And in our attempts to apply the principles of the Christian religion to the affairs of life, we have failed before we have begun if we are not aware of the fact that this age brings to religious education in a pressing way a special task; one with which, so far as we know, it has not before been confronted, and in the accomplishment of which we must make new and special applications of the principles of Christian religion to the affairs of secular life. The economic situations growing out of the industrial revolution, science and invention, advancements of the arts, increasing density of population and complexity of civilization, demand new definitions of rights and obligations; new duties for men in association; new concepts of justice; new and higher forms of expression of love of neighbor. And all that means the creation of a new social order and the preparation of the individual for the discharge of the duties of that new system of administration of the affairs of peoples.

It is logical, therefore, that the purposes of religious education, which is the purpose of the church, should center in this building of this Christian social order; we call it "Zion"; and in directing the energies of men of the church in and to this task. This is the logical purpose, again, because the task of the church is to order and to establish the government; that is, to build the kingdom; to bring into being a world ruled by the will of God. And all this means to order and to establish our own governments with justice and with judgment; to ground the essential activities of life in moral considerations—in considerations of right and wrong. This is the logical purpose of the church and of religious education, because all moral considerations are grounded in social facts; and, therefore, all moral development in the individual implies social adjustment. The church, then (and that means the men of the church), seeks an economic society and industrial system that affords universal opportunity and real freedom for both muscular and mental activity (for all forms of association) which are morally motivated—which are put forth from a conviction that, under God, we must share the responsibility for the welfare of the race.

And here is both the significance and the test of personality: one's choices in relation to the creation, the uses, and the dispositions of things, both material and immaterial, which concern all men and in which the interest of personality centers because welfare and happiness is conditioned in their uses or consumption. "Using the things of this world in the manner designed of God; so that the places where the Saints occupy may shine as Zion, the redeemed of the Lord."

Religious education must think of the individual in relation to his environment. And this environment is made up of social relations as well as material things. In other words, religious education must seek right relations between both men and men, and between men and things. It is the habitual mode of conduct of the individual as expressive of his beliefs and his purposes in his relations as father or son, as employer or employee, as buyer or seller, as governor or as governed; as a citizen of the State; as a member of society which religious education seeks to influence and modify. And hence the obligation of the men of the church to order and to regulate their conduct in the fundamental social relations, to make it conform to the will of God.

All development is affected by exercise in the field in which development is sought. Moral development is achieved through exercise in social relationships. Somehow, if we men of the church are to succeed, lessons of thrift, of frugality, of justice, of mercy, and all the rest, must be taught. And they can be taught successfully, and the individual prepared for the discharge of these duties, only by practicing—by attempting to apply the principles of right conduct for men in association. If we would train people for musical expression, we must lead them into fields of musical expression. If we would train people for social expression on the Christian basis, we must lead into fields of social expression on the Christian basis. We must qualify for the Christian life by living that life. The salvation of the world, our own salvation, is a matter of setting up the government of God as the government of the people.

In this relation there are many things that can be taught in the experiences of everyday life; the sharing of both responsibility and the fruits of victory; the willful rendering of accounts; the giving of sacrificial services; the subordination of private interest to public welfare; the development of a feeling of personal responsibility for the quality of the life of the group. We must make peace and good will tangible. And to do that, we must actually enact laws, build institutions, and regulate conduct—the conduct of the group, until it shall become the embodiment of good will, the crystallization of Christian sentiments, a people and a life out of which God shall shine.

The idea to which I seek to give special emphasis here is the necessity of lifting ourselves up out of the realm of fiction and into the realm of fact. We must stop using language and promoting activities which leaves government—the government of God, Zion, stewardships, mere figment of imagination, having no existence in fact, no relation to Christian personality, no bearing upon the satisfaction of human need, no reality, and no utility or power to save. We must make our objective tangible; it must be definite; it must be real; it must have form; it must be to a purpose; and it must have world significance.

Of what use is it, from the standpoint of religious education, to gather ideas or information merely for information's sake? Of what use is it to preach doctrine for preaching's sake or even for doctrine's sake? Such is theology. But religion is life. We must deal with ideas of human conduct that can be, that should be, that must be crystallized into social relations—into social forms which embody and express the sentiments of the people; and which preserve the ideal because they are real; and through this reality fire the imaginations of men and cause their lives to become molded into a living witness for God; which makes the Word flesh.

Law and order and social organization are essential to good doing on the kingdom-building scale. "There must be an organization . . . to advance the cause which you have espoused." No odds how well-intentioned the individual, there still must be rules to govern conduct on the highway of life, and organs of government; otherwise the very liberty we seek will be destroyed by the liberty we share. And religious education has no more important lessons to teach than lessons of self-discipline and social endeavor with a view to making real the ideals which men hold in common. If personal adjustment to a Christianized social order is the goal of religious education, then we have no other alternative but to set the stage that the individual may have opportunity to play his part and learn to make his contribution to the building of God's kingdom.

If you will that I give you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing. Education is the preparation of the individual for the duties of life. The desire to share in the accomplishments of the church; the refashioning of the life of the group to make it conform to the will of God; the desire to develop the skills and acquire the knowledges necessary to make them efficient workmen in the building of this new social order will arise from the tastes, or the foretastes, of the fruit of the adventure; and from the hope of sharing with others the fruit of the ultimate triumph of the cause of the church: the building of a society that is in fact the government of God. The one hope of religious education, and of religious educators, of preparing men for these Christian duties, is to do. "You must prepare yourselves by doing." If we would develop Christian men; not sports with a taste for speculation and games of chance; not mere gentlemen who neither insult nor inspire; but men with a passion for the uplift of humanity; then let us set the stage for exercise in the field in which development is sought.

A Lesson in Giving

Two wealthy Christians were traveling around the world, and in Korea they saw a boy in a field pulling a plow, while an old man held the handles and guided the instrument. The visitors were rather amused and took a picture of the pair. They showed it to the resident missionary and asked him if these two people were poor. The missionary declared that they were very poor, but when the little Christian church was being built they were very anxious to contribute their mite. They had no money, and so they sold their only ox and gave the money to the church, and were glad that they were able to give their share. They did not feel like complaining, but rather thought they were very fortunate to have an ox to sell. This was the reason for the two doing their own plowing.

The wealthy lawyer, when he reached home, went to his minister and said, "I want to double my subscription to the church, and please give me some plow work to do. I have never known what sacrifice for the church meant. A converted heathen taught me. I am ashamed to say that I never yet have given to the church that which has cost me anything."

It is really a privilege to give to the cause in which we, with all our hearts, believe. Sacrifice becomes a joy when we are anxious to see a beloved cause prosper.—Onward.

Equipment for Ministerial Efficiency

By John R. Grice

Based upon a graph, or outline, used by President F. M. McDowell at a ministerial conference in Kirtland, Ohio, by which we were enabled to measure our ministerial efficiency, I have prepared this article. I trust it may prove of help to some young man who is desirous of climbing to heights of usefulness as a servant for the Master.

Personal equipment is something that must not be overlooked by one who would fit himself for the best possible service in the kingdom of God, for it includes physical and mental qualities and attitudes which require the "putting of first things first."

Appearance goes a long way towards helping the individual to a plane of success. It is, in other words, a prerequisite, or first thing. While it may be a matter for dispute as to whether "fine feathers" really "make fine birds," still the fact remains that they do help to make fine-looking birds.

Carriage has a great deal to do with our reception. Many an otherwise fine-looking specimen of manhood has utterly ruined his appearance by his slothful and slouchy method of carrying himself about.

A good voice should be acquired. It can be cultivated. A voice that is rough and harsh grates upon the nerves, while one that is carried along in a monotonous tone is extremely tiresome, and tired people are always hard to reach.

In manner, we can not afford to be rude or boisterous, for if we lack dignity and grace we can not hope to put across the message of life.

Features, we can not alter, but the impression they make for good may be enhanced by careful deportment and demeanor.

We should obey the laws of health so far as we know them, realizing that a fine physique adds to one's appearance, while the haggard, sickly, depressed-in-spirits-looking individual is neither imposing nor attractive. Health, vitality, physical skill, and control all have place in personal equipment.

Intellectual ability is a splendid asset and manifests itself best in grasp of the subject matter presented; insight into the spiritual realm, and breadth of reasoning powers as evidenced in our deductions.

Mental balance shows up in one's soundness and keenness of judgment. It is an evidence of one's sanity. Some people think they should say everything they think. This is an unfailling mark of insanity. The mentally balanced man, with sound, keen judgment, will not always say all he thinks.

The efficient minister will have a fund of information, be broad in his sympathy, interesting in his presentation, and accurate in his deductions. He will not do too much generalizing. His interests and enthusiasms will be broad and fresh. If too narrow, they become unworthy of notice. He must possess initiative. He must not always wait to be directed, but must have some originality and independence.

He must be socially equipped, possessing such essential qualities as to make for effective work with others—teamwork.

To do this one must possess cheerfulness, joyousness, and optimism. The cheerful man can help others out of mental and spiritual depression because of his buoyancy of spirit. The optimist is the man who "sees in every difficulty an opportunity."

One must be thoughtful, kind, courteous, and tactful. If thoughtful, he will be considerate; if kind, he will be helpful to another; if courteous, he will regard the rights of others, and if tactful he will so direct his efforts as to lead rather than drive.

One must be loyal and dependable. Loyal to the institution of which he is a part. He will not bite the hand that is feeding him. He will not fail the church in adversity's hour.

Possessing sensitiveness to social proprieties he must be "fine grained."

Having patience, which he cultivates, his calmness and self-control will be attractive and of incalculable worth.

One must be generous, with a deep regard for the feelings of others—giving to benefit, never to harm.

He must be eager to forgive, believing that the prayer of Jesus will be answered upon the basis of his willingness to recognize its truthfulness.

Cooperation and adaptability are very valuable assets and go far towards making for success. To be able to cooperate with others and adapt oneself to conditions surrounding, will be found helpful indeed.

Social influence; leadership. Every minister must be, more or less, a leader of men. In order to best lead, one must understand men. This calls for the sympathetic touch, and a willingness to go before men to lead them to that which is good.

Executive qualities are indispensable, and the good executive must have, along with kindness and sympathy, forcefulness, competence, and ability to carry through.

Professional equipment should not by any means be neglected. It includes general and specialized knowledge, interests, skills:

(1) General education, culture. (2) Specialized knowledge of the church and its doctrine and program. (3) Knowledge of the religious nature and needs of both children and adults. (4) Interest in the lives of those whom he would teach and lead; the human touch of sympathy. (5) Interest in the uplifting agencies of his community. (6) Skill in speech. This will require a reasonable vocabulary, which should be ever-increasing, through study and use. Latter-day revelation admonishes, "Study all good books." (7) Grammar. Should have some knowledge. (8) Ease of expression; will be acquired through experience and study. (9) Have a capacity for growth; be interested in and spend time and effort for self-improvement.

Religious equipment includes social, moral, and spiritual qualities.

(1) One must hold affirmative convictions regarding the fundamental truths of Christianity. (2) Must be loyal to the institutions, affirmations, and ideals of the church.

(a) The Spirit saith further: That the elders and delegates assembled in business capacity are counseled to cease permitting the spirit of recrimination and accusation to find place in their discourse, either public or private, as it tends to destroy confidence and create distrust not only in those at councils where they occur, but to those to whom the knowledge of such a course of procedure comes by the voice of those who are present and witness what is said and done.—Doctrine and Covenants 130: 8.

(b) Those who go out from the assemblies and solemn conclaves of the church should exercise great care in their ministration abroad both to the branches where they officiate and in their preaching the gospel to those outside, to avoid sowing seeds of distrust and suspicion either in public ministration or in private conversation.—Doctrine and Covenants 131: 4.

Had the above been heeded by some men of the church who have occupied positions of trust and responsibility in the past, much of the troubles that we have been called upon to endure could have been avoided. Young men of the church of today will do well to heed this most excellent advice, which will facilitate their work as ministers for Christ, bringing blessings both to themselves and to the people to whom they are called to minister.

Interpret convictions attractively and creatively, so as to win men to the best in the church and in themselves.

Support belief by speech, ideals, acts, and attitudes consistent with ministerial calling.

Be constructively socially minded, giving enthusiastic support and sacrificing in the interests and agencies of social regeneration, especially those centering in the church.

Above all, be "humble and full of love": a man of "faith," full of "hope," and "charitable" towards all.

Such a man will be constantly growing in religious interest, knowledge, and influence, and will leave a name to be revered and respected among all men.

The Special Senses; and Throat, Teeth, and Nose.—Chapter 9

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

Philosophical speculation is not required to prove the validity of our sense organs. The special senses are located in the head, the seat of the mind, and are servants of the brain, or mind, its channels of perception of the outer world. These special organs are miracles of nature's finesse. To describe the eye alone would fill a volume. The organ of hearing is marvelous in its intricacy. Taste and smell are more primitive functions, but are valuable in conserving health and adding to the zest of existence. Touch perceptions are a matter of psychologic study. There is the sixth sense of direction, resident in the labyrinth of the ear. All these special senses may contribute to happiness and fitness, if not abused.

It is our object to enjoy these special senses in undiminished acuity. Hardness of hearing is a misfortune, as is dimness of vision, or loss of smell. As the years march on, we do not wish to become handicapped, so have a care of the value of sight and hearing, smell and taste, and abuse them not. Common sense is frequently violated in these matters by the wise and experienced, hence the need of a gentle reminder, lest we become as one shut in. A million dollars would be paid for recovery of sight and hearing by anyone possessing the sum who is so afflicted.

Symptoms of Eye Trouble

Any kind of severe pain inside the eye indicates serious eye trouble, which is not owing to the need of glasses. There may be no outward signs, such as growths, granulations, etc., no itching or smarting. Such internal pain may betoken very serious troubles if the eyes are neglected, even though on the outside there seems nothing the matter. The eye may look bad, itch and smart or be inflamed, and show growths, swelling, or be sore or watery. Such external troubles may look more serious than they are, and if corrected in time the organ may soon become normal. Sometimes, quite often indeed, eye troubles are a symptom or sign of brain disease or defect. These symptoms may mean much or little. The appearance of spots or floating particles before the eyes, known as muscae volitantes, has but little meaning for the physicians, for these spots may be noticed in any form of nerve trouble, in heart weakness, anæmia or blood poverty, or states of nerve exhaustion. They are simply the shadows of particles floating in the liquid of the eyeball, and are projected on the retina or back of the eyeball. They are just local conditions which have little significance.

Far-sight is known as hyperopia, and there is another defect of the lens of the eye known as astigmatism, both of which separately or together may be discovered by a specialist as responsible for eye-strain. In nervous people, the smallest amount of such defect may be a cause of irritational strain. Then again, weakness of the muscle inside the eye is the next most frequent cause of eye irritation. The correct discovery of the amount of such defect demands the offices of one especially skilled. Simple near-sight, or myopia, causes no strain, but when myopia is combined with astigmatism, the real eye-strain is in evidence.

Effect upon the Body

Let us briefly consider the derangements of the eye which induce trouble in other parts of the human body. Eye-strain shows itself not so much in the eye itself, in ocular or visual symptoms, but in nervous derangements that are often far removed and seemingly unconnected with the eyes in any way. The eye is the window of the soul, and on eyesight depends a good deal of the feeling of the subject. With good eyes, good feeling and a sense of welfare are associated. A little grain of sand in the eye will have its effect on the whole human being, because the sensation is reflected all over the body.

Far-sight, Near-sight, and Astigmatism

We have briefly mentioned far-sight, near-sight, and astigmatism. The latter defect is sometimes combined with either of the former, so that we may have astigmatic near-sighted people, and astigmatic far-sighted people. Astigmatism is a stigma or strain or shadow in effect. It is a twist of the lens of the eye along a line in any direction, and often is to blame for eye-strain resulting, with much headache and nervousness, especially in young women after the age of puberty. The symptoms of these conditions must not be neglected by the physician, especially in view of the fact that eye-strain, or emetropia, is responsible for many distant aches and disorders.

A hyperope sees well at a distance. His difficulty is poor vision for near work, for which he needs glasses. He may have headaches, eyestrain, melancholy, and worry and nervousness, for this reason. It is easy to see the signs of hyperopia or far-sight. The face may be under-developed, the eyes small and beady, quick in their movements. The individual may be subject to styes, small, white, pimple-like growths at lid bordering under lashes, or to dried and watery conditions of eyes.

Nearsightedness (myopia) is a condition of faulty development exactly opposite to hyperopia. The cause in true myopia is supposed to be an over-development of the eyeball. False myopia is often present, due to cramp of the ciliary muscles, that control the lenses. This is due to an improper distribution of nerve energy. In both true and false myopia, the percentage of success in restoring the sight by "Eye Gladness Methods" is about the same as in hyperopia.

Myopia seldom causes any discomfort, except the inability to read well at a distance, and the need of holding a book or work close to the eyes. You may sometimes observe a man reading with the aid of magnifying glass, which is an injurious practice, or holding a book so close to the eye that the nose almost touches the page. In such instances it is most unwise to dispense with glasses. Especially do women err who wish to look their best without glasses, but who positively need them.

Causes of Loss of Power of Accommodation

The power of accommodation is the ability to adjust the lens of the eye to near and far vision, and the enfeeblement of such power reveals itself by inability to see distinctly at a distance or nearness at which the patient could formerly see distinctly and with ease. As the accommodative power diminishes normally from youth until about the fifty-fifth to sixtieth year, when it is practically lost, the age of the patient must be taken into account in all considerations of the faculty of adjustment. Likewise the refraction of the eye can be known because the accommodation can be measured. That is to say, we must determine by means of an instrument known as the ophthalmoscope in what manner light enters the eye and what happens to the rays and how the image is imprinted on the back of the eye, or the retina. We must determine in what manner the lens of the eye takes in the light, and how the light is turned through the watery interior of the eyeball. When a disease known as glaucoma is present, we can notice the loss of accommodation of the lens, and the whole eyeball is characterized by interocular tension.

The power of accommodation is further reduced in many conditions of deranged nutrition, or any abnormal condition which lowers the general vigor, such as neurasthenia, kidney disease, diabetes, derangements of the liver, after hemorrhages, and during recovery from exhausting fevers. More characteristic is the influence of bad teeth, as the nerves of eye and teeth are closely connected.

Causes of and Treatment for General Eye-weakness

Asthenopia means eye weakness in general. There is inability to use the eyes persistently, on account of indistinctness of sight or discomfort and pain. Headache and other symptoms are induced by steady application. This is a very common complaint, due to many different influences, and it deserves special mention in this treatise. While the most important cause of asthenopia is optical defect, such as hypermetropia, astigmatism, or insufficiency of accommodative power, we can not ignore other influences, such as are present, optically, in the general constitution. Even if the eyes are optically perfect, they may be weak and easily tire, due to constitutional conditions.

While such troubles can be checked just as promptly as the eye weaknesses, by means of glass, it is seen that much eye strain is due to weakness of nerves, or to a nervous disposition. Cases occur where the family history denotes a neurotic disposition, or those who have been subjected to damaging influences, as overwork with confinement, anæmia, or diseases deranging digestion, like intestinal disturbances, or those who are the victims of neurasthenia or nervous breakdown. We have shown that it is possible to cure neurasthenia by rational health methods which are easily applied by any person with common sense.

Myopes seldom need glasses for reading before the age of 45 or 50. Such cases should strive to hold off the page at maximum distance, instead of yielding to the temptation to read closer and closer. Massage of the eyeball is not to be practiced except under expert advice, as it will possibly distort the eyeball. Furthermore, do not when sleeping rest the head so that pressure will be present against the eyeball. Myopes should also relieve their eyes of glasses when indoors and when not engaged in close work.

Astigmatism is a most common failing. Astigmatism may be true or false. This trouble always seems a bugbear, hard to understand by the layman. In fact, the author has seen many graduate physicians pretending to fit glasses who frankly admitted they did not understand astigmatism, or how to deal with it.

True astigmatism is a condition wherein the surface of the cornea or lens is uneven, much like a field with hills. Vision is possible, owing to the rays of light which enter the eye. Were it not that some means were provided to make these rays come to a focus or point upon the retina, vision would be but a hasty sensation, or blurred image. Now, in astigmatism, some part of the surface of one or both of these tissues is of greater curvature than some other part, just as in a field some may be high land, the rest hollow, or flat. The part of greater curvature will bring light passing through it to a focus, while if it passes through the straight or flat part, the light would not be any different than if passing through plain window glass. A perfectly good magnifying lens, without hollows and irregularities, brings light to a sharp focus. But few lenses of the eye are as perfect as artificial lenses. Therefore it is necessary to aid nature with mechanical helps, in other words, cylinder lenses.

Rules for Care of the Eyes

1. Excessive illumination is injurious. Read neither in the glare of the sun nor in strong electric light without the use of proper shades.

2. Twilight, or flickering light, is injurious to read by.

3. Reading in trains or while walking; faulty position while working, writing; or while lying down, or in huddled position, or with light in front or rear, all are not beneficial.

4. Needlework, or reading fine print, for long periods, do harm.

5. Light should be indirect, soft, uniform, and diffused. Light is best if reflected from the ceiling. Electric lights should be covered with ground glass shades; or better yet, with light amber paper.

6. At the seashore in summer, occasionally use light amber glasses. These should be non-refracting, of good quality.

7. Reading in bed is not injurious if one is not in a cramped or huddled position, and if one sits erect and does not strain the neck muscles. The light over left shoulder is best, as shadows are voided from writing with right hand.

8. Occasionally rest the eyes, as continuous reading or application does harm. Practice looking at distant points once in a while.

9. It is a good practice to take a red-headed hat pin and hold it between the eyes at a distance of about one foot. You may then bring it slowly to within a few inches of the forehead and then take it back again, one foot away. Practice this exercise a few minutes several times a day, as this will strengthen certain muscles of the eyes which are often unequal in their powers.

10. A substitute for a weak salt water wash is 10 grains of boric acid to the ounce of distilled water. If the lids are granulated, or the eyes are inflamed, the oculist will touch the lids with an astringent lotion or salve. Cold compresses should be used in inflamed conditions of the eyes, and the doctor's advice looked for promptly. Hot compresses, too, afford relief in painful conditions.

Hearing and Its Conservation

In the United States there are 10,000,000 sufferers from defects in hearing, and the American Otological Society Research Fund is studying the causes of and remedies for their condition. If a small fraction of the money extracted by quacks from deaf persons could be diverted to this fund it would be to the relief of many present sufferers and the benefit of an incalculable number of persons in the future.

To examine the curious and involved mechanism of the organ of hearing is to be impressed with this miracle of the Divine Architect of our being. The auditory canal is continuous with the outer opening of the ear, and is a passage an inch and a quarter long. The skin lining this canal furnishes ear wax which is obnoxious to insects. This wax becomes dry and constantly falls out of the ear in minute scales. The middle ear is a chamber of irregular shape about half an inch long and a quarter inch across, and is called the tympanum or drum of the ear. The membranous drumhead is tense and elastic. Its margin is fastened into a circular groove in the bone adjacent to it, known as the malleus or mallet bone. The mallet connects with other very small bones, weighing together only a few grains, and all vibrate with the drumhead to affect the nerves of hearing that reach the brain. As many as three thousand nerve-fibers have been counted, these fibers being of different lengths, like the strings of a piano.

To conserve hearing, it is desirable not to introduce cold water into the auditory canal or to get the ears wet frequently, and to dry it out if water is within, as otherwise the hearing is enfeebled. No cotton need be stuffed into the ear to prevent "catching cold," as this renders it sensitive to changes of temperature. It is dangerous to attempt to remove ear wax with a solid substance, as the membranes are very fragile. Nature has provided for the protection of the parts within. Ear wax seldom causes deafness, so it is well not to pick at the wax within through a mistaken sense of cleanliness. The yellowish matter is not dirt, and one should not clean too deeply. As hearing is, next to sight, our most important sense, it is well to conserve it. Blowing the nose hard is a dangerous practice which in the course of time causes deafness. The middle ear tube, or Eustachian tube, which runs down from the bottom of the ear drum, has to be kept full of air in order to let the drum vibrate properly. When the nose and throat become inflamed, the mouth of this tube sometimes gets blocked up and the drum can no longer vibrate well. If the ears ache, it is well to consult a doctor at once, for the purpose of preventing deafness, or the spread of the disease to the mastoid bones and the brain.

The proper use of the voice, such as reading aloud or lecturing or singing, seems to strengthen the muscles of the chest and gives tone to the organs of respiration. Not only the chest, but also the diaphragm and abdominal muscles are kept in constant action, and the muscles of the diaphragm are toned up by singing and speaking aloud and reading with sufficient emphasis. Practice good utterance, therefore, and experiment to acquire a rapid, distinct, and articulate enunciation. In this way, you may gain an evenness of tone, a confidence and complacency, which improves the personality noticeably.

Senses of Smell and Taste

The senses of smell and taste are useful as guides to the selection of wholesome foods. The nose warns us of the presence of noxious gases. As a general rule, those articles of food and of drink which taste good are beneficial and wholesome, though things may be too highly spiced, and thus the taste become jaded. The preference for plain food, not highly spiced, seasoned, and flavored, is to be commended. The sense of taste may become depraved through tobacco chewing, the use of strong drink, and the like, and such practices as the eating of Mexican dishes. If appetite is deficient, the body does not seem to need the extra food because of constipation or biliousness.

Even pepper and spices may injure the taste so that we can not tell when food is bad. Sometimes the senses of smell and taste blend together. If the sense of smell is lessened by a cold in the head, appetite is lessened. If the nose is stopped, persons can scarcely recognize the taste of onions.

The inside of the nostrils ought to be washed out, but care should be taken not to get the liquid in the Eustachian tube. Then scrub teeth and scrape tongue. The amount of debris found on the rough surface of the tongue should be cleaned away. Such a cleansing of nostrils and mouth must remove millions of disease-producing germs. Because of our daily contacts with dust and dirt, we accumulate numbers of germs. It may not be possible to remove all of them by any ordinary process of cleansing, but small numbers of germs are preferable to an army of them. The chances of infection, particularly from colds, which are so common in wintertime, may be guarded against in the simple way suggested.

The mouth must be cleansed with frequent washings, with weak solutions of boric acid (teaspoonful in a glass of water), or bicarbonate of soda (teaspoonful in a glass of water).

The teeth should be brushed with or without the use of a dentrifice (powdered chalk with myrrh added). Food should not be allowed to collect between the teeth, a quill toothpick being used to remove it. The dentist should be visited sufficiently often to keep decayed teeth under control, and to secure the removal of those which are beyond repair. One can scarcely realize the harm to the digestive apparatus from decayed teeth and sores in the mouth. Offensive breath from this cause, or from any other, should be investigated and removed, not only because it is an evidence of injury and ill health, but because it gives discomfort to others. A rubber massage brush for the gums is excellent.

Pentecost

When we read the Acts of the Apostles, which is taken up with the doings of the apostles after Pentecost, we are struck with the incongruity between the apostles and their acts. Here were very ordinary men doing extraordinary things, thinking in an extraordinary way, leaving an extraordinary effect in the changed lives of men and society. The very temper and spirit of their lives was extraordinary. They seemed to have found power by which to live. And far from being rampant emotionalism, the striking thing is their amazing balance and sanity. They burned with zeal, but they met issues and crises of the most far-reaching consequences and met them with pose and insight. They picked their way through intellectual and moral bogs and quagmires and marked out paths which we today tread with safety and salvation. And, more than that, they brought to bear upon life a power that redeemed men and made them immediately God-conscious; that changed the moral and spiritual climate; that turned dull, drab life into the spiritually gay and taught a sad world to sing—and to sing in spite of.—E. Stanley Jones, in The Christ of Every Road.

Northern Saskatchewan Young People's

The annual young people's convention was held in the chapel, Main and Dufferin, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, February 21, 22, and 23. Saskatoon Branch members entertained all visiting Saints throughout the convention. Elder E. L. Bowerman, of Shellbrook, was in attendance; also Sister Skinner, of Wilkie, and numerous young people from different points in Northern Saskatchewan.

Friday morning a goodly number assembled for the opening prayer service at nine o'clock, Elders Christy and Bowerman in charge. Class work followed. Sister Christy opened with an enlightening address on "Thinking with youth," and was followed by Brother Christy, who chose as a subject "Fundamentals of religion." Sister Diggle stressed "Purity and truth" in the final forenoon session.

At two o'clock in the afternoon the young people reassembled. Class work occupied the afternoon, the subjects taught being "Vital problems of youth," "Moral and spiritual courage," and "Religious education."

In the evening Branch President C. E. Diggle gave the address of welcome, after which the young men's club entertained with a humorous sketch, "Sewing for the heathen."

The young people of Saskatoon Branch are editing and printing a monthly paper. Miss Nina Beckman read articles therefrom, which were of a high order, some educational, others humorous, original poems, philosophical articles, legal and social columns.

The chapel was fairly well filled Saturday morning for the prayer service. Class work began at 10.30 and was continued again at two o'clock in the afternoon, creating unusual interest. Some of the subjects taught were "The origin of the church," "Ideals for youth," "How to choose a life mate," "Adolescence and its problems." Sister Christy handed questionnaires to young and old. The answers roused much interested discussion.

The recreational period was devoted this year to a wiener roast, which was greatly enjoyed by all the young people, Brother Bowerman and Sister Skinner chaperoning the gay party. A group of the below teen age young people was invited to an opposition wiener roast at the home of Brother and Sister Diggle.

A playlet, "The ten virgins," was staged by members of the Temple Builders Saturday evening at eight o'clock. Brother E. L. Bowerman, president of the northern section of the United Farmers, gave an illuminating address on "Labor and love."

Sacramental service was at eight o'clock Sunday morning, a splendid spirit being present. Sunday school was held as usual at 9.45. Sister Christy addressed the congregation for ten minutes on "Temperance."

At eleven o'clock Brother Bowerman preached an able sermon on "The brotherhood of man."

Several young people read papers or delivered short orations on some of the following subjects, "The restoration of the Jews to Palestine," "A message to the Indians," "The land and laws of Zion," "A ministry called by revelation." Some of those who took part were Sisters Ethel Cruce and Pearl Denton and Brothers Henry and Frank Piedt, McRae, and Clifford Moran.

At the final session, by special request, the play, "The quest of the Red Men," was repeated. The building was packed to capacity. Brother Christy followed with a dynamic message on "The history of the Indian and its connection with the Book of Mormon."

So came the convention to an end. All voted it the best yet. Highlights were the spirit of fellowship which prevailed, the interest in the class work, and the noticeable growth of the youth of the district during the past year.

The Saskatoon Daily Star Phoenix gave splendid publicity to the convention, publishing three articles of approximately fifty lines each and also an excellent picture of Brother and Sister Christy. This created much interest throughout the province as both are now known far and wide by their radio voices.

Books

By Poul S. Nielsen

"The love of reading will always take us into the best possible company. To read good books is to commune with great men."—Ruskin.

It has also been said that a house without books is like a house without windows. Where there is no vision the people perish, or where there is no desire for knowledge the people will not have the desire to improve their talents.

Almost everyone in the world today reads something, if it be only a billboard or the funny paper in the Bugville Daily, and Latter Day Saints are no exception. In many homes there is a wild scramble to get hold of the paper just to see who is going to have the next divorce in Hollywood or to find some other immaterial piece of news or scandal. In other homes the only books to be found are the Bible, some treatises on diseases of animals, and perhaps a novel or two on the order of the works of Nick Carter or Buffalo Bill. These are seldom read. The Bible, perhaps, was given as a gift when the man and his wife were married, and its chief use is to record the births and deaths of the family and lay on the parlor table. Even that use is passing with the age.

God said, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him." Some have taken this a little too exactly, it seems to me, so exactly that they have never made an effort to help themselves by improving their talents through the study of good books. But the question may be asked, What is a good book? Any book which will improve a person's faculties in a wholesome way must be classified as a good book.

To compile a list of books which would suit everyone would, I fear, be a hopeless task, but a few rules can be given. Of course the Bible should be found in all Latter Day Saints homes, both the Inspired Version and the King James Version. The Book of Mormon and Book of Doctrine and Covenants should also be found on the bookshelf. Any member of the priesthood ought to have the General Conference Resolutions and some of the tracts the church is printing. Of periodicals the Saints' Herald should be in all homes where there is one member, and wherever there are children they should have access to Stepping Stones and Zion's Hope. The Herald Publishing House is at present sending out some very desirable books, and it can secure any book published in the United States.

Do you ask, Where am I to find time to read? That is mostly a question of making wise use of the few spare moments in a day all can afford. You will certainly not deny that President Roosevelt was a very busy man, and yet he was also well read. He devoted fifteen minutes every day to reading. If we would read in good books as much as we read, or many of us, the daily papers, we should be far better off.

All of us should be vitally interested in this day in expanding our intellectual breadth. A few minutes a day devoted to reading will help us in attaining this. Books are not now high priced. Most of them can be secured in some cheap edition. It is not necessary to spend a great amount of money to secure a few.

I recall the words of some writer, whose name I have forgotten, to the effect that it is wiser to spend five hundred dollars on good books for children than to spend two thousand dollars on a college education for your grown son or daughter. All of us are familiar with the old saying: What you learn in the days of your youth, you will not forget in the days of old age.

Why not teach our children to love good books? It will help them grow.

Meetings in Western Oklahoma

By A. H. Christensen

The meeting at Canton is progressing well and has yet another week to go. Some appear to be near the kingdom. The meeting will close Saturday, March 15. Sunday is an all-day meeting at Seiling. On March 23 an all-day meeting will be held at Alva.

All Saints living within reasonable radius from these points are invited to attend. This will finish our last campaign for baptisms that can be made in the first century of our church existence in latter days. If there are any in your locality who have been intending to make their covenant with God, why not urge them to make it right at the beginning of the century? Come to these meetings with that purpose in view. We will try to have some of the district elders present on these occasions to assist in the ceremonies.

New York and Philadelphia Conference

The semiannual conference of New York and Philadelphia District February 22 and 23 proved most helpful and engrossing to all the members privileged to assemble in Philadelphia. Attendance of local members was excellent, and more than seventy visitors came from Archibald, Baltimore, Bloomsburg, Brooklyn, Delaware, Elk Mills, Johnson City, Scranton, and Independence. A detailed account of the business session which occurred at 6.30 Saturday evening appears in Conference Minutes in this issue of the Herald.

Activities of the second day of the conference opened at eight o'clock in the morning with a priesthood meeting. Apostle R. S. Budd presided, being assisted by District President T. J. Elliott. With the commemoration of the centennial anniversary of the church immediately before us, the priesthood were inspired by the appeals of consecrated men to go forward with hearts and hands revitalized and rededicated to the consummation of the great task ahead. A prayer meeting was in charge of Apostle Budd at nine o'clock, Brothers A. D. Angus, sr., R. J. Hawkins, and Henry Carr assisting. The opening remarks by Brother Budd and Patriarch Angus were followed by other inspiring prayers and testimonies. The Spirit was manifested through one of God's servants to Brothers Budd, Robley, and Jaques.

The eleven o'clock sermon was by Brother J. A. Jaques. "How long wilt thou forget me," an anthem by Carl Pflueger preceded a vocal solo by Sister A. Glassford, of Brooklyn. The theme of the sermon was "The expressions we give in our lives." It was a challenging message to youth to carry on. Briefly he said that such achievements as Pittsburgh's civic centers, International Art Gallery, the mile and one half tube for automobile traffic under the Hudson, and the modern skyscrapers are results of inspirational ideas put into action. Some men live and die, others' thoughts and deeds live long after them. Some families live through a praiseworthy posterity. Men and women have given their lives that others might live. Have we in preparing to carry on in life neglected the important obligations of service? Unselfishness was the keynote of Christ's message. If you would be perfect, prepare yourselves in the various arts and crafts, but do not neglect the more important phase of service—service to others. Be a builder.

Elder T. J. Elliott was the afternoon speaker, presenting the duties of the church membership in keeping alive the ideals for the perpetuation of which men have given their lives. He interestingly reviewed the work of the church pioneers, giving emphasis to the significance of the Centennial.

The Women's Department met at four o'clock, Sister H. L. Livingston addressing the gathering concerning the tasks of the women.

Apostle Budd spoke from a number of scriptural references at the vesper service Sunday.

The conference was adjourned until Saturday and Sunday preceding Labor Day, 1930. Elk Mills, Maryland, will be the place for the holding of the gathering.

Santa Ana, California

Under the leadership of the branch president, Albert M. Starkey, Santa Ana's newly elected pastor, the branch is going ahead. Brother Starkey, who works every day, besides taking care of branch duties, is a busy and active pastor. He has much enthusiasm and holds a high goal for the branch to reach. If everyone helps, this will be one of the most active and progressive locals in California, because we have an able leader with a high aim.

Other newly elected officers are: Branch clerk, Mildred Calkins; treasurer, James Farley; chorister, Rebecca Mills; librarian, Lena Odom; auditing committee: Sister Lola Mitchell, C. E. Calkins, J. W. Inman; flower committee, Lola Mitchell. Sunday school officers are: Superintendent, Sister C. E. Calkins; assistant superintendent, Sister Odom; secretary-treasurer Evelyn Parks; Department of Recreation and Expression officers are: President, Donald Nemmo; vice-president, Clarence Mills; secretary-treasurer, Rodney Engel; ladies' aid officers: President, Sister Anna Kuhn; secretary-treasurer, Sister A. M. Starkey; friendly visitor, Sister C. E. Calkins; cradle roll superintendent, Sister A. M. Starkey.

Average attendance at Sunday meetings is about fifty, with prayer service moderately attended. The Department of Recreation and Expression is enjoying good interest and doing many things. The women are active under their leader, meeting every other Thursday afternoon at the homes of the members. Sister Kuhn has sponsored some good dinners in the church basement served at moderate prices. The last meal served was a turkey dinner which was enjoyed by all.

Brother Albert Starkey is making business arrangements in order that he may soon leave to attend General Conference. He and Sister Starkey are driving back and anticipating a good trip. Brother David Carmichael will leave by train in time to get back for conference and will have a visit with his parents before leaving for home. Brother David and Phyllis have as guest at present the former's uncle, known to the entire church, Presiding Bishop Albert Carmichael. He will spend two weeks with them.

Thelma Irene Davis and James S. Reaks, of Corona, California, were united in marriage at the home of Brother and Sister Albert M. Starkey, of Orange, California, February 10, at high noon, in the presence of the immediate families. The bride's uncle, Albert M. Starkey, pastor of our branch, performed the ceremony.

Sister Charlotte Beal, formerly of Independence, Missouri, passed away at Orange California, January 18 and was laid to rest in Central Memorial Park Cemetery. She leaves besides her husband, five small children. Pastor Starkey, assisted by H. L. Holt, of Whittier, conducted the service.

Eldon Heminway, a pioneer of Orange County, died in San Diego in January and was buried in Fairhaven Cemetery at Santa Ana. Brother Starkey conducted the service.

The members who are leaving soon to attend conference are receiving good wishes for a happy trip and visit from those who are unable to go. We expect them to bring back to Santa Ana inspiration and new courage for the tasks before us.

New Philadelphia, Ohio

On February 23, 1930, occurred the death of Sister Elsie Goudy, wife of Elder William L. Goudy. Sister Goudy underwent an operation at Union Hospital February 17, and it was thought she was improving, but a sudden heart collapse caused her death. Her death was a sad blow to this branch, Sister Goudy having been a faithful and active member of the church since childhood, and her loss will be felt by all who knew her. Sister Goudy was a devoted wife and mother. She leaves besides her husband, one daughter June, also her parents and two sisters. The hearts of the Saints go out in deep sympathy to her bereaved family, and our prayers are that God will sustain them in their sorrow. God's will, not ours, be done. Funeral services were conducted by Elder E. G. Hammond, of Barberton, assisted by Elders John Carlisle and A. B. Klar of this branch. Members of the priesthood acted as pallbearers. The funeral was largely attended, and many beautiful floral tributes were evidence of the love and esteem in which our departed sister was held.

A combination church and Sunday school was held March 9 with large attendance. Elder E. G. Hammond, of Barberton, was present and preached an inspiring sermon.

Many local Saints are preparing to attend General Conference in Independence.

Plans are going forward for Easter. The children's program will be in charge of Sister Hazel Noble and Sister Edna Howells.

Stockton, California

Clay and Sutter Streets

The annual branch bazaar for 1929 netted a financial return of $149.88.

Installation of officers took place December 8 under the supervision of District President G. P. Levitt. The work is moving along smoothly, a force of consecrated workers being active.

December 20 a baby girl arrived at the home of Brother and Sister Root. She was named Cora Lee and was blessed under the hands of the pastor, assisted by Brother Brokaw.

District President Levitt delivered a forceful sermon December 22, using as his theme "Re-writing the Christmas story."

A Christmas tree and program were had in the evening.

The Temple Builders gave a social for the young people at Brother Bolton's home, Sister Rena Haas entertaining the adults at her home at the same hour. Both parties watched the old year out and the new year in.

Beginning with the first sacramental service of 1930, the branch took part in the week of church-wide prayer service.

January 9 the Department of Women gave a Jiggs supper, realizing a sum of more than nineteen dollars.

Sacramento's choir motored the evening of January 17 to Stockton and presented the cantata "King all-glorious." The following evening a number of young people and children gathered at the home of Sister Tinkess and enjoyed a real children's party, with games, music, and refreshments.

Beginning February 12 President Levitt held a four-day series of meetings, which was followed by an all-day Sunday service. District Bishop Edward Ingham occupied the pulpit at the morning service. A sizeable representation was present from Sacramento Branch.

William Edward, son of Brother and Sister Root, was led into the waters of baptism by the pastor February 15.

The Department of Recreation and Expression under the management of the district president of the department, George Thompson, put on a program, members from several branches taking part. One feature of special notice was a play directed by Doctor Wood, a professor from the College of the Pacific, dramatizing the return of Naomi and her daughter-in-law from Moab to Bethlehem. Sister Eliza Kaiser took the part of Naomi, Sister Maxine Haas the part of Orpah, and Sister Lesta Darrow, Ruth.

A bake sale was held February 21, from which the committee realized $41.57, the proceeds to be used in the improvement of the lower auditorium which when completed will have a plaster finish on the walls, a stage, a modern lighting system, besides a kitchen with built-in conveniences and a large gas range.

Sister Kinney, who has been in a critical condition for several weeks, is showing slight improvement.

Several in Stockton are making preparations to attend General Conference.

Cherokee, Iowa

Cherokee Branch is alive and striving to do its part in the work of latter days. All departments are in good condition, and interest has been fine throughout the winter. The Sunday school gained three members in February, and the average attendance was increased. The Christmas offering is now almost half of last year's total, some being interested who were not before.

Twenty-eight children have adopted the junior stewardship books issued from the departments' office of the general church. They will keep their own accounts of money earned and spent and tithing paid. Brother E. M. Chiles has been appointed sponsor of this activity. Brother Chiles is also branch solicitor, having held this office a number of years.

The Department of Women is holding regular meetings every two weeks. This year they are using the Book of Mormon for study. A successful bake sale was held in February, netting the sisters a neat sum.

The junior church service held the last Sunday in the month shows some improvement over previous meetings. Brother Dewey Hatch is in charge of this movement, and we think as the experience of this department advances, the meetings will become more and more helpful.

Brother E. L. Edwards was a visitor the last Sunday in January. He was speaker at a special service in the afternoon. His splendid sermons and earnest efforts in support of God's work help to make him always welcome in Cherokee.

Brother L. G. Holloway arrived February 12 and held special meetings for ten days. Weather and sickness interfered somewhat with attendance. The sermons were fine, and the spirit directed our brother in the presentation of his subjects. The members were glad to accept the many new thoughts given. Brother Holloway was in charge of a good priesthood service the Sunday afternoon he was here.

Sacramental and prayer services continue to be spiritual and of great benefit to those who attend. A goodly number of members are present at the midweek meetings.

Brother F. M. Sheldon is bedfast and has been so for several weeks. Heart trouble is the cause of his illness. The Saints are praying for his recovery in the near future.

March 2 was a busy day, opening with priesthood meeting. This was followed by Sunday school and later by sacramental service. At 2:30 in the afternoon, two candidates were baptized by Pastor A. R. Crippen. The new members were confirmed by Brothers Crippen and W. W. Reeder, who also blessed three children. Brother J. T. Spence was in charge of this spiritual service.

Brother Reeder spoke at the evening service, his text being "Neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more."

The priesthood are trying to convince the Saints that we must live together for the good of all the group and not ourselves alone. If we can accomplish this task, we shall feel that we have advanced toward the goal we hope to reach—Zion.

All are looking toward Independence, where the General Conference will soon convene in the greatest gathering the church has ever had. For months the prayers of the members have been for the success of this assembly and the blessing of God's servants who are directing his work. Brothers Albert Haynes and Alfred Ballantyne from this branch expect to attend.

We are much encouraged. With such a continuation of interest as is ours at present we should move forward as never before. The priesthood hold meetings every two weeks for instruction and counsel. The results are being manifested in a united effort to serve God and his people at all times.

Sister L. E. Peterson, a member of two years' standing, writes good news of the progress of the Race Track, Montana, Sunday school. They are following the program outlined in the Herald. They have had the second of these programs presented by the junior church. The young people are interested, and the programs are helpful to the older members.

Missouri Valley, Iowa

March 10.—Throughout the past month the events in this branch have tended toward the making of a happy and progressive community spirit.

The men gave an oyster supper which was a decided success. All had as much as they could eat.

We are now working on the dramas which are running in Vision and expect to give them during the hour occupied by the Recreation and Expression Department. We have organized a large class in dramatics, and the members seem much interested. Sister Louise Louis, who received her training at Graceland, is in charge.

Salt Lake City, Utah

The Utah district conference, held at Salt Lake City February 15 and 16, was thought by many to be the best ever held here. The church was filled, and chairs were put in the aisles to accommodate the audiences at the various services. Apostle M. A. McConley gave the Saints much encouragement.

Since last writing we have had three more baptisms, making eighteen in about six months. Brother John Carleton was a Presbyterian minister but was never satisfied. He has made an extensive study of all religions, both inside and outside of Christianity. Like all true sheep, he recognized the Master's voice in the gospel, and it is gratifying to know that Brother Carleton and his wife are now very happy in the work. Brother Carleton is delivering some interesting and instructive lectures on the old world religions in our Sunday evening class. The young woman, who also was baptized, is a relative of those who were baptized a short time ago. There are others interested who will doubtless soon unite with us. Two of the men who have recently united with us, formerly of the Utah Church, are now elders and doing good work as missionaries, teachers, and preachers. At least one of the new families will attend General Conference.

When we first came here Brother and Sister Conyers told of a prophecy delivered by a former apostle, W. H. Kelley, that this year would mark the beginning of a good work to be done in this valley, and conditions look very favorable for a great ingathering. Our work of gathering to Missouri, and the teaching and practice of stewardships, is making a real impression on many people here.

Our aged Sister Winkworth is fairly well this winter, and her faith is strong in the church work. It would do many of our young people good to hear her strong testimony of how she found the truth in the Reorganization after being in the Utah Church for many years.

All the departments are doing well under efficient leadership. Sister Rich has a good class in teacher training and another in the study of the Book of Mormon. The young ladies are forming a band of Temple Builders and are much interested in the work outlined.

We hope the ministry passing through Salt Lake City will stop and give us some sermons.

Tulsa, Oklahoma

Amid the many preparations we are making for the Centennial Conference, the Central Oklahoma district conference was held in Tulsa February 14, 15, and 16. At this time delegates for the Centennial Conference were elected. Brother Ed. Dillon, of Oklahoma City, was named chairman of the splendid group that is to represent us.

Among the visiting priesthood were Elder William Bath, who preached the week preceding conference. Apostle E. J. Gleazer spoke during conference, and Elder Z. Z. Renfroe, pastor of Oklahoma City Branch, the two weeks following conference. Patriarch Samuel Twombly occupied the morning hour Sunday, February 16, with one of his inspiring sermons. A solo was sung by Pauline James Arnsen, accompanied by Sister Belle James. At the evening service the Tulsa Choir rendered the anthem, "How beautiful upon the mountains," Sister E. E. Atkins directing, Mary Goldsmith accompanying. Pastor Falice Cunningham was in charge of the meeting, Elder Z. Z. Renfroe assisted. The sermon was preached by Apostle Gleazer. At the close of the service Sister Myers, of Holdenville, sang "My task," being accompanied at the piano by Mattie Martin.

After conference Brother Bath went to Oklahoma City to hold a two-week series of meetings, while Apostle Gleazer began the meetings in Tulsa. We enjoy his presence and like to hear him in the pulpit. He went from here to Denver, Colorado. The meetings were continued by Brother Renfroe.

The junior choir, under the direction of Frances Roberta Skinner, made its initial appearance February 23 at the evening service. Blanche Hill is accompanist.

The church was filled to capacity each night as the Saints came from neighboring towns to hear these unusually fine sermons. Brother Renfroe is one of the church's outstanding young ministers. We are confident he will accomplish much good for the Father. February 28 he preached a sermon on the Book of Mormon. A play entitled "Other sheep have I" was presented after the sermon. Claudia Cunningham directed the play. Sister Alma Adams sang "By the waters of Minnetonka." The singer beautifully costumed as an Indian maiden, brought to mind vividly the realization that the Lamanites are the Indians we see about us today.

At the close of the meetings two people desired to be baptized, and were brought into the kingdom of God.

The annual business meeting was held at the beginning of the year. Falice Cunningham was retained as branch pastor, Riley Cunningham and Evan Hopkins as associate pastors. Winifred Goodwin is to continue in the offices of financial and publicity agent. Sister E. E. Atkins was unanimously reelected director of the music department. Sister F. H. Cunningham was elected secretary and recorder; Frances Roberta Skinner, reelected branch reporter. The new department of drama is under the supervision of Harry Robinson. Sister Evan Hopkins is director of the Women's Department. She has an able body of assistants, and we feel assured they will accomplish many things of worth during 1930. The Department of Recreation and Expression proved a success last year, and we hope it will continue successful under the new method we are using. Winifred Goodwin is director of this department for another year. Religious education in all departments is under the direction of Evan Hopkins.

On the third sacramental Sunday of the new year, we met in humility and love to renew our covenant and be spiritually rebaptized. With a spirit of reverence and consecration we listened to the familiar hymns played by Sister Lackwood Moore. Pauline James Arnson sang the beautiful solo, "One hour with Jesus," being accompanied by her mother, Sister Belle James. Each communion Sunday brings these two from Claremore to worship with us. We are happy to have them.

March 7 came bringing warmth and sunshine, and wakened a few flowers from winter's nap. Bright and early in the morning it brought a tiny visitor to the home of Brother and Sister Winifred Goodwin. They have named the gift James Edwin. Sister Goodwin before her marriage was Goldie Adamson, daughter of Brother and Sister Peter Adamson.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

March 11.—Because the Saints are scattered throughout the country and roads are made impassable by the varying weather and because of sickness, attendance in this branch has not of late been so good as heretofore. However, we think that the next few weeks will change conditions for the better, and we can see no real reason for our local failing to prosper this year.

We have a full quorum of officers, one elder, two priests, one teacher, one deacon. The Lord has blessed us greatly.

At our district conference one of our priests was ordained an elder, and a teacher was ordained a priest.

Teacher Luther Crabtree has suffered with double pneumonia for the past few weeks, but he is now improving.

Elder Walter Culp has been a busy servant of the Master. He has been called a number of times to administer to the sick, and the Lord has been with him.

Sister May Crabtree is suffering at this writing. We pray that she will soon improve.

A baby was born a few weeks ago to Brother and Sister Charles Culp. Sister Culp is not regaining her health as fast as we had hoped.

Mr. Leonard has started the singing lessons on Saturday evening. It is hoped that he will be of much help to the members.

Our hearts go out in sympathy to Brother and Sister O. A. Rexroad, of McDermott. Oscar O. Rexroad, four-year-old son, passed away at his home March 9 of pneumonia. Besides his parents he leaves one brother, William, and three sisters: Juanita, Gertrude, and Genevieve. A brother, John Ancell, eleven months old, was buried Saturday, March 8, also a victim of pneumonia. Funeral services were held at the home of Ervin Bauser, the sermon being delivered by Elder Richard Shope, of McDermott. Interment was in Rushtown Cemetery.

Southwestern Kansas District

Elder J. W. Wooten having been appointed by general church officers to labor in the district for two months, went first to Winfield, Kansas, to hold a series of meetings. The intentions were to hold but one week's services, but the interest was so keen and the instructions were so good that it was deemed advisable to hold for two weeks.

On the second Sunday of the services, February 16, most of the district officers met at Winfield to hold an all-day meeting. Those of the district officers present were: Brother Charles T. Pooler, district president; Brother J. W. Wooten, district counselor; Brother Ira G. Whipple, bishop's agent; Brother Clayton B. Crooker, Sunday school superintendent; and Sister Minnie M. Barraclough, superintendent of Women's Department. Several Wichita Saints accompanied the officers on the trip.

The Sunday school was in charge of the district superintendent, assisted by the local officers. Good interest was manifested in the class work. After the Sunday school was dismissed, Sister Margaret Pooler played a piano solo. Brother Pooler gave a short talk. Then the Women's Auxiliary of the Sons of Civil War Veterans of Winfield presented the Saints of Winfield with an American Flag. After a flag salute and pledge, and the singing of "America," Brother Vickory, pastor of Winfield, gave an acceptance speech on behalf of the branch.

At the eleven o'clock hour Brother Ira G. Whipple delivered a good sermon on "Stewardships."

In the afternoon Sister Barraclough gave a talk to the Women's Department. This talk was followed by a round table meeting conducted by Brother Whipple, answering questions about the stewardship plan.

After the formal opening of the 7.30 meeting, Sister Adell Dorth sang a solo, accompanied on the piano by Brother Richard Campbell. Then Brother Wooten occupied the hour on the subject of "Authority of the ministry in the Latter Day Saint Church."

While the interest was very good among those that attended during the two weeks, the attendance might have been better. Brother Wooten brought to the Saints some soul-inspiring sermons along the line of the social program of the church. The Saints at Winfield were greatly benefited and strengthened. One Indian woman was baptized during the meetings.

From Winfield, Brother Wooten went to Hutchinson, Kansas, where he held forth for two weeks.

Winfield, Kansas

March 10.—The latter-day work is making slow progress in this city. The working organization of the church is alive, and although many of us are not as far up the ladder of progress and activity as we should be, considering the time, we are climbing. We have prayed in faith and feel that we must succeed in action. There is need for definite prayer to God to send more laborers into the vineyard.

During the past year we have had no missionary in this district, but we have been favored with many good sermons from members of Wichita Branch. We are grateful to Brothers Stoff, Whipple, Pooler, and others.

Much of the renewed interest here can be attributed to Brother J. W. Wooten, who began a series of lectures February 9 which continued for two weeks. While no additions were made to the membership, no definite missionary effort being made, the speaker stating at the beginning that he was directing his talks to the membership, we feel the lectures have given us much determination and desire to study and move forward. We hope that we may be able to keep in mind and effective in our lives the many good things presented. The theme underlying his lectures was "The laws of stewardship and tithing." Brother Wooten's cheerful disposition and friendly smile endeared him to the hearts of the members here. These were very successful meetings.

Sunday, February 16, a number of the women of the Sons of Veterans came in and presented a beautiful silk flag, for which we are thankful. We are glad to report the addition to our branch of Brother and Sister Hollingsworth, from Emporia, Kansas.

Our group of workers is small, but in looking back over our past record we can see that we have accomplished a number of things.

The Women's Department is organized with Sister Vickery as president; Sister Brant, assistant; Sister Dorth, secretary; Sister Hollingsworth, friendly visitor. We feel this department is one of the chief factors in keeping the branch alive, and the women solicit the prayers of the Saints that they may function collectively and individually in doing well the things which are at hand.

The Sunday school is growing in interest with Sister

Grace Crooks as superintendent. Under the leadership of Chester Crooks the Religio progresses.

We regret to have to report the death of the little son of Brother and Sister Loyd Vickery, of Arkansas City. The funeral was held in charge of Brother Stoft, of Wichita. We extend sympathy to sorrowing relatives.

Akron, Ohio

For the past month and a half, Akron Branch has been enjoying splendid sermons by Elder James Pycok, of Toronto, Canada, held on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings, as well as frequent Sunday sermons. As a general rule these meetings have been well attended, and through the persistent efforts of the publicity staff, six newspapers have furnished free advertising, sermonets, etc.

The young people's class which is taught by Frank Ebeling, held a kid Valentine party the night of February 11, and Friday evening, February 14, the Department of Recreation held another Valentine party. Both were well attended, and everyone present had an enjoyable evening.

The church school reports a substantial increase in attendance during the last several months, and through the unified services, more young people remain through the preaching services.

An exact count could not be obtained, but it is estimated between 225 and 250 were present at the Sunday services of the district conference held at Akron, March 1 and 2. Patriarch Richard Baldwin, Apostle C. F. Ellis, District President James Bishop, District Bishop Charles Fry, and Patriarch A. E. Stone were among the delegates. Apostle Ellis gave a most interesting and enlightening talk Saturday evening, and with the aid of his lantern slides enabled us to appreciate the hardships and trials of our noble missionaries and the customs of our brothers and sisters on those far-off islands in the Pacific, the South Sea Islands.

Brother Baldwin selected the title "Feed my lambs" for his Sunday morning sermon, and in the sacramental service which was held at two o'clock many testified concerning the inspiring points contained in this simple but impressive sermon.

Moorhead, Iowa

March 12.—Attendance at services has been on the increase during the present year. Perhaps some have made and are carrying out new year's resolutions. A marked interest has been noticed, not only in attendance in the Sunday school classes but also in the preparation of the lessons. There are credit contests being conducted between classes for possession of banners, and "I was early" badges appear to be working good results.

The Department of Recreation and Expression meets at 6.45 Sunday evenings under the supervision of Brother Glenn Wilson. The study of the Doctrine and Covenants has proved interesting to a large class. Lesson period is followed by programs arranged by different families in the branch. Brother Elbert A. Smith's short plays for each month have proved instructive. The play for February with short talks, prayers, and special musical selections occupied the entire evening's service.

The local priesthood have occupied during the regular preaching services of the year excepting one sermon from District President Gunsolley.

Cottage prayer services have been well attended and of spiritual benefit to those present.

Brother Mark Jensen occupied the pulpit at Logan, February 9, at the morning hour, Brother Harold Mann taking him there.

January 26 the Saints enjoyed a visit from District President Gerald Gunsolley and Sister Carl Crabb, of Logan.

Brother Gunsolley delivered an instructive sermon in the morning, and in the evening Sister Crabb and Brother Gunsolley gave instructions in behalf of the work of the Women's Department. We trust good results will follow. Basket dinner was served at the Aid Building.

The evening of February 20 a large attendance of Saints and friends assembled at the church and enjoyed a treat in the form of a musical program rendered by Sister Margery Horn, accompanied by her mother, Sister May Horn, who was formerly a Moorhead girl and known as Sister May Kestersen. Her daughter, Margery, is only fifteen years old, but she has had her beautiful voice in training for over four years and is now often heard over the radio. The family was moving from Sioux City, Iowa, to near Saint Louis, Missouri, and stopped overnight with relatives in Moorhead. The Saints greatly appreciated the privilege of listening to the program. They sincerely hope Sister Margery's talent will continue to be used in the Lord's work.

The Women's Department served dinner to one hundred and sixteen persons February 26 at the expense of the Fox Chemical Company, of Des Moines. An all-day program and demonstration was conducted for the benefit of the farmers, by Mr. Frank Fox assisted by others. Their efforts were appreciated.

A number of members spent the evening of March 10 with Brother J. J. Boswell, helping him celebrate his birthday.

To date sixteen subscriptions to the Conference Daily Herald have been sent from Moorhead Branch.

The military funeral service of Brother William La Seur, conducted by the Moorhead Legion, the sermon being preached by Brother J. Carl Ballantyne, of Lamoni, was held at the church March 4. Brother La Seur was eighty-four years of age and had resided in and near Moorhead for many years. Since the death of his wife, about fourteen months ago, he has lived with his daughter, Sister Charles Ballantyne, of Lamoni. He was a man much loved for his sterling qualities not alone by many Saints but also by many neighbors and friends. He was brought from Lamoni to his former home for burial by the side of his wife and son Harvey.

Pastor T. O. Strand of late has delivered a series of chart sermons on ancient Bible history which has been interesting.

Sister Merrill Struble has gone to Rochester, Minnesota, for consultation with the Mayo Brothers regarding her health.

La Junta, Colorado

March 11.—Our hearts were made sad by the death of Oscar Bair, who passed away January 15, 1930. He was ever at our services and social gatherings. He leaves a host of relatives and friends to mourn his passing. The funeral sermon was a source of comfort to the ones who were left.

On account of insufficient class rooms in our little church building in North La Junta, the Saints voted to have our Sunday school and evening services at the American Legion Hall which is more convenient in many ways. It is much closer in, and we have three class rooms. Since we have been meeting there attendance has considerably increased.

For two Sunday evenings we had illustrated lectures on the subjects "Industrial Zion" and "Group stewardship." This made us realize that the church is making greater progress along these lines than ever before.

We have of late had added attendance and interest in the women's meetings. Brother McDowell has been conducting classes along lines of "Family worship," which have been of lasting help to all.

La Junta Branch went over the top in its financial quota for the last year, and all declare their blessings as a consequence.

February 19 a successful supper was sponsored by the Department of Women. There was a ready response from the business men of the city, and many favorable comments were made. Brother McDowell met each patron at the door to make him welcome. One hundred and fifty partook of the supper.

Sister Brown, the efficient superintendent of religious education is preparing to teach a class in "Teacher training." Books and other material have been obtained.

Throughout the winter the cottage prayer meetings have been a great help to everyone attending. Brother McDowell has conducted a half hour class each Thursday evening before prayer meeting on "Living abundantly."

The adult class has been studying the all-absorbing topic of "Stewardships." Those in the class have received a greater vision of stewardships.

We have had greater success in financial affairs the past year than ever before. The envelope system was used, each one pledging so much weekly. The same system will be in use this year.

There is considerable agitation about the possibility of erecting an adequate church building in a more suitable location. Since using the three rooms at our disposal in the hall where we meet, we are more fully convinced of our need for a church home.

All enjoyed the sermons of the district president and of Brother E. P. Darnell, as well as a visit from the latter's family.

About twenty-five boys and girls, under the leadership of Brother E. M. Stevens, are beginning their junior stewardship program and plan to keep their individual record books.

We very much regret to have Brother and Sister O. A. McDowell go from our midst. Brother McDowell has been a source of inspiration to each one during his stay here. He has given untiring effort to the upbuilding of the work in La Junta. We feel the result of his effort here will remain with us throughout the coming years. He has been appointed to Tulsa, Oklahoma. They will leave shortly after the middle of March to do some special work in Independence. On their last day with us, March 16, we are planning a basket dinner and all-day meeting at the hall. It is not yet definitely known how La Junta Branch will be cared for.

Douglas, Arizona

March 12.—Members having moved away from this little branch faster than they came in, the work here was carried on by a few, and attendance was quite small for a number of months. Under the faithful efforts of our late pastor, Brother H. D. Simpson, who passed away December 7, 1929, attendance and interest gradually increased, and we now have a Sunday school attendance of from twenty to twenty-five. The superintendent is Sister Lillian Simpson, and Sister Tee Taylor is assistant superintendent. A contest for more members is on between the Busy Bees and the Willing Workers, and we look for good results.

Branch services are under the direction of Elder S. D. Condit, who has the assistance of Elder F. M. Dearborn and Junius Taylor, priest. A noticeable attendance and interest in services are now being enjoyed.

On Friday nights the young people participate in programs presented under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression. This is materially helping to interest the young in Sunday school. Brother Forrest Golding is superintendent of this department.

Prayer meetings are held each Wednesday night, usually at the homes of the members.

Several Saints from here expect to attend General Conference.

A pretty church wedding occurred Sunday, March 2, when Sister Pearl Josephine Dearborn, daughter of Brother and Sister Frank M. Dearborn, of Douglas, became the bride of Brother Andy Miller, of Bisbee. The ceremony was read by Elder S. D. Condit. The wedding march was played by Miss Lillian Simpson and L. W. Upton. About seventy-five friends were present to witness the marriage. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride was attended by her Sister, Miss Dorothy Dearborn; Mr. Miller was accompanied by Clyde Adams, of Bisbee. The young couple will make their home in Bisbee.

Portland District Young People's Convention

The young people's convention of Portland District drew to a close Sunday evening, February 23, with everyone feeling that the three-day meetings had been very much worth while. Young people from all over the district, as well as from Kelso and Longview, Washington, were in attendance. Brother George Lewis, Spokane, Washington, missionary, spoke Friday evening at the opening service.

Saturday was taken up with prayer service in the early morning, followed by classes conducted by Sister Anna Dobson on "Religious education in the home"; and "Problems of youth," by Elder Eli Bronson. This class was well attended by the young people. In the afternoon a round table was conducted by District President S. A. Dobson.

An entertaining evening finished the day. The eight o'clock hour was given to the young people, in charge of Sister Leone Bronson, superintendent of the Department of Expression of Portland Branch. She called on a representative of every branch and mission present, to tell something of the hopes, ambitions, and activities of the home group. Sincere responses of desires to qualify and "make good" in this great work were given by every young man or woman called upon. Brother George Lewis gave an interesting and amusing talk on Australia and his experiences in America. Miss Freda Young and Mrs. Sylvia Root furnished solos for the evening.

Sunday morning found a large number gathered at the church for early worship led by Brothers Dobson and Thompson. At ten o'clock the church school conducted very instructive classes. Sister Ethel Bronson, district superintendent, was in charge of the adult division, while Sister Lillian Livingston, Portland superintendent of church school, conducted the primary department. Brother H. W. Savage delivered the sermon to the junior church in the lower auditorium at the eleven o'clock hour, and Brother Eli Bronson was the speaker in the main auditorium.

Brother Savage spoke in the afternoon, and Brother George Lewis, of Spokane, delivered the closing sermon Sunday evening. His subject was "Hearers and doers," and he pointed out that we must no longer sleep on our privileges; that we must truly be "doers of the word" in these latter days. We have talked long enough about redeeming Zion, thinks Brother Lewis. How about doing something? And so think a goodly number of us with him. We are trying to remember his words as we go back to our daily routine—and apply them. "Not hearers of the word alone, but doers of it, too." We realize that we have failed to be doers to the best of our ability or Zion would be much more of a reality than it is. A half hour of music preceding Brother Lewis' sermon added to the spirit of worship for the evening.

Others assisting with the music were the Portland Choir; Perry Hunt, pianist; Leone Bronson, soprano; Lila Livingston, contralto, Eli Bronson, baritone; and a ladies' quartet.

The young people of Portland District felt that a convention at this time would be a preparation for the coming April conference, regardless of the fact that many of them might not be able to attend and they were certainly not disappointed in their anticipation.

The Australasian Delegation

By W. J. Haworth

Fifteen representatives of the Australasian Mission left Sydney by the Royal Majesty's Steamship Tahiti, for San Francisco, en route to Zion, on February 20. A wonderful send-off was accorded us by the Saints of the metropolis the evening before we sailed, and it seemed as though there were something like four hundred of the Saints on the wharf to see us off. Never has there been such an enthusiastic Latter Day Saint farewell in our country. The handclasps of friends, the kisses of relatives, bouquets for the sisters, streamers for the men and women alike, the clicking of cameras, frenzied searchings for this friend or that relative who had been lost in the throng—all these made up a scene of happiness, sorrow, smiles, and tears. Many were going from their homeland for the first time, and for all the parting was a severe wrench. All gloried, however, in the fact that we were bound Zionward. We are coming, brothers and sisters, with every faculty alert, desirous of seeing all there is to be seen of progress in the establishment of Zion, and of experiencing the joys of the centennial.

We have had a very smooth passage, and there have been very few whose mal de mer attacks have been severe or persistent. Some who were expecting to be seasick have been pleasantly disappointed. At Wellington, New Zealand, we went ashore and for a day and a half endeavored to visit the isolated Saints at that point. Though we did not meet some of them, we did have the pleasure of nice visits with others. A call at Raratonga gave us the opportunity of seeing the sights of that island. We note that this is the place where our missionaries were boycotted by the powers that be. We note also that there is now a Seventh Day Adventist Church there, so probably we might be able to defeat the boycott now.

March 3 we arrived in Papeete, Tahiti, met the missionaries, and were escorted to the church at Terona, where we were accorded a most enthusiastic welcome. Elder Farthing presided and interpreted the speeches. Rocotama offered prayer. Then Horahitu, who is making the trip to Zion with us, delivered an address of welcome which was interpreted by Elder Farthing. The writer responded on behalf of the delegation, the greater portion of his speech being interpreted. The natives seemed to enjoy the fact that I still remembered sufficient of their language to make an uninterpreted finish. We were then introduced to the gathering, each one standing for the ceremony, while Elder Farthing told the offices we held and gave other facts concerning us. This over, the meeting closed, and the Saints come forward to shake hands. They were very enthusiastic about this, some of them coming back three and four times. A short visit with the Farthings, and we returned to the boat for dinner, where Brother and Sister S. W. Ballard were our guests.

At 7.30 p. m. a sacred concert was held in the church, Elder Farthing, assisted by the writer, presiding. The native brothers and sisters furnished the greater portion of the program, but the Australians contributed about a dozen items. It was good to hear the songs of Zion sung in both tongues and to participate in the privileges of the occasion. To our party it was a season of great joy. The style of entertainment was new to the majority, but the wonderful spirit of the occasion impressed all. On the other hand the native Saints had been preparing for many months to meet us and to give us the experiences which proved so precious.

We heard himines, native and pu pu (foreign) to our hearts' content. In addition each of us received a present of some kind—a fan or string of shells—and were truly grateful for the saintly spirit which prompted these gifts. The concert was lengthy, but no one tired. At its conclusion our native brethren and sisters who would not be at the boat the next morning, came to say good-bye. We love these brown brothers and sisters and rejoice that they share the gospel hope with us.

Next morning at six the ship sailed again. This time we had with us Sister Farthing, Brother and Sister Yager, Horahitu, and the Farthing and Yager babies. A goodly company of native Saints with Brother Farthing stood on the wharf and waved us good-bye. Again we held streamers and felt the thrill of parting with those dear by the ties of the gospel. Brother Farthing looked lonely as he stood on the wharf holding a blue steamer at the other end of which were Sister Farthing and their little girl Gloria. He is carrying a heavy load of responsibility, and we pray that the blessings of divine direction and heavenly peace may be given him.

We are now nearing San Francisco. All is well with the party, and we look forward with keen anticipation to the experience of meeting the Saints of Joseph's land.

New Castle, Pennsylvania

March 11.—Saints of New Castle were very glad to have Elder T. M. Carr, district president, here for a series of sermons which began February 23. March 4 Apostle Clyde F. Ellis arrived and spent three days here. The hall was well filled at all services. Many nonmembers were present. Thursday night Brother Ellis and Brother Carr left for Pittsburgh to attend the district conference. We hope to welcome them back to New Castle at an early date.

Holden Stake

Blue Springs

The Saints here have been having some wonderful prayer and preaching services. A few weeks ago Apostle Roy S. Budd spoke at the morning hour on the text, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest; . . . for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." The effect was forceful and inspiring. Elder D. A. Whiting was also one of the February speakers. He stressed the necessity for the Saints putting on the whole armor of God.

Communion service of March 2 was indeed a communion with God. The Spirit spoke in commendation of the pastor, and one of the young sisters regarding the work she should do. At the evening service Pastor Hattey spoke on prayer, stressing the need of the family altar.

The General Conference officials have assigned the young people's classes of Blue Springs space to be furnished as a home library room. They are working diligently, and the exhibit will soon be ready. We invite conference delegates to visit our display.

Brother Frank Veenstra, returned missionary to Holland, preached here March 9, his first sermon in English in three years. His text was John 15: 1-5. Sister Veenstra and a young man from Holland sang two hymns in the Dutch language. The boy can not understand English, but they enjoyed the Spirit in the songs. At the evening service, Brethren Henry Stahl, Bullard, and Turner explained the Boy Scout movement to the enjoyment of all.

The branch is growing. Four new families recently came in. We welcome them. They are the families of Brethren Stowell, Spease, Inman, and Starks.

Chase County Branch

Lamar, Nebraska

March 12.—The Saints recently moved into the new church home and are enjoying it. The building, though not new, is nicely furnished inside and out, and best of all, it is ours. The auditorium is about thirty-two by forty feet and is well equipped with a corner pulpit, oak pews, piano, and all the things which add to the spirit of worship.

The day of opening brought a snowstorm, which, together with an abnormal amount of sickness, decreased attendance. Several carloads of members arrived from Wray Branch, sixty miles away, and spent the day.

Following the Bible school a sacramental service was held, Pastor Ward A. Hougas in charge assisted by Elder A. E. Tabor, of Wray. Brother Harold Tabor, of Wray, was ordained to the office of priest at this service in harmony with the direction of the district conference.

A basket dinner interested everyone at noon. And Brother Hougas preached one of his dynamic sermons in the afternoon. While the day was cold and the weather was stormy, the building was comfortably filled.

Last Sunday marked the monthly junior church service. The second Sunday of each month the morning church hour is given to the junior service. The children offer the prayers, read the scripture, play the piano, and form the choir. They give inspiration to all. Brother Hougas told them the story of two buttons, bringing out in an effective and simple way the lesson he had in store for them. So great was the response to the service by the juniors that the pastor has agreed to include with each morning service a ten-minute story period preceding the regular sermon.

One of the best recreational services held in many months was conducted last week with Sister Vera Travis in charge. Many interesting things are planned for these Friday night services, including a full-fledged play on which the cast is now working. Nonmember interest is the greatest at these services, and the possibility of missionary work is almost unlimited.

Every junior in the branch, together with some nonmember Sunday school attendants, has engaged in the junior stewardship work and is keeping his record. A contest is also in motion to increase the attendance with a treat in sight for the winners about July 1.

We are expecting to accomplish much this year and feel that the same spirit pervades the work here as elsewhere.

Far West Stake

Twenty-eight Baptisms in Saint Joseph

As a beautiful and fitting climax to a two-week series of meetings conducted by Apostle J. F. Garver, twenty-eight souls were inducted into the kingdom Sunday afternoon, March 16, Decision Day.

In a unique and original manner Brother Garver centered his discussions around the story of the prodigal son—God as the father and we as the sons. The far-reaching effect of the gospel through this series will not be completely realized and appreciated until eternity draws aside the veil.

At two o'clock Sunday, in the lower auditorium of First Church, a large concourse of Saints and friends met to witness the baptism of the twenty-eight persons—children, youth, and middle-aged. Those officiating in this gospel ordinance were High Priest Coventry Archibald, Elder R. E. Jones, and G. T. Richards a seventy. This was beautifully supplemented by the piano rendition of gospel hymns played very softly.

Confirmation services were held immediately following immersion, in the upper auditorium.

Thus added responsibility and greater joy have come to the Saints of this branch. May God abundantly supplement our honest endeavors to carry out our obligations to his newly found children.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Signs of spring could have been seen everywhere as last Sabbath Day was ushered in. Here and there fluttered a bird, and tiny blades of grass made their appearance to do their part along with the glorious sunshine in making a wonderful spring day. Influenced by a touch of spring, attendance at both Sunday school and the morning preaching service was very good.

Marguerite Johnson Blaine contributed her talent to the Sunday school service, singing a very lovely soprano solo, "Behold what manner of love," by MacDermid. Sister Sallie Forties told the children the morning story, and it was not only appreciated by the junior, intermediate, and primary departments, but also by the members of the adult division.

Following the return from the lesson study, Pastor C. E. Wight continued his Sunday morning talks, which are inspiring and uplifting to all who come within the sound of his voice.

The 7.45 service was occupied by Bishop J. A. Becker, who gave an illustrated lecture on "Agricultural stewardships in Zion." There was a goodly number present, and his discourse contributed much enlightenment to the Saints on this subject.

Final results of the Elliott Latter Day Saint League Basketball are as follows: First place, Central; second, Chelsea; third, Fourth Kansas City; fourth place, Bennington. Central team will play the Saint Joseph Latter Day Saints Team March 22. A number are planning on seeing this game in Saint Joseph.

At the recent special conference, held for the purpose of selecting delegates to General Conference, the following were chosen: Sister D. H. Blair, Bishop F. B. Blair, Sister F. B. Blair, R. E. Browne, R. J. Crayne, Sister R. J. Crayne, Evan A. Fry, Sister H. A. Gould, Maude Gunsolley, Sister Sarah Hawkins, Sister H. A. Higgins, H. A. Koehler, Sister H. A. Koehler, George Mesley, Sister Blanche Mesley, Sister P. J. Raw, W. B. Richards, Harvey Sandy, Seth S. Sandy, Bishop C. A. Skinner, Sister C. A. Skinner, C. E. Wight, Sister Luella Wight, Sister J. O. Worden, E. W. Lloyd, and Sister Blanche Green.

Our hearts were made sad with the death of Sister Frederick S. Anderson at the Independence Sanitarium Thursday evening, March 13. She was apparently recovering from a major operation, but there was a sudden change which resulted in her death. Her gentle manner and loving devotion to those things that were embraced in the cause for which she stood, made her loved by all. Funeral services were conducted from the church on Monday afternoon in charge of Bishop F. B. Blair. A quartet composed of Marguerite Johnson Blaine, Luella Wight, Evan Fry, and Alfred Hitchcock rendered several numbers, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" and "In heavenly love abiding." Bishop Blair offered the invocation and delivered the obituary. Patriarch H. O. Smith spoke comforting words to the bereaved ones, bringing to mind the nineteenth chapter of Job: "O that my words were now written, that they were printed in a book." Concluding this service, the body was borne by six of her brother associates to its resting place in Mound Grove Cemetery. The display of flowers around the casket and pulpit bespoke the abundance of friendship that was our departed sister's privilege to enjoy in this life. Surviving are her husband, Frederick S. Anderson, and two sons, Frederick, jr., and Norman.

Heathwood Church

This congregation is in deep sorrow on account of the passing from this life of Sister Phœbe Tucker, wife of Elder John Tucker, identified with and closely engaged in the work of the church since her childhood on the Kansas side. Her death occurred March 11, 1930, after a period of lingering sickness. She was stricken at the home of her daughter, Leah Eskridge, Chicago, Illinois, and returned home a short time before her death. Besides her husband, she leaves three daughters, Sister Eskridge, Sister Marie Johnstone, and Sister Blanche Green, the two latter residing in Kansas City, Kansas. She was born September 10, 1874; baptized May 6, 1894, and married March 14, 1895. The funeral sermon was by Patriarch Ammon White, prayer and eulogy by Bishop F. B. Blair. The soloist was Professor Edwin Edwards, and the service was held at the Quindaro Church, March 14, at 3 p. m. Brother White chose as a basis for his sermon Matthew 20: 26-28: "But whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant: even so the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." It was pointed out that this sister had spent her life in the active service of the Lord, devoting her energies and time to the cause she so dearly loved. As Jesus had gone about doing good, she had been found on a mission of love for humanity, endeavoring to acquaint all with whom she came in contact with the beautiful gospel of Christ. Sister Tucker bore a faithful testimony to the truthfulness of the latter-day work. She will be greatly missed, as she was a capable counselor to those in charge of local or stake affairs, occupying positions of trust in the various departments during her busy career. She was laid to rest in Highland cemetery, Kansas City, Kansas.

Argentine Church

The series of special meetings being conducted by Elder W. I. Fligg will be continued another week, the interest warranting the effort. Brother Fligg was the speaker Sunday night.

Chelsea Church

Patriarch Ammon White and Elder W. I. Fligg were recent speakers, giving some good material to think about.

March 9, Elder William O. Hands spoke on "How we talk to ourselves," which, he says, indicates how we behave.

Doctor E. G. Davis, astronomer, gave a very interesting illustrated lecture on the stars last Sunday evening, a fine audience listening to the entertaining speaker. He also was the speaker tonight, Elder W. S. Brown being the occupant of the sacred desk at eleven o'clock.

Brother and Sister R. J. Crayne entertained the O. B. K.'s at their home the evening of March 8. Twenty young folks spent the time playing games.

Chelsea tennis players are getting out their rackets, and six or eight were seen on the courts on Saturday.

The Wednesday evening prayer meetings are fairly well attended, and it is hoped that this attendance will increase.

Brother Robert Sears's wife, who has undergone a serious operation, is showing a little improvement.

Brother and Sister Cecil Conklin are now residing in Little Rock, Arkansas, and Chelsea misses two of its good workers.

The junior church service under the direction of Sister R. J. Crayne is being well attended. Sister Crayne has been appointed recreational leader, to take the place of Brother Cecil Conklin.

The Boy Scouts, Elder A. W. Sears leader, are manifesting much interest in their line of endeavor, and are looking forward to the season just ahead with enthusiasm. They are planning many events in the great outdoors.

Independence

Stone Church

"Let us decide to be happy," was the suggestion of Apostle Paul M. Hanson in his sermon Sunday morning, Decision Day. The way to be happy is to cooperate with God in making happiness, he said. When we let Christ become everything in our lives we shall have the peace and the life abundant that he came to give us. God can not be found except by asserting the best that is in us. We are constantly in need of making fresh surrenders to Christ. "All things work together for good to those that love the Lord."

The Stone Church Choir, under the direction of Paul N. Craig, sang, "O thou that tellest good tidings to Zion," from Handel's Messiah. Marcine Smith sang the soprano solo. Musical accompaniment for the service was played by Robert Miller, organist, and George Miller, pianist. Elder Wallace Smith presided and was assisted by Elder Frank McDonald.

The intermediate young people in their eleven o'clock service observed Decision Day, appointed by the general church, and Book of Mormon Sunday for their department. Sister Flo Burton, a teacher in the department, exhibited and explained the uses of a number of articles of Indian wearing apparel, ornaments, and a beautiful peace pipe. These were gifts given by the Indians to Sister Burton and her missionary husband, the late Elder P. R. Burton, who labored several years among the Red Men. Sister Burton is presenting an attractive collection of Indian relics to the general church.

For a scripture reading Elder H. W. Harder, in charge, read Mosiah 9: 33-49 from the Book of Mormon, and Elder S. A. Thiel, superintendent of the Stone Church Sunday School, spoke on "The significance of Decision Day."

An afternoon baptismal service commemorated the observance of Decision Day. The new font in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church was the place of baptism for twelve souls, most of them children: Paul Berntal Smith, Edith Fern Thompson, Lois Marie Hampton, Vera May Dutton, Sara Emma Odham, Lois Jeanne Williams, Jeanne Meredith Barto, Thomas Peer, Mrs. Belle Ramsey, William M. Norman, George W. Barnett, and Fred Gygax. Members of the ministry officiating were John F. Sheehy, H. G. Barto, M. T. Williams, Arthur Thompson, F. A. Cool, R. J. Lambert, and M. F. Gowell.

Immediately following the ordinance of baptism came the service for the blessing of babies. Six infants were given blessing in the hands of the elders: Donna Lee Kennedy, Paul Rogers Campbell, Thomas Feldhahn, Shirley Jean Chappelow, Betty May Bills, and Betty Jean DeTray. Then a number of those who were baptized in the early afternoon were confirmed members of the church.

To every man comes the right of personal revelation from God, declared Pastor J. F. Sheehy in his Sunday evening sermon, "Revelation." We live in a scientific age, an age of great discoveries, of swift motion, but as he has through all ages, God continues to recognize the need of his children for divine counsel and guidance.

The story of the prodigal son is the answer to Jesus' statement: "God is love." This love has been manifested through all generations by divine communication with man—revelation. Numerous examples were cited of forms of communication between God and man—walking and talking with the Father, dreams, visions, a voice, the visit of an angel, manifestation through the great world of nature, and finally through the blessing of the Comforter promised by the Christ.

The musical program was most effective in opening and closing the discourse. The Wahdemna Choral Club, led by Paul N. Craig, sang "The lost chord," and "Beautiful Savior," Kathryn Haberlein at the piano. At the end of the hour George Anway sang "Come, sweet Comforter."

Elder H. G. Barto was in charge of the service, and George Anway led the congregational singing.

Among the People in Zion

More than fifty people helped to make the rally and homecoming of the Y. P. R. Class of the Stone Church a happy occasion. At six o'clock in the evening former members, present members, and official guests began to arrive at the Y. K. T. classroom, near the Stone Church. Two former teachers of the class were included on the program, Sister J. A. Gardner and Brother J. Glenn Fairbanks, and also assisting were President F. M. McDowell, Pastor John F. Sheehy, and Elder John Blackmore. The Y. P. R. class approaches the tenth year of its existence as an organization. It was known by another name before the year 1921. During its life the class membership has changed considerably, and there has been a succession of excellent teachers. For the past two years the organization has given strong support to the church program of religious education; and last summer, with the consent and approval of general church officials, it launched the Tenth Legion movement.

Private funeral services for Sister Sarah Mabel Congdon, fifty-two years of age, who passed away at her home in Independence March 13, were held Saturday morning, March 15. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. The deceased is survived by her husband, William B. Congdon, Ogdensburg, New Jersey; two daughters: Marianne Congdon, Breckenridge, Missouri; and Bertina Congdon, Independence; a son, Hartwell R. Congdon, Springfield, Massachusetts; three sisters: Miss Anna Wood, Breckenridge, Missouri; Mrs. E. F. Robertson, Stonington, Maine; and Mrs. Louise Grover, Manchester, New Hampshire; six brothers: Burpee Wood, Los Angeles; Rufus Wood, Portsmouth, New Hampshire; Wilfred Wood, Nauvoo, Illinois; Harry Wood, Birmingham, Massachusetts; Welton Wood, Independence; and Roy Wood, Arlington, Massachusetts. Sister Congdon was baptized a member of the church January 16, 1898.

Second Church

Communion service March 2 was a well-attended and splendid spiritual meeting. In the evening Elder S. A. Burgess delivered a fine sermon on the Book of Mormon.

The morning speaker March 9 was Brother Frank McDonald, who contributed an excellent sermon. Attendance and interest were unusually good. At the same hour the junior meeting in the basement was about the largest we have had. Lantern slides were used in a talk to the children.

In the evening a large crowd came to hear our veteran preacher, Elder J. M. Terry. With all the vigor and power characteristic of earlier years, he discoursed on "The second coming of Christ." The stanch faith, the kindly disposition, and the deep love for all men in this grand old brother, cause the Saints to love and respect him. He is welcomed in our congregation.

Last Sunday the many who came out to the eight o'clock prayer service were given comfort and encouragement. Sunday school was well attended. Four weeks ago a class of young married couples was begun, with three couples present. This has now grown to a membership of thirty. Elder B. C. Sarratt is teacher of this class, on the subject "Financial law."

Elder John Blackmore was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour last Sunday. This day has been looked forward to as Decision Day, and Brother Blackmore reminded the congregation that every day is a decision day in our lives. Sister Gladys Inman and her son, Norman, sang a duet, "Zion."

At two o'clock in the basement of the church the Saints of Enoch Hill and Second Church met together for a baptismal service. There were six members added to the Enoch Hill congregation. Members added to the Second Church Congregation are Fay Murdock, Alvin Madden, Maxine and Norine Lauderback, David and Eleanor Hinsley, Frances Goold, and Rueben Monsees, the last named the husband of Sister Monnie Monsees. The confirmation of these members was attended to following the baptismal service. This was a time when all rejoiced with friends and loved ones of the candidates. Three babies were also blessed at the service.

The subject "Revelation" was presented by Bishop Israel A. Smith Sunday evening to the Saints of Second congregation.

Walnut Park

Decision Day was observed at Walnut Park with an appropriate sermon by the pastor, Elder Samuel C. Smith, and with a baptismal service immediately following. The adults and juniors combined their services for the period of baptism, which took place in the lower auditorium of the church. The young girl who was baptized by Elder John A. Taylor was Margaret Irene Logeman, the daughter of Brother and Sister Ammon Logeman. The Saints of Walnut Park desire to welcome her into fellowship in the church.

The Walnut Park Choir presented a fitting number as part of the worship service with the singing of the anthem "Appear, Thou Light Divine." The choir also rendered a fitting contribution on the previous Sunday, "The King of Love my Shepherd is."

The speaker at the morning service a week ago was the pastor of the Stone Church, Elder John F. Sheehy. Saints of Walnut Park were glad to have him visit the congregation and give them a talk to encourage them to higher endeavors.

During the last three weeks the evening speakers have been Elder John Gardner on the second, Elder James W. Davis on the ninth, and Elder T. A. Beck on the sixteenth.

Enoch Hill

The young people of the branch have recently formed an organization to care for their social and recreational needs. About thirty from this group attended a party held at the home of Verla Alexander on South Spring Street Friday evening. It was in the nature of a Saint Patrick's Day celebration, with appropriate games and refreshments, and was thoroughly enjoyed. The young people's organization is meeting once a month under the leadership of its officers and so far every meeting has been successful in its undertakings.

Elder W. T. Gard from Walnut Park gave a timely sermon at Enoch Hill Sunday morning.

Those from this congregation that were baptized at Second Church Sunday afternoon, were Sadie Maxine Master-son, Norman Russell Jones, Ivan E. Kramer, jr., Myron Craig Warren, Frederick Lee Young, and David Robert Jenkins. Brothers Warren and Martin officiated at this baptism.

In the evening a large crowd assembled at the church to listen to Apostle Paul M. Hanson. The sermon was reported and will appear in our publications.

Pastor O. W. Sarratt has sent out a call for all members of the congregation who can to gather next Saturday afternoon to clean up and beautify the church lawn and to prepare the recreation grounds for use. The gathering Saturday afternoon will be in the nature of a social affair as well as to dispose of the necessary work.

Gudgell Park

The communion service for March was well attended, and a good spirit prevailed to comfort and inspire the membership. The local priesthood were in charge.

The Sunday school continues to make progress. We are striving to make our Sunday school one of the best in Independence.

The speaker for the evening of March 2 was Bishop A. B. Phillips. He made his theme, "The Book of Mormon," very interesting.

The morning speaker March 9 was Elder E. F. Hoisington. The evening sermon was preached by Evangelist U. W. Greene.

Elder J. M. Terry gave a splendid sermon the morning of March 16, and in the evening Patriarch J. H. N. Jones spoke.

There will be no Religio session March 21 because two plays are being presented by the Parent-Teacher Association at the Oldham School Thursday and Friday nights. About half the cast are members of this congregation. The plays are "The road back" and "A visit to the oil regions." Come and enjoy the evenings with us.

Spring Branch

The 8.15 prayer service Sunday morning was well attended, fifty-two being present. Brothers Fish and Miller were in charge.

Brother J. H. Miller was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour.

A meeting of officers and teachers of the Sunday school and church school was held at 6.30 Sunday evening. Many problems confronting the Sunday school were brought up and discussed.

Brother Earl F. Hoisington was the speaker at the eight o'clock hour, his theme being that assigned to all the Sunday evening speakers in Independence, "Revelation."

The recreation and get-together meeting was held at the church Friday evening. A good crowd was present to share in the happy time. One of these meetings is held each month.

Louise, little daughter of Brother and Sister Miller, who live on East Walnut Street, passed away Monday, March 10. Funeral services were held at the home March 11. Brother J. M. Terry preached the sermon. The bereaved family have the deep sympathy of the Saints of this congregation.

Five members were added to our local membership Decision Day. The following were baptized at the Stone Church, Sarah Odham, Vera May Dutton, Lois Marie Hampton, Thomas Junior Peer, and George Barnett. The confirmation will be at Spring Branch Church March 23.

Plymouth, Massachusetts

Red Men's Hall, Middle Street

At the regular business meetings of the branch in 1930 few changes were made. Doris Giovanetti is the new superintendent of the department of religious education, and Elva Buttner is superintendent of the Department of Women, also branch chorister.

The work of the departments is progressing. The women are continuing the study of the Church History, which becomes more interesting as it advances. We wish more might hear of these wonderful things concerning which we read.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is taking up the literature of Queen Elizabeth's time. Social gatherings are held occasionally according to the desires of the group.

District President and Missionary William Patterson was here February 20 to 23 inclusive. His forceful lectures stirred our hearts to a greater determination to "work while it is called today," that we may prepare for the troublous times ahead. We are thankful for the inspiration and encouragement he brings us, and hope he will be returned to this district by the General Conference.

Other visitors to the branch have been W. A. Sinclair and wife, Brother and Sister Foster, M. C. Fisher and wife, and Rebecca Carter, of Somerville. We are few in number here, and these visits mean much to us.

Many Plymouth members attended the district conference in Somerville, and were especially helped by the sermons of Brothers Budd and Patterson. We regret not being able to hear the evening lecture by David Dowker, Somerville's efficient pastor.

Plymouth Saints send greetings to Herald readers, and we desire to keep before us the great objective of the church—the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth.

Topeka, Kansas

621 Jackson Street, Floor 3

March 15.—A Valentine party sponsored by the Department of Recreation and Expression was held at the home of Brother and Sister C. J. Sheets February 14. Games and refreshments were had. Miss Meryl Port won the prize for the most beautiful valentine made from material furnished for a ten-minute contest.

Brother O. E. Weedmark was the speaker the morning of February 16. This was his first attempt at preaching, and he did well. "Honesty" was his theme and he stressed the need for this virtue in dealings with self, friends, state, church, and God. Pastor Phillips's theme in the evening was "Great men."

District President Dave Little returned home Friday, February 21, after a week's illness at the S. B. A. Hospital. Many prayers have been offered for his recovery from a siege of erysipelas, and it is hoped that he will soon be able to assume the many responsibilities which are his.

February 22 was the occasion for a food sale by the Women's Department. More than thirteen dollars was netted. The February social hour was held at the home of Sister John E. Killen. The life and character of Washington were well depicted in the response to roll call by members present. Sister Anna Alfrey had charge of the entertainment.

Priest A. W. Port occupied the stand the morning of February 23. "Zion in the process of fulfillment" claimed his attention. In the evening the pastor spoke on "The way of life." Those who worshipped with us from a distance were Brother and Sister Kelley, a son and wife and youngest son, a former pastor, L. W. Hays, all of Kansas City; and Sister Guilderhause, of Atchison.

The service of sacrament for March was in charge of Brother Phillips assisted by F. O. Kelley and A. W. Port. The spirit of peace and liberty prevailed. Opening remarks were by Brother Kelley.

The evening sermon was by the pastor and was the beginning of a series of sermons on "The kingdom of heaven." Something of its origin, scope, and meaning by a parallel from that of the family, tribe, and state was shown. This effort bespoke an interesting series.

March 9 the morning was occasion for a sermon on "Faith" by F. O. Kelley. O. E. Weedmark spoke in the evening on "Zion."

A Temple Builder group has been organized by Sister Fern Weedmark, superintendent of girls. An impressive initiation service was held the evening of March 2. Sister F. O. Kelley was chosen Temple Builder leader.

An accredited class on "Recreational leadership" is being sponsored by the Department of Recreation and Expression at the regular evening service. Nine members are enrolled in the class, which is to cover a period of twelve weeks. Sister Fern Weedmark has charge of the class.

We are glad to welcome to this local Brother Paul Crum and family, also Sister Beck and family, all of Independence.

Cottage prayer meetings have been held at the homes of O. E. Weedmark, Helen Hays, H. C. Pitsenberger, and Anna Alfrey with good interest.

Under the auspices of the Women's Department a branch supper was held at the home of Brother and Sister C. J. Sheets March 14, proceeds to go to the building fund. Pep songs composed by Fern Weedmark were sung.

Good wishes go with Roy M. Swartz and family to their new home in Portland, Oregon. Though they are not members of the church we have learned to love them for their genial ways and loyal support in our social gatherings. Little Ralph is missed in the cradle roll department.

Sister John Killen is spending most of her time at the bedside of her husband in the Santa Fe Hospital. He is suffering an attack of appendicitis.

The Young Crusaders Class has entered a "World Friendship among Children" project for the cultivation of understanding and good will between the children of the United States and of the Philippine Islands. Along with many other classes of other denominations and organizations, these young people are sending one of the beautiful friendship chests which they and members of the primary department will fill with attractive and inexpensive gifts for the Filipino children. The Crusader Class earned the money with which to buy the chest by making and selling candy. The motto of the project is "We who desire peace must write it in the hearts of the children."

Saint Thomas, Ontario

March 11.—Regular sacramental meeting was held March 2 in charge of Elder James Skelding. It was well attended. The young of the branch were well represented. A goodly portion of God's Spirit prevailed during the meeting.

The young people under the Department of Recreation and Expression met and elected officers: President, William Duncan; vice president, Charles Skelding; secretary, Eva Johnson; assistant secretary, Donald Duncan; treasurer, Emily St. John; organist, Sister Rock; assistant organist, May Johnson; chorister, Sister Preston Ford; assistant chorister, Sister Frank Hitch; librarian, William Burger; teacher, Sister Earl Ford; assistant teacher, William Duncan. After the election of officers, a song service was held. Then lunch was served by the Women's Department. An enjoyable evening was spent.

San Jose, California

Grant Street and Spencer Avenue

Regular meetings have been carried out in San Jose in peace and harmony. The faithful members have continued to show their trustworthiness in service, conducting the meetings, strengthening the weak, and encouraging the downhearted. We are hopeful that some who have grown indifferent and strayed from the shelter of the fold will eventually return to the Master's service.

The pastor is endeavoring to carry out the religious education program of the church in all departments. He has of late organized a class in the study of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants in connection with the Wednesday evening prayer service. The lesson and discussion take the place of the testimony period.

Sister Lizzie Leaman, who had to undergo a very serious operation at the San Joseph Hospital last month, was able a few days ago to return home. She is convalescing nicely. The suregons who did the work permitted our elders to administer to her whenever she requested. She has been wonderfully blessed through administration.

Speakers at the preaching services throughout the month have been of the local ministry: R. E. Cowden, C. J. Cady, Roy Weldon, from Walnut Creek, and Roy E. Harris. All delivered commendable sermons.

San Jose members are expecting one of the Australian elders to preach March 16, as the delegation from Australia passes through on its way to Independence and General Conference.

Saints who visited the district conference at Sacramento, March 8 and 9, reported favorably on the gathering.

NEW YORK AND PHILADELPHIA.—The semiannual district conference convened at Philadelphia February 22 and 23, there being fine attendance of local Saints and seventy-seven visitors. Business session commenced at 6:30 in the evening, District President J. A. Jaques, of Brooklyn, presiding. It was resolved that Apostle R. S. Budd, together with the district presidency, preside over the conference, and that the district secretary act as secretary of the conference. The following minutes and reports were read: Minutes of previous conference held at Scranton October 12, 1929; reports of district president, J. A. Jaques; district missionary, G. W. Robley; Department of Women, Sister H. L. Livingston, superintendent; Department of Recreation and Expression, D. W. Weisen, superintendent; district secretary and treasurer, Isaac T. Jones. The question of dealing with ordinations recommended by branches was discussed. The resolution passed at the Brooklyn conference March, 1929, that "The conference rescind all resolutions on the district minutes on the matter of recommendations for ordinations to the ministry," was considered; and the following recommendation of President F. M. Smith was read and adopted as the voice of the conference: "That the names of persons to be recommended for ordination shall first be presented by the branch president to the district presidency. After the district presidency have obtained the approval of the missionary in charge and the First Presidency, they shall report back to the branch president, and the names shall then be presented to the branch for approval, and then to the district conference for approval." A communication was read from Scranton Branch, asking for the ordination at the conference of John Williams, of Scranton, to the office of deacon, and pointing out that this recommendation had received the approval of the district president and the missionary in charge. It was moved and seconded that this recommendation go through the procedure outlined in the resolution governing ordinations. A substitute was moved and seconded that the recommendation for ordination be approved by this conference. The following amendment to the substitute prevailed: "That we approve the ordination of Brother John Williams to the office of deacon, subject to the approval of the First Presidency." This action was in order, as it was explained that the steps required, prior to the acceptance by the First Presidency, had already been complied with. The election of officers resulted in the following corps being selected: District President, T. J. Elliott, Brooklyn; secretary-treasurer, Isaac T. Jones; superintendent of the Sunday School Department, E. Walter Lewis, Scranton; Department of Recreation and Expression, D. W. Weisen; Department of Women, Sister H. L. Livingston. Jaques, retiring district president, then addressed the assembly, wishing to thank the Saints and his associates for the courtesy and support afforded him in the past, and welcome his successor, T. ## With What Judgment

So quick to judge are we who do not know
 What trials are, what care is, and what woe.
 Too soon we censure, and too quick we praise,
 Before we count the cost, or know the ways.
 Some grow to age and never understand,
 Yet quick are they to take the critic's stand. . . .
 Know him who sorrows when you've sorrow known.
 Reprove the sinner whose trial has been your own.
 Praise one who has attained when you know how and why,
 Because you, too, have had to try . . . .
 Live more, and more we come to know;
 Do more, our understandings with us grow;
 Then when our brother's trials we understand,
 We can reprove, or take him by the hand.

—Cloe M. Hanthorne.

Historical Program for April

For Local Branches

Subject: The Organization of the Church

This program celebrates the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the church. It is fitting that the local congregations should take recognition of such a very important anniversary. They may, however, select their date to do so at a time calculated not to interfere with attendance at the General Conference.

Program

Opening song.

Prayer: Thanksgiving for the restoration of the church.

Reading: Joseph Smith's account of the organization of the church, from Church History, vol. 1, pp. 76, 77.

Song: "The angel message," Zion's Praises, 206.

Ten-minute address: Events surrounding the organization of the church. (May be illustrated with slides.)

One-act play: "The church is organized." Text to this play may be found in Vision for April, under the title, "Conversations."

Prayer: For divine blessing to be upon the general church during 1930.

Short sermon. "Upon this rock I will build my church."

Closing song: "In the light," Hymnal, 182.

Prayer: For divine direction and blessing to be upon the local church during 1930.

Local workers are urged to give careful attention to the working out of this program. Enlist the help of your young people. Encourage all to study the church history. Know your own church. Invite nonmembers to be present, that they may know our church history.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Bargainers Beware!

No religion of great vitality can be builded upon a policy of mere abstinence from some thing or things. The need and the demand today is for aggressiveness in religion, for goodness that consists of nobility of action, for an affirmative and a conquering righteousness! These statements seem almost platitudes, yet we have not taken them earnestly enough to heart.

There have been and perhaps still are sects whose major emphasis seems to be upon this "abstaining" principle; absence of the cardinal sins might seem to be taken as the principal indication of godliness. In our own church we often make a great deal of the admonition to "keep thyself unspotted from the world." But we must not forget that we are charged to be "in the world" and a light to the world even if we are not "of the world." I take it that the best way to keep ourselves unspotted from sin is to dye ourselves in righteous activity! Merely to keep ourselves from sin will never build the kingdom or anything else; we must spend ourselves in doing the things that will bring the kingdom.

Writing in the Christian Century some time ago, Rienhold Niebuhr expressed a thought that applies here:

As a matter of fact the noblest action is usually the most practical in the long run. But the immediate sacrifice which it demands is usually so great that we can not depend upon the shrewd and reasonable people to initiate it. The cost is always too great to make its appeal to bargainers. Therefore, most of the world lives out its life in a tepid respectability which avoids both the bad bargains of flagrant dishonesty and the risks of moral adventure.

Tepid is just another word for lukewarm, and the latter is the word John the Revelator used when he delivered a message to the Laodicean saints: "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold or hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth."

As we sing, "Keep us from the stain of sin," let us also pray that we might be preserved from tepid respectability, from lukewarm Christianity. Let us aspire to that warmth of spirit, that fire of virtue, which was in Christ Jesus.

The Lord's Supper and Oblation

The near approach of the Centennial Conference makes us aware that the opening day, April 6, commemorates the organization of the church a century ago, and that the fact of organization was solemnized by the communion service held at that time. It is a happy coincidence that April 6 this year comes on Sunday. In commemoration of the great sacrifice made by Christ himself by which the gospel was brought to rich and poor alike, and also of the organization of the church, two communion services are being planned for those who attend the conference in Independence.

The Saints who remain in their branches are requested to join with the Saints in Zion by planning their communion services with due appreciation of the solemnity of the sacramental service, and the significance of it to the church at this century turning point. The purification of the soul which comes to those who partake of the emblems worthily should be emphasized.

It should be remembered that the sacrificial offerings freely given by the Saints on such occasions are for the benefit of those who are poor and in need, and should measure our interest in our brother's welfare. The bishops and their representatives in the stakes and districts throughout the church are increasingly in need of funds to provide material relief for those who are temporarily in need of such assistance.

The oblation is used for this purpose. This year when the church celebrates the one hundredth anniversary of its organization by bringing together the largest number of Latter Day Saints ever assembled in the history of the Reorganization, the gratitude of the Saints at the conference and all those who remain at home may well be measured in a loyal response to the bishop's call for a centennial oblation. Let everyone respond. Giving helps the giver, and the fund thus placed in the bishop's hands will help those who need temporary relief.

If the Saints will support the oblation at this service it will enable the Bishopric to answer promptly many requests for help which otherwise must be delayed or possibly denied for lack of funds.

On the occasion of the communion services on April 6, the Saints may well engage in it with thanksgiving that the mercy and blessings of God have followed the church through the century, with the result that it has constantly extended its borders and increased its usefulness through the principles of the restored gospel. Therefore, let the Saints engage in this Centennial Communion Service with sincerity of purpose, that their spiritual power may be quickened and increased to the maximum of usefulness. Such spiritual power can be experienced only when expressed in terms of personal service in the various activities of the church. Let all Saints support the oblation. Branch presidents and local authorities are asked to plan their respective communion services in harmony with these suggestions.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,

By F. M. McDowell.

A Bombing Outrage in Independence

Monday's Kansas City papers were filled with accounts of the various aspects of the kidnaping of "Mike" Katz, a prominent merchant of Kansas City, Missouri, and the extortion from his company of $100,000. The feeling of the community, and Independence is essentially a part of Greater Kansas City, ran high, and apprehension for the safety of the citizen prevailed with many.

Independence has been engaged in building and remodeling several business places of recent months, and there has been generated during this building, considerable ill feeling because of union labor's seeking to control the building activities, in some of its branches.

One of the recent buildings, completed late in February, was that of Jesse L. Martin, designed to be the home of the Martin-Welch Hardware Company, a short half block north of the courthouse square, on Liberty Street. Only a couple of weeks have passed since the company moved in with a large line of general and builders' hardware.

Early in the morning of March 25, between half past one and two o'clock, a severe explosion awakened many citizens of Independence. Glass in the buildings near was broken, and some of the guests of the hotel across the street were rudely awakened by showers of falling glass in their rooms.

Some high explosive had been planted in the front entrance to the new Martin Building, wrecking its front and causing large damage to it in particular. Neighboring buildings were also damaged.

I have no quarrel with union labor as to the necessity for organization. I believe in labor's rights. I feel sure labor's contention that its members and its organizations are often unjustly treated by organized and by private capital are not without foundation. In fact, I believe that labor is often compelled to organize in order to preserve the necessities of tranquil life, and it has as much right and as great necessity to organize as has capital.

The perpetrators of this outrage in Independence have not been apprehended. No labor fanatic may have been guilty of this nefarious deed. But feeling at present runs high, and the just cause of labor suffers because this has happened. It would be well for Saints and all good citizens to reserve judgment and not condemn either organization or person without sufficient evidence.

Of one thing there is no doubt: The deed is an outrage and a challenge to good citizenship. Do not permit this view to dwindle or become moderated, but reserve judgment of guilt upon individual and organization until such time as evidence appears conclusive.

We can well remember that anarchy (and this deed was anarchistic) is sure to be more damaging to its perpetrators in the recoil, than was the anarchistic deed of its hand to the intended victim.

Looking at Accomplishments

Two men went to see a house that was under construction. One observed the fine design, the strong materials, and the excellent construction. He saw that people would some day be proud to live in that house, and that, with fitting decoration and gardening, the place would be beautiful.

The other made a sour face, remarked about the unfinished plastering and painting, and complained about the weeds, sticks, and rocks in the yard. His viewpoint was entirely different from that of his companion.

It is so with the church. Some people are able to see the accomplishments in terms of their completed usefulness and beauty. Others see only the uncompleted tasks and foolishly consider them impossible.

The church that has completed its tasks and accomplished its goals is a dead church. It has outlived its usefulness. There are many such churches in America. They do not reach out to youth, they offer no program, they perform no really important service. Their members sit with blind eyes awaiting that decay which will destroy them.

It is important to notice and rejoice at the number that have been brought to Christ, not to wail over the comparatively small number by which we fall short of the goal.

People who never fail of their desires often have cheap ideals and insignificant goals. Ultimately, we have the greatest goal possible, as any other worth-while organization does. Our field is the whole world, the objects of our efforts are all humanity; our scope is the entire range of human existence. Nothing less!

May we be delivered from narrowness, from pettiness, and from carping criticism. Let us look at the accomplishments.

President Smith and Australians Exchange Greetings

During President Frederick M. Smith's visit to Hawaii last November he addressed a letter of greeting to Australasian Saints from which the following passage is extracted:

The signs of the times clearly point to the hastening time being upon us, and that of necessity brings greater tasks and responsibilities. Individually and collectively we must more keenly sense the unfinished work of the church and be more active in the work of the church and in preparation for the still greater tasks which will surely follow. Zion is strongly and attractively beckoning us, and we should be stimulated towards greater effort and deeper devotion.

The fine spirit of consecration to the work of the church and willingness to sacrifice for the cause which is steadily spreading throughout the membership, hold fine promise that we may soon see the fulfillment of some long-deferred hopes. This spirit of consecration has enveloped in its folds the missionary work, and we confidently expect that as it continues and grows, the augmentation of members will go on apace.

May the Saints in Australasia be caught up in the forward and upward moving spirit, and may the members of the priesthood be studious, alert, active, and unreservedly consecrated and devoted to the tasks of the church.

This message was transmitted to the Saints through Elder W. J. Haworth, who wrote President Smith on January 7 that each member present on Tiona reunion grounds had been given a card containing the message, and that it had been read to the conference.

The reunion press committee were instructed to formulate a fitting reply to the President. From their reply are taken these passages:

We can assure you of the loyalty of the Latter Day Saints of Australasia as a body. We have as good Saints here as exist anywhere in the world. The pursuit of the policy and purposes of the church by the ministry and membership of this portion of the world has not been in vain. We have not only built up a fine body of members by our missionary efforts, but have also erected a high moral and spiritual standard by which to direct their various activities. The old and middle-aged people are slowly but surely passing, but a fine body of young people are preparing to take their places.

With prayers for your peace and progress and the blessings of God on the coming Centennial General Conference, we are your brethren in Christ.

The arrival of a delegation to the Centennial Conference from Australia occurred Thursday morning. A group of Independence Saints went to Kansas City to meet the Saints from a foreign land and the returning missionary.

W. J. Haworth and wife, H. I. Velt and wife, A. C. Barmore, returning missionary, and his wife who is an Australian, Colin Ferrett, Elvie Cuthbert, Flora Delofski, Walter Johnson, Geoff Gillard, Sister Kennedy, Sister Watson and her daughter Ethel, Sister Elliott, Sister George Lewis comprised the party. In another column more extended details of this delegation may be read.

THE ELDER JOHN HOWARD STORIES

XXIX. When Brother Fred A. Read His Sermon

The services of the day were over in the big reunion tent. As Elder John Howard stood in its shadow, the evening stars were coming out one by one and a new moon was just rising in the soft sky of the summer night. Behind him lay the tented city, more than two hundred tents, some in shadow, some in moonlight. Before him on a slope of the hill he could see a great mass of humanity, and presently from their midst shot up a pillar of smoke and fire. It was Friday night, and the Saints of the Lamoni reunion were having their Friday night camp-fire meeting and general good time.

Elder Howard joined the throng. Young people were darting out and in, arming themselves with long, slender willow wands on the sharpened ends of which they would impale marshmallows and then toast them by the fire, which was beginning to develop a bed of coals. One, then another, would stop long enough to say to him, "Brother Howard, have a marshmallow," until he was well "fed up" on the sweets. "Sweetened air, toasted brown," he had said—yet they were filling, if one took enough of them.

The feast over, some one started an old-time song, and soon the volume of vocal music was rolling up over "Zion's Hill" to the stars. And after that Apostle John F. Garver took charge and announced that there would be stories of missionary experiences. He called upon this one and that one for experiences in missionary work; "Heman C. Smith, John W. Wight, Richard S. Salyards, Martin M. Turpin, Leonard G. Holloway, they followed each other in more or less rapid succession. Some of the stories were funny; some of them were serious. Some of them John Howard thought would fit into a modern "Book of the Acts of the Apostles."

Finally the master of ceremonies called upon Evangelist Frederick A. Smith. Brother Smith came into the circle of light in which the speakers stood. He took his stand bareheaded, and in characteristic attitude, legs well apart and feet toeing well out. Unconsciously John Howard tried to spread his feet out that way, but found that it could not be done. Then he smiled at the unconscious trick of imitation and gave his attention to the speaker, who seemed to be in a thoughtful mood, as most of his auditors seemed now to be, the hilarity of the evening having spent itself. He began: "I have heard a great deal of advice to the ministry about making preparation for service. That is a good thing to do, and I have no objection to it. But sometimes one is placed in those peculiar situations where he can not make preparation. I will tell you about such an experience and how the Lord came to my rescue at that time:

"In the early nineties I was running a flour mill in one of our western cities. The General Conference sent a man out there to set the branch in that city in order, and in the course of his work I was chosen to preside over the branch and was ordained a priest. For some time I got along very nicely, as I had some one to call on to do the preaching for us; but the time came when we were left to ourselves, and I had to do my share of the preaching. It was on one of these occasions that I had this experience.

"I knew I was expected to preach the coming Sunday night, so made up my mind that I would read up and make some preparation. But to my disappointment, it seemed that everything went wrong at the mill all that week. I was kept at the mill late every night, and one night stayed all night. I was perplexed in mind and worn out in body when Saturday came, and, to add to my discomfiture, the manager came to me Saturday afternoon and said: We are so far behind on our contract (a Government contract) that if we can get the men to work it will be necessary to run the mill Sunday. I was as well aware of the condition as the manager, and knew we were in danger of losing heavily if we did not get our contract out on time; so I spoke to the men and they consented to work, and I was elected to work during the day Sunday. My last hope of a chance to read vanished. I worked Sunday until half past five in the evening, when I shut the mill down, went home, and got ready for church. I was weary in body and mind, and the burden of preaching rested very heavily on me. It seemed almost more than I could do; but I decided, as God had called me, I would place my whole trust in him and make the effort. I would try, anyway.

"When I got ready to go I found I had about fifteen minutes to wait till time for the car, so took up my Bible and tried to read, but I was not out of my trouble yet; nature demanded rest, and before I would read to the end of a line I would be nodding and so near asleep I could not tell the last words of the line. Of course this worried me; and my courage nearly failed me. My wife, seeing my condition (true helpmeet as she has always been), came up behind me and, slipping one arm around my neck, leaned over me and whispered a few words of encouragement that braced me up again, and I arose and started for the church. As I passed out I noticed the coal house door stood open and thought I would stop and close it. As I did so I was

WORLD'S AFFAIRS

Danger in Foolish Sentimentalism

Sentimental folly seems to be reaching a climax in this country. Everywhere it is the favorite sport of all sorts and conditions of people, from the lower extremity of bondsmen and shyster lawyers to the upper extremity of kind-hearted but uninformed church people, to protect the criminal at all costs. All the sympathy goes to the apprehended law-breaker. Nobody, among these interferers, seems to be interested in the victims of the criminal. Widows and orphans, the maimed, the robbed, and other sufferers are all forgotten, while every effort is made to help the criminal escape a just punishment.

It is well to let justice be tempered with mercy, but let mercy be restrained by common sense.

The Poor Boys

to my surprise I discovered that it had been forty-five minutes since the cards first appeared till they disappeared. Then I looked at my audience, and for the first time discovered that they were all in tears. It was then that it burst into my mind like a flash from an electric searchlight what had been done for me and that congregation, and I stammered out a few closing remarks and sat down, and gave way to my feelings in a flood of tears of joy and thankfulness.

"When the service was over I left that house strengthened in body, in mind, and in faith, and never felt more rested in my life."

The camp-fire had burned low before the speaker finished. A hush had fallen upon the audience. Even the evening breezes seemed to be stilled. Then some one began the hymn, "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning." Apostle Garver closed the meeting with such a prayer as he could offer under such a spirit. Even "good nights" were said low-toned, and the camp of Israel went to its rest, again impressed with the fact that God did not deign to work miraculously alone in the past or in the dim future but equally today.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

(Note.—The incident narrated in the above story is set down, verbatim, in the words of Evangelist Frederick A. Smith.)

prompted to step inside and pray. I knelt down in that dark little coal house and offered a very fervent appeal to God for help, then arose and went on my way. On the car I took out my little Bible and, finding a chapter that suited me, I decided to read it and make such comments as I could. When I arrived at the church my courage got another jolt: the house was full—I had not seen so many there for a long time. I hunted up one of the brothers (a deacon) to open the meeting, and we went onto the platform. As I looked over that audience my throat got dry, and it seemed to me that I never would be able to speak again; my knees were inclined to bump together, and it did not seem that I had strength to stand up.

"The opening exercises were very short (so it seemed to me), and the time had come for me to get up and go to work. I steadied myself by the pulpit and read the chapter I had picked out on the car. One verse struck me as being extra good, so I read it again and began to talk about it, when my attention was called to the clock and I noticed the hour. Suddenly the feeling of fear and weakness seemed to be lifted, and I felt perfectly free. My attention was now called to the west side of the building, and to my surprise a part of the roof and the top of the wall seemed to be entirely gone, and I could see the stars as clear and bright as I ever saw them. I had only time to note these things when I saw what appeared to be white cards about two feet long and about eight inches wide. I could see several coming, one behind the other with the face up. When the first one got into the opening in the building it turned down with the face of the card toward me, and I was able to read what was on it, for it had sentences on it in clear, bright, black type. I read it aloud and as I finished, it turned and disappeared. The next one dropped into its place and I continued to read; and as fast as I would read what was on them they would turn and disappear. After a little while (it did not seem like ten minutes to me) I saw there were only three in sight and no more coming. I read the last one and it disappeared, and I was through. The house assumed its natural condition, and I came down to the floor again, for during this time it had seemed to me that I was not standing on the floor, but standing in the air. There was a sense of lightness and freedom that is beyond my power to express in words. But as I said, I soon found myself standing on the floor and before that audience.

"Then there came over me (for a moment only) a feeling of loneliness that I can not describe, and I thought for the moment that I had made a dismal failure, that I had not talked ten minutes, when at this point I was prompted to look at the clock, and tion of boys which draws its membership from Chicago.

The Kansas City Times (the morning Kansas City Star) has this to say editorially about this move:

"... that Doctor Cook should be made a life director of a boys' organization and established as a leader of youth on the ground that 'he has not had a square deal' is one of those developments that could come perhaps only in America with its occasional and most peculiar sentimentalism."

The Times goes on to point out that he was "charged with fraud on a large scale in the promotion of oil schemes" and convicted after a fair trial; that his claim that he climbed Mount McKinley "has been definitely disproved," and that there is overwhelming evidence against his assertion that he discovered the North Pole.

Is He Normal?

A man may go wrong once and recover. When he goes wrong three times, his recovery is doubtful. Doctor Cook is to be pitied, and not to be trusted. His case is a tragedy. His brilliant mind is coupled with a defective moral sense and an inability to foresee the consequences of wrongdoing. It is probable that he suffers from psychopathic conditions of some kind.

"Don't kick a man when he is down," cry the sentimentalists. "Give the underdog a chance." What about giving the victims a chance for a while?

In the Meantime

A large group of boys are growing up under the shadow and inspiration of a career thrice blighted. Is there not danger that the taint of character which is destroying the man will spread to the boys? Is this the way to protect them?

Other positions, other work could be found for Doctor Cook. He should not be unhappy. He should be given a chance. But it is putting temptation in the way of the weak to put a paroled thief to work in a bank, or a convicted swindler to molding human character.

Sister James McPhee, renewing her Herald subscription from Sault Sainte Marie, Ontario, writes of the value of the church papers to her and her loved ones and acquaintances. She adds: "A neighbor of ours was baptized last May, converted by reading the Herald. He asked for baptism before he heard a sermon, and the first elder he met was the one who came to baptize him. I hope that through the Ensigns I have sent to others many more will be led to accept the gospel."

Centennial Conference

Advance Registration

As announced in the Saints' Herald for March 5, 12, and 19, it will greatly expedite the work of registration if those coming from a distance will register in advance. Up to Monday, March 24, over six hundred registrations have been received by mail. In six hours on Sunday afternoon, March 23, 854 members in Independence registered for the conference, and in Kansas City the total registration was 188 for the day. Favorable comment on the registration plan by those who visited the Auditorium Sunday was practically unanimous. The response of so large a number on the first day is ample proof that this plan is considered the most equitable, efficient, and businesslike way by which to finance the conference.

Reception Committee

On arrival at the conference, delegates and visitors should avail themselves of the services of the reception committee, who will see that they are directed to the homes where they are to stay. If there is any special reason for anyone to be met at the train, either in Kansas City or in Independence, word should be sent to the reception committee at once. Give full information, so that the special messengers sent to the trains may identify them without difficulty.

Transportation Committee

Those who are coming by train should read carefully the instructions of the Transportation Committee published in the Saints' Herald for January 22, page 86; February 26, pages 243 and 263; March 12, pages 298 and 325.

Registration Committee

The Registration and Credentials Committee will have quarters in the front lobby at the Auditorium. This committee will be on duty on and after April 4. It should be the first duty of those who attend the conference to register and get their room assignments from the Committee on Accommodations and Reservations.

Mail

Mail for those attending the conference should be directed in care of the Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. A distributing station for all mail thus addressed will be located in the lobby of the Auditorium, and you will receive your mail more promptly if this suggestion is followed than if it be sent to the residence where you plan to stay. There will be four deliveries of conference mail to the Auditorium each day.

Telegraph Service

A telegraph substation with a direct wire to the Kansas City main office will be installed at the Auditorium by the Western Union Telegraph Company, and telegrams for conference visitors may be addressed in care of the Auditorium, which will insure prompt delivery. Telegrams will also be received by this substation and sent direct, which will effect quite a saving in time as well as afford a great convenience to the conference.

Telephone Service

Telephone booths for local and long-distance calls will be installed at the Auditorium by the Southwest Bell Telephone Company for the convenience of the conference. This service will be on separate lines from the regular PBX service, so that the switchboard trunk lines in the building may be relieved of the extra traffic.

First-Aid Room

The Independence Sanitarium has been given one of the rooms in the southeast corner of the building off the second corridor, which will be equipped for a first-aid room where a trained nurse will be in constant attendance. This arrangement will take care of any cases of emergency illness.

Administration Committee

There may be some at the conference who will desire the services of the Administration Committee. The Order of Evangelists has been asked to act as this committee and will invite others of the ministry to assist them as may be necessary. Their headquarters will be in the L. D. S. studio at the north of the main auditorium in the Stone Church.

Guest Room

A guest room for those who desire quiet and relaxation between services will be located in the dining hall north of the Stone Church. It will be in charge of the Tuesday Club, and Mother's Club, a group of Independence young matrons who have assumed the responsibility of equipping it as a lounge room for the comfort and convenience of conference visitors. A trained nurse will be in attendance.

Meal Service

Meals will be served cafeteria style at reasonable prices in the basement of the Auditorium. A lunch room will be installed in the northeast corner of the building at the left of the main lobby where it was located during the last conference. This arangement is for those who desire quicker service than it will be possible to give in the main dining room. The Laurel Club of Independence has undertaken to manage the meal service for the conference and is organizing a force to handle the expected crowds in the most efficient manner possible.

Information Booth

Competent attendants will be in charge of the Information Booth, which will be maintained in the main lobby of the Auditorium day and night during the conference, so that visitors may receive every courtesy and their requests for information concerning any feature of the conference or about Independence or Kansas City may be promptly and accurately answered.

Exhibits

Practically all of the institutions and departments of the church will be represented by exhibits and displays of materials. Spare time between services may be spent profitably in these display booths where the heads of the institutions and departments or their representatives will be constantly on duty to furnish information and to explain their work.

Official Conference Program

The official conference program of 68 pages has been liberally patronized by the business men of Independence, who have bought advertising space. Practically all lines of business are represented. Conference visitors are invited to give these firms consideration when shopping in Independence. The program will carry in detail the full schedule of all meetings, programs, and class work held in the Auditorium, the Stone Church, Memorial Hall, and other local churches in Independence. Special mention will be made of the evening programs at the Auditorium. For the convenience of the conference visitors the entire program for each day has been grouped under the various dates, so that a careful selection of classes, services, or programs may be made in advance. The following program will be carried out on the opening day of conference.

The Centennial Institute

Conditions of Class Work

It is to be supposed that those who attend classes are earnestly seeking preparation for a better service in the church. Those who expect credit should pay the enrollment fee, secure the outlines available, and attend classes regularly. The student will keep his own attendance record and must return the record card to the institute desk before leaving conference.

How to Enroll

On arrival at the Auditorium April 4 and following, call at the Institute desk and secure a class folder and enrollment card.

Select courses with care. Fill out both attendance card and enrollment card. Return the enrollment card to the desk by Tuesday noon, April 8. The enrollment fee of fifty cents should be paid at that time. This payment entitles the student to obtain outlines and credit in courses pursued.

Students not enrolled by 7.30 Monday morning, April 7, should attend classes and make enrollment at the earliest opportunity thereafter.

Choosing Courses

Choice of classes in the Institute should be based upon the following considerations:

1. Care should be taken to avoid repeating courses which appear to be identical with courses previously carried for credit.

2. Each student would do well to select one class which he feels he needs for personal self-improvement.

3. Each should select one or more classes which

Graceland Alumni to Organize

Graceland alumni and former students are looking forward to an organization meeting which is to be held immediately following the Graceland program on the evening of April 11 in the Auditorium as a time when a permanent organization will be effected.

It is the object of this organization through publications and news letters to keep all former students of Graceland advised of the activities of the various alumni and the progress that is being made on the Hill. Every individual who has lived on Graceland's campus will always be a part of Graceland College and should have a part in the establishment of the policies and programs of the institution. Graceland needs a strong, vital organization of former students, and these students in turn need to keep in contact with Graceland.

DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS.

he feels he needs in preparation for the special service he wishes to render the church.

4. Each should keep in mind the needs of his branch and the service he may be called upon to render upon his return.

5. Two or more workers coming from the same branch should distribute their choices of subjects so as to carry back to their branch the greatest amount of good from the Institute.

6. It would be unfortunate if the choices of classes should pile up around a few most popular subjects. Those in charge of the Institute reserve the right to restrict the enrollment in any particular class to the number which may be accommodated. Early enrollments will receive first assignments.

7. Students should plan to attend classes regularly and avoid shifting from class to class. No change in the enrollment should be made without consulting those in charge of the Institute.

The Book of Mormon

By S. A. Burgess

A BRIEF NOTATION ON ITS EDITIONS

Librarians are much interested not only in single books but in how many editions and in the contents of each edition. Of course when a book is reprinted from the same plates, there is no material change except in title-page. Historically it is often important to know just how a book was printed at a certain date.

For example, the Kirtland edition of the Evening and the Morning Star is not exactly a reprint. It is in smaller type, much smaller pages. Sometimes things are omitted, others are changed, and still others added. It is really a revision and is of great interest in showing the views held by the church at the time of this reprint.

The work of translation on the Book of Mormon was completed in June, 1829. Oliver Cowdery made a complete second copy, and beginning in August, certain portions of this manuscript were taken to the printer, E. B. Grandin, and the work completed in March, 1830. This is the first edition of the Book of Mormon.

We may add here that of these two complete manuscripts, one was kept by Joseph Smith, jr., the other by Oliver Cowdery. The first was placed in the corner stone of the Nauvoo House. That building was never completed, but was only carried up to the second story window sills, and so remained for several decades. Later Major Lewis Bidamon took down the two wings and completed the southwest corner of the original and also built a stone office at the northwest corner. In tearing down this wall the corner stone was exposed. He divided this manuscript and sent part to our late President, Joseph Smith, and part to Joseph Fielding Smith. That which was received by our late President, because of water and weather, very soon fell to pieces. We have every reason to believe that the same occurred with the sheets sent to Utah, but they have preserved one page and have placed it between glass for preservation and safety in handling.

The other manuscript was handed over to Oliver Cowdery, and at his death it passed into the hands of David Whitmer, who cared for it carefully for the next thirty-eight years. This copy evidently consisted of about two thirds of the original which was preserved, and one third of the manuscript which was sent to the printer. This manuscript was deeded by the widow of David Whitmer, and his sister, to George W. Schweich, grandson of David Whitmer, and this manuscript together with John Whitmer's history, and a third copy of some parts of the Inspired Version and the manuscript of part of the early revelations was turned over in April, 1903, by G. W. Schweich to Joseph Smith, late President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and is still in the possession of the church.

As we have now reached the 100th anniversary of the first edition of the Book of Mormon, it may be interesting to our readers to know something about the number of times it has been printed and in what languages.

In 1837 Oliver Cowdery printed an edition in Kirtland; then in 1840 plates were prepared at Cincinnati, Ohio; and the third American edition was printed in Nauvoo. From these plates Joseph Smith printed a fourth edition in 1842. This edition is very rare. It is unique in being the only one which omits the word Junior or an abbreviation of that word after "Joseph Smith." Joseph Smith, sr., had passed away in 1841. It is also the only edition that is presented as printed by Joseph Smith.

In the meantime the first European edition was printed in Liverpool in 1841; the second in 1849. Then stereotyped plates were prepared, and successive editions were published, one in 1852, two in 1854, and a sixth edition in 1866. In fact, several editions were published in England from these same plates after 1866.

Then in 1858 J. O. Wright, in New York, offered an edition. The original copyright had then run out, and evidently it was not renewed. This Wright edition appears to have been purely a business venture, and not on behalf of any church. Elder Z. Brooks, of Kirtland, with the financial backing of Russell Huntley, bought the Wright plates and brought out an edition between 1859-61—the Brooks-Huntley Edition. This was used in the early Reorganization, and there are a number of copies still preserved in families of old Latter Day Saints.

In 1874 the Reorganized Church had plates prepared and published an edition at Plano. Several editions were printed from these same plates at Plano and then at Lamoni. We have the anomaly of a title-page bearing the words "Lamoni, Iowa, 1874," while it is evident that an edition was not published in Lamoni before 1882. These same plates were used until the Authorized Version was brought out in 1908. We possess a number of copies in our library up to and including the thirty-third edition of 1907. It is quite possible, however, that this represented the twenty-third edition from these plates, and that the earlier editions had been counted to make a total of thirty-three.

In 1892 the Book of Mormon was published in Lamoni, Iowa, in large type. Several editions have been published from these same plates, including the thirteenth edition, of 1916.

As stated above, the Reorganized Church received the original manuscript in 1903; a committee was appointed and careful examination and comparison made. As a result, a new edition was carefully prepared and compared with the original, and published in 1908, and called the Authorized Edition. We have copies of at least five or six editions off these plates printed in Lamoni from 1908 to 1918 and four published in Independence bearing dates from 1921 to 1926.

The Church of Christ (Whitmerite) published the "Nephite Record" in 1899.

The Church in Utah, in addition to several European editions from 1866 on, also published from these same plates of 1852 editions in Salt Lake City 1871, 1874, and 1877.

In 1879 Orson Pratt prepared a new edition, with footnotes, divided into chapters and short verses. These were electroplated, and at least eleven different editions were printed from them in England, including that of 1912. From the same plates, editions were published in Utah, beginning in 1881 and down to 1918. We appear to have at least eleven editions listed as published in Salt Lake.

A pulpit edition was published in Salt Lake City in 1888 in large type, and a pocket edition in 1906.

In Chicago a mission edition was published in 1905. There were at least five or six editions published there, probably about 70,000 copies in all. In 1913, from the same plates, the first edition was published in Independence. There were published eight editions in Independence, some 115,000 copies. The same plates were used for the first four editions; then new plates were prepared and used for the fifth to eighth Independence editions. There were at least two editions published in Kansas City, 1902 and 1905.

The original copyright of 1879 edition could run twenty-eight years and be renewed for fourteen years, so would have expired in 1921. Under President Heber O. Grant a new edition was put out in 1920 and copyrighted. It was printed from new plates, made at Hammond, Indiana. It includes a brief analysis of the Book of Mormon, a statement of its origin, and a synopsis of the chapters and pronouncing vocabulary, an index and new footnotes. At least five editions, and possibly seven, have been printed from these plates.

It would seem a conservative estimate to suggest that at least a million copies of this book have been printed in English. The Utah Church claims a distribution of 100,000 for the past year alone. So their figures would probably much exceed a million. It has been printed also in Deseret type; that is, in the thirty-eight phonetic characters adopted nearly sixty years ago by Deseret University. This was printed in New York City in 1869.

But more interesting to our readers is the fact that this book has been printed in fourteen different languages other than English. Arranged alphabetically, they are Danish (1851), with at least three reprints; also Peter Anderson and Peter Muecus prepared an edition, published by the Reorganization in 1903; Dutch (1890 and 1909); French, two editions both published in 1852; German 1852, and seven other editions have been printed since; also the Reorganized Church printed in 1911 a translation by Alex Kippe; Hawaiian, the first edition in 1855 and a second in 1905. In 1898 our church published a new translation made by J. M. Poepoe and G. M. Kameakua under the direction of Elder G. J. Waller; Italian, 1852; Japanese, 1909; Maori 1889, 1908; Samoan 1903. In 1875 some selections were made from the Book of Mormon and published in Spanish. The book itself was printed in this language in 1886 and again in 1920. It was printed in Swedish in 1878 and 1907; Tahitian 1904; and Turkish in Armenian characters 1906; Welsh, 1851.

In our library, quite largely through the efforts of Walter W. Smith, we possess the four first American editions, also the first six European editions; five electrotyped editions, including 1, 3, 4, and 5 as printed in Liverpool; seventeen editions published in Salt Lake City in the regular type, one published in Kansas City, one pocket edition, one large edition, both printed in Salt Lake City, both the Wright and the Brooks-Huntley editions, the Nephite Record published by the Whitmerites, five editions published by the Utah Church in Chicago, and all eight editions published by them in Independence.

We have two large-type editions published at Lamoni, several editions of the Authorized edition, and five or six of the early 1874-1907 edition.

We also have a Deseret Cipher Book of Mormon and books in the following languages, Armenian, Japanese, Danish, both 1858 and 1903 edition; French, four copies in German, 1852 to 1902; also that prepared by Elder Alex Kippe, Spanish, Swedish, Welsh, Hawaiian 1898; Tahitian and Dutch.

As the first century closes, we can not say with certainty exactly how many copies have been printed, but the number would exceed one million. Of less importance is the fact that we have in the Historical Collection at the Library Building some seventy-six different editions, including sixteen editions in eleven different foreign languages. More important is the serious study given the book for the past forty-five years by our young people and the testimonies received of its Truth.

Increasing Importance of Mental Hygiene.—

Chapter 10

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

"Every man his own neurologist" is an ill-advised slogan, but it is possible to make the visits to the nerve specialist less frequent, or entirely unnecessary, if one has been prone to excitability, nerve tension, fatigue, mental cowardice, and similar manifestations of ill health of the nervous system. Physicians these days are called on, not to treat specific diseases alone, but the whole patient, and his mental state. The attitude of the medical profession on this very point is being stressed these days; namely, that if there is general fatigue, lack of life interest, worry and fear, and a chronic state of the blues, there is needed more than the administration of medicine. The consciousness of power is not acquired by simply taking tonics for the nerves, of which there are many on the market.

Mental Tone and Physical Health

Mental tone is a solid pillar of good health, and "the city of happiness is in the state of mind." Indeed, one who really lives, knows that "his mind to him a kingdom is, such perfect joy he finds therein," rather than boredom, irritability, and neurotic impulses which make others around, as well as the sufferer, unhappy. There is not a person who is immune to depression of spirits, but when this condition becomes chronic, it is a danger signal. The department of the interior, or the realm of the intellect, ought to be controlled by its boss; but frequently we are victims of our mental states. "As we think in our own hearts, so are we." Melancholy moods point to fatigue, poisons, lack of sleep, and excesses of various types.

Nervous health, or tone, represents a general state of vigor. It is a condition that is maintained by radiations from the spinal cord through the nerves from the various parts of the body, and also is due to the stimulus from the brain. Cheerful hopes and firm resolves and fine interests will restore tone at once. On the other hand, a bad meal will upset one, as will a bad piece of news. There is reciprocal action, and it therefore devolves on the will to maintain tone, in spite of everything.

Every part of the nervous system makes itself felt on the other parts, and, while the mind is supreme, the subordinate members ought to be given their chance to cooperate to the common end of happiness by not being abused by lack of sleep, poor meals, overexertion, or intemperance. Irritability, then, will not occur, with a chain of aggravated symptoms ending in convulsions and spasmodic movements on the slightest irritation.

All this is part of mental hygiene, and mutual action takes place with the rest of the bodily functions in the interplay of powers in the republic of the inner man or woman, mental and physical. So much is this point of view established in modern medicine, that the physician knows he is not dealing with a symptom in treating a case, but must treat the whole person, even to advising in personal matters, such as occupation, etc., if this concerns general health, especially of the nervous system.

The Workers Are the Happy Class

Some one has happily defined happiness as the result of harmonious powers, steadily bent on pursuits which seek a worthy end. It is not the lazy man's dower; not the sensualist's privilege. It is reserved for the worker, and can never be grasped and held save by true manhood and womanhood.

A great deal of the unhappiness in the world is caused by want of proper occupation. The mind is incessantly active, and if it is not occupied with something more worthy, it will prey upon itself. It is one of the greatest misfortunes in life to be without a purpose; to drift hither and thither, at the mercy of every whim and impulse, losing health and vigor. A noble purpose is the cure for such disorders of the mind and body, and no better advice could be given than that which a poet gave to a society belle, whose life was almost intolerable from ennui: "Try to do a little good."

The physician tells us of the physical benefits of happiness. There is not the remotest corner or little inlet of the minute blood vessels of the human body which does not feel some wavelet from the convulsion occasioned by good, hearty laughter. The life principle, or the central man, is shaken to the innermost depths, sending new tides of life and strength to the surface. The blood moves more rapidly, and conveys a different impression to all the organs of the body, as it visits them on that particular mystic journey when the man is laughing. For this reason every good, hearty laugh lengthens life, conveying distinct stimulus to the vital forces.

Diminished Energy and Neurasthenia

Neurasthenia is not merely a name, to cover want of classification, but is a fairly well-defined condition, a state of diminished energy of the nervous centers, especially of the higher psychical, closely akin to ordinary fatigue, only so extreme as to have caused incapacity for rapid restoration. Neurasthenia is a paresis of the attention and will, the result of long-continued overfatigue.

Apparently, the simplest cause for neurasthenia is mental overwork, and in the cases of the young, overstudy. It is when there is added to excessive work, responsibility, worry, ambition, failure of attainment of the object striven for, and the like, that neurasthenia often develops.

Monotony is sometimes more wearing than some forms of mental labor. Extreme muscular fatigue renders one incapable, for a time, of doing his best mental work. The abnormalities of all kinds are well-known accompaniments and symptoms in many neuropathic conditions, as well as in actual insanity. Difficult and imperfect digestion are among the most frequent of what may be called the secondary symptoms of neurasthenia. There has been much discussion concerning the connection between ocular defects and neurasthenia.

Mental Discipline and Rest

After careful consideration, I conclude that the defense against nervous exhaustion lies primarily in sleep and supplies. Never surrender power to sleep. Go to bed each night, whether late or early, and go to sleep in a few minutes. This can be done by common sense and self-control. Lying down on your left side, empty mental consciousness of every content. Then, like a sleepy child, I would turn over on the right side and go to sleep. Yield not to the temptation to "lie awake and worry" and so break that priceless habit. This will help you keep vital and youthful. Sometimes one is too weary to go to sleep soon, and sleep in such condition will not be refreshing. Such a one will wake up in the morning feeling increased weariness. Of course, if a man could sleep for an unusual number of hours, nature might in time restore him.

The excitement of our civilization prevents normal conditions, and therefore we must aid nature. We need harmonious thoughts, and let them dwell on what is sacred and beautiful. We must, also, throw off disagreeable thoughts and feelings, and allow expansion and stretching to equalize blood circulation. We find various congestions around the throat, weary parts of the body, and those constricted and cramped. By stretching ourselves we can adjust the activities of our breathing and circulation.

There is no rule-of-thumb cure for these conditions; each case must be separately studied, and the details of cure can be decided only under competent medical advice. Various hypnotic drugs are used to induce sleep, but with regard to the risks which attach to the administration of powerful hypnotic drugs, let warning be given that all which produce sleep as a physiological effect, with the exception, perhaps, of the bromides, produce stupor, rather than sleep, in overdoses. So never drug yourself with hypnotics. In fact, these should never be used except as temporary remedies, when it is necessary to secure at once a fair amount of sleep.

Change of air and surroundings will often do much to cure, yet in many cases of psychic insomnia, drugs can not be dispensed with. Daily bodily exercise is a necessity for those who suffer from nerves and insomnia, and sunshine is a natural tonic and calmative.

In order to promote the sleep of a person in bed, the bed clothing should be sufficient but not excessive. Between extremes of temperature the changes in the thickness of the covering bed clothes should be gradual. In all cases the bedroom window should be open all night, and all the year round. In some cases a little food should be taken just at the time for sleeping. In the toxic kinds of insomnia, consumption of tobacco, alcohol, tea, etc., are extremely harmful. The question in cases of this nature is not what the patient should, but rather what the patient must not do.

The windows should be wide open, winter and summer, but a draft ought not blow upon the head. The window should be curtained in such a way that no street light or outside illumination brightens the room. The covers should be sufficient in weight to keep the body comfortably warm, but they should not be heavy. Keep yourself fit by sleeping in a cool, well-ventilated, dark room. Then go to bed to sleep, and you will lose consciousness as soon as the head strikes the pillow. For physiological reasons make the room comfortable, and for psychological reasons cultivate the habit of immediate sleep on retiring.

Three Worthy Rules

By commanding mental attention away from the "blue" and unto the rosy, and by determining energies unto new and health-bringing activities, better moods will mold mental tone. Moods as well as sleep are controllable by a trained will.

When tempted to worry: First, Forget it! Second, Get busy! Third, Trust God! The wise man visions forth optimism, and he has set it up strongly in a fixed habit. Life stands serene, sanctified, illumined throughout by a soft light of faith. Without that light, good health is but a hold for the merely physical shell.

The efficiency of a nation depends upon the state of people's nerves. Health, nerve, and efficiency form human power. When one believes that the emotions or feelings form our nerve states he knows that health can be undermined by emotional responses and conflicts. In the dark caves of mentality may lurk monsters of crude emotion, and emotional stress caused by worry and other influences, perhaps, evolved from the unconscious. Such things may wreck or impair health. In neurasthenia there is a loss of mental control, a paralysis of the will.

If doctors, teachers, and journalists could keep their feelings on the intellectual plane there would be fewer cases of nervous breakdown. People who retire at sixty-five often become introspective and nervous. Driving motor vehicles causes severe nerve strain. A telephone operator's occupation also is harassing. Tropical climates exhaust the nervous systems of white men, especially if they use stimulants. As for the treatment of neurasthenia, an individual who has been using up his nervous energy at an unduly rapid pace, by over-indulgence in food and drink, by dissipation and overexercise, ought to be living and sleeping in well-ventilated rooms, and paying, in every way, more attention to personal and domestic hygiene.

Narcotics and Drugs

Smoking wrecks bodies, produces sick throats, and even cancer of the throat. It ruins nervous systems. Most college coaches will suspend an athlete if found smoking during the training season, for it will impair muscular activity. The very harmful drug, nicotine, raises the blood pressure and produces a disorder of the abdominal walls characterized by severe pain, in the susceptible. We know of "tobacco heart," hardening of the arteries, mental depression, impairment of growth, cancer of the lip, tongue, and throat, neurasthenia, shortness of wind, acidosis, and high blood pressure as a few conditions which may result. Smoking seems to decrease mental activity. When one tries to reform the average cigaret smoker, there is trouble, because he is suffering from a definite disease which he will not recognize. Make no virtue of the tobacco habit, but recognize the facts, so that if ill health comes and it becomes necessary to quit smoking you will have a basis upon which to build up the necessary resistances.

From smoking there is the sore tongue, morning cough, hoarseness, chronic tonsilitis, and bronchitis. Some connection with cancer of the tongue has been claimed. Tobacco smoke has an antiseptic action (which may be of some consequence in this connection), but its action is attenuated in the presence of saliva and mucus. Nicotine stimulates and afterwards depresses all cells throughout the body, but in the sensitive and in the excessive smoker, the pulse rate is always quickened some five beats and the blood pressure is slightly increased. These changes usually give rise to no symptoms, but often the tobacco user goes to the physician for palpitation and arrhythmia of the heart.

Tobacco serves as a mild stimulant, followed by a slight degree of narcosis—the supersensitive become calm and lose their irritability, and the dull and apathetic are stimulated. Tobacco is likewise a deceiver, for it disturbs the judgment and improves the subjective condition, but does not improve the work of the person save where it may serve to free him from self-consciousness. It may well serve as a milder and safer substitute for alcohol. The insidious action of nicotine over many years is responsible for some of the cardiovascular diseases so common in middle and later life.

The drug situation in America today is not remote from our lives. An intensive study of the drug situation uncovers trails in the police court and the hospitals where there is so much evidence that one is quite apt to decide that the matter is rather bad. The use of drugs is not confined to the social outcasts of society, or to those on the borderland, or to working people, or to the foreign population. Use of drugs is a truly personal and secret habit that includes people from all classes. Because drugs are used secretly they become more dangerous, although not so spectacular or so public as is the liquor habit. The drug user may never be found out and may never be known to be an addict except to his or her physician. The Department of Justice in Washington says that from every section of the country come reports, undeniable reports, that the use of narcotics is on the increase. Some of the confidential information shows that the narcotic law has done nothing to really reduce the amount used in this country. The stricter the narcotics agents are, the more active the drug smugglers become.

Work and Relaxation

Nervous tension should be avoided by practice, during these spells of relaxation. Relax for a few minutes during the working day. Such practice daily repeated for at least fifteen minutes a day, just as with the five-foot shelf of books, will result in a state of ease, and ease is a part of every cultured person's character and manners.

The dangerous time of nerve stress is the time to relax full length on a couch and stretch a while, and let oneself go. Close the eyes for a few moments and vision pleasant recollections and forget the din of traffic and the sense of haste and nervous waste, such as leads on to disasters. Let go of the worry, excitement, and noise which irritate the nervous system.

The cigaret method of relaxation is fallacious. The real reason for being tired and nervous is auto-intoxication due to intake of the wrong foods and drinks and drugs, and to overstrain. Sensitive, impressionable women will weep and break down. Many are used to stimulation by drinks, smoking, tea, coffee, and wine, and find themselves unable to keep up without such aids, alas, until enforced conditions in sanatoria result in improvement.

Want of sleep under easeful conditions is one great source of nervous derangement. Easeful conditions mean springy mattress, not too heavy covering, and fresh air. Indeed, the whole psychology of sound nerves and sound mental states is wrapped up in physiology, the twain being inseparable, mysteriously bound in an interaction which has not been perfectly explained by the philosophers. Sometimes a bad spirit makes a bad body, and sometimes a bad body makes a bad criminal.

So intimate is the connection between body and spirit, that if one is wrong it disturbs the other. It is very difficult to tell where the mischief began, just as when two children have a quarrel—who began it? There may be dyspepsia, derangements of the liver, diseases of the uterus or prostate, as well as overwork, excitement, and bad news, or a lively imagination dwelling on ills. In the last thirty years there has been a great increase in nervous diseases brought on through overtaxed nervous systems. A successful broker on the exchange learns to control nerves, while many traders and speculators will be tingling with excitement and reduced to wrecks in a short time by ticker prostration. Racking radio and auto horn noises at night, etc., all help produce the pathology of nervous diseases, hysteria, sciatica, eyes supersensitive to light, teeth aching, neuralgia, periods of depression, and other annoying symptoms. When self-possession is once lost, the patient is like a frightened horse running out of control. To prevent such a calamity, keep rein and check of such impulses, and live rightly.

The validity of conscious experience is dependent upon the integrity of function and structure of the physique. There is profound disturbance of physiological activity in mental disorders in general. Our therapeutics must recognize the human machine, as a whole, is in disorder. The whole elaborate complex, mental and physical, needs overhauling and rehabilitation. The physiological health of the nervous system suffers from exhaustion; from depletion of reserve energy.

When the capacity of the nerve cells and of the endocrine glands is inhibited, there is inadequacy to meet the demands in generating work energy. The nervous system suffers. And where anxiety is a part of the problem, there is established a vicious circle which, if not broken, leads to exhaustion.

Rest is the essence of treatment in all such psychoses, the systematized rest, as paramount, in treating exhaustion. The human machine can not function until it is rehabilitated. The element of complications possible in its intricate machinery, makes the question of diagnosis and correction of its faults, one of painstaking observation and prolonged treatment, to renew the health which has so long been impaired by a long period of neglect. Rest is nature's method. The loss of weight, sleep disorder, mental perturbation, singly or in mass, are certainly indications calling for rest.

Relaxation! A charming word for the lazy, but potent cure for the restless and the overworked, to whom Nature seems to say, "Just be passive and let me have a chance to do your work." Make up your mind to rest while you are at the office, and do not resist, and you will get well twice as soon. Get off the high tension wire." If you will look at most of the people in the street, you will find in their vexed and harrassed expressions much to correct by a pleasant philosophy of life. All methods of mental healing emphasize and stress the value of passivity, the loosening of every muscle, a complete surrender. After this comes the reaction towards something more effectual—to positive, beneficial reaction.

Within the province of the care of our body, philosophy of life is the faith in one's power to lift himself out of sickness, weakness, and despondency into positive health, so long as there is a breath of life within us; to keep up the struggle against illness and infirmity by all the means within our power, and to remain undefeated captains of our souls. This does not imply terrible effort and laborious struggle. It is a pleasant path to general

NEWS AND LETTERS

Cleveland, Ohio

March 18.—Boy Scout Troop No. 192, under direction of the scoutmaster, Brother Harry Campbell, sponsored a fathers and sons banquet the evening of February 13. The speaker of the evening was Mr. Beck, and his subject was "The biggest thing on earth." The Women's Department served the meal.

February 16 Elder James Pycock, missionary to Kirtland District, gave a good talk on the Kirtland Auditorium campaign. Many were disappointed in not being privileged to hear Brother Pycock deliver one of his good gospel sermons. We look to the near future for this treat.

While en route to district conference Apostle Clyde F. Ellis stopped at Cleveland February 28, and the Senior Forum class of the Department of Recreation and Expression was greatly encouraged while listening to Brother Ellis relate some of the blessings of God. Truly God is in this work to comfort, cheer, and direct those who seek and serve him. The program for the evening was on the Word of Wisdom. Brother Ellis added much by a talk in which he related some of the menus that are served the missionaries on their foreign missions. Returning from the conference, Brother Ellis was again our guest and gave a fine discourse Sunday evening, March 2.

The church the evening of March 4 was the scene of a pretty wedding, when in the presence of many Saints and friends Orivell Loeding took for his bride Miss Irene Frey. The church was prettily decorated with large palms, ferns, pink roses, and white and pink carnations. Sisters A. McNeil and M. Atchinson contributed to the service with songs "Because" and "The little gold ring." The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by Sister M. Mason. The marriage rite was performed by Pastor Percy Farrow, Elder George Lindsay offering prayer. A reception followed at the home of the bride. The couple will make their home with the bride's mother in Cleveland.

March 12 the hour for the regular midweek prayer service was given over to Elder Chandler, district president of Northern England District, who was on his way to the Centennial Conference. Brother Chandler is filled with the desire and willingness to serve the Master regardless of the bodily and mental well-being and living. If there is surrender to weakness and infirmities and despondency, medicine and advice will do little good. There must be the will to live aright; to love life for all that there is in it; for us who have been placed here with the mission to do good, and be strong, to do good works.

This mental medicine may be denominated by any of the fancy names of the cults which profess to heal by the power of mind or spirit. An auto-suggestion contrary to breakdown and dissolution aids Nature to recuperate the vital forces. This determination to live down sickness starts the curative forces of the subconscious nature. These psychic and ethical forces are as operative in the body as potent chemical agents. These forces which can be set in action are greater than are supposed.

cost. He caused the members to feel the great need for consecrating all to the Master's cause.

Sister Margaret Oswald, a young woman from German who has been here the past five years, sailed for Germany March 12, to be with her mother for four months. Her mother has been ill some time. This sister was wished bon voyage and a safe return.

A little missionary work on the part of a sister traveling from New York to Los Angeles in the early summer of 1928 was like casting bread upon the waters. It was blessed and returned. The one to whom our sister told her story happened to be the editor of the Women's Page of our big daily paper The Cleveland News; and because of the sweet personality of our sister and the graciousness of her presentation, the gist of their conversation was published in the aforementioned paper. This has meant much to Cleveland and Kirtland Branches to have favorable comment before the general public. Elder E. Webbe, feeling grateful for this publicity, put out a little tract called "Appreciation," with the permission of Miss E. Wooley and the press, and printed hundreds of them. He asked Saints young and old to help carry out the missionary spirit of our sister, who so helpfully talked to a fellow traveler, and to pass these tracts out in our neighborhoods. A hearty response was made by many. This effort we believe has culminated in the starting of missionary preaching in the homes. Our first service was held at the home of Sister Saxton March 13, the sermon being preached by Elder Farrow. We hope to continue to bring the gospel story to many neighbors and friends in the different neighborhoods, that much good may result.

Farewell Service for English Conference Visitor

A farewell social was held in the James Street Church, Bradford, Manchester, February 12 in honor of District President William H. Chandler, who responded to the invitation of the church to visit the Centennial Conference. Brother Chandler's counselors took charge of the proceedings and arranged the program. High Priest G. W. Leggott presided, and Elder John W. Green offered the opening prayer. Brother Leggott explained the reason for the gathering and said that he was sure Brother Chandler is going to see big things. Elder S. F. Mather, Beresford Road Branch, sang a song, and Elder William R. Armstrong, pastor of Beresford Road Branch, spoke briefly relating a number of his experiences in the church work with Brother Chandler.

Sister M. Nelson, North Manchester Branch, sang, "I have wandered through life's garden," and the pastor of that branch, Elder Nephi Dewsnup, expressed appreciation for Brother Chandler's opportunity. Brother Chandler is comparatively a young man but one who has endeavored to keep the gospel standard raised. Brother Dewsnup looks upon Brother Chandler as one sent to lead us as the children of Israel were led to the promised land. Brother Chandler is going first to see what the land of Zion is like. He will return with accounts of his experiences there, which will be helpful to us.

Then Sister Olive Heywood, North Manchester Branch, recited "The Englishman," and Elder F. Tapping, Northeast Manchester Branch, spoke briefly in connection with Brother Chandler's departure and return.

Refreshments were served, and Sister M. Nelson opened the second half of the program with the song "The flight of ages." Elder James Waugh, Northeast Manchester, hoped that Brother Chandler would have a safe and pleasant voyage and that the Lord would be with him to bless and care for his loved ones who are left. Sister R. Schofield, Northeast Manchester Branch, recited "The back o' beyond."

Elder John W. Green, of the presidency, who has worked with Brother Chandler and knows that the opportunity to visit the Centennial Conference is fulfillment of one of his big dreams and who knows how hard our brother has worked in the district, asked the Saints to remember him and Sister Chandler in our prayers. There was a solo by Miss Holden.

Brother Chandler stated that this opportunity is the dream of his life. He is going prepared to learn, that he may return to us better able to direct our endeavors. In his talk he stressed the thought that we are workers together, whether it be in the Church in England, Australia, or America. He assured us that he is going as our ambassador and was given assurance that he goes to Zion with the message that we are behind the church in its program.

The gathering was brought to a close by the singing of "God be with you till we meet again" and prayer by Brother Leggett.

Davidson, Oklahoma

March 17.—Patriarch Samuel Twombly, of Fanning, Kansas, arrived in Davidson February 28 just in time to be one in a congregation of people which packed the house to listen to a program of entertainment furnished at 7.30 in the evening. The purpose of the entertainment was to secure funds for a payment on the church piano. This undertaking was successful and brought much enjoyment to players and listeners.

At the program, announcement was made concerning the two weeks' meetings to begin March 2, Brother Twombly the speaker.

Each evening beginning at 7.30 the orchestra and choir entertained the congregation half an hour before the preaching service.

In a splendid spirit and with much liberty Brother Twombly in an interesting way presented the principles and doctrine of Christ. With the illustrative aid of the skillful art work of Brother Homer Skinner, Brother Twombly made progress. Each sermon brought new and lasting thoughts to the listeners. A marked degree of interest was shown all during the meeting.

No candidates were brought into the kingdom through baptism, but we feel that much good was done. Interest was created in the minds of some to the extent that they may soon be numbered among us.

March 16 a one-hour musical program was dedicated to the faithful and untiring efforts of Brother Twombly. Then Brother Twombly preached an interesting sermon. About one hundred and thirty were present at the meeting.

Several Davidson members are planning to attend the Centennial Conference.

Sault Ste Marie, Ontario

Owen Sound District

March 14.—Elder H. A. Dayton has closed the series of meetings which lasted seven weeks. We feel that much good has been accomplished by his labors in this part of the field.

He will be greatly missed by many of the friends he has made while here.

Since the last report five more people have been baptized by him. This makes a total of seven. All are adults, five of them heads of families. Two are young women in their late teens; two others a young man and wife who had heard the gospel for the first time. They are anxious to help with the work. Six children of nonmembers were also blessed.

William Braun, a young German brother, has been ordained to the office of deacon. He has acted as janitor of the church for about a year and is an active young member. He came to Canada from Germany about four years ago; came in touch with the church and was baptized some three years ago. His service is very faithful.

Prospects look better and brighter for us since more have been added to the number here. The older members feel much encouraged to press forward. The number of young members is very promising. They are planning an Easter program, and all are anxious to take part. Several are gifted with musical talent, which is very helpful.

A number of Saints are planning to attend the General Conference next month. We are looking forward to the return of Brother Dayton after the conference is over, and we will try to be better prepared so that the work may be more successful.

More Baptisms in Rock Island District

During two weeks of special meetings at Kewanee ending on Decision Day, five more were added by baptism, four for Kewanee Branch, and one for Buffalo Prairie. Brother E. R. Davis baptized three, and Brother Harry Jones, of Kewanee, baptized two. This completes three more families, and brings our district number up to one hundred and one, within nineteen of our quota. There are still others near the decision point at Kewanee, and we expect some baptisms at Cedar Rapids, which, we trust, will bring us near our goal of one hundred and twenty for the conference year. All of the nineteen branches in the district have had one or more baptisms during the year, and our district ranks among those having honorable mention, which we feel shows a very good record. But our slogan is "To 1930 and beyond," so we are going forward in the hope of making as good a record, or even better, during the coming conference year.

Windsor, Ontario

March 18.—The gospel work in Windsor is progressing nicely. We have just closed a two-week series of meetings by Brother D. J. Williams, and ten precious souls were brought into the fold. Others we are sure will take the step in the near future. Brother L. D. Campbell is carrying these meetings on each Sunday night.

The branch is under the leadership of the past president, Elder J. Leslie Brown, who has had several years of experience as leader of the local. We are sorry to see Elder Isaac Andrew retire, but are glad to know he still deems it fit to give us the benefit of his services as first counselor to Brother Brown. The Sunday school, under the leadership of Brother Basil Barrick, is being efficiently conducted. The junior church, with Brother and Sister Charles Mifflin in charge, has become an interesting part of the work to the children. We have had several sets of stereopticon slides in our Department of Recreation and Expression led by Brother R. K. Wood and Brother Robert Newman. One of the sets was entitled "In the land of the Incas," and was educational to all interested in the Book of Mormon. We hope and pray that the work will roll onward and Zionward in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

Newton, Iowa

Elder Clyde McDonald, of Des Moines, closed a two-week series of meetings at Newton, Iowa, March 16. Every evening Brother McDonald brought a wonderful message of the gospel. The outside interest was good.

Sunday, March 9, also March 16 District President H. Castings was the morning speaker, and at the evening hour each Sabbath Elder G. F. Hull brought the message.

The afternoon of March 16 at two o'clock Elder Clyde McDonald baptized two into the kingdom. This makes a total of five baptized in Newton in the last month.

Saints at Newton are hopeful and pray that with the help of the Lord they may go forward in the work of building his kingdom.

Stake Business Meeting

At the special stake business meeting, held Monday evening, March 17, Brothers Paul Kelly, of Bennington Church, and A. H. Hallier, of Quindaro Church, accepted the call to the office of priest, ordination being ordered by the conference. In case of Brother Kelly ordination took place immediately under the hands of Bishops F. B. Blair and C. A. Skinner.

