out of our quota of forty. I hope that we may complete this undertaking before I leave for General Conference. One little girl tells me that she will be eight years old March 20, and she can scarcely wait until that time in order that she may become a member of the church. She has been properly taught by her mother.

I am looking forward to the Centennial Conference and earnestly praying that our heavenly Father will be with us, and I feel sure that he will be present to comfort and instruct his people.

Side Lights

Are Chains Stronger Than Their Weakest Links?

A few years ago I spent several months doing missionary work in the great and resourceful State of Michigan. In conversation with some of the older brothers who used to labor in the heavily wooded districts, I learned that when chains were fastened around logs or stumps of trees, and horse or engine power was applied the strength and usefulness of the chains were tested. The strain to which every link of the chain was subjected made known its value to all other links or to the entire chain.

Can the analogy of a chain with links be successfully used to illustrate our wonderful church in organization, strength, working powers, usefulness, etc.? We think it can. The three standard books of the church, the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants, the Lord's authorized records, have been linked together by him and accepted by solemn action of the church, and those books provide for organized quorums in priesthood; then growing out from and of those quorums are subsidized organizations and committees appointed and acknowledged by General Conference. These linked together, working harmoniously, form a great, strong chain in serving the church, and ministering the gospel to the world—a wonderful power for good. However, should all or even a part of a link of the authorized chain, or peradventure, two or three links, become inefficient officers and workers by continuous fault-finding, rebellion, slothfulness, or other causes, and if the affected link or links can not be made strong by brazing (reconverting), the Lord and his church should respectfully remove all such links, in part or in full, replacing them with new and strong material. Thus may the chain perform its much-needed and proper service in this "the hastening time," and "closing dispensation." The value of a chain can well be estimated by the strength or weakness of the links comprising it. Are you, dear reader, adding strength to the Lord's church chain?

Great Miracles

It is with gospel pride when taking the position that no other church or people in this age of the world can place before earth's millions such wonderful, tangible, miraculous works and productions as can we. Permit the mentioning of a few, namely, the translation of the golden plates (sealed book of Isaiah 29), by use of the Urim and Thummim, which is the Book of Mormon; the hundreds of verses supplied by revelation, and improved readings in the Inspired Translation of the Holy Scriptures; the mind and will of the blessed Lord to this church and the world, by over one hundred revelations, recorded in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; the gospel and the church in organization fully restored, including the Aaronic and Melchisedec priesthoods, all the doctrines, spiritual gifts, etc., authorized and enjoyed by the church in New Testament times. The Lord has placed his approval and indelible seal on the Reorganized Church, and every member should be deeply interested in its growth, spiritually, numerically, and financially. This church will succeed.

Strong Speeches at Conferences

When Saints can listen to strong adverse speeches at General Conferences without being disturbed, always retaining as kindly feeling toward the speaker as they do for the lecturer over the radio, being fully content not to "talk back," but think matters through, then we can add liberally to our store of faith and hope, the Christian charity which is more beneficial than retaliation.

Two Good Rules

A close and experienced observer of people said, "There are two good rules which ought to be written on every heart;

Never believe anything bad about anyone unless you positively know it is true; never tell even that unless you feel that it is absolutely necessary and that God is listening while you tell it." Many individuals, families, branches of the church, and perhaps districts could have been saved and prospered for good had the foregoing rules been carefully observed.

Refusing Nourishing Food

Would you, dear Saint, refuse nourishing food and needful medicine, or leave America because your choice for President of the nation, the man you wanted for Congress, or your candidate for governor was not elected to office? Will you, therefore withdraw moral and financial support from the church when action is had placing men not of your preference in office in branch, district, or general church? Or will you when legislative enactments are made placing additional requirements on members, which are not fully in accord with your ideas, refuse spiritual nourishment to be found in the services of the church, and in time allow yourself to drift from the church into unbelief and despondency? Is this an advisable course?

Paragraphs of Interest

The encouraging statement by Jewish authority, in the September, 1929, National Jewish Monthly Magazine is that, "Zionist and nonzionist have united to further the development of Palestine." Roger W. Babson, noted statistician and economist, said in the Federal Council Bulletin, September, 1929, "Only by a united Protestantism, can Protestantism survive."

A popular writer said, "There are 3,424 languages or dialects, and one thousand religions. Yet some people find it a hard matter to express by means of the 3,424 languages their opinion of the other 999 religions." It is reported that the greatest number of languages and dialects in the world are in North and South America, more than 1,600, and over forty different nationalities have homes in the United States.

Lincoln, Nebraska

March 5.—Pastor E. J. Lenox is again with us after spending about a month in the Sanitarium at Independence. Brother Lenox has not been well since his arrival from Wisconsin, and we understand that he underwent an operation on his throat while in the Sanitarium. We are sorry to report that immediately after the district conference Brother Lenox will return to the Sanitarium for further treatment. We extend to him our prayers and sympathy, and hope that he will have recovered sufficiently upon his return so that he can push forward in this great work.

We are glad to announce the arrival of a baby girl to Mr. and Mrs. Schotz the latter part of February. Mrs. Schotz was formerly Juanita Wilcox.

February 21 the annual business meeting of the branch convened. This session had been postponed because of the absence of Pastor E. J. Lenox. The meeting progressed in a spiritual manner. The church school plan was adopted. The following were nominated and elected for office under this new plan: Brother E. J. Lenox, president of the Branch. W. E. Poague and Grover Wall were chosen associate workers. Under this new plan W. E. Poague will be over the church school and Brother Wall in charge of the visiting. Francis Schrunk was sustained as secretary of the branch. The following were nominated and later elected as officers of the church school: W. S. Farrar, adults; George W. Sutterfield, young people; Sister W. E. Poague, children; Sister Katie Hale, Women's Department; Sister W. E. Poague, girls; Sister Eunice F. Fulton, secretary; Brother W. E. Poague, chorister.

The first district conference of this year was held with Lincoln Saints March 1 and 2. Brother McDowell, of Independence, gave us a beautiful sermon on "What is religion?" Friday night preceding the opening of conference. Saturday morning opened with a meeting led by Brother McDowell. The business session of the conference was held at 2.30 Saturday afternoon. Saturday evening a play presented by a group of young people of Lincoln Branch, was enjoyed by those present. Those participating were: Esther Schrunk, Francis Schrunk, Ruth Phanmiller, Al Phanmiller, W. E. Poague, Kenneth Bartell, Mildred Omev, Gracia Reichenbach, George Sutterfield, and Capitola Wright. Sister W. E. Poague directed the play. Sunday school convened as usual Sunday morning, followed by church. Brother McDowell delivered another one of his beautiful sermons. At the afternoon session of the conference ten were confirmed, nine of whom became members of Lincoln Branch. All of these were baptized sometime during the preceding week. The conference closed with a sermon from Brother McDowell.

In the evening of March 3 after a brief business meeting, Brother McDowell reviewed some portions of church history.

Brother Lawrence Brockway was placed in charge of the branch while Brother Lenox is in the Sanitarium at Independence.

Toronto, Ontario

Women's Department of Toronto Branch

The past year has been an extremely busy one for the Women's Department of Toronto Branch. At the opening of this season one hundred women were organized into ten groups of ten members, including captain and secretary-treasurer. The plan was that each person pay twenty-five cents a week and each group put on as many activities as could be arranged in turn. This system provides work for all and makes for friendly competition and social entertainment.

At the end of each quarter the entire department meets, and after opening exercises and matters of business, the superintendent, Sister J. A. Wilson, calls on the group captain to report the activities. The amount made is placed on the table of the general secretary and the treasurer. When all have responded, the total is read and special applause given the group contributing the largest amount.

The pastor, J. L. Prentice, and the bishop of the district and other brothers attend the meetings and lend their support. Refreshments are served by the social committee and the general get-together makes a happy evening.

The objective of the department was twelve hundred dollars, but when all was in at the end of the year it amounted to twenty-seven hundred dollars.

The activities of the groups consisted of concerts, convention and conference meals, chicken dinners, garden parties, silver teas, sales of work and home cooking, rummage sales, and special donations. This year, 1930, the objective is two thousand dollars with the group system continued and the Saints of Toronto interested in a new church building and a forward vision for this centennial year.

North Toronto Branch

February 16.—Work in North Toronto has taken on renewed impetus this centennial year, especially among the young is this observed. The total branch membership is ninety-nine, and attendance ranges between sixty and eighty at Sunday school and sessions of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

The annual branch roll call Sunday has also been a decided success. Everyone present registered his name and had a gold star placed beside it.

A special blessing has come to us after tribulation. Brother George Murphy fell down an elevator shaft and broke his back in two places. After the laying on of hands for administration by the elders he was able to get up from the hospital bed and after three months to walk, and a week later he sang at the Women's Department banquet. He is now able to stoop without his steel brace. At the hospital they called him the "Miracle Man," for others with similar trouble were still lying prostrate at eleven months. He entertained the patients while in the hospital by singing. His deep bass voice rang out across the courtyard and attracted the attention of many people, even to the roofs of the hospital. He was interviewed by the reporters of the daily papers and photographed. Brother Murphy is giving a recital in Foresters Hall in Toronto in aid of the building program, to show his appreciation for what God has done for him. We are all made to rejoice.

We are looking forward to our new church, when Toronto and North Toronto Branches will be amalgamated.

Rhodes, Iowa

March 4.—Brother John Hickman passed away February 23 at the home of his son Frank, with whom he had made his home for years. He was past eighty-three years of age. The funeral was held February 25 at the Congregational Church, E. G. Beye in charge, assisted by the Reverend Myers, local pastor, and also Brother Charles Nirk, of Newton. A large number of relatives and friends were in attendance. Floral offerings were very plentiful. Brother John was well thought of and respected in his community.

February 26 at Baxter occurred the death of Sister Angeline Barbee, who was past seventy-one years of age and a member of the church for over fifty years. The funeral service was held at the home of her son Ray, February 28. She had made her home with her son for some time. Brother E. G. Beye was in charge of this service. Quite a number of relatives and friends attended.

Thus two more of our members have gone to a better condition. Both lived faithfully and well until the time of their departure. They are examples for all who are younger. They served their Maker.

Bremerton, Washington

Ninth and Montgomery Streets

The Sunday evening before Christmas was given to the Christmas program, which was put on by all the children of the Sunday school. Recitations and songs with two beautiful tableaux composed a fine program. The church was decorated, and a beautiful tree occupied one corner of the room. Santa Claus made his appearance with treats.

The Saints were sorry to lose Brother and Sister Jack Coop, who returned to Portland District about the middle of January.

January 19 some of the Saints from here journeyed to Seattle, accompanied by Mrs. Alice Brown, whom Brother Bacher, branch president, led into the waters of baptism. It was with mixed feelings that he did so, for this was his first baptism. The confirmation took place at the home of Brother and Sister Monte Lasater in Seattle. Our baptismal record is sixty-six and two thirds per cent over the quota. Quite a number are interested in the work. The hope is they will soon make their choice.

The Sunday school is slowly coming back to normal. The unusually cold weather coupled with whooping cough and measles has done much to deplete our little group.

Brother M. H. Cook, district president, has just finished a series of splendid lectures. The crowd though small each evening appreciated his efforts, and he helped to encourage the members.

The Women's Department is busy. Wednesday evening, February 26, they are planning a dinner, which they hope will be a success financially and socially. At one meeting in February Brother Cook gave a splendid talk on "Coordination."

At this time we were privileged to have with us two Independence boys, Hubert and Stanley Mills, now on the U. S. S. Colorado. These boys are bandsmen, and they with their instruments make a real asset while they are here. One evening Brother George Johnson, of the U. S. S. Mississippi and his bride made Bremerton Saints a visit. Always we are glad to welcome the boys who are in the service at our branch services. Bremerton is the home of the Pacific Fleet, so if there happen to be any boys from the navy or marine corps in the city, they will find the church on the corner of Ninth and Montgomery Streets, or let them stop at the home of Brother and Sister Lundeen, 1423 Gregory Way, one block west of the State Street Gate.

Our members are looking to the General Conference with much interest, and some are planning to attend.

Pisgah, Iowa

Missionaries E. Y. Hunker and Marvin Fry have just closed a two-week series of meetings at Pisgah. A fine spirit prevailed throughout the period of services, and attendance was above the average. The sermons abounded in spiritual offering, and the Saints were edified and cheered, being made more determined to press forward. The elders visited in many homes during their stay here, increasing the interest of Saints and nonmembers.

