For a few years past the Christmas offering has been above $40,000 each year. We are sure that with concerted effort the offering this year may be raised to $50,000 or more. It should, if possible, go to $75,000, which would be one tenth of our general church budget for the year. It has been thought best to set our goal only a bit in advance of our usual gift, and experience the thrill of passing the mark.

In the remaining months of the year every consistent effort must be made to increase the offering. Each school, each class, each home, each individual member, should set a goal which they earnestly strive to reach. Let us give in our offerings as we have the means in hand. It may then be sent directly to the office of the Presiding Bishopric and begin at once its mission of love.

A Christmas Offering "Poster"

There is now ready to be sent out from the office of the Presiding Bishopric to the pastor of each branch of the church a very neat and attractive Christmas offering poster containing a "thermometer" with a graduated scale, beside which a movable column of "mercury" is placed to record the progress of the Christmas offering in the branch. The poster is 11 by 14 inches, printed in two colors, and should occupy a prominent place in the church where all may watch the red column rise from Sunday to Sunday as the goal is approached.

Capitalize the Goal Idea

The posters will be in the mails by September 20 and should reach pastors in the United States and Canada before September 27, and in England, Hawaii, New Zealand, and Australia somewhat later. They should be put immediately into use. Directions will be sent with the posters suggesting ways and means of making their use effective.

The goal of the church has been placed as $50,000. To carry us well over the top, it is urged that branches set their goal as one tenth of the branch quota of the annual church budget. This sum should be written into the poster in the space provided, and the whole idea clearly and enthusiastically presented to the branch, probably at the Sunday morning session of the church school. This should be done at the earliest possible convenient occasion. The position of the red line in the ascending column will register the amount of the offering to date. The sum at the top of the graduated scale is the branch goal. The red column should move up as the Christmas offering is announced each Sunday.

It may be helpful to determine, as a weekly goal, the amount necessary to be given each of the remaining weeks if the branch goal is to be reached. Perhaps each family or each individual will set goals at $2 or $3 or $10 per member, and make every effort to reach their goals. We can and must exceed $50,000 by December 31, 1930.

If any branch fails to receive a poster, they should at once notify the Presiding Bishopric, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Installation ServiceBy John Blackmore*

September twenty-eight is a combined "Church School Promotion" and "Rally" day. New classes will have been formed, and some new teachers will have been selected. Many of the old teachers will again accept the divine responsibility of teaching for another year. The following outline of an installation service will emphasize the sacredness of the task now being assumed by these teachers.

Keeping in mind the fact that many of the congregations of the church have their business meeting in which the church school officers are elected in December, we submit a brief outline of a service suitable for the installation of teachers of the church school. However, we suggest that this ceremony should be held in one of the regular congregational services, such as the morning service at eleven o'clock or the evening hour. We believe that the installation of these teachers and officers into the sacred trust of teaching is worthy of outstanding recognition. Also, this service will assist the congregation to appreciate the consecration and service of the workers in the church school.

The Service

SOFT MUSIC—The hymns are played while the congregation assembles.

PROCESSIONAL—The choir will enter and take their places upon the choir loft. The officers and teachers will enter and march to the seats reserved for them in front of the altar or pulpit during this processional. All will remain standing until the presiding officer signals for all to be seated.

INTRODUCTORY TALK AND INVOCATION—This talk and prayer by the presiding officer.

SCRIPTURE READING—John 15: 1-8.

HYMN—"Holy, holy, holy," Zion's Praises, 131.

POEM—"The Builders":

A Builder builded a Temple:
He wrought with care and skill.
Pillars and groins and arches
Were fashioned to meet his will.
Men said when they saw its beauty,
It shall never know decay;
Great is thy skill, O Builder,
Thy fame shall endure for aye.

A Teacher builded a Temple;
She wrought with care and skill,
Forming each pillar with patience,
Laying each stone with care.
None saw the unceasing effort,
None knew of the marvelous plan,
For the temple the Teacher builded
Was unseen by the eyes of man.

Gone is the Builder's Temple,
Crumbled into dust;
Pillars and groins and arches,
Food for consuming rust.
But the Temple the Teacher builded
Shall endure while the ages roll,
For that beautiful unseen Temple
Was a child's immortal soul.

PASTORAL PRAYER OF THANKS—This prayer is one of thanks to God for the group of teachers about to be installed.

CONGREGATIONAL RESPONSE—"Be with me Lord," Saints' Hymnal, 172.

Be with me Lord where'er I go;
Teach me what thou wouldst have me do;
Suggest whate'er I think or say;
Direct me in the narrow way.

CHOIR ANTHEM—Selected.

SHORT SERMON—"The power and opportunity of the teachers."

CHARGE TO TEACHERS—The presiding officer requests the teachers to stand to receive this charge. The charge should be formal yet sympathetic in style. It should be confined to the work of the teachers and their response to the great responsibility of the task.

CHALLENGE TO CONGREGATION—The congregation is requested to stand and is challenged in regard to its obligations in supporting and upholding the teachers. The influence of the home may well be referred to in this challenge.

PRAYER OF BLESSING—This prayer is definitely for God's blessing upon the teachers in their work, and upon the people in their home life.

CONGREGATIONAL HYMN—"I'll go where you want me to go," Zion's Praises, 28.

BENEDICTION.

RECESSIONAL.

Every step in the service should be well planned out and carefully arranged, so the service may be smooth and of even movement. It must of necessity be adapted to the requirements and possibilities of the congregation and church building.

Worship Service Themes for Intermediates at the Eleven o'Clock Hour

Arranged by

Howard Cook, Leta B. Moriarty, and W. Earl Page

In Independence at the Stone Church the young folk of intermediate age meet at the eleven o'clock period for their own worship service and sermonet. These meetings are well attended and have served a purpose for the young congregations that could not have been obtained in a service designed for the older people.

The young people contribute much to the program themselves. They give readings, tell stories, and give musical numbers. Some have even participated by offering prayer. The aim is to increase their participation in furnishing their own programs.

To a visitor and observer, it appears that the three young leaders who are in charge of this work have achieved a distinct success. However, they disclaim any illusions, and are highly critical of their own performances and results. They strive for better things.

The idea of an intermediate service is an excellent one. It ought to grow into more common use. We hope in the future to be able to present some outlines for the programs developed for each of these themes. Notice that there are themes for only ten months, as the service is dismissed during two months of the summer.—EDITOR.

Theme for the year: "Adventuring with Christ"

Rally Day Suggestions

By John Blackmore

Rally Day is almost here. Possibly the plans for the day in your congregation have been arranged. Have you thought of the spiritual values associated with the reunion of the Saints? Perhaps there are some in your local who can not go to church because of sickness, of age, or of distance with no vehicle for transportation available. It may be that other inconveniences will prevent them if a way to arrive is not provided.

The Shut-ins

The shut-ins would like to be present at their church home on this important day. This is a time when the strong can assist the weak. Seek out those who will not be able to attend unless means are provided. List their names and addresses.

Organize Automobiles

Many of the young folk of the congregation have cars and will gladly go and bring in to the services the folk who are aged, shut-in, or for other reasons can not attend unless transportation is arranged. The young people will enjoy this project, and all will be blessed in the day's work.

Get busy; the day has many rich possibilities.

REUNION NEWS

Western Iowa Reunion

By Grace Keairnes

Again the Western Iowa reunion is a bit of history, and the ten days were literally packed full of instruction and inspiration.

A number of tents were set up and occupied on Thursday night. The reunion was held in the city park at Woodbine, and the local Saints brought their midweek prayer meeting to the grounds, that the camp might meet with them. The songs of Zion floated out to those who arrived too late to attend the service, as they shuffled things into shape for a week of primitive living.

The first day of the reunion began with a young people's prayer service at 7.30, followed by a period of class work, general prayer meeting, and two more class periods before noon. Two or three classes were held each afternoon for those who desired, and this schedule was followed in a general way throughout the reunion except Sundays, when preaching took the place of class work.

The theme of the entire reunion was "Zion" and the task of preparation for the service that lies before the members of the church as Zion builders was given emphasis. This theme was carried out in the prayer services, in the class work, and was, in one form or another, the subject of most of the sermons delivered.

The classes covered a wide range of subjects. Brother M. A. Etzenhouser's lectures on "Zion's social ills and suggested remedies" were most enlightening and comprehensive, setting forth in no uncertain terms that "giving" and not "getting" must be the urge in bringing men and women to the center place. Sister Etzenhouser in her talks on "Preparation for marriage" gave a world of necessary instruction to the young people, and her sparkling personality and ready wit kept her audience on the alert from start to finish. To Bishop W. R. Adams was given the task of filling in time for some who were expected to arrive and did not, as well as attending to his own series of lectures on "Stewardships and Zion." Elder Ray Whiting's subject was "Religious education," and Sister Bertha Van Eaton, Women's Department worker, gave some helpful advice on diet. Franklyn Weddle, who was also in charge of the reunion music, guided an enthusiastic class of music lovers in the swinging of the baton, and Sister Ida Purcell initiated maids and matrons into the mysteries of handwork.

Each morning junior church was conducted by Leona and Ruth Hanson for the older children, while Lois Hatch and Harriet Jordan gathered the wee ones in for kindergarten work.

The pulpit was ably filled during preaching services by Elders L. G. Holloway, Charles Smith, and E. Y. Hunker, and in the latter part of the reunion by Apostle John Garver and Bishop Mark Siegfried, each one sounding the note of "Zion."

Each evening was given over to preaching services except Friday evening, when an impromptu program was presented by Graceland students, setting forth the spirit and ideals of Graceland. The platform was tastefully decorated with greenery, colored lamps, and the navy and old gold in abundance. When the speeches were over and the "tumult and the shouting died," Ray Whiting's yodel stands out in memory as the star number on the program. It may be interesting to note that seventy Graceland students and alumni registered during the reunion, Iowa, Missouri, Michigan, Nebraska, and Texas being represented, the time running back as far as 1898.

In the afternoons the recreation specialists, E. Y. Hunker and Marvin Fry, followed by kindred spirits, hid themselves to the baseball diamond or the high school grounds and engaged in lively volley and kitten ball games. It was interesting to note the reaction of some of the onlookers to these games, especially that of the dignified missionaries. After evening services the crowd trailed Marvin and E. Y. to a chosen spot on the camp ground, where with their guitars in hand and their backs against a lamp-post, they led a general "sing," assisted betimes by the Whiting yodel. Finally when the bear had gone over the mountain, old McDonald's farm had been attended to, and everyone had "found a peanut" and put it down his "sophagus," the music swung to the sentimental, then to the worshipful, and ended with a benediction on the camp of the Saints. An occasional wiener roast or marshmallow roast varied the evening program.

Meals were served in the basement of the church under the supervision of Brother Charles Smith, and a stand on the grounds in charge of Brother Joe Hamer made frequent trips down town less necessary.

About fifty tents were on the ground, and many drove in to the services both day and night in spite of somewhat unfavorable weather. The much-needed rain was gladly welcomed, however, after a long drought and no one complained because it accompanied other "showers of blessing."

The time of parting came all too soon, and a feeling of sadness was experienced as the white city began to melt away. Perhaps these little seasons of pleasant association are given us that we may sense in some measure the joy that will come when Zion has "increased in beauty and in holiness" and her people dwell in peace and righteousness, a light unto the world.

Idaho District Reunion

By Reveria Condit

Annual reunion of this district convened Friday morning, August 15, on the new grounds at Hagerman, Idaho. Apostles J. F. Curtis and M. A. McConley, associated with the district presidency and district missionary, O. W. Okerlind, were in charge of the gathering.

Two hundred and seventy registered at the reunion, and there were numbers whose names we did not get.

Brother Calvin Rich, of Salt Lake City, was associated with Arthur Condit in charge of the recreational activities. These workers took keen interest in the young, making them feel they were an important part of the reunion. Young people's prayer services were held at 8.15 each morning. The afternoons, from one to three o'clock, were spent playing volley ball, baseball, sight-seeing, and swimming. Friday afternoon, the town team challenged the reunion boys for a game of baseball. Our team made a good showing, the score being 16 to 9 in our favor.

The general prayer services from nine to ten o'clock each morning were well attended and of spiritual nature. All expressed the desire to do more for the church and live in such a way as to commend the church to others.

The lectures given by Apostles McConley and Curtis were instructive. Topics were "Stewardship," "Tithing," "Growth of the church," and other general themes of the day.

The hour from eleven to twelve o'clock each day was devoted to preaching, speakers being Apostles Curtis and McConley and Elders Calvin H. Rich, Utah missionary, and O. W. Okerlind, Idaho missionary.

The round table conducted each afternoon was educational. Song services were under the direction of Sister Gladys Vantrump, district chorister. She was assisted by Sister Emma Benson, of Independence. The singing each evening was used in connection with the orchestra to gather the crowd.

Evening preaching was along missionary lines, and all services were well attended. The big tent was filled to seating capacity, and on several occasions all were not able to find seats. Following the sermon came a short program. Each branch was assigned one evening for the presentation of its program contribution. One night was missionary night. Wednesday was Graceland night, the program being under the direction of Sister Charlotte Condit, who is a member of the Graceland faculty. It being her birthday, Sister Charlotte was pleasantly surprised by a handkerchief shower from the women and the presentation of some books purchased from the Herald book stand by the men.

All meals were served free of charge. This we find to be a good drawing card for the reunion. Vegetables were donated by local Saints, and other expenses were cared for by free-will offering.

At the district conference, Friday 22, the following officers were elected: President, Silas D. Condit, Hagerman; counselors, O. W. Okerlind and Cecil Hull, of Boise; secretary, Winona Porter, of Barber. The name of Arthur Condit, of Rupert, was recommended as bishop's agent.

Saturday afternoon baptismal services were held, eight candidates being baptized, six children and two adults. One of the adults was a woman of seventy years, formerly a member of the Utah faith. She had never heard of our work until about three weeks before her baptism. Sunday three more candidates entered the waters of baptism.

Sunday afternoon, resolutions of appreciation to the late district president and missionary, J. Arthur Davis, were read. Brother Davis was superannuated by the last General Conference. It is with deep regret that we lose him from the district, for all of us know that he has done a good work among us. Also a letter of appreciation was given the Vantrump family who are leaving for Independence, Missouri. They will be greatly missed in Idaho District, Brother Vantrump having served as bishop's agent and Sister Vantrump as district chorister.

The closing sermon was by Apostle Curtis. It was with regret that we saw our meetings come to a close. All agree that this reunion was one of the best ever held. May the inspiration of this reunion remain with us and help us to achieve greater things and that we may be better prepared to help carry this great work to victory.

Colorado Springs Reunion

By Mrs. C. D. Liggett

The reunion of Eastern Colorado District convened on the reunion grounds in Colorado Springs the evening of August 14. Apostle Gleazer was chosen to assist Brother E. B. Hull in presiding over the reunion.

On the morning of the first day of the reunion Apostle Gleazer was led to suggest a slogan for the reunion which from the very first won universal response. He suggested that the reunion be dedicated to "a clearer conception and a more diligent application of the law of Christ." The Saints eagerly accepted this slogan, and it became the theme of the gathering and was emphasized in the class work, devotional services, and preaching. Undoubtedly the members attending the reunion were immeasurably helped by keeping the slogan in mind and by consistently trying to make it effective in their reunion experience. It will probably become the slogan of the Eastern Colorado District.

With the able corps of workers sent by the general church, classes were soon organized for study and an eager group of students awaited instruction in the things pertaining to the redemption of Zion. During the hours of instruction the Saints were made deeply conscious that the message entrusted to our keeping is the message the world is waiting for.

J. A. Gardner, of the general church Publicity Department, was in charge of the nine o'clock morning class and used the outline, "Achieving church ideals." Daily he caused us to realize the greatness of our task and the need for a continuous forward movement to accomplish our goal.

Ten o'clock found E. J. Gleazer acting as instructor. He carried his class into the past just long enough to cause them to realize that the church has made and is making steady growth. He brought to the attention of the Saints many things needful for us to do to make our contribution to the church. He pointed out the need of definite leadership, consecrated lives, and the necessity of keeping up missionary efficiency.

Bishop C. A. Skipner, of Kansas City, taught the eleven o'clock hour, using the subject, "The financial law." He presented the matter in an interesting but simple manner that won for him the close attention of the class and made the members feel the need of complying with the law for the advancement of the work. Brother Skinner was pleased that he was able to help some to make out their inventories and file them.

Six o'clock found the young people gathered at Stratton Park in a prayer service, under the leadership of Brother H. E. Winegar. Each morning attendance at and interest in these meetings grew. We know that the Master was pleased with the prayers and testimonies from this group.

The general prayer service was held in the large tent every morning at eight o'clock. At each of the meetings a sweet, peaceful feeling prevailed.

The choir leader, Inez Shrunck, and her able assistant, Alice Milligan, did their part in helping the choir to make its contribution. The soloists who generously gave of their talents were Mrs. Lawrence Nelson, Una Holmes, Sister Fletcher, Alice Milligan, Everett Shupe, and Glaude A. Smith. The community song fests before the evening services were enjoyed.

Friday morning the young people gathered in front of the dining hall and marched into the large tent to mingle their voices in prayer and testimony with the voices of their elders. As they marched they sang, "We're marching to Zion." It was a touching sight to see this splendid body of young people with faces set Zionward.

One of the most interesting places on the grounds was the children's tent, where Sisters Conway, Winegar, Milligan, and Delphine Skinner took charge of the activities of the children. Each missionary was called upon, and assisted the sisters in whatever way he could.

The children enjoyed the flag-raising exercises each morning and the daily handcraft work. After the stories were told the children, they were allowed to dramatize them, each choosing the character he wanted to represent. On Saturday evening the children brought their work over to the large tent and put it on exhibition.

Sister Delphine Skinner provided amusement and at the same time showed what a talented young woman can do with a few pieces of crayons and a blackboard in drawing. Her cartoon portrayals of some of the prominent persons on the grounds brought forth many hearty laughs.

The Department of Recreation and Expression contributed a program each Sunday evening before preaching services.

The program on Saturday night was dedicated to the interests of Graceland College and was of the nature that stimulated interest in the church school.

The Women's Department held a get-acquainted meeting on Tuesday afternoon. Some of the brothers contributed of their talents to the program. Brother Skinner's reading was much enjoyed.

Recreational activities were conducted under the leadership of H. E. Winegar. The horseshoe tournament was won this year by Ellsworth Ebeling. Brother Leslie Travis was unable to be present to defend the title which he has held for two years, consequently the silver trophy was handed to the victor. Each year Colorado Springs Branch challenges the district to a baseball game and each year so far has come out victorious.

On Monday afternoon trips were taken to near-by scenic attractions, and with the Royal Gorge trip on Wednesday and the Cripple Creek trip on Friday the visitors were left with few moments of idleness. Those who made the Cripple Creek trip had the pleasure of seeing the beauties of nature through a snowstorm in midsummer.

District conference convened in the tent at ten o'clock on Saturday morning, Apostle Gleazer being chosen to assist the district presidency in presiding over the meeting. E. B. Hull was sustained as president of the district, and chose as his assistants E. J. Williams and J. D. Curtis. C. D. Liggett was chosen to take the place of Brother Ralph Vincent as secretary of the district. Brother Ralph Vincent was sustained as the bishop's agent, filling the place of Brother Ward A. Hougas, who has been transferred to Far West Stake. We regret the going from our district of Brother Hougas, but the one chosen to succeed him is a capable young man and will carry on the good work done in this department. A. E. Tabor, Ralph Vincent, and C. Hughes were elected as trustees of the reunion grounds. Ed. Fishburn, of Denver, was elected to the office of auditor. The budget committee consists of E. J. Williams, B. J. Peters, and Ralph Vincent. One hundred and five dollars was the budget voted for the district. Sister Winegar was chosen as the leader of the department known as Religious Education.

Petitions came to the conference for the ordination of the following brothers: B. J. Peters to the office of elder (he was recommended by the presiding authority of the church); Nephi Flowers, of Wray, to the office of teacher; Pringle R. Carriker to the office of priest; and Russell Carriker to the office of teacher. These petitions were granted.

Pueblo Branch petitioned the conference that it be disorganized due to its being handicapped by the lack of the officers to carry on branch activities. The request was granted.

At 8.30, August 24, the Saints gathered for the sacramental service. They came in prayer and fasting after a week of preparation. As soon as we entered the tent we were made aware of a wonderful degree of the Spirit, which brought words of comfort and instruction to the members. All present rejoiced that God had been mindful of us. Brother J. A. Gardner was called upon to deliver the charge to the three brothers whose ordinations had been provided for the day previous. Brother Gardner occupied the eleven o'clock hour, discussing the desirability of turning the floodlight of inspection on our lives and completing the task intrusted to our care.

E. J. Gleazer chose "Altars" as the thought for his address at the afternoon meeting. He enjoyed a marked degree of the Spirit in his delivery.

Bishop C. A. Skinner was chosen to give the closing address of the reunion. He used the theme carried out in his classes, "The financial law."

Many were kept away from the reunion by rains which made the harvest late and by the general economic depression. But those present will long remember the reunion for the splendid spirit that pervaded the camp. Everything seemed to move in harmony in all departments.

Sister Barry and her able assistant, Sister Willets, of La Junta, were in charge of the dining room and kitchen and provided well-cooked meals.

Some of the visitors who contributed to the success of the meeting were Bishop and Sister G. W. Eastwood, and Bishop Roderick May and his wife who have served the church so well. Brother and Sister Glaude Smith took care of the bookstand and helped in many other ways.

Graceland Chats

The opening of college is in the air. On Thursday morning, September 4, the faculty gather for the initial meeting of the year. By that evening plans will be completed for receiving the freshmen on the next day. On Friday the freshmen meet in the chapel at nine o'clock for their first assembly. By the time the next Herald arrives, enrollment will have been completed and regular classes will have been organized.

The Library in New Quarters

The library has been moved to the east side of the upper floor of Briggs Hall. This has been the most extensive improvement on the campus this summer. Two of the former classrooms have been thrown into one for the reading room, and the southeast room has become the stack room.

New floor covering has been laid, new steel book stacks installed, new oak shelving and furniture placed, new light fixtures put in, and the walls refinished, so that the whole library impresses one with efficiency and refinement. Last week the books were carried to their new home, and this week the finishing touches are being given. "Aristotle," the old owl of the library, still stands guard at the end of the reading room.

The Dormitories Decorated

Both Herald Hall and Marietta Hall have been painted throughout. Showers have been constructed in the basement of Marietta. A full-time janitor will take care of Herald Hall. Cement walks have been laid to Walker Hall and a driveway constructed. The housing accommodations of the college are in the best condition in several years.

Voice Instructor Engaged

Mrs. Linna Timmerman Hunt will be instructor in voice at Graceland this year. Because of ill health, Mrs. Marcella Menge Clarke was compelled to give up her position. Her excellent work of last year proved very constructive to the music department and most satisfactory to her students.

Mrs. Hunt comes with the best of recommendations and with a good background of experience. During the past year she has been studying in Chicago. Previous to this she was located at Shreveport, Louisiana. Her college work was taken at the University of Nebraska.

Summer Family Celebrate

A week ago Monday night the "Summer Family" held a farewell celebration. Some will leave the campus at the close of the summer. The invasion of the students will break up the summer unity. So, in the reception room of Walker Hall, they staged a jolly evening of games and refreshments. Ice cream and cake were served in "vast portions."

Mae Warren Comes for Home Economics

Mrs. Thamer Warren, known to students of recent years as "Mae," returns to Graceland as instructor in home economics. This change was necessitated by the marriage and subsequent resignation of Miss Clara Williams of last year's faculty. Mrs. Warren is an alumna of Graceland and is a graduate of Iowa State College at Ames. While in Graceland, she and her husband conducted the dining room at Herald Hall.

The Faculty Returns

Miss Tess Morgan, dean of women, returned to the campus rather early in order to get her work ready for the opening of the college. During the summer she has enjoyed a month's auto tour through the West.

J. C. Bergman, the registrar, has returned from his linguistic studies at the University of Iowa. His work as registrar requires complete preparation before the opening of the college.

The Mortimores have been in Lamoni for several weeks conducting repairs about their homes. During the earlier part of the summer they were engaged in geological work in the oil fields of Oklahoma.

Roy Cheville has returned for the college year. The Nauvoo Camp, the Children's School of Religion of the Lamoni reunion, and a week's tour through the historic scenes of the church have given experience and inspiration for work in the department of religion and religious education.

By next week the rendezvous of instructors will have taken place.

President G. N. Briggs has been in Iowa City attending meetings of the Iowa Association of College Presidents. N. Ray Carmichael is very busy with the details of getting the college plant in readiness for the year.

Northern California Conference

The Northern California district conference convened July 26 and 27. We were happy to have the privilege of accepting the hospitality of Oakland Saints and to be entertained in their new church.

The conference was declared open by District President G. P. Levitt at ten o'clock Saturday morning. The delegates chose the district presidency and Apostle M. A. McConley to preside over the conference.

The reporting to the conference was nicely arranged by the district president, this part of the business being soon cared for. Some communications were read at the morning session.

Business meeting continued at 2.30 in the afternoon, Brother Levitt in the chair. He read his message to the conference and then asked Brother McConley to preside. The resolutions in the district president's report were referred to the conference and passed upon. These resolutions provided for the district to adopt the new program of religious education, also for a branch organization to be effected at Castroville. We understand that Brothers Levitt and McConley are to attend to this September 7. Some excellent work has been reported from these regions under the direction of Brother A. R. Lawn.