A fine report from Sister Florine Hands on the week-day school of religious education held at Malvern Hill, also at Grandview and Argentine, was received and favorably commented upon as a permanent department of the work of the church. This has been continued for several years by teachers of our church, sponsored by the school board.

Elder Francis A. Evans is continued as associate pastor of Second Church.

Elder Robert L. Bishop, pastor and Elder H. A. Gould, associate, were ratified, action on them having been overlooked at last conference.

Elder Ralph L. Gould was appointed assistant pastor of Armourdale Church.

Elder Emmett N. Palmer was appointed associate pastor of Quindaro.

Resolutions of condolence were ordered sent to the families of Sister Phoebe Tucker and Susie Anderson, lately deceased.

A resolution favoring a proper attitude of respect toward all the revelations of the Lord to the church that have become laws and pledging our support, was concurred in by the conference.

A report was received which stated that we lacked only twelve to fill our quota of two hundred and fifty baptisms.

In the early part of the church school session last Sunday morning, Associate Pastor George Mesley related the pageant story, epoch 1, to the congregation. The sermon of the morning was by Pastor C. E. Wight.

In the evening there was a splendid lecture by Apostle Paul M. Hanson, pictorially presenting his last summer's trip in Mexico.

The prayer meeting tonight will be the last held until April 23.

Central Church contributed to the Sanitarium during 1929: Eight sheets, eleven tea towels, eleven tray cloths, twelve large bath towels, twenty-four wash cloths, ten pounds of rags, two hundred and fifty-nine bars Crystal Soap, twenty-seven quarts of preserves, six quarts pickles, ten glasses of jelly, two hundred and twenty-seven magazines. Sister Adam Young is representative.

The First Church of the Nazarene defeated Central boys at basket ball last Thursday. The Nazarene players over-shot our boys, who took their defeat in good spirit.

Mount Washington Church

Patriarch Ammon White is by invitation holding cottage meetings in the district of Fairmount. The chief interest centers in a discussion with an elder of the Utah Church on the faith of the two churches. The meetings are educational to those not of either faith.

Argentine Church

Elder William I. Fligg closed the series of special meetings with a forceful sermon on "Citizenship." Good interest has been shown him throughout, but no baptisms are reported. Some seem however to be favorably impressed with the new lessons in Christianity. Brother Fligg was not forgotten in the way of financial support by the Saints and friends. Elder W. B. Richards was the speaker at eleven o'clock.

Second Church

Brother E. S. Zink, though a very busy man, holds three missionary cottage meetings each week at the following places: 3307 Gennese, 3130 Bell, and 1216 Cherry Streets.

Bennington Church

Bennington closed a three-week series of meetings March 9, Patriarch Ammon White presiding. The effort resulted in the baptism of nine people, bringing the number baptized to eighteen, the quota assigned. Brother White's sermons were beautifully and plainly illustrated with a chart depicting the several dispensations of the gospel from Noah's time to the present. There was good attendance each night.

Sunday morning, March 16, Pastor O. G. Helm was the speaker, giving many good thoughts to the membership. Elder Okerlind was the speaker in the evening, his contribution being greatly appreciated.

The Sunday school is doing well. Attendance ranges around one hundred and forty-two. Everyone is busy just now, some taking part in the pageant to be presented at General Conference and others in the oratorio.

Fourth Church

February 23 a spiritual program was rendered at the family service, there being readings and songs. "Nearer my God" was sung by the young people living on Euclid Avenue, and four families from Euclid Avenue. They also sang "Yield not to temptation." Elaine Smith accompanied at the piano. At the young people's service at 6.30 o'clock a musical program consisting of violin, clarinet, and piano numbers was presented.

"Here is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit" was the text of Elder W. I. Fligg, of Independence, March 2. He dwelt upon the fact that this is a missionary church, and if the Saints pray more earnestly our missionary efforts will be greatly enhanced.

Sister Blanche Farrar, of Independence, church librarian, gave an interesting talk on the history of the church library, and its collection. Sister Farrar suggested the name, "Emma Hale Memorial Library." Brother Marion Sneed, gave a talk on the history of the late Joseph Smith.

"The life and dress of the Nephites" was a talk by Tyra Lueking at the family service March 9, and at the eleven o'clock hour, papers were read on "The finding of the gold plates," and "The Book of Mormon, the second witness for Christ." The first paper was prepared by C. O. Peterson, the second by Brother R. L. Grainger, of Chicago. While these papers were read, a painting was shown of the scene of the angel's visitation to Joseph Smith on Hill Cumorah.

At eight o'clock in the evening Fourth congregation was favored with contributions from outside talent: Sister Clifford Forties, reader; Sister Helen Dittmore, violinist; Sister C. J. Dittmore and Sister L. C. Connelly, accompanists; and Sister C. E. Wight, contralto.

Decision Day was a great day. Tyra Lueking gave a talk on "Decision." The church was filled, there being one hundred and sixty-five at the morning session, with an enrollment of one hundred and thirty-four. Offering amounted to $51.19. Elder J. O. Worden spoke on the theme "Decision." At one o'clock in the afternoon a large number went to Central Church for baptismal service. Four children and two adults were baptized. This more than fills our quota. At 6.30 in the evening the baptized were confirmed members of the church. Then sacrament was served to all, the principal talk being by Elder H. A. Koehler.

Grandview Church

Brother J. H. Stratton celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday March 9 at the home of a daughter, Sister Frank Merrill. Brother Stratton has been a member of the church fifty-five years. He was the first person baptized by Elder J. J. Cornish. He has been a subscriber to the Herald since uniting with the church, and has been a loyal member, and is still strong in the faith.

Sister Amelia Meyer passed away February 11 at the age of sixty-two years. Funeral services were conducted by Elder H. A. Koehler from the Long Mortuary.

Members of the Gleaners Class were entertained with a Saint Patrick's party by Sisters Juno Cook and Hazlett Bowers.

Recent speakers have been Elders H. A. Koehler, L. W. Hays, J. W. Davis, W. B. Richards, C. E. Wight, J. H. Paxton, W. S. Brown, Bishop F. B. Blair, Patriarchs Ammon White, and F. A. Smith.

The Wyandotte High School, Kansas City, Kansas, won the championship of the Kansas State basket ball tournament sponsored by Washburn College, Topeka, Kansas, March 20, 21, and 22, finals being played at Topeka. Brother Paul Harrington, son of Elder Joseph A. Harrington, was the only three-year letter man on the Wyandotte High School squad. He was placed on the all-state honor roll playing position of guard. Each player of the squad was awarded a medal, and the team was awarded a large brass shield. This is the first time Wyandotte School has had the championship since 1923.

Atherton Conference

After delay, due to weather conditions, the new church was sufficiently completed to hold the stake conference at Atherton March 14 to 16. There existed among local and visiting members a justifiable feeling of achievement.

After meeting nine years in a hall upstairs the Saints transferred the pulpit to the "little brick church in the vale," just in time for the first conference service Friday, 7.30 in the evening. At that time the room was filled to capacity. The Walnut Park Orchestra, of Independence, led by Brother Orlando Nace, opened the program with twenty minutes of good music. Bishop M. H. Siegfried gave two short talks on "Thrift" and "Budgeting." "If you but knew what age would crave, you in youth would learn to save" was quoted. It takes grace to endure poverty, asserted the speaker, but it also takes grace to endure wealth. Poverty in itself is not a crime, but it may be the occasion for crime. Our solution is thrift—spend less than we save. It is the art of gathering and spending in a wise way. What makes and keeps men poor? Waste! Idleness is waste, and so is sin, and speculation on the stock market. The main product of thrift is reflected in character. Thrift calls for backbone rather than wishbone. Budgeting, the speaker showed to be a very necessary factor in the establishing of thrift.

There were two playlets by Atherton young people reflective of the principles that are influencing their lives. Brother Roscoe Moorman, of Sedalia, gave a beautiful violin solo.

Saturday opened with an exceptionally good prayer meeting at 8.45 in the morning. Within the hour there were five prayers, seven songs, and sixty-six testimonies.

The principal items in the business meeting at ten o'clock in the morning, in charge of the stake presidency, were: The stake recorder, Sister Tacey Wade's report showed a net gain of 25 since November, 1929, the present number being 1,825.

Sister Edith Koehler, superintendent of the Department of Women, reported that the department had been working along the usual lines, willing to cooperate in any way to advance the cause of Zion. As the new unified methods are decided upon definitely, she assured the conference the women of Holden Stake may be counted on to do their part.

In the report of G. R. Wells, director of religious education, every branch was urged to place the new Junior Stewardship Record Book in the hands of every member between the years of eight and twenty who will agree to use it. Here is a plan ready made for us by the Presiding Bishopric. Hundreds of young people are needing this opportunity to develop the spirit and practice of partnership with God. This field lies fallow. Let us cultivate it. Fifteen of these books have been placed at Lees Summit and thirty-two at Holden.

The secretary of stake quorum of elders, G. F. Baker, reported a number of interesting items in regard to the work of the stake elders.

Stake Bishop J. A. Koehler reported contributions to the building fund: Atherton, $5; Bates City, $17; Blue Springs, $23.50; Grandview, $20; Holden, $6.25; Lees Summit, $6; Lexington, $4; Marshall, $12.25; Atherton Department of Women, $60; Lexington (individuals), $15; total, $169.25. The amount of $2,576.92 had been applied on the new Atherton Church; furnished by Atherton Saints, $1,200. Labor on the church has nearly all been donated. Cash and securities on hand in this fund February 28, 1930, $745.88. The Stake Operating Fund had received the following contributions: Atherton, $10; Blue Springs, $23.50; Grandview, $24; Holden, $29.83; Lexington, $4; Marshall, $12.50; offering at November conference, $21.40; total $125.23; previous balance $31.71. Paid out for last conference expense, $29.70; traveling expense of stake officers, $95.56; total, $124.26; balance on hand February 28, 1930, $32.68.

Delegates to General Conference were nominated from the floor and elected by standing vote. Twenty-eight were nominated, and the following eighteen were elected: W. S. Macrae, F. A. McWethy, H. V. Minton, Sister H. V. Minton, Frank Ford, D. R. Hughes, Ellis Rathbun, G. R. Wells, J. A. Koehler, Sister J. A. Koehler, A. E. Allen, G. W. Beebe, R. F. Moorman, C. F. Scarcliff, C. W. Childers, C. V. Hopkins, G. W. Hancock, Sister E. A. Curtis.

Having moved out of the stake, Sister Tacey Wade resigned as stake recorder, and her resignation was accepted. The appointment of a successor was referred to the stake presidency, as were the time and place of next conference.

It was decided that we favor a reunion in connection with some other district or stake, and that the decision be left to the stake presidency.

By regular motion it was decided that hereafter the terms of branch officers begin June 1 regardless of when elected.

The Stake High Council presented the following for ordination as indicated: Luther W. Payne, Lexington, elder. Brother Payne asked for further time; Ray Eddleman, of Marshall, teacher; Leman Johnson, Lexington, deacon; G. R. Norris, Warrensburg, elder; Clyde Johnson, Warrensburg, deacon. The last four were ordained at an ordination service held Sunday afternoon. At the same hour a memorial was held for the late E. L. Barraclough, former pastor at Sedalia.

Saturday afternoon President F. M. McDowell spoke on the theme "Sowing and reaping" from the standpoint of neglecting to reap. There are three levels of living, he said: 1. Neutral—a way of drifting; 2. Upward, a way of righteousness; and 3. Degeneration, downward and destructive. We can not remain neutral and drift. Eventually, we either degenerate or develop upward. If we fail to take the upward path, we are sure to degenerate. "How shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation?" Plants and animals, if uncultivated, revert to lower types, and man reverts to the savage life or to imbecility. The soul that is left to itself, unwatched, uncultivated, will die. Salvation is more than mere forgiveness; it is an achievement. Every person living is subject to this law—there is no such thing as a dead level. The saddest case is that of indifference. Where there is uneasiness, there is hope. Alma says if there be only a little desire, we can have it increased if we will in sincerity ask God in the name of Jesus Christ to increase it. How shall we escape, if we neglect? There must be a sense of care, of responsibility, which means progress upward. Soul means capacity for God. Every immature soul must be led to the fountain of living waters by some one who knows the way. It is the earnest hope of Brother McDowell that we shall find more in our religion than a mere heritage of creed or dogma.

At the close of the above service the delegates made an inspection of the stewardship lands.

Saturday evening Bishop J. A. Becker's illustrated lecture, "From Palmyra to Independence," was much enjoyed.

There was a young people's prayer meeting Sunday morning, also priesthood meeting and Sunday school. During the Sunday school Bishop Koehler lectured to a large class on the ideals and purposes of the Atherton stewardship project.

At eleven o'clock President Elbert A. Smith preached on the theme, "Building up the waste places of Zion." He reviewed Church History, dividing it into periods of preparation, organization, gathering, persecution, and enforced retreat from Zion, the dark and cloudy day with apostasy, and the period of return. Prophecies are being fulfilled. Zion shall be rebuilt and reinhabited. Today in Zion and her near-by stakes are gathered more than thirteen thousand members. The slogan "Forward to 1930 and beyond," has not been empty in meaning. Last summer there was an average of 513 baptisms a month. Zion is a place, it is a people, it is the pure in heart, it is a condition—a people working together under conditions of stewardship and equality.

The Atherton Choir sang beautifully several times during the conference, as did also the stake male chorus which made its first appearance in this assembly. Probably the best offering of the latter organization was "The little brick church in the vale," composed by Sisters J. A. Koehler and D. R. Hughes, and sung to the tune of "The little brown church."

The ushers in charge of Ralph Baker, of Holden, had no easy task, as the building was taxed to capacity at nearly every service.

Miss Gladys Beebe, of Kingsville, was secretary, with G. R. Wells to assist. Miss Bernice Hampton, stake musical director, Holden, was present, and her work showed the confidence of one who has studied and prepared for service.

Offerings were taken for expenses, which included those of the stake missionaries to General Conference.

With a vote of thanks to Atherton Saints for entertainment, the conference was closed.

Wichita, Kansas

Osie and Water Streets

Wichita Branch is progressing under the leadership of Pastor A. E. Stoft. The spirit of unity prevails. Our mid-week prayer services are well attended. The Saints in general are contributing their means and talents for the advancement of the work.

The Sunday school, under the superintendency of Brothers Stoft, Shepherd, and Sister Jacquith, is growing until the church building is inadequate for our needs. The young people's class of which Sister A. A. Buschow is the teacher, is one of our outstanding organizations. Attendance has risen from ten to thirty, indicating that the teacher is making our study attractive.

At the beginning of the year the Women's Department elected a new corps of officers: President, Sister A. E. Stoft; assistant, Sister H. V. Dace; secretary, Sister E. C. Nelson. The Department of Women holds a social meeting once a month, and instead of class study weekly we have a book review by one of the members. This has proved to be of interest and development.

Sunday, March 16, closed a two-week series of meetings. Elder R. M. Russell, of Detroit, was the speaker. Brother Russell is an interesting talker, and his sermons were instructive. A fine spirit prevailed throughout the period of services, and attendance was above the average. Brother Russell's pleasing personality made him many friends. Six souls were conducted into the fold and kingdom of God, Brother Stoft officiating.

The choir, under the leadership of Sister Paul Nelson, is doing good work. Mrs. Nelson is an accomplished musician and is very capable. Her services to the choir are an asset to the church meetings.

Miss Celia Hamilton, of Salina, is in Wichita attending the chiropractic school. She is a talented musician and has been generous with her contribution of solos.

Death has again invaded our ranks and removed from us Sister Hattie Shaver. She passed to her reward March 5. Was a member of the Wichita Branch for several years, a faithful church worker. Her sickness was of short duration. The funeral services were held at the church, sermon being preached by Elder A. E. Stoft.

Stone Church

A service of presentation and dedication replaced the regular session of church school for the adult and intermediate departments of the Stone Church on Sunday morning. The I. X. L. Class, of which Pastor J. F. Sheehy is teacher, formally presented the church school beautiful, leatherbound copies of the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants for use on the Stone Church pulpit. Presentation was made to the church school superintendency by Priest Ephraim Brown of the I. X. L. Class. Superintendent S. A. Thiel, in turn, presented the books to the branch through the pastor. The dedicatory prayer by President F. M. McDowell followed a talk by Brother Sheehy sketching the history of the three books.

The Australian delegation to General Conference was presented to the Stone Church congregation at the eleven o'clock service. Elder John Blackmore presided, and introduced the individual members of the delegation.

Scripture lesson was read by Patriarch J. H. N. Jones, and prayer was offered by Elder A. C. Barmore. Miss Flora Delofski, representative of Australia in the Centennial Oratorical Contest, gave a reading, "Sometime." The following brothers spoke briefly, each describing a portion of the trip from Australia to Independence: Geoffrey Gillard, Walter Johnson, H. I. Velt, and W. J. Haworth. A number of songs were sung by the delegation, Geoffrey Gillard accompanying at the piano.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Brother George Anway, sang "But the Lord is mindful of his own," from Mendelssohn's "Saint Paul." Robert Miller, at the organ, played "The old refrain" as an offertory. Robert Bruce, the infant son of Brother and Sister Roland Flanders, was blessed by Elders John F. Sheehy and M. T. Williams. Elder George Mesley pronounced the benediction.

"Fidelity to ideals" was the theme of Elder Leonard Lea's sermon to the intermediate church in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church at eleven o'clock. A story of the early days of the church was told by Wilda Lee McDowell.

A large congregation crowded the Stone Church to listen to the evening sermon. It had been widely announced that Elder W. J. Haworth, in charge of the Australasian Mission of the church, who arrived last week with the Australian delegation to the Centennial Conference, would be the speaker. Brother Haworth was introduced by Elder C. Ed. Miller, who some years ago represented the general church in Australia.

The Saints in Australia look to Independence as the place divinely appointed in latter days for the establishing of a New Jerusalem, Elder Haworth assured his hearers, calling attention to scriptural prophecies foretelling a flourishing, growing Zion. They are watching the center place, and they are happy to see the church now active in the work of establishing Zion, for it means the church is going forward. And so long as this work shall go forward in righteousness will the Saints of that faraway mission give strong and willing support.

Almost his entire time was devoted by the speaker to acquainting his American hearers with the extent of the church work in Australia and presenting the simple story of the efforts of pioneer and present-day missionaries in that country, their consecration, and the hope they have planted in the hearts of the people. The report for November, 1929, counts the Saints in Australia and the Dominion of New Zealand 2,437, cared for in twenty-eight branches. In this mission are thirty-nine Sunday schools; and activity is had in various other departments of the church. The church owns a publishing house and has purchased a permanent reunion ground of eighty acres. This mission has supplied the general church with some twenty-five able missionaries—Australia today is manned by its own missionaries, and it has sent to the Centennial Conference a delegation of sixteen members.

The sermon was given reverential setting by the musical program. A beautiful anthem, "O, pray for the peace of Jerusalem," was sung by the Stone Church Choir conducted by George Anway, Albert Brackenbury singing the bass solo; Robert Miller at the organ. There were solos by Sister E. C. Harrington, soprano, "Fear not ye, O Israel," Kathryn Haberlein accompanying at the piano; and Sister Josephine Smith Ebeling, contralto, "I will give you rest," Ciro Pinsuti, accompanied by Florence Koehler Campbell. Elder J. F. Sheehy led the congregational song service. The invocation and benediction were offered by Apostle F. Henry Edwards.

Australian Delegation Is Here

Last Thursday morning officials of the church were astir early, making preparations to meet and welcome the delegation of sixteen Saints from Australia coming to represent the Australasian Mission at the World Centennial Conference. This group of Saints left Sydney en route for San Francisco, February 20.

Thirty-two officials and members of the church from Independence including twelve ministers who have seen missionary service in Australia, New Zealand, and the Islands of the Southern Pacific, met the delegation at the Union Station in Kansas City. President F. M. McDowell and Elder John Blackmore, the latter formerly of Sydney, Australia, were in charge of the group to welcome the visitors.

The travelers were taken in cars on a sight-seeing trip through Kansas City, stopping at the home of President Frederick M. Smith. The party arrived in Independence after one o'clock and was served a luncheon by the Laurel Club in the Auditorium basement.

In the evening the delegation sat down to a banquet with thirty-seven general church officers, their wives, and other friends. Apostle Paul M. Hanson, who has made three trips to Australia as missionary, was toastmaster, and Elder J. W. Davis, who has also given service in Australia, was song leader. In behalf of the church, President Frederick M. Smith extended an official welcome to the visitors to Independence and the General Conference. Elder W. J. Haworth, who heads the delegation, responded to the address of welcome. Then Apostle Hanson introduced each member of the foreign delegation. At the close of the dinner, talks were made by President Elbert A. Smith, of Independence; by Elder Harold I. Velt, Sister Lewis, and Colin Ferrett, of Australia; and by Elder Gomer Wells, of Lamoni, Iowa, and Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, of Independence, both of whom have served as missionaries in Australia. The dinner was served by the Laurel Club in the lower room of the Auditorium. Motion pictures of the arrival of the delegation at the Union Station, Kansas City, had been made by Vance Eastwood, and were shown at the close of the meal.

The delegation is composed of Elder W. J. Haworth and wife. Brother Haworth is editor of the Australian church paper The Gospel Standard and manager of the Standard Publishing House. He is also minister in charge of the Australasian Mission. The Haworths live in Sydney, New South Wales, Australia.

Elder Harold I. Velt and wife are also representing their country at the world conference of the church. Brother Velt is pastor of the church in Adelaide, South Australia. He has had considerable missionary experience.

Elder A. C. Barmore and wife. Brother Barmore has been missionary to Australia for fifteen years. He has spent the greater part of his life in that country, and Sister Barmore is Australian by birth.

Brother Colin Ferrett is a young man who has had extensive training in voice. He sings over a number of radio stations in his own country. He is to sing the bass solo part in The Course of Time, the oratorio to be given at the conference. He comes from Sydney.

Sister Elvie Cuthbert has traveled extensively, having visited England. Her home is in Victoria, Australia.

Sister Flora Delofski is the Australian winner of the oratorical contest and will be one of the contestants in the finals. She is a member of the Conservatory of Music in Australia.

Brother Walter Johnson comes from Sydney and is planning to spend at least one year at Graceland before he returns home. He won third place in the oratorical contest.

Brother Geoffrey Gillard, also from Sydney, plans to attend Graceland College. He has made a study of ancient Egyptian history.

Sister Kennedy is the wife of a business man in Sydney. Sister Watson and daughter are also members of the delegation. They were residents in America some years ago.

Sister Elliott is the wife of a contractor in Sydney. Sister Lewis is the wife of Bishop George Lewis, of Sydney. Her husband has been bishop for a number of years. Her son George recently graduated from the University of Chicago, where he took his master's degree. He is now a missionary for the church in the Northwest.

While in America members of the delegation will make their home with friends among the church members.

Among the People in Zion

Eight hundred and fifty-four Saints of Independence registered as hosts for the World Centennial Conference during a period of a few hours last Sunday afternoon. The registration of local members was necessary to expedite the work of the registration committee during the first days of the conference. Advance registrations by mail and in Kansas City Stake, as well as in Independence, indicate the high interest and general responsive tone of the membership.

There arrived in Independence last Thursday morning Brother and Sister John Drigalla and seven children, from Mekosvyce, Powiat Ostrzeszow, Poland, who plan to make their future home near Independence. Because of errors in passports, the two eldest daughters of the family were not permitted to come at this time. They will later join the family. Bishop J. A. Becker, who spent some time as missionary in Germany, met the family and is entertaining them in his home until arrangements are completed for their location on a farm three miles from Independence. Members of the Drigalla family are glad to be in the center place in time for the Centennial Conference and are fast picking up words and phrases of the English language. Brother Drigalla is a priest.

As the time for the opening of conference approaches, the oratorio choir redoubles its efforts. It now practices on Sunday afternoon and Friday evening. Director J. T. Gresty spent last Sunday afternoon rehearsing the Saint Joseph, Missouri, choir. Sister George Hulmes was in charge of the choir in Independence. Successful rehearsals on the pageant Fulfillment proceed nightly, under the direction of Sister Gladys Newton Six. White Masque players and their friends are hard at work.

"Immortality and eternal life" was the theme of the talk by Apostle F. Henry Edwards to the Y. P. R. Class Sunday evening at six o'clock. The class continues its course of study, "Know your own church," next Sunday with a talk by Apostle J. F. Garver on "Spiritual gifts." There will be no meeting of the class during the three Sundays of General Conference.

Apostle and Sister James A. Gillen, of Independence, have received word that their daughter, Clarice Gillen, has received first place on the dean's honor roll at Kansas University, Lawrence, Kansas. Dean Raymond Schwegler, head of the School of Education, has selected five seniors from his department, membership having been determined on basis of scholarship. Miss Gillen is a graduate of William Chrisman High School, of Independence.

A telegram brought news to Elder D. O. Cato, of Independence, last Thursday morning of the death of his mother, Sister T. A. Weldon, at her home in White Salmon, Washington. Sister Weldon's death followed a long illness. The funeral was held at Centralia, Washington. During the lifetime of her first husband she lived in Independence.

Spring Branch

At eleven o'clock Sunday morning the ordinance of confirmation was administered, those of this branch who were baptized at the Stone Church on Decision Day being confirmed members of the church. A quartet from the junior chorus, Alma Dixon, Mary Belle Edwards, Gladys Dixon, and Donald Mabbott, sang. Those officiating were Brothers Mabbott, Miller, Fish, Tankard, Bozarth, and Cleveland.

Brother A. E. Allen was the speaker at eight o'clock, his subject being "Tithing."

Brother Elmer Peer is very ill at his home. He has the prayers of the Saints for his speedy recovery.

We are promised a speaker from Australia next Sunday evening. Spring Branch will be entertained at the church school program at 7.30 and the opening of the church service by Arthur Storms and his saxophone orchestra. All are cordially invited to worship with us next Sunday evening.

Calgary, Alberta

March 13.—From January 26 to February 2 the Saints of Calgary enjoyed the visits of Elder Bates, district Sunday school superintendent, and Elder Whalley, district president. Elder Bates was present at the Sunday school session January 25 and gave words of encouragement and pointed out various ways in which the Sunday schools can be improved. January 29 he gave the young people an interesting and instructive talk on "Temperance." During the week Elders Whalley and Bates paid house to house visits, encouraging the Saints. Sunday, February 2, we again enjoyed a sermon by Brother Whalley.

The members have been putting forth a special effort to beautify the interior of the church. We have made an arched front and painted the rest of the inside. Everyone is delighted with the great improvement and is looking forward to more later.

We are having splendid support and cooperation. Everyone is interested and anxious to see this great work move on with greater force than it has done in the past in the branch.

The Blue Birds are active little workers and have already made several very useful donations to the church in money and talent.

Yet while we have been enjoying the sweet things in the Master's cause, we have tasted also of the sorrow in the passing of one of our beloved sisters, Vanda Hale, age seventeen. For several years she has been declining in health, and though she expressed her desire sometime ago to again take her place at the organ or play her part in God's great church, yet the heavenly Parent saw wisdom in taking her to the great beyond, giving her and others the assurance before taking her that all would be well with her. Though young in years Sister Vanda left a testimony that can not be doubted and that would strengthen those by whom such encouragement was needed. The funeral was held February 24. Elder Whalley officiated.

Omaha, Nebraska

Central Branch, Thirty-sixth and Burt Streets

With the first signs of spring we feel a decided urge to get out into God's great outdoors, and those fortunate enough to have a car can not but have a "hankerin'" for taking a trip. This urge took the form of action rather early when Sister Nell Kelley, Rogene Anderson, and Harry Greenway drove to Chicago on February 17. However, there will be a good many of our number who will satisfy their desires, and, weather permitting, will drive to Independence for the Centennial Conference.

At the Sunday school hour February 23, George Washington's birthday was observed. Recitations and musical numbers were given by the children, and the entire assembly was led in the flag salute by Billy Wrenn. Brother Cooper, in his sermon of the morning, again brought to our remembrance the power of Washington's life, and how the Lord raises up men for leadership in the time of dire necessity. Elder David Lewis was the speaker of the evening.

The evening of February 26 Doctor H. A. Merchant officiated at the marriage of Sister Lois Wrenn to Brother Harold W. Keairnes, formerly of this city, but now of Minneapolis, Minnesota. All join to wish the young couple a life-time of happiness and service.

March 2 the Sunday school sounded the first note in the missionary effort that was to begin that day, by singing missionary songs from Zion's Praises. The sacramental meeting was well attended and many prayers were uttered in behalf of the special meetings. During the Recreation and Expression hour Mr. John Kirkpatrick, of the Union Pacific, brought an illustrated lecture on the Parks of Utah. Missionary O. L. D'Arcy began our series of meetings at the eight o'clock hour. Brother D'Arcy preached to a full house on the "Authority of the church."

Sunday, March 9, Brother Cooper brought a letter of greetings from the Grand Rapids, Michigan, Branch wherein they assured us of their prayers for the success of our meetings. This struck a responsive note of fellowship, and we could not but feel a closer contact with our collaborators. The good wishes of these Saints were returned, and our greetings were extended to the West Pullman Branch of Chicago, the Second Branch of Chicago, and a telegram of challenge to our good friends across the river. Brother D'Arcy's two sermons of the day gave much food for thought and were characterized by the power of the Spirit. We were fortunate at the "Religio" hour in hearing the combined orchestra of Council Bluffs and South Omaha.

Consecration, the giving of your heart's best, is going to make this church the light of the world. So spoke Brother D'Arcy at the eleven o'clock hour March 16. We were again made glad to receive wishes for our success from the First Philadelphia Branch. Mr. Holzman, the president of a local clothing store, entertained the "Religio" with a moving picture of his recent travels through the Panama Canal. The subject of Brother D'Arcy's closing sermon was, "The great day of the Lord."

The baptisms for our Decision Day were taken care of at a special service on the evening of March 17. At this time we were pleased to welcome four into the church. While this is not as many as we would have liked to have, who can measure the amount of good that has been done, and who can tell the number of hearts that have been touched by that spirit of divine love?

As we look back over the two weeks from March 2 to 16, we can not but rejoice that Omaha was fortunate enough to have been chosen as a link in the great missionary chain. We are glad to have made the acquaintance of Brother D'Arcy, and to have heard the many wonderful sermons he preached. Indeed, if we all could match Brother D'Arcy's integrity and catch the spirit of this work as he has interpreted it, our task in Omaha would be an easy one. We do not wish to forget our musicians and singers, who did their part toward making the services the success they were, and to thank the South Side Saints for their cooperation.

Students Prepare for Conference

Expectancy is in the atmosphere of the campus. Practices for conference events are regular happenings. The Oratorio Society is scheduling extra practices in order to get The Course of Time in readiness. The orchestra is doing the same. The A Cappella Chorus rehearses twice each week in anticipation of its concert work at conference. The cast from the College Players which gave "The passing of the third floor back" a week ago has resumed rehearsals until conference time. Several are busy with construction of exhibits and displays for the college booth.

Bus and railroad companies are offering terms for conveyance of students. Old automobiles are getting a spring going-over in readiness for the grand trek. Many are awaiting meeting of parents or friends from their home towns. More zealous students are talking about selecting classes and planning the days' programs.

Classes close Friday evening, April 4, and school reconvenes Wednesday, April 16.

Oral Interpretation in Chapel

At chapel Friday, February 28, the class in oral interpretation, under the direction of Miss Florence Thompson, presented the student body a fine program. Frank Parsons gave a humorous presentation of "The swimming hole," after which a group of poems were read by Miss Margaret Williams. We were then taken back to the old love shop as Miss Dorothy Elliott entertained us with "At the sign of the cleft heart." Miss Helen Stover displayed unusual talent in "Tommy Adkins" and "Well, I Will." The entire class then presented to perfection the gesture charts which are so valuable in the art of declamation.

F. O. M's Receive Member

On Tuesday evening, March 11, James B. Moses, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, was formally initiated into the F. O. M's, one of Graceland's activity and social clubs. The ceremony was administered in a setting which blended with the meaning and purpose of the occasion. This added emphasis to the idealism of the club, which was impressed not only upon the new member but also upon the older members. Having placed his signature on the constitution of the club, Mr. Moses was welcomed into the "inner group"—a group of fellows who would do great things for God and the church in 1930 and beyond.

Following this service a social hour was enjoyed, ice cream and cake being consumed in large quantities.

The F. O. M's are a cosmopolitan group. Those active this year are: Fred Davies, Arthur Oakman, and Voas Meredith, from England; Noble Kelly from Canada; Edward Larsen, from Denmark; and Joseph Sandidge, Virgil Shepard, Almer Sheehy, Granville Swenson, and James Moses, from all parts of the United States. Vernon Lundeen of Minneapolis, Minnesota, is the one alumnus of the club.

Our Departed Ones

WILLIAMS.—Mary Hart was born at Colesburg, Iowa, October 17, 1852, and died at Clearwater, Nebraska, February 12, 1930. She married James B. Williams May 13, 1857, at Colesburg, Iowa, and to them were born: William H., of Ten Sleep, Wyoming; Etta Rutledge, Clearwater, Nebraska; Caroline Patras, Chambers, Nebraska; Amos E., Wood Lake, Nebraska; Charles T., Valentine, Nebraska; Nellie Ziegenbein, Kadoka, South Dakota; Mattie Randall, Lincoln, Nebraska; Harve J., Wood Lake, Nebraska; George I., Midland, South Dakota; Morland J., who passed away April 6, 1923, at Ten Sleep, Wyoming. The death of her husband occurred at the home of their daughter Caroline, in Neligh, Nebraska, January 24, 1916. At the age of sixty-five she went to Wyoming and homesteaded. Since proving up on her homestead she has resided with her children. Was baptized September 17, 1882, at Magnolia, Iowa. She leaves nine children, thirty-nine grandchildren, forty-two great-grandchildren, and four sisters. The funeral was held from the Christian Church, Charles Soderstein delivering an impressive funeral address. Interment was in the Latter Day Saint Cemetery northeast of town.

BRADT.—Clara E. Bradt was born July 6, 1860, at Prince Edward's Island, Nova Scotia. She had been a member of the church for fifty years last summer and was a subscriber to the Herald for over forty years. She was a thoroughgoing, consistent Latter Day Saint, conscientious in the discharge of her duty as she saw it. Her influence for good was strong on the many young people with whom she came in contact at home and abroad. As a teacher she was gifted. Much of her life was spent in Boston, and for many years she was an active member of Boston Branch. She with her husband, John H. Bradt, and daughter, Doris, moved in 1918 to East Syracuse, New York, to make their home with their other daughter, Eleanor B. Whitehead, at whose home she lived until her death November 30, 1929. Her demise followed an illness of two years, she being confined to her bed the last few months of her life. The last four years of her life in Syracuse she was active as head of the Women's Department of the district. In this capacity she is sorely missed. Bishop M. C. Fisher, of Boston, who had known her for thirty-seven years, came from Boston to preach her funeral sermon, and paid an eloquent tribute to her life in the gospel. Her husband passed away eleven years ago. Surviving are two daughters, Eleanor Whitehead and Doris Bradt, and a niece, Grace Ivester, of Boston.

RALLINGS.—Robert Rallings was born February 21, 1858, at Steeple, Bumpstead, Essex, England. He passed peacefully to his reward February 25, 1930. He married Mary Jane Slater January 22, 1882. Sister Rallings died in January, 1926. One daughter and two sons mourn their loss: Emily Proctor, of Bradford, Yorkshire; W. G. Rallings and Walter Rallings, of Sutton-in-Ashfield, Notts. He married Sister Emma Holmes, widow of the late William S. Holmes, of Clay Cross, January 4, 1928. This union was a great comfort to them. Brother Rallings was baptized October 27, 1890, by Hebert Beaumont, at Clay Cross. He was ordained deacon in 1891, priest in 1898, and elder in 1906. He was delighted to entertain the missionaries. He was president of the Sutton-in-Ashfield Branch for about twenty years. He was most faithful and diligent to duty. The memorial service was in charge of G. V. Willis and John Holmes. W. H. Greenwood preached the sermon.

PERRITT.—Ray Earl Perritt, son of Albert and Dessie Perritt, was born December 22, 1926, at Eros, Louisiana. He died February 20, 1930, of spinal meningitis. Those of the family remaining are father, mother, a sister, and two brothers. The funeral sermon was preached March 16 from the Eros Church by S. S. Smith. Interment was in the Saints' cemetery by the church.

PARHAM.—Maud Peak was born June 20, 1888, at Crescent, Iowa. She was baptized a member of the church at Netawaka, Kansas, by John T. Davis. She was reared in the teachings of the church, and many of her efforts were for the good of the church. Most of her young days were spent in Independence, Missouri, where she was married to John Parham, of Little Rock, Arkansas. She passed to the beyond December 19, 1929, at her home in Los Angeles, California, from internal cancer. Surviving are her husband, one son, her parents, who are Brother and Sister Warren E. Peak, one brother, and three sisters. The funeral services were in charge of the pastor of Los Angeles Church, Glaude A. Smith. Interment at Santa Ana, California.

Ballantyne was charmingly simple. "I would be true" as sung by the Crescents en masse voiced their sincerity in carrying on the true Graceland spirit as expressed in the "Crescent's Desire," a poem read by Alice Chappelow. Alice Parsons offered prayer.

The rendition of "There's no love to me like the love of Jesus" in a duet form by Irene Johnson and Anne Morgan was feelingly given and accepted. Gertrude Laird read from the Bible of the virtuous woman. It can truly be said, and it was felt in chapel Friday, that the sweet simplicity which dominated this program is the keynote to the Crescent program as a whole.

A Preview of the Conference

Delegates and ex officio members of the 1930 Conference are already in Independence from distant and nearby fields, and we stand at the threshold of the second century of our existence. That the conference will mark a distinct point of progress everyone fondly hopes, though it is not at all likely that there will be either any sudden changes or long leaps made. We enter the next conference year and our second century, with the blessings and burdens of our heritage about and upon us. Our hundred years of teaching and progress have engendered definite attitudes, and we approach our tasks with resultant compulsion. On the foundations laid down by our forbears and predecessors we must build towards our ideals.

With God a century is as a day, and a day as a year, and before him our Centennial Conference will pass as a year's work done and as the beginning point of another; but with us it marks a distinct period, one of wholesome retrospect in efforts to evaluate progress made, and to gather needed zeal and enthusiasm for the movement forward. In the light of review we turn towards a scrutiny of the road before us, so far as we can look ahead. Our ideals attract, while the successes of the past encourage us onward.

The present conference will be found by the visitors and delegates to be expanded in activities and scope, and everyone will find ample opportunity to keep busy in profitable and worth-while endeavor; and it is earnestly hoped that from participation in the various programs furnished in the conference activities the Saints will return to their fields and branches with improved equipment and zeal to enter upon the greater tasks which the hastening time has brought to us.

With every unit of progress come enlarged possibilities and problems, and this means heavier burdens. This is one of the costs of progress. And it is well for a progressive people to provide times and opportunities for evaluating progress made and engendering new zeal and ardor for the enlarged tasks. Such a period is offered to us by the Centennial Conference, and we enter upon it with high hopes, and also with earnest prayers for divine association and guidance. We rejoice because we are about the Master's business, but feel keenly the heavy responsibilities he has imposed upon us.

Let us pray for the success of the conference.

Twenty-six Hundred Registrations for Centennial Conference

More than twenty-six hundred Saints and their friends had registered for attendance five days before the opening of the Centennial Conference on April 6. Registrations are coming in increasing numbers, and there is every prospect of a very large attendance.

The purpose of the registration is to provide a businesslike and systematic method of financing the General Conference meetings. Heretofore repeated collections have been taken in conference gatherings to defray the large expenses. During the 1930 conference it is hoped that no collection will be taken for this purpose. The officers of the church are asking as many of the conference visitors to register as can, and they hope that all, or practically all, will do so. Registration involves the payment of a fee of $1.50. While registration is by no means required, it gives the visitor a number of important privileges, of which the principal events are described in the following paragraph.

In the past there have been special services, and this year is no exception. The principal events of this nature are the pageant, Fulfillment, the oratorio entitled The Course of Time, and the Grace-land College Players' rendition of Jerome K. Jerome's The Passing of the Third Floor Back, a dramatic production of considerable worth and popularity containing a splendid lesson. Of necessity the doors are open to those who pay admission to these special services. They are expensive. They necessitate the expenditure of thousands of dollars, and those participating are doing so at great expense to themselves in time and money. Special publications are also necessary to the full enjoyment of the conference, and these are expensive. The Conference Program, the Centennial Year Book and Conference Souvenir, and other pieces of literature have been produced at considerable expense. Those who register will receive a full complement of literature, and will be admitted to each of these special services for one of its evenings of presentation. They will also receive the badge setting them forth as members of the conference as ex officio, delegate, or contributing visitor.

The oblation, which gives the visitors chance to contribute to the care of the poor and needy, will be taken on April 6 at the sacramental service.

Yesterday morning a letter came to the desk of the editor from a Saint of more than fifty years' membership in the church. This good sister was disturbed over the fact that registration fee was to be exacted and deprecated the charge which she thought was made for the entrance to the conference meetings, including the sacramental and social services. Of course this is a mistaken conception of the application of the registration fee. Let us see if we can explain it so that the Saints will understand, and that the feelings of those who may be tender in one respect or another may not be wounded.

This is a General Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Attendance from the one hundred and seven thousand membership is solicited, and the business meetings, the preaching services, and many other meetings including the social or prayer services are open to all without let or hindrance. All are welcome. All are invited. And many, many thousands are expected to visit these meetings.

So far as I know and can learn from inquiry there is to be no discrimination between those wearing badges and those without them so far as seating or other recognition is concerned at the official meetings of the conference. However, most of the visitors will realize that the church is under great expense for the conducting of all of the meetings, and that the registration fee is a fair and democratic means of meeting this expense. The unofficial events, such as the Pageant, Oratorio, and Institute classes, will cost even more, and the registration fee provides an inexpensive admission for those who would otherwise have to pay for a ticket.

Let it be understood that Saints who are unable to register because of the charge are just as welcome at the conference as those who are able and are registered. Let it be understood that they are solicited and pressed to attend the official meetings whenever they can. The church hopes that none will be turned away, though it is doubtful if the huge Auditorium will seat all who apply for entrance. They will be handled as they appear at the door without reference to whether they wear a badge or have none.

A Friendly Representation

Readers of the Kansas City Star will have noticed the full-page article in the issue for Sunday, March 30, dealing with the history of the church. All who are interested in the relation of the church to the press should secure and read this article carefully.

It should be noticed with appreciation that the writer of the article has made a good effort to stay seriously within the facts, and to give a fair and generous representation of the modern church. There are only minor inaccuracies, such as the misspelling of the name of Oliver Cowdery and the miscounting of the number of the angel's visits to Joseph Smith in 1823, but these are slips that do no harm. The whole article follows closely the facts of verifiable history.

Members of the church have been used to misrepresentations in former years. They could view the appearance of any article only with apprehension. but in recent years the situation is rapidly changing. Papers all over the country, where they have reason for presenting the history and character of the church, have shown a spirit of fairness and an attempt at accuracy. Errors have persisted, of course, from an earlier time.

There is one respect in which our people should be warned at this time. They have made a fad of protesting against articles in the press, no matter what is written. It may be fairly said that many of our own people are not acquainted with the complete facts of our early history, and hence are not qualified to judge the accuracy of an article such as has appeared in the Star. We have been taught to regard the pioneers of the church with undiluted sympathy, and to forget the mistakes and folly which brought them into trouble. The historical facts prove that they were frequently tactless and boastful, and that their conduct was often of such a nature as to irritate and anger their neighbors. They brought many troubles on themselves.

The history of the Reorganization has been one of peace. We have lived quietly by our neighbors and have found them, on the whole, generous and kindly. They have appreciated our industry and integrity when we have demonstrated those qualities. They cooperate with us in all good civic works. We have found it easy to be peaceful and happy with them.

Let this history teach us an important lesson. We must renounce, as we have always renounced, extravagant claims and boastful announcements. We must be humble. We must work. We must leave off the foolish pride of peculiarity and eccentricity. If we are to be "a peculiar people," that peculiarity must be for good works, for modesty, and for Christian living.

"De-bunking" Examined

A practice which has become more or less popular among some writers in recent years is that of "de-bunking." The purpose of the "de-bunker" is ostensibly to free the minds of the general public from the tradition and delusion with which they are said to have for so long surrounded certain subjects—particularly the great men of the Nation. If one could be assured that these writers really had at heart a sincere desire to portray for us the lives of our great men, we might receive their productions with less suspicion. But their principal emphasis seems to be upon the sensational, and their principal motive the popularization of their own works. This is neither legitimate biography nor legitimate history.

We have no sympathy for supposedly historical material which fails to secure and recognize all the facts involved, which does not relate in scientific fashion the important events of the past in their true light. But on the other hand we have the deepest disgust for any purported history which magnifies a few details out of all proportion to their actual importance. Such is the tendency of the "de-bunkers."

All the other facts of a man's life must assume their proper places in relation to his principal achievements. His personal peculiarities, his individual weaknesses, his mistakes—all must be weighed in terms of the man's total and lasting contribution to the life of his time and all time. We have not remembered (nor excused) our great leaders for the former; we do honor them for the latter. They were but men, and as such had their faults and made their mistakes. But these little things dwindle to insignificance when viewed in the light of the big things these men have done!

The purpose of history is not to assess and place blame, but to understand and to record facts. In the recording of facts some choice must be made and emphasis placed according to the comparative importance of those facts.

Joseph Smith, first prophet and founder of the Restoration Movement, has for one hundred years been the subject of "de-bunkers," although they have but recently been given that title. This man probably did things which now seem unwise; he was a peculiar man in a number of ways. But the facts of Joseph Smith's personal idiosyncracies or of his lack of discretion in certain situations have practically no importance at all in comparison with the fact of the gospel of Christ restored again to earth, or the fact of a plan for the regeneration of society through the principles of equality and brotherhood among men. By this message he achieved greatness.

In Joseph Smith the "de-bunkers" have seen a queer dreamer, a demagogue, a religious fanatic. But in this same man the historians and sociologists of the Nation have seen a great religious and social leader, called by one "the historical American of the nineteenth century who has exerted the most powerful influence over the destinies of his countrymen."

The Value of Religious Journalism

Every day of my experience as a church administrator increases my sense of the value of religious journalism. Much well-intentioned and serious-minded religious feeling is at the present time failing to make any strong impact for good, through sheer lack of religious information and education. The grossest misunderstandings abound, the most inadequate conceptions prevail, simply because the people are depending upon secular newspapers and magazines for information concerning religious matters. I would be the last to disparage the importance of such secular publications. They are doing an indispensable work, but their utterances are lamentably lacking in the realm of religious thought. Nothing has taken the place of the distinctively religious paper as a medium of imparting information and of creating sound religious understanding. If the religious press is not supported, we shall experience a great lack in religious effort—a lack which nothing but the religious press can fill.—Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Federal Council Bulletin, January, 1930.

The deepest thoughts are always tranquilizing, the greatest minds are always full of calm, the richest lives have always at heart an unshaken repose.—Hamilton W. Mabie.

Centennial Conference

Before another issue of the Herald is due, the Centennial Conference will be well under way, and with the passing of April 6 the church will have passed its century-marking goal.

Already the delegates and visitors are arriving in Independence, and over eighteen States are represented on the registration cards. Up to March 31 the advance registrations totaled 2,600. The decorating committee has used the church colors in the main auditorium and in the lobby, and the building is fast taking on the "conference atmosphere."

Broadcasting schedules have been arranged for news bulletins regarding conference as follows: Daily except Sunday 7.45 to 7.50 a. m. In addition to the above from 7 to 7.15 a. m. each Tuesday and Thursday. Beginning April 7 from 4.40 to 4.45 p. m. each day except Sunday. On Sunday for April 6-13 and 20 the news bulletin will be broadcast at 8 a. m. and at 10.10 p. m.

The winner in the Centennial Oratorical Contest, which will be held in the Auditorium Sunday night April 6, will deliver his oration over K M B C from the L D S Studio in Independence sometime between 10 and 11 p. m. the same night. As soon as possible after the judges' decision has been announced the winner will go to the studio and give his oration.

Out of the several hundred orations prepared and delivered in the Oratorical Contest, thirty of the best, including the six given in the final contest, have been published in book form, and a centennial edition of 3,000 has been printed. These books will be on sale after the contest, Sunday night, April 6. Due to the fact that the conference offers such a valuable opportunity to contact the workers in the branches, a number of study outlines have been prepared by the instructors who compose the faculty of the Centennial Institute. These are for use in the classes at conference. They will also be sold at a nominal price so that the workers who were unable to attend conference may obtain the same information.

A number of new books and pamphlets have also been published and will be offered for sale during the conference. The following list should be carefully read:

- Youth and the Restoration* (thirty of the best orations, including the six given at conference delivered in the Centennial Oratorical Contest), $1.50.
- Community Stewardship*, by J. A. Koehler, 50 cents.
- The Game Book*, by Eugene Closson, $2.

Physical Injury or Strain: First Aid; Also Sex Hygiene.—Chapter 11

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

Accidents are always liable to happen, according to the law of chance. This applies to one and all. Not everybody lives a charmed existence forever. The utmost precautions on our part can not insure us against unforeseen damage—hurt, or scar, or "trauma," as such injuries are called. The thing to do, then, is to be prepared to help ourselves as much as we can in emergencies. To be forewarned against accidents and diseases is to be forearmed.

Coupled with this subject matter, will be added a section on sex hygiene, which is placed in this lesson for convenience' sake. In a way, sex disorders are due to the accidents of infection, hence are preventable, for they afflict those who are morally guiltless as well as those guilty of infractions of the moral code. The theory of justice has to be modified when we consider how many innocent persons are visited by strokes of fate. But the thing to do is to make the best of it and to do what can be done to mollify the pain, to soothe the hurt, to bind the wound.

All kinds of knowledge are useful in emergencies. I am going to speak of serious things first, and then of the art of prevention. It is best to be on guard against accidents, with clear consciousness. A loose rug on a slippery floor has been known to be serious. In brief, prevention is better than cure, and we should guard against the possibility of accident from every angle.

The doctor is often necessary, but first aid usually calls for domestic skill merely. A medicine cabinet holds many useful things in emergency, such as clinical thermometer, alcohol, castor oil, syrup of ginger for cramp in the stomach, boracic acid for the eyes, carbolated vaseline for burns, oil of cloves for toothache, rubbing alcohol, aromatic spirits of amonia for fainting, shock, or weakness, bismuth for the bowels, talcum powder for skin irritations, iodine or mercurochrome for the breaks in the skin, or wounds, or collodion and gauze bandages. Much of this list is used even by the physicians. All are harmless when used in moderation.

All sorts of things might happen, for which wise precaution should be taken. For instance, in cases of gas escaping, it is desirable to secure all the gas cocks so they can not easily open. By some chance it is possible to get an electric shock at home, and for this reason insulations should be secure. Fresh air and enforced breathing are necessary, walking patient around. Or, small buttons or peas can get into the ear or nose passages. Slight nosebleed does not require the doctor's aid, but if difficult to stop, apply wet cloths to back of the neck, pinch soft parts of the nose, or put a roll of paper between the gums and the upper lip.

Burns and scalds may be treated by protection from the air. Coat with carbolized vaseline, or any grease, like lard. Very deep burns require a physician's aid. Cover with a piece of cloth and bandage or tie in place. As for poisons, much depends on what is kept in the closet. I would advise against mercurial antiseptics, there being milder and more potent washes which are not toxic. In mercury poisoning, cause vomiting by means of mustard and water, salt and water, and syrup of ipecac. Large quantities of lukewarm water may be drunk to wash the poison out of the stomach.

The variety of accidents possible is so large that adequate preparation for each and all is impossible. It is not within the province of a course of lessons on care of the body to enumerate more than a few more likely contingencies, such as burns and scalds. The secret of the treatment is to exclude air from the surface of the wounded area. Prevent displacement of the skin; blisters should be punctured if large, and skin kept in place by wet antiseptic applications or a strong solution of sodium bicarbonate. Extensive burns are worse than deep burns and require the best surgical aid.

In case of sprain, or the tearing of ligaments around a joint, or in milder cases of the stretching of the tendons, mainly in the ankle, which result in severe pain around the joint, swelling sets in. Immediately relief can be given by hot water applications. Keep the joint in hot water for several hours, until the doctor arrives. Fractures and dislocations can not be treated, ordinarily, except to make the patient comfortable until the physician comes. Rest and support of the injured member, with pillows, etc., and possible cold water compresses to the joint, if there is much pain, will be a relief to the sufferer.

It is contended that the majority of accidents in industry are due to failure or lack of care on the part of the human subject; and that although safeguards have reduced the rate of accidents, the tendency to those was largely a question of psychology. Many more accidents occur during the early days of new work than after a year's employment, and it is owing to the custom of putting "square pegs into round holes" that there is such a holocaust of deaths and injuries.

Susceptibility to accident can be detected by tests. The present-day method of engaging new workers irrespective of any knowledge of their suitability for a particular employment is reflected in heavy losses and in an accident and sickness incidence. The cost is both economic and humanitarian, for the inexperienced and psychologically unfit class of workers are a danger to themselves and to other workers. This is a medical and especially a psychological problem, and employers are beginning to fully grasp this point. It is to the interest of all that workers shall be healthy and adapted to their work.

An ordinary light bulb, for instance, may become dangerous through the presence of dust and moisture. Alternating is more dangerous than direct current; the number of cycles, the more numerous the greater the danger; the state of the patient's health; all affect the seriousness of the accident. While the passage of current through both legs is not usually fatal, the passage of the current through both arms very frequently is. Some minutes of consciousness may elapse from time of release from the circuit and death, or again the patient may recover from apparent death and occasionally death is delayed for some days, the heart musculature becoming suddenly dilated. Keep in bed for at least two weeks all patients who have been severely shocked.

Local effects include burning, metallic impregnation of the tissues, sprinkling of the patient with small pellets of pure metal. It is due to volatilization of the metal in the circuit, and it represents a burn due to hot vapor. When uncomplicated by other types, it is usually only superficial, and healing occurs fairly rapidly.

Safety on the water is insured by sound swimming ability. This is an admirable exercise if one is physically fit, but one should wait at least two hours after eating, and not swim when overheated; in moderation, and not till exhausted. A condition of keeping fit is to be prepared for various hazards on land or on water, or in the air these days, and to use all the necessary safeguards. To be alert in motoring is simply conserving life and limb. A moment's carelessness will undo all that good advice of the previous chapters. There are so many hazards that the majority of us escape them merely by luck and a little discretion. The subject of safety is not properly within our province, if discussed at any great length, but it is well to bear in mind at all times that we are living in a world full of accidents,

Exercise, in order to do good, must be indulged in with moderation. By analyzing the effects of exercise, we determine that the muscles are active, and nutritive changes take place far more rapidly and on a larger scale than in resting. The waste products are carried off in larger quantity, and new materials are absorbed with greater rapidity. Muscle forms so large a proportion of the mass of the body that it is known as the great furnace of the animal economy—about four fifths of the total heat of the system being evolved within it. It is most important to maintain a healthy functional activity of the muscular system. With the increase of the muscular action the waste products are also increased. Up to a certain point, the system is able to eliminate this waste, but in overexertion a point is reached beyond which the effete products begin to accumulate in the circulation and in the tissues.

When muscular fatigue is carried to excess, the healthy nutrition of the other organs and tissues can no longer be maintained. This condition has a special effect upon the nerve centers. When the nutrition of the latter becomes deranged, the nutritional changes and functional capacities of the entire system are disturbed. Phenomena of excessive muscular exertion, which take place in running, are where the brain is overcome by a kind of drunkenness due to the poisoning of the nerve centers by the muscular waste products; the heat-regulating centers lose their governing powers, and the body wastes with slow fever.

There are various local affections which are likely to be produced by excessive exercise, such as hypertrophy and dilation of the heart, aneurysm, and varicose veins. Even those who have been blessed with an unusual physique should remember that the overuse of the body may lead to a sudden and permanent breakdown of health.

The relationship between clothing and health is a direct one. Dame Fashion once ruled that woman's clothing be tight, so that she had difficulty in breathing freely and adequately; she knew where the shoe pinched, and her skirts swept the sidewalks. Now that woman dresses more sensibly she has improved greatly in physique and in health. It is the man now whose dress evidently is unhygienic, although men are beginning to clothe themselves more loosely and more in accordance with weather conditions.

The skin must have room in which to do its beneficent work. Modern clothes, and those of women especially, are loose, covering the skin without smothering it, allowing the air to move freely over it. The rays of the sun are able to penetrate the more hygienic clothing. The skin nowadays obtains its most vital necessities, sun and air. A tight neckband and wristbands in the winter are effectual in keeping the body warm. Clothes, however, should transmit some light. Our clothes are apt to intervene between the light of the sun and our skins.

Soft hats are more salubrious than firm and stiff ones. The covering for the feet should be broad of sole, low of heel, and ample of upper. The ridiculous fashions in shoes are bringing their just penalty in deformities and diseases of the feet.

Woolen undergarments, never heavy, for all weather except the heated months of summer, absorb perspiration readily, and do not, when moist, give to the body the chilly sensation given by damp cotton undergarments; and they seem efficient non-conductors, especially for variations in the temperature.

Hygiene of Sex

Naturally, this is a troublesome topic to discuss in print. Multitudes of books can be referred to on health and happiness in the relation between the two members of the marital union, the felicity that comes from proper embraces, and the sense of completeness and fruition—the reward of “keeping fit.” Such a thing as impotence is made difficult if the advice given in the other chapters is followed with reasonable loyalty. The wonderful opposition of types into which nature has cast the mammalian mold, male and female of the species, is calculated to render the one perpetually attractive to the other, granted there is decent health. It is assumed there is freedom from sex diseases and that all the organs of the body are kept healthy, as is also the nervous organization, and that the mind is in control, mens sans in sano corpore, free from eccentricities, happy in the sexual relation, rather than quarrelsome and irritable.

Temperance, moderation in all things, should be the unbroken rule; nothing in excess, to the ruin of faculty. Let the cup of happiness be moderate in measure, so that pleasure does not change to grief or disgust. Conservation to old age is thus made possible. The mystery and charm is not worn out by abuse, by resort to power of will when nature does not beckon. Overtaxed forces often become permanently exhausted and lifelong dullness results, which aphrodisiacs (medicines that stimulate sex passions) only slightly spur. In all cases where strength has been reduced by severe disease or severe labor, it is usually several months, sometimes a year before this function is reestablished. If the general health is improving, we need feel no anxiety as to the result.

There is slight risk of contracting gonorrhoea in its ordinary form except through sexual intercourse, but there is danger of getting some of the pus into the eyes and thereby inducing serious inflammation. This may happen to the patient himself by bringing the unwashed hands in contact with the eyes, or more commonly to the nurse, or other innocent person, from the use of a towel on which the patient has managed to get some of the pus. Such a patient should not be allowed to use any toilet articles except his own.

While syphilitic sores are nearly always venereal, a nurse with a hangnail or other abrasion may inoculate himself while dressing the sore or the resulting bubo. Syphilis is contagious at certain times and under certain conditions. The chancre, mucous patches, condylomata, and the blood during the first few years of the disease, are all contagious. The mucous patches are then located in the mouth and throat where they are not visible. Tableware, toilet articles, instruments and appliances, and bed linen used, should be kept entirely separate from those used by others and should be frequently disinfected. Physicians maintain that of the adult population between ten and fifteen per cent are syphilitically infected. The disease is unquestionably found with sufficient prevalence to constitute a menace and demand critical attention at the hands of capable physicians.

The great danger in a primary or an early syphilis is the likelihood of its transmission and the tendency on the part of many patients to discontinue treatment as soon as they no longer have ocular evidence of the disease. When a syphilitic patient presents himself for treatment, first and foremost it becomes the physician's duty to convince the patient that instead of condemnation he will have sympathetic attention.

Generally syphilitics acquire their infection before the twenty-fifth year of life. When the case has been adequately treated, a cure may be reasonably expected and no remote or late sequelæ contemplated. If the infection was acquired before the introduction of arsphenamin, together with mercurials for hypodermic administration, the case will be entirely different. After having pursued the prescribed treatment of mercury and potassium iodid for a period of three years, and with the absence of symptoms, a luetic (syphilitic) may honestly have believed himself cured.

But today we know the fallacy of such an attitude. Late accidents of syphilis as a rule occur between the fifteenth and twenty-fifth year following the primary infection. Among patients infected in more recent years and treated by our modern methods, cases can be cured at a much earlier date. The long period between primary infection and the neuro-syphilitic manifestation is of importance.

No less than 45 or 50 per cent of all syphilitics may be detected by simple observation of the eyes, gait, tremor, reflexes, and so forth, before the condition has progressed so far as to render the patient unfit for service or beyond the hope of medical aid.

The germ of the gonococcus causes untold suffering of an enormous number of innocent women. The discovery of the germ of syphilis has led to the inclusion in its deadly work of many serious conditions. An ever-increasing number of the victims of the one or the other of these infectious diseases fill the institutions for the blind and for the feeble-minded children, and also sterility. Secrecy which had so long obtained in these matters is no longer tenable. Imbued with the spirit of the era, the watchword of which is prevention, physicians realized that a condition, the roots of which are imbedded in social ideas and social customs, could not be overcome by medicine alone. If the world wants a radical change, a firm foundation upon which to build a society of individuals endowed with moral and physical strength, the work must begin early. The mother is the most fitting instrument to begin this regeneration of mankind. Parents should be taught the dangers and their dire consequences to their sons and daughters. The children must be sent out prepared for the struggle and impressed with their individual and moral responsibility. Our babies should be born into an atmosphere of truth and knowledge unashamed. It is hoped that sex education of parents will give them the courage of conviction.

The traditions upon which the parents' lives were formed do not exist for their children, and the parents give them nothing to take its place. The earliest questionings are met by deceit, falsehood, coldness, or abuse. The very strength of youth which today finds its expression in so-called independence and arrogance, rightly developed, might express itself in reverence, yet the mother who has not severed the spiritual bond between them by being ashamed of having given him birth should tell him with simple earnestness something of her inner life at that supreme moment. Instead of this, the child often misses the training and restraint which parental and family tradition would impose upon his early years. He develops a sense of freedom, as our youth understands it, which means the will to have—not the will to do without, or self-control.

Biology should be taught in the schools; not in fragments, but as a complete system of development from the lowest forms of life to the highest. To the child, reproduction in the human should be the last link in the whole chain of natural phenomena, instead of something quite apart from the natural order of things.

The actual teaching should be done by those trained for this purpose by young men and women in the scientific and premedical department, whose profession it will be to teach biology and sex hygiene. At present the school physician is to be relied upon, but it would be wiser were his office confined to the practical consideration of the physical health of the children.

It is fortunate if the reader escapes the hands of the urologist. There are many complications of bladder, urethra, kidneys, and there may be a stricture or incontinence of urine. If the bladder is never entirely emptied it becomes foul. Inflammation of the prostate gland may develop in the male, sometimes completely closing the urethra. The main cause of stricture is chronic gonorrhoea, which though seemingly cured after a long time, results in difficulty in voiding urine. The enlarged prostate presses upon the neck of the bladder and rectum, thus obstructing elimination. In women the majority of diseases, such as uterine displacements, fibroids, cancers, and polypi, are often traceable to gonorrhoea, as the Fallopian tubes communicate with the abdominal cavity, and infection is easily communicated. A cure is possible spontaneously in many instances if the patient observes the rules of healthy outdoor life, eats, sleeps, bathes properly, etc., whereas radical surgery may be necessary if the system is not buoyed up and vitalized in natural ways.

As practically all men and women are endowed with emotion and desire, in the sexual realm, it is desirable that it be exercised with proper sentiment and restraint, so that life may not be an utter disappointment under the sway of the senses. Nearly every individual has an interest in some individual of the opposite sex, which should be under the purifying influence of love, rather than passion. In this way, common interests are promoted and the mental and moral life are ennobled, and the act of love invigorates the physiological processes of the organs of circulation, breathing, digestion, muscular action, as well as the mental life, into which ambition is instilled.

Besides this, contamination is insured against. The horrors of venereal disease are too numerous to be discussed here, and are sufficient to fill several volumes of a thousand pages each. The symptoms are very severe, but the emotional life is affected even to a worse extent. Hence safety signals are set. It is human to err, but it is divine to avoid error, for nature does not forgive.

The period known as the change of life occurs in both sexes. In the woman this terminates a period of thirty years of child-bearing capacity, usually terminating the 45th or 50th year. I have known some cases to last much longer. After that period, men and women seem to be on the downhill of life, even though better health than before may be enjoyed by those who have safely passed that line. The organs become smaller, tissues shrink, lose elasticity and recuperative powers, and the result is sterility, usually. The object thus is to conserve vitality by correct living rather than surgical operations and stimulating drugs, which have not proved permanent in action. Though sex ardor may decline there is a keener interest in intellectual pursuits, and many life's ambitions may come to be realized.

The Stewardship of Life

We have met here to discuss matters of utmost importance to every one of us.

This Lenten season is a fine time for us to square our lives with the life of Jesus Christ, regardless of whether we think observance of Lent as being important and essential to our salvation or not. There can surely be no ill come to men who consider the life and death of Jesus Christ, who make effort to serve him and profit by his experiences.

Life is a sacred trust, a sacred responsibility, and men who put most into life are the ones who get most out of it.

I want to read a short statement from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants:

It is wisdom in me, therefore a commandment I give unto you, that ye should organize yourselves, and appoint every man his stewardship, that every man may give an account unto me of the stewardship which is appointed unto him; for it is expedient that I, the Lord, should make every man accountable, as stewards over earthly blessings, which I have made and prepared for my creatures.—101: 2.

In connection with this important latter-day revelation, I am inviting your attention to a statement of the Apostle James, found in James 4: 14, which reads: "What is your life?"

Life is a very wonderful thing, and for most people it is filled with opportunity. Opportunity, however, is valuable to us only as we improve it. Every day, no doubt, many opportunities slip past us; opportunities for doing good, results of which would indeed make the world a better place to live in.

Life is a stewardship. Defined, it means an attitude, or state of mind, in which the steward finds himself willing to consecrate all that he has, either of talents or means, to the good of his fellows—the group.

Such an attitude is a divine one, in which there is evidenced proper acknowledgment of God, as the owner of all life, demanding a definite plan for service. The plan, to be perfect, must include every phase of life and its relation to every other phase, together with its relationship to God.

God at all times maintains the proper relationship towards individuals, and the foundation of that relationship is Love. God loved and gave his Son; Jesus loved, and gave himself; we, too, must love and as freely give, as did God and Jesus, to the cause we have espoused. That we should follow him is clearly evident, for "His ways are higher than our ways, and his thoughts than our thoughts."

According to latter-day revelation, he is bound when we obey him. "If ye do what I say then I am bound."—Doctrine and Covenants 81: 3. And in the same paragraph he as distinctly declares that, "If ye do not what I say, ye have no promise." Every promise God has ever made is contingent upon our faithfulness, always, for in all our relationships, human and divine, love must be the motivating principle. Humility, too, and reconciliation, as they were manifest in Jesus Christ, must be manifest in us. In the hour of his extreme agony, when all looked dark to him because of his humanness, he said: "My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me!" And in the same hour of his extremity we hear him saying, "Nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt."—Matthew 26: 39. If we would always manifest the same humility of spirit and be as willing to bear and forbear as was the Son of Man, we could more easily square our lives with his great and noble life.

Man's trusteeship is clearly pointed out in the parable of the talents. Here man is placed under obligation to God. His life is made a sacred trust, not given to him, but a treasure intrusted to him for safe-keeping; and this treasure is kept safe only when interest accrues as the result of use.

Webster defines life thus: "The totality of actions and occurrences constituting an individual experience." Still another has said: "It is the manifestation of growth, having the ability to reproduce and the powers of adaptation to environment." In the last analysis, it is nothing more or less than opportunity for service.

God has invested in each of us for a period of years. Man's natural days are "threescore and ten," seventy years, but on account of unnatural conditions, heredity, environment, etc., some are born with the seeds of death in their bodies, while others accumulate them in early life through dissipation, ignorance, and the like.

The proper use of life will always bring blessings, because God has intended that it should. Life, with all its glorious opportunities, is only half known by the majority of people, for the simple reason that they are not willing to do the things that make real life possible.

The unfaithful steward made a fatal mistake by burying his pound. By so doing he defrauded the owner, himself, and the world that would have been benefited as the result of proper use. Therefore the Lord said: "Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant." Man can not escape his responsibility through hiding up his talents or ability, for he is not only responsible for use, but for disuse of God-given opportunities and "blessings of earth."

The talents God has invested in us should be re-invested so as to bring in returns to him. From the slothful servant, who failed to invest his pound, was taken the original investment, and it was given to the man having 10 pounds (Luke 19: 22, 24), for the simple reason that he had evidenced, by his gaining of additional pounds, the ability to handle more. The penalty of disuse is to forfeit all.

Men should be "golden rule" stewards, recognizing their responsibility to other people. Jesus advised thus: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets."—Matthew 7: 12. The man who keeps the golden rule and loves God with all his heart and soul and mind is sustaining the proper relationship, both to God and men.

It has been said that "the gospel of stewardship is a leveler," and this is true because it calls the poor up, and the rich it calls down. No doubt this is the reason why so many more poor people respond to the call of Christ. Men always hate to be called down, but do not mind being called up. Yet, if the rich only knew the beneficent results to be obtained by a response to the gospel plan, I am sure more of them would count it a privilege to work for the Master.

The good steward will seek, all his days, to draw men together in a common brotherhood. Jesus mingled with all classes of men. He met them in their homes, the rich and the poor, the wise and the unwise, in an attempt to get them to cooperate, to recognize the common bond of brotherhood that should and would unite them if they would allow it. Where there is no love there can be no true cooperation, for love is a basic principle in all the affairs of life, and must be so recognized to attain success.

Jesus was a minister of righteousness indeed. He did good always; he sought to better conditions for humanity wherever possible and demonstrated the proper spirit when he said: "I came not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

Men to emulate His life must also be willing to serve; but how often it is the opposite spirit that we evidence towards others! We want men to do for us but are unwilling to do for them.

He pointed out to us the true qualities of greatness in these words, viz: "Let him that is greatest among you be servant of all."

One can not hope to render acceptable service with self in the foreground. To really and truly render assistance to men in need, self must be left out entirely, and one must be swallowed up in the thought of service, doing "all things with an eye single to the glory of God."

The great objective of Jesus was the "salvation of the world." We, too, must have the same objective and labor to the end that this most needful thing may be made possible. If Jesus could find it in his heart to give his life, surely we can find it in our hearts to give what we have by way of talents and ability. He was faithful in his warfare and faltered not; so we must also be faithful in ours, trusting in him for the needed strength, enabling the "Friend that sticketh closer than a brother" to be our "ever present help in time of need."

We must not forget the stewardship of home life. The man who is unfaithful in his individual life can not hope to be successful in his home life. His home is a sacred trust and his children a sacred responsibility. A well-ordered family is a credit to the church and the community. Churches are measured by the family life that they produce. Each family is composed of individual units, and each unit is responsible, alike, for the success of all family endeavors. Failure on the part of one of these units means failure to that extent for the whole group. Where there is proper individual interests, we will have successful home life.

It is impossible to have godly children where we find godless parents. If we would have praying, loving, happy individual units, we must have praying, loving, happy parents who are responsible for the family coming into existence.

The individual who can rule his own spirit is better than he that taketh a city. The man who can not rule his own family, or "set in order his family," especially while that family is tender in years (the proper time to "bend the twig" into the kind of a shaped tree we wish to see) can not do much "ruling" or "setting in order" the house of God. There may be an exception in the family, where the parents find the gospel after the family is well grown, but even then a family, the members of which have been brought up to respect authority, will be attentive and respectful to the wishes of the parents who are trying to live a new life. It has always been very hard—and I may be unsympathetic in this thing—but I never can visualize any of my children failing to respect myself and their mother, when we desire to pray in our home and give the Lord Jesus Christ the position of prominence he should occupy in all our homes. A well-ordered family considers the family life sacred ground, even though all of its members may not be trying to live religiously.

The stewardship of life is not reserved for those alone who evidence particular talents or ability. The task is wide enough to cover any and every human experience, with a place for use of every ability anyone can possess. The church today offers many avenues for service, and many specialists are needed in the various fields of activity. Church departments offer a wide field for the exercise of choice. Where do you choose to labor? When you have found that place, then prepare for the best possible kind of service, and rest assured that God will watch over you. And if you are faithful in the discharge of your duties the time will come when your ability can be of use in the kingdom of God. Are you a musician? Then seek to play for the glory of God and the benefit of humanity. Are you a teacher? Then give of your talents in a godly service that will merit the recognition of men and angels. Are you one who desires to occupy in the field of literature? Then be assured that a broad field of opportunity awaits you. Would you preach the word of God to men who know it not? Then fit yourself by study and prayer and rest assured that God, who knoweth the hearts of all men, will call you in his own due time to the place you can best serve him.

In this matter of the stewardship of life is a phase that should be considered by everyone who has named the name of Christ, and that is our stewardship of church membership. There is no more important thing to give consideration than this, for every member of the church owes it to every other member to be the best possible representative; because the church is judged by the quality of its members. What, then, do you suppose men and women of the community think of the church—(your church) from the standpoint of your life?

The value of the church, to the world at large, is no greater than the value of its individual members. It can rise no higher than the level of its membership, so your duty and mine is to make our church life such a sacred affair that we never endanger its standing in the community by any misconduct of ours. Just what is your church worth to you? How much are you putting into it by way of individual effort? If you are doing but little, what do you suppose your neighbors and friends think of the value you yourself put upon it? Membership in this church, which is indeed and in truth the church and kingdom of God, should be worth infinitely more than anything else in the world. Do we count it as such?

Last, but not least, we wish to consider another phase of life that some men will have to account for, and that is the stewardship of priesthood life; for without priesthood this church would be worth no more than any other church. Priesthood is authority placed upon men—which is given of God—whereby they have right to direct in the affairs of the government of God among men. It is presumed, however, that such direction is done under divine direction as the ambassadors for Christ. Anything else than this would mean confusion, and God would fail of the accomplishment of his purpose among men, which is their salvation.

Church progress can always be measured in terms of priesthood faithfulness. Wherever you find a faithful priesthood, you will also find a faithful membership. Like begets like! So where men are careless and indifferent towards the performance of priestly duties, we can not expect to find the members alert and active. In all things they should be "ensamples to the flock." If we wish church to start on time, we must have a priesthood, who are the spiritual leaders, to be on time. If we want the members to live godly lives, we must needs have a priesthood who live godly before them. Anything else will spell disaster for the flock.

Men of God must be faithful to the ideals of the kingdom, carrying on under adversity. We can't expect always to have a smooth roadway and no difficulties whatever, but those who are faithful need fear no trouble, whatever its name or nature, for Paul says: "We can do all things through Jesus Christ who strengtheneth us."

They must carry on, even under difficulty, and be stable in time of trouble. You know it is a very hard thing for the members to have confidence in the fellow who is called and set apart as a guardian of the flock when that fellow runs at the first sign of trouble from the enemy! Where will they go for advice when such times of peril come, if those who should be their helpers have proved unfaithful and unstable under such trying things?

When the spirit of intolerance, arrogance, hatred, and unforgiveness manifests itself, as it sometimes does, how will men of the priesthood offer assistance, save they be humble, forgiving, and kind? If we would keep faith with the membership, we must exhibit the traits of character that go to make up true men of God, "studying to show ourselves approved unto God," and of a willingness to sacrifice in their interest.

Members of the priesthood must always go before the flock, in order to set them a proper example in all things. We can not hope to drive, but we can hope and will be successful if we are prayerfully trying to lead them.

Would we have a membership faithful in the performance of duty; stable in times of adversity; willing to carry on under difficulties of the most trying sort; humble, forgiving, and kind; sacrificing for each other; "studying to show themselves approved"; and faithful to the ideals of the kingdom, we of the priestly line must manifest all these things in our own lives as the "shepherds" whom God has called to "feed the sheep and lambs" of his fold.

What a responsibility! What an opportunity! Could any man wish for greater? And to have the assurance that God will direct and bless our efforts that men and women may see the light, and after having seen it may have help divine to the accomplishment of purposes that are mighty and blessed, is wonderful to say the least; for we can not hope to show to our fellows that we have found a "new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness," unless we can prove by our own labors and life that we have "found it" through the application of divine law.

Life may have its perplexities, but it also has its blessings. It may have its cares, but we have the promise that if we "cast our care upon Him" we shall find that "He careth for us."

What are we doing concerning our "earthly blessings"? Are we using them wisely in the interest of others? These things compose our stewardship, for which we shall be called to render an accounting to God one day. Will we have any interest to offer the Lord of glory because we have wisely invested the things with which we were endowed?

"What is your life?" is the question which we will all have to answer some day, and all is dependent upon our own efforts as to what the answer shall be.

The spirit of unselfishness, if it is to be anything that is recognizably Christlike, must not merely characterize a man's occasional acts; it must characterize and dominate the main drive of his life.—Ernest Fremont Tittle, International Journal of Religious Education.

Book of Mormon Bibliography

By S. A. Burgess

The century of publication of the Book of Mormon reminds us that our church people are perhaps not sufficiently familiar with what the church has published on that subject.

In Zion, one sermon has been preached in each of the branches, but that gave time to present only a small part of the discussion. There is some very interesting matter in each of the following books.

First, the current publications of the Herald Publishing House, which can be secured for the prices indicated:

Stewardship

By E. R. Davis

For the past few years, and more intensely the past year, I have been specially interested in stewardship. It seems to me that stewardship is the only solution to the present social and economic problems, and that it is slowly but surely coming into its own.

John M. Versteeg, in his book entitled The Deeper Meaning of Stewardship, says, "The church must teach stewardship, not to protect itself, but to save the world." I agree with this writer in that stewardship must have a broader scope than simply to "protect" the church. It must finally reach out to the saving of the world, if it is to accomplish its purpose.

A working Israelite, when accosted by a rabbi from America, and who refused to stop his work to enter into a conversation with the rabbi, said, "We have no time for talk while we work. We are working to redeem Zion for the world, and for Jehovah." In the same spirit of this working Israelite we must work for the redemption of Zion, for the benefit of the world, and for God. A young man who has taken up agricultural stewardship, in writing about running their tractor machinery nights, said, "If they ask you why we work nights, tell them it is so we can make more surplus to create more stewardships." The spirit of stewardship is to think of others as well as of self.

Zion Not for Latter Day Saints Only

That the benefits of Zion are to reach beyond the confines of the Church of Latter Day Saints is evident from the following words of the Lord:

For, behold, I am about to call upon them to give heed to the light and glory of Zion, for the set time has come to favor her.—Doctrine and Covenants 107: 1.

This was given in connection with a reference to the "nations of the earth." Again the Lord says:

That the kingdom of this world may be constrained to acknowledge that the kingdom of Zion is in very deed the kingdom of our God and his Christ; therefore, let us become subject unto her laws.—Doctrine and Covenants 102: 9.

From these scriptures we gather that Zion is finally to become so outstanding in its demonstration of Christian fellowship that other peoples, outside of the church, will be so desirous of relief from their burdens that they will see in Zion the very thing they need, and they will be willing to become "subject unto her laws." This leads me to believe that before Zion can be a success we must become possessed of the spirit of altruism, which can demonstrate itself only through the practical application of the law of stewardship.

Definition of Stewardship

Quoting Mr. Versteeg again, we get this definition, "In the speech of every day, stewardship means the management of another's property."

Bishop Carmichael gives us the following very excellent and comprehensive definition: "Stewardship is the management of an investment of God in you."

President F. M. Smith, in his very broad definition, gives us this: "Stewardship means, from every man will be expected according to his capacity, and to every man will be given according to his needs and his wants based upon his condition."

From these definitions, and the scriptures before mentioned, and others that we shall quote, I gather that stewardship means that I must develop the gifts, or talents that are resident in me, according to my ability to understand, and my opportunity in life, and use them with an unselfish motive, in the interests of the church, and society, if I would receive from the church, and society, my just wants and needs.

The before stated definitions, then, suggest to us that stewardship places upon us the responsibility of managing another's business; that that business is an investment that God has made in us; that each one is expected to serve according to his capacity, that every one might receive according to his just wants and needs; and that each one is to be held responsible for the development and proper use of his gifts, or talents, according to his comprehension and his opportunities, if he would be entitled to the benefits offered. And this suggests a further responsibility; that is, to seek opportunity for the broadening, or enlargement, of our comprehension of stewardship, and to create opportunities whereby we might use our talents for the benefit of the group.

In the parable of the talents, Jesus tells us that two sought out means whereby they might improve upon their talents, and one made no effort to develop his, but wrapped it in a napkin, and hid it. This person is called a "wicked and slothful servant." In keeping with the same thought I wish to quote from President Smith's address to the 1922 conference, as follows:

The social significance of the Christian religion is crystallized in the doctrine of stewardships, according to which one is held socially responsible for the manner in which he utilizes whatever of property and wealth he may acquire. . . . This envisagement of social responsibility requires that talents as well as property shall be directed towards community welfare, the compulsion being not law but public sentiment. Wealth and property are not for personal pleasure according to caprice, but for service and enlarged contribution to the common weal.

More on the Use of Our Gifts and Talents

Further considering our gifts, and their use, we read from the law of God as follows:

All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.—Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8.

In Doctrine and Covenants 46: 4 we read:

Seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given; . . . They are given for the benefit of those who love me and keep all my commandments, and him that seeketh so to do, that all may be benefited.

And in the last part of the 7th paragraph of section 46 we find that the bishop of the church, and others, "are to have it given unto them to discern all those gifts."

From these last references we learn that all are called to labor in the Lord's work according to the gifts they have received from him, that they are to seek earnestly for the best gifts, and to always remember for what they are given, and that the purpose of the gifts is not that the individual might be benefited alone, but that all might be benefited. The thought is that we are responsible to God for the development and use of our gifts in behalf of the people, that all might receive the benefits.

Stewardship Is Universal in Its Application

Stewardship is enjoined upon every responsible person in the church, as we shall see by the following texts:

Every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward over his own property, or that which he has received by consecration, inasmuch as is sufficient for himself and family.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 9.

Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. And, behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God.—Doctrine and Covenants 70: 3.

It is wisdom in me; therefore, a commandment I give unto you, that ye shall organize yourselves, and appoint every man his stewardship, that every man may give an account unto me of the stewardship which is appointed unto him; for it is expedient that I, the Lord, should make every man accountable, as stewards over earthly blessings, which I have made and prepared for my creatures.—Doctrine and Covenants 101: 2.

And again I say unto you, I give unto you a commandment, that every man, both elder, priest, teacher, and also member, go to with his might, with the labor of his hands, to prepare and accomplish the things which I have commanded.

From these scriptures we learn that God has placed the responsibility of stewardship upon every one of us; but as a people we have stood in our own light for one hundred years, in not exercising ourselves in this respect. And even during the past few years while the general authorities of the church have been urging upon us the need for us to assume the obligations of stewardship, so few, comparatively speaking, have sought to obey the divine command.

In 1833 the Lord said:

There is even now already in store a sufficient, yea, even abundance to redeem Zion, and establish her waste places, no more to be thrown down, were the churches, who call themselves after my name, willing to hearken to my voice.—Doctrine and Covenants 98:10.

If there was sufficient then, surely there is sufficient now. It is apparent, however, that we are still delaying the "redemption of Zion" by our slowness, and, in many cases, unwillingness to hearken to His voice.

We complain about the economic conditions. Our workmen in the shops and factories find fault with the conditions under which they labor. Our farmers complain of their hard lot; and yet we delay, and refuse to do the very things that the Lord has told us to do, if we would be relieved of these distressing conditions.

In 1834 the Lord gave a revelation to the church, in which he tells us the law by which Zion must be built up, and why it has been delayed:

Behold, I say unto you, Were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now; but, behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil, and do not impart of their substance, as becometh saints, to the poor and afflicted among them, and are not united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom; and Zion can not be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I can not receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer.

Here we are informed that the reason for the delay in the redemption of Zion, is the transgression of the people, and their failure to "learn obedience," in imparting "their substance," and uniting themselves according to the "law of the celestial kingdom." And he informs us that we must continue to suffer until we learn obedience.

The Admonition of the Past Few Years

At the April conference of 1920, in his opening address to the conference, President F. M. Smith said:

So far as the work of the church is concerned, then, the time is here for the establishment of the practical aspects of the doctrine of stewardships, and for that the Presidency stands, and that we recommend to you,—that we enter upon the establishment of stewardships without delay. Let me emphasize those two last words, without delay,—for the time demands it.

Then in his address to the October conference of 1922, he says:

Let me plead once more most emphatically for the doctrine of stewardships. Let me call your attention to the dangerousness of the delay that this people is likely to cause if they do not move out in the establishment of the doctrine of stewardships. I have plead for the establishment of stewardships. I plead for it now. As I said before, I believe that the answer this people will give will determine what our progress will be. And so I earnestly plead with you that you might give to this your whole and your prayerful consideration that you as a delegate or you as an ex officio might be able to answer before God as to what shall be the attitude of this people in moving out to establish the reformed society that we call Zion. Must we depend on the young entirely? If so, let us give those young the most expeditious education under the most favorable conditions that it is possible for us to give.

The conference of 1925 adopted the program for the establishment of Zion, the first part of which reads, "Be it resolved that we favor the immediate initiation of a program looking towards the establishment of Zion and the application of the law of stewardships," and then follows the program, setting forth twelve definite moves towards the inauguration of the same.

Touching upon this program in his address to the conference of 1926, President Smith says:

It is an objective of the church as outlined in that program more specifically to make stewardships a living force in human lives and activities. . . . It is an objective to teach stewardships so that every man will not alone feel his responsibility to God, but also responsibility to his fellow man. It is an objective ultimately to put every Saint upon the stewardship basis, and when we use the word stewardship here we use it not in its narrowed or contracted sense of one having conscious responsibility to God, but an economic and broadened idea that that responsibility also functions in responsibility to our fellow man and to the group.

We see, then, that as far as the advice and teachings of our presiding officers and the actions of the conference are concerned, we are left without excuse. And during the same period not only has the Presidency and Presiding Bishopric written many articles and tracts, and delivered many public addresses on the subject, but most of the men under General Conference appointment, and a number of the local priesthood, have made this matter a part of their teachings. True it is that numbers have awakened to this great need and have entered whole-heartedly into it during the past decade; and were it not for the fact that their numbers are being constantly increased, the way would look very dark indeed. Our concern is, however, that so few, comparatively speaking, have yet caught the vision, and in this delay our danger lies, as the "hastening time" is upon us, and admonishes us "that it is high time to awake out of sleep."

Stewardship in Operation

To find the results of a practical application of stewardship, let us examine the scriptures which set forth the experiences of peoples of past ages, and the teachings of their leaders.

First we turn to the Bible and read of the people in Enoch's day:

And the Lord called his people, Zion; because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness; and there was no poor among them.—Genesis 7: 23, Inspired Version.

A few hundred years before the coming of Christ in the flesh, God attempted to establish stewardship among the people in Joseph's Land (America). Of this experience we read from the Book of Mormon:

And they did impart of their substance every man according to that which he had, to the poor, and the needy, and the sick, and the afflicted; and they did not wear costly apparel, yet they were neat and comely; and thus they did establish the affairs of the church; and thus they began to have continual peace again, notwithstanding all their persecutions. And now because of the steadiness of the church, they began to be exceeding rich; having abundance of all things whatsoever they stood in need; an abundance of flocks, and herds, and fatlings of every kind, and also abundance of grain, and of gold, and of silver, and of precious things; and abundance of silk and fine twined linen, and all manner of good homely cloth. And thus in their prosperous circumstances they did not send away any who were naked, or that were hungry, or that were athirst, or that were sick, or that had not been nourished; and they did not set their hearts upon riches; therefore they were liberal to all, both old and young, both bond and free, both male and female, whether out of the church or in the church, having no respect to persons as to those who stood in need; and thus they did prosper and become far more wealthy than those who did not belong to the church.—Alma 1: 40-47.

By this scripture we see that progress is being made. They are administering to the needs of the sick and afflicted, and the poor and needy; but they still have these undesirable conditions among them. Reading further we get the following:

And many of them saw and heard unspeakable things, which are not lawful to be written: and they taught, and did minister one to another; and they had all things common among them, every man dealing justly, one with another.—3 Nephi 12: 11.

And they had all things common among them, therefore there were not rich and poor, bond and free, but they were all made free, and partakers of the heavenly gift.—4 Nephi 1: 4.

In these verses we find that they continue to make progress until they finally reach the ideal. They have a common interest in all things, deal justly with one another, have no rich and no poor among them; neither are there two classes among them, one known as bond, and one as free; but they were all free, and as a result were all partakers of the heavenly gift. And the writer continues by saying, "And surely there could not be a happier people among all the people who had been created by the hand of God." (4 Nephi 1: 19.)

This same condition is depicted as having obtained in the church in the days of the apostles.

And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need.—Acts 2: 44, 45, Inspired Version.

And the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had all things common. And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus; and great grace was upon them all. Neither was there any among them that lacked; for as many as were possessors of lands or houses sold them, and brought the price of the things that were sold, and laid them down at the apostles' feet; and distribution was made unto every man according as he had need.—Acts 4: 32-35, Ibid.

The above references to the Bible and Book of Mormon prove conclusively that the law of stewardships was in operation in the church, both in Palestine and America in those days; and these references show plainly the ideal conditions that prevailed among the people under the operation of this law.

The Teachings of the Leaders in Those Days

And again, Alma commanded that the people of the church should impart of their substance, every one according to that which he had; if he had more abundantly, he should impart more abundantly; and he that had but little, but little should be required; and to him that had not should be given. And thus should they impart of their substance, of their own free will and good desires towards God, and to those priests that stood in need, yea, and to every needy, naked soul. And this he said unto them, having been commanded of God; and they did walk uprightly before God, imparting to one another, both temporarily and spiritually, according to their needs and their wants.—Mosiah 9: 60-64.

Here we find the law of stewardship taught and practiced to the extent that those who possessed the most of this world's goods gave the most, those who possessed little gave but little, and those who were without the necessities of this life were supplied out of the tithes, surplus, and offerings of the others.

Now we turn to Paul's teachings and read:

And herein I give my advice: for this is expedient for you, who have begun before, not only to do, but also to be forward a year ago. Now therefore perform the doing of it; that as there was a readiness to will, so there may be a performance also out of that which ye have. For if there be first a willing mind, it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not. For I mean not that other men be eased, and ye burdened; but by an equality, that now at this time your abundance may be a supply for their want, and that their abundance also may be a supply for your want: that there may be equality: as it is written, He that had gathered much had nothing over; and he that had gathered little had no lack.—2 Corinthians 8: 10-15. Read also Moffatt's Translation of the New Testament 2 Corinthians, 8th and 9th chapters.

From the above we find that the teaching of Mosiah in the Book of Mormon, and Paul in the Bible agree in setting forth the law of stewardship. The surplus of those who had any, went to supply the needs of those who lacked, and by the operation of this law there was to be an equality among the people, bringing about a condition where there were no poor and no rich, and everyone had his just wants and needs. As stated before, this is the only system that will bring relief to this present world; and as the Lord looked to the church to put into practice such a system in past ages, so he looks to the church to establish such a system in our day, for the benefit and salvation of the people. The surplus is to be used to establish stewardships, so that eventually the worthy poor may have an opportunity to help to supply their own needs. Under the present economic system of the world, there are millions who do not have the necessities of life; while others revel in luxury and abundance. The present world system is not the Lord's way, for he informs us that there is sufficient in the world, and to spare, so that all may have their just wants and needs. Greed, graft, and selfishness must be eliminated from the heart of man, and the altruistic spirit of stewardships planted in its stead, before we shall have relief from the present undesirable conditions.

True Ownership

God owns everything. Even the time belongs to God, and he has set apart a portion of time for us to work, and a portion for us to rest; but has designated no portion of time to be wasted. He expects that we make the proper use of our time. The following scriptures will show God ownership:

The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the Lord of hosts.—Haggai 2: 8.

For every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. I know all the fowls of the mountains; and the wild beasts of the field are mine.—Psalms 50: 10, 11.

Behold, all souls are mine; . . . —Ezekiel 18: 4.

For ye are bought with a price: therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's.—1 Corinthians 6: 20.

For the land is mine, . . . —Leviticus 25: 23.

I, the Lord, stretched out the heavens, and builded the earth as a very handy work; and all things therein are mine; and it is my purpose to provide for my saints, for all things are mine.—Doctrine and Covenants 101: 2.

Behold, all these properties are mine, . . . —Doctrine and Covenants 101: 10.

It must needs be that the riches of the earth are mine to give.—Doctrine and Covenants 38: 9.

Let not any man among you say that it is his own, . . . —Doctrine and Covenants 101: 12.

Neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own.—Acts 4: 32.

. . . which doth not belong to you, but to God, to whom also, your life belongeth.—Mosiah 2: 37.

From these references we learn that God is the real owner of all things. Possession without ownership makes us stewards; and we are to be made accountable to God for the way we use the possessions which he places in our hands.

How to Become a Steward Indeed

We are now ready to learn the steps necessary for us to take in order to become a steward indeed. Of course, the first thing for our consideration is for us to become converted to the cause of Christ, and the establishment of his kingdom in the earth. This is brought about by a careful study of the gospel of Jesus Christ in connection with the doctrine, organization, and practice of his church, dealt with in the many articles published in the church papers and books. We leave that phase of the question to other writers at this time, and proceed to take up the definite steps to be taken in the making of a steward, following conversion to the principles of the gospel. In a leaflet recently put out by the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric of the church, entitled, The Making of a Steward, we find nine definite steps presented as necessary in the making of stewards. We do not wish to go into great detail in this connection, as much has been written along that line, and space here will not permit of any great detail; so we will touch only briefly upon each of the nine steps to be taken:

First. One who wishes to become a steward must first make application to the First Presidency upon a blank provided for that purpose; signed and submitted to the First Presidency by the branch, district, or stake president, in the territory where the applicant resides; or by some authorized elder in the church, where the applicant is located in unorganized territory.

Second. The applicant fills out and returns to the First Presidency a paper setting forth certain information about the applicant which is held in confidence by the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric.

Third. A blank is sent to three responsible elders who know the one who wishes to become a steward. This blank is filled in by the three elders, certifying to the applicant's spiritual standing, and returned to the First Presidency.

Fourth. The bishop of the stake or district, or the bishop's agent of the district or branch submits recommendations testifying to the financial standing of the applicant.

Fifth. If the applicant qualifies in the first four steps, arrangements are to be made by the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric for the consecration, or setting apart of the steward.

Sixth. The steward will now receive a "certificate of stewardship," which will be good for one year, subject to renewal on the grounds of the steward's yearly compliance with the law of stewardship; and now becomes a steward indeed.

Seventh. Inasmuch as the purpose of the church is to establish a Zion, consideration is now given to the advisability of the steward gathering to Zion and her stakes.

Eighth. Advice as to the time when the steward should come to Zion or her stakes, should come from certain ones whose duty it is to advise in this connection, who have on file the afore-mentioned forms properly filled out, together with other information, in order to advise him intelligently.

Ninth. A final decision may now be made as to the wisdom of the one asking advice about coming to Zion or her stakes.

More complete information touching these nine steps can be obtained from the headquarters of the church at Independence, Missouri.

In summing up the thoughts thus far presented, we learn: That God is the legal owner of all things; that our management of God's property, or his investment in us, makes us stewards, whether we admit it or not. We learn also that the law of God requires that every one acknowledge his stewardship and conduct it in harmony with that law; that a practical application of the law of stewardship will bring about Zion, which means relief from the present economic conditions in the establishment of a condition where there will be no want of the necessities of life. We learned that such conditions obtained in the past under the jurisdiction of the church, as set forth in the Bible, and the Book of Mormon; and that such a condition is to obtain again, when the people of God have prepared themselves for it. We learned also that the leaders of the church today, and latter-day revelations to the church, urge us to hasten our preparation for Zion's redemption. God has said that it is his purpose to provide for his people; but he says that it must be done in his own way, which is through the establishment of the law of stewardships, that men may work with each other, and for each other; that all who will may enjoy the favor of God.

Shadows

I passed him in the night
And moving on
He knew me not.
Yet there,
Clothed in the tattered rags
Of poverty,
Was mine own brother
Under God.

For that he was a man
We two are kin;
Nor race nor color,
Pride of place
Or other false assumptions
May excuse
My arrogance—
I passed him by.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Sacramento, California

March 24.—A fellowship banquet was held in the lower auditorium January 15. District President G. P. Levitt presided and gave an interesting address. Each officer in turn spoke of plans for the new year. The Women's Department served the sumptuous feast. Sister Ella Dawson was in charge, the Temple Builder girls serving.

Brother Levitt concluded his series of sermons on Church History and gospel principles January 26, speaking on "The resurrection and eternal judgment." A beautiful tableau was presented. Seven characters in costume represented Faith, Repentance, Baptism, Laying on of Hands, Resurrection, Eternal Judgment, and the Church with a crown of twelve stars. A lighted cross stood in front, and at the rear the sun, moon, and star glories were represented in silhouette with varying lights. The whole scene was illumined by a profusion of lights, concluding with an interplay of colors. Sister Marion Burton directed. Brother Ives Honeychurch was the electrician.

The choir, Sister Birdie Clark directing, went by auto January 17 to Stockton Branch to repeat its Christmas cantata. The evening offering of twenty-three dollars was graciously given for our building fund. One unpleasant feature was the inability of the guest tenor, Mr. M. Ridley, to accompany us. He was injured in an auto accident while returning home from the last rehearsal.

The February sacramental service was another of the spiritual feasts often enjoyed here. Brother Levitt was present to lead the worship. Several were addressed encouragingly in prophecy.

The district conference convened here March 1. Of the twenty delegates elected five are residents here. Apostle M. A. McConley gave an illustrated talk on the accomplishments of the church. Scenes of Independence and vicinity were very interesting. Brother McConley remained over the next evening to conduct a financial pledge meeting. A sum of $725 was pledged, and nearly $400 paid that evening.

Brother Levitt preached the following Sunday morning and evening. He pled with the Saints to add to their faith the gospel virtues. The spirit accompanying the morning sermon and the prophecy following was a benediction to the struggling group which had so recently made every effort to meet a great need in the pledge meeting.

Pastor W. H. Dawson and Elder S. M. Reiste ably conducted a two weeks' series of meetings just prior to Decision Day, March 16. Brother Levitt was present to speak one evening. This last day, Sunday, was the crowning event of the series, for Elder and Sister H. I. Velt, of Australia, were in our midst. Brother Velt addressed us morning and evening in a humble, saintly way and with such a testimony that we felt it good to be numbered with the Saints from all lands. He also gave a pleasing violin solo, and Sister Velt charmed us with her deep, rich voice in a solo number. Mr. M. Ridley was also present that evening, fully recovered from his accident. Because of his appreciation of flowers and other courtesies while ill, he chose to sing "Give flowers to the living." Brother and Sister Velt were guests of Sister Bidwell, whose husband is our city mayor. Together they enjoyed by auto the scenic beauties of California's capital city. The next day a group of Saints went to see the visitors off and to greet the Australian delegation on its way. It was an especial pleasure to again greet Elder and Sister A. C. Barmore, well-beloved former missionaries here.

The church school, Sister C. H. S. Bidwell superintendent, has made several progressive changes. At 9.45 Sunday morning the entire group meets in the main auditorium for worship. Classes then march to their locations for age-group worship, study, and final dismissal. This eliminates a second assembly and gives the teachers more time. Birthday offerings are received in the classes. Training in worship and Bible appreciation are two of the aims of the teachers. The orchestra, led by Brother E. C. Burdick, provides a fifteen-minute program, beginning at 9.30. Classes in study are provided for those desiring certain subjects at 6.00 o'clock in the evening. Sister Florence Epling has supervision of this hour.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, with Sister Marion Burton, superintendent, has provided many activities this new year. The Happy Timers have had several parties, one a valentine party. A country store was the feature of one evening for all in the branch. Mr. Ernest Doremus was the old-type grocer. The sheriff stalked in to watch several old cronies play checkers. Village lovers sang "Reuben and Rachel." The college girl was saucy. A fiddler, the country choir, and the "orchestry" gave selections. Farmers strolled in to visit. John Chinaman trotted in with his broad hat, pole and bags, asking for "Chiny lice." The setting was typical of '49 days here. Later the sale of groceries and refreshments netted a neat sum for the department's treasury.

A farewell program was given last Thursday evening to honor the twelve members going from here to conference. An address was given by the pastor. There were vocal solos by Sisters Birdie Clark, Edna Burdick, Betty Bidwell, a sketch in costume by Sister Marian Burton, and the story of Saint Patrick by Sister Orah Johnston. Later, games and refreshments were enjoyed in the lower auditorium. The program and refreshments carried out the traditional theme of the month's patron saint. The guests soon to leave were Elder and Sister G. P. Levitt, Sisters Gertrude Bidwell, Cora Taylor, Hazel Blohm, delegates; Sisters M. A. Harlow, Marie Honeychurch, Emma Cook, Rose Dawson, Betty Bidwell, Brothers Oscar Ensley, and Cleland Levitt, visitors.

The junior boys were taken by their teacher, Brother Burdick, to visit local government buildings. This trip came about as a result of a discussion of the trip of Mary and Joseph to Bethlehem to be taxed. The boys were interested in seeing where our taxes are paid, where law courts are held, and even the jails where some trips end. At the latter place a courteous officer gave them a friendly talk of counsel.

The Idola Club held its last meeting at the home of Brother and Sister Burdick. The financial committee, Sister Ella Dawson, chairman, have a cake-bake in the church kitchen nearly every Friday and a food sale the following day in local stores. The piano debt is decreasing.

Sister Burdick and her Temple Builder Chapter, Alpha Theta, met last at the home of Violet Rausch.

Mr. and Sister Irvin Petz, of Tracy, are the happy parents of a little daughter born here Sunday, March 23.

Two babies blessed in recent months are Madeline Alma, little daughter of Mr. and Sister I. Thompson, and Betty Lue, infant daughter of Brother and Sister Guy Driggs.

Brother Joseph Ensley was hurt recently while driving a tractor but is recovering, and all are thankful that he escaped a fatal injury.

Wray, Colorado

An all-day meeting was held in Wray March 23. Sunday school began at ten o'clock in the morning. There was preaching at eleven o'clock and again at 2:30 in the afternoon by Elder H. E. Winegar. His discourses were thoroughly enjoyed by the hearers. A basket dinner followed the morning services.

Two small girls were baptized by Brother Winegar at 1.30 in the afternoon in the head waters of the Republican River. The little girls were courageous, as this water is always cold and especially so at this time of year.

Saints came to Wray from a distance, taxing the capacity of the church building to the limit. Some one hundred and twenty-five were present. Local Saints are planning the construction of a basement to care for such meetings.

Everyone enjoyed the gathering, and we hope all will come again to be with us the last Sunday in April. An all-day meeting is held here the last Sunday each month.

Madison, Wisconsin

2119 Jackson Street

The morning of February 23 Brother Henry Woodstock was the speaker, using for his text 1 John 3:9. In the evening came the historical program. First Brother Burns directed the chorus in singing an anthem "Glory to God" and "Blest angels, we greet you." The invocation was by Brother Charles Clark, who then read Revelation 14:6, 7, and Doctrine and Covenants 17:1-11. The congregation sang "Angel message," and Sister Nona Walker "Face to face." The congregation sang "Angel's commission" from the Hymnal. Brother Clark gave a short illustrated lecture from the slides of the Angel's visitation and Hill Cumorah. Characters for the play were Brother Burns and Nona Walker, minister and wife; Margaret Johnson taking the part of Joseph. They made the play so real and impressive that the congregation was moved to tears. Brother Clark preached a sermon on "Hear ye him."

Preparation is now being made for the next play to be presented the last Sunday night in the month. Workers expect to present a play each month during the year. The programs thus far have been very interesting, and large crowds have attended.

March 2 Brother and Sister Henry Woodstock and Leda Colbert motored to Beloit to attend a rally day service at the Beloit Church. March 6 Leda Colbert, superintendent of the Department of Women, went to Milwaukee to meet with the women there and gave them a talk on "Religious education in the family." Brothers Berve and Muceus were also there. Brother Berve returned to Madison, while Brother Muceus stayed in Milwaukee to hold a week's series of meetings.

March 5 the prayer service had average attendance. The theme was "What have I done for the church?" It brought some splendid testimonies from the membership.

A surprise party occurred March 6 at the home of Brother and Sister Tom Johnson. The Saints gathered in honor of Sister Johnson, whose birthday it was. The house was full, and an enjoyable time was had. After Sister Johnson had been wished many more birthdays, a purse was presented.

Commencing Sunday, March 9, a week of special preaching services was held, Brother Amos Berve the speaker. Some of his subjects were "The Devil and what he intends to do," "The church of 1930," "Man and his possibilities," "Heaven—where and what it is," "Restoration of all things," "Pillars of earth." Brother Berve had good liberty in his preaching, and those who heard him received much help. On Sunday evening he gave an illustrated lecture "History of the church."

"What I would like to do for my church," the theme for the prayer hour March 19, evoked expression of many desires and ambitions from the membership, and as a result splendid spiritual tone was given the meeting.

The district superintendent of women asked that each local department contribute to a box of linen for the Sanitarium. Most of the branches responded. All contributions were sent to the superintendent, who with the aid of Sister Mary Woodstock packed them for mailing. The price of the articles was estimated to be sixty dollars. Articles such as towels, table covers, dresser scarfs, wash cloths, sheets, pillow slips, and others were contributed by Lancaster, Soldiers Grove, Evansville, Milwaukee, and Madison Branches.

Everyone is talking of General Conference. Many are planning to attend.

Floyd Carpenter's family, which has been shut in most of the winter on account of scarlet fever, is again out. We are glad to again have the members present to worship with us.

Muscatine, Iowa

908 East Ninth Street

Saints at Muscatine are trying to keep the gospel light burning. We meet on Tuesday evening for prayer service, and on Thursday evening for Recreation and Expression, which is well attended. Sister Dorothy Freers is the superintendent and Sister Beatrice Wagler is secretary.

The branch has given the plays published in Vision for January and February, and the one for March will be presented when due preparation is made.

Decision Day we enjoyed an inspirational sermon by a former member of the branch, Lockwood Moore, of Iowa City, Iowa, who occupied the morning preaching hour.

The Sunday school is doing well. Attendance each Sunday is about thirty-five. Brother Leslie Allen is superintendent and is alert in his office.

Brother Philip Wagler, branch president, with other members of the priesthood, is doing all he can to keep the church work growing. He preaches in the pulpit on Sundays and tells the old, old story in the shop through the week.

Many have expressed a desire to attend the General Conference, but as yet no one has fully decided to attend.

We have started to prepare a program for Easter Sunday. Sister Sini Goddard was chosen chairman of the program committee.

The Lord has blessed us in moving and remodeling our little church building, that we might make it an acceptable place in which to worship him.

Haverhill, Massachusetts

March 18.—Beginning February 9 District President William Patterson held a week's series of meetings in the branch. The spirit of his office and calling rested upon him to a marked degree throughout the series. Much valuable information was gleaned, and encouragement was given to some whose loads have seemed at times far too grievous to be borne.

The branch has had cause to again realize the truthfulness of the apostolic saying that when one member suffers all the members suffer with him. Bobbie Randall, our youngest regular attendant at church services, was suddenly stricken with appendicitis, necessitating an immediate operation in the night. What an anchor the hope of the gospel is! What a blessed privilege to call for God's servants and feel that while the surgeon's knife is necessary at times, the hand of God can surely guide that of the surgeon. Bobbie's condition very shortly after the operation was commented upon as being marvelous by the hospital nurses.

Junior church is being conducted by Teacher Andrew Wengle. Much interest is being shown by the young people. They have also formed a choir and are furnishing much of the special music. Sister Ella Thayer acts as director.

Much friendly competition is being stimulated in the Sunday school under the direction of the assistant superintendent, Parker Hatch, in memorizing the names of the books of the Old Testament, the ten commandments, etc. It is good to stir up our minds to remembrance.

The juniors who are studying the Book of Mormon through project work are still keenly interested in their task.

We regret our inability to have a representative from this branch at the Centennial Conference. The proud boast of this city at one time was to be one of the leading shoe manufacturing cities of the United States, but now its industrial problems have left it more like a battle field. The Saints being more or less dependent for a livelihood on the success of this business, have not escaped the financial struggle.

Decision Day, another guidepost along the path of progress, is now a matter of history in the branch as well as the hundreds of others throughout the church.

We trust it has been a turning point in the lives of many, a day for self-analysis for those whose names are enrolled on the books, a day in which vague longings crystallized into definite actions, a day in which all thought in terms of Joshua's statement: "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." It is the sensing of our personal responsibility that will make possible the development of the group philosophy.

Elder David Dowker in his evening's address in the branch, March 8, made special appeal to those already within the fold to search their hearts and lives to see if it were not possible to consecrate more fully of their time and talent to go the other mile, as it were, to further the cause of Zion. Through his vivid portrayal the Saints were made to visualize the sacrifice that in its finest interpretation is only their "reasonable service."

Pittsburgh Conference

The Pittsburgh district conference convened Saturday and Sunday, March 8 and 9. Saturday's business session opened at two o'clock. Apostle Ellis and Elder T. M. Carr were in charge. Officers elected for the district are: T. M. Carr, district president; B. F. Warner, vice president of the district; Benjamin Cooper, secretary; J. W. Winters, superintendent of Sunday school; J. P. Marsh, superintendent of Department of Recreation and Expression; Sister William H. Daugherty, superintendent of the Department of Women; T. M. Carr, department of music; and Floyd Bradford, publicity agent. Delegates to General Conference are: Lewis D. Cooper, of Pittsburgh; Anna Mae Curry, of Pittsburgh; Mollie A. Carr, of Lock No. Four; Katherine Winship, of Fayette City; and Frank A. Reams, of Punxsutawney.

Sunday morning at 8.30 the social service in charge by T. M. Carr and Frank Shinn. A peaceful spirit pervaded this service, and words of encouragement were spoken, especially to the district president, T. M. Carr.

At ten o'clock J. A. Jaques, of the New York and Philadelphia district, was the speaker. A stirring discourse, especially to the young people, from a salesman's point of view, was delivered on the subject, "Carrying on." This was immediately followed by another discourse by Apostle Ellis, on "Looking forward." Brother Ellis is a distinguished representative of this latter-day evangel. His precise and explicit statements were laden with valuable thoughts.

Institute work opened at three o'clock: Talk by Brother Bruce Crayne, of Los Angeles, California, "Activities of the young people of California"; talk by Brother John Peterman, of Detroit, "Vision of the young people of the church"; talk by Sister Anna Mae Curry, "Congregational singing." At this service two children were blessed and one brother confirmed.

Sunday evening Apostle Ellis was the speaker. The subject was, "Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrine," and the discourse urged us to be careful of our conduct, that this gospel be not blasphemed. God has placed both himself and his gospel above reproach, and it is for us to so live that all men may come to the realization that there is a saving grace in the plan he gives that can not be found elsewhere.

In the district, during February and March, special missionary services were held in Punxsutawney, DuBois, and New Castle with interest and attendance had from members and nonmembers.

F. F. BRADFORD.

Los Angeles, California

Central Branch

March 14.—As we look back over the month that has passed, we find much to be thankful for, and yet there have been some things which brought sadness. The passing of Brother A. Z. Rudd recently brought sadness to many friends, as well as to his immediate family. Brother Rudd had been living in Los Angeles for some time and we had learned to esteem him highly.

During the month of February Pastor Glaude A. Smith arranged with Doctor A. W. Teel for a series of health talks each Sunday evening. Doctor Teel would give us a short talk on health, and Brother Smith would follow this with a sermon on spiritual health. These services were very beneficial to those attending.

The Sunday morning service of February 9 was under the direction of the finance committee, Brother W. D. Gillen, chairman, in charge. The theme was "What your money is used for." We were glad to note a good attendance and believe the frank discussion of the things involved in the local budget for 1930 created a more widespread interest in local affairs. This meeting was followed on February 20 by a banquet sponsored by the trustees. The banquet was well attended, and the program arranged by the trustees was interesting and entertaining. A drive was started to raise pledges to clear the church debt within three years. About four thousand nine hundred dollars was pledged at that time.

The recently organized orchestra, under the direction of Brother D. W. Loar, is doing fine work. Here is opportunity for musicians to render valuable service. Orchestra practice is held each Friday evening.

The friends of Jack Forsythe were made very happy by witnessing his baptism Sunday evening, February 23. Jack has been working with us for some time and has a host of friends among the young people as well as the old. We are indeed very happy to extend him the hand of fellowship and call him one of us.

Brother and Sister Johnnie Van Valkenburg were made happy on February 17 by the arrival of a baby girl. They have named her Ann Marie.

The "Know your own church" programs which have been given lately have proved interesting and entertaining. The first playlet, which was of Joseph's birth, was well dramatized by Brother J. R. Johnson, Brother Frank Gregg, and Sister Nellie Crum. The second, Joseph's visit with the minister, was splendidly rendered by Sister Fern McConley, Brother W. D. Gillen as the minister, and Jack Forsythe as young Joseph.

February 25 the Idola Club had its regular monthly meeting at the home of Brother L. B. Shippy, on South Normandie. These club meetings are proving to be very pleasant, and the members always look forward to the next meeting. About thirty members were present at this meeting, and after business session the evening was turned over to the entertainment committee, which had arranged for a "Cootie" party. Sister Hazel Gregg, in charge of refreshments, served a delicious luncheon.

Southern California district conference convened at Central Los Angeles Church Saturday, March 8. The services were well attended by members from all over the district. Meals were served both days in the Recreation Auditorium by the "Marthas." The Sunday morning prayer service was particularly worthy of mention and one that will long be remembered by those who attended. Four men, members of Santa Barbara Branch, were called to the priesthood. Also Brother W. J. Nuckles, who has been in charge of the Lennox Mission for some time, was recommended to be ordained to the office of elder.

Brother John F. Martin talked at the eleven o'clock service on Sunday morning to a crowded auditorium. His subject was "The unfinished task." At the round table in the afternoon Brother McConley and Brother Albert Carmichael gave interesting talks. The evening service consisted of a fine musical program at 6.30 in charge of the district chorister, Sister Margaret Wickes Jones, following which Brother McConley gave an illustrated lecture.

At the business session on Saturday, delegates were elected to represent this district at the General Conference at Independence in April. Names of Southern California delegates follow: Laura Ball, John W. Blair, Roselyn Bussey, David B. Carmichael, Sister Billie Carpender, L. L. Coberly, Nelle Crum, Hunter Ferguson, George Givens, Frank A. Gregg, Lessie Hagaman, Ella Harris, Dona Long, Pearl Lytle, Mae Mather, Mae Melvin, Jessie Nichols, Myrtle A. Smith, A. M. Starkey, W. A. Teagarden, A. W. Teel, Charles Tutty.

East Branch

March 18.—Brother John F. Martin conducted a series of missionary meetings in East Los Angeles, March 2 to 16, the full value of which can not at this time be determined. Much good was realized, however, on the closing day of the meeting, which came on the churchwide Decision Day, when twelve were baptized into the church carrying the branch over its quota of new members. Good attendance, splendid interest, and an unmistakable missionary spirit prevailed throughout the meetings. Although there was rain two evenings and an epidemic of measles, the people were not prevented from coming.

Decision Day was a busy as well as a happy day. Friday night Brother Martin talked on "The turning point," working up to Decision Day, and on Sunday the theme in Sunday school was along lines of decision and baptism. Brother Martin also gave a chalk talk in Sunday school which held spellbound children and adults. At the eleven o'clock hour eleven of the candidates for baptism were baptized by Pastor J. C. Stuart. Brother Thorson and Brother Lum were in charge of the service. Brother Martin explained briefly the ordinances of baptism and the laying on of hands. Four of the candidates were young people and seven were children. The confirmation was had immediately after baptism then Brother Martin gave the charge to the new members concerning their privileges and duties. A quartet sang "Jesus, I my cross have taken," and three small girls, sang "Let them come to me."

At 2.30 in the afternoon, a large number gathered at the home of Brother Kaufman, in Montebello. From there they drove to the Rio Hondo River, where one more candidate, Brother Earl Clayton, was led into the waters of baptism. Brother Lum officiated, and Brother Stuart was in charge. Confirmation was at the evening service. The Saints were made to rejoice at Brother Clayton's decision to affiliate himself with the church, as he has been investigating the work for some time, and moreover his baptism completed another family circle. We feel he will be an asset to our branch.

A goodly number of our people attended the district conference at Central Church March 8 and 9. They report an enjoyable and profitable experience.

The Saints were saddened Sunday evening, March 2, when Sister Stroud was stricken with paralysis after coming to the church service. She was taken home immediately, and passed away a few minutes later. She was a teacher in the Sunday school and a devout supporter of the church. She came from Oklahoma to Los Angeles with her family about two years ago and although she came to us as a stranger, we found in her a kindredship such as is known only to Saints. The funeral was held Wednesday morning, at which time Brother Martin preached a beautiful sermon and gave much comfort and consolation to the bereaved ones. The body was laid to rest in Sunny Side Mausoleum near Long Beach.

The various departments are moving forward. They are under the leadership of the following: Sunday school, Sister Vivian Foster; Department of Recreation and Expression, Brother Clifton West; Department of Women, Sister Susie Le Neve; Department of Music, Brother Joseph Farley. The Sunday school is following as nearly as possible the themes presented in the Departments' Journal each month and is getting into operation thirty junior budget books. The Department of Recreation and Expression is giving each month the historical plays by Elbert A. Smith in Vision. The Women's Department meets all day every Thursday for quilting and embroidery work. It has just finished a quilt known to them as the "penny quilt." Every one was asked to piece a block for the quilt and pay a penny for each piece of material used in making it. When the quilt was finished, the blocks were judged on the merits of work and the number of pieces used and the quilt presented to the winner. Sister Vivian Foster won the quilt. She had two hundred pieces in her block twelve inches square. The department cleared fifteen dollars on the project. The department of music is to be commended for its support in the missionary services. Special numbers were rendered almost every evening.

The publicity department also reports a good business during the past two weeks. A number of tracts were given out, and books and subscriptions to the amount of $21.25 were sold. Still others have expressed their desire to order in the near future.

The Orioles have been busy with getting ready their exhibits for conference, and the older ones are busy planning for the organization of Temple Builders in the near future.

East Los Angeles plans for a busy summer and hopes to move forward toward the goal—Zion.

Logan, Iowa

March 27.—A common form of salutation among members of the Logan Branch during the last few weeks is, "Are you going to General Conference?" Many expect to be present at the centennial gathering and are looking forward to a season of pleasure, profit, and added incentive.

Since last report the pulpit has been filled at different times by Brothers Mark Jensen, of Moorhead; Ray Whiting, of Council Bluffs; and Chester Butterworth and Ervin Rosenberger, of Woodbine, as well as by members of the local priesthood. Junior church is held each Sunday in the basement under the supervision of Sister Myrtle Crabb.

Tuesday evening is branch "visiting night," when the priesthood meets at the home of the branch president, then go by two to visit the various homes of the membership. Good is being accomplished by these friendly visits.

Friends here learned of the marriage of Mrs. Martha Carlile and Charles Pitt, of Woodbine, February 24. Sister Carlile has been a member of Logan Branch for a number of years, and her many friends extend hearty good wishes for happiness in the new home.

Within the last few weeks two of our number have been called to the great beyond. February 23, Floyd Perkins, a veteran of the World War, was laid to rest after a long illness, caused in part at least by hardships and injuries sustained while overseas. He was given military burial, comrades of the American Legion firing a last salute and playing "taps" over the flag-draped casket. He leaves a companion and two little ones to mourn his passing. March 17 Brother John Kilpatrick passed suddenly to his reward, a victim of heart failure. Quiet and unassuming yet ever kindly and courteous, he will be most sorely missed by those who knew him best, especially in the home and at church services where he was a faithful attendant. He and his wife had recently moved to Logan from the farm, living together in the new home but a few weeks. He leaves his companion and six grown sons and daughters as well as other relatives and innumerable friends. So swells the number on the other side whom we may hope to meet in future glad reunion.

Decatur, Illinois

1174 West King Street

March 17.—We are trying to carry on the Lord's work. On account of much sickness among the membership, our attendance fell off during winter months, but it is again increasing.

Pastor O. C. Johnson, who has been confined to his home all winter with sickness, is now able to again take up the work that other members of the priesthood have been doing while he was ill.

The Women's Department held a bakery sale at a leading department store in February and cleared twenty-six dollars. The women will continue to make this a monthly affair to help pay off the church debt.

Elder F. T. Mussell, district president, has just closed a week's series of meetings, admonishing the Saints to come up higher and encouraging all to greater effort in preparing to occupy in Zion.

While many of the members have been out of employment, which has been some handicap to the progress of the work, we are not discouraged. The Saints are showing their loyalty by faith in the gospel. Quite a few of the members who have no work, or only a day or two a week, have managed to pay tithes and church pledges, when the dues on their homes went unpaid. This shows a great faith and loyalty.

February 14 the Women's Department held a potluck supper in the church basement, after which they entertained the men with a program in the main auditorium. It has been decided that such a social event should be held each month. The men on March 13 entertained the women with potluck supper serving and washed the dishes; then they entertained the guests with a program in the main auditorium.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sloan have a baby boy. Mrs. Sloan was formerly Miss Louise Dennis.

March 4 Miss Lena Ellis and Roy Stump, of Arcola, Illinois, were united in marriage at the home of Elder O. C. Johnson in Decatur.

Lansing, Michigan

March 12.—Our ranks, since May, 1929, have increased to the extent of one hundred and four souls: ninety-one by baptism (our quota was nineteen) and thirteen by transfer.

During the past six weeks, beginning January 26, Lansing has witnessed one of the most successful series of meetings ever held here. During these meetings, held by Elder O. J. Hawn, sixty people have enlisted as soldiers for Christ. Before Brother Hawn came two teams were organized to compete with each other as to which side could bring the most nonmembers to services. Albert Stanke was captain of one team and Clare Easlick captain of the other. Each time a member on the teams brought a nonmember one point was received, even though the same person came each night. The total number of points received by both sides was about twelve hundred. One sister's work was especially commendable. Sister Jennie Van Why brought five others with her, and each one became a member of the church.

March 10 a reception was held for the new members. Ice cream and cake were served, new members being served first. An impromptu program was given which was much enjoyed. Some Battle Creek Saints were present and contributed to the program.

February 9 and 10 Apostle D. T. Williams was here and interestingly gave through slides and lectures the history of the church.

The Sabbath school is also growing larger and larger each Sunday. It now numbers between one hundred twenty-five and one hundred fifty.

During the past week one of our young sisters, Dorothy Myzell, became suddenly ill with heart trouble and pneumonia and was given up by two doctors, but through administration she was relieved and is now on the road to recovery.

We are glad for these blessings, and want to work to the end that in this, the capital city of Michigan, our branch may grow and prosper until it may be recognized as one of the outstanding branches in the church.

Brother and Sister Ray Frisbie recently left Lansing to go farther west. They were willing workers in this branch, Brother Frisbie acting as branch solicitor and Sister Frisbie as friendly visitor. Sister Frisbie's health is poor, and they are seeking a more favorable climate.

Boston, Massachusetts

The sacramental service Sunday, January 5, 1930, marked the beginning of a week of special prayer and devotion observed throughout the entire church. This seemed a fitting and proper way to begin this centennial year.

At the first business meeting of 1930, the branch approved a coordinated budget for the year, placing all the finances of the departments under one head. We believe that in this, Boston Branch has made a big step in the right direction.

We have been happy to welcome Brother and Sister John W. Foster, of Enfield, England, into our midst this winter. Brother Foster has been appointed solicitor for the bishopric, and is proving of great assistance along this special line of work.

Sanford Lee Fisher, jr., is a newcomer in Boston Branch, but both his parents, Sanford and Agnes, have hosts of friends throughout the church who gladly extend their heartiest congratulations. Sunday morning, March 23, he was blessed by his two grandfathers.

Brother and Sister Richard Baldwin made us a short visit after reaching the shores of America. They were given a hearty welcome "home," and were made to realize their friends had not forgotten them or their previous work in this branch.

Sister Doris Oakman, also from England, has been with us for a number of weeks, residing at the home of Brother and Sister E. L. Traver. We have had the pleasure of listening to her oration, "The significance of the Restoration." Doris is to compete in the oratorical contest to be held in the Auditorium Sunday evening, April 6. The prayers and best wishes of her many friends go with her for her success.

A detailed account of the Southern New England Conference held March 1 and 2 has already been printed in the Herald by the press committee. We can only add that they did not exaggerate one bit in saying it was one of the finest conferences held in our district. The feeling of progress prevailed, and Brother Budd gave us much food for consideration.

Immediately following the district conference, District President William Patterson conducted a series of meetings. His general theme was "The restitution of all things." The attendance and interest at these meetings were very good, and none can estimate the value and far-reaching good accomplished, for only time can record this.

The Department of Women has held regular meetings at the different homes this winter. Attendance has been remarkable, for weather conditions have not always been satisfactory. The programs have been of a high order, interesting, instructive, and of a lasting benefit.

The Boston unit of the Patroness Society of the Independence Sanitarium has been organized with a charter membership of one hundred and seven women. The men-folks also are seeing the opportunity to do their "bit," and a goodly number are honorary members. This movement is heartily indorsed by President Smith, Doctor Teel, and many others at church headquarters. We believe this is the first unit to be formed here in the East, but we hope it will be but the beginning of a unit in every branch of the entire church. We trust it will be the stepping-stone toward a bigger and better-equipped Sanitarium.

Decision Day, March 16, added two new members to our branch, Burton Norton and Donald Learnard.

From a local paper we quote: "Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Fisher announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth Viola Fisher, to Frederick Warren Hill." We know this news item will be of interest far and wide, for Sister Ruth's work as head of the Dramatic Department of Graceland College won for her the love and esteem of hosts of friends.

Boston Branch will be well represented at the coming General Conference, as a goodly number of its members are planning to attend. We trust they may gather spiritual food sufficient not only for their own needs, but an extra portion to bring back to those who remain at home.

Elder David Dowker, pastor, has been accomplishing much good by his many visits to the homes of the Saints, and by his inspiring sermons. We are having excellent attendance at the Sunday morning services and a large number at the prayer meetings.

Sharon, Pennsylvania

March 21.—About four weeks ago, shortly after the return of Brother and Sister Richard Baldwin from England, the matter of holding a series of services in the Sharon Branch was arranged.

The week of March 3 was spent in visiting homes of the members, led by Evangelist Richard Baldwin and Branch President Martin Ahlstrom. The main effort was to reach the homes where part of the family does not belong to the church. Quite an interest was awakened, and when the meetings opened March 9, a large congregation was present to hear Brother Baldwin. The interest increased during the week; and on Decision Day, March 16, the church was filled for morning and evening services.

The morning of March 16 we held a unified service in charge of the pastor, in which parts were taken by Sister Alice H. Baldwin, Sister Anna Ahlstrom, Georgia Williams, O. G. Rosacker, Clarence Ryhal, and others, including the junior choir, led by Will Ryhal, assisted by the pianist, Sister Emma B. Ryhal. At the close of the sermon Brother Baldwin extended an invitation to any desiring baptism to make it known by standing up. Eight candidates arose in this service.

Our aim throughout these services has been to "complete the family circle" of our branch and the appeal was made, first to husbands and fathers, then to wives and mothers, and then to the children to take the deciding step and complete the family circle. Three others gave their names for baptism at the close of the evening service. Visiting in the homes was continued during the next three days by Elders Richard Baldwin, D. H. Jones, and M. Ahlstrom, and the number requesting baptism was increased to twenty-two.

Arrangements were made with the branch at Youngstown, Ohio, for the use of their baptismal font, and on Thursday evening, March 20, about fifteen automobile loads of Sharon members went to Youngstown church for the baptismal service. A short but impressive service was held in the church auditorium, then all present marched to the basement for the baptisms. After having publicly promised to follow their Savior in the service of God and to support the church in all its efforts, twenty-one were baptized by Elder Baldwin. Friday morning, March 21, one more was baptized by Brother Baldwin.

We are indebted to the Youngstown Saints for their assistance in preparing the church building and the font for our use.

We still have several others who are interested but who were not ready for baptism at this time.

Sunday, March 16, was the second time we have tried the unified service, and our people are well pleased with the new order. Many have expressed the desire that it be continued as the regular order for Sunday morning service.

Independence

Stone Church

The baccalaureate sermon for the graduating class of the Independence Sanitarium School of Nursing was delivered at the eleven o'clock service by President F. M. McDowell.

President McDowell discussed the following four great ideals of Jesus: 1. Faith in mankind; 2. Love for mankind; 3. Service to mankind; and 4. Righteous relationships with mankind. These ideals are adequate, he said; they are scientifically sound; they are not untried and have been winning their way; and they have motivated man in the most outstanding achievements of history. Only the ideals of Christ can explain the things men and women will do for humanity.

We are called to such new adventures as these: Peace, wealth sharing, devotion to humanity, the prevention of disease, obedience to law, and corporate endeavor. Will you lead the way?

Pastor John F. Sheehy presided and was assisted by Doctor A. W. Teel, church physician. The Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, sang the anthem, "The Comforter," by Custance, Nina Grenawalt Smith and George Anway singing the duet parts. Leroy Smith sang a baritone solo. Robert Miller, organist, and George Miller, pianist, were accompanists and played "Meditation de Thais," by Massenet as an offertory duet.

The intermediate eleven o'clock service was designed to dedicate the endeavors of the young people to the forward movement of the church at the opening of the second century of its history in latter days. Elder John Blackmore spoke on "The heritage of the first century of the church." The singing of favorite hymns, "Praise him! praise him!" "Faith of our fathers," and "I would be true," with devotional meditation and a prayer of blessing upon the tasks to be achieved in the new century, by Patriarch H. O. Smith, heightened the spirit of consecration. Music was directed by Sister H. C. Burgess. Elder S. A. Thiel was in charge of the service, assisted by Brother Howard Cook.

Sunday evening Stone Church Saints were privileged to again listen to a member of the Australasian delegation, Elder H. I. Velt, pastor of the branch at Adelaide, Australia. Simply yet urgently the speaker presented the world's need for the services of men regenerated by the Holy Spirit, considerate, courageous, consecrated to the purpose of promulgating the truth. His theme was "Give us men," and for a scripture lesson he chose to read a portion of latter-day revelation, Doctrine and Covenants 108: 3, associating with it Luke 10: 2. Much was told in personal testimony, proving that God's promises are true, and an appeal was made to the church to accept in entirety its responsibility in matters of tithing, offerings, and stewardships, that the gospel of truth may be taken by a willing people to a spiritually impoverished world.

Music was furnished by Opal Goode Doty at the organ and by Madge Nesbitt Hoskins, soprano soloist. Elder Frank McDonald was in charge of the service.

Among the People in Zion

Independence is afutter with preparations for General Conference, to open next Sunday, April 6. Four hundred and fourteen more local members registered themselves as "hosts" of the conference Sunday afternoon, raising the total Independence conference registration to almost thirteen hundred. Quorums and committees are holding preconference sessions, and workers in the general offices and the Herald Publishing House are applying themselves to the multitudinous tasks having to do with getting everything "lined up" for the opening day. Yesterday the housewives of Independence left their homes, where there are yet many things to do, and with brooms and dust-cloths busied themselves in giving the Auditorium a final brush and polish. Rehearsals on oratorio and pageant and other program features continue with redoubled earnestness. Every organization is preparing to do its part in serving the conference. Daily, missionaries are arriving from their fields, and delegates and visitors are introducing themselves to the reception committee.

On Friday evening, March 28, the Pen and Ink Club of Independence had the pleasure of hearing W. J. Haworth, who is editor of the Australasian missionary paper, The Gospel Standard. He is in charge of the Australasian Mission and comes to Independence as head of the delegation to the Centennial Conference. Brother Haworth held the interest of his audience with items and observations from his long experience as an editor, problems of publication, and differences in speech in our two countries. The discussion afterward took on a pleasant and instructive international tone.

The Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences at the Campus has announced to its students a vacation from class work during the first week of General Conference. Classes will resume regular schedule at the opening of the second week. Since Christmas attendance at night classes has been quite regular, and eleven members compose the class which will this spring complete the standard high school course of the State. M. A. Etzenhouser is principal of the Institute, and Sister Nellie Blackmore registrar.

The Australasian delegation is making itself at home in Independence. Its members are being given generous reception by the Saints of the center place. They have accepted invitations to dinners, receptions, and tours of inspection throughout Independence and surrounding regions. March 26 the delegation was invited en masse to the home of Bishop and Sister M. H. Siegfried, to meet representatives of various institutions and organizations of the church. After General Conference some of the members of the delegation plan to travel extensively in the United States, some to visit relatives, and two of the young men, Colin Ferrett and Walter Johnson, have arranged to remain and enter Graceland College.

Among those who have passed to immortal life in the last few days was Sister Peninia Sappenfield, eighty-two years old, who died March 25 at her home here. She is survived by her husband, Brother James P. Sappenfield, a daughter, Sister Nellie Martin, of Independence; and two sons: Byrd Sappenfield, of Independence, and Edward C. Sappenfield, Georgetown, Indiana. The funeral was held at the home last Thursday afternoon. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Brother Robert Batchelder, seventy-nine years of age, passed away March 26 at the Independence Sanitarium. He leaves four sisters, a niece, a nephew, and other relatives and friends. The funeral was held from the Stone Church March 28. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Shirley Ann, infant daughter of Brother and Sister Elbert P. Luff, passed away very suddenly Wednesday morning, March 26. The funeral was held from the home on Linden Street. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Second Church

Sunday, March 23, Second Church was favored with two fine sermons. At eleven o'clock Elder C. Ed. Miller was the speaker. He read that portion of Paul's letter to the Galatians where the contrast is so vividly drawn between works of the flesh and the fruits of the spirit. He then presented an impressive lesson on the value and importance of the spirit of prayer.

At 7.30 Apostle R. S. Budd was the speaker. As a scripture lesson he read James 3, and proceeded to give his hearers a plain, outspoken discourse on the proper use of our tongues.

The day started with a good prayer meeting at eight o'clock. There was church school as usual at 9.30, and junior service was held in the basement of the church at eleven o'clock.

The eight o'clock service of prayer on the last Sunday of March was directed by Brother Mortimore. Each moment of time was fully and profitably occupied.

In a short talk at the 9.30 session of church school, Pastor Dillee pointed out that this was the last session of the school in the first one hundred years of our history. The modest beginning of the church in latter days was compared to the present place of importance of our organization. All were admonished to support the religious education movement of the church.

At eleven o'clock Elder A. M. Chase of the missionary force was the speaker. He gave a splendid sermon.

Elder Hubert Case, who had been advertised as speaker for the evening hour, was called to Tulsa, Oklahoma, to officiate at a funeral. Brother Eli Bronson occupied in Brother Case's place. He read Paul's wonderful discourse to the Athenians and devoted his attention to a discussion of the factors determining the personality of man.

Another home was established in this district March 29 when two of our fine and active young people, Sister Maudelle Hopkins and Brother Leslie T. Sellers, were united in marriage at the home of Pastor A. K. Dillee. The bride is the daughter of Brother and Sister James T. Hopkins, of Independence, and the bridegroom is the son of Brother and Sister B. P. Sellers, of McKenzie, Alabama. The couple were attended by Brother and Sister Lloyd Masterson. The ceremony occurred at eight o'clock in the evening. Brother and Sister Sellers will make their home in this district. The bridegroom is employed at Sears, Roebuck and Company in Kansas City.

Brother Alfred Etzenhouser, sixty-eight years of age, died suddenly Sunday evening, March 30, of heart disease. He was a retired farmer and merchant. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Maggie Etzenhouser, of the home; three daughters: Mrs. Leslie Scarborough, of the home; Mrs. C. N. Crenshaw, Blue Springs Road, Independence; and Mrs. J. M. Atkinson, Pawnee City, Nebraska; three sons: Doctor Leonard Etzenhouser, Smithville, Missouri; Lester Etzenhouser, Wichita, Kansas; and Henry Etzenhouser, Los Angeles, California; and a brother, John Etzenhouser, Biggs, California. The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon in charge of Elder Joseph Luff. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Enoch Hill

"Prayer" was the theme of the sermon Sunday morning, March 23, by Patriarch W. A. McDowell. In the evening Elder A. C. Barmore, member of the Australasian delegation, delivered a splendid missionary sermon on the first principles of the gospel.

This day was occasion for a reunion of the Kramer family in honor of the return of Brother A. C. Barmore, Sister Kramer's brother. Sixty-five were present and a happy time was experienced.

An exceptionally good prayer service hallowed the evening of March 26 in the memory of Enoch Hill members. One hundred and twenty-five Saints found their way to the church to join in the worship service which brought together all the groups and the young people. Pastor O. W. Sarratt and the group elders presided, and the spirit which prevailed was one to bless and comfort. Tonight the Saints will again meet in union service to prepare themselves spiritually for the opening of the grand centennial celebration.

The young women of Enoch Hill extended the hand of sisterhood to Miss Flora Delofski, oratorical contestant from Australia, last Friday evening in a party at the home of Sister Nellie Kramer. Practically all of the active young women workers of Enoch Hill were present to make the acquaintance of Sister Delofski and do their part in welcoming her to Independence. Conversation, games, and refreshments helped to make a joyous evening.

Last Sunday evening Apostle R. S. Budd preached an effective sermon on the theme of the morning "Brotherly love." The church school session opened with quiet worship and soft music, and the scripture readings and hymns combined to produce a reverential atmosphere as setting for the study and the sermon by Apostle Budd.

In the evening a large congregation listened to an earnest discourse by Bishop B. J. Scott.

Holden Stake

Marshall

Elder H. V. Minton closed a short series of meetings here Sunday night. The whole Penny family, excepting a married daughter, were baptized Sunday afternoon, father, mother, two daughters, and a son, and a little girl named Litton, making six in all. They were confirmed at night by Elders Minton, McCormick, and Thayer.

Brother Penny's folks had ten miles to come to attend church, but they attended every night except one. They have been investigating about a year. A sister of Sister Penny, living in Nebraska, has been sending literature which they have eagerly read. They became convinced of the truth even before attending these meetings, but Brother Minton with his model church cinched the truth. It is a unique way, a wonderful object lesson, to see the beautiful little church built up from the foundation of Jesus Christ and his doctrine, each officer and principle fitted into place. The apostles are represented by the twelve pillars of the building; the spiritual gifts are represented by the windows, wisdom and knowledge in front, the gifts of faith, healing, miracles on the right hand side, prophecy and discerning of spirits at the back, and tongues, visions, and dreams on the left side. The priesthood is represented by the frame above the windows. Over all, joining the two gables, is the timber representing the prophet, holding the building together, with the two counselors on each side, and over all the covering of the roof, representing authority.

Quite a large congregation attended Sunday night, and good interest was shown. Brother Minton has baptized ninety-seven so far this year.

Knobnoster

Sickness the last few months has prevented a number of Saints from enjoying the privilege of attending church services, but with the opening of spring we trust all will soon be able to meet together again. Brother Burgess is slowly improving but is still unable to attend church.

The Women's Department, under the leadership of Sister Nellie Petre, is doing its bit to help financially. A good attendance is had at each meeting.

Pastor John T. Nutt has been giving valuable sermons each Sunday night.

This group is much interested in the short playlets written each month by Elbert A. Smith. The young people are busy preparing the March "Conversation," and seem to be quite enthusiastic.

Brother and Sister James Hansen and family, of Sedalia, worshiped with us Sunday, March 9. Several from here attended the afternoon service at Warrensburg.

The midweek prayer service is well attended, and real interest shown.

Warrensburg

The entertainment recently given was enjoyed by a goodly number. The refreshments which followed the entertainment netted a nice sum for the furnace fund.

Brother Ellis Rathbun favored us with a two-week series of meetings. Brother Rathbun is an earnest young man, who has a splendid career ahead of him if he remains humble and faithful. There was one baptism, and we believe if Brother Rathbun returns there will be more.

The farewell party given our departing Saints, Brother and Sister I. M. Smith who have moved to Independence, and Brother and Sister A. D. Sponaugle and family who have gone to Rich Hill, was attended by a large number of Saints and friends.

Several from Warrensburg attended the stake conference at Atherton and received much strength and encouragement there. Prosperous and experienced farmers expressed themselves favorably in regard to the stewardship farm. It is a wonderful project and has all indications of resulting in a signal success. We enjoyed our trip over the farm with Brother Hughes, the chairman of the Holden Development Association. While a considerable number were on their tour of inspection, there were perhaps three hundred wild geese circling overhead. There are indeed some splendid Saints at Atherton, and we join in extending to them our best wishes for spiritual and temporal success.

We are hopeful for the future of the church in Warrensburg. There are a number of faithful and sincere young men and women here who are doing much to insure the future progress of the work.

Warrensburg is a college town and offers wonderful educational advantages to all who are willing to give earnest and consecrated efforts to their studies. A number of our people are benefiting from these opportunities. We extend an invitation to those attending school here to come to the services at our church on Washington and Market Streets.

Post Oak

A large number of Saints from Post Oak attended the conference at Atherton.

Pastor James Duffey was the speaker Sunday, March 23, at the morning service. The strip of slab on No. 13 was finished to the Johnson-Henry County line last week, giving a hard surface to Clinton, Missouri. The section north to Warrensburg has been oiled and connects with Number 50, and the slab north to Higginsville.

Sister Jessie Phillips and Brother Jimmie, of Leeton, were among the sick. They were missed at the services.

Lamoni Stake

Centerville

Work in the Centerville Branch has shown marked improvement during the past few months. Sunday, February 23, Missionary James A. Thomas, of Lamoni, began a series of meetings. An all-day meeting was held with an excellent attendance of nonmembers, Saints from neighboring branches and from our own branch. Brother Robert Zimmerman, of Lovilia, and his orchestra gave a sacred concert; and the Chanters, a local organization of male singers, sang several numbers at the evening service.

Following the regular service on Friday evening, February 28, an informal reception was held in the church for Brother and Sister Z. M. Santee, of Mystic, Iowa, who were celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary. An appropriate program was given, followed by the presentation of a gift of gold and the serving of refreshments. Brother and Sister Santee have long been members of Centerville branch and are held in high esteem by all.

On Sunday evening, March 2, the local troops of the Boy Scouts were Centerville guests. A special sermon was delivered by Brother Thomas for them. Brother Zimmerman's orchestra furnished music, and the special scout ceremonial was given.

Tuesday evening, March 4, Elder W. D. Tordoff of Independence, acting pastor at Ottumwa, Iowa, was the speaker.

The meetings closed, Sunday, March 16, Decision Day, with baptismal services at the Mystic reservoir. One young woman, two young men, and three boys were baptized. Centerville Saints are rejoicing greatly over this addition. We have gone over our quota of five baptisms, another family circle has been completed, and we have gained some earnest workers. Confirmation services followed immediately at the church in Centerville.

Attendance at all the meetings has been excellent. Interest is strong, and we have gained recognition throughout the city for the first time since the organization of our branch. Nonmembers have attended regularly and are greatly interested. We hope that other baptisms will follow later.

During the meetings, we were glad to have with us for a time Brother Albert Boden, of Fedora, Kansas, who was a member of the Centerville Branch for a number of years.

We are all eagerly awaiting conference. Several plan on attending the full time, while others expect to go for at least a part of it.

Central Church

Elder H. I. Velt, of Australia, addressed the church school Sunday morning, relating numerous missionary experiences. There was a reading, "Unawares," by Emma A. Lent. In the service period of the church school which is in session from 11.05 to 11.45 Pastor C. E. Wight delivered the sermon.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson delivered an illustrated lecture Sunday evening, "Among ancient American cities," the slides being those obtained during his visit to Central America last year.

Central pageant players met with the entire pageant cast Sunday evening at 6.30 in the Auditorium in Independence. There are only three more rehearsals scheduled. Our singers are reminded that all oratorio singers rehearse Friday evening in full rehearsal at the Stone Church in Independence.

A schedule of Centennial Conference meetings and program has been mimeographed for convenience of Central members. In order that the people may be free to attend and enjoy these meetings, no local week night services are to be held in the stake until after April 20. Two sacramental services are planned to be held in the Auditorium the morning of April 6, one from eight o'clock to 9.45, the other from 10.15 to 12. Saints are advised to go early to these services. The First Presidency has proclaimed a day of fasting from the morning meal Saturday until the noon meal Sunday.

Elder J. W. Davis will be the morning speaker April 13. Church school convenes at 9.45. There will be no evening service.

Stark Acres Church

The series of meetings conducted by Pastor Joseph Curtis from February 16 to March 2 was well attended. Considerable interest was manifested by friends, and some seemed very near the kingdom. They have not as yet, however, taken the initiatory step toward becoming members. Several musical numbers and readings were given during the meetings to enhance the services.

A Valentine party occurred February 14 and a box social February 22. A good program marked both social affairs, and a neat sum was realized with which a supply of Saints' Hymnals and Zion's Praises was purchased. The Women's Department sponsored both events.

Brother E. S. Zink was the morning speaker the 16th.

Stark Acres members are pleased to have as workers Elder Joseph Curtis and wife.

The local young people met on the evening of the 13th to reorganize the O. B. K. movement. Brother Fred Godfrey was selected president; Elizabeth Frazon, vice president; Frances Waldron, secretary; and Lucretia Cruthers, treasurer. They met at the home of Brother and Sister Myers March 20 and had a wiener roast.

The Sunday school is holding regular sessions.

The infant daughter of Brother and Sister Leo Anderson was blessed February 23 and given the name Phylis Nadine.

Sister Bernard Swanson is in the Sanitarium. She is very ill and desires the prayers of the Saints.

The Women's Department meets Friday of each week.

The play, "The most precious gift," was given by the young people in five different places.

A noticeable increase in attendance is seen in all departments of Gladstone Church since the removal of the branch to its present quarters. Growth is evident in the Sunday school, the young people's prayer meetings, and the department of music, and this is encouraging to those in charge.

Pastor C. A. Selbe has of late delivered some instructive sermons, and Stake Missionary H. A. Koehler has assisted.

Sunday, March 23, Elder W. I. Fligg and Patriarch Ammon White occupied the morning and evening hour to the edification of their hearers.

The final Sunday of the month was rally day, and attendance was gratifying. Elder C. G. Lewis was the morning speaker, and Elder W. I. Fligg at night.

The young men of the local church have organized a basket-ball team, and though they are late in the season this year, they are planning to be in the best of form for the opening next year.

Boone, Iowa

March 25.—We must spread abroad the news of the blessing that came to Boone Branch last month. District Missionaries A. Loving and C. A. Kress closed a three weeks' series of meetings March 16. There was good attendance each evening, generally more nonmembers present than members. Handbills were printed giving the subject for each evening. In addition to the missionary sermons Brother Loving gave a couple of lectures which he illustrated with stereopticon slides.

Decision Day, March 16, a baptismal service was held. Fifteen from our branch, four from Nevada, and one from Cedar Rapids were baptized, thus causing our district to reach its baptismal quota.

There is much to be done in Boone. Many are interested, but the laborers are few.

March 23 we enjoyed a visit from Brother Clyde McDonald. He preached morning and evening.

The midweek prayer services have been revived, and we feel that all will gain much strength from these services.

The branch is praying for the success of the General Conference, asking that God will direct in all things.

Coffeyville, Kansas

Sunday, March 23, closed a series of two weeks of meetings conducted by Elder Lee Quick and Elder J. Charles May. There was fine attendance, and good interest was shown throughout the meetings. Six people were baptized Sunday at two o'clock, confirmation following under the hands of Elders Quick, May, Pender, and Grey, the last named of Parsons, Kansas. The music rendered by Brother May, both vocal and instrumental, was enjoyed by all. The two weeks these brothers were here seemed much too short. We would have been glad to have them longer. However, as they go on to other fields we feel they have planted good seed which will bring forth much fruit. The city paper gives us fine service in advertising and announcing our meetings, and this we appreciate.

March 16 a large crowd attended throughout the day. Brother Quick occupied the pulpit at the eleven o'clock service, and District President Harrington gave the sermon of dedication at two o'clock in the afternoon. In the evening

Brother Quick was again the speaker. The talk by Brother May, presenting some of his experiences in the islands, was enjoyed by all, especially by the young.

We are hoping that a few from Coffeyville will be able to attend General Conference.

Waterloo, Iowa

On account of much sickness church activities have been rather at a standstill since the opening of the year, but as the sick are now about recovered and spring weather beginning we are hoping for a renewal of interest.

Elder Amos Higdon held services here for two weeks with fair attendance. While here he ordained W. H. Hinds to the office of elder in accordance with the conference resolution.

A few members, including W. H. Wood and family and H. Michels and family, are planning to attend conference.

A. J. Fisher, whose health has been very poor for some time, is gaining in health.

Brother and Sister Hain, parents of Sister Emma Roosa, have been rather frail all winter, due to advanced age, but are feeling much better since the severity of winter is over.

Brother and Sister W. H. Hinds's child has recovered from double mastoid operation, and Brother and Sister Bert Purintions children from measles with pneumonia complications.

Columbus, Ohio

First Branch

March has been an eventful month for First Columbus Branch. Patriarch F. A. Smith held a series of meetings from the 2d to the 9th. They were well attended both by members and visitors. All the sermons were excellent, and we rest assured that they will bear good fruit among the honest in heart not of the faith as well as the Saints.

Two friends of long standing were baptized, Mrs. Nugent and her daughter, Evelyn.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is gaining impetus under the capable leadership of Brother Zieschang. They have several good classes and enough in the way of recreation to make it enjoyable for all ages.

The Loyal Club gave a potluck dinner at the home of Sister Hooley. Twenty-one sisters were present, and after the dinner reports were heard and ways and means were discussed to reach our goal of one thousand dollars this year. Sister Elsie Weate played two piano solos, after which all sang "The old, old path." We were delighted to have with us Sister Matthews from Second Branch, who favored us with a talk which was appreciated by all present.

Sister Faye Clark has left for her home on a visit prior to attending General Conference, where Brother C. W. Clark will join her. The members of the branch wish them God-speed and that they may be benefited spiritually and physically by their visit.

Brother J. B. Williams has been ill. He underwent an operation last week but is recovering rapidly. We had in our midst Brother Charles Scharfenberg, who has been seriously ill several weeks.

The new stewardship organization, which is a district organization, is steadily increasing. We are now conducting a membership drive in charge of Brothers H. P. Zieschang, H. A. Carter, and Sister Hazel Perry. They have chosen the name La-Da-Sa., (La-tter Da-y Sa-ints), and are trying to live up to the name.

The Sunday school remains our largest department in weekly attendance and has long since outgrown the building capacity. The interest in this as in all departments is Zionward.

“Between Two Centuries”

“We stand, as it were, between two centuries.” This significant note may be heard running through both the preconference preparations and the opening services of the Centennial General Conference. It was expressed editorially by President McDowell under this same title. President Smith voiced it at the sacramental service the morning of April 6 in words having this substance: We recognize the importance of this moment historically, as an observance of the centennial anniversary of the founding of the church—and also as the opening of a new century of life for the church. The speakers in the Oratorical Contest Sunday night, almost without exception, reemphasized the theme—that we stand at this vantage point to witness the passing of an old century and the birth of a new.

Between two centuries! With one hundred years of pioneering behind us; with three generations of devoted men and women passing on to us their faith and their charge. With the Open Road of the future stretching out before us, offering new fields of exploration and greater tasks than ever before to be accomplished, with the dire need for stronger faith and greater courage and deeper love than ever before. Upon such an occasion we stand and look, so to speak, in both directions. A look backward and a call forward!

We have been saying, “Forward to 1930 and beyond!” 1930 is here. We here and now celebrate a century of endeavor. A few short days, and weeks, and months, and this time of observance shall have passed. Then to the beyond!

In memory of the past let us here dedicate ourselves in the new century to the carrying forward of the same noble aims and high ideals which made that first great century worthy of our celebration and our remembrance.

The Centennial Conference Opens

Sunday morning early, the streets of Independence were busy, and some of them were filled with automobiles carrying the capacity in passengers, from near-by places, and from four or five different States, having just arrived in time for the first service of the Centennial Conference.

At eight o'clock there was a large crowd in front of the Auditorium, slowly entering, and practically filling the huge audience room. At least five thousand people, a large number of them young, presented themselves for this opening service, and to receive the Lord's Supper at the hands of a well-organized corps of the ministry, numbering 193 men. Passing up one street and down another toward the Auditorium, one of the Herald staff noted license tags from eighteen States, attached to parked automobiles. It is stated that there are automobiles from upward of 30 of the States of the Union, their owners having driven to be in attendance at the conference. The largest number of the priesthood ever assembled during the history of the Reorganization is present in Independence. There are as many of the priesthood attending the sessions of this General Conference as ever there were members who attended a general conference of the Reorganization in any other city than Independence, Missouri.

For many weeks the committees in charge of various activities for the meeting have tried to work out the program, so that there would be no rough places in the handling of their problems. It is noticeable that they have been successful in large measure, for, notwithstanding the crowd of people numbering at times in excess of 10,000, all went smoothly, even to the parking of 1,921 automobiles, this being an actual count made by the Boy Scouts who are serving the conference, and making themselves very desirable.

The service which opened at 8 o'clock closed at 10, and those in attendance slipped out the side exits, and at the back, making room for the thousands who waited in front of the Auditorium in the pleasant sunshine of the warm April day. Many of them had stayed there for an hour, but it was no waste of time, for all were finding acquaintances, or making new ones, and they were happy. One patriarch, more than eighty-four years of age, stood in the gathering for upwards of half an hour. He is very thin in flesh, and the pleasant breeze chilled him. If he should go the short two or three blocks to his home, it would mean that he would not be strong enough to stay for the sacramental service, so he dispatched the one who had brought him for his coat, and patiently waited the time when he could enter and attend the first service of the Centennial Conference. For more than sixty years he has been a member of the ministry, and he could not bear the thought of missing the opening service.

A young business man who evidently was well acquainted with various walks of life, and activities, was heard to say, "And all this for a religious meeting. I can imagine this for an event in the world of amusement, but——" He had seen men push and jam and sweat and wait for minutes that lengthened into hours, when some exciting event in the world of sport was to take place, but he had never witnessed anything like this in the way of a religious gathering.

The Saints were in perfect order. They were in a kindly spirit, ready for partaking of the emblems of the Lord's Supper.

From long distances many of them had driven, and some of the elderly ones were exhausted when they entered the room where the service was held at 10.15. One elderly woman was accompanied by her son, and in her exhaustion, after taking her seat, she could not hold up her head. Placing her head in the lap of her grown son, she patiently waited the time for the service to open. A neighbor said, "Are you sick?" "Yes, dear; my head aches terribly." "Don't you think you should leave the room, and get just a little fresh outside air, and be prepared to enjoy the service?" "No. I mustn't do that. I have come hundreds of miles to be here, and partake of the emblems with thousands of my brothers and sisters. I will be all right." Finally she prevailed upon to step into the corridor for a few minutes, but almost before she got the new life of the fresh air, she was ready to return to her seat.

This is an example of the spirit that was abroad among the people—a deep devotion. A desire to witness a beautiful service and partake with their numerous brothers and sisters prevailed to a remarkable extent.

The service at 10.15 was a repetition of the service which occurred at 8 o'clock. The same corps of 193 of the ministry waited upon the people in perfect order, and with great precision. Without any jarring or indecision, the feat of waiting upon the 12,000 communicants was achieved. Some of them estimated that between 13,000 and 14,000 partook of the sacrament at the great Auditorium on Sunday, but this is rather above the number. It is likely that 12,000 or 12,500 did partake. Miles upon miles of walking was required to accomplish the task, but everybody is happy, and the conference opens in one of the sweetest spirits that has ever characterized a gathering of the Reorganization since it became of any considerable size.

One hundred years ago, on April 6, the first Lord's Supper was served, which characterized the opening of the Restoration Movement. What a pity that those six young men who partook of the emblems of the Lord's body and blood on this April day, in New York State, could not have visioned the triumph of April 6, 1930, and the progress which their work instituted on that April day has made within a century.

The Afternoon Meetings

In the afternoon from half past two until three o'clock the Centennial Band gave a concert. This band is conducted by Brothers Earl Cox and Orlando Nace. The concert was broadcast over K M B C, microphones being placed within the Auditorium chamber. At four o'clock President Elbert A. Smith, assisted by his son Ronald G. Smith, and his cousin W. Wallace Smith, conducted a vesper service, which was impressive and spiritual to a high degree.

The Stone Church witnessed a large gathering of the ministry at half past two to participate in a prayer meeting. This was conducted by President Frederick M. Smith, Apostle James A. Gillen, and Pastor John F. Sheehy.

Memorial Hall

on Maple Avenue within two blocks of the courthouse square, was opened to a preaching service at 10.45, conducted by Elder Hubert Case, his subject being, "The foundations of our faith in the first century."

The Liberty Street Church

Patriarch John F. Martin conducted a preaching service at the Liberty Street Church on North Liberty Street from 10.45 to 12 o'clock, and the church was well filled.

The Oratorical Contest

The great room of the Auditorium was practically filled by the time for the opening for the Centennial Oratorical Contest, in the evening. For many months preliminaries had been conducted throughout the church, and various subjects relating to the Restoration, the history, the doctrine, the biography of the church had been treated by more than 1,000 of the young people in orations of 1,200 and more words.

HOWARD ELLIOTT    FRANCES SKINNER    JAMES GARDNER

In this final test for first place, these young people appeared:

Olive Curtis, of Independence, Missouri, Region No. 13. Her subject was "The Restoration." Flora Delofski, Rozelle, New South Wales, Australia, Region No. 15, spoke of "The vision of the Restoration." Howard Elliott, St. Louis, Mo., Region No. 12, treated "The last commandment," and James Gardner, of Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa, Region No. 10, spoke of "The spirit of the Restoration." Doris Oakman crossed the waters from London, England, Region No. 16, using for her subject, "The significance of the Restoration." Frances Roberta Skinner, Tulsa, Oklahoma, was from Region No. 5, treating the subject, "The light of the world."

The contest meeting opened under the direction of President Floyd McDowell, who was largely responsible for the instituting of the contest which had gone over so many months, and throughout the confines of the church. Seven judges, of wide experience and good equipment, had been chosen, and were placed at vantage points in the auditorium. Everything was set, and the contest was on. For more than two hours the huge gathering waited and listened, judged for themselves, admired, applauded, and then brought themselves under control as they waited for the decision, which was to be announced as soon as the result could be obtained.

Each of the six contestants received a scholarship to Graceland College, as a reward for appearance in the final contest. The winner of the first place received a cash prize from the general church of $300; the winner of the second place receiving $200 and the third place $100; 4th, 5th, and 6th places received respectively $75, $50, and $25, in cash. But the experience which each one of these contestants had gained was worth many times the remuneration in dollars and cents which was offered to them.

Decision of the Judges

The judges awarded the following rankings:

First place: James Gardner, Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa, Region No. 10, with the subject, "The spirit of the Restoration."

Second place: Howard Elliott, Saint Louis, Missouri, Region No. 12, with the subject, "The last commandment."

Third place: Frances Roberta Skinner, Tulsa, Oklahoma, Region No. 5, with the subject, "The light of the world."

Fourth place: Olive Curtis, Independence, Missouri, Region No. 13, with the subject, "The Restoration."

Fifth place: Flora Delofski, Rozelle, New South Wales, Australia, Region No. 15, with the subject, "The vision of the Restoration."

Sixth place: "Doris Oakman, London, England, Region No. 16, with the subject, "The spirit of the Restoration."

The audience breathed a sigh of relief as they, in remarkably good order, retired from the audience room at 11 o'clock.

The contest is over. The young people who participated are to be congratulated on the sincere quality of their endeavor, as another writer has expressed it. The award of the judges is very likely to be vindicated in the minds of most of those who attended, after a little time has intervened, and good, sober, second judgment has obtained in the minds of all. Much has been gained to the participants, and the church is yet to reap a harvest of benefit and strength in the years to come. The centennial oratorical contest is a thing of the past, but its fruits are yet to be garnered.

Thus ended the first day of the opening of the second century in the history of the Restoration.

Monday at the Conference

Again the weather is a beautiful specimen of what Jackson County can furnish in the springtime, bright, balmy, and just cool enough to relieve any sense of oppression which might come with the first increasing warmth of the season. All are comfortable and happy, so far as physical conditions are affected by the weather.

At 7.30 in the morning, many of the classes were well filled, and the Centennial Conference institute was on its way to success. The instructors seemed to be very enthusiastic, and are getting a good response from classes that number as many as can be accommodated, to advantage. From the Daily Herald we extract two paragraphs, written by one of the staff who visited the various classes:

Some courses which should be especially mentioned because they are new in our institute work and because they cover important material are: "Significance and use of the Doctrine and Covenants," by F. Henry Edwards; "Practical English," by Irene Layton; "Zion's social ills and suggested remedies," by M. A. Etzenhouser; "Church home and those who worship there," by M. A. McConley; "The new hymnal, its contents and use," by Evan Fry; and "Keeping fit," by Doctor A. W. Teel.