The song service of one half hour preceding the preaching was conducted by Brothers Hunker and Fry with guitar accompaniment.

We are thankful for such visits from the missionaries and hope they will come again.

There will be eight or more members from this branch to attend General Conference.

Yuma, Colorado

The band of Saints in this group has been having an uphill pull this winter. Roads have been unusually bad at times, making it impossible to hold services. Also there have been epidemics of measles and mumps bringing sickness into almost every home to the extent that we could not have services for several weeks. However, we are again started and hope to be able to increase attendance as spring advances.

Brother C. F. Klusman is now our superintendent, and Eura Korf secretary.

We regretted that we had no delegates at the district conference in Denver last week, but condition of the roads made it impossible to drive there. Some of us are planning to be present at the General Conference in April.

Brother A. E. Tabor, of Wray, was here February 9, and he expects to hold a sacramental service March 9 and be with us all day. We appreciate Brother and Sister Tabor's efforts in coming so far to help us out.

March 2 we will not have Sunday school. Brother Ward Houghes has invited us to meet with the Lamar, Nebraska, Branch, and weather permitting as many will be there as possible.

The Women's Department will meet February 26 with Sister Lee Korf to discuss plans for serving lunch at the public sale of Brother and Sister Roland Lutz, which will occur next week. We are sorry to lose these members from Yuma group, but we wish them much success in their new home.

Brother and Sister Lee Korf, Brother and Sister Louis Korf, Brother and Sister W. D. Hoch, and Sister Marie Klusman attended the funeral of Brother Raymond Auld, sr., at Otis, last week.

We are so small in number here that we do not have much of interest to report, but we hope to be remembered by the Saints in their prayers, that we may be encouraged to take more interest in our Sunday school and progress in the work.

Central Michigan District

March 4.—The gospel work in this district continues to move forward. In the month of February there were sixteen souls added to the church, five at Midland and eleven at Saginaw, making a total since last April of one hundred and five. The meetings at Saginaw are still in progress, the missionary elder being the speaker.

A fathers and sons banquet was held in Saginaw February 22, fifty attending. Speakers were Elders F. C. Bevan, J. W. Peterson, J. Wade, and Brother E. Lampkin. Brother Fauver was toastmaster.

Special conference will be held in the district March 15 and 16 at Beaverton.

Brother Bevan reports sale of church books and papers for January and February to the amount of eighty-eight dollars. He sells these books and periodicals while performing his regular missionary work.

Toledo, Ohio

March 3.—Toledo Branch has been enjoying an unusual shower of spiritual blessings. During the first three weeks of January, Pastor William M. Grice held a series of meetings. The services were well attended considering the great amount of sickness, and the sermons were educationally and spiritually uplifting, bringing many points of doctrine to our remembrance. The result of the meetings was a baptismal service February 28, two more precious souls being added to our ranks.

Patriarch F. A. Smith was here three evenings the last week of February. His fatherly advice left us a greater desire to strive toward our goal.

March 1 and 2 a departmental convention of the district was held. Work of the different departments was discussed and planned. Saturday evening an entertainment by the combined talent of the district was enjoyed. The sacramental service was one marked by the presence of the Spirit. The two who were baptized the last day of February were confirmed. The assembly was spoken to in prophecy, and Brother C. V. Holmes was called to the office of elder.

During the last few months Toledo Branch has suffered severely from sickness. We are now looking for the silver lining of our clouds and praying that our trials may serve to bring us closer the Father.

Alpena, Michigan

Alpena Saints are endeavoring to do their part in keeping the great work going in this region. When Elder J. J. Ledsworth and Brother McGuire came to our branch February 10 to open a series of meetings, they found the members quite discouraged. But as we gathered to the church each night and listened to these brothers preach the story of the gospel, our hearts were gladdened. Each one worked earnestly that the meetings might be successful, but we think we have been amply repaid for our effort.

Members in Alpena are in a scattered condition. Some find it difficult to get to church.

The series in February closed with an all-day meeting. The first service was Sunday school at ten o'clock in the morning, sacramental service at eleven. Lunch was eaten at noon, and two hours later the priesthood met. A sermon by J. J. Ledsworth commenced at three o'clock. He placed emphasis on filing our inventories and paying tithing. After the service several asked for inventory blanks and said they were going to obey that part of God's law.

Brother Ledsworth preached again at eight o'clock. He took his text from John 8: 31: "If ye continue in my word then ye are my disciples indeed."

The Saints from other branches met with us. Some drove fifty miles. A profitable day was enjoyed by a houseful of members. May the two brothers as they labor in other parts of the field be able to give cheer and courage to those among whom they work as they have to us.

Kirtland, Ohio

District President James E. Bishop delivered two interesting discourses in the Temple Sunday morning and evening February 16.

Patriarch A. E. Stone has improved in health and attended the district conference at Akron.

Because the district conference was in session at Akron, not a very large attendance was had in Kirtland at the March sacramental meeting. The service was presided over by High Priest George Neville, Branch President D. Proper, and Elder Eben Curry. A good spirit prevailed.

A number of Kirtland members are contemplating attending the Centennial Conference.

The many friends of the families of Brother and Sister John Neville, of Akron, Ohio, and Brother and Sister Aaron Kirkendall, of Creola, Ohio, were saddened to hear of the death of their sons. The young men were well known to many Saints in Southern Ohio and Kirtland Districts. Robert Neville was struck by an automobile at Akron and fatally injured. Rothbe Kirkendall met his death in his garage at Canton, Ohio, from escaping gas.

The church and community are glad to have a musician added to their ranks in the person of Ammon Fry, son of Brother and Sister Charles Fry. If he can obtain employment here, he will remain in Kirtland. He is a fine violin player and also plays the piano. We are pleased to have him in this community.

South Bend and Mishawaka Branch

Reddick and Delaware Streets, Mishawaka, Indiana

In every department of this local the work of the church has moved forward during the month of February. Regular services have been held, Elders Osler, Coonfare, and Freeman bringing the good news of the gospel to the people. Attendance has been splendid.

The True Blue Class gave a surprise party on Miss Irene Granger at the home of their teacher, Sister Bertha Granger, Irene's mother, February 7. A happy time was enjoyed.

The Saints were more than pleased to have Apostle D. T. Williams here with stereopticon slides on the history of the church February 13 and 14. A full house greeted him.

Preceding the lecture by Brother Williams February 14, a Valentine party was given the Oriole Girls at the home of Brother and Sister Freeman. All were present, and there were some visitors.

Sister Audrey Hartwell entertained her class of girls Saturday afternoon, February 15. Nuts and taffy were served for refreshments.

February 26 the first service was held in the new church, a midweek prayer meeting. This was a happy evening. An all-day meeting was held March 2, Brother William Osler, district president, being in charge. Sunday school and sacramental service in the morning were followed by a basket dinner. In the afternoon all gathered at the Y. M. C. A. in South Bend, where six candidates entered the waters of baptism, Elders V. L. Coonfare and C. B. Freeman officiating. Confirmation service was held at the church. Supper was served; then Brother Osler was the speaker for the evening. Though the weather was stormy, a peaceful and happy day was spent. Saints came from Elkhart and Knox, Indiana.

To find the church from South Bend, take a South Side and Mishawaka car to Reddick Street, then three blocks south. From Mishawaka take a Washington car to Reddick Street, then three blocks south. If driving take Lincoln Way, No. 20, to Reddick, then three blocks south. Pastor V. L. Coonfare's address is 919 Burdette Street, Mishawaka; Telephone No. 5—0669W.

Monetville, Ontario

February 24.—Elder J. L. Fryer came to this district about six years ago. After becoming acquainted with the people, he was asked to organize a union Sunday school. Prior to this there was no Sunday school here. A meeting was accordingly held to discuss the matter, and as a result a union Sunday school was organized, Brother Fryer being chosen superintendent.

The union Sunday school proved very successful, although at times, as Brother Fryer states, it was discouraging. Its membership consisted of Anglicans, Baptists, Presbyterians, and for that reason it was almost impossible for him to talk on the most vital points of the lessons because of their divided beliefs. The lessons were, therefore, discussed in a general way. Even then Brother Fryer received harsh criticisms at times, but he accepted these with great patience. One great change that the union Sunday school made was that it brought together people who had formerly been enemies. In addition to that it brought together the whole neighborhood under conditions fostering unity, peace, and order.

After continuing five years in this manner Brother Fryer began to feel that further progress as a union school was limited, there being no ideal in common. He thought the people had been taught enough about the scriptures to enable them to hear the gospel story. Last spring he wrote to the president of Owen Sound District, asking him to send a missionary if possible during the summer months.

In July Elder H. E. Dayton was sent. Meetings were held in the schoolhouse three nights a week and once on Sundays during July and August. The whole neighborhood attended the meetings and listened with great interest. The results were gratifying indeed, as eight were baptized and confirmed into the church by Elders Dayton and Fryer. Two or three families were opposed to the work, and the Saints have been scoffed at, persecuted, ridiculed, and had all manner of evil spoken against them, but they have endured it with love and patience. God has blessed his people here. Some of those so strongly opposed to the latter-day work are gradually coming to realize their mistake.

Last November Elder Dayton was again sent, this time to organize us into a group. The election of officers resulted: President, Elder J. L. Fryer; secretary, Elna Mercer; treasurer, Arthur Mercer; publicity agent, Thomas Grieve. A Sunday school and Department of Recreation and Expression also were organized.

Prayer meetings were held in the homes every Wednesday night until Christmas. These meetings were very fruitful for a group so new in the work. Owing to the extreme cold of our northern Ontario winters and the distance some have to come, it was thought advisable to discontinue these services until spring.

The Department of Recreation and Expression meets once every two weeks. We have games and debates, and everybody seems to have taken quite an interest in them. Lately, we have been much pleased to have nonmembers attend the meetings.

February 8 Elder Fryer baptized and confirmed Kenneth Crabbe, the school-teacher, into the church. Brother Crabbe was away on vacation when Elder Dayton held meetings here last summer, but later he was led into the light of the gospel.

God has blessed us individually and as a group in many ways. He has given us courage, patience, and love with which to endure persecution. Brother Fryer has given many fine messages every Sunday afternoon since the group was organized. We have made very good progress, but we are still new in the work and have many weaknesses. We ask the prayers of all the Saints that we may be blessed and strengthened as citizens and builders of the kingdom.

Flint, Michigan

From Flint Tidings

A reception will occur the last Friday of March in honor of the members added to this congregation since the first of August, 1929, either by baptism or transfer. The reception will be had at the Newall Street Church, and a splendid program is being planned. All the branch is urged to be present to welcome the new members into fellowship. The list of those received by baptism includes forty-two names, that of transfer fifty-four.

The historical programs and one-act plays written by President Elbert A. Smith and appearing in Saints' Herald and Vision will be presented one Sunday evening each month at both of the churches. We find these very impressive and edifying programs, and they may well be made outstanding in the celebration of the centennial year.

All those whose birthdays are in the month of March are invited March 13 to a party at the Newall Street Church. The party begins at seven o'clock, and a good time is promised, with entertainment and games. Each one born in March is allowed to bring one friend.

The Newall Street Department of Recreation and Expression is moving along. We have fine cooperation and very good crowds, average attendance being fifty. The response of the young people is encouraging. A dramatic club is organized and active. Archie Root is president; secretary, Mildred Barker; property manager, Archie Patten. This year's officers of the department are: Superintendent, Theo I. Bush; assistant superintendent, Laura McNamara; secretary, Lametta Surbrook.

The unified Sunday morning service is working well at Newall Street. Especially does the adult section of the school enjoy the united class work. Pastor Clarke is teaching by lecture method. The class has had an attendance of as many as eighty-five. The classes in the primary and junior departments have started an attendance test which should add interest and zest to the school. There are fifty enrolled in the young people's class. Carlton Glenn, son of Brother and Sister Theo Bush, is the youngest baby ever enrolled on the cradle roll in this branch.

Brother and Sister Thomas Blodget, who operate the Mount Morris Floral House, have been furnishing flowers and palms to decorate the church on Sundays. Their contribution is much appreciated.

Sister Pheba Nephew passed away very suddenly at her home February 2. The funeral was conducted by Elder A. H. DuRose.

A son was born to Brother and Sister Roy Clark February 9. They have named him Glen Richard.

Sister Edith Tree, who has been ill for the past four weeks, is reported improving.

The Valentine box social given February 14 was a big success socially and financially.