District officers were elected. G. P. Levitt was unanimously chosen as district president. He selected for his counselors W. H. Dawson, who has been associated with him in the past, and J. A. Damron, son of A. J. Damron, who has been an active member of the district presidency for a number of years. Brother Levitt spoke highly of Brother Damron's splendid work of the past and expressed it as his opinion that the work should fall on younger shoulders in the future. The conference gave a standing vote of thanks to Brother Damron for his loyal service.

Mary Steele was elected secretary; Bishop Edward Ingham elected treasurer; Edwin Burdick chosen director of the music department; and Brother G. P. Levitt, director of religious education.

Saturday evening the conference was entertained by an excellent program provided under the direction of Sister Kaeha Meyer, member of the Oakland congregation.

Sunday was a busy day. The first service was a meeting of the priesthood at 7.30 in the morning. Apostle McConley spoke to the ministry. At the close of this service we were happy to greet President F. M. Smith, who had arrived on the morning train. A prayer service at 8.30 in the morning was presided over by Apostle M. A. McConley and Herbert Hinton, new district missionary. This meeting was all too short. God was there, and the people were lifted to spiritual heights in a short season of worship. The Sunday school followed this service in charge of Sister W. P. Bush, local superintendent, and Sister Cora Hintz, who has been the district superintendent. By special arrangements the classes were arranged for special instruction.

At eleven o'clock President Smith was the speaker. This service was arranged as the official opening of the new church. The upper auditorium which seats five hundred people was taxed to its limit, and a large number were standing in the hallway. We are sure that President Smith's address will not soon be forgotten.

Apostle M. A. McConley spoke at 2.30 o'clock. His sermon was full of good counsel and was uplifting to all who heard. Following Brother McConley's sermon Brother J. W. Rushton, pastor of Oakland Church, took the stand and explained the symbolic meaning of the rostrum, the altar, the baptismal font, lights, etc., in the new church. This explanation was so beautifully set forth that it gave new meaning to our religion and a new appreciation of the sort of buildings we should erect for our distinctive doctrine and ideals.

President Smith preached an inspiring sermon at the evening service. He set forth in a forceful manner the objectives of the church.

Following this service Brother Levitt was given charge, and he declared the conference adjourned. To Brother Rushton and the Saints of Oakland, he, in behalf of the district, expressed appreciation and gratitude for the hospitality we had received in Oakland. Brother Rushton made the response for the Oakland people.

The women of Oakland Branch served meals to the conference at a reasonable price. This work we understand was directed by Sister Gorsky, assisted by loyal and devoted helpers.

Again the district faces a year that is filled with hopes that are bright. Together we are running toward great goals.

Magnolia, Iowa

Since the last news from this historic spot, a number of changes have taken place. At the resignation of Brother D. R. Chambers, Brother Jay Field was chosen branch president.

There is a fine group of young people in Magnolia, and it is the desire of all to see them progress.

Brother and Sister E. L. Butterworth suffered the loss of their farm home by fire some weeks ago, and soon after both were severely injured in a car accident. Sister Butterworth sustained a double fracture of the right leg below the knee, but she is making good recovery.

Sister Etta Hill Kilts passed away July 25, and Brother J. F. McDowell was called away July 29. Funeral services were conducted in the homes of the deceased, Alma M. Fyrando officiating in both services. Brother Fyrando has in the past few months been called to officiate in an unusual number of funerals, including those of members of the Methodist, Congregational, Presbyterian, and Lutheran Churches, as well as several belonging to no church.

The forty-sixth annual meeting of Harrison County Pioneers and Old Settlers was held August 22 and, as usual, was attended by thousands. John Burcham and wife, of Harlan, were here, aged ninety-three and eighty-nine. Sister Burcham is a daughter of Judge Jonas Chatburn, known to the older members of the church. Brother A. L. Merchant, of Logan, was introduced, having been a continuous resident of the county for eighty years. Brother Fyrando was elected secretary-treasurer of the association for the thirty-seventh consecutive year.

The drought and intense heat were destructive to crops in many parts of Iowa, but recent abundant rains have made pastures and lawns a pleasing green.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Fall should find us following along a clear-cut path flanked on both sides with ripe grain, symbolic of a rich harvest that should be ours. With a summer nearly past, filled with golden opportunities such as the classes at reunion and the renewal of friendships with members of the First Presidency, full of zeal and imparting inspiration, should not our winter culminate in a bevy of activities? It will be our aim to keep each person busy each minute of each day and night. That commission has been given again and again from the pulpit by Pastor Henry L. Livingston: "We must learn to live like Jesus, being about our Father's business." The goal for new converts for the entire church has been set—forty thousand in six years. Our task will be to think and to act "missionary" in connection with every one of our friends who do not know the joy of living under the enlightenment given through the Holy Spirit. We hope to fill our quota, to bend every energy in that direction.

The children of Latter Day Saint parents taught to look forward to being baptized when eight years old help to swell the number. Brother and Sister Adolphus Edwards, jr., have a new member in their household, Duane Wilson Edwards, born August 10. Although he can not be included among this six years of prospective church members, our hopes are he will be in the early numbers of the next group.

The joy of new arrivals in this world is very often shadowed by the sorrow of departures of old friends. The death of Sister Harriet Harrison, a charter member of the First Philadelphia Branch, is a loss that is shared by every member. In recognition of her righteous living, the Lord was good, making her years many. She was seventy-four years old. Fifty-eight years found her a member of this church and truly a Latter Day Saint. She was baptized into the church in 1872, in Birmingham, England. Her accustomed place in church, filled every Sunday, is now vacant. Our sympathy goes to her children. May they carry on as successfully.

We send back to Graceland this year Norman Preusch and Viola Firth and with them a new student, Asa Fowler. We say, "God bless them," and admonish them not to forget the folks back in Philadelphia who are expecting them to take the reins of leadership in the near future.

Our district conference to be held at Elk Mills, Maryland, during the Labor Day week-end will be the beginning of fall activities. Rally day comes soon afterward, at which time we want to be pushing strongly towards accomplishing our task—everyone a missionary.

Union Branch

Clitherall, Minnesota

A good sacrament meeting was held July 6, and another one on August 3. However small the attendance may be during the remainder of the month, there is usually a goodly number present on sacrament Sunday.

Patriarch F. A. Smith was here a few days in July and gave two very good sermons on July 20. He also helped confirm Ralph Eugene Russell, son of Brother and Sister Roy Russell, of Clontarf, who was baptized at the noon hour by Pastor Lester Whiting. If isolated Saints, surrounded by unfavorable conditions, can bring their children into the church, how much more we should be able to do when we have branch privileges.

While here, Brother Smith gave one patriarchal blessing. The scattered condition of the membership and the busy time made daily or nightly services out of the question, so he was able to enjoy a welcome rest before leaving for his next reunion date.

August 3 we were pleasantly surprised to receive a visit from Brother and Sister Rotzien and family, of Fargo, North Dakota. Their visit was an encouragement to our members here. Especially gratifying was the fact that their son, Courtney, is taking an active part in church work.

It is also gratifying to know that our pastor is receiving recognition for his godly life from nonmembers. Recently he was chosen to preach the funeral sermon of a good non-member neighbor. Thus the seed is sown, the sowers pass on, and the seed grows.

Toledo, Ohio

A beautiful ceremony took place at the home of Sister Belle Heminger June 30. Her youngest daughter, Eva, was united in marriage to Mr. Gordon Waggoner. The simple yet impressive ceremony was performed by Elder Asa Willmarth. The Spirit rested upon the assembled guests, confirming the sacredness of the occasion. The bride is a member of Toledo Branch, and a girl much loved and appreciated by all who know her. The young couple are living with the mother of the bride.

Toledo Branch enjoyed a spiritual feast at the sacramental service of August 3. A goodly number was present. Elder William Grice was in charge, assisted by several members of the priesthood.

The annual Sunday school picnic was scheduled for August 16 at Willys Park, where young and old enjoyed a fine outing together.

The earnest prayer of the branch is that God's work may progress in latter days.

Oakland, California

From the Oakland Bulletin

The conference of Northern California District held in Oakland Branch July 26 and 27, proved a most enjoyable gathering. All services were well attended, and a fine spirit prevailed. The business included the indorsement of the plan of religious education, and Elder G. P. Levitt was placed in charge.

Brother Damron resigned from the district presidency, and his son, J. A. Damron, was elected in his place. Brother Burdick, of Sacramento, was elected to the office of musical director. Other officers elected were the present incumbents. Brothers M. A. McConley and G. P. Levitt presided.

President F. M. Smith arrived early Sunday.

The Saturday evening's entertainment, under the direction of Sister K. Mayer, was of high quality. We are deeply indebted to the many talented people of the congregation and from among our friends who contributed to the enrichment of this occasion.

The Sunday services were a fine uplift in every way. We had the opportunity of testing the facilities of the new building and its equipment, and we were not disappointed. The morning congregation mounted in number to over five hundred. President Smith's message was listened to with deep interest. He expounded concerning the meaning of the church, and stressed the urgent need of conduct and character on behalf of the people to harmonize with the beliefs and doctrines. In the evening his message dealt with the practical features of the church's program and was illustrated by references to the united effort of the citizens of Independence where all creeds and people are erecting a new hospital, costing over a quarter of a million dollars. The Atherton agricultural project was named as an example of the operation of the stewardship plan.

Apostle McConley preached in the afternoon on the objectives of the church and methods employed in attaining them.

The women, under the supervision of Sister Gorsky, did excellently in providing for the physical needs. The meals served were of good quality and generous servings. Thanks are extended to all who helped.

During the week President Smith made a number of calls upon the shut-ins. Wednesday evening as the guest of Doctor Teel, of Los Angeles, he left by airplane for Los Angeles on important business, and Friday he departed for the East.

The sacramental service Sunday, August 3, was enjoyable, and the spirit of peace was felt by all who met to worship.

Pastor Rushton attended the young people's camp held at Irvington. He gave three lectures on "The Bible and its meaning." He preached there August 10.

Brother J. B. Carmichael preached the morning of August 10 at Oakland Church and Brother C. Hawley in the evening. Brother C. Moran accepted invitation to preach at Park Presidio Branch on that day.

The workers' conference held Tuesday, August 5, was well attended. The plan to begin study work in September was adopted, and two classes were provided for, one in "The psychology of teaching," the other, "A study of the Bible."

Scranton, Pennsylvania

August 26.—A strong iron fence has been placed around the lot on which our church building stands. The majority of the brothers and their nonmember friends helped, on holidays and evenings, to put up the fence, and the work was a new experience to Brother Joseph Swales, our chief engineer. Two coats of paint were applied, and the Saints are proud of their work. A report is being filed with the Bishopric, giving the increased valuation of our property. The church in Scranton is situated near a temporary recreation ground.

Religio work embraces many phases of activity and is progressing.

Last Sunday morning Brother Thomas Jones, pastor, spoke on "Inheritance and its purpose." The "Conditions of stewardship" will follow. Interest is being awakened in Zion's ventures. Such questions are discussed as: Why not start a mill in the West? a canning factory? a mail order house? Will you pay a few cents more for products to establish a church venture, and place it on a sound basis? It is our opinion that our intelligence should closely follow our faith in the ventures possible in the cooperative effort of a membership such as we have in America. And it is the writer's belief that every person in the church is a steward in and through the gospel covenant.

Sandwich, Illinois

August 18.—Church work in Sandwich is moving steadily along under the leadership of Pastor Earl D. Rogers, assisted by the faithful corps of sisters.

During the spring and summer there were several baptisms, and the new members are helping to take the gospel message to their friends and townspeople.

Grandma Culmer is seriously ill at the home of her daughter, Sister Abbie Elwood.

Brother Moore, of Aurora, was the speaker Sunday evening, August 17, and Brother J. M. Blakely, of Plano, spoke the evening of August 10.

A few weeks ago Brother Mac Wright was suddenly stricken nearly blind. He is somewhat improved but unable to work, so he and Sister Wright plan to spend a year in Sheridan, Indiana, at the home of the former's sister and her husband.

The evening of August 8 a farewell party for Brother and Sister Wright was held in the little white church and attended by a large company of Saints and friends. About twenty were present from Plano, and Brother and Sister A. Shultz and family came from Aurora. A short program consisted of instrumental music, singing, and reminiscences of years spent in Plano and Sandwich. Plano members contributed pleasing numbers to the program. Little Francis Poole presented Sister Wright a bouquet of flowers in behalf of the Sunday school. A vote of thanks was given the pair for their willing service in past years, and a special vote of thanks was given Sister Wright for her faithful work as superintendent of the Sunday school and also her work in other church offices.

A delicious lunch was served in the church basement, and Brother and Sister Wright were presented a purse as a token of esteem and love. Sister Wright has served as superintendent of Sunday school and teacher of a class nearly twenty years. She has taken an active interest and served in all departments. She has been most energetic when it came to food sales and other means of raising church funds.

We are sad indeed to lose Brother and Sister Wright from our community for a time, but we hope they will both come back much improved in health after a year of rest.

Missionary Meetings at Holdenville

The missionary meetings conducted at Holdenville, Oklahoma, by Elders William Bath and C. G. Smallwood, beginning August 6 and closing August 24, met with success. Attendance and interest were good, and nine candidates were baptized and enrolled as members of the Holdenville Branch. Two more are to be baptized as soon as arrangements are made. They were to have been baptized with the others, but owing to the rainy weather were not permitted to attend the service.

The Lord was with us in our meetings and opened the hearts and minds of many to his message. The ministers made a host of friends in this vicinity, and left in the branch, as a result of their work, an excellent spirit. On the Wednesday evening following the close of the meetings, a prayer meeting was held in the branch, and the Spirit was present with much power, causing the Saints to rejoice.

Among the nine baptized were Brother and Sister Taylor. Brother Taylor is eighty-two years of age and was a member of another church for many years. His wife was a member of the Utah Church for years, and she is seventy-six years old. They have four sons, whom they wish to see come into the fold.

Several people are investigating and looking forward to the time when Brothers Bath and Smallwood will return. Of course, the members are looking to the time of another meeting. Because of the good interest and friendship engendered by these brothers, we think a second series should be conducted by them in Holdenville in the near future.

The services were held under the district tent, and the tent is stored here until next spring when district meetings will again start. We hope the tent meetings will begin in our branch.

Music was directed and supervised by Brother C. G. Smallwood and Sister C. O. Apple. Special music was arranged for each night of the services. E. T. BROUGHTON.

Gospel Is Preached in Mining Camp

September 1.—A good series of meetings has just been closed at Gross, Kansas, a mining camp. As far as numbers in attendance, interest, and order were concerned, the series proved most successful. There were no baptisms, but I believe some are interested in the latter-day work, and that a permanent opening has been made in this place. Our plans for the future include preaching every week on Wednesday evening and Sunday school on Sunday morning. If we can get the required amount of help from the membership, we believe that a large Sunday school can be built up in Gross. It has been in progress two Sundays now, and there are seventeen nonmember attendants on the roll, notwithstanding a ball game is played at the hour our school meets.

The series of meetings was held to demonstrate the fact that it is still possible to conduct successful meetings in schoolhouses. Those who specially exerted themselves for the services feel well pleased with the results obtained. It was well worth the effort. The average attendance was sixty nonmembers, usually the same people each night.

J. L. CREVISTON.

Independence

Stone Church

The attendance and spirit of the Sunday school Sunday morning reassumed normal aspects. It was the first Sunday of the fall season, and many who have been away for the summer again were seen in classes and working in the departments. Promotion time looms in the near future, and the classes are enthusiastic in making plans for the winter.

The adult sacramental service held in the main auditorium of the Stone Church August 7, was in charge of President Frederick M. Smith, Apostles J. F. Curtis and R. S. Budd, and Elders H. G. Barto, R. T. Cooper, and T. A. Beck. The spirit of peace and meditation prevailed during the hour. At the opening, Apostle Budd prayed that all assembled might be able to look up and see God in his majesty and also look down and see ourselves as we are, recognizing more fully our dependence on Him. The oblation talk was given by Apostle Curtis.

Before the congregation partook of the Lord's Supper, President Smith spoke on the importance of the opportunity for renewing our covenant made with God in baptism and of the necessity of keeping ourselves in close touch with Him and not allowing our interest in church services to wane. He spoke of the fact that there has been a noticeable decrease of spirituality in the churches whenever prosperity has been on the increase. Just what per cent of our own people have been affected in this way has given him great concern. In the present financial depression of the world, he regrets our unpreparedness.

The ordination of Brother Edward Larson to the office of elder was performed by Apostles Budd and Curtis near the close of the hour.

It was most appropriate Sunday morning that the winter's program of eleven o'clock intermediate worship services opened with an hour commemorating the Lord's Supper. The theme for the year is "Adventuring with Christ," and this month the boys and girls are "Adventuring with Christ in loyalty." Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge of the group of more than one hundred young worshippers. Assisting him in the stand were Howard W. Harder, W. Earl Page, Oral Andes, Albert Brackenbury, Paul Elliott, Roy Davey, and Elbert Dempsey.

Priest W. Earl Page has this year been designated as intermediate pastor, and will be assisted in this work by Brother Howard Cook. Sister H. C. Burgess is chorister. Next Sunday morning the intermediates will observe College Day.

At the Campus

The Sunday evening service at the Campus heralded the opening of the schools in Independence on Monday. It was children's night, and music was furnished by a chorus of one hundred voices from the junior Sunday school department at the Campus. The chorus which was conducted by Sister S. A. Burgess, occupied seats on the platform. Solo numbers were sung by Jack Hayes, boy artist and announcer of K M B C. President F. M. Smith was in charge of the service.

"The child in our midst" was the theme of Pastor Sheehy, who gave expressions to many of his hopes and ideals concerning the relationship of the child to his parents, his school, and his community. Believing that "the child presages the coming man," the speaker stressed the need for a home life and a community life founded on love, wisdom, and understanding if we would build and maintain Zion conditions. The following obligations of society to childhood were named and discussed: 1. Preservation of life; 2. Preservation of health; 3. Opportunity to play; 4. Opportunity to receive an education which will prepare him for useful citizenship.

The Sunday school juniors at the Campus enjoyed their regular service of songs, class work, and devotion August 24. Elder R. V. Hopkins was present to deliver a pleasing talk to the department, and he interested his young hearers with stories of our missionaries.

Besides the regular songs and class work, the juniors on August 31 practiced a number of songs under the leadership of Sister Alice Burgess. Pastor John F. Sheehy had requested the children to sing Sunday evening, September 7, at the Campus outdoor service. For the worship service hour Elder C. Ed. Miller brought his stereopticon lantern and slide pictures taken when he was in Australia. His talk greatly interested the children. There was not time for all the interesting things he had to show and tell about.

Elder Will Bollinger was in charge of the sacramental service last Sunday, and Brothers M. A. Smith, W. L. Cowan, S. A. Burgess, and R. R. Redfield assisted in administering the sacrament to one hundred and twenty children. In the testimony meeting following Brother Bollinger suggested that the children who are soon to be promoted from the junior to the intermediate department, bear their testimonies. This was the last sacramental service they will attend with the Campus congregation.

Ninety have enrolled in the High School Department of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences. These night students are beginning work this week with the expectation of completing the year's course of study which is fully accredited by the Missouri State Board of Education. A number of classes have an enrollment of over twenty-five students each.

Eleven teachers will give their services for the school term, and all who teach academic subjects are degreed people. The faculty is as follows: E. E. Closson, John Blackmore, M. A. Etzenhouser, Mrs. M. A. Etzenhouser, Evan Fry, W. Earl Page, George G. Lewis, Mrs. George G. Lewis, Lewis Nelson, Juanita Echernacht, and Roy Davey. M. A. Etzenhouser is principal of the institute and Mrs. Nellie Blackmore is registrar. Class work opened at the Campus Monday night.

The Campus was the center of recreational activity on Labor Day and was visited by many thousands of people. In the evening the crowd was estimated to be sixty-five hundred. The movie was Will Rogers in "A Texas steer." During the day there were baseball games and a variety of contests.

Personalities

Miss Blanche R. Farrar, librarian of the Emma Hale Memorial Library, and her sister, Mrs. W. W. Forbes, of New York, sailed on the S. S. Leviathan September 6 for a two months' vacation abroad. They will visit England, France, Germany, Italy, Austria, Hungary, and Switzerland. In the absence of the librarian, Miss Leola Andes is in charge of the library. She is assisted by Miss Dorothea Babb, a senior in William Chrisman High School.

About ninety-one persons gathered Sunday afternoon, August 31, at the Campus in the fifth annual reunion of the Lambert Family Association. The association is composed of descendants of Richard and Jane Thornber Lambert who came from England in the early part of the 1830's and located in Western Illinois. Elder J. R. Lambert, of Independence, is the eldest surviving child of this couple and was the oldest person at the reunion. His sister, Mrs. Harriet Redfield, is also a resident of Independence. Two others are still living, Alec Lambert, of Colorado, and Mrs. Ellen Pitt, of Illinois. Besides a happy time of visiting, events of the day were a big picnic dinner, and in the afternoon a genealogical program in the Campus building. Among the out-of-town members of the family association attending the reunion were: Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Lambert, his mother, Mrs. George P. Lambert, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Siegfried and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Siegfried, all from Ferris, Illinois; Miss Madge Head and her niece, Miss Sarah Bowen, of Saint Joseph, Missouri; Mr. and Mrs. Orris Salisbury, son and daughter, Auburn, Iowa; Mrs. Lena Graham and son, Kenneth, Briery Stevenson and three daughters and a son, all of Lamoni, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. Victor Crooker, Miami, Oklahoma; Richard Herrick and family, Kansas City, Missouri; and Elmer Redfield and family, of Iowa.

Again the angel of death has moved among the members of the Stone Church congregation. Howard Hagen, nineteen years old, who graduated from the William Chrisman High School in 1928, passed away August 29 at the State Sanatorium at Mount Vernon. The funeral was held from the Stone Church September 2, and interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. Howard leaves his parents, Brother and Sister S. C. Hagen, a brother, Raymond, and a sister, Mrs. Thelma Bevins.

The funeral of Sister Clara Cooper, wife of John F. Cooper, occurred September 4 in Independence, and interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. Sister Cooper died at the Sanitarium September 2. Besides her husband the deceased leaves two sons, John F. Cooper, jr., and Clarence E. Cooper, and two daughters, Clara Elizabeth Cooper and Genevieve Cooper, all of the home, and a sister, Mrs. May Edwards.

Sister Lois E. Waits, who for a number of years has been an ardent Sunday school worker in Independence, passed away September 4 after an illness of several weeks. She is survived by her husband, Don T. Waits, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Bush, of Independence; eight sisters and one brother. The funeral service September 6 was in charge of Elder John F. Sheehy, and interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

On September 3 the Independence Sanitarium Nurses' Alumnae entertained the nurses of the second district of Missouri at the Nurses' Club in Kansas City. A short musical program preceded Doctor C. H. Allen's instructive talk on "The tuberculosis situation and problems." Refreshments were served sixty guests.

Apostle R. S. Budd made The General Epistle to the Saints the basis of his talk to the Y. P. R. Class at the Campus last Friday evening.

Second Church

The services for the boys and girls of older primary and junior ages, held at eleven o'clock each Sunday morning, are successful at Second Church. Brother J. L. Conyers is in charge. The attendance varies from thirty to fifty, and the programs interest and instruct the little people.

Patriarch F. A. Smith was the speaker at the church August 24. A. K. Dillee, pastor, spoke August 31, using as his subject "Be ye clean."

A week or two ago, the members of this congregation were glad to see the church receiving a new coat of paint. The appearance is considerably improved.

Group 17 met the evening of August 27 with Brother and Sister F. M. Crawford.

Ivan Dillee, son of Pastor and Sister A. K. Dillee, left Thursday morning to attend Graceland College.

Liberty Street

The first all-day social attempt of the season on the part of members of the Liberty Street congregation was a picnic held at the county park on Labor Day. A number of our members claim Alabama as their home State and since Glenn Davis, missionary to Alabama, was present, the competition between Missouri and that southern State was very keen. Earl Higdon was a discovery made at this picnic. His volley ball playing was so excellent that he gained the attention of all, and as a result of entreaties has consented to coach our team.

Sunday, August 31, Elder and Sister John Blackmore were in attendance at the church school. Sister Blackmore visited and observed at the junior worship hour, too. Brother Walter I. Betts was the speaker at eleven o'clock.

A new Sunday school class has been formed under the tutelage of Pastor F. A. Cool. Clyde H. Smitherman was the moving spirit in beginning this new unit in our church school.

At the September communion service, we were very glad to see Elder Glenn Davis associated with the pastor in conducting the worship. In the talk he made it was quite evident that his ideas of the importance of different phases of church endeavor had been considerably altered. When he left Liberty Street for his mission, his was the idea of pastoral endeavor, now it is missionary. This must be a witnessing church; its members must be constantly witnessing if this gospel is to reach the number of people it should, declared Brother Davis.

Sunday, September 7, a large group of young people motored to Atherton to attend a tent meeting at which Elder Glenn Davis had been invited to preach in the afternoon.

Enoch Hill

We are planning a special blessing service some Sunday morning this month and expect the pleasure of offering to the Father five precious little ones.

The church school session Sunday morning opened with fitting music and talks, "The meaning of personal liberty," by E. H. McKean, and "Can we do as we please?" by John Quick. The lesson of the morning was so directed by the superintendent and the pastor as to prepare the Saints for the sacramental meeting to follow.

Pastor O. W. Sarratt was again able to meet with his congregation last Sunday. He had been detained at his home for a number of days by an attack of rheumatism. All were happy to welcome him to church. It was good to see him with Brothers Brewer, Petre, Beal, and Whitsett presiding over the meeting of sacrament. A feeling of strong appreciation of God's goodness to his children characterized the hour of worship.