The missionary work of the church is well represented by E. J. Gleazer's class in "Missionary administration," and F. Henry Edwards's course, "Personal evangelism." Literature, art, and drama are all emphasized in: "Pictures and art in religious education," by Nelle Sampson; "Story-telling in religious education," by Nellie Blackmore; "Dramatization in religious education," by Florence Thompson; and "Poetry in religious education," by Irene Layton. Recreational activities are treated in "Recreation in religious education," by E. E. Closson. The ideals of Zion and the gathering are reflected in such courses as "Community stewardships," by J. A. Koehler, and "Zion's ills and suggested remedies," by

M. A. Etzenhouser. Young people's work and problems are being considered under the direction of E. E. Closson and Ray Whiting in their respective courses: "Working with young people," and "Young people's problems." "Science and religion," by M. E. Mortimore is developing a great deal of interest.

You can find the classes anywhere, around any corner, in any nook where they can be secluded enough to insure teaching efficiency. Added to this, there are large numbers of visitors who have entered any place, and who frequent the corridors and visit in the homes and in public places. The Centennial Conference is a wonderful social event in the lives of those who are attending. Young, middle-aged, and old alike enjoy it.

The Stone Church is still a point of extreme activity. At half past seven o'clock Monday morning, under the direction of Apostle Budd, a devotional meeting was opened, and one of our staff says it was a beautiful spiritual feast to all who were in attendance. These early morning devotionals, under Apostle Budd's direction, are to continue, and the Saints will be fed upon each other's faith and testimony.

Immediately following the devotional meeting, Bishop Koehler took up the subject of "Community stewardships," which he will continue for several days, but on April 14, will be followed by John W. Rushton, on the subject of the "Ministry of beauty." Brother Rushton continues his subject during the second week.

At the close of the lecture period, another devotional service is instituted under the conduct of President Frederick M. Smith. The reports from this service are encouraging. The Saints are enjoying it, and it continues from day to day.

At 11 o'clock, Elder Eli Bronson spoke on the subject of the "Missionary passion" on Monday morning. On Tuesday morning C. E. Wight, pastor of Kansas City, spoke on "Pastoral devotion." These sermons are all preserved, and will be furnished the Saints through the columns of the Herald and Ensign. No Latter Day Saint can afford to be without either the Herald or Ensign during the coming year. They will be filled with these good things, and they are good, which are coming to the people visiting the Centennial Conference. Chief among those who will not forego preserving these sermons are those who have heard them delivered.

At 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, the business session opened. For a very few minutes preceding the opening hour, Roy Cheville, of Graceland College faculty, conducted some congregational singing.

President Smith was in his place a few minutes preceding the opening, and under his direction the conference organized.

Apostles Gillen and Curtis instituted a motion that the First Presidency of the church preside, and that they be directed to complete the organization, and to arrange time, place, and nature of the subsequent meetings of the conference. The motion carried without dissenting voice, and almost immediately the chairman announced the following organization:

Committee on Credentials: I. A. Smith, C. L. Olson, Amos Allen.

Secretary of the conference: I. A. Smith, with privilege to choose assistants.

Committee on Transportation: O. W. Newton, with power to choose assistants.

Press Committee: R. J. Lambert, F. H. Edwards, Leta Moriarty, Leslie Flowers, Audentia Anderson, J. A. Gardner, Alice M. Edwards, Leonard Lea, Estella Wight.

Reception Committee: Under Mrs. Mary Wilkinson, Chairman.

Meal Service: In charge of Laurel Club.

Post Office: Mrs. O. C. White.

Telegraph Service: Western Union office in lobby of building.

First Aid Room: In charge of Independence Sanitarium.

Guest Room: Tuesday Club of Independence assisted by Mother's Club.

Administration Committee: The Order of Evangelists.

Auditorium Guides: Under direction of U. W. Greene.

Class Work: In charge of F. M. McDowell and C. B. Woodstock.

Conference Stenographer: H. W. Harder, with privilege of choosing assistants.

Conference Music: In charge of the Music Department.

The first copy of the Conference Daily had been placed in the hands of the delegates and ex officio members of the conference, and the chairman called attention to the printed reports of several of the committees: The Credentials Committee, the Department of Statistics, the Department of Music and the Graphic Arts Bureau. President Smith announced that these reports would be received and spread upon the minutes.

Preceding the organization of the conference, President Smith delivered an address in the following words:

It is likely that in many if not all the set speeches at this conference contrasts will be presented in conditions existing at the beginning of the second century of our existence with those marking the initial years of our organization.

We can consistently congratulate ourselves. But we must not to any degree permit the more favorable situations and conditions in which we now find ourselves to lull us into either a false sense of security or a cessation of the strenuous efforts which have carried us thus far; for the greatness of the tasks yet uncompleted demands an increase rather than a diminution of effort. For even one glance ahead fills us with some concern and anxiety as we scan the span between us and our goals.

In the world at large is a tension which bespeaks a deep-seated unrest, which springs from a sense of maladjustment; and though it may be subliminal in character, yet that consciousness functions as an emotional factor in such feelings of tension both individually and collectively. The world, war weary, is struggling to find the foundations of peace, but the seekers find themselves thwarted by psychological factors which go deep into genetic roots. Peace conferences fail because assurances of political security run counter to the goals and objectives held in view by those who envisage national functions through goggles colored by selfishness. The fraternity which makes for international understanding has not yet been developed. And this bespeaks the inadequate spread of the Christian spirit.

In America the outstanding factor promoting disturbed outlook is the wave of rebellion which has saturated our social order, and which finds expression in lawlessness and revolt against constituted authority, and which in trying to find justification seeks shelter under the cloak of personal liberty.

But unrestricted personal liberty can not be had in any social order, however primitive may be the form or simple the group objective. With growing complexity of organization and breadth of scope of endeavor, the restrictions upon personal liberty grow larger, and there is to be found in its place the great significant truth that safety lies in obedience to law and in respect for properly constituted authority. This revolt exists in other countries, but just at present finds its most violent outcrop in America if we except unfortunate Russia.

To these two great world questions (deep-seated social unrest and the search for peace, and revolt against authority), Latter Day Saints must give answer.

The answer to the peace question which we must give is obvious. We stand for peace. It is our motto. But the peace we work for, the kind the world is waiting for, is the peace which springs from the Spirit of the Master working in the hearts of men, engendering the fraternity of godliness. So long as political governments are organized on the basis of human aspirations and ambitions, and law is made to serve limited classes; and so long as law administration is had in the light of narrow national expression, there are bound to be erected national barriers over which fraternity can not pass untrammelled. And so long will wars continue to follow one another and so long will five-nation conferences on naval disarmament and other peace conferences fail and so long will there be the necessity for the exercise of loyalty to nation which prompts even Christian persons to take up the weapons of war in the defense of their country.

Yet it is one of our tasks to work for peace. And as we understand it, our allotted way is to promote the ideals of Christian government, based on the religious principles of the Christian faith. No reform, political or social, will ever promote or produce peace when the moment of religious emotions is ignored or forced out of consideration. Only the recognition of and trust in God as the All Father will ever change the fortified frontier countries into the imaginary lines separating nations of one mind and purpose.

We as a people shall be found promoting the interests of peace by clinging to the tenets of the Prince of Peace and insisting that they are feasible as the dynamic of social and industrial relations of persons, groups, states, and nations.

And against the disintegrating forces of disobedience to law and disrespect for properly constituted authority, this church, if its members are true to its traditions and teachings, will and must be found presenting a solid front. Law must be obeyed, and by our teachings and traditions we are bound to be on the side of law enforcement in assisting properly constituted authority to enforce it. By our voice, our means, our activities, and by our vote we must sustain and support those who stand for law and order.

Another way in which we are bound to assist in advancing the interests of peace, is by promoting the Zionite order of society, in which the social dynamic becomes the consciousness of brotherhood and the identity of interests. In the light of fraternity, conflicts of interests mean maladjustments, and it is one of our tasks to demonstrate that a social order is possible and workable, in which each person is so actuated fraternally that he works for others first, knowing that his own interests are safest when the interests of all are conserved.

Towards the Zionite ideal, we have made, in the past conference period, some progress. It is to be hoped that progress is permanent, and the momentum gained will be held and augmented till we can find our entire church membership moving swiftly and securely upon the basis of stewardship. Fear is still in our midst, and fear is a destroyer of peace, and springs largely from the roots of self-serving interests. Many of our people have not yet conquered their fear to the point where they can say: "Here am I, send me!" But the time is here when laity as well as priest must say, "I'll go and do what you want."

Only when the industrial and social activities of all our members are organized on the basis of social and divine responsibility can we say we are well on the road to Zion the beautiful.

For long have we been educating the Saints to the ideals of Zion. Much remains to do along educational lines. But we have more to do; we must educate the Saints to the ideals of Zion in the school of experience as well as in the rooms where culture is promoted. A small group of earnest, godly, saintly people, organized and functioning on the basis of the doctrine of stewardship can just now do more to educate the whole church in the Zionite laws than anything else. But for such a group to function, it must be composed of persons who have faith, which is the assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen, in whom the milk of human kindness is still sweet, and confidence in man is not only unshaken, but unshakable; who see through the eye of faith the shining towers of Zion, and who recognize that the greatest personal or group investment possible is that which is made in fraternity, and who are not fearful to pool wealth and talents in cooperative endeavor.

I am happy to believe that such a demonstration is being made.

With the approach to our Zionite ideals will come an expansion of our missionary ideals and activities. With the certain success of enterprises formed on stewardship foundations will develop a zeal which will be a compulsion towards letting others know of our blessings, and a desire to have them, also as brothers, share our conditions of happiness and prosperity. There will be developed a movement towards a larger missionary movement, in which whole groups or communities will function as a unit. The day of individual work in missionary effort may never wholly pass; but the day of mutual efforts in proselytizing has been definitely ushered in, and I look to see, under the zealous and earnest direction of our missionary quorums, whole branches and even districts organized and at work in missionary efforts while not neglecting in any way the "perfecting of the Saints" by church ceremony and religious educational work.

To catch the vision of this group type of missionary work, there must be among us a deeper and broader understanding of the social aspects of our religion, and a keener vision of the methods of our goals. Together with this must run a wider knowledge on the part of our missionaries of the present social order and institution, that there might be an appreciation of the maladjustments existing in the present social order; for only by this can there be developed a full appreciation of how the principles of our social philosophy are applicable to a solution of our social problems. Our missionaries should know that any easy door to the interested attention of persons today is afforded by the presentation of that which will touch the conditions surrounding the task of earning our daily bread and righteously distributing the results of material production. The theme of Zion should be the golden warp of the fabric our missionaries would weave in presenting the Word of God to those hungering to hear it.

As we enter upon the second century of our organic existence, what greater motif could furnish the dynamic of our endeavor as a missionary organization than that running parallel to the industrial development of Zion should be a new and greater missionary drive which shall utilize the whole machinery of well-organized branch and district, where seventies will not work as lone eagles, but where groups of them fired by the fine zeal and broadened by sense of the tremendous importance of the Zion ideal and directed by the far-reaching and far-seeing supervision of the Twelve, will saturate whole communities by the spirit of the Christian religion and write into the whole life of the community the living message of divine peace wrought on the basis of brotherly love. Such a missionary drive, I am sure, will bring results compared to which those of the past will be small. To this task we should bend our energies.

In no finer way can we celebrate this Centennial than by pledging ourselves to this kind of an enlarged missionary movement, one which will demand the coordination of all departments of our whole organization.

The present industrial depression should not go unnoticed by us as a people, and we should fortify our frugality and sharpen our wisdom in financial and industrial matters. But we should not be unduly discouraged by it. Our faith can not but be strengthened when we see prophecy fulfilled, and our zeal in the church should show an increase. The unemployment among us caused by the "losing of jobs" by the slowing up of industrial manufacturing, should fire our determination to build soon a social order in which there would be such community of interests that mobility of labor and flexibility of industry can so adapt themselves to changing conditions and local deflections that hardships are in no case wrought.

On the whole our work is distinctly onward, and we may well be encouraged. Of specific departmental activities we shall have more to say at other sessions.

It is a day of sacrifice and consecration. Every Saint will be tested, for that is concomitant of the hastening time. Only those who are tested and not found wanting, can stand. Let us live close to God and abide by the teachings of his church that our places in Zion may be assured.

Monday evening's session was termed "Official Night," a special program having been prepared under the direction of President F. M. Smith, which proved pleasing to the large number of people, very likely close to 4,000, which had assembled. Representative men of State, county, and city extended greetings and welcome to the conference. Among them was Lieutenant Governor Winters, William Southern, of the Independence Examiner, Mayor Roger T. Sermon, and Major Robert W. Barr, Eastern Judge of the Jackson County Court. Words of welcome and accompanying action proved to be very pleasing, and was heartily entered into by the large assemblage.

At the Stone Church at half past seven, Apostle D. T. Williams began a series on "The challenge of the second century." He continues for three evenings on this subject.

WORLD'S AFFAIRS

The Racketeer, a Growing Menace in America

We have been taught for years that alcohol has been the greatest menace with which we have to deal. But "John Barleycorn," as the personified symbol of liquor was long familiarly known, is now slipping into second place among the national menaces, dwarfed to an almost pitiable figure beside a new terror, the "racketeer."

The "racketeer," we should perhaps explain, takes his name from the "racket," a slang name for any business conducted in an unethical or illegal manner, or for unethical or illegal ends. The name covers a wide range of activities. One fellow conducts a dancing "marathon," and uses sensational methods to increase his gate receipts; this is a milder form of "racket." A prominent citizen of Kansas City is kidnapped and forced to pay an enormous ransom. Alleged union sympathizers bomb a number of buildings under construction by nonunion men. Gangsters and terrorists force tribute money from legitimate businesses. These are the more sinister forms of the "racket." Swindlers, cheats, and shady characters concoct many new schemes for making unearned money flow their way. These are all forms of the "racket."

gave the first performance of The Passing of the Third Floor Back. Memorial Hall seats from 1,000 to 1,200 people, and it was crowded.

Wednesday and Thursday evenings, this performance will be repeated.

The second day of the conference ended with much activity and splendid feeling.

Registration Exceeds Expectations

The authorities ordered five thousand badges, hoping that number would see fit to register as ex officio, delegate, or visiting members of the Centennial General Conference. Sunday saw the entire lot taken and registrants were still coming in large numbers. The number now registered comes nearer six thousand than five, and large numbers will desire the souvenir and will register during the next two weeks.

In anticipation of this considerable demand and to make good to the hundreds who have registered since the bronze badges are gone, three thousand additional have been ordered and will be on sale at once.

Hygiene of Beauty for Women and Handsomeness for Men.—Chapter 12

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

It is not my contention that nature made everything beautiful and that mankind spoils it. Nature can be aided by medical means in restoring comeliness; and the art of hygiene is a rational means of uniting the powers of science and nature to the purpose of being comely and wholesomely good within and without. Symmetry of form, clearness of skin, grace of movement, luxuriance of hair, melody of voice, the radiation of an atmosphere of charm, all this comes within the province of "keeping fit." For we live in society and therefore should be assets to our fellow beings, a delight for them to know, be we men or women, be we young or well advanced in years. I count no man or woman a full success who has not some measure of grace or comeliness.

When it comes to styles in clothing, health should be the first consideration, and clothing should conform to comfort and freedom of circulation. Many of the so-called pretty clothes for women and stylish suits for men detract from rather than add to the natural human beauty such as radiates from health and strength.

The healthy woman needs little or no addition to her charms by the cosmetician, for her hair, eyes, lips, and skin are naturally agreeable to look at. The best cosmetic is proper exercise and care of the body. Sensible exercise will insure a perfect skin and bring back youth to an extent that surpasses belief. It will give vigor and elasticity alike of figure and spirits; will in personal charm even do more for her than any other known thing; and for all the time it takes each day it is practically sure to be a safe investment, costing little or nothing, a simple, safe, joyful diversion.

The home feature sections of the newspapers contain many daily or nightly articles on keeping beautiful. There is an advertising motive behind much such advice. It is difficult to alter the constitution of the face except through improved health, for beauty is not skin deep, but is the result of natural vigor. Simple cleanliness is effectual, the use of food soap with lukewarm water, and use of towel pressed into face with fingers and palms. Cold creams do not feed the flesh. Zinc powders do not improve the complexion, nor lead dressings nor vermilion nor mercurial preparations. A round and rosy face is best promoted by general health plus a pleasing expression. Cultivate that poise and sweetness of disposition which will shine through the face as the expression of the soul. A healthy and good skin may be possessed by anyone who has no internal ailments.

Puffiness under the eyes, for instance, is caused by disease of the kidneys or liver, overfatigue, etc., and the black circles may indicate constitutional disease. The eyes themselves need not be massaged, as this will cause flattening of the ball. As for the eyebrows, a little occasional vaseline is permissible.

The search for the fountain of youth is fascinating, but disappointing through the cosmetic route, but not disappointing to the promoters and vendors of face powders, creams, ointments, lipsticks, thinning compounds, rouges, perfumes, etc., to the amount of millions of dollars annually. The faith of womankind seems to be inexhaustible, and she is willing to spend liberally for "magic" jars of compounds and pastes of no worth. Charm is a virtue that comes from mental and spiritual attitude, and is unpurchaseable. We must not lose sight of the fact that the quest of good looks and youth must be made with due regard to the laws of nature, and to remember that each period of life has its usefulness and its privileges.

Moving pictures have popularized the small, slim style of feminine figure. The lines of Venus de Milo, well-nourished, plump, and beautifully rounded, have little appeal to women of today. The young girl wishes to be thin, like her movie heroine, starves herself accordingly, and frequently even goes to excessive smoking or coffee drinking, to avoid taking nourishment. The young underweight person has as a corollary under-resistance, which may be temporary and secondary to a severe illness. Tuberculosis is the hazard in young underweights. She is more liable than others to any of the acute infections; and debilitating troubles like anemia and pellagra can be expected. While tuberculosis and debilitating diseases are less likely, the mounting debit of proneness to degenerative diseases are the great hazard of the older obese person.

For one who has reached the age of thirty to thirty-five, the best weight is just the same as the average weight. As one grows older, he should not permit himself to gain a few pounds every year, but gradually reduce his weight until when he is fifty or fifty-five he is considerably below the present average weight for men of his height and age.

As teeth are a pleasant feature of every face, being concerned with beauty, and as teeth and gums in good condition are a factor in making for sweet breath, nonhalitosis, for which so many advertisements of astringents, mouth washes, toothpastes, etc., appear in the daily press, they are properly a part of this section. A pleasant breath is the result of good digestion and a clean mouth and accessories of tonsils, teeth, the uncoated tongue, and an uninfected nose. Vigilance in these matters is the price of freedom from unpleasantness, and it is a duty to be agreeable.

Dental decay is a sign of degeneracy! Its increase is due to civilization, to rich food, and the common use of natural or artificial gaseous waters. They scarcely existed in antiquity, or do they exist among primitive peoples today.

An eminent physician attributes the constant increase of dental decay among the inhabitants of cities to their sweetened and starchy breakfasts. The eaters of bonbons and chocolate make themselves subject to dental decay; this decay which, after all, is due especially to the action of acid saliva and of microbes. An American dentist asserted that black or whole grain bread is very useful for the nutrition and preservation of the teeth. All food rich in phosphate of lime—oatmeal, for example—acts in the same manner. The Scotch, who make it the base of their food, have exceptionally good teeth, it appears. It is time to remedy by a stricter hygiene the dental troubles which become more and more frequent in our race. Dental corrosion, the vulnerability of the teeth, their rapid wearing away and early decay, can be almost always avoided and prevented by hygiene.

Dental surgery must be conservative, or it will not last. Tooth troubles claim most skillful attention; these ought not to be given to the care of the unethical commercial dentist.

Killing the nerves, extracting teeth, constructing complicated bridgework, all sorts of plates and pins, etc., could be made less necessary, and the fear of false teeth in old age safeguarded against, if— If we live on candy and white bread, if we lack the elements of silicon, fluorine, and calcium, to be obtained in whole wheats, in carrots and spinach and apples; if we eat pies and cakes and fried stuff without suitable mastication, we shall continue to need dental work and removable bridges and extractions. The dentist advertising on a commercial scale usually doesn't care to painstakingly treat root canals and save the teeth if he can make profit by bridgework and other complicated fixtures.

Of course we may brush teeth regularly and still find decay going on. Vigorous brushing with abrasive pastes washes away fillings, creates bleeding gums. The thing to do is to massage the gums thoroughly, but not roughly, with a rubber brush, and after brushing the teeth properly to rinse the mouth and thus neutralize acid and wash away particles that can not be reached by brushing.

The skin is one of the most easily affected parts of the body in the case of disease. It registers any deranged physical condition. In cases of indigestion, imperfect nutrition, and poor circulation, the skin becomes pallid, cold, and clammy. In all fevers the skin is hot, dry, and rough. It is such a clear barometer of one's physical condition that it argues for minute care of that part of the body. A clean, healthy skin is an essential for a healthy condition of the system. Regular bathing is required. Through the pores there is a constant excretion, in health and in sickness, and unless this is removed and the pores are kept open, the results are unwholesome. Through exercises of any kind the skin is contracted and expanded, just as the deeper muscular tissues are, and the pores discharge perspiration, or waste material. Bathing, like eating, sleeping, and exercise, should be regular, and performed intelligently. No one can keep the skin in a healthy condition by an occasional bath, at longer intervals than a week.

Washing the hair frequently is imperative, both in summer and less frequently in winter. It is a matter of common knowledge that mild soap and water are better as adjuvants to hair health and cleanliness than pomades, dressings, shampoos, etc. Since an average of fifty or sixty hairs fall each day, the scalp should be kept in condition to grow new hair, which is said to grow at the rate of eight inches a year. Rough use of brushes and combs unnecessarily destroys hairs. Activity of the hair follicles is promoted by washing the scalp and rubbing it dry with a towel.

As far as dyeing the hair is concerned, avoid the use of metallic and coal tar preparations, as these are absorbed or cause irritation of the skin. The henna compounds are recommended as less harmful and more natural, and give shades from black to blonde. As a rule men are indifferent to gray hairs, and it is far better to have a good shock of gray hair than be bald from the use of toxic dyes.

The scalp needs frequent ventilation. Growth of the hair is encouraged when the head is uncovered. Compare the heads of the waiters, which are continually uncovered, with the bald craniums of our officers, victims of the heavy caps. Women who confine their hair with narrow bands, and twist, pull, and press the hair, not only injure the hair but frequently destroy the roots. The hair ought to be gently smoothed and loosely arranged to allow the necessary ventilation. The secretion of perspiration, the sebaceous and waste products of the epidermis, not only impede the functions of the scalp, but they may be the cause of irritation. The falling off of the hair of convalescents is partly due to the rough use of the comb. Tight hats must be considered one of the causes of baldness.

Good poise, equilibrium, or attitude counts much for good looks. In the anatomical arrangements favorable to equilibrium, the muscles play the most important part; the spinal cord governs the elasticity of the muscles; the brain and the cerebellum order and adapt their movements.

The hygiene of grace consists in varying attitudes, shortening their duration, and suitably distributing the efforts which direct them.

Promenades and recreation should be made attractive; also gymnastics, which will never be liked until they are free, and are not regulated. High heels should not be allowed, as from a hygienic point of view they are absurd. Postures can also express debility, wretchedness, and unsteadiness with persons who are sensitive to cold and suffering.

External beauty of form evidently varies according to the æsthetic ideal of various nations. Western nations demand a delicate, smooth, white skin, set off by fresh tints, or sun tan. The degree of beauty is in proportion to the beauty of the skin, as also in proportion to the health. The flesh ought to be firm and soft to the touch, the shape undulated, coupled with stoutness and vigor. Blonde beauty is more brilliant, gayer, and more feminine; dark beauty is more dignified, more impressive, and more masculine, according to the popular idea.

At least one half of these details are purely and simply the result of the physical health. Health alone can give the clear brilliancy of youth and the freshness to the complexion, to the eyes, and the whole face, that fascinates us. Bad hygiene, constitutional weakness and disturbance, and organic diseases dry and discolor and wrinkle the face, give a yellow or greenish tint to the nails, the teeth, the hair, and are marks of defective nutrition. Thus organic functional harmony always visibly reflects itself in æsthetic form. A renowned philosophical physician said, "Health is only beauty in the functions of life." We must make our minds obey the laws of nature if we crave attractive looks.

Without doubt, hygiene has much to do with the grace of the body, the increase of its charms, and the correction of its defects. The cosmetic art is almost wholly dependent upon hygiene.

The true medical science of the future will strengthen and ennoble men and women. The definition of beauty is health, which is the casket that incloses this pearl. Hygiene gives each individual the greatest amount of beauty of which he is capable. But hygiene must watch over the individual from infancy; good habits and physical culture must improve the carriage in childhood, so that grace, precision, and dexterity may be given to all movements.

The action of the sun or ultra-violet rays gives good general effect, an increase of the red blood cells and the red blood platelets, production of that mysterious substance, vitamin D, and a general improvement in appetite and vitality. The local effect kills germs, hastens the cure of wounds, and very many diseases of the skin.

Light is active only when it is absorbed, and absorption takes place by the action of the ultra-violet rays on the ergosterol of the skin, which becomes a carrier of the various properties inherent in these rays. The production of vitamin D is very greatly involved, and concerned with, the mineralization of the body, particularly the calcium and phosphorus factors. In this regard, it might be noted that a new advantage has been offered in the irradiation of various farinaceous foods with the ultra-violet ray, in order to improve the calcium and phosphorus content of these foods, and, in a great measure, to eliminate the old-fashioned cod liver oil from our therapeutic chapters.

Lord Baylis, one of the leading physicians and surgeons of the world, once remarked, "Doctor Sun is the greatest physician in the world, but he is very hard to make an appointment with."

During the hot seasons of spring and summer, we can take advantage of the various forms of outdoor life, and are thus exposed to sunlight. These exposures can neither be measured nor controlled; and, from a point of view of treatment, are very indefinite. However, we do know, from experimentation, that the ultra-violet content of the various ultra-violet lamps is much greater than that of the sun, so much so that very often a four- or five-minute exposure to the mercury vapor quartz lamp will produce the same results as a full day's exposure to midsummer sunshine. We also know that the ultra-violet rays of sunlight are not powerful enough in the fall and winter months to reach the earth in any worth-while quantities. We are, therefore, very much tempted to limit ourselves in ultra-violet treatment to the action of these lamps. It is needless at this time to bring out the various advantages that the manufacturers of the mercury vapor quartz lamp present over those of the carbon arc lamp, and vice versa, except to say that the latter contains along with a lesser degree of ultra-violet rays, an abundance of the hot infra-red rays, which increase circulation, penetrate the deeper structures of our body, and are very soothing in regions of pain and discomfort. The subject becomes needlessly much more complex when we read of certain attributions allotted to the various singular rays found in the spectrum.

It is apropos at this time to warn the public against the injudicious use of these lamps. Much harm may result from improper use, and it is very essential to follow the advice of a physician or other competent individual before exposures are taken.

Sunlight is the oldest, cheapest, safest, most widely applicable healing power of nature. The germs of tuberculosis remain virulent after two years in the dark; pure sunlight kills them in from seven to ten minutes. Wherever direct sunlight falls it kills our enemies—whether upon our carpets or pavements. Sunlight is the celestial antiseptic.

But we must understand how to use what we have, and to make the most of it. An essential part of the light is ultra-violet. Ordinary glass, which does not arrest the visible rays, stops the ultra-violet. We can not avail ourselves properly of sunlight behind closed windows unless they be made of special types of glass. Coal smoke acts like glass and arrests these rays.

"The Steadiness of the Church"

By Grace L. Krahl

At a time when there was a respite from contention in the church in the days of the Nephites, Alma, their chief judge and high priest, writes concerning it as follows:

And now because of the steadiness of the church, they began to be exceeding rich; having abundance of all things whatsoever they stood in need; an abundance of flocks, and herds, and fattings of every kind, and also abundance of grain, and of gold, and of silver, and of precious things; and abundance of silk and fine twined linen, and all manner of good homely cloth. And thus in their prosperous circumstances they did not send any away who were naked, or that were hungry, or that were athirst, or that were sick, or that had not been nourished; and they did not set their hearts upon riches; therefore they were liberal to all, both old and young, both bond and free, both male and female, whether out of the church or in the church, having no respect to persons as to those who stood in need. And thus they did prosper and become far more wealthy than those who did not belong to their church.—Alma 1: 43-47.

It is of interest to note just what constituted the steadiness of the church, as expressed by Alma. In the passages just preceding the above account, it is disclosed, I think.

First, there was spirituality and a desire for religious instruction:

They were steadfast and immovable in keeping the commandments of God. . . . And when the priests left their labor to impart the word of God unto the people, the people also left their labors to hear the word of God.—Alma 1: 36, 37.

Second, they were industrious. In addition to the above regarding their industry, Alma says: "And when the priest had imparted unto them the word of God, they all returned again diligently unto their labors."

Third, there was unity among them. "They all returned diligently to their labors." They did impart of their substance every man according to that which he had.

Fourth, they were equal. "And thus they were all equal, and they did all labor, every man according to his strength." (Verse 39.) And there were none "who were naked, or that were hungry, or that were athirst, or that were sick, or that had not been nourished." (Verse 45.)

Under these conditions Alma says, "And now because of the steadiness of the church, they began to be exceeding rich," etc.

The foregoing is but one more observation of God's unchangeable plan for the temporal and spiritual welfare of his people: spirituality, industry, unity, and equality. If these were the factors that made for the "steadiness of the church" anciently, will they not be required today? And if the prosperity of the church depends upon its steadiness, shall we not all be faithful contributors to this end?

Stock market manipulation can be put in the same class of activity.

These activities are growing and spreading in an alarming manner. The Better Business Bureau is organizing against fraudulent operations. Chambers of Commerce have taken action to protect legitimate business from exploitation and terrorism. The police in many places are in the usual condition described officially as "baffled." It seems that no property, no business, no wealthy citizen is safe.

America is beginning to reap the fruits of her own lawlessness. Citizens who wink at the breaking of laws and who themselves break the law now complain loudly when lawlessness reaches out and takes its toll of them. Those who sanction the breaking of our prohibition laws are seeing the precious rights of property and personal safety violated.

The trouble is that the innocent suffer with the guilty. The state of affairs today seems to be at the worst. We need an entire regeneration of social and political as well as personal morale in order to preserve the good institutions of the country.

The Australasian Delegation

By W. J. Haworth

The Saints of the Australasian Mission have, for a number of years, been thinking of and planning, in many cases, to attend the Centennial Conference of the church. It is regrettable, however, that financial depression and unemployment prevented many who would like to have come from joining the delegation.

An effort to raise money for the sending of six missionaries and the oratorical contestant succeeded in raising only sufficient funds for one missionary and the contestant.

The personnel of the delegation is as follows: Elder and Sister H. I. Velt, Elder and Sister A. C. Barmore, Colin Ferrett, Geoffrey Gillard, Walter Johnson, Sisters Lewis, Kennedy, Elliott, Watson, Ethel Watson, Elvie Cuthbert, Flora Delofski, the writer, and Sister Haworth.

We sailed from Sydney by the Royal Mail Ship Tahiti, February 20. An enthusiastic body of Saints and friends assembled at the wharf to say farewell to us. Among the number were quite a few who had been themselves disappointed in not being able to make the trip. This did not in any way react upon the warmth of their farewell to us. Never before has such a crowd of Saints gathered to say farewell to any members leaving our shores. There were tender farewells, hearty handclaps, cheery good wishes; in fact, all those human touches which go with farewells were in evidence. We were going to Zion, and our relatives and friends saw us off with that thought in mind. Some had traveled hundreds of miles just to wish us bon voyage. We shall not soon forget either the tender or the cheery farewells, nor the devotion to the higher purposes of the church which prompted so many to come so far to join in the ceremony of sending us off to Zion.

The partings over, the ship moved slowly away, a labyrinth of many colored paper streamers uniting friends afloat and ashore first floating gayly in the breeze and then straining as the distance became greater until the last streamer was broken and we were gathering speed for the long journey.

Four days later we called at Wellington, New Zealand, and as the ship stopped over nearly two days in this port, we availed ourselves of the opportunity of visiting the isolated Saints of this city brought into the church by Brother Albert Loving. Incidentally we saw the beauties of the city and its environs. We were happy to visit with the Saints and to render such services as the opportunity offered. Though small, these were much appreciated by these isolated people.

Our visit with the Saints of Papeete was very precious to them and to us. For many months these dear people had been preparing to show their "Australasian" brothers and sisters a good time. It was good for the members of our delegation to come in contact with these native Saints—the product of many years of missionary endeavor. They accorded us a wonderful welcome, and it was a joy to fraternize with them—furthermore a Greater than any of us was in the assembly by His Spirit. There were eloquent prayers and a speech of welcome in the native tongue, the latter being interpreted, as was also my response. An international musical and elocutionary program in the evening helped further to bring the people of different races closer together. Next morning at six o'clock there were more farewells before the ship sailed, many of the natives joining Brother Farthing in saying farewell to the party now considerably swelled in number by the inclusion of Elder and Sister Yager and their little daughter, Nadine, and Sister Farthing and Gloria.

Our ship arrived in San Francisco March 14, and before we were at the dock we were gladdened by the appearance of Apostle M. A. McConley and Elder G. P. Levitt. Later Elder J. W. Rushton and a host of other Saints arrived with machines in which we were driven to the Danvers Street Church, where an informal lunch provided by the sisters awaited us. In the evening we were formally welcomed and introduced to the Saints. During the week-end we were the guests of the Saints of the Bay Cities. We joined with them in their public devotions, and our elders preached in their churches. Elder and Sister Velt went on to Sacramento, where the former preached morning and evening in the fine new church. Again we felt that spiritual uplift which comes from association with God's people.

We were joined at San Francisco by Sister Elvie Cuthbert, who had left Australia by the Sierra two days later than the date of our sailing. We traveled Zionward on the morning of the 17th by the Feather River Route. At Salt Lake City we were met by Sister Rich and Brother and Sister Conyers and driven about the city in their automobiles. The temple grounds of the Utah people were visited and some shopping done, and we were again on our way. One of the local brothers, whose name we can not recall, kindly provided the party with a quantity of choice fruit.

At Provo the president of the branch and his wife came aboard and made themselves known to us. We rejoiced greatly at meeting all of these good people and were much impressed by the many kindnesses shown us.

We arrived in Kansas City at eleven o'clock the morning of the 20th of March, where a large assembly of Saints, including President F. M. McDowell, Apostle F. Henry Edwards, Elders John Blackmore, J. H. N. Jones, J. T. Gresty, and G. R. Wells met us and drove to Independence. A pleasing surprise was afforded us when a stop was made at the residence of President F. M. Smith. Introductions were made, and the party proceeded to the Auditorium via Swope Park. The writer, who had been in President McDowell's car up to the time of the visit with President Smith, rode with the latter to Independence. After lunch we were taken to the homes of the different Saints of whom we are guests.

In the evening we were entertained at dinner with the leading officials of the church and their good ladies. Apostle Hanson presided, explained the purpose of the gathering, and called upon President F. M. Smith to deliver an address of welcome. President Smith was in good form, and a great happiness came to us as we listened to his inspiring address. A response was made by the writer. Other speeches were made during the evening, among those addressing us being President E. A. Smith, Bishop M. H. Siegfried, Elder G. R. Wells, and Elder C. Ed. Miller. Under the direction of Elder J. W. Davis the Americans sang "We're glad to see you here" and other sentiments of welcome. We responded with "The Yanks are jolly good fellows." After dinner Elder Miller screened some sixteen millimeters of films, most of which were taken by the writer en route, together with some taken at the union station, Kansas City, by Brother Vance Eastwood on the arrival of the delegation.

We are glad to be among the Saints of Zion and to worship with them. We are enjoying much of the Spirit of God as we join in their devotions. The kindly spirit of brotherhood so uniformly shed upon us by all with whom we meet warms our hearts and makes us feel that though the people of Zion are not yet perfect, it is indeed a city of Saints. We meet Saints in the stores, the banks, the cafeterias, and all seem glad to meet us Kangaroos who have "hopped" across the seas to join in celebrating the Centennial of the church. We pray that God may abundantly bless his people in the approaching conference, and that, with the Saints of all other lands, our delegation may make a satisfactory contribution to the spiritual success of the gathering.

Centennial Conference Opens

April 6! How long have the Saints dreamed of the day! What memories has it brought them of the simple yet significant happening on that day one hundred years ago this year! April 6, 1930, was a great day of commemoration and joy and gratitude for the church, especially for the church gathered to Independence.

An early morning of brightest April sunshine welcomed the crowd of more than five thousand Saints, young members predominating, to the Auditorium to partake of the Lord's supper under the leadership of the First Presidency, Presiding Patriarch, and Presiding Bishop. Behind these officers were stationed the Twelve, who served the bread and wine to the corps of priesthood which, in turn, dispensed the emblems to the throng of worshipers. The hour was hallowed by a well-executed program of communion.

A second service of communion began at 10.15, planned to care for the crowd of incoming Saints. Seven thousand and more were estimated to be present to share, under the guidance of official quorums, the blessing of the sacrament. Thousands, at the suggestion of the Presidency, came fasting to these services.

At the same hour the young people of intermediate age and many of their friends gathered to the Stone Church to enjoy an international-missionary program in charge of officials of the religious education department. Saints were present from foreign countries, two brothers speaking in German, their messages being interpreted to the congregation. Here East met West and North met South. The purpose of the program was to acquaint the young people with the fact that the church sends men and women to foreign countries to teach the people that which has made life better and happier for us. There were on the platform at the same time representatives from South Australia, Scandinavia, Poland, Germany, and America.

Elder Hubert Case spoke on "The foundations of our faith in the first century" from 10.45 to twelve o'clock at the Independence Memorial Hall. And Liberty Street pulpit was occupied by Evangelist J. F. Martin, his theme being "The Unfinished task."

At one o'clock in the afternoon the Registration Committee opened its booth, and for six hours was busy registering six hundred and twenty-two incoming members. More than one thousand enrolled on Saturday. The total registration Sunday evening stood 5,120.

A sacred band concert by the Centennial Band, conducted by Earl Cox and Orlando Nace, attracted a large crowd of listeners to the Auditorium at 2.30 in the afternoon. Vesper services were in charge of President Elbert A. Smith, and Elders W. Wallace Smith and Ronald G. Smith at four o'clock. Those who wished to worship with their brothers and sisters in prayer service were given that opportunity at 2.30 in the afternoon, President F. M. Smith, Apostle J. A. Gillen, and Elder John F. Sheehy conducting an hour of prayer at the Stone Church.

By six o'clock the crowd was gathering for the event of the evening, the final oratorical contest, looked to for many months throughout the church. Radio vesper services filled the room with music. By the time the hour for the opening of the contest arrived, the Auditorium was filled. President F. M. McDowell introduced the six contestants in the order of their appearance: Doris Oakman, London, England; Frances Roberta Skinner, Tulsa, Oklahoma; James Gardner, Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa; Flora Delofski, Rozelle, New South Wales, Australia; Howard Elliott, Saint Louis, Missouri; and Olive Curtis, Independence, Missouri. Pleasing music interspersed the orations, numbers by the Graceland Male Quartet, a solo by Arthur Oakman, of Graceland, and two selections by an instrumental trio of Independence musicians. Much interest was shown by the throng in the decision of the judges, which gave first place to James Gardner, second to Howard Elliott, and third to Frances Roberta Skinner. Each of the six contestants was presented a scholarship to Graceland College by President George N. Briggs, and cash prizes, offered by the general church for those taking place in the final contest, were given by President F. M. Smith. The following acted as judges: Alice Mae Burgess, A. Max Carmichael, Alice Edwards, Lonzo Jones, Blanche Mesley, C. E. Wight, and D. T. Williams.

The homes of the Saints in Independence are full of visitors, and all are happy and very busy. There are enough meetings and more to keep the Auditorium and Stone Church and oftentimes Independence Memorial Hall and Liberty Street Church centers of activity. Sandwiched in between regularly scheduled priesthood meetings, classes, worship services, preaching hours, and special events are intensive oratorio practices, Centennial Conference Choir rehearsals, not to mention receptions, class reunions, and the many happy hours of visiting.

Monday morning saw class work well begun. Monday afternoon was marked by the opening conference business session. The Centennial Conference is on, and many are the prayers that the members shall go out from it to their homes spiritually refreshed, intellectually strengthened, more hopeful, more courageous, more devoted to all that they know to be true and good.

An event which saddened the hearts of the members in the center place and all her friends was the sudden passing of Sister Josephine W. Hull, wife of Elder E. B. Hull, missionary of the church from Colorado Springs, Colorado. She died of heart trouble the morning of April 2 at the Independence Sanitarium. Sister Hull, who was sixty years of age, had come with her husband to attend General Conference. They formerly lived in Brooklyn, New York. Besides her husband she is survived by one son, C. Lewis Hull, of Detroit, Michigan.

Bennington Church

Some of the members have been very busy attending the oratorio and the centennial pageant rehearsals and have not been able to attend all the local services. A fine spirit prevails, and we have been eagerly looking forward to the Centennial Conference. Although we are situated in the Kansas City Stake, we are only a few minutes' drive from the Auditorium and were able to attend the services in Independence on the first Sunday of the conference. Many who find it necessary to continue their daily employment will be able to attend the evening programs.

There were no local services last Sunday, this arrangement being made to permit all the members to attend the conference. Next Sunday there will be church school at 9.30, and at eleven o'clock there will be preaching by Brother J. E. Vanderwood. We invite conference visitors to be with us next Sunday morning. There will be no services after twelve o'clock. The Bennington Heights Church is at 1300 Bennington.

Brother Ross Leaverton was the speaker at the morning hour of March 31, and in the evening Brother O. A. McDowell spoke.

Brother Fred Witte was appointed bishop's agent the first of the year. He has proved his adaptability for this work by the way he has kept his records and by assisting the Saints in filing their inventories. The children are becoming interested in the financial law, and some have asked for the envelopes in which they put their weekly offerings.

Grandview Church

March 30 Patriarch J. H. N. Jones occupied the eleven o'clock hour. In the evening the subject was "The definite aim." Brother Jones has pioneered for thirty-four years in Australia. He said that by the eye of faith a man may commune with God.

Lees Summit

The last Sunday in March this group enjoyed a visit from Elder and Sister Haworth and Miss Flora Delofski, delegates from Australia to the General Conference. Brother Haworth preached at the morning hour, and Miss Delofski gave us her oration, "The vision of the Restoration." To those who will not get to the conference, this was a treat; to those who expect to go, it was a stimulus to go. Following this, came a basket dinner, which gave opportunity to the Saints to get acquainted with the visitors from afar, and also to make the acquaintance of the family of Brother F. A. Jones, from Harrisonville, six members of which were recently baptized and have been recorded with our group.

At night, the third of the "Know your church" series was presented, the program printed in the Herald being used. The short dramatic sketch made more real to all the testimony of the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon and the printing of the first edition. The general opinion seemed to be that the players are getting better each time. The pastor preached the short sermon that followed the sketch, on the subject, "The Book of Mormon as a witness."

There will be no services in Lees Summit during General Conference. But on the Wednesday following, April 23, we have the promise of the Australians that they will be with us again. Elder Haworth will show moving pictures taken in Australia before he left and in New Zealand and the Islands on the way over. Miss Delofski will read several selections, and Colin Ferrett will sing.

Duluth, Minnesota

March 21.—Much time has been spent lately in remodeling the church edifice. It is now receiving a new entrance, making it possible to close the entrance to the basement by way of the rostrum. This arrangement will eliminate disturbance during services. Elder W. E. Shakespeare, while here during February, designed the entrance, and while holding missionary services from February 16 to March 2 spent the day building it with the help of Brothers A. C. Bundy and Sam Case. The missionary services, while not many were in attendance, were uplifting and brought before the group a clear understanding of the Restoration of the gospel.

Elder Blair Jensen, pastor at Minneapolis, was a welcome visitor February 23 and 24. He assisted in the services.

Sister Ester Braddon was married to Reginald H. Edlund January 29, the Reverend Carl H. Olson officiating at the double ring ceremony. The wedding occurred in the Elim Lutheran Church. The church was full of friends and relatives. Sister Eva Tourville sang "At dawning" and "I love you truly." Brother W. C. Stauty gave the bride away. The couple are at home at 4232 Grand Avenue, Duluth, Minnesota.

Elder Sam Case spent the week-end of February 2 at Ashland encouraging the Saints.

Elder W. E. Shakespeare, missionary to Northern Wisconsin, also arrived in Ashland, spending a week with the members. He baptized Sister Emma M. Widenhoeft February 9 in the font in the basement of Brother and Sister William Dennis's home. Brother Shakespeare visited Two Harbors Saints the latter part of the week of February 9, starting a series of meetings at Duluth February 16. The new font being installed at the back of the rostrum was put into use March 2, when two children, Dawn Tourville, daughter of Brother and Sister R. C. Tourville, superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression and musical director; and Zelta Bundy, daughter of Elder A. C. Bundy, pastor, were baptized. Elder Samuel Case officiated. This makes the Tourville family one in the gospel covenant. Elders A. C. Bundy and W. E. Shakespeare confirmed, and Brother Robert

How to Address Mail to the General Church

For a number of years mail to the general church and department heads has been addressed to Box 255, Independence, Missouri. When the general offices were moved to the Auditorium it was thought unnecessary to retain the box, inasmuch as the regular mail service brought incoming mail to the office by carrier.

All mail intended for the general church or any of its offices or departments should be addressed in the name of the church, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. Do not send mail to Box 255, as it is now rented by another party.

Our Departed Ones

In 1918 they moved to Skiatook, where they remained until moving to Depew, Oklahoma, in the fall of 1928. Mrs. Parshall united with the church at Terilton September 2, 1904. She died at Depew, February 24, 1930. Funeral services were conducted by William Bath at Depew Methodist Church. Interment was in Tulsa Cemetery.

KILPACK.—John James Kilpack was born May 20, 1863, at Council Bluffs, Iowa, and died March 17, 1930, at his home in Logan, Iowa. September 11, 1887, he was married to Georgianna Chapman at Neola, Iowa, and for about four years they made their home in Pottawatomie County. They then moved to the homestead in Harrison County, where six children, Ernest A., William J., Mrs. George Carlile, Mrs. Joshua Carlile, Walter, and Mabel, were born and grew to manhood and womanhood. Besides his companion and children he leaves to mourn his passing thirteen grandchildren; three sisters: Mrs. Moider Clark, Mrs. Louisa O'Neill, and Mrs. Fred Driver; and two brothers: David and Frank. One brother, William H., preceded him in death about a year ago. November 1, 1914, he was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and was a faithful and consistent member the remainder of his life. The last few weeks of his life were spent in his new home in Logan, Iowa, where the family moved from the farm in February of this year. A host of friends mourn with the family the loss of a loving husband and father, a kind neighbor, and faithful friend. Services were held at the Latter Day Saint church in charge of W. R. Adams, assisted by Fred A. Fry. Interment in the Logan Cemetery.

Zuelsdorf was in charge. Brother J. E. Walters, of Carlton, offered the invocation.

Pastor A. C. Bundy spoke on the six fundamental principles of the gospel as enumerated in the 6th chapter of Hebrews that evening. Brothers Sam Case, P. G. Schnuckle, and J. E. Walters, of Carlton, were behind the sacred desk in the morning.

Our thoughts are upon the Centennial Conference, some contemplating attendance. With our church building soon to be completed, decorated, and put in fine shape for the advancement of the work of the Lord, we are looking forward to a greater ingathering of souls than we have enjoyed heretofore.

Brother George Miller, Dixon, Missouri, and Brother E. W. Davis, Hayden, Missouri, have learned of the recent inquiry of Brother Connelly concerning location of Saints in vicinity of Dixon, and invite him to write to either of them.

The Week at General Conference

The readers of the Herald received last week the story of the auspicious opening of the General Conference of the Centennial Year, of the many thousands who thronged the huge Auditorium in two Sunday morning meetings to take part in the communion service, of the afternoon of meetings and greeting of old friends, and of the Centennial Oratorical Contest in the evening. They read also of Monday's fine beginning for the class work, and of the business session, with the full text of President Smith's splendid message to the General Conference and to the church. Among the last items noted was the Monday night meeting, "Official Night," bringing a welcome to the conference from city and state officials.

Affairs of Tuesday

Perhaps it is fortunate for the secretaries and workers at conference that all visitors do not arrive and attempt to register on the same day. At any rate, registrations continued at a lively rate on Tuesday. With much of their visiting done, greater numbers of the people turned their serious attention to class work and fewer of them were found congesting the large lobby of the Auditorium. The institute classes all noticeably increased their numbers, and the registrations for the class work were approaching the high mark of nearly thirteen hundred, which they were to reach before the first week was over. These people have made an average of more than three classes per person each day.

Anyone looking in at the Auditorium might suppose that the visitors were neglecting everything else for class work. However, lest it be supposed that they had become fanatics for education, let it be understood that the same visitor would have found the Stone Church filled to overflowing at the very same hours, with people attending the devotional and preaching services. In the prayer meetings a splendid spirit of testimony and consecration prevailed, and at almost every meeting one could see unmistakable evidences of spiritual power. Great numbers of people trudged between the Stone Church and the Auditorium, participating alternately in class work and in devotional exercises. The people have thus struck a fair balance between the educational and the spiritual aspects of the conference work.

An Important Recommendation

The report of the Church Statistician, Elder Carroll L. Olson, provided Tuesday's business session with some of its most important discussion. Brother Olson's figures tend to show that about one sixth of the church membership are not associated with any branch, and do not have the privilege of regular attendance at church. There is, on that account, a high rate of loss among them. Brother Olson therefore made the following suggestion:

It is our recommendation that wherever possible members of the church should locate in the vicinity of regularly organized branches and should avoid making their residence where it will be almost impossible for them to attend services regularly. When persons are moving from one town to another, or seeking a new location for their family in which to find better opportunities for employment, we suggest that they keep in mind the desirability of moving into the vicinity of a branch of the church where they may have the benefit of the association with the Saints and may also make their contributions to the onward progress of the church.

Apostle J. F. Curtis moved and Apostle M. A. McConley seconded the adoption of this recommendation. Its importance was made emphatic in the discussions of Bishop A. Carmichael and Apostles Curtis and Gleazer. L. S. Wight moved and B. E. Brown seconded the following amendment: "We strongly urge that no such moves be made without consultation with properly constituted stake, district, and branch authorities." This amendment carried, and the motion as amended prevailed. This important move for the integrating of our people and the strengthening of the bonds that tie them together should be carefully observed by the Saints, not only as a spiritual measure, but also as a rule of practical wisdom.

Morning Services at the Stone Church

The regular morning program for the first week at the Stone Church will be of interest to Herald readers. From 7.30 to 8.30 Apostle R. S. Budd conducted devotional services. Bishop J. A. Koehler lectured on "Community stewardships," from 8.40 to 9.40. Another regular devotional period under President Frederick M. Smith was held from 9.50 to 10.50. Each morning from 11 to 12 the pulpit was occupied by a different speaker at the preaching service. Large crowds attended all of these services, and during the later morning hours the church was filled to capacity.

Other Tuesday Events.

An international program under the direction of President Frederick M. Smith attracted an audience of more than six thousand to the Auditorium Tuesday evening, while Saints from various lands participated in the activities. At the same hour Apostle D. T. Williams occupied the Stone Church pulpit, speaking on "The challenge of the second century," a subject continued from Monday to Wednesday by him.

Wednesday

The principal part of the discussion for Wednesday centered around the budget submitted by the Board of Appropriations and the resolution accompanying it. Due to a mistake in the minutes, the body labored under a temporary misapprehension, which was cleared up so that the recommendation of the board was adopted Friday.

Interesting features not having to do with business were presented at the business session. Apostle E. J. Gleazer presented Howard Harpham, a fourteen-year-old member of the priesthood who acts regularly as a preacher for the branch at Seiling, Oklahoma. Apostle J. F. Garver presented Elder James McKiernan, who has been an active member of the priesthood for sixty-one years. Elder C. Ed. Miller brought to the stand framed pictures of the late Joseph Smith and of Frederick M. Smith to be presented to the church, the making of which had been financed by the Laurel Club. He also presented many other fine historic paintings, the framing of which they had financed, and spoke of the fine work of this club. The members of the Laurel Club, attired in the uniforms in which they had been hard at work in the basement to serve meals to the conference visitors, were seated on the platform. Sister T. J. Watkins made the first speech of presentation of the picture of Joseph Smith, and afterward requested President Elbert A. Smith to present the picture of President Frederick M. Smith, which he did. President Smith received the pictures in behalf of the church.

An incident of the evening, in addition to the continued services previously mentioned, was the reception in the church offices, during which throngs filed through the rooms and were met by the officers in their places of business.

Thursday

By Thursday the classes in the Auditorium had very nearly reached their maximum size for the week. At the motion of Elder James W. Davis, and the second of Elder E. A. Curtis, the conference voted to send congratulations to Sister Marietta Walker at her home at Brea, California, on the passing of her ninety-sixth birthday. The Mother's Quartet was invited to sing Patriarch J. T. Gresty's arrangement of "Come, sweet Comforter." Their rendition was beautiful.

The important event of Thursday's business was the discussion of the report of the Bishop. In behalf of the Presiding Bishopric, Bishop Mark H. Siegfried occupied the tribune, explaining the report, and answering all inquiries. He was able to set at rest a number of false rumors that, apparently set afloat by persons unkindly disposed toward the church, had caused concern to some of the members. It appears that the financial condition of the church is sound and that there is nothing to worry about if the members continue to do their duty.

The report of the Bishop was formally adopted.

The event of the evening was the Sanitarium program in the Auditorium. A review of the past work was made, and an announcement was made of the plans for a new building to meet the very urgent needs and to extend the usefulness of the institution. At this meeting occurred the graduating exercises of the Class of 1930, School of Nursing at the Sanitarium, Elder John W. Rushton being the speaker. At the same time Elder Richard Baldwin began a series of sermons on "The spirit of the second century," at the Stone Church.

Friday

The budget recommendations of the Board of Appropriations were adopted after brief discussion. The following recommendation of the board, concerning construction on the Auditorium, was adopted:

It is the opinion of this council that no further constructive expenditures should be made on the Auditorium until the general fund has been reimbursed, and that the Presiding Bishopric be authorized to expend on the Auditorium such funds only as shall be thereafter contributed.

The Board of Appropriations made the further recommendation, of significance to all departments and associations of the church required to make financial statements:

Resolved, That hereafter all departments and church associations making business or financial statements to the church, shall file their annual reports with the Presiding Bishopric at such times as may be designated by that quorum, in order that all the business of the church may be embodied in the annual report of the Presiding Bishopric.

The resolution was adopted. The report of the Quorum of Twelve brought extensive discussion from Apostles F. H. Edwards, R. S. Budd, J. F. Curtis, and E. J. Gleazer.

The event of the evening was the Graceland College program at the Auditorium. The A Cappella Chorus, with Miss Mabel Carlile as director, gave a program in two parts, the first of sacred music, the second of secular music. Their performance was highly finished, a great credit alike to Graceland, to the performers, and to Miss Carlile. Intermediate between the two parts was the appearance of the Lamoni-Graceland Orchestra under the leadership of Joseph H. Anthony. Their work was also of a very high order. After the program steps were taken to begin plans for the formation of the Graceland Alumni Association. Then all old Gracelanders adjourned to the basement of the Auditorium, where there was a combined reception, song fest, and "pep meeting," during which many old friends met.

Saturday

What was perhaps the most important single piece of business to be transacted by the conference, from the viewpoint of church administration, was passed on Saturday. It was the acceptance of the report of the Department of Religious Education and the adoption of its recommendations. The whole plan embodied in the recommendations was fully treated in the February issue of the Departments' Journal, and in a six-page folder that included very much the same material which was sent to pastors. A condensed form was printed on a single leaf and distributed to the delegates and ex officios at the Saturday session in order that everyone might understand the proposal. Readers are advised to look for further material on the measure, now that it has passed, in the church publications, particularly in the Departments' Journal.

The recommendations, presented for the benefit of readers of the weekly Herald, were as follows:

We recommend: That the vertical lines which have separated the Department of Sunday School, Department of Women, and Department of Recreation and Expression be erased and that the activities of these departments be merged into one department, to be known as the Department of Religious Education. It is in accordance with the spirit of this recommendation that the work heretofore directed by these three departments shall not only be unified into one department, but that the work of this newly created department be closely integrated with the total program of the church.

That the administration of this Department of Religious Education be left to a staff consisting of the following: A Director of Religious Education, for the present a member of the First Presidency; an Associate Director; a Supervisor of the Young People's Division; a Supervisor of the Children's Division, it being understood that these officers shall be ratified by the General Conference.

That this staff shall work closely under the supervision of the First Presidency, and that it make every effort to correlate and integrate its activities with the activities of all other phases and departments of church endeavor.

That this staff, working in cooperation with the general officials of the church, take such steps as are necessary to reorganize the work of religious education in stakes, districts, and branches in accordance with the above plan, it being understood that these changes shall be brought about only as found wise and practicable and as conditions in the various stakes, districts, and branches would seem to justify.

That this department be financed out of the general church budget, as are all other fields of general church endeavor.

The proposal to adopt the report brought lengthy discussion, most of it favorable. When the vote was taken, there was no doubt about the reception of the proposal, for there were hardly any dissenting voters to be seen.

A feature of the business meeting was the presentation by Sister Lizzie Victor, a delegate from the Hilo Branch in Hawaii, in behalf of the Women's Department of that place, to the Women's Department here, of a letter opener made of koa wood, the Hawaiian hardwood; in behalf of the Women's Department of the United States, mainland, Sister Blanche Edwards Mesley received the letter opener, and responded warmly to the simple but eloquent words of the Hawaiian sister.

Saturday evening was set aside for an "At Home" for the Independence Saints and their guests, while the Oratorio Chorus practiced for the Sunday presentation.

Sunday

The day was just another repetition of the beautiful spring weather which has characterized the entire conference. Automobiles arrived from near and far as the day advanced. A trip to the parking places and streets adjacent to the Auditorium found license tags from thirty-two States of the Union and from Ontario.

Many from adjacent States, such as Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, and even Illinois, were just in for the Sunday.

Stone Church

The day opened at 7.30 with a young people's prayer meeting under the direction of President McDowell, assisted by younger men. No other service was held at the Stone Church during the morning.

In the afternoon a refined musical program was rendered from 2.30 to 3 o'clock.

Patriarch Frederick A. Smith spoke at 3 o'clock. His sermon will be published in the Herald later.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson spoke in the evening, using stereopticon illustrations on the subject, "Among ancient American cities."

Other Churches

Walnut Park Church presented Apostle J. A. Gillen in the morning and Elder Eli Bronson in the evening service.

Liberty Street Church gave its attendants Elder J. F. Sheehy in the morning and Apostle J. F. Curtis for the evening hour.

Kansas City Central Church heard Elder James W. Davis in the morning service.

Memorial Hall, Independence, held a service for the young people's division of the church school from 9.30 to 10.30 a. m. In the evening Elder John W. Rushton was the speaker.

At the Auditorium

President McDowell addressed the adult division of the church school from 9.30 to 10.30 in the morning.

The 10.45 to 12 o'clock preaching service was broadcast. President Frederick M. Smith made the address, using the subject assigned to other speakers in the various services of the city for the morning hour, "Retrospect." The address was a masterpiece in thought and spirit. Herald readers will find it in a later number.

In the afternoon President Elbert A. Smith addressed the large congregation. Though somewhat overtaxed and physically under par, President Elbert A. delivered an important and appreciated message. This also will be given in a later number of the Herald.

A vesper service from 6 to 7 o'clock was relayed from the L. D. S. studio to the Auditorium.

The Oratorio, "The Course of Time"

The first rendition of Patriarch John T. Gresty's transcendent work, The Course of Time, was a drawing card of the Sunday activities. Long before seven o'clock the huge auditorium began to fill. The foyer was crowded. Parties assembling, and arrangements being made for the enjoyment of the evening.

An inspiring sight greeted those who arrived close to the hour of opening. The huge choir of nearly seven hundred, the men in black and the women in white, arranged so that the white bordered and surrounded the black was beautiful. On the platform were assembled the orchestra, the special part singers, and the soloists, another wonderful picture. The great room, filled with an expectant audience, completed the picture.

The composer-conductor, John T. Gresty, was warmly greeted as he took his place and reached for his baton. From the first it was apparent that a master was in charge, and all went well. The more than six thousand witnesses sat for three and one half hours, and at the three periods where applause was permitted, broke forth in torrents of approval and admiration.

Press stories descriptive of this evening's program were full of compliment. It was the day of John T. Gresty's triumph. The work he accomplished in composing, organizing, and producing The Course of Time marks him as an unusual man of great artistic and deep spiritual senses.

One went from the Auditorium after eleven o'clock on Sunday night in deep thought aroused by the performance of a masterpiece of human conception of the works of God.

Monday

Monday was very largely Graceland's day at the business session. The A Cappella Chorus sang a number of songs with lovely and brilliant execution. The youthful singers were fine to behold, and their intensity, their spiritual earnestness, their almost sacrificial effort to give their best to their songs, lifted the audience with them and brought them round after round of generous applause. President G. N. Briggs delivered a worthy justification of the college, and there followed a series of splendid tributes to the institution from Mrs. B. M. Anderson, George Lewis, Alice Chappelow, and Bishop E. L. Traver.

At the resignation of Mrs. Blanche Edwards Mesley from the Board of Trustees, Mrs. B. M. Anderson was elected to fill the vacancy.

The date of the next General Conference was set for October 6, 1931.

A series of lectures on the subject, "The ministry of beauty," was begun in the Stone Church by Elder John W. Rushton. At the eleven o'clock hour a series of sermons on the church in foreign lands was begun with an address by W. H. Chandler, president of the Northern District of England, on the subject, "The church in England."

The second rendition of the magnificent oratorio, The Course of Time, was given to a large audience in the Auditorium. Patriarch J. T. Gresty, composer and director, received a tribute and a cash present from the members of the chorus, and the congratulations and gratitude of all who had the privilege of hearing. For the benefit of those who had heard the oratorio Sunday, Elder William Patterson preached at the Stone Church in the evening on "The message of the second century."

Work, responsibility, and duty! These are the three great joy bringers of the world. Happy is the man who has learned to know the value of their gracious ministrations. He will no longer turn away from their benign presence, but will walk with them hand in hand, the flowers of true happiness blooming always about him.—Young People.

Decease of Marietta Walker

April 10 the business session of the conference instructed the Secretary to transmit the good wishes of the church and its congratulations to Marietta Walker, visiting at Brea, California, for that marked her ninety-sixth birthday.

This remarkable woman had accomplished much for the church in the days of her strength. She had retained many of her faculties, and much power of mind, as well as spirituality. It was fitting that the church should thus recognize her.

Sunday, April 13, as the Saints were assembled in the Auditorium for the morning service, word came that the day following her birthday Sister Walker had finished her earth life, peacefully passing to the great beyond. As the fact of her demise was announced an assemblage of nearly seven thousand Saints stood silently for a few moments to honor her memory.

As a public benefactor it would be difficult to designate her greatest accomplishment. It was her mind and hand which conceived and set in motion Autumn Leaves, the church magazine. Her energy and comprehension established the Christmas Offering. Her conception of the part of women in the work of the church has been accepted and made the basis for women's activities. She has given personal attention to the development of several of the present-day strong men in the councils of the church. She was one of the strong elements in establishing Graceland College. All of this and more.

Her body is being taken to Lamoni, Iowa, which was her home for nearly half a century. It will be interred in the beautiful city of the dead at that place. Funeral services are to be held Thursday morning at half past ten at the Brick Church in Lamoni, with James W. Davis as speaker. A memorial service will be held at the Stone Church in Independence at the same hour.

The church honors the life and mourns at the death of Marietta Walker. R. J. L.

"Not Much Done"

One sometimes hears, from some who have fed upon the rich food of excitement at former conferences, that at the Centennial Conference there has been "not much done." This is, of course, an unfortunate view of the purposes of conference, as well as a thought contrary to the facts.

There is an old proverb: "No news is good news." It offers us a piece of wisdom at this time. It is at times of sickness in families that letters fatten and telegrams fly thick and fast. In communities and nations, it is in times of trouble, disorder, and uncertainty that the newspaper headlines grow tall and the special editions appear. A time of peace and public or family health is a time of regularity, of order, and of stability. There is little occasion for news.

Of course it is to be expected that some few persons will never be satisfied with things as they are. Those who continually adjust the machinery of life find it continually out of adjustment. The car owner who is always "tampering the gadget" for the sake of tampering, rarely has a car that gives really satisfactory service.

It is so with the church. Things are running pretty well in general, if we compare our condition with that of any other period. Therefore we believe that the idea that "not much has been done" is an unfortunate view of the church.

Furthermore, this view is contrary to the facts. There have been several pieces of legislation of extraordinary importance.

The resolution to prosecute the missionary work with more vigor than ever before will put us back (or should do so) in the front ranks of the missionary churches.

The resolution based on the report of the Statistician, to encourage the settlement of moving Saints in communities where they may have regular privileges of church attendance, is a move, as one of the apostolic quorum suggested, in the direction of using our branches and groups as bases from which to conduct regular missionary campaigns, and is an indication of a change of policy of great importance and unquestionable wisdom. It is a move to quit producing the unhappy figure known as the "isolated Saint" and to put him where he may have church privileges.

Furthermore, the recognition by conference legislation of a change in the organization of our local branches that has been under experiment and observation for some time among some of our congregations is a move of the most profound importance. It restores the solidarity of the church which was gradually relinquished in the excess of independent organization.

It may be true, as some people say, that some of the speeches on the conference floor have been dull, tedious, pointless, irrelevant, and without effect; but that is inevitable in any conference, and this conference has had but few of them.

We have suffered very little from cases of pure obstructionism. The alarmists have had little support on the conference floor, and in the voting they were "sunk without a trace." Heaven, it is to be hoped, provides an unrestricted rostrum for some of the firebrands of former years, and other organizations have conveniently received a number of those who are still active in this life. The few that remain provide more amusement than trouble.

Our legislative acts have not been numerous, but they have been of large effect and of great importance.

And, if we may dare to venture the bold suggestion from an observation of our State and National Governments, it is not in legislative activity that a government fails or succeeds, but rather in administration. The administration needs but the word from the legislative assembly to go ahead, the vote of confidence. It carries the responsibility.

We pit our faith, so far as we should pit our faith in human agency, in our administrative officers: in him who is the divinely called and appointed prophet and at the same time the elected President of the church. We pit our faith, so far as we should, in his Counselors. We pit our faith similarly in the other leading officers of the church. We place our faith, and do not remove it, so long as it appears that they act in good faith under the divine appointment of their office and calling for the good of the work, and not for increase of personal power or reward or vainglory.

Those who cry to us, "Trust not in the arm of flesh," often mean that we should not trust some other man's flesh, but should trust theirs. There is little use in change of earthly agents for the mere novelty of change.

L. L.

When we turn to the scientists they tell us that they are abandoning the idea of a universe whose basic constituency is atoms, hard, like billiard balls, in favor of electrons, or organized force or energy centers. This new conception seems to be turning the scientific mind of the age from a materialistic conception and explanation of our universe to a spiritual interpretation. "Materialism as a philosophy is vanishing, for matter itself is vanishing." It is easier to step up from force centers to an immanent God than it was to posit a Creator of a hard material world out of nothing. It is no wonder, then, that as Doctor Milligan tells us, there is a definite turn of the tide of scientific thinking away from agnostic materialism to God.—E. Stanley Jones, in The Christ of Every Road.

The Centennial Conference

In special events the Centennial Conference has passed its second peak of interest—the renditions of the oratorio The Course of Time, composed and conducted by Evangelist John T. Gresty, of Australia. On the first Sunday night of the conference occurred the Centennial Oratorical Contest; the second Sunday evening and again on Monday the oratorio attracted conference members, townspeople, and musicians from Kansas City. This week interest is climbing to the presentation of the great centennial pageant Fulfillment, written by Sister Alice Mae Burgess, and to be presented by the White Masque Players of Independence and their many friends and helpers.

The Course of Time is the culmination of twenty-seven years of study and work on the part of the composer, and for a year almost a thousand musicians and singers living in various parts of the United States, Canada, England, and Australia, have practiced it. The members of the oratorio choir and orchestra availed themselves of every opportunity during the first week of conference to rehearse.

It is estimated that seven thousand heard the oratorio Sunday evening, mostly out-of-town people, Independence citizens having been requested to attend on Monday night in order that all conference visitors having to leave early in the week might have opportunity to hear the magnificent composition. Though the crowd on Monday night was not so large, it was quite as enthusiastic as the assemblage on Sunday night.

The chorus of seven hundred voices and the orchestra of one hundred pieces combined to ably present six beautiful choruses. And numbers by a male chorus, the Wahdemna Choral Club, of Independence, the Graceland A Cappella Chorus, and the orchestra were splendidly given.

The work of the soloists was brilliant and evoked many favorable comments. Soloists on Sunday night were: Miss Amy Glassford, soprano, New York; Mrs. John Zimmermann, jr., contralto, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Mr. Eugene Christy, Lawrence, Kansas, tenor; Mr. Arthur Oakman, tenor, London, England; Mr. James R. Houghton, baritone, Boston, Massachusetts; Mr. Colin Ferrett, bass, Sydney, Australia. Duet by Marcella Menge Clark, Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa, and Mrs. John Zimmermann, jr.; organist, Mr. Robert Miller, Independence, Missouri; pianists, Mrs. Mildred Connelly, Kansas City, Missouri; Miss Anne Self, Omaha, Nebraska, and Mr. George Miller, Independence. On Monday night soloists were: Nelle Atkinson Kelley, soprano, Omaha, Nebraska; Mrs. John Zimmermann, jr., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Mr. George Anway, tenor, Independence; Mr. Arthur Oakman, tenor, London, England; Mr. Eugene Christy, tenor, Lawrence, Kansas; Mr. James R. Houghton, baritone, Boston, Massachusetts; Mr. Colin Ferrett, bass, Sydney, Australia. The duet by Miss Lilly Belle Allen, Independence, and Mrs. S. A. Burgess, Independence. Organist, Mr. Robert Miller, Independence. Pianists: Mr. Wayne Cooper, Independence; Mr. George Miller, Independence; Miss Rae Lysinger, Lamoni, Iowa.

Of the oratorio the Kansas City Times has to say: "Only a church that is very much alive could produce a new oratorio so deeply religious in character. The Course of Time is more than an oratorio, for in it the composer has attempted to gather into a single work a vivid conception of the passing centuries and all they have meant to the Christian religion."

At the close of Sunday's performance Conductor Gresty was presented a beautiful lei by a little boy from Hawaii and a basket of flowers by the little daughter of Apostle and

It is impossible to believe that the sort of man that Jesus was and the sort of Spirit that Christ is, can fail at last to win mankind.—Dwight Bradley.

Sister M. A. McConley. On Monday evening he was presented a purse of more than two hundred dollars by the Oratorio Choir and Orchestra.

Sunday's program for the conference was full of splendid meetings. Sunday schools were conducted in all the churches in Independence, there being special lecture sessions for the young people at Memorial Hall and the adults in the Auditorium.

"Retrospect" was the theme of President Frederick M. Smith at the morning preaching hour at the Auditorium, when he addressed approximately seven thousand people. That the members of the church have during the past century realized they have a distinctive message to bear to the world and have through faith gone forward against all obstacles to build the great church which now exists is the belief of the President. Music at the morning hour was by the A Cappella Chorus of Graceland College and the Wahdemna Choral Club, of Independence, conducted by Mabel Carlile and Paul N. Craig.

At the same hour services were conducted at Walnut Park Church, where Apostle J. A. Gillen treated the theme "Retrospect," and at Liberty Street, where Pastor J. F. Sheehy preached. Central Church in Kansas City, Missouri, had for its speaker on that theme Elder J. W. Davis.

In the afternoon at three o'clock President Elbert A. Smith spoke to the congregation at the Auditorium on "Treasures old and new," the Centennial Choir, led by Paul N. Craig offering musical support. Assisting soloists were Nina Grenawalt Smith, Mrs. Frances Norris, and George Anway. Simultaneously a preaching service occurred in the Stone Church, Presiding Patriarch Frederick A. Smith being the speaker. An excellent musical program was rendered by visiting and local musicians.

Evening services consisted of the oratorio at the Auditorium, an illustrated lecture "Among ancient American cities," by Apostle Paul M. Hanson, at the Stone Church; preaching by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, Walnut Park; preaching by Apostle J. F. Curtis, Liberty Street Church, and preaching by J. W. Rushton at Memorial Hall.

During last week and the early part of this week throngs of people have gathered at the Stone Church to attend the two devotional services held each morning and the eleven o'clock hour when speakers from widely separated States have presented the following themes: "Missionary passion," "Pastoral devotion," "Twice born men," "Zion's homes," "Divine communion," "Creative fellowship," "The church in England," "The church in Scandinavia," and "The church in the South Seas."

Though meetings have been conducted at the Auditorium every night with the exception of Saturday, which was at Home Night, preaching services at the Stone Church have interested many. The first three evenings of the opening week Apostle D. T. Williams preached on "The challenge of the second century" as a part of the conference theme "A faith for the second century." On Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings Elder Richard Baldwin spoke on "The spirit of the second century." Monday evening "The message of the second century" was the theme of Elder William Patterson, and "The goals of the second century," was the topic of Bishop M. H. Siegfried last night and will occupy his attention tonight.

Numbers of visitors have gone home, but there are others arriving every day to be here at the close of the Centennial Conference. The devotional services are inspiring, the classes instructive. Business meetings each week-day afternoon have interested all and have been productive of constructive legislation. Surely the General Conference which is now drawing to a close will mean much of encouragement, of help, and of benefit to many thousands of Saints throughout the world.

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Street

April 1.—Sacramental service March 2 was in charge of R. E. Madden assisted by J. E. Matthews. The Spirit of the Master was present, and we felt it good to be in the house of the Lord. J. E. Matthews preached in the evening, taking for a theme "The Book of Mormon."

Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith preached at the morning hour March 9, reading for a lesson a portion of John 4. Bishop H. E. French was the evening speaker. As a reading he selected verses from Acts 17.

The Women's Department met March 13 in the social room of the church to enjoy a potluck dinner at noon. Twenty-four were present. A new member, Katherine Stratton, was welcomed to the department. Sister C. H. McMillin taught the civic lesson. A paper "Gems of thought" was read by Mina Turvey.

G. H. Kirkendall preached in the morning March 16 on the text, "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death."—Proverbs 16: 25.

C. W. Clark, pastor of First Branch, preached in the evening, taking for a theme "Ancient America."

Missionary John R. Grice started a short series of meetings March 19, to continue over Sunday, March 23. His sermons were most instructive.

Doctor W. B. Reeves was the chosen speaker the morning of March 23. For a theme he used "Why do we go to church?" In the evening Brother Grice discussed "Citizenship."

District President A. E. Anderton occupied the evening hour March 30. For a text he read: "And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church."—Matthew 16: 18.

At 6.30 two children were baptized by R. E. Madden, Mildred Sensabaugh and Margaret Thomas. They were confirmed by A. E. Anderton and J. E. Matthews.

A. B. Kirkendall met with the congregation March 23. He was visiting his daughter, Marjory, who is recovering from a very serious operation.

Rolla, Kansas

March 26.—The Saints were called together for a special business meeting March 23 at two o'clock at the home of Brother and Sister Frank S. Clinesmith. First the communion service was had, giving the members their first opportunity to partake of the sacrament since December. Testimonies were given and several songs sung; then the order of the meeting was changed to that of business, continuing in charge of Brothers Wooten and Mettlen.

We had been without a branch president since 1925, and no missionary was here until Brother Harvey V. Minton came in 1927. All present were in favor of reorganizing branch meetings, and Sister Harriett Williams made a motion which was seconded by Brother Roswell Ward, that the branch be set in order, which meant the election of officers. Brother Ed. E. Mettlen was unanimously elected branch president; Sister Ethel Hjort was unanimously reelected secretary; and Brother Frank Clinesmith was unanimously reelected treasurer. Sister Rena Coen was reelected chorister; Brother Elver Clinesmith, auditor. Brother Mettlen then made a short talk which was followed by the song, "I'll go where you want me to go." An instructive talk explaining the work of the church was given by Brother J. W. Wooten.

Sunday school officers were then chosen: Superintendent, Edgar G. Coen; assistant superintendent, Ed. E. Mettlen; secretary, Elver Clinesmith; chorister, Sister Coen. The Sunday school funds are to be handled by branch officers. It was decided to hold Sunday school in the homes until we get a permanent place to meet, conducting services four Sundays in each place decided upon by the school beginning the first Sunday in April at the home of Brother and Sister Clinesmith. The session will open at ten o'clock.

An oblation was taken during the sacramental service. More than four dollars was given. There were twenty-seven present.

Brother J. W. Wooten preached an hour following the meeting and has preached Monday and Tuesday evenings. Tonight will be the closing service, for Brother Wooten must return to Wichita. We are glad to have him with us. His talks on stewardship have been interesting and enlightening. Some nonmembers have been present at each service.

Niagara Falls, Ontario

March 7 marked the return of District Missionary B. H. Doty. This being our night of Department of Recreation and Expression session, we planned a surprise party for our brother. A most enjoyable evening was spent by all. We also had on this occasion Elder W. H. Chandler, president of Northern District in England.

Sunday, March 9, was a beautiful day. Sunday school commenced at ten o'clock and was followed by an inspiring prayer service at eleven.

A musical program given by Mr. Tackwell and his orchestra at the evening service proved a very acceptable change. His orchestra is composed of young boys and girls.

Elder Doty preached four nights in the church, commencing March 10. The services were greatly enjoyed.

Under the leadership of Sisters George Towers and Mary Collins, the Oriole Girls presented a program and held social evening March 26. The program was a credit to those who performed and those responsible for the training of the girls.

Several Saints are planning to be at the Centennial Conference. We pray the Lord will richly bless his people who will be gathered together for the notable event.

Sperry, Oklahoma

After many weeks of delay on account of bad weather a series of meetings was commenced here March 2. The house was full each evening, and on several occasions numbers were turned away. Brother William T. Bath labored under the influence of the Spirit, giving the people the counsel and instruction which were most needed. As a result twenty-two were added to the church.

As Mr. Robert Perkey was being conducted into the water the writer's mind traveled back a few years to a little white church at Jenks, Oklahoma, where he first met Mr. and Mrs. Robert Perkey. Little did he know at that time that the seeds of the gospel were falling on fertile ground. Mr. Perkey is one of the officials of the Prairie Oil and Gas Company. We give him with all the other new members a hearty welcome. Many of the newly baptized members are outstanding people in this community. Brother Bath wrote to Apostle E. J. Gleazer of the wonderful success he was having, and asked him to come. Brother Gleazer arrived and preached the last four nights, and through his efforts twelve new members will be added at once.

A reception was held at the close of the meetings for the new members. Pastor W. P. Rumsey gave the address of welcome, and the superintendent of the public schools made an interesting talk on how to live up to our ideals as church members.

The women of the branch are always finding some way to beautify the church home. Last week they added a new piano, as the old instrument has served its time. They also added a new drapery to the main auditorium, this costing several hundred dollars. They serve dinner to the teachers every Tuesday and also lunch at the sales. Under the leadership of Sister W. P. Rumsey they find time to visit the sick and contribute their talent to the building up of God's church in this locality. They gave a play at the high school last week and received more than forty dollars as admission fees. They are a faithful group. May God continue to bless them with wisdom and knowledge.

The Sunday school is growing. We are handicapped for room now. Little did we think a few years back that we should see our new church filled to capacity as it is now.

The Religio is presided over by Brother Clois Stephens and Brother Russel Rumsey. Some very interesting classes are now being conducted. The young people are taking part in the activities of the church.

Brother Selma Stephens holds young people's sacramental meetings at 8.30 in the morning and reports a fine spirit. On Friday night the normal teachers' training class holds its meetings, much interest being manifested.

Pastor W. P. Rumsey was again elected a member of the school board with no opposition. Our people in this community are gradually taking the place they should occupy. May the church continue to grow everywhere as it has in Sperry, and may the Saints all work together.

We want to extend thanks to Brother Gleazer and Brother Bath for the wonderful work they have done.

Deselm Branch

Near Manteno, Illinois

Attendance at church services is small owing to the scattered condition of the members and some indifference. However, the faithful workers are interested and busy.

The women, under the efficient leadership of Sister Pearl Pement, have been holding meetings every other Wednesday in the different homes. During the winter months the department held all-day meetings and invited the men. Splendid dinners have been served and the proceeds helped to swell the branch budget. The programs in the afternoons have been of high order.

Each month the historical play "Conversations," by Elbert A. Smith, are being presented as outlined in the Herald. Much inspiration has come from these programs.

Several young children attend Sunday school, and we feel our responsibility in trying to train them for service in the church.

February 17 Brother Andrew Robson, of Wilmington, passed to the beyond at Silver Cross Hospital, Joliet. He was born July 28, 1859, in Scotland and united with the church thirty years ago. Left to mourn are his wife, one daughter, and three granddaughters. The funeral was held in the Wilmington Presbyterian church, the Reverend A. E. Lehman officiating. Brother Robson was a contractor and builder. Twice he built chimneys on our church building that was burned and bombed, donating his service. He was highly respected by all.

Sunday, March 9, Elders H. P. W. Keir and O. A. Skinner, bishop's agent, visited our branch. They came to look over and appraise the damaged church property; they have a buyer for it. However, they will wait until after General Conference before any definite move is made.

We were pleasingly surprised to have here Brother Eklof and family, of Waukegan, Brother E. D. Rogers and family, of Sandwich, and Brother Lemere and family, of Bradley. Their visit made it seem like home-coming day.

Doctor A. W. Teel's health articles in the Herald are being read here with interest.

We would like to attend the Centennial Conference, but many of us can not. However, our prayers will be with the Saints as they assemble, that God will pour out his Spirit in rich measure over all.

Plano, Illinois

March 30.—Several Plano members plan to go to General Conference. This number includes the Sunday school superintendent, the assistant, and two or three teachers. They expect to attend classes in the institute in an effort to become more efficient workers. Sister Grace Johnson started March 27, going by way of Lamoni to visit with her daughter, Irene, in Graceland, and accompany her to conference. Sister F. M. Cooper started early in order that she might visit in Chicago a few days.

There has been much sickness here this winter. Sister Hester Uselton passed away March 2. She had been a shut-in for three years, having suffered a broken hip. She was patient through her trial. Sister Uselton was the only one of her family to accept the gospel, but she was a member having strong faith. Sister Jennie Wildermuth has been ill all winter with asthma and bronchial trouble but is much better.

The Women's Department has been active this winter, helping to pay for the furnace and studying the Doctrine and Covenants. Three new members joined at the last meeting; two more expect to join soon. Four of these are not members of the church.

The Iris Temple Builders have been busy. They are sending some of their work to exhibit at conference.

Of late junior church has been held once a month. We hope it will do much good. At the January service Sister Doris Wildermuth, a teacher in Aurora kindergarten, gave a dramatization of the story of Samuel. This was much enjoyed by the children. They are doing things. We have much talent among our juniors and expect to help develop it.

Two of our young people who are in Graceland will sing in the oratorio. Our hearts and prayers will be with them, even if we are not privileged to hear them on the great centennial occasion.

The committee for the Easter program is active.

Byrnsville, Indiana

It is well known to many of the missionary force that Byrnsville is an old Latter Day Saint stamping ground, and many are the missionaries who have labored there in the years past. It is the birthplace of Brother George Jenkins.

March 24 Elder J. O. Dutton began a series of missionary meetings there, lasting over Sunday, March 9. The attendance was good, and several of the nonmember neighbors showed interest in the services.

One day during his stay here, there was a "wood bee" for the benefit of Sister Renie Jenkins and her five children. Thirteen men labored to produce a woodpile, which made the widow smile with gratitude.

Brother Dutton was also authorized to work as an adjusting officer, and he was successful in getting several matters of long standing settled to the satisfaction of those interested. Many are now determined not to let matters drag again, but adjust them as soon as they are known, thus saving many hours of sorrow to those who should be best of friends. Some found that when we go in the right spirit to one offended, it is not hard to settle even matters of long standing. Jesus knew best when he said (Matthew 5: 23, 24): "Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift." This is the perfect law, given by Christ, and those who do as directed are perfect Saints. Those who fail to carry out this law are therefore imperfect until they do as here directed.

Byrnsville Saints can well be proud of their new church. It would be nice if every branch the size of Byrnsville had such a comfortable church. Brother John R. Byrn, priest, is branch president, C. N. Maymon, teacher, and Frank Martin deacon. Brother Maymon now lives at Henryville, and so is not able to assist as much as he would like. For a long time he was the only ordained man in the branch, and he has done a good work in Byrnsville. He is respected by all.

There is a good group of young people favorable to the church, and in due time there will be several to enter the church if the work is properly sustained and cared for in Byrnsville. We are hopeful that the future will see the work grow and prosper in Byrnsville and many more be added to the army of the Lord. Brothers Byrn and Martin are newly ordained men and willing workers. They will do a good work if they remain true to the trust imposed when they were ordained by District President J. A. Robinson last fall. The Saints are trying to let their light shine. May God help them to be true.

Persia, Iowa

March 24.—Elders E. Y. Hunker and M. K. Fry have closed the meetings which they have been conducting here during a period of about four weeks. These brothers were here sometime last fall and summer and so impressed their hearers that when it was announced they were to again be in Persia, interest was at once apparent.

They preceded their sermons with thirty minutes of singing and playing their guitars. Various parts and phases of the gospel and doctrines of the church were covered in their sermons.

Eight people, mostly members of the Sunday school, were baptized during the meetings.

Brothers Hunker and Fry have now gone to their homes to prepare for the Centennial Conference, which convenes April 6. All who attend the conference will undoubtedly profit much from the instruction and association.

With Sister Lora Cave as superintendent, and other officers, the Sunday school is doing well. Generally there is good attendance. The young people are manifesting interest in the sessions. The teachers are presenting the necessity and desirability of baptism to the pupils, and many children are eager to join the church as soon as they have reached the required age.

Dunlap, Iowa

During the first two weeks of March a series of instructive and profitable meetings was conducted in this mission by the priesthood of Woodbine Branch. Pastor Fred A. Fry began the series with a spiritual sermon on the unchangeability of God. This was followed by a discourse on each of the six principles of the doctrine of Christ, also "Science and religion," "Present-day revelation," "Spiritual gifts," "Church organization," "Apostasy," "The Book of Mormon," "The Restoration," and "The temporal law." The last-named subject was treated by Bishop W. R. Adams.

Much of the preaching was done by young members of the priesthood, and throughout the meeting the Spirit bore witness of the divine calling of these young men, as well as the older ones, to dispense the law for which the Savior gave his life that mankind might return to the presence of God purified, sanctified, and glorified.

Marked interest was manifested. Many young people and even children came with notebooks and pencils to take Bible quotations and notes on the different subjects discussed. A copy of the picture of Christ's church as illustrated in The Call at Evening was placed on the blackboard by Sister Catharine Baughman, and contributed much toward keeping the organization of the true church before the minds of the congregation. The meetings closed with the morning service on Decision Day. In the afternoon Brother Elvin Baughman led eight people into the waters of regeneration. Two married women were baptized, five young women of high school age, and an eleven-year-old boy. All were members of the Sunday school prior to baptism.

We are trying out the programs for the church school worship services as outlined in Departments' Journal.

A number of the members are planning to attend the Centennial Conference; we are hoping many good things may be brought back to us who are not privileged to be present.

San Francisco, California

Eighteenth and Danvers Streets

March 24.—Seventy-eight were present at the Sunday school session February 16. Pastor John A. Saxe was the morning speaker. Elder E. B. Hinton preached in the evening.

The Religio with its music and songs makes the lessons attractive and is drawing together a fine group of young people.

March 9 Elder George S. Lincoln addressed the Saints at eleven o'clock. In the evening a playlet created interest in the session of the Department of Recreation and Expression, and Deacon Cecil Smith delivered the sermon.

Fine attendance greeted Decision Day of the church. Ninety-one were present at Sunday school. Quite a number of the neighbors' children are attending. Fourteen members of the Australian delegation on its way to General Conference were present. They came from Australia, Tahiti, and other islands. They divided time between Oakland and San Francisco, preaching in the different branches. One brother from Tahiti addressed us in his native language, Elder H. W. Savage acting as interpreter. Apostle M. A. McConley and District President G. P. Levitt were here.

The morning of the following Sunday Elder George S. Lincoln preached and in the evening Teacher Thomas Jones. Brother Ben Parks gave a creditable lecture on the Book of Mormon at the Religio.

Rock Island District

Rock Island District has finished a year of successful effort and now awaits the Centennial Conference with the keenest of anticipation. A large number of Saints from the small branches as well as the larger centers are planning to attend.

Spring conference was held February 22 and 23 at Rock Island, Illinois. Apostle J. F. Garver, of Lamoni, Iowa, was the speaker. His messages were vibrant with an appeal to our personal responsibilities and opportunities, emphasizing the value of renewed consecration. Missionary Amos T. Higdon, Bishop C. J. Hunt, Pastor T. S. Williams, and a large number of district workers were present as well as representatives from nearly every branch. Meals were served in the basement in cafeteria style at minimum cost.

Owing to the increased inclination of our people to attend reunion at Nauvoo, it was thought advisable to dispense with reunion in this district, and to hold in lieu thereof a series of two-day meetings throughout the summer months. The following program was adopted: Oelwein, May 10 and 11; Cedar Rapids, May 17 and 18. Clinton, May 24 and 25; Fulton, May 31 and June 1; Muscatine, June 7 and 8; Tri-Cities, young people's convention at Moline, June 14 and 15, with district business session on Saturday afternoon; Joy, June 21 and 22; Galesburg, June 28 and 29; Kewanee, July 4, 5, and 6.

The district has gained thirty-one over last report. The present membership of 1,612 entitled us to sixteen delegates to General Conference. They are as follows: Brother and Sister E. R. Davis, Brother and Sister T. S. Williams, Brother and Sister J. C. Stiegel, Brother and Sister C. A.

Beil, Brother and Sister Charles Shippy, Brother and Sister Lee A. White, Bishop C. J. Hunt, Missionary Amos T. Higdon, Brother Edward Jones, and Brother William Wood.

The recommendation that Brother William Hinds, of Waterloo, be ordained to the office of elder was favorably acted upon. Brother Donald Cassidy, a former resident of Rock Island, was also recently ordained to the office of priest. There were one hundred and five men holding priesthood in the district including the men under appointment for the past year.

Nine applications for "stewardship" have been made to date. We anticipate many more so that at our next district gathering arrangements may be made for a special meeting for the setting apart of a number of stewards. One does not need to go to Zion in order to become a steward. He can become a steward right here in the Rock Island District; and the sooner the Saints take this step, the sooner we shall have Zion.

Our earnest prayers are for the success of the conference and the program of the church. We have turned our faces Zionward and find nothing worth while behind us. May God help us to bring forth more fruit.

Moline, Illinois

April 2.—The general topic of conversation among the members at present is the coming General Conference. Unless the unexpected prevents, a number of families from here will be present. Those of us who will not be privileged to attend will be keenly interested in the news we receive from the Daily Herald.

The work in Moline is progressing, and as a rule meetings are well attended.

The Department of Women is spending most of its time this year in class study. We are enjoying the study of the Book of Mormon under Sister H. R. Cady, a capable teacher. The lessons will surely prove profitable to us.

The branch was saddened by the death of a little sister, Marjorie Sheppherd. Brother Whitehouse, her grandfather, also passed away the same day. Both funerals were held March 31. Brother T. S. Williams, the Tri-city pastor, preached the funeral sermons.

Bishop Hunt is usually here at least once a month, and his talks are always interesting to young and old.

Our prayers are for the progress of the latter-day work and for its leaders, that they may be given divine strength and guidance.

Mobile, Alabama

April 3.—While on his way to Florida Apostle Paul M. Hanson stopped in Mobile, February 9, speaking at the eleven o'clock hour and again in the evening. We are sorry he could not longer remain with us.

February 14 Brother David W. Tillman celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday at his home on Baltimore Street. He has been a loyal member of the church for thirty-four years, always zealous in doing what he could for the cause of Christ. During the last six years the hand of affliction has been upon him, and he has not been able to meet regularly with the Saints. However, he is still strong in the faith.

The Sunday school is progressing under the leadership of Brother Steiner and Brother Hancock.

The junior church service, in charge of Sister Burt, is greatly enjoyed by the children who assist in the programs.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has good attendance. The class in dramatics has presented some splendid plays which were thoroughly enjoyed by all who witnessed them. Several of the characters in the plays were nonmembers.

Decision Day, March 16, closed a week's series of fine missionary sermons by Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley. Many nonmembers attended these meetings. The coming forth of the church and its structure were plainly set forth with proof by the speaker. Sister Gunsolley assisted in the music. Two little boys, Edward Barlow and Frank Day, were baptized in the afternoon and confirmed at the evening service. We feel that these meetings were successful and that there are others who will join us in the near future.

It was with regret and sadness that we learned that Brother and Sister Gunsolley probably will not be with us in the Southeastern Mission next year.

A number of members are leaving this week to attend the General Conference. We look forward to the return of Pastor G. E. Burt and wife. Much has been accomplished during the year and a half they have been with us, and we look to more progress in the gospel work in the future.

Webb City, Missouri

This is the last opportunity we have to appear in print before the Centennial Conference convenes. Conditions in our branch are favorable to progress, activity being had in all departments. We have been carrying out the programs having to do with "Conversations," and believe good has been accomplished. The Saints are looking hopefully to the tasks ahead, as we are about to enter the period following the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the church, and we know that it will require renewed faith and hope and the united efforts of all to move successfully forward. It is our privilege to live up to the full light of the gospel—to overcome all selfishness, to love our neighbors as ourselves, to have the courage to do right under all conditions and circumstances.

A number of the members are intending to go to General Conference. We have two delegates, Nelvita Cowen and Sister C. H. Hobart, who will be on hand. There will be others who will make week-end trips, some not being able to arrange to attend all meetings.

March 16 the night services were dismissed in order that the membership might have opportunity to hear the final sermon of a special series conducted at Joplin by Brother L. G. Holloway, of Lamoni.

Fanning, Kansas

The work of the church is moving forward in Fanning. Missionary W. A. Smith held meetings for one week in the first part of March. Good interest was shown. Others occupying the pulpit this month were William Twombly, William Marsh, and Patriarch Samuel Twombly.

The Sunday school is increasing in number. Each class in turn is presenting program features. These are well received and add variety and a spirit of friendly rivalry and contest to the school. Fred Marsh is the superintendent.

The Recreation Department is doing good work under the leadership of Brother William Gurwell. Programs and lessons found in Departments' Journal and debates are shown by the attendance to be real drawing cards.

The Department of Women is keeping up the work in this line. The women have recently finished a quilt made according to the specifications sent them by the chairman of the quilt committee of the Independence Sanitarium Patroness Society in Independence. This is one of the five hundred quilts for the new Sanitarium. The workers meet once a month at the homes for a silver tea, business, and program. A food sale was held March 29 at Troy, nearly twenty-five dollars being realized. We expect this year to tithe what we take in.

March 30 Miss Ines Pilcher, a teacher in Sparks High School, was baptized. We are sure she will be blessed in stepping forth to obey the truth. She is the only one of her family to hear and obey the gospel. May the good work of the missionary effort roll on.

A number are planning to attend the General Conference. Some are arranging to go by automobile and return, then go again before the closing session.

The infant son of David Davies and Frankie Marsh Davies was blessed March 30 by his grandfather, William Marsh, and Pastor William Twombly. He was given the name David Junior.

Brentwood Branch

Saint Louis, Missouri

April 3.—The Saints of Brentwood Branch are a wonderful people. We are pleased to report that so far as the general church's missionary endeavor is concerned they exceeded their quota in new members and raising of finances. Of course there is still room for improvement, and with everyone working together we expect to do more this year.

We regret to report the passing of our aged Brother George M. Remington February 25. He was in his seventy-eighth year. He was a brother of Charles J. Remington.

March 16 a unified service was had. We went to the Saint Louis Church, where our pastor baptized two candidates, Brother Russell Choat and Brother Leon Slavick. From these new members we expect much.

Another beautiful project service set forth the duties of the twelve apostles and how the missionaries' families are provided for. Everyone spoke highly of this service.

Brother Leon Slavick, who is employed by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, is making a good record in a contest his company is conducting in Missouri and Arkansas. Prizes are being offered to the one selling the most telephones. Brother Slavick is far in the lead, having sold to date five hundred and twenty-one.

We want to go forward.

Winning Our Neighbor

By C. G. Ziegenhorn

To win our neighbor is a worthy endeavor. How to get at it is our problem. Recently an effort in that direction has proved to my satisfaction a lack of cooperation with our neighbors. We have not been concerned in regard to their well-being physically, and they wonder at our concern in regard to their spiritual well-being. It sometimes gives them the impression that there is a snake in the weeds.

Many times our neighbor is concerned as to how he is going to earn that which will sustain him until he can ably take up the cross. Is it possible to have a clear conscience toward God, and one void of offense to all men, and to be idle and hungry? How can the hope of eternal life satisfy one who has a divine right to honest effort? How can it produce that which will overcome idleness and disregard for law? Blindness is the result of this discouragement, and it can usually be measured by a reflection cast by mole hills into mountainous proportions. Discouraged people are quick to listen to anything which offers relief from their condition. A lifting up spiritually, mentally, and physically is religion, and religion is measured by our openness or narrowness of conviction.

The Savior did not convert all he restored. Only one of the ten whom he healed of leprosy returned to thank him. However, they were to some extent saved; they were given opportunity to help themselves instead of being a burden to society. We will meet much to discourage us if we aim only for those whom we hope to baptize. Our motto should be, "Improve everybody."

The man who can help by creating new sources for honest labor should be encouraged to do so. The one who can do no more than visit the sick is sure of a reward. The problem is for each one to find his place, then work at his task.

Fresno, California

Brother Alma Andrews left Fresno March 26 for General Conference in Independence. He will be greatly missed by the Saints here, for he has been prominent in church affairs in Fresno for the last few years. His many friends wish him much success in his new work as missionary to which he has received a call. Sister Ona Andrews and little Caroline will remain in Fresno until he returns at the close of the conference before he goes into the field.

The church has had a new coat of paint since the first of the year. The Women's Department has had an attractive sign placed on the front of the building. This is lighted at night.

Terlton, Oklahoma

April 2.—Saints at Terlton have been wonderfully blessed during the meetings which closed Sunday. Brother Simmons was the speaker. He conducted services from Wednesday until Sunday, his efforts being marked by the powerful influence of the Spirit.

Sunday the Women's Department served basket dinner. The afternoon was spent listening to short talks, administering to the sick, and enjoying the gifts of the gospel, even the gift of prophecy. The Saints were admonished to be more diligent in the Lord's work and promised if they will obey God's command, they will be able to work in unity and receive great blessings.

The members are praying that a new day has dawned for Terlton and that under the influence of the Spirit all may be able to assist in the forward movement.

The Sunday school is progressing. An Easter program is being planned.

The Women's Department is engaged in a contest for regular attendance of members. The members are making a quilt to sell. All are interested.

Saginaw, Michigan

March 27.—The latter-day work has been progressing here the last month under the leadership of District Missionary F. C. Bevan. Two more were baptized March 21, making a total of thirteen since the series of meetings began.

March 15 and 16 a special conference was held at Beaverton, and many of the Saints from the different branches were there.

A reception and banquet were held March 22 to welcome the new members. Sister Blanch Northrup was in charge of refreshments which were served to the guests in green and white crepe paper baskets which she made. A large crowd was present.

Apostle D. T. Williams was here two nights and gave lectures on the history of the church, showing pictures.

Elder Bevan left Tuesday morning for his home in Ottumwa, Iowa, to spend a few days with his family before going on to conference. We hope he will return to our district when conference is over.

District President J. W. Peterson is expected here Sunday on his way home to conference. We pray that God's Holy Spirit may be with all gathered in Zion and also with those who can not be there, that we may go onward to perfection.

PAULINE BROWN.

San Antonio, Texas

First Branch, 3522 South Flores

Although we have some indifferent members, the regular attendants are advancing in lesson study. The time seems near when all who escape sifting out will become church students.

From February 14 to 17 we held institute work conjointly with the district conference. Elder J. A. Robinson, his wife and daughter, Miss Gracia, were authorized teachers. Their instructive services harmonized well with the conference sermons of Missionary A. M. Baker. The attention and interest Sister Robinson maintained with the junior church was marvellous.

Southwestern Texas District is sending seven delegates, a few elders, one musical contestant, and several others to the Centennial Conference. Most of the attendants are arranging to go by automobile.

Apostle J. A. Gillen, who conducted the missionary services week about at the two local churches, preached effectively. As a result, a number of nonmembers found more about the church to interest them. On Decision Day Elder T. J. Jett, sr., baptized six candidates.

The musical services under the splendid leadership of Sister Flossie Waite and Sister Emma Jackson are improving.

Tillamook, Oregon

April 3.—The three weeks' series of meetings was brought to a close Sunday, March 30, at which time a lovely baptismal service was conducted, two new members being added to the kingdom of God, Ernest Toedtli, a young man, and Florence Fitzwater, eight years old, were baptized.

The series of services was well attended. Sister Anna Dobson conducted a class in "Religious education in the home," each evening, after which Elder S. A. Dobson conducted missionary services.

A goodly number of nonmembers were present each night. All expressed their pleasure in being able to attend the services and testified of spiritual benefit derived. We feel that many friends were added to the work and that much good will result from the effort. Two or three more have asked to be baptized as soon as Brother Dobson returns from General Conference. We feel that many more are near the fold.

Some splendid messages of encouragement were received from other branches during the meetings, making us realize more keenly than ever before that God's people are laboring together as one big family for the success of the work intrusted to them. We want to thank those brothers and sisters who remembered us and to assure them that we attribute much of the success of our meetings and the wonderful spirit present, to the fact that our brothers and sisters were praying for us.

Sunday, March 30, the Saints were asked to fast until after the confirmation services. Church school and a short preaching service occupied the morning. At 12.30 we drove to the river where Brother Dobson performed the rites of baptism. Confirmation service at 1.30 was in charge of Brother Perl Fitzwater. The prayer of confirmation was given by Brother Clinton Dobson; address of welcome to new members was given by Pastor Wallace Dobson. Brother S. A. Dobson confirmed our new brother and sister. The room seemed filled with the spirit of love and reverence, and we were made to rejoice in the knowledge that the Father in heaven was adding his blessing to the closing service of our series.

The young people's "Problems of youth" class, held each Sunday evening in the home of S. A. Dobson, is well attended. Attendance has increased from six to fifteen, most of whom are nonmembers. A deep interest is being manifested, and we ask the prayers of the Saints for the success of this class work.

Delta, Colorado

Since it has been sometime since Herald readers heard from Delta Branch, we will go back to December 15, 1929, when election of officers for this year was held. At this time we were fortunate in having with us Missionary E. A. Davis. At the election L. A. Park, W. H. Williams, and Alex Boyer were elected members of the Board of Trustees for the period of three, two, and one year respectively. A full corps of officers for the branch and Sunday school was elected. In this there have since been several changes, some having moved away and others being unable to attend.

The district conference was to have been held in Delta in January, but on account of severe weather, it was postponed until February 22 and 23, when it was held with a good attendance. Brother Davis was again here. He and Brother Albert Rose were in charge. The former preached some inspiring sermons and gave timely instruction then and on the following Sunday morning and evening. That evening he preached his farewell sermon to Delta Saints. We were made sad to know that Brother Davis is not to be returned to our district. He has endeared himself to the Saints and will be greatly missed.

Three of our members are now attending General Conference, B. H. Bunten, branch president, Sister Anna Vest, and Sister Flora Wallis. Brother Bunten does not intend to return. This leaves us in a lame condition with only a few attending. We hope, however, to report better conditions soon.

Ontario, California

March 28.—We are well on our way in the centennial year of the organization of the church.

The official staff in the different departments is composed of the following:

Ontario Branch, Elder F. J. Lacey, pastor; active priesthood, John L. Swain, priest; Joseph S. Swain, teacher; Brother Prettyman, teacher; Charles C. Swain, deacon, bishop's agent, and branch treasurer; W. H. Kemple, publicity agent; sort, the doctors had about decided to perform another Clyde Roberts, assistant superintendent; George Swain, secretary; Charles Swain, treasurer; Sister Duffy, chorister; Sister Mary Swain, organist; Kenneth Duffy, librarian; and Gilbert Swain, assistant librarian. For the Department of Recreation and Expression: Gilbert Swain, superintendent; Clyde Roberts, secretary; Charles Swain, treasurer; Sister Duffy, chorister; Sister Mary Swain, organist.

Ontario Branch observed the Week of Prayer in obedience to the call of the church with increasing attendance, interest, and activity.

All services are well attended, and a number of nonmembers are investigating our work. Some will soon be baptized.

Elder F. J. Lacey is holding meetings at Riverside every Friday night, and Brother and Sister Peck were baptized Sunday, March 2, in the font of Ontario Branch, the result of his efforts and the prayers of the Saints. Brother and Sister Peck had intended to be baptized some time previous, but Brother Peck took sick and had to undergo an operation. For a time his life was despaired of. Finally, as a last resort, the doctors had about decided to perform another operation, which they doubted very much he would be able to survive. Through the administration of the elders and the prayers of the Saints of the Ontario and San Bernardino Branches God saw fit to raise him from his bed of affliction. He was able to be baptized and numbered with the Saints. Others are ready to be baptized at Riverside and will enter the waters of baptism in the font at San Bernardino next Sunday week.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is presenting the series of short plays written by Elbert A. Smith, depicting the early history of the church in the order given the last Sunday in each month.

Early in March Elder F. J. Lacey's little niece, Bernice Lacey, was very sick with what the doctor said was diabetes, and her life was despaired of. Several of the elders, Brother Teagarden, district president, included, set a period of fasting and prayer and then gathered together at his home and administered to her. She was instantly healed. She immediately got up and said she was all right. When the doctor made an examination the next day he said he could find no trace of it and was surprised and could not account for it. God is indeed in this church and blessing his people insofar as they will let him by being obedient to his commandments.

Brother Martin, district missionary; Brother David Carmichael, district bishop; Brother Sutherland, district Sunday school superintendent; Brother George Wixom, missionary, and Brother Glaude Smith, pastor of Central Los Angeles have been present at least one Sunday this year and have given some valuable food for thought.

Ontario Branch is preparing to observe a fast from Saturday morning until Sunday noon April 6 in behalf of General Conference and the church in general.

We extend greetings to the Saints everywhere in the name of the Master and ever strive and pray for the cause of Zion.

Bennington Church

In the month of March, ten persons were baptized, completing seven family circles and the quota of baptisms for Bennington. Those baptized were Ruby Barham, Edith Hare, Doris Meyers, Madalon Stafford, Parry Jackson, Kenneth Goodfellow, James McCarrison, William Donaldson, David Hastings, and Frank Dopp. March 2, Donna Mae Jones, the baby daughter of Brother and Sister Roy T. Jones, was blessed.

Elder J. E. Vanderwood was the speaker last Sunday morning. Although he had a prepared sermon, he set it aside, and spoke as he felt directed on another subject, urging the Saints to live the gospel as well as to talk about it. Brother and Sister George S. Willy, of Linneus, Missouri, and Glenn Beaman, of Barclay, Kansas, were visitors.

Next Sunday, April 20, there will be the regular order of services. Brother Howard Harpham, of Seiling, Oklahoma, fourteen-year-old member of the priesthood, will preach at the eleven o'clock hour.

Oshoto, Wyoming

The branch assembled for sacramental service at noon Sunday, March 2, there being a good crowd present. Basket dinner followed, and then Brother Fred Cousins preached a splendid sermon.

Wednesday evening prayer meetings are held every two weeks. The last service occurred at the home of Brother Vaughn McElroy. Next meeting we will worship in the home of Brother F. V. Coles.

We welcome Sister Everett McKim and her family to our branch. They come from Wiley, Colorado, Branch and are locating in this region.

March 9 Brother Horace Hartshorn gave a splendid sermon on "Faith." The roads were very muddy, but a good crowd was out to hear him.

The following Sabbath, Branch President Cousins preached a good sermon from the text Matthew 11: 28-30: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

Brother and Sister Cousins leave for Independence March 25 to attend General Conference. We hope for them a good trip and much enjoyment in the centennial celebration.

Lansing, Michigan

The missionary work of Elder O. J. Hawn has this year proved very fruitful in Lansing Branch. January 26 he opened a six weeks' series of missionary meetings, arousing considerable interest in the community. Attendance was good, and many accepted invitation to investigate the truths of the gospel. In numbers the result was sixty new members for the branch, varying in age from eight or nine years to the middle-aged adult. Older members are gladdened by this large addition of members, and the spirit of cooperation makes the future bright and promising.

Saint Thomas, Ontario

March 27.—We are having good times at the young people's meetings. They are attended by young and old. Attendance made it necessary to divide the class, Sister A. Mann being appointed to take the junior class. Half an hour is given to study and half an hour to program.

On March 16 Lois Lorraine, infant daughter of Brother Wilfred Skelding, was blessed by her grandfather, Elder James Skelding, and Elder Lorne Pearson, Pontiac, Michigan. Elder James Winegard, of London, occupied the pulpit in the evening.

Bishop Dent, of London, was the speaker at both preaching hours March 23.

Easter

Easter appears in various aspects to different people.

To the little child, who is often treated to pagan superstitions, it is a season when white bunnies miraculously lay gayly colored eggs in strange places. Those children are more fortunate for whom the church makes the day a beautiful and memorable spiritual experience.

For far too many people Easter has become a season for useless spending, as Christmas has. Bouquets of flowers too extravagant, boxes of candy too large, delicate and gorgeous garments too expensive, are bought in profusion. Merchants like to promote these Easter season excesses, and the sacred day is partly marred by commercialism.

Easter Sunday at the General Conference must have been a bitter disappointment to those ladies for whom Easter is little more than a chance to display costly finery. At sunrise there was a bit of golden light in the east, but the clouds soon overcast the sky, and, with a feeling of dampness in the air, a raw wind blew. Easter Sunday was the worst day, as to weather, during the conference.

But no lowering blanket of clouds, however gloomy, could dampen the spirits of the thousands to whom conference had been an educational training, a friendly visit, and a spiritual feast. God had been kind and merciful and had added the riches of his blessings to their efforts to do good. It was a day of rejoicing and quiet, reverent happiness.

Many regretted, it is true, to see the termination of a period so happy, so beneficial and profitable. To return to the ordinary things of life would be difficult.

The day was celebrated in the Stone Church, where Mrs. H. C. Burgess directed a group of intermediate people in the presentation of the cantata, "The first Easter," whose author is Ira Bishop Wilson. At other churches reference was made to the significance of the day and to its solemnity and importance in the life of our Lord.

The ceremonial features of Easter have been largely neglected by the congregations of our church, perhaps because of their reaction against the excessive ritualism of some other faiths. Certainly the ritual celebration of Easter is not an end in itself. There is no practical justification for any ritualistic celebration of any day save the glorification of God in worship that purifies, ennobles, and spiritualizes human life.

The future may bring, and it seems that the passing of the years has brought, a slightly increased use of ceremonial. The representation of the themes bearing on the resurrection of the Savior of men, with story, song, dramatic effect, and the spoken word, can not fail to impress on the minds of young people the wonder, the beauty, and the surpassing importance of the event. But they must not become ends in themselves, a mere shell of an empty faith. The fire of spiritual life must always be there, or all else is in vain.

The Centennial Conference Closes

April 15 opened with the regular class work at 7.30 a. m. The classes continued until noon. The closing sessions of class work were held on Saturday, and the attendance held to a remarkably high level.

The regular early morning devotional period, 7.30 to 8.30, conducted by Apostle Roy S. Budd and those he called to his assistance was a quiet, reverent, spiritual period. The last of these occurred Saturday morning. This series was profitable to the Saints.

Reports from the Seventies

Tuesday afternoon the Second Quorum of Seventy presented a report of their labors as ministers. It was a good report; it included 555 baptisms, or an average to each missionary reporting of 17 and 11-32. J. T. Riley was reported lost by death.

The Council of Seven Presidents of Seventy also reported to the conference. The joint Quorums of Seventy recommended the ordination to office of seventy of the following: Z. Z. Renfroe, John Smolney, Carl F. Greene, Frank Veenstra, F. C. Bevan, and J. C. Cornish. The recommendations were approved.

Preparation for the Ministry

A resolution coming from Detroit District and restricting the ordination of men to the ministry was referred to the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric. The gist of the resolution was the requirement of educational preparation subsequent to call, and before ordination; and that the church furnish them with a course of study appropriate to their calling. The closing resolution is "that such individuals shall not be ordained until they have demonstrated their ability to undertake the task intelligently for which they have been indicated."

Patriarchs to Be Ordained

G. J. Waller, George W. Thorburn, W. H. Greenwood, and George W. Robley were chosen upon recommendation from the Quorum of Twelve for ordination to the Order of Evangelists or Patriarchs.

Boundary lines of New York and Philadelphia District were changed by adding the State of Maryland, except Allegheny, Garrett, and Washington Counties, and also the District of Columbia.

The Manti Cemetery

S. A. Burgess, Church Historian, presented a letter from the Manti Cemetery Association, of Shenandoah, Iowa, which with Brother Burgess's letter became the basis for the following resolution, which was adopted by the conference: "We look with favor on the expenditure of some funds to assist in the movement to preserve the cemetery at Manti, near Shenandoah, Iowa, and refer the matter to the Presiding Bishopric and the apostle in charge of that field, with instruction to take active interest in the problem, and with power to spend such sum as in their judgment seems advisable."

Erecting Houses of Worship

The Presidency, Twelve, and Bishopric reported the following far-reaching action by their joint body. It was adopted as the will of the conference:

To the First Presidency: At the session of the Joint Council of First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric held today, the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas the "gathering" and the establishment of Zion are fundamental teachings of the church, and,

Whereas, the building of houses of worship, purchasing of reunion grounds, etc., have a distinct bearing upon such work, therefore be it

Resolved, that the building of houses of worship, purchasing of lands, and all investments made in the interests of the church shall be considered a part of the work of the general church and under the supervision of the general officers in harmony with the law of the church.

Resolved, that we look with favor upon the policy of financing the construction of church buildings under the supervision of the general church officers provided for in the law having jurisdiction in such matters.

Resolved further, that the General Conference include in its annual appropriations for capital expenditures the amount to be contributed by the general church toward the building of houses of worship under the direction of the officers above referred to.

(Signed) I. A. SMITH,

Secretary of the Council.

April 16, 1930.

A Memorial to Our Dead

At the business session a beautiful memorial service to the ministers who have died since the last General Conference was observed. Forty-seven names were read and their lives and ministry remembered and honored.

"Fulfillment"

On Thursday there was no business session. The house was in preparation for the presentation of the grand Centennial Pageant, Fulfillment.

Early in the evening the house began to fill. Every available seat which commanded a view of the stage was occupied long before the opening hour, and many hundreds were turned from the doors. No audience assembled at the Auditorium has exceeded this one in size and interest, unless it be the gathering on the first day to partake of the Lord's Supper.

The presentation on both Friday and Saturday evenings was successful beyond anticipation. Its effect when given in good tempo and with fine interpretation of a cast of more than twelve hundred people was powerful. One editorial writer said:

"No one could have anticipated the entire effect of the pageant, not even those who attended the dress rehearsal. The action, the music, and the interlocution followed through without intermission or break. There were many memorable scenes, filled with the rich arrangements of blending and contrasting colors in the costumes and in the colored lights. The lighting effects were especially well employed during the rhythm movements.

"A difficult piece of work was perfectly performed in timing the entrances and movements of the great numbers of people who had to be at the doors, ready to march down the aisles toward the platform. In the larger scenes it seemed that their numbers would never end. The music came in with perfect timing, following the action through without a hitch.

"All who took part in the production of the pageant are to be congratulated for the beauty and effectiveness with which their dream came true. There were mechanical difficulties, of course, and the production had to overcome many difficulties in lighting equipment, stage facilities, costume, and especially with the great number of actors. The producers made the most of their opportunities."

It had been determined to adjourn when final adjournment was taken until October 1, 1931. Reconsideration of this action brought about a reference of the question of church conference and relative program to the Presidency, Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric. This council brought in a recommendation that when the conference adjourns it do so to meet first on April 6, 1932; second, on April 6, 1934; third, on April 6, 1936. The recommendation was approved and the church by this action goes to a program of biennial conferences.

The same Joint Council set a definite goal for minimum number of baptisms to be achieved in the six-year period, as also in the first two-year period. This amounts to a statement that the officers believe a certain number of people can be converted if the church is active in evangelizing.

The proposed goal for the date of April 6, 1932, is 12,000 souls. For the date of April 6, 1936, it is 40,000. General Conference by a strong vote affirmed this as its goal.

On Saturday there was a noticeable thinning of attendance. Some had gone to their homes; others had not torn away from business or work, for it was felt that the business of the conference was over, and the great events including the College Players performance; the Centennial Oratorical Contest; the rendition of the great oratorio, The Course of Time, and the pageant, Fulfillment, had all come and all but the pageant had gone.

Two o'clock came, and the officers presiding were a little tardy. A look over the great room and a little counting and estimating showed that there were still in attendance many hundreds more than the Stone Church could accommodate.

Business session opened, and the registrations committee made a report. To that time there had been registered as visitors, ex officios, and delegates to the conference, 5,908. A further report from this committee is to be found in another column.

The Order of Evangelists made report and asked for repeal of the action of the General Conference of 1928. The request was referred to the Joint Council of the First Presidency, the Quorum of Twelve, and the Presiding Bishopric, with the provision that report upon the question be made to the General Conference of 1932. The evangelists, who were in charge of the administrations by the laying on of hands, reported almost two hundred had received the ordinance since the opening of the Centennial Conference.

Pipe Organ Fund

The Board of Appropriations reported that they looked with favor on including an appropriation in the budget of 1931 for a pipe organ, provided the budget for 1930 is raised. Two members of the Presiding Bishopric moved to approve the recommendation, and the motion was adopted.

The New Sanitarium

For several years it has been apparent that the Independence Sanitarium is inadequate to meet the demands of the church and of the community in which it is established. The need for hospital and sanitarium service is increasing, and insistent demands have been made that the Independence Sanitarium be expanded. Local interests have gained strength, and rather definite information has been given that a substantial sum of money is to be raised to aid in the erection of new buildings.

Stating these facts, the Order of Bishops came to the General Conference with a recommendation that the Presiding Bishopric be authorized to indorse a loan for the Independence Sanitarium in an amount equal to the sum raised by the community, after plans and specifications have been approved by the Board of Trustees and definite estimates have been secured from dependable and reliable builders.

This recommendation was approved by the conference.

The sustaining of officers, quorums, boards, and committees was accomplished at Saturday's business session.

Sunday's Sunrise Meeting

A sunrise prayer meeting for young people was conducted at the Auditorium at 6.30 Sunday morning. A large number of people were in attendance.

It was followed by a prayer service of the priesthood at the Stone Church at 7.45, and of the adults at the Auditorium at the same hour.

President Frederick M. Smith was the speaker at 10.45 at the great Auditorium service.

Last Conference Session

At two o'clock the conference met in a combined ordination and business session. The leading quorums of the church occupied places on the speaker's stand.

Two patriarchs were ordained, and six were ordained to the office of high priest. Four were added to the Quorums of Seventy by ordination. An impressive and elaborate ceremony accompanying the ordinations was conducted by President Smith.

A service in honor of superannuated ministers, in which they participated was also conducted.

After the missionary appointments were read, the closing prayer of the Centennial Conference was offered.

Closing Prayer by President Frederick M. Smith

Almighty God, Thou to whom we look for life, for strength, for being; whose message we revere, whose love we desire, and into whose service we would go, wilt thou accept our thanks for all of the blessings received, for we recognize that in thy mercy and thy goodness thou dost extend to us that which is beyond our merit. As we have reached the closing hour of this conference, we pray that thou wilt bless what we have attempted to do. We have striven to work in harmony with thy will. Forgive us our mistakes and our errors, and may the good we have accomplished redound to thy glory. Bless the effort we have put forth as we separate and go to our various places, the local branches, and the districts in which we are working. May we be fortified and strengthened for the tasks of the coming conference period. Wilt thou sweep over the church with the presence of thy Spirit, catching us up in the great missionary spirit. May we move forward to the edification of the Saints and the rejoicing of those hungering for the message we have to bear. Above all, may there be such unity of purpose and action that we shall have a solidarity that shall guarantee a forward movement such as we have never had in the past. We believe ourselves to be thy instruments; so wilt thou run before us to prepare our way. Bless our efforts, strengthen our hands that we shall be able to accomplish thy purpose, and to thee shall be all the praise, through thy Son. Amen.

The oldest known bit of writing in the world is a piece of papyrus in a Constantinople Museum. On it is written: "Alas, times are not what they used to be. Children no longer obey their parents and everyone wants to write a book."—E. Stanley Jones, in The Christ of Every Road.

A Veteran in Church Life and Accomplishment Passes

On April 12 the earth life of Marietta Walker was completed. Her body tired, but her spirit bright, intelligent, cheerful, and dominant almost to her last breath, she died as she had lived, firm in the faith of her Lord.

Sojourning at the home of her daughter, Frances Davis, Brea, California, she had been in good health on her ninety-sixth birthday, April 10. That day fifty of the young people of Santa Ana and Long Beach had called and greeted her, and gracious as ever, though deprived of hearing and bedimmed of eyesight, she had returned their greetings from her chair. She was made happy also by the receipt of greetings from the Centennial Conference of the Saints at Independence, and by many messages by mail and wire.

April 11 she was stricken by her last sickness, lapsing soon into sleep, and passing on in the night of April 12.

Her body was taken at once to her old home at Lamoni, Iowa, where a funeral service was held April 17. At the same hour, half past ten, April 17, a memorial service was conducted by President Frederick M. Smith, in the Stone Church at Independence.

President Smith said in his address:

Last year, in January, through the instrumentality of Charles B. Woodstock, Mrs. Walker was induced to write to her Alma Mater, Miami University, at Oxford, Ohio, a letter in which she crystallized what she believed to be some of the leading events and movements of her life, and it has been thought quite appropriate this morning that a statement of her life's work, from her own pen, should be read:

"January 23, 1929.

"Miss Olive Flower,
"Miami University, Oxford, Ohio.

"My Dear Miss Flower: From my friend, Mr. Woodstock, I have received a copy of your letter to him, which I am pleased to say is most kindly sympathetic in its mention of myself and contains also an expressed wish for further information in regard to my work since leaving Oxford College for Women where I graduated in 1859. . . .

"A short time before I left Oxford, an older sister died at her home in San Antonio, Texas, having obtained a promise from her husband that he would place her two daughters in my care. This led me into the far South, where I remained during the entire Civil War.

"I had married before the war cloud darkened the skies, and my husband, a Virginian, was born and bred a Southerner. He enlisted in the service at the beginning of the war.

"It is well known to those acquainted with the sentiment of Southern men in those days that to remain at home while every friend and neighbor was enlisted in the Southern Army was a disgrace. As a result it became a difficult matter for the trustees of the San Antonio Female College, a chartered institution, to find a man qualified to take charge. The Reverend Doctor Jesse Soring, of Georgia, who had the appointing power, came to me begging that I would take charge of the school, at least until a man could be found to relieve me.

"After serious reflection I consented to this proposition, and no one was found to take my place until just before the close of the war. I gave my best efforts to sustaining and building up this school that today is still a flourishing institution known by the name of Westmoreland. This was the beginning of my public work. During this time my husband, whose name was Robert Faulconer, had died while at home on a furlough, from disease contracted in the service.

"Near the close of the war I felt a great desire to see my aged mother, living in the North, and arrangements having been made for the care of the college, I resolved to attempt going to New York by way of Mexico and Cuba. In this attempt I succeeded, my little daughter being my companion in this long and perilous journey. At Havana we were met by the news of Lincoln's assassination, and on arriving in New York we went the same day to the Capitol to pass with the weeping multitude where his body lay in state. From there I went to friends in Indianapolis and later to my mother in Sandwich, Illinois.

"I had not been long at my home before Mr. Norris, who was in need of help for the faculty of my alma mater, Oxford, sought me out, offering me a position there. But the war, the long journey, and many changes had racked my nerves, and I did not consider the call to resume teaching.

"And now followed an interval of some years in which I did little outside of home duties. I was married to Samuel F. Walker, of New Richmond, Ohio, and we spent several years on a ranch in Nevada, where our two daughters were born. We returned to my former home in Sandwich, Illinois, and finally removed to a farm in the State of Iowa. Later we built a home in the nearby town of Lamoni, and here my husband died. After my three daughters were married my hands were freed for other lines of work.

"It was not until after I came to Iowa that I had ever thought of returning to anything in the line of literary work. This time it was not as a teacher, but I was for many years in close connection with the publishing house of the church of which I was a member. For this work, from that time to the present, all I was capable of doing has been done. Early in this time on the Iowa farm I seemed awakened from a long sleep by the spirit with which I had been imbued at Oxford, and, unknowingly, had brought with me to the wide-stretching prairies of Iowa. I loved my prairie home, dotted as it was with wooded hills of scrubby oaks and in the springtime covered with the most beautiful blue violets, sweet odors of which filled every breeze passing over them. I tried many times to transplant them to my home garden of flowers, but never succeeded in the attempt. They still bloom in some out-of-the-way place, but our hills are no longer blue with their beauty and sweet with their fragrance. On one of these hills our home was built, and at the foot of the hill ran a clear stream of water, where my husband found drink for his cattle. It would freeze over in winter, and the ice would have to be cut before the cattle could get their drink.

"The spirit years ago imbibed at Oxford had slumbered long. Its slumbers were now ended for time and eternity. I recognized the promptings of that spirit as due in part to the teachings of my beloved friend and preceptor, the Reverend Doctor John Scott, president of the Oxford Female College. A more generous, liberal minister and loving-hearted man I believe never lived. We did not always agree in our belief of doctrine, for he was a strict Presbyterian, and at that time I was a loyal Methodist. But that did not in the least interfere with our friendship. We corresponded at intervals as long as he lived, some of his letters having been written at the White House while he was there with his daughter, the wife of President Harrison. Some of the kindly things he said to me, as his pupil, to my mother, I shall never forget. Blessed be his memory as that of a good man.

"Into my heart came the strong desire to see a school similar to my alma mater established upon the broad top of the rolling hills of our home farm among the violets and breezes of our own Iowa prairies, and I gave myself, and my friends who were in any way able to help or to have more influence than I, little rest until Graceland had opened her doors to the young of our church and all who wished to enter. It was always with me a very hard matter to give up as hopeless anything I greatly desired to see done, because it seemed to me it ought to be done. My perseverance and the hopes and labors of many others have been abundantly rewarded in seeing Graceland College take her place as a fully accredited junior college, loved by thousands of students and recognized as an outstanding institution of learning in its class. The spirit which moves in Graceland and in her student body, and which carries her students to higher institutions for more advanced work, a spirit of consecration to the accomplishment of the great work of blessing humanity through the exercise of trained heart and mind and body, has often been remarked by officials of our State University. This rejoices my heart and helps me to feel that these youth are catching at Graceland in great measure the inspiration prevalent so many years ago at Oxford. With the advantage of modern opportunity before the youth of 1929, what unknown possibilities await those who diligently apply themselves to their tasks!

"I am at a loss to know what other bit of work to mention, for I greatly fear I am making this sketch too long. The magazine I am sending you contains matter from which you may choose or reject as seems good to you. The publishing house has seen fit to change the name Autumn Leaves to that of Vision. I chose the name of our beautiful Autumn Leaves as representing the coming of winter as events in the world precede the coming of Christ, of which He himself says, 'So likewise when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors.' Daniel, in writing of the same events, says, 'The wise shall understand.' Another translation reads, 'The observing shall understand.' The power of Vision can answer the same purpose, so to my mind the two names have a similar import.

"And now, dear lady, considering my advanced age, I have done the very best I could in response to your request, and you are at perfect liberty to choose or reject, but not to change the sense of any part of what I have written."

President Smith continues:

It has fallen to my lot to say something about this wonderful woman on the day that her remains are being laid to rest. I came in contact with her life in a rather strange way. Her fine Puritanic soul could hardly appreciate the pranks of an almost lawless youth; so in the exuberance of my youthful life, I gave my dear old Sunday school superintendent many causes for pain and distress. I found myself even writing a public apology for some of the pranks that I felt would wound her great heart. . . .

To her dying day, as long as she could master enough of her failing sight to handle her pen, she wielded one of the ablest and most cultured pens of the church.

In this letter we have read, you have learned of her ambitions for Graceland College, and there her great heart and my small one run in unison. She was instrumental in helping found Graceland College. What little I have been able to contribute has augmented the vision she had in regard to this institution of learning for our young people.

The magazine which she founded in the interest of youth still carries on. In my opinion it is carrying on the work very much as she would have it carried on, if her failing powers had not required that she relinquish her burdens of editorial responsibility to have them fall on younger and more active shoulders.

Some of the land on which Graceland as an institution stands came to the church as a result of her generosity. She and two others gave the land on which the college first started.

She was one of the organizers of the Religio, our young people's department, and those of us who are old enough to remember the beginning, will remember the times we used to repair to the south grove or the Brick Church to attend the Students' Society, as it was called, from which eventually emanated the young people's movement of the church.

She started the Mothers' Home Column in the Herald; was responsible for the work of the women, and in many ways directed activities that brought the women of the church together in a way not done before. She was always young in spirit, even when her physical body was racked by the forces of dissolution. For many years she was devoted to Zion's Hope, and it was one of her keenest delights to know that the Hope was in any way responsible for the advancement and progress of the work. With the Church in an Early Day has a big place in the hearts of many young people in the church. It was the child of her pen.

She was originator of the Christmas offering movement which still carries on, with perhaps not the same zeal in the last few years as under her administration, but still effective in reaching the objectives and goal which she desired. She was one of those most deeply interested in the proposition which faced all the church, the Evangelia, or gospel boat of the South Sea Islands, which later met such a tragic end. Only a few months ago she wrote another letter which we are going to read now; addressed to Mr. Charles B. Woodstock, dated Lamoni, Iowa, October 14.

LAMONI, IOWA, October 14, 1929.

Mr. C. B. Woodstock, Independence, Mo.,

Dear Brother in Christ:

I have been thinking that before I cross the river, the banks of which seem very near me, the young people with whom you are now laboring might enjoy having a few words from an older one who has labored for them so long and is now very near departure from this life.

When many of you were much younger, we read together that beautiful and inspired poem by Helen Hunt Jackson, and I have a strong desire to read it together again.

You remember how the title, "Not as I will," attracted us at the time and how the verses read:

Blindfolded and alone I stand
With unknown thresholds on each hand;
The darkness deepens as I grope,
Afraid to fear; afraid to hope;
Yet this one thing I learn to know
Each day more surely as I go,
That doors are opened, ways are made,
Burdens are lifted or are laid,
By some great law unseen and still,
Unfathomed purpose to fulfill,
"Not as I will."

Blindfolded and alone I wait,
Loss seems too bitter, gain too late;
Too heavy burdens in the load,
And too few helpers on the road;
And joy is weak and grief is strong;
And years and days so long, so long;
Yet this one thing I learn to know
Each day more surely as I go,
That I am glad the good and ill
By changeless law are ordered still,
"Not as I will."

"Not as I will!"—the sound grows sweet
Each time my lips the words repeat.
"Not as I will!"—the darkness feels
More safe than light when this thought steals
Like whispered voice to calm and bless
All unrest and all loneliness.
"Not as I will!"—because the one
Who loved us first and best has gone
Before us on the road, and still
For us must all his love fulfill—
"Not as we will."

The Resurrection

Synopsis of sermon preached by J. H. N. Jones in Richmond, Victoria, Australia, at their district reunion held during Eastertide March 31, 1929.

For a text I have chosen the words of the Saviour: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."—John 10: 10.

Today all Christendom celebrates the resurrection from the dead of our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus, born of Mary, lived on earth for the short period of thirty-three years; was crucified on Calvary, and rose from the dead on the third day. He had previously stated that "as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth."

If we take all our evidence from profane history, it is difficult to prove that such a person as Jesus Christ ever lived, but the Bible, a history written by his friends, is replete with evidence that such a man did live. The Jewish historian, Josephus, is the most important of the independent witnesses. He wrote:

Now there was about this time Jesus, a wise man, if it is lawful to call him a man, . . . He drew over to himself both many of the Jews and many of the Gentiles. He was (the) Christ. And when Pilate at the suggestion of the principal men among us, had condemned him to death, those that loved him at first did not forsake him: for he appeared to them alive on the third day (April 3 A. D. 33).

We may not be celebrating on the exact point of time of his resurrection, but as to the occasion of the celebration, the fact of his life, death, and resurrection, there is little room for doubt.

The Purpose of His Coming

Christ definitely stated that the purpose of his coming to earth was that men might have life. He also stated that many had come before him whose purpose was to kill and destroy, but that he was come to give more abundant life.

Let us, therefore, briefly examine the meaning of the words death and life as they are used in the Bible in relation to man. Death does not always mean a cessation of mortal breath. For instance, in the case of the prodigal son, "This my son was dead and is alive again" means that his severed relationship was death. When God said to Adam, "The day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Genesis 2: 17), he evidently did not mean that on that day Adam would cease to breathe. For after eating the apple he was driven out and lived on. But he did die from the standpoint of separation from God and life.

From Doctrine and Covenants 28: 11 we learn that death was first spiritual: "I the Lord God, caused that he should be cast out from the garden of Eden, from my presence, because of his transgression; wherein he became spiritually dead; which is the first death." Therefore, death was at first spiritual and not temporal or physical.

This harmonizes perfectly with a scientific definition of death. Drummond says death is a failure to correspond with our environment; therefore, to the degree we fail to keep in touch we cease to live.

Life is explained on the same line of reasoning: it is correspondence with environment; the more complete the correspondence the more abundant the life. Jesus came to enlarge our sphere of life and to finally abolish and destroy death in all its phases.

Man has been alienated from God by wicked works. He had to be shown the way back to God. Jesus demonstrated this by his sinless life and consequent triumph over death.

The Need for Resurrection

Some hold that if the spirit survives the body in intelligent state, there is no need for a resurrection, and conclude that man must be wholly mortal and will have no life until the resurrection.

This viewpoint seems to be logical, but it will not stand the light of truth. At death the spirit and body are divided. Even those who have been born again at death are separated from their bodies, and their condition is not all God designs it shall be.

The elements are eternal, and spirit and element, inseparably connected, receiveth a fullness of joy; and when separated, man can not receive a fullness of joy.—Doctrine and Covenants 90: 5.

The death of the body brings about a separation of element and spirit which can be restored only by the resurrection of the body. This is the redemption of the soul, for "the spirit and the body is the soul of man."

When man fell, a partial death (a separation) took place, but God did not permit the physical death to take place till man had been given a chance to return:

But, behold, I say unto you, that I, the Lord God, gave unto Adam and unto his seed, that they should not die as to the temporal death, until I, the Lord God, should send forth angels to declare unto them repentance and redemption through faith on the name of mine only begotten Son.—Doctrine and Covenants 28: 12.

Notice, that not only to Adam but also to his seed was this privilege extended; notice also, that spiritual regeneration comes first in order, and secondly comes the redemption of the body.

The Bible also clearly outlines this order. Paul, in Romans 8:21, after speaking of the heirs of God, says: "The creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God."

There is to be a resurrection of the just, and later a resurrection of the unjust. (Acts 24:15.) There are different glories to inherit (read 1 Corinthians 15:41), and our place therein is determined by our conformity to or deviation from the gospel law and the Christ character.

If we obey and abide the celestial law, we shall inherit a like glory. If not, we inherit a lesser glory. (Read Doctrine and Covenants 85:5.)

The second death, spoken of in Revelation 20:14; 21:8 will not be a death of the body but a final separation from God.

The Gospel of Jesus Christ

By Arthur E. Stoft

Jesus said unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John 12:6.

These words of Jesus indicate or point out to us the true meaning of his mission among the children of men. He opened the "way" for men in all ages to enter into that more abundant life he came to bring. He taught truth by precept as well as by example. He offered life, with all that that term implies, to all who had died. Jesus not only led the way, but he opened the way by living and teaching the truth. He taught that "the truth shall make you free." Obeying the truth he taught, will set us free from sin and death. So the mission of Jesus was and is to free men from the yoke of bondage, to show us the way to obey the truth, which obedience brings power over death. John the Revelator tells us in 1 John 3:8 of the mission of Jesus in the following language: "For this purpose the Son of God was manifested, that he might destroy the works of the Devil." In Hebrews 2:14 it says "that through death he might destroy him that had the power over death, that is, the Devil." So the work of the Devil is to bring death, while the mission of Jesus is to bring life.

It is quite clear that through the sin of our first parents, death was pronounced upon the whole human family, and it is just as apparent that through Jesus Christ, the death penalty is being removed, or has been removed. Death is an enemy of man and God. It is the last enemy to be destroyed. When all men live above sin or without sin, death will be unknown. The whole program of God is to bring life, and this life automatically removes death. In the gospel of Jesus Christ, the program of life is revealed. In the gospel of Jesus Christ, the laws pertaining to, governing, and promoting life are given. One can not conceive of an existence without laws governing that existence, so it is quite natural to believe that before the fall of Adam and Eve, God had instructed them concerning the laws that would continue and preserve life, spiritually as well as physically. God did not tell them that it was necessary for them to die before they could live. They were living, moving, self-determining beings made in God's own image; growing, developing, and becoming more and more like God and his Son Jesus Christ until they fell. To admit that death was in the plan of God would be to place God in an inferior position to Satan. Adam and the whole race of mankind could have grown and developed into perfect beings without sin or the penalty of sin, which is death.

The souls of Adam and Eve were evidently made to grow. Growth is one of the signs of life. The writer sincerely believes that they were growing, "going on unto perfection," developing even before Satan tempted them. God does not make dead things, and our fore-parents were certainly very much alive, able to "dress the garden," name the animals, etc. Before the fall, the command was given "to multiply and replenish the earth." Was their capacity to grow removed when they sinned? We believe not. While their progress undoubtedly was greatly retarded, they still maintained their ability to grasp and understand and put into operation the laws pertaining to life. A new order seemed to have been introduced by reason of the fall. Death seems to have been made a part of the program, and that may be the reason why some individuals believe that the sin of Adam was necessary in order for God to carry out his program.

Let us examine this "new order" of things for a moment. We call it the new order, but in reality it is the present order of things: Life through death. The earth was cursed, and by the sweat of their brows were they to earn their bread. They were told to make sacrifices of the best of their crops and animals, their firstlings. They killed in order that they might live physically. Seemingly all of the old worthies taught the idea of sacrifice and, in the case of Abraham, of human sacrifice. The law of Moses taught "an eye for an eye," "a tooth for a tooth," "a life for a life." All through the teachings of Jesus we find the same thread weaving itself into the fabric of the more abundant life, "He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." "And he said to them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." These and many other quotations might be given to show that Jesus taught that through the death of something life was made possible. Today the same order of things is in process. Life through death. The grass dies but saves the life of the cow. The cow dies, but the lives of human beings are saved. A righteous man gives his life's blood for the cause of truth; he dies, but the cause lives. Jesus gave up his physical life to show his power over death. He conquered death, hell, and the grave. Since death came by reason of the fall, it seemed essential for Jesus to experience this enemy of mankind (death) in order to create the order of life.

If we still examine this order of life through death a little more closely, we discover that life is promoted by reason of the application of the laws of growth to our lives. One who is leading a godly life, who is enjoying the presence of his Spirit, need not sin and die in order to enjoy the fuller life. He already enjoys it by reason of his obedience. Would it be too presumptuous to reason that life is had in spite of the elements of death? If one reasons that to sacrifice one's selfish ambitions for the good of his fellow men is denying oneself of enjoying real life, then it would seem that the philosophy of Christ was wrong. Is it not true that the Lord does not ask one to ever give up, or sacrifice, or deny oneself of the elements that go to make up real life? Christ wants us to put away from our lives only those things that bind us or keep us from enjoying life in the greatest measure. And the gospel of Christ is the means whereby men may fully live.

May we consider for a moment the idea expressed in song "Trials make us pure"? Is it true that trials or sickness draw us nearer to God? It has frequently occurred that when an individual who has been more or less wayward or careless or indifferent to God and his church, through accident or sickness has been awakened to his real standing toward God. Did the suffering in itself bring that individual nearer to God, or was it his repentant spirit? One is healed of a dreaded disease and is thereby drawn closer to God. Was it the disease that brought the blessing, or was it the faith that was exercised? In the case of the ten lepers that were healed, one of them was drawn closer to Jesus only because he exercised the spirit of gratitude, not because he had been a leper. His faith and his gratitude (elements of life) were the means of his closer walk with the Master of Life. When Jesus speaks, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends," the writer sincerely believes that the laying down of one's life is in reality not the element that makes one a real martyr but the fact of his love (the chief element of life) is the factor that secures for him real life. It is the compliance of the constructive principles of the gospel of Christ that produces life, and not the suffering, trials, and sorrow through which we pass.

The gospel of Christ contains all the elements of life. The soul of man is made to live, not to die. We might even suggest that the physical part of men contains elements of indestructibility. The children of Enoch lived such righteous lives that even physical death was not experienced by them. The gospel of Christ was made to meet the needs of the soul (body and spirit), and there is therefore no penalty attached to the acquisition by the soul of the gospel or principles of life (physical as well as spiritual). The gospel is a proper adjunct of the soul. It is the rightful addition of the soul. It is, in reality, a part of the soul. As the soul adds to it the various principles of life, there is no friction in the acquisition, because these principles rightly belong to the soul. There is an agreement between the soul and the principles by which that soul lives and develops. Just as the physical body is able to assimilate food by means of digestion without loss to the body, so the spirit in man assimilates the truth without loss or penalty. If in our obedience to the principles of life, we feel that we suffer the loss of some cherished hope or ambition, we can rest assured that our seeming loss was the thing that kept us from enjoying real life. The gospel is creative. Those who obey its principles grow out of sin; they remove the cause of all distress and sorrow and death. It is the builder of life without tasting of the pains of death. Death is no part of the program of life. Christ has through the gospel established the order of life, having tasted death for all, making it possible to live without tasting of either physical or spiritual death. Christ removed the effects of the sin of Adam through his gospel. The real nature of his gospel is life producing, life preserving, and never-ending life.

The Social Significance of Repentance

By E. F. Robertson

The ministry of this church of Latter Day Saints is admonished in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants to "Say nothing but repentance to this generation," which I believe is in strict harmony with the whole spirit of the gospel message; for, as it appears to me, that which is comprehended in the principle of repentance enters into every phase of gospel teaching and of spiritual life.

Funk & Wagnalls' Practical Standard Dictionary defines the word repentance, in part, as follows: "Repentance is sorrow for sin with self-condemnation, and complete turning from sin. . . . There may be sorrow without repentance, as for consequences only, but not repentance without sorrow."

In the version of the New Testament translated by Alexander Campbell, et al, called The Living Oracles, the word repentance seldom or never appears, but is rendered reformation. As, when John the Baptist came into the wilderness of Judea, it says he was "proclaiming in the desert," and saying, "Reform for the reign of heaven approaches."

Funk & Wagnalls defines reformation as follows: "To change from bad to good, or to persuade others to so change; make better morally; restore to former goodness; change for the better by alteration or reconstruction; free from evils or abuses; change from vicious to upright character."

John preached the baptism of repentance, and Jesus declared the Son of Man was come to call sinners to repentance. The ultimate object of the teaching of both was to change conditions from bad to good, and to accomplish those other things that are defined as being comprehended in the meaning of reformation.

Repentance as taught by those inspired teachers was to have its social as well as its individual application. Otherwise it could not result in greatly improved conditions of life. Jesus spoke not only to persons, but to cities and peoples. He said to Bethsaida and Chorazin, "If the mighty works that have been done in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented." To Capernaum he said, "If the mighty works that have been done in you had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day." And he declared it would be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon, or for Sodom, than for those cities which had been called to repentance and had refused to repent. Which declaration shows that it was social as well as individual repentance to which they were called. To the people of his generation he said:

The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.

In contrasting his own teachings with those of former times, he did so with a view to bringing about improvement, or reformation, through repentance.

Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill, and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment: but I say unto you, that whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment.

Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery: but I say unto you, that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

Under their interpretation of the law, only the action was restrained, but under the teaching of Christ improvement would be wrought in that the feelings that produce wrong action would not be indulged.

If thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee, leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.

But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

Inasmuch as repentance is properly defined in this article, it may be seen that the principle that improves, regenerates, and makes better the conditions of life enters into every phase of the gospel teaching, individual and social; improvement, growth, and progress being but manifestations of the presence of the principle of repentance in our individual and collective life.

Wherever the civilization of our own land and time excels that of the place and time in which the Christ began his work of preaching repentance, the improvement is due to the good seed of his teaching having taken root and borne fruit of repentance and reformation in the social order.

Walter Rauschenbusch, in his book Christianizing the Social Order, challenges the oft-repeated declaration that no one knows whether Christianity will work, because it has never been tried; declaring that Christianity not only has been tried, but that the question is as to whether anything in human life, private or social, has succeeded except Christianity. He continues:

It is true enough that there has never been a social order that was Christian from top to bottom. But large domains of our social life have come under the sway of Christ's law in their spirit and in their fundamental structure, and these are by common consent the source of our happiness and the objects of our pride, while those portions of the social order which are still to be Christianized are the source of our misery and cause of our shame.

Mr. Rauschenbusch believed it to be the duty of Christian leaders to push the work until unchristianized portions of the social structure should be brought under the domination of true Christian influence.

This would bring about a change from bad to good; an improvement by which the entire social order would be safely based upon the foundation of repentance.

Work Together; Be the Light of the World

A sermon by Roy S. Budd; at the Stone Church, January 12, 1930; Mrs. A. Morgan, Reporter.

ROY S. BUDD

Although I may, in part, assume the role of telling others what to do, and at times point out to you your failures, I trust you will not consider me scolding or class me with the faultfinders, but that you will accept my message as coming from a fellow traveler on the way, one who must meet the same problems in life that you meet and struggle, at times, against odds, to measure up to the standard set for those who shall assist in establishing the kingdom of God on earth.

My ambition is to lighten, not make heavier, the burdens of my fellows; to assist you to look forward with hope, not backward with regrets; to cause you to do as the poet has said:

Struggle on with strong endeavor,
For the good of fellow man,
If you can't do all you purpose,
'Tis as well; do all you can.

Matthew tells us that Jesus went to Galilee, teaching in the synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, healing the sick and diseased. His fame spread abroad throughout all Syria. To be at rest from the multitude he sought the quiet of the mountain. Here his disciples came to be taught and instructed in the law. Joyfully they sat at his feet to drink in the words of salvation, for to them he was the light of the world. Upon him rested the burden of teaching, healing, and administering.

A great surprise awaited them, for in addressing them their great teacher said, "Ye are the light of the world." Upon you rests the burden of preaching and the burden of healing. It is your business to minister to mankind; to establish the kingdom of God on earth. Through you must flow to the world that more abundant life which I came to give.

It had not dawned upon the disciples that they were to become his successors, making their lives like his, ministering to others as he had ministered to them, bringing joy and happiness to all the world through the gospel. Today we suffer from the same handicap, for many of us do not realize or appreciate the burden of being the light of the world. We have failed to appreciate the necessity for making our lives like his, the development of characters which will serve as a light to those with whom we associate. Like the disciples of old, we are prone to put the responsibility on the other fellow.

From members I have heard: Converting folk is the business of the missionary. From the missionary comes the cry: The business of the local men and members is to look after the needs of the Saints and convert their friends and relatives. Saving souls is not the business of the missionary, neither is it the business of the local people. It is the business of God, and we are his ambassadors, and should be concerned about our Father's business, advertising it by letting our light shine.

The age in which we live, as one writer has said, is an age of buck-passing; shrinking from responsibility. At the age of four we send our children away to kindergarten. We make somebody else responsible for their physical, their mental, their social, their moral, and their religious lives. If they fail in any one or all of these, with some degree of satisfaction we find the person responsible and advertise it to our friends.

In the home of a Latter Day Saint I heard a little boy swearing. It was embarrassing to his mother, but she passed the buck. She had sent him to Sunday school, but the teacher did not impress him. The environment in which he lived was not good. All that she said was true, but regardless of this woman's disposition to put the blame on some other person, God will hold her responsible for the training of the child she brought into the world; and regardless of our disposition to put the blame elsewhere, God will hold us responsible for the souls of those about us, for he has chosen us to be the light of the world, the builders of his kingdom.

It is not sufficient to be in possession of the light. We must let it shine before men, in such a way that they will not only behold, but that they will desire and yearn for it. In our lives we must demonstrate its efficiency. The final test of the church is not that we have a first presidency, a quorum of twelve, quorums of seventies, etc., or the doctrine we teach. The final test of any church is the lives of its people, and if we do not produce superior characters we must cease to assume that we are the light of the world.

The purpose of the church is to cause men to think, in keeping with the teaching of Christ. We are lazy. We do not think for ourselves. We place that responsibility on others. We allow the book writer, the magazine writer, and the editor of the daily paper to do our thinking for us. It is not the man who has read the greater number of books or magazines, but the man who has used his own mind to think his way through and determine his course after his reading, that is of value in building up the kingdom of God.

And good may ever conquer ill,
Health walk where pain has trod:
As a man thinketh so he is;
Rise, then, and think with God.

Some are very much concerned about the reading of the young people. I am not more concerned about the reading of the young than of the old. Our concern should be to teach both the young and old the art of thinking; how to analyze for themselves; to cause them to understand the things they should remember, and the things they should forget.

"As he thinketh, so he is"; not, as he reads, so he is. There is a story told of a boy who gave an elephant a piece of tobacco. The tobacco was very offensive to the elephant. Years passed. The boy, now a fully grown man, came in contact with the elephant, was seized by him and stamped to death. The elephant has a good memory for mean, nasty acts. Memory is a wonderful thing, but its value is determined by the ability of the one possessing it to choose his material. By remembering the mean things, he deprives himself of many beautiful thoughts and the possibilities of doing many beautiful acts. The elephant does not think; he only feels.

Some folks are like elephants; they remember the mean, nasty things. They do not think and analyze to determine what they should remember; they only feel, and nurse that feeling for years in hope of revenge. When opportunity comes, they, like the elephant, strike, bringing death to their victim and sorrow and regret to themselves. The gospel is to teach men to think and analyze their feelings. I bid you move out of the world of feeling into the world of thinking, and I assure you that more abundant life will be yours to enjoy.

Paul, in writing to the Philippian saints, made use of these words:

Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, if there be any praise, think on these things.

Paul was converted to the philosophy that thoughts direct acts. The man who thinks true thoughts lives a true life, and from him whose thoughts are just emanates justice. A pure mind abides only in a pure body, and lovely acts come only from those who have learned to think lovely thoughts. Virtue is determined not by physical fitness but by the training of the mind to think virtuous thoughts. Acts of wisdom follow thinking as night follows day. Thinking is the foundation of progress and success.

I heard a young man say, "The church is for the purpose of developing talent." That is true, but the development of talent is a minor thing. Talent can be developed in a number of fields. The church deals more with character, for character is the thing that determines our present and future happiness. The development of talent minus character increases the problem of civilization. The development of talent ahead of character increases the problems of the church. That is why we are so much concerned about the religious education for our children. I can see some talents in my boy that I am not anxious to develop until I am certain of his character. The world is filled with possibilities for developing talents. The business of the church is to supply the possibilities for character development.

God sent his Son into the world that the word might become flesh and dwell among men; and our responsibility, if we are to complete the family circle, as we have set out to do, is that we shall make the word flesh, and cause it to dwell among men. They must behold it in their midst. They must see it in our lives. It is not sufficient for the ministry to go forth preaching stewardships. The church and the world are in need of a man or group of men big enough to demonstrate the value of stewardships in their lives. Edgar A. Guest has written a little poem that illustrates my thought:

Sermons We See

I'd rather see a sermon
Than hear one any day;
I'd rather one should walk with me
Than merely tell the way.

The eye's a better pupil,
And more willing than the ear;
Fine counsel is confusing,
But example's always clear.

And the best of all the preachers
Are the men who live their creeds;
For to see good put into action
Is what everybody needs.

I can sooner learn to do
If you'll let me see it done.
I can watch your hands in action,
But your tongue too fast may run.

And the lectures you deliver
May be very wise and true,
But I'd rather get my lesson
By observing what you do.

For I may misunderstand you,
And the high advice you give;
But there's no misunderstanding
How you act and how you live.

Completing the family circle is not a problem for husbands and wives and children of the immediate family, but for the whole church. We are our brother's keeper. A woman who is a member of the church may live a virtuous, patient life before her husband day by day, and because of her life plus her instruction and the preaching he has heard, he may be on the verge of closing the circle. The unguarded act of a seventy, high priest, apostle, or even a member, may nullify the efforts of that sister. We are workers together.

In ——— I met a man who had listened to a number of sermons from one of our eloquent men. He told me he loved this man and believed his preaching and fully intended to be baptized when he returned from his vacation, which he was taking with this minister. Months after I found him not baptized. I learned through investigation that on this trip the minister did not live in keeping with his eloquent sermons. At an unguarded moment he forgot to let his light shine. He put it under a bushel. He had not transformed the word into flesh.

In a city far removed from here, a sister invited me to her home for the purpose of talking the gospel to her husband. When the time was opportune I began to speak of the church, stressing the first, or as we sometimes say, the fundamental principles, for although we are living in a modern age, it is not sufficiently modern to do away with the principles of the gospel established by Christ. This church is not only a social church, as some would have you believe, but it is a saving church. It has to do with the lives of men and women here and hereafter. The brother acknowledged we had a very fine philosophy, but contended that his experience with his wife and other members had proved to him that it would not work in the lives of men and women. "By their fruits ye shall know them." But all the picture is not black.

While holding a meeting in a branch in the East, I set my heart on converting a man whose wife was a member of the church. He came out to hear me preach, took me to his home, and treated me royally. I talked and explained with very little response from him. In desperation one day I said to him, "What do you think of the church?" With frankness, free from emotion, he proceeded to tell me his only way of judging it was by the lives of its people, and my soul was thrilled when he concluded that it must be a very good church, for he had lived with a woman who was a member for twenty-five years, had seen her in very trying circumstances, and she had never acted other than he believed a Christian should act. Her light was never under a bushel. She made the word flesh.

Down in one of our Southern States resides an old brother who for years has set his heart to do a certain thing in the church. There came a time when his wife and daughter, both members of the church, turned against him and his scheme; they even requested him not to pray in the home. However, he continued to pray at times, in his room so they could hear. He has won out; he will reach his goal. His wife told me no one could stay angry at or mistreat a man who lived so near to God. He trimmed his lamp and let his light shine before men. He moved out of the world of feeling into the world of thought, determined his course, and by the help of God demonstrated the truth of the gospel.

A boy who had disgraced his father's name and put his mother and sisters to shame, at my request returned to the home and asked his father to forgive. The father stretched forth his hand and said, "I had forgiven you before you returned. You are my son." The boy said, "Father I can not see how you can take me back after what I have done. You make me more ashamed than before." The reply quickly came, "It is the gospel."

Last week in ——— a young woman bore a beautiful testimony. When I congratulated her in an attempt to strengthen and encourage, she informed me that she had made many mistakes and felt that some of the Saints thought she was unworthy. When I learned of some of the experiences she had passed through, I did not altogether condemn the Saints for their feelings. However, she went on to tell me that many times she had stood on the threshold of sin, ready almost to enter when she had remembered the life of her mother and the prayers she had prayed. These two things had saved the beautiful young woman. Keep on living and praying, regardless of the fact that you can not see results, for by so doing you will complete the family circle.

The fact that somebody, whose life you know to be pure, is praying for you, enters into your life and mine, and sustains us. Had I not known that a dear little mother who lies on a sick bed in a hospital in Southern Missouri was offering a prayer for me this morning, I would not have courage to face this audience. Many times in my daily life when temptations come, I remember the many beautiful characters I have known and the number that are praying for me and am strengthened to press on.

"No Weapon Formed Against My Work Shall Prosper"

By V. D. Ruch

At a reunion held in the Des Moines District a few years ago, Patriarch Richard Baldwin delivered a prophecy in which the Lord, speaking through him, said: "No weapon formed against my work shall prosper, whether it be in the church or out of the church." Since hearing of that statement I have watched events quite closely, and upon several occasions have seen it supported. One instance in my own experience may be of interest.

Early in the spring of 1926, while doing missionary work in Norway, Sister Ruch and I organized a Sunday school at Bon, Norway. At that time there was only one other Sunday school in the community. It was being conducted by the Free Mission people, and its hour of meeting was 12 o'clock. Not desiring to conflict with the other school or to hurt them in any way, we selected 10.30 as our hour of convening, so that our school would be out in plenty of time to give any of the children who desired opportunity to attend the other school.

Our school was a success from the start. We had 51 present the first Sunday, and it grew rapidly until our average attendance was about 80. Only about eight or ten of these were children of members of the church. The others were children of nonmembers who belong to the State Church (Lutheran). It is just children who attend Sunday school in Norway. When children are confirmed members of the State Church at the age of fourteen, they quit going to Sunday school and do not any longer engage in children's activities. We have tried hard to overcome that custom, but we find it very difficult.

Many of the children attended both schools, but our school had outgrown the other in attendance. Those in charge of the other school could not stand our prosperity very long (they were very much prejudiced against us), so after a while they changed their time of meeting to 10.30, exactly the same hour used by us. Their thought, of course, was that they would be able to keep all of the children who were attending both schools, and thereby weaken our school and perhaps break it up.

From that day their doom was sealed. Instead of destroying our school, they almost broke up their own. The great majority of children who had been attending both schools continued to come to us. As a result, the attendance at the other school was greatly reduced. They soon discovered their mistake and changed their time to 11 o'clock, and again to 12 o'clock, attempting to gain back the children they had lost, but all was in vain. Their school was never the same again. The attendance and interest grew less and less, until in January of this year they had only five or six children attending.

The latter part of 1929, a new State Church priest was stationed in that district. He soon heard of our work, the prosperity of our various departments, and especially of our large Sunday school. He took upon himself the mission of trying to drive us out. He went about trying to poison the minds of the people against us. He solicited the aid of the Salvation Army, the Free Mission, and of course all the forces of the State Church, to assist him in driving the Mormons (as he called us) out of business.

The State Church has never before, in the history of the place, conducted a Sunday school at Bon. But now they were to organize one, and they boasted in advance that they would break up our school. The priest went to those in charge of the Free Mission Sunday school and requested them to discontinue their school, so he could have the entire field against us. As stated above, the Free Mission school had dwindled down to almost nothing, so they were glad to have an excuse to die an honorable death.

The stage was all set for the new school to start the last Sunday in January, this year, at 12 o'clock. We met at 10.30 as usual, and at the close nearly all of our 80 children went to the new school. As a result they had about one hundred present. Greatly encouraged by this splendid beginning, the priest announced that on the following Sunday their school would begin at 10.30, the same hour used by us. He urged the children to come back the following Sunday, and he promised them gifts, picnics, etc., during the year.

His purpose, of course, was to take all the children from our school, and during the week his friends boasted that they would do that very thing. I must admit that Sister Ruch and I were quite anxious over the matter, and wondered how many of our children would leave us. The promise of God came to us: "No weapon formed against my work shall prosper." We presented the matter to God in prayer and solicited his assistance. But when we took into consideration that our school is made up largely of children who are baptized as babies into the State Church and whose parents are members of that church, it seemed quite natural that the parents would send their children to the Sunday school of their own church. But when Sunday came, only about five or six of our children were missing. It was a very pleasant surprise for us, and we were made happy in the thought that God had once more fulfilled his promise.

Our average attendance during February (the first month of the existence of the other school) was 82, which was higher than it had been in January. We congratulated the children on this splendid record and urged them to do even better in March. As a result we had 102 present the first Sunday, and our attendance did not fall under 101 any Sunday in March. The last two Sundays we had 109 and 111, respectively. For the five Sundays in March our average attendance was 105. We did not put on any drive for new scholars in any way, but interest among the children became keen as a result of the opposition and competition. They put forth every effort to be present themselves and to get others to attend. During February and March, 28 new scholars enrolled with us. All of the children who left us to go to the new school have returned to us, with the possible exception of one or two. Our total enrollment is now 119, and the school is still growing. The last two Sundays 11 new scholars have been enrolled. Our little church is filled to capacity. We have difficulty finding seats for the last ones who have come.

The other school, we are told, has an attendance of from twenty to thirty. Instead of the priest breaking up our school, he has helped us. Never has the interest been as good as it is now. We thank him for his efforts.