The Saints are to be congratulated for their liberal response to the call for material relief for our needy families.

All groups of the Department of Women are busy and making a real contribution to the work of the local church.

Thomas Fay Thompson and Miss Beatrice Ione Stoner were united in marriage at the pastor's residence February 15. They will make their home in Flint.

Artland, Saskatchewan

The glee club meets once every two weeks, and among other activities they are dramatizing "Conversations," written by Elbert A. Smith. The aim is to have different players for each play. In this way all the young people will have opportunity for self-expression.

The primary class dramatized the play "The healing of the Centurion's servant." The parts were well taken and the performance pleased everyone. The dramatization followed sacramental service Sunday, March 2. Children taking part were Zella and Billie Cornish, Wesley and Ralph Laverty, Mary Proskow, Billie and Ellen Levitt, Phyllis Atkinson, and Phyllis Davis.

Dorothea, Vernon, and Myron Cornish and Kenneth Roberts attended the annual young people's convention at Saskatoon. They enjoyed the entire convention, especially the prayer meetings and the dramatization of "The ten virgins."

Independence Sanitarium Patroness Society

In the last year the Patroness Society has grown. Many inquiries have come to officers and members, and eleven units of the society have been organized. Units of the society are now being formed throughout the church under the instruction and direction of the president in Independence. The general movement will surely result in good for the church Sanitarium.

The society in Independence is looking to the coming General Conference with considerable anticipation, hoping to meet all who are members or who wish to become members. The evening of Tuesday, April 8, has been assigned to the Sanitarium Patroness Society for a get-together meeting of its members. We expect to have President Frederick M. Smith, Bishop A. Carmichael, Doctor A. W. Teel, Doctor John R. Green, Miss Gertrude Copeland, superintendent of the Sanitarium, and others present. The chief topic of discussion will be the new Sanitarium, the erection of which increases the opportunity of our society to serve. Miss Copeland will have leaflets to distribute with information about the new institution. Workers will be told how their unit may most efficiently serve in the tremendous undertaking of establishing a new Sanitarium. They will also be instructed by the leaders in the center place concerning the organization of other units of the society in their branches, and isolated members will be told how they too may help the Patroness Society.

A movement of which the members of the Patroness Society are justly proud is the Patroness Endowment Fund created for the benefit of the new Sanitarium. This too will be given mention at the Patroness program during conference. An evening of instruction, entertainment, and sociability is promised to Patronesses and their helpers and friends.

Last year the goal of our organization was five hundred quilts for the new hospital. Thirty-four have been finished, and many tops are ready to put together and quilt. All who are working on quilts for the society or wishing to assist in this way are requested to write the chairman of the quilt committee, Sister Mary Weston, 1316 West Lexington, Independence, Missouri, second vice president, for we have certain colors, patterns, and materials to use.

Members and prospective members will be glad to hear of the society pins. They are solid gold with our insignia on them, I. S. P. S., in black enamel, our colors and the Sanitarium colors. These attractive pins will identify you anywhere as a Patroness. Because we get the pins through a generous Latter Day Saint jeweler who gets the work done at cost, we are able to let you have one pin at the cost of $1.25, ten cents extra for postage and insurance on from one to five pins.

Let it be understood that the Patroness Society is not a department of the church, but a body of women organized to more efficiently serve the Sanitarium. For further information concerning our work, duties, and privileges, come to our meeting at General Conference, or write the secretary, Sister Iva Edgerton, Rural Route 3, Box 100A, Independence, Missouri. We want to grow by serving suffering humanity.

Mrs. H. L. Loosemore, president,
1117 West Van Horn, Independence, Missouri.
Mrs. Iva Edgerton, secretary,
R. R. 3, Box 100A, Independence, Missouri.

Fargo, North Dakota

Bungalow Church, 1423 First Avenue, South

February 23.—Elder C. J. Smith visited Fargo several days last week and preached some good sermons. You can not get religion, Brother Smith stated; Jesus did not come to get, he came to give. Going to church should be an investment. Service to God pays great dividends. Elder Smith has given Fargo Saints some fine service, and his good advice and encouragement during his mission in North Dakota have been appreciated. The Saints will welcome his return in the next conference year if the General Conference decide to again send him northward.

The Recreation and Expression Department gave a pie social at the church the evening of February 7. Games were played. February 21 this department met at the home of Brother J. F. Rotzien and enjoyed a pleasant evening with games and refreshments.

Elder Blair Jensen, of Minneapolis, was recently a welcome visitor and gave an interesting sermon while here. Goals mean nothing if we stop and falter on the way. Let your hands be strong, ye that hear these words, he counseled.

Elder Thomas Leitch has taken his last two sermons from Revelation 20 and John 14. He was called to Belfield, North Dakota, February 21, to attend the funeral of Sister J. W. Doty, formerly Sister Arzetta Kennedy, of Fargo. The deceased was married to J. W. Doty only five weeks. The cause of death was heart failure.

The Temple Builders have an enrollment of twelve members and meet every two weeks. This week they meet with Sister Agnes Spillman at West Fargo. The Sunday school gave a Valentine party February 14. The junior, primary, and beginner grades met with their teachers at the home of Brother Rotzien from four to seven o'clock and enjoyed games and refreshments. The intermediates and young people and adults spent a happy social time at the church later the same evening.

The Sunday school is holding a contest for Christmas offering. Banners are being used to represent the Hustlers and Rustlers.

The Department of Women will hold its social hour this week with Sister W. G. Couey.

Brother Charles Brown died at his home in Fargo January 29 from infection of the kidneys. Funeral services were held from Boulger-Houghes Parlors February 2. Elder Blair Jensen, of Minneapolis, preached a comforting sermon, reading Psalms 23. "There shall be no night there" was his text. Left to mourn are his wife, two daughters, many other relatives and friends.

It is good to work, pull, and push together to solve the problem nearest our hearts, that of helping to build up the kingdom of God on earth.

Baltimore, Maryland

Saints of Baltimore are endeavoring to keep the gospel light burning in this part of the vineyard. It is our desire that this light may illuminate our lives so brightly that those who observe our actions can not fail to note its influence.

We are few in number, but we are not discouraged. Aside from the joy we receive from trying to serve our Master and fellow men, we have the pleasure of knowing that there are many in this place who have glimpsed the splendor of the gospel light. One family of five has been added to our number, and we feel there are others who soon will say, "Here am I, Lord; use me."

Several people have lately been encountered who have expressed a desire to attend our services because the teachings of other churches do not satisfy their longing for truth. Surely their questions are being satisfactorily answered by the two able elders in Baltimore, Brothers Adolphus Edwards and Joseph Edwards.

A number of times at the end of the day we have looked at Brother Adolphus Edwards and thought that he was ill or extremely tired, but as the regular evening scripture reading took place and discussion ensued, the look of fatigue has disappeared and his face been lit up with a glow that can be kindled only by the Spirit of the Master shining from within. What a wonderful world this would be if each countenance could reflect this light and each heart be filled to overflowing with the joy that will come to us if we value the teachings of God. On every hand, as we look about us, we see faces illumined by an artificial light that comes because they place great value upon the things of the world, and at times when we mention the truths which we proclaim to be of greater value, we see a shadow of disgust and lack of interest.

But we look to the future and strive earnestly and faithfully to live uprightly before God and man. If our influence should cause one soul to sense the value of the gospel message, there will be great rejoicing in heaven.

"Forward to Zion!" We join in the cry. May it reecho around the world.

Brother Robley was here a few days, and we profited much from his stay in Baltimore.

Nauvoo, Illinois

The second historical program, as outlined in the Saints' Herald, was given the last Sunday in February. John Williams read from Revelation and Doctrine and Covenants, Roberta Lewis told of the visions of 1820 and 1823, and in the one-act play John Lee took the part of Joseph Smith, Arnold Ourth the minister, and Nina Koechle the minister's wife. The song, "What was witnessed in the heavens?" was sung as a duet by Elder James Page and Albert Sanford, jr., the latter playing guitar accompaniment. Brother Page also gave the short sermon on "Hear ye Him," and L. H. Lewis offered the prayers. A splendid spirit accompanied this program.

The Department of Recreation meets every Sunday evening at seven o'clock. A class in "Parliamentary Practice" is conducted by A. L. Sanford for the benefit of the young people, Elder J. C. Page teaches a class in Church History, and Florence Ourth entertains the children with Bible stories. At the close of the class period, all re-assemble to be instructed in "Practical English" by Irene Layton. One or two musical selections are rendered, and then our pastor gives a sermon. Brother Page is at present conducting a series on "The kingdom of God." The local priesthood take turns in occupying during the morning hour.

A Valentine party was held in the church basement in charge of John Williams and Ruth Bauer. Over thirty young people were present, and a delightful time was enjoyed playing appropriate games. Refreshments of sandwiches, punch, and candy hearts were served.

Brother and Sister August Lee celebrated their silver wedding anniversary at their home Saturday, February 22. The immediate relatives enjoyed a dinner together at noon, and in the evening their friends met with them and extended congratulations. A pleasant evening of musical selections by the high school orchestra, with vocal and piano solos, was enjoyed and refreshments served. Many beautiful gifts were received by Brother and Sister Lee. Their daughter Mary, who is attending Graceland, came home for the event and remained over Sunday.

Elder Page was called to Sonora February 6 to preach the funeral sermon of Brother George Herbert, ninety-one years of age. Brother Herbert had been a faithful member of the church for over forty years and died of pneumonia in a Quincy hospital. The funeral was held in the Golden Point Christian Church.

Beginning March 10 Missionary W. D. Tordoff will conduct a series of meetings here.

Saginaw, Michigan

March 5.—We wish to assure the church that the Saints of Saginaw love the gospel and are interested in its advancement. We are hoping some of us may attend the Centennial Conference. Those who go will return strengthened, their desire to forward the latter-day cause intensified.

District Missionary F. C. Bevan is now in this branch. For two weeks he has been holding a series of meetings, and many have taken new interest. He is showing stereopticon slides after services on stewardships and scenes from the life of Christ. March 2 he baptized eleven candidates, nine of whom were young people. The Saints at Flint permitted us the use of their font on this occasion, the weather here being very cold.

February 22 a fathers and sons banquet was had in the basement of the church. The room was prettily decorated in red, white, and blue. About fifty were present, and District President J. W. Peterson and Missionary F. C. Bevan were on the program. Each guest received a miniature flag as a souvenir.

The young people are taking greater interest in the progress of the latter-day cause. They bought a new piano, giving a play, "Tillie, the toiler," and a carpet-rag social to help pay for it. A number of nonmembers like to meet with the young people in their recreational programs.

We shall be sorry to have Brother Bevan leave us, for it is through his untiring effort that many have taken new interest in the gospel. He has visited every family of Saints in the branch.

Revival services were opened at Houston, Texas, March 2, by Elder A. M. Baker, of Thayer, Missouri, to continue to Decision Day, March 16. The Saints and their friends are meeting at the chapel on Tenth and Oxford Streets every evening of the week and three times on Sunday—Sunday school at 10 o'clock a. m., preaching at 11, and evening service 7.45. The following subjects are under consideration of this group: "Complete the family circle," "Two way chart," "How shall we escape?" "Kingdom of God," "Short-bedstead," "Paul's conversion," "The ministry of faith," "New Testament church apostasy," "Restoration of gospel," "Did Jesus visit America?" "Prophets—ancient and modern," "Obedience," "Going on to perfection," and "Three glories."

Graceland Chats

Basket-ball Season Closes

Friday night, February 28, closed the season of basket ball when Graceland met Clarinda Junior College. To the spectators it was a thrilling, close-scored game. The music of the Lamoni Band and the enthusiastic response to the cheer leaders gave a festive gayety to this closing game. It ended like so many of this season's games in a score that lost by a narrow margin after a lead for much of the playing time. This time the score closed 29 to 24.

To most Gracelanders, however, it was a rather good season in the light of the hard, consistent playing of the team and the loyalty to the coach and the school. Outstanding work has been by "Beans" Jones, guard; Dick Anderson, guard; Dick Wildermuth, forward; Leroy Dick, forward; "Sprat" Turner, center; and Wendell Gillen, forward.

JOHN HARRINGTON.

Special Students Hold Party

Last Friday evening after the basket-ball game, the Special Students' Class adjourned to room 108 in Briggs Hall to participate in their group social activity of the year. The "Special Students" are those not enrolled in any specific course for credit. The president, Edward Larsen, of Denmark, made excellent choices for committees. Everyone did his share and, of course, enjoyment reigned supreme from start to finish.