Brother J. E. Martin was missed from his usual place with the elders in sacramental service, he being out of town on business for a few weeks.

Brother C. E. Beal is feeling better after a recent operation. We are glad to have him back with us.

Wednesday night prayer meetings were held at the church during August, but now they are being held in the homes of the Saints, the three groups and the young people meeting separately. We are looking forward to the blessings of the Spirit upon us and those in whose homes we meet.

Brother and Sister R. E. Whitsett enjoyed reunion with Little Sioux District and report a wonderfully good time.

As a whole, while the outward manifestations of the Spirit have not been enjoyed, a quiet good spirit has been felt in our meeting, directing and blessing us. For this we are thankful to the heavenly Father.

Walnut Park

Sunday, August 31, the speaker for the morning service was Elder Earl F. Hoisington. He based his sermon on the nineteenth chapter of Luke, beginning with the twelfth verse. His texts were "Occupy till I come" and "Unto everyone that occupieth it shall be given; and from him that occupieth not shall be taken that even which he hath." Brother Hoisington emphasized the importance of everyone working at the task that has been set for him. He likened our activities to a torch race, which is a form of relay race, requiring that each person as soon as he receives the torch shall carry it forward, keeping the flame alive during his part of the race. The swiftest does not always win, but rather he who is able to keep the light burning while carrying on the race.

The worship period of the service was greatly helped by the presentation of the choir, "The Lord is my Guide and my Salvation," under the direction of Sister Minnie Scott Dobson.

September 7 was the Sunday for the regular sacramental service. This was conducted by Elder C. L. Olson, assisted by Elders Barnhardt, Lanpher, Smith, Robinson, and Blackmore. The first part of the hour was set apart as a special service for the blessing of children. The following were blessed at this time: Robert Glenn, son of Brother and Sister Ammon Badder; Frances Alberta, daughter of Brother and Sister Carlyle Barnhardt; Dorothy, daughter of Sister Dorothy Anderson Beck; Richard Eugene, son of Brother and Sister Eugene Brown; Fred Allan, son of Brother and Sister C. L. Olson; and Wilma Pearl, daughter of Brother and Sister Clarence Redfield. The blessing of these children formed an impressive and beautiful part of the service.

Four children who had been baptized during the church school hour were confirmed, in order to allow them to partake of the sacrament with the rest of the Saints. They were Maxine Badder, Mardell Avon Redfield, Raymond Peel, and Franklin Coil.

The serving of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was also an impressive part of the service. Elder John Blackmore was requested to make the introductory remarks. The sacrament was served to about four hundred persons who filled the auditorium of the church almost to capacity. Everything went smoothly, and a devout, worshipful spirit was felt. In the closing pastoral exhortation, Brother Olson called the attention of the Saints to the activities of the fall and winter and the many ways in which they may support the work of the church and be true to the covenant which they had again renewed.

Kansas City Stake

O. B. K. Activities

On Friday, August 22, the stake council arranged a game tournament and social on the Central Church lawn, at which time the Enoch Hill volley ball boys, of Independence, visited and trimmed every team in a volley ball tournament.

Croquet, ping-pong, sidewalk baseball, and Jack Burlington's miniature golf course kept all who desired to play busy. Others were content to enjoy the good fellowship of the occasion.

An "eats" committee worked hard to keep up with the demand for pop and ice cream. Sister Hannah Waddell donated thirty dozen of her delicious glazed doughnuts and three gallons of cider, and these were consumed with gusto and delight. The proceeds were devoted to the stake council expense.

This O. B. K. Council also sponsored the annual stake picnic at Swope Park on Labor Day. The weather was warm and about three hundred participated in the picnic activities. Some played tennis, some croquet and games. Others played baseball and playground ball, and some just enjoyed looking on and drinking lemonade, but everyone seemed to have a good time.

Previous to the picnic, the O. B. K.'s had sponsored a ranking and challenge tennis tournament in Kansas City, Kansas, and Kansas City, Missouri. The ranking players from each half of the city played out the tournament on the Swope courts adjacent to the picnic site. Kansas won, four games to one. The winners were: women's singles, Gladys Conklin, Kansas; mixed doubles, Otis Swart and Vera Snell, Kansas; men's doubles, Rob Crayne and Roy Conklin, Kansas; men's singles, Paul Harrington, Kansas; women's doubles, Nora West and Eliza Glick, Missouri. Bronze medals suitably inscribed were presented to all the winners.

Basket lunches were served in family groups, and sixty gallons of lemonade disappeared during the day. There was a trip to the zoo for the kiddies and some grown-up "children."

The Stake O. B. K. Council is planning to sponsor a Latter Day Saint basket ball league during the winter season, and this fall to promote a series of young people's meetings and two classes in the November Leadership School.

In addition to stake-wide activity once a month, most of the local O. B. K. groups have planned a schedule of varied activities. The Central group has had early morning prayer meetings, swimming parties, suppers, and monthly forum discussions, led by noted speakers. The Gladstone group meets every Sunday evening at 6.30 and has had some excellent fellowship meetings. Chelsea and Fourth O. B. K.'s have the best of support from their pastors, and they materially assist in all programs.

The original group at Mount Washington is still active. They recently visited the Gladstone Group. Other group cabinets are planning activities that will be interesting and inspiring to the young people.

Central Church

The worship period of the church school session Sunday morning was well planned and executed. There followed a profitable class period and the monthly service of sacrament. The congregation gave reverential attention to those in charge and accepted with gratitude the sacramental message by S. S. Sandy.

At the evening service the Walnut Park Orchestra, directed by Orlando Nace, gave a concert. The sermon was by Bishop C. A. Skinner.

Tomorrow evening the choir will meet for its first fall rehearsal and business meeting. This group will sing for the home-coming, and so it is necessary that a full attendance be had from the first rehearsal.

Next Sunday will be College Day, at which time a special offering will be taken for the revolving scholarship fund. At least three Kansas City young people will be helped this year by this fund. The members of this stake hope to raise at least one scholarship ($125) through this offering.

Central Church women will conduct a rummage sale in November. Housewives, as they do their fall cleaning, are asked to save discarded clothes, dishes, and other articles.

Home-coming day and the fifth anniversary of our occupancy of this church home will occur Sunday, September 21. There will be a sacramental service at nine o'clock in the morning, class fellowship at 10.30, a church dinner at noon. Special services will be held in the evening.

Fourth Church

"The resurrection" was the subject of Elder J. A. Holsworth, of Independence, at the evening service August 17. He quoted Mark 16: 9, 14 and Doctrine and Covenants 85: 4. His sermon was laden with the words of Christ, admonishing his children to prepare for his second coming.

The O. B. K.'s held a beautiful little prayer service near Brush Creek under the heavy foliage of the trees in a place where little wild animals also gave a listening ear. The hour was seven o'clock in the morning, the day August 24.

At eleven o'clock that morning Elder E. W. Lloyd occupied the pulpit. His text was, "Lo, I will be with you to the end of the world," and he related many instances in which God has answered the prayers of those who love him.

In the evening Elder E. T. Atwell, of Independence, was the speaker, reading as a lesson Matthew 12: 9, 10.

The Auditorium Orchestra, of Independence, gave this congregation a fine entertainment the evening of August 31. What a joy it is to see the young people take real interest in music. The numbers by the orchestra were much appreciated.

Argentine Church

Stake Missionary H. H. Sevy was the evening speaker on a recent Sunday. His discourse was concerned with setting forth the differences between the Reorganized and the Utah Church, mention being made of smaller factions of the latter-day movement.

William Wallace Patterson, ten-pound son of Missionary and Sister William Patterson, made his advent into the world August 31 at the Central Hospital, Somerville, Massachusetts. "The prospect list," writes Brother Patterson, "is increased by one, and I hope there is an increase in Zion building material, too."

Saint Louis, Missouri

Grand Boulevard and Carter Avenue

September 4.—Elder Bruce E. Brown was in charge of the services here during the month of August. He presented some fine sermons, leading his hearers to a higher spiritual plane. One sermon, "The romance of the trial of Christ," was exceptionally good and will long be remembered by the congregation. Last Sunday's theme was, "What was restored?" Good attendance has marked these meetings.

Brother Brown is now leaving this city to care for his duties in the district. He and Sister Brown will have the prayers and good wishes of their friends in Saint Louis. He is a diligent worker among the Saints, one never too busy to care for the sick and needy.

Two babies were blessed in August.

Sister Berthema Dixon, seventy-five years of age, recently passed away.

Brother Edstrom and family are now in our midst. The branch welcomes them and hopes their stay will be both profitable and pleasant.

The Women's Department gave a dinner September 2 at the Town Club. Attendance was good, and an enjoyable time was had. The proceeds of the meal go to the branch treasury.

Two of our young women this week return to Graceland.

Sister Grace Billinsky will be back from abroad this week and is to give a talk on her experiences at the conference this Sunday at Lansdowne.

Some of the sick have received blessings, and there are others to be remembered in prayer and fasting.

A number of out-of-town visitors have been among us this summer. Always we are happy to see them, and try to make them welcome.

Sunday evening services will be resumed September 14.

Madison, Wisconsin

2119 Jackson Street

Brother Willard Hield, of Green Bay, has been in Madison during the summer, attending summer school and occasionally finding time to worship with us.

July 2 Elder and Sister Jasper O. Dutton worshiped here. This was prayer meeting night, but the time was given to Brother Dutton, who preached on the text, "We should be called the sons of God."

July 10 and 11 Apostle D. T. Williams was in Madison. One evening, he used for a text the words of Job: "Oh, that I might know where I might find Him." The other evening his text was: "The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us."

Sister Bernice Howe Churney, of Antigo, came to the Wisconsin General Hospital for a thyroidectomy operation. She got along well, and in less than two weeks after the operation returned home.

A little daughter was born to Sister Neva Brigham Kuenzi August 23.

District President Amos Berve has been preaching here Sunday evenings most of the summer. "Building" has been his subject, and for a text he has used "I will build my church." Subdivisions are named under the three "C's"—Concentration, Construction, and Consecration. This minister for Christ exerts a great effort. After preaching in other places Sunday mornings, he drives here to preach in the evening. The fore part of the week he spends visiting the Saints and conducting priesthood meetings.

Elder Leonard Houghton has, for a couple of weeks, been home from his field and has preached on Sunday morning. August 31 he will occupy the pulpit morning and evening, as Brother Berve is holding a two-day meeting with the Milwaukee Saints. Many from Madison plan to attend.

Most of the summer, Elder Henry Woodstock has occupied the pulpit on Sunday morning, delivering some very practical sermons.

MISCELLANEOUS

Pastoral

To the Branch Presidents and Saints of the Rock Island District, Greetings: Having returned from my vacation, I am now ready for work; but in a somewhat limited way, as my doctors advise that I must slow up in my activities, and observe a rest period every day. September 7 to 22 I am to conduct an institute at Moline, using as a text the Extension Course of the Centennial Institute. Following this institute, I shall be ready for work in some of the other branches, either for institute endeavor or a series of meetings, and should like to hear at once from branch presidents, who would like my services in the above connection. I should like to arrange with some branch to begin work about September 23; but would like to come at the invitation of the branch, so I am asking that branch presidents bring this matter to the attention of their congregations so that those who wish my services can notify me soon, that I may arrange my program accordingly. In the past it has been my custom to make a tour of the district during November and December to be in attendance at the annual business meetings and election of officers; but this year I am planning to attend the annual business meetings where the branch officers desire my presence, and will not attempt to attend those where my presence is not especially desired; except that I should like to be present at all annual meetings where the adoption of the New Plan for Religious Education is contemplated. Will branch presidents who desire my presence at the annual meeting please write me soon, so that I can arrange my schedule early? As Brother Higdon's sickness will keep him from the field for about two months longer, and as I will be the only General Conference appointee in the district this fall, I should like to spend my time where I can do the most good. In this, I earnestly solicit the cooperation of the branches. These are strenuous times, and we need to walk close to God. If we do so we shall have his help, and shall be able to carry on. We need to be collaborators with each other and with God if we are to accomplish the task set before us. With best wishes for the success of all the Saints, and awaiting a response from the branch officers, I remain, your servant in the Master's cause.—E. R. Davis, district president.

Special Meetings in Rock Island District

The second annual harvest thanksgiving union meeting will be held at the Buffalo Prairie church Sunday, September 14. The first meeting will be at 10.00 a. m. This will be a meeting of the church school, followed by preaching at 11 o'clock. There will be a basket lunch at noon, and at 2 p. m. there will be a prayer and testimony meeting. Will the officers of Buffalo Prairie, Joy, and Millersburg Branches kindly advertise this meeting among the scattered members of their respective branches? We trust that the Saints of Buffalo Prairie, Joy, Millersburg, Aledo, Seaton, Keithsburg, New Boston, Eliza, Illinois City, and other near-by points, will avail themselves of the opportunity of attending this special union meeting; and that the officers of Joy and Millersburg Branches will cooperate to make this meeting a success.—E. R. Davis, district president.

Special Services

Special services will be held at Norfolk, Nebraska, September 20 and 21. Apostle E. J. Gleazer will be the main speaker. Saints from outlying points are invited to attend. Services will be held in Winter Hall, on Norfolk Avenue between First and Second Streets. These are the opening services in our new hall, and good attendance is anticipated.—R. Melvin Russell.

Our Departed Ones

WHITING.—Alonzo Whiting was born in Fremont County, Iowa, near Silver Creek, March 8, 1849; died in Independence Sanitarium August 18, 1930. He married Emily Pratt, of Manti, Iowa, the marriage ceremony taking place at Clitherall, Minnesota. His companion preceded him in death four years ago. He united with the church at Silver Lake, Minnesota, June 19, 1887, being baptized by Elder J. C. Foss, and remained a faithful and ardent supporter of the church until his death. He was ordained to the office of elder July 15, 1888, and entered the mission field after the April conference of 1908, laboring in the North Dakota District from that time until the April conference in 1911, under the direction of Heman C. Smith and William H. Kelley, the apostles in charge of that field. At the April conference of 1911, he was appointed to Minnesota, laboring in the Minnesota District until the April conference of 1913, working at that time under the direction of William H. Kelley and J. W. Wight, at which time he was forced by illness in his home to retire from the mission field. He also served as president of the Union Branch at Clitherall, Minnesota, for a number of years, this being his home from 1865 until he came to Independence, Missouri, and spent the past few years in the home of his sister, Mrs. Ann Barnhard. He leaves four sons: Leo Whiting of Clitherall, Minnesota; Bert Whiting of Max, South Dakota; Benjamin Whiting of Fargo, North Dakota; Orda Whiting of Longview, Washington; two daughters; Mrs. Mabel Kelley, of Borger, Texas, and Mrs. Edna Mustar, of San Francisco, California; three sisters, Mrs. Ann Barnhard and Mrs. Curtis Robbins, of Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Lucy Rosenkranz of Clitherall, Minnesota; two brothers, Chauncey Whiting, Clitherall, Minnesota; and Lurett Whiting, his twin brother, of Independence; many other relatives, and a host of friends.

WHITE.—Ammoron Otis White was born to David C. and Anna D. White May 23, 1877, at Newton, Iowa. At Newton and Rhodes, Iowa, he lived with his parents until he was about seven years old, when the family moved to Clinton, Missouri. At Clinton and Blairstown (also in Missouri) he spent the years leading to manhood. Thirty-one years ago he moved with his father's family to Lamoni, Iowa, where he maintained his residence until his decease. September 24, 1902, he and Louise Smith, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Smith, formed a matrimonial alliance which was broken only by his passing. This union was blessed with four children, three of whom, together with the wife, survive to mourn the death of a rare father and husband. The three living children are: Rollin S., Mrs. Gertrude Walden, and Max O.; the deceased child is Marjorie Delphine, who passed away in infancy. Besides the immediate family, his father, three brothers, and six sisters live to mourn. His whole life was spent in close association with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, for he was baptized at the age of eight. As a young man he was ordained a deacon and gave many years of faithful service to the church, not only as financial deacon of Lamoni Branch, but in other capacities. In 1903 he became associated with E. H. Smith in the furniture and undertaking business, and since the death of Mr. Smith in 1910, has carried on the business. Along with his business activities and his church work, he found time to serve his community in many capacities. As a man of strong convictions and high ideals which he always upheld, he was a public servant of a high type, one who constantly worked for community betterment. His illness was prolonged, and in his battle against disease, he sought the help of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital. August 29, 1930, he passed away, leaving not only his family to mourn, but the whole community and a host of friends in many places. Interment was in Lamoni, Iowa.

A MISSIONARY JOINS THE DO-IT-NOW CLUB

Helping New Members

Missionary Goodfellow had just concluded a very successful series of evangelistic services in Fairdale. He had baptized fifteen people, and a large number of interested nonmembers were attending the services.

Now he had to leave Fairdale to go to another part of his field where he was badly needed. What could he do to help these new members in their new way of life?

After thinking it over he decided that the best thing for them would be a chance to read the Herald every week. He went out, and before he came back to his room he had made sure that each new convert would have a copy of the Herald to read every week.

The Priesthood Called to Prayer

On Tuesday, September 30, it is hoped to have members of the priesthood wherever possible hold prayer meetings to present in prayer our petitions to Deity for the general success of the church, and specifically for the missionary activities, the priesthood studies, the increase in numbers of those entering into the relations of stewards, for the success of the stewardships already established, for the financial support of the church, and for such other general and local objectives as may present themselves to the various assembled petitioners.

It is desired that all members of the priesthood, so far as they can, participate in such meetings as may be called or arranged by branch, district, or general officers.

In this connection it is well to announce that a week of prayer has been planned for January 4 to 11, 1931, and details of the organization of this movement will be sent out to general, district, and branch officers in due time.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By FREDERICK M. SMITH.

The Significance of Doing

Most applicable to us today is the admonition of David to his son, Solomon, concerning the building of the temple of the Lord: "Arise therefore, and be doing, and the Lord be with thee."

It was the dream of David's life to build a house for the God of Israel, but because he had "shed much blood upon the earth" in the sight of the Lord, he was told that he was not to perform this righteous deed. Instead his son, Solomon, should see to the erection of the building. Then David said: "Solomon my son is young and tender, and the house that is to be builded for the Lord must be exceeding magnificent, of fame and of glory throughout all countries: I will therefore now make preparation for it."

Accordingly, when Solomon became a man, he found a work awaiting him. Fine materials had been gathered together from every part of the land to go into the wondrous house. Workers and artisans had been summoned from every city to do his command. The day came when David sought his son to explain the undertaking and give him the final instruction: "Arise therefore, and be doing."

How easy it is for people to say: "Tomorrow we'll attend to that," or "Next year I am going to do this," or "Yesterday I did this piece of work," and how difficult it often seems to put action into the present tense: I am doing! All of us are guilty of earnestly declaring to a friend or even in public: "I want to do . . .," and when the opportunity for the doing arrives, of refusing for trivial reasons. It is quite a common thing in the experiences of men to talk and talk of helping, serving, doing tomorrow, next week, next year, and finally to realize that we are not doers but idlers and oftentimes un-doers of the good work of others.

All of us are Solomons. There is a work for every one, a work handed to us in faith by our fathers. There is no good excuse for idleness, which is only a polite name for laziness. The world cries for wisdom and consecration and offers a field big enough for every soul to find its highest expression in service. Are we about the building of our temples to the Lord?

Few of the people who are actually doing have the inclination, even if they had the time, to carp and criticize in hurtful vein. Few doers are knockers. They have not the time to knock, and when they see something wrong they are the ones who are willing to dedicate their lives to the adjustment of that wrong.

Zion will become a reality when we as a people appreciate the true significance of doing; when we, having faith in God and our fellow men, do all the things which God has commanded. Is it not time that each of us take to himself David's words: "Arise therefore and be doing, and the Lord be with thee"?

After Repeal—What?

Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, considered the most likely "timber" for the Democratic nomination for President in 1932, has recently declared for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and for reference to the States individually of the matter of liquor prohibition. This declaration, for whatever political reasons made, commits Mr. Roosevelt to a position—and a position which will certainly need further clarification and amplification before the voters of the Nation go to the polls.

It is not a new observation and should be readily understood that Mr. Roosevelt's present suggestion as an alternative to the Eighteenth Amendment is nothing more nor less than a return to the status existing before the amendment was passed—control and regulation of the liquor traffic through state legislative enactments. There are many States whose people will not readily consent to such a "return," whether New York State be of that number or not.

No one supposes for a moment that the Democratic party nationally will line up behind Mr. Roosevelt's repeal declaration. In fact, many are of the opinion that his national political "goose" is already "cooked" by the stand which he has taken, supposedly for strategic reasons in state politics. At any rate, if a Roosevelt-for-President campaign is ever launched, the national committee will certainly face the problem of appeasing the great numbers within the Democratic ranks who helped to ratify the Eighteenth Amendment because of the evident inadequacies of individual state control. This, to say nothing of the opposing party, nor of the many Democrats (regardless of their personal convictions) who protestingly saw their party in 1928 nominate an avowed wet and have since been saying, "I told you so."

The people of the Nation will await with interest, many members of his own party with anxiety, further indications from Mr. Roosevelt as to just what his plans, if any, are for the handling of the liquor question. If they comprise a return to the policy of a dozen years ago, and nothing more, Mr. Roosevelt's "goose" is not only cooked, but done to a turn.

Baptisms for the Month

In another column will be found the statistical report for the month of August. This report is of interest, and should be carefully read by all district and branch officers, and by the missionaries as well, as there are several facts revealed which should be evaluated.

It is evident that, while the baptisms reported indicate a steady growth in numbers, if we are to reach the figures set as a goal for the year there must be increased activities and endeavors along missionary lines.

Preaching Christ

The Christian ministry, these days, is preaching an expanded gospel. Because they wish to rescue Christianity from the impotence of a purely creedal religion, because they wish to make Christian principles of conduct significant and effective in every field of human endeavor, because they wish to help in the grave task of saving the world from some very serious and imminent threatening dangers, because they wish to preserve Christianity itself from decay, the ministers are preaching a gospel that reaches all the world and its affairs.

Many a pulpit, therefore, resounds with lectures in sociology, psychology, economics, history, literature, business, industry, and even politics. What the sermons lack in spirituality is abundantly made up in information.

Now it happens that at this very time the suspicion is creeping about that information is not enough. The church has a duty toward society, it is true, and is greatly concerned with all the affairs of the world. But the church is no mere extension of the university; it is not an arm of the court of justice, nor an adviser to legislatures.

The primary concern of the church is with individuals, with the souls of men. Its business is and always has been to reform and inspire, to regenerate, to purify and ennoble, the person, wherever he is found. Religion is concerned with clean clothes, but it is far more concerned with a clean heart. It is concerned with the feeding of the hungry population of the world, but it is far more concerned with their spiritual sustenance.

We can not regenerate the world until we reach and reclaim individuals for Christ in a very definite and personal way. Mass conversions, whether they be accomplished with the sword or with education, are not finally effective for the great things we wish to accomplish.

When Paul sent his message to the Corinthians, he sent a message to all the world, to men of all time. It is a charge to us, in attempting to preach the gospel, to remember to know and to preach Jesus Christ, the Savior of men.

"For I am determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified."—1 Corinthians 2:2.

The Aims of Labor

William Green, the dynamic personality who is President of the American Federation of Labor, makes the following striking statements in an article in the New York Times for August 31:

Whatever forces shape the life of one generation foreshadow the future.

Measuring rods of progress . . . the discovery that labor is a most important consumer . . . labor's right to an assured annual income . . . the idea of partnership in production . . . labor participation in leisure and culture . . . the development of tools to control the forces of progress.

The fundamental things in the life of wage earners are a job, security for the future, opportunities and agencies for bettering conditions and terms of work and for achieving higher standards of living.

We have had a part in creating great wealth, and therefore maintain our right to benefit in the service we render in making life freer and more comfortable.

Take these sayings for texts, and read with them some of the sayings of Jesus, and you will have material for a good sermon on Zion. How like our own doctrine it sounds!

The Cost of a Lie

It cost $125,000 to tell one kind of lie. A supreme court of a Middle Western State has awarded that amount to the victim of a slanderous lie. A great newspaper and one of its leading men were injured, and men who formerly were connected with another paper were thus justly punished.

No permanent good is ever accomplished by a lie. That cause or that character which profits most by a lie becomes corrupt and self-destructive in the end. "Nothing can need a lie," says a familiar quotation. "Count it always certain that the truth will win and the right prevail in the end," says our Business Manager.

Foot Notes for Food Faddists

Doctor Robert Hutchinson, of the British Medical Association, says:

"Fussiness about health increases fears and impairs the serenity which is the basis both of health and of happiness."

"Eat moderately, taking an ordinary mixed diet, and don't worry about anything else. . . . Likes and dislikes should be listened to; they are nature's indications of what probably agrees or disagrees."

"Fruit is not very nourishing."

"Milk is both bulky and bilious."

"Vegetarianism is harmless enough, although it is apt to fill a man with wind and self-righteousness; but it is not a mode of diet for all."

"Few diseases are caused or cured by diet alone."

The Word of Wisdom is a valuable guide, and we are safe in following the counsel of our church physician. But it is not well to confuse the teachings of these reliable authorities with the fads at which Doctor Hutchinson strikes.

United States Government Recognizes Negro Education

The Secretary of the Department of the Interior announces the appointment of Doctor Ambrose Caliver to a new post in the United States Office of Education, as a specialist in Negro education. Doctor Caliver is a man of wide experience in education and is the first of his race to complete the requirements for the Ph. D. degree in the field of College Administration.