Sister Ruch is in charge of our school and is doing a splendid work. She has the love and respect of all of the children, and they will do all within their power for her. We print the Zion's Hope on the mimeograph, and the children are delighted to get them and enjoy the beautiful colored pictures.

Thus we have seen the fulfillment of the promise that no weapon formed against the work of God will prosper. May the time speedily come when people will quit fighting against God and his work.

PORSGRUND, NORWAY, April 7, 1930.

back a wayward son or daughter, I would speak words of cheer. When you feel all hope is gone, do not despair. Look up into the face of your Father and behold his power to save, bow down at his altar and worship him, for he who has led you into this beautiful gospel, he who has assisted you to develop a beautiful character, will send down his Spirit divine to strive with your loved one, inviting him to return and complete the family circle.

Kirtland, Ohio

Sacramental service for the month of April was presided over by Patriarch A. E. Stone, High Priest George Neville, Branch President D. Proper, and Elder Ebenezer Curry. Brother Neville gave the opening remarks before the passing of the emblems; then Brother Stone gave a short talk before the meeting was opened for prayers and testimonies. Both these brothers spoke with a degree of the Spirit which was felt throughout the services. The Painesville Saints having been invited to meet with us at this service, a number were present.

Some twenty persons from here are in attendance at the Centennial Conference.

Elder William Patterson, wife, and little daughter, from Massachusetts, visited relatives and friends in Kirtland and Cleveland on their way to conference.

At the resignation of Sister Fry, as president of the Women's Department, Sister George Biglow was chosen for that office.

The Women's Department meets once a month for a program. They meet once a week for other work. The April program has been postponed a month, since many of the leaders are at General Conference.

Wiley, Colorado

As the time for conference arrives, the Saints of Wiley Branch have turned their thoughts Zionward. While only a few can attend, everyone feels the call to be in that great gathering. The sacramental service was observed with fasting as requested, and a fine spirit was present.

The work is holding its own here. The choir under the direction of Sister Alice Fletcher is progressing. Several special numbers are in preparation for the Easter service.

Wiley Branch has heard with regret of the transfer of Brother O. A. McDowell from this district. His work has been much appreciated. To know him and his companion was but to realize that he should be located where he could reach the maximum number of Saints. But even though we are not many in number, we feel that a good work has been done here that will bear good fruit.

Dunn Center (North Dakota) Branch

March 31.—Saints in this region have passed through a long winter. We are so scattered that we are unable to meet together when weather conditions are unfavorable. The Saints from Werner, North Dakota, have not been up to services for over four months. They were discontinued December 8 until weather and roads were so that we could meet regularly.

Branch President Lester Anderson sent out word that there would be services last Sunday, but because the day was stormy and disagreeable, the members did not go up from Werner. We expect, however, to have regular services from now on.

The winter has been hard. Snow has been plentiful and is slow in leaving. It is mostly gone now, but it will be some time before anything is done in the fields.

Many members would very much enjoy attending conference, but it is impossible for us to be there.

On March 30 and 31 and April 1 the Saints of Hammond Branch, Hammond, Indiana, had the pleasure of having Elder William Osler with them. He was on his way to conference and stopped to preach three evenings. His sermons were very instructive. Sunday evening there was a fine play representing the coming forth of the Book of Mormon.

San Francisco, California

Park-Presidio Branch, 405 Arguello Boulevard

March 14 Sister Joy Chalmers and Mr. Nicholas A. Neklason were united in marriage by Elder J. W. Rushton. Forty-three guests were present, and all remained for the reception. The wedding setting was beautiful.

The third anniversary of the establishment of this congregation was celebrated March 21 with a dinner at the home of Brother and Sister A. L. Holling. Illness prevented the holding of our get-together party earlier in the year.

Elder John W. Rushton is doing a fine work in this district. Visitors are becoming interested to the extent that luncheon and dinner engagements in private homes are being arranged for him, so that more knowledge regarding the Reorganized Church may be had first hand. The services are well attended, and the membership is happy in the thought that many of the visitors are now regular attendants.

Sacramental service April 6 was in charge of Brother Louis A. Shippy, assisted by Branch President Edward Nelson and Brother A. L. Holling. Those who were present expressed themselves that it was the best meeting we have had the privilege of attending. Much of the time was devoted to consideration of the significance of the sacrament, as well as the importance of its being the centennial celebration. A comforting spirit was present throughout the hour.

This branch regrets that it is not represented at the General Conference, but it takes consolation in the thought that it can do a big work at home by attending meetings and spreading the gospel.

Our hopes and prayers are that much good will come out of the centennial celebration and that a real and constructive program may be carried forward with renewed enthusiasm.

Alliance, Ohio

April 11.—At the quarterly business meeting of the branch, the records show a slight falling off in attendance, especially in the prayer service. This is due no doubt, in January and February, to the extremely cold weather and icy streets, as well as to the number of sick among us.

With the adoption of the unified program for Sunday morning, we can see a change for good. It has increased the spiritual nature of our service, as well as added numbers. Many are commenting on the beauty of the service, and all seem delighted with it.

The Religio meets on Friday evening. The members have divided into two teams with Sister Arlene Lambert and Brother Joseph Gordon as captains. Each furnishes a program alternating Friday evenings. Some fine programs have been put on, a mock radio program and a children's hour program being especially worthy of mention. These programs have more than doubled attendance. There is keen competition, and we hope to accomplish good inside as well as outside the church membership.

Among special speakers for this quarter have been Elder J. C. McConnaughy, of Barberton, and Elder F. T. Haines, of Cleveland. We were encouraged by these visits.

Our hearts were saddened at the death of Sister William Goudy, of New Philadelphia. Brother and Sister Goudy have come to Alliance many times to render service, and we know a truly saintly woman has gone to claim her reward. Our sincerest sympathy goes out to our brother and her loved ones and the branch, which will miss her sorely.

Sunday, April 6, as requested the greater number of the Saints came in fasting and praying to the services. From the opening of the first service an atmosphere of worship was present. This sweet influence accompanied us throughout the sacramental service, bringing by the voice of the Spirit a message which encouraged all.

In the evening the Department of Women put on a historical program of the Book of Mormon as outlined in the Herald of February 26. Sister Harry Green, of Canton, assisted by Sister Marie Smith was in charge. The program was beautiful and impressive. Thus ended a pleasant and profitable day.

Independence

The Centennial Conference Closes

Close upon the two presentations of the great centennial pageant, Fulfillment, on Friday and Saturday nights, the General Conference held its concluding meeting.

The pageant was one of the two big features of the Centennial World Conference of the church, the other being the production of the oratorio, The Course of Time, April 13 and 14. A year's intensive study was given to the pageant, which was written by Sister Alice Mae Burgess, by the White Masque Players of Independence; and the presentation, under the direction of Sister Gladys Newton Six, required twelve hundred people. "Fulfillment was pageantry on a more gigantic scale than ever had been attempted in this city," says the Independence Examiner. "The production was officially sponsored by the church, which placed all of its resources at the disposal of a group of gifted men and women who, during more than a year past, have been giving it much of their time. The pageant brought a dramatic significance to the theme of the Centennial Conference, which is, 'A faith for the second century.'"

The history of Christianity, as presented by the pageant, is divided into three great epochs: Christ's Message; The Reformation; and The Restoration. The prologue and interlocutory parts were furnished by Sister Alice Smith Edwards and read by Doctor F. H. Criley. Spiritual voices heard in the performance were read into the microphone by Apostle J. A. Gillen. An orchestral prelude of Wagnerian numbers, "Pilgrim chorus," "Tannhauser March," and "Hymn to the evening star," was presented by the Auditorium Orchestra, directed by R. T. Cooper and Orlando Nace; organ music was by Robert Miller; and special selections were sung by a double quartet.

Because of the immensity of the cast it would be impossible to make mention of the splendid individual work, but every characterization was appreciated by the thousands who viewed the performance. And many scenes were made highly dramatic by pleasing music and effective lighting. To many the pageant brought a new understanding of the significance of the message and work of Joseph Smith, the young prophet, about whom the story of the Restoration centers.

During the latter half of the week the schedule printed in the conference program was closely adhered to. Class work occupied morning hours at the Auditorium, intense interest and earnest discussion marking each session. Business meeting opened at two o'clock each afternoon with the exception of Thursday, when the building was given over to the pageant players for the purpose of installing stage settings. Dress rehearsal of the pageant occupied Thursday evening, and the public performances were given Friday and Saturday, many hundreds of conference members, visitors, and townspeople presenting tickets for admittance.

There occurred daily at the Stone Church two devotional services, the second in charge of the First Presidency, one lecture period, and two preaching services. The morning lectures were "The ministry of beauty," by Elder John W. Rushton. Morning speakers and themes were: Elder H. I. Velt who presented "The church in Australia"; Elder V. Etzenhouser, "The church in Hawaii"; Elder Frank Veenstra, "The church in Holland"; Elder C. F. Greene, "The church in Germany." In the evening Elder William Patterson spoke two nights on "The message of the second century," and Bishop M. H. Siegfried one evening on "The goals of the second century." These services were characterized by the spirit of helpfulness and consideration, and some very large congregations were present.

Sunday, the final day, opened with a young people's 6.30 Easter morning prayer service at the Auditorium. Elders J. F. Sheehy, G. P. Levitt, T. S. Williams, and James Thomas were in charge, and the music, short talks, and prayers were arranged to impress upon the worshipers the significance of and great need for the spirit of resurrection. A priesthood meeting of prayer and devotion followed at the Stone Church at 7.45.

A large conference crowd assembled at the Auditorium for the 10.45 preaching service, following Sunday school sessions at the Auditorium, Memorial Hall, Stone Church, and all the branches in Independence, to hear the closing address of the conference by President F. M. Smith. "Prospect" was the theme. Sermons were delivered at the same hour in the Stone Church by Apostle Roy S. Budd, in Liberty Street Church by Elder C. E. Wight, and in Memorial Hall by Elder J. W. Haworth. Music at the morning services was supplied by the Stone Church Choir and local and visiting soloists and organists.

The closing meeting of the Centennial Conference, a service of ordination and dedication which opened at two o'clock Sunday afternoon, carried with it the setting apart of a corps of men to new offices, the honoring of veterans in honorable service, and the dedication of both the ministry and laity of the church to the task of carrying forward the cause of Christ into the new century of our group endeavor. Elder Albert N. Hoxie directed the congregational singing during the service. Special musical numbers were given by Sister Lillian Green and Brother George Anway, Brother Paul N. Craig accompanying. At five o'clock in the afternoon President Frederick M. Smith pronounced the benediction and the conference was adjourned, to meet again April 6, 1932.

Central Church

Church school was conducted at Central Church the last Sunday of General Conference, April 20. The story was told by Associate Pastor George Mesley, and the sermon during the service period was delivered by Apostle M. A. McConley. Sister Hazel Scott was the organist.

An Australian program attracted the members in the evening. The program was arranged and presented by the delegation from Australia to General Conference. It consisted of readings, solos, whistling, and movies of the scenes passed through since the group left their native shores for America.

Saints of this congregation have been happy to fellowship with friends and church members from all over the world. Now more than ever we feel that "God hath made of one blood . . . all people who covenant to serve him." This closer forging of the bonds of brotherhood should give us courage and increase our zeal in the undertaking of going on to perfection which is our privilege.

Gladstone Church

The former record attendance of ninety-two was broken March 30, when an even one hundred came to worship at this new location.

April 2 the Sunday school gave a farewell party to Sister Nina Hughes and family and presented her a fine hand bag. A fine social time was enjoyed. Ice cream and cake were served, and games were played.

April 1 Elder Ammon White united in marriage Mr. W. T. Pence and Sister Dorothy Farmer, at the home of Brother White in Independence, Missouri. Mr. Pence seems interested in the church and has announced his intention of uniting with it. A surprise party was given the young couple, forty-one partaking of a luncheon of ice cream and cake. The couple will make their home with the mother of Sister Pence, 408 Cypress Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri. They are active in the work of the choir.

Elders O. A. McDowell and R. D. Weaver recently occupied the morning and evening hour.

Argentine Church

Elder W. D. Tordoff was the speaker at 7.45. He drew a lesson from the eighteenth chapter of Matthew, answering for his fine audience the question of the disciples of Jesus, "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?" His remarks were supplemented by the reading of a poem, "He shall conquer who thinks he can."

Low Banks, Ontario

This branch is endeavoring to do its small part in the work of latter days. The Women's Department has been reorganized, with Sister Minnie F. Minor as president; Sister Viola Barrick, vice president; Sister Bessie MacDonald, secretary-treasurer; Sister Minnie A. Minor, organist. Under these officers we expect to continue our work.

The dramatic club has been showing a play entitled "Little Clodhopper." It will be given at Niagara Falls Wednesday evening of this week.

On Sunday, April 6, we are expecting Elder Clatworthy, of Bridgebury, to address us on the centennial topic. We hope the conference will be a success, and our prayers are for continued success in the future.

"Easter dawn," a play, is being prepared for Easter Sunday.

This branch had the pleasure of hearing Elder B. H. Doty the first of the month. His splendid sermons were a source of much encouragement. Weather conditions at the time of his visit were not good, and consequently attendance was not large.

We pray for the success of the conference and that the coming year will be one of marked achievement for the church everywhere.

Young Ministers from Minneapolis

In the list of men appointed to serve the church during the present interconference period in a full-time capacity are the names of six who started their ministerial career or received a very significant part of their training and experience in Minneapolis Branch, Minnesota. These men have all entered the appointment list within the last five years, and their achievements reflect credit to the faithful band of Saints located at Minneapolis.

Elder C. A. Kress was made associate pastor of Minneapolis Branch in January, 1922, having been ordained to the office of teacher at Minneapolis in April, 1917, and subsequently to the offices of priest and elder. He was elected president of the branch in October, 1923. He was appointed to the mission field in April, 1926, and is now assigned as missionary to the Northeastern Nebraska District.

G. Leslie DeLapp was ordained a priest at Minneapolis in January, 1925. He was made an elder in July of the same year and elected as associate pastor of the branch in August. He served in this capacity for a year and one half. In April, 1926, he was called and ordained to the office of bishop. In February, 1928, he entered the full-time ministry as bishop of Lamoni Stake, in which office he is now occupying.

Carroll L. Olson was ordained a teacher at Minneapolis in May, 1923. He was ordained an elder and made associate pastor of the branch in February, 1927. He was made church statistician in February, 1928, and is now occupying in that office.

Elder Ray Whiting was appointed and elected full-time pastor of the Minneapolis Branch in August, 1925. He came to Minneapolis after the completion of his course at the University of Kansas. The ministerial experience gained at Minneapolis proved so valuable that the Joint Council saw fit to call him to the office of high priest and appoint him as pastor at Council Bluffs, a branch of almost one thousand members. This change was made in February, 1928. Brother Whiting has again been appointed to Council Bluffs.

Blair Jensen was ordained to the office of elder and made full-time pastor of Minneapolis Branch at the same time, in February, 1928. During his two years' pastorate in this branch, he has also made remarkable progress, so much so that the conference of 1930 saw fit to call and ordain him to the office of high priest and appointed him to serve as pastor of a city where the church has almost eight hundred members, Omaha, Nebraska.

Vernon Lundeen has been selected to fill the place vacated by Brother Jensen. He has been appointed as missionary pastor of the branch. He is distinctly a Minneapolis product, having been born, reared, and baptized in Minneapolis. His father, Elder Charles Lundeen, was one of the church pioneers in this city, helped build the church, and for many years was pastor of the branch. He is loved and respected by all the Saints. When Vernon was ordained to the office of priest in September, 1925, it was prophesied that he would carry on the work and priesthood of his father. Subsequently he took a two-year course at Graceland College, and in February, 1930, he was ordained to the office of elder. All members and former members of the Minneapolis Branch rejoice in the progress that Brother Vernon Lundeen has made, and trust that he may carry on the work of his father, and that the branch, cooperating with him, may live up to the tradition which it has established in the last few years.

Birmingham, England

"Behold, spring sweeps over the world again,
Shedding soft dews from her ethereal wings;
Flowers on the mountain, fruit over the plain;
And music on the waves and woods she flings
And love on all that lives,
And calm on higher things."

April 8.—March 23 the son and daughter of Brother J. Coggan, John and Joan, were baptized by Brother J. Schofield. It was a beautiful ceremony, peaceful and sanctifying. Many of the school children witnessed the baptism, and it was noticeable that some of the older boys who cause considerable trouble through their unruly behavior, were as quiet as it is possible for a boy to be. We thought it indeed good to enjoy such occasions. As we sang "We will follow none but Jesus," our desires to do good were given new stimulus. We will indeed follow him. Silently we reconsecrated our lives to his service. Later in the day the candidates were confirmed by Elders A. Kendrick and J. H. Edwards.

The Sunday school is progressing. Sister G. Allen is the superintendent and chorister. At present we are concentrating and training for our anniversary celebration. A new feature is being tried out, an open Sunday. Once a month we hold a service in church endeavoring to use the talents and abilities of our young people. We have held three of these services, all of them proving successful.

The Saints were saddened early in February by the loss of one of our number, Brother Fred Smith, who was thirty-nine years of age. He left a wife and a little son two and one half years old whom he fondly and earnestly desired to be reared in gospel truth, that he may help in the latter-day work. We deeply sympathize with his family.

A glorious spring morning opened Sunday, April 6. Our hearts responded to the Father of love who has so abundantly blessed us. Meeting on that memorable day to partake of the sacrament of our Lord and Savior, we were impressed with the sanctity and beauty of the service and pledged ourselves anew to be true witnesses and Saints. Many times we remembered the great gathering at Independence, and our thoughts and desires were with the Saints assembled at General Conference.

In the evening President A. Kendrick spoke with power and much assurance, reviewing the work of God and man in the Restoration of latter days. He spoke of the rich and glorious heritage to which we are heirs, of the privileges we enjoy, and of our duty to God and man. We were urged to set a higher value upon the blessings we receive, to remember that the word of God is sure, that his plans can not be frustrated, that eternal life, the greatest blessing of all, is the certain gift to those who are faithful. The angels minister daily to us, that we may be strengthened and able to minister to those around us, that we may rise up with strength as eagles, that we may run and not be weary and walk and not faint.

We have several interested inquiries after the truth. It is our endeavor to carry with us the missionary spirit. We pray, "Thy kingdom come, O Lord, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." At this time we especially pray God's blessings upon the General Conference.

It is the desire of the Saints in this local to go forward with greater zeal and ambition, to bring souls of men into the kingdom of God more than we have ever before done. Zion the beautiful beckons us on.

Coldwater, Michigan

But few Saints of Coldwater Branch were privileged to attend the long-looked-to Centennial Conference at Independence. Nevertheless we have through modern facilities kept in close touch with the proceedings there. We read the reports in the church papers and the United Press and imagined we were there.

The branch through its departments staged an excellent program, the rendering of which was accompanied by the Good Spirit from on high. The morning service of sacrament and prayer was uplifting. The evening program, under the combined auspices of heads of departments, consisted of eight readings comprehending the brilliant series of angelic ministrations from 1820 to 1830 with the church coming out of the wilderness with full complement of official structure. Music was adapted to each theme and was spiritedly and sweetly rendered. The program concluded with a playlet in which Joseph, Hyrum, Oliver, Martin Harris, David Whitmer, Grandin and Gilbert with manuscript of the Book of Mormon, testimony, and printing press were represented.

The church was filled. Saints were present from Three Rivers, Battle Creek, Jackson, Fremont, and Clear Lake. Interest was intense, and a wonderful spirit accompanied. Concluding the program Brother Scott gave a strong address presenting prophecy and history as inseparable links. The golden chain of faith which binds us to God was strengthened. Hope was confirmed, and the subtle, mysterious quality we call the love of God, which promises a sacred brotherhood and millennial fraternity, seemed more distinct and alluring.

Sister Ethel Gallagher, one of our good departmental workers, was detained from the service with her husband who was at the Memorial Hospital for nearly two weeks, having undergone an operation for appendicitis. He is recovering splendidly.

Sisters Corless, Scott, and Fish, the conducting heads of departments, with our president and the present senior membership are to be commended for faith, interest, and sacrifice. The branch programs have cost effort, with determination and some tears. May the heavenly Father bless his servants.

The Scott girls spent their week's vacation from school in Battle Creek. Their brother, Harold, brought them home and played a part in the centennial program.

The juniors are busy preparing an Easter program which promises to be of high order. Their teachers are efficient, and much eagerness is manifested by all to do their part.

"The Reorganization" was the topic from the pulpit last Sunday. The evening subject for the senior class of the church school was "Taking many plain and precious parts from the word of God." The use of the Inspired Translation of the Bible was stressed.

The following Monday Brother Scott was called to officiate in two funeral sermons, both of the deceased being non-members. One was a woman in her ninety-ninth year. She was born in the section where the church was organized one year after the organization was effected. The second was a reputable farmer who died in the country. Attendance at the funeral was estimated to be more than three hundred people. A great many grasped the hand of the speaker upon these occasions, saying: "Thank you for the great light and comfort of your sermon. It is just my conviction and faith, but I could not express it, for I knew not where the conviction belonged." The light of the Restoration has reached the honest in heart.

Sister Starr Corless, who has been very sick and confined to the house, is now convalescent. Her husband visited his grandson, John Parker, jr., and his daughter, Sister Parker, last week. John Junior is in Graceland College but visited his home in Dowagiac, Michigan.

Sister R. W. Waldron, of Schenectady, New York, daughter of Brother and Sister S. W. L. Scott, has been ill with bronchial trouble. She is recovering and is expecting to visit Coldwater early in the summer. She is a member of this branch.

Ribstone, Alberta

April 6.—We felt somewhat lonely today when we had communion service without Brother and Sister Peter S. Whalley. However, the service was good, and it made us feel glad to know that Brother and Sister Whalley were enjoying themselves at General Conference. We hope to hear a full account of it when they return. Many here would like to have been there today, but since we could not be present we remembered all who were there, asking the Lord to bless the assembly.

Brother and Sister Whalley left Ribstone last Monday, Sister Osler and Sister Mabel Roy from Edmonton having met them here. It was understood that Brother and Sister Ward L. Christy were to join them at Saskatoon. Before their departure we had a little party at the church. The building was packed, and the evening was spent singing and hearing recitations. The Women's Department served lunch.

Every Sunday there is a good attendance at church. Of course there are no other church services here just now, but every Sunday the church is full, there being almost as many strangers present as Saints. About half the boys and girls who attend Sunday school are the children of non-members. We are trying to interest them while they are young.

Brother Lloyd Gregory and family are leaving Ribstone next Tuesday. They are going to Prince George, British Columbia. We shall miss them, because they have helped much with the choir.

Brother Tom Smith, a deacon, has been confined to his home about two months with rheumatism. We are sorry he has to suffer so severely. He can not wear a shoe on either foot.

DON'T LET YOUR HERALD SUBSCRIPTION LAPSE.

McDermott, Ohio

Sunday, April 6, was a busy day. Sunday school opened at 9.30 in the morning with more than fifty present, the number including a dozen visitors. Sacramental service opened at 10.45 in charge of Elder Richard Shope. The remarks by the pastor set forth how thankful the Saints should be on the occasion of the one hundredth birthday of the church. As they partook of the emblems of the Last Supper, they were reminded of the great assemblage at the General Conference. The close of the meeting invoked the favor of the Master upon the assembly, and the Good Spirit was strongly felt by all. This service was all that could be asked for. The emblems passed, the prayers and testimonies were marked by a touch of the Spirit bringing joy and thanksgiving to all. Brother Milton O. Rexroad was called to the office of priest.

At two o'clock in the afternoon a large crowd of Saints and friends gathered to the water's edge, where the wife and daughter of Brother James Copes and the daughter of Brother Al Copes were baptized by Elder Shope. This number completed our quota of baptisms for the conference year.

In the evening those baptized were confirmed under the hands of Brother Shope and Walter Culp, pastor of Pleasant Valley Branch. Then Elder Culp preached to a fair-sized crowd on the theme "Children—their care and teaching." His discourse was interesting and instructive and was well received.

The priesthood is active and working in harmony, and the laity is in good spiritual condition. The branch is facing a reasonably promising future.

Fisher, Arkansas

April 3.—It is encouraging to note the progress being made in the branch. Sometimes this progress can not be detected by the eye, but there is a feeling in the local that we are going forward. Our prayer meetings are exceptional except that the attendance is small. Increase in attendance and interest is noticeable at the church school and preaching services. This is probably the result of an effort by the membership to visit the homes and solicit attendance. This was done previous to Decision Day.

Great things are not accomplished in short periods of time. Our ambition is to start things great enough to require time in the achieving. Some time must be used in preparation. Some who have been slack in that line seem to be content to work overtime now. Who can suggest a better time than 1930 for greater preparation? It is the glorious present; yesterday is gone. The future can be used only as we develop today. Preparation is our defense against the darkness that is gathering to thwart the honest efforts of the faithful few.

We feel the need of Zion and are working to the end that in the future it may be strengthened by our presence. If there was ever a time when an ensign of righteousness was needed, it is now. The world is looking for such an ensign.

By faithfully doing what the gospel gives in the way of privileges, we find honor, and our work will lift the ensign that all men may be free and equal. No one need despair. Let us be up and doing. Demonstration is what we need to promote in these days. May the Lord's blessings attend the 1930 conference.

From the time of the expansion of Christianity in Europe until Chinese extraterritoriality brought the latest foreign military expeditions to China, the message of Christianity has often been largely nullified by the reliance its emissaries have placed on armed force to make easier and safer their missionary work. For centuries Christians have been cast-

She was a clever student and fine musician. When she became ill, fifteen months before her death, she was attending Calgary Central High School. Heart trouble took her away from earthly friends. The funeral was held at Armstrong's Funeral Home. The service, conducted by Elder P. S. Whalley, was largely attended. Many beautiful floral tributes from friends and classmates bore silent testimony of the love and esteem with which she was held by all who knew her. ## A Veteran in Church Life and Accomplishment Passes

President Smith read the following definitely stated and imposing list of the accomplishments of Marietta Walker.

Outstanding Contributions to the Church

1. One of the few who first saw the vision of Graceland College and worked for its establishment.
2. She gave a large acreage upon which Graceland now stands.
3. One of the organizers of the Religio. This first took the form of a debating society in her home.
4. She started the Mothers' Home Class Column in the Herald, which later developed into the movement of the Daughters of Zion, which today as the Department of Women is merged into the Department of Religious Education.
5. For years editor of Zion's Hope.
6. Founder of the Autumn Leaves. Acted as editor of it for some years. This magazine today is Vision.
7. She wrote the book With the Church in an Early Day.
8. Sister Walker commenced the Christmas offering.
9. She was a strong supporter of the gospel boat, the Evangelia.

The service was completed in a beautiful manner by the placing of a wreath at the foot of her picture, while "Calvary" was rendered as an organ solo. Revelation 22: 4, 5, was read. J. W. Rushton offered the prayer:

Almighty God, our heavenly Father, as fellow pilgrims we stand upon the shores of time and sense and bid farewell to this great spirit as she moves with dignity down the long trail through the Valley of Shadows into the realms of eternal day; and as we stand here with our memories sanctified in the gracious words and deeds with which her name is associated, our sorrow for our loneliness in her passing does not dim our eyes nor bring despair to our souls; but we rejoice and bid her Godspeed as she moves into thy presence to receive thy loving welcome into her home.

We desire, O Lord, to express to thee our deep sense of mystery, the mystery of life, the mystery of death, in the presence of which human wisdom fails and human speech can not register thought, but our faith in thy prevailing goodness and wisdom enables us to believe that the time will come when we shall meet again, and soul of thy soul, we shall be reunited in thy presence.

We give thanks to thee most heartily that so many of those with whom we have been associated in the warfare of life as pilgrims and crusaders have been called from the church militant and the conflicts with the powers of evil, to take their places with the church triumphant in thy holy presence, and that these are representative of the high hopes, of the true ideals, of the noble aspirations with which our Christian church is identified, of which it is the incarnation.

We ask thee, O God, that it may be thy will that we may be worthy of the representation which she our sister and others who with her, in that triumphant band, may represent to thee today.

We ask thy blessing in comfort upon those who are immediately associated with her and the family. In thy great mercy bring comfort to them, and bless them with that strengthening faith that they may look forward to the time when the grave shall not close all there is, but become the gateway to eternal life through which the ceaseless processions of thine immortal inheritance in the souls of men shall move to a vaster and a more glorifying state.

Fulfill now, O Lord, the promise in thy sacred word in the hearts and souls of thy believing children, and as together we stand today in reverence and in thanksgiving in all the mysteries of thine own workings, may we silently pledge ourselves in loyalty to the great cause of which this dear sister was our representative, and may we move to the healing of unhappy divisions, the spiritualizing of all the material things that face the conversion of all our talents and powers of personality into spiritual currency, and glorify thy holy name in our every word and work as thou hast done so splendidly through this our sister, and others who have preceded her.

We thank thee this morning that thou didst grant us to see the vision splendid, and to have within our minds and our ears the splendid melodies of these immortal symphonies which truth and goodness and beauty conjoin, making out of our poor lives the rare and infinite treasures thou dost love to gather to thyself as jewels.

We commend us to thee this morning, and ask thee to accept our thanks for all the blessings which have come to us and to the church through the love and devotion and loyalty and genius of this rare spirit. Help us by thy grace to follow in her steps until it may please thee to give us invitation and welcome into the home in which we may find all of our souls' appetites fulfilled, and our hopes for eternal friendships fully realized. Upon us be the blessing and the sanctification and comfort of the Holy Ghost, for Christ's sake. Amen.

The funeral service at Lamoni, Iowa, was held in the Brick Church, Elder J. W. Davis delivering the address, assisted in the service by Evangelist Frederick A. Smith. Her body was interred in Rose Hill Cemetery.

The church owes many of her dead huge debts for their lives of capable and godly devotion. And high among the list, with very few, if any, excelling her, stands Marietta Walker. R. J. L.

Grand Total	393	259	425	4,818	5,895

The grand total of 5,895 is almost three and a half times as great as the number registered at last General Conference, which gave a total of 1,696. If one excludes from this year's total the 1,896 hosts (the term host meaning one living in Independence, who is neither a delegate nor ex officio) one finds a grand total of almost 4,000. The reason that we subtract this figure for comparative purposes is that in previous conferences the Independence Saints who were neither delegates nor ex officios were not registered. Even using this smaller figure for comparative purposes, one finds that the 1930 conference was almost two and a half times as large as the 1928 conference.

It is of interest to note in the above table that Independence gave a total of 2,132 registrations, and the rest of the State of Missouri 852 registrations. This makes a grand total for the State of 2,984.

The other States with 100 or more registrations were as follows:

Iowa .....	435	California .....	165
Kansas .....	316	Nebraska .....	150
Michigan .....	297	Ontario .....	127
Illinois .....	292	Colorado .....	118
Oklahoma .....	209	Ohio .....	113

The standing of California in this comparison is very interesting. It is demonstrative of the attractive power of this Centennial Conference that 165 persons came all the way from California to attend the conference. If one adds the 39 persons who came from Washington, the 21 persons who came from Oregon, and the 9 persons who came from British Columbia, one obtains a total of 234 who came from the west coast.

From the New England States, the Middle Atlantic, and the South Atlantic States a total of 180 came to attend the conference.

Ontario also contributed a large proportion of the conference delegates, ex officios, and visitors as evidenced by the grand total of 127. The total for Canada was 159.

Representatives were at the conference from eight foreign countries outside of the United States and Canada, making a grand total of 40 so enrolled.

The Centennial Conference, therefore, will go down in history as one of the best conferences which the church has had, not only in the matter of the quality of the class work, the exhibits, the special programs, but also in the matter of registrations and attendance. The figures which we have indicated give merely the total of those who registered at the conference. It is almost impossible to give the total number of those who were in attendance, but we would not be very far off in saying that 15,000 different persons attended the conference.

Respectfully submitted,

Historical Program for May

For Local Branches

Subject: The Church in Kirtland

The program for May celebrates the establishment, sojourn, and work of the church in Kirtland, Ohio. The movement of the church to that place occurred almost at once, following the organization. The building of the Temple was a great and consecrated task there accomplished—a task that has left to us today the temple as a sacred heritage. In that temple the ministry received an endowment of power, and in its schools they received preparation of systematic and godly education. From that temple they went out to do a most astounding piece of missionary work. They penetrated to many lands and converted tens of thousands of people within a comparatively short time. No period of our history is more worthy of study.

Program

Opening Hymn: "O God! give strength to all thy saints."
Hymnal 325.

Prayer.

Reading: Doctrine and Covenants 176:1: Vision given to Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon in Kirtland, Ohio.

Song: "The Spirit of God like a fire is burning." Hymnal 355.

Sermon or address: "The history of the church in Kirtland."
(May be illustrated if desired.)

Prayer: Thanksgiving for the heritage of the past.

Two-Scene Play: (1) "These signs shall follow." (2) "Building the walls of the temple." For the text of this play see Vision for May, under title, "Conversations."

Song: "You may sing of the beauty of mountain and dale."
Hymnal 168.

Prayer: For the forward movement of the work during 1930.

This series of historical programs should grow in interest as the year develops. They should come to a climax in the history of the Reorganization and the present forward movement of the church. We trust that the local churches are getting out of them all that is possible. May peace and light attend them in that work.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Let those who would die on the field of battle, give better proof of their patriotism and a higher glory to their country, by promoting fraternity and justice.—Franklin.

The Waste of War

The London Naval Conference has caused the world to think afresh of war and its futility as given unrestrained expression in our own experience in the most horrible, the most unspeakable carnage men have known—the World War. The calm assumption of the conference that war is not only possible but very probable has caused the hope of peace-minded men to waver. The ranks of those who doubt the probability of permanent peace in the parity of navies are growing.

For all interested in mathematical calculations we quote the following paragraph from the Young People's Leader:

The World War cost 30,000,000 lives and $400,000,000,000. The $400,000,000,000 could have provided a home site and furnished cottages worth $4,000 for every family in Great Britain, America, Canada, France, Germany, Belgium, and Russia. After carrying out this housing scheme, we could have supplied every city of 200,000 inhabitants in the countries mentioned with a $5,000,000 library, a $5,000,000 hospital, and a $10,000,000 university. Then we could have established a trust fund which, at five per cent interest, would have provided an annual subsidy of $1,000 a year each toward the salaries of 125,000 teachers and 125,000 nurses. After doing all this, there would still have been a surplus left equal to the total value of all the public and private property existing in France and Belgium when the war broke out in 1914.

This burden upon future generations! At this price glory! Glory? And yet people, nations, leaders go on thinking war!

As little children we "Christians" are taught that man is created in the image of God and given a place a little lower than the angels. In him is to be found the spark of divine inspiration which will enable him to grow, to lift up, to serve. Have we forgotten the teachings of our childhood? Why is it that through the agency of a few, multitudes may be led to degradation, wasting their powers and properties in ruthless struggle, brother against brother?

Studdert Kennedy, English chaplain who saw much front-line service in France, has summed up war waste very clearly in lines which appear in the International Journal of Religious Education:

Waste of Muscle, waste of Brain,
Waste of Patience, waste of Pain,

Waste of Manhood, waste of Health,
 Waste of Beauty, waste of Wealth,
 Waste of Blood, and waste of Tears,
 Waste of Youth's most precious years,
 Waste of Ways the Saints have trod,
 Waste of Glory, waste of God,— War!

Is it time to assert ourselves in the name of peace, to mark well our stewardship of time, health, strength, and all other precious things? To us is given the joy of attuning our mortal ears to the deeply moving, soul-stirring undertone of the universe so beautifully worded by the angels over Bethlehem's hillside: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

L. B. M.

Our Missionary Campaign

Our missionary program received great stress and was strongly supported during the business sessions of the General Conference. It is our duty, as well as our privilege, to take an active part in the missionary work of the church. It should be our pride that we belong to a church which has the finest of reasons for missionary activity. We wish to share the gospel with others. If we do not wish to share it, we do not yet understand its value, or we have not yet been redeemed from the selfishness and indifference of the worldly life.

The burden of taking the gospel to the world can not be carried alone by the conference appointees. In some branches the people do nothing, leaving everything to the missionary. And in some places the missionaries are expected to do the work that has been left undone by local officers. The missionaries must often build up the branches before they dare try to bring outsiders to the services.

The missionary program is broad. It must prepare the children of members for baptism. It must inform those who have been lately baptized, and bring them gradually to a better knowledge of the gospel. Much of this can be done locally, by local officers, leaving missionaries free to work among strangers.

Nothing makes so good a basis for missionary work as a thriving branch, where strangers may be brought to take part in good services. If the branch is evangelizing its own people, teaching them the history and principles of the church, friendly non-members can be brought in to learn about it. Many fine conversions result from this work.

These are plans that have been tested in practice. They have the approval of our church officers, some of whom urged them on the conference floor. For the benefit of the pastors and local leaders, plans have been worked out, programs arranged, and materials collected. Some of this material is appearing in the May issue of The Departments' Journal. Further material will appear in the June issue. The outlines of an educational program, beginning with the first Sunday in May and leading up to Decision Day, designed to inform and enlighten people within and without the church, will appear in these issues. Your branch and your congregation should be following this material in order to help carry on the work that is before us.

Registration Passed 6,000 Mark

The Registration Committee, which had in charge the records of the membership and visitors to the First Centennial General Conference of the church, made a report which was published on page 470, Saints' Herald for April 23. The total of 5,895 members and visitors to the conference who had registered was reported at that time. Since the report was submitted, a recount has disclosed error which is corrected in the accompanying letter from the committee:

A recount of the registration cards for the Centennial Conference disclosed an error in the totals reported in the table on page 470 of the Saints' Herald for last week. This error affects the number of registrations from the State of Iowa and also for the church as a whole. The correct figures are as follows:

For Iowa:
Straight Delegates .....	35
Delegate Ex Officios .....	41
Straight Ex Officios .....	38
Visitors .....	434
Total.....	548
For the entire Conference:
Straight Delegates .....	403
Delegate Ex Officios .....	272
Ex Officios .....	437
Hosts .....	1,896
Visitors .....	3,000
Grand Total.....	6,008

This brings the grand total of the registrations to over 6,000.

Out of the total registrations 55%, or 3,309, came from a distance of over twenty miles. The means of transportation for this group were as follows:

By auto .....	2,063
By train .....	1,011
By bus .....	233
By airplane .....	2
Total .....	3,309

In this latest report it will be noted there are recorded as members of the conference empowered to transact business for the church, at least 1,112 people. Be it remembered this is a report of those who were registered—those who took pains to see the committee and sign their names and pay their fees. It is not at all unlikely that there were many hundreds who did not make this effort. On two days, almost a week apart, from the vantage point a count during business session of those occupying seats set apart in the Auditorium for members of the legislative body, showed many more than were registered.

On Saturday and Sunday, April 19 and 20, hundreds of visitors from distances of twenty to one hundred and fifty miles came to the conference.

Only two of the five or more who visited the conference and who used the airplane as a means of transportation were registered either as members of or visitors to the conference. Only forty per cent of those known to the writer as having come to the conference by airplane are registered. One would think that as large a percentage using the airplane would register as of those using any other means of transportation. If this be true it would mean that more than eight thousand people from points distant more than twenty miles visited Independence and the Centennial Conference. To those who have tried to be close observers this figure seems conservative.

Add to this the hundreds who live in Kansas City and within the twenty-mile mark, and we can account for the twelve to fifteen thousand people who entered the Auditorium on the first Sunday of the conference, April 6.

R. J. L.

The Department of Religious Education

The separate organizations of the Department of Women, the Department of Recreation and Expression, and the Sunday School have been, so far as the general church is concerned, merged into one, to be known as the Department of Religious Education. By action of the General Conference on Saturday, April 12, 1930, this change towards which the church leaders have been working and planning, was officially recognized and approved.

A full explanation of this plan was published in its proposed and adopted form in the Departments' Journal of February, 1930. Briefer explanations may be found in the leaflet circulated at General Conference on April 12, of which more copies have been printed since.

In the issues of the Journal following February, discussions will be found concerning the actual operation of the plan. These will be found helpful to leaders attempting to work out the plan in their own branches.

The new plan, while it will not be forced on any branch, will enable the branch to coordinate all its activities under the direction of one responsible spiritual leader, the pastor. It will help to unify the church work, to expedite its administration, and to economize on operation. Further, it encourages the development of a flexible program and a reverent type of worship.

Independence and the Centennial Conference

Our community has just completed a splendid task. It has been done to its credit. The Centennial General Conference assembled in Independence the first few days of April, and was present in numbers probably of more than five thousand visitors to the city by April 6, the opening date.

Independence is not equipped with large hotels and numerous rooming houses. Being so close to that great and growing center of population, Kansas City, Missouri, up to the present capital has not seen fit to invest much in that line. It promises more in the near future.

But Independence people are Americans of a fine type, and they believe in their community and are proud of it. This is true, almost without exception. Hence, when demands for entertainment by the thousands of conference visitors were made known to the Saints of Independence and their friends and fellow citizens, doors swung open throughout the city, and wherever the visitors were located they were welcomed.

Public buildings, churches, and halls, in addition to those owned by the Reorganized Church, were tendered the conference authorities, and there can be no complaint at the accommodations. All were made comfortable.

Independence people came to the meetings and events which bore promise of interest to those outside the faith. Business and professional men were in evidence frequently. Large numbers attended such events as the oratorical contest, the production of The Course of Time, and the pageant, Fulfillment.

When the great numbers of visitors and the length of time of their visit is considered, surely the church abroad and locally is justified in extending thanks for the reception of the Centennial Conference by Independence people.

R. J. L.

Lord, help me to clear the windows of faith, darkened by the haste and heedlessness of modern life. May I feel anew the warmth and glory of divine presence in my soul. May that light enable me to see more clearly during the coming days God's purposes for his people and for me.—Alice Mae Burgess.

The New Outlook in Religious Education

The Centennial Conference, just past, will go down in history as one of the memorable events in connection with the growth of the Reorganized Church. It was a great event, marking the close of the first century of church history and forecasting the second century of progress.

A New Attitude towards Education

In no way was the conference more memorable than in the changing attitude manifested toward education as a phase of general church endeavor. The change was not marked, as though it had come overnight, nor as though education were to be accepted in the second century in the place of spiritual attainment. Almost the reverse is true. Indeed, it is just the change one would have anticipated who has been following the developing interest in education as a means of soul growth and efficiency in evidence throughout the church in recent months. The insistent demand of the church has been for trained, resourceful leaders made ready for valiant service "by study and also by faith."

It seems significant that as a part of otherwise heavily filled days, 1,350 attendants at the conference registered for regular class work in their choice of the thirty-six classes held in four sessions each forenoon. This meant a daily class attendance of some 4,000 or more, and a total schooling of over 40,000 hours at this conference, in definite religious educational means, materials and methods.

General Conference Approval

Quite in harmony with this response to an unparalleled opportunity to gain clarity of ideas, unity of objective, and a common understanding of means and methods of reaching the purposes of religious education in general and the goals of the church in particular, came the legislation of the conference in the practically unanimous vote of the great assembly when the recommendation of President F. M. McDowell, contained in his annual report, was adopted.

This recommendation asked for the approval of the plan developed by the heads of the departments in recent months to more closely unify the programs of the Sunday School, Recreation and Expression, and Women's Department into a single efficient program meeting adequately all the needs of local, district, and general work.

The text of the recommendation follows:

"That the vertical lines which have separated the Department of Sunday School, Department of Women, and Department of Recreation and Expression be erased, and that the activities of these departments be merged into one department, to be known as the Department of Religious Education. It is in accordance with the spirit of this recommendation that the work heretofore directed by these three departments shall not only be unified into one department, but that the work of this newly created department be closely integrated with the total program of the church.

"That the administration of this Department of Religious Education be left to a staff consisting of the following: A director of Religious Education, for the present a member of the First Presidency; an associate director; a supervisor of the adult division; a supervisor of the young people's division; a supervisor of the children's division, it being understood that these officers shall be ratified by the General Conference.

"That this staff shall work closely under the supervision of the First Presidency, and that it make every effort to correlate and integrate its activities with the activities of all other phases and departments of church endeavor.

"That this staff, working in cooperation with the general officials of the church, take such steps as are necessary to reorganize the work of religious education in stakes, districts, and branches, in accordance with the above plan, it being understood that these changes shall be brought about only as found wise and practicable and as conditions in the various stakes, districts, and branches would seem to justify.

"That this department be financed out of the general church budget, as are all other fields of general church endeavor."

The Proposed Plan Is Practicable

As explained in the report of the department to the conference, the proposed changes have been under consideration for years, have been tried out experimentally in a number of branches, and reported upon as giving splendid results. We have every confidence that our work of religious education can be greatly improved if more definitely unified and harmonized among its several parts and with the work of the priesthood and with other forces for good in a community.

The first essential is that those concerned with each phase of religious education, local or general, should seek to balance and coordinate their activity with all others responsible in any way for the work of the church in that field. This will require a unity of purpose, a common understanding, a common objective toward which all shall plan and for which all shall work. It will assume an unselfish service, as the greatest desire will be the accomplishment of the greatest good for all concerned.

It will be necessary for those who plan and lead in class study, lectures, discussions, dramatization, program building, conduct worship exercises, organize working projects, or engage in recreational activities, to consult the needs of the community, and the particular needs of our membership with a view to serving all who should be included in our activities program.

Careful thought must be given to relate all departmental activity, of whatever nature, to its effect upon the total program of the church being worked out by those in charge. Every exercise, class, or project should be chosen and conducted to render a most necessary service to the whole.

Stock must be taken of our available leaders and each be encouraged to work where he can serve best. Provision must be made for a training program to provide for the development of leaders in all lines of activity who may ever gain knowledges and skills for leadership in advance of the coming needs of a growing people.

A necessary balance will be kept if we unselfishly and conscientiously seek to place the emphasis in any working group on those activities most needed to give the richest and fullest development of the personality, the spiritual nature, and the physical welfare, individually and collectively, of those with whom and for whom we labor.

This, as will be seen, contemplates the fullest realization of the gospel life made possible by our organized effort.

The New Plan Anticipates Spiritual Growth

The recommended change in the New Plan of departmental organization, is an effort to provide for the above consideration. It anticipates a working force, either local, district, or general, with whom there is no selfish concern, no personal ambition to satisfy, no wish other than that right shall triumph and the greatest good possible be accomplished. It assumes, too, that our leaders are coming to have a comprehensive vision of the gospel and the goals of the church, that we are converted to its program, that we are seeking the highest possible training for our tasks, and that we enter upon our service with whole-hearted consecration.

Looking toward the Change

It is not intended to upset present organization where leaders are not ready for the change. It is strongly urged that in every branch, district, and stake, serious consideration be given to the new plan and the purpose it seeks to bring about. Until some change is officially made by the body served, it is imperative that present officials continue to serve in the fields of their present responsibility. If organized on the old plan, as most places are, let them with all earnestness seek to coordinate and harmonize their programs, working with the pastor or branch president to serve the best interests of the church. In some places special business meetings may be called to consider reorganization on the new plan, but we urge that they do not do so hastily. Undoubtedly, at the next regular business meeting of branch, district, or stake, some formal action will be taken looking toward the choosing of a single superintendent or director to serve as a central directive or coordinating agency to work closely with the branch, district, or stake presidency in carrying into effect a program of religious education, well balanced, and closely integrated with the total program of the church. When this is done it will not be necessary to choose in addition, separate superintendents of the Sunday School, Women's Department, and Recreation and Expression. It will be advisable to organize the church school with children's, young people's, and adult divisions, making provision for all the activities in each age-group which shall best meet their need and contribute to the success of the whole.

Further articles in the Saints' Herald will discuss pertinent problems of religious education, especially those arising out of the new plan. The Departments' Journal is the official exponent of religious education and will contain the most explicit helps possible for us to give. The Journal should be in the hands of every department worker, pastor, and church representative.

One Thing at a Time

The life of our day tempts us to diffuseness. We are tempted to have too many irons in the fire, and we don't beat any one of them to final "shape and use." Gentlemen, have a few well-designed and well-proportioned schemes. Don't lose yourself in dreams. Lay your hands upon a few things, and hold on to them like grim death, and make them pay daily tribute to the Lord your God. Master something. Finish something, or be still working away at it when the Lord promotes you to higher service. That was the Master's way.—Doctor J. W. Jowett.

The Goodness of God to Me

I would read from the 16th chapter of Mark, commencing at the 14th verse:

Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen. And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe. In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover. So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God. And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen.

I deem it a great privilege that has been afforded me this evening, the privilege of speaking to you in one of the churches of Zion. In harmony with the thoughts that I shall present, I shall make use of the 5th verse of the 1st Thessalonian letter:

For our gospel came not unto you in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance.

I have not organized my thoughts for this evening. The Saints have been so kind that it has been almost impossible to have a quiet time for sufficient meditation, to organize one's thoughts to any great extent. And as I believe it has been announced that the other churches in Zion would have speakers talk along the line of the Australasian mission of the church, and seeing that I would have privilege at the General Conference of speaking at the Stone Church on the 17th of the month of April on the subject, "The church in Australia," I thought that perhaps it would be well for me to speak somewhat concerning my experiences in this great latter-day work. The story I believe to be a very interesting one, for the love of God has been so miraculously demonstrated to me from time to time that I feel it my duty as long as I have strength, to do my very best to extol his name, and the name of his dear Son, Jesus Christ.

A Mother's Influence

One thing that I have to be greatly thankful for is that I was blessed by having a godly mother; one who, though she had not so much as heard the name Latter Day Saint, and though she had no encouragement, nor any assistance in the little country place in which she lived, took particular pains, day by day, to train her children in the ways of godliness and righteousness. And for a great many years, until the members of her family were sufficiently old to carry on the work she laid down, she kept a Sunday school in the country district where she was, and gathered the members of every Protestant denomination together to have part in her Sunday school. When I think of it, from time to time, I think how wonderful her endurance and her patience must have been, under such discouraging circumstances as oftentimes prevailed.

It was through the efforts of my mother, too, that we had even a day school in the way-back place where I was reared. But I do not want you to understand that all the Australians have come from such way-back places as I have done, for such is not true. Of course you understand that Australia is a very large place, consisting, as it does, of over 3,000,000 square miles of territory, being about 4,000 square miles, larger, even, than the United States of America; and Sydney, the largest city in Australia, has a population of over 1,000,000 inhabitants.

But my parents lived in an isolated part of the country. The nearest town to there in the State of Victoria is about sixty miles away, and very difficult to reach, while the nearest town in the adjoining State of New South Wales is ten miles distant. A very small town it was, and that was the only town I had ever seen until I was eighteen years of age.

I left school at the age of thirteen years and some months, traveling two days' journey by horseback into a warmer climate of some three thousand feet lower altitude. I may say that the place where my parents resided, and still reside, in their isolation, is of a high altitude, and I know what snow and ice are, whereas many of the people of Australia have not seen such.

For several years I worked about fifty miles from home, at farming and clearing. Part of the time I was living alone. But at eighteen years of age, one of my brothers having preceded me to the far-distant State of Queensland, in the northern part of Australia, I decided to go there also.

As my parents did not object at the time, I took it for granted that they would not mind my going, and so I journeyed up the mountain, this time by bicycle, climbing almost the whole time over rugged paths, to the old homestead. From there I cycled two days more to where I saw a train for the first time. I saw quite enough of it before I was through with my journey, for when the journey was completed I found myself one thousand seven hundred miles from home, and I had been so sick all the way I feared I never would be able to return home again. However, the time came when the Lord demonstrated that his hand had been leading and directing right from the very beginning.

I had been so trained by my mother that though I was environed by various unfavorable environments, as far as spiritual life was concerned, I did not deviate very far from what I had been taught, so that I am glad still to be able to say that I do not know the taste of liquor, nor have I ever used tobacco.

I would encourage all mothers to spare no effort with regard to the training of their boys and girls, for it certainly stands by those boys and girls when they are surrounded by trials and temptations in later life.

Gets Contact with Latter Day Saints

In Queensland I worked for a time with my brother, and his partner, in farm work, but after a time I set out on my own, doing contract work, and growing corn on rather a larger scale. While in that vicinity I came in contact with a family of Latter Day Saints who had not been very active in church work for a considerable time, because of the fact that they had been long isolated from church privileges. But the head of the home was an elder of the church, a hard-working countryman, a Swede by nationality—by the way, the father of A. L. Loving, who has for some time been doing missionary work in this country.

Becomes Interested in Literature

One day while at their place I picked up a book, and there I saw something which attracted my interest. I asked the privilege of reading that book, feeling at the same time I knew sufficient about religion to be able to find fault with this new-fangled idea, as I thought it to be, for I had heard a little about the Latter Day Saints, and what I had heard was not at all favorable.

To my great surprise, the lady of the home expressed great delight. I couldn't understand why she should express such delight that I was going to read a book of the church. I have since found, after fifteen years of missionary work, that it is a very difficult thing to induce people to read the literature of our church, and I understand now why she was so pleased when I asked the privilege of reading that book.

My mind had not been trained in the way of study from the time I had left school to that time, which was about six years later, for during that time I had known nothing but hard and long hours of work. For that reason I could not grasp things very quickly, but nightly I would read a little from that book, entitled The Fall of Babylon, written by Elder W. J. Haworth, at present missionary in charge of Australasia. He is the father of my wife. I had not met him at that time, and I somehow had the thought that the writer of the book I was reading was dead years before.

As I read further and further, instead of being able to find fault with the principles, I found to the contrary that the religion to which I had adhered was lacking when compared with the Scriptures. My caution was so great that I would not admit very much when asked concerning my interest in what I was reading, for in my mind I had it that there were to be false prophets in the last days, who would deceive, if it were possible, the very elect.

Finds Harmony with the Scriptures

I continued my investigation, but came to that point where I found that if the Latter Day Saints were deceivers and false teachers it would take more than my wisdom to discern it, because the more I studied, the more I found them to be in harmony with the scriptural church, established by Jesus Christ himself. I came across the passage where the young man, Joseph Smith, was impressed by that scripture which he read, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who upbraideth not, but giveth to all men liberally, and it shall be given him," and I had sufficient faith to put that to the test. So I began to ask of God to make it plain to me whether or not this people were his people, or if they were deceivers, false teachers. The more I prayed and studied, the more convinced I became.

Finally I decided that baptism by immersion was the right thing. I had never been so baptized. I had never seen a baptism performed by immersion; had never before heard of such; but when I made that decision, I had to fight a big battle within myself. Something had come under my notice which caused me to fear, and that was this: that in this church, restored in these last days, God chose his own ministry, and by revelation called them to respective offices of priesthood in his church, and holding on to the idea of ministers of missionary type, not having had any branch experience in the church, I thought of the ministers of the church only as those going out without purse or scrip, as the ministers of Christ's church in the early days, and this was the difficulty: I feared that if God chose the weak and the foolish ones, he might possibly choose me. I thought he should know better than that, but I had that fear.

Prays over Baptism

And so, in my prayers, in the lonely place where I was camped in a tent, where the wild dogs would be howling around me during the night, I asked the Lord that if I should be baptized—for I desired to be baptized in his church to keep his commandments—he would not call me to be a minister for his church. No sooner, however, would I ask that petition of the Lord than these words would come to my mind:

For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called, but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise. God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty, and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are; that no flesh should glory in his presence.

But again I would say, The Lord knows I could never preach. Nor was that the only reason I was unwilling to be a preacher if the Lord should call me. For, while I felt extreme diffidence and backwardness, there was another reason: I had cherished ambitions to make money, and though I did not think at the time that I was having any particular success financially, many times since I have marveled that with the wages as low as they were at that time, I was able to have saved up a few hundred pounds by the time I was twenty-one. I was not willing to make the sacrifice which I believed would be required of one who should go out as a preacher for the Master.

Shrinks from the Ministry

So again I would pray, Lord, I want to do thy will, but I trust you will not call me to be a minister for your church. Then there came to me how that Moses told the Lord that he was slow of speech, and the Lord corrected Moses and said, Who hath made man's mouth; and Jeremiah, who complained that he was but a child, but the Lord said, Thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak. And there came to my mind another thought, so I prayed, "but if it should be thy will to call me to be a preacher, wilt thou change my desires so that I will be willing to do whatever you might require of me."

With that prayer, and believing that God would answer it, I decided to give my name for baptism. But the first time I went to where this family of Latter Day Saints were, while I was desirous all the time of speaking the desire of my heart concerning baptism, I was disappointed in myself to find that I had gone back to my camp and had not mentioned what I had desired. The following week-end I went with the same desire, and determination to speak the desire of my heart, and again I went back to my camp, feeling a little worse than the previous time, feeling almost in despair at my being so cowardly and not able to express the desires of my heart. I believe the third time the same thing happened, and I began to feel very miserable to think I had not the courage to do what I had desired to do, to ask of these people concerning baptism.

Finally I mustered up the courage, and when I mentioned it Elder Loving said to me, "You know you will have to count the cost." My caution immediately came into play again, and I wondered if after all I had made a mistake. What could this mean?—I would have to count the cost? I kept my feelings to myself, and upon the 13th day of July, 1913, we repaired to a distant part of the country, and I was baptized.

Overlooks Laying on of Hands

Somehow, I had overlooked the part of the laying on of hands for the bestowal of the Holy Spirit, and was extremely disappointed that I had no special experience at the baptismal service. I reasoned with myself: "I have not felt any greater experience than when I was confirmed in the Church of England, nor have I had any greater experience spiritually than when I took the sacrament with the Methodist people; nor when I enjoyed sitting under the voice of the Presbyterian preachers." And while the other people were rejoicing, on their way back to the home, I was sadly disappointed at heart.

But a little later arrangements were made for the confirmation. Two children were baptized from that family I have mentioned, and they also were confirmed. As soon as the hands of Elder Loving were placed upon my head, the Spirit of God came and filled that room where we were assembled, and permeated my being to such an extent that I could not feel my flesh. He began to speak in an unknown tongue, all the while this wonderful power overshadowing me, and then came the interpretation to that unknown tongue. It began:

Thus saith the Lord unto thee: In the still watches of the night I have heard thy prayers, and thy supplications have come up before me. Verily I say unto thee, I have led thee by the hand, even from thy childhood unto this place, that thou mayest receive my gospel, for thou art of the house of Joseph, thine ancestor. And verily, I say unto thee, If thou art faithful thou shalt carry my gospel unto thy kindred, and shall bring many souls unto me, for I will enlarge thine understanding concerning my law, and the gifts of my gospel shall be as a lamp unto thy feet, and a light in thy pathway. But cast not thou my gifts before the unbeliever, for they are sacred. Verily I say unto thee, be thou steadfast, for trials shall come upon thee, and shall hover around about thee, even as an exceeding dark cloud; but by the prayer of faith they shall be dispersed and thou shalt come forth as a bright and shining star in my kingdom, and thy name shall be written in the Lamb's Book of Life, and shall not be erased.

Ambition Is Changed by Operation of Spirit

Oh, dear brothers and sisters, many times since that occasion these wonderful promises have stood by me when I would have despaired of even being able to continue in this life. But at that particular time my experience was so great, the love of God was so manifest to me, that I could not give up. I had always believed God loved me, and loved all his people, but never had I realized to what extent he really did love us until that occasion. I found my whole disposition changed, just as literally as any prayer could possibly be answered. Instead of not being willing to make the necessary sacrifices, instead of not being willing to face an audience, my whole desire then was to tell the gospel story to all to whom I might have the privilege, trusting God for future blessing I might stand in need of from time to time, even to the extent that I had to exercise patience until such time as I was ordained to go forth in missionary endeavor. Day by day, while I was swinging the ax in the timbers of Queensland, or while planting corn, or while at any other kind of work, I had scriptural texts which I was memorizing all day long, in an effort to be prepared when I should be ordained to the ministry, of which the Lord had spoken to me.

Immediately I began writing to my people. I was the youngest of the family. My older brothers and sisters had all scattered widely in the various States, being hundreds of miles apart, there being only my mother and father and one sister in the place where I had been reared.

To my disappointment, answers came back to my letters, upbraiding me, expressing great sorrow that I had left the good old way in which I had been so carefully trained by my mother. Ministers of various denominations were called to the assistance of my brothers and sisters in various parts of Australia. Immediately, in my zeal I would turn to the scriptures and answer those letters. Still I seemed to make no impression upon them.

Carries Gospel to His Parents

At last I decided I would make the effort and return home to my parents, thinking if I could only tell them what I had experienced, perhaps they would then believe. To my sad disappointment, they would not listen to me, after my traveling that long distance. So disappointed was I that I soon returned to Queensland, wondering if perhaps what the Lord had said had now been fulfilled, in that I had taken the gospel to my kindred. And I wondered if they would be condemned for not having received it. But I continued to write to them about the church and its wonderful power and blessings. Apostle Gomer T. Griffiths came to Australia, and while in the vicinity where we were, the Lord revealed to him that I should be ordained to the office of priest.

Ordained to the Ministry

When he laid his hands upon my head, by the Spirit he said to me, "Be thou patient with thy people, and thou wilt yet see them all in the church." I endeavored to exercise more patience.

It was not very long—it seemed a long time to me, but in January, 1915, not eighteen months from the time I had been baptized, I went out as a missionary, having received a conference appointment. I was accompanied by Brother Cyrus Loving. Neither of us held the Melchisedec priesthood. Elder W. J. Haworth, who was at that time in temporary charge of the Australasian mission, made it a matter of prayer as to the wisdom of two priests going together, not having authority to lay on hands in confirmation should any success attend their efforts. He was answered to the effect that success would attend our efforts; that in due time he would be called to our assistance, and that when that time should come I should be ordained an elder. So we went. We began to preach in the country schoolhouse where I had received the latter part of my schooling. Quite a number came, and from quite a distance, to hear what strange thing I had to say.

Experiences of Early Ministry

I may just tell one little episode, to show the zeal with which I entered into the work, though I do not believe I was always wise. Before my efforts at preaching, I had the privilege of attending the Church of England service, and I stood at the door and handed several tracts to every member of that congregation, and to the minister himself, as they came out of the door. Before that, though, I had been praying. While they were praying from their prayer book, I was praying that they, in due time, might receive the light which I had received, which prayer was literally fulfilled in due time, for I was later privileged to baptize the greater part of that congregation. Meanwhile Brother Cyrus Loving was called to another field, and I was left alone.

I occupied every building I could engage, and many times my voice would give out and my throat would be very sore. I got my parents praying about the matter. I got them studying their Bibles. One day father looked up—he had not been in the habit of reading his Bible—he had not lived up to religious principles as mother had done; but one day he looked up from his Bible and said, "Mother, I don't know what you think about it, but I have come to the conclusion that our boy is right, and we have been in darkness all these years. I, for one, am going to be baptized."

Parents Enter Church as His First Converts

You can imagine the joy that came to my soul. I spoke to mother to ascertain what her feelings were in the matter, but being more cautious and deep, she hardly expressed herself. I knew that that was a good sign. I thought she must have been feeling the same way or she would most certainly have expressed herself. So when father came to be baptized, mother came, too. So mother and father were the first two I had the privilege of baptizing into this church.

Others began to come, and they were also baptized, until quite a fine branch was organized in that place. Elder Haworth was called to my assistance because I had not the authority of laying on hands for confirmation. He ordained me to the office of elder, and together we confirmed a number of people, baptized quite a number of others while he was still there, and also confirmed them. With all the opposition received, one way or another those days, and with the little experience I had had, I yet challenged practically every minister of every denomination who gave us any opposition to discuss matters openly. Strange to say, such challenges were very seldom accepted. When they were, it always turned out to the honor and glory of God through his true church, not because of any power within me, but because of the power of God in fulfillment of his promise that he would enlarge my understanding concerning his law.

My brothers and sisters in the various States became interested, and one by one were baptized until all, as the promise said, were members of the church. My dear old grandmother, seventy-nine years of age, was baptized, also, and from that time until the time of her death last year, was as faithful as a young member could be.

With such blessings that have come to me from time to time—and I have mentioned only a few—you can understand why I have strong faith in this great latter-day work. During my experience as a missionary for fifteen years, I have found that every promise of God, without one single exception, is literally fulfilled when we do our part. That is the wonderful thing about this work; the power of God is in it. We do not only say to people that it is their privilege to receive the Holy Ghost, by obedience to the commandments of God, but we know, by actual experience, that they do receive that power, and it has been my privilege, upon more than one occasion, to witness even the fact of children of tender age experiencing the power of God when the hands were laid upon their heads in confirmation. To have seen so many brought into this work, and to know that away back in Australia, so many fine people have been brought to such a degree of rejoicing causes my heart to be glad.

Has Faith in Church Leaders

My faith is strong in the leadership of this church. If the leaders at any time should prove unfaithful, I have faith that God will make such changes as lead should be desirable; but I have confidence in the leaders of this church. I do not believe, as some do, that they are responsible for the divisions that may have been in the church. I believe that these divisions are the outcome of the weaknesses of men and women who became dissatisfied. The same tendency is to be found everywhere in the world in these days. The disposition of people is to separate themselves from law and order, and to dictate their own course in life. The spirit of bolshevism throughout the world, which seems to be the spirit of Gog and Magog, gathering the nations of the earth together to battle, naturally may be expected to appear to some extent in the ranks of the church. Naturally, the Adversary of souls would not sit quietly by and see God's work progressing without making every effort in his power to disrupt, to divide, and to cause all the misery that he possibly can.

To my mind, the church of God, at the present time, is in a greater way of progress than it has ever been before, and I believe that I have every good reason for feeling that way. So far as people saying they do not enjoy the good old times they used to be concerned, my experiences are very, very different; for right along the way until the present time I have experienced that God's hand is guiding and directing in this work.

Seven years ago the spirit of prophecy told us that we would be called upon to come to this great land of America. Concerning the last place of our appointment in South Australia, eight years ago, before that appointment was made the Lord revealed it to me that I would be appointed there, but I had never thought of such. The last sacrament Sunday, before leaving there, the Lord again spoke of my service during those years, giving loving promise concerning my blessing in coming to this land, and emphasized his love still further by extending his gracious promise even into the next life. So, with the Apostle Paul, I am able to say, "For our gospel came not in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."

This is a great work, and it is marvelous to us from Australia that so many Latter Day Saint people can be met, everywhere around. From place to place where we have been, we find ourselves continually meeting with Latter Day Saints. What a glorious privilege it is! And when people speak to me about the division that has occurred, and which they believe still exists, there comes to my mind the thought that the most wonderful thing is that so many people can live together and associate together so often and so closely, and be united to the extent that the people of this church are. For I know something of human nature. I know something of my own human weaknesses, and human tendencies, and I know how hard it is for men and women to associate closely together and to agree. It can not be done apart from the spirit of regeneration, and were it not for the Spirit and power of God among this people today, I am sure that we could not have felt such a degree of spiritual unity as we have felt in your midst; as we have enjoyed from the very time that we stepped on to this great land of America.

Therefore, throughout my experience I have found that the words of the Lord are true concerning this church, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, when you have love one toward another." I have enjoyed that love of the people of this church everywhere. My experience has been this, and I am glad it is true, the better acquainted I become with the members of this church, the more I learn to love them. That has been my experience throughout the years. When we first meet with brothers and sisters they might not just appeal to us. There may be something in their personality which seems adverse to us. But when we get to know them, we find invariably our love becomes intensified with that closer acquaintance. Is not that a precious fact? So I haven't any doubts but that our associations with you in this great land, wherever we may be, shall be happy associations. If your associations had not been happy in the past, there would not be so many gathering themselves together in these various church buildings in Zion, and week by week the power of God is working upon the hearts of his people, and the fellowship we are enjoying by reason of the Spirit of God working in the way of regeneration, is keeping us together. May God help us to overcome all those weak tendencies which would go towards dividing, and by his Spirit may we be strongly united that the great program of the church may yet be realized.

Like the children of Israel of old we have, comparatively, been wandering around in the wilderness as yet, but may we soon enter right into the promised land. In the stewardship conditions which have so long been proclaimed by the leaders of this church, we ask you not to fear, brothers and sisters, to make every sacrifice that the law may require of you. I have put it to the test. Thousands of others have tested it out, and there is not a single promise which God has made but will be literally fulfilled, when we exercise the necessary faith, and do what the law requires of us. May God help us to do so.

God Is Depending on Us

A sermon by J. F. Martin, delivered at the Liberty Street Church, Independence, Missouri, April 6, 1930. Reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

The subject which has been announced is "The unfinished task." The scripture reading is from the 37th Psalm:

Fret not thyself because of evildoers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity: For they shall soon be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb. Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed. Delight thyself also in the Lord; and he shall give thee the desires of thine heart. Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass: And he shall bring forth thy righteousness as the light, and thy judgment as the noonday. Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for him: fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass. Cease from anger, and forsake wrath: fret not thyself in any wise to do evil. For evildoers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth.

I would like to add to that a verse or two from the 18th chapter of Matthew:

At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven? And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them, and said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

Now, there are two verses I desire to use as texts. One is the 5th verse of the 37th Psalm, which is as follows: "Commit thy way unto the Lord. Trust also in him, and he shall bring it to pass." And the other is the 3d verse of the 18th chapter of Matthew: "Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."

In the home of Charles Dickens, travelers are shown the unfinished manuscripts of Edwin Drood, just as the author left it. So, also, are travelers shown the unfinished paintings of Angelo, Stewart, and others. Now these unfinished works are not pathetic, because they stand amid a great array of finished masterpieces. What need we care for unfinished Edwin Drood when we have David Copperfield, Dombey and Son, Oliver Twist, and all the others? The unfinished work of a rich life is to be expected, for the joy of labor will keep a man at his task until his hand drops and his eye closes. The thing that hurts is not the unfinished work but the unfinished life. Let me illustrate by giving you a glimpse of some pictures from life.

In the first picture we see two parents of a fair young boy, with doctor and nurse at the bedside. How anxiously they watch the movements of the doctor! How eagerly they question the nurse! Money without restriction is at their command, and the doctors know that anything that science has discovered is at their beck and call. They do their best, but when their best is done the boy is dead, and they lay his young form away in a handsome casket to await the resurrection morn. "Unfinished" is written across the picture.

In the next picture we see a ruddy young graduate of Yale on his way to Southern New England—not to barter and buy, but to suffer and die. Standing in the clear, crisp air of a September morn and looking bravely at his captors and to the clear sky beyond, as though speaking to generations yet unborn, he says, "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country." He is but twenty-one years of age; forty-nine years short of the allotted threescore years and ten. "Unfinished" is written across that picture.

In the next picture we see another son of Yale, who died eight years before Nathan Hale was born. He loses his father at nine, and his mother at fourteen, and goes to a consumptive's grave at twenty-nine. Carey, the missionary, spent forty years in India; Moffatt, a missionary, spent fifty-three years in Africa, and Patton spent fifty years in New Hebrides. Zeisberger spent sixty years among the Indians; but David Brainerd was given but four years among the American Indians before he was shunted off by consumption. "Unfinished" is written across this picture.

In another picture we see a beautiful little girl lying sick of a fever, her little doll clasped tightly in one hand, and her mother looking tenderly at both, and praying the dear Father above that he will spare her little doll mother and that her own future may be brightened by the sunshine of her eyes and the pressure of her arms. But like many another little fairy of a humble little home, she goes out in the light of an evening star, leaving the home in darkness and tears. "Unfinished" is written across this picture.

And one more picture. Over yonder, far beyond the shriek and roar of shrapnel and cannon, away back in the early Christian century, there lives a monk in a cell, made by nature's own hand in the side of a mountain. He has not gone there to speak to the ages but to live a life of rigorous self-denial, and undisturbed communion with the Infinite. His days and nights are as unvaried as the returning sunshine and the evening stars. Day by day, night by night, he chants his songs and recites his prayers, now bending his deep-focused eyes over his secret parchment, now closing it and brooding upon its thoughts. Buried to the world before he dies. Contributing nothing; exacting nothing; as unproductive in his day and generation as the little girl who died with her doll in her arms. Given hands to work, and feet to run, and eyes to cheer, but none of it done. "Unfinished" is written across the picture.

And so, from every nook and corner of the world, we hear the cry "Unfinished," "Unfinished," just as "Unclean, unclean," came from the lepers of old. Sad indeed would this world be if there were no remedy for the unclean and no satisfaction for the unfinished, but He who knoweth our frames and remembereth that while we are but dust, we are also just a little lower than the angels, has made abundant provision for both; for the unclean are made as pure as a newborn babe, and the unfinished is made as complete as a cathedral a thousand years in building.

It is the belief of your speaker that somewhere, somehow, sometime, every unfinished work will be finished. Now to illustrate:

The fair young boy who died in that luxurious home almost before his life had started was Leland Stanford. His life was not only unfinished but hardly begun. The hand of death cut the thread almost before the spool began to unwind. But love is stronger than death, and what death left unfinished love completed, for shortly after the death of Leland Stanford, his parents dedicated their wealth to the memory of their boy. They erected the Leland Stanford University at a cost of $40,000,000, in memory of the fair young boy they had laid away. Death had robbed the boy of about 20,000 days, and his parents laid down about $2,000 for every one of those days, and dedicated it to the education of the youth of the West. Death left his work unfinished, but God is finishing the unfinished, for while Leland Stanford no longer walks upon the earth in person, yet in spirit and influence he is going about from home to home, city to city, village to village, calling men to better living. I repeat, God is finishing the unfinished.

And that ruddy young graduate of Yale, who gave his life for his country on that cool September morn, rises from an obscure patriot to a place among the immortals of this country, mightier dead than alive. On the spot where he died stands the heroic figure of Nathan Hale, reminding the passing thousands that the sufferings of this world are as nothing compared to the glory that shall be revealed in us. The college which sent him out honors his memory. The schools of the land teach each generation the story of his life, and the valor of his heart. When Nathan Hale looked out that last morning upon his beloved land, his work was unfinished, but God is finishing the unfinished.

And that other son of Yale, who slept out in the woods beside his horse when he had one, and often walked ten and twenty miles to preach to the Indians, and died of consumption at twenty-nine, left a story that is growing sweeter with the years. Although he left only a heavy gray coat, a compass, and a few manuscripts as a material legacy, he left a life of devotion that has been an inspiration to thousands; yea, millions. Carey, the missionary, was influenced by his life and went out to India, and was able to have the Bible translated into fifty different dialects and distributed among 300,000,000 people. Others caught the fire from Carey and carried it on and on.

David Brainerd's influence is having its sway in the world, and much good is being done for the cause of humanity because David Brainerd lived. Shall we say that he lived in vain? When he passed out from this sphere of action, his work was unfinished, but God is finishing the unfinished.

And the little girl who died from the fever and who was carried to her grave while the rose was still in the bud, lived long enough to make an indelible impression upon a schoolboy companion. Trapping him one day in a spelling contest, she lingered after school to tell him she was sorry she had spelled the word. That boy was John Greenleaf Whittier, and after forty years have passed away, and he is slowly going down the western slope of life's long hill, he remembers the little girl, and he reminiscently says to himself, "Still memory to a gray-haired man, That sweet child face is showing; Dear girl, the grasses on her grave have forty years been growing. He lives to learn in life's hard school, How few who pass above him, Lament their triumph and his loss, Like her, because they love him." So we see that the little girl did not die in vain. Ah, no. She still lives through the work of John Greenleaf Whittier. Her influence is being carried on and on, and thousands today, a hundred years after she died, are being inspired to better things because she lived. When she passed out of this world in the springtime of her life, her work was unfinished, but God is finishing the unfinished.

And that monk who lived and died in that cell, never going out into the world, or bearing any of the world's burdens, lived long enough to write a song. It was written in Latin, and was intended only for his own personal devotion, but a thousand years after the song was written, it was found and translated into English, and today it is one of the beautiful songs of our English hymnology. God finished the unfinished.

And so, friends, I repeat, that I believe that somewhere, somehow, sometime, every good work that is well started, will be finished to the good of humanity. And that reminds me that the greatest work of all time was started many, many years ago, and to us has been given the task of helping to push it on toward completion.

Nearly two thousand years ago there appeared upon earth a great spiritual leader whose life and work were destined to revolutionize the social and moral standards of the world.

Coming into the world a child of humble birth, he grew in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man until he was acknowledged the Only Begotten Son of God and sent forth to establish his kingdom upon earth. But cruel hands put him to death before his work was finished, and it was left to his disciples to carry on toward completion. Yea, my beloved Saints, he is depending upon us to help him finish the task.

I would like to bring to you at this time a little story which illustrates how the Master is depending upon his disciples to help carry on his work. A legendary story is told of a conversation that occurred in heaven, when Jesus returned from his work upon earth, and had ascended into glory. He was met by one of his archangels there, and the archangel said, "Where have you been?" Jesus answered, "I have been down on the earth." "What were you doing there?" asked the angel. "I established my church upon the earth," he answered. "What provision did you make to carry on your work there?" "Well," returned the Christ, "I selected and ordained certain men to continue my work, to carry it toward completion." "But," the angel said, "suppose these men fail you. What plan do you have then?" Jesus replied, "I have no other plan. I am counting on them." Ah, friends, that is true. The Lord has no other plan. He is counting on us. He has faith in us. He laid the foundation. He established his church, and he left a part of it for us to carry on; to push toward completion. He started a mighty work, and his first disciples worked nobly to push it on toward completion; but soon there came the dark and gloomy days of the apostasy. And for a long time the world was in spiritual darkness. But at last the cloud was lifted. An angel of the Lord appeared and brought the long-lost message of salvation to Joseph Smith, and, through him, to all the world. Once again the task was given to men to establish the kingdom of God upon the earth and bring to the world the solution to its social, its economic, and its religious problems, and that task, dear friends, is yours and mine. If it is still unfinished, you and I have the responsibility of helping to carry it toward completion.

But what things shall be necessary if we are to succeed in carrying it on toward completion? In this connection I am reminded of an article that I read the other day entitled "Raising spiritual moles." The writer told of a little experience he had had one day while working in the garden. He said he was spading in the garden and chanced, as he turned up a spadeful of dirt to notice a beautiful mole. He described it as sleek, fat, well fed, but blind to the beauties of the world around it. As he was admiring it, a dog suddenly jumped forward and snatched it in his teeth, and in a moment it was all over. He said that as he looked at that mole, he thought how much it was like the church. The church, in appearance, is very beautiful. The modern church is indeed an elegant structure, and on Sunday morning it is surrounded by big, expensive cars, out of which step spiritual moles—sleek, well-fed, and satisfied, who come to church to hear the music and to bear with the sermon, and then hasten away to the "big eats," and to a drive in the afternoon, and possibly a party at night. Spiritual moles. And what is the cause of it? This writer gave three things as causes for this condition. First he said: Our children have almost no spiritual training at home; they come to Sunday school with little or no idea of what it is all about. And these little moles grow up to be big moles, and they come to church on Sunday morning in their fine big cars to hear the music and salve their consciences, and to please the preacher sometimes, and then hasten away to the "big eats" and to a day of entertainment, running anywhere from a big dinner and drive and a snooze in the afternoon to bridge and a dance or show in the evening. If you should ask them what it is all about, they could not tell you.

In fact, if you should ask most church members today if they have ever been "converted," ever been "born again," and have ever had the "witness of the Spirit," if they do not laugh in your face it will only be out of consideration and pity for you.

Now that is saying something pretty strong, I know, but it is a fact. How many have had the testimony of the Spirit? How many can say they have really been born again? How many can say that they are really converted? Well, one reason why they can not is, as this writer said, that our children are not getting the training in the home that they should have. Another reason he gives is that the ministry itself knows too little of the things of the Spirit. It is true that they have been well schooled in a knowledge of things about Jesus Christ, but how many of them know Jesus Christ? I may know much about Jesus Christ, but not know Jesus Christ. Is he my daily companion? When I retire to the place of prayer, do I feel that Jesus is near; that I can almost reach out and grasp his hand? Do I know Jesus Christ? I am afraid that many of the ministry of today do not know Jesus Christ. They know but little of the things of the Spirit. It is true that they can lift you to great heights with their powers of eloquence. It is true that they may know all of theologies and isms of the day, perhaps, and can discuss them with intelligence, but how many of them can fire you with a desire to live in harmony with the teachings of the Master? How many of them can stir up within you a desire to do the will of the Almighty God? How many of them can send you away from the church with your souls burning with the desire for spiritual things? One of the troubles today, then, is that many of the ministry have not yet been converted; have not had the witness of the Spirit, and can not carry that influence to the hearts of others.

A third reason for this development of spiritual moles is that many are content with substitutes. Give a church a preacher who is a combination of Irish orator and financial wizard, who can tell a good story and "get the boys to come across," who has sense enough to "lay off" the booze question, and not mention gambling and dancing and divorce, and back him up with a good choir and a director of religious education, and a few consecrated women to visit the aged and to instruct the children, and the church is more than satisfied. It seems to me that as these spiritual moles continue on with their contented burrowing, sleek, well-fed, comfortable, but blind to the light of the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ; with the home indifferent, the Sunday school unready, and the ministry unwilling to preach without fear the whole gospel of Jesus Christ, that somehow we can hear a voice say, "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye can in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven."

Are we raising spiritual moles? One of the things that we shall need if we are to finish the task he has given us, is the spirit of true love. I am going to tell you a little story to illustrate what I mean by that. There was a certain surgeon who had a reputation in his community of being one of the greatest surgeons of the day, but who rather prided himself on the fact that he always got a big fee for his work, and he boasted that he had never done any work for nothing. But somehow he was persuaded to join one of the business clubs of the city, the ideal of which was service to the community, and eventually he caught the spirit of the club and began to see that he had not occupied his time as well as he might. He had not gained from the world the happiness that he believed was in the world; and so he decided he would try serving others. He sent a note to the club saying he had determined to give one day each week to charity; that any person in need of his scientific knowledge and skill might come to his office on that day and he would be glad to take care of him. So the club sent to him several who were in need of surgical care.

One of the first cases sent him was a little boy, four years old, blind from birth. His mother was with him. The surgeon's heart was touched by the need of that boy, and he used his best powers in an attempt to restore the boy's sight. Finally the day came when the truth would be known as to whether the boy's sight would be restored. They were in a dark room, and the surgeon was anxiously but hopefully removing the bandages from the boy's eyes. Finally the last bandage was removed, and the boy looked up and experienced for the first time the blessing of sight. Suddenly the boy looked up; he ran over to his mother crying, "Oh, mamma, I didn't know you were so beautiful." When the mother recovered from her joy, she said, "Sonny, what would you like to give the doctor for what he has done for you?" All the little boy had in this world was a lone Teddy Bear. His mother was a servant in one of the homes near there. She couldn't provide the little fellow with very much, so all he had was a little Teddy Bear with both eyes gone and just one leg left. The little fellow looked down at his Teddy Bear, then at the doctor, and then at his mother. Finally he walked over to the doctor and placed the Teddy Bear in the doctor's hand. He gave him all he had.

After they had gone, the great surgeon sat there with tears trickling down his cheeks, looking at the Teddy Bear. Some days afterward a friend went into his office, and there, upon a rich pedestal, in a glass case, he saw that Teddy Bear, and the doctor said that was the largest fee he had ever received. The fees he had received before in the way of money had warmed the palm of his hand, but the Teddy Bear was the fee that warmed his heart. Why? He had given himself in service, not with the idea of getting gain, but helping somebody else. Somehow, folks, it seems to me that that's the spirit that must characterize us if we are to finish the task which the Lord has given us to do. A burning passion and love for humanity that will send us out in service, thoughtless of our own comfort, willing to sacrifice self, not with the idea of getting personal gain, but making somebody else happy. The Lord has made such a sacrifice. God has given his Son. He has given the best he had, that we may be redeemed.

That reminds me in conclusion of a little incident in the life of Harry Lauder that I think might be interesting to you. One day during the World War, Harry Lauder was walking down a certain street, along towards evening. He was attracted by a little boy and his father who were out for an evening's walk. In the windows of the various homes were service flags, with stars on them. The little boy said to his father, "Daddy, what are those flags in the windows for, and what do those stars mean?" And the father said to the little boy, "Wherever you see a flag with a star in it, that means that that home has given a boy, a son, for the country, for the world." The little boy thought a while, and just then the first evening star appeared in the sky. The little fellow looked up and saw the star, and cried out, "Daddy, God must have given a son, too, for there's a star in his window." How true that is, friends! God has given a Son. He was sacrificed for us. He has given us the gospel in these latter days, and has assigned us the task of establishing Zion. He is calling us now to carry on the work that he left unfinished. May we so live that we may be accounted worthy to complete the task assigned us, so that when the Master comes to gather his own, we shall hear that welcome plaudit, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

May we as a church so live and labor in this new century that has dawned upon us that it can not be said of us that we are raising spiritual moles; may we so train our children in the things of God that they may grow up as true Zion builders. May we as a ministry so strive for the witness of the Spirit that like Paul of old we can say, "Our gospel comes not unto you in word only, but in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." May we not be content with the mere mechanics of our religion, but may we seek for the life and light from heaven without which we can not hope to succeed. May we be so true and faithful to our task that at last there may come a time when we can truly say, "It is finished."

"Gratitude is the evidence of fine cultivation. Where there is thankfulness, there the tillage brings forth understanding and beauty, charm and intelligence, no matter what the status of society."—Mon Day Morning.

The Question Mark and the Exclamation Point

If one were to devise a coat of arms for the present age it would be something like this: In a scroll at the top the word Query, underneath it an interrogation point rampant and two exclamation points dormant. The whole world is a questionnaire. About half the world is asking, Whence did we come? and the other half, Where are we going? and the very few remainders are asking, What are we doing? We want to take things to pieces; we want to know how and why the wheels go round. We thought it was all so simple that a few questions and answers would be sufficient, but strange to say, the farther we investigate the more we discover how little we really know. Many of the things which we called laws in science, good for all time and efficacious everywhere, we find at last were not laws at all but only guesses of men who guessed wrongly. We know what power does, but we do not know what it is. We think we see electricity, but what we see is only the clothes it wears. Nobody knows what it really is.

You want to save a second of time and gain an inch of space, but what's your hurry, if you don't know where you are going? Why are you troubled about space, when all the space you will need is enough for a few short planks in the windowless chamber of silence and rest? You want to telegraph to Mars and gossip with the evening stars when the lamps are lighted down the Milky Way. You want to find out things in chemistry, in physics. You want to sail on voyages of discovery with "Winkin, Blinkin, and Nodd"; but in the meantime, with all your fuss and feathers, with all your queries, and boasted wisdom, has the child's spirit, which is the best thing about you, died? However young you are, you are old, when you have lost that spirit. How can you expect to enter the kingdom of heaven when Jesus said that nobody who had lost the child-spirit of reverence and wonder, of love and worship, would be able to feel at home there?

You have forgotten how to "loaf and invite your soul." You never worship any more. You do not want to hear a nightingale sing, you want to put your scalpel into her throat and find out where the music comes from. You do not want to pray until you see just what is at the other end of the line. You go through the garden and pluck its flowers, but you never meet the Gardener. You love to talk about the evolution of man; but it is only of his body that you are thinking, and wondering where some of his useless parts came from. If you came only from the amœba through the anthropoid apes, why aren't you back there with the rest of your family, developing your prehensile strength and throwing coconuts at your neighbors? Did it ever occur to you that the reason you are not there is because some power was let down from above to lift you up?

Wouldn't you like to come to the place where the exclamation point would overtop the interrogation point, where the marvel of God's grace and the love which stopped not at the Cross would hush all your questionings and bring you into life as into a great cathedral, where the holy hush of angel music would entrance your soul? The reverent souls are those which look out into the great open vistas, where, with stars for tapers tall, they can see the city which is afar off and the path which leads to it through unshadowed spaces. He whose heart is attuned can hear the music of the spheres as a background to the chant which the angels sing, "Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, heaven and earth are full of thy glory. Glory be to thee, O God most high."—Charles L. Goodell, Federal Council Bulletin.

It Isn't the Church, It's You

If you want to have the kind of a church
Like the kind of a church you like,
You needn't stand on the corner and talk
And forever and ever gripe.
Come out to the church on meeting night
For there's plenty of work to do.
It's a knock at yourself when you knock the church—
It isn't the church, it's you.

When you hear a rumor that things are going wrong,
And trouble somewhere is brewing;
It's time for us all to quit our talk
And stop our fretting and stewing.
Just take a look at yourself and say,
"What is it that I can do?"
Are you doing your bit to make things hit?
It isn't the church, it's you.

It's really strange sometimes, don't you think,
That things go as well as they do,
When you think of the little, the very small mite
We add to the work of the few.
We sit, stand around, and complain of what's done,
And do very little but fuss.
Are we bearing our share of the burdens to bear?
It isn't the church, it's us.

So if you want to have the kind of a church
Like the kind of a church you like,
Rub off your guile and put on a smile.
Don't gripe, my brother, don't gripe.
There's plenty of work that has to be done,
And shouldn't be done by a few.
It isn't the church that's always wrong.
It isn't the church, it's you.

The Conference Lives on with These Saints

The great Centennial Conference has closed, but it has left with us the spirit and courage to press forward. May each one of us strive harder than ever before to do that which may rightfully be expected of us to put across the program which the church is undertaking during the next two-year period to come.

Though I arrived in Independence too late to enjoy all the many good sermons and speeches which composed the conference, I feel fully repaid for the effort put forth to get here. Long will this conference be remembered, I feel sure, by the many delegates and visitors who were present. It was the climax of all preceding conferences.

The foreign delegations did well their parts. The great pageant will surely be the means of leading many unto righteousness. The gratitude of the entire church is due those who took part in the production of the gigantic spectacle.

I can not yet begin to fathom the magnitude of the events to which we are looking forward in the next six years. I only realize that it is our privilege to give the best of our ability and talent. Two days I sat in the Auditorium listening to our leaders lecture, teach, and admonish their classes to strive to live the latter-day work.

I can say with Brother F. G. Pitt, who sang the first night my companion and I had the privilege of sitting in the Auditorium, "God is so good to me." And because the Lord is mindful of his own, I wish to serve and praise him. May those whose vision is clear and broad lead us into the future. May avenues of service be opened up. May we who are only babes in the latter-day work live more upon our knees, sacrifice, and be willing to render service in the name of Him who came to earth that men might have the life more abundant. Give us Saints who will dare to do, equipped with zeal that knows no discouragement. Give us those willing to unflinchingly accept their assignment, all who are of courageous hearts and joyous spirits.

The conference is over but not really past. It is too vital, too living a thing as yet to become only a memory. Yet the great Auditorium is silent today except for the sound of footsteps hurrying along the ramps to the various offices, and the murmur of voices of a few lingering visitors, mingled with the chirping of sparrows. It was only yesterday that the conference crowded the building with its vivid throngs. Old friends and new friends, all with the love of God shining in their faces, moved about in the foyer between the sessions, each eager to meet everyone else.

Thoughts of that last session when men were ordained at the altar of the Lord, when our kindly President gathered the patriarchs around him on the platform and gave them comforting words, when he called on the splendid army of missionaries to arise in the audience and come forward with their companions to the platform are things not to be forgotten. His words of admonition to them and Brother Gilen's prayer of blessing were sweet indeed and will linger long in their hearts. The President's great heart also seemed to go out in blessing and encouragement to the army of all who are local workers and homefolks wherever they dwell, whatever their task, all who labor and sacrifice for God's work.

The Centennial Conference has been a grand and a satisfying gathering.

We are rejoicing over the peaceful, spiritual, and soul-inspiring Centennial Conference which will long be remembered by those who were privileged to be present. Our hearts are gladdened with the realization that the Lord is looking after all the affairs of the world and does not forget his people.

Stone Church

After three Sundays dominated by General Conference meetings, it was restful on April 27 to resume regular Sunday morning sessions of the church school in all departments. To the adults and intermediates in the main room of the Stone Church, Apostle Paul M. Hanson spoke on things which reminded his congregation of Easter and its significance in our lives.

The special Easter number for the intermediate department April 20 was a cantata, "The first Easter," by Ira Bishop Wilson, beautifully sung by ten young girls under the direction of Sister H. C. Burgess.

"Highway building versus Good Samaritanism" was the subject of the sermon by Bishop J. A. Koehler at the eleven o'clock service. Healing the wounds of those who have been waylaid on the economic highway is not enough, he said; our task is to build a new highway of economic justice, to remove the sources of evil, to build a civilization which shall be the embodiment of social justice. This task is self-imposed upon a people which claims to be called of God to do his will. We have yet to build the highway of God.

The Stone Church Choir sang the unaccompanied anthem, "Bless the Lord, O my soul," from the Russian Liturgy by Norden, Paul N. Craig directing. Robert Miller played an organ offertory and accompanied the congregational singing. Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the service, and was assisted by Elder F. G. Pitt.

Downstairs the young people's eleven o'clock service took on a missionary tone. "Have faith in God" was the message brought by Elder E. Y. Hunker, who related a number of instances he had observed among the Saints of Scandinavia in which faith brought the blessings of comfort, assurance, and health. Brother and Sister Hunker sang the hymn "Stand up, stand up for Jesus" in the Norwegian language. Elder H. W. Harder was in charge of the service, and prayer was offered by Brother Oral Andes. Congregational singing was conducted by Sister Louise Lewis.

"Among ancient American cities" was the title of the illustrated lecture delivered in the evening by Apostle Paul M. Hanson. Scenes of ruins of Mexico, Guatemala, and Honduras drew the interested attention of the congregation. The speaker gave emphasis to the symbolism of Christ and the religious inclination of the ancient inhabitants of the Americas as shown by the architecture and carvings of the ruins. A study of the remains of their cities causes us to realize, he asserted, that we have scarcely touched the surface of their knowledge of art and architecture.

All but a few of the photographs from which the slides were made were taken by Apostle Hanson on his South American trip last year.

Special music was furnished by a ladies' quartet composed of Sisters Ola Davidson, Blanche Gault, Mary Helm, and Lulu Tyrrell. Pastor John F. Sheehy was assisted in the stand by Elder James Thomas, of Lamoni.

Among the People in Zion

The Y. K. T. Class, an organization of young people of the Stone Church congregation, will celebrate its tenth anniversary May 10 with a banquet served by the Laurel Club in the Auditorium. All former and present class members and their friends are invited to help the class observe its anniversary. The cost is a dollar a plate.

The Y. K. T. Class was organized with twenty-six charter members. At that time only four officers were necessary to meet the needs of the class. A constitution was drawn up, and the class motto, "By their works ye shall know them," was chosen. The initial letters of the words, "Ke know them," from this motto, were selected for a name. For a meeting place they used in turn the lawn of the Stone Church, the west tower room, then, through the courtesy of the officers of the Church of Christ, the first floor of their church building. In the summer of 1925, Bishop Becker gave the class permission to remodel the little building on the Stone Church lawn, and through the efforts of the members and their friends the present classroom was made ready for use. The official staff now consists of twelve members besides the leader and his associate.

The greatest desire of the Y. K. T. Class has been to render service, both as individuals and as an organization. The members have been urged to cheerfully accept any position of trust, great or small, that has been offered them. From among their ranks have gone forth a pastor, Sunday school superintendents, teachers, secretaries, chorister, pianists, as well as scoutmasters and girl leaders. A number of the young men have been called to the priesthood, and some of the young women are taking special work to prepare themselves for better service. A few have been called by death. The years have brought great changes in the personnel of the organization, there being only two of the charter members who are still active in the class, although all who have ever been members are retained on the social list regardless of where their work may now be.

An event which saddened the hearts of the Saints in Independence and in every place where she was known and loved was the death of Sister Stella Williams, wife of Missionary Thomas S. Williams, of Rock Island, Illinois. Sister Williams, who was thirty-eight years of age, died April 24 at the Independence Sanitarium, having undergone an operation there some days before. Left to mourn their loss are her husband, a son, Blaine Williams, of the home; her parents, Brother and Sister R. Barker, Hiteman, Iowa; a sister, Mrs. Joseph Wilson, Taylorville, Illinois; and three brothers, Floyd Barker, Nauvoo, Illinois; Elmer Barker, Hiteman, Iowa; and James Barker, East Moline, Illinois. The funeral service was held at the Stone Church Monday afternoon, and interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence.

After a three-Sunday discontinuance of class meetings during conference, the Y. P. R. Class resumed its lecture course on "Know your own church" Sunday evening, Apostle J. F. Curtis speaking on "Factions of religious Mormonism." Vice President L. E. Flowers was in charge.

In their effort to see America, members of the Australasian delegation to the Centennial Conference have had another thrill, this time one not at all welcome. Last Saturday five cars, carrying eleven of the delegation and others, started a pilgrimage to Nauvoo, Illinois, site of memorable early church activities. About one hundred miles from Independence, the machine driven by Bishop M. H. Siegfried and carrying besides the driver, Elder and Sister W. J. Haworth, Sister Ethel Watson, and Sister Siegfried, got out of control, left the highway, and turned over twice. Brother and Sister Haworth were injured slightly. Attended by Brother and Sister H. I. Velt, they remained in the hospital in Booneville, Missouri, until the party returning from Nauvoo, brought them home to Independence Monday evening. The injured are recovering nicely.

Brother Henry L. Loosemore, sixty-nine years of age, died at his home in Independence of heart disease. He was a member of the church of long standing, having been baptized May 7, 1889. Surviving are his widow, Sister Maria Loosemore; a daughter, Mrs. J. C. Armstrong, Fairland Heights; a son, Reginald Loosemore, Independence, and a brother and sister in England. The funeral will be held in the Stone Church this afternoon, and interment will be in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Elder and Sister Chris L. Munro, of Independence, celebrated their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary at their home Monday. They were married April 28, 1875, at New Brunwick, Canada, where both were born. They moved to Boston, Massachusetts, April 1, 1880, and came to Independence in 1905, where they have since intermittently made their home. Brother Munro is a carpenter. They have three children: Daniel W. Munro, Stamford, Connecticut; Mrs. Grace Hutton, Saint Louis, Missouri; and Ernest Munro, Springfield, Missouri.

Second Church

During conference the baptismal font was used several times by the ministry from other congregations, the basement of the Stone Church with its new font being used for conference meetings.

The only other services held in this local during the Centennial Conference were church school meetings the second and third Sundays of the conference period, there being good attendance.

Wednesday evening, April 23, union prayer service of the five local groups was held at the church. The crowd was of encouraging size and a good meeting was had.

A spiritual treat awaited those who assembled Sunday morning at eight o'clock to share in the service of worship.

Good attendance and interest marked the church school period. A special number was a piano solo by a very small girl.

Elder R. D. Weaver was the speaker at eleven o'clock. He said that the age in which Jesus lived could have not produced a man whose works would have endured as the works of the Christ have endured had he been other than the Son of God. He led his congregation to see that Jesus met life's trying situations just as we have to meet them, and asked us to measure our reactions by the manner in which we think Jesus would act under similar circumstances. Second Church Saints wish Brother Weaver Godspeed as he goes to his distant mission field.

Elder J. H. Yager was the evening speaker, taking for a text the question of the Christ: "When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" The speaker pleaded for faith in each other on the part of the Saints, in God and his Son Jesus Christ, in his church. All this we must have in order that when the Son of Man comes he will find faith alive on the earth.

Walnut Park

The first service of Walnut Park congregation, following the General Conference, was a union prayer meeting at the church on Wednesday evening. It was a very good meeting, and a fine spirit was manifested.

The eight o'clock prayer meeting Sunday morning was also an excellent witness to the desire of the Saints to carry forward the work of the church in harmony with the renewed inspiration and new vision of our tasks which were obtained at the conference. In spite of the disagreeable weather, forty-three were present, and the time was occupied in prayers and testimonies that were earnest and to the point.

The church school, under the leadership of Brother Barnhardt, met at the usual time, from 9.30 to 10.45. During the latter part of the period, Brother John Shields, from Ontario, who has served the church for many years and is now one of the order of superannuated ministers, gave a brief talk concerning some of his experiences in the work. The young people of Walnut Park were indeed happy to hear the testimony of this veteran soldier for Christ.

During the last two Sundays of General Conference, the Galilean Class, which has been studying Bishop G. L. DeLapp's quarterly, on "The financial law," was privileged to have the author and editor of that quarterly present. Brother DeLapp explained some of the purposes of the course and the viewpoint from which he was approaching Zion's problems. On the second Sunday he explained the project which is being worked out in Lamoni Stake under his direction and its place in our entire church program. His explanations and discussion were much appreciated.

Apostle R. S. Budd was the morning speaker April 27, his theme being based upon the reading found in James 3:

1-13. His discourse centered about the proper use of the tongue, as an instrument capable of doing much good, and yet very frequently abused. Brother Budd stated that most of our trouble comes from talking too much, especially about things concerning which we have no knowledge. He further stated that nine tenths of second-hand talk is not true. If we are to become kingdom builders in the second century, we must train our tongues to speak in the right way. A good test to apply before talking to some one about a third person is to answer each of the following questions: Will this help the brother (or sister) about whom I was to speak? Will this help the one to whom I am speaking? Will this help myself? If it falls down in any one of these points, it should remain unsaid.

The evening speaker was Elder Glaude A. Smith, formerly pastor of Walnut Park, for three years pastor of Los Angeles Branch, and now appointed to Denver, Colorado. His theme centered about the principle of "Growth." He used as texts: "Jesus grew" and "increased in wisdom and in stature, and in favor with God and with man." If the Saints are to continue to live, they must grow, and in order for this growth to be complete it must emphasize all four elements of the growing process, the physical, the intellectual, the social, and the spiritual.

Both the morning and evening speakers were ably supported by the Walnut Park Choir, which in the morning rendered the anthem "Bless the Lord, O my soul," and in the evening "The Lord is my Light."

Enoch Hill

Miss Catherine Thomas, formerly of Enoch Hill District, now superintendent of the Don Sawyer Memorial Hospital at Eureka Springs, Arkansas, returned to her work Saturday after a week's visit with her mother, Sister Goldie Grayer, and friends on Enoch Hill. Miss Thomas, who is a graduate of the Independence Sanitarium, finds her new work very interesting. The institution of which she has charge has thirty beds. It is the plan of the doctor in charge to very soon open a training school for nurses, of which Miss Thomas will be the teacher. Accompanying her to Independence was the wife of the physician in charge of Don Sawyer Memorial Hospital.

A union prayer meeting last Wednesday evening brought the Saints together for the first service at home except church school since the opening of the Centennial Conference. Brothers O. W. Sarratt, C. E. Beal, and Joseph Martin conducted a meeting in which free expression was had from the members of their hopes for the coming century of church activity and their determination to be ready to answer the call to service.

Patriarch W. A. McDowell was the speaker at the church school session Sunday morning, reading Exodus 4. "What is in thine hand?" was his text, and he brought out very forcefully the desirability of letting our actions express what we believe. Forget your excuses, he admonished, and be ready to help when opportunity offers. Elder O. A. McDowell was in attendance at this service to hear his father preach.

Bishop C. J. Hunt brought to the branch a message of hope and courage in his evening sermon.

Bisbee, Arizona

April 23.—Bisbee Branch had an unusually pleasant Easter. The day was one of beautiful sunshine. It was warm, and there was not a cloud in the sky. The day opened with good attendance at Sunday school. At eleven o'clock the Sunday school presented the following program: "What is Easter?" by Brother Goldie; "The first Easter," Brother Puckett; violin solo, Brother Stewart; violin solo, Brother Puckett; a pageant "The Easter spirit."

In the evening Brother Goldie preached an excellent sermon on "The resurrection."

Far West Stake

Saint Joseph Branch

One of the most successful series of missionary meetings ever held in the nucleus branch of the stake was conducted by Apostle J. F. Garver from March 2 to 16, inclusive.

Several weeks prior to the opening of this series Elders R. E. Jones and G. T. Richards, missionaries, devoted co-ordinated efforts among definite prospects. In this work they were ably assisted by Brother Roscoe D. Peterson, and other local ministers. Such intelligent and consistent contacts as were made could but inevitably bear good fruit. Consequently the local Saints rejoiced to see thirty persons enter the waters of baptism on Decision Day, March 16.

Looking back over this series of missionary meetings, I am compelled to pause and make a careful analysis from the standpoint of actual, effective ministry. It is quite probable that a certain percentage, and perhaps the majority, of our people are satisfied with the visible additions to our ranks through the reaping of these thirty souls. To some this is the measuring rod of success. But to many of us it is positively evident that, to place a minimum, an equal number of other good people who received the benefits of this series, are on the brink of baptism, though perhaps at present it is unknown to certain of them. It is not given to all of us to know at first the peculiar unfoldments of the fruitful seed when once embedded in the fertile hearts of good men and women and boys and girls. But it is our privilege, yes, our duty, to constantly nurture that seed, leaving the maturing processes to God and the inner lives of those to whom our arms are outstretched in a righteous embrace.

The thought that we are all prodigals, with God as our responsive Father, so beautifully and vividly pictured by Apostle Garver, will linger long in the minds of thinking men and women. It comes as inspiration to us as we endeavor to pattern after that Character revered by countless hosts of the human family, and a signpost to life in its eternal verity.

Apart from the lasting spiritual benefits derived from this particular series of meetings, the priesthood of the entire branch met on several occasions with Apostle Garver for discussion of local administrative problems. They were greatly strengthened and caught a greater vision of the church as a unit, as a result of Brother Garver's contributions from the font of his broadened ministerial experience. It is good to see our brothers of the priesthood consolidating their efforts for the promulgation of the work. May the spirit of humility, love, and brotherhood steadily grow and thrive in the lives of all of us until we are in that condition where the Lord can work incessantly through our agencies for the sake of the multitudes who yet linger in spiritual darkness.

The dark angel of death has quite recently cast its grim shadow over the Saints of First Church. On March 16 as one of the thirty candidates climaxing the missionary series, a young brother, John Wallace Reeves, entered the waters of baptism to the rejoicing of his mother and immediate church associates and friends. A few weeks ago he was stricken by that deadly disease spinal meningitis, and on Wednesday, April 16, he breathed his last. Our condolence and sympathy go out to the bereaved mother and remaining boys. May God pour into those wounded hearts the oil and healing balm of his Holy Spirit.

The pulse of the Saint Joseph members is quickening with a steadily growing missionary desire. This city offers to the church a fertile field for missionary endeavor, and before long we are confident many, many more souls will be added to the kingdom.

General Observations

Since reading the general missionary appointments for the new conference year, we were dismayed to find that Elder G. T. Richards had been transferred to another field of labor.

In his several years of arduous missionary work in the stake, Brother Richards has won for himself the love and respect of all who know him. We wish him godspeed, and extend to Kansas City Stake our congratulations on gaining him as a minister.

Elder R. D. Weaver has likewise been assigned to another district, this time in sunny California. His brotherly contacts with the Saints of Far West Stake extend over a long period of years, and all wish him success and joy in his new field.

With the return of Elder R. E. Jones to the stake, and especially to the vicinity of the Saint Joseph Branch, we are fortified in our observations on the progress of the work there.

We are happy to welcome as new ministers to the stake Brothers S. E. Miffin, Walter Woodward, W. A. McDowell, and Ward A. Hougas. Some of these brothers are known to us personally or by reputation, and we are confident that with their assistance Far West Stake will justify herself as one of the largest precincts of the church.

The potential possibilities of this stake are very promising, both in talent and opportunities for definite missionary endeavors.

May God grant us a consistent portion of his Spirit, that the work may prosper even beyond our fondest expectations.

W. H. Cryer.

Central Church

The sermon for the service period of the church school last Sunday morning was by Apostle J. F. Curtis. During the worship period at 9.45 the talk was by Bishop C. A. Skinner, and a girls' chorus sang, directed by Sister Bertha Burgess.

In the evening over eighty children from the Malvern Hill Religious Day School were directed by Sister C. E. Wight in a performance of the cantata "The Child Jesus," by Mary Houts Flagg. This cantata was a part of the graduation exercises of the school and was given by children of the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth grades. The measure of appreciation for the outstanding work done in the school was shown by the evening's attendance. The address was by Pastor C. E. Wight, and an effective candle-lighting service was conducted by seven girls of the sixth grade. Among other pleasing program features was the presentation of diplomas.

Next Sunday the Saints will meet to partake of the sacrament in remembrance of Him whose name we bear. Let us make adequate preparation for this hour, that we may indeed feast with the Master. In the evening the Lincoln and Lee Dental College Glee Club, directed by Doctor Davidson, will be heard in concert, and the pastor will speak.

The Young Men's Bible Class is planning a basket-ball banquet at the church Friday, May 9. An interesting program is being arranged.

The F. L. C. Club will be in charge of a dinner and social evening at the Ricardo Hotel, May 6.

Second Church

This struggling congregation courageously continues on under restricted conditions because of dwindling numbers, under the guidance of Elder F. A. Evans, pastor. The ministry baptized one in excess of the quota set a year ago. Recent speakers have been Elders W. I. Fligg, E. W. Lloyd, F. A. Evans, C. E. Wight, and W. O. Hands and Priests P. J. Raw and E. S. Zink.

Sister Margaret Evans, daughter of Brother and Sister D. A. Evans, and Mr. Leland E. Holloway, were united in matrimony February 8, 1930, Elder F. A. Evans officiating.

Brother Edward Robertson is seriously ill with a complication of ailments, the heart showing the greatest weakness. He desires the prayers of the church.

Frederick Joseph, son of Brother and Sister J. A. Myers, passed from this life the 24th of last month, age four years and seven months.

A good Easter program was presented by the young people, Mildred and Esther Lungwitz singing "Calvary" and "Open the gates of the temple," accompanied by Elizabeth Flynn.

Sister P. J. Raw, the solicitor, was the delegate to General Conference from Second Branch, and was thankful for the wonderful spirit of that great gathering.

Argentine Church

Henry Ray Gunion, only son of Elder and Sister Henry M. Gunion, passed from this life April 20 after a lingering siege of sickness. The funeral service was in charge of Evangelist Ammon White, in the presence of a host of brothers and sisters and friends gathered at the local church, April 22. Burial was in Maple Hill Cemetery. He was born in Mansfield, Kentucky, August 25, 1905, and baptized when eight years of age by Elder George Jenkins.

The speaker at 11 and 7.45 Sunday was Elder Thomas Newton. He drew a lesson in the morning from the fifteenth chapter of Saint John. In the evening his subject was "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul," stressing the need for keeping the whole law.

Lachine, Michigan

April 20.—Saints of Lachine Branch were well pleased to have here for the Easter services Elder Allen Schreur, of Gaylord, and Elder Elmer Parks who accompanied Brother Schreur.

Prayer service occupied the early morning hour. Many splendid testimonies were given, greatly strengthening the members. The service of prayer and worship was followed by a sermon by Brother Schreur. Afternoon services were opened at two o'clock, the first being an Easter program prepared by the Sunday school. Then Brother Parks talked for a short time.

During the afternoon service Brother M. Smith was ordained to the office of priest. Brother Amos Guy and family, of Hillman, attended the services.

The members of this branch are hopeful for the return of Brothers Schreur and Parks and that others will find their way to Lachine to help with the onward march of the gospel.

Atchison, Kansas

Ninth and Santa Fe Streets

This branch has been laboring under adverse circumstances the past winter. The membership has been greatly reduced by removals. Of a recorded membership of fifty we have only about five families living in town to support the spiritual and financial activities of the branch. These few have responded heroically to the local program. Financing the needed repairs on the building and meeting the payments on the paving tax have called for sacrifice on the part of the small number. Four men worked each night until ten o'clock putting in a new ceiling in the church, one being a nonmember. This was a saving of nearly one hundred dollars. Notwithstanding the necessity for the raising of these funds, the branch went over the top with its quota of tithes and offerings for the year.

Many of our membership attended the sessions of General Conference and returned greatly enthused and with higher ideals to lead them on during the coming year. We noted the spiritual and educational progress made by the church in the last few years.

The Saints welcome the family of Moroni Stewart, of Council Bluffs, to Atchison, and feel they will be of great assistance in the work here.

Our only representative in the conference oratorio was

A Correction

In the Fresno, California, news letter, Saints' Herald, April 16, page 444, column one, second paragraph of the letter, there occurs in the second sentence an error. The sentence should read: "The Temple Builders had an at-

Mother's Day

Next Sunday is Mother's Day. All over the land there will be special services in honor of the mothers. To those who are living, many thousands of letters and telegrams will go, bearing expressions of love and appreciation. Many will be reached by flowers and other presents. The graves of many who have passed on will be decorated with wreaths and touched with tears.

All over the church there will be special programs and sermons for mothers. What will your church plan to do? Those churches which follow the "continuous program," having the worship period, the lesson study, and the preaching service follow each other without intermission, will find it easy to manage special features without lengthening the amount of time used for morning services. The reading of poems, especially by young members of the Sunday school, is always very interesting. Those leaders who have been following the "Church School Worship Service" by Edith Harkness in the Department Journal will find helpful suggestions in the May issue. The program offered centers in the home, and the mother naturally receives special attention.

Mother's Day sermons are difficult. The speaker must manage not to say too much, and not too little. Some sermons we have heard have resounded with duties and responsibilities, making the mother's life seem a very severe one. Other sermons were filled with pathos and tears, and it is quite certain that intelligent and capable mothers must have found it very difficult to listen to them.

A good mother, if we may judge by appearances, is admirable and courageous. Hers is not an unhappy or tragic fate, to be wept over. Ordinarily she is happy, and her service is beautiful. She is worthy of high esteem, but she does not want foolish idolatry. Her dignity is too great for flattery on this one day, and her importance is too great for neglect the rest of the year.

She well deserves an honest tribute, with judicious praise and commendation. To praise her too extravagantly is to underrate her actual worth.

On Mother's Day the men of the congregation need some practical reminders. When a mother does something well, her family often forget to give her the thanks she deserves. When she is sick or tired, they often expect her to go on working, without giving her the help they could so easily afford to give. Mothers often get too little appreciation and too little help. Most of us could do more to make their lives pleasant and happy.

For the Sake of Success

Often the Herald has something to say about business and religion, about politics and religion. The proper combination of these elements means the success of each and all of them. Truth and justice and virtue at the base of each will make for the proper combination.

It is impossible to make an all-round success if any of these elements is merely passive. An active religion and a passive business make for the failure of both in the individual. A passive view of (or perfunctory participation in) politics, makes for insecurity and unprogressive surroundings, or of soil in which to grow the plants of business and religion. The symmetrical tree of life attains its form because no one root has failed to function and draw from its environment and convey to its furthest removed bud the nourishment necessary for its activity, its unfoldment.

Confidence is essential to activity in business—if there be lack of confidence business is paralyzed. If confidence in the virtue of political creed be wanting, the politics resulting will be of the type which has repulsed good people and caused them to refrain from activity. And when confidence in religion is not present, religion shrivels and dies—one of the elements of life, and a principal one, is removed.

The existence of confidence depends upon the virtue there is to be found in the proposal. Virtue as regards strength, virtue as to purity and truth.

Latter Day Saints should be careful that their business, their profession, and their politics are selected because they possess virtue, because they render service, for the reason that they are true to the principles of their religion. Having thus selected they will succeed, and will lend honor to their religion and its Author, the God of the universe.

Applause and Laughter

Applause and laughter are humanly natural. Nearly everyone likes to applaud a good speech or lecture, or to laugh at a good story or a clever performance. Yet applause and laughter have a status in polite society like that of whiskers: most men may have them; a few let them grow unchecked, while many keep them trimmed.

Applause in Church

Some time ago I attended a musical program in a church. It was not a religious service, but the church atmosphere prevailed. The selections were of a rich and majestic beauty, and the skillful interpretation given them by the musicians brought over the audience a feeling of sublimity and reverence. At the end, the people sat still in hushed expectancy, as if waiting for the prayer of praise and thanksgiving that should naturally have closed so fine a service. They waited, with that devotional act ready in their hearts, and all but on their lips. Suddenly, from the rear of the church, there broke out a round of hand-clapping and applause. Half of the audience turned around in astonishment and disapproval. It was a shock.

The people who applauded had the best intentions in the world. They were as sincerely grateful for the music as the others; but they did not sense the spiritual turn of the program. Had they thought, or had they known better, they would have refrained.

Both laughter and applause should be used carefully in church. They are much alike. The problem of regulating them is delicate and difficult. They are appropriate for the expression of normal joyousness and approval in many sorts of human situations. Neither laughter nor applause is especially dignified; they are concomitant with the release of emotion and the breaking of restraint. Neither of them is compatible with great religious experience, nor with deeply spiritual affairs. They are as out of place there as slang and profanity.

When we approach the sublime moment, when hearts are stirred to their profoundest depths, when all the forces of the intellect center the attention upon a great spiritual experience, the only proper response is silence and worship. Some people's lives are so endlessly occupied with a round of trivial things that they do not know how to behave when the sublime experience arrives. Trained perception will teach them what to do.

A Lesson on Laughter

Laughter and applause can be mean and cruel, as well as kindly and generous.

A missionary friend tells a story of a time when he and another missionary were living with their families in one house. This friend had occasion one day to chasten his young son. When the spanking was finished, the little daughter of the other missionary started to laugh at the crying lad. Her father immediately punished her and said: "There. You must learn never to laugh at the downfall of another person."

The objectionable feature of the laughter was its cruelty and unfairness. It was good for the little girl to learn the lesson early in life.

Applause in Contests

The trouble with every contest, whether it be athletic or forensic, is that for every winner there are numbers of defeated and disappointed people. The victor stands on the shoulders of those whom he has beaten.

The audience rejoices with the victor, and he receives the loud applause and the happy laughter. Behind him stand the people who lost, though they may have been inferior to him by only small and barely measurable margins. Against the little good obtained for the winner must be balanced the embarrassment and humiliation felt by the losers. They will be "good sports" and make brave faces while they congratulate their conquerors, but they suffer.

The Sting of Defeat

Even on the conference floor, laughter and applause can be cruel. We sometimes clap our hands when instead we ought to bow our heads and pray; pray that we be prevented from unchristian exulting and forgiven for sinful pride.

On any important issue there may be two opinions. Without the advantage of a wisdom that is more than human, no one can tell certainly which will prove to be right, though they may make some shrewd guesses. The doubts and objections of the defeated minority are hardly ever dissipated by the vote which overrides them. The exultant clapping of hands can only make them more acutely conscious of the sting of their defeat, and may even make them feel that they are isolated from the sympathies of the body.

If the decision on the issue was right, time will prove it so, and those who voted with the defeated minority will come to recognize their mistake.

Kindliness, sympathy, and Christian tolerance will win them more quickly than anything else. At any rate, laughter and applause are cruel, and often unjust; therefore, they are out of place on a conference floor.

Are We Free?

Freedom, Independence, Unrestraint are words often heard and read. Everyone has his own ideas concerning them, and these in large measure determine his attitude toward himself, toward society, and toward life. Whether a man is conservative in his beliefs or radical in his tendencies, he is acquainted with them and their apparent desirability. He asserts them in his own life, or if he thinks he does not have them he is discontented, broods, and pities himself. He wants them; he strives for them; he makes them his goal. In modern society they occupy a place of great importance and are determining factors in the happiness of all people. Lack of them or suppression of them has caused generations of men to live with rebellion in their hearts, which heated by hatred and a desire for revenge, eventually burst into flame. And on the other hand freedom, independence, and unrestraint misused by a few or by many, have fostered selfishness, license, inequality, and injustice. History is crowded with examples of lack of freedom or its misuse.

Today we boast that we are free. But are we? "Freedom," writes Ernest Fremont Tittle in an article, "Unshackled youth," in The Epworth Herald, "is never just release from all restraints, the domination of parents, parsons, and professors. It is rather the acquiring of new powers. It is release not from something, but for something that a man wants to do and ought to do if he is to play a man's part in this world."

In order that we may know if we possess real freedom, Mr. Tittle submits a set of questions that we may ask ourselves:

Can I keep my mind fixed upon any subject for as long as half an hour? Can I lay aside my prejudices long enough to give fair consideration to certain facts which seem to contradict them? Can I keep my temper when other people are losing theirs? Can I live through a single day without needless worry? Can I make a promise and keep it? Can I resolve to do something and then go and do it? Can I experience prosperity without being puffed up, and adversity without being cast down? Can I meet disappointment without losing my poise? Can I stick to my guns in the face of opposition? Can I stand alone in loyalty to my convictions without egotism or self-pity? Can I rejoice over the opportunities which life has given to me and not spend time in futile brooding over the opportunities which it has denied me?

Is not the power to do as we ought the only freedom that matters? Must not we be masters of ourselves before we are really free?

Let us evaluate anew freedom and its meaning in our lives. Let us hold before us the pattern of Christ who, though he was the world's greatest Freeman, was servant of all. Are shackles holding us back from the best expression of ourselves? Are we doing everything within our power to promote the right kind of freedom? Are we ourselves free?

L. B. M.

Missionaries at Home

"Train the Family Circle"

We have heard often in recent months of the move to "complete the family circle." This endeavor to bring into the ranks of the church those members of families who have not yet decided to enter is a good one. The urge to join the church should by no means become importunate, nor should it be applied to anybody as a kind of pressure. But sometimes people remain outside simply because no one asks them to join. The question or request should be placed gently, in order not to cause any embarrassment.

Too often people forget that preliminary training and study should go before baptism. Baptism and enrollment on the church records are not at all sufficient. We should add to the slogan, "Complete the family circle," another slogan that is even more important, "Train the family circle."

Training for Christian living, in a knowledge of the gospel and of the church, should be continuous; baptism should be an incident in that time of training, and not a period to it. Membership in the church, if it is to mean anything, must require a continual effort for advancement that is aided by study, prayer, and earnest endeavor to live according to Christian ideals.

In this effort all of us can be missionaries, all of us can do something. We can invite our nonmember friends and relatives to church. We can help to improve the services so that they will be fairly representative of the church work. We can aid in preserving an atmosphere of reverence and dignity there that will make them wish to return. And we can be ready to explain the history and beliefs of the church in an intelligent way that will contribute to the development of young people about to become members, or already within the ranks.

Training the family circle is the logical necessity for a higher type of membership, for better service, and for actual progress toward the Zionite ideal.

Children's Day, June 15

In all Christian churches the third Sunday in June is set aside this year as Children's Day. It is fitting that the day should be observed in our church as an outstanding event of the year. It should be a memorable day for the youth because of the joyous experiences it may bring into their lives.

A Day of Decision and Covenant Making

In the temperate regions of the Northern Hemisphere, where most of us live, Children's Day comes in the midst of a happy springtime; all nature is resplendent in color, fragrance, and melody. It is a time of beginnings, of hope and anticipation, a day of abundant new life. An appropriate setting, this, for exercises full of meaning to the children. For them it must be a day of decision and covenant making, for some a day of new beginning in the gospel life, for others a day of remembrance, of annual renewing of the covenant, and a beginning again in the upward way.

Prepare for the Occasion

In the weeks between now and June 15 let there be every consistent preparation made for the event. The decoration of the church and the working up of a program in which the children shall have prominent parts is no small element, and deserves careful attention. The Department Journal of this and previous years contains valuable program helps and references to suitable published materials.

But it is most important that the decision to be consummated on Children's Day shall have been prepared for by class and individual preparation in the weeks preceding. Baptism must come as a logical fulfillment of desire cultivated and made intelligent and meaningful by instruction and nurture at the hand of the pastor or church school leaders. Special materials and methods for such a course of instruction is given for primary, junior, and intermediate pupils in the Department Journal for May. These suggestions have been carefully presented and if used with tact and wisdom should help in creating an appreciative understanding of the gospel, the significance of baptism, and loyalty to the ideals of the church.

It is not intended that the instruction shall be limited to actual candidates for baptism. It will be well for the entire church school group to participate in the instruction classes. Those who have been baptized should have the privilege of extending their vision and deepening their conviction, and of whole-heartedly renewing their covenants.

In the Saints' Herald will be found special evangelistic materials proposed for the pastor's use with a class of adults, members and nonmembers, who are willing to become better informed of the faith, belief, and programs of the church. Those who are not members should be encouraged to make the decision to join with us in the covenant of baptism. The entire membership should be led to take on new vigor as they gain an expanded vision and a new hope and confidence.

The call of the second century is distinctly a call to evangelism. The Department of Religious Education in every branch of the church is expected to cooperate fully with the pastor, the priesthood, and the general ministry in the teaching work of the church. The membership of the church must grow, numerically, mentally, and in spiritual vision and power. Let us take full advantage of the opportunities afforded us. Let us make the coming Children's Day one of marked increase in church interest and activity, as well as in members.

CHARLES B. WOODSTOCK,
For Department of Religious Education.

The Children's Division of the Church School

Under the new program of religious education for the church, provision has been made for what is termed "horizontal" divisions on a basis of age groups. It is proposed to provide fully in each age group for the various types of experience considered helpfully educational. In other words, to provide religious motivation, a sense of religious values, for every worth-while activity that may increase the opportunity of religious growth, from infancy to old age, and make more sure the development of habits and attitudes which must go to make up citizenship in the church of God.

Such a program may well be termed the church school, for it is, indeed, the whole round of experience activities on all days of the week, calculated to help in the educational process through which members of the church are to be grown and qualified for the Master's service. The church school is well named.

Provision is made in all branches for three main "horizontal" age group divisions: the children's division, from infancy to 12 years; the young people's division, from 12 to about 24 years; the adult division, from about 24 years up; these to take over, when it is agreeable, all of the work formerly cared for by the Sunday School, the Women's Department, and Recreation and Expression Department. In each division the activities are to be carefully balanced and related within the division and with other activities of the branch. Always the welfare of the individual and of the entire group is to be taken into consideration.

It is not advised that hasty action shall be taken to abandon previous organizations of Sunday School, Women's Department, etc. Those responsible as officers, teachers, and leaders must continue to serve until such time as changes may be made advisedly. Indeed, it is rather a change in thought and attitude that is needed, anyway, and that does not come overnight.

Workers with children will welcome the statement which follows from the pen of Bertha Constance Woodward, of lines of work now being undertaken through the general office of the children's division.

The Children's Division of the Church

By Bertha Constance Woodward

I. Objectives are being determined for each year of the child's life, which will be sequence steps toward the ultimate objective of the church. Since objectives are the goals of religious growth, and since goals must be within reach of the individual, the objectives of the children's division are not stated in terms of finished products, but rather as successive stages in an ongoing process. They specify the most perfect, the highest levels of living of which man is capable of conceiving in each area of experience and in each field of religious thought which touches the life of a particular aged child.

II. A program is being builded in harmony with the interests, needs, and capacities of the child. It will serve as a guide to parents and teachers in their work with children, and will also give stimulative material for use by the children. This program, if followed completely, will make possible the reaching of the objectives for the various ages.

Such a program will consist of:

1. A quarterly which will serve as a guide or manual to direct parents and teachers in their work with children and in the primary and junior grades, will give stimulative material for the children to read, and suggest activities by which they may live the truths inculcated in the lessons. This quarterly is planned for use by both parents and workers in directing the religious growth of the child through the entire week.

2. A book which will help parents and teachers to understand the physiology and psychology of the child.

3. A problem guide which will assist parents and workers in understanding child problems and in solving them.

4. A source book of methods from which materials may be chosen for use in solving child problems and in assisting children to build ideals. It will suggest projects and opportunities for living the ideals and habits taught. Such a source book should be in the hands of every worker, and in every home for reference purposes when teaching opportunities are at hand.

5. The Department Journal, and other magazines which will give current help to parents and workers.

6. Two story papers (Zion's Hope for the nursery, kindergarten, and primary children; and Stepping Stones for the juniors) are planned to continually stimulate the children to make religious choices and to build higher ideals in each area of experience. While the quarterly lesson emphasizes a particular ideal to be reached, the child is meeting life as a whole; problems in various areas are confronting him and opportunities for teaching numerous lessons arise; therefore, the story papers, together with the before mentioned problem guide and source book, will be as essential as the quarterly.

7. Materials for use in missionary programs, week-day church schools, vacation church schools, junior church, and for the Sunday evening period, are being provided.

8. A graded list of books for the children's home and church libraries; wall pictures; furnishings and equipment for the child's room in the home as well as in the church; birthday, attendance, invitation cards; special day materials, and other worth-while supplies are recommended.

9. Books for use in recreation and expression, source books, songbooks, the Junior Stewardship Record Book, together with the books published by the Herald Publishing House which can be graded in the children's division, have been recommended.

Leaflets are now ready for distribution which will suggest the material and supplies for each department in the children's division. These may be obtained from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

III. The workers with children are being trained through classwork in reunions, institutes, and conferences, through the gaining of credit in correspondence courses, and through personal correspondence. Arrangements have been made for people to specialize for their work with any particular age group in the children's division. It is absolutely impossible to reach our objective through the use of a well-planned program, unless the parents and workers are trained to use the program effectively.

IV. An organization is being planned which will allow the leader to direct the growth and development of children in harmony with the program planned. Such an organization provides for the

Treasures—New and Old

A sermon by Elbert A. Smith, April 13, 1930, at the Centennial Conference. Reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

Upon a certain occasion Christ made this observation:

Every scribe that is instructed in the things of the kingdom of heaven is like unto a householder, that bringeth forth from his treasures, things both new and old.

It seems two thousand years ago Christ observed that when he went into the homes of the people they brought forth their treasures, and, included in the treasures, were some old, familiar heirlooms—treasures new and old. Human nature has not changed at all. If you came into my home today I have certain old treasures that I am proud to show to you, my friends. We have an old mahogany chest of drawers that belonged to Joseph and Emma, my grandfather and grandmother, and I have a snuffbox that belonged to my Grandfather Hartshorn. I have never had any real use for the snuffbox, but still it is a familiar heirloom.

It is especially true, I believe, that when people move from an old country to a new one, they take with them certain treasures. As a church we are not moving into a new country, but we are moving into a new century, and we carry with us certain treasures, new and old. I am inclined this afternoon to briefly recount some of these treasures.

In the way of material assets, the Bishop tells us that we have approximately $4,000,000 against approximately $1,000,000 of liabilities. This is a splendid showing, considering that most of this property has been accumulated within the past twenty-five years. That report does not sound much like the rumors we have heard for several years—that the church is bankrupt. But as a matter of fact, rumor and truth usually bear very little resemblance to each other. They have no family relationship.

Included among these material assets are certain historic treasures, new and old. Among the newer treasures we have this vast Auditorium that already is beginning to stand up prominently in our religious experiences. Thousands of people, as long as they live, will look back to this building as a landmark in their social and religious life. And going back to the old treasures, we have the Kirtland Temple coming down to us from the old church; coming under a court decision—that we are the church in succession, and entitled to all its property and all its rights. That is the only temple on earth built by divine revelation. But aside from this, to us it is a symbol that both God and the laws of the land have recognized us as endowed with the rights and property of the church one hundred years ago.

What will we take for these treasures, new and old? What will we take for the Kirtland Temple? Gomer Griffiths tells us that years ago John D. Rockefeller came to Kirtland and wanted to buy one window from the temple; just one old Colonial window. But he didn't have money enough to buy it. So you can readily see that upon the whole building we would not think to place a valuation for sale. As a matter of fact, most of these assets are not for sale, and should not be.

And so, if the church has such a splendid showing, there should continue the same dependable stream of tithes to meet our current expenses. But, passing from our material assets, we have those that are even more beyond the possibility of evaluation. We have, for example, our old doctrinal message—the gospel of Jesus Christ, committed to this people a hundred years ago; what we have called the first principles making up the foundation of our missionary effort. This people has always had a distinctive message, and it should always have a distinctive minister, presenting that message. No one, under ordinary conditions, listening to one of our preachers, should long be in doubt as to whether he is a Methodist, a Baptist, or an honest-to-goodness, one hundred per cent Latter Day Saint.

Some months ago I received a letter from a hard worker among the priesthood who said, "I have baptized, during the last ninety days, forty-two souls. I expect a hundred this year. And my method is to preach the old Jerusalem gospel, with a preparation of fasting and prayer, and let God give the increase. And so, as we move out in the new century, we should carry with us these simple fundamental doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ. They may lead up, it is true, into the more advanced doctrines, but it is still true that except a man is born of the water and of the Spirit he can not see the kingdom of God—except as he shall be born of the water and of the blood. And so, before there is anything possible of the glories and beauties of Zion, there must be an obedience to the simple, fundamental principles of the gospel.

Then, we have the old fundamental organization of apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers. This, including a first presidency; for it is a fact that if Joseph Smith was not ordained president of the church until some years later, he presided at the organization of the church a hundred years ago, and every day afterwards until the day of his death, and his son after him, for more than fifty years, and his grandson today in the same place.

Bishop Carmichael had a good sister in the West who had become disturbed for some reason, and she said to him, "Why should there be a head of the church when Jesus Christ is the head of the church?" and Bishop Carmichael replied, "Did you ever read the statement in the Bible that the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the church?" She was a married woman. He said to her, "You have a husband? According to the Bible he is your head. Why don't you cut your own head off?" "Well," she said, "I never had thought of that." Though her husband was her head under the law, she had her own head through which to communicate her will. And so the church has its head on earth, through whom Christ, the great Head, communicates his will.

During the past one hundred years some people have gone out from the church and have experimented with church government until they have neither church nor government left.

We move forward into the new century carrying with us the old treasures, and among them the three standard books of the church of God. I remember seeing the late Prophet Joseph Smith standing before the conference, and holding up these three books he declared, "A threefold cord is not usually broken, and when it is broken and one of these books is torn from the other, which God had joined together, inevitably there is trouble." When the slogan went forth, "We have no more use for the books because we have the living oracles," the way was paved for the introduction of apostasy. And whenever one of these books is set aside, the way is paved for the incoming of endless confusion. All three of these books rests on the same basis, and there is not a criticism that I know of that is brought against one of them that can not be brought against the other two.

There is a charge that changes have been made in the Book of Covenants. Critics tell us that there have been 50,000 changes made in the New Testament Scriptures alone. Liberty is found in obedience to the law, and a statement is made, "That which is governed by law is preserved by law," and so we move forward into the new century carrying with us the old treasures of the law.

Whatever we may say about the old-time missionaries, they knew their church books, and there is a saying that no matter what a man may know, if he doesn't know the thing he ought to know about his business, he is an ignorant man; and when a little boy was asked what gross sickness was, he said it was a hundred and forty-four times what ordinary sickness was. And certainly if we go forward, ignorant of the things we ought to know which are contained in the books of this church, we shall be grossly ignorant, no matter what else we may know.

So, as a measure of safety, we carry with us these old treasures—the three standard books of the church. We carry with us the old-time blessings. I presume that if I should give time, two thirds of this vast audience would rise to its feet to testify concerning having seen, heard, or experienced during the past year, some of the gifts of the gospel. I wish to tell you one of my own experiences. Nearly a year ago, or during the month of May, the Joint Council met together, and after solemn prayer and fasting, decided to launch a great missionary program; and to invite the church to go out, and if possible, pile up a record of six thousand converts. And the next day after the council closed, Brother McDowell came down to my house and said that he and President Smith had selected me to write a general epistle to the church, setting forth our desires along that line. I wrote no to the proposition of writing the epistle. I did not seem to have in mind that which would be adequate to the needs of the hour. But I promised to do my best, and after Brother McDowell had gone, I went into the most secret place available, the room where my mother had dwelt for many years, and from which her prayers had ascended up on high, and as I knelt in prayer, the Spirit of the gospel that was with the Saints a hundred years ago came into that room in power, and I rose up immediately, and wrote the epistle which went out from the Presidency on May 28. And under that Spirit I was led to make this promise: Under the mission to preach the gospel to the world, our friends and neighbors and the inhabitants of the earth must hear the gospel sound. Let us replenish our missionary work, that we may awaken our own neighborhoods and communities. So shall we speed the missionaries on their way to their distant fields.

The Quorum of Twelve is enthused with this task. Not less so are we. Will you join with us? Will you support the church with your tithes and offerings, that the missionaries may be sent out in increased number? Will you personally help the missionaries with finances when they visit your locality? Will you support and throw your energies into orderly plans for missionary work that shall develop?

Now, this is the promise: If you will, we say unto you, this will be a notable year in your experience. Prove the Lord in this, and he will bless you. I ask you if that prophecy has not been fulfilled? Because the missionary force moved out under that promise, and under that incentive, the very next month, that of June, broke all previous records in our history for baptism, and the next month (July) had exceeded that of June, and now the statistician comes to the conference and says that the year itself has broken all records in our history.

Among the riches we carry forward with us are the old traditions of the church. Some of them are afraid of tradition, but tradition itself is neither moral or immoral. It is unmoral. It is both good and bad. It is for us to select the good and reject the bad. I do not fear the traditions of the elders, but I am proud to treasure many of the traditions of the past hundred years. While the great battle for prohibition is going forward, I am proud to say that it is traditional that this church should be against liquor. In Kirtland and in Far West and in Nauvoo, before most people dreamed of prohibition, we were ready to prohibit liquor or strong drink. In this age, when there are those seeking riches by violence and by fraud, I am proud of the old traditions of industry that characterized the church. Scores of hostile historians, in spite of their prejudices, have commented on the marvelous industry which characterizes the Saints in Independence and Nauvoo and Kirtland. The idler shall not eat the bread of the laborer is traditional with us. In this age of lawlessness, I am proud that he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land. In this age of companionate marriage and experiments of all sorts, of crumbling homes, I am proud of the old traditions of the sanctity of the Latter Day Saint home. "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else."

I am proud of the heroic history of this church. A hundred years ago next October, we launched our first mission, and four young men, on foot, most of the time in the winter, traveled fifteen hundred miles, frequently eating their frozen bread by the way, and preached to thousands of Gentiles, to Indians, founded Kirtland, came at last to Zion. Oh, I could enumerate scores of examples. When the mob came against the church in Missouri, there were six men who stepped forward and said, "Take us, and do what you will with us; but spare the church." They were willing to purchase the church with their own blood. And Joseph Smith was a heroic figure when he stood on the hilltop overlooking Nauvoo, and said, "I am going as a lamb to the slaughter, but I am calm as a summer morning, and my conscience is void of offense toward God and man." And Hyrum Smith was a heroic figure when

Joseph begged him to turn back and save himself, and he refused to do it. The very morning of the assassination, John Taylor said to Joseph Smith, "I can get a pass out of here, and I will go to Nauvoo and raise the Legion, and we will have you out of here before sundown, if we have to tear down this old jail." But Joseph refused that sort of deliverance. He said, "They will be satisfied with my blood, and spare the church."

Among our treasures have been the noble men and women of the past, the men of a hundred years ago, and the noble men who rallied around the late President Joseph Smith, Bishop Kelley, Joseph Lambert, scores of others that I might mention, whose memory is beyond value, whose influence can not be appreciated in dollars and cents.

I was fortunate in my boyhood home—I always heard the name of the church well spoken of. They were men I was taught to revere. I never heard the voice of slander leveled against them; and neither have my children heard it in my home. I have often said, The greatest asset of the church does not appear on the Bishop's books.

Last Sunday morning, as I sat here in this stand and saw the twelve apostles coming up and serving the ministry the emblems, as they marched by and my eyes rested upon them, one by one, involuntarily I found myself saying, Thank God for Paul Hanson; thank God for J. F. Curtis; thank God for John Garver; thank God for Edwards and Gleazer; and so on, as my eyes rested upon them, without a single exception.

I want to tell you I have been associated closely with the men of the Presidency and the Twelve and the Bishopric, for years. I have seen them behind the scenes; and in opposition to any rumor that you may have heard, I wish to now publicly bear my testimony that they are noble men of God. And while I mention these men of the leading quorums there are hundreds of noble men in the other quorums.

Once in a while one falls away. But think of the hundreds who are true, and I dare say that for every noble man there is at least one noble woman. I know how it is in my experience; it is my lot to be heard from the pulpit and through the press in defense of the gospel of Jesus Christ, but when it comes to living the Christian virtues that are the result of that gospel, the palm goes to my wife. She makes a better application of the gospel in her life than I can do; and I am sure that what is true of my home is true of hundreds of missionaries' homes. And when a man lives for twenty-five years or more with such a woman, he develops a profound reverence for the womanhood of this church. And so I say that the greatest assets of the church do not appear on the bishop's books. The greatest asset of the church is men and women of the church who are living in harmony with the gospel of Jesus Christ. No man can tell how rich this church is, because no man can estimate the value of such men and women; but for their fellowship I am grateful.

And finally, last of all, one of the treasures that we carry with us is the vision of this church. Where there is no vision the people perish, but where there is such a vision with increased unity and increased love and with every developing power, we should move forward in the new century until Zion is fully redeemed.

Just a personal word, by way of parting. One of the treasures of the conference is to meet your friends and shake hands with them. But, for some inscrutable reason, I have suffered a setback in my health during the past few weeks, and I have not been able to go out and mingle with the Saints, and greet them. And so I take this opportunity to greet all of you as my brothers and sisters, and extend to you my love and confidence, and invoke God's blessings to be upon you.

Tithing; and Growth of Character

A sermon by John Blackmore. Mrs. A. Morgan, Reporter.

It would appear to me that this congregation should not leave here this morning without a reference to the passing of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court—William Howard Taft. Rarely has a man reached the heights of the administrative power of the United States, and also the judicial. This congregation, with other congregations of the great land of America, must mourn the loss of that great man, Chief Justice Taft; and in company with these other congregations, we express our sympathy to those who mourn his loss, and the loss that his passing is to this great country.

This morning, throughout the churches of Independence, the speakers will consider the question of "Tithing." And in harmony with the requests of the bishops, my topic and my talk will center around that theme.

I want to take a text which is in harmony with the preacher's privilege and with general custom. It is a text of scripture taken from the Old Testament: "Will a man rob God?" And then Malachi, speaking to the Hebrews, said, "Ye have robbed me in tithes and in offerings." Not with the intention of doing violence to that scripture; not with any motive of changing that message, I want to rearrange the language and give another emphasis:

"Will a man rob his soul?" For the man who refuses to pay his tithes, robs his own soul, and thereby robs God.

This is the interpretation I want to place upon the text, "Will a man rob God?" "Ye have robbed me in tithes and in offerings," and I am asserting that the only way that you can rob God is by robbing your own soul; and when you refuse or neglect to pay your tithes, you are robbing your own souls, and through the impoverishment of your souls, you are robbing God.

I want to refer to another scripture that is very often used by Latter Day Saints: "He that is tithed shall not be burned." Speaking frankly, I do not like the wording of that statement. I do not like that particular piece of scripture, though it is found in our own books. It is negative. I would rather put it in a positive manner: "He that is tithed shall live." He that is tithed shall live, rather than not be burned, because I believe that there are definite principles of law back of and behind the principle of tithing, in which the paying of your tithes develops your own soul, and the principle of development is life. If I may convey that thought to you this morning, I will consider that I have given to you a message worth while.

Tithing is a doctrine of the Christian church. It was taught and practiced by early Christians. Scripture and secular history are replete with evidence concerning tithing; and so, the question of the rightfulness of tithing is not a point of difference between religious bodies. The question of the rightfulness of tithing is not a matter of difference between Latter Day Saints. There might be a question of difference as to the method of paying the tithes. Methods might be disputed, but the principle of tithing can not be disputed. This morning we will not concern ourselves with the question of the method of paying tithing. When a man believes thoroughly in the principle, the method will become secondary, and there will be no severe dispute in regard to the method. The principle will be the vital thing, and it is the conversion to that principle in which we are particularly interested.

I do not propose to convert you by the multiplication of Bible or scriptural texts. I assume that as Latter Day Saints you have made a conservative study in regard to the different scriptures relating to the question of tithing. I also assume that biblically you are converted. I would merely refer you to the scripture, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I have commanded you?" I believe that is the only scriptural statement necessary for me to read.

We want now to make a survey of the great principles of life, and I wish to suggest to you that every principle in the universe has a utility value. If it did not have a utility value, it would cease to exist. Every principle that the great Creator has initiated and placed somewhere in the universe, has a definite value. If it were not so it would cease immediately. Somehow or other, in the great principle and functioning of the universe, each principle is necessary and essential, so we would say that God's way is one of definite values.

There exists a very definite reason for the fact of creation. Every act of God can be definitely justified. Every part and phase of the creation is vital and essential in its relationship to the whole. Even the smallest principle in the great law of the universe is essential to the greatness and the stability of the whole. We would say every law is vital, and there exists a definite reason for each phase of the law. There are definite reasons for the laws of nature, and there exist definite reasons for the laws of life. Those biological laws, those great mental laws that the department of Religious Education today is so vitally interested in, and those great spiritual laws also in which the whole of the church is so vitally and actively concerned are all essential, and part of the great laws of life. We would say that there is a need for definite obedience to the whole law. There is definite need for this obedience to the whole law, because the laws of growth are fundamental. Christ said, "I come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly," but Christ intended that we would engage in and secure that life by the processes of growth, and by no other method.

Latter Day Saints do not believe in the eleventh hour type of conversion. The Latter Day Saints' philosophy does not believe that a man can suddenly be transformed from the low, degenerate type to the high celestial type. We do not believe that transformation can be accomplished in a moment of time. In the philosophy of this church the law of growth is fundamental. May I suggest to you, it is an eternal process in experience, and may I, for a moment or two, play upon that word eternal, "an eternal process in experience." In other words, we would say that growth is an eternal process, and the whole of the philosophy of this church is centered around the great principle, the eternal principle, of growth: It is a constant and gradual development of the personality of your soul, and that growth is not ended when this life departs. The principle of growth goes on in the great eternal future. And over there, yonder, this church believes that the laws of growth are still in progress. So the principles of life exist that man might grow, and if you will not mind my doing it, this morning, I will substitute the word life for gospel. We usually speak of the principles of the gospel; but the gospel can not be made distinct from life, and so actually it is the principles of life that exist and are eternal that man might grow.

Very often we indulge in a little self-satisfaction, and we make the word gospel mean just the little things that are included in our theology or our religious notions; but I believe, somehow or other, the word gospel is greater and grander than that. It is the great good things and the greatest things and the best things that can come to human understanding by which we may grow and develop and secure a greater personality of soul. We would say that the principles of life, the fundamental truths, are the essential elements in the philosophy of this church.

The principle of tithing, the principle of giving, is an essential element in the whole of that process. It is essential in the complete growth of the individual, and the principle of giving has a definite utility value in your own life. We would say that the principle of tithing in the church is based upon man's need; his spiritual need—not the need of the church as a whole, but the needs of the individual first, and the group second.

I am going to make this assertion: you can not grow to the greatest spiritual attainment possible unless you indulge in the principle of giving. It is fundamental, and so we would say that tithing has a spiritual value and significance, and it is essential for the complete development, the complete salvation of the individual. It therefore immediately becomes a saving principle for the individual first, and for the group second.

I do not believe that God wants sycophants: men who will bow down before him to gratify some blind impulse of fear or superstition, or merely to have their barns filled with goods. I do not believe God respects the man who merely pays his tithing that he might secure barns that are full of grain, because if that were true, then God would be untrue to the great principle of life. God desires that we pay our tithing on the basis of life, and not for selfishness, and if I pay my tithing that my barns may be full, that I might secure greater material goods, then basically the motive is selfishness, and I am out of harmony with the great principle of love. So our obedience to the principle, and the idea of giving must have an intelligent association. It must be a reasoned obedience, an intelligent obedience, motivated by a common and genuine desire to realize the best in your own development. Not that your barns might be full, but that your personality may increase; that your soul might expand; that your spiritual tone might be elevated; that you may radiate light to other folks is the reason for the existence of the law of tithing.

We want to discuss, now, the principle of giving upon the individual who keeps that law or principle. First, the principle of giving develops altruism as distinct from selfishness. Giving is the only antidote for selfishness. There is no other way in the great creation of God by which you can eliminate selfishness from yourself, and from your soul, except by and through the principle of giving. Our spiritual nature, or our spiritual capacity, develops as we express kindness, sympathy, and love. The way of giving is the process of development in terms of practical love and demonstrated sympathy. We would say, then, that the way of giving develops a practical love, not merely a sentimental feeling of love, but love in word and in deed. Not in word only, but also in deed. We might sing of love, we might pray about love, we might listen to sermons about love, we might think about love and sympathy, but unless we practice the processes of giving, we will never develop in our souls the great attribute of love.

Tithing develops a trait of character that is essential, and that trait of character is the power to do despite the personal cost. That can be developed only by giving. Men can develop within themselves the great power and the great urge to accomplish only by giving of themselves to the great task before them; and, therefore, the only way you can develop your soul is by the giving of yourself; and your money is only a part of you. It has meant your time and your labor. You give that you might develop yourself. Tithing is not merely the paying of money, but is a reaping of its results. Tithing, my dear friends, will not buy you a place in heaven, but it is of value to you as you develop yourselves for heaven. May I repeat that? Tithing will not buy you a place in heaven, but it is of value to you as you develop yourselves for heaven. It is a preparation for a better life, a better social order.

One can not change his thought habits in a day. It is impossible. Though your habits might apparently be unnoticed, yet they are deeply embedded in your own personality, and you can not change them in a day. You can not lift yourself out of the motives of selfishness into the realm of a great, pure life in a moment of time. It must be a gradual growth upward, and the principle of paying, the principle of giving, the principle of tithing, is an essential element in the process of that growth. It can not be anything else.

We would say that tithing assists in the elimination of selfishness. You can not delay the paying of your tithes and expect to reap the results in character building. To put it another way and make it just a little plainer, you can not expect to delay the day when you will pay your tithing, and say, I will pay it at the end of my life, and expect to reap the results of that slow and gradual process of growth that comes only by the way of giving. It is essential, and must be done now. There is a tremendous soul value in paying your tithe regularly. It is in harmony with the law of growth.

Tithing helps in lifting the group. It is a community obligation. A man, my dear friends, does not increase his responsibility when he joins the church. A woman does not increase her responsibility when she joins the church. I have met people, and you have, who have said, I can not join the church because I can not assume that responsibility. They are deceiving themselves by a fallacy. My responsibilities were just as great before I entered the church as they are today. Your responsibilities were just as great before you entered the church as they are today. The man walking down the street has the responsibility of good citizenship, and he can not respond to the principle of good citizenship without he takes cognizance of the great institutions that are perpetuating the very best and the highest in ethics and morals. To be the best kind of a citizen he must give his moral and his financial support to some church. What would Independence be if it were not for the churches this morning? I include not only our own church, but other churches; the other institutions of religion that are endeavoring, in a very brave and courageous fashion, to project into the future the very best of morals and ethics. We see definitely, a man has no right to consider himself a good citizen unless he is willing to give his very best, his moral, and even his financial support to one of these institutions—of course, preferably our own institution, our own church. Yet as he walks down the street he has the responsibility resting upon his shoulders to respond to the principle of good citizenship, and that responsibility rests upon his shoulders before he becomes a member of the church, as much so as it does afterward. A man's responsibility does not increase when he joins the church. It is upon his shoulders before he affiliates with the church—the great responsibility of supporting the best institutions of the community.

He has the responsibility of living the best kind of a life that he can live. He has the responsibility of developing the best in his own soul it is possible for him to develop. He can not develop the best in his own soul unless he is prepared even to reach down into his pocket and by the method of sacrifice be prepared to give of himself to the institution that is making civilization possible, and is perpetuating and projecting the best of that civilization into the future. He can not expect to enjoy the sanctions of society and the very best that he is enjoying in terms of morals and ethics and understanding, unless he is prepared to support the institutions that have brought out of the past the great revelations of the seers and sages.

He must, in response to good manhood, support the church; and therefore we say that tithing helps to lift the whole group. It not only helps to lift the little church that we may be a member of, but it helps to lift the whole civilization. I venture the guess this morning—I may be wrong—but if a great number of the good people of the world would refuse to further give of themselves and of their substance to the church, then civilization would begin to break, and we would enter into an era of great immorality, sin, and decay. Therefore, on that basis alone, the principle of tithing is necessary in the process of life. When Christ said, I come that ye might have life and have it more abundantly, he did not mean just you; just the individual. But back of that great statement of the Savior are all the vital forces by which society grows; by which man progresses; and by which the very best in life is being constantly attained. Therefore, may I repeat as the church is vital and essential in the life of the community, of the country, and in the best life of the world, then a man and a woman should be prepared to give of themselves, if necessary, by the way of money to perpetuate and build up these institutions. That is why tithing in this church is necessary.

In relating that principle to the principle of growth of the individual; again, you can not respond to the very best urges in your own soul and not do that thing. If you refuse to do it, then you are tearing down within yourself the great forces of life and the forces of growth, and you will suffer. Now you can understand why I said at the beginning that I did not particularly care for that scripture that says, "He that is tithed shall not be burned." I would rather put it positively and say, "He that is tithed shall live." The church that is tithed shall live, and the world that tithes itself religiously will live on, and the civilization will grow.

The keeping of God's laws transforms the life. God does not want your money or your goods just to have them. God primarily wants you. He wants you to grow and develop the personality of your own soul, and the way you can do it is by the whole law; and the principle of tithing, the principle of giving, is a part of that process.

The ultimate defense of the tithing law is that it is a developer of character. Pay your tithe, my dear friends, and grow spiritually; grow in character; grow in altruism; in love and in sympathy.

There are some elements of growth you can not reach any other way than by the way of tithing, the way of giving.

And in His Name—Number 1

By Thomas S. Williams

Names of Bible characters, social groups, communities, and festivals were bestowed and in early Hebrew history invented because of their special or peculiar meaning. They were of greater significance than to be used as a mere means of identifying one individual from another. In a number of instances the reason or motive for giving the name followed its pronouncement, the conjunctions because and for being used. We shall note some of these as we continue our outline.

What's in a Name

A Hebrew name may be descriptive of an uncommon physical appearance (Genesis 25: 25), or be suggested by some incident during birth and infancy. (1 Chronicles 4: 9; Exodus 2: 10.) It may refer to a unique position into which one is born (Genesis 3: 20; 4: 25), or to a fancied characteristic or anticipated achievement in the newly born. (Judges 13: 24; 1 Samuel 25: 25.)

It may allude to a special favor divinely or otherwise conferred (1 Samuel 4: 21), or to a particular relationship with Jehovah or the people. (Genesis 41: 45; Matthew 1: 21.) Scriptural names containing el or jah, or a combination of both as in Elijah have reference to some desired or accepted relationship with the Creator. In many instances names expressing the religious thought of the day were created and given. (See Young's Analytical Bible Concordance for interpretation of Eliab, Eliezer, etc.)

A given name may be derived from a historical fact or a prophecy concerning some future event in the nation. It may have reference to the spiritual condition of the people. (Hosea 1st chapter; 1 Samuel 4: 21.) A great phenomena of nature, the division of the earth, suggested the name of Peleg. (Genesis 10: 25.)

These references make evident that knowledge of the original significance of Hebrew names, especially those of leaders, communities, and festivals, will add to one's understanding of Bible history and increase one's comprehension of the religious thought of that day. This is particularly noticeable in the name of Jesus Christ and his relation to the expected Messiah and the origin and development of the Christian church.

Change of Name

Names once given did not always remain. Some extraordinary experience, a change in the manner of living, or a transfer of loyalty would in many cases (if not always) be accompanied by a complete change or alteration of the Hebrew name. A covenant was usually sealed in this manner. The new name interpreted set forth the place or peculiar part one was to have (or already had) in the new life.

Abraham, chosen of God to be the chief progenitor of many peoples, was given a new name which contained an allusion to the promise: ". . . thy name shall be Abraham; for a father of many nations have I made thee." (Genesis 17: 5.) For similar reasons the name of Jacob was changed to Israel; Oshea to Joshua; Simon to Cephas; and Saul to Paul.

This practice of altering or substituting another name was not peculiar to the Hebrews. It was a custom observed by nearly all primitive social groups. When the individual was initiated into full tribal membership, he was given a new name. This was also done when one would move or be moved to another country, or when he entered another religious group.

One of the Pharaohs of Egypt set a prince of the royal line of David upon the throne of Judah, and when so doing gave him a new name. (2 Kings 23: 34.) Later a king of Babylon removed another ruler from the same throne, made his uncle king in his stead, and gave the latter a new name. (2 Kings 24: 17.) The name of Daniel was changed by the ruler of Babylon. This was done so that the name of the young man would be "according to the name of" the Babylon god. (Daniel 4: 8.)

In primitive thought, the personal name of an individual is not merely an attribute, it is an integral part of his self, his ego.—Religions of Primitive Peoples, Brinton, p. 93.

Since one's name was a part of the self, the continuation of the old appellation after a transfer of loyalty would be unthinkable. A new mode of life is impossible without a new self, and a new self is impossible in the absence of a new name. A man's name must be "according to the name" of his God. The direction of his religious devotion and his manner of living must harmonize with his own name, and his name must be in accord with that of his God.

We note this thought is carried over into Christian thought and terms. Revelation 3: 14 contains the promise of a new name for those faithful to the Cause of Christ: "I will write upon him the name of my God, . . . I will write upon him my new name." A name seems to be related to one's personality, and that of Deity contains or outlines the qualities of the divine personality. It is with good reason an ancient writer said: "A good name is better than riches." (Proverbs 22: 1.) The phrase evidently had deeper meaning than mere reputation.

The Name of God

The names of men being of vital importance, how sacred indeed must be the name of God. To know God was to be familiar with and understand the meaning of his name. To know him was to be acquainted with his attributes and no man could gain this experience without some knowledge of the divine name. Deity possessed the qualities described in his name, his appellation summing up his personality and expressing the nature of his person.

The two names given the Creator by the Hebrews point out some phase of the divine character. Elohim "contains an allusion to his majesty and power." Jehovah "refers to his absolute existence, his eternity and unchangeableness." (Isaiah 26: 12; 2; Exodus 3: 13-16.) ". . . this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." (John 17: 3.)

Knowledge of Deity's name was necessary to personal relations with him. Loss of name implied the end of that experience. (Exodus 3: 11-15.) Possession of the name was necessary to do full honor to divinity. How can one pay his respects to a heavenly personage unless he is made acquainted with his characteristics. (Judges 13: 17.) Divine "help is in the name of the Lord," and the emotions of fear and trust are experienced through a comprehension of the meaning of the Name of Names. (Psalms 124: 8; 9: 10; 1 Kings 8: 43.)

The People and the Name of God

It was King David's idea that God brought Israel out of Egypt that he (God) might make himself a name by means of the wonderful things he would do for his people. (2 Samuel 7: 23.) Through his people God designed to magnify his name above the names of other gods, at that time in the land. When a people accepted God they took upon themselves his name. (Deuteronomy 28: 10; Numbers 6: 27; 2 Chronicles 7: 14.) In all their activities they carried with them the "name of their God." (Micah 4: 5; Zechariah 10: 12.)

The Holy Name was either profaned or sanctified through the conduct of the people. The type of performance was the determining factor.

. . . I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the heathen shall know that I am the Lord, . . . when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes.—Ezekiel 36: 23; also 43: 7, 8.

The name of the Creator is continually blasphemed by oppressing the poor. (Isaiah 52: 5;

NEWS AND LETTERS

Los Angeles, California

Central Branch

April 21.—The last two weeks of March were very busy ones for the Saints of Central Los Angeles Branch, especially so for Brother and Sister Glaude Smith, as they were making arrangements to bid us all farewell, Brother Smith having received word that his work for the coming year would be in Denver, Colorado. While we realize that it probably was for the best interest of the work as a whole that Brother and Sister Smith were called to another field, it did not lessen the regret when it came time to say good-bye. This was fully demonstrated at several farewell parties given by the Ladies' Aid Society, the Temple Builders, the Idola Club, and the trustees.

On the evening of February 14 the Mizpah Chapter of Temple Builders gave a buffet supper in honor of Sister Myrtle Smith. Hostesses for the occasion were Sisters Bernice Wagnon, Gertrude Crum, Hazel Klein, Mabel Crum, Mildred Sima, and Alice Hayman. Sister Smith was presented a coolie coat.

The regular monthly meeting of the Idola Club was held at the home of Brother and Sister L. B. Shippy Tuesday evening, March 25. After a short business session the meeting was turned over to the entertainment committee, which had arranged a program as a farewell to Brother and Sister Smith. Piano numbers were given by Brother John F. Martin; vocal solos by Sister Stella Kelley Hodges, a reading by Irene Stearns, and vocal duets by Brother and Sister Smith. Brother L. B. Shippy gave the address to Brother and Sister Smith, presenting them with gifts from members of the Idola Club.

March 31 the trustees sponsored a general farewell party, which was held at the church. East Los Angeles Branch and Lennox Mission associated with Central in this farewell to our pastor and his wife. A splendid program had been arranged. Talks were given by W. E. Badham, trustee; Associate Pastors Ray T. Knowlton and L. L. Sutherland; and by W. J. Nuckles, leader of the Lennox Mission. Vocal solos were given by Mrs. Mildred Sima and Stella Kelley Hodges; Duets by Pearl Crum and Mabel Crum, Doctor Joseph Mather and his daughter, Mrs. Mildred Sima, and Brother Glaude and Sister Myrtle Smith. There was a story by Sister Minna Mae Lewis; and Sister Garnet Sames, choir president, on behalf of the choir read a beautiful poem and presented Brother and Sister Smith the gift from the general assembly, sponsored by the choir. The party closed with a song by the assembly suggested and led by Sister Stella Hodges, choir leader.

Sunday morning, March 23, we were glad to have as speaker Brother Horahitu, a native of Tahiti. This brother can not speak English and the interpretation of his talk was ably rendered by Brother Joseph Yager, missionary for several years in the Society Islands. Both of these brothers were on their way to General Conference. Brother Horahitu is a prominent man in his own country, an elder in the church, and the official representative of the Tahitian people to the General Conference.