The unique decorations helped create a spirit of fun and sociability, and Fred Davies had an appropriate program of games which enhanced the lively spirit of the evening.

The true spirit of Graceland was dominant throughout the evening, but more especially as the group was seated around the table in the candlelight with their honorable president seated upon the throne at the head of the table. Everyone expressed a desire to meet again for a similar celebration.

GRANVILLE SWENSON.

Freshmen Organized for Kid Party

The big event, which comes but once into the life of every Graceland freshman, is now being "hashed" over, not in the college kitchen, but by the various committees which have been selected. Last week the freshman class selected officers to push this big social event. The freshman kid party is to be held either on the 25th of April or on the 2d of May. Combinations, or whatever there is available in wearing apparel, will be displayed, in hope of winning the coveted prize.

Those who will see that it is put over in true freshman style are Noble Kelly, president; Dorothy Elliott, vice president; and Al Fisher, secretary.

"On with the party!" is the freshman cry.

WILLBUR WALLACE.

Home Economics Serve Chop Suey

Amid the soft, flickering lights of Chinatown, and through the gay harmony of laughter and music, couples, arm in arm, wended their ways down the narrow aisles to the gayly bedecked tables. Charming Chinese maidens softly pattered to and fro carrying savory dishes of Chinese food, better known as chop suey. Quaint old Chinese paintings and tapestries adorned the gayly painted walls. This one little corner of earth surrounded by four walls seemed to hold all the gay spirits of the Orient.

All of these imported luxuries were made possible by the superior efforts of the Home Economics Department of Graceland. The fine work of the students, together with the experience their supervisor, Miss Williams, has had in the Orient, made the event delightfully realistic.

EDNA SMITH.

Independence

Stone Church

Elder John Blackmore was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service, on the subject assigned for discussion in all churches in Independence—"Tithing." Brother Blackmore emphasized both the individual and community values of tithing. For the individual the practice of tithing holds spiritual growth—the development of altruism, love, and sympathy. "He that is tithed shall live." Any man in the church or out has the responsibility of supporting the best institutions and of developing his own soul as best he knows how. Tithing is a means of perpetuating the church, which is a vital and essential institution in the community and the world. He who robs his own soul by failing to give, robs God. "Will a man rob God?"

The Stone Church Choir, led by Paul N. Craig, sang the unaccompanied anthem, "Bless the Lord, O My Soul," by Norden. Organ music was played by Robert Miller and Louise Lewis. Elder Wallace Smith presided and was assisted by Elder James D. Gault.

Elder C. Ed. Miller based his sermon on "Faith" delivered to the young people's church in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church at eleven o'clock, on a number of personal experiences which proved intensely interesting to the congregation. Special music was supplied by representatives from other congregations in Independence, Bernice Boyd, of Second Church who played a piano solo; and Mildred Crabb, of Walnut Park, who sang most pleasingly. Congregational songs were "Faith of our fathers," "Stepping in the Light," and "I would be true." Sister H. C. Burgess directing. Elder H. W. Harder presided over the service. The theme of this service for the month of March is "I will be faithful."

Music at the evening service was supplied by the Gresty Quartet composed of Sisters Ina Hattey, Blanche Gault, Hazel Moler, and Ruth Holman; Opal Goode Doty at the organ; and the congregation led by Paul N. Craig.

"The second coming of Christ," the theme for all the evening speakers in Independence, was treated by Bishop A. B. Phillips who read in the Scriptures a number of promises prophetic of Christ's coming. It matters not so much when and where Christ will make his second appearance among men as what shall be our standing before God, was the principal thought. We are daily building character, Brother Phillips believes, which is to determine the nature and quality of our eternal existence.

Elder J. L. Gray was in charge of the service, and Bishop B. J. Scott offered the invocation and benediction.

Among the People in Zion

More than four hundred voices and fifty instruments of band and orchestra were combined in the first rehearsal of the oratorio, The Course of Time, in the Auditorium Sunday afternoon. For two hours the Messiah Choir of Independence and the Kansas City chorus practiced with the oratorio band and orchestra, Brother Gresty, the composer, directing. Friends who had come to listen mingled with townspeople, who clustered on the main floor or in the gallery, to get a view of the ceiling now that it is finished. All lingered to hear the choruses and solos rehearsed by choir and band. In the audience was President Frederick M. Smith.

Practices for various groups participating in the centennial pageant, Fulfillment, are being held almost nightly. Sunday evening the first rehearsal was held in the Auditorium on the new platform built especially for the pageant by the White Masque Players of Independence. Directors and workers are encouraged at the response from those taking part. Members of the Wahdemna Chorul Club and the Stone Church Choir are costuming.

The adult prayer meetings held at the Stone Church on Sunday, at eight o'clock in the morning and at 2.30 in the afternoon, are well attended. In these the Saints find opportunity to pause in their many duties and activities, and gratefully raise their voices in prayer, testimony, and song.

Loretta Mae Desmond, infant daughter of Brother and Sister George K. Desmond, was blessed at the prayer service Sunday afternoon. Sister Desmond was formerly Miss Betty Lloyd.

Miss Pauline Roberts, daughter of Sister Iva M. Roberts, of Independence, and J. Woodford Barbour, of Independence, were quietly married at the home of Elder Cyril Wight in Kansas City, March 3. The couple will make Independence their home. The bridegroom is with the Walesby Construction Company, of Independence, and the bride is employed in the laboratory at the Independence Sanitarium.

In the write-up of the Laurel Club five-dollar dinner, recorded in the Herald of March 5, page 292, there is an error. The impression is given that the dinner was a means of helping the Laurels to raise their one thousand dollar pledge to the young people's gymnasium movement. It should be understood by all that the five hundred dollars raised at the dinner will go from the club to the gymnasium in addition to their pledge of a thousand dollars. The Laurel Club Cookbook, containing a section of meatless menus, a department from Doctor A. W. Teel, a department of dietetics and care of the sick from the Sanitarium, is now on the press.

Another veteran of the church has answered the immortal summons, Brother John L. Booker, who passed away early Monday morning, March 10. Brother Booker was born November 26, 1853, and became a member of the church February 19, 1867. He was a retired grocer. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Harriett Booker; two daughters, Mrs. Fred Friend, of Independence; and Mrs. S. H. Bailey, of Tulsa, Oklahoma; two sons: D. C. Booker, of Independence; and L. F. Booker, of Tulsa. The funeral will be held at 2.30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. Interment will be in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Doctor A. W. Teel is making Independence his headquarters until after General Conference. He has been here a number of days and is now established in the office of the First Presidency. Preconference plans and activities keep him very busy.

Liberty Street

A visit from a member of the First Presidency is always the occasion for much happiness at Liberty Street, so when President F. M. McDowell appeared at the March communion service a splendid experience was guaranteed. The talk he made was one of the best some of his hearers had ever heard him give. If there were those in the congregation who were skeptical about the church's progress, their doubts were dispelled by the facts announced by our leader. The growing inclination on the part of the membership to comply with the financial law is a partial index of the spiritual advancement they are making. The fact that each succeeding year finds more and more of the talented young men of our church organization allying themselves officially with the church, to act as its representatives, gives promise of continued expansion.

The pianist, Miss Lyda Thomason, contributed to a large degree to the success of this outstanding communion service. The assistance of the young men of the priesthood in conducting the sacrament of the Lord's Supper is especially inspirational. Elder Glenn Davis was associated with the pastor in presiding over this meeting.

The most recent project of the Sunday school is that of cleaning the church. The plan is for each class in the school to make it its particular problem for one week. To date the young married people's class and the Samaritan Class have shown their ability, and next week Sister Mable Tignor's group of intermediate girls will demonstrate their powers of accomplishment.

At the evening service March 2 the historical sketch,

"The three witnesses testify," was presented. Glenn Davis as Joseph Smith, George Fender as David Whitmer, Lee Davis as Oliver Cowdery, and Raymond Wrigley playing the part of Martin Harris gave this epoch in Church History new meaning. A vocal solo, "Book of Mormon hid for ages," was sung by Doris Blake. The sermon was preached by Elder Frank McDonald. The story of the Book of Mormon was intelligently and interestingly told by Brother McDonald.

Elder T. A. Beck was the speaker at the morning hour Sunday, March 9. A foretaste of things to be gleaned from the approaching conference formed a part of his discourse. The merit and value of the conference to the individual member is not determined by the amount of enthusiasm he feels now but by the way he will feel after the great centennial is history.

The attractiveness of the church pulpit was increased by two beautiful bouquets of cut flowers furnished by Sister Rhine of the local congregation.

The evening sermon was preached by Elder M. A. Smith, "The second coming of Christ" being his theme.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Sacrament Sunday was a beautiful day, and the lower auditorium was filled to capacity at the eleven o'clock hour. Pastor Cyril E. Wight and Associate Pastor George Mesley were in charge of the service, assisted by Elders Harry Paxton and Harvey Sandy. Brother Clarence Archibald, of Saint Louis, who was a visitor, offered the invocation. After the serving of the Lord's Supper, a number of enthusiastic and inspiring testimonies were given. A special season of prayer was entered into in behalf of the many sick ones of the membership.

Preceding the preaching service at 7.45 in the evening, the choir gave a program consisting of several anthems and numbers by members of the choir.

Elder W. I. Fligg was the speaker of the hour and continued the "What do we believe" series.

Brother and Sister A. D. Hitchcock announce the birth of a son March 4.

Sister F. S. Anderson, who has been confined in the Independence Sanitarium for the past two weeks, having undergone a major operation, is doing nicely and received a few of her friends Sunday. Also Sister Adam Young, who has been ill for the past four weeks, is improving and will be able shortly to again attend services.

Following the prelude, "Morning song," on March 9, the choir assembled in its place and rendered the anthem "Holy art Thou" to an attentive congregation. A hymn in Zion's Praises was sung, and Brother R. A. Thrutchley offered the morning prayer. Brother George Mesley told the children the morning story, after which the classes assembled for lesson study.

Brother Cyril E. Wight was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour. At this service Helen Scott rendered a beautiful solo, "The ninety and nine."

The last two games the basket-ball boys play in the Elliott League are scheduled March 11, when they play Chelsea, and March 13 when they play Fourth Kansas City. These games have done much to create sociability among the young people, and they serve as good, wholesome entertainment for all.

Patriarch W. A. McDowell was the speaker at the 7.45 service Sunday, discoursing on "The judgment" in continuation of "What do we believe." This series has done much not only to acquaint our neighbors with the doctrine of Latter Day Saintism but also to improve the knowledge of the Saints.

Gladstone Church

The opening services at the new location at 4801 Anderson Avenue broke all previous records in attendance and were very spiritual. The early morning prayer meeting enjoyed a bestowal of God's power. The church school attendance was ninety-two, surpassing the previous record of eighty-four, the collection being $7.37. The building fund was substantially increased.

The midweek service was held at the home of Brother E. J. Moran, where God's presence was felt by a houseful of worshippers.

Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was a spiritual feast, seventeen testifying to the goodness of God. Elder E. W. Lloyd made a stirring appeal for loyalty to the great cause of the gospel. The full quota of the ministry, eight in number, assisted. Elder George Mesley counseled the young at the evening service.

A Book of Mormon class of twenty members was organized with E. B. Johnston, teacher. The class session will be held from 6.30 to 7.30 each Sunday. The Department of Recreation and Expression also has an evening class, with Ellsworth and Dorothy Bunsley as helpers to the leader, Brother E. Day. There is an entertainment committee of three. Sisters Hughes and Johnston are in charge of the dramatic interests and give promise of making the sessions of this department interesting.

Elder H. Arthur Koehler was the evening speaker and will continue with a series of Sunday sermons for several weeks. These will especially interest nonmembers. Musical numbers were recently given by Sister C. E. Wight and Brother F. D. White.

Argentine Church

Bishop A. B. Phillips was the morning speaker Sunday, a goodly number being present to hear him.

Elder W. I. Fligg occupied the hour at 7.45. He will conduct special meetings during the week except Friday, when the stake business meeting will be held.

Armourdale Church

Elder W. I. Fligg was speaker at eleven o'clock Sunday; W. S. Brown at 7.45 in the evening.

Saint Louis District Conference

Saint Louis District met in conference with Saint Louis Branch Saturday and Sunday, February 22 and 23. Apostle F. Henry Edwards was present and assisted in presiding over the sessions.