The announcement from the Secretary of the Interior says regarding the office:

Its specific and immediate function is to serve as a clearing house of information concerning Negro education; to conduct, direct, and encourage educational research; to stimulate interest in the present status and future possibilities of Negro education; and to assist in coordinating the various researches, activities, and interests of Negro schools and of persons concerned in Negro education and related matters.

It is a fine thing to see the Government taking a greater interest in this large group of citizens whose educations have not heretofore received the attention they should have.

Perhaps when the Government has educated the colored citizens, it can tell the white citizens what to do with the educations they have received.

Fearless and friendly men we Christians ought to be, telling mankind about a world in which a heroic man named Jesus has lived and still lives; a world that, to be sure, often persecutes those who try to follow Jesus, but one in which men of Jesus' type are invulnerable and always coming back after they are supposedly dead and buried to carry on the spirit more fearlessly and with a friendliness more unconquerable than before. Unless this be our gospel, what have we to preach, and what manner of lives shall we live?—Dwight Bradley, in The Christian Century.

Statistician's Report

The regular report of the Department of Statistics for the month of August is as follows:

Net enrollment of the church as of August 1, 1930	108,079
August baptisms	345
Transfers from the unknown	18
Gains by correction	2
Total gain	365
Deaths regularly reported	77
Deaths on the Disorg. File
Assumed because of age	220
Expulsions	17
Losses by correction	5
Total loss	319
Net gain during the month	46

Net enrollment of the church as of September 1, 1930	108,125
--	---------

In addition to the above, the following number of miscellaneous reports were received during the month:

Transfers	476
Blessings	130
Marriages	112
Ordinations	32
Divorces	8
Corrections of name	4
Silence	1

The total of 345 baptisms reported during the month of August brings the grand total for the first eight months of the year 1930 to 2,970. Inasmuch as our objective for the year has been set at 6,000, this means that the church has achieved 49.5 per cent of this objective or only 30 baptisms less than 50 per cent. Based upon averages for the past ten years we should have achieved 65.4 per cent by the end of August. The church is therefore 15.9 points behind what it ought to be at this time of the year.

This suggests to us that the missionaries and priesthood of the church will need to greatly increase their efforts during the next few months if we are to even approximate our goal or come anywhere near the record set last year. An increased emphasis will need to be laid on the missionary program of the church and especial attention paid to the activities of Rally Day, September 28, and Decision Day, October 26. If these activities are properly organized by the missionaries, district presidents, pastors, and local priesthood, a large number of converts will result.

One of the reasons for this past month being relatively low in the number of baptisms lies in the fact that many of the important reunions of the country, which have in the past resulted in a considerable number of baptisms, were canceled and the missionary opportunities contained therein were therefore allowed to go by. Analysis of the baptisms for the month shows that nearly all of the reunions that were held resulted in new members.

The total of 345 baptisms for the month was distributed as follows:

Zion and the Stakes	45 baptisms
United States and Canada outside the Stakes	287 baptisms
British Isles Mission	8 baptisms
Society Islands Mission	5 baptisms
GRAND TOTAL	345 baptisms

In the United States and Canada outside the stakes, the branches and district nonresident groups having five or more baptisms were the following:

Lone Star, Alabama	15 baptisms
Council Bluffs, Iowa	12 baptisms
Rich Hill, Missouri	12 baptisms
Holdenville, Oklahoma	9 baptisms
Kirtland, Ohio	9 baptisms
Idaho nonresident	8 baptisms
Dayton, Ohio	7 baptisms
Hagerman, Idaho	7 baptisms
Kalamazoo, Michigan	7 baptisms
Onaway, Michigan	7 baptisms
Decatur, Nebraska	5 baptisms
Deer Lodge, Montana	5 baptisms
Flint, Michigan	5 baptisms
Jonesport, Maine	5 baptisms
South Boardman, Michigan	5 baptisms
Toronto, Ontario	5 baptisms

In addition to the above, 6 branches and 2 nonresident groups reported four baptisms each; 13 branches and 1 nonresident group reported three baptisms each; 16 branches and 2 nonresident groups reported two baptisms each, and 44 branches and 10 nonresident groups reported one baptism each.

This makes a grand total of 110 different branches and nonresident groups well scattered throughout the country, outside the stakes, which reported baptisms during the past month. This is an encouraging sign, inasmuch as it shows that the missionary spirit continues to be well diffused throughout the church.

The Alabama District was outstanding in the number of baptisms reported during August with a total of 22 baptisms. Fifteen of these were performed at Evergreen, Alabama, by W. J. Williamson on August 7. Three were baptized at McKenzie by Glenn Davis on August 24, 3 at Owassa by T. W. Peacock on July 15, and 1 at Brewton on August 6 by E. N. McCall.

The Alabama District was also the first district or stake in the United States and Canada to achieve its full quota. The objective was set at 45, and this past month's reports bring the grand total for the year to 45 baptisms, making them exactly 100 per cent. The priesthood and missionaries of the Alabama District are to be congratulated on this achievement.

Mention should also be made of the fact that the Hawaiian Mission has also achieved its objective and gone over the top. With an objective of 30, they have thus far reported 32 baptisms for the year, making their standing 107 per cent. Several other districts have achieved over three fourths of their objective, and it is hoped that by the end of September there will be others who have gone over the top.

The Idaho District also did well during the past month, with a total of 17 baptisms. Eleven of these were performed at the reunion at Hagerman, Idaho, on August 23 by Missionary O. W. Okerlind. Three others were performed by him at Payette, Idaho, on the 29th of July. Elder J. Arthur Davis baptized 3 at Raymond, Idaho, on July 27. This brings the grand total for the year to 38, which makes the Idaho District 84 per cent of its yearly objective of 45 baptisms.

The Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District ranks third for the month, with 16 baptisms. Five of these were performed at the Indian Lake reunion on July 31 and August 3. The rest of the baptisms were performed at six different places in the district, showing that many of the branches in this district are giving evidence of the missionary spirit.

The Southwestern Iowa District came into the honorable mention column this past month due to the missionary efforts of L. G. Holloway at Council Bluffs. On August 3 and 10 he baptized 14 souls into the kingdom, 12 of whom were enrolled with the Council Bluffs Branch and 2 with the Glenwood Branch. We are hoping that the missionary spirit will continue in this district and that they will achieve their objective for the year.

It will be observed that the net enrollment of the church continues to be above the 108,000 mark, in spite of the fact that we have been obliged to check off a considerable number of names from the Disorganized File in cases where death must be assumed because of the extreme age indicated and because of the fact that nothing has been heard of these individuals for many years.

Fraternally yours,

THE DEPARTMENT OF STATISTICS,

By CARROLL L. OLSON.

The Man Who Proved God

By R. W. F.

Once in the history of the Reorganized Church lived a young man who "went down to the sea in ships." He was desperately poor. In time of winter and fierce storms, snow sifted through the roof of his garret chamber and onto the bed where he sought to keep warm by covering his head with the thick muffler.

To this home came a minister of the Reorganized Church. He spoke of purity of life, of repentance, of the Powerful God—the White God. This young man, accustomed to a life of sin and hardship and sailor's yarns, clean and unclean, agnostic and God-defying, listened to the message of the missionary. He was impressed by its arresting call; its promise of power; of the better life, socially, morally, industrially. With repentance and baptism accomplished, he began the consistent life of tithe paying—first a few pennies only. But the payment of those few pennies seemed to bring back dollars; and the payment of dollars brought back hundreds of dollars. It seemed like an investment; but it was an investment in spiritual welfare as well as industrial; for the light of the Spirit increased and the richness of life enlarged.

After the passage of a few years, the vessel which at first was rented was owned, and its valuation was $17,000. A bank account, increasing in value, appeared. In those days the fuller phase of tithe paying, that of the surplus, was unknown, or untaught. But the offering was not neglected. Other members of the branch caught the spirit of tithe paying, and they, too, prospered. They had entered partnership with a divine law, the law of faith in God and his promises, the law of copartnership with Deity.

Are there not thousands of readers of this account of the man who proved God, who, too, can look back to the days of prosperity when they "proved God" and found him true to his word? "Bring ye your tithes into my storehouse, and prove me, saith God!"

Health in the Home

By Myrtle Grapes, R. N.

Lesson Three

HYGIENIC HOUSEKEEPING

"Dirt"

We wish that we might write this lesson in letters of fire, "Cleanliness in the home." Some homes are such beautiful examples of this form of "godliness" or goodness that they are a joy to all who enter. There are homes of the variety called painfully clean, where the home maker is more concerned with the things of her domain than with the comfort and happiness of her loved ones. This home is as unwholesome as the dirty, filthy house. It can not be a good home and at the same time be a dirty home. Or shall we express it positively, The good home is always a clean home. Floors, walls, ceilings, furnishings, dishes, the family clothing and bedding must be clean. They can be of simple, inexpensive design and material, but if they are clean they possess a loveliness that the most costly and exquisite furnishings do not possess when covered with dirt and filth and arranged in a disorderly manner. Along with all the many other accomplishments, the good home maker must be more or less of an artist.

In the last lesson we endeavored to show the importance of ventilation, and there can be no effective ventilation when every movement of the air serves to scatter dust from surfaces into the air. When the dust becomes a part of the air, some member of your family is going to breathe it. Dust may seem a harmless thing, but it contains dangerous bacteria discharged from the bodies of people, all kinds of people.

Cleanliness is one of the strongest supporters of health, affecting both the mental and physical health of your precious flock. Dirt is always offensive to the decent individual. All his senses—sight, smell, touch, and taste—shrink from filth and dirt. Dirt has a depressing effect on the mind, therefore inhibiting its powers. Dirt means lack of comfort, decency, and self-respect.

Absence of dirt is the keynote for the prevention of disease, and disease's ugly twin sister, poverty. The man who leaves a clean, cheery home with a clean body, clean clothing, and clean, happy thoughts will do a much better day's work than the one who leaves a slovenly home, a scolding wife, fretful children, dressed in soiled clothing and yesterday's grime of toil still staining his body. There is something about being clean and decently dressed that makes any self-respecting man (or woman) square back his shoulders and look with courage on the world and its battles. It is the home maker's duty thus to send forth the provider for that home. This should not be made a drudgery, for home making is an art. Even the art of cleaning can be made less of drudgery if we do it in an intelligent manner and have a vision of what it may mean—educations for the children, travel, culture, and improved living conditions in general, because cleanliness makes for health, and health makes for greater earning powers. The average mother must not only do her own cleaning, for most homes do not support a maid, but she must teach habits of cleanliness to every member of her flock.

One of the greatest dangers of dust and dirt is that it has a constant tendency to settle in dark, damp, warm, and out-of-way places and therefore is overlooked. Then, too, germs also grow in this same sort of place—where it is dark, warm, damp, and dirty. Mother nurse, look to the out-of-the-way corners under sinks, closets, basements, etc. To sum up this important question, we would say there are four important reasons why the removal of dirt is necessary: (1) it endangers health, (2) it causes irritation of the mucuous membranes of the nose, throat, and eyes, (3) it has a depressing effect on the mind, (4) and it spreads diseases.

Remember, mother nurse, that the removal of dirt does not mean stirring it up and scattering it from place to place; better to leave it alone if you do not remove it. Dirt is removed from the home by washing, sweeping, and dusting. Too much can not be said for the health-promoting properties of good, old-fashioned hot soap suds. Soap kills germs. Soap loosens dirt, so it can be removed because of its chemical composition. Soap is made from a combination of alkali and fats. We would digress to say here that she is indeed a wise woman who invests in a pair of rubber gloves and a good hand lotion to protect her hands when she does her rougher work. Chapped hands and broken finger nails and dirt incrustrated under the finger nails are dangerous to health. The small cracks thus made in the skin are openings for the entrance of disease germs into your body. The dirt under finger nails has often been examined under the microscope in laboratories and contains a dangerous content of bacteria. Besides, as one famous authority on health maintains, if we are "100 per cent healthy" we possess "the greatest possible beauty." Rough, red hands never make for beauty.

Some simple rules for dusting are as follows: (1) Dust after sweeping, not before. (2) Use a clean duster. (3) Use a damp, not a wet cloth.

(4) Dust with a firm, even stroke, never around and around. (5) Do finished work. Use dry duster to polish furniture. (6) Go well into the corners.

Board floors with large cracks are a source of disease. In laying linoleum it should fit true to the wall in order that no dirt can work under and become a breeding place for germs. Painted walls are more sanitary than those papered with wall-paper. If paper is used, it must all be scraped from walls before fresh paper is applied. Covering dirty paper is poor and unsanitary housekeeping.

Ice boxes and food cupboards must be washed at least once a week with hot soap suds, and aired, but the care of food is a whole lesson in itself that perhaps we may reach some day.

The family laundry may be done by the mother or by a reliable laundry or individual washer woman, but all household linen should be snowy white and clothing of family spotlessly clean. Speaking of "spotlessly clean" brings us to the point of removing most common spots and stains.

(1) Blotting paper, dry starch, and corn meal to remove grease spots. Dissolve grease with hot flat iron and then quickly apply one of these agents.

(2) Sunlight, borax, ammonia, and hydrogen of peroxide are excellent bleaching agents. Sunlight on dampened linen will remove scorch stains.

(3) Blood stains are removed by soaping first in cold water, then washing in hot soap suds. Hydrogen of peroxide also removes blood stains. A paste of starch and then sunshine removes old blood stains.

(4) Coffee stains can usually be removed by pouring hot water from a distance.

(5) Ink stains can often be removed by moistening with lemon juice and salt and then laying in the sunshine.

(6) Soak olive oil and vaseline stains in kerosene or turpentine.

(7) Cocoa and chocolate stains: wash first in cold water, then hot.

(8) Tea stains are soaked in glycerine, then washed with hot water.

(9) Rust can often be removed with lemon juice, salt, and sunshine.

(10) Medicine stains are best removed by soaking in alcohol.

(11) Butter and sunshine will remove grass stains.

There are many others, but lack of space in these lessons prohibits giving them.

In our next lesson we will discuss "Plumbing and some of its health hazards."

Living for the Great Vision

By Bishop Mark H. Siegfried

One hundred years ago, when God ordered the Restoration among men, he did not do it through the masses of people representing the Christian churches of that day. He dropped the germ into the mind of an individual and sent him out to lead a great upward movement among men. A new epoch in religious history was begun, and the thoughts and habits of the man-becoming character moved on to secure a new social progress which has swept its influence into every corner of the nation and many other parts of the world.

No man, scholar or historian, can definitely forecast the accomplishments and institutions of the coming century; because no man can tell what great idea God may some day drop into the soul of a great leader ordained to carry it to the waiting millions.

However, we sometimes wonder. Have we come to believe, "It is safer to trust fear than faith"? Has our age lost faith in God? Have doubt and skepticism, and infidelity both to man and God, burned to a brown crisp the once golden, waving harvests of wheat rich in the proteins of faith?

No. Men are weary in the midst of wealth and pleasure for the same reason that the rich young ruler was sad in the midst of his possessions. He could not continue as he had lived, because he had a new thought.

Our own people have seen the splendid vision but today halt undecided, because they are yet unwilling to go on and fulfill the new ideals.

For those who have eyes to see, Jesus still stands in the streets and in the market places. In this generation he gives society a new vision of the earth as a potential paradise where none may have too much and none want. The Saints of a hundred years ago were happy and willing to do everything; and their deeds kept pace with what their vision revealed. We are unhappy because we have not done what we know we should do. This vision of individual excellence will continue to haunt us until performance shall have overtaken our ideals. Then will it be God's opportunity to burst the emerald gates and bring forth new ideals and new goals. Our duty is to redeem Zion now.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Forward, Religious Education

By C. B. Woodstock

The weeks centering about the first of October are rich in possibilities for religious educational development. Public schools are opening in September, and the college campus welcomes the youth of the land to its halls of learning. Everywhere there is the challenge of education. Even those who must work, but who yet have the spirit of youth, seek supplementary training in night schools or by correspondence.

Rally Day

With the call of the public school and the college, comes also the call of the church and its facilities for religious education. Rally Day has been urged throughout the church, not only as affecting the Sunday morning session of the church school, but as affecting all its services and all its members, and all to whom its services should reach. Local departments of religious education will seek most earnestly to cooperate with the priesthood and other branch authorities through the month of September to stimulate attendance at all services of the church and to help make those services as widely productive of good as possible.

Especial emphasis by the united forces of the branch should bring the rally spirit to a climax on Rally Day, September 28. This day should see the church and its congregation at its best. The home visiting, the church school solicitation, the check-up of the membership by branch officials, the toning up of the church building for the new year's work, the concerted planning of those in charge of services, the joyous spirit of good fellowship and communion, the deep feeling of reverence and worship which has been cultivated, all should contribute to a day of service fitting to the occasion.

Promotion

It happens that September 28 is also the time, in most places that promotion will take place within the church school. It will be a fitting time to close the work of the year's classes, to recognize special worthy attainment, and to promote students who have completed the work of a lower department, to the one next higher. This will facilitate the grading of the school and help to standardize class work.

The New Church School Year

The new year for the church school will open on October 5. A previous suggestion that branch officers of the department of religious education be elected in September seems ill-advised, since we find it is customary in most branches to hold an annual election of all officers near the beginning of the calendar year. But teachers will have been chosen for the new year, classes will be reorganized, new quarterlies will be on hand, and the school should start out with all the advantages gained and carried over from the rally spirit of September. There should be no occasion for a lowering of the standard. Classes well organized, with teachers alert and with fresh subject matter for discussion and new adventures to be shared, the work of the church school should gain impetus with the passing of the weeks.

We are much concerned, too, with the development of week-day and week-night activities, planned and carried out under the direction of the local church school as a part of the program of religious education. Boys' group and girls' group meetings, parents' classes, women's work groups, classes for the priesthood, socials, recreational evenings, parties and picnics, as well as the regular worship and prayer services, all are necessary and may be organized and directed to serve most worthy and desirable ends in the constructive work of the branch.

And still more are we concerned that our effort shall effectively supplement and build into the larger interests and ministry of the members of the priesthood, who are specially called and commissioned to watch over, nourish, and feed the flock. However efficiently planned and conducted otherwise, if our religious education program fails to lead the youth to the church and help them to get inspiration, comfort, hope, and courage from its services, our program to that extent is a failure.

Decision Day, October 26

We may even look ahead to the last Sunday in October, set by the church as one of two annual decision days. The other is in June. Definite plans will be announced and discussed to help make this another memorable day in the church when many more, young and old, shall be encouraged not only to make the decision to obey the gospel in its initiatory rights but to join with us in a growing comprehension of its truth and in an application to daily living which will demonstrate to the world the eternal principles contained in the message of Christ. Our work is distinctly missionary.

A World Rally

And we are not alone in this emphasis upon religious education. The forty-two denominations represented in the International Council have set aside the week, September 28 to October 5, as Religious Education Week, an interdenominational rallying of the forces calculated to build Christian character and Christian citizenship. In a special way do we share, with other Christian churches, the earnest desire that our religious education program shall be effective.

We quote from the opening paragraph in a pamphlet put out by the council:

"The purpose of an observance of Religious Education Week is to point directly and specifically to the need for religious education in the community, and to challenge each local church with a sense of its responsibility both for bringing to those who are enrolled in its organizations a more worthy program of religious education and for reaching the unchurched children, young people, and adults in the neighborhood. The tremendous demands which modern civilization is making upon manhood and womanhood require a steadfast purpose and courage through every day of living. It is the conviction of an increasing number of statesmen and business leaders as well as of men in religious vocations that this purpose and courage can come most surely through religious education. It is imperative, therefore, that more earnest effort be put upon this task of the church."

The demands of the Restoration Movement for growth and progress in our day can be met only as we consistently organize our forces and move out under the divine influence and blessing of the Spirit of God, to the accomplishment of our tasks.

Religious Education must move forward!

What Quarterly Shall We Study?

Few people realize the extent of study materials prepared by the Department of Religious Education and carried in stock by the Herald Publishing House. A recent check discloses the fact that we now have thirty distinct courses, most of them running for four quarters, a total of 106 separate quarterlies and nine textbooks. These begin with the Nursery and continue in a consecutive series of informational and enrichment studies up to the adult years, where there are two timely, freshly written quarterlies for this year, and nine supplementary studies written in recent years but available for those who have not used them.

Surely this is not a dearth of materials! It should provide a range suited to the needs of all. No class should be permitted to wander aimlessly for weeks, months, and years, as some classes are wont to do, with no set goal, no measure of advancement, and no guide or lesson helps. The quarterly lessons are studiously, prayerfully prepared and made ready as source books for the use of teachers and students. Every member of the school should have a quarterly for personal study and should keep it for constant use.

The Church School Curriculum Guide

A comprehensive guide to the use of our study materials has been prepared and is being mailed out to all Sunday school superintendents and directors of religious education. These may be had on request from the Herald Publishing House.

Rally Day in the Children's Division

By Myrtle A. Weber

"What shall be the nature of the program for Rally Day in the children's division?" some one is asking. "Shall we plan elaborate, showy numbers for the day's program? Where shall we get our material?"

Rightly, and wisely, too, Rally Day has been set at the close of a season of vacations and the opening of a season of work. It is an opportunity to "rally" back the church school workers and the children, to reunite their efforts, to revive their interests, to rouse their enthusiasm, to renew their pledges of loyalty.

Rally Day a Missionary Effort

Thinking of Rally Day in the broadest sense of the term, is it not missionary in nature? The very spirit of Rally Day is peculiarly missionary. Do we not stress that each one be present and on time and bring at least one other with him? Rally Day affords a particular opportunity for everyone to participate in the missionary program of the church. Our missionary program, our program of personal evangelism, should be in order the whole year through. However, at definite stated times we have our endeavors eventuate in some special day. In this particular season of the year we set Rally Day as a climax of our effort.

With these few points in mind let us turn our attention to the question in hand. What shall be our program for Rally Day? Our Rally Day program shall start not with the opening exercises of the church school on September 28 but at least a whole week before.

Preparing for Rally Day

As a teacher in the children's division, plan your lesson with especial care for this Sunday so that you can enter into your teaching with vigor. Visit the home of every pupil during the week. Even though your children are in the habit of attending regularly, they will appreciate your visiting with them. Visit not only the members of your own class but those children in your neighborhood who are the same age as those you teach. Invite them to go with you to Sunday school on Sunday. You or some dependable child from your class should call for the invited ones. Encourage your children to invite their friends and playmates; not only to invite them but to call for them on Sunday and bring their friends with them. Be sure that all names of prospective pupils are turned over to your superintendent.

As a superintendent of the children's division see that every child is sent a special Rally Day invitation card. Cards should also be sent to all the children whose names are turned in by the teachers or pupils. Be very particular in the planning of your program for Rally Day. It need not be elaborate, nor need it deviate much from the general plan; only be sure that it is well thought out, interesting, and that it provides for one or two novel features.

In general, we would suggest that the Sunday school program for Rally Day be much the same as for other Sundays except that special effort be made to have it particularly interesting and stimulating, so that the children will want to return Sunday after Sunday.

THE DO-IT-NOW CLUB INDORSES COMMUNICATION

John says:

Last night Mary called our little boy, Willie, to get some butter for supper. Mary can be heard four blocks away when she is calling Willie. But Willie was six blocks away. We ate supper without butter. And after supper I had a little talk with Willie about communication.

The first requisite in an effective organization is communication. An army without communication would soon be destroyed. A business without communication would soon fail.

The welfare of the church depends on regular and dependable communication between the officials and the people.

REUNION NEWS

Kirtland Reunion

By P. E. Farrow

At the start, the prospects for Kirtland reunion were not as promising as in other years, but each obstacle seemed to be in turn successfully met and overcome, until at the close all were able to rejoice that obligations were taken care of. Blessings also had been enjoyed, an evidence that the Lord remembered his people.

The beautiful Temple, nearly one hundred years of age, gives to those who gather an inspiration that no other place in the church affords, unless it is the new Auditorium. Yet Kirtland has sentimental values that as yet have not been attached to the Auditorium. Because of this, there are always visitors from distant points. Besides those coming from the associated districts of the reunion, there were in attendance Saints from New York City, Chicago, Independence, Florida, Rhode Island, Michigan, and Ontario, Canada.

Reports from the classes and various phases of church school show a fine interest in educational work. One of these reports above the name of AuVergne Proper is a splendid sample of the work accomplished. For a number of years Sister Proper has supervised very successfully the kindergarten or beginners' class. The report is as follows:

"The kindergarten this year had an attendance ranging from twenty-five to thirty-five children between the ages of four and eight years.

"The theme "Our friends" was carried through each day's work. Saturday the children were led to look upon "play-mates as friends." Monday a trip was taken to a near-by farm to visit the farmer and to learn to know him as "a friend." Wednesday a near-by grocery store was visited to meet "Our friend, the storekeeper." Thursday we considered the need of the telephone and a trip was made to the exchange to learn the work of the girls in the office and to know them as 'friends.' Friday the value of Mother and Father as 'friends' was discussed, and a gift made to give to them. We closed the theme with a lesson on "God as our Best Friend." Each day handwork was done to fit in with the theme."

Other special activities of the reunion that were not mentioned in our previous article might be noted here with interest.

On Wednesday evening, August 20, a Graceland program was given by students and alumni of the college. Following this program, the evening was given over to stunts and outdoor sports, on the well-lighted lawn of the Temple grounds. Brother Jaques, of New York City, supervised this stunt program and succeeded in making everyone laugh to the limit of his lung capacity.

On Friday evening, a community service was arranged. Mr. Herrington, principal of the Kirtland High School, secured for us the Reverend Warren, of the Painsville Congregational Church, who gave an interesting talk on "Friendship," using for his text, "Then are ye my friends when ye do whatsoever I command you."