Sunday evening, March 23, there was a beautiful baptismal service preceding the preaching service, at which eight members were added to our number. Brother Jerry Parr, Sister H. Grace Omohundro, Sister Gertrude E. Kirkpatrick, Jack Rodney Stearns, Brother Thomas Donald Bell, Sister Hilda Nuckles, Sister Jennie V. Nuckles, and Brother Richard E. Eggleston were baptized at this service and confirmed immediately afterward. Brother Carl Crum was the speaker at this evening service. Brother Crum and his wife had just returned from missionary work in Hawaii and were on their way to General Conference.

Brother Glaude Smith preached his farewell sermon to Central Los Angeles Saints Sunday morning, March 30. Brother Smith has done a splendid work in Los Angeles and has endeared himself to the hearts of all who know him. It was with a great degree of regret and sadness that we saw him leave.

On this day we were pleased to welcome visitors from Hawaii, Margarethe Pahau and her son Bobby Pahau, Piilani Victor and her son, Kehau Victor. There were also present two brothers from South America whose names the writer did not obtain. These people were on their way to General Conference.

In the evening, the third of the "Know Your Own Church" programs was splendidly rendered by Brothers L. L. Sutherland, Wilbur D. Gillen, Herbert Blakeman, Orlin Hagaman, Richard Wagnon, and Drexel Knowlton. Sister Fern McConley directed.

Sunday morning, April 6, was the centennial communion service. There was a goodly number in attendance, and a splendid spirit prevailed throughout the service. The evening service on this date consisted of a splendid biblical play presented under the direction of Sister Mabel Crayne. The leading role was played by Maenard D. Hall, ably supported by Gladys Hall, Lloyd Crayne, Herbert Blakeman, Drexel Knowlton, Jack Forsythe, and Jerry Garner.

While a number of our members are absent attending General Conference, we who remained at home have been very pleased with the reports on the conference which have been ably presented to us through Brother Kenneth Curtis and members of the Dramatic Club. Doctor Joseph Mather, who spent the first few days of the conference in Independence, going and coming by airplane, was back with us Sunday morning, April 13, and gave a very interesting talk about his trip.

The work goes steadily forward in Los Angeles. Assistant Pastors R. T. Knowlton and L. L. Sutherland are ably conducting branch affairs until the arrival of the new pastor.

Jeremiah 34: 16.) The Apostle Paul charged the Roman saints that the name of God was treated in like manner by those who were violaters of the law. (Romans 2: 24.) Special attention is called to scripture on this point found in Proverbs 30: 8, 9.

With the broader conception of taking upon oneself the name of the Lord comes deeper meaning relative to profaning his name or taking it in vain. Those who have broken the divine covenant and whose conduct belies their profession are in so doing desecrating the Name. An old Hebrew phrase says: "Hypocrites must be exposed, for they profane the name."

Oshoto, Wyoming

Members of Oshoto Branch came together for an all-day meeting April 6. The opening meeting was Sunday school at eleven o'clock, which was followed by communion service. A spiritually uplifting sacramental and prayer hour was enjoyed, one young man being spoken to by the Spirit and admonished to keep clean habits, those free from tobacco and strong drink.

A basket dinner followed the morning fast, the members eating from a common table.

In the afternoon service the sermon was by T. V. Cole, who gave some splendid thoughts.

April 13 was a beautiful day, and called to Sunday school a large attendance.

The Easter program by the Sunday school was given on Easter Sunday. The afternoon sermon was by Brother Horace Hartshorn. His audience was very attentive.

A Mother's Day program is being planned for May 11.

Some refreshing rains have recently swept over this region, and we are thankful for them.

Mallard, Iowa

April 28.—Out-of-town visitors during the last two months have included friends from Independence, Missouri, Pomeroy and Albert City, Iowa, and Long Beach, California. Brother and Sister Albert Nesshoefer and daughter, Alberta, of Long Beach, were members of this branch until about six years ago, and we were very pleased to see them once more. They arrived March 29, and expect to remain until June 1.

March 28 a social evening was held at the home of Brother and Sister Benjamin Fish.

The morning of April 27 little Chester Christensen was blessed by Brother E. L. Edwards, of Pomeroy. The parents are not members of the faith, but we hope our lives may be a leading power to them, urging them to become citizens of the kingdom of God.

Sister Mattie Ward returned home April 28 after a four weeks stay at the hospital in Savannah where she had a cancer removed. She is yet in a weak condition, and our prayers are that God will bless her with strength and health.

I was permitted to attend the entire session of General Conference. I feel that it was a wonderful conference. Everything was arranged the best it could be, and the spirit which prevailed throughout all the meetings was very good and comforting. I feel that much credit is due the Saints of Independence for the great work they did to accommodate the visiting members. All class work, all programs, and all services were instructive and of help to the attendants. Surely those who were permitted to attend the conference will go out with a greater desire and determination to help redeem Zion.

Benjamin, William, and Elizabeth Fish, Norman Ward, and William Truog from Mallard Branch attended conference a few days.

We are pleased to have the same missionaries returned to our district.

MRS. FRED HAHN.

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

April 29.—The centennial anniversary of the church, April 6, opened with good attendance at Sunday school. Sacramental service was in charge of A. E. Anderton, H. E. French, and J. E. Matthews. A good spirit was present, and there were many earnest testimonies. Comfort was given through prophecy. Visitors were present from Springfield, Ohio, Lansing, Michigan, and Dayton, Ohio.

In the evening Brother J. E. Matthews took for a theme "The Restoration."

Edgar R. Kimball was ordained to the office of priest Wednesday evening, April 9, at the prayer service. Business meeting followed, and arrangement was made to remodel and redecorate the church.

Doctor W. B. Reeves preached on "The gospel net" at the evening hour April 13.

The largest attendance in the history of this branch was had Easter Sunday. Classes did not convene, the time being occupied by a program of songs and recitations. Easter candies were distributed to the children. The church was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns, and Easter lilies. The morning service followed with an Easter scripture reading by Bishop H. E. French, and the cantata, "The thorn-crowned King," by a quartet, Hazel Gribben, Lucinda Madden, Ethel Kirkendall, and Ada Bierly. Vera M. Hunter played the organ.

Jane Todd, a Sunday school pupil, was baptized at 6.30 by R. E. Madden.

The Women's Department met April 17 to share a pot-luck dinner at noon. Twenty-four members were present. A talk was given by Sister Edna Zieschang, of First Columbus Branch, on "Beautiful Ohio."

Sister Lena Wemlinger is improving. She is able now to be out.

"Appreciation" was the theme of G. H. Kirkendall the morning of April 27. That evening R. E. Madden read for a lesson John 11, preaching on the topic "Positive and negative."

Brooklyn, New York

Park Place and Schenectady Avenue

Now that the Centennial Conference is a matter of history Brooklyn Branch settles down, with the rest of the church to the beginning of a new century. On Sunday, April 27, we welcomed back several of those who left to attend conference, among them our pastor and wife, who were presented a large bouquet of flowers as a "welcome home" gift from the two men's classes of the Sunday school. About twenty of our number attended the conference. Those who have arrived home are enthusiastic in their praise of all conference activities—the oratorio, the classes, and the organization of the meetings. Especially were they impressed by the desire for study and preparation shown by those in attendance.

During the absence of the pastor, the pulpit was filled by local speakers, including J. A. Jacques, Roy Squire, Paul Belleisle, Charles Hield, Archie Hawkins, and Glen Parrish. Easter Sunday a half hour was devoted to Easter songs and recitations by the primary department, directed by Ada Schenck, followed by a play, "He is risen," given by the junior and intermediate departments, under the leadership of Sister Paul Belleisle.

The Women's Department held a food sale and social in the church basement some time ago.

We have had two visiting speakers since last report, Brother Frank Mesie, of Sherrill, New York, and Brother William Chandler, of England. The latter was en route to conference.

Brother and Sister Albert Potts are the parents of a baby boy, born March 25. He has been named Donald Albert. Sister Potts has been very ill but is able to be out again.

Another whose illness was for a time the cause of much concern is Brother Ephraim Squire. It was feared that he would be unable to attend conference, but he was greatly blessed by administration, and with his wife and daughter was able, though a few days late, to make the trip.

We are glad to see again Brother Ed. Brown and family, and to know that Brother Brown is in such improved health. We regret, however, that business makes it necessary for them to move to Providence.

The Temple Builders, with Sister Howard Mousley as leader, gave a Saint Patrick's Day social and dinner the evening of March 17. A program was given in the manner of a radio program. About twenty-five dollars was taken in, which the girls wish to use toward the purchase of a pipe for the organ some day to be installed in the Auditorium. This group of young women meet at the Mousley home every two weeks, where one of their number prepares and serves a dinner as a lesson in home economics. Mrs. Edward Spencer, a graduate in home economics from Columbia University, supervises the planning and preparation of the dinners. After dinner the girls spend the rest of the evening in a lesson in basketry, taught by Mildred Chatham, a student of Pratt Institute of Arts and Sciences. One of the group, Ethel Waterhouse, has been quite sick, but is now improving.

South Bend and Mishawaka Branch

Mishawaka, Indiana, Delaware and Reddick Streets

Activities continued during March and April in the South Bend and Mishawaka Branch. Attendance has been very good at all meetings. The Sunday school has an enrollment of ninety-seven, and has passed the one hundred mark in attendance nearly every Sunday since the church was opened.

The first week in April the church building was closed in order that the walls and ceiling might be plastered and other improvements added, making it more comfortable for all.

The pulpit has been occupied during the months by Elders McKnight, Freeman, Coonfare, and Brother Forest Myers.

March 11 Brother Charles Ferry took a carload to Berrien Springs, Michigan, to conduct the funeral service of Sister Elizabeth Maynard. The service was held in the United Brethren Church, and a large and appreciative audience gathered to pay their last respects.

The "Builders" gave a Saint Patrick's party March 15 at the home of Brother and Sister Ralph Wynn. A pleasant evening was reported. Sister N. B. Weaver is the teacher of this class.

The Department of Recreation and Expression sponsored a party at the home of Brother and Sister Charles Stephenson March 22. A delightful evening was spent.

April 6 two families of Mishawaka Saints drove to Elkhart to the morning service, and the following Sabbath two families from Elkhart met with this local. There were also visitors present from Dowagiac and Coldwater, Michigan.

Sisters Orpha Coonfare, Myrtle Perry, Abbie Hartnell, and Lillian Freeman, and Brother Charles Ferry, of Mishawaka and South Bend, and Brother and Sister M. J. Willsey, of Elkhart, attended General Conference from this branch. They returned very much enthused.

Easter Sunday was marked by a program under the auspices of junior worship in the morning. In the evening Sister Audrey Hartwell's class presented a little pageant which was much enjoyed. Elder C. B. Freeman was the speaker in the evening.

April 16 the three small children of Brother and Sister Taylor were blessed under the hands of V. L. Coonfare and C. B. Freeman.

April 21 we were glad to have Elder Percy Farrow and wife and friends stop with us on their way to Cleveland. Brother Farrow preached a helpful sermon. He was one of the first to conduct an extended missionary effort in Mishawaka.

dent, closed the service with brief comments on the subjects treated by the various officers.

The church grounds have been seeded to blue grass, and several fine trees have been set out. Having a location right on the highway, the Saints feel doubly the responsibility to maintain a neat appearance in church building and grounds.

The sisters are meeting to do some work for the Sanitarium.

One of our oldest members, Sister H. N. Hansen, is enjoying a visit from her sister, Sister Lapworth, of Cameron, Missouri. Sister Lapworth gave the branch a talk on the Sunday school as it is conducted at her home.

Stockton, California

Clay and Sutter

Since the commencement of General Conference attendance has decreased in this branch to some extent. However, many of the members have been keeping in close touch with affairs in Independence through the Daily Herald, and the Saints in Stockton are fired with zeal and devotion to the progress of the church.

In the last two months we have had as visitors Brother and Sister Holden, of San Francisco. Brother Holden was the speaker March 9, and on the following Sunday Brother and Sister Hinton accompanied them on a second visit. Brother Hinton preached that day. Brother W. H. Dawson, pastor of Sacramento Branch, motored to Stockton April 13, and delivered an instructive sermon on "The nineteenth century Prophet." This sermon cleared up several misunderstandings in the minds of nonmembers who were present. April 27 Brother A. E. Frazier, pastor of Modesto Branch, delivered a forceful sermon on "Sacrifice."

The Department of Women gave a Jiggs supper March 13, clearing thirteen dollars. On April 3 they gave a cafeteria supper, clearing more than thirteen dollars.

A company of twenty-one characters, under the direction of Doctor W. C. Wood, instructor of religious dramatics at the College of the Pacific in Stockton, has been rehearsing an Easter play, "Peter's Vision," written by Doctor Wood. Easter Sunday they presented it at the church in Stockton, and the next Sunday at Modesto. This play is in itself a sermon and presents a clear picture of conditions existing in the Holy Land at the time of the crucifixion of the Savior.

Stockton Branch has a hopeful outlook at present, because its members are eager to do their part in achieving the tasks which are before the local.

Hazel Dell Branch

Weston, Iowa

The Saints of this branch have had the pleasure of late of listening to several different visiting members as well as men of the local ministry. One sermon which received undivided attention was the talk of Pastor J. A. Hansen concerning his trip to General Conference.

A fine Easter program was given by some of the Sunday school children, being followed by a sermon by Brother James C. Jensen on the theme "Resurrection." This treated Old Testament days up to the time of Christ.

The last Sunday in April an all-day meeting was held. Speakers in the morning were Elders Hans Andersen and P. T. Anderson, two brothers who are always willing to tell of their faith and hope. Brother P. T. Anderson is the missionary appointed to the Denmark Mission. The first time he went on a mission was twenty-five years ago. In the afternoon several short talks were given by the officers of the branch on such topics as "Duty," "Prayer in the home," etc. P. T. Anderson told the congregation some of his experiences as a missionary, and Nels Johnson, district presi-

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

The members of this branch are enjoying the warm spring sunshine, the songs of the birds, new grass, and green leaves on the trees.

Brother O. A. Rexroad, of McDermott, was the speaker the last Sunday evening in March and the first in April. His messages were joyfully received by the Saints, who commend his effort.

Brother Walter Culp, of Pleasant Valley Branch, appeared in the McDermott pulpit April 6 in the evening.

There is fair attendance at all services. Brother Walter Culp was in charge of the sacramental hour. Brothers Donald Bealor and E. E. Williams assisted. A degree of the Spirit was felt.

The Bible Class has again been started. On the first Saturday evening more than fifty attended. We hope this group will continue to grow. This class is planning a Mother's Day program.

It seems that the priesthood are working harder than ever before to shape the attitude of the branch toward the work there is to do.

Brother Donald Bealor preached the evening of April 13. On this day during prayer and praise service Brother Walter Culp was commended for his work by the Spirit, also Brother E. E. Williams.

Brother Charles Culp, who was hit by an automobile April 19, is in the general hospital. We understand that he is suffering from a broken leg, a broken arm, a crushed breast, and cuts about the head and face.

Easter Sunday found a goodly number at Sunday school and at prayer meeting. The latter proved highly spiritual, the Spirit speaking to the congregation and admonishing Brother Albert Bond to prepare himself for a work.

Graceland Chats

Men's Tennis Match

The Graceland Tennis team defeated the quartet of Simpson College (Indianola, Iowa) on their courts last week. Graceland team consisted of Leroy Dick, Traverse City, Michigan; Bud Fisher and Myron Fisher, Boston, Massachusetts; and Dick Wildermuth, Plano, Illinois. The Fishers were given a good battle in the doubles. The Graceland team won every match.

Phidela Rice in Recital

Phidela Rice favored Lamoni last Saturday evening in a hurried trip across the country from Boston to Texas. Through Florence Thompson, instructor in speech, who attended his summer school last year, this trip was made possible for the artist course.

"David Garrick" was the play selected for the Lamoni recital. Mr. Rice's genial greeting and directness won the friendship of the audience, his mellow voice, subtleties of shadings, adherence to transition of character impersonations, and vivacity won their admiration of his work. He responded to repeated encoring with a poem "If we had the time," and the grave diggers' scene from "Hamlet."

On Sunday morning Mr. Rice attended the service at the Brick Church, reading the one hundred and fiftieth psalm and "The servant in the house."

Student Election Held

This year's election of student leaders called up unusual enthusiasm. Graceland students are alert to campus interests, and this interest aroused much discussion this year. The elective offices are five: president of Athenian Federation, editors and business managers for the school paper, The Record and the annual, The Acacia. Nominations were made in Friday chapel, elections being conducted by ballot on the following Monday.

Annual Freshman Kid Party

In Briggs Hall, Friday, April 25, the Freshman reverted to kid days. Rompers, short fluffy dresses, sailor hats, boy ties, toys, and dolls gave a colorful outlay of costumes. Squawkers, popguns, and juvenile wails, howls, and yells produced pandemonium.

"Farmer in the dell" opened the games, when the noise could be hushed so that announcement could be heard. Recess was allowed in order that the kiddies might consume peanuts and "all-day suckers." A parade before the judges found Carolyn Miller, Long Beach, California, and Verba

Parker, Des Moines, the cutest couple, Faye Aelick and "Unk" (a guest) cutest single kids.

Strawberry pop (with straws) and lollypops were served for refreshments. While the youngsters strained their vocal chords on kid ditties, the photographer snapped the party.

Noble Kelley, Pauline Siegfried, Lila Emmerson, Almer Sheehy, and Al Fisher were leaders in planning the party.

Lamoni Stake

Easter at the Brick Church

Most of Lamoni's conference-goers had returned by Easter Sunday, and these with several coming from conference to visit in the town and college, made good-sized congregations at the Brick Church. In the morning the choir sang "Burst forth my soul," and Mrs. Marcella Clark sang a beautiful arrangement of a spiritual of the crucifixion. Roy a Cheville delivered the sermon, "On the road to Emmaus," a pastoral sermon of Eastertide.

A vesper-type service was planned for the evening. Screens shut off the tiers of choir seats, leaving a smaller rostrum for the service. A white cross stood at the center and before it an altar with lilies and candles. Baskets of apple blossoms, pots of lilies, and a festoon of lilies on the railing gave a touch of the Easter time.

A small chorus of twelve college students, a girls' trio from the balcony, and Arthur Oakman, soloist, furnished music for the service. Short messages of Easter were brought by two small girls for the children, Almer Sheehy for the youth, and Mrs. Callie B. Stebbins for the adults. As the closing hymn was ending, the main lights of the church were replaced by a small spotlight, centering upon the cross. This with candles before it, gave a beautiful setting for the benediction and the hymn response by the choir. Roy Cheville was in charge.

Meeting of the Workers of the Church School

An interested group of workers in religious education answered the call of the director of the church school for a meeting Thursday, April 24. The General Conference had made an interruption in local work, and so the next three months, until the Lamoni Reunion, is the next unit of work. Stimulation of the General Conference and the necessity of outlining plans for the next period of church school work gave point to the meeting.

The departmental divisions of the church school of the Brick Church were outlined as follows: Preschool (—to four years); beginner, through the first grade; primary, second to fourth grades; junior, fifth to eighth grades; high school, college and adult. It will be seen that the educational unity of the community makes it possible to follow the grading of the public school system. Promotion time comes at the latter part of August, just before the opening of the school and college.

The director asked of each department such questions as these, concerning the next three months: What are your curriculum plans? What are your membership goals? What special projects are you undertaking? What social and recreational plans have you formulated? Boys' and girls' work, teaching of stewardship, etc., came up for detailed discussion.

The Second Milers

The Second Milers are the organized class of young people of the adult department. During the year they have conducted a study class on Sunday mornings, inviting representative workers to discuss the several angles of the church work. On Sunday afternoon they have held another class in the study of the Book of Mormon, and at times a class in dramatics, through the week. The Tenth Legion program has been emphasized.

On several evenings members of the class have visited neighboring branches, presenting programs and assisting in socials. In many instances one-act plays have been given.

Fortnightly, socials of varied nature have been held. Last week it took on the nature of a surprise birthday party for the president, Miss Pearl Leise.

Recently they have undertaken the project of furnishing a room in the Elvin Cottage recently rented by the church school for extension of its educational work.

Central Church

Regular session of the church school opened May 4 at 9.45 in the morning. From 10.50 until noon the congregation worshiped together in another service commemorating the last supper of Jesus and his disciples before the crucifixion of the Master.

In the evening the Lincoln-Lee Dental College Glee Club presented an excellent concert, which was deeply enjoyed by a large congregation. The chorus was directed by Doctor L. E. Davidson, whose acquaintance and talent have previously been enjoyed at Central Church. The address was by Pastor C. E. Wight.

On Sunday afternoon there was a rehearsal of the Stake and Central Choirs.

The young men's Bible class is sponsoring a church banquet Friday evening, May 9, at 6.45 o'clock. A committee of energetic sisters is planning the meal, and a good program is assured.

Brother and Sister J. W. Walburn, for many years residents of Independence and Kansas City, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Sunday, April 27. They were married in Independence in 1880, and two years later were baptized into the church by Brothers Joseph Luff and F. C. Waraky. For many years they were workers in the Bennington Group of Kansas City Stake. A short time ago they took residence with their only daughter, Sister Fred Wamsley, 2412 Cypress. On Sunday at this home a reception was held in their honor, and more than two hundred friends and relatives called to pay their respects to the well-wedded couple. Many little tokens of esteem and affection were left at the home, and their old-time friends, Brothers George Harrington and F. A. Evans, sang for them two old songs. The church joins these friends in wishing Brother and Sister Walburn many more years of happiness and service.

The semiannual conference of the stake will be held Friday, May 16, at 7.45, with the devotional services on Sunday, May 18. Please note the reverse order, as heretofore the business session was on Monday following the Sunday devotional meetings. The election of officers will occur at this meeting.

Argentine Church

Elder W. D. Tordoff was the speaker at 7.45 Sunday evening to a fairly good-sized congregation interested in his message, which was taken from the second chapter of Acts. Brother Tordoff goes to his mission field immediately.

Bennington Heights Church

The Saints are glad to again hold regular services. All seem to have taken on new courage and greater determination to go forward with the work of the church in the new century.

Sunday, April 20, the speaker was Brother Howard Harpam, of Oklahoma, the boy preacher. There was a full house to hear him, and several nonmembers were present who pronounced his sermon "Wonderful!" A violin duet was played by Sisters Tryee and Pauline McCann, accompanied at the piano by Sister Lorena Gross. A solo was sung by Sister Lulu Tyrrell, accompanied at the piano by Sister Dorothy Lentell.

The infant daughter of Brother and Sister Albert Walters was blessed by Brothers Ralph Farrell and Orville Helm.

Sunday, April 27, the sermon in the morning was by Elder R. S. Salyards. In the evening the speaker was Elder Horahitu, of Tahiti, interpreted by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis. The Saints were happy to have this brother in Bennington Heights local and to meet him before he leaves for his home in the South Sea Islands. A solo was sung by Brother Raymond Bliel, accompanied by Sister Marguerite Agin.

Brother and Sister J. W. Walburn, who attended Bennington Heights Church for many years, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary April 27. An account of the celebration appears elsewhere in Kansas City stake news.

Sister Emily Beaman has been ill the past two weeks.

Quindaro Church

Quindaro went eleven in excess of the quota set a year ago for baptisms. April 27 two more were baptized, and the hope is that during this year many others may be added to this local.

Recent speakers have been Elders G. P. Levitt, Bruce E. Brown, G. T. Richards, and Apostle E. J. Gleazer. Many encouraging and uplifting thoughts were expressed by all.

Vistiors of late have included among others members from Port Huron, Applegate, and Mount Clemens, Michigan.

Under the direction of Chorister Otis Swart, some beautiful anthems are being given by the choir.

April 3 Sister Bernice Graham was united in marriage to Jackson Dean, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank Wadlians, by Pastor H. A. Higgins. Only immediate relatives were present. The young couple will be at home at 1608 Walker Avenue, Kansas City, Kansas.

May 4 the service of sacrament was shared by a goodly number. The evening hour was occupied by Apostle J. A. Gillen, who used as a theme "God's way is the best way." He read Matthew 7 as a scripture lesson and emphasized the fact that that which was necessary to save men two thousand years ago is just as necessary today. The fundamental principles are the same.

Elder Leonard Lea will be the speaker next Sunday morning at the Mother's Day service.

Will Dreams Come True?

Perhaps a few lines from one who was not privileged to attend the Centennial Conference will be acceptable. It was with eagerness in our home that we awaited the arrival of the postman with the Daily Herald. Always it was the first mail read. Then we talked about the many things done at conference. We were glad to note the unity and friendship which prevailed and to consider the constructive things done.

When first we learned that the church had set as its missionary goal for the coming two years the bringing in of twelve thousand converts, we were ready to admit that we thought it a big undertaking. However, on second thought we pronounced it fine. If all the members will do their duty, the branches will prosper and will bring in new members. Let us consider how the Lord has blessed us in the past and how in the past year he has been very near us. True enough we did not quite reach the numerical goal set for the church, but that does not mean that we should lose heart and doubt our ability to reach the new goal, the Lord directing. Even if we should fall short, why should we regret the effort? Is it not better to try and fail than never to have tried? Many members and officers need a little spurring to find out what they can do. All of us can do a little better than we have ever before done. It is useless for us to calculate what the other person can do to help achieve our new goal. He can not do it all. Each one of us must find the place for which he is best fitted to serve. In the army of the Lord there is no room for slackers and shirkers. If we are not going forward we are slipping backward, for there is no standing still in the Lord's work. The salvation of each member depends on the extent to which he helps some other brother or sister.

God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform. It may be with numbers of us as it was with the examples given by Brother J. F. Martin in his sermon in the Daily Herald. Without knowing it we may be the means of bringing some one to Christ. The writer has seen this occur numbers of times. God is with us as a people, and if we will put our trust in him and try to do our part, it is hard to say to what proportions the fruitage will grow. As a people and as individuals we are respected throughout the land and if we will continue in the way mapped out for us by our leader, we shall be a power for good in years to come. Then will our dreams come true and we shall be able to spread the gospel wherever the Lord would have us take it.

Are you, brother, and are you, sister, eager and willing to do your part in serving the Master? Have you considered the goals of the church? Have you dreams concerning the latter-day work which you hope to make come true?

POUL S. NIELSEN.

Independence

Stone Church

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the eleven o'clock service. The service proper was preceded by a period of organ music played by Opal Goode Doty.

Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge and was assisted on the stand by Bishop G. W. Eastwood and by Elders W. Wallace Smith, Harry Barto, and Frank McDonald. Elder C. B. Woodstock spoke briefly on the history and the present significance of the Lord's Supper.

Another of the sacraments of the church was observed at this service, when Apostle F. Henry Edwards solemnized the marriage of Bertha Constance, of Independence, and Walter F. Woodward, of Council Bluffs, Iowa.

More than one hundred members of the intermediate department of the church school availed themselves of the invitation to remain upstairs and share in the adult sacramental service. The regular young people's communion service was not conducted in the lower auditorium.

The nature and function of the Holy Spirit, the Comforter promised by Jesus to his disciples, and the need of the church for it were discussed by Presiding Patriarch Frederick A. Smith in his Sunday evening sermon. If we obey the commandments of the Father, we may expect his Spirit to teach us his will, enabling us to partake of Godlike characteristics.

Music was contributed by the Stone Church Choir which, under the conductorship of Paul N. Craig, sang two anthems, "The radiant morn hath passed away," by Woodward, and "The heavens are declaring," by Beethoven.

This was a farewell service to Patriarch and Sister J. H. N. Jones. Arriving some weeks previous to the General Conference, these two Australian delegates spent their time visiting relatives and associating with the Saints. Brother Jones was ordained to the office of patriarch in the Stone Church pulpit January 5, 1930, and there Sunday evening as a mark of respect and love for him Patriarchs U. W. Greene and W. A. McDowell blessed him for the work which he is to do when he reaches his homeland, Australia. Briefly Brother Jones told of their impressions of the church in America, and of the courage and hope with which they are returning home. Brother and Sister Jones have made many friends in America, and numbers came forward at the close of the service to give them a parting handclasp. The worthy couple left Independence Monday morning.

Congregational singing of favorite hymns was conducted by Elder J. F. Sheehy, and the invocation and benediction were by Patriarch W. A. McDowell. Elder H. G. Barto was in charge of the service.

Among the People in Zion

A wedding of more than usual interest to the people of Independence followed the sacramental service at the Stone Church last Sunday morning when Miss Bertha Constance became the bride of Walter F. Woodward, of Council Bluffs, Iowa. The ceremony was made singularly impressive by its beauty and simplicity. A chorus of ten young girls dressed in white and carrying flowers, accompanied the bridal party into the church singing a cappella "Onward to Zion." The double ring marriage ceremony was read by Apostle F. Henry Edwards. The bride was given in marriage by her father, Charles D. Constance. Miss Elsie Constance, a cousin, attended the bride, and the bridegroom was accompanied by Elder Robert Jones. For a number of years Sister Woodward has been known in Independence for her excellent work in the Department of Religious Education, in the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences, and in the summer vacation schools. Last year she took her B. A. degree from Northwestern University. Brother Woodward was given his first missionary appointment by the Centennial Conference, and soon will take his bride to his mission field, Far West Stake. The happy couple left Sunday for a short wedding trip to Council Bluffs. Friends in Independence wish them a long life of usefulness and joy.

Liberty Street

Elder C. E. Schmid, city missionary in Chicago, ended the Centennial Conference vacation in this branch by preaching to a large and appreciative audience the evening of April 20. The happiness the gospel life affords is not the happiness of self-denial, sacrifice, and privation, but is a fuller and more complete experience than can be dreamed of attaining by any other means. To the young he gave the challenge to follow the great Christian Leader in the greatest of all human adventures—Christlike living.

An added attraction at this service was a short concert by Arthur Storm's stringed ensemble preceding the preaching hour. Special numbers were played by the conductor and one of the members. Mr. Storms, while not a Latter Day Saint, has helped the church materially in developing the musical talent of many of our young people. The high quality and tone of the concert given at Liberty Street were nothing less than inspirational, and were highly commended by all who heard.

One of the outstanding thrills of the conference for Liberty Street people came at the closing session of that memorable gathering. When the name of Glenn Davis was read for the Alabama Mission, the emotions of joy and sorrow were so peculiarly combined that we have not yet been able to analyze the result. That the local is proud of its young missionary and former assistant pastor is putting it mildly, but where his substitute will be found is quite another question. The usual round of dinners and parties is in progress, with Glenn as honor guest. He leaves for his mission Friday, May 9.

April 27 was memorable in the history of the Sunday school for two reasons. The unified system of church school administration was tried, and the new basement Sunday school room was initiated for service.

Patriarch I. M. Smith was the speaker that morning, and Elder Evan Davis preached in the evening.

The May communion service was one of the most largely attended sacramental gatherings in the history of Liberty Street. Three babies were blessed, the small sons of Brother and Sister Vernon White and Brother and Sister Earl Sallee, and the baby daughter of Brother and Sister Curtis White. Elders F. A. Cool and Glenn Davis officiated in this ordinance.

An illustrated lecture by C. Ed. Miller on the Kirtland Temple was the drawing card that attracted a large number of people to the evening service May 4. "Onward to Zion," sung by Mary Ethel Cool, was the special musical number preceding the lecture.

Within the past month two of our number have been claimed by death. Brother George Henry Inman, a young man of twenty-two years, passed away at his home in Independence, of pneumonia. He leaves to mourn, his father, Jasper N. Inman, three sisters: Ruby Inman, of the home; Mrs. Ruth Ferguson, and Mrs. Pearl Ward, of Independence; two brothers: William Inman and Fred Inman, also of Independence. The funeral was held from the church in charge of Elder William Sarratt; sermon by J. E. Martin. Interment was in Mound Grove.

A brief funeral service was held at the Latta Funeral Home for James Hickman Arterburn, infant son of Brother and Sister James Hickman Arterburn, who died April 23. The baby was given burial in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Walnut Park

Sunday the various services at Walnut Park were of a high order. A fine spirit was present from the beginning of the eight o'clock prayer meeting until the close of the evening preaching service. The Saints were fortunate in having a number of visiting elders and General Conference appointees to assist in the meetings.

Elder R. D. Weaver was the speaker at the early morning prayer meeting. Those present were blessed with a manifestation of the Spirit, the gift of tongues, together with the interpretation. The words of exhortation and instruction will, it is hoped, be remembered and put into operation in the lives of the people.

The church school period started ten minutes earlier than usual to allow time after the study period for the presentation of the Anti-Saloon League drama entitled "The harvest." This presented in a very impressive way the results of disobeying the laws of the country respecting prohibition. A young man almost becomes a murderer through following in his father's footsteps. The father had his own private bootlegger, and it was this example that led the son to disobey the law. While in an intoxicated condition, and driving an automobile, the son ran over and almost killed a mother and child. The lives of mother and child hang in the balance for hours. The father then realizes that his own example has been the cause of making his son a near-murderer. At the end of the drama the father resolves that he will set a good example hereafter and that his son, who while a child walked in his father's footsteps across the snow, may continue to follow those footsteps in the right direction.

The sacramental service was introduced with a piano prelude of familiar hymns played by Sister Minnie Scott Dobson. After the presiding officers and priests had marched to the stand from the basement and taken their places, the congregation sang the opening hymn "One hour with Jesus." This expressed the theme of the entire service. The remarks concerning the oblation were made by Elder John A. Robinson, president of the Southern Indiana District, who was visiting the Walnut Park congregation for the first time.

Elder Glaude A. Smith, formerly pastor of Walnut Park, made the remarks preceding the blessing and serving of the emblems. He called attention to the fact that it was because of God's love for humanity that he gave his Son to the world, to live and die for mankind. The concluding remarks by the presiding officer, Elder C. L. Olson, called attention to the high points of the service, the hour spent with Jesus, to the sacredness of the covenant which the Saints had renewed that morning in partaking of the bread and wine, and to the fact that in return for the wonderful expression of God's love for us we should leave the meeting with a determination to render a faithful accounting of the responsibility devolving upon us by deeds of love and service for those with whom we are associated.

The evening speaker was Apostle Clyde F. Ellis. He gave an interesting discourse to an appreciative audience of over two hundred. The subject of his sermon was "What religion means to the world today."

Brother Charles Benton Gold, an elderly member of Walnut Park congregation, passed away the evening of April 29, his death being attributed to heart trouble. The survivors are: His wife, Mary M. Gold, of the home; five sons: S. B. Gold, C. R. Gold, William Gold, all of Independence; H. H. Gold, Lamoni, Iowa; and Otis Gold, Herrin, Illinois; three daughters: Mrs. Charlotte Simmons, Mrs. Annie Kelley; and Mrs. Hazel Parrish, all of Independence; thirty-three grandchildren, and twelve great-grandchildren. The funeral was conducted from Walnut Park Church by Elder Glaude A. Smith. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. Brother Gold was born October 7, 1853, at Goreville, Illinois. He was baptized into the church November 16, 1902.

Enoch Hill

A peaceful service of communion opened the month of May, the pastor and local ministry in charge. Appreciation of the ordinance was shown by the large gathering of worshippers. The church school service of the morning was marked by high interest in the class work and exercises.

In the evening Brother C. E. Beal, of the local ministerial corps, delivered a talk on the question, "Are we satisfied with ourselves?"

Sister Sarah Estella Winslow, wife of Brother Lucian B. Winslow, passed to her eternal reward April 30, at her home in Independence. For years she was an ardent and faithful church worker, being particularly successful in leading the young people and in Sunday school work. She was born near Sandwich, Illinois, January 11, 1869, the daughter of Henry and Sarah Hart. She was baptized on the farm of Brother Joseph Smith by Henry A. Stebbins and was confirmed by President Joseph Smith. Her marriage to Brother Winslow occurred at Independence October 20, 1906, and she was the mother of one son, Oscar, who survives. A large group of relatives and friends mourn with the husband and son the passing of a loved one and friend. The funeral was conducted at Enoch Hill Church, Pastor O. W. Sarratt in charge, the sermon by Elder J. M. Terry. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery not far from the resting place of the one who confirmed her a member.

Death has claimed one of the young members of this district, Ernest McCollum, sixteen-year-old son of Brother and Sister Alex. McCollum, who died at the Sanitarium April 29, from severe head injuries received while riding in a truck, April 28, west of Fairmount, Missouri. Besides his parents he is survived by four sisters: Hazel McCollum and Esther McCollum, of the home; Mrs. Oscar Hedges, 1017 South Woodland Avenue, and Mrs. Fred Ryan, Hayward and Saville Streets; and two brothers: Victor McCollum, of the home; and George Walker, of Grain Valley. The funeral services were held at Enoch Hill Church. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. Ernest was baptized a member of the church in 1921.

Skiatook, Oklahoma

This branch is progressing. Good attendance marks all services.

The spirit of the General Conference was felt in our gathering April 6. It was the best prayer service many of the local members have experienced.

The women from Sperry, Oklahoma, joined in our missionary lesson April 17. "Faith" was the subject of the study, and nearly everyone responded with interest and helpful suggestions.

MISCELLANEOUS

Pastoral

To the Saints and friends of Southern Indiana District I wish to say that according to the direction of the appointing powers of the church, I am to be your servant for another year. I hope this coming year may be one of profit to the church and one of pleasure for all of us, and that we may see many souls brought to the knowledge of the truth. During the past eighteen months forty-eight or fifty were brought to the church, and now that we do not have another conference for two years, seems to me that we ought to see if we can not make it one hundred in twenty-four months. If so, we must all do our best and that means to live so that the blessing of God may attend. Our faith must be active in behalf of others around about us. Every ordained man should read with care Doctrine and Covenants 104: 44: "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty, and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence. He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shows himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand. Even so. Amen." Also keep in mind, Doctrine and Covenants 34: 4: "Wherefore, I have called upon the weak things of this world, those who are unlearned and despised, to thresh the nations, by the power of my Spirit; and their arm shall be my arm, and I will be their shield and their buckler, and I will gird up their loins, and they shall fight manfully for me." Doctrine and Covenants 43: 4 states: "Again I say, hearken ye elders of my church whom I have appointed; ye are not sent forth to be taught, but to teach the children of men the things which I have put into your hands by the power of my Spirit; and ye are to be taught from on high. Sanctify yourselves and ye shall be endowed with power, that ye may give as I have spoken." Now it is plain to be seen that "the things which I have put in your hands" are the three books, the Bible, Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. It would have been very profitable for the missionary could the new century have been started out with a new edition of the Inspired Translation, as I find it one of the best things that the church has with which to do missionary work. I find it easy to interest nonmembers with the Inspired Translation. Many thinking people have seen the mistakes and blunders in the other translations, and welcome something that can bring them a proper understanding of what God has really revealed to man. The preface states (Doctrine and Covenants 42: 15): "Thou shalt ask, and my scriptures shall be given as I have appointed, and they shall be preserved in safety; and it is expedient that thou shouldest hold thy peace concerning them, and not teach them until ye have received them in full. And I give unto you a commandment, that then ye shall teach them unto all men; for they shall be taught unto all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people." April 4, 1920, through President E. A. Smith, we were told: "When you go forth to preach to the world, you are not to preach your own speculations or idle imaginations, and you are not to teach the philosophies of men. You are to preach the gospel, as it is in the books that have been given to the church, and you are to cry repentance to this generation." By this means will we be able to build up the church, the kingdom of God. I hope the near future will make possible the new edition of the Inspired Translation in modern type. Many times; could the missionary have sold the book, had it not been such poor type. I shall be pleased to hear from any scattered Saints in Southern Indiana District, especially those located where it will be possible to hold meetings. I will visit all scattered Sants so far as time will permit. Address me, 1141 West Thirty-third Street, Indianapolis, Indiana, or at my home address, 418 Southwest Fourth Street, Galva, Illinois.—Jasper O. Dutton.

children's division to function as a unit of the entire church, yet makes it possible for the consecrated and trained teacher to direct and supervise the growth of religious motivation through contact with the children and their parents in all areas of childhood experiences.

Since appropriate nurture must be at hand when an interest reaches its height if right growth is to result, and since children need to be continually stimulated to make religious choices, the parents must be recognized as the home teachers of the church. This necessitates the consecration and training of every parent as representatives of the church. The teacher, under the direction and leadership of the superintendent of the department, must be capable of assisting the parent through personal conferences, reading materials, teacher meetings, etc., to understand and provide for the needs of the child, that he may give a contribution according to his capacity. The slogan for the children's division is "To every child according to his needs, and from every child according to his capacity."

NOTE: Next week we plan to present a definite statement of the proposed plan for the work of the Young People's Division by E. E. Closson, director of that division.

Greetings to the Saints of Rock Island District: Your attention is called to the following program of meetings, which was authorized by the last district conference: Week-end meetings are to be held at Oelwein, May 10 and 11; Cedar Rapids, May 17 and 18; Clinton, May 24 and 25; Fulton, May 31 and June 1; Muscatine, June 7 and 8; Tri-Cities, convention and conference June 13 to 15; Joy, June 21 and 22; Galesburg, June 28 and 29; Kewanee July 4 to 6. These week-end meetings will begin on Saturday night, and will continue over Sunday. There will perhaps be one or two illustrated lectures at each place, and the other meetings will take the form of classes for the discussion of important themes. Week-night meetings will be held at Waterloo, May 13 to 16; Anamosa, May 20 to 23; Savanna, May 27 to 30; Dahinda, June 24 to 27; Peoria, July 1 to 3. The week-night meetings will take practically the same form as the week-end meetings, with illustrated lectures and class work. The attention of the Saints is also called to the following important actions had by the late General Conference: Adoption of a recommendation coming from the Department of Statistics, found on pages 11, 12, and 35 of the Daily Herald; adoption of a recommendation coming from the Quorum of Twelve, taking up nearly all of column two on page 42 of the Daily; adoption of recommendations coming from the Department of Religious Education found on pages 45 and 95; action touching our church building program found on page 114; action touching the reporting of local finances of branches and districts to the general church, found on page 130; and the adoption of a six-year program, with 40,000 as our quota in baptisms for the six-year period as found also on page 130. We invite the careful consideration of all branch and district officers, the local priesthood, and the membership throughout the district, to all of the above; and we solicit the cooperation of all that this conference year and the opening of a new century may be ushered in with increased activity on the part of every officer and member, that there may be no slackening of the pace so splendidly set by our district during the late "missionary-financial campaign." Our district made a very good record in the closing year of the first century of our great work, and with the inspiration that this effort has brought to us, we are hopeful of a successful entrance into the new century, and the two-year conference period that we have before us. The work of the church means so much to the membership of this church, and eventually to the world, that it seems to me that none of us can afford to let anything else take first place in our lives. May the Lord help all to enter wholeheartedly into the task set before us, is the wish of your colaborer.—E. R. Davis, district president, Moline, Illinois.

Two-day Meeting

There will be a two-day meeting at Vales Mills, Ohio, May 17 and 18. The first service opens Saturday evening at seven o'clock. The young people are urged to make an effort to attend. The branch will give all who attend a splendid welcome.—A. E. Anderton, district president.

A Great Man Passes

In the death of Edmund Levi Kelley on May 10, 1930, the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints sustains an irretrievable loss.

To every member who knows the history of the development and accomplishments of the church from 1880 until 1916 the name of E. L. Kelley and the sight of his kindly face has been a constant reminder of his abiding faith, undimmed hope, and quiet satisfaction and humility in the hour of victory.

This living example of accomplishment and of character building under the laws of the gospel of Jesus Christ is now removed from the view of our physical eyes, and thus the church sustains loss.

The fact that Brother Kelley had retired from active prosecution of constructive work in 1916 did not mean that his personal influence with the church membership had ceased. It had merely taken another form. The fact that now he has passed from among us means that his past work assumes still a different aspect and operates in another but important way for the onward march of the army of the Lord.

When the day comes that the membership of the church shall have achieved the success in bending their energies, in tempering their passions, in directing their thought, which has been exemplified in the life of our brother, Zion will be an accomplishment. The things said of her influence in the pages of the revelations of God to the church will be taking place in the world.

It can be said that Brother Kelley possessed the natural talent and proclivities for the responsible positions which he occupied in the church. In addition to the abundant endowment of nature, there shines forth to those who watched and knew of this man and his work, the example of his attitude toward duty. No man possessed keener wit or more power to destroy by sarcasm and ridicule. Yet he declined to use these to attain his ends in the work of the church, assuming the position that victory achieved by such courses was defeat for the eternal cause of truth. His was the attitude of working for eternal things and enduring success.

His brilliant and well-trained mind, his fervent and unconquerable spirit, his regular and temperate habits, and his perfectly formed and poised body, combined to constitute the Christian gentleman whose memory the Herald and the church honor. R. J. L.

BISHOP EDMUND L. KELLEY

Funeral Services for E. L. Kelley

At the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, Monday, May 12, at 2.30 p. m.

On Monday afternoon a large number of relatives and mourning friends of former Presiding Bishop E. L. Kelley gathered at the Stone Church, entirely filling the main floor and part of the balcony, to pay their respects to his memory. The casket rested against a heavily banked background of wreaths and flowers, the tributes of those to whom his passing was a severe loss. For the music, Robert Miller played an organ interpretation of a selection from the Hymnal, number 188, "Rest bye and bye." There was present a double quartet, composed of Evan Fry, George Anway, Mrs. I. A. Smith, Mrs. Louise Lewis, Mrs. Alice Burgess, Mrs. Ruth Holman, Albert Brackenbury, and Clarence Resch. They first sang, "Remember now thy Creator," and George Anway followed this with "I know that my Redeemer lives." These numbers, beautifully rendered, added to the solemn occasion a strong tone of reverence.

President Frederick M. Smith delivered the address, paying a sincere tribute to the man whose earthly remains rested before him. That address is given herewith. After the address the double quartet sang, "Lead, kindly light," and the organ recessional was Dvorak's "Goin' home."

Address delivered by President Frederick M. Smith at the funeral of former Presiding Bishop E. L. Kelley, the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, April 12, 1930.

After reading the obituary found in the news columns of this number of the Herald, President Smith spoke as follows:

It is a pleasure, though a pleasure refined by the sadness of the occasion, to pay tribute to such a man as was our friend, our brother, and our church father, E. L. Kelley.

In the passing of this man every member of the church, as well as many nonmembers, will be interested. It is not given to many persons to serve the church in official capacity longer than he did; and the heavy responsibilities that he bore are hardly to be appreciated by those not intimately acquainted with the conditions under which he at times carried his official burdens.

It is quite likely that all Saints, when they heard the news of his passing, made a mental review of his work in so far as they were in a position to do so.

The obituary gives only in brief outline a few of the many facts of his long years of service. The time here allotted to pay respect to his work is entirely inadequate to express an evaluation of his life and activities. He did not occupy in very many positions; but from the one position to which he gave the best of his life, he engaged in a great many good and important pieces of work. After a few years of missionary endeavor he was called to one of the leading quorums of the church, to one of the most difficult of all of its group tasks, that of the bishopric, and the conducting of the burdensome work of the financial department. And there he continuously labored, though he took the additional burden of being counselor in the Presidency, associated with President Joseph Smith.

With President Joseph Smith his official relations were always of the most cordial and helpful kind, their friendship being of a deep and rare quality. Few will ever know how much the late President Smith depended upon Brother Kelley as counselor, friend, brother, and official colaborer. Few even sensed the rich friendship between them, for, both being men of few words, they rarely revealed their personal feelings to others.

There is no need to discuss here the functioning of religion in the life of our brother. He was deeply religious. His whole life was squared by his religion. Few men have exhibited a finer "unfeigned belief in one eternal God," or displayed a more unre-served trust in Him.

He was thoroughly saturated with the Christian religion and belief; hence he was ever buoyed up by the hope which lies close to the roots of Christian faith.

He was a Latter Day Saint without reservation, in heart as well as in mind. His teaching was constant, for he taught by example as well as by precept. As a man among men, his life was one of probity, integrity, and soulful honor. No member of his family can fail to be lifted up by the memory of his life, or a knowledge of his reputation as a Christian and a Saint.

My own official contact with him came quite early in my life, between my high school and my college days, in his office. After college days, as an editor, I was associated with him while he was president of the Board of Publication. And as counselor to Bishop William Anderson I was again brought into intimate contact with him. As one of the Presidency my contacts with him grew in frequency and importance; our association drew us close, as the relations between the Presidency and Bishopric should. It is my intention, in reviewing these matters, only to show the opportunity I have had of knowing him very well.

Though he was thirty years my senior, as a young man in the ministry I experienced the great encouragement an older man can give to a younger officer. It was characteristic of him that the young men would always look to him for support and encouragement, unmarred by any kind of jealousy of promising younger powers.

His personal loyalty to fellow workers stands out as the sparkling beauty of a priceless jewel. That fine loyalty cheered and supported me over many a period of discouragement. And I doubt not that many others of my generation can give a similar testimony.

Many are the lessons we could draw from his splendid life.

Was he a success?

The answer is a respectful and unqualified "Yes."

When men have passed away, and people examine the ledgers of their lives and take inventory of the things that remain after their departure, a question commonly asked by men is, "How much did he accumulate?"

Who wishes to be measured by that standard? Can the accumulated values of a man's living on this earth be expressed in little columns of figures, in the red or in the black ink?

Perhaps the man who returned a facetious answer to such a question gave more of truth than of humor in his reply. When some one asked him, concerning the departed one, "Did he leave much?" the man answered, "All he had." Was money and property all that he had? Was there no heritage of good deeds and fine works? Was there no example of personal worth and integrity? No tradition of high character and nobility?

A better question to ask is, "What did he take with him?" What has the world lost by his going? How are we impoverished by the emptiness of the place that he leaves?

A man of vigorous character, he had much of what we term temper. But as a Christian he early learned the necessity of the subjugation of the passions. Like all of us, he felt resentment against some of the injustices he experienced. But it may well be said of him that he refined resentment into the fruits of rich service. Anger is present in every man's equipment. What he does with it in the way of control is the answer he gives to the impulses and compulsions of spiritual forces.

"He walked by faith." This may be said of him, as far as it may be said of any man. What was his faith? I never knew a greater one—a supreme faith in God, a confident faith in man. And I have had opportunity to see that faith tested.

Out of these tests of faith he came with a great equanimity, a tranquillity characteristic of his great resources and power. He calmly faced every issue, and passed apparently undisturbed through every crisis and ordeal. His devotion to duty was unsurpassed: he knew its call, its imperative demand, and he knew how to answer.

Like every man who serves in the ministry of the church, he faced the necessity of deciding what line he would pursue; he faced the issue, and he met it squarely: whether he would devote his life to the seeking of comfort and the accumulation of wealth or would give it to the ceaseless labor of love.

He chose; the result of his decision you well know. And he never wavered or faltered in that decision. He possessed powers which would have carried him far in worldly success. As a churchman he was dominated by a sense of fairness and justice. As a judge in Israel, he had the unstrained quality of mercy which tempers justice. It may be said of him, if it may fairly be said of anyone, "He was a just and upright man."

He was resourceful. Amid the trials and under the tension of lean months and years of uncertain temporal conditions, I've seen him pursue his quiet way in a manner to challenge admiration, restore disturbed confidence, and fortify wavering faith.

Of course he knew and experienced the depression of disappointed hopes; he knew the heavy down-thrust of misplaced confidence, the disheartenment of manifest weakness in fellow workers; but through the refining process of the years, the acquaintance with grief which comes with the passing of time, the softening effects of trouble met with fortitude, he had learned to greet his friends always with the smile of a brave man.

I am reminded of the words once written by Ella Wheeler Wilcox:

'Tis easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows by like a song;
But the man worth while is the one who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong.
For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years.
And the life that is worth the honor of earth
Is the smile that comes through tears.

What a heritage he has left us! What an example of fortitude, what a tower of strength he was! A mighty man has fallen in Israel, not as one who is stricken down in the beauty and vigor of surging life, nor as one who, amidst the innumerable tasks and activities attendant upon the daily discharge of onerous duty, is snatched away; but rather as one who in the ripeness of age sinks gently down upon the couch of his final rest.

Our beloved brother, father, and faithful servant has gone; but we sorrow not as others who have no hope, for we, like him, are not ignorant of them which are asleep in Jesus.

I join his family in their grief, for in the richness of my years of official contact with him I had learned to love him as a father. But in the midst of that grief I raise my eyes in trustful faith in God. And I am determined to carry on in the work our brother loved, in the hope that I might eventually make a contribution a little comparable with his, and develop the strength of soul that will enable me, too, to smile through my tears.

Our loved officer, brother, father, would have us carry on his work.

Shall we not do so?

Mob Justice Too Costly

The recent display of mob violence at Sherman, Texas, is very much to be regretted. When everything is totaled up, the losses are much greater than the gains.

The question of what the Negro victim in the case deserved or did not deserve does not enter in just now. No one would try to justify his criminal action. But to wreak vengeance upon him, a body of citizens took the law into their own hands and disregarded life and property and public safety to secure their own ends. This is a serious matter.

Consider the cost of the incident. One $60,000 courthouse was destroyed. A number of citizens and officers were injured. There was a flare-up of racial animosity which has done and will do injury to innocent members of the Negro race. A number of rioters now face prosecution for obstructing justice and resisting officers of the law. The reputation of the State of Texas has been jeopardized and the administration of justice made more difficult.

And what was gained? The life, or rather the death, of one Negro, which the State would no doubt have demanded and secured in a short time by due process of law. Regular justice is not slow in these matters in the South, especially when a Negro is involved. But at what a cost it was obtained by the mob! Who will contend that the gain was worth the cost?

The spirit of mob action is too destructive a thing to be countenanced. It is too costly; its returns are too paltry. Its effects threaten the preservation of life, property, and the very justice which it professes to seek.

In the announcement of the winners of the Music Contest, conducted at General Conference, printed on page 450 of the Saints' Herald for April 23, the name of the organist who took second place is incorrect. It was Miss Oris Campbell, of Sault Sainte Marie, Ontario, Canada, who won second place instead of Mrs. Horace Campbell, of Sault Sainte Marie, as announced.

Church Enrollment Now 107,508

The Department of Statistics has made report of March and April changes and additions to the church record of communicants. It will be noted that there are 363 baptisms reported for April. Only once in the history of the Reorganization has that number of baptisms been equaled or exceeded in April.

President Smith believes that it is easily possible for the church to excel in 1930 the record of any previous year, so far as additions to the church enrollment are considered. Why not? There are almost six thousand new members who are willing and anxious to add their labors and their influence that this may be.

Immediate Steps in Religious Education

In every stake, district, and branch of the church some concern is felt that any change in the organization and administration of religious education shall be along lines quite in keeping with the best interests of the work of the church locally and as a whole. The action of the recent General Conference gave approval to the new plan as outlined by President McDowell, and ordered that the general department, working in cooperation with the general officials of the church, "take such steps as are necessary to reorganize the work of religious education in stakes, districts, and branches in accordance with the above plan, it being understood that the changes shall be brought about only as found wise and practicable and as conditions in the various stakes, districts, and locals would seem to justify."

Not a Revolutionary Change

Although anxious for the anticipated changes to be made as soon as can be done reasonably, the general officers of the department have repeatedly urged that any change be made, with due consideration for all the interests at stake. A mere change of mechanics of administration, a change of names, and a shifting of responsibility without a change in attitude where necessary on the part of those in charge of the several lines of religious educational endeavor, is quite insufficient. As has been stated previously, the change is primarily one of education and growth from a number of independent, parallel organizations in which officers were inclined to be individualistic if not competitive, to a single, unified department meeting adequately and yet with greatest economy the educational objectives of the church. In harmony with conference action, actual changes should be brought about "only as found wise and practicable," where, as a result of spiritual growth and education, leaders and people are ready to cooperate fully, to work in harmony.

Three Types of Organization Possible

As the immediate step to be taken in the direction of the new plan, choice may reasonably be had from the following, depending largely upon local conditions and the desire of the people to be served.

1. The Local Council Plan

In a branch organized and working on the old plan of three departments, where little or no consideration has been given to the new plan, or if there is opposition to the proposed change, it may be advisable to continue for the year with the superintendents, respectively, of the Sunday School, Recreation and Expression, and the Department of Women, working with the pastor as a local Council of Religious Education, in an effort to closely harmonize and unify their program to accomplish the objective of the church. This plan should be considered as temporary, and should lead to further changes in harmony with movements in the general church. This provides but little opportunity for building complete age group programs.

2. The Pastor's Assistant Plan

In a branch where the pastor lacks the training or has little opportunity to give much time and attention to the work of religious education, and where the prevailing sentiment is in favor of maintaining the old order of things with three departments, it may be most satisfactory to choose an assistant to the pastor to serve as supervisor or director of religious education. This might be one of the three heads of departments, or another chosen to work with them in carrying out as nearly a unified program for the branch as might be possible.

3. The New Department Plan

In a branch whose officers and people have been in touch with the developing interests of religious education within our church and in other Christian churches, where there has been a general education and growth permitting of a reorganization of religious education on the new basis, wholly as a function of the branch, it is recommended that provision be made for a single department of religious education, instead of three.

A superintendent, or director, should be chosen in the manner customary for the election of branch officers. Since this officer is to work closely with the pastor or branch president, the branch may well extend to the pastor the courtesy of placing in nomination the one whom he would choose.

There should then be chosen, a children's supervisor, a young people's supervisor, and an adult supervisor, with other teachers, leaders, and specialists needed for the church school.

In general the Sunday morning session should form the nucleus of the church school activities and continue its services as the Sunday school, but with age group supervisors in the place of department superintendents, who will give attention to all the activities for their respective departments coming within the range of religious education throughout the week. This will include in a well-balanced way all the study, recreation, expression, home, and work projects previously undertaken for that age by the three departments, but now, if possible, enriched and expanded, and integrated with the total church program for the branch.

CHARLES B. WOODSTOCK,

For Department of Religious Education.

Joseph Smith; the Lord's Servant.—Number 1

An article to be published in five installments, of which the first is presented now.

By Hyrum O. Smith

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.—Amos 3: 7.

The above passage has been familiar to all classes of Latter Day Saints, and the ministry of the church have consistently and continuously used it to show that God provided for future events by warning his prophets in advance of his intentions, outlining each successive dispensation of his work so plainly that those who would study his word might not be deceived.

Thus the careful reader may trace the sojourn in Egypt, the Mosaic dispensation, the coming of Christ, the dispersion of the Jews, their restoration in connection with the restoration of the gospel, the apostasy, the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, and numerous other events plainly portrayed, God thus revealing his secrets to his servants the prophets, the culminating event being the organization of his church once more upon the earth, and the provision for the continuation of that church until the end, and the declaration being made that God had restored his work for the last time, and that it would continue until it had consummated his purposes in the redemption of the world.

The church was organized, or, properly speaking, the church began to be organized on the 6th day of April, 1830. It is obvious that its original organization could not continue until its purpose was served. That is, the personnel of the organization would necessarily have to be renewed from time to time, as men died or transgressed, and thus became unfit to represent God and the right. Hence before a year had passed, God, true to his character as revealed in the past, began to reveal his secrets to his servants the prophets, concerning the perpetuation of his church. Obviously he would not make provision for all the officers of the church and designate beforehand who they would be, but he did make provision for the chief executive, who, once inaugurated, would have power to set in order all the other officers of the organization.

In February, 1831, about eleven months after the organization of the church, the following instruction was given:

O hearken, ye elders of my church, and give ear to the words which I shall speak unto you: for, behold, verily, verily I say unto you, that ye have received a commandment for a law unto my church, through him whom I have appointed unto you, to receive commandments and revelations from my hand. And this ye shall know assuredly, that there is none other appointed unto you to receive commandments and revelations until he be taken, if he abide in me. But verily, verily I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him he shall not have power, except to appoint another in his stead; and this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations, or commandments; and this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived, that you may know they are not of me. For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me, shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed.—Doctrine and Covenants 43: 1, 2.

Joseph Smith to Appoint His Successor

There are several statements made in this quotation that I wish to consider. First, Joseph Smith is to appoint his successor. And this is so important that the declaration is made that even if by transgression he should lose his right to all the other prerogatives of his office, the right to appoint another in his stead would still be retained, and it is so important that the Lord declares, "and this shall be a law unto you." "And this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived."

In 1841 a revelation was given through this man who was to appoint his successor, and the only one who could do so, giving the line of descent from father to son in this important office. This revelation reads:

And now I say unto you, as pertaining to my boarding house, which I have commanded you to build, for the boarding of strangers. Let it be built unto my name, and let my name be named upon it, and let my servant Joseph and his house have place therein, from generation to generation; for this anointing have I put upon his head, that his blessing shall be put upon the head of his posterity after him; and as I said unto Abraham, concerning the kindreds of the earth, even so I say unto my servant Joseph, In thee, and in thy seed, shall the kindred of the earth be blessed. Therefore, let my servant Joseph, and his seed after him, have placed in that house, from generation to generation, for ever and ever, saith the Lord, and let the name of that house be called the Nauvoo House; and let it be a delightful habitation for man, and a resting place for the weary traveler, that he may contemplate the glory of Zion, and the glory of this the corner stone thereof; that he may receive also the counsel from those whom I have set to be as plants of renown, and as watchmen upon her walls.—Doctrine and Covenants 107: 18.

Again, in 1844, January 2, writing to John C. Calhoun, Joseph Smith clearly sets forth the idea that his posterity would follow him in his work. He says:

While I have powers of body and mind; while water runs and grass grows, while virtue is lovely and vice hateful; and while a stone points out a sacred spot where a fragment of American liberty once was; I or my posterity will plead the cause of injured innocence, until Missouri makes atonement for all her sins, or sinks disgraced, degraded and damned to hell—"where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched!"—Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 395.

Joseph Smith Appoints His Oldest Son as His Successor

In pursuance to this law of lineage, Joseph Smith appointed his oldest son, Joseph, as his successor. This son was about six or seven years old when he was first designated as the one who would take his father's place at the head of the church. His father was then in jail in Liberty, Missouri. The boy was taken by his mother to visit his father, and remained in the jail for the night, and during his stay the father laid his hands upon his head and blessed him as his successor. My maternal grandfather, Lyman Wight, also had his hands upon the head of the lad and assisted in this blessing. After leaving the jail at Liberty the church's headquarters were established at Nauvoo, Illinois, and just before the death of his father this son was called into a room which was used for assembling the different authorities of the church for counsel, and there he was solemnly set apart for this office by anointing with oil and the laying on of hands. Afterwards the son was called to the stand in a public meeting, held in a grove or arbor, and in answer to a question as to who would be his successor, Joseph Smith, pointing to his son, said, "There is my successor." Of all these occasions the son retained a distinct remembrance, and often testified in regard to them. I will let this son tell his own story. He says:

To whom it may concern:

The history of the church shows that while Joseph and Hyrum Smith were in prison at Liberty jail, Clay County, Missouri, they were visited on two or more occasions by the wife of the Prophet and the wives of others of the prisoners. On one of these occasions Joseph Smith, a son of the Prophet, accompanied by his mother, was permitted to remain for a brief visit. The dates of two of these visits of the wife of the Prophet are stated to be December 8, when the wife of Sidney Rigdon accompanied Emma, the Prophet's wife; and on December 20 (1838), when the wife of Caleb Baldwin and the wife of Reynolds Cahoon made the visit in company with Emma the Prophet's wife.

It is within my memory that I remained in the jail a part of two days and one night at least; and that during this visit my father and some others laid hands upon my head, and he blessed me as his son, pronouncing blessings upon me to which I was and would be entitled as his son. I remember two or three of those who were present, among whom were Erastus Snow, I think, and Caleb Baldwin, and Lyman Wight. I do not remember who laid hands upon me with my father, but I do remember that the one whom I think was Erastus Snow, was quite a singer and he sang two ballads or ditties which attracted my attention and which I heard afterwards sung at different times. One was called "The Massacre at the River Raisin," of which the opening lines were:

"In the Michigan forest the night winds were high, Fast drifted the snow through the bleak winter sky."

The other ballad was called the "Mobbers of Missouri," the tune being "The hunters of Kentucky." I have no recollection of the words of this poem, though I heard it sung numbers of times afterwards at Nauvoo.

I do not know at which of these dates I was left by my mother in the jail, but I do remember the circumstance.

After we reached Nauvoo and after the brick store was erected, they used to hold meetings and councils in the upper story of the store. I remember being called into the large room. My father and other elders and principal men of the church were there, of whom I remember Uncle Hyrum, Newel K. Whitney, and George J. Adams. I was seated in a chair and father and some others laid hands upon me, oil having been poured upon my head, and I was again blessed by my father as his son and blessings pronounced upon me to which I was entitled as his son and successor.

I remember hearing George J. Adams say to my mother in the hall at the Mansion House, "We now know who the successor of Brother Joseph will be if anything should happen to him. I have just come from the council where your son Joseph was blessed for this purpose."

I remember, further, the meeting in the grove where I frequently attended with my father and mother and was usually seated upon the stand with my father when he was present. I remember that my father in speaking with reference to himself, the subject I do not exactly remember, but he turned as he was speaking and pointing to me said, "There is my successor." There was a number of persons on the stand whom I knew at the time, but I can not remember many of them, though I think that George J. Adams and William Clayton were among them. There was a number in the congregation whom I remember to have become acquainted with as I grew up.

I have stated these recollections heretofore, and they are strongly corroborated by the memory of others.—Joseph Smith, Journal of History, vol. 2, pp. 9-11.

Just as Joseph Smith says, these recollections are strongly corroborated by others, so we find it in private journals, in testimonies taken under oath in the courts of the land, affidavits, and so forth, by those who were present, and by those who testify of hearing those who were present talk of the matter, until no event of history is more fully established. It is not necessary, therefore, to add anything to this statement, as the testimony is too voluminous. Besides, it has been published time after time in the history and other publications of the church.

It may be contended, however, that Joseph Smith was a fallen prophet at the time all of these things are said to have occurred, the giving of the revelation in 1841, the writing of the letter to John C. Calhoun in 1844, and the blessing of young Joseph in the jail at Liberty, Missouri, in 1838, and confirmation of that blessing in Nauvoo in 1843 and 1844, for, unfortunately, there are those who so contend. But the revelation providing for the appointment of a successor stipulates that if Joseph Smith shall lose all other powers of his prophetic office, he will still retain the right to appoint another in his stead. In fact, there are those (silly as it may seem) who contend that the only way he could have the right to appoint his successor would be by transgressing himself.

Joseph Smith Was Not a Fallen Prophet

I find, in some of the quotations I have made, the positive evidence that Joseph Smith retained his prophetic power as late as January 2, 1844. On that date he penned the letter to John C. Calhoun from which I have quoted, and in that quotation I find one of the most remarkable prophecies of the man's career. He says:

While I have powers of body and mind; while water runs and grass grows, while virtue is lovely and vice hateful; and while a stone points out a sacred spot where a fragment of American liberty once was; I or my posterity will plead the cause of injured innocence, until Missouri makes atonement for all her sins.

When this was penned Joseph Smith's oldest boy was in his twelfth year, and his youngest was not yet born. How did he know what his posterity would do? The lives, both of himself and his family, were in constant jeopardy. He knew not, from a human standpoint, what the morrow would bring forth. Whence came this positive assurance as to what his posterity would do? In the language of another:

Must not the knowledge of such truths be derived from that prescience alone which scans alike the will and the ways of mortals, the actions of future nations, and the history of the latest generations?

I certainly think so. And this is positive evidence that he enjoyed that prescience enjoyed by all God's prophets even unto the last, and the man who claims that Joseph Smith was a fallen prophet, and yet quotes this statement as an evidence of his prophetic powers, proclaims his own folly.

Events go to show that the prophecy was literally fulfilled. Joseph Smith's posterity did take up his work; they did plead the cause of injured innocence to such an extent that Missouri is making atonement for her sins. Where the Saints were once driven from their homes and those homes destroyed, and in one case, at least, a whole colony massacred, they are honored today, and almost every hamlet, village, and city has its quota of Latter Day Saints, until fifteen per cent of the total membership of the church resides within the confines of the State.

It will not do to say that this prophecy was simply an aftermath of the prophetic powers that had belonged to this man before, for the statement is made that if his prophetic powers are taken from him he will not have power, except to appoint another in his stead." The right and power to appoint is the only power that will remain to him.

God's Rule for Detecting the False and Proving the True Prophets

Testing Joseph Smith by the rule that God himself lays down by which we are to tell the false from the true prophet, it is clearly proved that he retained his prophetic powers as late as January 2, 1844. This rule is familiar to all Latter Day Saints. The negative rule is laid down in Deuteronomy 18: 21, 22; the affirmative is given in Jeremiah 28: 9, and Ezekiel 33: 33. These passages read, in the order named, as follows:

And if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the Lord hath not spoken? When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him.

The prophet which prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the Lord hath truly sent him.

And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come), then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them.

The Successor Shall Honor His Predecessor

Not only is the successor to Joseph Smith to be appointed by him, but there were to be other things by which this successor was to be known, as is shown by the following:

For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me, shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed.—Doctrine and Covenants 43: 2.

Perhaps all of the claimants to the office which Joseph Smith held stand on even ground in one respect. They all came in at the gate after this revelation was received, but there the similarity ends. James J. Strang claimed he was appointed by Joseph Smith as his successor, but the method of appointment was questionable; and besides, the arbitrament of time has entirely disposed of his claims. Brigham Young claimed to have been appointed by the prophet, but only in connection with his eleven fellow apostles, and this appointment did not designate them as the successors in the presidency of the church, but to act in their calling as apostles, the second quorum in authority in the church. So far as I have been informed, Granville Hedrick never made any claim to having been appointed as Joseph Smith's successor. In all of the cases tried in the courts of the land, these men, especially Brigham Young, have been declared usurpers. In the famous Temple Lot Suit, Judge Philips pronounced Brigham Young a "bold and bald usurper," and this after a careful investigation of the rules and law governing the succession in the presidency, as given in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

Applying the second test to these would-be leaders, I find them woefully wanting in regard to their respect to the teachings of the man whom they claim to succeed. And yet the test that the Lord gave us by which to try anyone who laid claim to be the successor to Joseph Smith was that they should "come in at the gate and be ordained to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed," thus honoring the one who had preceded them.

Joseph Smith was killed by a mob June 27, 1844, and almost immediately Brigham Young began to lay his plans to assume the position of president of the church, but he knew the written word would not sustain him in his claim. Hence he began to throw discredit upon the revelations given through Joseph Smith, and thus established the fact that God had not called him to that important office. Many years before, the record credits John the Baptist as giving important advice to the seeker for the truth. He says:

For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.—John 3: 34.

No matter how great the claims made by a man as to his acceptance with God, invariably he will betray himself by discrediting the words of God, and substituting his own words in their stead. As early as September, 1844, when William Marks presented the written word in his defense of Sidney Rigdon, Brigham Young replied:

I have known that Brother Marks had no evidence but the written word, it is quite time to go to the river and be baptized for the remission of their sins. Brother Marks says, If there are any ordained to offices equal with Elder Rigdon, he don't know it. He don't know all the ordinations, nor he won't till he knows something more than the written word. . . . As to a person not knowing more than the written word, let me tell you that there are keys that the written word never spoke of, nor never will.—Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 666.

This statement lays the foundation for what was afterwards taught by this usurper; that the man who held these mysterious keys should be listened to, even if his teachings were contrary to that which had already been revealed. This opened up the way for the foisting upon the people of the doctrine of polygamy, with its kindred evils.

Instead of teaching the marriage covenant as given in the revelations through Joseph Smith in the following quotations, he introduced the doctrine of a plurality of wives. The Book of Mormon declares:

Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the word of the Lord: for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none: for I, the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women.—Book of Jacob 2: 36.

The Book of Doctrine and Covenants, composed of revelations given to Joseph Smith for the government of the people of the Lord, has this to say:

Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else; and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit; and if he repents not, he shall be cast out.—42: 7.

And again, I say unto you, that whoso forbideth to marry, is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation; and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made.—Doctrine and Covenants 49: 3.

I shall not go into details as to this man's departure from the faith, but it is perfectly obvious that he does not fit in with the rule laid down by the Lord by which we should know that one whom he had called to succeed Joseph Smith in the presidency of the church; for the true successor, the one whom God had ordained or selected, would come in at the gate, and be ordained to teach the revelations which had already been given to the church, thus avoiding conflict in principle or doctrine.

As to Granville Hedrick, he made no claim to having been appointed to succeed Joseph Smith. He was, at one time, nominally connected with the Reorganization, but refused to amalgamate with that organization because those composing it insisted on teaching that Joseph Smith remained true to his own teachings until death, while Granville Hedrick did not so believe.

By invitation W. W. Blair and E. C. Briggs visited a conference held by Hedrick and his followers at Bloomington, Illinois, in 1857, and the following is the account given of that visit by Brother Blair, and the account is corroborated by Brother Briggs.

The conference (composed of perhaps twenty persons) appointed Mr. Hedrick their president. He preached, and such a sermon (if a sermon you could call it) I pray God I may never hear again from the lips of a professed saint. It consisted mainly in a tirade of abuse directed against the martyred prophet. Stories were told about him, the telling of which by his vilest enemies would have been to their everlasting shame.—Church History vol. 3, p. 637.

In other words, because the Reorganization refused to besmirch the name of Joseph Smith, and drag his character in the dust, this man and his followers could not work with us, but withdrew and set up an organization of their own, claiming that the man whom God had raised up to bring forth his work, in this the latter dispensation of the gospel, was a fallen prophet, and accusing him of the vilest things that can be attributed to man. According to their story, he was a hypocrite; his life was a living lie; he taught one thing in public and taught and practiced another thing in private; he remained but a few years faithful to his mission, and then, because of ambition, deliberately changed his own revelations that he claimed he had received from Almighty God, and proceeded to give false revelations to bolster up his departure from the faith. If I were inclined to write a book against this latter-day work, I would go to those who pretend that they believe that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, inspired by him to establish the church of Christ on earth in these last days, and who are now opposing the Reorganization, for the most damning stories against the character of the one whom we believe, under God, was the instrument in establishing this great Restoration Movement, this "marvelous work and a wonder." In fact, the history of the past shows that, almost invariably, the man who gets the seeds of apostasy in his heart, at once begins to seek for evidence to show that Joseph Smith was a sinful man, and makes this innocent man the scapegoat on which to ride away into the wilderness of doubt and distrust, and they grow rabid in their denouncement of him.

And in His Name.—Number 2

By Thomas S. Williams

The Name in the New Testament

The significance of a name which we have noted in Old Testament religious beliefs is even more striking when one studies the New Testament. Jesus evidently followed the custom when he added the names Cephas and Sons of Thunder to three of his disciples. These were no doubt descriptive of characteristics observed in the men so designated. (John 1: 42; Mark 3: 17; Luke 9: 54.)

The name of Jesus was given him because it described his mission, and consequently his program is discovered through an interpretation of his name. ". . . thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." (Matthew 1: 21.) Justification for the Christian movement was later found in the definition of the Name of its founder.

The relation of Christianity to Judaism was explained by means of a translation of names and terms. Gallio recognized that the disputation between Paul and the Jews was centered in a "question of words and names of your law." (Acts 18: 15.) Ancient prophecy was their source material. (Matthew 2: 3-6.) Philip in the conversion of the eunuch began with Old Testament prophecy concerning the Messiah and preached Jesus unto him. (Acts 8: 26-40.)

Preaching the Name

The emphasis placed upon the name of the Lord Jesus is very forcefully set forth in the following:

. . . Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them. . . when they believed Philip preaching, the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.—Acts 8: 4-12.

The apostles went forth preaching (the essence of which was interpreting and witnessing) and baptizing in his name. (Acts 2: 38; 10: 43-48; 19: 5.)

They regarded the manifestations of healing experienced under their hands as not received by any power of their own, but in and through the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. (Acts 3: 6-16; 16: 18.)

To speak thus and to be the means of performing such mighty works was no assumption on the part of these men. They had been commanded to so act by him who manifested that Name among them. (Matthew 28: 19, 20.) In addition to this, the needs of the times demanded the mention of the name. The name of Jesus Christ has specific meaning. It summed up his work and, as well, his personality. The great task of that day (and today) was to testify that "Jesus of Nazareth was the Christ." (Acts 18: 5.)

To proclaim and prove the lordship of Jesus is vital in Christian testimony and preaching. To this Jesus evidently was in agreement, for he asks: "What think ye of Christ? Whose son is he?" (Matthew 22: 42.) What one thinks of the sonship of Jesus is basic in belief and practice. It was and is the program of the church to interpret the meaning of the name of Jesus, and then proclaim by means of testimony that Jesus of Nazareth was the true personification of all the name implies.

Loyalty to the Name

The great Name of Jesus the Christ was not to be defined and accepted by mere intellectual assent. It was worthy of sacrificial devotion. It demanded a living sacrifice. Loyalty to the point of self-effacement was of vast importance to spiritual salvation. The privilege of sonship with God shall be given those who believe on his name. (John 1: 12.) There is no other name given among men whereby men can be saved other than through Jesus of Nazareth. (Acts 4: 10-12; 2: 36.)

This idea of loyalty to the divine as represented in and understood through the characteristics revealed through a proper interpretation of the name was carried over from early Hebrew theology into the Christian concept of Messiah. One need only examine the appellation given Deity to discover the attributes credited him. The name of Jesus the Christ harmonizes beautifully with the life he lived, thus making it manifold less difficult to understand and to more fully comprehend his work.

Manifesting the Name

A name of such great significance needs extraordinary manifestation to make possible human appreciation. Jesus came to present to mankind a better vision of the Creator. (John 5: 43.) The name of God must be defined in terms of simplicity. Hence Jesus could rightfully say: ". . . glorify the Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee; . . . I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world." (John 17: 1-6.)

Loyalty to the divine name can be possible only through the proper exhibition of personality. The highest type of personality comes nearest representing the qualities of the Creator. This was realized by or through the life of Jesus. This is made evident in the suggestion of Gandhi and a Jew of Nashville, Tennessee, that racial and world problems may be solved by the adoption of the Christ spirit and attitude.

Jesus manifested the Father among men, and it is the privilege of those who profess the name of Jesus and loyalty to him to perform the same task. This is indeed a great responsibility, but a necessity which can not be avoided. It is a psychological truth that "We know religion when we see it in persons." (Hocking.)

Belief in the Name

To believe in his name is to believe and accept his claims. To have faith in him is to trust in his promises. Baptism in the name of Jesus Christ signifies immersion into the profession and work of the personality represented in the name. It is taking upon oneself a new name. Thus being a pledge of loyalty and the seal of a new covenant.

Thus one takes upon himself a name which is in "accord with the name" of his God, the new name bringing with it a new personality, consequently a new direction for the expression of life energy; a changed life, without which it is impossible to comprehend the kingdom of God. It is a pledge of allegiance to all the accepted name implies and represents.

And summing it all up; it suggests a close, a near relationship existing between one who takes upon himself the name, and the bearer of the name. It signifies a pledge to exemplify the qualities of character discerned in the name and observed in the divine personality. It is a sacred responsibility to assume, and yet one that can not be rightfully avoided.

Success

He has achieved success who has lived well, laughed often, and loved much; who has gained the respect of intelligent men and the love of little children; who has filled his niche and accomplished his task; who has left the world better than he found it, whether by an improved poppy, a perfect poem, or a rescued soul, who has never lacked appreciation of earth's beauty or failed to express it, who has always looked for the best in others and given the best he had; whose life was an inspiration; whose memory is a benediction.—Mrs. A. J. Stanley.

Preparation for Church Membership

By Cyril E. Wight

Foreword

The following brief outlines are designed to assist the pastor or leader in preparing candidates for membership in the church. It is not enough that we baptize people into the church—we must convert them to a new way of living. This conversion can not be accomplished on the basis of a mere assent to the doctrines and philosophies of the church.

This conversion will become an accomplished fact only as the candidate perceives value and meaning in the structure and philosophy of the church. With this approach and a proper "follow-through" in his education after he becomes a member, the convert will become a real asset and the church will be able to make a living demonstration of its faith.

The material furnished should be sufficient to cover six or more class periods.

Lesson I

"WHY JOIN THE CHURCH?"

I. Introductory.

The usual answer to this question is, "To obtain eternal life, or salvation." This is an appeal to the selfishness of the individual. While recognizing that we can not bring about an immediate transformation, let it be remembered that our object is to replace selfishness with an attitude of altruism. Therefore, in so far as possible we should at the very outset make appeals that will tend to develop right attitudes. As a suggestion for such a development of attitudes we submit three answers, as follows:

II. To conserve and develop the creative instinct.

a. When God said, "Let us create man in our own image," he set forth the one great doctrine which makes for growth. By placing that same element in man, he has truly proved that we are "in his image." Note a few examples of man's possession of the creative instinct:

1. In the political field:
  - a. The Magna Charta.
  - b. The Declaration of Independence.
2. In the musical field:
  - a. Handel's Messiah.
  - b. Gresty's Course of Time.
3. In the field of religion:
  - a. The law of Moses.
  - b. The sermon on the mount.
  - c. The writings of Paul.
  - d. Building of the city of Nauvoo.

b. When Jesus said, "I will build my church," he placed his approval upon the creative instinct.

III. To develop a richer fellowship.

a. "I am come that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly."

1. Fellowship with Jesus in his way of living brings a vast increase of power over that which comes through the development of an individualistic type of worship.
2. Fellowship with our friends in the bonds of the church brings to us keener insight and deeper sympathy. Thus through the very wear and tear of church life are developed those qualities which make for a higher way of living.

b. "I am the vine, ye are the branches."

1. In the entire fifteenth chapter of John, Jesus places his approval upon the development of a close fellowship, one that will make for a richer life through the flow of power from one part of the church body to another.

IV. To increase our capacity to serve.

a. Read Matthew 25: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren" re-emphasizes the attitude of Jesus toward the real purpose of fellowship. He conceived of fellowship, not as an end in itself, but as a means of increasing our capacity to serve.

V. The answer of Jesus.

a. "Whoso seeks to save his life shall lose it, and whoso loseth his life for my sake shall find it." This indicates the attitude of the Master as to the reason for joining the church. Those who join for the mere purpose of selfishly saving their own lives are apt to be disappointed. On the other hand, those who lose themselves in consecrated service to their Master through the avenue of the church, will by the process of "forgetting themselves into immortality" save their lives.

Lesson II

FUNCTIONS OF THE CHURCH

I. Introductory.

In the previous lesson it was suggested that membership in the church brings to the individual certain advantages. It is scarcely to be assumed that the church exists as an end in itself. It serves no good purpose unless its machinery is designed for the performance of definite functions which are beneficent. It seems wise, therefore, to first consider what are the functions which the church should perform with a view to bringing real benefit to humanity. Following this, we will consider the actual organization of the church to determine whether its structure is of a character to permit the carrying out of these functions. It would appear, both from a scriptural analysis and from a knowledge of the needs of humanity, the church should be organized for the performance of the following functions:

1. Communion or revelation.
2. Spreading the "good news."
3. Building men for God.

II. Communion.

a. It is not within the province of these outlines to offer proof as to the existence of God. This is presupposed. We are assuming that a beneficent Father would give to his children such instruction as may be necessary for their growth. This is borne out by the following scriptures:

1. Amos 3:7: "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."
2. Matthew 16:18: "Upon this rock I will build my church." Whether this passage refers exclusively to the function of revelation, this function is at least included in the basis upon which the church is to be builded.
3. Revelation 14:6: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people."
4. John 16:13: "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of Truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak; and he will show you things to come."

b. It required centuries of revelation to give men a fairly clear picture of God. Gradually this picture changed from one which emphasized his stern and unyielding power to one which showed his mercy, his grace, and his love. Both pictures were in part correct, but neither is complete. It has required a continuance of revelation into our present day to indicate the intense interest of God not only in individuals, but in the relations of man with his fellows.

III. Spreading the "Good News."

a. The gospel is interpreted as the "good news." When Jesus, through the revelation of God to himself, recognized the power of the truth he had re-

NEWS AND LETTERS

Puyallup, Washington

The services held in this branch Sunday, April 6, will long be remembered by those who were present. Tacoma Saints met with us. The church school opened at 9.45 with an appropriate program. Nearly all the Saints of both branches came together fasting, according to the suggestion of President Frederick M. Smith.

From the opening number of the program to the close of the communion service a great degree of the Spirit was present. There was no intermission between the school hour and the sacramental service.

During the sacramental service the priesthood of both branches were seated on the rostrum, with Puyallup Branch president, Lester Bronson, and Tacoma Branch president, Jesse Snyder, in charge and assisted by Elders P. P. Reed, C. E. Wheeler, and J. F. Coats. The emblems were served by Priests W. M. Bronson and Ray Sowers. The oblation was taken up by our lone deacon, Robert Pentland.

The congregation as a whole was spoken to twice by the Spirit of the Father through two holding the Melchisedec priesthood. Brother Burr Bronson was called to the office of priest, and Brother W. M. Bronson, now occupying the office of priest, was called to that of elder.

As a closing part of the morning service, a huge cake, baked by Sisters Gladys Bronson and Clara Wheeler and decorated with one hundred candles, was cut into one hundred pieces by Brothers Lester Bronson and Jesse Snyder, blessed by Brother P. P. Reed, and served to the congregation by Brother Jesse Snyder's two youngest daughters, Mildred and Gladys. Thus was our fast broken together. A wonderful spirit prevailed during this ceremony. Many nonceived, he discerned also that the news was not intended to be hoarded, but to be broadcast everywhere. In other words, as the prophetic function was first necessary to reveal the will of God, the apostolic or missionary function was equally necessary for the spreading or disseminating of the good news. This is clearly revealed in the last great commission of the Master, given to his disciples:

Matthew 28: 19, 20: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

IV. Building men for God.

a. The final function of the church is to bring men to the "fullness of the measure of the stature of Christ." This is to be done through the agencies provided in the structure of the church.

b. The church, to be truly the church of God, must be so designed that it will effectively carry out the functions indicated above. Our next outline will cover the structure of the church, to learn whether it is in a position to carry out the task assigned to it.

members who were present have since expressed themselves as having never before attended a meeting, over which prevailed such a spirit.

Numbers at morning and evening services are noticeably growing. We have many attending whom we hope to see enter the kingdom of the Father.

As a branch we are following the outline given in the Department Journal and are finding it a success.

We had a very interesting Easter Day. A program was given morning and evening. The play "Easter dawn," presented in the evening, was most attractive.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

Easter Sunday was a red-letter day for Saskatoon Branch. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion by the Temple Builders. Lilies, tulips, jonquils, and potted plants were used in profusion.

Following the Sunday school lesson the children sang two songs. Each little class gave an exercise, Dan Moran a reading, and Sister Diggle told an Easter story.

Junior church was conducted without a hitch, every participant being provided with a program. During the playing the prologue by Sister Steves, all quietly took their places on the rostrum. Then the congregation rose and sang, "Lift your glad voices in triumph on high." The choir followed with an anthem, "Christ from the grave is risen." The prayer was by Brother Arthur Beckman, and the girls' quartet sang a lovely Easter number. Irma Denton and Amy Beckman read from the Scriptures to the accompaniment of soft music. Brothers Frank Piedt, Freeman Snyder, and Dan Moran, with Sister Nina Beckman reading, dramatized "The walk to Emmaus." This was followed by a violin solo, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," by Brother Paul Schmidt. Elder Beckman's Easter message was much appreciated.

In the evening, the Saints enjoyed a feast of music the like of which has not been ours for many years. The choir, thirteen in number, which had been practicing faithfully for some weeks, marched to its place while Sister Steves played "Meditation." Special numbers by the choir were "How calm and beautiful the morn," "Praise the Savior, all ye nations," "'Tis midnight and on Olive's brow," and "How calm and bright the lovely morn." Mr. Mackie played a cornet solo, "The Holy City," and Brother Gendron preached one of his old-time gospel sermons.

The outstanding part of the day's activities was the spirit of sacrifice manifested by those who took part in order that success might be enjoyed. Noble Harper, who is employed during the night hours, sacrificed his sleep on Easter morning; Dan Moran took a last-minute practice, although he was feeling ill; and Sisters Osler and Steves sacrificed an invitation to the country to visit their loved ones, in order to attend a final rehearsal. These are only a few of the many sacrifices made. Surely this spirit will lead to the redemption of Zion.

The Women's Department has been flourishing to an unusual degree. It edits a paper. This will be read partly at the Religio and the remainder at a gathering in honor of Brother and Sister Gendron, which will be held this week. The branch is rejoicing over the splendid large cookstove, the gift of Brother and Sister Gendron. The church kitchen is gradually being furnished with dishes, towels, tablecloths, etc. Last week an oyster supper, served cafeteria style, was the means of bringing in more than fifty-three dollars. A good program was had upstairs after the meal. The women have been sewing on layettes for the Women's Christian Temperance Union Hospital and working on quilts as they study mothercraft.

Brother Arthur Gendron is a most wide-awake president of the "Religio" (we still call it that when we are in a hurry). Debates are perhaps the most popular form of expression, but speeches, impromptu and otherwise, readings, music, and the reading of the Young People's Monthly, edited by themselves, all have their turns. Once a month the department has dramatization. Last week Miss Isabella Craig, Victorian Order nurse, asked permission to show slides and lecture on the work in Canada. This was granted and the program much enjoyed.

The Sunday school under the superintendency of Brother Frank Piedt is flourishing. Every Sunday there is a special feature following the lesson—questions on doctrine answered, a temperance talk, a special program, etc. On Mother's Day the cradle roll department will present something unusual.

The branch is planning to have the church made fully modern in a short time. The members have sacrificed throughout the year, having given nearly eight hundred dollars for branch expenses alone. Many have been out of work for months.

A few weeks ago the publicity agent arranged a special service which is now semiannual in this local. Four speakers gave addresses on the various church periodicals, Brother Christy following with an able discourse on the three books. An original sketch entitled "The deacon and the publicity agent" presented its lesson. Special music helped to make the hour enjoyable.

Elder DuRose Writes Home Folks of the Conference

(Taken from Flint Tidings, May, 1930.)

After a two-day trip covering eight hundred and twenty-six miles, we arrived at the gathering place, Zion, about 6 p. m., April 5. Ample evidence was at hand that thousands of others had been doing the same thing; it was literally true that all roads led to Independence. Sunday morning, April 6, dawned bright and fair, and thousands of Saints wended their way to the great Auditorium to the sacramental services, the first one at 8 and the second at 10.15. About twelve thousand persons partook of the emblems administered by a corps of one hundred and eighty-six men. Truly, as one looked upon that vast concourse, with heads bowed in reverence, memory was carried back to that other sixth day of April when six humble, God-fearing men assembled to organize the church after the divine plan, and afterwards partook of the sacrament. What might they have said could they have assembled with us? But space forbids that we here linger over these delightful experiences. In the afternoon a sacred band concert was given in the Auditorium to a full house, while at the same hour in the Stone Church the ministry were gathered for prayer under the direction of President Smith. The event of the evening was the International Oratorical Contest, the first place in which was won by James Gardner, of Graceland College, with the oration, "The spirit of the Restoration."

Monday morning the Auditorium and Stone Church were alive with people attending their choice of classes in thirty-seven subjects which were run in four periods beginning at 7.30 and ending at 12. The subject matter is of wide range, covering almost every conceivable field of church activity.

The first business session was marked by a beautiful and fitting ceremony under the direction of President Smith. While the American flag and the church flag were presented at the stand by Boy Scouts, other scouts standing around the balcony unfurled the flags of fourteen foreign nations, representatives of which were in attendance at the conference.

All the business sessions have been marked by a spirit of peace and unity, the reports coming from the various departments of the church were discussed by representatives of those departments, so that a thorough understanding of the activities could be had by the delegates and ex officios.

Special sections were set apart for the various district delegations, and it is pleasing to note that of the thirty-two delegates elected to represent the Detroit District twenty-seven were in attendance.

One of the features provided for the relaxation of the delegates and visitors was a three-act play presented by the Graceland College Players, "The passing of the third floor back." This was given in the Independence Memorial Hall, capable of seating three thousand persons at one time. Plans were made to present this three times, so that all might have the opportunity to enjoy it, but so great was the crowd and so urgent the request that the players were prevailed upon to make the presentation five times.

The evening of April 8 a very colorful program, designated as International, was given in which numbers were presented by representatives of all foreign countries present. Other entertaining programs were Graceland College program and the Sanitarium program, which were of a high order.

Mention must be made of the Oratorio, "The course of time," which was presented Sunday evening, April 13, and Monday evening, April 14, by a chorus of about eight hundred voices and an orchestra and band of over one hundred pieces, under the directorship of the composer, John T. Gresty of Australia. This magnificent piece of work was beautifully rendered before an audience of about seven thousand people who sat thrilled through the three and one half hours occupied in its performance. Music critics from the largest Middle West newspapers who were present have nothing but the highest praise for both the work and the rendition.

Devotional meetings are held each morning at the Stone Church under the direction of the First Presidency, and preachers of the highest caliber are also to be heard each morning.

Services or classes have been provided for every kind of need, and the officers of the church are to be complimented upon the comprehensive program provided. There is little doubt but that the Centennial General Conference of 1930 will go down in history as one of the most constructive and far-reaching in the history of the church.

ARTHUR H. DUROSE.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, April 14.

Memorial Tribute to Sister T. S. Williams

The Saints of Rock Island Branch were deeply grieved to learn of the sudden death of their pastor's wife, Sister Stella Williams, following an operation for appendicitis at the Independence Sanitarium. Her departure from our midst is one of the most tragic losses we have experienced for some time, and we regret the loneliness and sorrow which have come to her loved ones. Although it is less than a year since we first came in contact with our departed one, so intense was her love for the work of the Lord, and so exemplary was her life of the ideals for which she stood, that to know her was to admire her and to appreciate the better things of life.

Sister Williams was loyal to her family, her branch, and her friends. In his pastoral work she was indispensable to her husband, enriching his service and inspiring him always, for her efficiency was a strength which anyone might envy. As a mother she was the best kind of pal and friend a boy like Blaine might ask for, and he is fortunate that the foundations of his future have been so carefully laid by her tender hands. To the young of the Tri-Cities her home was always open, a place where they were wont to gather for social times and enjoy themselves in the atmosphere of Christian hospitality.

She was at every service that it was possible for her to attend, visiting with Brother Williams at the Tri-Cities when he preached there, and assisting in every way she could. At Rock Island, the Religio program on each Sunday evening was announced by Sister Williams, and in her memory a special program was planned for last Sunday evening. Those participating took their places without any announcements, and the service was beautiful and impressive. The program was as follows: Opening song, "What a gathering there will be"; prayer, Brother William Willets; song, "Jesus, Savior, pilot me"; reading, Brother T. R. Willets; duet: "Nearer, my God, to Thee," Sister Lee White and Sister Ethel Spergler; poem, "The woodland path," by Elbert Smith, read by L. A. White; duet, "Whispering hope," Sister A. J. Gray and Sister T. R. Willets; poem, "The River of Time," by E. A. Smith, read by A. J. Gray; piano duet, Marjorie and Marion White; vocal duet, "I hear my Savior calling," by A. J. Gray, and T. R. Willets; closing song, "Tenderly lead thou me on."

At the corner of the church at Rock Island, a small white syringa bush has been planted in her memory, that its pure white flowers and sweet perfume may be a living reminder of the purity and sweetness of her life of service.

An Australian Writes

By J. H. N. Jones

As a visitor to America from the other side of the world, where I have spent twenty-seven years in an effort to preach a message which originated with a young man on this continent, one hundred years ago, it might be deemed appropriate and fitting that I undertake a canvass of the salient features and historical incidents. Firstly, one thing that arrests the attention of an Australian is the changed attitude of the people of Missouri towards the church. One hundred years ago the Saints were mercilessly mobbed and driven from their homes in the dead of winter and forced to seek an asylum anywhere beyond the reach of enraged and murderous mobs. Today the Saints are considered among the best citizens of Independence and of Missouri. This, to one from afar, or to one at home, who thinks, is a wonderful swing of the pendulum of public opinion.

Prejudice against our religion no doubt still exists, but our citizenship is not questioned. What is the reason for the change? Is it that we as a people are different, or is the change on the part of the outside people?

The Reorganized Church, which is the chief body of Latter Day Saints in Independence, stands for and preaches the same message as did Joseph Smith and the early elders, so the change is not with them. It must, therefore, be a change among the people, and an advance of the law-abiding elements of our civilization. The people of the early day did not understand the aims of the new evangel and as a result persecuted its devotees to death. Our historian says this: "For a man to claim that he was intrusted with a divine appointment to restore to a Christian nation what they supposed they already possessed and richly enjoyed, would naturally create bitter antagonism, and we are not surprised that the conflict still continues; nor do we blame men for refusing to accept the claims of the Latter Day Saints until good reasons are shown for so doing."—Volume 1, p. 1.

It was the startling nature of this claim coupled with the zeal of its advocates bursting forth in a primitive civilization or on the frontiers where law and order could not be enforced, that no doubt furnished a setting for the lamentable happenings of those early times.

The news of the Restoration did not reach Australia until about the fateful time when the Prophet Joseph Smith and his brother Hyrum were killed, or martyred, by the Carthage mob. Little was known of these happenings until the coming to Australia of the elders of the Reorganized Church in 1874, over forty years after the founding of the church.

Word that had come to us had been of a most unfavorable kind and had filtered through prejudiced and bitterly biased channels. Mormonism had nothing to it but Brigham Young and his nineteen or more wives. That was the subject of ribald song in my early day.

When the first elders of the Reorganization came, a new light was turned on. We were told that true Latter Day Saints never had believed or practiced or taught the twin relic of slavery, polygamy. They requested the people to hear and weigh their message with an open Bible and an open mind.

Some who had already detected the deficiencies of modern Christianity when compared with the Bible account of Jesus and the apostles were willing to hearken. The great majority being satisfied with what religion they had or with no religion at all, paid no heed except to ridicule and misrepresent. Those who would listen were told the wondrous story of the Restoration: That early in the nineteenth century God had visited the earth once again after long centuries of silence. Christianity of the middle ages had written those ominous words, "The end," underneath the last book in the Bible and had said, God will not speak again by revelation to man.

The young man Joseph Smith countered the scholarship of the age and said, God has spoken to me and has told me that the creeds of the day are all wrong, that they are teaching for doctrine the commandments of men. He told an astonished world that an angel of God had appeared and spoken to him, directing him to a spot where lay a record of an extinct people and the means of translating it (Urim and Thummim). He said that he had been told by the angel if he were faithful he would be empowered to translate the record and send it forth to mankind.

We were told that this wondrous event had been actually accomplished and the book was in their hands for us to examine; furthermore that the apostolic office and the powers held by the early apostles of Christ but lost through the Dark Ages had been restored. They preached the full commission given by Jesus our Lord to the eleven after his resurrection: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

These ministers maintained that the signs followed the believer now as in days of old. Why not? Is it not a scientific fact that we live in a world of cause and effect? The gifts had disappeared from among the Christians because they had turned heathen again and had but a dead form left. So said John Wesley in his ninety-fourth sermon. The cessation of the gifts was a matter of cause and effect—no authority, no gifts. The Restoration of gifts was merely a matter of cause and effect; God restored the apostolic authority to Joseph Smith by the hands of an angel, and under the new and heavenly administration the gifts appeared.

Since that day many are discovering that there is something wrong with a spiritless and lifeless Christianity. Many are discovering that there is virtue in principles which at that time were discarded. Let me cite for instance the growth of belief in the principle of divine healing. Does this not amount to an admission that this young man was divinely led when he declared the gifts were for us today in harmony with the terms laid down in scripture?

The translation of the book and the organization or Restoration of the church with a ministry empowered to preach, baptize, confirm, and confer the gifts as in apostolic times were associated with the revelation of another wondrous aim even that of a universal Christian brotherhood, social, economical and spiritual. The present disastrously unequal state of society was visualized.

Listen to what eminent men have said since the World War: "Before the war people often supposed that ours was a Christian culture. The war has revealed us to ourselves. Civilization is pagan."—Doctor Bernard I. Bell.

Lloyd George said: "I am afraid that unless something intervenes there may be in the world again a catastrophe, but not like the last one. The next war may well destroy civilization."

Wells said: "We have come to the crossroads, and no one knows the way out."

Latter Day Saints believe that God knows the way out and that he has revealed that way through his servants the prophets in our time. The Prophet Amos said: "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets." God showed the boy Joseph Smith that which is now known to every man of thought, viz, that the wars of the world are created by national strife for a place in the sun. It is now proved beyond reasonable doubt that trade wars precede the actual killing of men in real warfare.

Zion is the word that was given to that young man. Even before the church was organized came the admonition: "Seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion; seek not for riches but for wisdom: and behold the mysteries of God shall be unfolded unto you, and then shall ye be rich. Behold, he that hath eternal life is rich." (Doctrine and Covenants.) Is this not in harmony with Paul's admonition which states that in the last days perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of themselves, covetous, boasters, etc., having a form of godliness and denying the power thereof?

The selfish seeking for wealth is the peril of our time, and before peace can come a more equal distribution must be had. "Our civilization is pagan," says Doctor Bell, and with a pagan civilization how can Christianity succeed?

It was revealed to this young man and to this church that Christian love must penetrate and impregnate all our relations, social, economic, and spiritual, before the prayer, "Thy kingdom come," shall have been realized. It was revealed that the time would come upon the world when men would have to flee to Zion. The program then of this church is firstly to lead men to a godly life through the gospel; to give them faith in and render them obedient to the principles of the gospel, preparing them for a reception of the Spirit of God; to inculcate in their hearts the two greatest commandments: Love for God and man; to teach them to surrender individual liberty in the accumulation of wealth at the expense and degradation of their brother men; to awaken in men a recognition of their stewardship rather than ownership, that in Zion they may work out a condition of living all for each and each for all. This church maintains that socialism is not divine enough and sectarian Christianity not social enough for this task. God has given to the world a perfect social program, and he challenges us to put it into effect.

This church's advent into the world and its first one hundred years of experience have been marked by a wondrous advancement by mankind over the forces of nature. The Prophet Daniel said, "Many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased," and this at the "time of the end."

The peoples of America and Australia in particular have made great strides materially. Waterless stretches of land have been irrigated; treeless portions have been re-forested; great canals have been cut. But these astonishing achievements stand side by side with a confession of helplessness to cope with the social and spiritual problems. The sense of mastery over the forces of nature is amazing when compared to the helplessness in confronting the problems of humanity. The scientist knows that in dealing with the God of nature he is dealing with something trustworthy. The relentlessness of nature is its trustworthiness. Is not this true also of the spiritual world? God is as reliable in one sphere as in the other, but men do not trust him. If men would take from applied science to applied Christianity a recognition of the principle of the trustworthiness of the laws with which they are dealing, they would become masters of a spiritual and social power even greater than that exercised over the material universe.

During the century that has passed, this church has had a strenuous time in its endeavor to hold to its gains. It has now reached a time when its program of social Christianity is being developed.

May we expect in the century of endeavor opening to us manifestation of a greater recognition of the worth of the angel's message? Our plea is for Christianity and Christian love and law in all our relations, with the consequent decrease of poverty, crime, and lawlessness and the preparation for the coming of the King of kings.

"Come, O thou King of kings!

We've waited long for thee;

With healing in thy wings,

To set thy people free;

Come, thou desire of nations, come;

Let Israel now be gathered home."

Brother Ullom Receives Special Blessing

The Wheeling district conference, held at Wellsburg, West Virginia, March 1 and 2 is almost ancient history now, but there was one occurrence that we think will be of interest to many.

In the communion service on Sunday afternoon our venerable patriarch, Gomer T. Griffiths, asked Elder Lorenzo D. Ullom to come to the rostrum. He then spoke of Brother Ullom's advancing years and of the fact that he would not be with us much longer; also of Brother Ullom being his "son in the gospel." He said he felt impressed to confer a special blessing upon Brother Ullom, and placing his hands upon his head, he very beautifully presented him to God. One special request was that when his time came to pass to the beyond the sting of death would be removed and that the passing would be very peaceful. After the blessing, Brother Griffiths asked us to pray for Brother Ullom, stating, "He has prayed for you all many times."

It is true that Brother Ullom has prayed for all. It is doubtful if any individual living has escaped consideration in his mighty prayers. His faith is as a child who prays, "Bless everybody, dear Lord." Those of the household of faith whom he knows or has heard of, have no doubt been presented to God by name in his prayers, for he has spent many years doing nothing else but going about among them to encourage them and administer to the sick. In doing this, he travels long distances, bearing his own expenses, and he has made many liberal donations of means for the advancement of the work in general and local phases. He is a consistent tithe payer. Despite his advancing years, he has not slackened his work, and walks a great deal in his visiting.

This was not a business conference, but was principally educational. The only business transacted was the election of delegates and the adoption of a resolution favoring an extended session of institute at the time of our fall conference, to be held at the Fairview Branch, Nauvoo Ridge, Glen Easton, West Virginia. The arrangements are to be in the hands of the district presidency and the superintendent of the Sunday School Department, in consultation with the general church officials. Following this item of business, the first session was turned over by District President William Richards, who was in charge of the conference, to Bishop L. F. P. Curry, who gave a fine lecture, illustrated with blackboard outline, on "Preparation for Zionite citizenship." One sister was heard to remark, "If we have to be that perfect, I think we will never get there." Surely we fail to consider the admonition, "Be ye perfect," and overlooking it, we fail to strive for the high ideals we should demonstrate in our lives.

The Saturday evening session was devoted to subjects pertaining to the Restoration, as was the Sunday school session on Sunday morning. The various speakers and readers handled their subjects in a creditable manner and the musical numbers were well rendered. An impressive feature which marked the opening of the Saturday evening program was the reading from memory of Revelation 14: 6, 7 and Doctrine and Covenants 17: 1, 2 by Brother Vernon Liston, a young man of high school age.

The communion service Sunday afternoon was well attended and quite spiritual, a goodly degree of activity being shown. It was in charge of Brothers G. T. Griffiths, O. J. Tary, and L. A. Serig. In blessing the babe, Richard Arvin Winship, the son of Brother and Sister Robert Winship, Brother Griffiths called attention to the fact that it was the fifth generation of the same family that he had had to do with as a minister. His many years of service have been faithfully rendered.

Sermons were preached during the conference by Brothers Griffiths and Tary. The Wellsburg Saints and friends entertained the conference visitors hospitably, and the convenient arrangement of their dining room in the church building largely overcome the inclement turn of the weather.

Beloit, Wisconsin

Beloit Branch is moving forward under the leadership and care of its new pastor, Elder Harry Wassen, of Janesville. There is an active Recreation and Expression Department here which meets Thursday evening each week. The Women's Department meets every two weeks. The Sunday school is growing in interest and numbers.

Easter Sunday the Sunday school presented an interesting program. Then Elder Wassen gave a touching sermon which helped us to more clearly sense the meaning of the Eastertide.

May 4 several carloads of Saints came from Madison with the members of their choir and gave a beautiful Easter cantata. It was well rendered. These young people are giving much to the church in music and song.

Columbus, Ohio

First Branch, Tompkins Street and Medary Avenue

May 1.—Although Pastor C. W. Clark was absent the major part of the month of April, the branch moved along efficiently under the guidance of his counselors and assistants, Brother Kriebel and Brother Ferguson.

The members came fasting to the communion service April 6, and enjoyed a degree of the Spirit which was a part of the general assembly in Independence. There were with us Brother Gray and family, nonresidents.

April 13 there was present as speaker in First Branch the district patriarch and father of the work in Columbus, Brother J. E. Matthews. We enjoyed what is known to the old-timers as a typical Matthews sermon.

Easter Sunday a short but excellent program commemorated the resurrection of our Lord.

Thomas Mills, of Moundville, Kentucky, formerly of Columbus, has been visiting the past week. He is on his way home from General Conference. Brother Mills and Brother Clark have given the members descriptions of the high spots of the conference and have conveyed some of the spirit which they enjoyed in the great gathering. When Brother Mills spoke the last Sunday evening of his visit, his hearers could not help but wish that he might be more often in our midst.

March 26 the Women's Class of the Sunday school gave a farewell tea to Sister Alice Bierly, who has been with us for many years but is now living in Jackson, Ohio. We are loath to part with this faithful member, and miss her comradeship.

Sister Florence Gabriel and Brother Wilbur Overly have been united in marriage. They have been feted and congratulated by individuals and various organizations of the branch. Columbus Saints in general wish them much happiness.

Sister Edna Zieschang, an able teacher, is conducting the Women's Department class in Religio and teaching "The problems of industrial Zion." This subject is also being studied by the Willing Workers class under the tutorship of Sister Zieschang.

Since the last letter from this local two have been added to the church, Brother and Sister Fisher.

The members of this branch are active and are eager and happy to do their part in the work of latter days.

Nauvoo, Illinois

The historical programs published each month are being used very effectively in our branch. We are fortunate in having talent that can present them impressively. A splendid spirit accompanies them, and we are led to believe that they are making lasting impressions upon those who witness them. Brother Elbert Smith is doing a splendid work in preparing them for us.

The Saints of Nauvoo have been very busy entertaining visitors. Quite a number from the East on their way home from conference stopped to visit this historic spot, and on April 27 the delegation from Australia, with others from Independence, were with us. Unfortunately, their visit was marred by two auto accidents and a drizzling rain. They arrived Saturday evening, and on Sunday afternoon Bishop Siegfried conducted a sight-seeing tour about the town. In the evening, Elder George Lewis, formerly of Australia, was in charge of the services at the church. He presented several of their number, and they gave some interesting talks on the work in Australia.

Elder Amos Berve, former pastor and wife, were guests of the Grotts for a few days, visiting their old friends here. Brother Berve preached on Sunday morning.

Elder D. J. Williams, former president of the district, and wife, were guests of the Lees for several days, and instead of the regular Wednesday night prayer service, Brother Williams preached for us.

On the first day of May, two hundred women from the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs met in Nauvoo. Flags were displayed in the streets, business houses decorated for the event, and the Nauvoo band in white uniforms played inspiring tunes. A splendid program was carried out, which included a visit to the historic church buildings where a twenty-minute lecture was delivered by Elder J. C. Page. Historic leaflets were distributed, and the delegation voiced their appreciation.

A pretty little wedding took place in the Mansion House on the third day of May when Sister Blanche Grotts Booze was united in marriage to Mr. Wolfgang Kingelmueller of this city. The living room, where the ceremony took place, was prettily decorated for the occasion. The immediate members of the family and a few friends were present. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and the bridal couple were attended by Miss Dorothy Argast and Mr. Harry Covington. Elder J. C. Page performed the ceremony. Refreshments were served, and then the bride and bridegroom left for a short trip to Quincy. The following Monday evening a reception was held at the home of the bride's mother.

The afternoon of May 4 a beautiful baptismal service was held at the river, when Elder J. C. Page led into the waters of baptism Mrs. Isaac Jemison and little William Kachle, jr. They were confirmed during the evening service under the hands of Brother Page and Elder J. W. Layton.

Brother Robert P. Fairclough passed away at his home

April 28 after an illness of several months. He was born in Lancashire, England, March 11, 1857, and came to America in 1880 following his marriage to Mary Jane Littlehales. They located in Worcester, Massachusetts, where three children were born to them, Mabel A. Sanford, of Nauvoo; Daisy L. who died at the age of fourteen; and Herbert E. who resides in Chicago. He united with the church in Somerville, Massachusetts, in 1905 and was true to his covenant till death. He moved to Independence in 1912 and came to Nauvoo three years ago. He leaves to mourn, his widow, two children, one sister living in England, four grandchildren, and one great grandchild. The funeral was held in the church, with Elder J. C. Page in charge. Interment was in the Nauvoo Cemetery.

Stone Church

The Mother's Day sermon was preached by Apostle Roy S. Budd, at the eleven o'clock service. For a scripture lesson he read from Saint John, 19: 26, 27: "When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, Woman behold thy son! Then saith he to the disciple, Behold thy mother! And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home."

To the mothers of today Apostle Budd said, Behold your children! It is given to mothers to be the religious educators of the world, the teachers of religion; to them is given the task of preparing men and women for the kingdom of God. If this world is to be a religious world, a world of love, it will be because mothers make it so.

To the sons and daughters of today, he said, Behold your mothers! Be true to the things which they have taught you. Remember the suffering, the patience, the faith, the courage of motherhood. Mother love is the nearest thing to God's love that we know of. Let us so live as to be worthy of it.

The Stone Church Choir sang the anthem, "New every morning is the love," by Keble and Bullard, Miss Lilly Belle Allen singing the soprano solo. Paul N. Craig directed and Robert Miller played organ accompaniment. LeRoy Smith, baritone, sang the solo, "Little mother of mine," by Brown and Burleigh, accompanied by George Miller, pianist. Robert and George Miller played an organ-piano duet, Rubinstein's "Kamennoi-Ostrow." The first half hour of the service was broadcast over radio station K M B C. Elder D. O. Cato presided and was assisted by Bishop J. A. Becker.

Mother's Day was commemorated by the intermediate department of the church school during both the 9.30 and eleven o'clock periods. At their own church service the boys and girls listened to the helpful address of Elder George Lewis, recently missionary in the Northwest but now appointed to work in Independence. Music was supplied by Marguerite and Gladys Givens, young members of the Stone Church Choir, and Superintendents S. A. Thiel and Howard Harder presided.

The evening service was a continuation of the Mother's Day program. Elder C. Ed. Miller was the speaker and emphasized the mother's high mission in the world. The ideal home has no successful competitor, he said. The church can not take its place, neither can the State. John Howard Payne wrote the heart song of the centuries, beautifully expressing a great truth when he sang, "There's no place like home." The mother spirit presides over the ideal home as a perpetual benediction.

We must recognize greatly changed social and economic conditions in the world, averred the speaker, but our spiritual needs are ever the same. Therefore let us plead for a return of the family altar.

In an address Doctor Harvey Wiley, previously connected with the government, said: "Children are starving to death in the midst of plenty" because they do not receive proper food. Wheat is an ideally balanced food. Elder Miller urged that the Word of Wisdom be observed in our homes.

Among the People in Zion

"Ellis Island," a play written and directed by Miss Lenore Anthony, of Kansas City, was presented by the Independence Music Club and assisting artists May 6 in the lower room of the Auditorium, to an audience of several hundred music lovers. The scene is laid on Ellis Island, New York, and the story of the landing of immigrants to this country is told. The way in which they spend their time while awaiting relatives and friends makes a program of variety and interest. The play was to have been given February 11 but was postponed until after the Centennial Conference.

Members of the Music Club who presented this splendid program were assisted by outside talent from Kansas City and Independence as follows: LeRoy Smith, of Kansas City, formerly a student at the Rochester, New York, School of Music and a member of the opera company of that school; Dale Pigg, instructor of Spanish in the William Chrisman High School; Herbert Fraher, of the Kansas City Grand Opera Company; Albert Brackenbury, of Independence, of the Horner Conservatory of Music; Irving Jenkins, of Independence, former student at Harvard University; Miss Troya, of Kansas City; Anthony Farrara, of Kansas City, boy soprano and student of Walter Ehrmann. The people of Independence appreciated the work of the above-named and also of numbers of others who contributed generously to the success of the entertainment.

Teddy Beck, son of Elder and Sister T. A. Beck, holds the distinction of being the youngest Herald news correspondent in the world. He has recently been appointed reporter of the activities of the junior department of the Stone Church Sunday school at the Campus by the superintendent, Sister Ray Moler. Teddy is eleven years old. His first letter to the Herald follows:

"The junior service at the Campus last Sunday morning was well attended. The theme of this service was 'Mother's Day.' The children had their parents as guests. The junior school and worship were in charge of Sister Hazel Moler, and Sister Alice Burgess was in charge of the program.

"The program Sunday morning consisted of a reading by Maxine Budd. A chorus of boys sang 'Mother Machree.' Thelma Butts gave a reading, 'God bless my mother.' An interesting tableau, 'Sweetest little fellow,' was given by Emma Jean Etzenhouser accompanied by Brother Moore, pianist. Miss Flora Delofski, visitor from Australia, gave a reading and also a tableau, 'My mother's hands.' The children gave two tableaux, the Twenty-third Psalm, and 'What is home without mother?' A chorus of girls sang two songs, 'M-O-T-H-E-R,' and 'That wonderful mother of mine.'"

A familiar face is gone from the Stone Church congregation. For many years the Saints of Independence have accustomed themselves to the kindly association of Bishop Edmund L. Kelley, formerly Presiding Bishop of the church, and all mourn the passing of a friend and brother. He died at his home in Independence at noon Saturday, May 10, being eighty-five years of age. Besides his widow, Sister Catherine B. Kelley, he leaves three daughters: Mrs. Jeanette Craig, of the home; Mrs. Ruth Lichtenwalter, of Philadelphia; and Mrs. Laura Green, of Independence; five sons: W. B. Kelley, and J. S. Kelley, of Independence; D. E. Kelley, Kansas City; E. L. Kelley, jr., Hardin, Montana; and Richard C. Kelley, of Philadelphia. Brother Kelley's name is inseparably linked with the history of the church; he was Presiding Bishop from 1891 to 1916. He moved to Independence from Lamoni, Iowa, in 1904, and has since made his home here. The funeral services were held at 2.30 Monday afternoon from the Stone Church, President Frederick M.

Smith delivering the sermon. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

More than seventy-five present and former members of the Y. K. T. Class were guests at the banquet May 10, which observed the tenth anniversary of the class. Apostle F. Henry Edwards was the principal speaker, and under the toastmastership of Kenneth Fligg an attractive program entertained the guests. Elder R. J. Lambert is present teacher of the class, and Kenneth Morford is president. The banquet was served by the Laurel Club in the lower room of the Auditorium.

Independence has said her farewells to several members of the Australasian delegation to the Centennial Conference. Elder and Sister J. H. N. Jones left us more than a week ago, and Monday morning Elder and Sister W. J. Haworth, Miss Flora Delofski, and Sister Rose Elliott were escorted by officials of the church and friends to the Union Station in Kansas City, where they boarded a train for Los Angeles, California. There they will be joined by other members of their party preparatory to sailing for their homeland. Members in the center place have been happy to make the acquaintance of these Australian Saints, and feel as a result that the bonds of fellowship between the church in America and the church in Australia have been strengthened.

Second Church

There was good attendance at the early prayer meeting Sunday morning, May 4. Church school at 9.30 was characterized by normal attendance and interest. Communion service at eleven o'clock was well attended. It was a beautiful service, bringing to the worshipers a feeling of deep appreciation for the church and its earnest workers, and inspiring them to be helpful in its great objectives. That evening Elder John Blackmore brought a fine message to the congregation.

A spiritual prayer hour was experienced by the small number which attended last Sunday morning. The church school at 9.30 and the preaching hour at eleven were continuous services in honor of Mother's Day. The first service was made up of the usual class period and readings and musical numbers appropriate for the day. The sermon in the morning was by a former pastor, Elder R. J. Lambert, who did justice to the occasion. A large crowd was present, showing the high esteem with which the congregation regards this former worker in our district.

At this service the infant son of Brother and Sister Roy F. Ursenbach was blessed by Brother A. K. Dillee and F. N. Mortimore.

In the evening Elder D. A. Whiting gave an excellent sermon to a rather small but attentive crowd on the text, "Study to show thyself approved unto God."

Sister Sarah Jane Davis, wife of Brother John F. Davis, of this district, passed away at the Independence Sanitarium May 7. She is survived by her husband, three children: Byron G. Martin and Cyril B. Martin, of the home; and Leonard F. Davis, of Independence; her mother, Mrs. Caroline Garland, of the home, and five sisters: Mrs. Susie Duskin, Long Beach, California; Mrs. Lena Howe, Mrs. Ella Cookston, Mrs. Jessie Binger, and Mrs. Laura Bishop, of Independence. Sister Davis was forty-six years of age at the time of her death and was a faithful member. The funeral service was held at the church last Friday afternoon, interment being in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Liberty Street

Beautiful flowers decorating the pulpit, and the red and white carnations worn by the members of the congregation the morning of May 11, gave evidence that Mother's Day was here. The annunciation to Mary from Luke was the Scripture reading used by Harry Blake in the opening of the church school.

Special Mother's Day music was furnished by a girls' chorus directed by Sister Bertha Burgess. A prayer song sung a cappella was especially beautiful. These girls had a full program for Sunday, their contributions having been heard over K M B C, at the Stone Church, and at one or two other places. Liberty Street was therefore doubly appreciative of their appearance at the eleven o'clock service.

The Mother's Day sermon was by the pastor, F. A. Cool. John 19: 25-27 was the scripture text. The pioneer mothers of yesterday, the mothers of all our great men are giving the mothers of today a challenge. Are we ready to accept that challenge by leaving to our posterity the worth-while heritage that these noble mothers of the past have left?

The junior department has had a rebirth of enthusiasm since moving into its new quarters. Since the departure of Glenn Davis for his mission field in the South, Raymond Wrigley, a former junior leader, has taken charge of this department. Mary Madden is again acting as his assistant, and all bids fair for a successful season among the younger boys and girls at Liberty Street.

At 1.30 in the afternoon a beautiful baptismal service was had in the basement of the Stone Church. "Softly and tenderly Jesus is calling" was played on the piano by Lyda Thomason, after which the congregation sang "My God, how wonderful thou art." While Raymond Wrigley inducted his nephew, John Wrigley, and Larue Surface into the church and F. A. Cool administered the ordinance of baptism to Cecil R. Walker, the pianist softly and reverently played "I would be true." The closing prayer was by John Zion.

Confirmation of these newly baptized members was had at the evening service. Apostle Myron A. McConley and Patriarch John T. Gresty functioned in this ordinance.

"Perfect day" was sung by F. A. Cool, with cello obbligato by Fred Friend, Lyda Thomason accompanying.

The Lord has no favorites; the white race is no more favored in his sight than are our darker-skinned brothers. Too many of us are like Peter in this respect, and the lesson learned by that worthy apostle on the housetop is meaningful for us today. The great goal the church has set for itself in the attracting of new members can be accomplished only if it is attacked as his individual problem by every member of the church. Nothing is impossible of accomplishment if one thinks it strongly enough, emphatically declared Apostle M. A. McConley. If enthusiasm and anxiety for our church work are contagious, the listeners who heard Brother McConley in this sermon delivered at the evening service May 11, should be doing great things for the church in the near future.

Walnut Park

Inasmuch as Sunday was Mother's Day the various services at Walnut Park partook to a large extent of this central theme. In the early morning prayer meeting the various prayers and testimonies centered about this subject. In the latter part of the church school period, a special program of songs and reading was presented by various members of the school. This was much appreciated and enjoyed by all.

The eleven o'clock worship service gave special recognition to the meaning of the day. A group of four girls gave two contributions to the service, the first a double duet entitled "O mother dear," and the second a quartet with the short but significant title "You." A clarinet quartet playing "Wonderful mother of mine" also contributed to the beauty of the service.

The morning sermon by Elder John Blackmore was very fitting. The reading was taken from Luke 2: 15-19. He called attention to the fact, as recently shown by a study undertaken at a university, that the most musical words and the words most full of meaning are the two, mother and home. The next two are father and love. This quartet of words, representing the fundamental institutions and relationships of society, is the richest in content and musical beauty. Upon the home rests the hope of the future. To the mothers and fathers is intrusted the great task of bearing and rearing the unborn millions of the future, as well as the children of today, and making of them true Zion builders.

Preceding the evening preaching service, a Mother's Day playlet was enacted by children of the junior age, which they had previously presented at the junior church service in the morning. The children in the play performed well. A few songs were sung in connection with the production, including "Old-fashioned mother of mine" and "Nobody knows but mother." Grandmother, after receiving Mother's Day gifts from her grandchildren in remembrance of the occasion, delighted the children with a story of her girlhood days.

The speaker for the evening was Elder R. D. Weaver, who is leaving this week for his mission field in Southern California. He used a reading from the Book of Mormon, the fourteenth chapter of second Nephi. Two of the texts upon which he placed special emphasis were "To be learned is good if we hearken unto the counsels of God," and "But if we walk in the light as Christ walked in the light, then we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Christ cleanseth us from all sins." His sermon was much appreciated.

The midweek activities during the past week have included the regular group prayer meetings held in each of the five groups, all of which have been resulting in much good to the Saints. Friday night there was also a special missionary preaching service in Group 29 East.

Enoch Hill

Appropriate services commemorated Mother's Day in this district. In the morning Elder R. D. Weaver delivered a splendid address on the theme of the day, and the song of the children was concluded with a ceremony in which each child presented his mother a giant peony.

A faithful member of the local priesthood, Brother Joseph Martin, preached in the evening to a congregation composed of his neighbors and friends who were very appreciative of his message.

Six local men of Enoch Hill have completed a special course in Boy Scout work, given by scout officials of Kansas City. The course lasting five evenings and concluding with a hike next Saturday and Sunday afternoons was offered to scoutmasters and committee men. It was taken by Brothers Don Cox, Glenn Cox, John Quick, C. E. Beal, O. W. Sarratt, and E. H. McKean.

The first play night of the summer season has been set for this Friday evening. The young people of intermediate and senior age are invited to play on the church grounds. There are two volley ball courts and a baseball diamond. In addition, the grounds on one side of the church will be used for the playing of a variety of outdoor games. Refreshments will be sold to help in the expenses of equipment and upkeep of the grounds. In maintaining this playground, which is being sponsored by the young people's organization of the district, it is hoped to keep alive on Enoch Hill the spirit of play, fellowship, and real brotherhood.

Sister Tamer Ann Evans, seventy-four years of age, passed away the morning of May 10 at the Sanitarium. She is the mother of Sister Henrietta Allen, of Enoch Hill, with whom she made her home. She was baptized a member of the church October 16, 1870. Surviving are one son, Warren Evans, Independence; two daughters: Mrs. Nellie A. Greer and Mrs. Henrietta Allen, Independence; three brothers: Arthur Hailey, Avenue City, Missouri; Thomas Hailey, Saint Joseph, Missouri; and William Hailey, Huntsville, Missouri. Sister Evans was the widow of Caleb B. Evans. The funeral was held from the Walnut Park Church Monday morning, Elder R. D. Weaver preaching the funeral sermon. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Gudgell Park

Communion service for the month of May was in charge of the local priesthood. Attendance was good, and a peaceful spirit prevailed.

The church school is making progress. Attendance is good, and class work is interesting.

The evening speaker for May 4 was Brother Frank Veenstra. Brother and Sister Veenstra sang several songs in the Dutch language.

Mother's Day was observed by Gudgell Park Saints first at the Sunday school with special songs, then a talk on "Mothers" by Sister George Burch. At the eleven o'clock service there were songs and a splendid address by Evangelist U. W. Greene. The evening speaker was Elder Bozarth.

East Independence

The little home band looked rather small as we assembled for the first time after the General Conference. For two weeks we had accustomed ourselves to the throngs of the conference, and with them had enjoyed the blessings bestowed upon the assembly. However, if we are to judge from the joyous greetings and smiling faces, it was very pleasant to be at home once more.

Brother and Sister Benjamin Stowell have been going through severe trials of late in the illness of two of their children. The baby, Fannie, and an older boy, Nathan, were seriously sick and had to undergo operations. Both seem at present to be improving, and it is the hope of the branch that they will soon be entirely recovered.

Of late the sermons have been of an encouraging nature. The good advice and testimony of Brother W. D. Bullard, the sound arguments of Brother W. E. Peak, the hopeful outlook of Pastor L. W. Moffett have been helpful.

Sacramental service for May was an hour during which the spirit of quiet and reverence prevailed.

On Mother's Day Brother C. I. Carpenter gave a fine talk to, and concerning, mothers and their wonderful task in the redemption of mankind. His message was preceded by a special number by a quartet composed of Brother and Sister J. C. Friend and Brother and Sister W. H. Butler.

In the evening Elder Frank McDonald in his sermon took the congregation back to the beginning of time, showing how man in the Garden of Eden was put to the test of trusting God. It seems that then as now man had to learn by hard experience that God's ways are best.

Central Church

With the Centennial Conference recorded as history, all meetings at Central have resumed normal attendance, and the Saints are invigorated with a burning desire to press forward during the second century to a higher goal in the establishing of Zion here on earth.

During the first week after the close of conference, the choir members were given a rest, no rehearsals being held. Nearly every one had been in the oratorio chorus, as well as the pageant. Members from Bennington, Argentine, Northeast, Gladstone, Quindaro, Heathwood, Fourth Kansas City, Grandview, and Central composed the Kansas City Chorus, there being one hundred from this stake who sang in the rendition of the oratorio. At the last rehearsal of the Kansas City Chorus, it was decided so much good had been derived both socially and educationally, that a permanent organization should be effected. Brother Clayton Wolfe was elected president pro tem, and Sister Alice Smeeton, secretary, and they together with Brother Evan A. Fry, director, were given the power to choose assistants necessary in the drawing of a constitution to govern this new organization. This organization is now working on a concert to be given at the stake conference Sunday evening, May 18.

Kansas City Stake was well represented in the pageant, about one hundred and seventy-five participants representing Quindaro, Bennington, Central, Grandview, Fourth Kansas City, Argentine, Chelsea, Northeast, Gladstone, and Heathwood. Each player paid two dollars toward the expense of the costumes, and when the final count was made the expense incurred by the stake was the sum of ten dollars, which we think is a very good record in economy. A permanent organization is also planned by this group of players.

About one hundred and fifty attended the basket ball banquet given at the church on Friday evening by the Central basket ball team. Brother Alfred Hitchcock was the toastmaster for the occasion. An interesting program consisted of the address of welcome by Bill Brown; vocal solos by Brother Clayton Wolfe and Frank Baylor; violin solo by Frank White; and short talks were given by Glen Falser, Doctor E. P. Nelson, and Bill Ealy concerning different parts of the basket ball. Brother Charles Babb delivered an enthusiastic talk on "Hot air." Guests of the evening were President Floyd M. McDowell, who spoke on "The basket ball," and Elder Leonard Lea, who delivered the invocation. Everyone attending expressed himself as having enjoyed it immensely. A good feeling of fellowship was manifested.

Sunday being Mother's Day, high tribute was paid to Mother. The primary department extended an invitation to the mothers to visit this department during the third period, when a lovely little program was given.

At the service period, hymn number 118 in the Saints' Hymnal was sung, a singing tribute to Mother, after which the choir very beautifully rendered the anthem "New every morning," by Bullard, Helen Scott singing the soprano obbligato.

The sermon was delivered by Elder C. Ed. Miller, who is very capable of reaching the hearts of the people. He paid a high tribute to motherhood and delivered an interesting discourse, suggesting that we be more careful in the rearing of the children today, that the family altar be restored, that the men and women of tomorrow shall be found ever righteous and stalwart in their habits.

At the 7.45 service, Sister Elizabeth Hitchcock rendered a lovely solo. The evening discourse was delivered by Apostle Roy S. Budd.

At a recent meeting, the infant son of Brother and Sister Alfred Hitchcock was blessed by Brothers Keir and B. R. McGuire, of Independence, and given the name, Joseph Franklin.

Brother and Sister Ross Moore announce the birth of a son May 4. Sister Moore has been critically ill but is now improving.

This evening at eight o'clock the laity of Central Church will hold a reception in honor of the stake officers and newly appointed missionaries. An interesting program has been arranged, after which refreshments will be served.

The stake business meeting will be held Friday, May 16, at 7.45 o'clock. At this meeting the stake officers will be elected for the new conference year.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson will be the speaker at the eleven o'clock service on Sunday, May 18. In the afternoon there will be an installation of the newly elected stake officers.

Fourth Kansas City Church

The family service on Wednesday evening, April 23, was one of inspiration and devotion. The sisters from the platform sang, "Have thine own way, Lord," while the male voices sang alternately with the sisters, "The beautiful garden of prayer." Marian Worden and Elaine Smith were at the piano and organ, each playing for her respective little choir. The auditorium was filled to capacity. In closing, the congregation sang, "Into my heart."

At the eleven o'clock hour April 20, Elder W. P. Creviston spoke on "Spiritualizing our work in the church," and at the evening session, Elder J. E. Vanderwood, his companion, and his sister, Sister Conkle, paid us a visit. Brother Vanderwood taught the class at the young people's session, and preached on the subject, "The risen Lord," at 7.45. He emphasized his statement that unless the Saints resurrect themselves to newness of life, and learn to live together, Zion can never be redeemed.

April 27, at eleven o'clock E. T. Atwell preached a forceful sermon, laying his foundation on the first verse of the twelfth chapter of Hebrews: "Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us." He read accounts of many marvelous healings, etc., from the Ensigns, as proof of the many witnesses there are for Christ. Elder R. D. Weaver, of Independence, preached at night after a fine program by the Bennington Church.

Edmund L. Kelley—A Short History

November 17, 1844—May 10, 1930

On Saturday, May 10, Edmund L. Kelley, former Presiding Bishop of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, passed away at his home in Independence, Missouri.

Thousands of friends and admirers mourn his passing. Many of them have known him for a brilliant speaker, and have listened to his voice; many of them knew him as a friend and adviser, and benefited by his practical wisdom; many of them enjoyed the warm hospitality of his home, and remember the kindness and gentleness of his spirit, the depth and richness of his striking personality.

Older people will remember that for many years his life was a practical parallel of the history of the church, and that he was concerned in every great undertaking that featured its work. He was a strong and able defender, a brilliant interpreter and exponent of its doctrines and laws, a financial adviser of extraordinary sagacity. He saw the vision of a greater and better future for the church, and helped to provide and build for it.

He exhausted himself in service, giving himself till weariness and advancing years forced him to retire from the labor in which he had assumed so heavy a burden. His passing is a matter of sorrow and regret, as the passing from life of a distinguished character must always be.

Edmund Levi Kelley was born near Vienna, Illinois, November 17, 1844, the son of Richard Yancey and Sarah E. F. (Ballowe) Kelley. Both father and grandfather were members of the church which met its tragedy in that year. His father later affiliated with the Reorganization, and it was in his father's home that he heard the long discussions with neighbors and friends that gave him the basis of his understanding of the church and its doctrine.

After a number of years that were devoted largely to study, to teaching, and the practice of law, he came into the service of the church. His varied activities and training prepared him for the work that he was to do. He studied business, he traveled, he completed his preparation for the profession of law, and at the same time he kept up his interest and activities in educational affairs.

He was baptized a member of the church May 23, 1864, a few months before his twentieth birthday, at a semiannual conference near Council Bluffs, Iowa.

While he was superintendent of schools in Mills County, Iowa, he met Miss Catherine Bishop, who was to become his wife on December 21, 1876. His marriage proved to be one of the happiest and most fortunate events of his life, for her personality, ability, and character supplemented his own in a remarkable way. She proved to be a valuable aid and support in all of his work and has also justly achieved a degree of public recognition in her own right and for her own important contributions to the church.

In the winter of 1870 he determined to give his services to the church, and attended a conference in Plano in 1871, when he was ordained a priest and appointed to labor in Michigan, from which time he was destined for service in the church. Its history is liberally marked with the records of his work. He was a leader in many of the most important committees of the time. He collected information from members of the early church and their descendants as to the early organization and its leaders. He performed an important part in the legal action that cleared the title of the church to the right of possession of the Temple at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1880. In 1881 he was with Zenas H. Gurley in Washington, District of Columbia, to defend the interests of the Reorganization and to assure the recognition of its distinct identity when the Edmunds Bill, directed against certain conditions existing in the Utah Church, was under debate. His mission there was completed successfully.

At the conference at Independence, Missouri, in 1882, he became a member of the Presiding Bishopric, a connection which he was to maintain until his retirement in 1916, first serving as counselor to the newly appointed Presiding Bishop, George A. Blakeslee, and continuing until 1891, when he was chosen to the office of Presiding Bishop. This office he held until the time of his retirement.

Bishop Kelley gave what was probably one of his greatest contributions to the church in his prosecution in 1890 of the famous Temple Lot suit which resulted in the vindication of the moral right of the church to the possession of the Temple Lot in Independence.

During his term in office he managed the finances of some of the most important institutional undertakings of the church. In his administration Graceland College was founded and started its important work; homes for orphans and for aged people were acquired and built; the gospel ship Evanelia was sent to the South Sea Islands; a new building for the the Herald Publishing House was erected in Lamoni, and the Independence Sanitarium was built and started on its fine work, free of debt. The general offices of the church were established in Independence; land and property were acquired, and the total wealth of the church was increased several times over. These are only a few of the important works in which he was involved. It is reported that at a number of crucial times for the finances of the church, it was his character, reputation, and ability that enabled the church to secure money to continue its work. Never once did he fail.

In 1897 he was called to assume an added responsibility in acting as counselor to the late President Joseph Smith. He continued in this position while doing his other work, until 1902.

Among his many abilities, he was a fluent and powerful speaker, fully in command of any audience he ever addressed. His manner in the pulpit was always dignified and commanding of attention and respect; in speech and gesture he pursued an exemplary way, his reverence for his office and the place causing him to restrain rigidly the tendency to humor that brightened his conversation. Few idle words ever fell from his lips, and no mean ones. But in the passages of words with his opponents, he kept to the larger issues, holding to his determined way with a power that was not to be frustrated nor turned aside. It is said that he defended the church, during this busiest time of this life, in fifteen major debates, the most famous of which was the series of discussions in which he opposed Clark Braden. The debate, published, became a text in the defense of the church.

To every human relationship he brought a genuine human kindness, born of fraternal respect and a love of mankind. To the solution of every problem he brought the resources of his scholarship and the strength of a keen, analytical mind sharpened by the experiences of his busy life. To his home life he brought affection, gentleness, trust, and simple sincerity; to his business affairs he brought high honor, character, and unimpeachable integrity; to the dispensation of charity he brought pity and sympathy, and guarded care; to his church work he brought dignity, reverence, and abid-

Pastoral

To the Saints of the Spring River and Southern Missouri Districts; Greeting: The Centennial General Conference having appointed me to labor as patriarch in this new field, I desire to make that appointment of the most possible benefit to the church by doing all that is practicable for the membership residing in these districts. In order that the service may be of the highest practicable order, it is necessary that the provisions of the law governing that service be observed. Some provisions of the law are as follows: The patriarch is "To visit branches and districts as wisdom may direct, invitation, request, or the Spirit of God determine and require." From this it is apparent that officers of branches and districts should be alert to the needs of their membership as to the services of the patriarch and extend invitation to visit as such needs may appear, and as wisdom may direct. It is also understood from this statement in the law that the patriarch may, as the Spirit of God may determine, visit in the absence of such invitation, and such visits should not be looked upon as being presumptuous, and he should receive the same cooperation as he would expect where invitation had been extended. He is "to comfort the Saints; to be a father to the church; to give counsel and advice to individuals who may seek for such; to lay on hands for the conferment of spiritual blessings." It is supposed that he will offer counsel and advice only when it is sought for, unless led by the Spirit otherwise. The Saints should feel it is their privilege to seek counsel and advice, and feel free to do so, as they have need, with full assurance that their affairs will be held in the strictest confidence, and that they ing faith; and in all the labors of his life he was an admirable, upright man.

Besides his widow, Mrs. Catherine B. Kelley, he is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Laura Green of Independence, Mrs. Jeannette Craig of the home, Mrs. Ruth Lichtenwalter of Philadelphia, and by five sons: W. B. Kelley, of Independence; E. L. Kelley, jr., of Hardin, Montana; Richard C. Kelley, of Philadelphia; J. S. Kelley, of Independence, and D. E. Kelley, of Kansas City.

L. L.

will not in any degree be jeopardizing their personal interests in so doing. The conferring of spiritual blessings is at the request of those desiring it, and is to be conducted in harmony with the mind of the Spirit of God as it may be manifested to the patriarch and to the one asking for ministration. It is a sacred ordinance and should be treated as a divine privilege and entered upon with a sincere desire to do the will of God as such will may be made apparent. It is not primarily fortune telling or pointing out the future work of the individual, but rather the sealing of a covenant to serve God. It is not contingent upon the payment of a fee, or even the making of an offering; but it is the practice commonly in vogue that those receiving blessings make an offering such as their willingness, ability, and desire may determine, such offerings being accounted for to the Bishop as any other funds coming into the hands of the ministry are reported monthly. "He is to labor in connection with the branch and district officers." He can not function in preaching, teaching, expounding, exhorting, and performing the duties of revivalist, to the fullest extent without holding public services. It would be very unseemly for him to make appointments for such services without the cooperation of the officers in charge. All his work in the branches should be by cooperation with the officers, thus lending support and strength to the efforts. He is not to meddle with branch affairs or district affairs. He is not to listen to complaints made by individuals to him. . . . He is not to be put in charge of either branch or district." These provisions of the law are found in section 125 of the Doctrine and Covenants, and it would be well if all the Saints might be familiar with paragraphs three, four, five, and six, which give in detail the principal duties and function of the patriarch, or evangelist, so that there might be mutual understanding of the work of the patriarch and the privileges of the Saints as affected by his ministry. Sister Gunsolley will accompany me as stenographer, and will also render service in the work of the women, young people, and children, being qualified in the line of music, story-telling, and junior church. We will be in the field after the first week in June, and would appreciate hearing from district and branch presidents with reference to work in their districts or branches. We also solicit correspondence from individual Saints who may be disposed to write us. Address 1309 Maywood, Independence, Missouri.

—J. A. Gunsolley.

Church Bonds

In another column will be found an advertisement by the Presiding Bishopric concerning the bonds which the church has issued and some of which have been sold. The Bishop is urging the Saints to purchase these bonds, and giving some reasons why they should do so. I feel that the Bishopric can not too strongly urge this, and I sincerely hope that many of the Saints will buy the bonds. In fact, I fain would see every member of the church the possessor of one or more of the church bonds. They constitute a very safe investment, one of the best that can be made, and it is to be earnestly hoped that all members will begin now, if they have not previously done so, to start a movement for thrift by making investments which will provide a reserve fund for a "rainy day," or for financial independence. Thrift means giving up present pleasure for future security, a curtailment of wants nearer to the level of needs for the sake of having later the means of providing just wants or even needs when a reserve may prevent distress or furnish the comforts so desirable as the recurring years bring age.

There are many Saints today who through speculation in stocks are short various amounts of money who may well wish they had bought church bonds with the money they "risked" on some speculative stocks sold them by "high powered" salesmen.

We have been admonished to avoid speculation, and recent happenings have demonstrated the wisdom of such advice. And, it would be well with us if we should profit by our experiences and avoid further mistakes.

For one to have one or more church bonds will center his interest upon the financial success of the church, and it will also give the owner some degree of pleasure to know that the church has the use of the money to carry on necessary activities, while the demands of thrift are being met in a financially sound way.

To advise that all members buy church bonds to the extent of their ability, is in my opinion to give good advice.

I have looked forward to the time when through the sale of church bonds to our people the floating indebtedness of the church could be liquidated and eventually the financial obligations of the church largely if not entirely be confined to the church members. This as a step towards complete freedom from debt. Why not make a better start in this direction now?

Sacrifice Week

Another Opportunity

In these columns we have previously expressed our appreciation of sacrifice as a factor in religious progress and development. To be told that it is a day of sacrifice is an indication that God intended that his people should grow through the benefits of sacrifice.

To be willing to give or to devote to higher purposes that which we have saved or deflected from more common things is to give expression to some of the idealism that is within our consciousness. To thus devote our means or time to the higher things is to bring into our lives that which will lift us up and expand our spiritual forces. A willingness to sacrifice for a cause, an ideal, a purpose, is fundamental to loyalty and worship. For that which we love and adore we are ever willing to spend and be spent.

To sacrifice for a cause, an ideal, works towards good in a two-fold way. It lifts us up by giving legitimate and refined outlet to innate feelings of attachment and it at the same time increases our love for and devotion to that for which the sacrifice was made.

In calling upon the church members to make sacrifice for the cause we all love, we feel that there is being given opportunity for spiritual refinement. In fixing another sacrifice week for the church we are but setting a specified time in which special efforts shall be made to enhance the spiritual factors which have been mentioned.

In setting the week of June 22 to 29 for sacrifice week, a two-fold purpose is in view, that of fixing a definite time for the exercise of devotional sacrifice, knowing how easy it is to procrastinate unless a time is set, and that of calling attention to the needs of the church and to a special object towards which sacrifice may be directed.

Our last General Conference was outstanding and to say it was the "best ever" is but to express a patent fact. Faith was stimulated and built up, and clear-cut direction was given to our tasks. The "appointing powers" showed their faith in God, the church, and the future, by increasing the number of appointees even though the signs of the times pointed to financial depression. About thirty-six men were added to the list. This increases the amount necessary for family allowances each month by a large figure, as well as other general expenses of the church likely to be incurred, and gives a very definite thing upon which the minds of the Saints may be fixed in meeting the issues and demands of sacrifice week. To give oneself unreservedly to the service of the ministry of this church means to be actuated by the spirit of sacrifice and devotion. These new additions to the working force of the general ministry together with those who for years have been giving their best to the cause, present a challenge to the members. That challenge is caught up in the statement, "The church must meet its obligations!"

The delegates and ex officios of the conference approved the move to increase the list of appointees, and also the budget appropriations; and hence the conference itself has presented the challenge to the members.

I have faith in the people of this church and the God they worship. The growing tasks of the church would bring to me despair had I not such faith. But remembering the many past evidences of their devotion and willingness to spend and be spent for the cause, I face the future with my hopes quickened. Sacrifice week will come to us as another opportunity to measure our devotion in material substance. Let us remember the great tasks of the church, the devotions and sacrifices of the past, and enter sacrifice week with a full determination that the church shall not face a deficit at the end of our fiscal year.

Reunion Season Nears

In the column headed "Official" there comes to Herald readers the reunion calendar for 1930. It is offered by the First Presidency, not entirely finished, in order that the officers of organized districts or sections where these meetings are proposed may have opportunity to consider and report to the Presidency any material difficulty detected.

Reunion season continues for about seventy days, and is planned to care for the wants of the church in furnishing spiritual opportunity, educational opportunity, and a place where social contacts may be made by Saints which bid fair to advance them in the gospel life. Saints generally respond to the suggestion of spending a few days together in study of gospel and contributory subjects. They plan as far ahead as is permitted by the announcement of the dates of the various meetings, and it is not unusual for a family of Saints to visit two or more meetings during the season.

The system of reunions has proved to be profitable to the church membership and consequently to the general organization, and as the plan of furnishing study, recreation, sociability under the direction of the officers goes forward to maturity, its virtues are clearly seen.

May the 1930 season prove an auspicious one, opening the second century with a clearly defined consecration of saintly endeavor to advance the interests of the church and to comfort God's people.

Mr. Morrow for Repeal

Dwight W. Morrow, former ambassador to Mexico, is a candidate for Republican nomination as United States Senator from New Jersey on a personal platform of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Mr. Morrow has been commended and rightly so for stating clearly his position on prohibition. He has not been quite so widely commended for his judgment.

As we understand it, Mr. Morrow's plan is to repeal the amendment, referring back to the individual States the power of determining the status of the liquor traffic within each, the Federal Government "to give protection and assistance, to those States that desire complete prohibition, against invasion from the States that do not." He suggests that experimentation in forty-eight laboratories is preferable to experimentation in one.

The people of the United States experimented for years, not only in the forty-eight state laboratories, but in the thousands of villages, towns, and cities by means of "local option." National prohibition is the most recent and most inclusive experiment. Its enactment was no more an indication of the failure of state prohibition than was state prohibition of the complete failure of "local option." But there were certain phases of control still outside of the first two experiments, which are encompassed by national prohibition. The Federal Government was specifically empowered in regular constitutional manner by the States to take up these matters. A consideration of the powers of our "sovereign States" must not overlook their powers to act as a "federation of States," with the Federal Government as their instrument.

The repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment would quite naturally be an admission of its failure. New Jersey may make this admission by electing Mr. Morrow to the Senate. The people of the Nation of forty-eight States, forty-six of which ratified that amendment, may not be willing to accept such a verdict.

"All Are Called"

If the Herald News Department is typical of the church field of activity, we now have actual proof that every one, from the oldest to the youngest, the greatest to the least, people in all professions are needed and can work together.

Among the more than two hundred correspondents to this department are found members of all professions, in addition to students, housewives, and the ministry. All are gladly giving their services. The last two years have seen grow up in the church the universal tendency among older members to follow the example of a high church official, who because he is always busy, finds himself frequently saying: "Let the younger men do it." The number of young correspondents has increased, and the young people have responded well. The Herald is proud of and grateful to all who are exerting themselves to be of journalistic assistance.

The range of age among the correspondents awakened considerable interest among the editors last week when the name of a new correspondent was sent in. Teddy Beck, son of Elder and Sister T. A. Beck, of Independence, has been appointed correspondent for the junior department of the Stone Church Sunday school at the Campus. His first letter appeared in the Herald for May 14. Teddy is eleven years old and next year will go into the seventh grade in the Independence Junior High School. He is conscientious and earnest in his work, a helper who is very willing to learn. He is the youngest Herald correspondent in the world. His extreme youthfulness caused wonderment in the editorial office as to just where the other end of the age range fell. And so far as the records reveal, we think the honor of being the oldest correspondent to the Herald goes to Brother Frederick Hansen, of Persia, Iowa, who is eighty-five. For a number of years Brother Hansen has served the official church paper with consistent faithfulness, and his work is much appreciated.

Herald News correspondents believe the latter-day admonition: "All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all."

J. H. N. Jones Speaks of America

For many months visitors from foreign shores have come to America and to Independence to attend the Centennial Conference and to visit the land where the church was born. It has been an experience of far-reaching effect in the lives of some of them, who are now returning to their homes. There are others who remain for more or less protracted stay, as long-time visitors or students, and others who have concluded to become residents and finally citizens of the United States, the great republic.

Evangelist J. H. N. Jones and Sister Jones, of Australia, were among the earliest arrivals, having come in October, 1929. These good people made a visit to Eastern States and Canada, and to many points in the Middle West during their stay of seven or eight months. For this reason and because Brother Jones is a close observer and a fearless writer, the letter received from him and here quoted, is interesting to American Saints. It was dated at San Francisco, California, May 14:

Our ship has the Blue Peter flying, and we, that is, Sisters Kennedy, Jones, and myself, are sailing today through the Golden Gate at 2 p. m. for our homeland, Australia.

Thus ends a most delightful visit to this most wonderful country and still more wonderful people. We have spent a most enjoyable and educational time in your midst and have gathered impressions which we shall carry in fond memory as long as sentient life lasts.

We desire to extend to the President of the church, Frederick M. Smith, the executive officers, and all the Saints and friends who have made such a thrilling experience possible, our most sincere and heartfelt thanks for their many practical expressions of kindness, without which such an experience would not be possible.

Many wonderful friendships have been made among the Saints and friends of Saints in this country whom we shall never forget. On behalf of the party I wish to say good-bye. Keep a little spot in memory green in remembrance of your brothers on the other beautiful land on the south side of the line—Australia.

Brother Jones and many of his brothers and sisters breathe a refined spirit of brotherhood and sainthood. Americans are glad they have made the visit, and are thankful to have come in contact with them.

Church Bonds

THE desirability of church bonds has gained church-wide recognition because 5% plus safety meets two vital requirements of the investor. The consideration which prompts people in the selection of their investments are:

Safety of principal.

A good interest return.

Prompt and unfailing payment of principal and interest.

In these days when stocks and bonds of various kinds are uncertain and questionable, and when the future in many lines of business seems to be doubtful, it is a good time to invest your savings in church bonds, which are backed by the integrity of a hundred thousand people in addition to meeting the above requirements.

From every point of view they are a good investment, safe for you and a help to your church. No one who ever invested a dollar with the church ever lost a penny. Are you willing to invest your money where you have intrusted your hope of eternal salvation?

Church bonds are offered in denominations of $25, $50, $100, $200, and $1,000. Any denomination of these bonds may be bought on payments, if desired. Send orders for bonds to the Presiding Bishopric, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. Additional information furnished on request.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

Officials and Missionaries

In other columns of this issue of the Herald will be found a complete list of general officials and missionaries as sustained and appointed by the late General Conference with some corrections and changes made by the post-conference council of First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric.

In making up the list of general church officers we have departed from the usual custom in showing some of these officers, and for fear readers may misunderstand we wish to state that these changes appear to be necessary in order to best serve the interests of the church in the matter of the securing of clergy permits and other transportation courtesies.

Respectfully,
I. A. SMITH, Secretary.

A Week of Special Sacrifice, June 22-29

We believe that no one statement in the revelations of our Lord to us is emphasized more forcefully than that which says, "Zion shall be redeemed by sacrifice."

Nothing in this life is of any great or permanent value unless it is paid for with the things that go to make up life. Sacrifice is as old as the world. It is the power back of all progress. Without it, selfishness, the arch enemy of humankind, would reign supreme. The redemption of the world was conceived in sacrifice, was born in sacrifice, and must be of necessity nurtured in sacrifice. Sacrifice was the force that moved the Eternal God and his Son to save the world. The Psalmist had caught its fire when he exclaimed, "I will freely sacrifice unto thee." (Psalms 54: 6.)

The Latter Day Prophet has told us that "this is a day of sacrifice"; and that we might not mistake the time, he has said, "Now it is called today, (until the coming of the Son of man)." We may expect then to be asked continually to sacrifice until the Son of man comes.

The reason is obvious. We are building a kingdom of righteousness to which the Master will come. Nothing can go into that structure but the best, and the best is the life of God's chosen Saints. If we expect eternal life as our harvest, then we must sow the seed of life eternal, for every seed comes from its own kind. Our final objective is a big thing, the biggest thing in the world. To realize it we must think big things, talk big things and do big things. Doing this we may fully expect to realize big things.

Sacrifice, How to Offer

"Thou shalt offer a sacrifice unto the Lord, thy God, in righteousness, even that of a broken heart and contrite spirit," is the divine instruction to us in these latter days. Sacrifice we must, but it must be done "in righteousness," in harmony with the law of the Master, which is the gospel, for therein is the righteousness of God revealed.

The law must be kept not only in letter, but also in spirit. "A broken heart" is a subdued heart, a humble attitude. Our spirits must be "contrite," or penitent, "deeply sorrowful for sin because it is displeasing to God." For such there can be but one final outcome—God's promise is that those of us who do this will receive his greatest gift to man—eternal life.

The things most dear to us are the things for which we have to suffer; for which we must pay the fullest price in life's forces. This is so in our individual lives; it is true also in the life of our church. There can not be a more exalted sacrifice than that of an individual for such a group as this church.

Such sacrifice means that the individual is willing to give the best he has for the good of his fellow men. It is in this spirit that the thirty-five new men who were placed on the conference list this year have pledged their best to do missionary work among the people in the districts where they have been assigned. It is in this spirit that the veterans in our missionary force have toiled for years giving all they had to the people to whom they have brought their message.

Such a sacrifice embodies all that is noble and good; it creates a sublime example for our following.

A definite time for the members of the church to make a concerted sacrifice of their time, talent, and means has been named. During the period June 22 to 29 the Saints everywhere are asked to make careful analysis to determine what especial sacrifice they can make at this time.

The Saints are everywhere called to join unitedly in doing the things we have been commanded to do by our great Leader. All should give this sacred task their fullest cooperation.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By A. Carmichael.

Department of Religious Education

The Adult Division

The onward march of the church has constantly involved a readjustment of the machinery of administration. The history of the Sunday school movement clearly demonstrates this fact. The gradual development of the Department of Recreation and Expression also indicates this constant process of adjusting the machinery of administration to new demands. And the complete story of the beginning and growth of the women's work in the church as it has passed through the successive stages of the first few "women's" circles into the Daughters of Zion, and gradually changing into the Women's Auxiliary and then into the Department of Women. Each change or modification of the machinery has grown out of new demands experienced by a progressive and growing church. We are confident that our great army of consecrated church workers will loyally and cooperatively adjust themselves to this onward movement. The three departments have by the action of General Conference been merged into an expanded whole; one consolidated Department of Religious Education. It is an expansion of function for all of the three departments that have been merged.

The General Organization

The new plan provides for three divisions in the Department of Religious Education. In this message we are definitely interested in the Adult Division. For into this division are merged many of the activities previously accomplished under the auspices of the Department of Women, the Sunday School, and the Adult Activities of the Department of Recreation and Expression. The same activities will be encouraged and stimulated as under the old system of machinery. But, the new unified machinery of organization will unite the activities into their rightful place as an integral part of the whole congregational or church endeavor. The change means the promotion of the different departments into the larger field of a unified and coordinated church program of Religious Education.

The Local Adult Division

In harmony with the onward movement of the church as expressed by the recent General Conference and the new plan of organization of the various departments into a united whole, the local departments will gradually and cooperatively adjust themselves to the expanded program. The officers of the three local departments of Sunday School, of Recreation and Expression, and of Women, will sympathetically talk the matter over with the pastor and gradually complete the merger into a unified program of effort. Difficulties will undoubtedly arise, that may need careful and cautious adjusting. We advise that the local officers become well acquainted with the details of adjustment necessary in the new plan, before action involving the merger takes place. Be sure that all sympathetically understand what the movement means and then cooperatively go ahead.

The Local Adult Division and the Department of Women

Under the new plan, the Sunday School and the Recreation and Expression Department are merged with the Department of Women into the Adult Division of the Church School. This does not mean a lessening or narrowing of activities, but rather an expansion of opportunity and function for all groups. The local work will go on much as it has in the past. To facilitate the development of the unified machinery and program of activities, we advise that the local Department of Women affiliate with the Adult Division of the church school. This should be done in consultation with the pastor and all other officers involved. In the meantime, we advise that the local department carry on, with the advice of the pastor constantly being sought. There is no need for hasty action. Be sure that each step of the process of affiliation is well understood. The General Department stands ready to give advice and assistance wherever possible.

How Will the Women Work?

Under the new plan there exists as much opportunity for work adapted to the interests of women as under the old plan. The difference is merely a matter of machinery rather than of function and of activities. We advise that the various local quilting groups, the social workers' groups, the special study classes that meet during the week whether in the homes or in the church, continue as before. And all of those other expressions of activity, such as work groups who are planning and working for the beautifying or completion of their church homes, and other worthy projects, should keep on working. In no manner will the new plan curtail these activities when they have the sanction of the pastor and other involved officers and groups. Of course, each group of workers must consider their own specific work and contribution in terms of its relationship with the whole congregational program. Always must we keep in mind that life is of more value than machinery. Our church machinery must serve the life of our people.

In completing the merger we believe that in many instances it will be found advisable for the present leader of the Department of Women to be made the leader of the Adult Division of the local church school. She could then bring those special activities of the women into the church school as projects of the Adult Division. In other locals it will be advisable for the Adult Division superintendent to place some consecrated sister as leader of the local women's activities, who will stimulate and carry on all such worthy projects as previously mentioned. This sister would be an officer of the Adult Division of the church school, and the activities of the women would become an integral part of the program of the church school. May I again state that the only change in the women's work is that under the new plan it becomes an activity of the Adult Division of the church school rather than the function of a separate and distinct department. The whole plan harmonizes with the fundamental law of the church and the unity of its task.

There are many specific projects and activities that the women of the Adult Division may organize to accomplish. Many of these have previously been stressed under the capable leadership of Sister Blanche Edwards Mesley. Brother Woodstock in his previous article mentioned them. I will be merely reiterating what these leaders have said and emphasized. Yet, it may be well to repeat. Here are some of the activities:

Sunday Activities:

The regular Sunday activities have always been the concern of the women of the church. In addition to the regular Sunday morning class work and individual participation in the congregational services, there are many other valuable activities, some of which we have here listed.

Week-day Study Groups:

These classes may study a variety of courses such as: Child Welfare, Dietetics, Family Budgeting, Landscape Gardening, Home Beautifying, Training for Leadership, Health Processes, Church History, and many other desirable courses.

Week-day Work Groups:

These groups may have, if desired, the old-type quilting and sewing circles. These groups may sew for the needy, or for the Sanitarium in harmony with the program of the Patroness Society. They may unite with other groups in worthy community projects, in the establishment of baby clinics, parent-teacher associations, etc. Groups for beautifying the church property may be organized. There is no end to the possibility of these group formations, all working in harmony with the general church program and as projects of the church school.

Social Affairs:

These worthy and valuable functions may be organized by groups of ladies working in harmony with the superintendent of the Adult Division, and the pastor. We too often do not know each other because we do not meet each other in a social way.

These are merely suggested ways in which our grand army of consecrated women workers will find opportunities for religious expression. I am anxious to point out one other way in which many of our consecrated women have expressed their sincere religious zeal. Thousands have worked as Sunday-school teachers. They have given consecrated and able service. Thousands will continue to respond to this tremendous challenge. The church schools of the future will need a great army of noble men and women who will train themselves for the devoted task. There is before each one a wonderful opportunity to participate and rejoice in the onward march of this church.

Write the Department of Religious Education, The Auditorium, Independence, for advice about your problems. We stand ready to help. Our motto is sympathetic and cooperative service.

For THE DEPARTMENT OF RELIGIOUS

EDUCATION,

By John Blackmore, Supervisor of Adult Division.

Clean-up Time

By Myron A. McConley

Spring House Cleaning

In most homes house cleaning is at least an annual affair, though in some homes it comes much oftener. It seems that "house moss" just accumulates. Dust permeates the very fabric of the window curtains and draperies. The woodwork and walls get a smoky, sooty surface from the furnace and the gas range. The light fixtures take on a somber hue. The window glass becomes semi-opaque. And finally it is time for a general house cleaning, from cellar to garret.