Delegates to the Centennial General Conference were chosen, to represent the district in such work as properly comes before them. Those chosen to act as delegates are: District President E. A. Curtis, George F. Barraclough, Russell Archibald, Prosper Carl, Marie Carl, Ralph N. Remington, Sister Elsie Barraclough, Myrtle Trowbridge, Josie Bilinsky, Ruth Crabtree, Pearl Archibald, Minnie Henry, Isabelle Peach, James Wild and Clinton V. Dickens.

Lansdowne Branch presented for action the names of five young men for ordination to the priesthood. The recommendations were approved and ordinations provided for. Brother Prosper Carl, Aaronic priest; John B. Smith and Clinton V. Dickens, teachers; S. C. Six and J. R. Maloan, deacons. Lansdowne forces will be considerably helped by the addition of these men to their priesthood.

The district missionary contest which started July 1, 1929, and closed February 1, 1930, brought concerted missionary activity in the branches of the district, and Saturday evening, February 22, after the close of the business session, the winning branches of the district were banqueted in the lower auditorium of the church. So keen was the competition of the workers in the various branches that the Belleville and Sawyerville groups were tied for first place and had a very scant margin on Ava Branch, which ran second. Covers were provided for one hundred and eighty at the banquet, and all joined in the spirit of the occasion, feting the victorious branches.

Instructive speeches were given to the banqueters by Brother C. L. Archibald, on the subject, "The pastor of 1930"; by Brother G. S. Trowbridge on the subject, "The Sunday school, and its contribution to the missionary work in the church"; Brother T. Howard Elliott, "The prospects of the Restoration"; Patriarch F. A. Smith, "Fellowship"; and Apostle F. H. Edwards, "Our Problem." District President E. A. Curtis was toastmaster, and Prosper Carl led the singing.

Points in the contest were allowed for attendance at meetings, tracts distributed, subscriptions to church papers, books sold, new members, and tithe payers.

Elder Walter L. Wehrli gave a talk to the Sabbath school, on "George Washington." Apostle Edwards and Patriarch Smith each had a class featuring some special work.

Patriarch Smith addressed the congregation at the eleven o'clock service. His subject matter was the lesson of the Savior, "Except your righteousness exceed that of the Pharisees." The hour was spent listening to the counsels of Brother Smith regarding our work and our place in the social order.

Apostle Edwards addressed the church at 5:45, following closely the theme of the conference in outlining the task immediately before us, and its part in the future of the church work.

Patriarch Smith gave blessings to five applicants at the conference, Russell Archibald acting as his stenographer.

There were representatives at the conference from the branches at Saint Louis, Lansdowne, Alton, Belleville, Sawyerville, Brentwood, Maryland Heights, Saint Charles and O'Fallon.

Several branches, through their delegates, signified their intention of holding special missionary services between March 1 and 16, in response to the call of the high councils of the church.

Ludington, Michigan

106 South Rath Avenue

The branch celebrated New Year's Eve with a watch party in the hall. Games were played by the younger members, and a good social time spent.

January 4 District Missionary E. N. Burt, of Traverse City, came to conduct a series of meetings. Interest was very good from the start. He preached a series of sermons on "The Old Jerusalem Gospel," convincing many of the truth of our beliefs. He remained two weeks and baptized three persons January 12. Elder Buell Shelley and wife and Brother and Sister William Tubbs of Free Soil, attended the baptismal and confirmation services. Elder Shelley gave a short talk and assisted with the confirmation. Sister Lottie Shelley and Sister Lottie Tubbs sang a duet. Two more were baptized January 19.

Because his throat was troubling him, Elder Burt went home the following Monday to rest for a week. He returned January 26 to hold another two-week series, taking up the subjects where he left off.

January 28 a young people's meeting was held. The play, "The birth of a prophet," was given with the program as outlined in the Herald.

During this week the branch chose sides in a contest to see which could bring the most out to church. As a result the hall was filled to capacity every night. Saturday evening everyone assembled in the basement to enjoy a supper and social time.

When Elder Burt started services in Ludington, he was divinely shown that there was much work ahead of him and that he must apply himself closely. This is exactly what he did. He preached every night, and during the day he preached the gospel to nonmembers in their homes. He was blessed in his work.

He went home for a short rest and returned February 16 to preach another week, making five weeks in all. At the end of this week he was able to see part of the fruits of his labor, baptizing ten more into the kingdom of God. Eight of this number were children and young people. Several others are interested, and we trust they will soon see their way clear to accept the gospel.

March 2, after the evening church school, the time was given to a historical program as outlined in the Herald. At the beginning of the play Elder J. L. Randall added a pageant of the visitation of the two personages as Joseph Smith was praying in the woods. We expect to hold these programs given in the Herald the last Sunday evening each month.

The new system of branch organization as outlined in the Departments' Journal is working well in this local. The work is progressing, and we are pleased to start the year with fifteen new members.

Holden Stake

Holden

Recently there passed from earth's labors one whose influence has been felt in the lives of many of our workers, who in their days of preparation read with profit her writings in Autumn Leaves, Sister Eleanor Kearney. Much of her life's history is found in Pattie; or Leaves from a Life, one of the first books, if not the very first published by the church press for our young people. She came to the Holden Home in May, 1925, with an incurable broken hip, moving about always in a wheel chair until her last illness, which ended in death February 21, 1930. She suffered much, but she loved much, and the church loses an honored member and worker. Stake President Macrae preached the funeral sermon.

Elder Harvey Minton began a series of missionary meetings here the first Sunday of March, and will close Thursday, March 13, on account of the meeting of the stake conference at Atherton on the 14th. He is assisted in the singing by G. R. Wells, the pastor at Lees Summit. Brother Minton is using a unique method of object teaching. He has constructed a model church building, each part representing some part of church organization—doctrine, spiritual gifts, and fruits of the Spirit. This has kept his audience in an attitude of anticipation from night to night, as he builds the church of Jesus Christ. It is a more effective way of presenting our message than the chart method. Do not fail to see Brother Minton build when the opportunity is yours. His model has drawing power for members and nonmembers.

At a joint meeting of church school classes composed of young people between the ages of eight and twenty, Brother Wells secured the names of thirty-two who want to become junior stewards, and have promised to use the Record books furnished by the bishop. A sponsor has been appointed, and in consequence we look for a more thrifty bunch of young people. Many of them are looking forward to joining the Tenth Legion, but that can not be done until they have developed a consciousness of partnership with God. This record book for juniors is the best thing yet published to assist them in keeping accounts in thriftiness and actually recognizing partnership with God.

Pastor Macrae and the visiting missionaries were entertained by the dramatic club in their rooms on Monday evening of this week at a light luncheon, when the elders talked to them on the value as well as the prospects of service in this form of teaching.

Lees Summit

The second of the "Know your church" series of programs was given here the last Sunday night in February, when the dramatic sketch, "Joseph meets a minister," was presented. The part of young Joseph was taken by Merton Loveland, that of the minister by Floyd Danielson, and the minister's wife by Beula Boyd. The cast has been assigned for the next series, "The three witnesses," to be given March 30 at 7.30 p. m.

Our group has been strengthened by the addition of the family of Brother F. A. Jones, of Harrisonville. There are eight of them, five sons and a daughter having been recently baptized in the font at Holden by Elder Fitzwater, a visiting brother who held meetings in a nearby schoolhouse. We welcome them. When the new road is paved this summer between here and Harrisonville, they will have only eighteen and one half miles on an all-weather road to come to church.

During the last few weeks, Lees Summit's pastor has been away helping in a missionary series at Holden and also attending to his work as superintendent of religious education in the stake.

Ava, Missouri

March 5.—Ava Branch in the Southern Missouri District is taking on new life and hope. The Saints are encouraged. Since the middle of last April nine new families have bought land here; some have bought farms and located in the neighborhood close around the Saints' church. The total membership belonging to these nine families is thirty-one souls. The priesthood in the branch are: Elders. Burgin, James Dobson and Joseph Ward, and Priests John Morris, George Nowack and S. A. Davis.

Elder W. E. Haden, missionary to Southern Missouri District, has recently closed a successful meeting at the church six miles east of Ava. While the weather has been extremely cold, there has been good attendance of nonmembers. One was baptized, and some others stated their intention to be baptized when Brother Haden returns.

March 2 a fine all-day meeting was had here and basket dinner. The good Spirit was here throughout the services.

Among the big things done for the branch while Brother Haden was here was the reorganizing of the Sunday school and the recommendation that Brother George Nowack act as bishop's agent for the branch. Brother Nowack is able and well qualified for that service.

The new members who have lately moved into the branch are taking hold of the work with us. We extended a hearty welcome to them at the Sunday service, making them feel that they were among friends, even though in a strange land. Every one of the families is from a different state, and Brother Dobson is from Canada.

Savannah, Illinois

March 4.—Savanna Branch has just concluded a four-week revival service conducted by District Missionary Amos Higdon. District President E. R. Davis was present during the first two weeks of the period. We feel much good has been accomplished at this time, for the Spirit of the Lord was present at every meeting, and the message was delivered with power so that much favorable comment was made by nonmembers. The Saints were edified, having their faith strengthened and their knowledge of divine truth increased.

We believe that seed sown during the services will finally yield fruit for the Master. Our church is not centrally located, is not accessible to many without cars, otherwise we believe many more would have attended. However, attendance was good in spite of hindrances.

Some fine people, members of other churches, expressed considerable admiration at the way the speaker explained the scripture, making the points of doctrine easily understood. They said that they never heard a better or clearer explanation given and that Brother Higdon was the best Bible student they had had the privilege of hearing.

Brother Higdon has endeared himself to all. We look forward to the time of again having him with us in like capacity and pray that he may be always blessed with the Spirit of the Lord and that through his earnest efforts many precious souls will be brought to a knowledge of the truth and accept the latter-day gospel, which is truly the power of God unto salvation.

Montrose, Iowa

March 6.—A series of two weeks of spiritual missionary services closed at Montrose February 28. Elder A. M. Chase, veteran missionary, now pastor of Fort Madison Branch, conducted the meetings, Elder D. B. Sorden, district president, preaching one soul-searching sermon of the series. Stereopticon pictures of Bible and Book of Mormon ruins of prehistoric interest; the Passion Play of Ober-Ammergau, and of the Hawaiian Islands were shown for one half hour before the sermon each night. The Hawaiian pictures were shown at the public school on two afternoons.

Brother and Sister Chase, Sister Beulah Smith, and Brother J. H. Reed appeared before us a number of times during the meetings, singing some attractive numbers. Mrs. T. P. Knobs, a nonmember, acted as pianist. Much interest and appreciation were shown by Saints and friends. One night there were as many as eighty-three present. Saints from Fort Madison and Keokuk were present. One young woman is to be baptized very soon.

The Women's Department, under the supervision of Sister Beulah Smith, is doing some good work, meeting each Thursday and in an all-day meeting once each month, when hot dinner is served the members and their families. Seven new members were taken into the department not long ago, most of them not yet members of the church. A social time was held in their honor at the home of Sister Smith.

Montrose has been holding midweek prayer meeting in the various homes of the members this winter. We met with Sister Myrtle Coy, a shut-in, March 5.

Hazel Dell Branch

Weston, Iowa

Subzero weather and afterwards muddy roads are not as a rule conducive to getting people to come to church. But it is to be said to the credit of the Saints of this region that these conditions hindered only a few from coming to the house of the Lord during the last two months.

Preaching services have been held morning and evening every Sunday. Men from the district and local officers have occupied. One much-appreciated feature has been the programs presented by the young people of the branch every Sunday before the evening preaching hour. We doubt if the young people themselves realize how much their help is appreciated. There have been addresses, instrumental numbers, and plays. Both of the "Conversations" Restoration plays, written by Brother Elbert A. Smith, have been given, together with the program outlined in the Herald.

A secular play was given in the basement two evenings in order to raise some money for the young people to buy instruments, music, and other equipment.

February 28 a pretty wedding was solemnized in the church when Sister Edna Jensen was married to Leslie Handlan. All of the Saints wish God's blessings on their married life. They are going to live on a farm close to the church, and we hope to see them every Sunday in the future, as we have in the past.