Saturday evening at 6.45 a vesper service was held in the Temple. At eight o'clock a program displaying some very fine Latter Day Saint talent, local and visiting, was given in the new high school auditorium.

Sunday, August 24, the last day of the reunion, was not promising from the standpoint of weather during the morning hours. This, however, did not seem to discourage people from coming, and a large attendance was had. By noon the rain had ceased, and a profitable day was spent in worshipping our Maker.

Two prayer services were held at 8.30 in the morning. The young people met in the upper auditorium, as they have been doing for a number of years, for the last young people's meeting. The gifts of the Spirit were manifested in this meeting, and about three hundred young people were given a special blessing. At the same time, a fine service was had in the lower auditorium, under the leadership of the reunion presidency.

At eleven o'clock Bishop J. A. Becker preached, Apostle Ellis at 2.30 in the afternoon, and John R. Grice preached at 7.45 in the evening, this being the closing service of the reunion.

Northern Michigan Reunion

By Mrs. Ada Allread

The ten-day reunion at the Park of the Pines, Boyne City, Michigan, came to a close Sunday, August 24. The reunion this year was highly successful in every way. The weather was perfect for camping, and between two or three hundred people camped on the grounds near Lake Charlevoix.

Prayer meeting at ten o'clock Friday was the opening service. This was followed by the organization meeting with Elder Allen Schreur, district officer, in charge. The following officers were elected: Apostle D. T. Williams was given charge of the program of reunion work with power to choose his helpers. Elder Marshall McGuire was given charge of the auditorium. The reception committee consisted of Allen Schreur, E. N. Burt, Nina Harper, Hector McKinnon, and Elder Ledsworth. Mrs. Sarah Schreur was chosen to appoint the four leaders of the groups for working in the dining hall. Police of the grounds, Brother Watts. Editor of the Camp Paper, Etta Wilson. The same reunion committee was retained: Dirk Schreur, Allen Schreur, Alvin Ellis, J. E. Bennett, Richard Hartnell, and Arthur Starks. The treasurer of the reunion committee reported $283.41 resources and $232.79, disbursements, leaving a balance on hand of $50.62. Pledges amounting to $200 were taken to pay the balance on the reunion grounds. Ada Allread was retained as secretary.

Three young people's meetings were held on the lake shore early in the morning. The meetings were of a high spiritual order. Particularly uplifting was the close of the meetings when the young people walked from the lake shore into the prayer meeting of the older folks, singing as they marched and bringing a fine spirit into the meeting.

The reunion sermons were given by Elder Williams, Elder Burt, Elder Koehler, and Elder Doty. Their instructions help us to build greater Christian characters.

Elder Peterson from the Central Michigan District led in the prayer meetings.

Class work was conducted during the mornings. Elder Williams held excellent classes on "Family evangelism" each morning. Bishop Koehler conducted instructive classes on "Stewardship," and Elder E. E. Closson on "Recreation and expression."

There were camp-fire programs nearly every night after the regular evening service. Readings, songs, corn roasts, etc., were enjoyed around the camp fire.

Ten people were baptized into the church, three adults and seven children.

The camp enjoyed two plays under the leadership of Miss Madeline DeVoss, of Grand Rapids, who has taken dramatic work and has much ability along that line. We greatly appreciate her services.

We are indebted to Miss Louise Evans, of Grand Rapids, again this year for vocal music. And we wish to mention the soloists who not only entertained us, but also added much to the religious spirit of the meetings by their songs, Miss Edith DeVoss, of Grand Rapids; Elder Koehler, of Independence; Elder Pitt and his wife, and Elder Arthur Oakman, who assisted throughout the meetings. We appreciate greatly the services of Elder Byron Doty, who again this year had charge of the orchestra and band. The contributions of this group supplied inspiration to the opening of the sermons.

In all, we feel that the 1930 reunion was one of the best reunions ever held at the Park of the Pines.

Eastern Michigan Reunion

By H. E. C. Muir

The reunion of Eastern Michigan District was held at Cash, Michigan, from August 24 to 31, and proved a most successful gathering. Attendance was good throughout the eight days. August 31, Sunday, over six hundred people were present, there being one hundred and fifty automobiles on the grounds. This number did not much exceed that of the first or opening Sunday.

Through the untiring efforts of the reunion committee and the loyal support of the members of the district, we were able to make this, the first reunion in several years, a real event. The committee gave due consideration to the general business and financial depression, and curtailed expenses wherever possible not to interfere with the success of the reunion. A great contribution was made by Cash Saints, who opened their homes to care for visiting members, assisted in preparing grounds, church buildings, and the reunion setting. A good, well-kept grove of large trees on the farm of Brother Dukirk adjoining the church at Cash, made it possible to arrange seating and pulpit conveniences for open-air services part of the time throughout the reunion period. These services, according to the custom of the past, assumed the air of "camp meetings," the church building being used when it was advisable.

Weather conditions were ideal each day, and saved us the expense of renting an auditorium tent.

Several members camped on the grounds the entire time. The committee had tents erected for the convenience of all. A refreshment stand was maintained to provide for the travelers' appetites.

Cash, Michigan, is located in the central part of the district, and this made it possible for all members to drive to and from reunion each day. Because of this it was found convenient to adopt the basket dinner method of sharing meals, and so avoid the expense of maintaining a dining tent and accessory facilities.

District talent was pressed into service and made the meetings attractive. Because we found people in our midst who are musically capable, we were spared the expense of obtaining outside assistance, and the opportunity to give of their talents greatly encouraged our young men and women.

A prayer and testimony service was held every morning at nine o'clock. These proved of high spiritual order, and much of God's power was felt. A remarkable testimony was given by Patriarch J. J. Bailey, eighty-five years of age, telling of the divinity of the latter-day work, and at the close of the meeting this brother pronounced a father's blessing on the assembly.

Powerful and instructive sermons were preached by District Missionary C. E. Harpe, of Lamoni; A. C. Barmore, pastor at Port Huron; G. T. Richards, missionary to Kansas City Stake; Blakesley Smith, Detroit; W. M. Grice, missionary to Ohio; Myron Carr, district president; W. H. Sheffer, E. Deam, H. Swoeffer, and others. V. D. Schaar, of Lake Orion, rendered valuable service in institute work during the first part of the reunion.

Sister Harold Muir contributed much in the way of conducting class work throughout the entire reunion, having under her supervision all those ranging in age from three to twenty-five years. Efficient class work was done by the following: Elder Herbert Swoeffer, young men and boys; Sister Herbert Swoeffer, girls eight to twelve; Sister Charles Schriviner, young women; Sister Harold Muir, all children from three to eight years old age. These classes were conducted in the forenoons, and many wise provisions were included in the methods pursued. Sister C. C. Whitford, of Port Huron, conducted a class in music every afternoon with gratifying results. Recreation every afternoon was in charge of Ernest Deam and H. Swoeffer.

Friday evening, August 29, a pleasing program was given by the young people. Readings, vocal and instrumental music, talks, and the origin and display of the Christian flag were features. At the close of the hour the Saints went to the grove where a marshmallow toast and games were enjoyed before they bade each other good night.

Sister Millie Mitchell, district historian, was on the grounds with her notebook, getting all the facts and data valuable for a record of the Eastern Michigan District. Sister Mitchell is alert to her duties along this line.

In the afternoons the time was divided into periods of class work, sermons, and recreation. Missionary C. E. Harpe, who has had considerable experience in reunion work, was on the grounds the entire period and contributed much in putting into operation the activities which greatly benefited the members.

A business meeting was held Friday evening, August 29, to determine the wishes of the district concerning reunion activities another year.

A standing vote was called to decide the question of a 1931 reunion, and approval of the issue was unanimous. The reunion committee is composed of Myron Carr, chairman; H. E. C. Muir, secretary; C. E. Harpe, T. R. Isles, Albert Dukirk. These men were sustained by unanimous vote and will continue to work in the interest of the reunion for Eastern Michigan District. Already the committee is giving attention to some problems to be worked out in an endeavor to broaden the scope of the coming one, that more territory may be benefited by the gathering.

It will interest Herald readers to know that the district voted, June 28, 1930, to hold a reunion this season. The date was set and committee members were appointed. The committee started the work without one cent in the treasury, carefully arranging plans and working them out. The expenses of the reunion were promptly met, there being four collections taken and some donations received from the branches. The close of the reunion finds a neat sum in the treasury with which to begin work for next year.

C. C. Whitford was in charge of tent facilities and rendered a very helpful service. He was on the grounds constantly and did much for the welfare of others.

The reunion closed, leaving a feeling of satisfaction in the bosoms of all who attended. It brought joy and gladness into our hearts, and the prevailing spirit was one which lifted us to a higher plane of thinking and living. It increased our faith in ourselves, our district, the church, and the angel's message.

Visitors Help in British Reunion

By Emily Horton

The July reunion of Midland District, British Isles Mission, was held July 19 and 20 at Priestley Road, Birmingham. The presence of President F. M. McDowell, Apostle Paul M. Hanson, and Apostle F. Henry Edwards gave the assembly much pleasure, which was increased on hearing the fine sermons of Brother McDowell.

The reunion was opened by District President J. Holmes, who gave expression to words of greeting to the Saints gathered together. President McDowell was then introduced by Apostle Hanson, and gave some helpful information on the general church program.

Sunday began with a baptismal service, which was followed by a spiritually joyful time of prayer. Then President McDowell again addressed the congregation. After dinner he gave a lecture which developed, as was intended, into a round table discussion. Some interesting points were raised and satisfactorily settled by the leader.

Sunday evening, after being introduced to newcomers by

President McDowell and Apostle Hanson Visit Norway

By V. D. Ruch

A happy occasion for the Saints of Norway was experienced recently when President F. M. McDowell and Apostle P. M. Hanson visited this mission. These leading church officials arrived at Oslo, the capital city of Norway, from England, on Saturday morning, August 9, where they were met by the writer, who accompanied them to the little town of Bøn that afternoon.

Owing to Brother McDowell's time being limited, these brothers could spend only about five days in Norway, so we decided to divide the time between Bøn and Porsgrund, and use them just as much as we possibly could the short time they were to be with us.

Our first meeting was held on Saturday night in the newly painted little church at Bøn. This was a combination meeting consisting of a program, talks, and refreshments. After the opening exercises, President McDowell was introduced and spoke for about thirty minutes, bringing to us the greetings of the church in America as well as some good food for thought. This was his first experience in speaking through an interpreter, but with a few exceptions when he was bubbling over with enthusiasm and found it difficult to stop long enough to give the interpreter a chance, he did exceptionally well. His comment later was: "I'd like to see John Garver trying to speak through an interpreter. I'll bet he would forget all about the interpreter and go right on through with his sermon."

He was followed by Apostle Hanson, who several times before has visited this mission, and who was a welcome visitor among us. Brother Hanson has visited some thirty or more foreign countries and has spoken through a great number of interpreters in his life, so that experience was not new to him. He brought a message filled with encouragement and admonition. The Saints appreciated the kindly greetings and the messages these brothers from Zion brought.

The girls' society, of which Sister Ruch is leader, followed with a splendid program, after which refreshments were served.

On Sunday four meetings were held as follows: Sunday school at ten o'clock, sacramental service at 11.30, and preaching services at four o'clock and eight o'clock. These meetings were all of high order and characterized by the presence of God's Spirit. Brother Hanson made the opening remarks at the sacrament service and later bore a strong testimony of the truth of this latter-day work. Brother McDowell preached at four o'clock. In the evening the brothers divided the time. Brother Hanson insisted that Brother McDowell do most of the preaching because of this being his first visit here.

Several visitors from out of town were present to spend Sunday with us, among them five members of the Utah Church, who are investigating our side of the story. Of my work among them and their impressions received at Bøn I will write later. It is sufficient to say here that they were all well pleased, and one of them, an elder, said it was the best day he ever spent in his life. It was an enjoyable and profitable day for all.

Monday afternoon the Women's Department had its regular meeting, and about thirty-five women were present to hear the splendid lecture by Brother McDowell. Near the close of this meeting, as usual refreshments were served, and by this time Brother McDowell, who had been in the country two days, had learned enough of the language that he could say, "Tak for maten," (Thanks for the food), very much to the delight of the ladies present.

That evening at eight o'clock, President McDowell was again the speaker, and under the Spirit of God brought to the attentive congregation a forceful sermon on the subject, "What does the gospel expect of me?" The message touched the hearts of the people, and I believe it will bring forth fruit. At the close of the service that evening we took the train to Oslo, where we stayed the remainder of the night with a family of Saints, leaving there early next morning for Porsgrund.

Arriving at Porsgrund about two o'clock Tuesday afternoon, we were made welcome at the home of Sisters Thronsen and Pedersen, the two widowed sisters of Elder Peter Muceus. These sisters have done much for the work in Norway and have always extended a welcome to the missionaries. Brother McDowell was especially glad to meet them because of his long acquaintance with Brother Muceus in America.

The meetings in Porsgrund were held in a rented hall, which was comfortably filled on the two evenings (Tuesday and Wednesday) that we were there. The messages these brothers brought were well received, and much favorable comment was heard. On Wednesday afternoon a spiritual sacramental service was held, which seemed to bind the Saints of that community closer together. Members of the church from Kragerø and Sandefjord were in Porsgrund for these two days. On Thursday morning we returned to Oslo, where these two servants of God entrained and left Norway, all too soon, for other points in Europe.

The writer has not had much experience in serving as an interpreter, so it was with more or less anxiety, humility, and prayer that he entered into the work. I am glad to be able to state that God was with me and blessed me beyond my expectation. I enjoyed the work and only wish I had more of it to do.

Never before in the history of this mission, as far as my knowledge goes, has any member of the First Presidency visited the country. One evening at one of our services the thought came to me that this mission was having a unique experience in that it had present one representative from each of the three leading quorums of the church: Brother McDowell representing the First Presidency, Brother Hanson representing the Apostles, and the writer a representative of the Seventies. Brother McDowell won the hearts of the people at once and fitted in nicely. Brother Hanson has been here a number of times and his visits are always looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure. He has a host of friends here. I am sure the visit of these two leading officers brought much encouragement to the Saints and did much good in other ways.

As far as the lone missionary and his family are concerned, it is putting it mildly to say that we were happy and delighted to have these two brothers and church officials from America with us and to have the privilege of entertaining them for a short time in our humble home. We often long for such association, as it fills us with new life and courage to go on fighting the good fight of faith and gives us added strength to hold the banner of King Immanuel higher. We thank you, brothers, for your visit. Come again.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson, Brother McDowell delivered an uplifting sermon.

Birmingham Saints generously opened their homes to the visiting members, and the only charge made was for dinner and tea on Sunday.

Altogether an enjoyable week-end was spent, combining education and pleasure.

A New Opening in Washington

It may be of interest to Herald readers to hear what has been occurring in Port Angeles, Washington. My wife and I, originally members of Seattle Branch, were transferred here from Seattle by my employer. At the time we left the home branch, we went to the district secretary to get names of Saints who might also be located in Port Angeles. After settling here and as time permitted, we looked up those whose names we had. And to make a long story short, we found a number of members and several people not yet members, but much interested in the gospel story.

March 16 of this year we organized ourselves into a Sunday school. Of course we have not been officially organized, for we could not get the proper authorities here to effect the organization, but we got permission to organize ourselves into a Sunday school and hope to work for a charter. Our objective was to get started in some phase of church work, that we might through association and activity sustain our interest in the gospel and the church.

Since the day of organization our group has progressed. It took some time to bring an elder here to preach, for the ministry all seemed busy in other places. Our patience was rewarded when Brother Monte E. Lasater, elder of Seattle Branch, spent one Sunday with us. His presence and help were much appreciated. Shortly after this visit, Elder Harold I. Velt, lately of Australia, but now assigned as missionary to this region, was here a period of twelve days.

Brother and Sister Velt's stay in Port Angeles marked a happy time for the Saints. Good attendance was had every night, and only two nights were missed during his entire sojourn here. He brought with him lantern slides and gave some interesting lectures on early American archaeology.

When this worthy pair left Port Angeles, an inventory of the work they had done found much interest aroused among our friends and a greater determination among the members to live the kind of lives becoming to children of God. We regretted to see them leave, but Brother Velt was scheduled to do much during reunion time in August, and after promising to return as soon as conditions would permit, they were gone.

From time to time we hope to have others here to work with us, visitors for the week-end or ministers who will hold meetings here.

We feel that another field is being opened to the gospel in Port Angeles, and it is our prayer that our numbers will grow until there will be found in this city a strong and active branch of the church.

Press Notes Work at Toronto

The congregation of Saints in Toronto, Ontario, is building a new church home. The members are enthusiastic as they see the work go on. From the Toronto Daily Star for September 2, a worker clipped the following account and mailed to the Herald:

"The corner stone for the new chapel of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Bathurst Street and Saint Clair Avenue was laid Saturday afternoon in the presence of a large gathering.

"A. F. McLean, one of the oldest Toronto members, gave a short history of the Toronto congregation. The honor of laying the corner stone was given to Bishop J. A. Becker, of Independence, Missouri, one of the presiding bishops of the general church. An appropriate Bible reading was given by Elder James Pycock, a missionary from Michigan, followed by a short talk by Elder J. E. Vanderwood, a missionary from New York State.

"The stone contains the three standard books of the church, namely: The Inspired Version of the Bible, the Book of Mormon, which contains a history of the ancestors of the American Indian, and the book of Doctrine and Covenants of the church. With these was placed the 1930 printed directory of the congregation containing the names of the members and officers of the local church, and a copy of the Toronto daily papers. J. L. Prentice, of Toronto, was chairman at the meeting."

Impressions of Life in the Center Place

"Zion her beauties I am yearning to see."

The above expression was frequently made by the writer before being privileged to move to Independence. And since coming to Independence, we have been so deeply impressed with the many activities we have witnessed that I desire to give to the Saints back in Texas, my native State, a glimpse of life here.

Since our arrival here, we have met many and been associated with people in the church about whom we had read, but whom we had scarcely hoped to know. From them we have learned many things.

I read in the Herald and was told that the massive dome of the Auditorium could be seen as one returned to Independence from Kansas City. One week while employed in Kansas City, my walk to work led me over a viaduct on Fifteenth Street. Each morning while the dew sparkled on the bushes and birds twittered in the trees, I paused reverently, looking back at Independence. The dome of the Auditorium stood out a stupendous monument.

One Sunday evening, as my companion and I were returning home from the Campus and were passing the Auditorium, six young women approached us with the inquiry if this was the temple of the Latter Day Saints.

"We call it our Auditorium," we replied; "the Temple Lot lies just across the street." They plied us with many questions and expressed a wish to go through the building. But the hour was late, and so they listened to our explanations and marveled when we told them that the grandson of the Martyr was now our president. We invited them to return at their early convenience to visit the building.

Many like these young women have heard of our church over the radio and have enjoyed the excellent programs given from the Stone Church and from Central Church in Kansas City.

Truly we find pleasure in listening to the Stone Church Choir and think that much praise and commendation is due those who have it in charge and all who compose its ranks.

As we watch the Saints, old, middle-aged, and young, go about their undertakings and generously contribute their services, we are impressed that God is indeed "marshaling his army for the rescue of his truth," and we pray for the breastplate of righteousness and the shield of faith.

Lately a sister in our group was very ill. She called for prayers, and the Saints responded in fervent petitions before the throne of God. She improved, and her doctor, who had been alarmed at her condition, pronounced her normal. Nothing is impossible with God, and he will remember his own. The sister gives him all the praise for her recovery. Many healings of this kind are taking place here and elsewhere among God's people.

I was told by a young man, who is a nonmember, that he felt the divine influence of God's Spirit in the Sanitarium; that he believed God intervened in his behalf. Truly the blessings of the Lord are many.

I and my family have been greatly blessed. Since coming here, I have been confined to my bed only a few hours at a time.

The splendid services at the Stone Church last Sabbath have stayed with me all week—sacramental service, the sweet quietude that prevailed. I felt God's Spirit rest upon us during that hour as I have never before felt it. It was with us during the entire service. As the program of worship progressed, we lived the truth of the hymn:

"One sweet hour with Jesus every day,
How it cheers the soul along;
How it helps the heart along the way
Like the music of a song."

Let us rejoice in these latter days that we have the gospel to guide our footsteps. Let us go forward one united band.

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho

On the evening of August 19 Coeur d'Alene Saints and their friends, numbering eighty-two in all, met on the lawn at the L. E. Holmes residence to enjoy a social evening together. The program for the evening's entertainment had been well planned and organized so no time was wasted. After singing and prayer many interesting games were played. Sister Goldie Sage and Sister Gladys Fout had charge of the games and stunts, which were very amusing to all. Sister Emma Holmes had charge of the serving of refreshments.

Coeur d'Alene Branch is growing in numbers and, we feel, in spirituality.

August 10, L. E. Holmes, former pastor, baptized two precious souls into the kingdom of God, one adult, Sister Emma Payne, the other Doloris Erley, age ten years.

Recently Brother James H. Sage was elected branch president. He has the confidence of the membership here. He and the rest of the priesthood of the branch are working splendidly together.

The church school is moving along nicely under the plan outlined in the Saints' Herald. Several nonmembers are becoming much interested in the gospel.

Brother A. C. Martin, our new missionary, is to begin a series of meetings Wednesday, September 3. We are hoping that through the cooperation of all concerned in these meetings much good will be accomplished, and that eventually all the honest in heart of the little city of Coeur d'Alene will have the privilege of hearing the restored gospel.

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

The morning of August 3, W. C. Wigton was baptized by J. E. Matthews and confirmed by H. E. French.

Sacramental service was in charge of H. E. French and J. E. Matthews, and a wonderful spirit was present during the hour.

Brother Matthews preached in the evening on the text, "For what man knoweth the things of a man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God."—1 Corinthians 2: 11.

G. H. Kirkendall preached on "I will build my church" the morning of August 10. That evening G. P. Myers read for a lesson Matthew 6: 19-33, choosing for a text the last verse of his reading: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

The Women's Department met July 10 at the home of Ada Bierly and shared a potluck dinner at noon. The meeting was called to order by Sister Nieman. Twenty members and three visitors were present. Civics lesson was taught by Sister Matthews. A new member, Sister Lillian Simmons, was received into the department. A paper, "A wealth of friendship," was read by Viola Wemlinger.

The Orioles took a trip to Oshaughnessay's Dam not long ago, and a happy time was had.

The Temple Builders have lately enjoyed several swimming parties.

The balance of the month the church was closed in order that the upper auditorium might be redecorated.

Mallard, Iowa

September 4.—After the intensely hot summer, this region is enjoying cool weather.

Out-of-town visitors for August included people from other cities in Iowa, from Nebraska, California, and other States. Among these visitors was Brother John Cross, of Hastings, Nebraska. He united with the church here when he was a young man. Then he drifted away from church interests and moved to Hastings. But he wrote to our branch president and told him of his desire to still be counted as one of God's children. He asked that the Saints write to him. This they did, and when Brother Cross visited us this summer he attended church a number of times and spoke at one evening service, bearing his testimony to the truthfulness of the gospel. He is eager to live where there is a branch in order that his family may attend.

Another of our visitors, Sister William Carmichael, of Oceanside, California, is visiting her husband's people here. She, too, has many friends in Mallard, for she was a teacher in our public schools a few years ago.

Brother Walters, of Boone, was on his way to Rochester with his son. He is an old friend of the Batt family and visited them one Sunday. Brother Walters is president of Boone Branch and was asked to speak at the morning service. Visitors are welcome in our branch.

Norman Ward, and Violet and Bernetta Hahn attended the reunion during the entire session. They report a fine time enjoyed in the class work and other services. They came home enthusiastic and planning to attend next year. Brothers William Truog, Velmar Fish, and Brother and Sister Fred Hahn attended the last Sunday and were permitted to hear three good sermons and to meet with many old friends.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fourth and Washington Streets

The vacation season is over. Our workers have returned feeling fine after a rest and change, and ready for the winter's work. Brother Myron LaPointe is going to Graceland College this year, and Brother John Hughes to Iowa City. We shall miss these young men.

Attendance during August was good, in spite of hot weather.

The district president was here August 17 to make us his first visit. He gave a good sermon which was much enjoyed. The Saints in Ottumwa designate Brother Mussell as a young-old man. He stands for progress and is a sincere friend of the young people.

August 31 Bishop Charles Fry brought fine instruction to the branch in a sermon of much worth.

Pastor F. C. Bevan is actively doing all he can to help the gospel work along.

The women report a month crowded with various activities to help raise funds for payments on the church.

Sister E. Hughes, in charge of the church school, is alert to her task.

Sister G. A. McMickle, organist, has gone to Muscatine, Iowa, to take special treatments for a period of six weeks. We miss her. Sister A. Goodwin is taking her place at the organ.

Ottumwa members are happy to have Sister Wilkinson, of Des Moines, here. She is attending business college in this city.

Muskegon, Michigan

September 4.—During the past summer, Muskegon Branch has added thirteen new members to its roll by baptism, and several children have been blessed.

Seth Osborn, teacher, has enlisted in the infantry for three years. Brother Seth is greatly missed by Muskegon Branch, as he has always taken an active part in the church work.

Sister Taylor Evans was called to Pennsylvania in July by the death of her mother. While there her son, Robert, eight years old, fell as he was playing, fracturing his skull. He was under the doctor's care for nearly three weeks before they could return home.

Elder Ellis Whitehead, who is manager for a vacuum sweeper company in Grand Rapids, makes regular weekly business calls to our city.

Sister Olive Smith was married June 21 to Al McMichael, of South Haven, Elder Whitehead officiating. After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride. They received many useful gifts. They are making their home at South Haven.