In the olden days this involved beating the carpets. Who of us men-folks can not recall those "good old times"? But now, with our vacuum cleaners, electric washing machines, etc., the occasion is less strenuous, and let us hope more efficient.

I want you to know I am in favor of house cleaning. (Most men-folks are, though sometimes their equanimity is upset in the process.) For surely cleanliness is next to godliness. Zion can not become a reality among a people whose homes are unclean. If Zion is to be the light of the world, her homes must be exemplary in their cleanliness and order.

I trust the day will come when our people shall have mounted that plane of living where every home in the church is a place where cleanliness and order reign and the laws of sanitation and health are understood and observed.

The Yards, Too

Civic pride should prompt us to desire to have beautiful home surroundings. Nothing contributes to the beauty of a neighborhood more than clean, orderly yards, with well-kept lawns, ornamental shrubbery, stately shade trees, and well-selected flower beds.

Most cities and towns have an annual clean-up day, when all the stray tin cans and other rubbish are corralled and carted off to the city dump. In our larger cities this sort of cleanliness is almost compulsory. But in the smaller towns and cities it is largely a matter of individual taste.

Every Latter Day Saint home should be one where the love of God is reflected in an honest effort to beautify the surroundings and make them in keeping with the ideals of the gospel of Christ. Lamoni and Independence and every other Latter Day Saint community should be leaders in this direction.

Let us give more consideration to our home surroundings. A home owner seems naturally to take more interest in this than those who are renting. But even as renters, we can do much to create more beautiful surroundings. To those living in places where the ground is available, let me suggest that flowers are inexpensive. Their cultivation not only makes the neighborhood more attractive, but it reacts in beautifying the souls of those who care for them. On Sundays they can be used to decorate your church, making it more homelike and attractive. And they can then find their way through orderly distribution into the homes of the sick and the shut-ins.

Room for much development lies in this field.

More Important Work Follows

When we get the interior of our house with all its furnishings spick and span—rugs vacuumed, curtains laundered, walls, woodwork, and light fixtures cleaned, winter blankets laundered and packed in moth balls, windows washed, etc., we have done a commendable piece of work.

This is a stimulus to clean up the yard. In fact, the very air of spring seems to invite it. And when it is done we feel better.

But with these tasks finished, is our work complete? I think not. The task is just begun. For, having created clean and attractive exterior surroundings, the road is now open for cleaning up "our inner selves." For there are times when our souls, like the homes we live in, need a genuine overhauling and cleansing.

The atmosphere of selfishness and greed and lust, and the mad rush after pleasure and material things, is bound to affect us, and to a degree we become contaminated. Some need it more than others, but we can all profit by a good spiritual vacuuming.

We need to pause, and withdraw from worldly activities long enough to meditate and survey and evaluate our actual condition. The following questions are suggested as pertinent:

Just where do we stand on the great moral questions of the day?

Are our habits such as are conducive to godliness?

Are our attitudes correct and Christlike?

Are our thoughts clean and wholesome?

Is our reading matter educational and such as will provide a reservoir of useful knowledge?

Is our leisure time wisely used?

Are our means of recreation selected with care?

Is our church attendance what it ought to be?

Do we actually take part as we should when we do attend church?

Are we really industrious?

Are we thrifty?

Are we doing our share to bear the financial burden of the church?

Are we giving God and the church the best we have?

Are we really making spiritual growth?

To answer these questions honestly, and frankly face the situation, resolved to make such adjustments as the needs may require, will do us all good.

A Great Work Ahead

The work yet lying before this church unaccomplished is very important. It challenges the best we have. To engage therein should be considered not only a duty, but a privilege. No greater honor can come to mankind than to be "colaborers together with God."

The Zionie goal will not be achieved in a day. Many difficult problems must be solved. Trying obstacles will arise, but to be overcome. Faith and courage and perseverance, and above all much genuine work will be needed to build Zion.

We believe as a result of the Centennial Conference that thousands of our people have returned to their homes with their faith renewed, their vision enlarged, their zeal rekindled, and a determination to reconsecrate and rededicate their lives to God's service.

Success Is Assured

We are fully persuaded that God will finish that which he has begun. Right will eventually overcome wrong, truth will triumph, justice and equity will prevail.

But who will be those who shall enjoy this wonderful condition?

We make bold to predict that only those will stand and remain faithful who are closely in touch with God. Without God's power to save, permeating our individual lives, we can not succeed. With his help and under his guidance, we can not fail.

Maintaining Contact with God

Without earnest prayer, contact with God is not maintained. The necessity for prayer and the power that comes therefrom can not be overemphasized.

Secret prayer, where you can honestly canvass the situation between yourself and God, cleanses the spirit and clears the vision and balances the judgment. It steels the courage to the point of honest confession for wrongs committed and makes possible an adjustment.

Family prayer, where the family altar is maintained, meets a human need for which there is no substitute. In entering the second century of our history, it becomes the bounden duty of every Latter Day Saint to set his house in order.

When these two important steps have been negotiated, I recommend the next logical step as "community prayer." Attend and help to develop and encourage the weekly prayer meeting in your branch. Take your part as opportunity may permit or necessity require. It will cleanse your soul in that it will put you in touch with the Spirit of the living God.

The Plan Is Guaranteed

When contact with God is maintained through prayer and right living, life takes on a different tone. The sun shines brighter, the grass looks greener, the flowers are more beautiful, the birds sing more sweetly, and you partake of that "more abundant life" which Christ came to give.

Then the other meetings in your branch will have an added attraction. The Sunday school will be interesting, the Department of Recreation and Expression will claim your attention, the sermons will seem to have livened up and be inspiring, the church music will sound better, and even the old church building itself will mean more to you.

Yes, fellow laborers, clean-up time is here. May we be able to qualify so that we may be worthy the name we bear—Saints in very deed.

Joseph Smith, the Lord's Servant.—Number 2

By Hyrum O. Smith

God's Estimate of the Man

But let us see what God's estimate of the man is. Joseph Smith's mission and work were so important that, as early as the days of Joseph of Egypt, if the Inspired Version of the Bible is to be credited, he was spoken of in the following language:

A seer shall the Lord my God raise up, who shall be a choice seer unto the fruit of thy loins. Thus saith the Lord God of my fathers unto me, A choice seer will I raise up out of the fruit of thy loins, and he shall be esteemed highly among the fruit of thy loins, his brethren; and unto him will I give commandments that he shall do a work for the fruit of thy loins. And he shall bring them to the knowledge of the covenants which I have made with thy father; and he shall do whatsoever work I shall command him. And I will make him great in mine eyes, for he shall do my work; and he shall be great like unto him whom I have said I would raise up unto you, to deliver my people, O house of Israel, out of the land of Egypt; for a seer will I raise up to deliver my people out of the land of Egypt; and he shall be called Moses. And by this name he shall know that he is of thy house.—Genesis 50: 26-29.

All classes of Latter Day Saints recognize that Joseph Smith is the one mentioned in this prophecy, and he is known as "The Choice Seer" by all. It may be urged that this was only another attempt to exalt himself, but almost the same language is found in the Book of Mormon. Will those who now claim that he was a weakling, departing from the faith he himself was made an instrument in the hands of God in establishing, say that he falsified the record of the prophecy as found in the Book of Mormon, as they claim that he was false to his own revelations, changing them to suit his convenience? The Book of Mormon statement is a little more brief than that which is found in what we have already quoted, but this book corroborates the other in the essential facts. Joseph Smith was to be a choice seer; he was to be like unto Moses; he was to be great in the sight of God. And I can certainly commend the declaration of Paul when he says: "Let God be true, but every man a liar."

The writer has had exceptional opportunities to examine into the evidence connecting Joseph Smith with the nefarious practices of which he is accused, and finds nothing that can be called conclusive evidence of his participation. Furthermore, in standing in defense of his character, and his claims to be a prophet of God, I have had exceptional liberty, and the Spirit of God has borne testimony to his calling in an unmistakable manner. I am, therefore, prepared to say that I thoroughly believe that he continued to be true to his calling as a prophet of God, and that when leaving Nauvoo on that fateful day, knowing full well that he was going to his death, he told the truth when he said:

I am going like a lamb to the slaughter; but I am calm as the summer's morning; I have a conscience void of offense, toward God, and toward all men—I shall die innocent, and it shall yet be said of me, He was murdered in cold blood.

Certainly those who traduce the character of Joseph Smith can not be the ones who were appointed to be his successors; for his successors were to honor him, teaching the revelations that he gave to the world as the word of God, and carrying on the work that he began to a successful conclusion.

The Son of the Prophet

The moment we begin to contemplate the claims of the son of the prophet the scene changes. His is not a destructive, but a constructive campaign. He does not build his claim to the right of succession on the downfall of another, and that other a "choice seer." He does not try to drag in the dust the name of God's chosen instrument in restoring the gospel to earth. He remembered the prediction made to his father many years before, where it is declared: "For thus saith the Lord God, Him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power for good." (Doctrine and Covenants 19: 2.) He was not ready to join hands with the enemies of this latter-day work, but began, just as his father had predicted that he would, to plead the cause of injured innocence, and declared his intention so to live and so to teach that the stigma attaching to the name Latter Day Saint should be removed; and he lived to see the glorious results of his labors. Honored and respected by his neighbors and fellow laborers inside and outside the church, he has gone to his reward.

In 1868 he summarizes that which I have already presented in regard to the blessing of leadership pronounced upon his head by his father.

In Liberty Jail the promise and blessing of a life of usefulness to the cause of truth was pronounced upon our head, by lips tainted by dungeon damps, and by the Spirit confirmed by attesting witnesses.

This blessing has by some been called an ordination, from the usual predilection to confound names and terms.

The blessing that marked Moses as the deliverer from Egyptian bondage, was not that which Jethro pronounced upon his head.

Subsequent to our baptism in 1843, upon two occasions was the same blessing confirmed by Joseph Smith, once in the council room in the brick store on the banks of the Mississippi, of which we have not a doubt there are witnesses who would confirm the present testimony; once in the last interview Joseph Smith held with his family before he left Nauvoo to his death. A public attestation of the same blessing was made from the stand in the grove in Nauvoo, some time prior to the murder in Carthage.—Saints' Herald, vol. 14, p. 105.

A Period of Preparation

Naturally one so young as was the Prophet's son at the time of the reception of this blessing, could not or would not fully understand its meaning and its importance. But as the years went by, it would be constantly recurring to his mind, and there would be hours of serious thought as to its meaning. The event was too indelibly impressed upon his mind to be forgotten, and God would not let him forget it. God's servant, his accredited prophet, had said that he was to be his successor in the prophetic office in his church. Under the blaze of inspiration this prophet had declared that his posterity would plead the cause of injured innocence, and his word had gone forth and must be fulfilled. He had spoken in the name of the Lord, and being a true prophet it must follow and come to pass. Thus began the period of preparation. Let us study that period as given in the language of the one who had thus been called. It is interesting to note the period when he began a serious consideration of what his life's work would be. In the following, written by his own hand, he places the beginning in 1853. He was born in 1832, so he would be in his twenty-first year, just arriving at his majority, an appropriate time to begin to consider his life's work. Let us listen to the story as he tells us, keeping in mind the year, 1853.

It was during this summer and fall that I had the first serious impressions concerning my connection with the work of my father. That spring, if my memory is correct, there was a large emigration to Utah; a part of which was camped at Keokuk, twelve miles below Nauvoo, on the Iowa side of the Mississippi River. A delegation of them visited Nauvoo, and with one of them, whose name if I learned it, I do not remember, I had a long conversation respecting Mormonism. I had talked with many upon the matter; but had never taken the subject into very earnest consideration. This person urged that I was possibly doing a great wrong in allowing the years to pass by unimproved. I stated to him that I was ready to do any work that might fall to my lot, or that I might be called to do. I had no fellowship with the leadership in the Salt Lake Church, and could not then give my sanction to things there; my prejudices were against them. In the summer and fall several things occurred that served to bring the question up; my sickness brought me near to death; my coming of age, and my choice of a profession were all coincident events; and during my recovery I had opportunity for reflection, as for weeks I could do no work. One day after my return to health was assured, I had lain down to rest in my room; the window was open to the south and the fresh breeze swept in through the trees and half closed blinds, I had slept and awoke refreshed; my mind recurred to the question of my future life and what its work should be. I had been and was still reading law under the care of a lawyer named William McLennan, and it was partially decided that I should continue that study. While weighing my desires and capabilities for this work, the question came up, Will I ever have anything to do with Mormonism? If so, how and what will it be? I was impressed that there was truth in the work my father had done. I believed the gospel so far as I comprehended it. Was I to have no part in that work as left by him? While engaged in this contemplation and perplexed by these recurring questions, the room suddenly expanded and passed away. I saw stretched out before me towns, cities, busy marts, court-houses, courts, and assemblies of men all busy and all marked by those characteristics that are found in the world, where men win place and renown. This stayed before my vision till I had noted clearly that choice of preferment here was offered to him who would enter in, but who did so must go into the busy whirl and be submerged by its din, bustle, and confusion. In the subtle transition of a dream I was gazing over a wide expanse of country in a prairie land; no mountains were to be seen, but far as the eye could reach, hill and dale, hamlet and village, farm and farmhouse, pleasant cot and homelike place, everywhere betokening thrift, industry, and the pursuits of a happy peace were open to the view. I remarked to him standing by me, "This must be the country of a happy people!" To this he replied, "Which would you prefer, life, success and renown among the busy scenes that you first saw, or a place among these people, without honors or renown? Think of it well, for the choice will be offered to you sooner or later, and you must be prepared to decide. Your decision once made you can not recall it, and must abide the result."

No time was given me for a reply, for as suddenly as it had come, so suddenly was it gone, and I found myself sitting upright on the side of the bed where I had been lying, the rays of the declining sun shining athwart the western hills and over the shimmering river, making the afternoon all glorious with their splendor, shone into my room instinct with life and motion, filling me with gladness that I should live. From that hour, at leisure, at work or play, I kept before me what had been presented, and was at length prepared to answer when the opportunity for the choice should be given.—History of the Church, vol. 3, pp. 254, 255.

Young Joseph's Claims Recognized by Many

If the young prophet had been inclined to forget his prophetic appointment, forces outside of himself were at work to bring this appointment constantly to his mind. There is no question, there can not be any question, but what the idea generally prevailed that "Young Joseph," as he was familiarly called, was the one to take his father's place at the head of the church. By reading subsequent history it develops that this young lad, but twelve years of age, had his backers for the presidency as early as August 8, 1844, although those who had control of the printing establishments of the church carefully kept all reference to it out of the record. The evidence of the fact is found in a letter written by James Blakeslee, a then prominent member of the church, as well as of the priesthood, and dated August 16, just eight days after the meeting at Nauvoo in which the rights of different persons to the presidency were discussed. In this letter the following is found:

But alas, what a change one year has made. Even the space of about one year, or a little more, has successfully introduced into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, a sufficient amount of false doctrine, to deceive and lead away nearly all the church at Nauvoo, while the Prophet and Patriarch of the Church have been barbarously murdered by the hand of a gang of demons in human shape. Thus you see, sir, that the church is left without an earthly head, unless the promise of the Lord shall be fulfilled, which saith, that if he removed Joseph, he would appoint another in his stead. But as this has not yet been done, what is the church to do? Now, sir, if I have been correctly informed, some of the members of the church at Nauvoo, want Stephen Markham for their head, and others Sidney Rigdon, and others President Marks, and others little Joseph, and others B. Young, and some others P. P. Pratt, and if they all have their choice, we shall soon have a multiplicity of Churches of Latter Day Saints.—True Succession in Church Presidency, p. 180.

We are not, however, obliged to depend upon private letters for evidence to show that Young Joseph's claims to the presidency of the church were early advocated, for notwithstanding the evident censorship that was exercised to keep evidence of this fact from the people, there was a letter published from the pen of one James Kay, written from Saint Louis, Missouri, and dated November 22, 1845, which contains the evidence that there was a movement on foot to give Young Joseph his rights. An extract from this letter reads as follows:

Doubtless you will have heard of William Smith's apostasy. He is endeavoring to "make a raise" in this city. After he left Nauvoo he went to Galena, when he published a "proclamation" to the church, calling upon them to renounce the Twelve as an unauthorized, tyrannical, abominable, blood-thirsty set of scoundrels. I suppose you have his pamphlet. I did think to send one the day he landed here, but felt inclined to hear and see his course a little while. Reports were daily coming from east to west of William's unmanly conduct; sorry I was to hear them, they seemed so well authenticated. He contends the church is disorganized, having no head; that the Twelve are not, nor never were, ordained to be head of the church; that Joseph's priesthood was to be conferred on his posterity to all future generations, and that young Joseph is the only legal successor to the presidency of the church, etc. G. J. Adams is William's right hand man, and comes out as little Joseph's spokesman; they intend holding a conference here this week and organizing the church on the old original plan, according to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, Book of Mormon, and New Testament. Discussions are to take place between the Rigdonites and Josephites on the claims of each to the "Mormon Throne." Two high priests have been disfellowshipped, one seventy, and a number of other officers and members from this branch I suppose will join the Smith party.—Millennial Star, vol. 7, p. 134.

Waiting for the Young Man

The careful and unprejudiced reader of history will be confronted with the undeniable fact that very few of those who aspired to be leaders of the church at the death of Joseph Smith, claimed that right unqualifiedly, but asked the church to recognize them as "guardians." They were impressed with the fact that Joseph Smith's posterity had the legal right to the presidency, but recognized that there was an interim between the death of the Prophet and the time when his oldest son would be of age to take the burden and responsibility of presiding over the church. Hence we find Sidney Rigdon asking only to be recognized as the guardian of the church. Even the Twelve, at first, asked to be recognized in the natural and lawful rights as chief in authority in the absence of the president, the law making it their duty to regulate the affairs of the church in all the world. After the church had sustained them in this right, they gradually claimed more and more until they aspired to the presidency.

One of the witnesses in the late Temple Lot Suit, John H. Carter, of near Provo City, Utah, testified that he was present on the occasion when Joseph Smith pointed to his son, Young Joseph, and said, "There is the successor," "There is your leader," also testified that:

It was the understanding of the people generally, of the church as far as I know; all understood it from that day on that when the boy Joseph came of age he would take the lead in the church and be its head. There were a great many people who believed that, and moreover, President Young preached it himself for sometime after he came into the valley. That was the belief of hundreds and thousands, was the belief then, and is the belief now.

I have always believed that ever since I heard Joseph say the words I have stated, ever since I saw his father point him out; and I believe it today just as strongly as I ever did, and it was under that belief that I have followed President Young west with the branch of the church now known as the Salt Lake branch. That was the teaching and the ideas held out by the officers and elders, including Brigham Young and other prominent elders of the church, who afterwards came west and located here at Salt Lake City; and it was the teaching in Utah Territory for several years after the death of Joseph Smith. Here in Salt Lake City they publicly taught and held out the idea to the members of the church that Joseph Smith the son of Joseph Smith, jr., would eventually be the president of the church.—Plaintiff's Abstract, pp. 180, 181.

The attitude of Brigham Young as shown by the testimony of Mr. Carter, was the universal attitude of others who claimed to be leaders. They seemed to cater to the opinion that they found prevailing among the membership, and held out to those to whom they appealed for a following that when Young Joseph was of age the reins of government would be turned over to him. Notwithstanding the fact that James J. Strang claimed to have a letter of appointment from Joseph Smith, directing him to assume the leadership of the church, yet in a conference of his faction held at Voree, Wisconsin, April, 1849, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

That we give our prayers daily for Joseph, the son of Joseph, that he may be raised up of God to fill the station to which he has been called by prophecy.—Gospel Herald, vol. 4, p. 16.

Lyman Wight claims that Joseph Smith made special provision for the welfare of the church to cover the interim between his death and the coming to proper age of his son. He says a council of fifty composed of men from the leading quorums of the church was organized, and upon them was placed the solemn duty of directing the affairs of the church during this period. Speaking of what, in his estimation, should have been the procedure, he says:

The fifties assembled should have called on all the authorities of the church down to the lay members from all the face of the earth, as much as was convenient, and after having taken sweet counsel together, in prayer and supplication before God, acknowledged our sins and transgressions which had caused our head to be taken from our midst; and then have called on young Joseph, and held him up before the congregation of Israel to take his father's place in the flesh.—Church History, vol. 2, p. 791.

So strong was this doctrine of lineal priesthood impressed upon the minds of those who had embraced this movement, that constant pressure was brought to bear upon Emma Smith, the Prophet's wife, by those who would be leaders, one faction going so far as to promise her all manner of riches and honors if she would remove with her family to Utah, and threatening her with all manner of evil if she refused. But Emma Smith could not be bribed or coerced into doing what she knew was evil, and she remained faithful to ideals and doctrines taught by her martyred husband, and trusted God to work out the destinies of those to whom the priesthood rightfully belonged.

The Church in Germany

A sermon by C. F. Greene, April 19, 1930, at the Centennial Conference. Reported by Mrs. A. Morgan,

My dear brothers and sisters: Although I do not speak so plain as you speak, and speak all the time in the German language and it will be hard to express myself, yet I believe the Almighty God to whom we have prayed will help me to speak your language.

Before I came in this church I was a Utah elder. I lived a long time in Salt Lake City. Converted into the church in Germany, on account of two tracts that were written; one against this church from the Utah Church, and the other one from this church against that church. Both were given into my hands. I was going through Salt Lake to Germany. I read those two tracts when I found time and discovered that the tract I got from this church was correct. I saw that that tract which was made by the Utah Church got around the Scriptures. They explained the Scriptures out of the writer's own mind, and this church left the Scriptures as they were, and explained scripture as it was. That makes me open mine eyes.

I got on my knees and prayed to the Lord and cried, "Here I have two churches! Which is your church, O Lord?" A new life was given me; a new mind. I went home, read the tracts again, and that time it was so clear that I could distinguish it as readily as I tell you from me.

The next Sunday I stood before the Utah people. I had to preach, and I told them, "I have for you this morning a new message. I don't know what you do this morning with me. I will preach the gospel right, as it is in these three books that the Lord has given us."

I got about half of that people on my side. The others were against me.

I wrote to Joseph Smith just as soon as I was converted. It was in the time he lived, 1912; I wrote him about a mission. I told him, "I am converted myself and I want a man to baptize me." F. M. Smith wrote to me that we have a missionary in Berlin. He would send him to me. He came, and in two days he baptized me. When I got a few branches ready I see a great war that would come over Germany and over the nation. I told to mine people, "I go to America; you got a hot time, and I like to go." Nine months after I left Germany and came here to this place, Independence, the war broke out—and I was saved. Just as soon as the war was over, the church sent me back again to Germany. And I preached the gospel and I have preached the gospel to this church there. We have about ten branches in Germany.

In Germany they are much different than you are. And when we send members over from Germany, you must, as Americans, try to hold them in the church. Take these German people as they are, not as you want them, and you hold them. In these circumstances I must work in Germany, too. I have learned your spirit in America. I was a long time here. I have worked in various ways to get the people—to draw them into the kingdom of God. I am a man who has faith in God who made heaven and earth. I believe in Jesus Christ. I went to Graceland College to learn this language in a short time.

I would like to give a little bit of scripture before my time is gone. You know, you have heard this time from the missionary about the mission, and I would like to stop a little bit and go into the scripture, too. We have one place in the Prophet Isaiah, I believe it is the 53d chapter. There is a wonderful thing there. I think it is the first verse: "Who hath believed our report; and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" You know that this prophet lived six hundred years before Christ was born. He said that when Jesus would come on this earth, they would not accept him. He saw in spirit that they killed him. He saw that the apostles would be killed. He saw that the branches would die in the wilderness, and he cried, Who will believe the report that we give them? I want this morning to give you my testimony that you are the people that believe this report in these days.

Let me speak just a little bit from the Prophet Isaiah about Joseph Smith in the time that we live. I want just to read a little bit in Isaiah, chapter 28, and the 9th verse. There is the answer given: "Whom shall he teach knowledge? and whom shall he make to understand doctrine?" The answer from heaven is, "Them that are weaned from the milk, and drawn from the breasts." The German people ask me, "Can you explain out of the Bible that this church has to come?" The Lord tells us that in the last days a boy that is not long weaned from the breast of the mother—that the Lord will give him the knowledge of this doctrine in the last day. And I believe, and I believe you believe, too, that this Joseph Smith was that man. He was weaned from the breast of the mother thirteen years, and when he was fifteen, the Lord spoke to him. He did not know about the Bible. He did not know the mind of the Lord. But he was taught, and from this teaching it comes to us, and we go out to preach the gospel to all the nations. And I would be proud of that, that we are the people to proclaim the gospel of Jesus Christ in its clearness. And we go out to do what we can, so far as the Lord will help us.

I think I will have to read this now. I want to get some other place. We find that in the Doctrine and Covenants, chapter 9, verse 3: "Thou shalt preach the fullness of mine gospel, which I have sent forth in these last days. The covenant which I have sent forth to recover my people, which are of the house of Israel." We see here in this place that the Lord has in mind in the last days a people that comes out of the house of Israel, to be workers.

Since I came to Independence, I have heard many things. Many have tried to convert me in the other way. The Lord has told in the Doctrine and Covenants, "As I have made a covenant with Abraham, so make I a covenant with you (Joseph Smith). In thee and in thy seed shall the earth be blessed." Now, I don't care who may come to me. The first thing I ask of him is "Are you the boy from Joseph Smith?" "No." "Get behind me." The other comes and says: "Here, you have sinned; the Lord has cast you away. Come to me; we are all right." "Are you the boy from Joseph Smith and his boy's son?" "No." "Please get behind me. You are of the Devil."

Let me, if you please, read here for you a testimony. I need not to preach the gospel. You hear it all the time. I give you just a few testimonies of the Scriptures that you know. I can not explain this so very clear, but if you understood German I could make it very clear. We would have a fine time, and we would have an understanding how the German people get the gospel as it is written.

The Lord told me, When you stand before the people and present the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants, there is no people to put you down. I believe it. I feel glad to testify from these three books, and I will not be ashamed. But let me just read a few words. We find them in Isaiah 59: 20, 21:

And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord. As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the Lord: My Spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and forever.

He means here Joseph Smith, and you read the whole chapter and you find it out. I understand in the Bible that Joseph Smith—his son is his child, and the Bible says, "and his child's child." So Frederick M. Smith is his child's child. When you are not that seed you can do nothing with me.

May the Lord help us that we as a people may stay together. Have one mind; have one heart. You know that the Lord said, When you are not one you are not mine, and it is necessary that we believe that what God has said and revealed in these last days is true; he will bless us, and it shall not be a long time the temple will be built. The church in heaven will be connected with us on this earth, and you shall see the Redeemer with your own eyes, that he still lives in heaven and comes to you; and this is the right place.

We Germans believe that this place is holy, made of God, and Joseph Smith and his father have blessed this place where we are come. I believe it for myself, and when I get off the ship at New York and touch my foot on American soil I pray to the Lord, Make me worthy to walk here in this land that thou hast given thy people in these last days.

May the Lord bless us.

The Church in Holland

A sermon by Frank Veenstra, of Independence, Missouri, missionary to Holland, delivered at Centennial Conference, April 19, 1930. Reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

It is asked of me to speak about the church in Holland. We know God is not a respecter of persons, because, when Jesus was on this earth with his disciples, he said to them, "Go ye, and teach all nations." I am glad that I am born in this dispensation of time; that the glorious gospel of the Son of Man is born again on earth, or reestablished on earth. I am very proud of it.

The first missionary sent to Holland, according to the Instructor, from Gomer Griffiths, was in 1869; but we have no statement of what he has done. I believe he did not accomplish much under such circumstances as he found. So that was the first missionary. In the year 1920, in January, President F. M. Smith and T. W. Williams came to Holland to visit the city of Rotterdam. We then had one member in Holland, a man by the name of Graven. He was a member of the Utah Church. I was converted to the Reorganized Church, and I came in contact with Brother Graven; Brother R. L. Fulk baptized him in Utah. So F. M. Smith and T. W. Williams came to Brother Graven, and these men had the opportunity to baptize two of the boys of Brother Graven. We had three members in Skedam. Later on, a little stream came across in the year 1922 out of the great river of truth. They came with the steamer, the Reindam. In the year 1923 we landed, on the second day of January. That same month we did hold our first sacrament service in Skedam with five in number. But let me tell you, my friends, my brethren and sisters, the Lord was with us. He spoke to us and said, The work in Holland will prosper! The work shall go on!

That same year I and Brother Postma were sent to Holland. You may say we were almost the first missionaries who went to Holland. That year we baptized seventeen members out of the Utah Church and two out of the Dutch Reformed Church. In the year 1924 Brother Curtis and Brother Hanson came to Rotterdam and organized a branch. They ordained some brothers as elders.

In the year 1925 Sister Veenstra and I went together. That year we baptized several others. God had said the work should prosper in Holland, and God, my dear friends, is a true maker of his word. I assure you, as true as I am standing before you this morning, he has promised us again and again. That same year a Brother and Sister Egan were there as missionaries. They helped along.

I can not help but tell you of the great goodness of the almighty God, what he has done for us, for the church in Holland. We are blessed in many ways. Jesus said they should lay hands on the sick, and they should recover. We had a dear sister in Rotterdam. She was in the hospital-sanitarium; she was awfully sick; she laid at the door of death. No help. Doctors could not help her any more. She was sent home. No cure for the dear one. Our dear sister must have died. She received the gospel of the Son of Man, and she had faith in God, and so we had. This dear sister was administered to, and she was healed. She was healed! She is a woman who can do her daily task again. Oh, don't you know, she appreciates it, too? She is a worker for God. I sometimes think, Do we appreciate enough the great and marvelous work we are engaged in? Are we sincere enough? I hope we are. A few evenings ago Brother Baldwin spoke on that line.

We had another dear sister there. She had to go through an operation. Brother Baldwin came to me from England. He arrived at Rotterdam, and that sister came to me and said, "Brother Veenstra, I have to be operated on." I said, "You have to?" "Yes," she said, "I have been to the doctor today, and he says there is no other cure for me than to be operated on." Well, this dear one had faith in the Almighty God, friends. We administered to her. Two days after that she went to the doctor to be examined again, and the doctor said, "What has happened? There is nothing wrong with you any more." Oh, my friends, haven't we got something to be proud of? Oh, I wish that we all would more and more appreciate the great work that we are engaged in.

Let me say here, we have been a long time renting halls and places in which to gather. We have not the opportunity you folks have here. On Wednesday evening we had our little prayer service in the hall.

There was a sister who had five cancers in her mouth: Sister Garth. It is your sister and my sister in the bonds of the gospel of Jesus Christ. At that time she was not a member of the church, my friends; but she asked us, "Can I be administered to?" I believe God is the same yesterday, today, and forever. If he ever did heal the sick and send his representatives out, he can do it today. Oh, my friends, I can tell you and testify to God that next morning this dear sister was healed. She had been to all doctors she could get in this great city of Rotterdam. Well, well! Haven't we got something to be proud of? Something to live for, my friends?

At that time we had rented a hall, and we had to pay two dollars every service we held; and we held, generally, three services. That was $6 rental in one day. This lady—her husband told us—do you know what he said? He said we ought to have our own hall, our own service, our own music, etc. This man bought us new chairs, and he bought us something to go on, and we was released from this big burden. Does not the Lord work wonderfully for his children?

I am going to tell you one instance more, and then I have to quit, because I do not want to rob my brother of the time. He has been years in Germany. You were here a little bit ago. One of our speakers here on the stand mentioned he did not like to talk too long along that line. But I am impressed to speak along this line, on account of the goodness that God has manifested to the church in Holland. We had one little bit of a tot. She was maybe two or three years of age. Her name was Kommertje ver Haagen. Well, that little tot was born almost paralyzed and was grown up that way. She did not know that she had feet just like mine, but they were hanging on her body, my friends. Today, through the administration of God and his servants, this little one walks just as good as one of us. Glory to God for his great kindness in the work where we are engaged. Praise God from whom all blessings flow!

We have in Rotterdam now a branch of about one hundred and fifty members. Maybe a few more. I will not say exactly, but we have a branch now in Rotterdam of about one hundred and fifty. This branch is organized; we have an elder, and other officers; it is pretty well organized. I said to Brother Hanson once, "I am impressed to go to Friesland," which is about one hundred and twenty miles from Rotterdam. So I was working in Friesland last summer—Sister Veenstra and I. I says, "Sister Veenstra, do you know what we have to do now?" She said, "No." She knows I don't care where we go, I am not afraid to say so. I said, "I want to hold open-air services." "What do I have to do?" she said. She is proud; my wife, you know. I said, "You are going to sing with me." "On the streets?" she says. I said, "Yes." "Oh, I feel almost ashamed of standing on the street and singing, and people standing in front." "Well, it won't be very long." We were singing the songs of Zion. They did not know what we were singing. Once one of my brethren said to me, "Frank, you are all off." "That does not matter," I said; "they don't know anything about it, anyway." So Sister Veenstra and I stood there and sang and sang, and we had at last a congregation of three to four hundred around us. At that time we baptized two over there, I believe it was. This summer I had the opportunity to baptize eighteen, with the help of God. So Brother Hanson said to me, "You find a man who is qualified, who can lead this little mission." So you see we had about twenty in Friesland.

The work in Holland is prospering. The work in Holland is just like the Lord has promised us. The work should go on, and his word should be preached in all nations, and I am glad Holland is one of the nations, too.

In 1929 last year, the last sacrament service we held at Rotterdam; when the service was through we had a house full. A young man came to the stand, and he said, "Brother Veenstra, I am out of work. For two weeks now because my kidneys are so bad, the doctor has forbidden me to work, and I haven't the strength to work either." A young boy he was, intending to get married almost any time, and this sickness came on him. So he came for administration, and I could see his beautiful girl standing next to him. I went along there to administer to this my dear brother. All I could say to him was he should be healed and get well. Ah, two days after this, my friends, he came. He said, "Brother Veenstra, glory to God! I feel well!" Oh, haven't we got something to be proud of? My friends, let me tell you, we are the richest people on earth. Maybe not in moneys, but we are the richest people on earth, let me tell you, in the way of God's work. I believe I shall quit, because I will take too much time.

Join with us in sweet accord,
To sing the praises of the Lord;
Praise unto his holy name,
Every heart his love proclaim.
Sing the needs of every nation;
Show the way unto salvation.
Give to all this invitation
Join the children of the Lord.

My friends, this is the last remarks I make. If you can do anything for this work, please help us. Send us help in Holland, that the church may prosper over there. I thank you.

Preparation for Church Membership

By Cyril E. Wight

Lesson III

STRUCTURE OF THE CHURCH

I. Introductory.

a. In our search for the church of God, we should keep in mind that there must be present that structure which will permit the performance of the functions mentioned in the previous lesson. It is the tendency of the modern religious world to minimize the importance of structure. Little emphasis is placed upon a specific type of organization. On the other hand, the church that emphasizes the necessity of a certain organization may fall into the error of thinking in terms of the machinery of organization only. We are safe when we recognize that function comes first and that organization is of importance only as it permits of the performance of function.

II. Need of Organization.

a. The need for organization is best illustrated by the flower. The value of the flower is measured by men in terms of its functions. Its real value to man is spiritual. This value may be summed up in two words: Beauty and fragrance. In other words, the flower functions only as it pleases the senses of man with its beauty or its fragrance. But it is dependent upon its structure for the giving of these spiritual values. Destroy the organism of the flower and you destroy its function as well. Therefore, we may argue that the functions of importance in the church are dependent upon the proper structure of the church.

III. Bodily Structure and Function.

a. We are indebted to the Apostle Paul for a splendid analysis of the relative value of structure and function. In the first Corinthian letter, twelfth chapter, he uses the human body as an illustration. Note verse 17: "If the whole body were an eye, where were the hearing? If the whole were hearing, where were the smelling?"

b. He places the emphasis upon the function by suggesting that it would be impossible of performance without the necessary structure.

c. In the human body there is a distinct structure for the performance of each of the five senses. When one of these parts is lacking, the body is crippled.

IV. Church Structure and Function.

a. In the previous lesson we suggested three functions as necessary for a church that is alive and

OF GENERAL INTEREST

"Christian" Business

Considerable significance lies in the statement made the other day before the Birmingham Pastors Union by W. D. Moore, president of the American Cast Iron Pipe Company. Mr. Moore said: "When the bankers found we were going to put the Christian religion into our business, they drew away from us, so that we had to finance our own business."

If the religion that has come from the hills of Judea to become dominant in the Western World teaches anything, it teaches honesty, fair dealing, scrupulous regard for others, unselfishness, mercy. These qualities are surely not so inconsistent with modern business practices that the open adoption of them as guiding principles of a corporation should result in the withdrawal of the banking support almost essential to commercial success in our present economic system. It would seem, moreover, that a business avowedly conducted on so high a moral and ethical plane should be accorded more generous dealing than one dominated by lower motives.

Without inquiring into the reasons behind this in accord with scriptural emphasis. These are as follows:

1. Revelation.
2. Spreading the gospel.
3. Building men for God.

b. Let us now examine to see whether our own church is in a position to function. Note verse 28 of the above chapter: "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers," etc.

c. Now note how each of the officers set in the church is placed there for the performance of a specific function:

1. Revelation—Prophets.
2. Spreading the gospel—Apostles.
3. Building men for God—Teachers.

d. The setting aside of any of the God-ordained structure of the church makes impossible the performance of some God-ordained function.

V. When Has the Church Completed Its Service?

a. Read and study the entire 4th chapter of the Ephesian letter. Note particularly verses 11 and 12.

b. The full structure of the church can not be diminished until "we all come in the unity of the faith."

c. The church, in the words of latter-day revelation, is for the purpose of bringing "unity, sanctification, and glory."

action of bankers, the thought arises that their course might have been determined by past failures of "Christian" businesses. Too often efforts to conduct a business according to one's conception of the ideals of the Galilean have been dominated by an irrational hope that the Lord will take care of his own, and that no business run as he would run it will ever be allowed to fail.

But the Lord, it may be said without sacrilege, has too much to do to concern himself with such matters as keeping down overhead expenses, watching the profit and loss sheets, studying markets, and taking care that sound business principles are followed. Divinity does not concern itself with the mistakes made by a subordinate, chosen because he was devout in the mid-week prayer meetings. The fervor and blind faith of some so-called religious business men have injured the efforts to nail at the business masthead the flag of earnest service.

It is pleasing to note, however, that the American Cast Iron Pipe Company seems to have prospered under "Christian rule" and that now the bankers are very willing to accommodate the company. Apparently, the executives and employees of the company have, according to Mr. Moore, hit upon a method by which religious ideals can be openly and emphatically combined with conservative business practices.—Birmingham Age-Herald, January 9, 1930.

Scripture in New Tongues

Two North American languages were added in 1929 to the long list of over eight hundred tongues into which the Bible or its parts have been translated, according to a statement by the American Bible Society. For the first time the four Gospels were issued for the Eskimos of the Bristol Bay and Kuskokwim River district in Alaska from a translation made by Moravian missionaries aided by a group of natives. The four gospels were also published in the Hopi tongue for the Indian tribe of that name living near the Grand Canyon. This is the first time that any part of the Bible has been made available for this tribe, and is the thirteenth Indian language spoken in the United States in which the American Bible Society has published Scriptures.—Record of Christian Work.

The basis of all true friendship is one's being on good terms with oneself. Only when a person is a friend to himself is he capable of being a friend to another.—Sarah Elizabeth Roberts.

Graceland Chats

Short-Story Contest

Every year at Graceland the students of the four literary societies participate in a short-story contest. This occurs about the middle of the school year, but the winners in the contest are not announced until sometime in May.

This year, eleven exceptionally fine stories were accepted from those submitted to the judges. Five of these stories had been written by members of the Pleiades Society, four by Niketes, and two by Kapforeans.

The Record of May 6 announced the winners and published the winning story which had been written by Gladys McKim, a member of the Pleiades Society. Second place was taken by a Nikete, Virginia Webbe; Elmer Dobbins and Elsie Andes, both Pleiades, tied for third place.

The points awarded the societies are as follows: Pleiades 30 points, Niketes 12 points, Kapforean, 12 points.

Monday's Special Chapel

A special chapel, especially on Monday, is always enjoyed. It means that those terrible long class periods on Monday morning are cut ten minutes, and ten minutes is a lot—at times. Mrs. Whitney, of the Tuberculosis Association of the State of Iowa, gave a most interesting lecture. She started her talk by relating an experience, and everyone listened attentively, because it was so interestingly told. After that everyone listened to see if she would give them a little advice that would be helpful. Indeed, helpful advice was given. Mrs. Whitney complimented President Briggs on his healthful-looking group of students. She told us that it used to take two sheep at least a year to make clothing for one young lady, but now two industrious silk worms could do the work in two days. Hers was not a critical talk but a helpful one. She left a bit of advice for the resisting of diseases, and her theory seemed to be that an ounce of prevention is worth a ton of cure. She had to tell us that we must sit straight and walk straight, because she had promised never to make a speech without including that, and the advice did not come amiss. If you see any Graceland student looking as though he had a star on his chest that he does not want to let fall, you will know that he heard Mrs. Whitney's lecture and has taken seriously the advice to give his lungs plenty of room to expand.

Graceland's Men are Out for Track Meet

Bang! What's that noise? Oh, don't you know what that is? That's Coach Gilbert practicing the track men on starting. Were you at the Palmer-Graceland track meet last week? Wasn't that some one hundred yard dash? It surely was good to see Frank Parson beat that fast man from Palmer. And didn't it look great to see Stan Barrows going over the bar at eleven feet six inches? Palmer had a good track team, but Graceland's was too good for them. The boys did not have such good luck at Chillicothe the latter part of the week, due to injuries to two of our best runners, but they showed the Chillicothe Ducks that Graceland could still put out a good track team. We lost most of our track men last year, but Coach Gilbert always seems to get a track team from some place. The track season is at its height now. The boys go to a triangular meet at Penn this week-end. We are looking for them to "bring home the bacon."

Patroness Carnival

Toot! Toot! Bang! Pop! Laughter, yelling, squealing, and almost every kind of noise imaginable blended together in the gay time at the Patroness Carnival last Thursday night at the Coliseum. Everybody was there, from the baby in the buggy to the old gray-haired men, and all were having an equally good time seeing everything from a swimming match to the most mystic of gypsy fortune tellers. Confetti was flying right and left, and those who did not have a mouth full of it were busily engaged in consuming waffles, sausage, ice cream, candy bars, and other delicious edibles.

The college students especially appreciate the work of the Patroness women, for were it not for them we would not have many of the nice things we now have in the reception room of the new dormitory.

Hiawatha's Wedding Feast

In preparation for the final climax of a successful year, the Oratorio Society is diligently preparing a secular concert, Coleridge Taylor's cantata, "Hiawatha's wedding feast," based on Longfellow's poem. The beautiful music for the work appeals to every singer, and the performance promises to be an outstanding event of commencement week.

Coleridge Taylor was an English Negro who has won his greatest fame as a composer with this cantata. The crowning glory of the work is a tenor solo, "Onaway, awake beloved," which will be sung by Arthur Oakman. The following theme forms a setting around which the music is written:

"You shall hear how Pan-Peck-Keewis,
How the handsome Yenadizze,
Danced at Hiawatha's wedding;
How the gentle Chibiabos,
He the sweetest of musicians,
Sang his songs of love and longing;
How Iagoo, the great boaster,
He the marvelous story-teller
Told his tales of strange adventure,
That the feast might be more joyous,
That the time might pass more gayly,
And the guests be more contented."

Centennial Conference in the Society Islands

By R. J. Farthing

The 1930 annual conference of the Society Islands Mission, held at Papeete, Tahiti, April 6 to 14, was a thrilling, uplifting, and record-breaking affair, a time of immense crowds, tremendous enthusiasm, and heart-felt though restrained rejoicing in mind and spirit. Including the preliminary meetings held evenings from March 31 to April 5, the total attendance by actual count at the evening services amounted to 38,228. Only twice was attendance below the two thousand mark, and it increased rapidly to the closing evening when 5,660 people came to hear the debate between our Paia a Metuaaro and Taurarii, a representative of the French Protestant Church.

Our mission conference pavilion seats only five hundred, and five hundred more temporary seats were placed outside at right and left of the building (which has no walls and consists of posts, roof, and a platform). Thousands stood around the building for three hours at a time evening after evening without tiring, so intense was the interest. Some evenings they stood in the rain. Almost the whole population of Papeete was in attendance, there being many carloads from all the districts of Tahiti even to Tautira, seventy miles away. In addition to these there were, of course, our own people from the various branches in the Tuamotuan Archipelago.

The success of the conference is remarkable in the face of the unusual difficulties and disappointments the various branches experienced in coming (or not coming) to conference. Amanu and Hao Branches had to come about the first of March to be sure of a boat for Papeete and are still here (April 28) waiting for a boat to return them. Niau Branch also came two weeks early and started for home on a vessel named Ramona on Saturday (April 26), but trouble with propellor rod compelled them to return in the night. This means a delay of a few more days while the boat goes into dry dock for repairs.

This has been an unusually rainy and stormy April. April weather here is usually fine. The Tubuai delegates started on March 30, their boat was delayed fourteen days by storm and headwinds; when they arrived here conference had closed. One boatload of Tikehau Saints got away to conference, but the second was held up by strong north winds that for ten days prevented the boat's coming out the channel, which faces directly north.

The Kaukura, Apataki, Arutua, and Manihi Branches had arranged with the vessel Moana to bring them to conference, but day after day passed, and the vessel never showed up again. They were intensely disappointed.

The conference was officially opened with a sacramental service on Sunday, April 6. Seven elders were in charge. Seven priests distributed the emblems. Seven teachers counted the number of those who partook. And seven deacons received the oblation. The first ordinance administered in the second hundred years of our church's history was the blessing of an infant in this service.

The business sessions commenced Monday at ten o'clock in the morning, Elder R. J. Farthing being chosen to preside over the conference, assisted by Elder S. W. Ballard. The chief business transacted was: Enlargement of conference pavilion ordered; levy of 25 francs per member assessed to assist children's home at Heberona; three petitions to civil authorities indorsed: One to the Governor-General asking for prohibition of sale of alcoholic beverages to natives; one to the Administrator of Tuamotus, asking for prohibition of transportation to and traffic in liquors in the islands inhabited by our people; and the third to the Mayor of Papeete, asking for the outlawing of licensed prostitution.

Ordinations approved were: three elders, two priests, three teachers, and eight deacons; also new president and counselors for the teachers' quorum as also for the second deacons' quorum. The delegates chosen for the next General Conference were: C. F. Ellis, F. M. Smith, R. J. Farthing, Aririma a Natua, A. H. Christensen, F. B. Almond, H. W. Savage, J. H. Yager, R. B. Brown, Celia Farthing, Paia a Metuaaro, J. C. May.

The Sunday school examinations, which were in the form of a contest between the various schools, resulted as follows: First place, Niau with other competing schools in the following order: Rairoa, Taronā, Makatea, Amanu, Tikehau, Manihi, Takapoto, Hao.

The Religio examinations resulted as follows: Taronā first, with Makatea a close second and the others: Tikehau, Rairoa, Manihi, Amanu, Hao, Niau.

The next mission conference will be held at Taronā, Papeete, starting April 6, 1931.

Conference Brings Greater Vision

May 12.—The most wonderful conference of the church which marked the centennial year is just closed. While attending the conference and since, I have had a greater vision of the church than ever before, and I desire to push on with greater activity. The wonderful Auditorium filled service after service with earnest, determined, loving, thinking people; the sacramental service, April 6; the powerful and pointed address of our President at the opening session of the conference; the different classes of instruction, teaching us how to live; the oratorio; the pageant; the earnest look of the missionaries; the report of increase of baptisms; the increase of the church financially; the step toward stewardship; all tend toward the advancement of Zion. Upon all these we may look back and count the hardships and sacrifices made by those who pushed this work on—the Presidency, the Twelve, the missionaries, and all those who have worked so earnestly that we might have the blessing today.

In our local work in Saint Joseph, Guilford, Fortesque, and other points throughout Far West Stake, we see an increased desire to push ahead. I have also been made to realize and appreciate the work done by the local priesthood who preside over branches and groups, and those who assist, who are on the job to feed the Saints, who go day and night to administer, who sympathize with those in need both spiritually and financially, who toil ten to twelve hours every day to support their families and help support the local groups. Were it not for these the work of our missionaries would be in vain, for upon these men rests the burden of feeding the flock and keeping them in the fold. Theirs is sacrifice that we have overlooked; but bread cast upon the water, though tossed by many billows and dashed against many rocks, will return.

We should feel encouraged to do our part, fill our niche, and brighten the corner where we are. There is so much to do we have no time to waste over nonessentials. Give of your prayers, your talents, your brawn, your finances, and help push the great work along to the redemption of Zion. If each one does this, when the next conference rolls around we shall have made such wonderful advancement that we can see Zion come over the crest of the hill.

J. L. BEAR.

Little Visits in Zion

I am glad to report that my companion and I are still active in the cause in which we have engaged for over three score years. Today finds us more deeply imbedded in the blessed faith than ever before because of the added testimony that comes each day.

February 22 we visited the splendid little church mission at Sugar Creek, Missouri, where we felt well in telling the small band of Saints and friends the gospel truths. Brother Slusher maintains the good work there. Elder H. V. Minton has helped them greatly by a recent series of meetings.

March 16 we were invited to Gudgell Park Branch, where we found an active, expanding congregation of workers for the Master. They are doing their share in bringing about conditions which will lead to the redemption of Zion.

In March we also visited one of the missions in Kansas City, where we were given pleasant reception. There we tried to encourage the members in the work they are undertaking.

By invitation of Elder Harold Hattey, the young leader of the flock at Blue Springs, Missouri, we went with him in his car to the neat hall where the Saints of that town worship. My companion, who accompanies me when possible, and I were heartily received by the gathering, and we rejoiced together in the gospel work as we spoke to them of God's marvelous work.

In our visits here and there in Zion and her surrounding stakes, we find a splendid spirit of peace and unity. It is perhaps more strongly noticeable now than ever before.

In our long and intimate association in and with the church, we never passed through a more harmonious and more important conference than the centennial gathering. We met many dear friends from all quarters, especially from the Pacific Coast, where we spent twenty years in service to the church. We were gladdened by the added assurance that the good work moves on apace on the Pacific coast under the care and leadership of general and local workers. This is to us evidence that the work reestablished in latter days is moving on universally. As we sit on our front porch at night, we see lights in our good Bishop's office in the Auditorium which tell us that special work is being done in that department, also in the office where the work of religious education has its headquarters, and we are encouraged.

The afternoon service of prayer at the Stone Church on the first Sunday of the month was wisely occupied by those present. All had their faith in the gospel reconfirmed. There is room for others both at the eight o'clock service and the afternoon meeting, and all members and friends are invited to come and partake. Here is experienced the spirit of peace and good will toward all.

Centennial Conference of Midland District, England

The 1930 conference of Midland District, British Isles, Mission, April 19, 20, and 21, was held at Sutton-in-Ashfield.

In spite of several disappointments and much bad weather, the conference was greatly enjoyed by those present. Many innovations in the matter of conference organization were successfully introduced. W. H. Greenwood of the quorum of the seventy was associated with the district presidency in charge.

Visiting Saints began to arrive at the Saints' hall during Saturday afternoon. Refreshments were at once supplied them by the catering committee of the Sutton Branch. By 6.30 o'clock a good crowd had assembled to enjoy the first session, in which members of the Recreation and Expression Department, under E. R. Chappell, of Leicester, gave an outline of Church History. This was in the form of a dialog, and all enjoyed the unusual service.

The business session followed and was noteworthy for the good spirit that prevailed. Considerable business was transacted in good fellowship and harmony. After the opening exercises, a few words of welcome were given by the district president, Joseph Holmes.

The election of district officers for the coming year resulted as follows: Elder Joseph Holmes was unanimously sustained as district president, with High Priest J. Schofield as his counselor. Sister F. Emily Norton, of Leicester, was appointed secretary. This young sister is studying stenography and secretarial work, and should prove an efficient officer. A. H. Trenam, who previously held the position, was released at his own request, and a vote of thanks was accorded to him for his past services. E. R. Chappell, of Leicester, was given the supervision of the Sunday School Department. This brother is interested in young people, and with his previous experience in this position should do good work. He was also appointed district publicity agent, subject to the approval of headquarters. Sister Annie Holmes, of Langwith, was sustained as superintendent of the Women's Department and will also have charge of the Recreation and Expression Department. She made a special appeal for the cooperation of branch presidents and their officers.

G. W. Rallings, of Sutton-in-Ashfield, was unanimously sustained treasurer, a post he has held with success for many years. He was also sustained as head of the health department.

A communication from Sheffield Branch was considered. This had reference to the alteration of district area so that Sheffield might be included in the Midland District instead of the Northern District, as at present. No action was taken upon this, pending further advice from Apostle Paul M. Hanson.

A recommendation from the district presidency that Brother E. R. Chappell be ordained a member of the Melchisedec priesthood was accepted by the conference, the church authorities having given their approval.

Branch reports showed that we are holding our own against many adverse conditions. The spiritual condition of the branches would appear to be very good, but there is not quite the numerical increase for which we have been hoping.

The Sunday services began with a prayer session. Very few attended this session, but those who did enjoyed a goodly amount of the Spirit of the Master. It was during this service that the ordination of Elder Chappell took place, W. H. Greenwood, J. Schofield, and Joseph Holmes officiating.

Brother Greenwood was the preacher at the next session. He took the place of Brother A. T. Trapp, who was indisposed.

Brother J. A. Judd, superintendent of the British Isles Sunday School, was also unable to be present as advertised, and his place was taken by Brother Chappell. He gave an interesting talk on religious education, speaking of Grace-land College and of the bitter disappointment of having no college in England. A fine and educational meeting ended in singing hymn Number 144 in Centennial Hymns, and the closing prayer was by the district president.

The Fellowship Service followed at three o'clock, and the meeting was notable for the beautiful testimonies of some of the sisters.

At the evening session Brother W. H. Greenwood spoke very convincingly on "What is the Restoration?"

For the Sunday sessions a large public hall was rented by the district authorities. About one hundred meals were served to visitors in a very tasteful and satisfactory manner. In this respect, as in several others, the conference was much better than any other previously held in this locality. The Sutton-in-Ashfield Saints threw their homes open to visitors and spared no effort to make them comfortable and happy. Nothing was charged for sleeping accommodation. Many visitors stayed until Monday, when outstanding business was disposed of in the morning, followed by a real "laugh and grow fat" session in charge of Sister Annie Holmes of the Recreation and Expression Department.

District President Joseph Holmes is an active president. He has a right to feel proud of the progress we are making, and our next conference should see much good result from present labors. Thus ended a real centennial celebration, and all who were present went away happy and strengthened and with a greater desire to do much for the church in the future.

Spokane Branch and District

Spokane Branch and District celebrated the centennial anniversary of the church April 6 at Spokane with a goodly number present from various parts of the district. The sacramental service at eleven o'clock was well attended, and the Spirit was present to a marked degree.

The bountiful basket lunch at noon was enjoyed by all.

A special centennial program at two o'clock was given by members from all over the district. There were songs, speeches, reminiscences, beautiful and beneficial.

Now that our delegates to General Conference are home again fired with new vision and zeal, we are receiving much help and encouragement. We hope with the help of the new missionaries to accomplish many things.

Easter was celebrated with a sunrise prayer meeting at six o'clock and a Sunday school program at ten o'clock. The children in the primary department were presented chocolate Easter eggs and cookie bunnies by their teachers.

A surprise party was given for Elder George Leach, "Grandpa," as he is known by all, on his eighty-second birthday. His long and faithful service is much appreciated by the Saints of the district.

A son was born to Mrs. Catherine Porter April 19. He will be called Francis Clark after his father, a young priest who was electrocuted in an accident last summer.

The sacramental service May 4 was very beneficial. Prayers and testimonies of the Saints showed the spirit of re-consecration and determination to move forward in the work of the new century.

Flint, Michigan

From Flint Tidings

The Saints are rejoicing that Pastor Thomas L. Clarke has been returned to Flint for another eighteen months' period of service. He returns from the Centennial Conference imbued with many new ideas and methods which we hope to see put into operation to improve our services and make our local organization more efficient.

May 11 will be observed by all Christian denominations as Mother's Day. Preparation is being made to observe the day in our churches with a dramatic presentation in the morning and an appropriate sermon in the evening.

The morning of May 18 there will be conducted at the Newall Street Church a service for the blessing of babies. Much attention is being given to make this service beautiful and impressive. Parents having babies or small children to receive the ordinance of blessing are notifying the pastor.

Historical programs and plays are presented at both churches the last Sunday evening of each month. Those who wish to be assured of a good seat are forming the habit of coming early, as the churches are always taxed to capacity for these events.

The group birthday party for those born in the month of May will be given Monday evening, May 19.

Sunday morning, May 25, a service in memory of the members and friends of the church who have passed to their reward during the past year will be held at the Newall Street Church. Following are the names of those for whom the service will be held: Gerald Woodin, age 19 years; died October 27, 1929. Mrs. Elizabeth A. Pohly, age 70; died April 5, 1930. Sheldon H. Graves, age 73; died February 27, 1930. Mrs. Phebe Nephew, age 70; died February 2, 1930. John McNeal, age 70; died December 31, 1929. Joel Degeer, age 75; died October 29, 1929. Henry Waters, age 82; died August 29, 1929. Mrs. Anna Fisher, age 64; died July 30, 1929. Robert N. Jubenville, age 1 year; died March 20, 1930. Erskine Farris, age 35; died February 22, 1930. Raymond W. Barker, age 2 months; died August 28, 1929. Alvin E. Gunsell, age 34; died October 20, 1929. William L. Fell, age 17; died October 31, 1929.

Sister Elizabeth Hartnell Pohley passed away at her home in Juniata, April 5. She was born in England, July 6, 1860. Leaves her husband, four daughters, two sons, several grandchildren, nieces, and nephews. The funeral services were held April 8 from the Juniata Baptist Church, Elder W. E. All-dread, of Flint, in charge, assisted by Saul Pittsley: Sister Pohley has been a member of the church for fifty-eight years, and she died firm in the faith. The beautiful floral offerings at her funeral bespoke the esteem of her many friends. We extend to the bereaved family deep sympathy.

Sister Burns is not feeling as well as usual. Sister Blaine and Brother Farrand are back at church after illness. Sister Maud Loeffler's mother, Sister Grant, is failing rapidly. Lametta Surbrook recovered sufficiently to attend the conference at Independence. Brother and Sister Cataline and Sister Blaine, who were hurt in auto accidents, are well on the way to recovery.

March 28 a reception for new members was given. Everyone enjoyed the program and association. The Department of Recreation and Expression sponsored the program, and the young people are to be congratulated on the fine response and the talent displayed.

Flint was well represented at the Centennial Conference: Myrtle Holden, Brother and Sister O. A. Woodin, Elder T. L. Clark, Elder and Sister A. H. DuRose, Brother and Sister L. V. McNamara, Zola McNamara, George Njeim, William Tuttle, Henry Hartzler, Dorothy Notter, Julia Stewart, Lametta Surbrook, Loretta Surbrook, Clyde Walters, Sister Charles Robertson, Archie Patton, Ethel Harris, Elder and Sister Fred Harder, May Anspaugh, Andrew Walters, Anna O'Brien, Bertha Miller, Clara Jacobson, Elder C. M. Clifford, Donna Manning, Lottie Hodges. Brother William Tuttle did not return to Flint after the conference. He intends to remain in Independence.

Athel and Vera Packer have a daughter, Vera Jean, born March 23.

Members Find Welcome in Bloomsburg Branch

(From a letter to the First Presidency)

Being temporarily located at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, where my husband is working, we at once began to think of attendance at services of the church in branches in this State. It was a rather long drive to Philadelphia to church, we concluded, and knowing that there was a branch up at Bloomsburg, we decided to go up there to find the Saints.

The road all the way is a picturesque highway running along the Susquehanna River. The drive was lovely, and after eighty miles of beautiful scenery, we drove into a pretty little mountain town having wide clean streets and a general appearance of peace. We drove up a main street, stopped to inquire where the church was located, and were directed down another wide main street. With no difficulty at all we found a white church, clean and fresh looking, standing on a corner, surrounded by a nice yard and hedge fence. It looked very different from the churches I have found in other places, being very clean and well kept.

We were a few minutes late but slipped into a back seat until the service was over. The entire congregation came to welcome us, and being urged, we stayed for dinner with Brother and Sister Cunningham. Sister Cunningham is a sister of Sister Gomer T. Griffiths. They also had as dinner guests Patriarch and Sister Angus. We had a fine visit, a real old-fashioned Latter Day Saint welcome and visit.

Since that first Sunday we have driven up there every Sunday until this week. Saturday Brother Cunningham brought his wife and Brother and Sister Angus down to spend the week-end with us here. We had a fine visit. Just listening to Brother Angus talk makes one feel much better. We felt deeply honored to have him in our home.

In all the branches I have visited in years I have never before found the unity and sweet spirit that radiates from the branch at Bloomsburg. They are fine people, and I know that just knowing and being with this kind of Saints will help me.

I have taken some pictures of Bloomsburg which I will send to the Herald later on. MINNETTA ISAACS.

Oelwein, Iowa

Oelwein Branch started the new century's program of baptisms in Rock Island District when Brother George McFarlane, pastor of the branch, baptized two little girls on Mother's Day. At least we believe this to be the first baptismal service in the district since April 6. Oelwein made a very good record during the closing year of the first century in the baptism of thirteen. We would like to see this branch as well as the other branches in the district do as well this year, or even better than last year.

The writer came to Oelwein Saturday, May 10, to begin a series of week-end meetings throughout the district. I delivered illustrated lectures Saturday and Sunday nights, on "Bible evidence in support of the Book of Mormon." During the day on Sunday I conducted three classes in the interest of the new plan, and the problems of our church program of religious education. The average attendance at the five meetings was about twenty-eight, a fairly good average for a branch the size of Oelwein. We trust the effort may have been of benefit to the work here, as we go on to Waterloo and other points to conduct a similar effort.

E. R. DAVIS.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

The Bible Class is progressing under the able management of Brother E. E. Williams. This class meets on Saturday evening at 7.45.

There is also progress in the Sunday school.

The prayer and praise service April 27 was well attended. Brothers Mark Crabtree and Brother Luther Crabtree occupied, and a fine spirit was felt. In the evening Brother E. E. Williams talked to a congregation of fair size.

May 4 was a wonderful day, one to be long remembered by Pleasant Valley members. With McDermott Saints we jointly enjoyed the sacramental service in this branch. One hundred were present at the Sunday school. At 10.45 the communion hour opened, there being a full corps of priesthood from both branches. Elder Wiggett, of McDermott, was in charge. Elder Richard Shope asked the blessing on the bread and wine, Priest E. E. Williams, of Pleasant Valley Branch, passed the bread, and Priest O. A. Rexroad, of McDermott, the wine.

After the service, Elder Walter Culp and Brother Rexroad took the sacrament to our aged Sister Joann Crabtree and her daughter, Ida. Then Brother Culp was called to the home of Sister Roy Culp in Pike County, to administer to her. E. E. Williams accompanied him.

A joint priesthood meeting was held at McDermott at 2.30, which proved to be exceptionally fine. After this hour a number of the priesthood motored to Portsmouth to take the sacrament to an aged member, Sister Sopha Crabtree, who is in poor health. Elders Shope and Wiggett administered to her. From there they went to the Portsmouth General Hospital to visit Brother Charley Culp, who was in an automobile accident two weeks ago. They took the sacrament to him and administered to him. He is suffering with a broken right arm, and his right leg is crushed below the knee. However, he is getting along nicely.

Mark Crabtree will preach for McDermott Saints, and Walter Culp will speak in his home branch pulpit, Pleasant Valley.

Burlington, Iowa

The ministerial association of Burlington held its meetings twice each month in the Y. M. C. A. Building, but because of remodeling and making the building larger, they met at the different churches during the winter months. The meetings were called at 10.45 in the morning, and after the business session they had luncheon served by the ladies' aid societies at 12.15. They met at the Saints' church December 5, 1929. Inquiries and comments on the building and the budget plan were many, and all questions were gladly answered by Pastor D. B. Sorden. Praises and compliments of the association were not a few. This gave the ministers of various denominations opportunity to visit each other's churches and get better acquainted with the faith of others.

On Decision Day two new members were baptized. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The front was enhanced with large potted ferns, a beautiful basket of white lilies, snapdragons, and carnations together with four large vases of red carnations. The drawing aside of the curtain revealing the minister and his candidate was very impressive. One week later another sister was baptized. The names of the new members are Mrs. Francis Dixson, Mrs. Susie Duke, and Mrs. Mildred Duke.

Sunday morning, March 23, Marilyn Cummings and Jack Leo Duke were blessed. That day closed a two-week series of meetings held by R. D. Weaver, of Independence, Missouri. His sermons were very instructive, and his way of presenting the gospel was so clear it was effective.

Sister Effie Taylor had the misfortune to fall down two cellar steps and break her ankle. This compelled her to take a rest, which was not at all opportune, as Sister Effie's mother, Mary Jane Willey, has been confined to her bed with a broken back for the last seven years. Sister Effie is a skilled nurse, but she was greatly handicapped in taking care of her mother by her own injury.

Sister Zulia Clawson, of Farmington, Iowa, was coming to Burlington to have a tooth treated. She got as far as Mount Pleasant and had to be taken to the hospital, because it caused her extremely severe pain and much swelling.

Brother and Sister D. J. Williams visited the Burlington Saints on their way back to Canada. Brother Williams assisted with the sacramental service on Sunday morning, which was a fine, spiritual hour. It was a reminder of the many fine meetings we enjoyed under his direction during the eight and one half years Brother Williams labored in Burlington.

The program committee is busy arranging the different parts in the pamphlet called The Language of the Flowers, a book written by one of our former members, Sister Madge Craig Siegfried. This will be given Children's Day, June 15. On that day Charles Roland Hunger and Roland Orland Callaway will be blessed.

Des Moines, Iowa

717 East Twelfth Street

The three weeks' series of meetings held from March 2 to 23 were outstanding in many respects. The speaker, Elder R. E. Davey, presented the gospel in a clear and convincing manner. His general theme for the series was "Successfully undergirding individual and social life." Interest and attendance were good. Many nonmembers were present.

Pastor Hartshorn called upon various classes and groups to sponsor a night providing decorations, special music, and presentation of the speaker. The C. W. A. W. Class was adjudged most successful and was asked to sponsor a second night as a special honor. This feature added much to the success of the meetings. Seven were baptized during the series. Brother R. E. Davey officiated.

March 23 was observed as Branch Veterans' Day. The eleven o'clock service opened with all members of the branch on the rostrum. C. B. Hartshorn was in charge assisted by E. O. Clark and V. L. Deskin. Hymn, "Guide us, O thou great Jehovah," was sung, and the invocation was by Brother Clark. Sister Sackrider sang a solo "The old rugged cross." A poem, "The bridge builder," was read by Sister Charters. Brother Hartshorn then introduced the speakers, first Sister Cook, one of the oldest members of the branch. Her subject was "Early struggle for existence." Her talk was impressive, and we could feel that God had indeed recognized her services, the gentle Spirit resting over the congregation as she related the early experiences of the branch. Next came "Carrying on at the Des Moines Street Chapel," by Fred Chandler; "Recollections of Lyon Street Church and memories of former Twelfth Street Church," by Catherine Waller; "Des Moines pastors as I knew them," E. O. Clark; "Missionary efforts of the past," Florence White; "An outstanding meeting of the branch," J. M. Brown; "Outstanding personalities of branch history," Carrie E. Maitland; "A tribute to our veterans," V. L. Deskin. A duet, "The Saints shall wear robes as the lilies," was sung by Sisters Sackrider and Elizabeth Robinson.

At the evening program, pictures of persons and groups of the Des Moines Branch were shown on the screen.

Doris Nelson and Helen Castings have been received into membership in the Tenth Legion.

One of our faithful members, Sister Lula A. Carr, passed away April 9. She leaves her husband, George A. Carr, and two children, Clarice, eleven years old, and Dewayne, six years of age, to mourn her departure. Funeral services were held at Lamoni April 11.

A large number from this branch attended the conference and report a wonderful experience. Brother David Dowker and family made a short stop here on their way home from conference.

Elder M. E. Cook spent several days in Des Moines with relatives and occupied the pulpit at the morning hour April 27. His subject was "God in the present tense." After the 6.30 class period Brother C. B. Hartshorn and Brother F. T. Mussell gave short, interesting talks on the conference. At the eight o'clock hour an excellent drama, "The boy who discovered Easter," was presented, Sister Bertha Deskin director.

Under conference appointment Brother and Sister C. B. Hartshorn remain with us. The branch extends a hearty welcome to them for the next period of work. During the past two years Brother and Sister Hartshorn have given unreservedly of their time and talent for the advancement of the work in our city. Through their humble and efficient service they have endeared themselves to all.

The May sacramental service with Brothers Clyde McDonald and Charles Chapman in charge, was a spiritual meeting. A number of the priesthood were in attendance, and it was truly inspiring to hear one after another testify of his love for the work and express his willingness to more fully consecrate himself to the service of God.

Davidson, Oklahoma

May 4.—The opening day of the Centennial Conference will be one long remembered in this branch. At the eleven o'clock hour the Lord's supper was served to a large congregation. The members had assembled in a mood for worship, and the Holy Spirit was present in much power.

Davidson Saints rejoiced over the news of the General Conference. Eight members of the branch attended and returned bubbling over with zeal, new ideals, and a greater determination to help push the gospel work onward to its goal. Those who remained read the Daily Herald, and to some extent sensed the spirit of the conference. News of what was taking place caused tears of joy to flow from their eyes as the Spirit manifested its power and gave assurance here just as it did to the Saints assembled in Independence.

We were made sad, however, over the misfortune of our young Sunday school superintendent, Brother Troy Parker, who after attending the first few days of conference became very ill with rheumatism. He was unable to give further attendance. From that time he has been in Excelsior Springs, near Independence, taking treatment. The last report informed us that he was improving.

Elder Z. Z. Renfroe, of Oklahoma City, gave an interesting talk to the group of Saints and friends on Wednesday preceding the conference. For a subject he took the important events of the conference.

Ida Skinner, young daughter of Brother J. F. Skinner, became the bride of Dick Feeley in a simple but impressive ceremony at the church April 11. Elder B. F. Renfroe, uncle of the bride, read the marriage ceremony. Sister Feeley holds high ideals of Christian endeavor and is a most acceptable worker in the service of the Lord. While Brother Feeley has been in the faith only two years, he holds the office of teacher and makes use of every opportunity to lift high the standards of the church. Appreciation of this worthy young couple was shown the evening of May 2 when fifty-nine friends and relatives presented them some beautiful gifts at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Sister Grady Hood. Sister Troy Parker sang "I love you truly," violin accompaniment being played by Valeria Parker. The gifts were presented by Sister Roy Skinner. Refreshments were served, and all departed after extending congratulations to Brother and Sister Feeley.

Saint Thomas, Ontario

The program for Mother's Day was in charge of Brother J. Skelding and Sisters Lillie Burger and P. Ford. The church was decorated with flowers, plants, and birds to commemorate the day. Solos were contributed by Sister Lenore Rock, Sister P. Ford, Sister E. Ford, and Brother Charles Duncan. Sisters Jessie and Ethel offered a duet. Instrumental numbers were given by Sister Dorothy Pantling, Sister Grace Duncan, and Brother Miles Rock. Readings were by Sister A. Mann and Sister W. Stephens. Bishop Dent, of London, was the speaker for the morning and evening services. An important feature of the program was a paper by Sister Stephens calling attention to the significance of Mother's Day and mother.

Eagle City, Oklahoma

A pretty wedding was solemnized in the church here April 27, Sunday. Miss Jessie Olmstead and Raymond Dyke were the happy couple. The ceremony was performed by Elder Lemuel Dyke, of Minco, Oklahoma, before ninety-eight guests, including relatives and friends from other places. The bride is a teacher in our school and has many friends in Eagle City. The bridegroom is the son of Branch President Lester E. Dyke and wife, and has grown up in the church and Sunday school, being active in all departments of the work. He was ordained a deacon and teaches a young people's class in Sunday school. He is a graduate of the Eagle City High School and Enid Business College, and expects to teach next winter. The young couple expect to attend Northwestern Teachers' College, at Alva, during the summer.

The baccalaureate sermon for our school was preached here May 11, and so we will observe Mother's Day, May 18.

San Francisco, California

Eighteenth and Danvers Streets

May 8.—A number of our members are missing from our midst. They have not yet returned from General Conference, and as a consequence we have a number of empty seats during services.

April 6 Elder Emery Parks was the morning speaker, and E. B. Hinton preached in the evening. The following Sunday morning Elder Hinton preached, and in the evening Deacon Cecil R. Smith.

Prayer meeting April 16 found seventeen present, fourteen of whom took part in prayer and testimony.

The third Sunday of the month Elder George S. Lincoln was the morning speaker, and in the evening Priest Frank Stede occupied. Easter drew numbers to our services.

Elder E. B. Hinton baptized a candidate, Mr. Long, April 17. He was confirmed by Brothers Lincoln and Hinton. One child was blessed by the same elders. In the evening the branch had the pleasure of hearing Apostle M. A. McConley, who was a very welcome speaker.

Fifty-three were present at the sacramental service May 4. This was a good and profitable service, many taking part. The gifts of the gospel were manifested to the encouragement of all.

Pastor John A. Saxe has been away for more than a month, but is now at home again.

Sunday school, Religio, and Department of Women are doing well. The young people give some fine entertainments in the assembly hall, and these activities help to keep them enthusiastic and interested.

Independence

Stone Church

Bishop Albert Carmichael was the speaker at the morning service. His text might be expressed in the phrase which he emphasized, ". . . and yet we find excuse." He showed how the law of tithes and offerings is an eternal principle for supporting the church, and how it was observed by the faithful from the earliest of Bible times to the present. The additional light which has come to this church places upon us a greater responsibility for compliance with the law. ". . . and yet we find excuse." Bishop Carmichael made an appeal for all to become stewards over their own property, that Zion might flourish and the church move forward to the accomplishment of the tasks God has set for us to do.

The Stone Church Choir sang two anthems, "Sing to the Lord" by Haydn, and "Far from my heavenly home," by Rathbun. George Anway directed, and sang the solo for the second anthem; Paul N. Craig played piano accompaniment. Sister Brocaw played an organ number, "Nocturne," for the offertory. Elder D. O. Cato was in charge of the service, and was assisted by Patriarch H. O. Smith.

Special attention was given to the beatitude, "Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth," by the intermediate church on Sunday morning. The speaker, Brother Vance Eastwood, took for his text Luke 14:11: "For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Appropriately chosen hymns enhanced the impressiveness of the service. "Happiness" is the department's theme for the month of May. Next Sunday morning Pastor John F. Sheehy will address the boys and girls.

A musical program of high merit prefaced the evening's sermon at the Stone Church. Brother Colin Ferrett, of Australia, sang two excellent solos, "Open the gates of the temple," and "A new commandment" from "Olivet to Calvary." The Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig and specially requested to sing by the speaker, chose as its contribution "The Comforter," by Custance, Lilly Belle Allen and George Anway singing the duet. Robert and George Miller opened the service with a beautiful organ-piano prelude.

That a re-experiencing of the spirit and fire of the Pentecost of nineteen hundred years ago is necessary in the church today is the opinion of Elder John F. Sheehy, the speaker. Before Jesus ascended into heaven, he commanded his disciples to wait at Jerusalem for the promise of the Father, the Comforter, which was to teach them all things and to assist them in executing the commission: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." To demonstrate to the world today a perfect brotherhood, we must be imbued with and directed by the Spirit of the Master, a living, vitalizing power in our lives. We must know the will of God and have the strength to do it. We must have the love of the Christ. We must be awake to our opportunity.

Among the People in Zion

The Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences announces the date of its commencement exercises to be May 29, Thursday evening, in the assembly room of the Institute Building. At that time President Frederick M. Smith will make the commencement address to a class of eleven members. The 1930 high school graduating class is almost double the size of the 1929 class, and includes on its roll five students who are not members of the church.

The enrollment of the school is large, Brother M. A. Etzenhouser, the principal, reports, and the mortality rate in attendance has been less than in former years. Throughout the winter intensive effort was given to the creating of effective school organization. Each class has functioned as an organized unit, and attention has been given to the social as well as educational phases of school life. The faculty of eleven members has given generously of its time and talent throughout the thirty-six weeks of the school year, and deserves the commendation and gratitude of the church.

For four years the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences has been accredited by the State of Missouri. It has found for itself a place in the activities of the people of Independence and is filling an actual need. This year the efficient registrar is Sister Nellie Blackmore.

Many friends of Independence mourn with the Saints of Lamoni and elsewhere the passing of Doctor Bertha Ann Greer. Sister Greer, who was seventy-four years of age, was brought to the Sanitarium from Lamoni, Iowa, May 8, suffering with a broken hip. There she died early the morning of May 15. Up to the time of her accident, Doctor Greer was a practicing physician and had been for many years in and around Lamoni, her home. Her husband, who died a number of years ago, was also a doctor. Sister Greer is survived by two sisters: Mrs. Evaline Burgess, and Mrs. Sybilla Zenor, both of Lamoni; and one brother, Frank X. Allen, of Del Rio, Texas. The body was taken to Lamoni for the funeral service and burial.

"An hour with books," was enjoyed by more than fifty people at the Emma Hale Library, corner of River Boulevard and Lexington Street, the evening of May 13. Apostle F. Henry Edwards spoke on "Books," and there was a review of Edna Ferber's lately published volume, Cimarron, by Leonard Lea.

Miss Blanche Farrar, librarian, announces that the Emma Hale Library, in an endeavor to extend its service to the people of Independence who can not come during the day, will be open, until further announcement, each Tuesday and Thursday evening until nine o'clock.

The reading room of the library has a selection of the better magazines. Recent works of reference, and a number of recent books of fiction, biography, and history are now accessible, and the public is invited to take advantage of the reading and circulation privileges.

The Sunday school at the Campus was well attended. The usual song, "O, gentle Savior," was sung for opening, and Brother Will Bollinger, pastor, offered prayer. After singing "Because he loves me so," the children had class work.

The theme for the worship service of the juniors was "Honoring God." A piano prelude by Brother Moore was followed by the song, "I would be true," by the children and prayer by Brother R. R. Redfield, a teacher in this department. After the song, "Savior, like a shepherd," the offering was taken up by four boys while Brother Moore played on the piano "How gentle God's command," and when the boys had finished, Brother Bollinger gave thanks for the offering. He then read a scripture lesson from Doctrine and Covenants 86:3, "The Word of Wisdom." Doctor Grabske was the speaker and talked on "Keeping fit." He says the best medicine for a boy or girl is much milk and water. The closing song was "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," and the benediction was by Brother Bollinger.

Enoch Hill

Members of this congregation gave a farewell party Thursday evening at the church in honor of Elder Carl F. Greene and Sister Greene, who left Friday night for Germany, which will be Brother Greene's mission field for the next ten years. One hundred and fifty guests were present, among them Elder and Sister Frank Veenstra, who also left Friday evening for Holland, and some German friends of Elder and Sister Greene. Varied selections in Dutch by a trio composed of Elder and Sister Veenstra and Pete Driyzer, and two musical numbers by the German group were most entertaining. Ice cream and cake were served and wishes were extended for a pleasant voyage and success in their work. The two missionary families left Enoch Hill bearing with them memory books signed by all the guests of the evening.

"Education" was the theme of the church school, and Brothers O. W. Sarratt and C. E. Beal spoke in the opening exercises on various stages of educational development. The sermon of the morning was by a member of the local priesthood, Brother Charles Warren.

In the evening a splendid discourse was delivered by Apostle C. F. Ellis.

The opening play night of the season Friday evening, was enjoyed by more than sixty young people and children. Many plans are under way to add to the general good time of this evening.

Spring Branch

Spring Branch Saints were very glad to have Pastor Cleveland and family back again on Sunday after a time of quarantine with scarlet fever. They have been missed during the past few weeks.

Sunday school was well attended, there being perfect attendance of officers and teachers. A special class for all who plan to be baptized Children's Day was started Sunday, Brother Fish the teacher.

The eleven o'clock service was in charge of the pastor. After the prayer, a response was sung by the junior choir. They also sang a beautiful anthem. The speaker of the hour was one whom we love to hear, Bishop B. J. Scott. For a text he chose Matthew 16: 25.

Friday night was play night at Spring Branch. A large number met at the church at eight o'clock where a good program was given. The program was in charge of Leonard Roberts. After the program, games were played under the direction of Brothers Tankard and Farrow.

Brother and Sister Hampton, on Lexington Road, are the happy parents of a new daughter, born last week.

We are glad to have new members move into our branch. Brother Austin and family are here from South Dakota, and Brother Andes and family from Second Branch. Always new members are welcome, for there is work for all.

Brother Arthur Peer is very ill at the Sanitarium. The branch is praying for his speedy recovery.

Sister Stewart also is in great need of the Saints. She is in the Sanitarium following an automobile accident.

Elder R. J. Lambert was the speaker at eight o'clock Sunday evening.

Holden Stake

Atherton

The Saints of Atherton appreciated the stake conference which was held here March 14, 15, and 16, and we wish to thank all who so diligently worked on the new church in order that it was made sufficiently ready to care for the conference crowd.

J. E. Martin occupied the morning hour March 23. He said that he had spent several days working on our church and that he felt the Spirit in working that he has felt here in worship.

Elder Charles Koehler gave an interesting sermon at the eleven o'clock hour March 30. He used to illustrate his thought the flowers, principally gladiola. We know he is a lover of vegetation as is proved in the interest he has taken in our Harvest Home Festival held each year in Independence.

Elder Frank Minton occupied in the evening, and the members were glad to note his success as a missionary after spending his first year in the field.

Many Saints at Atherton attended the General Conference of the Church in Independence and took advantage of class work. A number of the young people participated in the pageant, and our girls made some articles for the display. Brother Wilkinson sang in the oratorio.

Saints from many States visited Atherton, making inquiry about stewardship and looking over the lands. One day they came in a body, making a line of fifty-nine cars, and stopped at "The little brick church in the vale." There were about three hundred. Brother J. A. Koehler gave them a talk, and they sang a song composed by Pastor Amos E. Allen, "Our Zion marches on."

Marshall

Ralph, the oldest son of W. P. Mitchell, died at Fitzgibbons Hospital, Marshall, early Sunday morning, April 13. He never regained consciousness after a collision with another motorcycle which occurred about nine o'clock Saturday night. He was twenty-three years old, married, and had a little son two years of age. He joined the church in 1916.

Brother H. V. Minton preached the funeral sermon. The men's quartet sang.

Elder R. S. Salyards presided at the sacramental meeting the first Sunday in May, and preached a wonderful sermon at night. There was a good and appreciative audience. He spoke again Monday night.

Blue Springs

Horse Shoe Lake was the scene of an impressive baptismal service May 30 when our branch gained four members, Arvine Spaulding, Lloyd Glenn, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Deviney, all young people.

A liberal number of Blue Springs Saints attended General Conference and were inspired and stimulated to move forward.

The communion service May 4 was another spiritual feast, the spirit of prophecy being present. Elder Ellis Rathbun was the evening speaker, using John 15: 1-15 as a basis for a splendid discourse on "Our need of Christ."

Brother Joseph Banks died at his home in Grain Valley May 3. The funeral service was conducted Sunday, May 4 by Elder R. D. Weaver.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni

Mother's Day Service

An organ prelude opened the morning service at the Brick Church. After the announcements and offertory the service continued in the following order: Voluntary hymn, "Music when soft voices die," A Cappella Chorus; reading of Rauscherbusch's "Prayer for mothers"; Hymn of Motherhood, congregation; invocation, W. E. Prall; anthem, Appear thou, Light Divine, choir; solo, "O little mother o' mine," Mark Anway; quartet, "Faith of our mothers," Athenian Male Quartet; Poems of Mother's Day, Alice Chapelow; sermon, "Mothers in Israel," Roy A. Cheville; hymn, "Prayer for mothers," congregation; benediction, W. E. Prall.

A large and appreciative audience filled the main floor of the church and the balcony was well occupied. Baskets of iris and tulips gave gayety of color to the rostrum.

A Service of Home

At the evening service of Mother's Day the theme was "Home." The congregation sang an opening hymn of worship. A poem by Edgar Guest was read to give the theme of the service, and the congregation continued with the old hymn, "Home, sweet home." With lusty volume and sensibility of the true spirit of the hymn, the voices filled the church building. Roy Cheville, who presided over the service, offered the invocation. Mrs. Marcella Clark of Grace-land sang as a solo an arrangement of the chapter the theme of which is "Love never faileth."

Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, who was guest at Lamoni for the day, was the speaker. Her talk was prefaced by an old familiar hymn, sung by an octet from the A Cappella Chorus and dedicated to her—"Take time to be holy." Her discourse, "Houses or homes" breathed practical advice and domestic idealism. She began by referring to the inspiring visit she had made only recently to her childhood home and closed with a verse from Guest's poem, "It takes a heap o' living."

The Mother-Daughter Banquet

Two hundred and thirty-one mothers and daughters attended the annual banquet at the Coliseum dining room, Monday, May 12. A brilliancy of festooning, light shades, flowers, and table decorations greeted the guests as they marched to the tables.

Mrs. M. E. Mortimore acted as toastmistress and Anne Morgan as song leader. Mrs. Evaline Burgess, loved by Lamoni folk, gave the toast to the daughters and Gretchen Kelley responded. The principal speaker was Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, who had come for the occasion. In her spirited way she spoke on "Creators of men."

The banquet is promoted by the church school as one of its educational projects. It was directed by Mrs. W. E. Prall, who with a corps of workers decorated the building and served the delicious three-course dinner.

Commencement Exercises

Both members of the Lamoni pastorate have had speaking appointments at commencement exercises near Lamoni. W. E. Prall delivered the baccalaureate sermon at Davis City Sunday evening, May 11, and was scheduled for Hite-man a week later. Roy Cheville delivered three commencement addresses, at Hatfield, Missouri, Pleasanton, and Davis City.

Church School Enlarges

For several weeks plans have been in progress for adding "Elvin Cottage" to the housing quarters of the church school. The building needed much repair, and volunteer labor was summoned to the rescue. Older men reshingled it. The "Second Milers," the organized class of young people, took over one room to be refitted for their headquarters and have done wonders in transforming it. Junior boys and girls responded in the work of cleaning and moving. The scouts will be assigned one room for their headquarters, and they will take up the project of equipping it. The primary department is being moved to this cottage, and the high school will take the quarters vacated by them. The work of the church school is certainly forward looking.

Change in System of Branch Finance

At a special business meeting of the branch, the recommendation was presented by the presidency with the concurrence of the bishopric, that the branch finances be placed in charge of the stake bishopric. This will make possible the crediting of all contributions with greater ease. The recommendation was adopted after considerable discussion by way of inquiry about its purpose and methods. On last Sunday morning a collection was instituted with the double envelope system.

Killmaster, Michigan

May 12.—The Saints in this little group are trying to keep the gospel banner afloat. Pastor M. J. McGuire has gone to his mission field. He gave this congregation a good sermon Sunday evening, April 27, and told us of the Centennial Conference and some changes that have been made. These we thought were very good.

The Sunday school started once more May 4. As leader here now we have Elder Richard Stewart.

There is a fine group of young people in Killmaster, and we are striving to interest them in the work of the Master and to keep before them the pattern of his life.

The Women's Department is endeavoring to re-commence its work. It is hard for all to attend, because the members are widely scattered throughout this community.

Mother's Day was rightly observed, and Brother Stewart gave a good talk. About thirty-five attended the service.

We ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints in behalf of this group, that we may press onward and upward until Zion is redeemed.

EDITH SLATER.

Ludington, Michigan

106 South Rath Avenue

March 7 the young people's division of the branch, under the leadership of Elder J. L. Randall, together with the adults motored into the country to the farm home of Mr. Charles Genson, where a social evening was enjoyed.

Two days later Elder John Randall occupied the pulpit, giving a good discourse on "Which church would I join?" Mr. and Mrs. Roy Haner sang two duets entitled "The old rugged cross," and "Ashamed of Jesus." Mr. Haner accompanied on his guitar.

Sister Lottie Shelley, of the District Department of Women, attended the midweek prayer service.

Sister Eva Nicosia, of Muskegon, attended services Friday evening and Sunday.

Apostle D. T. Williams met with the Saints March 28, giving an illustrated lecture on Church History at the Kozy Theater. Good attendance greeted him.

March 16 visitors were present from Muskegon and Fountain.

Brother George Rogers passed from this life March 20. He had been a member of the church for seventeen years. Elder E. N. Burt came from Traverse City to preach the funeral sermon, which was held in the Sugar Grove Schoolhouse. Elder Burt preached here in the evening, his topic being "They that hunger and thirst after righteousness shall be filled." He also talked on the "Words of Wisdom."

April 20 in the evening an Easter service was given by the children's division of the church school.

Wells, Michigan

Northern Michigan District

May 13.—Mother's Day we had the pleasure of a visit from Apostle D. T. Williams. Officers had received word of his coming and were at the train to meet him. He arrived in Escanaba about nine o'clock in the morning. From Escanaba they motored across to Gladstone to the church, where they found the Sunday school session about over. Then followed the program for Mother's Day. Brother Williams gave the address to the mothers, making complete a fine program.

At 2.30 in the afternoon Brother Williams gave a lecture on "The coming forth of the Book of Mormon." The pictures flashed upon the screen clearly explained the history associated with the Book of Mormon, and the lecture was masterfully given. We were made glad that we are among the number who are convinced of the divinity of the Book of Mormon.

In the evening the subject of the history of the church was continued. Numbers of nonmembers attended this meeting, and we believe much good was done. Monday morning Brother Williams left for Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Today we expect the district missionaries, Brothers McGuire and J. J. Ledsworth, to begin a series of meetings, their first here. We have heard of their work but have not yet met them. We welcome them with the hope that they will feel themselves at home with us and their work be very profitable to the church.

This is a wonderful field for missionary work. We have only three branches in upper Michigan from sixty-nine to two hundred miles from here. Our branch has the largest membership. We are informed that not one of the three locals holds regular meetings and that all are greatly in need of encouragement. This encouragement should first be given to the priesthood, for if these workers are busy and hopeful the others will partake of their spirit. We have served them from this point a number of times and would like to help more. A number of times officers from here have responded to their calls for administration, preaching, and funerals. At times we have felt that we should spend more of our time with them, but this seems possible only to the neglect of the flock at home. Workers here are hoping the time will soon come when we shall see these places revived and very active and other branches organized in this territory. Brothers Cornish and B. S. Lambkin were the workers who years ago introduced the gospel into this region.

Duluth, Minnesota

May 11.—Activities were much the same during April as in other months. Those who had the privilege of attending the Centennial Conference returned to report one of the finest conferences and most instructive and uplifting assemblies of their experience. These members were Pastor A. C. Bundy, Elder Samuel Case, Brother and Sister Robert C. Zuelsdorf and daughter Marjorie Ann, of Duluth; Sisters Susanna Sloan and Susie Craven, of Two Harbors; and Brother and Sister William Dennis and daughter, of Ashland, Wisconsin. All these are members of our branch.

During the absence of the pastor, Elder P. G. Schnuckle, Brothers J. C. Walters and W. C. Stauty occupied the pulpit.

The junior class of the Sunday school, Sister Julia Case teacher, gave a program and lunch the evening of March 28. As a result the sum of five dollars and seventy-five cents was turned in as Christmas offering.

Elder Morse Cooley, of Winedot, Michigan, brought his wife to Duluth for burial. Elder A. C. Bundy, of Duluth, officiated at the funeral. Interment was in Forest Hill Cemetery.

The Sunday school gave a fine program Easter Sunday. The committee in charge was composed of Sisters Eva Tourville, Sybil Bundy, Julia Case, Esther Edlund, and Mrs. Charles Jackson. Brother J. E. Walters delivered the sermon at the eleven o'clock hour.

Brother Robert Zuelsdorf occupied the morning hour of April 27, Pastor A. C. Bundy being behind the sacred desk in the evening. They gave a report of the work of the conference, expressing the hope that the results of the vast gathering may be seen in the fruits of saintly lives, lives lived to the glory of God and the uplift of our fellow men.

Pastor Bundy was in charge of the sacramental service May 4. Brother J. P. Fetting, of Sandusky, Michigan, teacher of Cash Branch, assisted. Brother J. E. Walters, of Carlton, Minnesota, passed the emblems. Pastor Bundy was the evening speaker.

Elder Samuel Case was the speaker Mother's Day, using as a lesson John 19:25-27. Doctor Nolan with his wife, Sister Louise Nolan, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, was in attendance at the morning service. Pastor A. C. Bundy was the evening speaker, assisted by J. E. Walters. As a scriptural basis for his theme, he also chose John 19. A fine tribute was paid to motherhood by both speakers.

The church building is now being finished on the inside. Soon it will be complete with a coat of white paint on the outside and a new entrance. We are looking forward to a greater effort in the evangelizing of this city and in the bringing of the honest in heart to the kingdom of our Lord. We desire to make ourselves into Zion-building material. We hope to go forward in the new century, profiting by the mistakes we have made in days that are gone. We look to the future with an intense desire to walk in the footsteps of the Master.

Blenheim, Ontario

A beautiful scene greeted all the second Sunday in May, the house of the Lord being decorated with God's own handiwork. There was an abundance of May flowers gathered from the near-by woods, fern foliage, and gorgeous blossoms from the fruit trees, cut and gathered so as not to injure the trees. The air was fragrant with blossoms and musical with the hum of voices cheery with greeting. The atmosphere was inspiring to the entertainers and was reflected in recitation and song.

The program was splendid. The primary class recited "Mother's lap." A solo was sung by little Gertrude Jones, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. R. Woods, of Windsor. W. Hartford gave "Somebody's mother." "The sinner and the song," a quartet number was sung by Sister W. E. Hewitt, A. R. Hewitt, Sister S. E. Hewitt, and W. C. Hewitt. Mabel Hartford sang a pleasing solo, and a paper, "The value of mother," was read by Sister R. Jones. This paper awoke many to a realization of the real value and the unselfishness of mother in the home.

The sermonet was by Elder A. R. Hewitt. Sister S. E. Hewitt and Brother A. R. Hewitt sang a duet selection, and a paper was presented by Sister W. Hartford.

Sister Careless, ninety-one years of age, was the oldest mother present. She is the gracious mother of Sister R. Jones. There were three generations of the Hewitts represented.

Visitors were present from Detroit, Windsor, Chatham, and Rondeau. And they too shared the prevailing feeling of friendship and love. The gathering was like a big family reunion.

Sister A. R. Hewitt aptly told what she saw and heard at Independence while at conference, especially dwelling on International Night. In imagination we were carried into the Auditorium and saw the international program as an index to universal brotherhood. This program went far in promoting a broader understanding and deeper love among the Saints of other lands. It has helped them to sense the need of working together to establish Zion in latter days, a place where national boundaries and racial restrictions will be unknown. We are thankful for the consecrated men and women who carried the gospel to their homelands. Sister Hewitt told us that fourteen nations were represented in costume. We think Ireland needs no better representative than Brother E. J. Gleazer, and after laughing at his expense we sobered up to hear our wooden-shoed brothers and sisters led by Elder Frank Veenstra, and saw again the flags fluttering. In her talk, Sister Hewitt did each nation justice.

From Fort Sumner, New Mexico, comes word that Elder G. H. Wixom has just closed a five-night series of meetings which was enjoyed by all. Nonmembers were heard to remark that they had heard more gospel in one of Brother Wixom's sermons than they had in any one sermon in their lives. Attendance was good most of the time. On Sunday afternoon all the members partook of the sacrament, renewing their covenant with the Master. Brother Wixom was on his way home to California from the Centennial Conference.

Two errors were unwittingly allowed to creep into the transcription of the Oshoto, Wyoming, news letter, printed on pages 510 and 511, Saints' Herald for May 7, 1930. In the account of the sacramental service (paragraph one), the last sentence should read: "A spiritually uplifting sacramental and prayer hour was enjoyed, our young men being spoken to by the Spirit and admonished to keep clean habits, those free from tobacco and strong drink." The name T. V. Cole (paragraph three) should be F. V. Cole.

To them eight children were born, two being called away early in life, a girl, Clara, at the age of two and one half years, and a boy, Peter, in infancy. Mrs. Peterson died at the University Hospital in Omaha, April 9, 1930. Left to mourn are her husband, four sons, two daughters, six grandchildren, her aged mother, and four brothers. Her husband preceded her to the land of eternal day June 23, 1925. Since his death Sister Bolt had engaged in social welfare work in Chicago, Illinois. Besides being a member of the church into which she was baptized when a child, our sister was a member of the Eastern Star. All her life she was a faithful church member, and with her husband was influential in building up the church in Springfield, Illinois, where for many years they made their home. Most of his life Mr. Ewing farmed, and in the past few years he specialized in bees. May 21, 1882, he united with the church and remained a faithful member until his death. As a man of upright character and an official in the church, his influence for the better things of life was felt by many. Interment was in Oak Ridge Cemetery near Sandwich.

These mourn the passing of a loved one, together with his wife, two sisters: Mrs. George Hawk, near Davis City; and Mrs. Bud Davis, of Pleasanton; twelve grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, and other relatives. Mr. Turpen and his wife united with the church in 1883 and have since been members in good standing. He died strong in the faith April 15, 1930.

WILLIAMS.—Stella Barker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Barker, was born at Lucas, Iowa, January 14, 1892; and passed from this life April 24, 1930, at the Independence Sanitarium after a brief illness. August 29, 1908, she united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, being baptized at Hiteman, Iowa, by W. E. Williams and confirmed by George Hull and Edward Rowley. Christmas Day in the year 1912 she was united in marriage to Thomas S. Williams. She was an ardent worker in the church, laboring with her companion in the mission fields for a number of years. She leaves her husband, Thomas S. Williams; one son, Blaine, of the home at Rock Island, Illinois; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Barker, Hiteman, Iowa; one sister, Mrs. Joseph Wilson, Taylorville, Illinois; three brothers: Floyd Barker, Nauvoo, Illinois; Elmer Barker, Hiteman, Iowa; and James Barker, East Moline, Illinois; and a number of other relatives and friends. LOOSEMORE.—Henry L. Loosemore was born in Clist Saint Lawrence, Devonshire, England, April 14, 1861. He married Maria Tucker February 4, 1886, at Exeter, England, and moved to the United States in 1889, having been baptized into the church just previously as the fruit of the ministry of William Newton. Arriving in this country, the family settled in Kansas City, Kansas. One year later he commenced work for the Union Pacific Railroad Company, with which he continued until he retired in January, 1926. His services during these thirty-six years won for him the high esteem and appreciation of his officers and associates in the service. During the four years of his illness he received many tokens of kindness and sympathy. He passed away quietly April 28, his entrance into the realm of eternal day being a happy release to him after the long vigil of sickness. These mourn besides his widow: Bessie Armstrong, of Fairland Heights, who was born in England; Reginald Henry, of Independence, born in Kansas City, Kansas. Three children, two sons and one daughter, preceded the father to the better land. One brother and two sisters in England also survive him. In the church of which he was a faithful member he was honored with ministerial responsibility. In March, 1903, he was ordained a priest and officiated in the Armstrong Church. In 1912 he was ordained to the office of elder in Grandview Church, Kansas City, Kansas.

A General Epistle to the Saints

To the Saints; Greeting: Two great projects, above all others, engage the attention of the church at this time: our missionary program, and the gathering.

To evangelize the world, to bring men to a knowledge of the gospel, and to persuade them to comply with the conditions of the plan of redemption, was the early object of the church. It is still our primary function, our unceasing duty, and our great aim.

To build, as a result of this successful program of evangelization, a new type of community, a new and ideal social order, Zion, was from the very first our most important hope. That hope is still strong within us, an object more precious than all others.

Upon the accomplishment of these two objects—warning the world, the gathering to Zion—depends our success in all other enterprises; personal security, salvation, the right atmosphere for our homes and children. Every worthy object is made more sure of attainment if only we can first accomplish our primary aims.

When it was declared, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come," a great task was set for the church, a task which lays a heavy burden upon us as a people, while on each member it imposes the responsibility of participating in the work of raising before the people of the earth an ensign which shall be to them a testimony, a witness. In a few words is thus set out the necessity for us and our work to be missionary in spirit and character. That there shall be no cessation of missionary zeal and work is also indicated by the expression that the completion of the task shall usher in "the end." "And then shall the end come." We, therefore, may well be admonished that the Great Ruler calls us to a great work and we must ever "be about the Master's business."

The greatness of the task is matched by the idealism of its purpose, and though we may be overwhelmed when we contemplate the stretch of years over which this work must extend, we are lifted up to renewed hope when we recall that the purpose of the great endeavor is to save. The Supreme Being has willed that man should be saved; the salvation of mankind is our objective.

But God has also willed that man must save himself, and to do so man must have the means of salvation placed in his hands. This means is the gospel. "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation." The task is thus glorified by the knowledge that it is one of placing in the hands of each man the means of escape from the bondage imposed by sin and disobedience.

To this great missionary task of the church we must address ourselves with fervency, fidelity, and divine devotion. It may well be said that the great responsibility we have mentioned attaches to every Christian; it is a task we share with others; but upon us it has been specifically imposed by what to us is divine instruction and direct mandate.

To preach the gospel as a witness, however, does not complete our task. There is an additional responsibility of preparing a place from out of which the beauty of perfection and the glory of God shall shine. Zion must become a reality. What an attractive goal this necessity fixes! But what a burden of responsibility it also imposes. Over the years of the past has spread the work of preparation. Slow though the progress may have seemed, we find ourselves now in the very midst of the hastening time.

To gather together the people of the church is no less a divinely imposed task than is that of preaching the gospel as a witness. Preaching the gospel until it has become a spiritual dynamic in the lives of men is but the preparation for Zion. Out of the nations shall be gathered the elements to comprise Zion from which the effulgent glory of God shall radiate. Without the idea of "gathering to Zion," this church would be as a vessel on the sea blown about by variable winds. But our port is fixed, and so we can lay our course.

It is easy to say, "Let us go up to Zion!" But again the greatness of the task is indicated by divine instruction, and guidance has been vouchsafed us by the admonition for preparation: "Let all things be prepared before you."

The work of the gathering is upon us, and every day reveals in clearer light the greatness of the task imposed. "Let us gather home to Zion," is a song which stirs to the depths the hearts of Latter Day Saints, for it sings of the ideals and of the fixed goal of the people.

Thus our great work is twofold, to preach salvation, and to work out a practical demonstration of that which we preach. To this great dual task we must address ourselves. Upon every member falls a portion of the responsibility. Not all can carry the responsibility of priesthood, not all can preach (by word), not all can teach (by precept), yet all can work.

To accomplish the twofold task imposed requires money and means. To send emissaries to the peoples of earth, to buy land on which Zion shall stand, to build the houses and towers of the Zion city or cities, even to gild the towers that shall glitter in the sunlight of God's favor and the illumination of nature, will require money.

And this brings to each member of the church a great opportunity to share in the task. According to his capacity or ability each one can help. A man's capacity to earn may become a criterion of his capacity to contribute to the progress of the cause.

Our work can not be fully accomplished without money and temporal support. Here, too, divinity has pointed the way, and has given the instruction: "If thou lovest me, . . . thou wilt consecrate of thy properties." To build Zion, to eliminate poverty, to redeem the land of Zion, to bring about the perfection of Zion, while we carry on the work of spreading the gospel as a witness challenges our best.

To preach, to build, to give our substance and talents is the challenge of our great task! Shall we respond and be about our Master's business?

To the work, ye Saints of God!

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By A. CARMICHAEL.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, May 20, 1930.

Note: This epistle is to be read from the pulpit of every Latter Day Saint church on Sunday, June 1, wherever possible at the morning service. It is the responsibility of the presiding officer and of the one in charge of that particular service to see that it is well read and given prominence and consideration.

Would Our Church Win the Blue Ribbon?

In the Christian Century for May 7, 1930, there appears an editorial under the title of "Religion and the World's Fair." The plea of the editor is that religions be represented at the fair, not in competitive fashion or in a display by each of what they have inherited as traditions or as the idealisms of their founders, but that a fresh inquiry be made into the human conditions which religion ought to produce, into the human job which religion is here to do, into what good it has been to humanity. The following queries and comments of the editor are so stimulating and thought provoking that we quote at some length:

Let the religious leaders of the world bring to Chicago in 1933 not the religious systems they have inherited, but the exhibition of the human goods which their religions have produced. A tree is known by its fruits.

Which of our religions is functioning satisfactorily in respect of these human objectives which we agree our religions ought to help mankind to attain?

What religion is producing the best human society and the best human beings?

Can a religion claim credit for the admirable features of our social order and not accept blame for its vices?

When the churches do this, their claims of virtue will surely be submerged in their common consciousness of misdirection, sloth, self-centeredness, love of power, satisfaction over palliative measures of relief where conditions call for daring social reconstruction, and a hundred other sins of which religions have been historically and institutionally guilty.

The paramount disclosure of such a study will be that no religion has any right on the basis of its achievements to thank God that it is not like other religions; rather will it smite upon its breasts and say, God be merciful to me, a sinner!

Modern intelligence is impatient with the proud talk of superiority of one religious system over another. What men are interested in is that kind of religions which consciously orient themselves in relation to the task which modern intelligence begins dimly to see as the essential business of religion in our human world.

Instead of offering a platform on which the religions of the world may proudly display themselves with all their uncriticized presuppositions of virtue and spiritual idealism, the great fair should offer a platform on which the highest representatives of these religions may help one another to discover what kind of a world it is the business of religion to create, and then to inquire how far each religion has carried its own social order toward that goal.

The management would do well to provide, in addition to the platform, the plain, old-fashioned Methodist mourner's bench where the leaders of all faiths, convicted of sin, could find forgiveness and a new life.

Let us suppose that such a display of religious achievements were granted a place at the Chicago fair in 1933. Let us suppose our church were asked to there show its product in terms of a type of human beings and a quality of social order. Would our product be of a quality commensurate with the claims that we have made as a church? Dare we longer make such claims before the world unless we bend every effort to produce that sort of product?

Should not our church by virtue of its claims rank high in such a test? Would we win the blue ribbon, or would we need most of all the plain, old-fashioned mourner's bench which the editor suggests?

These subscribers have not been hastily denied the privilege of receiving the official organ of the church, but every endeavor has been made to secure their renewal subscriptions. If there should be one now stricken from the list, there is no doubt but what he can again be placed thereon under an understanding as to when payment of the subscription price shall be made.

All Are Participating Stockholders

Each and every member of the church is a stockholder in the Herald Publishing House and is therefore interested in the literary and financial success of the publications.

The Saints' Herald is the leading and most important journal published by the church. Its circulation had passed the nine thousand mark, and fond hope was cherished that it would reach the ten thousand mark before the close of the year 1930. But the fact that the subscription price is less than the cost of production, and that the publishers can not longer furnish it without the money being placed in their hands, has compelled the adoption of a new policy, and several hundred subscribers are this week stricken from the list.

You members of the church are participating in the profit or the loss incurred in publishing the official organ. If ten thousand paid-up subscribers can be obtained from among you at the present price, $2 for the year, I believe the publication would show a small but safe profit. Less than that number of subscribers means that a loss must be sustained at the present price, or the price must be advanced.

Which Shall It Be?

Not a Latter Day Saint wishes to see his publishing house lose a cent, a dime, a quarter, or a dollar on each subscription. All wish it to be a financial success. Not one would like to see the price advanced, for that action would mean that numbers of Saints of limited means would feel the pressure and some would be compelled to cancel their subscriptions. But we must choose between these unsatisfactory alternatives or go among the people and secure new subscriptions and renewals until we shall have increased the list twenty or twenty-five per cent, for the publishing house can not longer carry the burden.

The increased list of paid-up subscribers is the only satisfactory solution. Will you help secure it? If you do, new life will be infused into the church membership. Information and good spirit will be spread among the people. The financially crippled publishing house which you own will become a greater power and a stronger influence for good. Make this day a wise choice.

After July 1 all Herald subscriptions not properly agreed upon otherwise by written understanding between the publishing house and the subscriber, will be discontinued after thirty days from date of expiration. Please examine your label and act the part of Saints who are live and wise.

"None Other Name"

"For there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

It is an old, old custom for tradesmen, manufacturers, and all people who have either wares or ideas to sell, to seek indorsements of prominent and famous people. Under monarchical governments it is the high ambition and the prized honor to be the purveyor, vintner, draper, or what not, to His Majesty the King. In the United States, not having any royalty, our tradesmen pursue the large body of our transient aristocracy: pugilists, golf champions, actors, movie stars, and any members of the nouveau riche whose lavish spending makes them publicly prominent.

The matter has gone farther. Many authors of systems of ethics, or social philosophies, and of fads of various sorts have attempted to support their theories by making them appear to be consonant with the teachings of Christ. Some of them have even gone so far as to push the name of Christ into the background and bring other names to the front.

Thus we have had the personality of Jesus represented to us successively in various roles, and many a clumsy disguise has obscured his teaching. He has been interpreted as a super-salesmen, as a Socialist, as a sympathizer with the capitalist, as a trade unionist, and as many other things. All these have one characteristic in common: none of them are true.

Jesus is the great figure of our religion. He is the focal point of our thoughts, and his teachings are the basis of whatever creeds we possess. He takes precedence of all others who have inhabited flesh; there are none to stand before him. Let his interpreters take care that they speak plain and true, according to the simple power and divinity of his word.

The restored gospel was brought to us through the agency of a latter-day prophet. But it is the gospel of Christ, not of the prophet. The prophet is worthy of honor, and his name shall be remembered, in all probability, wherever the gospel is preached, and wherever men obey. But he spoke as a representative of Christ.

Our work will be successful in so far as we are able to interpret correctly the teachings of Jesus and apply them to our modern problems. If we make mistakes and go astray, our fault is likely to be in failing somewhere to see clearly the strict requirements of our duty.

Jesus had a rich and complex, though a balanced, personality. He was an ascetic and taught self-denial, but he was very different from the founders of the monastic orders. He taught the social responsibility of property owners, but he was not a communist in our understanding of the term. He lived an intensely real life, but he was not a materialist; he was a great mystic, but he did not lose himself in daydreaming, or in abstraction. He used all means, but he avoided all extremes. His teachings permeated his life; his life illustrated his teachings.

His teachings are broad. They leave room for every truly good thing. But no single thing, however good, can touch his teachings without being changed, stamped with the unmistakable and ineradicable marks of his genius and transcendent personality. It becomes for ever changed and different in some essential characteristic.

The philosophy of Jesus has a word to say with reference to every human problem. As the political groups of the earth grow great, they find that other philosophies, though long successful, now meet failure; the shouting of war lords, the rattling of sabers, the machinations of secret diplomatists—all these have reached the limit of their effectiveness, and they may possibly pass with the superstition and darkness of the ages in which they were developed. The speeches of world statesmen lately ring with an old and familiar type of thought. Is it to be that our dizzying rapidity of change, our whirling course of progress is to bring us back to something at once the most radical and the most conservative thing in the world? Is the philosophy of Jesus, neglected as too beautiful and impractical for nineteen hundred years, to turn out to be the only practical and effective solution of problems that have broken down all the fine products of human shrewdness and intelligence?

The supreme importance of the Christian message accounts for the numerous prunings, expansions, subversions, distortions, and misinterpretations from which it has suffered. Probably it will continue so to suffer. It is part of our business not to be a party to any of these faults.

Perhaps this is a good time to remember the statement of Paul in his first letter to the Corinthians:

"For I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."

Historical Program for June

For Local Branches

Subject: The Early Church in Missouri

This month's program commemorates the establishment of the church in Missouri. The movement westward from Kirtland began with the sending of missionaries to western Missouri and eastern Kansas to preach to the Indians, or Lamanites as they were called by the Saints. Revelations to the church had proclaimed that the land of Zion lay still farther west than Kirtland, and finally Independence, Missouri, was designated as the center place for "The Gathering." The Colesville Branch was the first group to move in, having migrated from Colesville, New York, to Thompson, Ohio, near Kirtland, and thence to Missouri, locating some twelve miles west of Independence. Here we see a recognition of the principle, "Seek learning even by study, and also by faith," in the erection of a building that seems to have been used both as a church and a schoolhouse. It was the first schoolhouse within the present limits of Kansas City.

Suggested Program

Song: "Glorious things are sung of Zion," Hymnal, 110.

Prayer.

Reading: Description of the land of Zion. Church History, vol. 1, line 4, page 205, to line 4, page 209, inclusive.

Music.

Short talk: "Early revelations and instructions to the people in Zion." Church History, vol. 1, chapter 10, and especially sections 57, 58, 59, 63 in Doctrine and Covenants, for source material.

Play: "The foundations of Zion," number six of "Conversations," by Elbert A. Smith; published in June number of Vision.

Song: "O happy is the man who hears," Hymnal, 107.

Short talk: "The Gathering"; looking forward.

Song: "Triumphant Zion lift thy head," Hymnal, 123.

Prayer: Dedicating those present to the cause of furthering Zion.

What You Can Do During Sacrifice Week

June 22 to 29, 1930

A week of special sacrifice has been called by the administrative officers of the church for June 22 to 29. A church-wide movement of this nature, we believe, reflects the desire of the majority for sacrifice week to become an annual event.

There is a spiritual background to the idea of sacrifice. Participation in it will center your interest in the welfare and progress of the church. It will bring you a personal development you can gain in no other way. You will have the satisfaction of knowing that your sacrificial offering has directly and materially aided the church to advance its program.

During this week you should try, by sacrifice if necessary, to pay your tithing and make a free-will offering for the work of the church.

God does not want your money for the mere purpose of getting it. The church does not desire your money only that it may be spent, but it is pleasing to God and the church to see that development of character in the Saints which is expressed by the willingness to sacrifice that his cause may prosper.

This year the sacrifice week is an appropriate sequence to the Centennial Conference and a time to ask every Saint to unite in this church-wide endeavor. We invite you to help the church reach its immediate goals—missionary enterprise and the gathering to Zion.

The Young People's Department

Any program of religious education would be sorely lacking which failed to take into consideration the interests, needs, and possibilities of the young people. Especially is this true of our church, with its call to demonstrate a vital religion which shall save the world. We shall need the vision, the vigor, and the intense consecration of which youth is capable in the process of carrying out the purposes of the latter-day message.

We would not disparage the worthy contribution of those whom we consider aged, nor the stalwart courage and the splendid service now being rendered by the middle-aged. But before the young of the church the future holds wonderful possibilities. The promise of the ages, the endowment so long foretold, may be realized in large measure in the years before us by those who are willing to pay the price in preparation, in consecration, and in earnest, efficient endeavor. Such are the possibilities confronting the youth of our day; such the challenge to the young manhood and womanhood of the church as they face the opening century.

Youth Is Dynamic

It may be given to old men to dream dreams, to cherish the values of the past. It is given to youth to see visions, to be adventurous, to make discovery of new values in life. Both are needed if real progress is to be assured.

Somnolent age is in danger of stagnation without the challenge of thinking, reasoning youth. Adventurous youth too often runs amuck if its adventure is not tempered with the wise guidance of experience and made meaningful through appreciation of the heritage of the ages. Youth with its vision and vigor must ever be encouraged to press onward toward the goal of higher achievement. The secret of success is found in mutual comradeship in which age and youth together make consistent progress in the great Christian adventure of righteous living. So may come Zion, a city of industry, of righteousness and truth, a demonstration of God's good will.

The New Plan

One of the compelling conditions which has made necessary the most careful consideration of a new program of religious education has been the demand of our young people for an adequate program of study, work, and play which will help them to meet successfully the issues of our rapidly moving age. Traditional ideas are challenged, antiquated methods are in the discard. Only the truth and right shall be able to survive. A slow-moving, haphazard, piecemeal program does not suffice for our day.

All of this is not to be remedied at once by a mere change in plan. But to attempt to organize a carefully planned, well-balanced program of all-the-week activities, in which every legitimate need of life is met, will certainly go a long way in the right direction.

A Single Department

For a number of years three parallel agencies have sought to provide for youth. Too much the idea has been to provide an adult-made program for young people. The intention has been good, but perhaps overzealously carried out. Teachers in Sunday school, leaders in recreation, and workers in the Women's Department have each tried to provide for certain activities, but seldom has the complete range of need been adequately supplied. The old three-department-plan was not without its merits and its faithful leaders, and it has brought us to the present. It is not proposed to discard the activities, nor to abandon at once the present department organization, except as the way may be clear for a more definitely unified plan to go into operation.

The details of the plan for a single department of Religious Education have been discussed in former issues of the Saints' Herald and in the Department Journal. We may present the salient features of the Young People's Division, where the former three departments have been merged.

The Young People's Division

Under the direction of a leader who has the personality and the sympathetic understanding of youth, provision should be made for well-balanced, all-the-week programs for each age group from 12 to about 24 years. The number of groups will depend upon the size of the whole department. Usually there should be three, at least, probably following the Sunday School Department ages: 12 to 15; 15 to 18, and 18 to 24.

Each age group should be in charge of a teacher-leader; perhaps the teacher of the Sunday morning class. The more contacts the teacher-leader has during the week with the members of the class, the richer and more varied their mutual experiences, the greater the possibility of successful, helpful leadership.

The supervisor of the division, in council with the teacher-leaders, and in sympathetic touch with the young people themselves, plans a program of study, work, and play suited to the good of each age group, in harmony with the larger program of the branch, and in keeping with the purposes and objectives of the church.

Study Classes in Groups

In connection with the regular church services of sermon, prayer meeting, sacrament, etc., provision should be made for regular study occasions. Chief of these is the Sunday morning or Sunday school hour. Selection should be made of quarterly or other class work which promises to meet most nearly the recognized need and interest of the group. The regular Gospel Series Quarterlies are recommended.

For other occasions, Sunday evening classes and week-night classes, other needed, interesting, or entertaining studies may be taken up. Such occasions may be the former Religio or Recreation and Expression meetings. The whole field of interesting and helpful class work is here available. Young people's classes of various kinds, radio, camera, drama, music, choral, and the like are possible.

Recreation

In small branches groups may not be large enough for a narrow range of ages. But every effort should be made to arrange occasions where social good times may be had under able leadership, with helpful companionship and in a wholesome environment. Our new book of recreation, The Game Book, by E. E. Closson, furnishes a vast fund of well-selected games. Probably each age group should manage to meet for recreation at least once a week, at a convenient time and place, under the sympathetic direction or sponsoring of teacher-leaders, but with large opportunity for self-direction under guidance on the part of the young people. Growth and development come only through such activity.

Expression

Similar provision must be made for creative activities in which individuals and groups may participate in creative projects. Religious education as well as other forms of educational growth takes place only as ideals and ideas are given concrete expression in the actual conduct of life. Music, instrumental and vocal; dramatization; story-telling; welfare projects; home, church, and community beautifying and equipment; and projects in connection with the financial or evangelistic program of the church, all afford abundant work projects which challenge the finest talent and the fullest consecration of the youth.

Girls' Organizations

As in the past, the Oriole and Temple Builder programs provide unlimited opportunity for organized work and play for girls' groups. In Our Girls book there has been gathered by Mrs. Woodstock a rich fund of information and carefully worked-out direction for individual and group activities among the girls. These are planned as an extension of most inviting things for girls to know and do, supplementing and often giving vital meaning to the regular teaching of the church. The teacher of the girls' Sunday morning class, or an associate teacher, if otherwise qualified to lead in social, recreational, and experimental lines, is the most logical group leader. Hence the happy term, teacher-leader.

Because the above age groups are within the Young People's Division, the several girls' activities come under the direction of the local supervisor of the young people. Especially if this supervisor be a man, it seems advisable for some capable woman to be assigned the task of sponsoring the Oriole and Temple Builder movements. But in no case should these movements grow up independently of the larger interests of the branch and the church school of which they are a part.

Boy Scouts

The Boy Scout program is being adapted to the needs of our church group of boys of scout age.

The standard church scout troop will be found well adapted to our need for a high type of activity program for our boys. Often the teacher of a class of boys may also be the scout leader. If not, he should be in close sympathy with the boys in their scout work. Again, we are anxious to see the boys' program an integral part of the provisions of the church school for activities which meet the all-the-week needs of our growing young people.

A Balanced Program

Thus it would seem there may be planned a program for the young people of the branch which shall include participation in the regular services of the branch, a share in its financial obligation, social and recreational experiences, study, worship, and work, all in proper balance and each emphasized with due regard to the success of the total program of the church.

Elder E. E. Closson, for the past several years superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression, has been assigned the larger task of directing the entire Young People's Division of the new Department of Religious Education. Inquiries addressed to him at The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, after June 5, will be given his prompt and careful attention.

CHARLES B. WOODSTOCK,
Associate Director.

Cicero and Demosthenes

Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

When Cicero spoke the people said, "How well Cicero speaks." But when Demosthenes spoke the people said, "Let's go against Philip."

Cicero was an eloquent orator, although interested in the welfare of the people and not altogether in self, yet he impressed himself upon the people instead of impressing his subject. But Demosthenes, unlike Cicero, impressed upon the people his subject and not himself.

In other words, Cicero was one of those teachers remembered for the good impressions he made, while Demosthenes was one of those teachers remembered for having power to arouse the people to action.

When Cicero was slain by his enemies, Rome lost a friend. One that was loved and highly esteemed by all who knew him. Though he sleeps and has been sleeping throughout the ages, yet Cicero lives in the hearts of the people, and his character walks the earth for ever.

When Demosthenes suffered death by his own hand, Greece lost one of the most powerful orators of its day. One who achieved by persevering to do those things he set out to achieve. He, too, sleeps, but as long as time shall last, his works shall never be dimmed in the eyes of humanity.

Let us, like Cicero, cultivate a pleasing personality, and live our lives in such a way that our influence shall be known and felt for good.

And on the other hand, like Demosthenes, having wisdom to stir the people to action and to conduct ourselves wisely before this world.—C. H. B.

THE HERALD BOOKSHELF

"Now that General Conference is over," says J. F., while arranging some of our new titles on the Bookshelf, "people will be thinking about applying some of the things they learned to their home branches. And," he adds emphatically, "they will need the new books."

Certainly, they will need the new books. One of the very first will be The Game Book, by E. E. Closson, who has been long connected with the Recreation and Expression Department of the church, and who will continue his work with the new Department of Religious Education.

The book will be very much appreciated by everyone who has anything to do with the social affairs of young people. The young people will need it as an aid in planning their parties, picnics, and general good times.

Written by an expert in this work, it contains the best possible material, at the same time conforming to the church ideals for its young members.

There should be several copies in every branch or local congregation. The book is a boon to reunion workers, and all who like outdoor recreation.

The Game Book, by E. E. Closson. The Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri. Price, $2.00.

Reunions for 1930

The Herald for May 21 contained the first list of reunions submitted by the Presidency. Two errors have been detected. Southern California dates should be July 11 to 20. The place of meeting for Central Michigan will be Beaverton. Please take notice of these corrections.

Church Bonds

THE desirability of church bonds has gained church-wide recognition because 5% plus safety meets two vital requirements of the investor. The consideration which prompts people in the selection of their investments are:

Safety of principal.

A good interest return.

Prompt and unfailing payment of principal and interest.

In these days when stocks and bonds of various kinds are uncertain and questionable, and when the future in many lines of business seems to be doubtful, it is a good time to invest your savings in church bonds, which are backed by the integrity of a hundred thousand people in addition to meeting the above requirements.

From every point of view they are a good investment, safe for you and a help to your church. No one who ever invested a dollar with the church ever lost a penny. Are you willing to invest your money where you have intrusted your hope of eternal salvation?

Church bonds are offered in denominations of $25, $50, $100, $200, and $1,000. Any denomination of these bonds may be bought on payments, if desired. Send orders for bonds to the Presiding Bishopric, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. Additional information furnished on request.

Prospects and Responsibilities of the Second Century

A sermon by Frederick A. Smith, at the Stone Church, 3 p. m., April 13, 1930. Reported by W. McDonald.

A little retrospection may possibly help us in looking into the future. I am going to read one or two lessons today before I start in on my talk:

God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; neither is worshiped with men's hands, as though he needed any thing, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things; and hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us.—Acts 17: 24.

I want also to call attention to the thought expressed in the 10th chapter of the Acts:

Then Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

Turning now to Isaiah I note another statement, and herein will be found the text. In the 29th chapter, 26th verse in the Inspired Version (it is in the 14th and 15th verses of the King James Version), you will find this language:

And again it shall come to pass, that the Lord shall say unto him that shall read the words that shall be delivered him, Forasmuch as this people draw near unto me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their hearts far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men, therefore I will proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise and learned shall perish, and the understanding of the prudent shall be hid.

The text is found in the statement, "I will proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder among this people."

A Fulfilling of Scriptural Declaration

It is true when we go back to the particular statement as found in Isaiah we have gone way back into the old fields, long before the days of Christ himself, and in a careful following of the historical sketches that have been given us we find no place where this particular declaration found its fulfillment until we reach that period of history in which this church begins to make its manifestation. During the days of Christ and before it there were prophets, apostles, and those who worshiped God; but at no place, at any time, was the fulfillment found touching the records that we are pleased to term the Book of Mormon, and as we look upon that we discover the outstanding features of it are of such a nature as to emphasize the fact that it had not received its fulfillment until that day, a little over one hundred years ago.

To those of us who have been permitted to see this, the hundredth anniversary of the organization of the church, to participate in the peculiar rites that have come to us in the celebration of that event, a little retrospection possibly will help us and bring us closer to God and more firmly established in our hope. For when I look at it, I find there are some things that touch us very peculiarly along this line.

Go back one hundred years, and we might start earlier than that, for we discover there are some things leading up to it, and we see the necessity of our recognizing the prophetic statements in connection with it. I would ask you to think for a few moments of some of the statements that have been made that have their fulfillment in history as we move along over that period.

Apostasy and Darkness Come

It is a peculiar and significant thing that after the days of Christ, when the apostasy had set in until they wandered clear away from God, darkness enshrouded the earth, and no manifestation of God was to be found, there came a period of time in which they tell us in our historical research the Reformation started. This reformation period carried us down from fifteen hundred into the early eighteen hundreds, a little over three hundred years. And right in connection with that we read when at the end of that three hundred years of reformation there was not the first single thing to indicate that God had anything to do with it. When you go back and read carefully you discover that every man that stepped out on the rostrum emphasized the fact that he did not believe in revelation from God at that time, and since the days of John on the Isle of Patmos all the prophets had fallen asleep and God had not spoken to humanity. They emphasized it by making the declaration that it was not necessary; and because they did not have it they concluded that they could get along very nicely without it.

Light of Restoration Breaks

That condition grew and continued until about 1830. But before that period came our history starts, for the real history of this church starts a little while before 1830. The things that led up to it and that brought about the organization and the perfection of it are the things that I want to refer to now, to refresh our minds, to increase our faith, and to recognize the fulfillment of the prophecies of God. In them we discover many things that emphasize the thought that darkness would come; and after darkness would come the light; and that light is the thing in which we have rejoiced. In doing so I shall just sketch a little bit of history for you, that you may look at it and think it over.

Over in the wilds of New York, in the western borders, there was a family living which was in moderate circumstances in life—pioneers in opening a new country, without the chances and privileges of education that are found further east. Into their community came a revival service; a union meeting of some three churches. In the course of this revival this family became interested in religion, and as they expressed it at that time, "got religion." Among the number of the family was a boy, young in years, without the opportunities of schooling that others around had; nevertheless, intelligent and independent enough to think and to act largely for himself. In his own language, he tells us that about the only thing he found in which these churches agreed was that they should take the Scriptures as their counsel and abide by them. In studying them, he found something that startled him, and he went to the woods to put it to the test.

First Vision of the Restoration

When I make the statement he went to the woods, there is no mistake about it, for the country at that time was covered with timber, and only where they had cleared that timber off were there open places, and there were many places that had never been touched. Strange as it may seem, to this very day the little piece of timber or grove in which he went and made his first supplication still stands virgin forest. It has never been touched to any extent with the axes of mankind. So, when he went out there he tells that he looked all around him to be real sure that nobody was seeing him.

Here he was, a boy, not old enough yet to fully sense the importance of manhood and the independence that ought to be his, yet too big to offer the little prayer his mother had taught him; and he did not yet feel able to make a prayer satisfactory to himself which could be heard in public. Then he says he kneeled down and began to pray. I want to notice just what happens here. I am going to use his own language to give it to you:

I had scarcely done so when immediately I was seized upon by some power which entirely overcame me, and had such astonishing influence over me as to bind my tongue so that I could not speak. Thick darkness gathered around me, and it seemed to me for a time as if I were doomed to sudden destruction. But exerting all my powers to call upon

God to deliver me out of the power of this enemy which had seized upon me, and at the very moment when I was ready to sink into despair and abandon myself to destruction, (not to an imaginary ruin, but to the power of some actual being from the unseen world who had such a marvelous power as I had never before felt in my being,) just at this moment of great alarm, I saw a pillar of light exactly over my head, above the brightness of the sun; which descended gradually until it fell upon me. It no sooner appeared than I found myself delivered from the enemy which held me bound. When the light rested upon me I saw two personages (whose brightness and glory defy all description) standing above me in the air. One of them spake unto me, calling me by name, and said, (pointing to the other,) "This is my beloved Son, hear him."

My object in going to inquire of the Lord was to know which of all the sects was right, that I might know which to join. No sooner therefore did I get possession of myself, so as to be able to speak, than I asked the personages who stood above me in the light, which of all the sects was right, (for at this time it has never entered into my heart that all were wrong,) and which I should join. I was answered that I must join none of them.

The Creeds Were Wrong

I must pause for a moment and call your attention to a thought that is here. Here is one of the beginnings of this work. One of the first commandments that came to this young man; and let me say, it became one of the distinctive features that has emphasized this work for a hundred years, and it carries with it one of the distinctive features that must emphasize this work for the next hundred years, is "Join none of them, for they are all wrong." Get the thought at once and you see one of the basic principles upon which we stand. You see one of the emphatic differences that present themselves to us. We can not get away from it, if we become sectarian and leave the footpaths of the past and change the ordinances and things of that description, we will have done precisely what they did in the days of the apostasy after Christ. Look at it clearly and see that revelation from God is the essential feature of difference upon which we stand. The fact that God revealed that these sects were wrong and had wandered into the darkness away from the fold of God becomes one of the essential reasons for the organization of this church.

A little later this young man, for he had like other young men I suppose become careless and thoughtless, for he informs us in a further statement that I quoted for you, that God informed him that the time had come when the church of God was to arise, come out of the wilderness, and if he would be humble and faithful he should be an instrument in the hands of God in assisting to bring this work about. He tells us that he became like other boys, a little careless and thoughtless, and evidently got into some of the habits and customs of the day, and then one night after he had gone to bed, feeling that he needed to call upon God and repent of anything he may have done that might be evil, he prayed, poured out his soul to God, and suddenly, as he describes it to us, a wonderful manifestation appeared, and as I call your attention to this manifestation you have one other distinctive feature:

While I was thus in the act of calling upon God I discovered a light appearing in the room, which continued to increase until the room was lighter than at noonday, when immediately a personage appeared at my bedside standing in the air, for his feet did not touch the floor. He had on a loose robe of most exquisite whiteness. It was a whiteness beyond anything earthly I had ever seen; nor do I believe that any earthly thing could be made to appear so exceedingly white and brilliant; his hands were naked, and his arms also a little above the wrist. So also were his feet naked, as were his legs a little above the ankles. His head and neck were also bare. I could discover that he had no other clothing on but this robe, as it was open so that I could see into his bosom. Not only was his robe exceedingly white, but his whole person was glorious beyond description, and his countenance truly like lightning. The room was exceedingly light, but not so very bright as immediately around his person. When I first looked upon him I was afraid, but the fear soon left me. He called me by name, and said unto me that he was a messenger sent from the presence of God to me, and that his name was Nephi. That God had a work for me to do, and that my name should be had for good and evil, among all nations, kindreds, and tongues; or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all people.

Prepared for Fulfillment of the Scripture

Here is a prophetic declaration; here is a description of this messenger. He proceeds to tell us that that messenger unfolded to him the Scriptures, pointed out to him the fulfillment that should come to pass soon, outlined to him the manner in which the work could be done, and as he did so he said "the light gathered about him and disappeared." Four times that angel appeared, four times up to the next day at noon he had made known to him this same thing, and then the boy goes further, to make the declaration that every year, once a year, he met that angel, and the angel revealed instructions from God as to the work that was to be done and how it was to be done.

This leads up to the organization of the church. We discover that God did not only reveal to us that he was God, that he was going to accomplish this work, but he revealed how it should be done, a thing that had not been found in all the three hundred years of the Reformation.

I now stop and look for a few moments at a statement made at the close of this interview, a prophetic declaration that the name of this man, this boy, obscure in the backwoods of a new country—his name should be had for good and evil in all the world, by every kindred, tongue, and nation, and emphasize to you the fact that this hundred years has demonstrated the truthfulness of that proclamation. Wherever we have gone in all the nations of the world we have met with that peculiar opposition and abuse, and that boy's name has been handed out for good by his friends, and evil by his enemies. How could he know that such a thing as that would be? And you answer it would be impossible for him to know. He would never have dreamed of such wide notoriety as that; that he should be known all over the world. You think a few moments. How many boys would? And under these contrasts we discover one of the fulfillments that marked the hundred years and emphasizes the truthfulness of the great work in which we are engaged.

Book of Mormon Given

Now I want to notice just one or two other things as we move along, and in doing so call your attention briefly to the thought in connection with it. In following this thought up there comes to us the next manifestation, the deliverance of the plates of what we are pleased to term the Book of Mormon. This same messenger brought these plates, gave them to him, and then comes a period of peculiar history, of trial, of worries, of anxiety, of care, and even of weakness of humanity and loss that finally brings him back into touch with God and presents the divine manifestation again.

We reach then the period of our organization. This man, with the scribe who had assisted him in the writing of this book, go out to pray and inquire of God about some of the peculiar things which were found therein. And in the still forest of that country, in the bright sunshine of a May day, they describe to us one of the most wonderful scenes, in which the angel of God came to them again, whose brightness and sheen were brighter than the midday sun of May.

The description they give of this angel is a very fine one, and they proceed to tell us what he did. He now laid his hands upon them and ordained them and sent them out to accomplish their work. This was in 1829. In 1830 the accomplishment had been so far progressed that they proceeded to do what they had been commanded, and organized a church.

With this organization there came a wonderful carrying out of the fulfillments of the declarations that had been made, a startling manifestation of wisdom, of light, and understanding, that exceeded anything that had yet come to us along lines of this kind. And because of this there comes to us the consciousness of the peculiar statement and its fulfillment, of a marvelous and wonderful work. It was marvelous. You think for a moment of the conditions in that day, when the people for centuries had not heard a word from God; when no avenue had been opened and no manifestation of God had been known, and their traditions had carried them out as they thought that every possibility of communion with God had been closed and no longer would he speak to humanity. With these things in their hearts, conscious of them, being pushed in spite of themselves, there comes the realization that God had spoken to this boy. Obscure? Yes. Uneducated, so far as the higher learning was concerned? Yes; but my friends, intelligent just the same.

And then we have a little statement here I am going to call your attention to found in Doctrine and Covenants 1: 4:

Wherefore I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets; the weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow-man, neither trust in the arm of flesh, but that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world; that faith also might increase in the earth; that mine everlasting covenant might be established; that the fullness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple, unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 4.

Fulfillment Brought by Weak Ones

That the declaration from the prophets might be fulfilled, and that the weak things of the earth, possibly one of the most marvelous features that attended our work, and has been manifest in it all along through, has been most peculiar in the fact that it has been through the weak things of the world, it has been brought about by the power of God, for God said in our text, "I will proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder among this people." God was to have a hand in that, and he has continued to move, and I look upon it today after all these years as a marvelous work and a wonder. When that boy came he was told the creeds of the churches were wrong, and I ask myself, What has this work done? What are some of the peculiar evidences of its successfulness in the world? I am going to point out one or two to you.

Changes in the Creeds

On the 9th page of the first volume of the History of the Church you will discover the statement made that the creeds were wrong; an abomination in the sight of God. We are only a hundred years from that statement. Let me ask you, my friends, where are their creeds? "The wisdom of their wise men shall perish; the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid." The creeds were the wisdom of the wise men that had gathered together and formulated them that they might have some definite understanding of God. The understanding of the prudent men along these lines had been hid.

I point you today to the history of the world, the religious world. Take any denomination today that existed at that time and go carefully and read the creeds that they had then and have today. Make inquiry, What has become of them? for you will not find them the same. There is not one single one but what has been changed. Not one. I make the statement further that the traditions that bound them then and hindered and hampered them possibly in their conception of God and his great work, has been broadened and widened until today there is a vastly different idea of God than there was then. While skepticism has been brought in and it has become stronger with the people, yet I emphasize the fact that one of the great things of this work that has been brought about by the weak things of man has been to break down the mighty and strong of the learned of the world, and force, if you please, by reason of spiritual education and influences that have been brought to bear, a change of views that presents to us a marvelous condition.

I emphasize another fact. In spite of the fact this church has been torn and rent by reason of disturbances within and destructions among the people, and the killing of the Prophet and his brother, and divided asunder, yet God has made the declaration it should stand and never be torn down nor given to another people until Christ come. That must stand and will stand, just as sure as we are here. It matters not how men may differ and what peculiar differences there may be, what divisions there may come, this very statement tells me that the organization of God shall continue until he comes, and the church shall never be given to another. He has kept that word before us, he has emphasized it, and it must find fulfillment. God has said that he would move in his own way to accomplish his purposes, and he would move as he saw fit and turn and overturn until it accomplished the purposes whereunto he had sent it. And I have faith and confidence today that in spite of internal differences that may have existed, in spite of things that may have come, emphasis must be laid upon the fact that it must continue and will continue, and that God's word is true, and he will turn and overturn until it has accomplished its purpose.

Hastening Must Come

I have no doubt along this line, not a single hesitancy in the world, for as sure as God lives it must do that. He stands over it, and his hand will guide and direct and his hand must manifest itself in the work of God that shall be done. Not man and man's influence, but the great power of God shall be made manifest, and the accomplishment of the purposes shall continue, and we must see it in the march of events, according to the prophecies, and make strides along these lines greater possibly than we have made in the past. The work must move more rapidly, and the changes may come more quickly than we have contemplated, but just the same they will come, and the work will be done, and it will be one of astonishing effects.

I can look further into the future, though it comes to us with just a few thoughts along another line, for other prophets taught under similar circumstances to the one like this. I go back to Isaiah, and he unfolds to us a picture of his first vision, in which he saw God sitting upon the throne. He gives us a splendid picture of it. And why should the world stand back? Why should they reject the thought that it might be possible to see God, for I discover in his revelations to us he has unfolded the declaration that no man could see God except by the power of the Holy Spirit and the revelation of the priesthood that he had given. There is the exception, there is the line upon which he has moved, and that is how he has made himself manifest.

I ask you to turn again and read Ezekiel and Jeremiah especially. He gives you a very clear and distinct view of what he saw along that line. I bring you to Amos and he says:

I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was a herdman, and a gatherer of sycamore fruit; and the Lord took me as I followed the flock, and the Lord said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel.

I could take you from one to the other, all the way along. And then comes a peculiar one found in the statement made in Zechariah, chapter 2, in which two angels are talking to each other, and one says, "Go out and speak to this young man and tell him that Jerusalem should be inhabited as towns without walls." It had laid waste and desolate for centuries. Think of a prophecy coming to the young man that such a thing should occur! When I look back over history, I find he tells of this circumstance, and how the promise was made it should be inhabited.

War of the Rebellion Foretold

There are many I could mention. I am going to ask you to think of still one more, for we have been given the right to judge these men by their works, to judge them by their prophetic statements. This man, this prophet of God, made a declaration concerning the Great Rebellion that came into our country, making the prediction several years before it came to pass, and then is fulfilled precisely what he has stated.

So far as the Holy Land is concerned, we have but to go back and discover the statement made that after the Spirit of God was poured out from on high that land should be fruitful again, and be inhabited again, and we discover about twenty-five or thirty years from the time this revelation came to him that thing was fulfilled.

Zion Must Be Established

Is it not a marvelous work? When we go back and study the records and look over the past we find a chain of evidence, a marvelous chain of circumstances that have been wrought, have been fulfilled. Prophetic declarations have been absolutely fulfilled; things in their nature that no human power could have brought about. Is it not wonderful? He said it would be a marvelous work and a wonder. The world despised it, the world hated it, the world sought to destroy, but still that marvelous work goes on and the testimony of Almighty God is made, and still there comes to us the evidences of its growth, its development; and it must eventually accomplish the purposes whereunto God has sent it and bring about the redemption of his people and the establishment of Zion.

And as we enter upon the second century of our experiences it must be with brighter hopes and greater zeal, with more faith in God, with a stronger determination upon our part to fulfill the commands of God, and recognize the evidences that have come in the past, of the prophetic declarations that have been fulfilled and give to God the credit; and make manifest our determination to accomplish his work; that we may stand before the world as a witness, a living testimony, that the church shall shine as the children of God and make manifest the power of God is one of the things that there can be no escape from, for if we will succeed, that is what must come, and I say without hesitation on my part, friends, that it will come.

The time is not far distant when there will be manifest such manifestations of God as we have not seen, and there shall come such wonderful workings of the things God has said as shall enable us to move with greater rapidity and stronger forces than we have yet done. I look forward in confidence and faith and enter the new century with the assurance that God is true, that his work is true, and that it will accomplish the purposes whereunto he has sent it, and man can not stay the power of God nor can they do what God has said in their own strength or might.

We Must Make Personal Preparation

Hence we must grow closer to God than we have; we must get more humble and prayerful in our attitude before him; we must make our attitude toward the world and our fellows around us of such a kindly nature, of such brotherly affection and such manifestation of the Spirit of Christ himself as shall bear witness that we are indeed the children of God.

With that confidence and that assurance and that recognition of the great work of God that has gone on in the century past in spite of the weakness of man, in spite of the failures of man, we can enter the new century with courage and confidence and satisfaction that it shall accomplish all God has said, and that we shall rejoice with God and with the Saints when they are redeemed.

May God bless us to that end. May his power be made manifest as never before, until all mankind shall know and recognize the marvelous work and the wonder that God is doing among mankind.

By Hyrum O. Smith

Forces Leading Up to the Final Decision

By all students of this latter-day work, it will be at once recognized that the situation of the son was that of the father in the beginning of this latter-day movement. The father was confronted with a divided Christianity. Numerous sects had been formed out of what at one time was a united church. True, this united church was a remote fact in history, but it was a united church when first organized by Christ and his apostles. When confronted by this condition of affairs, and being deeply concerned as to his own soul's salvation, he took God at his word as found in James 1: 5:

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.

Up to this time it had not occurred to him that all the warring sects were wrong, and what was his astonishment when the answer to his prayer came, clearly and unmistakably, all of these sects are wrong, and he must join none of them, but that God had in contemplation the restoration of the primitive gospel in its fullness, and that he was the instrument through which this restoration was to be accomplished. And, without going into detail, we simply record that this restoration was accomplished through this man's instrumentality, and remained a coherent organization for fourteen years, or up to the time of the death of its organizer.

But, as it was in the days of old, disintegrating forces were at work, and when the son came upon the stage of action, he found that which his father had been instrumental in establishing shot through with disturbing influences, and the same lo here and lo there engaged his attention. Let us hear his account of what occurred that influenced his decision. In this account will be found that which will emphasize the fact that not only the Saints, but many outsiders, recognized the right of the sons of Joseph Smith to occupy in their father's place. It will be noted, however, that in the answer that the son received from his inquiry as to where his life's labor should lie, he was not told that all the warring factions were wrong, but was distinctly told which one of these factions was acceptable to God. His narrative is as follows:

In the fall of this year (1856) three events transpired that had much to do with deciding my course religiously and aiding me to answer the question, what part in my father's work, if any, I was to take. For a number of years I had been more or less intimate with the family of Christopher E. Yates, a friend to the Saints, who at the time of the disturbances in Hancock County, for his outspoken denunciations of mob violence and mob law, had suffered the loss of a fine barn, a lot of grain, hay, and a number of horses by fire, set by incendiaries out of revenge as it is supposed, and who had removed with other citizens into Nauvoo and bought property there. With one of his sons, Putnam, circumstances had made me well acquainted. He had crossed the plains a number of times, had been in Salt Lake City and other parts of Utah, and in California. He and I had frequently discussed Mormonism; that is, some parts of it, and he had persistently insisted that I could do a great and excellent work by going to Utah, and as he put it, "taking the lead away from Brigham; breaking up that system of things there" or to "fall in with the style of things there, become a leader, get rich, marry three or four wives and enjoy yourself." Though not a religious man himself, he thought it might be a duty that I owed the people of Utah. He further thought, that from his experience in Utah, and the expressions he had heard among the people there, that I would be received with open arms and could succeed.

To this I replied as best I could, until the question, Why not go to Utah? There are the men who were with my father, or a great many of them. There, a large part of the family; there, also, seem to be the only ones making profession of belief in Mormonism who appear to be doing anything. Does not duty demand that I go there and clear my name and honor of the charge of ingratitude to my father's character? Is not polygamy, against which you object, a correct tenet? Is not your objection one of prejudice only? These and a thousand others of similar import were suggested, and added their weight to the difficulty of the situation. In the height of it, the words suggested to one who had gone before me came to me with force; "If any lack wisdom, let him ask of God." Why not I? Was I not in a position to need wisdom? And was I not destitute of sufficient to enable me to properly decide? I had for three or four years been investigating spiritual phenomena; had read some of the productions of Andrew J. Davis; had also read a little of Doctor Emanuel Swedenborg's philosophy; but I found no good in spiritualism; the phenomena were physical and gross; no response from the departed spirits of any of the family, though severally appealed to in turn ever came; and the manifestations though strange and material were altogether inadequate for the deductions spiritists drew from them. I did not give credence to the philosophy. My human intelligence was at fault, I could not decide. I believed that He who had enabled my father to decide which of all should receive his attention, could, if he would, enable me to decide whether I should, or should not, have anything to do with Mormonism; and if so, what. I proceeded upon this conclusion.

A year or two before this we had raised an excellent crop of wheat, upon a piece of land lying in the south of our meadow, and this man Yates had assisted in doing some of the work. While engaged in it we had some conversation about Utah. After this I did not see him for some months. One day, while pondering these questions, (and here, unlike some, I can not certainly state whether morn or even, only that the sun was shining,) I suddenly found myself sowing this piece of land to wheat. My brother and this Mr. Yates I saw harrowing the wheat after my sowing. In passing over the land I met Mr. Yates as he drove to and fro, and our conversation was upon this Utah subject; and the same arguments and statements were repeated by him. To these I was urging again my reluctance to move, and the question was again presented, Why not go to Utah? I paused, rested the bag of grain that I was carrying across my shoulder, upon my knee, and turned to answer him. I heard a slight noise like the rush of the breeze, that arrested my speech and my attention. I turned my gaze slightly upward and saw descending towards me a sort of cloud, funnel shaped, with the wide part upward. It was luminous, and of such color and brightness that it was clearly seen, though the sun shone in its summer strength. It descended rapidly, and settling upon and over me enveloped me completely, so that I stood within its radiance.

As the cloud rested upon the ground at my feet, the words "Because the light in which you stand is greater than theirs," sounded in my ears clearly and distinctly. Slowly the cloud passed away and the vision closed. A few days after this occurred I met this man Putnam Yates, and held a conversation with him in which he again urged upon me the idea of going to Utah; and my answer was in exact accordance with what I had seen. The other question, "Is polygamy of God?" was as distinctly and definitely answered to me, as was the one referred to above; and the answer was, "No," and I was directed that I was to have nothing to do with it, but was to oppose it.—Church History, vol. 3, pp. 256-259.

A People Preparing

When the church broke up in Nauvoo, some of the leading men thereof refused to be carried away with the false doctrines that were taught by some of the would-be leaders. Nominally they allowed themselves to affiliate with some of the factions that sprang up at the death of the prophet, but just long enough to examine their claims and find them wanting. One of these men was Zenos H. Gurley, a man of honor and unquestioned veracity. Narrating some of the events that occurred during this trying period he writes:

During this time several strange things came to my knowledge that fully satisfied me that unless good and evil, bitter and sweet could proceed from the same fountain, neither J. J. Strang, B. Young, William Smith, nor any that had claimed to be prophets, since Joseph's death, were the servants of God. The inquiry arose in my mind, "What shall we do? Here are a few honest saints who have obeyed the gospel, and are looking to me for instruction. What can I say? What can I teach them?" Thus I meditated for months. God, and God only, knows what the anguish of my mind was. I resolved that I would preach the word; and, thank God, preaching brought me out right.

It was after preaching on Sunday evening, in the fall of 1851, while sitting in my chair at Brother Wildermuth's house, my mind was drawn to Isaiah 2: 2, 3. At that moment the great work of the last days, as it is spoken of by the prophet in that chapter, seemed to pass before me in all its majesty and glory. It appeared that I could see all nations in motion, coming to the mountain of the Lord's house in the top of the mountains. At this time Strang's Beaver Island operation appeared before me. It looked mean and contemptible beyond description. A voice,—the Spirit of God—the Holy Ghost, then said to me, "Can this (alluding to Strang's work) ever effect this great work?" I answered, "No, Lord." I felt ashamed to think I had ever thought so. The voice then said, "Rise up, cast off all that claim to be prophets, and go forth and preach the gospel, and say that God will raise up a prophet to complete his work." I said, "Yea, Lord."

As I left the house my mind was dwelling upon what had just transpired. Although the Spirit had told me that God would raise up a prophet to complete his work, it did not enter my mind at that time that I would realize the work in its present form. My whole desires were that those dear souls around me might enjoy the gifts and blessings of the gospel as the Saints did in Joseph's time, and be saved from the meshes of iniquity which thousands had run into. A few weeks afterward, while reading a paragraph in the Book of Covenants, which says, "If thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light," the Spirit said unto me again, "Rise up, cast off all that claim to be prophets, and go forth and preach the gospel, and say that God will raise up a prophet to complete his work." I answered, "I will do it, God being my helper." From that time I began to look about in earnest for a starting point. I examined the book carefully and saw at once that the teachings of the day were contrary to the law, and resolved that although I had but one talent, yet in the name of Israel's God I would go forward and leave the result with him.—Church History, vol. 3, pp. 204-206.

It will doubtless be noted that there was simultaneous preparation going on during the years 1851 to 1860. A people was being prepared for the advent of a leader, and the leader being prepared for the people. It was, too, without any collusion. Each was being prepared without any knowledge of the other's movement. In 1851 the word of the Lord to these seekers for light was: "Rise up, cast off all that claim to be prophets, and go forth and preach the gospel, and say that God will raise up a prophet to complete his work." Two years later when this young prophet-to-be had reached his majority, he was asked, as described in a vision already quoted, "Which would you prefer, life, success and renown among the busy scenes that you first saw, or a place among these people, without honors or renown? Think of it well, for the choice will be offered to you sooner or later, and you must be prepared to decide. Your decision once made you can not recall it, and must abide the result." God had promised the people that he would raise up a prophet to complete his work, and this was the first step in fulfilling his promise.

Almost immediately, after receiving the assurance that God would raise up a prophet to lead them, there came to this struggling band of truth seekers the information that the one to come forth was of the seed of their martyred prophet. This they knew was in harmony with the law that had been given for their guidance. The first revelation to this effect was received through Jason W. Briggs, when the Lord declared that he would, "in his own due time call upon the seed of Joseph Smith to come forth, and set in order the quorums; in a word, to fill his father's place." This revelation was committed to writing and sent to the various groups of people who had begun to separate themselves from all claiming to be prophets. These different groups indorsed the revelation as from God, because the Spirit of God bore witness to its truthfulness. One of the incidents leading to this indorsement is very graphically told in a narrative written by this man from whom I have just quoted, Zenos H. Gurley, Church History, vol. 3, pp. 207, 208.

About ten or fifteen days after I had heard of this revelation, while sitting by my evening fire, my boys came running into my room, declaring with great earnestness that their little sister was up to Brother Newkirk's, speaking and singing in tongues. For a moment I was overpowered with joy. I exclaimed, "Is it possible that God has remembered my family?" Immediately I went up, and when I was in one or two steps of the house, I paused. I listened, and O the thrill of joy that went through my soul! I knew that it was of God. My child, my dear child was born of the Holy Spirit. I opened the door and went in. It appeared to me that the entire room was filled with the Holy Spirit. Shortly after I requested them all to join with me in asking the Lord to tell us who the successor of Joseph Smith was. I felt anxious to know that I might bear a faithful testimony. We spent a few moments in prayer, when the Holy Spirit declared, "The successor of Joseph Smith is Joseph Smith, the son of Joseph Smith the Prophet. It is his right by lineage, saith the Lord your God."

These people were commanded to organize, continue their preaching, gathering all who desired the truth, and await the due time of the Lord, when the prophet would be sent to them. This they did, and the Lord continued to direct them by his Spirit. Their attitude towards the Book of Doctrine and Covenants was early expressed in a resolution adopted in June, 1852, reading as follows:

Resolved that the whole law of the Church of Jesus Christ is contained in the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Book of Doctrine and Covenants.

They thus put themselves on record as honoring the revelations given to the church through the martyred prophet. This is a significant fact in the contemplation of the subject of true succession to the presidency of the church, for the reason that I wish to emphasize the statement made in the revelation providing for the appointment of the successor wherein it is clearly stated that that successor shall "be ordained to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed."

The actual organization of this movement began in June, 1852, and for several years it continued to grow and prosper, gathering from every section those who had repudiated the claims of other leaders, until finally they were, they thought, in a position to call upon the one whom they had been told would be the future leader of the church. Up to this time the young prophet had not decided where his life's labor should lie. He had simply been told that he should not go to Utah, but had not been directed to any one of the factions. We will now let him tell his own story. Up to this time he had been solicited constantly by the various factions to cast in his lot with them. With the possible exception of that organization known as the Reorganization, all had sought his allegiance to their cause. The Reorganization, however, had bided its time, having the assurance that the Lord would in his own due time send the prophet to them, and he had made known to them, as we have seen, who that prophet was to be. I will now quote from the narrative written by this man around whom the various factions endeavored to rally.

The question of my going to Utah in order to fill the destiny appointed me was now disposed of, and I was prepared for two events that occurred subsequently to what is here related.

A week after my marriage my wife went with me to the farm and here we began our married life. We had hardly been settled more than a month when I was visited by George A. Smith and Erastus Snow. They came to visit and chat with me, and to discharge a commission intrusted to them by Mr. Fred Piercy, the artist to whom I had sat for a crayon sketch for his work "Route to Salt Lake," referred to elsewhere; he had sent me a copy of that work by them. I made them welcome as my means permitted, set before them something to eat, and did my best to answer their inquiries and entertain them. Elder George A. Smith said but little, leaving the burden of conversation to Elder Snow. I was at this visit asked if I did not intend to come to Utah to see them there, the question being supplemented by the statement that they were looking for me to come; that I had many friends there, who had been friends to my father; that they thought I ought to be with them, and felt a great desire to see me among them.

To this I replied that I might some day visit them when a railway was completed that I could go and come without let or hindrance.

"But," said Elder Snow, "we want you to come and stay." In reply to this I stated that "I could not do that in the sense conveyed, so long as such things were taught and practiced there as I had reason to believe were taught and practiced."

"You refer to plurality," said Elder Snow; and I answered him, "Yes, I refer to the doctrine of polygamy as it is called in the States."

"Why you believe in the Book of Mormon, do you not?" inquired Elder Smith.

I replied to him, "I believe in the book; but do not believe the construction that you Utah people put upon it."

Other conversation took place of a general character, mainly between Elder Snow and myself, until they left, the interview lasting some two and a half or three hours.

Not more than three or four weeks elapsed after the visit of Elders Snow and Smith when I was visited by Elders Samuel H. Gurley and Edmund C. Briggs, sent as delegates from the Reorganized Church at Zarahemla, Wisconsin, with a commission to deliver what they believed to be the word of the Lord to me:—

"THE CHURCH IN ZARAHEMLA, WISCONSIN, TO JOSEPH SMITH

"Our faith is not unknown to you, neither our hope in the gathering of the pure in heart enthralled in darkness, together with the means, to the accomplishment of the same; viz., that the seed of him to whom the work was first committed should stand forth and bear the responsibility (as well as wear the crown) of a wise masterbuilder—to close up the breach, and to combine in one a host, who, though in captivity and sorely tried, still refuse to strengthen the hands of usurpers. As that seed, to whom pertains this right, and heaven-appointed duty, you can not be unmindful or indifferent. The God of Abram, Isaac, and Jacob covenanted with them and their seed. So the God of Joseph covenanted with him and his seed, that his word should not depart out of the mouth of his seed, nor out of the mouth of his seed's seed, till the end come. A Zerubbabel in Israel art thou. As a nail fastened in a sure place, so are the promises unto thee to make thee a restorer in Zion—to set in order the house of God. And the Holy Spirit that searcheth the deep things of God, hath signified to us that the time has come. For, through fasting and prayer, hath the answer from God come; unto us, saying, Communicate with my servant Joseph Smith, son of the Prophet. Arise, call upon God and be strong, for a deliverer art thou to the Latter Day Saints. And the Holy Spirit is thy prompter. The apostles, elders, and Saints who have assembled with us, have beheld the vacant seat and the seed that is wanting. And like Ezra of old with his brethren, by the direction of the Holy Spirit have we sent faithful messengers to bear this our message to you, trusting that you will by their hands notify us of your readiness to occupy that seat, and answer to the name and duties of that seed. For this have our prayers been offered up for the last five years. We are assured that the same Spirit that has testified to us, has signified the same things to you. Many have arisen perverting the work of the Lord. But the good and the true are throughout the land waiting the true successor of Joseph the Prophet, as president of the church and of the priesthood. In our publications—sent to you—we have shown the right of successorship to rest in the literal descendant of the chosen seed, to whom the promise was made, and also the manner of ordination thereto. We can not forbear reminding you that the commandments, as well as the promises given to Joseph, your father, were given to him, and to his seed. And in the name of our Master, even Jesus Christ, as moved upon by the Holy Ghost, we say, Arise in the strength of the Lord and realize those promises by executing those commandments. And we, by the grace of God, are thy helpers in restoring the exiled sons and daughters of Zion to their inheritances in the kingdom of God and to the faith once delivered to the saints.

"Holding fast that which is good and resisting evil, we invoke the blessings of the God of Israel upon thee and upon all Saints, for whom we will ever pray.

"J. W. BRIGGS,

"Representative President of the Church, and the President in Zarahemla.

"Zarahemla, November 18, 1856."

The reception that these brethren met with was not a flattering one. Elder Gurley stated their mission, and presented the document containing the message to me. I heard what he had to say; I read the message that they brought, but could not accept it as they had hoped. It was not to me the word of the Lord. Elder Briggs vehemently urged the matter upon me; and announced the culmination of the message in tones of thunder, and almost dictatorially directed me to accept the message, and do as directed therein; or reject it at my peril.

I met this vehemence indignantly, and almost turned these messengers out of doors. But, through the calmer, humbler efforts of Elder Gurley and the interposition of my wife, the storm abated; I invited them to stay over night, and that when the morning came, I would accompany them to town and would then give them a final answer. In the morning I went with them to Nauvoo, introduced them to my mother and stepfather, went with them into a room, where quietly and peaceably Elder Gurley and I talked the situation over. I gave them my answer which was this: What they came to bring might be the word of the Lord: I could not say that it was not. I had, however, no testimony that it was. That I was prepared to do what God required of me, if he would make it known to me what it was; that I believed that he could reveal himself if he would; that I believe that my father was called of God to do a work; and that I was satisfied that that work was true, whether I ever had anything to do with it or not; that I did not then know whether I should ever be called to take any part in that work; but that if I were, I was ready, and that it would have to be made clear to me, in person, as well as to others, what that work was; that I could not move upon the evidence given to others only. That they might be assured that I should not go to Salt Lake to affiliate with them there. And finally, that if it should be made clear to me that it was my duty to cast the fortunes of my life and my labor with the work and the people that they were representing, I should without hesitation do it, but that I could not then do so. Upon this understanding we parted, Elder Gurley returning to report the result of their mission; Elder Briggs declining to accompany him home, for reasons known to himself; and I to my farmer's work. Elder Briggs stopped in the city and neighborhood for nearly a year, worked for me a part of the time, and returned at his leisure.—Church History vol. 3, pp. 259-263.