Railroad Ticket Rates to General Conference

Reduced fares to General Conference have been granted by the railroads on what is known as the Round Trip Identification Certificate Plan, instead of the usual certificate plan heretofore applying to General Conference traffic. The Identification Certificate Plan provides for the sale of round-trip tickets at fare and one half of current fares, with minimum of $1 for round trip, upon presentation of identification certificate, which will be issued by the Transportation Department direct to members of the church applying for such certificate. One certificate will suffice for all members of the family. These certificates are now ready for distribution and will be mailed to all members requesting them.

Tickets will be sold going and returning same route, except from stations in Arizona, British Columbia, California, Nevada, Oregon, and Washington, from which territory tickets will be sold going via any direct route and returning via any other direct route. Certain indirect routes will be authorized from this territory at fares slightly higher than those applying via direct routes. Tickets will be sold to Independence or Kansas City, Missouri, dates of sale being as follows: From all points in the United States and Canada, with the following exceptions, dates of sale of tickets will be April 3 to 9, with return limit April 25. The exceptions are: New England, dates of sale April 2 to 8, return limit April 25; Montana, Southern Idaho, Utah, Alberta, dates of sale April 2 to 8, return limit April 26; Arizona, British Columbia, Nevada, Northern Idaho, Oregon (except via California), Washington, April 1 to 7, return limit April 28; California, March 31 to April 6, return limit April 28; Oregon (via California), March 30 to April 5, return limit April 28. Passengers must reach original starting point prior to midnight of date of final limit, and tickets must be validated by ticket agent before boarding train for return journey.

Tickets good for thirty days from date of sale will be sold on basis of fare and three fifths.

It must be understood that these reduced fares apply only to church members and dependent members of the family; and the name of the member to whom the certificate is issued, together with names of dependent members of the family for whom tickets are desired, must be filled in before the Identification Certificate is presented to ticket agent. Arrangements for tickets should be made well in advance of your departure, to avoid any possible delay.

Address Transportation Department, Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, for your Identification Certificate.

Conference Minutes

EASTERN COLORADO.—Annual conference of this district was held at Denver, February 22 and 23. Attendance was good, and weather conditions were ideal. Many from the eastern part of the district, however, were prevented from coming by poor road conditions. The first session of the conference was given over to district officers' and branch reports. District President E. B. Hull gave a report at some length, showing conditions in the district as being very encouraging. The majority of the branches are progressing. The report of Bishop's Agent Ward A. Hougas was pleasing, showing the district quota over the top, or practically so, from a tithing standpoint in spite of the conditions throughout the district being slow in matters of money and crops. Apostle E. J. Gleazer was present and his timely remarks were appreciated by all in attendance at the business session. Statistical reports from branches and the nonresident class disclosed the fact that the district now has a total membership of 1,836, which gives us eighteen delegates to General Conference. Upon motion by the conference a nominating committee of three was appointed by President E. B. Hull. It was the purpose of this committee to select the eighteen delegates from all parts of the district, and we believe a fine selection was made from individual and representative standpoint: E. B. Hull, chairman, Colorado Springs; Mrs. Josephine Hull, Colorado Springs; George McConley, sr., and Mrs. Mollie McConley, Sterling; A. A. McDowell, La Junta; H. E. Winegar and Effie Mae Winegar, Denver; I. N. DeLong, Uteville; G. F. Walling and Flora Walling, Denver; Ward A. Hougas, Holyoke; C. L. Bruno, Denver; John Brown, Wray; L. R. Holmes, Denver; Mrs. Letha M. Tilton, Fort Collins; Mrs. Ethel Radcliffe, Denver; Mrs. Cordelia Anderson, Albin, Wyoming; Mrs. Edith Hughes, Lamar. Recommendation from Wray Branch that Harold Tabor be ordained to the office of priest, and recommendation from Denver Branch that E. W. Fishburn be ordained priest, were approved. The latter was ordained during the sacramental service Sunday afternoon under the hands of Apostle E. J. Gleazer and Elder E. J. Williams. Brother Tabor not being present at conference will have his ordination taken care of by Elder Hougas. The election of departmental heads for the district resulted in the following choices: superintendent Sunday school, Sister E. E. Conway, Colorado Springs, Ruth Robinson as assistant; superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression, Glen Holmes; superintendent Department of Women, Letha M. Tilton; Sunday school secretary, Ella Darnell; chorister, Inez Schrunck, assistant, Alice Milligan; librarian, Mrs. R. C. Harrison. Some interesting discussions relative to the district reunion grounds at Colorado Springs were had, and no doubt definite steps will be taken to clear the district of the remaining debt and make possible the building of an auditorium adequate to care for crowds in attendance each summer. This will mean much to the district, and every member should be prepared to help. The evening hour Saturday was occupied by Elder O. A. McDowell and Elder Ward Hougas. Apostle Gleazer presided over priesthood meeting at 8.30 a. m. Sunday in the basement of the church. The regular Sunday school session was held at 9.30 in charge of local officers, and at eleven o'clock Apostle Gleazer spoke on "God is." In the evening he continued that theme. Meals were served cafeteria style in the basement of the church. The work in the kitchen was well supervised, and the menu was splendid. District President Hull was forced to leave the conference Sunday noon because of the serious illness of Sister Hull. Her speedy recovery was made a subject of prayer at the afternoon sacramental hour. The spirit of cooperation and love marked the meetings, and as a result the district is anticipating much spiritual growth.

Our Departed Ones

CHAPPELOW.—Frank Wilson Chappelow was born October 13, 1872, at New Trenton, Indiana. He departed this life February 15, 1930, at Independence, Missouri. He united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in September of 1887. Was ordained a priest February 15, 1925, and though afflicted in body he sought faithfully to magnify his calling. He was married to Martha Cary January 30, 1901, at Harrison, Ohio. To this union there were born five children, three daughters and two sons. He was a teacher in the public schools twenty-four years; he was a bookkeeper in the Presiding Bishop's office since coming to Independence in 1920. He leaves to mourn his sudden departure, his wife, three daughters, two sons, three sisters, and two brothers, besides other relatives and many friends. Funeral services were in charge of F. A. Smith, assisted by Ammon White. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

KEARNEY.—Martha Eleanor Kearney was born September 23, 1842, in the State of Ohio, daughter of Joseph and Martha Hopkins Waldorf. "For her it was destined that her path, like that of her divine Master, was to be one of sorrow and suffering from her cradle through life." (Page 34, Pattie; or Leaves from a Life). "Pattie," the pet name of her mother Martha, was from infancy bestowed on Sister Kearney. Hers was a life of suffering and sorrow, but rich in faith and spirituality. In late years she suffered a broken hip and was taken from the Sanitarium after two months' treatment to the Saints' Home at Holden, May 6, 1925, where she remained a cripple to the day of her death, February 21, 1930. Short services were held by Elder W. S. Macrae at the Home the next day; and on the day following, her funeral took place at the residence of her son, Willis, at Clinton, Missouri, Brother Macrae preaching the sermon. Interment was in Clinton Cemetery. She was baptized at Plano, Illinois, by Henry A. Stebbins. In October of that year she moved with her young son to Lamoni, where she resided until he grew to manhood. In 1888 she began the serial, Pattie; or Leaves from a Life, in Autumn Leaves. This story was afterward published by the church in book form. In this work she expresses a decided conviction as to what kind of literature should be placed in the hands of the youth of our church. The key that divine love had placed in her hand, "that truth does not exist apart from God," she held tightly unto the end of the journey.

PALFREY.—Hannah Louisa Lincoln was born in Albany County, New York, January 9, 1850. She married Frederick Palfrey in Brookfield, Missouri, November 7, 1869. Five children were born to them, all of whom are living: Mrs. T. J. Sheldon, Independence, Missouri; Ephraim Palfrey, Chicago, Illinois; Edgar William Palfrey, Providence, Rhode Island; Mrs. George M. Vandel, Sioux City, Iowa; and Mrs. John E. Hovenga, Stewartville, Missouri. Sister Palfrey was baptized into the Reorganized Church by Albert Bishop at Saint Joseph, Missouri, February 9, 1873. In 1925 she associated herself with the Church of Christ, Temple Lot. Died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hovenga, Stewartville, Missouri, March 1, 1930. The funeral was held from Stahl's Funeral Home at Independence, Missouri, March 3, 1930, the service in charge of Joseph Luff, assisted by W. D. Bullard. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

WILLIAMSON.—George Henry Williamson was born in Glenwood, Iowa, January 15, 1852. He grew to manhood in Shelby County, Iowa, where October 9, 1874, he was married to Georgianna Virginia Bebee. To this union were born nine children, eight of whom remain: Mrs. Carrie Riley, of Castana, Iowa; Leroy Williamson, Yetter, Iowa; Merrit Williamson, Bonesteel, South Dakota; Mrs. Pearl Jackson, Waterloo, Iowa; Mrs. Lena Talcott, Chadron, Nebraska; Cecil Williamson, Sturgis, South Dakota; Leonard Williamson, Bonesteel; and Mrs. Hazel Butterworth, Plainfield, Iowa. Besides his children, he leaves his wife, two brothers, two sisters, fourteen grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren. Brother Williamson moved with his family to South Dakota in 1902, locating near Platte. After about two years he moved to the vicinity of Bonesteel, where he was engaged in farming until about two years ago. He united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in 1904, in which faith he remained faithful to the end of his life. He died at Bonesteel February 6, 1930. A funeral service was held at Bonesteel and a second service at Deloit, Iowa. The interment was near his old home in Gallands Grove, Iowa.

DAVIS.—Harriet Davis was born January 18, 1862, in England, coming to this country with her parents when she was two years of age. She grew to womanhood and in 1879 was united in marriage to William A. Davis at Renick, Missouri. Nine children blessed their union, three of whom and her companion, preceded the mother in death. In 1881 she united with the church, and remained faithful to her covenant till death. She was always a frail person and the affliction that caused her death overtook her some four years ago, but it was borne with patience and Christian fortitude. Her spirit took its flight January 29, 1930, at her home in Taylorville, Illinois. Left to mourn are two daughters, Mrs. Pearl Williams and Mrs. Fred Ettenger; four sons, Joseph, Melvin, Orville, and Walter; seven grandchildren, and a number of other relatives, as well as a host of friends and neighbors. The funeral service was conducted Sunday, February 2, from the Saints' church in Taylorville, William B. Phillips and F. T. Mussell participating.

CALHOUN.—Mary J. Calhoun was born near Brewton, Alabama, December 8, 1856. She married John P. Calhoun in 1875, who passed from this life March 22, 1905. She was baptized May 24, 1872, at the place of her birth, where she lived all her life, and where she died February 6, 1930. She leaves three sons, four daughters, one brother, three sisters, fifty grandchildren, thirty-four great-grandchildren, and an entire community in which she was well and favorably known. She was an active and consistent member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and delighted in ministering to the bodily comforts of the Lord's servants, who were frequently guests in her home. Interment was in the church cemetery at Dixonville, Alabama, J. A. Gunsolley preaching the funeral sermon to a full house of her relatives and friends. E. N. McCall, presiding elder of the Dixonville Branch, was in charge of the service.

LISTENBERGER.—William Henry Listenberger was born August 2, 1856. He married Lucinda Warner March 13, 1880, and to them six children were born. Left to mourn the passing of a husband and father are his wife, one son, Oliver, and one daughter, Mrs. Carmel McKinney; two grandsons, two granddaughters, five sisters, one brother, and many other relatives and friends. His death occurred February 11, 1930, at Hibbard, Indiana. He was baptized a member of the church July 23, 1916, and lived an upright and Christian life. The funeral sermon was by J. W. McKnight, assisted by William Osler.

WICKER.—Martha Elizabeth Thomas, daughter of Aquilla and Martha Thomas, was born June 18, 1858, at Ford, Iowa, one of twelve children; passed away February 6, 1930, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alfred Snook, near Pleasantville, after an illness of two years. She married Andrew J. Wicker, September 7, 1876, and they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1926. To them were born six children, one boy dying in infancy. She leaves to mourn her departure her aged husband, five children: Mrs. Alfred Snook, Mrs. J. R. Epperson, Council Bluffs; Fred, of Des Moines; Harry, of Dunreath, Iowa; Ralph, of Lamoni, Iowa; sixteen grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren; two sisters, Mrs. B. N. Freel, Pleasantville; Mrs. Fred Chandler, of Des Moines; two brothers, Will and Alvin, of Lamoni, Iowa. She was baptized into the church in January of 1876, and lived a faithful and loyal life. The funeral was held at Hartford, Iowa, February 8. Clyde McDonald, of Des Moines, preached the sermon. Interment was in Hartford Cemetery.