The young women of the church gave a linen shower for Mrs. Harley Waldo, formerly Anna White, whose wedding recently took place at the new home of her parents, Mr. and Sister John White, Elder Whitehead officiating. A few immediate relatives and friends attended. They are making their home with the bride's parents. Sister Waldo received many nice gifts. A dainty luncheon was served and a good time enjoyed by all.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, under the leadership of Brother Douglas Osborn and his associate, Brother Charles Sheffer, has been giving splendid programs on Friday evening, and a good attendance has been created, especially among the young people. Programs have consisted of beach parties, auto tours, and pictures were exhibited that were taken by those attending the Centennial Conference, showing many interesting places in the history of the church. The lecture accompanying the pictures was ably given by Brother Osborn. Sister Wilma Bushor, musical director, entertained with a musical night program, which was ably given. Much credit is due our sister for the interest taken and the advancement made in this department.

Elder Carlisle Whitehead and wife, of Pontiac, who spent a couple of weeks in the cherry country near Frankfort, returning via Muskegon, spent several days with the former's parents. Brother Carlisle occupied his father's pulpit while here.

Elder Pycock, of Grand Rapids, conducted services here a couple of Sundays during July.

A surprise party for Wilma Bushor was held at the home of Elder E. E. Loomis and family, Saturday night, August 30. About thirty-five brothers, sisters, and friends were present. A potluck lunch was served and a delightful time was had. Sister Wilma was presented with a beautiful three-pocket brief case.

Brother and Sister William Bushor, accompanied by Elder and Sister Archie Whitehead, motored to Grand Rapids last month to visit the former's mother, Mrs. Mary (Grandma) Bushor, who suffered a stroke several months ago, but is doing nicely at this time.

Muskegon and Ludington Branches held a joint picnic at the Isaac Walton Camp, between Shelby and Hart, on Labor Day. A basket dinner was provided by the women. Horse-shoe pitching, volley ball, and baseball were the games in which both old and young participated. All enjoyed the association of the Ludington members.

Mr. Williams, who suffered a broken leg while in the employ of the gas company, when a load of iron pipe fell on him, will soon be able to be about again. The doctor has removed the cast. Mr. Williams, although not a member of the church, has done much in helping to further the work here. He was one of the most faithful workers on the new church building during its erection.

Elder and Sister Archie Whitehead left Friday, August 22, for their old home in Cadillac by way of Grand Rapids, where Elder Whitehead conducted the funeral service of Brother Alex Smith, a life-long friend. The services were held from the Grand Rapids church Saturday afternoon. After the funeral service, Brother and Sister Whitehead resumed their journey to Cadillac, where they will visit their daughter and family and renew old-time acquaintances. While there Elder Whitehead will remodel their old home, and last but not least we know he will be active in the service for the Master, and many there will hear his voice again. The Lord's work is always first and uppermost with our brother. Sister Whitehead is expected soon to return to Muskegon, while Brother Whitehead will probably be gone a couple of months. The Muskegon people greatly miss Brother Whitehead, as he is considered the father of the branch, being its pastor, with the exception of a very few months, since the organization of the branch some fifteen years ago. This is the first time the elder has left our branch for so long a time, and we are looking forward to the time when he will return.

Brother Lloyd Soper, a patient at the Muskegon County Tuberculosis Sanatorium, met with us this sacrament Sunday. We were glad to hear again his testimony, and the desire he has to labor for the Master. Brother Lloyd's condition seems to be greatly improved. For this we are thankful. May God continue his blessings to our brother to the end that the desire of his heart may be granted.

Davidson, Oklahoma

Recent rains have relieved the summer's drought, and the outlook of the farmers is now much more cheerful.

Elder Z. Z. Renfroe favored Davidson Branch with two inspiring sermons Sunday, August 3.

Zella Dean, two-year-old daughter of Brother and Sister Roy Skinner, had been critically ill since the month of May as a result of an attack of pneumonia. On Wednesday, July 30, her condition was considered grave. Her little body was so weakened that she could not possibly recover from the operation performed as a last expedient, unless strength came from a greater Source than man. The Saints met in their usual prayer service, and many prayers were offered in behalf of the little child. After the meeting, the elders went to the babe's bedside to administer, and the Saints grouped themselves in silent prayer just outside the door. The next morning an X-ray was made finding a great pocket of pus gathered in the left lung, pushing the heart as far to the right side of her body as normally it should have been to the left. The doctors held little hope for her recovery either with or without an operation. However, the pus was removed, and the heart went slowly back to its place. The child was surprisingly strong when she regained consciousness and quickly began to mend. Only a few days passed when the drainage tube was removed, and the little girl was walking and playing with other children. Doctors and friends have marveled at this case, but we well know how she lived, and we praise the heavenly Father for the blessing given this home. It has strengthened the faith of this congregation, and we hope always to remember the injunction to "pray for one another."

The rest of our sick are also improving.

Brother and Sister Z. Z. Renfroe were called to Davidson from their home in Oklahoma City August 24, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Roxie Benson Wolfe, only sister of Sister Renfroe. Mrs. Wolfe was a lovable young woman of twenty-five years who leaves to mourn besides her loved ones hundreds of friends.

Miss Edythe Skinner has gone to Tulia, Texas, where she has accepted a position as teacher of public school music in the schools there. She attended Graceland College in 1928.

The Women's Department enjoyed the regular monthly social at the home of Sister Dick Feeley. The theme of the program was "Prayer." Several good talks were given, together with prayer, readings, and songs. There followed the testimonies of each member with regard to the results of prayer in her life. The Spirit of God dwelt in the hearts of all present.

Special preaching services were held the evenings of August 29, 30, and 31 in behalf of three who desired baptism Sunday, August 31. Two candidates came a distance of two hundred miles, one of these having never before heard the gospel, save through the Ensign and conversation with church member friends.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

307 West Pierce Street

The work in Council Bluffs has been moving along very nicely, and prospects bid fair for a fall and winter of intensive work.

The missionary spirit has been uppermost in the hearts of the Saints, and much good has been accomplished both in the gaining of recruits to our ranks and the reviving of many already enlisted. July 6 tent meetings were begun at Twenty-second Avenue and South Eighth Street which continued for five weeks. Brother L. G. Holloway was the speaker. Although the weather was extremely hot, the temperature running up as high as one hundred and twelve, attendance and interest were exceptionally good. Fourteen were baptized, mostly adults, and we are thankful for this number to help us in our onward progress toward the establishing of a much-needed Zion. We have found Brother Holloway an able representative of the gospel, one who finds a warm spot in the hearts of those who learn to know him.

We are not satisfied with the efforts of these five weeks, and another series of meetings in the tent is to be launched next Sunday evening, September 7, on the lot belonging to the branch next to the church building in the west part of the city. This will continue during September or longer if interest seems to justify. Brother Holloway will again be the speaker, and we are anticipating still better results than in our first effort.

August 13 a special business meeting was held, at which time it was moved and unanimously carried to adopt the type of branch organization recommended by the last General Conference, the same to go into effect October 1 following promotion day, the last Sunday in September. It was also moved and carried to give the envelope system of raising branch funds a trial for four months beginning September 1. Last Sunday was the first day to use them, and gratifying results are already reported both in branch funds and tithing. At this meeting, Brother Conrad Booton was recommended for ordination to the office of priest and the recommendation unanimously approved. We are confident Brother "Con" will prove a valuable addition to the priesthood. Brother Nels Hansen resigned as counselor to the branch president, owing to his daily duties demanding so much of his time, and Brother Peter Heuermann was elected to fill the vacancy.

During the period between the closing of the tent meetings and the closing of reunion, Cupid was busy. August 9 was the date of the marriage of Sister Olivetta Salisbury and Mr. George Waddell. August 14 Sister Mabel Mattison was united in marriage to Mr. Clifford Johns. August 18 Sister Grace Epperson and Brother Homer A. Doty, jr., became one and left the following day to make their home in Traverse City, Michigan. Sister Mabel and husband will reside in Omaha, Nebraska; Sister Olivetta and husband will remain in Council Bluffs. We extend hearty congratulations and best wishes to all these young people and shall certainly miss those who have left us.

Seeing the great need of specialized workers to effectively carry out the more extensive program of religious education, we have planned to again conduct a training school on Monday evening during the fall and winter. The first semester of thirteen weeks will run from September 15 to December 8, and the second semester from January 5 to March 30, with two class periods each evening. Special classes will be conducted for the present teachers and leaders as well as those desiring to qualify for special work in the future. There will be two elective courses for those who wish to carry on systematic studies but do not care to prepare for special work. We also plan to conduct a class on Sunday evening just before the preaching service, after the tent services close, taking up in succession the eleven subjects known as the Extension Course of the Centennial Institute. We are confident that the Saints are sensing more keenly the need of this special preparation and that they will respond loyally to the opportunities placed within their reach in these various classes.

Sister Loise Hatch, who has been one of our dependable workers in the beginner department of the church school, is attending Graceland this year. She has our fullest confidence and our prayers for a successful college career and an efficient work in the future.

Omaha, Nebraska

Central Branch, Thirty-sixth and Burt Street

On August 6 we were happy to welcome the wife of our pastor, Sister Blair Jensen, and their small daughter, Carol, into our midst. The Jensens are now located in their new home at 3502 Cass Street.

The entire branch was saddened by the rather sudden death of Sister Rose Adams on August 9. "Aunt Rose," as she was known to many, was a staunch worker in the Sunday school, but in the last year or so she has been confined to her home by ill health. The burial was at Logan, Iowa, the former home of the Adams family. Brother T. Howard Elliott, of Saint Louis, Missouri, whom Aunt Rose mothered for two years, was here for the service. Our deepest sympathy is extended to the family.

The sacramental meeting for August was held Sunday, August 10. This change was made due to the lack of facilities at the district reunion, and the number from our branch in attendance there. Pastor Jensen was the speaker at the evening hour.

Brother Leslie Wight, of Minneapolis, brought the message for the morning of August 17. Brother Jensen again preached the evening sermon.

On August 23 the B. M. Anderson home was the scene of a farewell reception. The Andersons, we are very sorry to say, are leaving soon to live in Lincoln, Nebraska. However, Lincoln is but a short distance away, and we shall expect them back frequently.

The weather man furnished cooler weather for August 24, and the attendance was noticeably better. Brother Jensen remarked that as the weather got cooler, with the coming of the fall and winter, he would expect our numbers to increase in the same ratio. "It shall come to pass that the trumpet call shall be blown" was the text chosen for the morning discourse. Brother Jensen brought to our attention that it is our task to sound forth the trumpet call first by the life that we live. The cry of this church is, Whom shall we send and who will go? The speaker further reminded us that our prayers must move us to intelligent action. Brother W. T. Wellman was the speaker at the evening worship hour. His sermon was on "A day of choosing," and he told us that we must qualify in order to be chosen for the task of Zion.

Several were absent from the city over the Labor Day week-end, thus cutting down the number in attendance at the branch picnic on August 30. This is the second function of its kind for the summer, and from all reports "a good time was had by all."

The sermons for the last Sunday of the month were preached by Elders Blair Jensen and Isaac Sylvester. Brother Jensen has been giving a series of sermons at the South Side Branch on Sunday evenings.

With the coming of September, our travelers to far-away parts have returned. Sister Nell Kelley is back from a summer spent in Europe, and Sister Merile Self has returned from an eastern trip which included a visit to Kirtland Temple.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni

Lamoni is moving into a new year. The fall season is the real beginning of the church year. After reunion comes Promotion Day and the inauguration of the church school year. The incoming of the college students brings vigor and new activities. The musical program begins in the fall. This year the installation of Elder T. S. Williams as pastor makes another element of newness.

An Appreciation of Retiring Pastor

On Friday evening, August 15, a gathering was held on the church lawn in appreciation of the retiring pastor, W. E. Prall. Lawn seats were arranged about the outdoor platform, and a song fest of friendship ditties and familiar hymns was enjoyed by the large gathering. Speeches of appreciation of Brother Prall's work were made by G. W. Blair for the local congregation and J. F. Garver for the general church. The guest of honor responded in a short and fervent speech of appreciation and pledged continued support. Roy A. Cheville, for the branch, presented Brother Prall with an occasional chair and end table for reading and a purse of money. A group of ladies of the branch served refreshments.

This gathering was the collective expression of appreciation of Elder Prall's pastoral work in Lamoni Branch. For two years he was counselor to C. E. Wight in the stake presidency, and for the past five years he has been president of the Lamoni Stake. While he relinquishes his administrative work, he will continue to give his loyal support in the ministerial work of the branch. That support he has given his successor, Elder Williams. Brother Prall will remain in the esteem and affection of his former congregation.

High School Department Organized

In the departmentalization of Lamoni Church School, the high school age constitute a department. In this community all students of this age are enrolled in high school. Their social life gives them a unity for church activities. In most churches this age is inadequately provided for. Realizing this, local church school leaders have tried to work out greater efficiency in this department.

G. A. Platz remains as superintendent of the department. With him will be associated two workers, Sister Roy A. Cheville and Fred Condit. These work in the recreational and social projects of the department. Committees have been appointed for definite features of their church school work.

One evening the upper classmen received the incoming freshmen of the high school on the lawn of the Platz home. Rollicking games and watermelon were the outstanding features. Last week a gay evening of games was enjoyed in the lower auditorium. The department also assisted in the reception of college students.

Dinner for T. S. Williams

On Thursday evening, September 11, the priesthood of Lamoni Branch welcomed their new pastor at a dinner in the lower auditorium of the church. A large number of the ministry and their wives were present. The members of the college students were invited and thus received into the Lamoni congregation.

A committee under the supervision of Sister J. H. Anthony planned and managed the dinner, a bounteous supply of fried chicken, potato au gratin, vegetable salad, cocoa, rolls, jelly, and apple pie a la mode. A table was provided for honor roll members, those of long-time service.

After the dinner, Roy Cheville led the group in songs of fellowship and consecration. The church halls rang with the spirited singing. Each group of ministers: deacons, priests, elders, and high priests, and the women selected one of their number to welcome Brother Williams and to pledge support. Those chosen to speak were C. F. Church, deacon; E. Dewey White, elder; W. E. Prall, high priest; and Sister C. B. Stebbins for the women. T. S. Williams responded briefly and reverently. A hymn, "What hast thou given for me?" was sung, and Roy Cheville offered a benedictory prayer.

Prayer Meetings Emphasized

Two weeks ago an announcement was made, stressing the prayer meetings. Three adult meetings are held—in the western, central, and eastern parts of town. The young people meet in the basement of the church and the college students in their chapel. Goals of attendance were set and the attendance increased. This aspect of the pastoral work will receive continued emphasis.

Graceland Chats

This week finds college life well under way. The outlook is promising. All over the country a dropping off in college attendance has been expected and has been experienced. In the light of this condition it was presumed that there would be a marked diminution in the enrollment at Graceland. Added to this was the discontinuance of the academy department at Graceland.

The enrollment reached and is passing the two hundred mark—an excellent showing in the light of all conditions of the year. The quality of students matriculating tells more. The transcripts of high school records indicate that this year the college is receiving a corps of young people who have made good in academic work and school leadership.

The material plant of the college is in better shape than ever before. The new library, the campus improvements, and the redecorating of the dormitories have added to the general efficiency and beauty. The continued studies, research, and travel of the faculty add to the high standing of the staff of instructors.

Freshmen Received at Brick Church

A hundred young people formed a large circle on the lawn of the Brick Church on the first Friday evening of the Freshmen Days. Around this circle marched the new students to be greeted and welcomed. At a signal the circles stopped to exchange a word about some topic of conversation designated by the leader. Slips of paper were distributed containing some reason for being famous, and a favorite pastime. From this miscellany of nonsense, each Freshman introduced himself. One student was Julius Cæsar, famous for "riding across the Sahara on a guinea pig" with "singing in the bathtub" as his favorite pastime.

The guests and hosts were divided into four groups according to the season of their birthday. Each group prepared a song of their season, the sheets being given them, and presented it. Judges scored these spontaneous outbursts of drama and music. There was also a program of skits and speeches of welcome. Punch and wafers were served for refreshments.

The high school department and Second Milers Class of the Lamoni Church School were hosts. Their committees prepared the reception.

Students Meet for Church School

On the first Sunday morning the college students met in the chapel at nine o'clock. Roy A. Cheville as director of the Lamoni Church School presented M. E. Mortimore, who is head of the college department of the local church school. This year several courses of shorter duration will be offered. Each course will continue for eleven weeks, thus making three quarters for the year. For the present period eight courses are being offered. The next three months will find a new registration and new courses. Some may be repeated. Classes are being limited to an enrollment of twenty. The following courses are offered: "Home problems," Mrs. N. Ray Carmichael; "Ethics of college life," Miss Morgan; "Story-telling," Miss Condit; "Christian objectives in education," James Evans; "Drama in religious education," Mrs.

M. E. Mortimore; "Orchestration and the church," J. H. Anthony; "Science and religion," M. E. Mortimore; and "The church economic program," James Thomas.

The First Prayer Meeting

By 7.30 the main floor of the chapel was filled. New and old students were mingled in anticipation. Roy A. Cheville and M. E. Mortimore took seats on the platform, and from the piano came the voluntary hymn, "Sweet hour of prayer." A reverential quiet descended. "Great and marvelous are thy works," sang the students, and then as a prayer hymn they united in "Lord, we come before Thee now." Following the long-used custom, the students knelt for the prayer offered by M. E. Mortimore.

"There are three phrases I have heard for several years at this first meeting," began Mr. Cheville. "They are these: 'This year I hope—'; 'This year I plan—'; and 'This year I promise—.'" From this introduction he laid the theme of the evening. Old and new responded, some penitently, some expectantly, some appreciatingly, and all reverently. It was a wonderful beginning for the college year.

Northern California's Young People's Camp

By Genevieve Earle Opsal

The first young people's camp of the Northern California District was held at Irvington from August 6 to 10. A fine group of about one hundred young people between the ages of ten and twenty-one attended.

Under the direction of G. P. Levitt, district president, and Mr. and Mrs. George Thompson, a well-rounded camp program was planned and conducted. Camp was awakened at 6.30 in the morning, and from that time until taps the day was filled with classes, recreation, and programs.

The young people met under a beautiful elm tree each morning for prayer meeting. These meetings were always inspirational.

Classes were conducted by Elders J. W. Rushton and G. P. Levitt. Brother Rushton lectured on "The appreciation of the Bible," and Brother Levitt gave a series of lectures on "The challenge of the church to youth." These classes were held for those between the ages of fifteen and twenty-one.

For those between the ages of ten and fourteen, junior church was held and conducted by Sister Hazel Blohm, who is experienced in this field.

Hikes, games, and a track meet provided the afternoon recreation.

Each evening's entertainment began with a moving picture serial, after which everyone gathered around the camp fire for songs, yells, and stunts. All too soon, the curfew tolled the hour of bedtime.

That which added enthusiasm to the camp was group division and organization of these groups into clubs. There were four groups; the Whoopie La La's between ages fifteen to twenty-one, led by Miss Genevieve Opsal; the O. F. A.'s between the ages of fifteen to twenty-one, led by Miss Dorothy Opsal; the Sunshine Club, a group of girls from ten to fourteen, led by Sister Mardel Holden and Sister Emerick; and the O. K.'s, a group of boys between ten and fourteen, led by Brother Dick.

When these four groups gathered in the dining hall for meals, each tried to outdo the other groups in creating clever songs and new yells.

On Saturday afternoon the annual track meet of the district was held. Many visitors from around the bay came and participated. This year the cup was awarded to San Francisco.

At the close of camp, Sister Gorsky and Sister Witsky were presented with a beautiful fern apiece in appreciation of their services in preparing the splendid meals during camp.

Sunday, the final day of camp, saw many visitors from branches all over the district. The day was a fitting climax to the wonderful times the previous days had brought. Beginning with the early prayer service, one could feel the Spirit of God throughout the morning and afternoon worship periods. Brother Rushton gave an inspirational sermon in the morning with the young people's choir singing a special number. In the afternoon Brother Levitt emphasized the need of a camp not only for Northern California District but for the entire Pacific Slope.

The young people are looking forward to next year when they may again meet in camp life. Everyone present did his share in making camp a big success.

Independence

Stone Church

"Every young person in the church given the opportunity of a college education or its equivalent—with his face Zionward," was the slogan suggested by President Frederick M. Smith in his College Day sermon Sunday morning. The state schools can furnish academic education, he said, but Graceland College is best equipped to keep the faces of our young people turned Zionward. Graceland is best able to keep spiritual development running parallel with the educational processes.

President Smith emphasized the value of wise, sympathetic leadership and instruction during the period of readaptation which comes in college life; this he feels the Graceland faculty is able to give. He recommended the college as having a distinct place in the program of the church and entirely worthy of the support of the membership; stressing also the responsibility of making it possible for our young people to attend the college by building up a permanent Scholarship Loan Fund.

Elder L. E. Flowers briefly outlined the way in which the present Scholarship Loan Fund of the college is administered, and at the close of the service expressed to the congregation the appreciation of the students, past and present, who have been assisted by this fund. Elder W. Wallace Smith presided.

A quartet consisting of Kathryn Skinner Westwood, soprano, Gerald Johnston, tenor, Elizabeth Okerlind, contralto, and Albert Brackenbury, bass, sang "Graceland's Alma Mater Hymn." The Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, sang the anthem, "The sun shall be no more thy light." Robert Miller played the organ prelude and offertory, also accompaniment for other musical numbers.

Downstairs the intermediates also observed College Day, the theme being "Loyalty to the church," special attention being given Graceland College. A trio of girls, Irene, Evelyn, and Mildred Shupe, sang Graceland's "Alma mater hymn," and led the congregation in "Graceland forever." The hour was in charge of Brothers H. W. Harder and Howard Cook, the latter reading "Does an education pay?" and introducing the morning speaker, Priest W. Earl Page, intermediate pastor. Elder Harder gave a brief explanation of the Scholarship Loan Fund and the way it is administered.

Attendance of the juniors at the Campus Sunday morning was much smaller than usual on account of the rain. The songs, class work, and exercises of the morning were much as usual. Elder S. A. Burgess pleased the children during the worship period by talking to them.

In the afternoon a party of a dozen church school workers of the Stone Church congregation visited the Presbyterian Church school plant, Fifty-fifth and Oak Streets, Kansas City. In the party, besides the superintendent, his associates, and departmental heads and pastors, were Pastor John F. Sheehy and Church Architect Henry C. Smith.

The Sunday evening service was to have been the last meeting for the season of the nine Independence congregations at the Campus, and President Smith had been announced as the speaker. But rain which fell nearly all day made it necessary for the congregation to assemble in the Stone Church.

Concluding the summer series of sermons centering about the Zionie home, President Smith spoke of several ways in which the Saints can help in their local congregations during the coming winter, and suggested as a slogan for that period: "Let us know our duty and perform it." Living our religion, thinking rightly, speaking the truth, being ready to serve, attending church as consistently as we can, remembering family and individual devotions, developing a sympathetic understanding of the problems of our youth, observing the financial and temporal laws—in fine, being true Latter Day Saints, compose the program of activity delineated by the speaker and designed to contribute to the improvement of our homes, our community, and our church.

The song service was made effective by Pastor Sheehy, who led the congregation in singing songs of challenge. The answer was the hymn, "I'll go where you want me to go." Brother Sheehy was in charge of the program for the evening, being assisted in the stand by Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael.

A quartet composed of Sisters Ina Hattey, Blanche Gault, Hazel Moler, and Ruth Holman, sang, "May the Lord depend on you?" and "One hour with Jesus." A pleasing soprano solo was sung by Miss Ina Hattey. Accompanists were Jeannette Kelley Craig and Evan Fry. Organ numbers were by Evan Fry.

Among those who during the past week have slipped from our midst to the life beyond was Brother Bror Mauritz Brolin, fifty years old, who died Friday night at his home in Independence. He was born in Sweden; and at Helsingborg September 11, 1911, he became a member of the church. Surviving are his wife, Sister Thea Brolin, two daughters, Mae and Annie, of the home, and a brother, Ernest Brolin, Morkopping, Sweden. The funeral was held from the Stone Church early Sunday afternoon in charge of Elder Francis Smith. The sermon was by Apostle J. F. Curtis. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

At the Stone Church there occurred on the afternoon of September 9 the last rites for Sister Fanny E. Herrick, who passed away September 5 at her home in Quincy, Illinois. Elder James Davis was in charge, and interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. This aged sister is survived by her husband, five daughters, and three sons.

After a vacation of several weeks the Stone Church Choir met last Thursday evening for its first fall rehearsal. Attendance was large, and zeal and enthusiasm mounted high. Paul N. Craig directed the rehearsal, and Robert Miller played the piano. The choir has many musical plans for the winter.

Walnut Park

Inasmuch as last Sunday was College Day, a special program, contributed by former Graceland College students, was presented at the eleven o'clock service at Walnut Park. This service was in charge of Elder C. L. Olson, assisted by Elder Benjamin Bean. The service started with a processional, during which the former Graceland students marched up from the basement and took their places on the stand. The first number on the program, following the opening song, invocation and scripture reading, was a song, "The Alma Mater Hymn," presented by a chorus of sixteen Gracelanders, led by Miss Ada Fallon.

The next item on the program was a talk on the history of Graceland College by John A. Taylor. A quartet composed of Vera Chapman, Ethel Moorman, Benjamin Bean, and Roy Davey sang "Happy Graceland." A talk on the social and religious activities of Graceland was given by Miss Ada Fallon. The Graceland chorus next presented the song, "Graceland." Roland Kapnick followed with a talk on the purposes and ideals of Graceland. The presiding officer then explained the purpose of College Day and the Scholarship Fund, explaining that the deacons would wait upon the congregation for their contributions. Preceding this, however, the chorus sang the old favorite, "Graceland forever." The pianist played this song while the deacons received the offering. As the closing number of the program the congregation was asked to join with the chorus in again singing "Graceland forever," following which the benediction was pronounced by Brother Bean.