Here was an anomalous situation. Here was an important position, with no candidate to fill the vacancy. Men capable in every respect to lead a people hungering for a leader kept self in the background, and begged this man to take his father's place, because they knew it was his right by lineage. And this man, whose right by lineage it was, refused to move except as God directed him to move. From a human standpoint the situation is inconceivable. All other factions that arose at the death of Joseph Smith were headed by men drunk for power and emoluments, and hesitated not at all to assume the position of leadership, notwithstanding the law of the church governing in such matters. But here was a man and men who cared more for God's law than they did for personal advancement. They knew that it had been decreed that he who was to succeed in the prophetic office was to be ordained to teach the law contained in the revelations given through the one whom he was to succeed, and that which was true of the leader must be true of the people whom he was to lead on to final victory. Hence they were careful to keep within the law, not only so far as the doctrine of Christ pertaining to the salvation of men in ordinances and precepts, but they must be true to all the laws of the church, including the law of lineage. It is certain that these men were not anxious for place or power, but the interests of the cause of truth were their greatest consideration.

The Testing Age

By Poul S. Nielsen

That we are now living in the testing age is a fact that no one who is in the least observant can deny. In our daily lives, a farmer can not read any of his papers without running across some item or other wherein he is urged to test one thing or another. His cows must be tested for tuberculosis; his milk must be tested for butter fat; and if he sells it in the city, without doubt he will have it tested occasionally for purity also. The grain he sows in the ground he must be sure has a good germinating power, to insure its growth. In the schools, our children must take one test after another from the time they start as little tots until the day they quit school. In industry the cry is continually, Test; test!

No building is put up unless all the material that goes into it is tested for strength and durability. All the great roads now being built all over the United States are being tested—first the roadbuilding material, and next the finished road.

All Must Be Tested

The cry is everywhere, that we must be tested and tried, and whosoever can not stand the test must get out and give room for some one who can. This is not alone in our lives as workers in the world, but perhaps more so in the affairs of our church. True enough, the church is not going to pass anyone by who is trying to meet the test, but the time is drawing near when only those who are willing to do their very best shall be able to stand; or in other words, receive as great a blessing as they possibly can. In Malachi 3:2 it says: "But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fuller's soap."

A refiner of gold and silver will put his metals in a strong fire and thus burn out all the impurities in his metal. Of course, in this way he can tell whether or not there was any impure thing added to the metal. A fuller will put his soap on the cloth he is going to cleanse, and will thus remove whatsoever impurities might be on the cloth with which he is working.

He who is the Ruler over all of us is going to put us, as it were, in a refiner's fire, there to be purified and to remove all our imperfections, so that when we meet him face to face we shall be like the gold and silver that went through the fiery furnace: as pure as it is possible to be. The question is, How shall we be able to meet this test?

Meeting the Test

The only way for us to meet it is to prepare to give our very best in service for our church and the ideals it is championing; for if we do this we are working for almighty God, and need have no fear for the coming of Jesus Christ. Our lives might contain many things that are needed to be burned out. "If thy hand offend thee, cut it off" (Mark 9, 40), is without doubt not to be taken literally; but more likely means that if something or other stands between us and our heavenly Father it is better for us to cut it out altogether than to go on in our own foolish ways and thereby lose our salvation. For what gain would it be to us if we had all the riches of the whole world and could not save our own souls? No one can save his brother. All we can do is help him to see the way that leads to life everlasting; and surely all Latter Day Saints ought to be willing to help anyone to find the true light of Christ. There are two principal ways that we can warn our fellow man; first, by telling him of our church; second, by giving him the printed word about our church. In order to do the first, it is necessary to send out men to preach the gospel; and in order to do the second, it must be printed and then sent out to whosoever wants it.

The Test of the Missionary

To do both things it is very essential for the church to have some funds to pay those who leave their homes and families to bring the glad tidings to the world, and they must have tracts and books to use and give away, and sell at a reasonable price. A true missionary's worth can not be estimated in dollars and cents. He might baptize only a few, but who knows but perhaps one of those whom he has brought into the fold may prove to be the means of bringing many more into the church.

None of us ought to be ashamed to speak a good word for our church or what it stands for, and those who are holding office surely least of all. Yet it seems that some men are halfway afraid to own up that they are officers. Such things ought not be. If a society is worth loving enough to be baptized into it, surely it is worth while living up to its code. If we will only fight for what we love, life will be a whole lot easier, and so will death. If we are sure we are right, then is the time to stick to it, fight, and give our life if need be. It is nice enough to sit in an easy chair and read in church history of the hardships the pioneer Saints had to go through; or to read of our missionaries in foreign lands, far from home and loved ones. But do you think that if the time should come to you to go through what the founders of our faith did, that you could stand? Or would you take the easy way out of it and quit then and there? Or if the church should need you some other place beside where you now are, do you think you could stand the test? Or would you be like the refuse that the refiner throws out after he has saved the precious metal?

This is the preparing, or testing age, and let us all do our best to be as near pure as we can, so when the great Master comes we can be the gold and not the dross.

Preparation for Church Membership

By Cyril E. Wight

Lesson IV

PHILOSOPHY OF THE CHURCH

I. Introductory.

In this lesson, we shall consider Continuous Revelation as the starting point for the philosophy of the church. In presenting this subject to those contemplating membership, it should be kept in mind that revelation is of value only in so far as there is contributed something that will add to the religious life of the group. The mere fact of having revelation as a fundamental belief does not prove the divinity of our work. The real test is in the quality of the revealment which is accomplished through this process.

II. Revelation—Old and New.

- a. The present age brought to us a crystallized revelation from the past. This revelation brought the following contributions to the religious life of humanity.
  1. Belief in one God.
    - a. "I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage. Thou shalt have none other gods before me."—Deuteronomy 5: 6, 7.
  2. Belief in immortality.
    - a. "For I know that my Redeemer liveth and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth. And though after these skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God."—Job 19: 25, 26.
  3. Belief in spiritual rather than physical worship.
    - a. "For I desired mercy and not sacrifice, and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings."—Hosea 6: 6.
- b. Unfortunately for the continued spiritual direction of the race, there came a time when men were no longer able to correctly interpret the message of God. The light had gone out.

1. "For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep and hath closed your eyes. The prophets and your rulers, the seers hath he covered."—Isaiah 29: 10.
- c. Growing out of this condition, there developed a traditional attitude toward revelation, resulting in the belief prevalent at the opening of the nineteenth century that the canon of scripture was forever closed.
- d. The answer of those instrumental in the development of the latter-day cause was a challenge to this belief. This challenge may be classified as:
  1. A restatement of belief which had been lost in the traditional outgrowth of the centuries.
  2. A statement of new revelation, resting of course, upon the basic elements of truth presented in former revelation. (It is apparent that the believer in present-day revelation is committed to the idea of new and growing appreciation of the things of God, or else he must think of God merely as one who utters vain repetition. It is inconsistent to believe in continuous revelation and yet limit God to the thought forms and the idea molds of the past. This brings us at once to a consideration of present-day revelation.)

III. Contributions of Present-day Revelation.

- a. The value of present-day revelation shall be finally judged on the basis of the worthwhileness of the new ideas in molding a better type of Christian citizenship. On this basis it will be well to study the following leading contributions. Space does not permit a complete quoting of the passages referred to.
  1. Emphasis upon the development of man's thinking processes. "The glory of God is intelligence."—Doctrine and Covenants 90: 6.
  2. Statement of the law of indestructibility of matter, now recognized as scientifically correct. "The elements are eternal."—Doctrine and Covenants 90: 5.
  3. Law governing physical well being.—Doctrine and Covenants, section 86.
  4. Law of the conservation of energy.—Doctrine and Covenants 85: 2.
  5. Law of stewardship.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

The Unity We Already Have

In the quest for outward unity among the churches, it is easy to forget how deep an inner unity is already ours. It is easy, too, to overlook the fact that it is this underlying spiritual oneness which alone can give vital meaning to any united organization.

Most important of all, with all our different labels and special points of view, we all share the one priceless possession, that alone gives meaning to any of our organizations—the personality of Jesus Christ. No denomination claims, or can claim, any monopoly of Him.

What a common treasure we have also in the heritage of our devotional literature. It was Charles Wesley who wrote, "Jesus, lover of my soul," but Lutherans equally sing it; it was Martin Luther who wrote, "A mighty fortress is our God," but Methodists freely use this great historic hymn. A Presbyterian wrote, "O love that wilt not let me go," but who would describe it as simply a Presbyterian hymn? A Congregationalist wrote, "O Master, let me walk with thee," a Quaker, "Dear Lord and Father of mankind"—but both belong to the whole body of Christ's people. And when Walter Rauschenbusch, out of a fresh discovery of Christ, pours out his soul in "Prayers of the social awakening," or Joseph Fort Newton gives us the exquisite petitions of "The altar stairs," who would put them down as merely Baptist or Episcopal productions? When we reach the inmost aspirations of our hearts, we find no barriers between us.

In the field of Christian scholarship, no fences hem in whatever new insights anyone may gain. So similar are the deeper phases of our Christian experience that, when Bishop McConnell defends theism against the attacks of Harry Elmer Barnes, he speaks for no single group but for the whole Christian fellowship. When Canon Streeter writes "Reality," he reinforces the faith, not of Anglicans alone, but of countless men and women of every name.

And no denomination has an exclusive monopoly of Christian character. Indeed, it is an amazing thing that, if you mention the names of some of the great souls who have stirred the imagination of Christians all over the whole world, millions who clearly see in them the spirit of Christ could not guess to what denomination they belong. Grenfell, living as a doctor among fisher folk of Labrador who never knew before what a physician was; Kagawa, pouring out his life in the worst slums of Kobe and Osaka; Schweitzer, after winning world renown as a scholar, giving himself in the jungles to the Africans—who knows their respective denominations? And who cares?—for they all belong to the one family of the true servants of Christ.

And, at the deepest level of all, we all, whatever our church affiliations, have one common purpose, for the sake of which, in the last analysis, each denomination exists—the purpose of making Jesus Christ the Lord of all the life of all the world. In comparison with that, all the things that divide us are peripheral and secondary. And set over against that purpose, confronting all denominations alike, we see today portentous common foes—a new materialism in much of our philosophy, a new sensualism in literature and on the stage, a new secularism that assumes everything can be arranged without a thought of God, educational systems that are built up without the recognition of the Christian motive, industrial and international and interracial relations that try to get along without the Christian principle of love.

With such spiritual treasures as we have in common, who would isolate himself in any way from his fellow Christians? Who would not rejoice to work with them in every common task on the basis of the rich and indisputable unity that we already have?—Federal Council Bulletin, May, 1930.

Our English Brother

[The Manchester (England) Herald dated April 26, 1930, contains a biographical sketch of Elder G. W. Leggott which is interesting. The Herald appears to be characteristically conservative, and is not given to overdoing any personal sketch. For this reason there is added comfort in the splendid article of their "Who's Who" column.

The Saints' Herald congratulates our English brother and church officer on his success, and the English church on their good fortune in possessing such an exemplary leader.—EDITORS.]

The Life Story of G. W. Leggott

The life of Mr. George William Leggott, of "Brownlow House," North Road, Clayton, head of the firm of Messrs. G. W. Leggott and Son, Clayton Lane, Clayton, reads more like fiction than fact. It is indeed a case where truth is stranger than fiction. A native of Yorkshire, Mr. Leggott is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Leggott, humble Yorkshire folk who were farmers at Hemingborough. Mr. Leggott worked on the farm for a time, but yearning for bigger things, he decided to pay a visit to Manchester forty-nine years ago, to see his uncle. That visit proved the turning point in his life. Mr. Leggott's uncle at that time, held an important position with Messrs. Hardman and Holden, chemical manufacturers, Miles Platting, and he obtained a situation for his nephew. Tar distillation formed the principal subject of Mr. Leggott's studies, and so adept did he become at the task, that in a very short time he was put in charge of a tar distilling plant at the firm's Blackburn branch. Later, he took up a position with Messrs. F. C. Calvert and Co., Bradford, by which firm he was employed for twenty years.

This hardy son of Yorkshire was nothing if not ambitious, and longing to be independent, he decided to go into business on his own account as a general dealer and carrier. He took a small shed in Upper Dover Street, Bradford, and commenced with a small pony and an even smaller cart, which he used to drive himself. His early jobs included carting food and supplies from Manchester to the Clayton Vale Hospital. Gradually, the transport side claimed Mr. Leggott's increased attention. His first big contract was carting bricks for the erection of Bradford Baths. Then followed other contracts, including carting the debris from the Bradford Gasworks to the tip. By this time, he was compelled to increase his transport facilities, so he took the land on which his premises are built in Clayton Lane, and soon became the owner of a score of horses.

New and bigger contracts made Mr. Leggott turn his attention to mechanical road transport, horses being totally unfit for the heavy loads and long distances for which he was now called upon to contract, and he bought a steam wagon with which he experimented for a time. So satisfactory were the results that Mr. Leggott had the foresight to order several wagons of a similar type from Messrs. Mann, of Leeds, and he had the honor of being one of the first in the country to see the vast possibilities of road transport. Mr. Leggott's enterprise was reflected in the vast growth of his business interests, and now his firm possesses a fleet of over forty steam and petrol driven lorries and trailers, which are running daily to all parts of the kingdom.

Mr. Leggott's latest contracts include the removal of the whole of the excavated material from the site of the new Town Hall and Library extensions in Manchester, and supplying the material for the new road and bridge from the end of Princess Road to the Wythenshawe housing estate. Latterly, he has specialized in the supply of building materials of all descriptions.

There are few, if any, better known figures in the world of transport. Mr. Leggott is a trustee of the Horse and Motor Association, a member of the Commercial Motor Users' Association, and a director of the Lancashire Chamber of Transport. As an authority on road traffic matters, his services and experience are utilized to the full in the joint committee, appointed to remedy the congested traffic conditions of Manchester, of which he is a co-opted member. He is also a member of the Lancashire and Yorkshire area of the Roads and Bridges Committee, for which he has rendered valuable service.

Like so many other business men, Mr. Leggott has found a help and an inspiration in religious work. Though it may not be generally known, he is a fully licensed minister and is the spiritual head of the Gospel Hall, James Street, Bradford, the local branch of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints. Mr. Leggott was one of the founders of this religious institution locally and has seen it grow enormously during the past thirty-five years. The first meetings were held in a small dwelling house, and under Mr. Leggott's leadership, the branch has developed into the present handsome building in James Street, a well-appointed structure with accommodation for 500 people. Branches have sprung from the Bradford Church in such widely divergent spots as Australia, New Zealand, Columbia, and Canada. Mr. Leggott is held in high regard in his church, and is one of the presidents of the Northern District. He is a preacher of unusual power and eloquence and he has addressed congregations at local churches and Sunday schools of all denominations.

In social work, Clayton branches of many societies have found a generous supporter in Mr. Leggott. He is a member of the Clayton Lifeboat Guild, and the Clayton Conservative Club. As president of the Clayton Ratepayers' Association, he has been the means of hastening the provision of improved facilities of every description in the district. With the help of a splendid body of officials, Mr. Leggott leads the association from strength to strength. It was owing to the Association's efforts that a Maternity and Child Welfare Center was provided in Clayton. The diminution of the smoke nuisance and many other matters respecting the health and comfort of the people have been brought about by the association during Mr. Leggott's presidency. On two occasions, Mr. Leggott contested Bradford Ward at the City Council elections, but was unsuccessful.

Of late, ill health has prevented Mr. Leggott taking his usual prominent part in the affairs of the district, but he is as keen as ever he was on doing what he can to further the interests of Clayton and its people, and renders much valuable service in an unostentatious way.

The Church Program

After having heard a clear-cut and concise explanation of the church program and what the leaders are trying to get us to vision and help carry out in broader fields and greener pastures, the scales, as it were, fell from my eyes and the darkness vanished from my mind. For this I owe Brother Whiting my heartfelt gratitude.

To me heretofore the program appeared to be full of innovations to the true gospel of Christ as I had been taught it. But now as I see it we are working for the ideals our Master had, but we have widened the scope of our human activity.

I had sought different ones for an explanation of the present program, but none had been able to bring the soul-satisfying light that Brother Whiting conveyed to me upon his return from the Centennial Conference. Then, too, the fact that men and women, good, intelligent members, were leaving the church, members upon whom I had looked as pillars in the faith, disturbed me more than I can tell. Why was this? What was the matter? I had to know. I set to work reading everything I could on every side of the question.

I soon discovered that the different factions, though teaching many plain and precious truths, were not in full harmony with the teachings of the church books. Some of them had cut the head off the bride, and all she had for a head was a crown. What a strange creature the bride would be! Though she was the bride of a great prince with a beautiful crown decorated with twelve shining stars, she had no head on which to wear her ornament. Her hands also were cut off, and other portions of her being.

I sought the Lord many times in earnest supplication. I prayed for light, but nothing came. I am convinced now that it was God's purpose to make me properly sympathetic and understanding of my brothers and sisters in the same state of mind. I was not willingly blind, and indeed I suffered immeasurably. My own experience has taught me that there is not a stone that we should leave unturned to help those who are puzzled and uncertain come to a proper understanding of the conditions which exist. We should never answer them indifferently, or with cold look and treatment, but we should take them to the Lord in prayer and extend to them loving-kindness, which is a mighty weapon in the hands of those who work against the Adversary of the soul.

This morning I was meditating on the beautiful bride, the Lamb's wife to be, in her full form and beauty, with her perfect head, the Prophet and his two counselors, a perfect representative of the Godhead here on earth. What if prophets are spoken of? Haven't we had three at the head of his church in this age of the world? And what if the scriptures do speak of apostles first? They are a crown for her head, most beautiful and essential to any royal kingdom. Then the bride was given two beautiful arms, far-reaching in their power; the seventies. On those perfect arms were placed soft, delicate hands, the high priests after the order of the Son of God. These hands are strong as iron bands and take hold of the hearts and minds of those who seek for truth, and draw them into the body of the bride, that they may strengthen, sustain, and support her in every way. In return she will lift them to higher planes of righteousness, and they will become members of the royal family and joint heirs of the wealth of the glorious kingdom. In the bosom of this lovely bride God placed evangelists, patriarchs, and the remaining officers of the Melchisedec priesthood. Was she yet perfect? No, indeed. Strong limbs were necessary to support and hold her up before the world, and perfect feet to carry her forward and upward. These were given her in the form of Aaronic priesthood.

Is she perfect now? No; not until life enters that body, life controlled by the mighty forces of the Godhead given to the directing forces of the head of the bride, or the church on earth. For, say the Scriptures, surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secrets to his servants the prophets. Now is she perfect?

No; not quite. She must be clothed from head to foot with pure white robes of righteousness and shod with the sandals of eternal truth, to help her over the rugged roads of life beset with many pitfalls. These are cunningly covered over and made beautiful to entice the feet and divert the mind of the unwary from the straight and narrow way. These pitfalls are set by the Adversary and his agencies.

The crown also must be a righteous crown, not one picked up at the will of men and placed on any head, but one given through the directing forces of the Godhead to the directing forces of his church—the perfect bride.

RICH HILL, MISSOURI.

Portland, Oregon

East Seventy-sixth and Irving Streets

Elder Eli Bronson preached his farewell sermon Sunday evening, March 23, using as a text, "Give heed to the things you have heard lest for some reason they might slip." A large crowd was present, and though they regretted parting with Brother Bronson and his family after pleasant association with them for a period covering five years, they wished them success and happiness in their new field of labor.

A farewell party had been given them the previous week in the lower auditorium of the church. A large number of Saints gathered and forgetting for a time the occasion of the meeting, spent a pleasant time with songs and games. Delicious refreshments were served at a late hour.

Brother and Sister Bronson left March 24 for General Conference. Upon their return, Brother Bronson went immediately to his new mission in Los Angeles.

On Easter Sunday, Portland Saints witnessed a pretty wedding when Sister Ethel Larson and Brother Paul Hardy were united in marriage. Brother Harley Morris officiated in the ceremony. The young couple will make their home in Portland, and they have the sincere wishes of their many friends for a life of service and happiness. Both are faithful workers in the branch.

Brother and Sister De Spain left for Los Angeles, California, April 27. They will visit their children and other relatives there during the summer. We wish them a pleasant vacation and safe return.

Sister Ada Winters and son, Harold, remained in Independence for a visit with home folks after they had enjoyed the conference. Sister William Smith is enjoying a vacation visiting her daughter and husband, Brother and Sister H. L. Livingston, of Philadelphia. Sister Lively, Sister Edith Quick, and daughter, Lora, are home again after spending the winter in Independence, Missouri.

Brother and Sister Dan B. Sorden and daughter, Marilyn, have arrived in our midst and are busy with the duties of a pastor and family. We want to welcome this family to our city and church circle, and we anticipate many hours of pleasant association with them. An informal reception was given in the church auditorium immediately following a special business meeting the evening of May 6. This was planned in order that the Saints might have an early opportunity to meet Brother Sorden and his family.

Sacramental service was held the morning of May 4, the local priesthood presiding.

Tuesday, May 13, an officers' and teachers' meeting was held. Brother Sorden consented to teach a class each Sunday evening at seven o'clock for six weeks. He will teach on the subject "Religious education," using the outlines of President F. M. McDowell.

Saturday evening, May 17, a party given by the young people was enjoyed at the home of Sister Ethel Bronson, about twenty-five being present.

We are indeed happy to report the splendid condition of the branch. The priesthood are working in their capacity, each one having special families upon his visiting list for each week. Attendance in church school has reached and passed the one hundred goal. The midweek prayer service is well attended, and last week a one hundred per cent participation meeting was reported.

The sermon the morning of May 18 was by Elder D. B. Sorden, and the evening hour was assigned to Brother William Belcher of the State Boy Scouts. Brother Belcher spent the hour showing his moving pictures taken of different camps in his work, also the pictures he took while at conference and on the way home. Both meetings of the day were largely attended and much enjoyed.

Omaha, Nebraska

Central Branch, Thirty-sixth and Burt Streets

The Centennial Conference will ever live anew in the hearts and minds of those who were permitted to attend. Those who remained at home could not but catch the spirit of the times. Fired with the challenge of the new century, we all press forward.

We remember the earnest and persistent efforts of Sister Audentia Anderson in training those of the Council Bluffs, South Omaha, and Omaha Branches, who participated in the oratorio. Omaha is proud to claim as hers, Sister Nell Kelley, who was the soprano soloist in the Oratorio on Monday evening.

During the time Pastor J. L. Cooper was at conference, Elder David Lewis was in charge of branch affairs. On April 12 he was called to preach the funeral sermon of Sister Mary Black. This sister was over eighty years old, and during the last few months of her life suffered with an incurable malady.

By Easter most of the conference attendants had returned. The church was decorated with greens and Easter lilies, and at the Sunday school hour we were entertained with recitations, musical numbers, and Brother Lewis brought the lesson of Lazarus who was raised from the dead. Hope and vision for the coming days and the year ahead can be ours if we can but catch the hope of immortality that is portrayed in the resurrection of Jesus, said Brother Cooper in his Easter sermon.

April 27 the adopted child of Brother and Sister Edward Larsen was blessed by Elders C. T. Self and David Lewis. This date marked the arrival of Brother Blair Jensen in Omaha Branch. He is our new pastor. Brother Jensen was the speaker at the morning and evening services, and brought two splendid messages, "Strengthening our arm for the coming century," and "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward."

A short business meeting, with a reception following in honor of the new General Conference appointee, Brother Blair Jensen, occurred Wednesday evening, April 30. Apostle F. Henry Edwards was in charge of the business session, and we enjoyed his pleasant, "Thank you," given to each one taking part in the general routine of business. Pastor Cooper's resignation, which contained words of comfort and blessing was accepted, and also, the recommendation of the Joint Council and First Presidency, that we accept as pastor and Branch president, Brother Blair Jensen. At the reception which followed, the Women's Department served ice cream and cake. Other guests of the evening were:

Sister F. Henry Edwards and small son, Sister Doris Oakman, of London, England, who motored up with the Edwards's, and Brother C. A. Cress, the new missionary to Northeastern Nebraska District.

The evening of May 1 we were very fortunate to have Apostle P. M. Hanson give his illustrated lecture on his recent trip to Mexico and Central America.

The sacramental service May 4 was well attended. The meeting was in charge of Elders J. L. Cooper, R. W. Scott, J. W. Rushton, and Blair Jensen. Apostle Paul M. Hanson voiced the prayer of the morning for the congregation. A beautiful anthem by the choir made a pleasing setting for the sermon that evening by Elder John W. Rushton. Peace, the ultimate essential of which is harmony within ourselves, was the dominant thought of the evening. Apostle J. F. Garver was a guest at this service.

Bright and early the morning of May 6 Brother Cooper left for his new field in Kirtland, Ohio. Sister Cooper and John Francis will remain in Omaha until school is out in June. After having this worthy family with us for four years, it is with no small degree of sadness that we see them leave for other fields. Nevertheless our best wishes go with them in their work, and we shall strive to put into practice many of the instructions and suggestions they have given us.

Mother's Day was observed by the Sunday school with a fitting program. Two well-prepared talks were given by Sisters Grace Thiehoff and Verda Bryant, and a beautiful solo by Sister Nell Kelley climaxed the program as the service merged into the morning worship hour. At this time, Brother R. W. Scott and Sister Lois Francis sang pleasing Mother's Day solos. Pastor Jensen, in his sermon of the morning, enlightened us with the thought that the kingdom of heaven will be established on this earth when love, such as our mothers have for us, shall motivate our actions toward our fellow men, Elder C. T. Self was the evening speaker.

Sister Blair Jensen and small daughter, Carol, who have been visiting Brother Jensen's parents in Iowa since conference, were in Omaha the week-end of May 10.

Long Beach, California

May 16.—A thorough redecorating of the church in Long Beach started the new year. The walls were given a new coat of paint, and the floor was covered with a new carpet, giving it a very cheerful appearance.

Shortly after the first of the year, we enjoyed a series of Sunday night sermons by Brother John F. Martin who preached to a large congregation which included many strangers. Some of these are interested, and we expect to see them enter the church soon. Brother Martin's sermons are always inspiring. The members of Southern California District are going to miss Brother and Sister Martin, for they are loved by old and young.

Elder Horahitu, of the South Sea Islands, stopped in Long Beach on his way to General Conference and presented a good sermon which was interpreted by Elder Yager, missionary to the islands. They sang a song in the native tongue assisted by Sister Yager.

The young people, as well as some of the older members, went in a body to Brea, California, and visited Sister Marietta Walker on her ninety sixth birthday. They sang several hymns among them "The old, old path." She enjoyed the visit and seemed to be feeling fine, but she passed away April 12, and news of her death was sent to the General Conference and throughout the church. From Brea, the young people went to Balboa Newport and visited Sister Butterfield who has been sick for some time. They concluded their trip with songs and prayer on the beach.

Easter morning found Long Beach Saints gathered for a sunrise service on the beautiful Pala Verdes hills, high above the clouds, and although the morning was foggy and chilly and heavy with clouds all around and below, the sun as it arose shone full upon the worshipers. Those who were there will never forget the beauty of it and the wonderful spirit present.

Long Beach Branch is growing. New members are being rapidly added, and soon we must look for larger quarters. Among the recent baptisms was that of Sister Beth Leibold. She has been an active worker in and friend of the church for the past three years.

The local was happy to welcome home those who attended General Conference. They brought many glad tidings of good things they had heard and seen in the center place.

The departments of Long Beach Branch are not to be overlooked. The Recreation and Expression hour which is conducted on Friday night is proving very successful under the direction of our young brother, Leo Pendarvis. The programs are well worth commenting upon, and the whole branch is to be commended on the way it responds when called upon to help on the program. We have an active group of young people in the Sunday school as well as the Religio.

Last Wednesday evening we were pleasantly surprised to have present friends from Australia on their way home from General Conference. Instead of the regular order of prayer meeting, a good sermon was given by one of their number.

Salt Lake City, Utah

336 South Fourth, East

May 20.—All the Saints of Salt Lake City who attended the General Conference are enthusiastic in their praise of its benefits. It is hard, indeed, to choose what impressed them most. Several of the delegates gave their impressions to the Saints, and it seems to be the consensus of opinion that the desire of the visitors to study our problems, and their ambition to work and pray that our long-deferred hopes may soon be realized, must bring results.

The Mother's Day program was very good and well attended. Young and old participated to make it a success, and the carnations and other flowers gladdened our hearts. A correspondent in one of the local papers suggested that there is altogether too much sadness on Mother's Day, and I think the point is well taken. Surely our mothers who have passed to their reward would wish us to be happy and have joyous memories of them and our association with them.

The young women of the Temple Builders chapter arranged a fine banquet for their mothers for Friday night, May 9. They report a wonderful time. There were appropriate speeches and songs during the banquet followed by a nice program. The writer can testify to the good chicken supper as he was remembered with a full plate including ice cream and cakes.

Today, I had the pleasure of baptizing Brother Frank Nogle, but this pleasure is tempered with sadness; Brother Nogle with his excellent family is leaving our midst tomorrow and starting for Missouri. His wife and daughters and a granddaughter were baptized from another church less than a year ago. By their zeal and helpfulness they have endeared themselves to us, and it seems they have become almost indispensable to our work here. Brother Nogle and family came to Salt Lake City many years ago as members of another church, but were sorely disappointed at conditions here. They feel now that they have at last received what they thought they were receiving then, back in Michigan, and they are very happy. While we deeply regret their going from us, we know it is best, as their opportunities will be much greater to learn to be useful. We heartily recommend them to the Saints wherever they may locate. Brother Nogle has sold his small farm and will look for a satisfactory home in Zion. Last night a farewell party was tendered them, and they were wished Godspeed.

Among the many visitors we have enjoyed since conference was Elder Carl Greene from Germany. He has relatives and friends in this city as he was once a missionary for the Utah Church. He gave us a week of sermons and, we think, did a great amount of good.

Tomorrow night we have the pleasure of having Elder R. D. Weaver with us. We are to have meetings with him two evenings before he leaves for his mission field in California. These visits from the missionaries and others are much appreciated, and we hope for many more.

We are hopeful for a successful year of church work, and with the enthusiastic workers here to help surely we will realize our hopes.

Graceland Chats

Memorial Service for Bishop Kelley

For the second time since conference, a pause was made in the rush of school life of Graceland in memory of one who had passed to his reward. On Monday afternoon, May 12, the students, faculty, and friends from Lamoni gathered in the chapel to pay tribute to the memory of Bishop E. L. Kelley, who had long been a true and loyal supporter of the college.

Miss Vivian Castings played while the A Cappella Choir filed to their seats. The chorus then sang "Lead kindly Light." Following the music, Elder R. A. Cheville read two memorial poems. The chorus sang "Father, when in love to Thee," and Elder Wilber Prall addressed the audience. In simple language he traced through Bishop Kelley's life and pointed out the many ways in which he had been of service to the church and to Graceland College. It was only through Brother Kelley's untiring efforts and his refusal to close the school that the doors of the school remained open. After the conference had voted to discontinue the institution, Bishop Kelley on his own personal note raised money to keep it going. The church owes thanks to him for this act as today the fruits of this school are shown throughout the church.

Following the words by Brother Prall, the chorus sang "Blest be the tie." While the piano played softly, Roy Cheville offered a prayer of appreciation in memoriam of Bishop Kelley, and the chorus responded. Many of the students there dedicated themselves to the task of continuing the work of the future from the place where the hands of Bishop Kelley had laid it down.

Mrs. Etzenhouser Speaks at Graceland

Mrs. Etzenhouser came to a Graceland body that knew and admired her. Theirs had been the privilege of hearing her course of lectures on "Preparation for marriage and parenthood" at the Centennial Conference, and they were quick to avail themselves of the added opportunity to hear what further she might have to say.

Nor were they disappointed. She came, she spoke, and Graceland listened. The topic she chose to speak on was "Petting." Her direct, unoffending manner of approach was conducive to a favorable reception. As usual, Mrs. Etzenhouser's humor and fund of interesting anecdotes livened the atmosphere. Chief among the stories she tells is the thick gravy story. Her advice is to feed a man what he wants, when he wants it, and the way he wants it. Warm should be her place in the hearts of men.

When she approached the heart of her topic, she talked earnestly and feelingly, admonishing against promiscuous petting. She spoke of the Graceland romances and imparted the cheering information that out of all the Graceland marriages only two or three have ended in divorce.

So high is the regard Graceland feels for Mrs. Etzenhouser that whenever she returns to talk to us again, we will be eager and anxious to greet her and listen to what she has to say.

Engineers' Trip

Thursday afternoon found thirteen Graceland Engineers and their sponsor, Doctor Roy H. Mortimore, headed towards Ames, on their annual engineers' trip. Camp was made about twenty miles outside of Ames the first evening. The new appointee, Delmar Goode, showed his ability by satisfying the unusually good appetites. Before turning in, all the fearless took a good swim in the near-by stream. That was nearly a sleepless night, as all were awake, either tending the fire or forecasting cloudbursts. The next day was spent in the general inspection of the beautiful campus and its buildings of Iowa State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts. Those of special interest to all engineers were the machine shop, the iron foundry, and the chemical and engineering laboratories. The homeward journey was made Saturday morning in the rain.

There is no doubt but that all who took the trip felt well repaid, not only because of the outing, but also because of the value of the practical knowledge received.

Annual Gym Show

The annual girls' gym show Friday evening, May 9, was, like its predecessors, tremendously successful.

The show started with a splendid bit of marching, the girls keeping perfect time with the music. The zigzags and star formation made beautiful effects on the floor. This was followed by a remarkable exhibition of what the girls can do with Indian clubs. It was a clever bit of work and, judging by the applause it received, was well appreciated. Again the girls exhibited their versatility, this time with wands, a flashing spectacle of old gold and blue. Next came the tumblers and flipflops, headstands, cart wheels, and as a climax, three difficult pyramids.

After an intermission, the scene of activity changed from the gym floor to the stage. Three scenes, beautiful in setting and graceful in execution, were received with enthusiasm. The first scene was laid in Old Seville with its bright Spanish coloring and soft music. The second was descriptive of a snowfall, the white costumes and falling snowflakes making a beautiful setting in the subdued lights. The closing scene was a lively musical comedy number.

Mrs. Gilbert, better known as "Frankie," has labored long and earnestly through the winter, training the girls in their various acts for the show. Appreciation of her work was in a measure expressed by the presentation of a huge bouquet of roses.

The College Declamatory Contest

A heavy downpour of rain could not squelch the enthusiasm that was shown by Lamonians and Gracelanders at the college declamatory contest Saturday night at the Brick Church. It was an unusually interesting contest, with the participants well balanced as to performance and selection.

The contest was divided into three sections—oratorical, dramatic, and humorous. The winners were as follows: Oratorical section, (1) Max White with "What think ye of Christ?" (2) Frank Parsons with "The blundering giant," (3) Raymond Troyer with "The keys to success;" dramatic section, (1) Ross Cole with "The bishop's candlesticks," (2) Mildred Topham with "Jean Val Jean," (3) Lila Emmerson with "Laddie"; humorous section, (1) Iona Goodwin with "At the theatre," (2) Harold Wall with "Tommy Stearns scrubs up," (3) Alice Parsons with "One o'clock in the A. M."

First over all was won by Ross Cole, with his strong dramatic reading "The bishop's candlesticks." His characterization was outstanding. This gave the Niketes Literary Society the declamatory contest banner.

Between divisions of the contest, musical numbers were given by Vivian Castings, Lois Garver, and Arthur Oakman. MARGARET WILLIAMS.

South Woods Prayer Meeting

Last Wednesday evening the usual prayer meeting time found a long procession of college students headed for the South Woods. There seemed to be something quite different from the atmosphere of regular outings to the woods.

When all were seated around the glowing coals of a camp fire, "Uncle Roy" told them that when the experiment of a South Woods prayer meeting was first announced a few years ago, some expected something quite different from the reverent atmosphere of chapel meetings; but now it is looked upon as one of the most inspiring services of the year.

After singing a few familiar hymns, Uncle Roy announced the theme of the evening—"Moments of consequence." He reminded the worshipers that at the first meeting this year all were looking forward to the happenings of the year. Now, deep in retrospection, all were thinking some of the really meaningful moments of the almost past school year—a conversation with a friend, an inspirational meeting, some inspirational moments alone in our room or out in the surroundings of nature—those experiences which really mean the most in the year's work at college.

That the theme struck a responsive chord was evident by the number who spoke. After two hours it was necessary to close the meeting, and as they departed all realized that this meeting would be a real "Moment of Consequence" to them.

On class day the graduates are the guests and entertainers. They leave their will, history, and traditions to the oncoming sophomores. The Graceland queen is crowned, and the program is presented before her. The queen and prince of coronation are chosen from the graduating class and are attended by those from other classes. Those chosen this year are Anne Morgan, Seymour, Iowa, queen, and Marion Langton, Lawton, North Dakota, "G" prince, with Dorothy Springer, Perry, Iowa, and Richard Anderson, Lamoni, principal attendants. From the freshman class were chosen Daisy Black, Stewartville, Missouri, Vivian Castings, Des Moines, Frank Parsons, Max, Nebraska, and Charles Young, Woodbine, Iowa. From the juniors were selected Verna Schaar, Lake Orion, Michigan, and Delmar Goode, Independence, Missouri. From the special students were elected Carolyn Miller, Long Beach, California, and Donald Chesworth, Fall River, Massachusetts.

Friday, June 6, is a momentous day and is scheduled to the full. Honors Chapel is to be held at Zimmermann Hall at 9:30 in the morning. A campus lunch will be served at twelve. We always expect lots of sandwiches, juicy, savory baked beans, colorful salad, and cooling ice cream. It is a combination that has never been equaled. At 2.30 the girls' dormitory will be formally dedicated as Walker Hall by F. M. Smith, and commencement exercises are to be held at the Brick Church in the evening.

To the average freshman the merrymakings which mark the close of the year have only a vague meaning, but to the sophomores they go deeper than that. Whether we are entirely conscious of it or not, these festivities are only a brave attempt to hide the sadness of parting behind a mask of smiles.

Lambda Delta Sigma Elects

At the last regular meeting of the Alpha Chapter of the Lambda Delta Sigma Society, officers for the year 1930-31 were elected. They are the following: Charlotte Condit, president; Morris Mortimore, vice president; and Anna Lynn Van Skyke, secretary-treasurer. The greater part of the evening was spent in listening to a report given by a committee for investigating possibilities for a Graceland Alumni Association. The committee was headed by Mr. Bergman, and those giving reports were Miss Tess Morgan, Anna Lynn Van Skyke, Harriet Jordan, and Iris Butts.

Next week the new members of the Lambda Delta Sigma will be named. This election is based upon a point system of scholarship and attainment in extra-curricular activities.

Reception at Walker Hall

Saturday afternoon I stood in our lovely reception room watching the ladies of the Patroness Society and the Booster Club as they entered and were received by the dean, Miss Morgan, Mrs. C. F. Smith, instigator of the mother-daughter movement, and the house officers; Ferne Roberson, Anne Morgan, Alice Chappelow, Helen Stover, and Alice Parsons. The girls looked lovely in their dainty afternoon frocks as they went to and from the tea table where tea, macaroons, date bars, nuts, and mints were served. During the afternoon Fae Aelick sang, accompanied at the piano by Delta Friend. Dorothy Elliott gave a group of readings in her usual pleasing manner. Later we were entertained with a piano solo by Vivian Castings and a humorous reading by Iona Goodwin.

After the ladies had all left, groups of girls collected around the room discussing the advantages we were deriving from our new dormitory, and every girl seemed to realize how much the women of Lamoni have contributed to our happiness this year.

OLIVE WINEGAR.

Tennis Team

The Graceland tennis team has had a very successful season, winning four out of six matches. The only team which defeated them was Iowa Wesleyan, conference champions of Iowa. The colleges which Graceland defeated were, Simpson twice, 6-0, 5-1; Penn, 3-1, and Missouri Wesleyan, 5-0. Iowa Wesleyan beat Graceland twice with scores of 2-1, 2-1. There still remain two more matches, one with Albia Junior College and a return match with Missouri Wesleyan, which will make eight meets in all for this season. This is a full schedule, considering that there was only six weeks' time for all these meets.

This is the seventh year of varsity tennis at Graceland, and the interest in this sport is increasing each year. With the competition of other colleges, tennis along with the other competitive sports is holding its place.

The varsity team is composed of five men: Bud Fisher, Boston, Massachusetts; Brand Banker, Lamoni, Iowa; LeRoy Dick, Traverse City, Michigan; Richard Wildermuth, Plano, Illinois; and Myron Fisher, Boston, Massachusetts.

Independence

Stone Church

Sunday morning at the Stone Church was celebrated as baccalaureate service for the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences. George Anway contributed his interpretation of "The voice in the wilderness"; the choir sang a beautiful hymn, unaccompanied; and Colin Ferrett sang "How lovely are thy dwellings."

The baccalaureate address was delivered by President Floyd M. McDowell, who found his subject in the text, "But desire earnestly the best gifts." He emphasized the place of desire and its power in the lives of individuals and peoples, of businesses and institutions, and made its importance basic. Illustrations were made of the quality of literature found in the news stands and book stores; of the pictures and dramas presented in the playhouses; of the amusements and entertainments of society—results of desire they are. He dramatically asked, What could six thousand Latter Day Saints located in Independence do if they desired and demanded only the very best it is possible for them to conceive? That demand would be met as every other united public demand is, and the influence would be incalculable.

The graduating class consisted of eleven young men and women who had finished the high school course prescribed by the State of Missouri at the Institute of Arts and Sciences, and furnished a striking illustration of what can be accomplished by those who miss the opportunity to study in the regular public schools but who are willing to sacrifice amusement and pleasure because they earnestly desire the best there is to be had.

Pastor John F. Sheehy, in keeping with the season, gave to the intermediates at their eleven o'clock service a commencement talk on the beatitude: "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled." This he associated with the theme of the month, "Happiness."

At the close of the sermonet a cantata was given by five junior members from the Campus: Don Lewis, Evelyn Burgess, Leroy Huggett, Alice Elaine Hoisington, and Florence Burgess. Sister Alice Mae Burgess directed, and Sister Bertha Burgess was at the piano.

Large attendance marked this meeting, which was the last of the eleven o'clock intermediate services until September.

Stone Church Saints spent Sunday evening with Miss Helen May Martin, of Kansas, listening to her message of music. Although deaf and blind, Miss Martin is an accomplished pianist, and, assisted by her mother, Mrs. Helen Martin, she has presented programs in the larger churches of Chicago, Cincinnati, and Dallas, also in colleges, high schools, grade schools, and clubs.

As her first number, Miss Martin played C Minor Prelude by Chopin, a performance outstanding for its brilliance and appeal. Compositions by MacDowell followed, and then the musician gave her favorite number, "The moonlight sonata," by Beethoven, the first movement. She plays only classical music, and her concerts have been highly praised by musical critics in numbers of large cities. Of her, Ignaz Paderewski said: "You are the most wonderful girl in the world; your teacher has accomplished a marvelous wonder."

The program Sunday evening was under the auspices of the Independence Music Club and was open for the public. Demonstrations of teaching the deaf and the blind were given by the pianist and her mother. A silver collection was taken by members of the Music Club.

Miss Martin and her mother were introduced by Sister Israel A. Smith, president of the Music Club. And at the close of the hour Patriarch J. T. Gresty was called forward and presented to the guest musician. He warmly praised the performance of Miss Martin.

Assisting in the evening's program were Margaret Gard, contralto soloist and Robert Miller, organist.

Among the People in Zion

The evening of May 22 William Chrisman High School, of Independence, presented diplomas of graduation to a class of one hundred and seventy-one seniors. Commencement exercises were held in the Memorial Building, the address being by Judge Merrill E. Otis of the Federal Court in Kansas City. The baccalaureate sermon was given Sunday afternoon, May 18, by Doctor Raphael Miller, pastor of the Independence Boulevard Church, Kansas City.

Last year's senior class was composed of one hundred and forty-one members.

The following are young Latter Day Saints who graduated from William Chrisman as members of the class of 1930: Fern Andes, John Barrett, Joe Benson, Doris Blake, Acil Blodgett, LaRena Bullard, Rachel Bullard, Merton Cadwell, David Cole, Edna Cox, Gladys Cox, Carwin Criley, Verva Crull, Kenneth Curtis, Olive Curtis, Robert DeTray, Hale Dexter, Phyllis Dobson, Merrill Etzenhouser, Muriel Farrell, Emlyn Fender, Herbert Ferrie, Milton Gold, Louise Griffin, Charles Hall, Helen Hall, Harry Hartman, Inez Hartman, Bettie Hefflon, Wanda Holman, George Hulmes, Ruth Kerlin, Sara King, Doris Long, June Marie Lukens, Richard Maloney, Richard May, Ina McCord, Dayton McPherson, Nora Moore, Maurine Nace, Mary Nigh, Merle Quick, Howard Reese, Vaughny Reese, Frank Sadler, Howard Sheehy, Pauline Sheldon, Wanda Skinner, Alma James Smith, Elizabeth Smith, Kathleen Snead, Vida Stonger, Wayne Tucker, Edmund White, and Douglas Wright.

Election of officers in the White Masque Players was held Monday night of last week at the Wahdemna Choral Club rooms. The results are: Louise Jennings, president; Dorothy Carmichael, vice president; Pearl Gardner, secretary; Beatrice McNamara, treasurer; Leonard Lea, literary critic; Marcine Smith, membership chairman; and Gladys Newton Six, dramatic director. Refreshments were served by the committee consisting of Rosamond Smith, chairman, Allegra Luff, Hortense Dempsey, Kathryn Haberlein, Reginald Smith, and Stanley Withee. More than sixty members of the club are assisting in the production of the Passion Play by the Freiburg Players in Kansas City. Plans are under way for the annual White Masque party, which will probably occur in June.

Doctor and Sister Joseph Luff celebrated their fifty-seventh wedding anniversary at their home Saturday, May 24, with a family gathering and visits from many friends. They were married May 24, 1873, at Toronto, Canada, and have made Independence their home since 1879. Brother Luff has enjoyed a career of considerable attraction and variety. For a number of years he was a member of the Quorum of Twelve and church physician, and in addition to this he has written books, composed hymns, and built houses. The couple are widely known throughout the church and count for themselves many friends. They are the parents of three daughters and two sons all of whom live in Independence: Sister W. J. Bullard, Sister S. J. Preston, Sister E. B. Dooley, J. J. Luff, and Alma C. Luff.

Miss Lillian Farrell, daughter of Elder and Sister Ralph W. Farrell, of Independence, became the bride of Orville Martin, son of Brother and Sister W. F. Martin, also of Independence, May 9, 1930, Judge George F. Roach, of Kansas City, officiating. The ceremony occurred in Kansas City. The bride at the time of her marriage was in her second year of the Independence Sanitarium School of Nursing, and the bridegroom is an active member of the Wahdemna Choral Club. Both are graduates of the William Chrisman High School.

Warren E. Peak, jr., the only son of Warren E. Peak, sr., and Sister Mary S. Peak, passed away May 23, 1930, at Kansas City, Missouri, and the funeral services were held at the Stone Church Sunday afternoon. The sermon was by Patriarch F. A. Smith, and interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. The deceased was baptized a member of the church when he was eight years old, his father officiating. He attended William Chrisman High School for three years and graduated from Lamoni, Iowa. Took electrical engineering at the State Manual Training College in Pittsburg, Kansas, and Junior College in Kansas City. At the time of his death he was a Western Union telegraph operator in Kansas City. He received his air pilot's license last October and expected soon to take up flying. His death followed an operation at Saint Joseph's Hospital, in Kansas City. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Connie Peak, one son, father, mother, two sisters, and other relatives and friends.

Second Church

Members of Second Independence Branch were privileged to hear two of the church's apostles Sunday, May 18. At the eleven o'clock service Apostle J. F. Curtis spoke. Brother Curtis is quite a favorite at Second Branch, and attendance and interest were good. In the evening Apostle Paul M. Hanson was the speaker. His sermon, like that of Brother Curtis, was appreciated. The early morning prayer meeting and the junior service were normally attended.

May 25, a beautiful day, brought many Saints to God's house to worship. The church school service from 9.30 until twelve o'clock was one of spiritual devotion. Soft music before the opening of Sunday school created a worshipful atmosphere which remained through the class period and the service which followed. There was no confusion as the juniors and older primaries filled the main room, and the service changed from class study to church worship.

The church school plan has only recently been introduced into Second Branch. Its principal advantage is in that it preserves the spirit of worship which might be lost to some extent by a definite break between the two services. Brother G. G. Lewis was announced as the evening speaker.

One of Brother A. K. Dillee's "talks" followed, a pastoral sermon deeply appreciated by the congregation. The text of his sermon, "Let us give flowers before the funeral," was "Be ye kind, one to another." The value of an expression of appreciation and the encouragement it always brings was given emphasis. The following poem which he read was written by a member of the congregation:

When we find a friend in trouble,
Caught in life's dark stream—
We can all his faith redouble,
Bring back each bright dream.
Words of praise and courage spoken
Help to heal a heart that's broken,
Yet we oft withhold this token
Of our real esteem;
And we pass him by in haste
Lest a moment's time we waste.

Let us break this voiceless fetter;
Speak their praises now,
Time and place could not be better;
Let us make a vow
That we'll bring the flowers to them
While they still are here to view them,
For their good deeds now.
Scorn excuses, scorn delay,
Speak that kind word now, today!

Walnut Park

Sunday, May 18, the speakers at Walnut Park were Elder W. W. Scott in the morning and Bishop B. J. Scott in the evening. On May 25 the morning speaker was Elder C. K. Green and the evening speaker Elder C. Ed. Miller, who gave an illustrated lecture on the Society Islands.

A young people's jamboree for members of the young people's division of the church school was held Saturday afternoon and evening at the farm of Brother and Sister Samuel C. Smith. The afternoon was enjoyably spent in games and recreation, so that when the six o'clock hour arrived all were ready for the picnic dinner. This dinner was well prepared, and the hungry young people did justice to everything that was set before them. A bonfire closed the activities of the day, and all went home feeling that they had indeed had an enjoyable time.

On Sunday afternoon occurred the regular monthly priesthood meeting in the church. Bishop Eastwood and his counselor, T. A. Beck, were the special speakers of the afternoon, giving an outline of the work that is before the priesthood in matters of finance for the current year. An interesting discussion followed which resulted in the edification of all those present. The priesthood of Walnut Park appreciate the counsel and help of our local bishops.

The Walnut Park congregation was saddened by the death of Sister Mary Jenkins, who died on Thursday, May 22, and whose funeral was held at the church on Saturday afternoon. Elder C. K. Green preached the funeral sermon.

Holden

Brother F. A. McWethy was injured quite seriously last week by a freight train which struck his car. He was taken to the Independence Sanitarium, where an X ray showed a broken arm. There were also internal injuries. Brother McWethy has been counselor to the president of the stake since its organization. He has done faithful service both at Holden and in the stake. We are glad to report that he is recovering.

Sunday, May 4, sacramental service was well attended, and a good spirit prevailed. The stake high council and stake bishopric who were in Holden for conference with the stake presidency attended. At noon they with their wives and families had lunch together in the cottage annex.

Sister Bernice Hampton has been elected to teach in a rural school near here. She was also offered a place in the Holden school after she had been chosen for the rural school.

Sunday, May 11, a short Mother's Day Program was given preceding the annual business meeting. Members of the stake presidency were chosen pastors. The new organization for religious education was approved, and the present corps of officers was sustained, subject to such changes as the new system requires. At the resignation of Brother Robert Dillon as superintendent of the Sunday school, C. F. Scarcliff was chosen temporary superintendent. Because she is moving to Atherton, Sister Gladys Beebe resigned as superintendent of the primary department, and Sister Roy Kleckler was elected. Sister Floy McWethy was chosen head of the department of music; Sister Myrtle Carr, church pianist; and Sister Anna Hazelbeck, auditor.

Sister Arline Shimel has been elected to teach in one of the intermediate grades of the Grandview, Missouri, public schools.

Brother George Hiles and family, from Texas, have been visiting in the home of Sister Hiles's brother, F. A. McWethy, since General Conference.

Brother Perry Hiles, of Independence, was with us Sunday. It seems good to see former workers back again.

Brother George Beebe and family moved recently to Atherton to one of the stewardship farms. Their daughter, Gladys, will teach in a rural school there next year. We wish them all success.

No church services were held Sunday night or Wednesday night because of the baccalaureate sermon and commencement exercises. We are proud of our five boys and girls who were graduated. They are: Mary Beebe, John Beebe, Myrtle Carr, Arlyne Lovell, and Richard Macrae. Besides doing good school work, these five have been outstanding in music, athletics, and literary work.

The following have recently moved to the Holden group: W. K. Gard, H. O. Petre, Jess Ogelive, and Brother Spillman.

Central Church

The stake conference the business meeting of which occurred Friday, May 16, at 7.45 in the evening, with devotional services all day Sunday, May 18, has ushered in a new epoch of activity for the stake. Virtually a new order of departmental work has been provided for, together with a newly pledged corps of officials to minister and care for the work. The action of the late General Conference placing all work known heretofore as Sunday school, Religio, Women's Department, boys' department, girls' department, and kindred activities under one head, the Department of Religious Education, was adopted by the stake and is to be adopted by the local churches as speedily as conditions will permit. However, the latter are counseled to proceed cautiously in making the change.

The business meeting was in charge of the stake presidency, Elders Cyril E. Wight, Seth S. Sandy, and Charles D. Jellings. The opening prayer was by Brother Jellings. Minutes of the former meeting were read by the secretary, Sister Maude Gunsolley, and approved. The financial report of Bishop C. A. Skinner from November 1, 1928, showed total receipts of $23,557.17, and disbursements amounting to $22,984.34, leaving a balance on hand of $572.83. The recorder, Sister Maude Gunsolley, reported present membership of 2,653, with no baptisms. The report of Elder W. S. Brown, reporter and historian, was read, also reports from Evan Fry of the music department; Sister Blanche Greene, girls' department; Elder W. O. Hands, boys' department (five troops); O. B. K.'s having an enrollment of 661. A report from the Kansas Religious Day Schools showed a membership of 12,500 which included 210 at Malvern Hill, 73 at Grandview, and 14 at Argentine, a total of 297. Ministerial reports were read from Ammon White, the elders' quorum, and stake missionaries.

Elder H. A. Higgins, pastor of Quindaro Church, was elected a member of the stake high council. L. C. Connelly was recommended to the office of elder, and provision was made for his ordination. Action was taken to discontinue the Stark Acres Church. The resignation of Seth S. Sandy as counselor to the stake president was accepted, and his call as counselor to Bishop C. A. Skinner was accepted. The call of Elder George Mesley as counselor to the stake president was approved and the ordination provided for. Brother Mesley was also elected director of religious education.

Action was taken to sustain the stake presidency, Cyril E. Wight, Charles D. Jellings, and George Mesley, also the stake bishopric: C. A. Skinner, F. S. Anderson, and S. S. Sandy; the High Council composed of ten men: Harvey Sandy, J. O. Worden, C. A. Selbe, R. L. Bishop, R. E. Browne, J. A. Harrington, L. W. Hayes, J. H. Paxton, E. N. Palmer, and H. A. Higgins; and the stake missionaries: H. H. Sevy, and G. T. Richards. Sister Blanche Greene was elected supervisor of girls; W. O. Hands, supervisor of boys; Evan A. Fry, head of music department; Maude Gunsolley, secretary and recorder; W. S. Brown, reporter and historian. The new work of these officers commences July 1. A rising vote of thanks for past services was given to Elders Ammon White and H. A. Koehler, Sister C. C. Babb, Robert Crayne, Sister Fern Lloyd, and S. S. Sandy.

A happy arrangement was effected contracting with

KMBC, the Midland Broadcast Central Company, the broadcasting of a program from Central Church from ten to eleven o'clock each Sunday night for two months.

Conference Sunday, May 18, opened with Sunday school at ten o'clock and proceeded to a sermon at eleven o'clock and dinner at one. The elders' quorum met at 1.30, and an installation service began at 2.30. Committee and departmental meetings were scheduled to meet from four to five o'clock; then luncheon was served. The evening was filled with activity, preaching service at 7.45 and radio sermon at ten o'clock. Musical features for the entire day were exceptionally good.

At eleven o'clock Apostle Paul M. Hanson was the speaker. His theme, "I give you to be the light of the world," was based on Matthew 5.

The installation service at 2.30 in the afternoon was one of unusual merit and attraction. Members from every branch in the stake were present; and visitors from Independence and other surrounding towns. The following program was presented:

Prelude, "A cloister scene" .....	A. T. Mason
Call to Worship .....	President F. M. Smith
Obligato, "Rock of Ages" .....	Violin

At 7.45 a hymn opened the service, and prayer was by Bishop C. A. Skinner. An offering to care for the KMBC hook-up with Central Church was then taken. The stake choir sang a chorus from the oratorio, The Course of Time, composed by J. T. Gresty. Soloists were Elizabeth Hitchcock and Clayton Wolfe. Frank White was violinist, Hazel Scott, organist, and Mildred Connelly, pianist.

The sermon was by Apostle M. A. McConley, who read Doctrine and Covenants 11:3. The theme was "Keep my commandments." All commandments were given by the Lord, asserted the speaker, at a time and place when they were essential. The statement of John Burroughs, "I came here to find myself," was applied to the coming of the church to this locality to build up the work of God, for this is where we found ourselves. The benediction was by C. A. Skinner.

From ten to eleven o'clock Stake President C. E. Wight gave his first effort over KMBC from Central Church, laying a foundation for a two-month series. On May 24 he delivered his second radio sermon from the church, his theme being "The philosophy of Jesus in the modern world."

Argentine Church

May 24 was Boy Scout Day at Argentine Church. Seven boys at this time joined Troop Number 26. Mr. Clifford L. Tozier, assistant scout executive of Kaw Council of Boy Scouts, made the address at the investiture.

Gladstone Church

Midweek prayer meetings are improving in attendance since the close of General Conference. The members of this branch are applying themselves to the task of growing in numbers and accomplishments. Those who formerly were infrequent in attendance are becoming more active.

The communion service May 4 was marked by a good degree of the Holy Spirit. The pastor presided, assisted by eight of the ministry. In the evening the sermon was by Bishop C. A. Skinner.

A Mother's Day program was well rendered. Gladstone extends thanks for the outside help so generously given and is proud of the local talent exhibited. Sisters L. C. Connelly and E. B. Johnstone, and Brothers Bob Parsons and Bob Davis gave some splendid readings concerning mother. Brother Cross, of Independence, contributed several violin solos. Brother E. B. Johnstone was the evening speaker, Brother Charles G. Lewis in charge. The young people's choir gave a special number.

The ministry are visiting the membership under the direction of Brother Connelly. They look forward to having the stake missionaries hold a series of meetings in this branch.

Bennington Church

Mother's Day services were well attended. A pageant was given by some of the mothers, and one scene was presented by three young men. Sister Emma Helm gave the readings. A duet was sung by Marguerite and Mary Agin, "Mother's Bible." "Mother" was the subject of the impressive sermon of Bishop B. J. Scott, and in the evening the sermon by Bishop Skinner was well received.

Grandview Church

Since the close of conference, members have been privileged to have speakers from a wide area. Among them were Elders H. W. Savage, George E. Harrington, O. W. Okerlind, C. F. Greene, and G. T. Richards.

Elders H. H. Sevy and G. T. Richards, newly appointed stake missionaries, are now laboring in this district. Brother Richards is preaching a series of Sunday night sermons.

The Gleaners Sunday School Class is quite active at present. A birthday surprise party was given Sister La Verne Oberlag May 13. May 9 seventy-five class members and friends were entertained with a dinner and social good time. The proceeds from the supper and grab bags, amounting to more than eight dollars, will be used to purchase kitchen equipment for the church.

May 16 a miscellaneous shower was given in honor of Sister Mildred Swearingen, who will be married to Brother Fred Brose June 19.

The Department of Women held its semiannual bazaar and chicken supper Thursday, May 22, in the church basement. They netted between fifty and sixty dollars.

Woodbine, Iowa

A number from Woodbine Branch were in attendance at the General Conference and came back with an increase of zeal for carrying on.

Owing to the General Conference, our Easter program was given April 27 rather than April 20. The joint choirs of Woodbine and Logan rendered an Easter Cantata under the direction of H. L. Peyton, Sister Gunsolley at the piano. This was deeply enjoyed.

On Mother's Day we had a program in honor of Mothers,

Nauvoo Summer Camp of Boys and Girls

In the historic city of the Saints, at Nauvoo, Illinois, June 30 to July 12, will meet the third annual boys and girls camp.

The camp is organized and conducted under the direction of the General Department of Religious Education of the church as an activity of the Young People's Division, Elder E. E. Closson, director, and Mrs. C. B. Woodstock, associate director.

Two weeks of ideal camping experience is provided in the beautiful and inspiring surroundings of Nauvoo, full of historic meaning. Each day is fully occupied with programs especially planned for helpful, stimulating, educational experiences under trained leaders. Hiking, scouting, swimming, seacraft, handcraft, nature study, church history, dramatization, pageantry, worship, camp fire, organized and free play, fill the days from sunrise to taps.

This season, new bunk cabins are to be built by the boys, an address by Chester Butterworth, numbers by a male quartet, a solo, and a duet. As the mothers marched before the congregation, a rose was pinned on each one.

Brother George Young occupied in the evening of Mother's Day, delivering a good sermon. On the same evening, Brother Howard Reynolds talked to the Saints at Dunlap.

Brother Frank Fry was home to spend Sunday with his father and family. He is working in Council Bluffs.

Three young women members of Woodbine Branch, will graduate from Woodbine High School May 23.

We are planning to have junior church in the basement next Sunday in charge of Howard Reynolds. After the study hour in the evening, we will be dismissed to attend the baccalaureate service at the Methodist Church.

Independence and the New Hospital

As the result of a series of conferences covering a period of several weeks, the Independence Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a campaign to raise $125,000 for the building of a new hospital plant for the Independence Sanitarium. Outside of the Liberty Loan drive during the World War, this is probably the largest financial campaign ever organized in Independence for a local project.

The Chamber of Commerce has called to its assistance a group of men well qualified to organize and promote a campaign of this nature. All churches, clubs, industries, and associations in and near Independence are being represented on the various committees and sub-committees which are being formed to complete the organization.

This city-wide campaign has developed some very interesting information, which to a large extent is unknown by even the friends of the Sanitarium. In its twenty-one years of service it has ministered to over 18,000 patients, sixty-five per cent of whom were nonmembers of the church and live in Independence and vicinity. Investigation of the capacity of the Sanitarium has brought to light its overcrowded condition, which has existed in the last few years due to the fact that people generally are giving more attention to matters of health. They are seeking the services of the medical profession and the hospitals for the health service which they require.

Whatever amount is raised by the citizens of Independence will be matched dollar for dollar by the church, as provided for by resolution at the Centennial Conference.

Plans are being matured so that work may be begun at the earliest possible time.

One feature of the campaign is of special interest to the church at large. That is, the much better understanding between Independence business men and citizens, and the officers and members of the church which is building and underwriting the new hospital. This is desirable to all, making as it does for the correct solution of this and succeeding community problems.

The Ideal Home

It is necessary, in the confusion of life, to remind ourselves frequently of our ideals. The endless round of small duties and distractions that require minute attention tend to glue our eyes to the ground, so that we forget to look up, occasionally, to the heights of the ideals to which we aspire.

The ideal society which we hope to build—Zion—depends upon the quality of our homes; depends upon the things we learn and think and do there. Without fine homes, no Zion is possible. Without fine homes, nothing of real human value is possible on a large social scale. Isolated, poverty-stricken, and disorderly homes, on rare occasions, have produced geniuses and beautiful characters. But these are almost accidental cases, and it takes good home life to produce a high type of citizen and church member in large numbers.

By a good home, we do not mean necessarily a wealthy home. Some wealthy homes provide the very worst environment for children, while modest and even poor homes can be rich in the things that develop integrity and Christian character. The development of a good home requires intelligent study, work, religious ideals, moral standards, and the type of devotion and self-sacrifice which can come only from strong love.

The essentials of a good home consist of more than possessions and property. The purchase of good books will aid, but can not produce a family of readers. The possession of the Three Books will encourage, but not insure, the right spiritual conditions in the family.

To see a community where the homes are well kept, where the children are happy in their development and growth, where mothers and fathers join in contributing to an intelligent and spiritualized home life is one of the finest experiences that can come in this life. All the arts, sciences, and industries are subordinate in value to this one institution—the ideal home. This is our Zion ideal. It is the goal of our endeavor. Unless we can improve homes we can accomplish nothing. If we can improve our homes steadily and progressively, then we can accomplish everything.

Tenth Legion Progresses

Not much has been said in these columns of late about the Tenth Legion, a movement among the young people of the church in which "Every member is a tithe-payer, a missionary, and a church worker." But the Legion has been growing, slowly but it seems surely, and has been making its contribution to the general church.

For the first three months of 1930 the contribution of the eighty-eight members of the Legion to the general church was in tithes, $809.25; and in offerings, $113.96. This is in keeping with their good record of last year, and is an evidence of their continuing loyalty to the church and to the goals which they have set for themselves as members of the church.

At the present time the membership of the Tenth Legion includes young people living in twenty-eight districts and stakes of the church, including Canada and the British Isles, and in addition a few members in unorganized territory. The movement is getting a representative support, but is in need of additional recruits to its ranks.

Again, let it be emphasized, that the Tenth Legion's aims are the aims of the church itself. It is an organization established for the purpose of mobilizing the young people of the church who are anxious to do their part in carrying forward the work of the Restoration. Its standards require that each member shall be a loyal, contributing worker, an active representative of the church.

To the young people of the church everywhere, the members of the Tenth Legion send greetings—and say, "Join us in this endeavor of devotion to the cause which we all love and to which we have pledged our allegiance."

Kansas City Saints Looking Forward

The Central Church of Kansas City, Missouri, is an active organization, presided over by competent and conservative men. At their first Sunday meeting in May, their regular four-page program sheet carried on its first page the following meritorious address:

Our Opportunity

The "Beyond" of 1930 is here. The Smiths, the Cowderys, and the Whitmers were the pioneers of the first century. WE are the pioneers of this second century. As it was in the beginning of the last century so is it now—the world still hungers for the peace and truth of the gospel message restored. Never before has the church, and especially its members in Kansas City, had a better opportunity to declare and live the message of that gospel.

The centennial presentation of such magnificent and stirring programs as the oratorio, the pageant, the international program, and the oratorical contest; the splendid publicity given by the Kansas City papers to the message of President Smith and the conference business sessions; and the city-wide enjoyment of our radio programs; all are combining to draw attention to and create an interest in the distinctive message that is ours to proclaim to this city.

We shall never have a greater opportunity to witness for the gospel. Let us tell its story to our friends. Let us live it as we never before have lived it. Let us consider and supply the local and general financial needs. Let us be humble, prayerful, forgiving, and sincere. Let us be Saints. In so doing we shall reap the fruits of our opportunity, and sow good seed that others, too, may reap.

Statistician Reports to First Presidency

Carroll L. Olson, director of the Department of Statistics, has made his report to the First Presidency of the church under date of June 2. The church records now contain the names of 107,551 persons, showing a net gain of only 43 names for the month.

Brother Olson philosophizes quite correctly, I believe, on the cause for the rather indifferent showing of accessions by baptism. The Centennial Conference, probably just a little more than the regular General Conference, entailed a number of changes and readjustments, together with the fact that the opening of the season is seeding time and not harvest time, and these facts have a bearing.

Officers in branches and missions, and all having to do with baptisms should carefully carry out the suggestions contained in the report, for the sake of efficiency. Haphazard and dilatory action has caused much trouble in past years. Care such as is suggested has always given good results.

The May Report

During the month of May the following numbers of the various types of reports were received by this office, resulting in the indicated changes in the total net enrollment of the church:

Net Enrollment of the church as of May 1, 1930 .....	107,508
Transfers .....	513
Blessings .....	138
Marriages .....	92
Ordinations .....	12
Divorces .....	4
Branch Disorganized .....	1
May baptisms .....	143
Gains from unknown .....	26
Gains by correction .....	8
Total gain .....	177
Deaths .....	97
Expulsions .....	27
Loss by correction .....	10
Total loss .....	134
Net gain during the month .....	43
Net enrollment of the church as of June 1, 1930 .....	107,551

While the month of May was rather inactive in the line of baptisms, this can be explained by the fact that immediately following a General Conference there is always a slump while the missionaries are getting back to their fields and getting adjusted to their new locations where changes have been made.

However, the month of June should show a considerable increase in membership, in harmony with the regular seasonal fluctuations. Preliminary reports which have come to us indicate that a large number of baptisms will be performed on Children's Day, which this year has been set as June 15. If the work of the local priesthood and the church school has been well organized in each of the branches, a considerable number should definitely align themselves with the church through the covenant of baptism on that day.

A rough estimate based on available statistics indicates that there are between fifteen hundred and two thousand young people in Latter Day Saint homes between the ages of eight and sixteen who have not yet joined the church. These young people should be encouraged to take the necessary steps to become affiliated in the work of the church.

In the matter of reporting baptisms, we are asking that special care be taken to see that the reports are made out and sent to this office as soon as possible after the ceremony. The one who performs the baptism is responsible for seeing that the items are reported. However, if a large number of persons are to be baptized and several different persons take part in the baptizing, it may be more convenient for the one in charge of the baptismal service (presumably the pastor) to appoint some one for the special duty of seeing that the correct items of birth, baptism, confirmation, etc., are entered on the report blanks.

We suggest that wherever possible the following items be obtained before the beginning of the service: the full name, the correct date and place of birth, the complete mailing address, and the genealogical items called for on the reverse side of the blank.

Report blanks may be obtained by writing directly to our office. Complete directions for filling out the forms are sent with them.

Be sure to see that the baptismal reports are filled out and mailed in as soon as possible in order that the new converts may receive their baptismal certificates without delay. These are mailed directly from this office, and are based on information given on the report blanks. Therefore, be careful to see that the items are reported accurately and promptly.

Deprived of Reading the "Herald"

There are Saints who can not raise the money to pay a subscription to the Saints' Herald or Zion's Ensign, and some if not all of them need these journals in their homes. The Herald Publishing House is compelled to discontinue the periodical at the close of the subscription period, and those who are unable to raise the money or to make definite arrangements to pay later are thus deprived of their church reading matter.

The church can ill afford to let any who can not pay but who need and will use one of these journals be compelled to go without it. The Presiding Bishop, therefore, offers to subscribe for such Saints as find themselves in need of one of these and who can not pay for it. The Bishop asks that such Saints get an indorsement to their request that the paper be sent for a year or shorter term, as may be necessary, from the bishop's agent, the branch president, or in case this is impossible, an indorsement from an active elder of the church.

Such requests and indorsements should be for-

Individual Responsibility toward Sacrifice Week

It is our everyday problem to do a certain piece of work; to go to some particular place; to set a definite time to see people. With the same exactitude the Nation elects its President, levies its taxes, and observes its fixed ceremonies. In other words, our individual and national life is made up of a series of goals, intermediate objectives which we reach or do not accomplish according to the degree of determination with which we attempt the performance of these tasks.

All Saints are asked to observe sacrifice week, June 22 to 29. But how shall it be observed? For sacrifice week to mean the most to the individual and to the church, definite ways to sacrifice, and consistent, self-imposed attitudes toward these methods should be adopted. It is not enough to say that sacrifice is a good and wholesome experience; nor is it sufficient to pray that the church may be blessed through sacrifice week. But it is vitally important that each Saint carefully choose one or more ways in which to sacrifice and then prayerfully and consistently observe these self-imposed requirements.

Only by actual participation in definite self-denials, prompted by a sincere desire to help spread the gospel and supported by fervent prayer will the making of our offering revitalize our spiritual forces. Folders containing suggestions outlining definite ways to sacrifice are being sent to each branch pastor for distribution to the members.

The measure of the response to sacrifice week is the only limit that will be placed on our expanding missionary program. There are many new men on the missionary list this year. They have made their choice. In good faith they have intrusted the support of their families to the Saints whose tithes and offerings contribute to their support.

The financial arm of the church is in this manner fulfilling a part of the law which is found for its guidance in Doctrine and Covenants 82:2 and 83:23. This is looking after the poor and providing one of their necessities. No Saint should be deterred from making any real need manifest to his brother. Should you know of one who is in these circumstances and who hesitates because of a sense of embarrassment or false shame, it is your privilege as a brother or sister in Christ to lend aid. No hungering Saint should be denied the Herald or the Ensign.

Put yourself in the place of the young missionary who has taken his first conference appointment this year and leaves his home and family for the first time; or of the veteran missionary who once more accepts the church's pledge to care for his loved ones. Will you do your share, so that the church can give the support which the missionary has the right to expect? Will you choose a definite plan through which to make your sacrifice offering, and will you definitely determine to carry it out?

Religious Education at the Reunion

The reunion affords an excellent opportunity for religious education. It is the one time in the year when a vacation is taken from ordinary duties and the Saints and their friends gather for a week or more to live in an ideal community to engage in worship, study, work, and play. The most successful reunions are those in which there is a happy balance of activities resulting in a healthy, intelligent growth in Christian citizenship.

The desired growth is accomplished by a nice distribution of emphasis upon each of the several phases represented in well-formed, sturdy character. This can not come in a restricted daily program which stresses one or two phases of life quite to the omission or disparagement of other and perhaps equally necessary phases. For instance, a daily program providing for two or three daily prayer meetings which all are expected to attend would surfeit the people in that kind of service and crowd out other types of service. The same would be true of too many preaching services or class hours, or too much playtime.

To secure a fine balance of all activities which meets the need of a growing, thinking, dynamic people who are to provide the brain, sinews, and faith of Zion's redemption is no minor task. It challenges the vision and the administrative skill of our leaders. Based primarily upon the present interests and the sensed needs of a people, the program must stimulate and develop latent interests, search out and train hidden talents, discover and bring to function unknown abilities in those who participate in its activities.

For all of this, it is highly important that those in charge shall studiously and earnestly approach their task. It is comparatively easy to provide a traditional type of reunion with a regular routine of preaching and prayer services. But to make departures, to vary the program, to meet the needs of all ages, to consider interests, needs, and capacities, and suit the program to each as a real educational and building endeavor is no easy task.

And yet this is a most outstanding opportunity to apply in a practical way the best understood principles of religious education. Why may not the religious education of the reunion be organized as a community on the basis of the new program? In a branch it is expected that a director of religious education shall plan his program and organize his workers with the sympathetic cooperation of the pastor. In many places he will be an assistant or associate with the pastor. The class work, social, recreational, and project features are all planned as integral parts of the total branch program which provides in a balanced way for all the needs of all the people.

To accomplish this the new program provides for at least three age groups, separated only for convenience in conducting activities suited to their needs and capacities, but definitely united in certain mass gatherings. There are distinct advantages in having the children by themselves for a story hour, for class work, for junior worship, and for children's games. It is also desirable for young people to be in a group by themselves for class work, for special early prayer meetings, and for dramatization and other projects. Likewise the older people have specific interests and needs which should be provided for, but which do not interest or meet the need of children and young folks.

Undoubtedly, however, there is equally distinct advantage in providing certain branch and reunion activities in which all participate. There is great good to come from a mingling of old and young in some preaching services, in some prayer services, especially in the sacrament service, and in general entertainment or play. But when all are supposed to participate, careful provision should be made by those in charge to recognize their presence, to appeal to their interests, and in some measure to meet their need.

It would seem that the reunion may very profitably be organized on this basis. Indeed, in many places this has been done already in a very practical way. The action of the last General Conference approving the new plan will enable reunion committees to move with more certainty in the matter where it has not been tried. The experiment should prove helpfully educational.

It would be necessary for some one closely associated with the reunion committee to be designated as the director or superintendent of religious education for the reunion. Age group supervisors should be chosen and put in charge of the children's, young people's, and adults' programs, they to sponsor, supervise, and harmonize all the special activities as a vital part of the daily reunion program. It would be understood, of course, that the general conduct of the reunion should remain, as formerly, in the hands of the reunion presidency.

Training Classes

At every reunion some effort is made to secure class work helpful in training local leaders in the religious educational work of the church. Class work may be provided in general informational courses or in the more specific methods of teaching and leadership. Choice should be made by those in charge depending upon the need of the district and upon the availability of able teachers of specific subjects. Usually the subjects should change from year to year, care being taken to provide a logical succession over a period of years.

Classes Approved for Credit

To help in standardizing class work and to stimulate prompt and regular attendance at training courses, the general department has developed a plan for the approval of class work when regular institute conditions are met. A careful statement has been prepared including all conditions of the certification plan and of institute approval which will be sent upon request. Credit conditions are not extremely exacting, and reunion committees and district superintendents of religious education are urged to ask for the approval of their class work for credit, that it may be so advertised and their people receive the full benefit of certification. It is evidently impossible to enter credit on our records for class work where the regular conditions for credit have not been met. CHARLES B. WOODSTOCK,

Associate Director.

War on War

By William Nisbett

Let war begin on war, 'tis long past time,
To raise the banner of world peace on high,
That ensign's long been trampled in the grime,
But raise it now, uplift it to the sky.

Let gold accrued for war be used to speed
The coming of a universal peace;
For war has had its day and failed indeed,
So let us fight that all bloodshed may cease.

Let men who agitate for war be shamed;
May they be rendered powerless to control.
And may their vengeful natures all be tamed.
God grant us this, and make the wide world whole.

Zion's Highway

I am walking on a highway
That leads to a promised land;
And there's One who's walking with me,
Who takes me by the hand,
And he helps me on the way,
Although the way be long;
And the comfort of his presence,
Makes my heart break forth in song.

I am trav'ling on a highway,
A highway true and straight,
It was made and trod by Jesus,
In his love for us, so great.
He invited you and me,
To travel at his side,
And he promised us his Spirit,
If we in his word abide.

So I'm trusting in his promise,
As I walk the narrow way,
And the path is growing brighter,
As I near the perfect day.
And my Father says his Son
Shall come to earth again,
And he'll gather in his Zion,
His elect with him to reign.

Oh! come, my friends, with me;
We'll walk the narrow way,
And we'll always dwell with Jesus,
In that eternal day
When the Father, too, shall come,
To earth, to dwell with men.
We shall share his wondrous glory,
We shall live with him again.

Our Future Zion

By Nellie Martin Cleland

Glorious things are sung of Zion,
Of a people long ago,
How they followed their great leader
And by faith their works did show.
But we now are looking forward
To a Zion in our day,
Step by step we follow onward
As our leader points the way.

Oh, the Zion of the future,
Built by Saints of latter days
Shall be builded by an army
Walking in the narrow way:
Those who keep themselves unspotted
From the mammon of this day,
Holding high their Master's banner
By good works in full array.

Zion, then, a city builded
Like a hill so high and bright,
All the nation's looking forward,
Pressing toward her glorious light.
Then her banners, strong and mighty,
Shall unfurl to every land;
Waving love, and peace, and safety,
By a consecrated band.

Zion, shining there in beauty
As God's law she doth obey;
Righteousness shall be her watchword,
Christ her light through all the day.
Then a people pure and holy—
By their works it hath been done,
Shouting loud with joy and gladness,
"Come, our Savior; we are one."

Men Must Save Themselves

A sermon of Apostle Edmund J. Gleazer, delivered at the Stone Church, December 29, 1929. Reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

EDMUND J. GLEAZER

I hope you will not consider I am presumptuous in saying so, but you may consider the sermon this evening as introductory to the succeeding missionary campaign. I would like to have you accept it in that sense, and with that thought in mind I have selected the following subject: "Save yourselves from this untoward generation."

Most of you will recognize, of course, that that text or subject is suggested by the language of Peter, in the second chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. In order that you might have the setting, I am going to read several verses, commencing with verse 37:

Now when they heard this, they were pricked in their heart, and said unto Peter and to the rest of the apostles, Men and brethren, what shall we do? Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call. And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation. Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls. And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles. And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need. And they, continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God, and having favor with all the people. And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.

"Save yourselves from this untoward generation."
I want to associate with that the following texts:

Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues: . . .

The earth also is defiled unto the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, and broken the everlasting covenant.

My second text is no doubt recognized as from the 18th chapter of Revelation, 4th verse, and the last was from Isaiah 24: 5.

I would like to do three things this evening. First, I want to emphasize that we must save ourselves. Second; we must be saved together. Third; we must do it now. I am going to try to limit my discussion to these three points: We must save ourselves; we must be saved together; we must do it now. If you can not remember anything else I have said, just remember these things. We must save ourselves; we must be saved together; and, we must do it now.

I will spend a little time with the first. We must save ourselves. I like the answer of Peter to that great question propounded to him by men and women who were honest and who thought they were the children of God. They discovered they were in an unsaved state. Peter's message carried conviction to their souls. They were pricked in their hearts, and in answer to their great question, What must we do? we have the language of my text. I want to place special emphasis now on the first part: Save yourselves.

If I were before any other congregation than one composed largely of Latter Day Saints, I would be compelled to spend considerable time explaining just what we mean by this, but being Latter Day Saints, you understand that even though I am placing emphasis on saving ourselves, I am not ignoring the mission work of Jesus Christ. But we have learned, thank God, from this latter-day evangel, that all that God has done, all that the Father has done, and all that Christ has done, will be in vain unless we take advantage of the provisions which they made possible. Of course there would be no salvation without Christ, or without the gospel; but in order for mankind to be saved, they must apply the gospel, and only to the extent that man does apply it can Christ become his personal Savior. That is what I mean when I say again, Save yourselves.

There are too many people in this world who are willing, and they seem perfectly willing, for God the Father, and God the Son, and their minister to concern themselves with the question of salvation, but they themselves are not concerned. We have heard quoted by our brothers many times, the story of a certain individual who said he paid his preacher to look after his salvation, as he paid his lawyer to look after his legal affairs.

There may be too many of us depending upon our preacher, our pastor, our parents, or some one else, to look after our salvation. The first and chief consideration in the life of every man, or woman, should be his or her own personal salvation. We should be thinking constantly concerning our personal salvation.

We must save ourselves. Note how the following text also emphasizes that one truth, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins; that ye receive not of her plagues." If God's people were to escape the plagues of Babylon, they were to come out of her. Their salvation depended on their coming out. I want you to notice that. God did his part. God told them what was going to happen and invited them to come out of her, that they be not partakers of her sins; that they receive not of her plagues; and whether or not the people of God escape, depends upon their coming out of ungodly conditions.

Again, "The earth is defiled unto the inhabitants thereof." Who defiled it? The inhabitants thereof. If the earth was defiled by the inhabitants, the earth can be regenerated only by those who have defiled it; I mean, by the inhabitants.

Independence, Missouri, so far as its moral standard is concerned, or its moral standing, let me say, is no better than those of us who reside here. We make it what it is. The inhabitants defiled the earth. A defiled earth is not a safe place in which to live. To remove that defilement, the inhabitants must be changed or converted. I am not going to attempt to tell you how they defiled it—I rather anticipate the brothers will do that during the series of meetings—except to call your attention to what is already quoted in my text: "they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinances, and broken the everlasting covenant." If that were true in Isaiah's day, it is equally true of the people of our day, to the extent that any man or nation, I care not where that man may be, or that nation may be, or when they have lived, any man or nation which transgresses the laws of God, changes his ordinances, or breaks the everlasting covenant, defiles the earth by virtue of his own defilement. To the extent that any person transgresses the law of God, to that extent he defiles himself as a child of God.

Again you see that man must save himself from these conditions. I have several quotations from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. I want to bring them to you, and then go back just a moment and make a certain connection. In the 11th section of the book, we find the word of the Lord is given to Joseph Knight:

A great and marvelous work is about to come forth among the children of men. Behold, I am God, and give heed to my word, which is quick and powerful, sharper than a two-edged sword, to the dividing asunder of both joints and marrow; therefore, give heed unto my word. Behold, the field is white already to harvest; therefore, whose desireth to reap, let him thrust in his sickle with his might, and reap while the day lasts, that he may treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God; yea, whosoever will thrust in his sickle and reap, the same is called of God; therefore, if you will ask of me you shall receive, if you will knock it shall be opened unto you.

I want you to notice, my dear friends, that the salvation of Joseph Knight depended upon Joseph Knight. And it was dependent upon Joseph Knight thrusting in his sickle and reaping. Do you notice that? Let me read it again:

The field is white already to harvest; therefore, whose desireth to reap, let him thrust in his sickle with his might, and reap while the day lasts, that he may treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God.

The salvation of your soul can be secured by thrusting in your sickle and reaping while the day lasts. You must do something. It is not a question for God alone, and I have been convinced for a long time that salvation can come only as a result of our participation individually in the great work of Christ. Note this:

Now as you have asked, behold I say unto you, Keep my commandments, and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion.

Joseph Knight wanted to know what to do. He was concerned about his salvation, as you and I are concerned, and I am satisfied that the language addressed to him by God applies equally to us. Might I not admonish you to thrust in your sickle, and reap while the day lasts, that you may treasure up for your soul salvation in the kingdom of God? May I exhort you as a servant for Jesus Christ, that you, too, keep the commandments of God? Keep the commandments of God and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion.

If each one of you should approach me and say, "Brother Gleazer, what must I do?" I couldn't answer you otherwise. Keep God's commandments, and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion. Let nothing hinder you in that work, for your own salvation depends upon your participation in that work.

Again, I like this text very much indeed. In the 77th section of the Book of Covenants, a portion of the 1st paragraph, let us note:

If you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which we have commanded you and required of you.

It is thoughts like that which make me proud of this organization. It is so reasonable. It is so sensible. No one is going to pray you into heaven. You are not able to buy your way into heaven. Social standing or prestige is not going to take you in. No. If you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world—if you would that God would give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which he has commanded you and required of you. That is the only way. It is the will of God that each of us should have celestial glory, but whether or not we shall have that place in the celestial world depends upon our keeping the commandments and doing that which he has required of us. If you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing—note that—by doing; prepare by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you. In other words, you or I can not have celestial glory unless we prepare, and we prepare by doing the things which God has commanded and required of us.

I wish to associate with that text one from the 85th section of the Book of Covenants, 5th paragraph. Here the Lord is speaking of the various glories hereafter. The first sermon I ever heard in the Church of Latter Day Saints I heard in the city of Philadelphia, and on that occasion Brother Greene was the speaker, and his sermon was on the various glories of the hereafter. You can imagine the results. I want to tell you that I went away from that church that night thinking—thinking. That sermon turned me in the direction of Latter Day Saintism.

The Lord is discussing these various glories, in the 85th section of the Book of Covenants; but what I wish to bring to your particular attention is the following:

For he who is not able to abide the law of a celestial kingdom, can not abide a celestial glory.

It is God's will that we should abide the celestial glory, but we can not unless we abide the celestial law. It rests with us, with the individuals again. If you can not abide the celestial law, you can not abide a celestial glory. It is yours if you can abide it. It is yours if you can meet the conditions. That is exactly what Jesus had in mind when he was approached by the mother of James and John, who requested that these, her two sons, should hold positions of honor in the kingdom of God, one on the right and the other on the left hand of Jesus. But Jesus gave her to understand it was not his privilege to give to them such a gift, but if they were able to drink of the cup he drank of—in other words, if they could abide the condition, if they could fill the place—it was theirs to occupy. You have the opportunity, my brother, my sister, if you can abide the condition. Isn't that a sensible plan of salvation? I think so.

Remember, the emphasis again is placed on you. One more quotation. In the 38th section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants you will find language near and dear to the heart of Bishop Carmichael, and this is the language:

... that ye might escape the power of the enemy, and be gathered unto me a righteous people, without spot and blameless: wherefore, for this cause, I give unto you the commandment, that ye should go to the Ohio; and there I will give unto you my law; and there you shall be endowed with power from on high, and from thence, whomsoever I will, shall go forth among all nations, and it shall be told them what they shall do.

Our good Bishop utilizes that text in opening his discourses on stewardship. Another one is the 42d section of Doctrine and Covenants.

I wish to place special emphasis on the text, "If you would escape the power of the enemy." God is speaking to the members of his church and saying to them, If ye would escape, then you must go to the Ohio, and I will give you my law. In other words, whether or not they escaped rested with them. If you would escape, go to the Ohio and I will give you my law; I will tell you what to do, and there you shall be guided with power from on high, and so on. Again, it rested with the individual. When we do what God commands, then is God bound.

I want to go back and say again, We must save ourselves. I thought I would bring to you another text this evening, and I went back yesterday and examined it very closely in its setting, and it runs something like this: "Flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of heaven." Of course, that is the statement of Paul, discussing the resurrection of the dead; and while we know it refers to the physical body, yet I want to say this, and I am satisfied we have abundant scripture to sustain it, that salvation is not inherited. You must earn it. You must grow into it. You can become saved. No father, much as he may love his son, can bestow upon him salvation. No mother, much as she loves her daughter, can bestow upon that daughter salvation. It is not inherited. We must grow unto it. We must become saved. We must work out our salvation in fear and trembling. Even Christ could not save the people in his day. Think of it, if you will! The greatest person who ever graced this earth, one who is more universally respected, one who is more universally loved, one who is more universally admired than any person who has ever graced this earth—Christ—could not save the people in his day.

I can just refer to two texts in that connection: the statement in the 1st chapter of John, 11th and 12th verses. Let me read it to you, so you will get it just as it reads: "He came unto his own and his own received him not, but as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God." He did not make them sons of God, much as he would have desired to. He could not make them sons of God. He came unto his own, but his own received him not, but to as many as received him, to them gave he the power to become the sons of God.

Do you know what that power is, my brother? Paul tells you what it is when he gives us to understand that he is "not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to them that believe." Jesus gave them the power to become saved. He gave them power to become his sons, and he demonstrated that power in its saving qualities in his own individual life, but he could not save them. We must save ourselves.

And again—and this is very beautiful—in the 13th chapter of Luke, 34th and 35th verses:

O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together [notice] as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, but ye would not.

Notice the thought there. How oft would I have gathered your children together; but ye would not. And as a consequence, your house is left unto you desolate. Again the salvation of the people depended upon their cooperating with God. How oft would I have gathered you together. Oh, just think of those words! Think of the anxiety revealed in those words! How oft would I have gathered you together, but ye would not. Christ was helpless because of their failure to be gathered. How oft would he have gathered us together, us Latter Day Saints, as a hen gathereth her brood under her wings, but we have not been as willing to be gathered as God would be to gather us, and therefore we today are paying the penalty.

I trust that what I have quoted, though familiar passages of scripture to all of you, has impressed upon each the necessity of looking unto his own salvation. I trust on this, the closing Sunday night of 1929, we will take an inventory of our standing, and will determine as the result of that inventory, that we shall save ourselves from this untoward generation.

But now, again, we must be saved together. It is a beautiful thought in a Christian work; in a Christian religion. If you go back to the scriptures in the Bible, in the Book of Mormon, if you go back to the history of God's dealings with his people, and attempt to analyze the answers that all the prophets and apostles have given to the people individually or collectively when concerned about this great question of salvation, you will discover that what the people were required to do concerned their conduct and their attitude towards their fellow men. "Sell what thou hast and give to the poor," was said to one man; and to another, "Why tarriest thou? arise and be baptized." Do you think that is individual? Why, certainly not.

Do you understand the purpose of baptism, or why men should be baptized into Christ? If so, you will see what the servant of God had in mind when he commanded Paul, or Saul, to rise and be baptized that he might become identified with the body of Christ, and have relationship with his fellows, as well as God, that he did not have previous to that baptism.

Regardless of what you may think, you will discover that in order for men to work out their souls' salvation, they were required to deal differently with their fellow men than before. Even that sermon of sermons, the most wonderful sermon ever preached—analyze it completely if you will—I refer to the Sermon on the Mount—has to do entirely with the conduct of man toward man; and whenever you find the conduct of man toward God emphasized, you will discover that the end sought is more perfect human relations. You can not be saved alone. We must be saved together. Salvation can be realized only by joint effort. You are living in a world that teaches this truth daily. The clothes that we wear tonight are ours as the result of joint effort. The shoes upon our feet are ours because of the work of other men. The houses we live in are ours because of the result of the joint effort of others. Certainly the people of this age should be able to appreciate the necessity for joint effort in things that pertain to salvation.

I wonder if we could get along very well without the church. It is true that when Joseph Smith went out into the woods to ask God the great question that was uppermost in his mind, he went alone, but it wasn't long until the Father and Son appeared unto him, and you recall that it wasn't very long after that, just a matter of a few years, until other men were associated with Joseph Smith in order to bring to pass salvation. Joseph Smith did not baptize himself; not at all. Oh, no! It wasn't very long until Oliver Cowdery was associated with Joseph Smith, and other men were added, and there came into existence the church of God as the means of salvation.

My brothers, you can not get along without the church; and what is the church but a group of men and women who have been baptized into Christ, working jointly for the salvation of God's people? Again you have a matter of participation.

I don't believe there is an individual in this church, and I make no exception, of prophet, apostle, bishop, seventy, high priest, who can work out his soul's salvation alone. We must work it out jointly; together. You have the individual responsibility of saving yourself, but to save yourself, you must be saved with others. We do not live alone. It is a self-evident fact! We can not live alone. You may become tired of the restrictions that civilization imposes upon you. Some people seem to act that way, but you don't find these people going off into isolation, for if they did they wouldn't live. You can live in the highest sense of the term only as you make life a matter of relationships. Consequently, if we would have the right relationships, we must work these relationships out together. We find every community has to do with the establishment of right relationships in the human family. So in our attempt to save ourselves, let us remember that we must work together. Salvation can be realized only by joint effort. Salvation, in that sense, is social. We do not live in isolation.

Peter said, "Save yourselves from this untoward generation." And the Lord said, "Come out of her, my people." Just pause for a moment and consider what salvation would be to us if in some miraculous manner we were able to step out of the world, away from the group. How do you know you are saved? Salvation is a matter that concerns your relationship with your fellows as well as with God. If you isolate yourself, how do you know you are saved? Some of us don't know how little religion we have until we get into a business meeting. We think we are religious. Some of us don't know how little religion we have until some one drives his car in front of us. Some of us men don't know how little religion we have until we disagree with our wives. Some women do not know how little religion they have until they disagree with their husbands. And so on. After all, it is in these matters of adjustment that we reveal just how much religion we do have. One inhabitant could not very well defile this earth. One inhabitant could not very well defile the church.

That reminds me of a story Bishop Carmichael told recently—that he and a certain brother were up in Canada. Some people had given them to understand God had rejected this church. A Scotchman up there took the position that he didn't know what was going on down here, but he thought that God Almighty wouldn't reject 100,000 people because one man went wrong. I believe that. That is how much I believe in God. In his church. One man could not defile this church. Fifty men could not. And is not the reverse equally true? One man, not even Jesus of Nazareth, could regenerate this earth. Christ did not regenerate the earth. And don't you think any one man, or any two men, are going to bring about Zion. It is going to require many men and women who will stand in the strength of Israel's God and live their lives in such a way that the glory of God will be reflected in their everyday affairs. So you see the necessity of joint effort if we would save ourselves.

Now, hear me! We are not saved unless those who live with us are saved. I am not merely referring to those who live within our own homes, but to people we come in contact with daily. Think it over, if you will. That emphasizes the necessity for joint effort in bringing to pass the salvation of God's people.

If you must live with people, then those you live with must be saved or you are not saved, and that is why we are given to understand that there will be no liars in heaven; no hypocrites; no adulterers. It is not safe in Zion if these people are in Zion. You can not have Zion with hypocrites, liars, or adulterers in it, or those who are not saved. It would not be Zion that way; but, on the other hand, those who are out among the wicked—I am referring now to the children of God—shall flee to Zion for safety. You would not be safe out in the world, but you will be safe in Zion. So, even the children of God must go to a place of safety, where the wicked will not be.

Lastly, thirdly: Save yourselves from this generation. This generation. You do not know how proud I am. Oh, yes, you do, because I think you are equally proud that you are identified with a church that has to do with present-day problems and conditions. It is not a dead religion, or a religion of the past, or of the future alone. When I was a boy I used to grow impatient with the idea that I had to die in order to enjoy what the children of God enjoyed anciently. That worried me in the Methodist Church, and I noticed it worried others.

I remember a beautiful young woman arose once in the prayer meeting. She was the finest young woman in the church. She spoke something like this: Why can't we enjoy the blessings that they enjoyed anciently? Why do we have to suffer certain things in this life? She commenced to ask questions along that line, and no one could answer her. This church deals with the questions of life as they come up from day to day. That is as God intends it should be. Our religion is a religion of the present. God speaks today. Our religion is to save us from this generation. How much time are you and I giving to the great question of saving ourselves now? or are we still thinking of the future? There may be some in our ranks who are sitting by with folded hands, awaiting the time when Moroni or Michael will sound the great trump and relieve them from their distress. I am satisfied that a great deal of the distress this people have experienced, a great many of our heartaches, of our trials, tribulations, and disappointments are due to the fact that we have not taken God at his word, or taken advantage of the wonderful program of religion, or done the things God has required at our hands, and thus moved forward. We have failed to use our religion in its fullest sense.

Save yourselves from this generation. I wish we would think in terms of the present, of the now, and be concerned about the plight of our people today, and attempt to save ourselves today. I can not go into some one's home and say, Brother, there is something wrong. This world will be blessed by the bye. I do not believe in the doctrine that the more you suffer here the less you will suffer hereafter; or that you must suffer now in order to enjoy the hereafter. I think our suffering grows out of our failure to keep the commandments of God; so we must save ourselves from this generation. We can not but be concerned with the present.

Some of the greatest teachers of this age are pointing out, in their periodicals and from the public platform, that Christianity is a failure. They are challenging the Protestant and Catholic people to come forward and make their contribution—now. They are crying out for help. They want to test religion as they have tested everything else, according to its contribution to society. What does it do for man? What is it doing? Not, what will it do? What is it doing now? We need it now. The world today has need for a religion such as they have not yet experienced. They are crying out for religion. They want salvation from the problems of today. They want brotherhood now. If you don't have it now, what guarantee is there that you will have it hereafter? Latter Day Saints, there comes to us as a people a challenge, and with that challenge an opportunity, and I would to God that you and I tonight would be aroused to the fact that we must save ourselves from this generation, and in saving ourselves we will save all that will hear and follow our example.

In speaking of some worthy man, sometimes we will say, Why does he not join this church? Why does not he identify himself with us? I will tell you: Because we have failed to reveal Christ in our activities. We have failed to present to him that this church does solve these problems. We have failed to convince the world of the fact, or to demonstrate that this religion answers the present need.

My brothers and sisters, when those of us who have named the name of Jesus Christ will attempt to save themselves from the evils of this generation, then we are going to show them what we have accomplished, and then they will identify themselves with us. God wants us to do it; and so, in the language of Peter, let me plead with you that you save yourselves from this untoward generation.

You have not done that merely by uniting with this church; but the church makes it possible for you to do it. Will you do it? Save yourselves from this untoward generation, and in doing so you will honor Jesus Christ as in no other way, or with gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh. You will honor Jesus Christ by saving world-weary men and women, and to the extent that you attempt to save yourselves, to that extent will you succeed in making possible the salvation of others.

Joseph Smith, the Lord's Servant.—Number 4

By Hyrum O. Smith

The Final Decision

The incident just related took place in 1856, and the deadlock continued until some time in 1859. Some of those composing this movement were so anxious to go ahead that they concluded that "Young Joseph" had, by his delay, forfeited his right to the presidency, and insisted on completing the organization without him. Others, however, stood firm, and waited for the Lord to move in the matter. The decree had gone forth that the Lord would, in his own due time, send the prophet to them, and they were willing to abide his time. As early as 1851 the Lord had spoken to Jason W. Briggs to this effect:

And in mine own due time will I call upon the seed of Joseph Smith, and shall bring one forth, and he shall be mighty and strong, and he shall preside over the high priesthood of my church; and then shall the quorums assemble, and the pure in heart shall gather, and Zion shall be inhabited, as I said unto my servant Joseph Smith; after many days shall all these things be accomplished, saith the Spirit.

In 1856, however, Joseph Smith said the Lord had not yet called upon him, and he refused to move until that call had come. He had declared himself ready to do whatever the Lord had for him to do, and upon that declaration he rested, waiting for the Lord to speak. In due time the Lord did speak, and we will let this man tell how the call came.

During the year 1859 the question of my connection with my father's work was finally determined. I became satisfied it was my duty. The queries heretofore referred to were one by one being settled; until the final one, where and with whom should my life-labor lie? was the only one left. This was determined by a similar manifestation to others to this effect: "The Saints reorganizing at Zarahemla and other places, is the only organized portion of the church accepted by me. I have given them my Spirit, and will continue to do so while they remain humble and faithful."—Church History, vol. 3, p. 263.

Significance of the Answer

As before stated, the situation that confronted the father now confronted the son. The question asked by the father was, "Which of all the sects professing Christianity is right?" The question asked by the son was, "Where among these factions claiming to be representing this latter-day work, does my life's labor lie?" The father was answered, "None of the sects is right." The son was answered, "The Saints reorganizing at Zarahemla and other places, is the only organized portion of the church accepted by me."

In the case of the father the apostasy had been complete; all had gone astray. In the case of the son the apostasy had not reached the stage where all had gone astray. As it was in the days of Elijah, who thought he was the only one left who was faithful to God, so in effect God answered this young modern prophet, "Yet I have left me seven thousand in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed unto Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him." (1 Kings 19: 18.)

The direction given to this young prophet of God has several important bearings on the questions involved. First; it is important to notice that the Reorganization was denouncing polygamy, and declaring it was not of God. Second, It was honoring the martyred prophet by denying that he was a fallen prophet, and declaring that he was faithful to his trust until death. They declared that he was innocent of the introduction of false doctrines into the church. Others proclaimed him a coward, declaring that he taught one thing in public and practiced another thing in private, and that other thing a vital doctrine pertaining to the salvation of men. The Reorganization declared that his whole life was a refutation of that lie. They declared that if this doctrine was vital to salvation, and this man was convinced of it, he would not have hesitated to proclaim it. They refused to join with the enemies who had destroyed his body, and now wanted to rip his character to shreds. The Reorganization adhered strictly to the faith once delivered to the saints through the instrumentality of this man of God, and they refused to deviate therefrom in any particular. They had been told, in the beginning of their movement, that "ere long, saith the Lord, I will require the prophet at your hands." And they knew that they must present to him a clean bill of health, figuratively speaking. Logically, there was no other place for him to go. He knew that he who was ordained to succeed his father, would be ordained to teach those revelations that had been received through that father, and he took this direction of the Spirit as a vindication of his father's character, and it was and can be viewed in no other light.

Young Joseph Takes His Place

Soon after receiving the directions given above, this young man took steps to communicate with the leaders of the Reorganization, and by appointment, he met them at their next general conference. This conference was held at Amboy, Illinois, April 6, 1860. The minutes of that conference read as follows:

Joseph Smith, son of Joseph Smith, the Seer, was then introduced to the conference, and delivered an address, explaining in brief his position and the causes which brought him there. He said:

I would say to you, brethren, as I hope you may be, and in faith I trust you are, as a people that God has promised his blessings upon, I came not here of myself, but by the influence of the Spirit. For some time past I have received manifestations pointing to the position which I am about to assume.

I wish to say that I have come here not to be dictated by any men or set of men. I have come in obedience to a power not my own, and shall be dictated by the power that sent me.

God works by means best known to himself, and I feel that for some time past he has been pointing out a work for me to do.

For two or three years past depositions have been waiting on me, urging me to assume the responsibilities of the leadership of the church, but I have answered each and every one of them that I did not wish to trifle with the faith of the people.

I do not propose to assume this position in order to amass wealth out of it, neither have I sought it as a profit.

I know opinions are various in relation to these matters. I have conversed with those who have told me they would not hesitate one moment in assuming the high and powerful position as the leader of this people. But I have been well aware of the motives which might be ascribed to me,—motives of various kinds, at the foundation of all which is selfishness,—should I come forth to stand in the place where my father stood.

I have believed that should I come without the guarantee of the people, I should be received in blindness, and would be liable to be accused of false motives. Neither would I come to you without receiving favor from my heavenly Father.

I have endeavored as far as possible to keep myself unbiased. I never conversed with J. J. Strang, for in those days I was but a boy, and in fact am now but a boy. I had not acquired a sufficient knowledge of men to be capable of leading myself, setting aside the leading of others.

There is but one principle taught by the leaders of any faction of this people that I hold in utter abhorrence; that is a principle taught by Brigham Young and those believing in him. I have been told that my father taught such doctrines. I have never believed it and never can believe it. If such things were done, then I believe they were never done by divine authority. I believe my father was a good man, and a good man never could have promulgated such doctrines.

I believe in the doctrines of honesty and truth. The Bible contains such doctrines, and so do the Book of Mormon and the Book of Covenants, which are auxiliaries to the Bible.

I have my peculiar notions in regard to revelations, but am happy to say that they accord with those I am to associate with, at least those of them with whom I have conversed. I am not very conversant with those books, (pointing to a volume before him), not so conversant as I should be and will be. The time has been when the thought that I should assume the leadership of this people was so repulsive to me, that it seemed as though the thing could never be possible.

The change in my feelings came slowly, and I did not suffer myself to be influenced by extraneous circumstances, and have never read the numerous works sent me which had a bearing on this subject, for fear they might entice me into wrongdoing. It is my determination to do right and let Heaven take care of the result. Thus I come to you free from any taint of sectarianism, taints from thoughts of the varied minds I have come in contact with; and thus hope to be able to build up my own reputation as a man.

It has been said that a Mormon elder, though but a strip-ling, possessed a power unequaled by almost any other preacher. This arises from a depth of feeling, and the earnestness with which they believe the doctrines they teach; and it is this feeling that I do not wish to trifle with.

I know that Brigham Young is considered a man of talent, by some a bold and fortunate man, and by others an unscrupulous and bad man, accordingly as circumstances differ.

Should you take me as leader, I propose that all should be dealt by in mercy, open as to Gentile or Jew; but I ask not to be received except as by the ordinances of the church.

Some who had ought to know the proprieties of the church, have told me that no certain form was necessary in order for me to assume the leadership—that the position came by right of lineage; yet I know that if I attempted to lead as a prophet by these considerations, and not by a call from Heaven, men would not be led to believe who do not believe now. And so I have come not of my own dictation to this sacred office.

I believe that we owe duties to our country and to society, and are amenable to the laws of the land, and have always considered it my duty to act upon this principle; and I do say among the people where I live I have as many good and true friends as I could desire among those of any society.

The people of Hancock County have been strongly anti-Mormon, and there I know of no enemies. I have been engaged in business with anti-Mormons, I have mingled with them, and have not only been obliged not to make any remarks which might give offense, but also to smother my own feelings, if I had any. I hold no enmity to any man living who has fought this doctrine; nor do I know any who hold enmity towards me. I hope there are none.

In conclusion, I will come to you if you will receive me, give my ability, and the influence my name may bring, together with what little power I possess; and I trust by your prayers and faith to be sustained. I pledge myself to promulgate no doctrine that shall not be approved by you or the code of good morals.

I have my shortcomings, but I trust as a leader I shall do nothing to lead astray. If I do so, I shall expect condemnation; for I am satisfied that this people, governed by the same policy, would serve me worse than they have Brigham Young before, for I would be wholly deserted.

A gentleman from Utah informs me that a majority of Brigham Young's people were restive—not satisfied with their condition—but dared say nothing. That those who preached and those who practiced his teachings were, in reality, the old fogies of the institution, the younger taking a different view of matters.

I do not care to say any more at present, but will simply add that if the same Spirit which prompts my coming, prompts also my reception I am with you.—Church History, vol. 3, pp. 247-250.

Perhaps this speech would not be considered a classic. Perhaps it might be improved in grammatical construction, but there are characteristics that impress one who will read it without prejudice. It has been said that this young prophet came to the church claiming no special call from God to himself, but such expressions as "I wish to say that I have come here not to be dictated by a man or set of men. I have come in obedience to a power not my own, and shall be dictated by the power that sent me"; "I know that if I attempted to lead as a prophet by these considerations, and not by a call from heaven, men would not be led to believe who do not believe now. And so I have come not of my own dictation to this sacred office," indicate that he was called to this office by revelation from God, and that he proposed to be led by that God who called him.

Other outstanding statements indicate the honesty of the man. His concluding statement is not only a promise of honesty, but humility as well. He says:

In conclusion, I will come to you if you will receive me, give my ability, and the influence my name may bring, together with what little power I possess; and I trust by your prayers to be sustained. I pledge myself to promulgate no doctrine that shall not be approved by you or the code of good morals.

Not only does the young prophet intimate that God had sent him, but his coming to these men who were instrumental in establishing the Reorganization was predicted nine years before in a revelation given through Jason W. Briggs on November 18, 1851, wherein it is stated that the Lord would call upon the seed of Joseph Smith. This portion of the revelation given to Briggs reads as follows:

Therefore, let the elders whom I have ordained by the hand of my servant Joseph, or by the hand of those ordained by him, resist not this authority, nor faint in the discharge of duty, which is to preach my gospel as revealed in the record of the Jews, and the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants; and cry repentance and remission of sins through obedience to the gospel, and I will sustain them, and give them my Spirit; and in mine own due time will I call upon the seed of Joseph Smith, and will bring one forth, and he shall be mighty and strong, and he shall preside over the high priesthood of my church; and then shall the quorums assemble, and the pure in heart shall gather, and Zion shall be reinhabited, as I said unto my servant Joseph Smith; after many days shall all these things be accomplished, saith the Spirit.—Church History, vol. 3, p. 201.

Not only was it revealed to Jason W. Briggs that God would raise up a prophet from the seed of Joseph Smith, but others testified to the same thing at different times. I have already quoted a statement made by Zenos H. Gurley, in which he says that twice these words came to him when he was perplexed as to what his attitude should be towards different ones who had risen up, claiming the right to leave the church:

Rise up, cast off all that claim to be prophets, and go forth and preach the gospel, and say that God will raise up a prophet to complete his work.

And in a later communication this same man claims he was told distinctly which one of the prophet's sons would be called. That communication reads:

The successor of Joseph Smith is Joseph Smith, the son of Joseph Smith the Prophet. It is his right by lineage saith the Lord your God.—Church History, vol. 3, pp. 206, 208.

Thus this young prophet comes to the remnant of the faithful, doubly designated as the successor of his father, and rightful heir to the successorship of the presidency. He was called by revelation to himself, and that call was confirmed by revelation to others, and he fulfilled the prediction of his father that the one who should be his successor would "be ordained to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him who I have appointed." He was faithful to the trust imposed in him, and built up an organization that has survived the attacks hurled against it by recalcitrant factions, and went to his death honored by all who knew him. Surely he was called of God to do the work he did.

(To be continued.)

As a Little Child

By J. E. Vanderwood

Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter the kingdom of heaven.—Matthew 18: 3.

I am going to touch but a few of the high points suggested by this magnetic scriptural extract, and see if by reasoning together we may come to appreciate better what the Lord has intended we should be able to appreciate. For years I have read this text, and not until I read a single phrase elsewhere, on yesterday, did I see what I now see in it. The simple phrase opened up to me a volume of thought, and related a number of things in my mental vision that have never before appeared to me in the excellent light that they now stand out, beckoning me toward the goal that is set for us in Christ. As I grow older, and as I study and think through my problems again and again, I come to enjoy that richness of life, that beauty of truth that heretofore was unknown to me. I am therefore very desirous of having all who would come to share the blessedness of life rethink these things with me.

Jesus knew how to teach. He was able to use illustrations that would fit the circumstances and fulfill the need. He used such illustrations as continually enlarge and grow into excellence and beauty as we ripen into mature thought and become experienced in life. The language, "Except you . . . become as little children," was until now appreciated by me in a very limited way. I am now ready to confess that I did not see the most important thing in it. But yesterday, when I read the words of Doctor John M. Gregory, which I had also read many times, the light of truth burst in upon my vision, and I said with tear bedimmed eyes as I sat in my study, Why couldn't I have seen it before? The simple phrase that caused me to catch the vision of the matter was this: "Let us, like the Master, carefully observe a little child." What a word will do when we are in the way of receiving instruction! What a wealth of light and truth are awaiting us when we are willing to say, Use me, Lord, and I will be used. Lead me, and I will be led. Teach me, and I will be taught. Cause me to understand, and I will give my life that others may be taught.

Let us, as Doctor Gregory suggests, carefully observe a little child, that we may learn from him what education is. We are prone to look beyond the mark. We are constituted so that we see everything but the important thing; we behold everything but the worth-while thing; we observe everything but the thing that is intended to give us life. This seems to be a characteristic of most human beings, but the Master has given us the means, he has outlined for us a program which will enable us to come into possession of his most excellent truth if we are willing to apply ourselves to acquire its deeper meanings and its more worth-while truths.

"Except you . . . become as little children, you shall not enter the kingdom of heaven," is worthy of careful thought. What does the phrase imply? Have we considered it as we should? Do we really understand what it demands of us? These and many like questions may be asked; but the thing we are most concerned about just now is to try to get at the basis of this teaching. Weymouth renders this text thus:

In solemn truth I tell you that unless you turn and become like little children, you will in no case be admitted into the kingdom of the heavens.

What does it mean to become as little children? Have we observed a little child, as Doctor Gregory suggests? If we have not, then we are as yet entire strangers to the message of Christ. If we have, we are better able to understand and appreciate the Master's message to us. A child comes into the world a perfect person, equipped with all the potentialities of mankind, but he is entirely helpless. Doctor Gregory says:

Let us take account of the infant. He has a complete human body, with eyes, hands, and feet, all the organs of sense, of action, and of locomotion, and yet he lies helpless in his cradle. He laughs, cries, feels; he has the attributes of the adult, but not his powers.

The essential thing in causing him to differ from the man is that he is undeveloped. He is supplied with all the organs of the body, and of the mind, but they do not yet function as they are capable of functioning. The child does not come into the world as a full-grown man; he comes into it undeveloped and untrained. We enter the kingdom of heaven in the same way. As the child grows, matures, exercises, learns, and lives, he becomes fitted for the things that pertain to mature manhood. There is no other way for him to come into the world, and God has provided that he shall be cared for and taught by others until he has reached the state of mature manhood, both physical and mental. So it is with us when we come into the kingdom of heaven. We must come into it as children, undeveloped and untrained, yet with the possibilities of becoming—we have not yet become, but we have the power of becoming.

The term heaven, in its most fundamental sense, means harmony. Jesus, therefore, says to us, Except you become as little children you shall not enter the kingdom of heaven. Where harmony is lacking, there are found discord and confusion. As the child comes into this world unfitted for its possibilities, but with the power of becoming, so we must enter the kingdom of heaven (harmony), if we are to enter it at all. We have the power of becoming, but we must grow, develop, train, live, and work to this end. It would be just as impossible for us to enter it fully matured as it would be for a child to come into life a full-grown man. We must enter the kingdom of heaven as little children if we are to enter at all. And just as the child through the process of growth, exercise, training, comes finally to the stature of manhood, so we by the same process may become the children of God in the fullest sense. The child has to make many adjustments before he reaches the stature of manhood, and we must make many adjustments before we reach the stature and fullness of Christ.

We should remember that the power of becoming is ours. We should, however, remember always that both the capacity and the experience must be developed if we are to become the persons the Lord intended we should become. When the matter is thus considered we see the need of a thorough program in religious education. Doctor Gregory has expressed it like this: "Education, in its broadest meaning, embraces all the steps and processes by which an infant is gradually transformed into a full-grown and intelligent man." When we think of all that is necessary to develop a child into a full-grown and intelligent man, we will come to understand what is needful in order to transform men into the likeness of Christ.

The child learns from the parent, from the teacher, from his associates; and in this way he comes to act as they do. He reflects the likeness of those with whom he associates in his own life and conduct. So Christ learned from his Father, by his association with God, until the life of God was reflected in his life. Therefore, it is clearly to be understood that if we will learn of Christ we will be able to reflect his likeness in our conduct among men.

Let us consider this a little further. Christ lived in harmony. I mean by this he lived consistent with himself. That is to say, there were no mental conflicts with him, for he had determined to do the will of the Father, and he was delighted to do the things that pleased him. He was not vacillating. He did not plan to do a thing and then change his mind before he got at it. To the contrary, he moved resolutely forward with the assurance that God is true, and that he was capable of being in constant harmony both with God and within himself, so long as he did not divide himself mentally.

So, in the fullest sense of the term, he became the Son of God, and he has made it possible for us to become the sons of God if we will enter the kingdom of harmony as little children; that is to say, with the necessary potentialities and the desire to constantly adjust ourselves to our environment (and I mean the God environment) until the divine harmony takes complete form within us.

John records these words: "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God." Entering the kingdom carries with it the power of becoming. We enter as children, wholly undeveloped and untrained at the beginning, but by the process of growth and of learning we come to that state of harmonious development where the law of the kingdom of God is formed within us; and by the same means and the same process we enter completely into the kingdom of heaven. For when we have developed within us the divine harmony, we will have come into possession of the kingdom of harmony, and hence have fully entered the kingdom of heaven.

Let us remember that it requires growth, development, training, to bring the child to manhood. So it requires also these things to bring mankind into the kingdom of heaven. The child makes this adjustment after he is born into the world. So we must make the adjustments necessary after coming into the church to prepare and fit us for the complete kingdom of harmony, which is the kingdom of heaven.

Luke records it thus: "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein." That is to say, if you are not willing to come in with the potentialities you have and therewith grow and unfold into the likeness of the Son of God, you shall forever remain a stranger to his cause and the noble life that he lived among mankind. We must receive it first in our undeveloped state, but we must not remain in that condition. A child comes into the world that it might grow and develop and become fitted for the things that belong to mature men. So must we come into the church of the living God, that we may develop and grow into the things that will ultimately bring us to the measure and stature and fullness of Christ.

Once more we observe the words of Doctor Gregory:

In what does the infant differ from the man? Simply in being a child. His body and limbs are small, weak, and without voluntary use. His feet can not walk; his hands have no skill; his lips can not speak. His eyes see without perceiving, and his ears hear without understanding. The universe into which he has come lies around him unknown and mysterious.

So it is with those who have entered the church militant. They have not come to grasp the possibilities that lie around them; they are at best children, but as such they are endowed with powers and possibilities of becoming the true sons of God.

So we are again reminded that the whole problem of the kingdom of heaven must be brought to mankind through a system of religious education. This educational program must be such as shall meet every need of man so that he may be brought to maturity of life and character. It must be the means by which he may become all that the Master of men has intended he should become. Receiving it as a little child means the accepting of the possibilities that are ours, and then growing into the thing he has purposed we shall come to be. We can come in only as we are, but we should remember always that we come in that we might become, and he has given unto us the power to become, just as he has made it possible for a child to become a man.

As we come to develop our capacity and acquire experiences in the kingdom of God, so shall we be able to enter continuously in the way that will both insure life and peace for us. We shall come to possess that which will put us in constant touch with the Infinite, for we will be ever more coming to the place where the law of harmony will operate in and through us, and thus the kingdom of heaven shall be fully realized.

One of the most deadening traits that trouble men is worry. The feverish desire to get on and possess more has overtaken many. Paul caught the spirit of Jesus when he wrote, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." He knew how to enjoy much and how to get along with little. Contentment comes to those who have learned how to be independent of things and how to trust in the God of the lilies, the sparrows, and of little children. Contentment is a virtue that can be cultivated and made to grow. Its seed is faith in a Christlike God.—The Epworth Herald.

God's Hand in the Destiny of Nations

By E. B. Hull

E. B. HULL

The latter-day prophet, Joseph Smith, said in July, 1828, "The works and designs and the purposes of God can not be frustrated, neither can they come to naught. —Doctrine and Covenants 2: 1.

Men of all ages have tried to thwart the purposes of God, and they have failed.

Nebuchadnezzar gave glory only to himself for his achievements, but God showed him in a dream what would befall him and the nations that would arise after his day. The great king of Babylon found that the God of the heavens was superior to his earthly power.

The Lord considered righteous Abraham, and he told him to leave the country of his fathers and go to a land to which he would be led. Abraham obeyed God, and he was led to the land of Canaan. God gave him this land for an everlasting inheritance. The complete fulfillment of this prophecy is yet in the future. Abraham's posterity was driven from this land a number of times, until the prophecy of Christ was literally fulfilled, where he said: "Behold your house is left unto you desolate."—Matthew 23: 38.

The allied operations in the World War in Palestine brought about the elimination of the Turkish power in that country. Great Britain took over the protectorate of the country, thus fulfilling the prophecy of Isaiah, as follows: "As birds flying, so will the Lord of hosts defend Jerusalem; defending also he will deliver it; and passing over he will preserve it."—Isaiah 31: 5.

The Prophet Ezekiel said: "Thus saith the Lord God; behold I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land."—Ezekiel 37: 21. Isaiah says: "He will assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth."—Isaiah 11: 12.

Now the World War is over and the Jew is assembling in Palestine, the land destined by God for the home of this people. Ezekiel tells how this was to be brought about:

After many days thou shalt be visited: in the latter years thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste: but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely all of them.—Ezekiel 38: 8.

Isaiah tells us what they will do when they are privileged to come into their land in peace:

And they shall build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations.—Isaiah 61: 4.

This is being done at the present time.

Abraham's great-grandchild, Joseph, was a source of annoyance to his brothers, because of dreams he had concerning himself and them, so they sold him to men that carried him to Egypt. They thought they were rid of their dreaming brother, but God overruled, and eventually Joseph was the means of saving the entire house of his father, Jacob, when famine was raging in Canaan.

When Joseph was sold by his brothers, they received for him only twenty pieces of silver, valued at $12.80. Judas sold our Lord for thirty pieces of silver, worth $15.30, the price of a slave if killed by a beast, according to their law.

Moses is another character of destiny. At the time he was born, the king of Egypt had issued a decree that all male babies of Israelitish mothers were to be put to death. The mother of Moses hid him in the rushes along the river Nile. When the king's daughter came to this place to bathe, she discovered Moses and adopted him as her own. God's purposes could not be frustrated by any earthly king's decree, for God had selected this boy to do a great work when he had grown to manhood. He was to lead Israel out of Egyptian bondage.

Divided Israel

After Israel had wandered in the wilderness for forty years, they were permitted to enter the land of Canaan. In the course of time the Israelites rejected the rule of the Judges and demanded a king, so they would be like other nations. The Lord permitted them to have a king, and Saul, David, and Solomon reigned over Israel. At the death of Solomon, his son Rehoboam began his reign. He increased the taxes and put many burdens on his subjects, which ended in rebellion and the dividing of the nation. Ten of the tribes, which included a half tribe of Manasseh, went to the north in 952 B. C. and established their capitol at Samaria. They were henceforth known as the kingdom of Israel. Those that remained in the southland were called the kingdom of Judah.

The old saying, "United we stand, divided we fall," came true in regard to the kingdom of Israel. The divided nation was not strong enough to withstand the siege that came upon her by the government of Assyria. In the year 721 B. C. Shalmaneser captured Israel, carrying the people to his own country, Assyria, placing them in Halah and Habor, by the river Gozan, and in the cities of the Medes, according to 2 Kings 17: 6. Many people thought that the captives amalgamated with the Assyrians, and thus lost their identity, but such was not the case. Here again God overruled, causing the captives to come out of that country, and today many people living in the north of Europe and other countries are descendants of the ten tribes, once known as the kingdom of Israel.

In the book of Esdras, of the Apocrypha, thirteenth chapter, and verses 39-47 we have this account:

They [the ten tribes of Israel in Assyria] took counsel among themselves that they would leave the multitude of the heathen, and go forth into a further country where never mankind dwelt, that they might there keep the statutes which they never kept in their own land. They entered into the Euphrates River by the narrow passages, for the Most High showed signs for them and held still the flood till they were passed over. For through that country there was a great way to go, namely a year and a half.

Some historians believe that these captive Israelites came out of that country by the way of the Caucasus Pass, between the Black and Caspian Seas, going north through Europe, settling in the most northerly part of Europe.

In the days of Jeroboam (975 B. C.) Dan refused to shed his brother's blood; and rather than go to war with Judah, they left the country in a body and went to Greece, to Javan, and then to Danmark. Keating, in his history of Ireland, says: "The Danans were a people of great learning and wealth. They left Greece after a battle with the Assyrians and went to Ireland and Danmark, which was called Dan-mares (Dan's country)." Again it looks as if the Lord was directing the migrations of his people. It may be that a portion of the tribes went into the frozen north, being led by God as Lehi and the Jaredites were led, until they were entirely separated from the rest of civilization. We are sure that many must have made their homes in the countries of northern Europe, for those that have accepted the gospel as restored in these last days, that have come from this part of Europe are of Israel, particularly of the tribe of Ephraim.

Christ said to his disciples in the land of Palestine: "Other sheep I have, which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd."—John 10: 16.

He could not have referred to the Gentiles, for he said in Matthew 5: 24: "I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel." The people in Jerusalem did not understand him, for when he showed himself to the people on the American Continent, he said:

Now it came to pass that when Jesus had spoken these words [to the people on the American Continent], he said unto those twelve whom he had chosen, Ye are my disciples; and ye are a light unto this people, who are a remnant of the house of Joseph. And behold, this is the land of your inheritance; and the Father hath given it unto you. And not at any time hath the Father given me commandment that I should tell it unto your brethren at Jerusalem; neither at any time hath the Father given me commandment, that I should tell unto them concerning the other tribes of the house of Israel, whom the Father hath led away out of the land. This much did the Father command me, that I should tell unto them, that other sheep I have, which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd. And now because of stiff-neckedness and unbelief, they understood not my word; therefore I was commanded to say no more of the Father concerning this thing unto them. But, verily, I say unto you, that the Father hath commanded me, and I tell it unto you, that ye were separated from among them because of their iniquity; therefore it is because of their iniquity, that they know not of you. And verily I say unto you again, that other tribes hath the Father separated from them; and it is because of their iniquity, that they know not of them. And verily, I say unto you, that ye are they of whom I said, Other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice, and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd. And they understood me not, for they supposed that it had been the Gentiles; for they understood not that the Gentiles should be converted through their preaching. And they understood me not that I said they shall hear my voice; and they understood me not that the Gentiles should not at any time hear my voice; that I should not manifest myself unto them, save it were by the Holy Ghost. But behold, ye have both heard my voice and seen me, and ye are my sheep, and ye are numbered among those whom the Father hath given me. And verily I say unto you, that I have other sheep, which are not of this land; neither the land of Jerusalem, neither in any parts of that land round about, whither I have been to minister. For they of whom I speak, are they who have not as yet heard my voice; neither have I at any time manifested myself unto them. But I have received a commandment of the Father, that I shall go unto them, and that they shall hear my voice, and shall be numbered among my sheep, that there may be one fold, and one shepherd; therefore I go to show myself unto them.—Book of Mormon, 3 Nephi 7: 13-26.

But now I go unto the Father, and also to show myself unto the lost tribes of Israel, for they are not lost unto the Father, for he knoweth whither he hath taken them.—Book of Mormon, 3 Nephi 8: 4.

In the year 587 B. C. King Nebuchadnezzar sent an armed body of men into the land of Judah and took captive the people, carrying them to Babylon, where they remained for seventy years. Thus divided, Israel was destroyed as two separate kingdoms, and her people scattered.

In the year 70 A. D. Titus, the Roman general, took Jerusalem by siege. It began at the Passover time, when a million and a quarter of people were gathered at the Holy City. For three and a half years horrors were experienced by those that were shut up within the wall. At last the city was taken, the temple reduced to ashes; the courts of the temple swam with blood; 6,000 miserable women and children sank amid the blazing ruins. Josephus reckons the number of captives taken during the war at 97,000, and the number of those who perished in the siege at 1,100,000. Prisoners were sent to Egyptian mines, and to towns, and sold as slaves. Thus the words of Zechariah were fulfilled:

I will scatter them with a whirlwind among all the nations whom they knew not. Thus the land was desolate after them, that no man passed through nor returned; for they laid the pleasant land desolate.—Zechariah 7: 14.

Ezekiel says:

My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill; yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search after them.—Ezekiel 34: 6.

Although God's people have been scattered in all parts of the world, they will be remembered and brought forth in the due time of the Lord. There are to be at least three records written by three divisions of the House of Israel: The Jews, the Nephites, and the People of the North Country, probably a portion of the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel. Ezekiel 37th chapter tells of two of these books that are to come forth; one is the Bible and the other is the Record of the Nephites and Lamanites, or in other words the history of the house of Joseph of Egypt.

The Book of Mormon tells of these records:

Wherefore, because that ye have a Bible, ye need not suppose that it contains all my words; neither need ye suppose that I have not caused more to be written; for I command all men, both in the East, and the West, and in the North, and in the South, and in the islands of the sea, that they shall write the words that I shall speak unto them. For out of the books which shall be written, I will judge the world, every man according to their works, for behold, I shall speak unto the Jews, and they shall write it, and I shall also speak unto the other tribes of Israel, which I have led away, and they shall write it; and I shall also speak unto all the nations of the earth, and they shall write it, and it shall come to pass that the Jews shall have the words of the Nephites, and the Nephites shall have the words of the Jews; and the Nephites and the Jews shall have the words of the lost tribes of Israel, and the lost tribes of Israel shall have the words of the Nephites and the Jews. And it shall come to pass that my people which are of the house of Israel, shall be gathered home unto the lands of their possessions; and my words shall be gathered in one. And I will show to them that fight against my word and against my people, who are of the house of Israel, that I am God, and that I covenanted with Abraham, that I would remember his seed forever.—2 Nephi 12: 54-74.

The Doctrine and Covenants is not one of the books referred to, for the contents of that book is rather an interpretation of the law found in the other books, especially pertaining to the building of Zion. The Doctrine and Covenants is an international book, and is in fulfillment of what Jesus said in 2 Nephi 12: 70: "And I shall speak unto all nations of the earth, and they shall write it." See also the first three verses of the preface, or section 1 of the Covenants:

Gathering of Israel

Go and proclaim these words toward the north and say, Return, thou backsliding Israel, saith the Lord, and I will not cause mine angels to fall upon you; for I am merciful, saith the Lord, and I will not keep anger forever. . . . In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers.—Jeremiah 3: 12, 18.

Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that they shall no more say, The Lord liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but, The Lord liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them, and they shall dwell in their own land.—Jeremiah 23: 7, 8. (See also Jeremiah 16: 14, 15.) (See Doctrine and Covenants 108: 5, 6.)

This stupendous miracle is to be enacted when the children of Israel come from their fastnesses in the ice hills, and the great deep shall roll back to the north, and the islands shall become one land, as it was before it was divided, according to Doctrine and Covenants 108: 5, 6. Genesis 10: 25 tells us that "the earth was divided in the days of Peleg." Peleg was the fourth in descent from Shem, who was the son of Noah. This was about the year 2247 B. C.

America Hid from the Knowledge of the People on the Eastern Continent

It is not strange that God has hid a portion of the Ten Tribes of Israel that came out of Assyria, for America was hid for hundreds of years, until God saw fit to reveal its existence to the people of the Eastern Continent. People may have come to America in the year 1000 A. D. or before, but it was not until Columbus came in 1492 and took back proof of his discoveries, that America became known to the civilized world. Book of Mormon, 1 Nephi 3: 145-151, gives us an account of the Lord having something to do with the coming of Columbus to the land of America.

Mr. Ingersoll, the noted infidel, made a statement that God did not know anything about America until Christopher Columbus discovered it and told him about it. The Book of Mormon disputes this statement.

Archæological finds in America have proved the fact that people lived on this continent for hundreds of years. The Book of Mormon tells us that the first migration came from the Tower of Babel in 2200 B. C. Another colony came from Jerusalem in 600 B. C., and a third colony came from the same place in 585 B. C. The first colony that came to America lived here for 1600 years before civil strife put an end to this nation. The second and third colonies continued on this land until about the year

OF GENERAL INTEREST

What Is It to Be a Christian?

The answer to this question is a simple one, however profound it may be in its implications and consequences. To be a Christian is to be Christ's man; that is, it is to be one who has accepted Jesus Christ as the Lord and Master of his life.

Thus to be a Christian involves a relationship which is strictly personal. One can not make the claim to be a Christian merely on the ground that he is a citizen of one of the so-called Christian nations. Nor does the fact that one has been baptized, or that he is a member of a Christian church warrant him in calling himself a Christian. Before he can claim that high privilege, he must have definitely entered into a certain personal relationship to Jesus Christ.

He must know enough about the character, life, teachings, and conduct of Jesus Christ to form an intelligent judgment of them. Thus he must have studied the New Testament, particularly the four gospels in which the life of Christ is set forth, or he must have gained such knowledge from others who possess it.

Now no sincere and thoughtful person can thus become acquainted with Jesus Christ without being attracted to him. Yet to admire Jesus and to approve his character and teaching do not make one a Christian. Admiration must ripen into love, and approval into obedience.

There are four realms in which the Christian surrenders the control of his life to Him whom he has thus made his Master, and we may describe them under four terms which are applied to Christians in the New Testament. They are disciples, believers, followers, and brothers. They suggest that Christ

The Lord protected and hid the people that lived in America so long as they kept his commandments; when they failed to do this he allowed them to almost exterminate themselves in wars; the remnant that survived were the American Indians on the continent that were here when Columbus and those that followed him landed on the shores of this Western Continent.

must control our intellect, our will, our affections, and our relation to others.

Christians are called disciples; that is, learners, pupils. A Christian is one who has given the direction of his thinking to Jesus Christ and has become a pupil in his school.

Jesus is still the supreme Teacher of mankind. If, as Matthew Arnold has said, "conduct is three fourths of life," then the largest and most important part of what we need to know we can learn from Him. He teaches us what God is like and what God wants of us. He teaches us how we should behave toward our fellow men. Above all, he shows us how we may attain the type of character which he exemplified.

Again, Christians are called in the New Testament believers. A Christian is one who has surrendered his will to Christ to be controlled by him.

Christian believers are not merely persons who hold correct opinions about Jesus Christ. Indeed it is conceivable that one might be quite correct in his thinking and yet not truly be a Christian at all. The Christian life depends primarily, not upon one's ability to settle offhand disputed questions in religion, but upon an act of the will.

Christian believers are those who believe in Jesus Christ sufficiently to give their wills into his control. There is a vast difference between believing something about a person and believing in that person. The first Christians believed in Jesus, though they did not believe all that they later came to believe about him. They believed in him thoroughly enough to choose to cast in their lot with him. It is such confidence in Jesus Christ that the New Testament calls "faith."

Once again, Christians are called in the New Testament "followers." A Christian is not only one who sits at the feet of Jesus to learn from him and who trusts him sufficiently to give to him the control of his will, but who loves Jesus Christ with a devotion sufficient to follow him wherever he may go. He has given to Christ the control of his affections.

You can not tell when you begin to follow Christ just what it may mean for you, nor where it will take you. It may mean that you must turn your back upon some inviting opportunities of business success, which can not be accepted without disloyalty to conscience. It will certainly mean that you must devote your life to unselfish ends. But whatever it may involve, you will have Jesus Christ with you, and under such a leader you can not fail.

Finally, a Christian is called in the New Testament a "brother"; that is, he is one who accepts the duties of the relationship which Christ declares that every man occupies toward his fellow, and tries to perform them.

"One is your Master, even Christ," said Jesus, "and all ye are brethren." He lived as a brother to all men. It was said of him that "he went about doing good." It made no difference whether men helped or hindered him or tried to injure him; he served them all in love.

To be a Christian, then, is to be a brother to all men, as Jesus was. To be brotherly is to be unselfish, to be willing to share and to "lend a hand." Within the family, no brother should wish to succeed or be happy at the expense of the failure or misery of any other member of the family. The human family, whose Father is God and within which all men are brothers, includes men of every race, white and black and yellow, rich men and poor, wise men and ignorant. Between them Jesus made no distinction. Race prejudice is totally opposed to the spirit of Jesus. It is evident that Jesus meant that whatever relations we sustain to others, whoever they may be, in school or in the home, in the factory or in the office, as teacher or scholar, father or mother, brother or sister, friend or acquaintance, employer or employee, we should act as brothers and sisters ought to act toward one another.

It is sometimes easier to be a Christian in the wider circles in which we move than in the intimate relations of family life. Jesus chose the term brother by which to describe those who had adopted his attitude toward their fellow men from the institution of the family, but he was not unaware that relations within the family are often far from ideal. There is no better place to begin to live the Christian life than at home. Pierre Loti, in his autobiography, tells us that when he was a boy of nine it was his ambition to be a saint. He read the stories of the saints who had been canonized by his church, and his fancy fell upon Saint Simeon Stylites. This Simeon lived upon the top of a pillar for many years without descending, and acquired thereby a great reputation for sanctity, so that people made pilgrimages from a wide area to see him and seek his blessing. Pierre determined to be another Stylites, so he placed a high stool in the middle of the kitchen and mounted it, and announced his determination to remain there for forty years! But he soon found that such a resolution presented difficulties. His mother and the cook found him in the way and proclaimed him to be a nuisance, and made it in general so disagreeable for him that at the end of an hour he sadly descended from his eminence. He recorded in his diary, "Thus I discovered that it is exceedingly difficult to be a saint while living with your own family!" It is often difficult, but exceedingly important, to be a Christian in the home.

The Christian must not take advantage of another's weaknesses, of whatever nature they may be. There are certain physical appetites and desires which are essential to life but which easily degenerate into weaknesses, and which easily lead astray. A Christian will be aware of these dangers and will not put temptation in a brother's or sister's way. He will not bring a blush upon another's cheek, nor stir an evil passion in another's heart. Nor can a Christian take advantage of the poverty or misfortune of his brother man to enrich or advance himself. All the good things that he desires for himself he must desire equally for others and be ready to help others to secure them. "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you," said Jesus, "do ye even so to them." The Christian life demands mutual respect, regard for one another's rights, and the service of the weak and unfortunate.

To be a Christian, the Bible says, is to be "saved." To be saved is far more than to be assured of heaven when we die; it is an experience which fits us for life here and now. Salvation is a process which is not completed in an instant, though it definitely begins at the moment when the control of one's intellect, will, and affections, and the direction of one's relations to others are surrendered to Jesus Christ as Lord and Master. It was said of the early church that "there were added to it daily such as were being saved." They who have taken Christ as their Master are being saved from selfishness, to a Christlike character, by faith or trust in him.

A Christian, then, is one who has entered into a certain personal relationship with Jesus Christ, has committed his life to Jesus Christ in trust, is endeavoring to learn what Christ has to teach him and to follow in his Master's footsteps, and is trying to be brotherly. With the help of that Master, he is striving toward Christlikeness in character.

Who is a Christian? He is one whose life
Is built on love, on kindness and on faith;
Who holds his brother as his own self;
Who toils for justice, equity, and peace,
And hides no aim or purpose in his heart
That will not chord with universal good.

—Robert A. Ashworth, in Federal Council Bulletin.

We can give to the succeeding generation a vast equipment in plant and machinery, a great store of knowledge of how to run it, and we can leave for their stimulation centuries of art and literature. But the world will march forward only as far as we give our children strength of body, integrity of character, training of mind, and the inspiration of religion.—President Hoover.

Retrospect of Work of Bishop E. L. Kelley

By Gomer T. Griffiths

Kirtland, Ohio, May 23.—The officers of this branch, upon learning of the demise of our worthy and beloved brother, Bishop E. L. Kelley, arranged for a memorial service which was held in the Temple Sunday morning, May 18. There was present at this service a large number of Saints and friends.

We thought it perfectly proper and fitting to thus honor this man who had been instrumental in the hands of the Lord in restoring the grand old historic Temple from its one-time dilapidated condition to its original beauty and grandeur. He also had to do with the restoring of the Temple to the Reorganization as its rightful owners, the latter by process of law.

That the reader may have some idea of the condition of the Temple and the tremendous task which was placed upon the shoulders of our brother, I herewith quote from a statement made by the late Joseph Smith and published in the Saints' Herald in 1866: "The Temple is in tolerable repair so far as the outside is concerned, but the inside has become the prey of the spoiler; all of the ornamentations, moldings, letters, and carved work have been broken up by curiosity hunters; the two upper rooms are stripped."

Brother Smith had been to Washington, District of Columbia, in the interest of the church, and on his way home to Plano, Illinois, stopped off at Kirtland to visit the Temple. He was greatly disappointed at the appearance of the house of the Lord, and especially the inside.

About sixteen years later when Brother Kelley was sent here by the leading authorities of the church he found the outer walls in terrible condition. The task lying before him was one calling for great courage, patience, and hard work.

I have been acquainted with our brother for over fifty years. We traveled together when he was a missionary over half a century ago, at which time he held the office of a priest. In 1901 he and I were sent to England by a revelation from the Lord to look after church affairs there and also to ordain a bishop in that mission. We also lived as neighbors for some years and were associated together in church councils for many years. I have never met a minister in all my experience in the church who manifested greater faith in God and in his promises than did Brother Kelley. This accounts for the great and wonderful success he attained as a minister of Jesus Christ. When the news of his death reached me, the thought came to me, a mighty man in Israel, a prince among men has gone to his reward, and I was reminded, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

Brother Kelley was the first president of Kirtland Branch. He was also ordained Presiding Bishop in the Temple. During his ministry here he removed more prejudice from the minds of the people than any other minister. When he came here in 1882 there was an element residing here much opposed to our people returning to Kirtland. To do what they could to prevent such a thing they secured Reverend Clark Braden of the Christian Church, who was considered a great debater and who made the statement that he would "demolish Mormonism." However, in the debate which followed, Brother Kelley won the victory for himself and the church, and made friends to the cause by his gentlemanly and Christian deportment.

In my association with Brother Kelley I found him to be a true and tangible Latter Day Saint, a congenial man with whom to travel. He was a good mixer and always ready to extend the hand of welcome.

History reveals that he had been of an enterprising and energetic nature from his youth up, and occupied many positions of trust and great responsibility. He left a wonderful record for the young of today to imitate.

May we all remember the scriptural statement, "To him that worketh is the reward."

Bisbee, Arizona

May 21.—Elder George H. Wixom, ex-State missionary in Arizona, made a farewell visit to Bisbee before going to his field of labor in Southwestern Texas.

He came Wednesday evening, May 14, and was here at the midweek prayer and song service. Thursday evening he preached to a good congregation of Saints and friends. Friday evening a company of Saints took Brother Wixom to Douglas, where he preached to the local church organization. Saturday evening Bisbee Saints with five candidates for baptism went to Douglas, where Brother Wixom baptized the new members in the font of that branch. Those who were baptized are: Mrs. Stella Miller and her youngest daughter, Mrs. Cunningham and her niece, and Edward Whitaker.

On Sunday morning Brother Wixom, with the assistance of Brothers Condit, Dearborn, and Goldie, confirmed the new members.

After the morning service the Saints of Douglas and Bisbee Branches with their friends enjoyed a picnic luncheon in Warren Park. Then Brother Wixom took the train for Tucson, where he preached in the evening.

We shall miss his visits, for he has endeared himself to all by his ready smile, his consideration, and his help. We wish for him success in his new field, and we are ready to welcome to our midst the new missionary, Brother S. S. Smith.

Lamoni Stake

A Missionary Service

Several young ministers who are students at Graceland participated in a missionary service at the Brick Church Sunday evening. The congregation sang the hymns that voiced the evangelical appeal of the church. An octet of young men of the priesthood sang two spirited numbers. Four young men who are receiving their first general church appointments spoke.

Arthur Oakman, of London, England, who will be in Central Michigan District this summer, spoke first on "The missionary message of Latter Day Saintism." Virgil Sheppard, who goes to Southern Illinois, talked of the genuine nature of "Missionary zeal." Granville Swenson, of Washington, outlined "The church's missionary goal for the year," and Fred Davies, who will be returning to the British Mission at the close of college, described the "Outlook of the young missionary."

When they had finished, the octet sang with zeal the old song of the missionary chorus, "Speed away." Warmed and inspired by the service, the congregation sang in closing, "Jesus, I my cross have taken." It was one of those instances of singing a hymn in which hearts are blended and feelings throb for expression. The benedictory prayer was offered by Roy A. Cheville, who presided over the service.

Memorial Service

Lamoni observed memorial time by holding a union service at the Brick Church on the Sunday preceding Memorial Day. Members of the American Legion were guests of the service.

The congregation sang "God bless our native land," and prayer was offered by G. N. Briggs. The chorus sang that spirited anthem, "The Lord is my light," and the A Cappella Chorus in more somber tone sang, "Music when soft voices die." Apostle D. T. Williams delivered the sermon, a call to the qualities and attitudes of life that promote peace.

The close of the service was particularly impressive. When the sermon was finished, a quartet composed of Marcella Clark, Mabel Carlile, Arthur Oakman, and Roy Cheville sang a simple memorial anthem "Brave hearts, lie still," taps were sounded from the balcony by Leroy Dick, and without a break the organist began "My country, 'tis of thee." The congregation joined, with the choir leading. As the hymn was sung W. E. Prall, who presided, and Roy A. Cheville, associate, passed quietly to the front vestibule to greet the congregation.

The Second Milers to Creston

Twenty-five young people of the Second Miler Class of the Brick Church drove to Creston for the evening service. They enjoyed a picnic supper with the Creston Saints. The Second Milers presented a program of music and talks, and W. E. Prall, who accompanied them as their guest and pastor, delivered the sermon.

Topeka, Kansas

621 Jackson Street, Floor 3

May 15.—"Every day is a decision day in that we are choosing right from wrong," stated F. O. Kelley, while occupying the stand the morning of March 16. This being the day set apart by the general church as decision day, he chose the lesson found in Joshua 24:15. "The kingdom of heaven" was the subject of Pastor Phillips's discourse at the evening preaching service. It was keeping with the theme of the day.

March 23 was marked for a variety of services. After an interesting Sunday school session, the pastor delivered a discourse at the morning preaching hour, thoughts on "The people of God." A duet, "All the way," was contributed by Sisters Anna Alfrey and Vida Zirkle, Sister Happe accompanying.

At 2:30 in the afternoon occurred the baptism of two candidates, members of our Sunday school. The ordinance was administered at the Y. W. C. A. by Elder B. F. Deller, and the new members are Brother Deller's youngest daughter, Ardis Louise, and Wendell, the eldest son of Brother and Sister F. O. Kelley. Those present will not soon forget the beauty and solemnity of the occasion. The candidates were confirmed by Brother Deller at the close of the ceremony in the hall at 621 Jackson Street, where an appropriate little service had been arranged by the pastor. We hope there will come to those with whom the new members come in daily contact beauty and nobility of character.

In the evening an hour of mental and social recreation for all was provided by the Recreation and Expression Department. Miss Ruth Williams, of the Nazarene Church, a returned missionary, gave an illustrated lecture on India. She gave a vivid picture of living conditions there, showing the need of missionary endeavor in that far-away land where millions have never heard of the Christ. There was also an exhibit of articles such as idols, handwork, and clothing made and used by the natives. The audience was much pleased with the rendition of the number, "He was not willing that any should perish," by the Nazarene Girls' Quartet.

"Going on to perfection" and "Repentance" were suggestive of a well-arranged line of thought presented by F. O. Kelley and Pastor Phillips at the morning and evening preaching services March 30.

April 3 was the occasion for the monthly social of the Women's Department, also an auction sale of articles donated by the sisters. The proceeds go to the building fund. The meeting was held at the home of Sister F. O. Kelley, at Menoken, Kansas.

All services were dismissed during the Centennial Conference, and the majority of the members attended the general services on Sunday. We were fortunate that many took class work while there. Others brought interesting reports of other services and meetings attended. The new thoughts and ideas, together with the impressions of the spirit of the conference, form a whole to give impetus to branch activities.

Regular local work was resumed April 27 with zeal and enthusiasm. We are looking forward to the time when we shall be organized in harmony with the advanced program of religious education.

The Women's Department has taken up a study of the new program of religious education, using President F. M. McDowell's outline.

Monthly sacramental service for May was in charge of Brother Deller, assisted by F. O. Kelley and O. E. Weedmark. Brother Kelley stressed the significance of the service and what it means to the children of the covenant. In the evening Brother Weedmark was the speaker.

Interesting cottage prayer meetings have been held at the homes of Sister Conrad, F. O. Kelley, A. W. Port, Sister Agnes Brittain, Sister Williams, and Sister Emma Happe.

Mother's Day was appropriately observed with two sermons, "Mother," by F. O. Kelley in the morning, and in the evening "The two mothers" by Pastor Phillips. The primary department gave a short program and invited the mothers to the primary room at the close of the class, and the adult school gave due recognition in the opening exercises of the morning. Two specials were enjoyed by Sisters Anna Alfrey and Emma Happe. Sister Alfrey was accompanied by Sister Happe, and sang "That wonderful mother of mine" at the morning service. Sister Happe was accompanied by Sister Goodfellow and sang "Mother" at the evening service.

The volley ball court at the rear end of the church lawn was opened Tuesday evening, May 13, and is in charge of O. E. Weedmark, recreational leader.

Leicester, England

Members of the Recreation and Expression Department of Leicester, England, compose an active department. Saturday, May 10, they gave the first performance of an original pantomime, "Aladdin," written and produced by Elder E. R. Chappell. A good audience assembled, including District President J. Holmes and his family. Everyone enjoyed a performance that was a credit to all.

The players interpreted their roles with great credit, especially as the majority had no experience in acting and stage-craft. The cast was as follows: Emperor, Arthur Norton; empress, Florrie Norton; Abanazer, E. R. Chappell; princess, Ida Norton; Zaidee, a slave girl, Betty Chappell; fairy queen, Clarice Pickard; slave of lamp, Emily J. Norton; slave of ring, Gladys Latham; prince of demons, Thomas Newport, sr.; vizier, Thomas J. Norton, sr.; Pekoe, his son, Ted Courts; Mrs. Mustapha, J. Fred Chappell; Aladdin, her son, Florence E. Norton; guards, Kenny Pickard and Norman Norton. Kitty Standley was the pianist, and Lenard Wood played the jazz band.

It is difficult to single out any for special mention, but the burdens were borne by Florence E. Norton as a very vivacious Aladdin, E. R. Chappell as Abanazer, and Ida Norton as Princess Badroulbador. Sister Ida's singing was one of the features of the evening. The music and lighting effects were in capable hands, and altogether the entertainment was a pronounced success.

It is the intention of the Leicester Branch to produce this pantomime at local centers for the benefit of local charities, etc., in an effort to establish friendly relation between ourselves and other organizations.

Sunday, May 11, saw good congregations responding to invitations extended the previous evening.

At the morning Sunday school session the district Sunday school superintendent was in charge, and the district superintendent of the Recreation and Expression Department gave an interesting talk.

At the evening session Elder E. R. Chappell presided and District President J. Holmes offered the invocation. Special numbers were rendered by Sister Annie Holmes and Sister Ida Norton.

Short sermons were delivered by Priest T. J. Norton and Pastor T. Newport who spoke on "Service."

Leicester Branch is going ahead, happy in forwarding the Master's work. Grumbling and complaining are going out of fashion at Leicester. The Saints are finding better things to do.

Mitchell, Ontario

May 19.—The Centennial Conference, toward which we all looked with anticipation, is now history, and the missionaries have arrived in many of their fields. Members of this branch were caused to rejoice on a recent Sunday afternoon to see Elder William I. Fligg and listen to his words. Brother Eastwood, of Stratford, brought Brother Fligg to Mitchell in his car, and they returned to Stratford where Brother Fligg spoke in the evening.

On Sunday, May 18, we were again happy and thankful to have with us a minister of the gospel, Elder Frank Gray, of London. He traveled forty miles or more to preach to Rostock Saints that morning, and in the afternoon he came with Elder Ralph Moore and preached a good gospel sermon to us. He made very plain the necessity of being born of the water and the Spirit. Then back he went to Rostock to preach in the evening.

Elder Fligg was announced to preach the afternoon of May 11, and he was pleased to have a full house. He announced himself the speaker the first Sunday in June, and Elder Amos Smith, of Listowell, will speak the third Sunday in June.

The members of Mitchell were glad to have Patriarch John Shields the first Sunday in May. A brother brought him in his car from London. We enjoyed a spiritual meeting. At the close of the meeting they set out for Stratford where Brother Shields was slated to preach in the evening.

The last Sunday in April, Brother Robert and Sister Atkinson, of Saint Marys, were with us. He preached an inspiring sermon.

We wish to thank the different branches for helping us with speakers and in other ways in the latter-day work.

Dallas, Texas

Dallas and Third Avenues

A severe winter and stormy spring have prevented our having standard attendance. Therefore, we have not accomplished as much as we had hoped to do. However, now that the weather is favorable we look with hope to larger attendance.

The street in front of the church is being paved, and this improvement will help us materially. During the rainy weather, the mud had done its bit to discourage attendance.

We have been congratulating Brother and Sister Walter Keith on the arrival of a daughter, Laverne, December 30, 1929. Also a daughter was born to Brother and Sister D. A. Fuller March 6, 1930, Doris June.

The branch regrets the loss of Brother and Sister W. C. Fasig who had visited us for some time. They returned to their home in Independence.

About seven of our number attended the General Conference, and all reported a spiritual feast.

Sister Jannett Louis, of Independence, has returned home. Her sister, Mrs. H. E. Wilke, accompanied her for a visit and to attend the conference.

Several of our very active members have been away some time visiting relatives in distant States. A few of these terminated their visit the last of March in order that they might attend the conference in April. Others attended the conference first and have since been visiting.

Dallas Saints regret the loss of Brother and Sister E. F. Yerrington. They have moved to San Antonio. Saints of that city will find in them willing and efficient workers.

The branch has resolved to hold cottage prayer meetings each Sunday afternoon. This we believe will build us up spiritually and mentally.

Ladysmith, Wisconsin

May 20.—It will, no doubt, interest Herald readers and missionaries in particular to know that we have a live Sunday school at 710 Lake Avenue. The organization is less than two years old, and several have moved away since we started, but activities continue. At Christmas we presented a Christmas play, and appropriate programs have been arranged and presented for each special occasion. Sister Esther Steede should receive much credit for her activities in this line of endeavor. She gives a good example of what a girl of fifteen can do besides her regular class work (teacher).

April 6 at nine o'clock in the morning we had communion service. A fine Spirit was present. Brother Steede was in charge. The Sunday school, which opened at ten o'clock, was in charge of the superintendent, Leroy Colbert.

Mother's Day was observed with songs and program.

Rewarding the work of the Sunday school, several have been baptized of late, and many others are interested and will probably unite with us before the summer is over.

There is real talent among our young people.

All are now planning for the reunion to be held in Chetek. We anticipate a socially and spiritually profitable time.

Beardstown, Illinois

May 22.—The Department of Recreation and Expression, under the direction of Sister Eva Corcoran, presented a wonderful program the evening of May 22. This department is doing good work and furnishes opportunity for an attractive band of young people to be active. Meetings are held every Thursday evening at 7.30 on the corner of Thirteenth and Monroe Street.

Lately a most interesting program was presented. There was an instrumental duet by Maurice Corcoran, trombonist, and Ogle Thomas, alto saxophonist; a vocal duet by Sisters M. R. Shoemaker and E. E. Thomas; a mandolin solo by Beulah Lee; a recitation, "Talking for Jesus," by Jean Foster; recitation, "Say I will," by Clarence Osar; song, "Have thine own way, Lord," by Mildred Lee and Thelma Lewis; recitation by Marjorie Lewis; vocal solo, "Coming home," by Eva Martin; and a recitation, "Castor oil," by Jack Foster.

There was a two-act play by the primary department, "The healing of the centurion's servant." The cast was: Centurion, Jack Foster; his wife, Mildred Lee; his daughter, Mary Janice Thomas; his son, Claudius, Jean Foster; Rahab who is ill, Clarence Osar; servants, Thelma and Marjorie Lewis. This play was well rendered, and the experience gained at this age will be valuable as they grow older.

Beardstown has Sunday school at 9.30 every Sunday morning and preaching at 7.30 in the evening. Prayer meeting is on Wednesday at 7.30 in the evening.

Mother's Day we were favored to have Brother O. Salisbury as speaker in the evening. We extend a welcome to all to worship with us.

Providence, Rhode Island

The past six months have been very happy ones for this local. A spirit of love and cooperation has permeated all our activities. We can truthfully say that God has blessed us with his presence.

We have a prosperous Sunday school operating under the superintendency of Brother John Colbourn, assisted by Brothers J. Allison Cook and Alfred Toombs.

The ladies' aid is active under the leadership of Sister Alberta Wilcox. They recently purchased a beautiful new Estey organ for the church.

A farewell party, arranged by the Alpha Nu Omega Club was held in the vestry of the church Tuesday evening, March 25, in honor of Brother and Sister Bruce Brown, who are to make their home in Saint Louis. A large number of members and friends attended. A purse was presented to Brother and Sister Brown by Brother Herbert Floyd, president of the club, on behalf of those present.

We regret having Brother and Sister Brown leave us. We have found them true children of God, and wish for them much happiness and many friends in their new field. We pray God's spirit may always be with them.

The Easter services were well attended. Elder Fred Roberts was the speaker at the morning hour. In the evening a program was arranged by the Sunday school. Exercises and songs by the children were followed by a pageant, "The triumph of love," directed by Alfred Toombs. This was the most impressive program ever produced in Providence Church.

Sunday evening, May 11, the pageant was presented at the First Baptist Church in Lakewood, Rhode Island. We feel sure we left our Baptist friends with a friendly feeling toward us.

Brother Peter Whalley and wife Polly visited us Sunday morning, May 11, and Brother Peter certainly reached the hearts of his listeners with his Mother's Day sermon. Other recent visitors to this branch were District President William Patterson and Patriarch George Robley.

We are pleased to have Elder Edmund Brown and wife return to the Providence Branch and rejoice to know that Brother Edmund's health is improved.

Oakland, California

From The Oakland Bulletin

In the passing of Bishop E. L. Kelley the church loses a gallant gentleman, a devoted and able minister, and one who amid the early days of struggle had a sympathetic ear for others' needs and sufferings. He was one of the stalwarts who in the early days of the church's life laid the foundations upon which the present generation is building. How well those noble and valiant souls did their work we can not properly appraise today, but even now we begin to see that they were giants in their day. The church and the world are poorer for the loss of such men as Bishop E. L. Kelley. We express our deepest sympathy for the widow and children in their bereavement.

On Mother's Day we were reminded that it is a gracious thing to cultivate gratitude for the blessings of our daily life. Of all blessings none is so valuable as mother. Brother J. B. Carmichael was the morning preacher, and Pastor Rushton spoke in the evening.

A great spectacle was witnessed by those privileged to be at the University Stadium Wednesday morning, May 14. Over twenty-five hundred students received their diplomas and moved into the onflowing current of life, to become professional and business men and women. What a wonderful fifty years this army of trained men and women is going to share in and help to make! If we can have spiritual power coined with mental and physical efficiency, the next generation will be exceedingly blessed.

May 13 the workers' conference was held at the home of Brother and Sister Cecil Hawley. We hope to see this meeting made effective for good. The attendance was disappointing.

Prayer service at the church on Wednesday had a small attendance. All of us should remember that the church of Christ needs the spiritual contacts which only prayer and meditation can secure.

Today (May 18) Brother C. Moran is preaching at the Park-Presidio Church in San Francisco. The pastor will speak in Oakland morning and evening.

Among the sick who need our prayers are the son of Sister Tasto, who is very ill in the Merritt Hospital; Brother J. Wilson in the Southern Pacific Hospital; Ruth Bricker, W. Clark, and others.

A reception for the pastor was held at the home of Sister K. Meyer May 15, and a pleasant time was had by all. Sister Helen Ingham was mistress of ceremonies. A full house was in attendance.

Independence

Stone Church

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the eleven o'clock service, with Pastor John F. Sheehy presiding. He was assisted on the stand by Bishops J. A. Becker, G. W. Eastwood, and R. T. Cooper, and by Elders F. Henry Edwards, H. G. Barto, and W. Wallace Smith.

Bishop Becker spoke briefly preceding the offering of the oblation, and Pastor Sheehy read "A General Epistle to the Saints" from the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric. Sister Louise Lewis, at the organ, played the musical accompaniment for the service.

Thinking of the needs of the church as it with the rest of the Christian world approaches the nineteen hundredth anniversary of the Pentecost when the disciples of Christ "were all with one accord in one place" and experienced the endowment of the Holy Ghost, Apostle F. Henry Edwards on Sunday evening spoke earnestly to the people.

The church needs, he asserted, a great spiritual dynamic—an assurance and a real experience of God. We need today to re-think the big things to which we are committed, to feel deeply and movingly the demands which God makes upon our lives, to sense again our need for forgiveness and redemption. As the church moves forward against its enemies—materialism, intolerance, and selfishness, it must have a new baptism of fire, an endowment of the Spirit which made memorable the first Christian Pentecost. The question now before the church is one of power and quality of membership and the set of our faces.

Out of the Pentecost of old came to the apostles' burning conviction born of the Holy Ghost, that Jesus is the Lord, that beside him there is no Savior, that through him can come peace and power as in no other way.

Let us pray for a new Pentecost, suggested the speaker, that we may be imbued with and motivated by that Spirit. Through Pentecost we may have a new acts of the apostles, a greater evangelism of the world, a following of big purposes, a doing of mighty things. But we must be careful as we pray. We must make sure that we are strong enough to endure the fire of the Spirit; we must be willing to respond to the demands which the inspiration and knowledge of God will bring us.