SYLVESTER.—James M. Sylvester was born August 1, 1868, at Homer, Michigan. In 1902 he met and married Miss Mary Dee Ridder, of Grand Rapids, Michigan. A few years later they moved to Lansing, where they heard and embraced the latter-day gospel May 4, 1924. He remained faithful to the church till death took him. Enlargement of the heart caused his demise February 12, 1930. Although suffering severely, he was conscious to the last. Left to mourn are his wife, Mary, a member of Lansing Branch; three brothers, George of Schoolcraft; Lewis, of Kalamazoo; and Herbert, of Lansing. It was his brother Herbert who with his wife moved to Lansing from Duluth, bringing the news of the gospel which our deceased brother accepted. Brother Sylvester was a member of the I. O. O. F. Society, a citizen upright and just before all men. The funeral sermon was by O. J. Hawin, S. A. Barss in charge of the service. Interment was February 14.

CHAPMAN.—Robert Elvin Chapman, son of F. E. and Royce Tucker Chapman, was born May 3, 1916, at Hood River, Oregon. In 1924 he moved with his parents to Vancouver, Washington. August 21, 1927, he was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and remained a faithful, obedient member. February 16, 1930, following a very short illness, this dearly beloved boy passed from this life. Everything was done that skilled and loving hands could do to spare his suffering and save his life. But he heard the call of the voice of God from the eternal world, and with the faithful obedience characteristic of his life he quietly answered the summons of his Maker. He is survived by his loving parents; one sister, Hazel; three brothers, Walter, Ralph, and Thomas, all of Vancouver, Washington; many relatives and hosts of friends. Funeral services were held in the Knapp Parlors, Vancouver, February 19. Sermon by Elder Eli Bronson. Interment was in the Multnomah Cemetery.

SROUT.—George Srout was born September 22, 1847, in the State of Maryland. He became a member of the Church November 26, 1924, at Saint Cloud, Florida, being baptized by N. L. Booker. He passed away January 14, 1930, at Saint Cloud, leaving a widow, Margaret Alice Srout, five sons, and two daughters. With his wife, Brother Srout gained much comfort from the church periodicals and books and his delight was the latter-day gospel. He will be sorely missed by his many relatives and friends.

BARTON.—Hester Ann Snow was born at Springville, Utah, April 3, 1863. Died at Ainsworth, Nebraska, February 15, 1930. She was married May 12, 1880, at Springville, Utah, to Reuben A. Barton. To them were born five sons: R. A. Barton, Tuthill, South Dakota; L. W. Barton, White River, South Dakota; Morris D. Barton, Clinton, Missouri; and E. S. Barton, Ainsworth, Nebraska. With her husband she moved to Keyapaha County, Nebraska, in April, 1883, taking Government land under the homestead law. They moved to Ainsworth in 1908. Her husband passed away February 13, 1913. Sister Barton united with the church through the ministry of W. A. Smith February 13, 1898. She remained faithful to the gospel covenant. It was her delight to assist in every way she could in the spreading of the gospel. The funeral occurred in the Congregational Church, Levi Gamet preached the sermon, and the Congregational minister offered prayer.

USILTUN.—Hester E. Warren, daughter of Hamilton and Elizabeth Warren, was born January 15, 1843, at Chestertown, Kent County, Maryland, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Edward Comly, at Plano, Illinois, March 2, 1930. She became the wife of Albert L. Usilton November 25, 1865. To them were born nine children, five of whom, Elmer E., May E., Albert, Vernon, and Eddie, have preceded her in death. Two sons and two daughters mourn her passing: Warren Usilton, Madison, Wisconsin; Harry Usilton, and Mrs. Edward Comly, Plano, Illinois; and Mrs. Evelyn Brown, of Bellingham, Washington; ten grandchildren; and six great-grandchildren. One brother, a sister, and her husband have preceded her in death. She became a member of the church at Plano, September 14, 1919. For fifty-six years she was a resident of Plano, where she was a loved and respected neighbor and friend. The funeral was held March 4 at the home of her son, Harry Usilton, at two o'clock, and half an hour later at the Saints' church. J. M. Blakely officiated. Interment was in the Plano Cemetery.

DAVISON.—Alpheus J. Davison, son of William R. and Annie M. Davison, was born February 18, 1891, at Logan, Iowa. He became a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints October 15, 1899, being baptized at Logan by James Donaldson and confirmed by A. A. Baker and J. C. Johnson. He passed from earthly life January 19, 1928.

DAVISON.—Annie M. Davison was born March 18, 1849, in Bedford County, Pennsylvania. She was married to William R. Davison. She was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints September 17, 1882, at Magnolia, Iowa, by Charles Derry. Confirmation was under the hands of R. Farmer and Charles Derry. Her death occurred November 20, 1929, as a result of tuberculosis. Her husband survives her.

Blue Pencil Notes

Incubating rumor's eggs seems to be a favorite industry with many people. The hatch is practically one hundred per cent; even the addled eggs hatch out particularly wild rumors. They can run and scratch the first day and within a week are scattered abroad, for no one cares to keep his own rumors.

My mother used to tell a story about her brother. When he was a boy he whistled so incessantly that it became annoying. One day his uncle offered him twenty-five cents to refrain from whistling for one hour. The boy accepted this offer of hush money with alacrity, and was so pleased with his bargain that he immediately began to whistle on his very highest notes. Older people sometimes think more about the prize than the terms on which it is to be won and so lose the reward.

The American Legion Magazine reports the case of a little girl who said to her mother, "Bobby Smith kissed me, mamma." The surprised mother ejaculated, "Why did he do that?" The wise little girl replied, "I don't know, but I think it was because I have the stronger will." So Adam may have thought whenever he saw an apple.

"Hum, hum," soliloquized Deacon Goodentart, "if this divorce business holds up, about fifty years from now there's going to be an awfully poor crop of golden weddings."

When a late arrival enters church, why will the whole congregation invariably transfer its entire attention from the preacher to the late comer? You will do a good work wherever you are on such an occasion if you will appoint yourself a committee of one to keep your eyes on the speaker and allow the usher to attend to the seating of the recent arrival—after all, that is what ushers are for.

Journey's End

It is a lonesome business,
This going on ahead,
Into the unknown region,
The domain of the dead.

If we could go together,
In family and group—
Why, we could cheer each other,
Like soldiers in a troop.

It is a lonesome business,
This staying on behind,
When those we love, departing,
Leave empty heart and mind.

If we could go together,
The family, the friend,
Life's journey, oftentimes joyous,
Had not such tragic end.

Lord God, they need a Comrade,
Who journey on before,—
And they, alas, who tarry,
Need Comfort even more.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Decision Day

A splendid spirit of consecration and of inspired enthusiasm has been developed throughout the church during the missionary campaign of the past year, which reached its highest point in the Decision Day services held Sunday. About sixteen series of missionary services were expected to be concluded at this time, but in several instances the spirit and promise of these meetings were such that it was thought better to continue for at least another week.

It is too early for results to be estimated in numbers of converts, but reports from nearby points indicate a splendid response. In Independence between forty and fifty were baptized.

Business, Politics, and Religion

One often hears, "Politics and religion are like oil and water; they just won't mix." It is not infrequently that one of these is heard: "Business and politics are not complementary"; "One can not carry his business into his religion; if he cares much for either, better keep them a long way apart."

I wonder what is wrong with these sayings which are supposed to be the crystallization of wisdom gained from experience!

Business is a necessary element in the life of many people of modern times. It is a principal element in the lives of a large percentage and at least an incidental with by far the majority.

Politics affect all of us, from the oldest and most decrepit and forsaken down through the list of individuals in the prime of life and wealth of property, to the youth, the child, and the infant who have life before them.

It is not natural that two so nearly universal elements of civilized life should be inharmonious, and warring against each other.

Religion is such an eternal element that no nation has existed and prospered for any considerable period of time without its use. It is the life and the refinement of the state. Politics is the science of government and embraces statecraft and the conduct of civic affairs. So it would seem that politics and religion must mix else the death of one or both must come.

I can not question the essentiality to our social life of any one of the three elements. So there is left no alternative except to conclude that if the three are not complementary and can not exist in closest proximity or association, there must be serious imperfections in the kind of religion, the particular business, or the variety of politics—one or all of these.

Should we try to perpetuate in our social life a true system of politics and an untrue and impure business, then we must not be surprised at loss of momentum in our journey of progress. Also a strict guarding of the true system of politics would be obligatory, and would involve more or less contention. An undefiled religion and a filthy system of politics would grind harshly and result in much damage, of course. The religion might not be harmed—would not if its adherents displayed a proper resistance. But the people trying to combine the two would reap turmoil and regret. The true religion might yield a little and become lacking in some of the elements of truth. The impure system of politics might yield to the influence of the true and pure religion without harm to that religion. The perfect system of government may become imperfect because of contact with an impure or faulty system of religion. But what is the safeguard? What is the standard?

These questions must be answered. There is a satisfactory solution. Business, politics, and religion must live together. They must not quarrel and jangle, for in so doing they cause disrespect for each. They must not yield to domination which would take them from the path of truth—aye, there's the standard!

If the truth be the standard or measure of the religion we are living, and it yields none of it, then one may safely engage in business; and without damage to one's religion he may pursue its ends, and succeed. The errors of business may be corrected, its mistakes abandoned, and harmoniously they may occupy together—they are complementary.

And while pursuing the interests of such a business in the manner dictated by such a religion, the person may engage in politics without damage and without hindrance to the living of his religion and with benefit to himself and others. He may not become a political boss, exercising powers and practicing subterfuges to the detriment of his fellow men. Those things are no part of political science, and should have no place in our government. He may not use the moneys drawn from the people by taxation for the promotion of any other than the public interests. But he may exercise his faculties or talents, applying the proven principles of business and the refinements and ideals of religion to his life in politics.

He need not abandon politics to save his business if his politics be pure and scientific and if his business be practical and just. He need not leave his position in the government of his city, his State, or his Nation, neither his chosen line of business activity, in order to live a truly religious life.

Two matters are important if one would harmonize the three elements:

First; their truth, or genuineness. There can be no harmony and no lasting progress in any combination which brings a system to the combination which is untrue or unjust.

Second; their order. Religion being the life of man with his God should come first, as man's life with God is the foundation of his conduct among men. It should, however, remain within its own realm, and as a system should not dominate or seek to control and direct the other systems.

If these points be remembered there need be no hesitancy when business calls one to activity. There need be no criticism for the brother who heeds the call of his fellow citizens to contribute of his talents for the administration of the government of men.

How Drunk Is a Drunkard?

Just one more squib on the prohibition question. Along with the assertions that prohibition is not a moral issue and that the Eighteenth Amendment has resulted in a wave of disrespect for law has come the statement that drunkenness is not a national problem and that there never have been enough drunkards to give concern to the Nation. This, like its two companion ideas is a bit misleading, to say the least.

Perhaps it has never been decided just how drunk a man must be, or how often, before he becomes a drunkard. It has been established, however, that before prohibition many of the manufacturing and business plants of the Nation held regular reception on Monday mornings for the wives of workers who had spent the majority of their pay-checks on liquor before reaching home on Saturday. Now, if a man is drunk enough to spend in a saloon money that is very much needed by his family for food, clothing, and other necessities of life, is he not drunk enough to become a national problem? He surely is, or was, and for this very reason the Nation did something about it—and we have the Eighteenth Amendment.

Samuel Crowther, economist and writer, to whom I have referred a number of times, is one of those who says that drunkenness is not our national problem and never has been. He does say, however, that the working men of the Nation are spending millions of dollars for the necessities and comforts of life since prohibition that they used to spend for liquor. We are content with this answer—whether or not these men were ever drunkards, it is at least safe to say that they are not as drunk as they used to be.

Eastern Saints Should Know

Attention is once more called to the appointment of Brother R. F. Healy, 7436 South Michigan Avenue, Grand Crossing Station, Chicago, Illinois, as Transportation Agent to assist conference visitors passing through Chicago. We would strongly urge that all travelers to the conference by rail write Brother Healy at once informing him when and by what route they will reach Chicago. This will enable him to have accommodations provided so that members of the church may travel together from Chicago. Sleeper arrangements will be made upon request. Your cooperation in this matter will be greatly appreciated.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Tree Rings Tell History from 700 A. D.

WASHINGTON, December 10.—Solution of the most baffling question in the study of the pre-Columbian history of the United States—the dating of the scores of important Indian ruins of our Southwest—was announced today by the National Geographic Society.