In spite of the rather disagreeable weather, a large number of Saints were present at the service and expressed themselves as greatly enjoying it.

Enoch Hill

The children's department of this branch has not been heard from for some time. Nevertheless this division has been very active during the heat of the summer. The superintendent and the Blue Birds, junior Orioles, and teachers have had some pleasant outings. One of the most enjoyed was a trip taken late in August to Bud Park. There were twenty-two in the party, four adults and eighteen children. The lesson on the Sunday previous to the outing was "Living the golden rule." Each child seemed to be so impressed by the lesson that he carried the spirit of it through the picnic, and it was an extremely happy ending to the summer's work. The girls are meeting every Friday after school with their teachers, Sister Joseph Martin and Marguerite Maloney, and are making invitations for rally and promotion Day service.

Last Sunday was a stormy day, but in the children's department we are proud to report no teacher absent and only one officer absent out of thirteen.

Sister Willis Young has been doing fine work with the boys. Her endeavors are much appreciated. The very little ones are under the supervision of Sisters John Jones and John Johnson. These workers are especially adapted to the care of young children.

Heavy rain kept most of the members from the early morning prayer service Sunday, but did not deprive those present of the quiet and refreshing influence of the Spirit.

During the church school session, Brother and Sister Cross played a violin and piano arrangement of "A dream of paradise." Apostle J. F. Curtis spoke at the eleven o'clock hour on the theme of College Day, giving many practical illustrations of the wisdom of increasing our store of knowledge and the benefits derived therefrom.

The Erodelphians, a young people's organization on Enoch Hill, have during the summer made Friday evening of each week a real play night. More than forty strong they have gathered many times to participate in volley ball and other games. Last night they enjoyed a wiener roast, and this Friday evening they expect to make a volley ball tilt with Gudgeon Park the closing event of the summer season. A call meeting next week will bring them together to plan the winter's activities. Brother E. H. McKean, the president of the organization, has had the hearty support of Louise McDonald, chairman of the social committee, and Lawrence Martin, chairman of the recreation committee, as well as every other Erodelphian.

Spring Branch

The 8.15 prayer service Sunday morning is growing in attendance, September 7 being the largest we have had. Seventy-two were present. The Sunday school is also maintaining a good attendance record. A splendid program was given at Sunday school last Sunday by the young people's class.

The eleven o'clock service was in charge of Pastor J. E. Cleveland. E. W. Lloyd, of Kansas City Stake, was the speaker. His sermon was greatly enjoyed.

A farewell social was held at the church Tuesday evening for Brother and Sister Tankard and family, who are moving to a farm near Odessa, Missouri. They are good workers and will be missed by this congregation. But their friends of Spring Branch know that wherever they go they will find work; always they are ready to do their part. That evening we were glad to have with us once more Brother and Sister French and small daughter. To have them here causes the Saints to think of old times. They are always welcome.

Our first Sunday evening service following the summer's union sessions at the Campus will be held next Sunday evening. There will be no sermon, the time being dedicated to a service of baptism.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Music for the worship period of the church school September 14, beginning at 9.45 in the morning and closing at 10.15, was appropriately selected and given. A story was told to the school by Sister Sallie Forties.

The sermon at the service period, 11.05 to 11.45, was by Elder E. E. Closson. Perfonia Murrell was the organist. The program and decorations were in charge of the Semper Fidelis Class.

Next Sunday is Home-coming Day at Central. Invitations have been mailed, programs planned, and the Lord's table prepared. The congregation is requested to come fasting to the nine o'clock sacramental service. There will be class reunions and a home-coming dinner in the morning. In the evening the choir will give a concert, and we hope to have as guest speaker Doctor G. Leonard Harrington. This is the fifth anniversary of our occupancy of this church home, and a special building fund offering will be received.

The Harvest Festival will be held at the Auditorium in Independence October 7 to 12. Kansas City Stake will be represented in a booth depicting industrial Zion. Gifts of canned fruits and vegetables are to be used for church institutions and the poor. Tithe your fruit.

Bennington Church

The Saints of Bennington will hold an all-day home-coming service October 5, to which they especially invite all former attendants and all the ministry who have preached for them, as well as friends. They will make the day a worth-while experience to all who attend. A basket lunch will be served after the sacrament service. Those who can not be with the Saints of this congregation, please send a card, which will be read during the service. The members feel that they are progressing at Bennington and hope to do a good share of God's work.

The little brick church is located on the corner of Thirteenth and Bennington Streets.

Decatur, Illinois

1174 West King Street

The work of the church is moving along in this city after the extremely hot weather we experienced this summer. Vacations have ended, and we are making preparations to hold a series of meetings by the first of October in which it is hoped much interest will be shown.

The Sunday school held its annual picnic on Labor Day at Fairview Park. Many good dishes were spread on the picnic table, and the time after lunch was given to playing games and participating in contests. We were glad to have Elder H. V. Minton, district president, and family, of Taylorville, here on Sunday, and the members were given a treat in spiritual food by Brother Minton. He admonished us to come up higher and to prepare for a missionary effort.

Among other events of the month were the marriage of Mrs. Dottie Young to E. J. Short, Pastor O. C. Johnson officiating at the church, and the baptism of the twelve-year-old daughter of Sister Sadie Stephenson, of Bloomington, Illinois.

Brother D. C. Moore, of Aurora, Illinois, was here one Sunday of late and occupied the stand at the evening service. His sermon presented many good thoughts.

Pastor O. C. Johnson is improving in health after almost a year of sickness. He is now able to reassume all his duties.

Holden Stake

Knobnoster

The splendid showers of Saturday afternoon and night, September 6, brought cheer to our hearts after a drought of several months.

On August 24 Brother U. W. Greene worshiped with us. His discourse both morning and evening were full of food for thought.

Brother E. E. Petre, who recently underwent an operation at a Kansas City hospital, is reported to be getting along nicely and will soon be able to return home. Brother F. A. McWethy, of the stake presidency, met in sacrament with our group September 7. He occupied the pulpit at night.

Brother Albert Floyd and family and Sister Mary Floyd, of Palestine, have been visiting with Brother and Sister Don Chick, Sister Albert Floyd's mother. Brother Floyd, his mother, and son will leave for Jaffa, Palestine, the 11th of September. On Tuesday evening a little farewell surprise was tendered them. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served, and an enjoyable time was had.

Dayton, Ohio

Woodward and Howell Avenues

Dayton Saints were much alive during the month of August. Pastor Rockwell being absent most of the time, Assistant Pastor G. W. Stevens carried on activities in a dignified manner.

On the tenth of the month, the building committee recommended the renting of a church building at the corner of Woodward and Howell Avenues on the west side of the city. Without opposition their recommendation was adopted, and our first use of the new meeting place was August 13. The edifice will seat two hundred persons and besides the main auditorium, it has eight separate classrooms for church school. It is also well equipped with a basement for banquets and socials. The acquisition of this building has enhanced in every way our opportunities in this city.

On the last three Sunday evenings, Elder Francis May was the speaker. His themes, "Personal greatness," "Community greatness," and "Millennial greatness," were well delivered and gratefully received.

Commencing August 1, Dayton Branch began a five months' trial of the group method of working in religious education. George Hunter was elected superintendent of religious education; John Stults, leader of the adult group; Floyd Rockwell, leader of the young people; and Effie Hunter of the children. We are hoping for greater efficiency, especially in the field of recreation.

The first week of September brought some special favors in the presence of Bishop J. A. Becker and Apostle Clyde F. Ellis. The bishop spoke on Friday evening, making plain the financial law. Apostle Ellis spoke on "Stewardships" the following evening. In a general way he referred to the distress and disappointments of selfish individualism and the widespread tendency to seek something more excellent. Then, in a concise and masterly manner, he presented "Christ in you, the hope of glory." Under the subtitles, "Man," "Others," and "God," he set forth our personal duty, our social responsibility, and our missionary opportunities. Moved by the clearness of his concepts, the excellence of his delivery, the strength of his teaching, there came to many of us the realization that the Christ of the Restoration is indeed the Leader of religious education.

Saint Louis District Conference

The Saints of this district gathered at Lansdowne Branch, East Saint Louis, Illinois, in conference capacity Saturday, September 6. The business session was conducted under the supervision of the district presidency, the routine of receiving reports from officers and committees occupying a large part of the meeting. Brother Ralph N. Remington, who lately moved to Independence, Missouri, tendered his resignation as superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression for the district, and the office for the unexpired term was given to Brother Edgar Boren, of Belleville, Illinois, Sunday school district superintendent.

Following this session, Presiding Patriarch Frederick A. Smith addressed the congregation, giving fatherly counsel and advice. He chose as a basis for his talk, the words of the song in Zion's Praises, "Earnest workers for the Master." This address proved to be the keynote of the entire conference, all the subsequent meetings being dominated by the theme, "Earnest workers for the Master." Brother Smith addressed the congregation on Sunday morning at the eleven o'clock hour, continuing his general theme, and again at the priesthood meeting his counsels were of an instructive nature. They should bear fruit in the lives of the men of our ministry.

The Women's Department was privileged to have Sister Grace Billinsky as headline attraction in its program. Sister Billinsky, just returned from an extended tour of European countries, had a very interesting lecture. Her description of the Passion Play, which she witnessed at Oberammergau, was very delightful.

Elder C. A. Edstrom, the new pastor of Saint Louis Church, was the occupant of the pulpit at the evening hour, pleading with the people to continue vigorously in their efforts to convert themselves into earnest workers for the Master, and have for their very own the knowledge of the truth expressed by the Apostle Paul, "The gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto salvation."

The next conference will meet with Saint Louis Branch, November 29, and at that time the district officers for the ensuing year will be chosen.

West Haven, Connecticut

September 10.—Regular church services are now being held each Sunday at the home of Brother and Sister Donald E. Crowell, 23 Admiral Street, West Haven. Sunday morning worship opens at 10.30; Sunday school at 11.45; study hour seven o'clock in the evening; prayer service Wednesday evening at 7.30.

We will be glad to have members living in or near New Haven meet and worship with us. There is a regular attendance of twelve adults, eight children, and two cradle roll members.

Thus far the humble efforts of this small group have been blessed by the presence of the Spirit. The members have every reason to believe that there is much to be done here, and we are uniting our forces for the advancement of the work.

ALICE C. CROWELL.

Kirtland, Ohio

Absence of the tented city which occupied the grounds adjoining Kirtland Temple during the reunion, causes us to feel somewhat deserted. Local Saints, however, treasure memories of the reunion which will encourage them to strive harder to attain our goal—Zion.

Among the reunion events which the young people will long remember were the young people's prayer meetings. On one occasion a regiment of young people left the camp at seven o'clock in the morning for a hike to Temple View. Brother Jacques was marshal and was aided by Brother Carr, of Pittsburgh, and Brother Farrow, pastor of Cleveland Branch. When the group arrived in the woods, a suitable place was selected for a halt and a splendid song and prayer service was conducted under an immense pine tree.

The Kirtland Religio executive committee presented a concert at the Kirtland High School auditorium. The proceeds will be used to purchase new chairs for our own auditorium, which is used as a cafeteria during reunion.

Classes were conducted at the reunion by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis and Bishop J. A. Becker as well as a class in music sponsored by Miss Amy Glassford and Mrs. F. T. Haynes.

A traffic signal (semaphore) was used for the first time in Kirtland during the reunion. The Boy Scouts under police supervision helped direct traffic.

The tower on the Temple has been repaired with a new railing and a copper roof. Plans for a historical museum on the third floor of the Temple are under way. Contributions will include articles of interest belonging to the period in which the Temple was built. Communications concerning contributions should be mailed to our pastor and temple attendant, Elder John Cooper, Kirtland Route, Willoughby, Ohio.

Patriarch G. T. Griffiths and wife were welcome guests at the Temple August 31. Brother Griffiths was the morning speaker.

Branch activities are conducted regularly under the direction of the new pastor, and we pray that success will attend our efforts.

MAE GILL.

Sacramento, California

September 11.—District President Elder G. P. Levitt recently conducted a four-night class in public speaking. The class was an enjoyable one, and so keen an interest was awakened in this subject that some of the members of the priesthood and others have arranged to continue the study in the night high school.

On the evening of August 1, President F. M. Smith was here and spoke to an assembly of the Saints and friends. He spoke very ably on world conditions and the need of the social principles of the gospel. At the close of the service little Lila Jean, infant daughter of Brother and Sister Ralph Sabin, was blessed by the prophet and Pastor W. H. Dawson. Brother Levitt was in charge of the evening's service.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, Sister Marion Burton in charge, gave a swimming party and watermelon feed for the branch at the American River Beach the last Friday evening in August. A camp fire and games were also enjoyed.

During the vacation months Sister Edna Burdick has acted as branch chorister, leading the congregational singing and providing special numbers. The choir, Sister Birdie Clark, leader, is soon to resume work.

Mrs. Inez Peterson and son, Eddie, of Oakland, are living here now. We are glad to welcome Eddie with his violin to our orchestra.

Mrs. Louise Harter and young son, of Yuba City, are established here now, and with the former's mother, Sister McRoberts, often worship with us.

Having lived a righteous life and complied with the whole law, she was ready for the change and looked forward to the time when she might join the heavenly hosts. When she realized that she was soon to go, she sent for Brother A. R. Lawn, desiring administration, not that she might be healed, but that her life might be spared and her faculties remain normal until her loved ones could come to her that she might talk with them in regard to the gospel plan and their salvation. This prayer was answered.

INDEPENDENCE BRANCH SCHOOL

Is Now Starting Its Third Successful Year's Work.

This school, though not an institution of the church, has been prompt to recognize the church's attitude and high standard in education, and has affiliated its Independence interests with our educational plans. It uses for its work our own "Campus" building and the profits accruing go to the benefit of that building's work. Saints therefore should feel the importance of sustaining its interests rather than those outside.

Particular attention is called to our CLASS LESSON PLAN FOR BEGINNERS. Classes are in charge of highly competent instructors, specially trained for this work. Progress is always gratifying. This plan is recommended for those wanting the best in instruction but who can not afford the higher fees of eminent teachers, or for those who may wish to determine the talent and aptitude of a child.

District Reports

One of our younger men, recently selected to assume responsibility of presiding over a district, wrote the Presidency as follows:

"As nearly as I can discover there has been no systematic reporting from the district, and we are trying to get this organized. From my business experience I know that systematic reporting from men is the best disciplinarian to get action, so I am fully in favor of keeping after reports. It will take some time to get this done, but we will try to make a showing. Will you please advise at your convenience what kind of reports you wish from district presidency, and if there are any regular forms for such reports other than the form No. 504 for branch presidents.

"We have felt it would be a good plan to cooperate with the bishop's agent in an effort to get every member listed as having filed his inventory. It seems to me that if we go after this as an objective, and if we can make any showing as to results, the spirituality of the entire district will automatically show an increase in growth."

The above objective of this district president is passed on to the readers of the Herald in the hope that it may stimulate other district presidents to give thoughtful consideration to the question of reports.

As one of the Presidency, I, while I appreciate the value of statistics, am more interested in the question of the spiritual advancement and the financial development of the Saints individually and collectively than I am in the mere matter of statistics, but I realize that statistics are often the indices which point to spiritual progress.

It is to be hoped that whatever changes in our statistical form, as at present used, are made necessary by changing conditions and developing organization, will be made so that the presidents who are disposed to statistics will be amply able to furnish a full report on the activities of the district and the priesthood therein.

The promise of great progress in the church which is just before us, and in order for us to meet the growing demands upon us as a people to reach our goals and objectives and to keep pace with the additional calls being made upon us by divinity to develop and progress, must keep us on the alert, and we are therefore under the necessity of taking advantage of everything which will assist in developing a deeper and more significant appreciation of the spiritual values that lie in activity in church ceremonies, meetings, and general activities.

The Presidency is always anxious to cooperate with district presidents who are looking forward and trying to develop matters along more efficient lines, and we trust the suggestions from the district president above referred to will be helpful to all our district officers.

Historical Program for October

For Local Branches

Subject: "The Reorganization."

Following the death of the Martyrs in 1844, the church was plunged into a period of darkness and sorrow. Men arose one after another and presumed on various claims to stand in the place of prophet and president. The Saints were confused and torn by the conflict of factions. Some followed after this leader and that; others turned away in bitterness, hoping never again to hear the name of the church spoken. Some there were who, after testing and rejecting the self-appointed leaders, preserved their confidence in "the faith once delivered to the saints," and waited for the time when God should again speak to his people.

Out of these years of stress and storm the Reorganization was born.

Suggested Program

Song: "O for a faith," Number 104, Saints' Hymnal.

Prayer.

Music: Special number. (Quartet, "Lead, kindly Light" suggested.)

To One of the Least

One of our missionaries went to a town to hold a series of meetings. The meetings were a great success, and everyone was enthusiastic. They wanted him to come back and continue the good work. It looked as if he had really accomplished something for the cause.

This missionary had spent money for railroad fare to get to the town. He had expenses while he was there. And it cost him money to get to the next place in his field.

Nothing was said to him about money during his stay. The last minute before he left, one brother came to him and put a sum of something less than three dollars into his hand. The pathetic insufficiency, the miserliness, the inhumanity of this treatment, did not seem to occur to the man.

The missionary had to call on the bishop for funds, and he came into the next town without money to buy a lunch. He was hungry, and he began to wonder what it all meant.

For I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: naked, and ye clothed me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. . . . Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me.—Matthew 25: 42, 43, 45.

Keeping Sweet

One of the greatest distinctions of Jesus was his ability to keep his disposition from souring, even in the face of all the suffering and humiliation, the disappointment and pain that he endured. This ability to remain sweet tempered and kind is to be recommended to all people, in all places, at all times.

There is a little clerk who serves large numbers of people every day. The public that she serves pays her salary, maintains the good building in which she works, and makes it possible for her to earn a comfortable living at an easy job.

Yet she chooses to scorn the public that she serves. She wears a sour, washed-out expression on her face. She looks disappointed, and she doesn't care who knows it. More than that, she takes every possible opportunity to make herself disagreeable to the public, and to make the transactions she performs unpleasant ones.

Her punishment is that she becomes the kind of person that she tries to be. Her character and personality are becoming the product of endless daily

Harvest Festival at the Auditorium

The twelfth annual Harvest Festival will be held in the Auditorium, October 7-12 inclusive. As the time approaches, intensive preparations are being made to take care of the exhibits and to make the display of grains, fruits, and vegetables more attractive than ever.

Last year many exhibits arrived only one day before the opening date. This works a great hardship on the committee in charge of the Festival, and also the people who are made responsible for constructing the booths and displaying the exhibits. This year it is desirable that shipments be made in time to reach Independence not later than the second or third of October.

There will be a larger display of poultry and rabbits than in the two previous years, and it is quite probable that an industrial exhibit will be added to the festival program.

All requests for space and for information regarding the exhibits should be directed to T. A. Beck, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. Also all exhibits should be consigned to him.

An interesting exhibit from the Hawaiian Saints is already here. Brother G. J. Waller, who has always been interested in the Harvest Festival, has done much to gather and ship this exhibit.

A Correction

In the Saints' Herald for August 27, 1930, page 965, under "September activities of the church school," there appeared this statement: "In order that officers for the new year may take their places the first Sunday in October, we suggest that the annual election take place as early as convenient in September."

On consultation with the First Presidency, it is discovered that such a procedure might in places interfere with established custom in some branches, particularly where the annual election is held at a fixed time near the close of the calendar year. In such case it would evidently be unwise to order a separate business meeting for the election of church school officers in September or October.

little acts and words of unpleasantness. She will be justly punished.

Let us learn from Jesus to keep our dispositions sweet.

Defending the Forties

A correspondent objects to the remarks of the Reverend Stegg, recently quoted on this page. Her objections would be worth quoting at length, but we have not the space here. Among other things, she says:

"There have always been lawbreakers, and law-breaking has never been confined to any age; . . . it seems to me the cause is to be found, not in the age of the lawbreaker, but in the fact that our laws, not being enforced, have caused the people to hold them in contempt, and the disregard of authority is advanced by just such propaganda as this article of Mr. Stegg's. Older people are not necessarily better than young ones. . . . A contempt for age is advanced from the pulpit and the press, and youth exploited without the object of such exploitation being clear. . . . Can you blame older people for resenting it, particularly when they know a man is just coming into his powers when he is thirty? Christ did not commence his ministry until he was thirty, but in the few years following he saved a world."

Bonds

"There are bonds that bind you and—bonds that set you free."—From the advertisement of a great insurance company.

In this short statement is a text for a sermon, a theme for a book, and a wise observation for the conduct of life.

Habits are the bonds that chain us to profitless and time-wasting pleasures, harmful appetites, unworthy companionships, and lives frittered away that end in nothing of much value.

Laws are the bonds that liberate us to a larger and freer life. The law binds me to peace, and at the same time guarantees me that my neighbor will keep the peace. The law keeps me from getting drunk and (most of the time) guarantees to keep my neighbor sober. The law prevents me from killing, but at the same time acts as a safeguard of my life.

The laws of the church are of the "bonds that set you free." They may fence us in, but they fence the world out. They are barriers, but they are also protections.

Red Flag—or Red Cross?

In South America the red flag of revolution is again waving. In time of political excitement every particular tyranny, upheld by military power, is in danger. Blood is spilled and life is wasted. The most brutal of human passions are loosed, and one may think that Dean Swift's terrible indictment of humanity approached the truth.

On the other hand, we have another picture. Santo Domingo, completely wrecked by a hurricane and its population decimated, with many thousands dead and many other thousands badly injured, is receiving the aid and sympathy of the world. More lately the shores of France have been lashed by a terrible storm that has taken great toll of life and property. The rest of the world will send help and comfort.

There are two classes of people in the world very unlike: those who wave the red flag, and those who bear the red cross; the one to destroy life, the other to save it.

The red flag is the symbol of hate; the Red Cross the symbol of love.

Prepared Teachers

No preacher, teacher, or anyone who seeks to lead youth in the way of life has any right to be unlearned or ignorant. Paul's word to his young friend Timothy, "study," or as the revised version has it, "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed," needs to be heeded.

Never was there so much splendid material available for those who would be the guide and the inspiration of youth, and never had capable men and women so much leisure time in which to prepare themselves to be workmen of God. Yet, Sunday after Sunday poorly prepared teachers appear before groups of young people and talk and twaddle and then wonder why young people stop coming to their classes. Jesus came to help people live an abundant and a joyous life. He went about doing good and helping troubled people to live the good life. To his followers today he says as he did to his followers of long ago, "Learn of me. I will make you fishers of men."—The Epworth Herald.

Preparation by Doing

A Task for Religious Education

By Bishop J. A. Koehler

The late Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, William H. Taft, recently called our attention to the manner in which education subordinates scholarship to sports. The inducements which colleges and universities hold out for patronage, the numerous activities which are featured, the achievements for which the individual is given social esteem, leave the mass of men with little or no concern in the improvement of the behavior of their fellows, either as individuals or as groups, except as their behavior may affect them privately or adversely. And few there are who find satisfaction, or even pleasure, in devotion to the essential tasks which satisfy the wants of the race.

Readjusting Worldly Standards

Religious education has to reverse this order. Its task is to cause men to love righteousness, the good, more than pleasure; and, therefore, to find their chief joys in the personal parts they take in enterprise which promotes the welfare of men generally, and therefore pleases God. Instead of teaching men to acquire means of acquiring, as secular education does, religious education must seek to give men the means of giving.

The basic principle of true religious education is set out in this statement: "You must prepare yourselves by doing." This we men of the church have not done. We have sought to prepare ourselves for doing. And we have failed to make the preparation for Christian living, which can be made only by doing. We have talked to the youth of the church about catching the vision of the task; but we have not given them the task in the doing of which they are enabled to catch the vision.

Exemplars of the Good Life

It is the business, it is the duty, it is the one hope of success of religious educators, of "born-again" men, of the saviors of the world, to be exemplars; to be livers of the life they would teach others to live. "Follow me" is the true method of religious education. "Let your light shine in this manner before men; that they, seeing your good works, may be lead to glorify God." How shall men, who themselves have not experienced the Christian life, teach others to live it? We have yet to show our faith in the purposes of the church, which are summed up in the one word, Zion, by determining ourselves to the task of Zion building. We have been too contented with mere verbal expositions in classrooms. And, in consequence, the task of building the kingdom, the task of making the governments of the world the government of God, has yet to be undertaken. My fellow ministers and teachers, it ill becomes men who themselves, with an open door of opportunity before them to actually share in the ongoing work of God in the world, have not shown the courage to make the adventure, to put such responsibilities upon the shoulders of boys or men of lesser lights.

The envisagement of a God-willed world by the mass of men is conditioned in leadership, in example, in adventure in ordering and establishing the affairs of the world in accordance with the will of God by those who are called to be "the light of the world"; and in this way, "the salt of the earth."

Revealing Christ in Life

If the church would win the world to Christ, it must reveal Christ in its own life; it must "make the Word flesh," that men may have opportunity to see and to understand it. This is the message of the prophet of the Restoration. This is the task of the teachers of Christian religion. "To seek to establish the cause of Zion." Zion, the ensign to the nations; Zion, the standard for the peoples; Zion, the highway of life, the Christian way of living, which the nations of the world some day "will be constrained to acknowledge is in very deed the kingdom." This is the obligation, the self-imposed obligation, of the teachers of religious education in this kingdom-building church. This is the reason for the important place that doctrines of economic justice, with their explicit demands for the building of a social order that will dispense economic justice, have in the work of the church.