True to its custom on the first Sunday of the month, the Stone Church Choir sang. Its contribution, directed by Paul N. Craig, was the anthem, "I will lift up mine eyes," by James H. Rogers. Sister Pearl Crick sang the soprano solo. Congregational music was led by Elder John F. Sheehy. In the stand with the speaker were Elders H. G. Barto and M. A. Smith, who were in charge.

Among the People in Zion

The Campus has opened its summer season activities. On the evening of Memorial Day the first moving pictures of the year, "We Americans," were shown to a large crowd. All afternoon picnickers and visitors came and went, availing themselves of the new and improved equipment. An event of considerable attraction was the baseball game, in which the Campus Club won its third successive game in its schedule in the American Division of the Manufacturers and Jobbers League. Every Saturday afternoon, weather permitting, a game is scheduled for the Campus diamond, and baseball fans are giving encouraging response. Already this year the Campus grounds have been the scene of numerous private picnics, and on May 23 occurred the first annual picnic of the Independence Stove and Furnace Company, a gathering of between three and four hundred people.

The Institute Building at the Campus was ablaze with light from attic to basement Thursday evening, May 29, and friends of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences thronged into the assembly room on the third floor. There President Frederick M. Smith delivered the commencement address to the 1930 graduating class, which is composed of eleven members. The high school graduates are Edgar Courtway, Loren P. Kidder, M. Elizabeth Miles, Alice Mangum, Ollie J. Pinson, Frank E. Rohrs, Wilbur L. Sell, Burl M. Shirk, Lloyd E. Stoner, A. Carlos, and Coila A. Tienken.

The Independence Music Club held its annual luncheon May 28 at the University Club of Kansas City. A feature of the program was a group of songs sung by Mrs. Margaret Strickler, accompanied by Brown Schoenhut, flutest, and Mrs. Garver at the piano. Sister Nina Grenawalt Smith presided, and the speakers were Sisters W. N. Robinson, J. F. Frazier, Margaret Gard, and Hazel Scott. Fifty members and guests attended. Sister Harold Burgess was elected president for the year.

Sunday school for the junior department at the Campus May 25 was well attended. Songs, "O gentle Savior," "My gift to Jesus," and "My rose of Sharon," were sung. During the class period the young people between the ages of eleven and twenty years old were invited to attend the Nauvoo Camp the first part of July.

The theme of the junior worship service was "Honoring God through self-control." The opening song was "Kind words." While the offering was being taken up by four boys, Brother Moore played "To a wild rose," by MacDowell. A cantata, "Our wrongs," was given by five children. Brother Vance Eastwood talked about the life of plants and self-control in our lives. The juniors would be happy to hear Brother Eastwood again. "Where he leads me" was the closing song, and the benediction was by Pastor Will Bollinger.

"O gentle Savior," "Bring them in," and "Savior, like a shepherd," were the songs which opened the Sunday school at the Campus last Sunday morning. The theme of the worship service was "Helpfulness." "Consecration" was the first song, and the opening prayer was by Brother Livingston. The scripture, 1 Corinthians 11:23-25, was read by Brother Cowan. Elders S. A. Thiel, W. L. Cowan, Judson Livingston, and W. F. Bollinger administered the sacrament to the children. Brother Thiel talked, and there were a number of prayers and twenty-five testimonies by the boys and girls. The closing song was "I need thee every hour," and Elder Thiel dismissed the service.

The Young People's Research Class, which since last October has met in the Y. K. T. room at six o'clock each Sunday evening, this week changes its time and place of meeting. It will continue its course on "Know your own church" each Friday evening at the Institute Building on the Campus. Speakers and their subjects for the past five Sundays have been: Elder J. W. Davis, "How God calls men"; Apostle E. J. Gleazer, "Baptism"; Elder Richard J. Lambert, "Repentance"; President F. M. McDowell, "Faith in God"; and Apostle F. Henry Edwards, "What is salvation?" On last Sunday evening the class was reminded by the president that there will be no lecture Friday evening, June 6, the time being devoted to class election. All members are invited to be present.

Miss Ruth Bryant, physical education instructor of the Independence Junior High School, has been secured to take charge of the playground at the Campus this summer beginning June 9. She will have boys and girls five days each week. Each morning from 9 to 10.15 o'clock she will have children up to ten years of age for group games. The boys and girls will play separately. From 10.15 to 11.30 o'clock each day boys and girls over ten years old will have play period. Tuesday and Thursday afternoons in June, beginning at four o'clock, twilight baseball will be conducted by Miss Bryant and her assistants, who will be children picked as squad leaders. Children taking part should be there by four o'clock June 10.

The funeral of Charles Robert Dobson occurred Sunday afternoon at the Stone Church, the sermon being delivered by Elder John F. Sheehy. The deceased, a son of Brother and Sister Adam Dobson, was born at Luce Town, Montana, November 6, 1909. He married Miss Barbary Rawson at Shelby, Montana, in 1928. He passed away May 26 as the result of injuries received at the Portland Cement Company at Cement City, Missouri. Left to mourn are his wife, mother, four brothers, and four sisters. His father and eight brothers and sisters have preceded him in death. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence.

Walnut Park

All the services at Walnut Park on Sunday, June 1, were of a high order. The eight o'clock prayer meeting was unusually well attended, and resulted in great spiritual benefit to those present. The meeting was in charge of Elder John A. Taylor.

The regular Sunday session of the church school, under the supervision of Elder Barnhardt, was also well attended. The classes are characterized by an increasing interest on the part of the pupils and an improved quality of teaching. The Walnut Park Orchestra, under the direction of the church school chorister, Sanford Downs, has been rendering valuable assistance in the school program.

Sacramental service, Elder Fred Lanpher in charge, was marked by a spirit of worship and devotion. Bishop J. A. Koehler, of Holden Stake, was present and gave the talk preceding the oblation. Elder Samuel C. Smith, the pastor, gave the talk on the sacrament.

A beautiful and fitting part of the service was the blessing of Betty Lou Thorpe, the seven-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Verne Thorpe, of Memphis, Tennessee. The mother was formerly Alice Bullard, of Independence. The baby was blessed by Elder George F. Bullard, the grandfather, assisted by Elder Samuel C. Smith.

The speaker at the evening service was Patriarch W. A. McDowell, who gave an interesting discourse on the subject "Improving our talents." The Saints of Walnut Park were indeed happy to have Brother McDowell with them in order to have the benefit of his fatherly counsel and encouragement.

Sister F. R. Schafer, who is in charge of the adult department of the church school and who was formerly head of the Women's Department at Walnut Park, was taken to the Sanitarium on Wednesday of last week and operated upon Thursday morning. The operation, performed by Doctor John R. Green, was very successful, and Sister Schafer is recuperating rapidly; in fact, she got along so well that on Monday she was taken in an ambulance to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Carroll L. Olson, who is a trained nurse and who will see that she is properly taken care of to insure a complete recovery.

A beautiful wedding took place at the church Sunday afternoon when Miss Margaret Gard, daughter of Brother and Sister W. T. Gard, and Clyde O. Bullard, now of Chicago but formerly from Independence, son of Brother and Sister George F. Bullard, were united in the bonds of matrimony. Almost four hundred Saints and friends from Independence and elsewhere were present. The double ring ceremony was performed by President Frederick M. Smith before an altar and archway banked with ferns and Shasta daisies. Preceding the ceremony George Anway sang "Because," "Ah, sweet mystery of life," and "At dawning," and Gomer Cool played two violin numbers, "The Indian love call" and "In time of roses," accompanied at the piano by Florence Koehler Campbell, who also played the "Lohengrin" wedding march. "Love's old sweet song" was played softly during the ceremony by Mrs. Campbell and Mr. Cool. Tiers of cathedral candles on either side of the archway were lighted by Mary Bell Sanders, Audry Horn, and Ruth Irene Cox. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The matron of honor was Mrs. Cora Fligg Bullard. Miss Ruth Bryant and Miss Ruth Lanpher were bridesmaids. Mary Elizabeth Gard, niece of the bride, and Frances Bullard, sister of the groom, were flower girls. Richard Crawford was the ring bearer. Earl J. Cox acted as best man for Mr. Bullard, and the groomsmen were Arlen Chapman and Roy Gard. The ushers were Milford Nace, Boyd Crawford, and W. K. Gard. Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the church. Miss Maurine Nace sang, "I love you truly" and "Believe me if all those endearing young charms," and Albert Brackenbury sang "O promise me" and "When." Mr. and Mrs. Bullard left Sunday night for a trip south and east and after June 10 will be at home in Chicago.

Gudgell Park

May 18 Saints of Gudgell Park had the privilege of hearing two splendid sermons. At the morning service Apostle C. F. Ellis spoke, at the evening hour Elder A. C. Martin, of Seattle, Washington. Attendance for the entire day was good.

Friday night has been turned over to the young people for play night. They are working on another volley ball court in order that all may have room to play.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson gave an excellent sermon the morning of May 25, and that evening Patriarch F. A. Smith occupied the sacred desk.

The early morning prayer meeting continues to be a source of encouragement to the young people.

Sister Iva Gould's class of ten girls had charge of the church school May 25, and the way they conducted the service made the entire branch proud of their ability.

Unusually good attendance greeted the first service of the month. Sacramental service was encouraging, the local priesthood in charge.

Elder William M. Self spoke in the evening.

Spring Branch

Attendance at the early Sunday morning prayer services has been gaining, as well as that of the Wednesday evening worship services.

Sunday morning the eleven o'clock service of communion was in charge of Pastor J. E. Cleveland, assisted by Brothers Snively, Mabbott, Heath, and Smith. We were happy to see the smiling face of our former pastor, Brother Snively, at this hour. He is always welcome, and the members wish it were possible for him to attend more frequently.

Some of the men of this district have lately been very busy, working each evening to complete the construction of a new baptismal font. This will be finished in time for Children's Day exercises. Fourteen names have been handed in for baptism at that time. We expect more names to be submitted before the day arrives.

The members rejoiced to see Brother Arthur Peer at the church school service Sunday. Brother Peer has been seriously ill the past two weeks.

A banquet for the priesthood and their wives will be held at the church Thursday evening, June 12.

Elder J. A. Gardner was the evening speaker Sunday.

A Bright Outlook in Detroit

By Hubert Case

May 30.—As I muse upon the Centennial Conference and the work beginning the new century of church development, it seems to me that the big thing of the conference which undoubtedly stands out in every mind was the careful observance of the admonition, Teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you. This was a teaching conference, teaching the people to do the things He has commanded us.

The vision now seems clearer. The class work is over for the present, and the workers are at their tasks, one group gathering in the sheaves, the others engaged in all the pursuits of industry and culture. We are all laborers together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.

This year finds us facing new conditions in Detroit. The Saints have bought more books and papers than in any previous year, and my stock of books to loan prospective members is many times greater than ever before. We aim to bring into the church members with as full an understanding of their duty as possible. Through the publicity people in Detroit and the courtesy of the Herald Office managers, we have obtained about five hundred dollars worth of books in the last two months. Why should not these books be in the hands of the people rather than on the shelves of the office?

Last year the harvest of souls was bounteous. More than three hundred were brought in by myself and the ministry who assisted me. This year and the years ahead we feel that we should do better.

Encouraging Letter from Hilo, Hawaii

Hilo Branch has for the past few months been struggling under a strained condition which has been of much discouragement to the Saints, especially the priesthood, but at the sacramental service held May 5 a very spiritual meeting was enjoyed by a goodly majority of the Saints of the branch. We were made much happier by the attendance of Brother Gilbert J. Waller, our beloved elder, recently called to the office of patriarch, whose unexpected visit was a happy surprise both to himself and to us. It seems to us that the guiding hand of a loving God had something to do with making possible his visit among us, the result of which has brought about a satisfactory and longed-for condition among the Saints. Elder Prescott A. Foo, who is isolated from the Saints, on the island of Maui, was also present with us.

At 11 o'clock a priesthood meeting was held with Brother Waller in the Mission House. A business meeting followed at 11.30 in the church building, wherein Brother Waller read several extracts of letters from President F. M. Smith and Apostle M. A. McConley having to do with work among us. This was followed by the ordination of Brother Robert Pahau, who was called to the office of elder, and the restoration of Brother Camara to active duty in his office as teacher.

The business meeting having been disposed of, those of the priesthood took their regular places. Then followed the administration of the sacrament. A goodly degree of the Spirit of God was present. Many testimonies were borne.

Brother Hapai, under the influence of the Spirit, bore his testimony, witnessing to the truth of this wonderful work. Brother Waller was made happy at the result attained, and can report to President Smith and Apostle McConley the success of his visit. Brother Hapai, on behalf of the branch, took the opportunity to congratulate Brother Waller at his recent call to the office of patriarch, Brother Pahau at his call to the office of elder, and Brother Camara at his restoration to the duties of his office as teacher, urging the Saints to cooperate with the priesthood, who needed their support because of their added responsibilities. A number of sick were administered to. Such a meeting is indeed a blessing to those whose hearts are bound by the tie of Christian fellowship.

After the service, Brothers Waller and Foo were guests of the priesthood at a Chinese lunch given at King Joy Lau Restaurant, after which we all went to see them off on the S. S. Hualalai, Brother Waller to Honolulu, and Brother Foo to his home on Maui.

This day has been one of my happiest experiences with the Saints. I ever pray for the continuance of God's guiding hand among his children.

LELANI HAPAI.

HILO, HAWAII, May 10.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

"Apple blossoms," by Kathleen Roberts, in all its beauty, came in joyous ecstasy from the organ, played by Hazel Scott, as the congregation reverently meditated while the choir and presiding officers assembled in their places, and another Sabbath service was begun on May 25. Brother B. E. Root offered the invocation. Sister Lilly Belle Allen, of Independence, sang a beautiful solo, "God so loved the world," by McDermott. Elder George Mesley told the morning story of the children, the various classes then assembling for the study period.

At the service period, hymn number 142 was sung. "God is our refuge," by Buck, was ably rendered by the choir under the direction of Brother Evan Fry. The morning discourse was delivered by Stake Missionary G. T. Richards, who used for his text the fifteenth chapter and third verse of the first epistle of Peter, "Be ready always to give an answer to every man that asks for a reason of the hope that is within you." He gave an interesting discourse, bringing to mind some of the tasks that lie before us as individuals and as a church to realize the hopes that are within us in the establishing of Zion.

At the evening service, the choir sang "The radiant morn hath passed away," by Woodward, and were pleased to have as guest soloist, Brother Colin Ferrett, of Australia. Brother Ferrett sang from Handel's Messiah, "The people that walked in darkness." Elder Cyril E. Wight spoke fittingly in memory of "our boys" who gave of their lives for the cause of democracy.

The radio broadcasting over K M B C from ten to eleven o'clock was continued, and many telephone calls and letters are being received in appreciation of this service.

June 1 was a beautiful Sabbath. Everywhere radiated the handwork and goodness of God. Following the prelude, "Andante con Moto," by King Hall, on the organ, hymn number 178 was sung, and prayer offered by Brother Roy Thurtchley. "Bless the Lord, O my soul," by Ippolitoff-Ivanof, was sung by the choir. The guest soloist, Brother Albert Brackenbury, sang a bass solo, "Out of the deep," by Marks, assisted at the piano by Hazel Scott.

During the study period, the O. B. K.'s met for election of a counselor, their selection being Brother Bill Brown, and Brother George Bowser as assistant. Dorothy Eaton was elected secretary-treasurer.

The sacramental service at eleven o'clock was only fairly well attended, but a spirit of reverence was felt, and a number of short testimonies were given. Those that are on beds of affliction were particularly held before the throne of grace.

The Stake Oratorio Chorus met at 2.30 under the direction of Brother Evan Fry and rehearsed for a radio concert June 8.

At the evening service preceding the sermon, the choir rendered several anthems, assisted by Velma Nunn, contralto, a musical service which is always inspiring. Brother Lester Fowler, tenor-baritone, also contributed to this program, singing "The king of love my shepherd is," by Shelby.

This program was repeated at the radio service from ten to eleven o'clock over K M B C.

Several of our members have been seriously ill. Sister Myrtle Wamsley has undergone a major operation at Saint Joseph Hospital. Brother Clayton Wolfe underwent an appendicitis operation at Research Hospital. Recent reports indicate that both are improving, and it is hoped they will be able to return to their homes in the course of the next ten days or two weeks. Both these young people are active workers at Central Church.

Some of our young people have been attaining signal honors in expressional activities. Billy Babb won a trip to California and second place in a Kansas City harmonica contest; Maribeth Martin won second in a Horner Conservatory contest; Rebecca Dunn won first for interpretative reading in the state contest at Columbia and national scholastic honors; and the high soprano solo work of Josephine Crinklaw won her three honors: First in Kansas High School League, second in state contest, and soloist in a national high school chorus of sixty at Chicago. In addition to winning high scholastic and journalistic honors, Paul Harrington captained the Wyandotte High School Basketball Team in the state tournament, where they won first place. We are proud of the success of these and other young people throughout the stake.

Fourth Church

Sacramental service the 4th of May was a feast to the Saints, as the Spirit was there with its gift of prophecy.

At eight in the evening Elder Leonard Lee addressed the young people, his talk being on the Centennial Conference. He urged that "we all keep very much alive in active service until next conference."

Mother's Day, May 11, was enjoyed by all. The main auditorium was beautifully decorated with flowers and gave the appearance of a veritable garden. One hundred forty-eight were present to enjoy the many solos, readings, and songs. Several of the young women sang "The beautiful garden of prayer." Pastor J. O. Worden then read the seventeenth chapter of Saint John, the beautiful prayer of the Savior; and Sister J. O. Worden read a poem, "The mother's prayer."

At seven o'clock in the evening occurred election of departmental heads. At eight o'clock in the evening Patriarch Ammon White was the speaker.

Tuesday, May 20, the priesthood, with their wives and close friends, held a social at the church. Three long tables were placed in triangular formation. Upon them were placed potted flowers and plants, as well as beautiful cut flowers. Three large lamps gave a beautiful effect, aided by colored ribbons overhead. Several of the sisters proved to be expert in cooking and in preparing dainty dishes. Solos were sung by the young women. Brother Cyril Wight, stake president, Brother C. A. Skinner, stake bishop, and Pastor J. O. Worden spoke cheering words to those present, and outlined the duties of each member of the priesthood, and their companions.

Argentine Church

At 7:45, Patriarch Ammon White was the speaker, teaching a lesson from Matthew 24, stressing the thirty-seventh, thirty-eighth, and thirty-ninth verses. He deplored the tendency of the present generation to be "eating and drinking, marrying, and giving in marriage," as they were in the days of Noah, heedless of the approach of the flood. He said that the ancient church was organized in simplicity and suggested periods of fasting rather than undue feasting or revelry. The call now is to repent.

Sacramento, California

May 29.—Elder Wilbur Gillen, of Los Angeles, was a business visitor in this city last week. He preached Sunday morning on "The first commandment" and in the evening on "The social philosophy of Joseph Smith." His sermons showed much study and thought and were well received. As he expects to be here occasionally this summer, we are looking forward to his next sermon on "Stewardships."

At the morning service on Mother's Day, Elder John Howe, of Modesto, spoke, presenting a fine sermon drawn from a depth of rich experiences. In the evening, as a preface to a splendid sermon by Elder S. M. Reiste, the Temple Builders, Alpha Theta Chapter, presented in tableaux "The mothers of the leaders of men," by Hazel Blohm. Those taking the parts were: Helen Sandvick, the mother of Moses; Rose Ida Dawson, the madonna; Ruth Weitzel, the mother of Martin Luther; Inez Honeychurch, the mother of the Prophet of the Restoration; Violet Rausch, the mother of the Prophet of the Reorganization, with her three sons, David, a baby in arms, Alexander, Jack Russell, and Joseph, Kenneth Honeychurch; Nellie Roberts, a grandmother of the Civil War days; Letha White, a modern mother of Zion Builders. Sister Marian Burton directed and was the reader. Brother Ives Honeychurch was the electrician. Helen Sandvick costumer, Sister Gertrude Bidwell pianist. Sister Edna Burdick is the girls' leader. Their social meeting at Easter-time was at the home of Letha White. The table decorations were in keeping with the season. Sister Burton met with them at the home of Rose Ida Dawson for the play arrangements.

Elder George Vallem, of Lodi, ably filled the pulpit the last Sunday morning in April, referring to the great work ahead of us as a church. His sermon showed how closely he had kept in touch with the Centennial Conference through the Daily Herald, and, incidentally, the value of this news medium to the church at large.

The Easter services were well attended. Pastor W. H. Dawson gave the sermons. The choir, directed by Sister Birdie Clark, rendered special music. The children in the primary department, with Sister Orah Johnston, superintendent, and Sister Della Price, teacher, told the story of Easter, holding up golden letters, "Christ Is Risen." Seated in front of them were the beginners, taught by Sister Adelma Price, holding up silver letters, "Easter." The juniors sang "Easter bells."

Friday evening, May 2, the Idola Club gave a chicken supper at the church. Sister Ella Dawson, chairman of the finance committee, was in charge. Afterwards a program was given upstairs, Sister Marian Burton presiding. Talks on the Centennial Conference were given by Sisters Gertrude Bidwell and Hazel Blohm. A paper written by Sister Cora Taylor was read by Sister Marie Honeychurch. Vocal solos were contributed by Sisters Betty Bidwell and Edna Burdick. Sister Dawson and her committee are continuing in the arduous but successful work of cake sales for the benefit of the piano fund. All of Friday is spent in baking in the church kitchen and then all of Saturday in selling the cakes in local stores. The Idola Club met last at the church, with Brother E. C. Burdick in the chair. A group stewardship taken up independently by three of the members was reported as successfully launched. Other items of importance were discussed. Sister Marie Honeychurch was appointed to secure data on the large popcorn and machine seen at conference. Refreshments were served by the committee, Sister Rose Dawson, chairman.

For some time the attendance of nonmembers at Sunday evening services has averaged ten adults. Mr. Earl M. Leslie was baptized in April by the pastor. Several more are to be baptized soon.

This month three teachers of piano have given their annual recitals in our main auditorium, each making a donation to our building fund. Two more recitals are planned for June. This utilizes our fine new Kimball grand piano and widens the circle of acquaintances with the church.

During the absence of the church school superintendent, Sister Bidwell, at conference, the assistant, Sister Mary Bussell, presided.

For the general assembly worship period Sister Bussell used the theme "Sacrifice and love" for two Sundays, showing the pictures of Joseph Smith and Kirtland Temple, and Frederick M. Smith and the Auditorium one morning; then on sacrament Sunday a large picture of "Jesus in Gethsemane." On this morning the children marched from their classes directly to the sacramental service. Another Sunday the theme was "Home-coming," with a talk on the conference by Sister Hazel Blohm. The following Sunday the theme was "Home," with a cornet solo, "Home, sweet home," by Brother Ives Honeychurch and a talk by another conference delegate, Sister Cora Taylor, on "The responsibility of parents as teachers." Scripture readings were given, "Some of God's commands to fathers," by Olive Ensley; "Instruction to sons and daughters," by Ralph Ensley; "How to bring joy and grief to parents," by Sister Marie Honeychurch. This was taken from the Department Journal for May.

Ten workers are taking the second test in Section II of The Teacher's Training Course from our own Department of Religious Education. Sister Florence Epling has charge of this, as well as of other study classes at the six o'clock hour Sunday evenings. Fourteen workers, including most of this group of ten, have just received their certificates from a county council six weeks' session of the international council of religious education, held in a local church. Our church ranked first in numbers attending.

Brother and Sister Newton Napier have just returned from a visit with relatives and friends in the Middle West and Portland, Oregon. They attended church in Kansas City and Saint Louis. Illness prevented their making the trip in time for the conference.

Sister Julia Crocker, of Loomis, worshiped with us Sunday, her first opportunity since attending the conference.

Elder and Sister C. W. Hawkins have returned to their home in San Jose. Sister Hawkins spent several weeks in the home of her daughter, Sister W. H. Dawson, while the latter attended the conference.

The Saints here were saddened to learn of the death in Arizona of the baby daughter of Brother Emell Lundgren, of this branch, who now resides in San Francisco. The little one's neck was broken when she fell three steps.

Sister Pauline Napier Winslow was graduated from junior college last evening with the large class holding services in the Memorial Auditorium.

Sarnia, Ontario

May 30.—Sarnia Branch is moving steadily forward under the leadership of Branch President Wilfred L. Phillips, and each department is making favorable progress.

The Women's Department anticipates putting on an apron social and a bake box. The members hope the results will be gratifying. During the latter part of March they presented a play entitled "Mrs. Deacon Spriggs" from which the sum of thirty dollars was realized.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, under the leadership of Brother Charles Dodds, is furnishing recreational activities for the younger members of the branch, and they are taking a keen interest in the development of this department.

The Sunday school sponsored an Easter Day and Mother's Day program by the junior pupils of the school.

We were pleased to hear that Elder D. J. Williams was sent back to be our district president.

Three homes have been made happy by the arrival of new members, a son, James Allen, to Mrs. R. Darrach; a daughter, Joanne Ferne, to Mrs. Clifford Smith; and a daughter, Terais Imogene, to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hughes.

On March 9 we lost a faithful member in the passing of Sister Roy C. Gilson. She was a loving wife and mother and will be missed by her family and friends.

We pray that the word of God will spread, and we are going forward in the hope of making a better record this year than we did last.

MARJORIE R. SWAINSON.

Barberton, Ohio

May 27.—At this beautiful time of the year, when nature is putting forth an effort to appear new and look glad and when "Clean up" is the slogan of the hour, we send all of like faith our greetings and trust that you, too, are pressing onward with a new determination and desire to present to mankind the old message made more attractive in the light of the present-day program.

Barberton continues to operate its activities under the church school program adopted in January.

The priesthood, under the direction of Branch President Odom, are bending every effort to better qualify themselves for the task which lies before them. On Monday evenings twice a month this body meets, and members submit papers and make talks on their duties. Visits are being made, and recently a few who have not been in attendance for some time were brought back.

On Monday night each week, for one hour before priesthood meetings, this same body is engaged in the study of English under the direction of Sister Ward. A brief grammar review of parts of speech, correct usage of verbs, etc., has been made. The priesthood have entered into an agreement to constructively criticize each other's talks from the standpoint of English. At present they are working on how to collect, organize, and present material in brief talks in an attractive manner.

The old type of Religio has been abandoned, and instead for one hour before the Sunday night sermon, the adults meet in a class called "Latter Day Saints' Education for Efficiency in Church School." Under the direction of Sister Ward the class is using the socialized recitation in which members give reports from books read and other members ask questions and discuss the reports. Reports have been given from Your Growing Child, The Problem Child in the Home, The Child and Society, and Cabot's Ethics. Outlines are often used from which discussions take place. The young people continue to meet on Tuesday nights. They are now giving two talks at a meeting, and a social hour follows.

Sister Hoffman, the primary supervisor, is working on material for a Children's Day program with the little folks.

On Mother's Day Brother and Sister Haines, of Cleveland, were here. Brother Haines delivered a good sermon, and Sister Haines gave a vocal selection, accompanied at the piano by Melba Colegrove, of Cleveland.

In the evening the young people gave a program in honor of Mother, after which the mothers were presented carnations.

Elder McConnaughy, of this local, has begun a series of Sunday evening missionary sermons, hoping to attract nonmembers of this city.

We are glad to note that Brother Crispin is much better and has been able to meet with us a few times. He has been able to be taken for drives.

Our Departed Ones

DOUBT.—Worthy Ellis, son of Edwin and Ellen Doubt, was born August 22, 1869, near Angola, Steuben County, Indiana. Departed this life at his farm home near Batavia, Branch County, Michigan, April 19, 1930. July 4, 1900, he was married to Mrs. Olive Bowman, of Angola. Leaves to mourn his passing his wife; one daughter, Vera, by a former marriage; one stepson, Claude; two grandchildren: Max, of South Bend, Indiana, and Virginia, of Sturgis, Michigan; two sisters, and a wide circle of other relatives and friends. He was a model farmer. Was baptized by S. W. L. Scott, August 30, 1920, and was a firm believer of its doctrines. His business principle was the Golden Rule, and he was a man highly esteemed. The funeral was conducted from the Saints' church in Coldwater, Michigan, April 22, 1930, S. W. L. Scott preaching the sermon to a large congregation. Interment was in Riverside Cemetery, Quincy, Michigan.

GRAHAM.—Harry Marshall Graham was born August 20, 1910, near Brownell, Ness County, Kansas. Moved with his parents to Bourbon County, Kansas, living near Mapleton and Devon for nearly nineteen years. He united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints June 13, 1920, being baptized by C. A. Gamet at Mapleton, Kansas. He was an active church worker and occupied as assistant Sunday school superintendent in Fort Scott Branch for the past year. He died April 29, 1930. Besides his parents he leaves to mourn four sisters and three brothers.

LOCKERBY.—Cornelia E. Ball, daughter of Charles and Elizabeth Ball, was born July 5, 1835, at Steuben, Oneida County, New York. Her girlhood days were spent in the schools of that locality until 1858. At the age of twenty-four years she with the family moved to Michigan, where they farmed in Branch County. May 3, 1860, she married William G. Lockerby who had immigrated to America from Scotland. Three children were born to them: Mrs. Minnie Corless, Coldwater, Michigan; Mrs. Ella Moore, who died in 1909; and Mrs. Carrie Murphy, of Coldwater. Her husband passed away in 1895, since which time Mrs. Lockerby has made her home with her daughters. She was baptized into the church by E. C. Briggs, July 24, 1876, and for fifty-four years has been a pillar of faith and Christian excellence. She passed away April 27, 1930, the last member of the older generation belonging to Coldwater Branch. Surviving are her two daughters, two grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, and a wide circle of other relatives and friends in Michigan and New York. The funeral was conducted from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Murphy, April 30. The sermon was preached to a large audience of friends by Elder S. W. L. Scott. Interment was in Lake View Cemetery, Quincy, Michigan.

CHASE.—Mary Rogers Wixom was born at Dennis Port, Massachusetts, October 23, 1849, the daughter of Ira and Elthina Wixom. She was married to Captain George F. Chase June 8, 1870. Four years later she united with the church, being baptized by Elder Charles Brown at Dennis Port, September 30, 1874. She died in Brockton, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. Ernest Megathlin, April 17, 1930. Her husband preceded her in a tragic manner during the years of the World War. Brother Chase, who was a master mariner, failed to return from one of his voyages, and after weeks of anxious waiting, his body was finally found off the Massachusetts coast. Sister Chase was a saintly woman whose testimony both of word and of deed reflected the life and attitude of a true Latter Day Saint. She is survived by her daughter, Mrs. Sylvia Megathlin, of Brockton; two sisters: Mrs. Elthina Joy, of Providence; and Mrs. David B. Nickerson, of Manton, Rhode Island; one brother, Edgar F. Wixom, of Onset, Massachusetts; one grandson, L. Gordon Megathlin, a student at Brockton High School. Funeral services were from the Dennis Port Church, sermon by Elder H. A. Chelline.

FIKE.—Nellie Ann Pike was born June 8, 1859, at Harts Grove, Ashtabula County, Ohio. She moved to Nebraska with her parents in April, 1868. Was married to George W. Fike at Wilber, Nebraska, June 9, 1878. She united with the church April 29, 1890, being baptized into the Blue River Branch at Wilber by James Caffall. She was a good daughter, a faithful wife, an affectionate mother and grandmother, and her life was full of good works. She departed this life at Lincoln, Nebraska, May 9, 1930. The funeral was from the home of her father at Wilber May 11, C. H. Porter preaching the sermon, assisted by Samuel Brolihar.

GOLD.—Charles Benton Gold was born October 7, 1853, in Johnson County, near Vienna, Illinois. He married Mary M. Burklow at Goreville, Illinois, February 19, 1874, and to this union were born ten children, seven sons and three daughters. One son died in infancy and another, Harvey E. Gold, gave his life in the service of his country during the World War. In early life, Charles Benton Gold belonged to the Methodist Church, and during those years he was a devout man, always having daily devotions offered up to God in his home. In November, 1902, he united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, being baptized by Elder J. W. Paxton. He was firm in his faith in God and lived a good Christian life. His move to Independence, Missouri, was occasioned by his desire that he and his companion might have better church privileges, and it was at his home on South Pearl Street, in Independence, that he passed peacefully from this life April 29, 1930, at 5.45. He leaves his wife, Mary M. Gold, of Independence; five sons: Samuel B. Cecil R., and William W., of Independence; H. H. Gold, of Lamoni, Iowa; and Otis Gold, of Herrin, Illinois; three daughters: Mrs. Charlotte Simmons, Mrs. Annie Kelley, and Mrs. Hala Parrish, all of Independence; thirty-three grandchildren; twelve great-grandchildren; and many other relatives and friends.

Walker Hall Dedicated

As a part of its Thirty-fourth Annual Commencement, Graceland College on Friday, June 6, established a permanent memorial to Marietta Walker, known as the "Mother" of the college, whose death occurred April 12. The new women's dormitory was officially dedicated as "Walker Hall" and was received by the chairman of the Board of Trustees from the Presiding Bishopric of the general church.

When the first dormitory of the college was erected in 1907, it was named Marietta Hall in honor of Mrs. Walker, who had given a tract of land for the college plot and who was then and always one of its foremost friends and supporters. But this frame building will pass out of existence in a few years with the erection of a needed dormitory for men; and Walker Hall now stands to perpetuate the memory of this noble woman.

As President Frederick M. Smith said in his address at the dedicatory exercises Friday afternoon, Walker Hall is really the first fully completed unit in the building program of the "Greater Graceland" plan. President Smith also directed the attention of his hearers forward to the next units which are needed—the men's dormitory, the library building—and to the qualification of Graceland as a standard four-year college. He suggested that 1945 would be the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the college and that a fitting way in which to celebrate that event would be the dedication of the Memorial Building, which is to be the central unit of the "Greater Graceland" plan.

With the completion of Walker Hall, the Graceland Campus takes on an additional note of breadth and dignity, and to its students comes a new and deserved sense of comfort. In this accomplishment and in this dedication we take pride. But the alumni and other friends of the school are not willing to stop there. There are other and pressing needs which should be supplied as soon as we are able to do so. From this point we set our faces forward to the next move in the building of a Graceland that shall be greater both in physical equipment and in ability to serve the young people of the church.

Progress and Good Reading Go Hand in Hand

It has been the observation of those closely connected with the publishing interests of the church, that branches which are alive and progressive, growing in numbers and strength, are almost without exception regular patrons of the publishing house, buying the books and periodicals which are published by the church, and, of course, making them a goodly part of their regular reading.

No more enduring example of this is found than the district commonly referred to as Western Iowa. It has been a district from which the church has received steady, reliable support in gospel mission work, in the payment of tithes and offerings, in subscriptions to the journals and books of the church, in loyalty to the church institutions, in recruits to the ranks of the ministry, and in everything which goes to make valued membership useful to all parts of the church.

The Saints of Michigan have generally been liberal patrons of church publications, and have been and are regarded as well-read and loyal and dependable Saints. This has been a district which has furnished good, strong, and well-balanced support of the church through a long term of years. It has had its grief and dissension, it is true, but the ranks have held against concentrated and vicious onslaught, and Michigan today is a stronghold of the Reorganization.

During the past year and one half the church at Detroit has increased in membership very rapidly. Missions have been very often and ably conducted. Along with this has gone an increasing patronage of the church publications which will furnish strength for future missions and for Zion's development and refinement and movements. Going hand in hand, and it is fair to believe, having much to do with this progress, the branch has increased materially its patronage of the church publications. The organization conducted a contest which netted 99 subscribers for the Saints' Herald; 53 for Zion's Ensign; 61 for Vision; 28 for the Department Journal; and in which 229 books were purchased by the people. In addition to what this campaign produced, a goodly number renewed their subscriptions while at Centennial Conference and by mail, and there was considerable additional patronage. Surely there can be few if any better illustrations of benefit to people and the publishing house and the general church being a mutual matter.

Oklahoma is one of the fruitful fields of the church for missionary work and general activity. It has contributed finance, workers, patronage, and loyal support in good quantity and quality. Zion's Ensign and the Herald are both in much evidence in Oklahoma.

There are many smaller communities of Saints which furnish just as good illustrations as these three larger ones give to us. The rule is very nearly universal. Progress in the church and the reading of the church literature go hand in hand.

The Herald Publishing House is trusted with the stewardship of sacred writings and the literature of the church, and will go as far and as fast as it can to distribute these sacred things among the people of the church and of the world. Each member of the church should feel himself to be a stockholder in the publishing house, and should be active in the presentation of the work. What can you do? Is it possible for you to secure a few subscriptions or to sell a few good books or tracts? If it is, and you do it, you have served a dual purpose for good and progress—the progress of the people and the progress of the church.

A Good Criticism

From the American Journal of Nursing for May we cut a short but intense and kindly criticism. There is not likely a vocation of deeper concern to the life and happiness of the people than that of nursing. The people should show their appreciation and comprehension by providing special training and demanding a high type of character and intellectuality in those who are to serve them in this capacity. Read what Mr. Bunce has to say.

R. J. L.

Education of Nurses a Public Function

The people provide agricultural, domestic science, commercial, engineering, law, religious, and, to a limited extent, medical training for those who wish to follow these vocations. Then why should they not, in some measure at least, provide for the training and education of nurses? This public function is now being performed by the hospitals, thereby, in many instances, increasing the cost of hospital care to the individual patient. Why should this extra burden be borne by the already over-taxed sick? Furthermore, while the patients are entitled to the care of properly trained nurses, the student nurses are entitled to something in addition to practical training for the years spent in training. Other vocational schools usually have one hour of theory to four or five hours of practice, whereas, even in our best schools the nurses receive only one hour of theory to ten hours of practical work. It seems to me that the hours of study and practice in training schools for nurses should approach more nearly those found best for other vocational schools.—From an address before the Georgia State Nurses' Association, October, 1929, by Allen H. Bunce, M. D., editor the Journal of the Medical Association of Georgia and trustee of the American Medical Association, Atlanta, Georgia.

Sixtieth Anniversary of Marriage Celebrated

John Condit and his wife were married sixty years ago at Mondamin, Iowa. At the ages of eighty-three and seventy-nine years they are both living and healthy; and at the church building at their home in Hagerman, Idaho, February 28, they were privileged to celebrate their sixtieth anniversary in the company of a large number of their posterity and many friends and interested citizens of the community.

In this age it is worthy of notice that a pair of souls should be able to so order their lives that they are preserved in good health and splendid loyalty to each other and the laws of the church and of the land along with the laws of nature. Brother and Sister Condit are to be congratulated, and the church should be proud of them.

The Statesman contained a story of about a thousand words in reporting the celebration of their anniversary.

The New Song Book

The Herald Publishing House made every effort possible to have the new song book in print before the convening of the Centennial Conference. This was found to be an impossibility because the copy was more than ninety days late; that is, the copy was not submitted to the publishing house within ninety days of the time required if the date for the sale were to be April, 1930.

In addition it has been found that a number of the songs which the committee on compilation proposed to use are copyrighted, and the publishing house has not as yet been able to secure permission to use all of them. Some of these matters are still in abeyance.

It is outside the realm of possibility for the exact date of sale for the new book to be announced. The date will be advertised as soon as it is possible to determine it with reasonable certainty.

R. J. L.

Folded deep in the heart of life there is a mystery and meaning which so many of us fail to find. Life is not the thing it seems. Beneath its surface there lies a morningland more fragrant than all earth's dewy dawns; just beyond the mists of materialism and the shadows of sense there waits the Only Comrade who can satisfy our souls.—William H. Boddy.

Sacrifice Week in the Church

If sacrifice week is to be a benefit to the church the Saints must unitedly participate in responding to the call of the church.

Sacrifice week should be motivated by prayer, so that we may be reborn to the accomplishment of the great purposes of the church and reconsecrated to the individual activities and tasks that make up our daily progress toward these great ends.

Observance of sacrifice week will bring spiritual blessings to us. Our offering, given according to our ability and measured by our willingness, indicates our love for God and his work.

Missionary work, the spreading of the gospel, must always be the prime and dominant purpose of the church. The sacrifice offering will be used to finance our missionary program, which is the largest and most comprehensive ever adopted by the church—forty thousand converts in six years.

Every Latter Day Saint must spend and be spent if this goal is reached. Sacrifice week is our first church-wide opportunity to do this since the Centennial Conference. Every Saint should consider sacrifice week his individual opportunity. Every Saint should make some sacrifice, even though it may be small, and thus be counted in. The call is to every Saint.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By A. CARMICHAEL.

The Nauvoo Camp

This year there will be a camp at Nauvoo for young people between the ages of sixteen and twenty, in connection with the regular camp for boys and girls between twelve and fifteen years of age. Senior campers will be allowed considerable opportunity for choosing their daily program from a number of interesting activities. Instructions in handcraft, landscape gardening, boat building, nature study, dramatics, music, swimming, and other phases of camp life will be offered.

There will be a general assembly period each morning, at which time some interesting event in church history will be discussed. Leading officials of the church are expecting to visit camp and mingle with the young people. There will be plenty of music, camp songs, and hymns, and opportunity for sincere worship experiences.

The afternoons will be given over largely to recreation—boating, swimming, playground games, and competitive sports.

Just at sunset the entire camp assembles in front of the Old Homestead, near the graves of the Martyrs, for a very impressive flag lowering ceremony.

Then around the blazing logs of the camp fire an informal program attracts the campers until the bugle sounds Taps. Together the campers stand, and before the evening prayer is offered, they sing:

Day is done,
Gone the sun,
From the lake,
From the hills,
From the sky,
All is well,
Safely rest,
God is nigh.

The camp at Nauvoo is for young people from all parts of the United States and Canada. Last year young people from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, and Oklahoma were in attendance. Present indications are that a much larger area will be represented this year. Each branch should send at least one representative to this camp. Come to Nauvoo and get acquainted!

One dollar a day covers all necessary camp fees. Registrations should be sent in before June 25; an extra fee of one dollar is required of those who register after that date.

For further information write the Camp Director, Department of Religious Education, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

THE HERALD BOOKSHELF

A Book for Leaders of Girls

J. F. is moving new books into the vacant places on the Herald Bookshelf. Sales have lately made this necessary.

"I don't know where you'll find any books that are better printed than these new volumes," he says. "The paper is of an unusually fine and durable quality, the type new and clear, and the binding is made to stand long wear."

J. F. passed an attractive book across the counter. It was one of the latest products of the Herald Office, Our Girls, edited by Lenoir Woodstock.

This book provides abundant help in organizing the activities of girls at home, at church, and at learning to work and play. Its aim is to help provide a more sanely healthful, a more broadly cultural, a more socially useful, and more deeply spiritual life for girls.

The answer to the problems of girls is to be found in increased activity and enriched living, not in restrictions and prohibitions. "Tell us what to do!" is the demand of the young people. The book helps answer this demand.

Parents, teachers, and leaders of girls should have this book. Even the older girls themselves should have copies, to help in their own work and to prepare them for service to their young friends.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

The New Hospital for Independence

Saints who visited the Centennial Conference will remember that on April 19 there came before the conference a communication from the Joint Council of First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric a paper which originated with the Order of Bishops. This paper and its discussion recounted the inadequacy of the Independence Sanitarium to meet the ordinary hospital demands of the church and of the community where it is located, of the additional needs it should be qualified to meet, and of the church and community demand that these conditions be remedied.

The paper contained the following resolution: "Resolved, That the Presiding Bishopric be authorized to indorse a loan for the Independence Sanitarium in an amount equal to the sum raised by the community, when plans and specifications have been approved by the Board of Trustees and definite estimates have been secured from reliable and dependable builders."

The Independence Sanitarium has been a benison to the church, and it has not only been a convenience to the entire Independence community, but because of easy accessibility and for several other reasons not less important, it has been instrumental in saving life and money to the populace.

Another purpose the Sanitarium has served is, it has become a point of intimate contact between many of the best of all classes of Independence people, and the church authorities directing the conduct of the institution. It has done a good work and has been a credit to the church. But the time has come when because of obsolescence the plant can not adequately serve all these purposes longer. The church and the people of the community need and demand something better. What members of the church gain by coming from distances to receive consideration and treatment here, is offset by what they lose because of these conditions of obsolescence.

For the church to be the gainer by contact with the community through this avenue is impossible unless the avenue be improved. The church demands for improvement are therefore because of the twofold incentive to properly care for her missionaries and her membership who shall have need for hospital and sanitarium service, and to be properly represented as a creditable and progressive organization through her institution.

It would be natural and right for the demand which has come, to originate in the Order of Bishops and others of the family of officials of the church.

This occurred. But because of many other calls for the sinews with which to conduct the great, many-sided work of the church, the public manifestation of this demand was delayed, and when it did come the demand of the people both of the church and the community was almost if not quite simultaneous.

Only six weeks have elapsed since action looking in the direction of the new hospital and sanitarium plant began publicly. Today the entire Independence community is in action. Organization for the raising of $125,000 by the community is being prosecuted by the Independence Chamber of Commerce and helpers which the chamber is calling to its assistance. It is a large proposition, but there is an optimistic air prevailing which promises the success and execution of the entire plan.

The Herald will keep the church in touch with the progress of the campaign. Appended is a news story which appeared in the leading newspaper of the city, the Independence Examiner, for June 3.

REMARKABLE RAPIDITY IN PLANS FOR DRIVE

Roy Johnson, General Chairman, Sees a Good Omen in the Great Number of Citizen Volunteers. Is Great Indorsement

According to Roy Johnson, president of the Independence Chamber of Commerce and general chairman of the community hospital campaign, organizational plans for the formation of the three separate divisions that are now being recruited to secure the $125,000 from the citizens of Independence and vicinity, are shaping up with remarkable rapidity. "No greater indorsement can be had of any movement," continues General Chairman Johnson, "than the fact that a great number of the most substantial citizens are volunteering their support to make its objectives possible.

"Today," said Mr. Johnson, "fifteen of the influential ladies of the city met with Thomas E. Garvey, who, as general of the city-wide solicitation forces, is recruiting volunteers for his sales army. Mrs. W. L. C. Palmer has accepted the appointment of major of a division composed of four teams, with a total of twenty-eight captains and lieutenants. Her captains are as follows: Mrs. J. A. Gardner, Mrs. C. A. Galloway, Mrs. R. B. Mitchell, Mrs. E. A. Ikenberry.

Miss Mary O'Reilly, as major, has secured the following captains: Mrs. H. F. Markey, Mrs. Jesse Martin, Mrs. J. A. Becker, Mrs. May Hudspeth.

Mrs. Noah Adams, as major, has turned in her four captains as follows: Mrs. Roger T. Sermon, Mrs. John R. Green, Mrs. Stanley Green, Mrs. Fannie Lee Knight.

General Tom Garvey is indeed pleased with the one hundred per cent cooperation he is receiving from the Women's Division.

Each of the twelve captains, under their three respective majors, is to secure at least six lieutenant workers to comprise his team, and at this enthusiastic meeting each captain promised to have his full complement of workers before Friday of this week.

General Garvey Reports Progress

Commenting on the Men's Division, General Garvey said that two of the majors, E. I. Purcell and Ed Harrington, have secured their full quota of captains and within the next day or so Mize Peters, his remaining major, would have his list completed. The majors with their captains are as follows:

Major E. I. Purcell, Captains T. W. Kirby, Louis Harbin,

The New Hospital for Independence (Architect's Drawing)

R. J. Lambert, Walter Johnson, Claude P. Brown, Ed. C. Dart.

Major Ed Harrington, Captains G. B. Cook, J. A. Gardner, Claude R. Brown, F. E. Dooley.

General Chairman Johnson reports that there will be two very important meetings of the campaign today. The Industrial Division, under Chairman P. J. Hanson, and Vice Chairman Alvin D. Hatten will meet at four o'clock at the Chamber of Commerce office to outline plans for the solicitation of the workmen in the various plants and industries. At this meeting, representatives will be present from the larger firms and corporations.

One of the most important meetings of the campaign, according to Mr. Johnson, will be a dinner meeting tonight of the special gifts committee at Alleman's Cafe at 6.15 o'clock under the leadership of Doctor Tom Twyman. At this meeting over forty of the more substantial business and professional men of the city will be present, and their work will be outlined to them at that time.

As this committee will start its active solicitation among the firms and corporations and more substantial citizens on the following day, under Doctor Twyman's supervision, an illustrated folder has been sent to about 500 of their prospects. This folder, according to Doctor Twyman, is one of the best pieces of literature that he has ever seen, dealing upon any hospital situation. Its contents deal with the needs of Independence and this vicinity for a community hospital. It explains in detail just how the new building will fill this need. Doctor Twyman predicts that its perusal, even by the most casual of readers, can not fail to make all more "hospital minded."

It Must Not Happen Again!

The hospital fund campaign committee furnishes the following statement concerning one of the many phases of the hospital question for Independence:

"Meningitis! A word that brings fear to every mother's heart! For meningitis is one of the deadliest diseases that can attack her child and threaten its precious life.

"During the past two winters, there were twenty-six cases of this dread disease in Independence and vicinity. Eighty per cent of them resulted fatally. There is a serum that is effective against the threat of this terrible disease of the membranes that envelop the brain and spinal cord. But its application must be immediate upon discovery of the trouble.

"In the epidemic of the past two winters, the victims were unfortunate in that Independence had no facilities for the reception, care, and treatment of such cases. They must be looked after in a special hospital or ward, equipped for such service. They must receive prompt attention. Laboratory tests must be available. Alert, expert observation of developments must be possible.

"Every moment counts when this disease presents itself. Independence was without adequate provision and protection when the emergency arose. To enter a patient in the crowded Kansas City hospitals and pay the high weekly rates demanded in advance from out-of-town cases was not possible for all the families concerned. Then, too, the Independence physician can not always care for his patient in the hospital in another city, either because the hospital rules forbid his doing so, or because it is impossible for him to give the time required for the many visits necessary in closely watching the case.

Death Rate Alarming

"That death rate of eighty per cent among the meningitis patients of this community was as high as the rate that prevailed before the discovery of the serum. When conditions are favorable, and prompt attention can be given to patients, with laboratory tests and close observation of developments, the death rate is reduced to twenty per cent. The difference is startling and represents the difference between preparedness and the lack of it in meeting the emergency.

"The new hospital in Independence will make it possible to provide for the prompt reception and immediate treatment of meningitis patients. One of the houses at present occupied by the nurses will be devoted exclusively to the care of such cases and others of a contagious nature. Had such provision been available during the past two years, that sad death rate would have been avoided.

"Surely the people of Independence and vicinity will not forget the lesson taught them at such a cost of life and happiness! To build the new hospital and make it possible for Independence to provide protection against this dread disease, and other diseases of similar danger, is surely a community obligation that every citizen will help to meet to the measure of his financial ability!"

Faith the Dynamic

By R. W. F.

"We walk by faith." Sight is imperfect. Faith, too, seeks fuller expression in the lives of each of us. Natural sight, in time, will fail us, but the light of the soul may increase in brightness as the light of the mere body dies.

As we go on, you and I, facing the present and welcoming the future, no day passes without its challenge of our faith. At times, perhaps, these challenges find us weak indeed, but never completely deserted, for the Divine source of faith supplies our need by His grace.

Faith inspires us to lift up our eyes to the hills, whence cometh our strength. The eternal hills are always there, and God is ever the same; but we, perchance, lack in dynamic fire, and from day to day experience the need of communion with God through prayer in order that we may walk and not stumble.

Faith, then, is a fruit, or the fruit of prayer. And throughout the teachings of the Way Shower are found many exhortations to prayer. It has been said that prayer is the key that unlocks the door in the morning and the bolt that closes it at night.

The truthfulness of the foregoing has been made strikingly apparent to every one of us. Dark days have been brightened by prayer, and bright days have suddenly grown dark and troublesome, because of lack of prayer. And this dynamic of faith is so essential in the round of life, that human creatures, as well as Christ himself, resorted to quiet places, where opportunity was offered for communion with the source of life.

It is the Evil Genius of our life that darkens our soul with the whisper that prayer is not essential; it is the Good Spirit that urges us to pray. "Pray that ye enter not into temptation." "Pray always." Jesus taught a wonderful prayer to his disciples, and he illuminated his teaching by his example.

"We walk by faith." And prayer increases our faith. And faith trusts and is not suspicious, but rather enlarges our love, by which we bless and curse not.

The Mystery of Death; the Hope of Life

A funeral sermon following the death and in memory of Henry L. Loosemore, at the Stone Church, April 30, 1930. Delivered by John W. Rushton.

Scripture Readings

Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting to everlasting thou art God. Thou turnest man to destruction; and sayest, Return, ye children of men. For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night.

Thou carriest them away as with a flood; they are as a sleep: in the morning they are like grass which groweth up. In the morning it flourisheth and groweth up; in the evening it is cut down and withereth. For we are consumed by thine anger, and by thy wrath are we troubled. Thou hast set our iniquities before thee, our secret sins in the light of thy countenance. For all our days are passed away in thy wrath; we spend our years as a tale that is told. The days of our years are three score years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off and we fly away. Who knoweth the power of thine anger, even according to thy fear, so is thy wrath. So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom. Return, O Lord, how long? and let it repent thee concerning thy servants. O satisfy us early with thy mercy, that we may rejoice and be glad all our days. Make us glad according to the days wherein thou hast afflicted us, and the years wherein we have seen evil. Let thy work appear unto thy servants, and thy glory unto their children. And let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us; and establish thou the work of our hands upon us; yea, the work of our hands establish thou it.

But some man will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die; and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain: But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body. All flesh is not the same flesh; but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds. There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial; but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: It is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory; it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power. It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written, The first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit. Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven. As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood can not inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

Behold, I shew you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed. In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin, and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord.

For which cause we faint not, but though our outward man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen; for the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal. For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. For in this we groan, earnestly desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven. If so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked. For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened; not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life. Now he that hath wrought us for the selfsame thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit. Therefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord. (For we walk by faith, not by sight.) We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord. Wherefore we labor, that, whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him. For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ; that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad.

Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.

Jesus said unto her, I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live.

On such occasions as this, when we meet in the presence of our sacred dead to bid adieu to all that is mortal, and we are left only with the memory of our past experiences, we are made to feel the loneliness, the uncertainty of life, and our dependency upon the unseen Powers, whose interest in us our religion teaches us to believe is ever evidenced to God's children. Death is not the only occasion when we realize that we are surrounded by mysteries which challenge our intelligence, defy our explanations, exhaust our wisdom, and impoverish our language. We are surrounded with mystery. The pebble, which we kick at our feet as we traverse the street, has its origin, its law of being, its dissolution, its transformation; and the wisdom of the profoundest scientist stands before that phenomenon eluding explanation as you and I sit and stand here today in the presence of this distress and grief.

We have watched the unfolding of life as it whispers to us in the beauty of the flower, and the fragrance with which it distills its personality upon the atmosphere. We watch life as it moves through all the varied genera and species of the animal kingdom, from the humble uni-cellular amoeba until we reach the majestic sovereignty of the human being, with all of the imagination, faith, and intelligence of man. We realize that life begins, so far as we know, in the union of two cells, fused, under the influence of that intangible love with which we are familiar, and in the process of the law of its being there comes the day when it is said, "A man is born into the world." That moment we observe with a little more familiarity and intimacy, the unfolding of Nature's purpose. We see the helpless child grow stronger, develop individuality, manifesting the changes which are incident to the strengthening of the will, the increasing of the content of the mind, the exaltation of the throne of reason, and the unfolding of the innate genius and talent which belong to him, until finally we are conscious of a new personality. After a few years there enters into the blood stream some mysterious microbe, and in the course of this microbe's work there takes place dissolution, and one day it is said, "Death took him and he slept with his fathers." It can not be explained. Life begins in mystery; life is surrounded by mystery; and the end is mystery. Were we to give up our appreciation of life and all that belongs to life because we didn't understand the mystery, there would not be a solitary thing we could hold on to and claim as our own.

The presence of these eternal mysteries does not prevent us from believing, hoping, imagining, and adventuring beyond the limits of the things which we know through the instrumentality of our five senses. We see this mysterious force of life taking hold of all kinds of matter and producing all kinds of results. We know not life except through its functions and its doings. We can tell nothing more about life than that it is a power of organization, expressing itself in beauty and grace and intelligence; in faith and in achievement; and in hope and in ideals.

In the creation of all the real values of our life, when we look upon death and see that death merely is that agent which seems for the moment to excel the power of organization, so far as one particular form of matter is concerned, we allow ourselves in our grief and with the limitations of our knowledge, to despair and wonder if this thing really can be the handiwork of a loving heavenly Father, and we wonder still further what the end must be.

May I remind you that if our religion means anything to us, it begins with this simple, explicit, self-evident truth; that at the back of the universe of all things which are seen and sensed, there is at work that mighty Intelligence which has brought into being this wonderful universe as we know it, and of which we ourselves form a part, superlative in goodness, power, and love. We have seen how this power takes hold of matter, and under the influence of pressure and heat the common carbon and soot of our daily experience is transformed into the brilliant diamond which for the time being becomes the shrine of the brilliant rays of our solar light. We have seen the same organic power take hold of the common sand which covers our streets, and under the influence of heat and pressure that sand is transformed into the glittering and iridescent opal. We have seen clay, the common clay with which we soil our fingers and our shoes, under the influence of heat and pressure, become the ruby and the sapphire. We do not count these miracles, because we know that such things take place with regularity, for we see the transformation taking place in nature and in the chemist's laboratory. We see the same thing taking place in life. We see in our hands a microscopic speck of matter, that, under the influence of nitrogenous substance of the earth, the ministry of the skies and the sunshine, is converted into a green blade of grass, and then into bloom, or blossom, and finally into fruit, and when this circle of experiences is completed we have a renewal of the same story, and life unfolds itself in precisely the same way, in unbroken continuity.

We have seen, in the animal world, a process which might illustrate our end if we could see as far and know as much. We have seen the pupa of the insect world transformed into the larva; the larva into the crawling caterpillar; the caterpillar into the chrysalis, and one day that sarcophagus was wooed by the springtime warmth, and the doors were opened, and from out of that dark chamber there fluttered into the sunshine of the spring skies a gorgeous butterfly, an ethereal thing that flits from flower to flower as though it would not deign to touch the earth. This miracle takes place at this very moment. We see it; we pass it by, because it is so commonplace, so frequent, and so usual.

Today we stand in the presence of only one episode in the great movement of Nature relating to man and still under the control of God. We were not privileged to see the chemistry that brought two cells together, the ovum and the zoophyte; we have not been privileged to watch the marvelous transformations which brought human life through all its changes; all we have seen was the helpless babe, as it lay helpless in its mother's arms, crying to be fed. We have seen it grow until that helpless little bit of humanity became strong with manhood and vital in power; or gracious in all the tender chastity of womanhood; and we have thought this thing could endure for ever. But one day the fiat went forth, and the sable-hued messenger of death touched the victim upon the shoulder, and they entered down the long trail through the valley of shadows and passed out of our sight.

Now, shall we, in our ignorance and shortsightedness, conclude that this is the end? May we not believe, as we look upon the evidence of God's work in nature, that as, in the case of the bloom and the fruit, as for the caterpillar and the butterfly, for man also there are some chapters yet to be written by the finger of God, and his own glory will shine in and through a state and condition with which as yet we are not familiar except in the dream and the prophecy of Seer and of Apostle? Shall we not let our faith, based upon these facts, lift up our drooping souls, and enter into communion with the Divine, of whom Tennyson has written:

"Nothing walks with aimless feet,
Not one life shall be destroyed
Nor cast as nibbich in the void,
When God shall make the pile complete."

In all the beauty of nature the law of conservation maintains the balance. In our knowledge of his gracious wisdom, as seen in the changing, ever-changing panorama of nature witnessing to the ceaseless power and love of the Infinite, the constant working out of his own purpose and will, we are sure his final achievement will conserve our interest and eternal glory.

I offer this to you as a basis for our faith in this dark moment of grief; a darkness which can not be impenetrable; both of which must yield to the light of faith, and to the tender voice of hope, spoken to us throughout the preceding generations. And may I remind you, this afternoon, that there is one thing which ought to impress us very deeply, and unforgettably; we should keep this in the secret chamber of our being; that the only real worth which must finally stand is that worth which shines out in truth and goodness which serves constantly and lovingly the well-being of humanity, and in that transcendent beauty born of truth and goodness which neither death, nor evil, nor the grave, nor hell can dissipate or destroy. And when, in the language of the beautiful lessons which we have read from God's own word, the time of God's vindication of our faith and of his own love and omnipotence shall come, there shall be revealed the real worth of every human soul in exactly the same process with which we are familiar in our natural life. As we have seen life, the organizing power of nature, taking hold of that matter, and producing the flesh of birds, of fishes, of beasts, and of man, so we shall see the organizing power of God's life revealing itself in the glory which is celestial, in the glory which is terrestrial, and in the glory which is telestial: the glory of the sun, of the moon, and the differentiated glories of the stars, as they shine out in the darkness of the night. And, says the apostle, as these things bear witness in your consciousness, in your soul, they are but the picture of what there shall be in the resurrected state. "As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." It behooves us, therefore, to remember that what we are today will condition what we shall get and be tomorrow. God can give to me only what I have the ability to appreciate and to use. In this school of our earthly experience, he invites me to submit to the celestial law, and promises that upon my submission to the celestial law of his own life he shall clothe me with the celestial glory which is his own life in the heaven which is his home.

And so, in the light of these foundational principles upon which the faith of our brother itself was grounded, I can bid you consider his faith and ask you to remember his life, the life that is known to all of you as well as to myself, probably not quite as intimately as to most of you here today. I remember distinctly today when the news came that the brother had been baptized in the city of Manchester by Brother Newton. I was but a boy, having joined the church in that far-off land, and knew of these people in that garden spot of England (Devonshire); came over to this United States of America, changing their life, changing their way of living, and taking part in the development of the church in Kansas City, Missouri, and Kansas City, Kansas.

The life of Brother Loosemore has been lived among you. He spent his time in doing his daily work; honestly meeting his obligations of his family and his home. The margin of time which was his he devoted to church experiences, to the advancement of the kingdom. The reputation he has made among you is one upon which you base your respect and offer to him the tribute of your sympathy and your prayers because—in his humble way he was faithful to the truth, loyal to his duty, and constant in his work. Today I ask of you to remember his widow and his family and his friends, and we should in our faith and prayers hold them up before God, who is the Father of all, and bends over all with sympathy and loving-kindness, listening to the faintest whisper of every human heart, that he will give to these the comfort, grace, blessing, and sustenance which only God, as our heavenly Father, can give. We commend them, with all of us, to him for his blessing and sustenance, in the name of Christ. Amen.

Charity is never lost; it may meet with ingratitude, or be of no service to those on whom it was bestowed, yet it ever does a work of beauty and grace upon the heart of the giver.—Middleton.

Joseph Smith, the Lord's Servant.—Number 5

By Hyrum O. Smith

The Reorganization

Twice in competent courts of the land has the Reorganization been declared the true successor to the original church, following in the footsteps of the church preceding it in doctrine and organization. One of these court decisions was given by John F. Philips in the famous Temple Lot case, tried in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Western Division of the Western District of Missouri. In this decision Judge Philips says:

Beyond all cavil, if human testimony is to place any matter forever at rest, this church was one in doctrine, government, and purpose from 1830 to June, 1844, when Joseph Smith, its founder, was killed. It had the same federal head, governing bodies, and faith. During this period there was no schism, no secession, no "parting of the ways," in any matter fundamental, or affecting its oneness.

The only authorized and recognized books of doctrine and laws for the government of that church from 1830 to 1846 were the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. The Book of Doctrine and Covenants, which consisted principally of claimed divine revelations to Joseph Smith, was the edition published at Kirtland, Ohio, in 1835, and at Nauvoo in 1845.

Leaving out those portions of the decision that relate to the departure from the faith of the different factions involved in the suit, I come to the part that draws a comparison between the original church and the Reorganization. The judge quotes a number of passages relating to the provisions made for a successor to the original church; among them that which I have emphasized in this article, where it is distinctly stated that the successor shall teach the revelations already given to the church, and then states:

A considerable number of the officers and members of the church at Nauvoo did not ally themselves with any of the factions, and wherever they were they held onto the faith, refused to follow Brigham Young to Utah, and ever repudiated the doctrine of polygamy, which was the great rock of offense on which the church split after the death of Joseph Smith.

In 1852 the scattered fragments of the church, the remnants of those who hold to the fortunes of the present Joseph Smith, son of the so-called "Martyr," gathered together sufficiently for a nucleus of organization. They took the name of "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," and avowed their allegiance to the teachings of the ancient church; and their epitome of faith adopted, while containing differences in phraseology, in its essentials is but a reproduction of that of the church as it existed from 1830 to 1844.

Italics in this last quotation are mine, as I wish to emphasize the fact that the church today is essentially the church of yesterday, with no "parting of the ways," but, as declared by these court decisions, the Reorganization, as the successor to the original church, is teaching the same doctrine, is organized according to the same pattern, and carrying out the same policies as were taught by Joseph Smith, its founder.

What Has the Reorganization Done?

I do not believe a better answer to this question can be made than is found in an editorial in the Saints' Herald for May 28, 1887, volume 34, pages 337, 338, from the pen of President Joseph Smith. One needs only to multiply the reasons given in order to make it fit the present. In answer to the above question, President Smith says:

It has saved the faith of hundreds in original Mormonism.

It has proved that evil, wrongdoing, and debauchery do not justly belong to the faith and practice of Latter Day Saints.

It has restored the confidence of hundreds in their fellow men, and shown that a man may be clothed upon with the priesthood, or authority to act in the name of Christ, without being given to evil practices by which his fellows are wronged and defrauded.

It has sent its elders into nearly all parts of the United States where the early elders of the church had gone, and there set about redeeming the name of the church from the odium cast upon it by the advocates and practitioners of polygamy.

It has won respect for its doctrines in those places where its elders have been heard.

It is spreading the doctrines of primitive Mormonism in every place where elders can go, and in doing this it has made clear the difference between Utah Mormonism and the primitive faith of the church.

It has built up, since 1860, over four hundred branches, extending from Maine to New Mexico, and from Oregon to Florida, in England, Wales, Tahiti, and Australia.

It has made the name of Latter Day Saint honorable in places where it was a hiss and a byword, and has been the instrument of fulfilling the word of the Lord, "and ye shall find favor in the eyes of the people."

It has so wrought that its elders are able to stand up in defense of its truths without a cringing sense of shame of the name they bear.

It has kept its public pledges to advocate the truth and insist that honesty is not only the best, but is the only policy that will establish men.

It has an almost empty treasury, but its Bishopric can sleep in peace, because their coffers hold no ill-gotten gains, and its officers do not fear the just complaint of wronged and oppressed comrades. . . .

It has consecrated the individual labors of hundreds of faithful, honest men, but has not "consecrated" the wealth of others, nor of the "cattle on a thousand hills," without giving an equivalent in honest compensation therefor.

It has built "houses of worship" in places where its members dwell, and where they have sung, prayed, and worshiped God after the manner their neighbors call heresy, but have maintained their integrity during it all.

It is carefully and steadily gaining ground everywhere, and the Lord "confirms the word."

It has built up a publishing house worth many thousands of dollars, and is using it to spread the truth.

It has published and given to the Saints and the world, "In the own due time of the Lord" the Inspired Translation of the Holy Scriptures, the most valuable uncompleted (incomplete in the sense that it was not published in his lifetime) work of Joseph the Martyr.

It has placed the Scriptures, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants before the world, as containing the word of God, and has maintained them there honorably and consistently.

It has through the instrumentality of those agencies which God sometimes employs to bring his purposes to pass, discovered and placed before the Saints and the public, what is evidently the long lost "Manuscript Found," which the opposers of the latter-day work have so industriously urged as the origin of the Book of Mormon; and which is proved to be a clumsy attempt to account for the settlement of this, or some other land, by a class of mariners cast away from their vessel which was lost. By making this discovery and publishing the manuscript, the Reorganization has definitely shown that the Book of Mormon did not originate with the Reverend Solomon Spaulding.

It has so labored and so lived, that the places whence the Saints were driven in the years gone by are open to their return, and the inhabitants thereof are asking the Saints to come in and dwell with them, thereby making practicable the fulfillment of the prophecy, which states that the "waste places of Zion shall be rebuilt."

It has made a happy and a smiling people of those cast down, oppressed with care, and well-nigh hopeless.

It is driving out the spirit of unrest and disquiet, so long resident in the hearts of Saints, and is filling its place with rest and quiet, causing them to begin to drive the corner stakes, plant the hearth stones, and raise the roof trees of permanent homes in which "Zion, the pure in heart," may dwell in peace and safety; and by God's blessing they will continue to do this, until "Zion and her borders be full."

It is striving in all its parts to make the name of Saint honorable, its faith permanent, and its practices lawful; and although there are, in places, contention and strife, they are in contravention and disregard of rule, not in accordance with it.

It has won a standing place in the arena of the world's great strife, and has demonstrated that its advocates are worthy to "fight the good fight of the faith," unto success.

It has, by dint of the "perseverance of the Saints," gained so great coigns of vantage against the common enemy, that those not of the faith are gladly willing that the elders shall defend the Christian philosophy against the assaults of unbelief.

It has restored the only temple built by the Saints and accepted of God, after those who claimed to be true defenders of the latter-day work had left it to be desecrated by careless and indifferent hands, a place for the bats and a shelter for sheep.

It has provided, by precept and example, that loyalty to the commands of God given to the church does not require men to be disloyal to the government which God caused to be "instituted" for the very purpose of the development of his church.

It has so far kept the commands of the Lord that they who are bearing the burden of the ministry have confidence to approach him and ask that they be further directed in their work; and they are encouraged in their work by the fact that he hears and answers their requests.

Those who are looking on and denouncing us for not doing more, may read this with profit, and be content.

The above enables the Saints to see that the "kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal," and that its work of enlightening and converting the souls is still blessed of God.

It likewise proves that the Saints, though not of the world, may yet live in the world, and be preserved, prospered, honored, and blessed, if they are just and faithful.

The church of the living God is moving. Let the Saints take courage and go forward to victory, triumphing in the Lord.

This was written forty-two years ago last May. At that time the church numbered, perhaps, twenty thousand. Today it has been multiplied by five, and has over one hundred thousand adherents, and is being added to daily. All of this because of the policies inaugurated by the son of the Martyr, and passed on to his son, Frederick M. Smith, who is just as faithfully adhering to the original doctrines of the church as his father adhered to them in his day. And I doubt not that should the church be brought into court today, any competent judge would echo the decision of Judge John F. Philips, where he says "there was no schism, no secession, no parting of the ways, in any matter fundamental, or affecting its oneness."

The record of the Reorganization is an enviable one. It has moved forward steadily, and unswervingly. It has held inviolate the character of its founder under God, the "choice seer," while others have endeavored to blacken his character, belittle his work, and make him the scapegoat for their sins, at the same time claiming that he was at one time a prophet of God, and instrumental in bringing forth this great latter-day work. Certainly, if we can judge the character of a father by the sons he left behind him, he was not a weakling. He did not fail at the first signs of trouble, but he steadfastly pursued his way in endeavoring to perform the work that God had called him to perform, and remained true to the task set him, and died, as he said himself, with a "conscience void of offense toward God and man." And by prophecy he left a task to his posterity to plead the cause of injured innocence until those who had wronged him should make an atonement for their sins. And just as steadfastly as their sire are they moving forward to accomplish the task set them to do, and no man can truthfully say that they have in any sense departed from the faith once delivered to the Saints.

As a personal testimony, which naturally may not have the weight with others that it has with me, I will say that in 1888 I began my active ministerial work, and naturally I was called upon to defend the character of Joseph Smith the Martyr, and his claims to being divinely called to do the work that he did, and in that work, if I know what inspiration is, I was divinely inspired, reaching transcendent heights of inspiration when standing in his defense.

Four years later I was called to the Rocky Mountain Mission, and in the work of that mission I was not required to stand in defense of Joseph Smith the Martyr, so far as his prophetic calling was concerned, but I was called upon to defend the claims of his son to being his successor, and in the exercise of my duty along this line that same transcendent inspiration came to me, until there was no doubt left in my mind as to the fact of his occupying, by the will of God, his father's place, and the Reorganization over which he presided being the true successor to the original church organized in 1830.

I leave this testimony to the reader. If you say I was mistaken, then all I have to say is that there is no certainty in spiritual assurances given to confirm one in the faith.

God's Hand in the Destiny of Nations

God Used a Man among the Gentiles to Discover the Americas, Which Had Been Hid from the People of the Eastern Continent for Ages

And it came to pass that I looked and beheld many waters; and they divided the Gentiles from the seed of my brethren. And it came to pass that the angel said unto me, Behold the wrath of God is upon the seed of thy brethren! And I looked and beheld a man among the Gentiles, who was separated from the seed of my brethren by the many waters; and I beheld the Spirit of God, that it came down and wrought upon the man; and he went forth upon the many waters, even unto the seed of my brethren, who were in the promised land.

And it came to pass that I beheld the Spirit of God, that it wrought upon other Gentiles; and they went forth out of captivity, upon the many waters.

And it came to pass that I beheld many multitudes of the Gentiles upon the land of promise; and I beheld the wrath of God that it was upon the seed of my brethren; and they were scattered before the Gentiles, and were smitten. And I beheld the Spirit of the Lord, that it was upon the Gentiles; that they did prosper, and obtain the land for their inheritance; and I beheld that they were white, and exceeding fair and beautiful, like unto my people before they were slain.—Book of Mormon, 1 Nephi 3: 145-151.

Washington Irving said in his book, Life of Columbus, published in London in 1828:

When Columbus formed the theory in regard to his trip across the Atlantic, it is singular the firmness with which it became fixed in his mind, and the effect it produced upon his character and conduct. He never spoke with doubt or hesitation, but with as much certainty as if his eyes beheld the promised land. No trial or disappointment could afterward divert him from the steady pursuit of his object. A deep religious sentiment mingled with his meditations, and gave them at times a tinge of superstition, but it was of a sublime kind. He looked upon himself as in the hand of God, chosen from among men for the accomplishment of his high purpose. He supposed that he saw foretold in Holy Writ his contemplated discovery, shadowed forth in the revelations of the prophets. And the ends of the earth he believed were to be brought together, and all nations, tongues and languages were to be united under the banner of the Redeemer.—Professor H. H. Brownell's The New World, vol. 1, p. 31.

Washington Irving tells of another incident in Columbus's journey to America:

On October 7, 1492, Columbus found himself in parallel 25 minutes, 30 seconds, and had he continued he would have landed on the continent of America. But yielding to the long-continued persuasion of the commander of the Pinta, Martin Alonzo Pinzon, he steered to the southwest. Of this Pinzon said: "It seemed to be like an inspiration that my heart dictated to me that we ought to steer in a different direction."—Cosmos, vol. 2, p. 638.

Commenting on this Washington Irvin said:

If Columbus had resisted the counsel of Pinzon, and continued to steer westward, he would have entered the Gulf Stream, and has been borne to Florida, and from thence probably to Cape Hatteras and Virginia, a circumstance of incalculable importance, since it might have been the means of giving the United States of North America a Spanish population in the place of an English one, by which the religions of these countries were subsequently colonized.

The Cabots and the Pilgrims coming from the north of Europe to America, and settling in the northern part of North America, brought a different race and religion. The Spanish came to this country seeking gold, while the Anglo-Saxons came seeking God. The maintaining of these Anglo-Saxon ideals has meant the establishment of liberty, both religious and civil, in America.

What this one act had meant to the establishing of the Church of Jesus Christ, and the place for the gathering of God's people in the last days in the country of the United States, can hardly be imagined. Surely "God has had a hand in the destiny of nations, and the purposes of God can not be frustrated, neither can they come to naught."

Joseph Smith came from pure Anglo-Saxon stock. The first ancestor of Joseph Smith by this name, of whom we find any record, was Robert Smith, who emigrated from England to Boxford, Essex County, Massachusetts, in 1638. . . . Robert Smith married Mary French, the daughter of Thomas and Freedom French. Thomas French emigrated from England and settled at Ipswich, Massachusetts.—Ancestry of Joseph Smith, by Heman Hale Smith, vol. 5, p. 389.

The family record is traced down to the present members of the Smith family, clearly proving them to be of pure English ancestry.

Therefore, it follows that the Smith family, of whom the first prophet was a member, being of pure Anglo-Saxon stock, and the Book of Mormon declaring that the "choice seer" was to be of the lineage of Joseph of Egypt, Ephraim being his son, the legal head of the ten tribes, it is impossible to successfully deny that the Smith family, who emigrated from England, were of Joseph's seed, for it would be impossible for the "choice seer" to be of the tribe of Joseph without also admitting that the entire Smith family was of like lineage; and if we admit this, we must also admit that other Smiths (and their number is legion) are in all probability of the same race, tribe, and lineage."—Battle Axe of Jehovah, p. 66, 67.

God Decreed That the Land of America Was to Be a Land of Liberty unto the Gentiles

The Book of Mormon says:

And this land shall be a land of liberty unto the Gentiles, and there shall be no kings upon the land, who shall raise up unto the Gentiles. And I will fortify this land against all other nations.—2 Nephi 7: 18.

Behold this is a choice land, and whatsoever nation shall possess it, shall be free from bondage, and from captivity, and from all other nations under heaven, if they will but serve the God of the land, who is Jesus Christ, who hath been manifested by the things which we have written.—Ether 1: 32-35.

In fulfillment of the prophecies of Nephi and Ether in the Book of Mormon, God had something to do in the American Colonies' throwing off the English yoke, and declaring themselves a free people. This brought on war with the mother country, and this is also depicted in prophecy, as follows:

And it came to pass that I, Nephi, beheld that the Gentiles who had gone forth out of captivity, did humble themselves before the Lord; and the power of the Lord was with them. And I beheld that their mother Gentiles were gathered upon the waters, and upon the land also, to battle against them; and I beheld that the power of God was with them, and also that the wrath of God was upon all those that were gathered together against them to battle. And I, Nephi, beheld that the Gentiles that had gone out of captivity, were delivered by the power of God out of the hands of all other nations.—1 Nephi 3: 152-155.

Here is depicted in prophecy the Revolutionary War with Great Britain, beginning in 1776. The rule of King George, of England, was renounced by the American Colonies, and the Americans eventually won in the first and second wars with Great Britain.

Nephi says: "This land shall be a land of liberty unto the Gentiles, and there shall be no kings upon the land, who shall raise up unto the Gentiles." Some may say that Dom Pedro, emperor of Brazil, exercised a rulership in a monarchial form, but, except in name only, he was more of a president than a king. He exercised no autocratic authority and ruled his country the same as a president of a republic does. But even he was dethroned and banished from the country. Today Brazil is a republic in form of government.

The only time when an effort was made to establish an actual monarchy on this continent was during the Civil War of 1861-1865, when Napoleon III, emperor of France, sought to create a throne in Mexico, by placing Maximilian of Austria to be the head of this new empire in April, 1864. The United States was so locked in their own Civil War that the Nation was unable to do more than protest against this French violation of the Monroe doctrine. But as soon as the war was closed, notice was served upon Napoleon that his army of 20,000 men, with which he proposed to sustain the Empire of Maximilian, must be withdrawn, which, of course, would seal the doom of the empire.

Napoleon withdrew his troops; then Juarez and Diaz, native chiefs, at the head of their Mexican hordes, made short work of Maximilian. He was tried and condemned by the Mexicans, who set him against a wall and shot him to death. Thus was fulfilled the prophecy in regard to a Gentile attempting to set up a kingdom in the land of America. But what became of Napoleon? The prophecy says that "he that raiseth up a king against me shall perish." (2 Nephi 7: 20.)

Napoleon was the cause of the Maximilian Empire in Mexico. History tells us that Napoleon III engaged in a war with Germany, with the result that his armies were overwhelmed; he himself was taken prisoner, and became an exile in England, where he died in 1873. His only son engaged with the troops of England, in what they were pleased to call "the war for the extension of civilization." While in this South African country he was shot to death by the Zulus, in June, 1879.

One of the outstanding prophecies as recorded in the Book of Mormon, is the one which says:

This is a choice land, and whatsoever nation shall possess it, shall be free from bondage, and from captivity, and from all other nations under heaven, if they will but serve the God of the land, who is Jesus Christ.—Ether 1: 35.

When this country, the United States, was small in power, they had the spirit of daring to adopt the Monroe doctrine as a rule of foreign policy for this country. The substance of this doctrine is as follows:

This foreign policy was first formally announced by President Monroe on December 2, 1823, to the effect that the United States will regard as an unfriendly act any attempt on the part of European powers to extend their systems in the Western Hemisphere, or any interference to oppress, or in any manner control the destiny of governments in this hemisphere, whose independence has been acknowledged by the United States.

It looks as if the officials of the Government of the United States were inspired to do this act, as they were inspired in the formation of the Declaration of Independence, for the Lord said to the Prophet Joseph Smith in December, 1833:

Therefore, it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another. And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood.—Doctrine and Covenants 98: 10.

In 1563 England began to import Negro slaves into the West Indies. In 1619 the first slaves were brought into the Colonies. Twenty of them were sold from a Dutch vessel to men in Jamestown, Virginia. The first act of Congress prohibiting the importation of slaves into the United States was in 1807. The Emancipation Proclamation, freeing all slaves in the seceding States during the Rebellion, was in 1863. The adoption of the Thirteenth Amendment, prohibiting slavery throughout the borders of the United States and its Territories, was in December, 1865.

When the antislave question was being agitated in this country, Joseph Smith advised in 1844 that the slave States abolish slavery not later than 1850, and pray Congress to pay every man a reasonable price for his slaves. He further said:

Break off the shackles from the poor black man, and hire them to labor like other human beings, for an hour of virtuous liberty on earth is worth a whole eternity of bondage.—Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 532.

Joseph Smith wrote to Mr. N. E. Seaton, editor of a paper in Rochester, New York, on Friday, January 4, 1833, as follows:

Now I am prepared to say by the authority of Jesus Christ, that not many years shall pass away before the United States shall present such a scene of bloodshed as has not a parallel in the history of our nation; pestilence, hail, famine, and earthquakes will sweep the wicked of this generation from off the land, to open and prepare the way for the return of the lost tribes of Israel from the north country. The people of the Lord, those who have complied with the requisitions of the new covenant, have already commenced gathering to Zion, which is in the State of Missouri: therefore I declare unto you the warning which the Lord has commanded me to declare unto this generation, remembering that the eyes of my Maker are upon me, and that to Him I am accountable for every word I say, wishing nothing worse to my fellow men than their eternal salvation; therefore "fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come." Repent ye, and embrace the everlasting covenant, and flee to Zion before the overflowing scourge overtake you, for there are those now living upon the earth whose eyes shall not be closed in death until they see all these things, which I have spoken, fulfilled. Remember these things; call upon the Lord while he is near, and seek him while he may be found, is the exhortation of your unworthy servant.—Joseph Smith, in Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 707.

The divine wisdom in this advice is better seen, when we consider that the slavery question began to be bitterly agitated in 1846-47, and that in 1848 the Calhoun dogma of "the constitutional rights of each slaveholder to remove with his slaves into any Federal territory, and hold them in defiance of Congress or any local authority," was hotly urged by the proslavery party, causing intense excitement and bitterness throughout the nation, between the proslavery and the antislavery elements; and further, that in 1850, the Honorable Henry Clay introduced in Congress his famed "compromise" in the interests of slavery, and that thereafter the antagonisms aroused on that subject rendered reconciliation and equitable adjustment impossible—and, that the terrible war of the Rebellion was the final arbiter.

Joseph Smith evidently foresaw by divine inspiration that the only time for its peaceful adjustment was "by the year 1850," and not later.—Voice of Warning, p. 145.

Revelation Given to Joseph Smith on Wars That Would Be in the United States, Beginning at the Rebellion at South Carolina

On December 25, 1832, Joseph Smith received a revelation foreshowing the desolating wars and fearful judgments in the latter days.

In this revelation is foretold the War of the Rebellion, through which our Nation passed from 1861 to 1865, and resulted in the death of over 600,000 persons, and in crippling and disabling by disease over 400,000 more.

This revelation was first printed at Liverpool, England, in 1851, in a pamphlet entitled The Pearl of Great Price though many of the Saints had known of its existence since it was given in 1832. It was also published in Beadle's work against the Mormons, in 1870. Mr. Beadle states that he copied it out of The Seer, a work published by O. Pratt, in Washington, District of Columbia, in 1853, eight years before the Rebellion commenced. Mr. John Hyde, jr., published a work in 1857 (three years before the secession of South Carolina from the Union), in which he cites a statement of Joseph Smith, made on April 6, 1843, concerning this matter, showing that Joseph Smith declared publicly the place where the war would begin, and the cause.

I prophesy in the name of the Lord God, that the commencement of the difficulties which will cause much bloodshed, previous to the coming of the Son of Man, will be in South Carolina (it probably may arise through the slave question); this a voice declared to me, while I was praying earnestly on the subject on December 25, 1832.—Mormonism, by John Hyde, p. 174.

Mr. Hyde wrote this work against the Mormons in 1857 in order to prove that Joseph Smith was a false prophet.

The following is the revelation given by Joseph Smith on December 25, 1832:

Verily, thus saith the Lord, concerning the wars that will shortly come to pass, beginning at the rebellion of South Carolina, which will eventually terminate in the death and misery of many souls. The days will come that war will be poured out upon all nations, beginning at that place; for behold, the southern States shall be divided against the northern States, and the southern States will call on other nations, even the nation of Great Britain, as it is called, and they shall also call upon other nations, in order to defend themselves against other nations; and thus war shall be poured out upon all nations. And it shall come to pass, after many days, slaves shall rise up against their masters, who shall be marshaled and disciplined for war: and it shall come to pass also, that the remnants who are left of the land will marshal themselves, and shall become exceeding angry, and shall vex the Gentiles with a sore vexation; and thus, with the sword, and by bloodshed, the inhabitants of the earth shall mourn; and with famine, and plague, and earthquakes, and the thunder of heaven, and the fierce and vivid lightning also, shall the inhabitants of the earth be made to feel the wrath, and indignation, and chastening hand of an Almighty God, until the consumption decreed, hath made a full end of all nations; that the cry of the saints, and of the blood of the saints, shall cease to come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth, from the earth, to be avenged of their enemies. Wherefore, stand ye in holy places, and be not moved, until the day of the Lord come; for behold it cometh quickly, saith the Lord. Amen.

War is to begin in the State of South Carolina, according to the revelation, and the Southern States would be divided against the Northern States. Such an event as the Civil War of 1861 was never dreamed of in 1832, but it had been revealed to Joseph, and he knew it was coming, hence his advice in 1844 that the slave States should abolish slavery not later than 1850; for after that date it would be too late.

Notice the fulfillment of the exact wording of the revelation. From the first convention that attempted to annul the supposed contract between the State Government and the National Government, to the firing of the first gun, every step was first taken by South Carolina. Her Senators were the first to leave the Senate chamber, and give notice of the withdrawal of South Carolina from the Union. The first representatives in the National House of Representatives to withdraw were the representatives of South Carolina. On the 11th day of April, 1861, the first guns of the great war were fired from the shores of South Carolina upon Fort Sumter.

The Southern States were to be divided against the Northern States. Eleven of the Southern States withdrew from the Union and constituted themselves a confederacy, to be known as the Confederate States of America. They chose a president, they had a congress and a constitution and government, and for four long years they waged war with the Northern States. So it is a truth that the Southern States were divided against the Northern States, as stated in the revelation.

War shall end in the death and misery of many souls. That particular part of the revelation became a fact only too soon, though quite contrary to the prevailing opinion when the Rebellion began, for the first call for troops by the Union was for ninety days. It was thought by the foremost statesmen, even after the conflict opened, that it would be one of short duration, but it dragged its slow but terrible length along through four troubled years, and culminated finally, as all American historians agree, in the death and misery of many souls.

The Southern States will call on other nations for help, even the nation of Great Britain. The Southern States did call on other nations for help, even Great Britain and France. They sought to be recognized, diplomatically, as belligerents, and thus secure themselves against the influence and cooperation of other nations in favor of the Northern States, and further, to obtain material aid in order to defend themselves against invading armies of the Northern States.

Messrs. Mason and Slidell were captured upon the high seas by Captain Wilkes, who learned that they were aboard the British vessel Trent, on their way to England and France for the purpose of negotiating treaties with those nations, by which they would give their support to the Southern Confederacy.

Captain Wilkes took them from the Trent and brought them back to our shores. In doing so he violated one of the principles of international law, that the American Government had contended for in previous years—the violation of which formed the cause of war, largely, between Great Britain and the United States in 1812; and as soon as it was apparent that there had been a violation of this international law, our Secretary of State hastened to apologize to Great Britain, and took the earliest possible occasion to return these two Southern representatives, ministers plenipotentiary to those nations I have named, back to a British deck, that they might go on their way to negotiate their treaties, thus fulfilling the terms of this wonderful prophecy "that the Southern States would call on the nation of Great Britain, and other nations."

Great Britain sympathized with the Southern cause to the extent that she permitted vessels to be constructed in her docks, whose purpose was to prey upon the commerce of the United States. One case was notorious, that of the Alabama, fitted out in the docks of Birkenhead, near Liverpool, and when fully equipped, left England's shores to prey upon American commerce, until finally, the settlement of the Alabama claims became an important incident in diplomatic controversy between England and the United States, England consenting, finally, to pay an indemnity of $15,000,000 for breaking the neutrality that she should have maintained.

The revelation said that war would be poured out upon all nations. At the outbreak of the great war in Europe, on July 28, 1914, it was little thought that it would involve almost the entire world. It did involve the entire world in a measure. The population of the world at that time was 1,721,426,000; the population of the nations in war was 1,109,466,225. This represents almost the entire population. This war cost the world all told 30,000,000 lives, and a property loss of $400,000,000,000.

Victor L. Berger has figured out this loss, as printed in the Vision of February, 1929, as follows:

With this amount we could have built a house worth $2,500 and furnished this house with $1,000 worth of furniture and placed it on five acres of land worth $100 an acre, and have given all this to each and every family in the United States, Canada, England, Wales, Ireland, Scotland, France, Belgium, Germany, and Russia.

After doing this there would have been enough left to give each city of 200,000 inhabitants or over, in all the countries named, a $5,000,000 library, a $5,000,000 hospital, and a $10,000,000 university.

And then out of the balance we could still have had sufficient money to set aside a sum at 5% interest which would pay for all time to come a $1,000 yearly salary for each of an army of 125,000 teachers, and in addition to this, to pay the same salary to an army of 125,000 nurses.

And after all this has been done, we could still have had enough left out of the four hundred billion dollars to buy up all of France and Belgium and everything of value that France and Belgium possesses; that is, every French and Belgian farm, home, factory, railroad, street car—in fact, everything of value in these two countries.

What might have been accomplished with the money spent in the last World War? It went out of the pocket of the people, and went up in smoke or in suffering.

The prophecy states that the slaves shall rise up against their masters, who shall be marshaled and disciplined for war. Not less than 200,000 of the blacks were enrolled in the armies of the North. They were marshaled and disciplined by white officers, and their arms were directed against their former masters.

The remnants who are left shall marshal themselves (not be marshaled by others) and shall vex the Gentiles with a sore vexation. Who are these? They must be of Israelitish blood, for they are to vex the Gentiles. The only people that were in the land that were not Gentiles, were the Jews and the Indians, and the Indians are of the seed of Lehi, who came out of Jerusalem in 600 B. C. These are the people that went on the war path and vexed the Gentiles with sore vexation. In August, 1862, they began their massacres (at the very time when we were having our Civil War). In the State of Minnesota alone they killed 2,000 persons in a few hours, and destroyed property valued at $2,500,000.

Famine and plagues are to follow these wars, until the inhabitants of the earth shall be made to feel the wrath, and indignation, and chastening hand of an Almighty God, says the revelation. The terrors of famine and plague predicted have been so widespread and destructive since 1860 that the bare mention of them ought to satisfy anyone of the truthfulness of this item of prophecy.

The Chicago Tribune, of November 15, 1871, says:

War, famine, pestilence, fire, wind, and water and ice have let loose and have done their worst, and with such remarkable phenomena accompanying them, that it is not to be wondered at men have sometimes thought the end of the world had come.

If the editors of this paper had this opinion in 1871, what of the time intervening between that date and the present. We have had worse things fall upon the children of men since the year 1871, and the end is not yet.

The Lord says to us in these last days:

I, the Lord, am angry with the wicked; I am holding my Spirit from the inhabitants of the earth. I have sworn in my wrath and decreed wars upon the face of the earth, and the wicked shall slay the wicked, and fear shall come upon every man, and the saints also shall hardly escape; nevertheless, I, the Lord, am with them, and will come down in heaven from the presence of my Father, and consume the wicked with unquenchable fire. And, behold, this is not yet, but by and by.—Doctrine and Covenants 63:9.

A revelation was given through Joseph Smith in November, 1831, found in Doctrine and Covenants 1:3, 4, 6, as follows:

Wherefore the voice of the Lord is unto the ends of the earth, that all that will hear may hear; prepare ye for that which is to come, for the Lord is nigh; and the anger of the Lord is kindled, and his sword is bathed in heaven, and it shall fall upon the inhabitants of the earth; and the arm of the Lord shall be revealed; and the day cometh that they who will not hear the voice of the Lord, neither the voice of his servants, neither give heed to the words of the prophets and apostles, shall be cut off from among the people; . . . wherefore I, the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, jr., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; . . . I, the Lord . . . willeth that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh, the hour is not yet (1831), but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the Devil shall have power over his own dominion; and also the Lord shall have power over his saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon Idumea, or the world.

The Lord says to the peoples of the world, and especially his disciples, as recorded in the book of Luke, Inspired Version 21:34-36:

Let my disciples therefore take heed to themselves, lest at any time their hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and that day come upon them unawares. For as a snare it shall come on all them who dwell on the face of the whole earth. And what I say unto one I say unto all. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, and keep my commandments that ye may be counted worthy to escape all these things which shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man when he shall come clothed in the glory of his Father.

War—What For?

By William Nisbett

(A tribute to Agnes MacPhail.)

War! What for? for nothing good,
Antithesis of brotherhood—
Gethsemane of motherhood.

Oh, what a shame that there should be Such awful, useless butchery—
Such hatred, vice, and tragedy.

May Canada be strong for peace
And show the way that war may cease—
May women's influence increase.

For women have a leader bold,
Who fearless stands 'mid sneers untold—
Oh, hasten, and her hands uphold.

For men have failed to find a way
To banish war and strife away—
'Tis women's work and women's day.

The Vacation Church School as a Missionary Agency

By Bertha Constance Woodward, Supervisor of the Children's Division of the Department of Religious Education.

As a church we have overlooked the outstanding opportunities which a simple type of the vacation church school offers for doing missionary work. Since we have six excellent lessons for children on Church School Evangelism (see May and June numbers of the Department Journal), and a list of activities which suggest ways for children to live our religion (this may be secured from the Department of Religious Education), there seems to be no excuse for us to longer leave undone that which we should have been doing.

There are several ways in which such a school may be sponsored.

Missionaries may consider it one of their approaches in reaching both the children and the adults of a community. If they can solicit the help of several consecrated and competent sisters, or unemployed men in the local church community, who would assist both in advertising and in conducting a school, there is no question but that many home contacts would be made which could never have been made otherwise. Children would be anxious to attend a vacation school; and, too, parents who could not be reached in any other way would be willing to hear an explanation of the program that is being given their children. Even in the house to house canvas, which is necessary in advertising the school, there would be an excellent opportunity to explain the church program.

Such a school could be held in either the morning or the afternoon during the time the missionaries were preaching in the community. If working with children is a new experience to the missionaries, a one-week term would be long enough for the first school. The lessons in church school evangelism, mentioned above, will make possible the handling of one week in a very fine way if activities from the suggested list are chosen according to the abilities of the various age groups. The Game Book, by Closson, can be used as a help in conducting the playground work, and the materials necessary for the projects and activities can be supplied by the discards at spring house-cleaning time or by donations. If additional suggestions are needed, the Department of Religious Education stands ready to help in whatever way it can.

In a few communities our church is already conducting vacation church schools. The missionaries could easily be used in such schools and could help in giving a decided missionary slant to the program.

A school sponsored by consecrated and trained local church workers also has an excellent opportunity to do missionary work. Even though there are no preaching services to which families might be invited in the evenings, there will be those in the local church who are good visitors and can be personal evangelists.

Such a school could well be used by a local church to prepare the way for a special missionary effort in a community. Each parent, worker, and child could use his influence in reaching as many homes as is possible. Even children should be made to feel that it is a privilege to help other children to know about our church.

Regardless of whether the missionary or the local church sponsors the school, the workers should not spoil a good piece of work by getting weary in well-doing the moment the closing of school is over. The missionary work is only begun! The families of the children are exceptionally friendly at this time, therefore be friendly with them, and let them know that friendliness is part of our religion.

The keeping of contacts may be easier if each family in the local church is asked to take one of the homes touched by the vacation church school as its special charge, and to call upon regularly. See that the parents in these new contacts are definitely linked up with the vacation school when it is first opened; then they will have an opportunity to become acquainted with many of the Saints through social gatherings and parent-teacher meetings in the school. Calling in the homes will be an easy matter then.

By keeping in touch with the families the whole year through, many of them may be led to attend special meetings at the church and may even become regular attendants at the church school and other services. Thus the vacation school adds life, strength, and missionary opportunity to the local church, and the church which does not provide for such a school is losing a great opportunity.

The following experience from one school should encourage us:

Just three days before the school started a father came to me and asked that we drive to his home for his three children. One was a girl thirteen years old who had never been to Sunday school. It was my privilege to baptize this girl and a boy nine years old, and take the mother into the church.

There is a little village about three miles away, out of which we hauled twenty children. There was a little dead church in the town which was having no services at all. Following the close of the school the parents asked us to come over and hold a meeting. The request was urgent. Within a few weeks we took a tent and started a meeting. The spirit of revival did not have to be kindled; it was already there; the work was easy; the fruits of revival came without the usual struggle; the seed had been sown, and all there was to do was to reap the harvest.

There were thirty-one conversions, not all children, but fathers and mothers as well. One man and his wife and four children came and were baptized.

In all of the vacation school work, we should remember this—even if the new friends never desert their faith, we have at least had the opportunity of making our religion real to them. Even if no adults are reached, it is worth while to know that children have been given the simple and wholesome teachings of our church, which should help motivate a more religious life in childhood and adolescence and help them to become active members in the church.

Also, remember that while the missionary can do much good alone, he can do much more good if he has the assistance of the local Saints in preparing for and following up his work. The missionary can do some things; the vacation church school can do some others; and together with the local church, which is back of both, they can come close to doing all things necessary to convince a neighborhood of the value of the living truths which our religion exists to promulgate.

Lesson V

I. Introductory.

a. In our last lesson we considered revelation as the starting point for the development of our church philosophy. It must be recognized that every structure must have solid foundation stones upon which to rest. From an ecclesiastical standpoint we have labeled these as "principles."

b. Classification of the principles:

1. Primary (Hebrews 6: 1, 2).
  - a. Faith.
  - b. Repentance.
  - c. Baptism of water.
  - d. Baptism of Spirit.
  - e. Resurrection.
  - f. Judgment.
2. Secondary.
  - a. Sacrifice. (Romans 12: 1.)
  - b. Service. (Matthew 20: 26, 27; Matthew 25: 40.)
  - c. Love. (John 15: 12, 13; 1 Corinthians 13.)

II. Importance of the Principles.

a. As no superstructure can stand without a solid foundation, so is it impossible for the church to remain intact except it rest upon eternal principles. Read carefully 1 Corinthians 3: 11-15.

III. Relation of the Principles to Growth.

a. We can never leave the principles out of consideration in our attempt to grow spiritually. Yet in our use of these principles there is given infinite opportunity for development to each in his own peculiar abilities. This may be illustrated by the following examples:

1. There are thirteen simple sounds in the chromatic scale, yet from these few sounds, literally thousands of musical harmonies have been produced. Furthermore, a leading musician has stated that we have scarcely started in our search for new musical combinations and possibilities.

2. We are advised that there are but eighty simple chemical elements. Yet from these few elements, literally thousands of chemical compositions have been created.

3. The rays of the sun become more widely separated, the farther they travel from the source of their light. Yet as we follow them back, we find them always converging in the eternal source of light.

4. Our conclusion from the above examples would be that an infinite opportunity is given to everyone who utilizes the principles of divine life, but that no matter what endless variety of expression may be attained, we may trace the development straight back to its source found in the few underlying, simple principles. The principles themselves are simple, but they afford tremendous opportunity for a complexity of expression.

IV. Meaning of the Principles.

a. FAITH: "The assurance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." (Hebrews 11: 1, Inspired Version.)

b. REPENTANCE: The continuous adjustment of life from a lower to a higher order. (Luke 3: 8.)

c. BAPTISM OF WATER: A type of the burial of the old life and the resurrection of the new. (Romans 6: 1-5.)

d. BAPTISM OF THE SPIRIT: The complete immersion of the proselyte into the spirit of the work, in which every part of his being is touched with a divine fire and consecrated to the ideals of the new way of living. (See Matthew 20: 22, 23; Acts 2: 1-18.)

e. RESURRECTION: That life has power over death.

f. JUDGMENT: That the frail judgments of men will some day be swallowed up in the eternal readjustment which shall not judge after the "hearing of his ears or the sight of his eyes."

The commencement banquet was had Thursday evening at the Coliseum. President G. N. Briggs, toastmaster, introduced the speakers of the evening. "The famous doors" were revealed by Frank Parsons as he spoke of the West, East, and North doors. "The lobby," as related by Helen Anthony brought to the banquet the real student life of Graceland. Noble Kelly told of "The chapel," its charm and associations; prayer meetings, pep meetings. "The tower," and its significance was treated in a pleasant manner by Alice Chappelow. Music for the evening was given by a male trio, Rod May, Bob Crawford, and LeRoy Dick.

The dedication of Walker Hall, the new girls' dormitory, marked the closing day of the school year, occurring at two o'clock in the afternoon. The crowd met at Zimmermann Hall and moved to the east side of Walker Hall. Music consisted of congregational singing and numbers by the Lamoni Band. Presiding over this service was Bishop F. B. Blair, for many years an active member of the Board of Trustees. The program included the main address by President Frederick M. Smith; a talk by Mrs. Fannie Jones, mother of Franklyn D. Jones; presentation of the building to college by Bishop M. H. Siegfried and acceptance by the chairman of the board of trustees, Bishop A. Carmichael.

At the Honors Chapel, held at Zimmermann Hall Friday morning, twenty-seven Graceland athletes in football, basketball, track, and tennis were presented the official "G" by their coach, A. R. Gilbert. The reward to the men is not alone in the sweater or the letter they have received, but rather in the personal development gained by having loyally served and represented the student body and college. The award carries with it a responsibility as well as an honor, for every man wearing a "G" carries with him, to be connected with his actions and words, his college, Graceland. To earn the official "G" a man must participate in one of the sports at a required standard, maintain a scholastic ranking above graduation standard, and keep his personal habits and social contacts of such a character that they will add dignity to the name of the college. The following earned the "G" this year: Football: Arthur Martin, Don Barrows, G. R. Bathe, Ross Goddard, Ed Traver, George Melenzyer, Kenneth Ingram, Almer Sheehy, Russell Rockwell, Cecil Willetts, Albert Bradbury, James Smith, Marion Langton, Robert Kelley; Football and track: Frank Parsons, Delmar Jones; Football and basketball, John Turner; Basketball and tennis, LeRoy Dick, Richard Wildermuth; track, Hillard Cox, Elmer Anderson, Stanley Barrows, Norman Preusch; tennis: Mortimer Fisher, Brand Banker, Myron Fisher; Basketball and business manager, Richard Anderson. All together for the last time a good-bye was said in the form of "Yea, team, fight, fight, fight."

Twenty-one girls were awarded the yellow "G" at the final chapel of the year. It was a lot of work practicing volley ball, playground ball, basket ball, and tennis; going out for track; and hiking to Kellerton, but the satisfaction the girls will get out of wearing the letter will more than make up for the effort. In addition to the more strictly athletic requirements, each "G" woman has measured up to the standard of clean competition and good sportsmanship. Those winning letters are: Marjory Bean, Margaret Christensen, Alice Dickey, Dorothy Gunsolley, Edna Smith, Frances Whitcher, Lois Garver, Gertrude Jones, Jeanette Parsons, Daisy Black, Ruth Clark, Ann Donelson, Lila Emmer-son, Eva Wallace, Faye Fry, Thelma Ingram, Sarah Kelley, Dorothy Prall, Katherine Schafer, Doris Swain, and Mildred Topham.

The final Athenian program was held Saturday night, May 31, in the chapel. This program marked the culmination of a year of active service by Delmar Goode, Athenian president. Much talent was displayed: first, in a two-piano number, "Danse Macabre," by Vivian Castings and Pauline Siegfried; then, a reading by Iona Goodwin. The Athenian Male Quartet sang "I hear the wind a-blowing," Anna Mae Hough read "The mirror." Collin Ferret, bass soloist from Australia, sang two songs. This was his first appearance in the chapel, and he was enthusiastically received. The presentation of the gavel by Delmar Goode to the new Athenian president, Noble Kelly, was followed by a skit by Ed and Frances.

The baccalaureate sermon was delivered to the graduates by President F. M. McDowell at the Brick Church the evening of June 1, and other outstanding events of the college commencement were: the graduate piano recital, of Dorothy Gunsolley in the college chapel the evening of May 27; the voice recital in the college chapel the evening of May 29; the commencement play, "So this is London," given at the Coliseum the evening of June 3; the commencement concert at the Brick Church at eight o'clock the evening of June 4; class day exercises on the campus at two o'clock the afternoon of June 5, and the campus lunch June 6.

The last two weeks were crowded with parties, initiations, announcements of elections, rehearsals, games, picnics, recitals, planning of programs for next year, and all manner of farewell functions.

Not least in interest were three weddings. The commencement season furnished a number of climaxes to college romances. Some returned to Lamoni to the Brick Church or chapel for the wedding ceremonies. May 30 at the Brick Church occurred the wedding of John Muceus and Grace Lane, Roy Cheville officiating. At the Saints' church in Davis City June 4 occurred the wedding of Helen Vandel and Harve Eliason. And Friday afternoon, June 6, in the chapel occurred the wedding of T. Hillard Cox and Beatrice Gates, the ceremony being read by Roy Cheville. Several other weddings are scheduled for the summer.

Graceland sends six of its students into the missionary field. Some of these are resuming their labors after a few years' leave of absence for study at Graceland; others are accepting their first appointments. Fred Davies, of Wigan, England, after two years study at Graceland, is returning to the British Mission. Granville Swenson has returned to his home at Everett, Washington, and will be working near there during the summer. In September he and his wife will go to Chatham District in eastern Canada to begin missionary work. Virgil Sheppard, of Joplin, Missouri, returns to the field after three years at Graceland. His appointment is to the southern district of Illinois. Arthur Oakman, of London, England, will be in Central Michigan territory during the summer months, busy at reunions and general evangelistic services. Joseph Sandage, of Glasgow, Montana, returned to his home after General Conference. He goes to Saskatchewan, Canada, to serve as traveling missionary. Edward Larson, of Copenhagen, Denmark, will spend his summer in the central regions of the church, probably in Kansas City and Independence, working under the supervision of the directors of missionary work.

Thirteen of Graceland's students have been successful in obtaining schools to teach next year, and several others are awaiting final action of school boards.

Farewells were reluctantly said during the morning and afternoon of June 7, and by the early part of this week workers of faculty and student body who plan to spend the summer on the hill were established in their quarters. In the meantime numbers of students have arrived home or are on their way to homes in various States, and are settling down to summer activities.

Logan, Iowa

Logan Branch was well represented at the Centennial Conference, more than twenty being present for varying lengths of time. Many took advantage of the class work offered, and all enjoyed a most happy and profitable experience.

April 21, Brother John Dungan, a long-time resident of Logan, passed to his reward after a short illness of pneumonia. Our hearts go out in sympathy to his faithful companion and family of three grown daughters and son.

Owing to the number attending General Conference on Easter Sunday, the cantata, "Life eternal," was rendered the following Sunday by the combined choirs of Woodbine and Logan, under the direction of Brother Harrison Peyton. An appreciative audience greeted the singers at the eleven o'clock hour in Logan and another equally appreciative at eight o'clock in the evening in Woodbine church. Here the choir members presented a sheaf of roses to Brother Peyton and another to Sister Ruth Gunsolley, pianist, as a token of appreciation for their untiring work during the weeks of practice.

Mother's Day was observed with an appropriate program, during which a group of young girls pinned a flower on every person present. In the evening the Missouri Valley Choir, under the direction of Miss Louise Lewis, rendered an effective, candlelight vesper service, which was much enjoyed by the audience.

Services were dismissed on May 18 that those who wished might be present at the district institute held in Missouri Valley Saturday and Sunday. The church was comfortably filled, though threatening weather no doubt cut down the attendance. Class work on "Community stewardship" was conducted by Bishop W. R. Adams, and on the "New plan of religious education" by Elders Ray Whiting and Gerald Gunsolley. Brothers E. Y. Hunker and Marvin Fry, the singing missionaries, were also present and assisted in the services both as speakers and in a musical way.

The order of the midweek service has been somewhat changed to include class work on different subjects, preceded by a short prayer service. This arrangement seems to meet with general approval.

Those interested in the recreational part of the work conferred together recently, and as a result the young people of Dunlap, Woodbine, Logan, and Missouri Valley meet each Monday evening to engage in baseball, volley ball, and other sports. Brother Roll Salts kindly offered the use of his grassy pasture just east of Logan, an ideal and accessible spot.

Brother G. L. Sweet, of Harmon, Oklahoma, writes that his interest in the forward movement of the gospel continues deep and unwavering. He would like to have a missionary visit Harmon to hold meetings, and assures such a worker of a good hearing. He says in part: "There are several here who are interested in the gospel story, but I realize my inability to explain it to them as I would like to have it presented. I am pleased to hear of the progress the Saints are making toward the missionary goal of the church and the establishing of Zion. Though I have been isolated from the church for about twenty-five years, I am eager to do all I can to help. For the past four years we have been meeting with the people of another denomination. I enjoy worshipping with them, but it grieves me to see their ignorance of the fullness of the gospel."

Seen by a Visitor to Centennial

By George E. McConley

I wish to relate a little experience I had while my wife and I were attending the Centennial Conference on Sunday, April 6, during the second sacrament meeting held in the forenoon of that day.

Wife and I went a little early and occupied seats on the first floor, down near a row of palms and flowers which seemed to me to be about fifty feet long, and ran from one side of the platform to the other. At either end of these ferns and flowers were two beautiful white lilies. As this was the first time we had ever attended a service at the Auditorium, I naturally became curious to see all of the arrangements that were made for taking care of the thousands that attended the meeting to partake of the sacrament. The service commenced about 10.15 and lasted about three quarters of an hour, and I am informed that some seven thousand partook of the sacrament.

The day previous I had fasted, and felt in splendid physical condition at these exercises. I had remained there but a short time when I was informed by a heavenly messenger that angels were present. I immediately prayed inaudibly that I might be enabled to see them.

When the sacrament services began, I heard the singing of birds above the platform and looked there, and also among the ferns and flowers, to see if I could discover any birds in bird cages or otherwise. I could see none. I remember distinctly that no canary birds were heard. At the time prayer was offered for the blessing of the bread to be partaken by the membership, the birds' voices all became still; then after the prayer they commenced, and during the time of serving the bread to the vast number assembled, the singing of birds continued until the prayer was offered blessing the wine, when the sound ceased until after the prayer was offered and the singing continued until the close of the exercises; that is, the end of the sacrament, at which time all of the birds' voices concentrated among those ferns and flowers, and commenced singing. It seemed to me that there must have been fifty or seventy-five. I again looked among these plants, but could see no evidence of birds, when suddenly the sound ceased, and then an instant after they were all together near some windows in the right upper gallery. This continued a very short time, and suddenly ceased when at the upper left part of the gallery they broke out in singing which lasted perhaps a half minute. During all of this time I tried to discover if there were not birds there, but none were seen. Then the singing ceased altogether.

I was given to understand that as I had listened to the birds' singing in the woods while they were engaged in their activities, I was given to know that the vast hosts of angels of heaven were cheerfully carrying out the works of the Great Jehovah. This had never dawned on me before. Of course, I was aware that the Scriptures relate angelic visits, especially at the time of the birth of our Savior. I never realized that all of the vast host were engaged in various activities.

I was also informed by the heavenly messenger that John the Revelator and the three Nephite witnesses were also present, and they partook of the sacrament along with the rest. I earnestly desired that I might see these men, and twice looked around over the vast audience to see if I might not discover some peculiarity about some person or persons, that would indicate who they were, but could see no difference in general appearance, so that I felt disappointed in not being able to discover them.

The next morning early wife and I and Sister Vandel, of Colorado, went by auto about one hundred miles east of Independence, and when a few miles on the highway from Independence, we met three men, one at a time. They were perhaps thirty or forty rods apart. Then as I was crossing the bridge I saw another man approaching about twenty rods away, and was informed by a heavenly messenger that this was John the Revelator. This completely surprised me, and I looked earnestly at the man as we neared each other. He was more husky in appearance than the three Nephites who had preceded him, and whom we had just met as before related. He had on a poor-looking Cady hat. I noticed the hair of his head, both in front and behind, and observed that it was slightly streaked with gray. He wore a dark gray overcoat, rather shabby. His shoes also seemed to be old, and when approaching, or rather when we came near to each other, he shrugged his shoulders and gave me a glance and somewhat opened the front of his overcoat.

I then observed that his breast was about double the thickness of that of the ordinary man; that is, from the back of the shoulders through the body to the front of the chest. His cheeks were full, and he walked without a cane or staff, and so did each of the Nephites who preceded him. All of them seemed to be about forty-five years of age, and hale and hearty. The Nephites were more slender, and all of these persons were about the usual height of men. None of them were using tobacco that I could observe.

While passing these persons, I at first thought that they were poor unfortunates and mentioned the fact to the other occupants of the car until I was informed by the messenger who they were; although the messenger at this time did not mention the names of the Nephites, just John the Revelator.

I was impressed that on account of the fact these persons had partaken of the sacrament with us, they recognized this as being the only true church of Jesus our Savior, although at the same time another church in Utah was holding services the same day, and still another was holding services on a part of the Temple Lot there at Independence.

STERLING, COLORADO, May 10.

Oakland, California

From the Oakland Bulletin

The new church is rapidly nearing completion. It is remarked by all who see it that it is a work of beauty and will make an ideal house of worship. The committee met last Sunday (May 18) and gave to a subcommittee the task of selecting and arranging the drapes for the upper auditorium. Also another committee was appointed to inquire into the matter of seating the church. All going well, it is expected that the church will be ready for occupancy very soon, and we are hoping to arrange for the formal opening services for Sunday, July 29.

Last Sunday Brother Carmichael was in Santa Rosa and preached to good congregations at Windsor and in Santa Rosa. Brother Moran was the preacher at Park-Presidio. The pastor preached morning and evening in Oakland.

Today (May 25) the pastor will preach in the morning at Park-Presidio and in the evening is to be the guest of the Winslow Club of the Plymouth Congregational Church, to give a lecture on "The origin and meaning of Mormonism." Brother Carmichael will preach in the morning and Brother Bush in the evening.

Sick members include the family of Brother G. Hawley and Brother and Sister Wilson, Brother Wilson being in the Southern Pacific Hospital where he underwent an operation May 19. The son of Brother and Sister Tasto is still in the Merrit Hospital and is unable to be moved. Brother Harry Jones is in the Fabiola Hospital, but hopes soon to be at home. The son of Brother and Sister Gatchett is ill, and our prayers are solicited.

We welcome to our midst Brother Davis, of Independence, father of our orchestra director; also Sister Blair, of Detroit, Michigan, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. A. Foley.

San Francisco, California

Park-Presidio Branch, 405 Arguello Boulevard

May 28.—Park-Presidio congregation and its many friends had the pleasure of tendering a reception and complimentary luncheon to Brother John W. Rushton on his return to the coast. Covers were laid for one hundred. Brother Rushton's Mother's Day sermon was beautiful, and many new visitors were greatly impressed by his discourse. After the service all repaired to the banquet hall, where a delightful luncheon was served by the members and friends of the Ruth's Club. Special praise is due Sister Bessie B. Holling, president, for the able manner in which she and her associates brought the affair to a successful conclusion.

A program consisting of instrumental and vocal selections was greatly appreciated, after which Brother Rushton was called upon to give a brief resumé of his observations at the Centennial Conference.

Patriarch J. H. N. Jones, of Victoria, Australia, was then called upon for a few words, and he expressed his appreciation of God's goodness to the people of the United States. This being his first visit to America, he was given the opportunity of making comparisons. He compared the fertility of the soil and many things with which we are blessed to those of his beloved Australia.

On Wednesday, May 21, Elder W. J. Haworth, of Rozelle, Australia, sailed on the Steamer Matsonia for Honolulu. An early hour telephone call made it possible for some of the Park-Presidio Saints to show Brother Haworth and his party of visiting members some of the points of interest in San Francisco. It was our pleasure to serve them, and we know our efforts were appreciated.

The Park-Presidio members want to go on record that we are always happy to do our duty toward any visiting Saint, but needless to say we prefer to have due notice of the arrival of visitors that proper arrangements can be made to show our hospitality.

Our services are well attended, and with Brother Rushton back in our midst, we look forward to bigger and better meetings.

Flint, Michigan

From Flint Tidings

The 1930 Flint High School graduates of our branch are receiving congratulations on the completion of this part of their educational career. They are Loyce Eva Surbrook, Harry Arthur DuRose, Ralph Hutchins, Zola McNamara, Ida M. Barker, James Bryan, Wilma Pettit, Louise Hampel, Ronald Hough, and Helen L. McBride.

The semiannual business meeting of the branch was held at the Newall Street Church Monday evening, June 2. Special items of business of far-reaching consequence came before the Saints.

June 8 will be nationally observed as Children's Day. A special program is being arranged for both churches for the 9.35 morning hour. In connection with the program at the Newall Street Church, the ordinance of blessing will be administered to several babies and small children. In the evening at the Newall Street Church the pastor will give a picture lecture of special interest to the children.

At 2.30 in the afternoon of this day the ordinance of baptism will be administered to children eight years of age and older.

For some time we have been planning a social and educational evening for the local priesthood and their wives. At last a definite date has been fixed, June 11, at eight o'clock. The women are arranging the food, and the pastor is preparing a program for the occasion. All members of the local ministry and their wives are invited to be present.

All members who were born in June are invited to a group birthday party to be given at the Newall Street Church June 16. These monthly birthday parties are proving popular and enjoyable affairs.

Sunday, June 15, will be observed as District Day at Newall Church. Brother J. Charles Mottashed, bishop's agent of Detroit District, will speak in the morning, and in the evening District President Arthur H. DuRose.

The fifth historical drama, written by President Elbert A. Smith and setting forth the history of the Restoration, will be presented at both churches the last Sunday evening of the month.

All couples married during the past year will be guests of honor at the service held at Newall Street Church Sunday evening, June 22. The church will be appropriately decorated for the occasion, and everyone is welcome.

Saturday, June 7, at 3 p. m. in the Newall Street Church, Leon Max Loyd Hunter, of Flint, and Miss Mary Brodie Miller, of Flint, will be united in the holy bonds of wedlock by the pastor. This will be a public wedding, everyone being invited. One hundred and fifty seats will be reserved for relatives and special guests.

During the month of June a special fund of approximately eleven hundred dollars is to be raised for the purpose of re-decorating and repairing the Newall Street Church property and purchasing needed equipment.

The young people's devotional services are being handled beautifully and interestingly with slides. The last two meetings have been well attended.

The Department of Recreation and Expression will present a musical program June 13. Much time is being spent to insure the success of the entertainment. Two male quartets have been working for weeks to present their numbers.

The first duty performed by the pastor upon his return from General Conference in April was the administering of the ordinance of baptism to seven individuals: Dorothy A. Louthan, Luella I. Randall, James D. Kerr, Caroline K. Baxter, Ellen E. Middleton, Irene M. Middleton, and Billy Smith. The service occurred April 23, and the Spirit of the Master was manifested to a marked degree at the baptismal and confirmation service.

The choir at Newall Street has begun work on a new operetta, "Cave man stuff," to be given in the fall. All who like fun and are not afraid to work are invited to come to the practices on Thursday evenings.

The second monthly choir party was held at the home of Sister Moriarty, May 1. A good crowd enjoyed the evening and the program planned by Mildred Barker, Clyde Walters, and Norman Thompson.

Sister L. E. Welch died May 19 after only an hour's illness. The funeral was held at Clare, Michigan.

Marguerite Joplin is doing fine work as the pianist for the junior church at Newall Street Church.

Sister Percy Pushman recently underwent an operation at Hurley Hospital and is able to again be at home.

Sister Hazel Moore, who has been in the hospital for several weeks, following an automobile accident, is believed to be improving, but it will be necessary for her to remain in a cast at the hospital for some time yet.

Sister Benton Cataline is still unable to have her arm out of the cast. It will be remembered by the Saints that she and her husband met with a very serious automobile accident about two months ago.

Sister Nora Rector was in the Woman's Hospital for two weeks, but is now able to be at her home.

Sister Bertha Sweetman is at the sanitarium at Howell undergoing treatment. It will be necessary for her to remain there some time. She has the prayers and best wishes of the Saints.

Elder and Sister David Dowker, former Flint pastor, but now of Winter Hill, Massachusetts, was a caller on friends and relatives in Flint following the General Conference.

Elder Joseph Yager, brother of Guy Yager, who has been representing the church in the Society Islands for the past three or four years, is visiting his relatives in Michigan. He has been returned to labor in the islands for another two years.

Bemidji, Minnesota

June 1.—Regular services continue at Bemidji each Sunday. Brothers Leon A. Gould and George W. Day are doing the preaching.

Not one of the Saints here was able to attend the General Conference. But news of happenings of the centennial event and of the good spirit enjoyed by the Saints interested us very deeply.

Annual branch business meeting occurred June 1. A good number was present, and the spirit which prevailed was encouraging. Brother George W. Day was reelected pastor of the branch; Clara Wheeler, clerk and publicity agent; Alice Gould, chorister; Carrie Cronemiller, organist; Brother Thomas R. Knight was chosen superintendent of the Sunday school.

Our aim is to improve our condition, to live in harmony, to work, to learn, and in all things to make ready that we may have part in the gathering to Zion.

San Diego, California

4328 Alabama Street

May 26.—It has been some time since anything appeared in the Herald from San Diego Saints. We are situated in the far southwestern corner of these United States, seemingly almost isolated from the main body of the church, but the members are still concerned about God's work, and through the medium of the Saints' Herald keep informed of its progress and endeavor to attune themselves to the higher ideals which are to lead us to perfection.

We are only a few in number, having shrunk to a mere mission, but there are among us the faithful who are determined to keep the gospel fires burning and to hold the light of Christ to the world.

Every department is cooperating and tending in its endeavors to a unification which is sure to mean progress for the entire body.

The Sunday school superintendent, Sister May Melvin, left for Montana the latter part of the month of March, and since then the assistant superintendent, Miss Barbara Kellerby, has proved herself able and efficient.

Brother George F. Sherman, the capable pastor, is proving in many ways that he is a true servant of Christ and can suffer adversity without slackening his efforts to do good.

The Department of Recreation and Expression president, Ellis Schimel, left San Diego to take employment in north-eastern Oregon, but we were again fortunate in having a vice president who was a veteran in this work. Brother Marce Harder stepped into place and took charge without the department losing momentum. Brother Harder is also deacon, treasurer, and bishop's agent's solicitor, ready and willing to serve to the best of his ability. He never fails to be on hand with his pencil and receipt book.

Under the supervision of Brother Long we have a picnic every third Sunday of each month, and each Sunday night there is a playlet on the stage given by the Kellerby sisters and others. We are not stinted in talent.

The lesson study from the Book of Mormon is made interesting by the teacher, Brother E. C. Aylor.

Sister Pickles is again able to meet with the Saints after a spell of sickness. She possesses the spirit of steadfastness which is assurance of unbroken faith.

We are glad to welcome back to our ranks Brother C. M. Gilbert and family, after ten weeks of sickness. While Brother Gilbert is weak in body, he is strong in spirit and makes a good teacher in the study of the Book of Mormon.

We are thankful for the safe return from the Centennial Conference of Sister Mullen, head of the Women's Department. Sister Aylor was left in charge during the absence of Sister Mullen.

Elder J. F. Kellerby delivered a much-enjoyed sermon last Sunday morning on "The binder" or "Cement" that holds us together—Love. Brother Sherman occupied at the evening service with a series of educational themes as outlined by the general church.

All visiting Saints will find welcome in our church home in San Diego.

MRS. MAUD SCHIMEL.

Denver, Colorado

The new pastor, Elder Glaude A. Smith, and family have arrived, and Denver members are happy to have them. A reception was tendered them and the retiring pastor, E. J. Williams, May 22. The new pastor was introduced to the congregation by Elder E. B. Hull, of Colorado Springs, who was in charge of the gathering. He spoke highly of Brother and Sister Smith, and we feel that their coming to Denver means considerable loss to the church at Los Angeles. The retiring pastor was called to the floor by Brother E. F. Shupe, who reviewed his work from the time he was ordained an elder nearly thirteen years ago. The Saints through Brother Shupe presented him a beautiful pen and pencil as a token of the love and esteem of the Denver congregation.

Brother E. W. Fishburn, the new priest in this local, assisted for the first time in the sacramental service May 4.

Sister Hannah Adkins, who was stricken while attending the General Conference, passed away May 12 and was buried May 15. Elder Glaude Smith preached the funeral sermon. Sister Adkins was one of the oldest members of Denver Branch, being here when the branch was organized over forty years ago.

Mother's Day was appropriately observed by the branch. Pastor Smith delivered the sermon.

Sunday, May 18, Elder R. D. Weaver called on his way West and gave two splendid sermons. The house was well filled to hear him.

On the last Sunday of the month Brother E. W. Fishburn was riding horseback in Turkey Creek Canyon when the horse was struck by an automobile. The rider was thrown about a hundred feet and badly injured; the horse was killed. At present Brother Fishburn is getting along fairly well. We hope and pray for his speedy recovery.

Better Conditions and Good Prospects

By J. F. Mintun

May 24.—Having assisted in the funeral services of two aged members of the church, I thought it fitting to send to the columns of the Herald brief mention of these Saints. Three members have been laid to rest since last Sunday; and since it is a fact that if one member suffers all the members suffer with him, several have felt the effect of the deaths occurring. It is true that others have seemed to be little affected by the sorrow of their brothers and sisters.

The last conference work has brought about a better condition here among the ministry and the members. We have much to regain in interest in the line of missionary work, but we are hopeful that after a time of patience, properly occupied, the former interest realized may be regained and a further move in advance may be made. I am happy in trying to do my part in this advance movement, and in what I have already done the Spirit of God has been with me, bearing witness of what God wishes done.

May the activities now made manifest be founded upon the Spirit's power and the warning it has given, and not upon an enthusiasm based upon doing only because others are doing, and such one does not wish to be outdone. True cooperation with each other is to be had under the Spirit's direction, which Spirit all are entitled to and are enjoying if they are living up to their adopted privileges in the great family of God. This is God's work, and not man's, and all human devices and machinery will avail but little except the Lord be with us. The psalmist David speaks with a certainty as to man laboring without God in the one hundred and twenty-seventh Psalm, "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it." If this be so in building a house, how much more necessary is it that the Lord assist in building the kingdom of God! And this is emphasized by the Christ when he gave instruction to his ministry in New Testament times, just before his departure from them, "For without me ye can do nothing."

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

June 2.—With the opening of the second century this branch is desirous of helping the general church meet the goal it has set.

Sacramental service May 4 was in charge of Brothers R. E. Madden and J. E. Matthews. A peaceful spirit was present to encourage the worshipers. J. E. Matthews preached in the evening on "The Restoration."

The Sunday school presented on May 11 a brief Mother's Day program. G. H. Kirkendall preached at the morning hour on the theme "Our mothers."

Missionary John R. Grice started a series of sermons May 18 which lasted until June 2. His discourses were beautifully presented and accompanied by the Spirit. There was fair attendance, and five candidates were baptized. Surely much good has been done by these meetings. We hope the seed of truth has been sown and will bear fruit at some future time.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fourth and Washington Streets

May 26.—Ottumwa Branch has been very busy. The latter-day work moves on in this city of 28,600 people. Ours is an industrial town having a packing plant and several small factories; people come here to shop from miles around.

We have a beautiful church home in the center of the city. The building will seat four hundred in the upper auditorium and two hundred and seventy in the basement. Elder F. C. Bevan was appointed to Ottumwa as pastor. He was ready to leave for Michigan when word came of change of appointment.

We have adopted the new plan of religious education, with Sister E. Hughes as director. We also have the unified service, which all seem to enjoy.

One woman was baptized here by Brother Bevan.

Apostle D. T. Williams was here the evening of May 4, and gave an illustrated lecture on church history.

May 11 special sermons and programs were had in honor of our mothers. Brother Bevan preached morning and evening.

Seven days later Apostle F. Henry Edwards was here to deliver two fine sermons. At this time Brother Bevan was installed as pastor.

May 25 the pastor gave a special sermon in keeping with the theme of Memorial Day. In the evening Elder C. Harpe was the speaker. Brother Harpe was on his way to Michigan to his mission field.

The women's club is kept busy raising money to pay off the balance of debt on our new church home. They are meeting with good success. They raise on an average about fifty dollars a month. All Saints living near Ottumwa, who have no church home, will be welcome in Ottumwa. When you are in the city, call the church. The telephone number is 3999, and the pastor is generally in the study in the morning. In the afternoon call Black 3803. The church building stands on the corner of Fourth and Washington Streets, three minutes' walk from the station.

Our services are: Sunday: Church school at 9.45 followed by a sermon at 10.45; evening service, 7.30; Wednesday, 7.45 devotional service; Thursday, Women's club, 2 p. m.; Friday the adult division and the young people's division meet at 7.30 for class work, which is followed by recreation. About thirty-five attend the classes on this night.

English Saint Leaves an Unsullied Record

May 26.—In behalf of Northern District of England, I wish to report the death of Elder James Spargo, of Wigan Branch. For practically half a century this brother was a faithful member and minister of the church. Those who knew him and came in contact with him testified to his integrity. His reputation within and without the church was enviable.

He was baptized by the late Joseph Dewsnup, sr., August 28, 1881, and was ordained January 15, 1882, to the Aaronic priesthood. Later he was called to the office of elder in the Melchisedec priesthood, in which office he labored until shortly before his death. Because of his social disposition he has figured in the progress of the church in a remarkable manner, moving in all kinds of society. His character was unique, a man quiet in manner, few of words, but when he did speak his words were filled with the impressions of a pure mind and carried weight to the hearer. He took great interest in the church and its work, looking forward to its interests and progress.

For almost twenty-five years I have had some personal contact with the brother and have found him in the peaceful fields of thought. He was a great reader of the church literature and ambitious for the triumph of the cause he loved. He lived in the faith and died in the faith. Almost his last words were to inquire after the welfare and progress of the church in its centennial gatherings. He was a man who loved truth, he was humble to the point of self-abnegation, and his earthly character was beyond reproach.

Apostles have sojourned with him, and many missionaries and traveling elders have been ministered to by him and his dear wife, Sister Ann. Apostle Gillen's father visited him many times, and later Apostle Gillen found a pleasing retreat in his mission journeys here and frequently sought the quietude of this Saint's home. Apostle Paul M. Hanson visited him before leaving England on his last mission. I returned from the Centennial Conference and in a few days was summoned to preside at the funeral of this dear brother.

What thoughts crowd the mind as one stands by the grave of one we have learned to love. Brother Spargo's encouragement to the young men and women here will be missed. He was accustomed to sit quietly in the branch while younger men stood to minister, and he praised God that the work was in safe hands before he was called to his reward.

The church has parted with a faithful Saint in every sense of the term. His wife is now without her life companion, his son and daughter mourn a loving parent, and the town of Wigan is poorer in parting but in all a better town because Elder Spargo passed that way.

This brother earned his praise on earth. Often I have congratulated him on his spiritual attainments. People passed into heavenly places when they came into the company of this man.

The funeral occurred at the Wigan Cemetery, and the crowd of members and city people was abundant testimony to the regard in which he was held.

The Northern District Presidency took care of the rites May 14, 1930, and on Sunday, May 18, the memorial service was held in the Saints' meeting room, which was crowded beyond capacity. High Priest W. H. Greenwood preached the funeral sermon. The service was dedicated to the memory of one who lived to serve and set good example before his people. All can sympathize with those left to mourn, but at the same time we see by faith our brother translated into the glory of the kingdom he served so well while upon the earth.

W. H. CHANDLER, District President.

Stone Church

The opening service of the day nationally observed as Children's Day, was at the Stone Church a ceremony of baptism. Parents, Sunday-school teachers, and other friends of the children to be baptized assembled in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church at eight o'clock. The font was open, and there were baskets of lilies and daisies. With Pastor John F. Sheehy thirteen children entered the water and came out new subjects of God's kingdom. The service was in charge of Elders S. A. Thiel and H. W. Harder, and piano music was by Sister Thomas McKevit. The following children were baptized: Mary Shull, Raymond Webster, Eleanor Scott, Dorothy Countryman, Charles Henry Countryman, Granville Countryman, Beulah Horning, Arthur Lawrence Hodges, Ruth Barnby, Fern Gault, Myron Hershey, Virginia Long, and Fleta May Smith.

A special confirmation service was observed at the eleven o'clock hour for the young people who were baptized earlier in the day. Pastor John F. Sheehy, who presided, read as a scripture lesson the story of the Day of Pentecost, and emphasized the appropriateness of observing the anniversary of Pentecost with the confirming of new members into the church. Brother Sheehy also gave a charge to the congregation to exemplify the love of God before these new members of the church.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, sang the anthem, "Sanctus," by Gounod, George Anway singing the tenor solo. Lilly Belle Allen, soprano, sang a solo, "God so loved the world," and was accompanied by Kathryn Haberlein, pianist. Lorena Kueffer and Louise Hills Lewis played organ and piano accompaniment for the service, Miss Kueffer playing the organ offertory.

In his farewell sermon to Independence Saints, Apostle Paul M. Hanson on Sunday night commemorated the nineteen hundredth anniversary of Pentecost.

We are now in the vestibule of the structure of great achievements to come in the near future, he informed the congregation. Daily our vision is being widened, and men are endeavoring great things. But as we move from one accomplishment to another, we are made more conscious of our need to put away trivial things and to hold to the fundamentals of life and truth; if we are to give our best, we must have contact with the Divine, a God experience such as was vouchsafed the saints on the Pentecost nineteen hundred years ago.

Characterizing and making outstanding that Pentecost, summarized Apostle Hanson, were the endowment of the Spirit, the fruit of sincere and humble prayer; contact with God through the Comforter; the harmony of the church; and the gladness of the people as their minds were lightened by the knowledge of God. To us must come, as it did to them, a realization of the great and simple truth of the existence of God.

The musical program offered a splendid setting for the sermon. The Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, sang two numbers, "Come, Holy Ghost," by Palestrina, the duet being sung by Lilly Belle Allen and George Anway, and "The Comforter," by Culance. A favorite solo number of the congregation, "Come, Sweet Comforter," was sung by George Anway. Lorena Kueffer played the piano accompaniments. Elder H. G. Barto was in charge of the service, assisted by Patriarch Ammon White.

Monday evening Apostle Hanson left Independence for the East. He, in company with Apostle F. Henry Edwards and President F. M. McDowell, will sail from New York for Liverpool, England, on the S. S. Samaria June 21. His traveling companions will join him in the East in a few days. The Saints of Independence wish them Godspeed on their mission.

A few minutes after the close of the preaching hour, a wedding occurred in the Stone Church auditorium when Miss Edith Stark became the bride of Lawrence Mayhew. The bride is the daughter of Sister Austria Scott, of Independence, and the bridegroom is the son of Brother and Sister Albert Mayhew, of Westby, Montana. Miss Elizabeth Okerlind sang "Believe me if all those endearing young charms," before the ceremony, and organ music was by Miss Lorena Kueffer. The bridal pair were accompanied by Miss Sadie Mayhew, sister of the bridegroom, and Mr. Charles Stark, brother of the bride. Elder Roy Young read the ceremony, and the simple but impressive single ring service was witnessed by a large number of friends and acquaintances.

Among the People in Zion

Attendance at the junior services Sunday morning at the Campus ranged about one hundred and sixty. The opening song, "O gentle Savior," was followed by prayer by Pastor Will Bollinger. After the song "Spelling love," Miss Bullard took care of the tithing for the children. The theme of the worship hour was "Helpfulness." The song "Bring them in" was sung, and during the offering Brother Moore played "The last rose of summer." Sister Davis's class of girls presented a pantomime dramatizing the story of Naaman and the leper. The girls wrote, directed, and gave the play without assistance. After the singing of "My rose of Sharon," Brother Bollinger told a story illustrating helpfulness.

Eight Independence men were in the graduating class of the Kansas City School of Law, which held its commencement exercises June 4 in the Grand Avenue Temple, Kansas City, and two Independence undergraduates received honors in their classes. The graduating class numbered one hundred and seven. Of the eight from Independence two are members of the church, Roy H. Gould and Howard E. Kelley. The undergraduates who received honors also are church members. Philip Harrington, of the sophomore class, received the Patrick Carr prize, given to the student attaining the highest grade in code pleading; and Carroll Olson, of the freshman class, had the highest average in Blackstone.

Mid-year election of officers of the Y. K. T. Class of the Stone Church Sunday school was held June 1. At the first of the year the class chose to sustain its leaders, Elder and Sister R. J. Lambert, and elected Sister Ada Mann Christmas offering superintendent for the year. Officers elected the first Sunday of the month are: President, Kenneth Morford; vice president, Roy Smith; secretary, Sister E. Y. Hunker; treasurer, Sister Mark Holman; membership chairman, Katherine Head; pianist, Lorena Kueffer; sergeant-at-arms, Joe Curtis; publicity agent, Nina L. Davison.

Word has arrived in Independence of the marriage of Miss Ferne Gould, daughter of Brother and Sister George A. Gould, of Independence, to Murrell A. Whitehead, son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Whitehead, of Toronto, Canada, which took place the evening of May 24 at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles McLean and Doctor McLean, Toronto, Canada. Mrs. Charles McLean attended her sister as matron of honor, and Joyce Ann McLean, niece of the bride, was the ring bearer. Doctor McLean acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Whitehead will make their home in Toronto. The bride for the past year has been private secretary to the treasurer of one of the World Banks at Toronto.

Miss Katherine N. Miller, daughter of Brother and Sister Charles F. Miller of Independence, and Harold A. Pearson, of Independence, were married Saturday night, May 31, at the home of the bride's parents in the presence of immediate relatives and a few friends. The ceremony was performed by Bishop B. J. Scott. The young couple are at home at 828 North Cottage Street.

For the first time this summer the Y. P. R. Class assembled at the Campus last Friday night. Business of the evening was the mid-year election of officers. In charge of the present class president, the following corps of officers was elected to serve beginning July 1: President, Margaret Armour; vice president, Opal Hill; secretary, Nina Davison; treasurer, Oral Andes; and sergeant-at-arms, Dale Williamson. Apostle F. Henry Edwards will speak to the class this Friday evening.

Supported by the senior department of the Stone Church Sunday school, the young people's Wednesday night worship services are attracting interest. Attendance has been good, and the degree of participation tells of a desire on the part of the young worshippers to be strong and true workers with Christ. Elder Mansel Williams, Teacher Walter I. Betts, and Elder G. G. Lewis have been in the stand the last two Wednesday evenings. June 4 Wallace Bunnell Smith, the infant son of Elder and Sister W. Wallace Smith, was blessed in the hands of Patriarch Ammon White.

Miss Doris Elizabeth Hefflon, daughter of Brother and Sister Fred G. Hefflon, of Independence, and Eugene Hall, son of Brother and Sister James E. Hall, also of Independence, were married at 8.30 o'clock Friday evening, June 6, at the home of the bride's parents, in the presence of immediate relatives. The ceremony was read by Patriarch T. C. Kelley, grandfather of the bride. The young couple left immediately for Breckenridge, Missouri, where they will make their home.

Three Independence young people were counted among the graduates at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, Kansas, Monday night when nine hundred and eighty-eight students received degrees and diplomas. The local young people are Miss Clarice Gillen who received her B. S. degree in education, Richard Charles Keown who received an A. B. degree, and Wayne Edward Luff who received a B. S. degree in chemical engineering.

Second Church

Inspiration and encouragement must surely have been received by all those who attended the eight o'clock prayer meeting of the branch June 1. The service was a prelude to the other worship services during the day. The church school, commencing at 9.30 with regular Sunday school classes, closed at noon after the serving of the Lord's Supper. Although attendance was not as large as usual on sacrament Sunday, the spirit of reverence and devotion was no less, and the Saints went away uplifted.

Before class work was taken up at Sunday school, two junior girls, Helen Willoughby and Bethel Davis, sang a duet selection. Billy McPherson, who is twelve years old, played for the chorister at the opening of the service. Later he with two of his playmates, Gibbs Knight and Alexander Jones, played a piano trio. We of the Second Church are justly proud of our young musicians.

The same inspirational atmosphere was present at the evening service when Elder L. E. Flowers preached, using as his text, "What shall I do to be saved?"

The morning speaker June 8 was Elder Harry G. Barto. Brother Barto spoke to the Saints concerning the financial law of the church. His address was comprehensive and enlightening. He explained the paying of tithe as a privilege as well as a duty. Announcement was made that Elder C. Ed. Miller would be the speaker at the evening service.

June 4 marked a high point in the midweek prayer meetings. Each of the five groups, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 31, reported unusually good attendance. A desire for God's Spirit and love rather than a sense of duty must have promoted many to attend, for all of the groups enjoyed fine meetings.

Cathryn McIntosh, the seven-year-old daughter of Brother and Sister Alex McIntosh, died suddenly Friday night at 8.30 o'clock from a heart attack while playing at her home. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon at three o'clock at the home. Besides her parents, Cathryn is survived by one brother, Theodore. The congregation extends sympathy to the bereaved family.

The marriage of Miss Lora Ellen Collier to Mr. Morris H. McLees was solemnized June 7 by Pastor A. K. Dillee at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. George Lundy.

Enoch Hill

The marriage of Miss Verla Marie Alexander, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Alexander, 1503 South Spring Street, to Alfred L. Waters, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Waters, Kansas City, Missouri, took place June 3 at 8 o'clock at the Enoch Hill Church. The ring service was read by Elder Amos E. Allen as the bridal pair knelt on a white satin pillow before the altar. The church was artistically decorated with Shasta daisies and greenery.

Preceding the ceremony a stringed quartet composed of Frank White, Milford Nace, Orrin Fry, and O. K. Fry, accompanied by Mrs. Rosamond Filson Sherman, played "The voice of love." Frank White, violinist, played "To a wild rose," and Miss Delta Maurine Nace sang "Ah, sweet mystery of life" and "At dawning." The musicians played the wedding march from "Lohengrin" as the bridal party approached the altar, and Mendelssohn's wedding march after the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white embroidered net trimmed with pearls and rhinestones. Her veil was trimmed with pearls and orange blossoms. She carried a bridal bouquet of white roses and baby breath.

Miss Imogene Winn, maid of honor, wore a gown of pink net, a pink picture hat, and carried a bouquet of pink tea roses and baby breath. Miss Margaret Mills, Miss Margie Thomas, and Miss Claudine Ellis, bridesmaids, wore white flat crepe gowns, picture hats, and taffeta bows of orchid, green, and yellow, with bouquets to match.

Arlon Chapman acted as best man for Mr. Waters, and the groomsmen were William Mills, Fernoy Alexander, and Fred Chapman.

Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Misses Pauline Alexander, Pearl Chrestensen, Martha Chrestensen, and Ruth Hartman served refreshments to one hundred and twenty-five guests.

Holden Stake

Marshall

C. F. Scarcliff, of the stake bishopric, Brother Robert Dillon and wife, and Sister Bernice Hampton were with Marshall Group Sunday, May 25. It took a very short time to select a pastor, which resulted in the unanimous choice of Elder T. L. McCormick; Brother George A. Thayer was continued as the stake bishop's representative. Then Brother Robert Dillon had time for his excellent sermon on faith, which took an unusual turn, counseling us to have faith in our fellows, faith that Zion will be accomplished, etc.

Sister Bernice Hampton, director of music, held a meeting in the afternoon. This service was profitable.

Central Church

The talk in the worship period of the church school Sunday morning was given by Elder George Mesley, and in the service period which followed the class study the sermon was by Bishop C. A. Skinner. The choir sang "Send out thy light," by Gounod, and the prayer was by Bishop F. B. Blair.

In the evening Pastor C. E. Wight continued his series of Sunday evening talks. Brother Wight puts much thought and preparation into his sermons, and they are deeply appreciated by the congregation. Music was by the choir, and a solo by a young singer from Malvern Hill, Miss Josephine Crinklaw. The S. W. S. Quartet made its contribution to the service.

In the radio program from ten to eleven o'clock Sunday evening the oratorio chorus, assisted by a quartet, sang "The triumph of Christ," the final grand chorus of The Course of Time, by Brother J. T. Gresty. Miss Crinklaw and the S. W. S. quartet assisted on the program, and Stake President C. E. Wight continued his radio sermon series.

Bill Brown has been chosen stake counselor and leader of the Central O. B. K's. George Bowser is vice counselor, and Dorothy Eden secretary-treasurer. These three, with Doctor E. P. Nelson, director of the young people's division, will constitute a Central Church cabinet to direct O. B. K. activities during the 1930-31 season.

Quindaro

Elder Leonard Lea was the speaker of the Mother's Day program given by the junior department, under the direction of Sister H. A. Higgins.

May 25 the stake orchestra furnished the program for the Recreation and Expression hour. Brother Clayton Wolfe sang a tenor solo. A special blessing was conferred upon the heads of Sister A. Murphy and daughter, Helen, under the hands of Elders H. A. Higgins and E. N. Palmer, that they may have a safe journey to Sweden, where they plan to visit relatives. They sailed for Osceda, Sweden, May 31, on the S. S. Milwaukee. Sister Murphy left Sweden when she was eighteen years old to come to America. One of the side trips from Sweden will be a visit to the island of Gotland, where a great-aunt, ninety-seven years of age, is living.

Brother John Bales, seventy-one years of age, passed away at his home in Kanas City just as the sacramental service was drawing to a close. He leaves his wife, three daughters, and two sons. The funeral services were held at the church at 3.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The sermon was by Pastor H. A. Higgins assisted by Brother John Tucker. Brother Bales was a faithful Saint and member, loved by all who knew him. He was baptized by Brother Ammon White six years ago. Last year he and Sister Bales celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Patriarch Ammon White addressed the Women's Department and their nonmember friends May 15 and 22. His counsel and advice were much appreciated. Five members received their patriarchal blessings from him. We wish him success in his new field.

Pastor Higgins was missed June 1. He was visiting his mother in Nebraska. A goodly number attended the sacramental service.

Gladstone Church

May 25 two sermons were enjoyed by Pastor C. A. Selbe and Elder C. G. Lewis.

Gladstone and Fourth Churches united in a picnic on Memorial Day, lunch being served at 1 p. m., after which baseball was played by the nines of the two congregations. The result was a tie. ### Stewartsville

At this time we can say that there has been little to divert us from the true course of progress, but rather has there been that which should stimulate progress in the local. Pastor T. A. Ivie, though afflicted, is trying, with God's aid and our cooperation, to advance the work in Stewartsville. The interest of the young people and the juniors gives hope that a better and more complete work may be accomplished in the future than has been done in the years that have gone.

Mother's Day was observed this year with a fine service at the eleven o'clock hour. Brother Milo Burnett paid Mother a beautiful yet honest and sincere tribute, which together with a splendid supporting program, made the service well worth while. The evening worship was omitted, due to the baccalaureate service for the high school graduates. Brother Floyd M. McDowell delivered the baccalaureate address, this being the third year that he has delivered either the baccalaureate or commencement address to our graduating classes. In this year's class three Latter Day Saint girls ranked highest. Having been a recent graduate of this high school, the local reporter feels that he can say that we all appreciate Brother McDowell as a "big brother," and we thank him for his splendid contribution and cooperation in our behalf.

This community was grievously shocked by the news of the severe burning about the body received by Brother David E. Powell May 15, which caused his death a few hours later. Brother Powell was a faithful and incessant worker. Although seventy-eight years of age at the time of his death, he was active to the last. The funeral was held May 19 at Stewartsville, Brother Samuel Twombly in charge, Brother T. A. Ivie assisting. Interment was in Stewartsville Cemetery.

The Wahdemna Choral Club Gives Final Concert of Season

The Wahdemna Choral Club, which is well known for its work in support of the Conference Choir during the General Conference, as well as for its excellent work at the Stone Church in Independence, is to close its fourth season on Friday, June 20, at 8.15 p. m. with a popular request concert at the Stone Church in Independence, Missouri.

The program will consist of favorite choruses, popular on the club's programs of the past, request numbers, and some numbers sung here for the first time.

The club is composed of fifty talented young singers and is directed by Paul Craig, with Rosamond Filson Sherman accompanist, and Miss Vera Redfield business manager. New voices are being tried continually in search of the best material, and a waiting list is kept from which vacancies are filled. The club urges all interested young people to try out for membership.

The Indian name, Wahdemna, selected by the members, means "United for a good purpose." This purpose is to develop, under the best influences, the highest possible standard of choral work among the young people of our community. As a result the work of the club is serving as a constant stimulus to our young people to develop musically.

It is a live organization and an asset to the church and community, and should be enthusiastically and faithfully supported and patronized by everyone in this locality.

The budget for next year requires that the club raise the sum of $200. A part of this amount the club hopes to raise at the coming concert. This money is needed for new music and for the purchase of robes, as well as for the maintenance of the club building.

There will be no admission charge to the concert. However, a number of seats have been reserved for those who will make the club a donation of fifty cents or more, whose names will be listed among the patrons of the club. Those who do not reserve seats are urged to come to the concert prepared with an offering to be given to the ushers. All members of the club are furnished with patrons reserved seat tickets, or they may be obtained at the Club House, 1034 West Lexington Street, also by phone, Independence 3251.

Howard was born November 10, 1858, in Nashville, Tennessee, and was married November 25, 1873, to Ezra Robinson, who passed away March 2, 1919. There are left to mourn four children: Myron A. and Albert G. Robinson, of Clinton, Iowa; Edith Robinson Voelpel, of Independence, Missouri; and Mabel Robinson Mercer, of Chicago, Illinois; a sister, Lyda Taffre, of Chicago, Illinois; a brother, Garlin Howard, of Bridgeport, Texas; seven grandchildren, and many friends. Sister Robinson was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints September 5, 1880, and continued a faithful member and regular attendant until the time of her death.

RUDD.—Alvin Zarahemla Rudd was born at Buck Grove, Iowa, March 14, 1858. He married Sarah Hammond at Dow City, Iowa, February 4, 1884, and to them were born four children, one son and three daughters. One of the daughters died in infancy. He became a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints August 9, 1868, at Buck Grove, Iowa. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1896, and always showed great interest in the work of the church, working diligently in the offices he held, and striving to advance the Master's cause. He passed from this life early in the morning on February 9, 1930, in Los Angeles, California. He leaves his wife, Sarah Rudd, of Los Angeles; his son, Harry L. Rudd, also of Los Angeles; two daughters, Nettie I. Bowers of Sapulpa, Oklahoma, and Alta Crawford of Antwerp, Ohio; twenty grandchildren, two brothers, two sisters, and many other relatives and friends.

McGUIRE.—Sarah Irene McGuire, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George McGuire, was called from this life Tuesday, May 27, 1930. She was born July 20, 1929, and was blessed by Elder Richard Stewart, of Greenbush, Michigan, February 4, 1930. The funeral was held from the Baptist Church at Mikado, Elder M. J. McGuire, of Onaway, officiating.

ADKINS.—Hannah E. Thomas was born March 10, 1861, in Wiltshire, England. When in her early twenties she came to America, where she married Andrew Lamb, and they established their home in Denver, Colorado, where she has been a resident ever since. There were four children born of this union, three of whom survive her. Mr. Lamb passed away May 17, 1893. About five years later she was married to Mr. E. M. Adkins at Denver, Colorado. For nearly fifty years she has been a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. She was ever a faithful member and constant in her faith and her devotion to God. While attending the General Conference of the church at Independence, Missouri, in April, 1930, she suddenly became ill and was taken to the Independence Sanitarium. April 27 she was moved to Denver, and placed in the Porter Sanitarium. She departed this life at that place May 12, 1930. She is survived by her three daughters: Mrs. F. J. Pullen, of Los Angeles, California; Mrs. E. W. Fishburn, of Denver; and Mrs. Leslie A. Vosmer, also of Denver.

HAWES.—Cyrus K. Hawes was born February 15, 1889, in Renville County, Minnesota. He drowned in the Missouri River February 22, 1930, the body being recovered May 1, 1930. The funeral was May 4 in Carrollton, Missouri, conducted by William Hamann. He married Mrs. Hazel Carpenter October 16, 1921, who with two children mourn his early departure. He was baptized into the church August 23, 1921.

FORD.—Mary Whitworth was born November 4, 1840, in Lancashire, England. Died May 22, 1930, at Hamilton, Missouri. She married John Ford October 1, 1860, in Winchester, Scott County, Illinois. Was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Sweet Home, Missouri, July 19, 1885, by Elder William Powell. Her husband died June 20, 1906. In 1912 she moved to Hamilton, Missouri, and united with the Oak Dale Branch, where she often bore a strong testimony of God's goodness to her. She united with the Church of Christ at Hamilton, Missouri, June 30, 1929, by transfer. Elder James E. Yates of the Church of Christ preached her funeral sermon at the Methodist Church at Hamilton, May 25, 1930, and interment was in Highland Cemetery. Left to mourn are her children: J. T. Ford, Mrs. Alice Winslow, and Mrs. Mary Hawley, of Hamilton; Fred Ford and Mrs. Nettie Lane, Lamoni, Iowa; and Mrs. Hatvey Toney, Zurich, Montana; twenty-five grandchildren; and thirty-five great-grandchildren. Four children preceded her in death.

GEBARD.—Mary Jeanette Ferguson was born April 20, 1896, on a farm in Antrim County, Michigan, where her girlhood days were spent. At the age of eight she was baptized into the church at East Jordan, Michigan. In 1917 she moved to Des Moines, Iowa, where she made her home the remainder of her life. October 18, 1927, she married Elmer Gebard. About two weeks ago she developed pleurisy, which later developed into double pneumonia. She was taken to the hospital, and every means known to science was employed to save her life. Under this difficult condition she gave birth to a son on Tuesday morning, but the thread of its life had already broken under the strain. After a day of restless toil the spirit of the mother went out in search of the child of her dreams. Two hours after the sun had set her earth work was finished; the drama of life was closed after a sojourn of 34 years, 1 month, and 7 days. Besides her husband she leaves her aged father, Robert Ferguson, Lansing, Michigan; one sister, Myrtle, of Des Moines; and three brothers: James M., Robert P., and William D., of Holt, Michigan. She was preceded in death by a brother, Alexander A., two infant sisters, and her mother. She will be missed by a host of friends and relatives who had learned to love her for her kindly disposition and her faithful devotion to the church and her friends. Through her prayers and exemplary life she was able to bring her husband into the fold of Christ some two months ago, and besides this service is left the heritage of a pure and devoted life. The funeral was conducted from the Saints' Church, Des Moines, May 29, by Pastor C. B. Hartshorn. The girls of Sister Mary's Sunday school class acted as pallbearers and furnished the music. Interment was in Glendale Cemetery.

McINTOSH.—Cathryn McIntosh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex McIntosh, of Independence, Missouri, was born in 1923. She died of heart trouble at her home in Independence at 8:30 o'clock June 6. Besides her parents she is survived by one brother, Theodore, also of the home. The funeral was held at three o'clock June 9 at the home, and interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

The Sacrifice Period

June 22 to 29

Latter Day Saints have learned some of the sweets of sacrifice from the experiences of their religious lives. There is scarcely a good Saint but what has more than once read paragraph 5 of section 65, Doctrine and Covenants, and from that reading gone into deep meditation. Part of that paragraph reads:

Now it is called today (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people. . . . Wherefore, if ye believe in me, ye will labor while it is called today.

The most important work any man has to do is to search out the point of contact between him and his God. Far too many waste years looking in high or distant places for that point, while God has given it a position close to every man's right hand.

Not everyone who has become a member of the church of Jesus Christ has a considerable quantity of money to contribute to the forwarding of the work. Various reasons exist for this condition. Some of them entirely justify the individual who does not so possess; some only partially justify; others condemn in part or wholly. The possession of material things is not an index to the worth of a man's life. The Master put the thought in this language: "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." The other side of the picture he brought before the people in his parable of the talents, wherein he represented the lord of the vineyard as commending the exercise of energy and judgment in the accumulation of wealth, and most severely condemned as wicked and slothful the servant who failed to do more than watch the treasure and the passing of time, and who accumulated nothing.

But whether one has much or little in the way of material property, there is usually some way in which he can help in the regular and special activities of the church. The one who can find no way in which to strengthen and make more potent, or nothing to contribute to the cause, is poor indeed. The failure to participate in the work of the church, the refusal or neglect to contribute to its treasury is generally the result of a refusal to lay upon the altar a little time, a portion of one's talent, or an amount of his material wealth.

There is reserved for the Saint who desires to help, some of the sweets of sacrifice, and the exceeding and permanent comfort of having found the point of contact with one's God.

If one has material things and they are much appreciated and highly prized, he has a splendid opportunity to approach his God by the sacrifice of enough of it so that he will be impelled to watch the ends which are accomplished by its expenditure. One can not buy his way into heaven with money, but it is possible to purchase with money an interest in the kingdom of God on earth. And stock in this kingdom, if watched and guarded as one guards his earthly treasures, is ready for exchange for stock in the kingdom of God triumphant in the heavens. The treasure sacrificed to the church represents effort generally, value always, and God will see to it that no value is lost to the man who honestly trades with him. But one who sacrifices to give money or property and then forgets to watch, or fails to detect the course and effect of his sacrifice, has not even done as well for himself as the servant to whom his lord intrusted the keeping of one talent—the man who buried it out of the sight of his fellows, but who watched it with sufficient interest to be able to return it intact.

If there are those who can not contribute currency, a money order, or a check, it is likely they may not be denied the privilege of sacrifice, for they may contribute time and effort to the same cause, and they may purchase the same engrossing interest in the kingdom of God. The same rules will apply to sacrifice of this nature as govern in the sacrifice of property.

The Lord has made it plain that sacrifice is required of his children. He has placed before them that for which they are asked to part with their treasured time, their coveted talents, or their accumulated wealth. He has permitted men to see that the thing for which they are asked to give is beautiful and worthy, but he never entirely removes the veil from the work of art from his divine hand until the child with whom he deals gives all he controls as a sacrifice to enhance its interests and complete its beauty.

Eight days of opportunity lie before the membership of the church—opportunity to make extra effort called for by the Presidency and the Presiding Bishopric of the church, because there is need for your sacrifices. I hope to see such a response as has never characterized a sacrifice period in the history of the church. If this occurs it will mean that the interest of the membership will be deeper and broader than it has been.

This would be very fitting, for this is a new century in the history of the church and we are starting this second century more than one hundred thousand strong. In addition, we have been assured by the officers of the leading quorums of the church that the hastening time is upon us—that it is in process. We must concentrate our efforts if we shall be able to hold the ground we possess. We must multiply our expenditure of time, energy, and means of whatever kind, if we shall succeed in gaining the headway we must if the responsibilities the Lord has located with us shall be discharged.

Drive for Independence Community Hospital

Independence business men are actively pushing the drive for funds for the proposed Community Hospital that is to take the place of the now inadequate and out of date Sanitarium Building. The members of the canvassing committee, who are all men with heavy business and professional responsibilities, are to be highly commended for their zeal, their indefatigable energy, and their determination to make the drive a success. They have already accumulated an impressive percentage of the $125,000 total which the drive is expected to produce from people residing in Independence and from firms doing business there. It begins to appear that they will be successful, if every giver will do his best for this important and much needed project.

The Sanitarium has not afforded sufficient hospital space nor adequate facilities for a number of years. It is imperative that Independence provide a new hospital. More beds, maternity quarters and equipment, and isolation quarters for contagious cases are very badly needed. Moves are being made so that the privileges of citizens of Independence are being restricted in Kansas City hospitals.

The church alone has maintained the Independence Sanitarium to date. Independence territory might build a new hospital by itself, without the aid of the church, but it would be a difficult task. A modern hospital would put the Sanitarium out of use, which would be unfortunate for the church and our people. It is far better, since the hospital facilities will be used, as in the past, by both members and nonmembers, that the church and the city cooperate in building a new plant, which is the plan for the new community hospital.

The sum of $125,000 is only half of the total necessary to be raised for the proposed building. The other part is to be obtained by other means than this drive. Everyone should contribute to this very worthy and necessary cause.