The answer is given in a unique form, a tree-ring calendar, worked out from the study of more than 5,000 cross sections of living trees and timbers from scores of the major Indian settlements of our Southwest.

The quest for the missing dates extended over years. It ranged from astronomical study of sun spots, through geology, archæology, and kindred sciences, until it culminated in piecing together the fragmentary clues of timber and tree rings—evidence as conclusive as that of finger prints.

Two Expeditions Involved

Two series of National Geographic Society expeditions were involved in the results. One series, comprising eight expeditions led by Neil M. Judd, explored the world-famous Pueblo Bonito ruins in Chaco Canyon, New Mexico, and patiently dug from tons of earth hundreds of art objects, household utensils, and ceremonial appurtenances.

The other series, led by Doctor A. E. Douglass, studied tree rings from Pueblo Bonito and dozens of other ruins.

Of the daily lives of the people at the giant pre-Columbian apartment house at Pueblo Bonito, as at many other Indian ruins in the Southwest, which was North America's metropolis before Columbus came, we long have known as much as we do of the early Egyptians, Babylonians, or Persians.

As travelers stood in amazement before one or another of the ruins of these marvelous civilizations of our own continent, their almost invariable question has been, "How old is it?" And that has been the one question which archæologists could not answer.

Scientific Value of Finds

Doctor Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society, in assessing the value of the finds of the expeditions, says:

"They have pushed back the historic horizons of the Southwestern United States to a period nearly eight centuries before Columbus crossed the Atlantic.

"They have discovered not only the age of the great communal dwelling of Pueblo Bonito, metropolis of our aboriginal Southwest, but also have dated some forty other ruins whose time of occupancy hitherto had been unknown.

"Moreover, they have developed a tree-ring calendar which can be applied to all early ruins in which datable timbers exist.

"A collateral finding of great interest, yet to be developed, is the possible relation between the weather cycles clearly revealed in this tree-ring calendar of the Southwestern United States and similar cyclic variations being recorded by a third National Geographic Society Expedition (in conjunction with the Smithsonian Institution), an expedition which still is in the field, at Mount Brukkaros, Southwest Africa, making daily observations of solar radiation."

1,200-Year Weather Chart

Doctor Douglass, in his report to the National Geographic Society, writes:

"Just as the far-famed Rosetta Stone provided the key to the written mysteries of ancient Egypt, so the collection of an unbroken series of tree rings has made clear the chronology of the Southwest.

"These researches have carried the calendar back to A. D. 700 in the Southwest, and they have provided the beginnings of a continuous weather chart for 1,200 years.

"Through this work we have learned of some outstanding events in America which were contemporaneous with the conquest of Spain by the Moors, and we know that certain Pueblo Indian settlements were enjoying their golden ages when William the Conqueror faced Harold the Saxon at the Battle of Hastings.

"The earliest beam we recovered from Pueblo Bonito was cut A. D. 919 from a tree that was 219 years old when cut. Pueblo Bonito had reached its golden age in 1067 and was still occupied in 1127."

Some Mesa Verde Dates

In many instances, Doctor Douglass' report points out, one group name is applied to several ruins. The "talkative tree rings" enabled the explorers to date each ruin of the groups studied. Thus, in the Mesa Verde group, Cliff Palace is dated 1073; Oak Tree House, 1112; Spring House, 1115; Balcony House, 1190-1206; Square Tower House, 1204, and Spruce Tree House, 1216 and 1262.

Explaining the procedure by which the tree-ring calendar was worked out, Doctor Douglass explains:

"The method which we have used in extending the historical calendar of the Southwest is the outcome of a long attempt to read the diaries of trees. Every year the trees in our forests show the swing of time's pendulum and put down a mark. They are chronographs, recording clocks, by which the succeeding seasons are set down through definite imprints. Every year each pine adds a layer of new wood over its entire living surface.

How a Tree Registers Time

"If every year were exactly the same, growth rings would tell the age of the tree and little more. Only in rare cases would they record exceptional events of any interest to us. But a tree is not a mechanical robot; it is a living thing, and its food supply and adventures through life all enter into its diary. A flash of lightning, a forest fire, insect pests or a falling neighbor may make strong impressions on its life and go into its diary.

"But in the arid regions of our Southwest, where trees are few and other vegetation scarce, the most important thing to man and trees is rainfall.

"This fact has helped vastly in our dating work, for certain sequences of years become easily recognized from tree to tree, county to county, even from State to State."

From sun spots to tree rings seems a long scientific jump. But it illustrates how one fact of science may have far-flung results in other fields. For Doctor Douglass is an astronomer.

A Dramatic Confirmation

"Originally my work was a study of sun spots," he writes. "It is known that there is a periodicity in their occurrence; they are most numerous at intervals of eleven years. As an aid in that astronomical investigation, I studied trees, for solar changes affect our weather, and weather in turn affects the trees in Arizona's dry climate.

"The first confirmation of our general interpretation of a relationship between tree rings and sun-spot periods came in a most dramatic way.

"Evidence of the eleven-year sun-spot cycle has been easily found in Arizona pine trees. The regular recurring periods had been recorded for 500 years by tree rings, except for the interval from 1650 to 1725. During that 75 years the tree rings gave no evidence of periodical changes in the weather as were to be expected.

Independent Research Facts

"Several years after we had encountered this puzzling fact, the late Doctor E. Walter Maunder, an eminent English astronomer, unaware of my findings, wrote to me that he had discovered that there were no sun spots between 1645 and 1715, and that if my tree rings did not indicate some effect of this absence of sun spots, my work was being conducted on an erroneous hypothesis.—Saint Louis Times.

Centennial Conference

Advance Information

In order to expedite the work of registering the hundreds of delegates and visitors who are expecting to attend the Centennial Conference, it has been thought best to ask that reservations be made in advance by mail. This plan is to enable us more nearly to estimate the number who may attend, so that an adequate supply of souvenir official badges, Conference Programs, and Year Books may be provided. It will also assist the committee which is looking after accommodations and reservations to provide rooms for the visitors.

Information covering the matter of registrations has been published in the Saints' Herald for March 5 and March 12. The registration plan was adopted because it is believed to be the most equitable and most business-like way to finance the General Conference. In order to get this matter before the members of the church, registration cards were sent to each branch president in America with the request that the cards be given to delegates and visitors who expect to attend the conference, who should mail them at once, with check or money order for the registration fee of $1.50.

The following is a duplicate of the registration card. It may be clipped and mailed if you do not receive one through your branch president.

Plans have been made to register conference delegates and visitors who are attending from Kansas City, Independence, and vicinity on Sunday afternoon, March 23. A committee, representing the Committee on Registrations and Credentials, will be on duty at the Auditorium in Independence from noon until six o'clock. Also a like committee will be on duty at the Central Church in Kansas City, Missouri, to register people from Kansas City during the same hours on this day.

Those registering in advance by mail will receive a postal card acknowledgment which, when presented to the committee at the conference, will entitle the holder to the official souvenir badge with his name thereon, a copy of the official Conference Program, a copy of the Year Book, and coupons for admittance to three of the major night programs. They are as follows: The Centennial Oratorio, The Course of Time; the Centennial Pageant, Fulfillment; and the Graceland Players' three-act play, The Passing of the Third Floor Back. There will be two performances each of these three events, and the coupons, which the one registering will receive, will entitle him to admission to one each of these events. Those who do not register and wish to attend these programs, and those who register and wish to attend a second time, may purchase admission tickets at the following prices: The oratorio and pageant, fifty cents each; and the Graceland Players' three-act play, The Passing of the Third Floor Back, twenty-five cents.

With the exception of these three, there will be no charge for any other conference meeting or program, with the exception of the Centennial Institute, which is offering thirty-seven hours of class work each day. Any delegate or visitor may take from one to four hours' work each day in these classes, which are held from 7.30 a. m. to 12 o'clock noon. An enrollment fee of fifty cents is asked from those who take work in the institute. If a person wishes to take the maximum number of classes, it would total forty-eight hours for the two weeks, and will cost him but little over one cent per hour. Outlines will be provided in most of the courses, which are given free to those who enroll. Many of these courses represent months of painstaking study and research on the part of the instructors.

The general church authorities find it necessary to again call attention to the necessity for making reservation in advance, if those expecting to attend

Notice to Singers

Singers wishing to join the chorus of the Oratorio The Course of Time, to be given at the Auditorium on the evenings of April 13 and 14, should be prepared to sing the following choruses: The incidental chorus parts in "The story of creation," number 4; "Harp, lift up thy voice," number 5; "Honor, dominion," number 7; "Lift up your heads, O ye generations of Jacob," number 10; and "Ein feste burg," number 15; "Babylon is fallen," number 26; "Awake and watch," number 29; and "The triumph of Christ," number 32. Notice that we are omitting "He that believeth and is baptized," number 13. The men of the chorus should also prepare number 21, "Away with Him."

All men of both chorus and orchestra should prepare to wear dark suits, white shirts, and black bow ties. The ladies of the orchestra will wear navy blue or black dresses. The ladies of the chorus should wear all white dresses.

Everyone desiring to sing in the chorus should have filled out the blank which they found in their oratorio and returned it to Miss Mabel Carlile, Lamoni, Iowa. On this questionnaire you indicated your willingness to have your knowledge of the oratorio and its music tested. We have no thought of making this an individual voice test, but will probably take small groups on one or two of the choruses in order to test your knowledge of the parts you are to sing. Anyone who knows his part of the chorus will be assured of a place in the final chorus. We wish to emphasize the necessity of hard work on these numbers. The average choir singer will need from three to four hours' rehearsal each week in order to get a sure grasp of the material.

We are hoping that our chorus will be near eight

It is seventeen days until the opening day of conference, and those who delay a single day in making their requests for accommodations work a distinct hardship on the committee which is trying to protect their interests.

Interpretation of General Conference Anthems

In order to unify the work of the various choirs throughout the church, we offer the following suggestion as to interpretation on the anthems to be used at General Conference. Remember, your admittance to the conference choir will be a copy of each one of these anthems. The Conference Choir should not be confused with the Oratorio Chorus. Choirs that have not been doing work of the difficulty of an oratorio should plan to join us on these anthems. We print below suggestions for three of these anthems. Others will follow in an early issue of the Herald.

MABEL CARLILE.

1. Psalm 150 ..... Caesar Franck
J. Fischer & Brother

This anthem should be sung in a very rapid tempo. Test it by your watch. Each beat should be twice as fast as the watch ticks. Continue this tempo until the middle of page eight. (Line 2.) While the voices sustain the word Lord in double forte, the instrument may slow down, leading into the next movement. The climax of the whole composition is reached in line two of page eight, and its effect is greatly enhanced if the preceding line at the bottom of page seven is sung in a soft, "breathy" manner. Now swing into the last half of line two (page eight) in a broad, dignified manner, continuing this style of rendition to the bottom of page nine, where Tempo I is resumed on the last two notes (soprano).

2. "Bless thou the Lord, O my soul," ..... Ippolitof-Ivanof
Arranged by Norden, Boston Music Company, Publishers

There are several editions of this anthem. Unless your copy is the right edition, it is useless. Both the words and music differ in various publications. The edition we have selected is so well edited and marked that further suggestion is useless. It might be well to work with an instrument at the first few rehearsals, but drop it as soon as possible. This anthem comes from the great Russian school of unaccompanied cathedral chorus. Work it out, phrase at a time, perfecting every detail of pitch, enunciation, and expression. On page four, measure two, a hold over the first syllable of the word ever is very effective. The pianissimo at the close should be held until it gradually fades into silence.

3. "New, every morning is the love," ..... Bullard
G. Schirmer Company

Even though the time signature indicates a 2-2 measure, the spirit of this anthem seems best expressed in a measure of four counts. The only difficulty this anthem presents to the director is in its long-sustained words at the end of each phrase. In these places the directors baton-hand should continue a steady beat of the time, while the other hand is held up before the chorus in stationary position until it is suddenly dropped to indicate the release at the end of the phrase.

MINISTERIAL PROBLEMS

Preparation by Doing

Religious education must seek, not only to adjust the individual to his environment, but to create the especial environment to which the life of the individual should be adjusted. And the major items of the religious life, of the Christian social order, are economic, domestic, political, and cultural and devotional. It is in these relations that the individual must be saved. That is to say that the task of religious education is to effect the rebirth of the individual and, through his regeneration, the reconstruction of society.