We have said that religious education must center in personality. But what is the sum of the qualities or characteristics that we wish to build in individual men? And what are the conditions for the development of those qualities? "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets": love of God and love of fellow men. That is to say, that religious education seeks to arouse or awaken within the individual a feeling or emotion that will cause him to appreciate his fellows as men; to find delight in the unfoldment of their manhood; to desire to live with his fellows as companions—in a state of true fellowship; and to please God by working at the tasks which promote the well-being and the happiness of the race. This is the love of God.

The Work of Religious Education

Now the conditions for the development of these qualities are not to be found in mere verbal discussions in classrooms; in the pursuit of knowledges, many of which are not capable of being applied to the purposes of promoting the welfare of men universally—though they can be applied by the individual or small groups of individuals to achieve certain private ends, often at the sacrifice of the welfare of men generally; neither are these conditions to be found in the subordination of the essential tasks of life to social activities which center my interests in me.

To develop world-saving qualities in the individual, his thoughts and his endeavors must be made to center in questions or problems of human living together; the stage must be set for playing the Christian game of life, in which, as the individual takes his part, he develops the qualities which fit him to discharge the duties of Christian living. "You must prepare yourselves by doing." If our present circumstances prevent the doing of these things in fact, then they must be done in fiction; the drama, like field practice, or what not, must be employed to prepare men for the real situations of a Christian social order. But do not sadden the hearts of men, when the hour for the actual playing of the game has struck, with fruitless attempts to satisfy their longings by indefinitely extending the time of practice and dramatization of hopes.

Religious education must seek, not only to adjust the individual to his environment, but to create the especial environment to which the life of the individual should be adjusted. And the major items of the religious life, of the Christian social order, are economic, domestic, political, and cultural and devotional elements. It is in these relations that the individual must be saved. That is to say that the task of religious education is to effect the rebirth of the individual and, through his regeneration, the reconstruction of society.

Our Special Task

And in our attempts to apply the principles of the Christian religion to the affairs of life, we have failed before we have begun if we are not aware of the fact that this age brings to religious education in a pressing way a special task; one with which, so far as we know, it has not before been confronted, and in the accomplishment of which we must make new and special applications of the principles of Christian religion to the affairs of secular life. The economic situations growing out of the industrial revolution, science and invention, advancements of the arts, increasing density of population and complexity of civilization, demand new definitions of rights and obligations; new duties for men in association; new concepts of justice; new and higher forms of expression of love of neighbor. And all that means the creation of a new social order and the preparation of the individual for the discharge of the duties of that new system of administration of the affairs of peoples.

It is logical, therefore, that the purpose of religious education, which is the purpose of the church, should center in this building of this Christian social order; we call it "Zion"; and in directing the energies of men of the church in and to this task. This is the logical purpose, again, because the task of the church is to order and to establish the government; that is, to build the kingdom; to bring into being a world ruled by the will of God. And all this means to order and to establish our own governments with justice and with judgment; to ground the essential activities of life in moral considerations—in considerations of right and wrong. This is the logical purpose of the church and of religious education, because all moral considerations are grounded in social facts; and, therefore, all moral development in the individual implies social adjustment. The church, then (and that means the men of the church), seeks an economic society, an industrial system, that affords universal opportunity and real freedom for both muscular and mental activities (for all forms of association) which are morally motivated—which are put forth from a conviction that, under God, we must share the responsibility for the welfare of the race.

And here is both the significance and the test of personality: one's choices in relation to the creation, the uses, and the dispositions of things, both material and immaterial, which concern all men and in which the interest of personality centers, because welfare and happiness are conditioned in their uses or consumption. "Using the things of this world in the manner designed of God, so that the places where the Saints occupy may shine as Zion, the redeemed of the Lord."

Readjustment of Relations

Religious education must think of the individual in relation to his environment. And this environment is made up of social relations as well as material things. In other words, religious education must seek right relations between both men and men, and between men and things. It is the habitual mode of conduct of the individual as expressive of his beliefs and his purposes in his relations as father or son, as employer or employee, as buyer or seller, as governor or as governed; as a citizen of the state; as a member of society which religious education seeks to influence and modify. And hence the obligation of the men of the church to order and to regulate their conduct in the fundamental social relations, to make it conform to the will of God.

Development through Practice

All development is affected by exercise in the field in which development is sought. Moral development is achieved through exercise in social relationships. Somehow, if we men of the church are to succeed, lessons of thrift, of frugality, of justice, of mercy, and all the rest, must be taught. And they can be taught successfully, and the individual prepared for the discharge of these duties, only by practicing—by attempting to apply the principles of right conduct for men in association. If we would train people for musical expression, we must lead them into fields of musical expression. If we would train people for social expression on the Christian basis, we must lead into fields of social expression on the Christian basis. We must qualify for the Christian life by living that life. The salvation of the world, our own salvation, is a matter of setting up the government of God as the government of the people.

In this relation there are many things that can be taught in the experiences of everyday life; the sharing of both responsibility and the fruits of victory; the willful rendering of accounts; the giving of sacrificial services; the subordination of private interest to public welfare; the development of a feeling of personal responsibility for the quality of the life of the group. We must make peace and good-will tangible. And to do that we must actually enact laws, build institutions, and regulate conduct—the conduct of the group, until it shall become the embodiment of good-will, the crystallization of Christian sentiments, a people and a life out of which God shall shine.

The idea to which I seek to give special emphasis here is the necessity of lifting ourselves up out of the realm of fiction and into the realm of fact. We must stop using language and promoting activities which leave government—the government of God, Zion, stewardships, mere figment of imagination, having no existence in fact, no relation to Christian personality, no bearing upon the satisfaction of human need, no reality, and no utility or power to save. We must make our objective tangible; it must be definite; it must be real; it must have form; it must be to a purpose; and it must have world significance.

Of what use is it, from the standpoint of religious education, to gather ideas or information merely for information's sake? Of what use is it to preach doctrine for preaching's sake or even for doctrine's sake? Such is theology. But religion is life. We must deal with ideas of human conduct that can be, that should be, that must be crystallized into social relations—into social forms which embody and express the sentiments of the people; and which preserve the ideal because they are real; and through this reality fire the imaginations of men and cause their lives to become molded into a living witness for God; which makes the word flesh.

Law and order and social organization are essential to good doing on the kingdom-building scale. "There must be an organization . . . to advance the cause which you have espoused." No odds how well-intentioned the individual, there still must be rules to govern conduct on the highway of life, and organs of government; otherwise the very liberty we seek will be destroyed by the liberty we share. And religious education has no more important lessons to teach than lessons of self-discipline and social endeavor with a view to making real the ideals which men hold in common. If personal adjustment to a Christianized social order is the goal of religious education, then we have no other alternative but to set the stage that the individual may have opportunity to play his part and learn to make his contribution to the building of God's kingdom.

If you will that I give you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing." Education is the preparation of the individual for the duties of life. The desire to share in the accomplishments of the church; the refashioning of the life of the group to make it conform to the will of God; the desire to develop the skills and acquire the knowledges necessary to make them efficient workmen in the building of this new social order will arise from the tastes, or the foretastes, of the fruit of the adventure; and from the hope of sharing with others the fruit of the ultimate triumph of the cause of the church: the building of a society that is in fact the government of God. The one hope of religious education, and of religious educators, of preparing men for these Christian duties, is to DO. "You must prepare yourselves by doing." If we would develop Christian men; not sports with a taste for speculation and games of chance; not mere gentlemen who neither insult nor inspire; but men with a passion for the uplift of humanity; then let us set the stage for exercise in the field in which development is sought.

To work with God is an indispensable method for coming to understand his character and his purposes.—Mary Alice Jones.

Questions and Answers

The following questions have been asked by T. L. Clark, of Flint, Michigan. Answers are given by the Presiding Bishop. If other readers have questions of general interest, we shall try to have them answered.

Question 1. "Are women to be set apart as stewards by the imposition of hands, the same as men?"
Yes.

Question 2. "Can an individual become a steward—be set apart—whose companion is not a member of the church; or, can one become a steward whose companion is a member of the church but not in sympathy with the stewardship movement?"

To the first part of this inquiry, we reply that we see no reason why this individual can not be set apart as a steward, provided his or her companion does not object. The answer to the last part of question No. 2 is included in the above.

Question 3. "Are full-time ministers of the church to be set apart as stewards by the imposition of hands, or is this comprehended in their ordination?"

Yes—to be set apart.

Question 4. "What about the minister's wife. Is she to be set apart?"
Yes.

Question 5. "About how much cash money should a man have in order to be taken into a Community Stewardship Group, such as is organized at Ather-ton, Missouri; that is, assuming he has otherwise qualified?"

At the present time, on account of lack of necessary funds with which to put on the necessary improvements on the land for occupation, the steward ought to have in the neighborhood of about $2,000 or more. Note that this is only an expediency. It is hoped that some day we will be able to help people who have not the means. This will come when the Saints more fully comply with the law.

Question 6. "What other enterprises besides farming will there be opportunity for men to engage in in these stewardship communities in the near future?"

Any legitimate business. This would mean any business that is warranted by the laws of God and man—anything that supplies the need of the human race. It is our sincere hope that we can begin to establish any of these needed industries just as soon as possible. We are waiting for those who have the qualifications to do so to come and get to work.

Question 7. "Are we justified in saying that as soon as an individual proves his worth and meets the qualifications of a steward, he will be given opportunity to become a member of some stewardship community? In other words, that the gathering is upon us, but the call is first to prepare?"

We answer, Yes, remembering the last statement, that all should first prepare, this preparation to be done in harmony with those having the burden of the gathering.

Questionnaire for the Local Church

NUMBER 1.—CHECK YOUR BRANCH ON ITS PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

By F. Henry Edwards

What is the first impression made by your church building as it is approached by strangers? What impression does it make on the best type of your own members? Is the public notice board clean and readable? Are the announcements up to date? How long is it since the building was painted? Is the grass cut? Are there any flowers round the building in their seasons? Are the windows clean? Is there any litter of papers, etc., scattered about?

What is the first impression made by the interior of your church building? Is it clean? A building littered with torn hymnals, church papers, coats, and hats is not conducive to elevated worship. Is it cheerful? A few flowers will make a world of difference. An untidy or cheerless room gives a very unfavorable impression of the people who worship there.

What do you have on the walls of the church? Are announcements and banners scattered round without relation to each other? Are pictures clean, well chosen, and well located? Do they hang straight?

How is the church ventilated? A poorly ventilated church means an inattentive congregation. How is the church heated? How is it cooled? Are there enough fans to go round in hot weather?

Have you adequate equipment? If not, are you taking steps to secure it in the proper order and in a reasonably short time? Do you have the standard books available for pulpit use? Have you Bibles, hymn books, etc., for the average congregation? Do you have enough blackboards, sand trays, children's chairs, etc.? Do you have any kitchen equipment? Are there enough sacrament cups? Are you proud of your baptismal font?

Does your church possess attractive individuality? Are visitors likely to be won by its physical

The Rally Day Sermon

By John Blackmore

What shall be the rally day sermon? Here is an opportunity: what shall be the response? Undoubtedly, the type of sermon should be determined in a large measure by the spirit of the day and the kind of group comprising the congregation. Each minister should make a survey of the most important spiritual needs of the people and build his sermon to meet that need.

The Young People

If the rally day spirit has really gripped the congregation and the preliminary work has been well planned and executed, then the young folk will be in attendance. Therefore it will be well for the speaker to recognize their presence and to deliver the bread of life in a manner adapted to their experiences. Of course, the minister will understand that these young people are critically watching him and weighing his message in the light of their own life experiences.

The Children

Some pastors will choose to make this rally day an event when all of the different age groups will meet together in the morning preaching service. Instead of the regular junior service, there will be a mixing of the ages. This arrangement is often essentially good, as it gives to all the idea of group unity. But it also affects the sermon. Surely, somewhere in the spoken message, the speaker will recognize the presence of the children. It will be a tragedy if the children do not receive spiritual food in this service.

It might be well if a definite part of the service is arranged for the enjoyment and appreciation of the children. The adults will also enjoy it, as most grown folk love to see the children recognized and happy. Tell a good story suited to the children and watch how the older people of your congregation will enjoy it.

The Visiting Guest

To be sure, each speaker will keep in mind the possible evangelism of the visitors. Yet, the sermon will not be the only message that the guests of the congregation will receive that morning. The attitudes and behavior of the young people will also be a message, whether it be good or bad. The absence of the young folk will be observed by the visitors, and conclusions will be drawn. A visiting mother will delight in the children's part of the service and perchance will send her child to the church school next Sunday.

We may teach the visitors at the rally day services by example as well as by precept. Perhaps in the final analysis the example will be the strongest influence to win the hearts of the visitors to the church and its services.

What to Do

If you are a visiting speaker, talk the matter over with the pastor and discover, if possible, what will be the composition of the congregation. On the other hand, if you are one of the regular local officers, study the situation and prayerfully prepare your sermon with all of the above-mentioned factors in mind.

After all, the most important consideration is not the minister and his sermon but the people and their spiritual needs.

Intermediate Worship Programs for October

Arranged by Howard Cook, Leta B. Moriarty,
and W. Earl Page

In Independence, at the Stone Church the young folk of intermediate age meet at the eleven o'clock period for their own worship service and sermonet. These meetings are well attended and have served a purpose for the young congregations that could not have been obtained in a service designed for older people.

Readers are referred to the Herald for September 10, 1930, page 1019, to the themes for the school year.

In this article the authors have outlined the services for the month of October, using the themes previously listed. They are highly recommended.

—EDITOR.

During the month of October the following four programs will be presented by and for the boys and girls of intermediate age in the intermediate church services of the Stone Church congregation. The hour of this meeting is 10.45 each Sunday morning; the place, the lower auditorium of the Stone Church. "Adventuring with Christ in courage" is the theme for the month.

Scripture reading, Matthew 4: 18-23.

Address: "Courage to make our decision: to follow Christ." This talk should be planned to take twenty minutes. After the introduction of the speaker, the room is darkened, and during the course of the talk the following copies of master paintings from the life of Christ are thrown on a screen by a stereopticon machine: "Sistine Madonna," Raphael; "Christ returned from Egypt," Dobson; "Christ in the temple," Hofmann; "Christ's baptism"; "Christ preaching from a boat," Hofmann; "Christ blessing little children," Hofmann; "Christ healing the sick," Hofmann; "Christ in prayer," Hofmann; "Jesus the Christ," Hofmann. This collection will furnish an excellent pictorial background for the sermonet.

Hymn: "Where love leads the way," congregation.

Benediction.

The properly conducted church school is a very important feature of religious work, because it serves the young people at a time when they are most impressionable and, particularly, because it affords them opportunity for an intimate acquaintance with that monument of splendid literature, the Bible. Both as literature and as inspiration, the Bible has a value with which no other work can be compared, and every activity that expands and popularizes the knowledge of it is extremely worth while.—Detroit's Beacon Light.

Organizing for the New Year

FOR THE WORKERS' CONFERENCE IN OCTOBER

By Charles B. Woodstock

Attention has been called in recent issues of the Saints' Herald to the fact that the new year of the church school classes begins in October. The basis of this suggestion has been the beginning of our quarterly courses at that time. This is true also of the quarterlies of all the large Christian churches. Indeed, it is considered to be the most favorable time to organize new classes and to begin new studies. It may be inadvisable to elect new officers at this time, since branch officers are generally chosen in December or January. But certainly it is a time for newly organizing class work.

Special reasons for beginning in October rather than in January or July are as follows:

1. In the northern hemisphere, where fully 90 per cent of the church membership live, the public school year opens in the fall.
2. Public school promotions form new groupings of children and young folks, a common basis for promotion in the church school.
3. There is more continuity of study through succeeding months if begun in October than at any other possible time.

Grading and Promotion

Without any question our schools should be graded. That is, there should be an orderly arrangement of the members of the school by which they are divided into logical groups for consistent work. Probably every school has a mixture of children, youth, middle-aged, and older people. They vary widely in experience, in interests, in thinking power, and in ability to understand and use the instruction given, or to participate in the activity suggested. An effort at grading will separate the school into groups as nearly as may be on the basis of interests, needs, and capacities.

This basis, the "I. N. C." (Interests, Needs, and Capacities) of modern pedagogy, follows pretty closely the mental age of the individuals. Thus we should group together as Juniors those who have mental ages of normal children between nine and twelve. This only roughly parallels the grouping by physical ages. Normal children, having ordinary advantages of development, will have normal mental capacities. That is, normal children of nine years usually have a mental age of nine years; they have the same general range of past experience, the same ability to understand, to imagine, to remember, to think, plan, and reason, and to carry out ideas. In general they have the same interests and experience the same needs. Of course they will vary between the slow or dull child and the one who is quick and alert. There will also be the very dull child, on the one hand, and the very bright or precocious child at the other extreme. But these are either subnormal or abnormal and must be considered and placed on their individual merits.

The public school probably does the best grading on the basis of mental life. This is most nearly true in our large city schools. So it may be best to adopt the public school grading of pupils from the Kindergarten age up to, and perhaps through, the high school. Usually a member of the Sunday school will do best work and be happiest in a class of students with whom he associates in the public school. Again, there are exceptions to this rule. Some public schools fail to promote a pupil on a mere technicality, and he is held back as a "repeater" for a whole year. If he has been faithful to his Sunday school class, we would not be justified in refusing him promotion.

A Grading Standard

We hesitate to set up a standard of grading so arbitrary that the best interests of individuals are sacrificed for the sake of maintaining the rule of the school. We would rather say, "The need of the child is the law of the school." Our big problem is to fully understand the real need of the child and to establish a basis of grading which is flexible enough to do justice to all, and yet stable enough to be consistent and to merit confidence and respect.

In general, then, the following is recommended, using both the physical age and the public school grading. Most children are normal and will cause no difficulty. The exceptions must be studied carefully and every effort made to do justice, first to the child and then to the best interests of the whole school.

Ages	Church School	Public School
Birth to 4 years	Nursery
4 and 5 years	Kindergarten	Kindergarten
6, 7, and 8 years	Primary	Grades 1, 2, and 3
9, 10, and 11 years	Junior	Grades 4, 5, and 6
12, 13, and 14	Intermediate	Grades 7, 8, and 9 or Junior High
15, 16, and 17	Senior	Senior High age
18 to 24 (about)	Young People	College age
About 24 and up	Adult

Promotion Plan

Promotions from one department to another should occur as nearly on the above basis as practicable. If physical age is the determining factor, children of the primary department who are to be nine years of age before January 1, following, should be promoted at this time to the junior department. If the school grade is taken as the standard, then those who have been promoted to grade 4 should now be advanced to the junior department.

The same rule would hold in promotion from other departments.

Exceptional cases of backward children, and those unusually advanced for their ages, must be considered and placed as individuals where they will have the greatest opportunity for growth and advancement without doing an injustice to others in the school. A backward child of twelve, if underdeveloped physically, will be happier and gain more with a group of juniors with whom he works and plays in day school, than if advanced into a group quite beyond him in powers of thinking and feeling. While a physically normal boy of fifteen, who has not been able to go on to high school should not be denied promotion because of that fact. Probably above the intermediate grades the school grading is not so significant. The social grouping, determined by the developing interests of later adolescence, becomes a more important factor.

Special Recognition

There are at least three purposes to be served through the holding of promotion day exercises.

Its first value is found in the stimulating effect upon individuals of the school in the public recognition of worthy attainment on the part of the pupils promoted. A suitable certificate should be presented to those who have completed the work of a department with credit. In some places a careful check has been attempted and the passing of an examination each quarter has been required of those promoted. It is doubtful, however, if a rigid requirement of attendance and participation may be set as a basis for promotion. Some such standard might be arranged to determine those whose attainment merited special recognition, by a certificate or otherwise.

The program should be interesting and stimulative, an altogether happy occasion, marking the progress of the school and the passage of pupils through the progressive courses of religious education. This is a matter of publicity which should not be overlooked.

Special recognition in promotion plans assist also in establishing a standard, both of progress through the church school and of attainment of pupils in class work. It is unfortunate for the members of a class or a school to look upon the class work of the school as a joke or to treat lightly the earnest endeavor of teachers to interest the class in matters of a religious nature.

Promotion Exercises

The exercises should be dignified, reverential, uplifting. It should be an exercise of the branch and not merely of the school. The songs, prayers, and talks should all be carefully planned to contribute to the effect of the occasion.

Let the classes to be promoted sit in places of honor. The church should be especially decorated with flowers and plants or autumn leaves to make a pretty setting. The certificates or awards should be prepared beforehand and neatly arranged to be given out without confusion.

The addresses should be studiously prepared to express appreciation of the efforts of pupils and teachers, a challenge to future endeavor, faith in the church and its program, and confidence in the integrity of the boys and girls who are to be the real leaders of the church in its achievements—a few years hence.

Promotion should mark a high point in the work of the school. It should prepare the way for a most favorable opening of the new church school year on the following Sunday.

Topics for Discussion

1. Discuss the advantages and disadvantages of closing the church school year with September. How may the disadvantages be overcome?

2. What do you think of the "I. N. C." basis of grading? Can you make it work in your school?

3. Is the standard of grading as outlined in effect in your school? What exceptions have been necessary? How have they been justified?

4. Discuss local plans for promotion. What advantages are found in public exercises? What difficulties may be encountered? How shall they be met?

5. Discuss plans for promotion exercises. How may they be made most effective?

Characters and Costumes

High Priest—dresses in loose robe in rich colors, high cap, and a breastplate.

Paul—A determined young man, dressed in a loose robe with a wide girdle about the waist, flowing turban on his head.

Ananias—dresses same as Paul, only in different colors.

Servants—dress in loose robes with cords about their waists and turbans on their heads.

Chorus—is hidden behind scenes. The Voice is one of the men members of the chorus near the place from which the light appears.

SCENE I

(The pianist plays one verse and chorus of "Victory through grace," from Zion's Praises, No. 2. The curtain is raised as music ends.)

PAUL (striding back and forth before the high priest, who is seated at the table): We have done away with Stephen, but the Christians are redoubling their efforts. Something must be done. The followers of Jesus are becoming too numerous and gaining too much power. We must stop them.

HIGH PRIEST (gravely): Yes, something must be done. They are poisoning the people with their vile teachings. How can we stop them?

PAUL: Give me letters to the synagogues in Damascus, that I may bring them, men and women, to Jerusalem in chains, and throw them into prison.

HIGH PRIEST (writing as he speaks): Throw their leaders into prison and force them from their gathering places, and we will have them where we want them. (Gives Paul a scroll.)

PAUL: Now I have authority to destroy the Christians. (Paul takes the scroll, bows, and exits to the right. The chorus sings first stanza and chorus of No. 12 in Zion's Praises before the curtain descends.)

SCENE II

(Paul and two servants are traveling to Damascus. Paul is carrying the scroll.)

PAUL (holding out the scroll): At last I can destroy the followers of Jesus and save my people from such contemptible doctrines.

SERVANTS: We will help you all we can.

PAUL: We shall overthrow both the followers and the teachings of this base man who called himself the Son of God. (As Paul finishes this speech, a bright light is flashed upon him. He falls to the ground, face downward. Servants cover their faces with their arms and turn slightly from the light.)

VOICE (in the direction from which the light comes): "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?"

(Chorus sings first stanza and chorus of "The Savior at the door," Zion's Praises, No. 152.)

PAUL: "Who art thou, Lord?"

VOICE: "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest; it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks."

PAUL: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"

VOICE: "Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do." (Light vanishes.)

PAUL (Rises and gropes as in darkness): I can see no man! Lead me to the city. (Servants go to him, and one on each side lead him from the stage to the right. Chorus sings all stanzas, and then the chorus, "Lead me, O my Savior, lead me," Zion's Praises, No. 73.)

(Curtain.)

SCENE III

House of Ananias. (As the scene opens, Ananias is standing in meditation while the chorus sings the first two verses of "Jesus, my Shepherd," Zion's Praises, No. 117. As the song ends, a light appears.)

VOICE: Ananias.

ANANIAS (drops to knees, arms toward the light): "Behold, I am here, Lord."

VOICE: "Arise, and go into the street which is called Straight, and inquire in the house of Judas for one called Saul of Tarsus; for, behold, he prayeth, and hath seen in a vision a man called Ananias coming and putting his hands on him that he might receive his sight."

ANANIAS: "Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to thy saints at Jerusalem, and how he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all that call on thy name."

VOICE: "Go thy way; for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles and kings, and the children of Israel; for I show him how great things he must suffer for my name's sake."

(As light fades away, Ananias rises, and the chorus sings last stanza of Zion's Praises, No. 117.)

(Curtain.)

SCENE IV

(Blind Paul is kneeling by a bench. A table at one side is covered with food. The servants are standing near the table.)

FIRST SERVANT (looking at the table and then at Paul): For three days he has eaten nothing.

SECOND SERVANT: And has drunk nothing.

(A knock is heard at the left door, and Ananias is admitted. The servants then retire. Ananias looks about the room for a moment, then goes to Paul and places hands upon his head.)

ANANIAS: Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost."

PAUL (rising and looking around him): I can see! I can see!

(Both seat themselves as in conversation while the chorus sings all of "Tell me the story of Jesus," Zion's Praises, No. 27, and the second stanza and chorus of No. 94, "Ye must be born again." As the song ends, both arise and exit to the right together.)

(Curtain.)

SCENE V

Paul stands near the center of the stage looking up. The chorus sings all of No. 28, "I'll go where you want me to go."

(Slow curtain.)

The Standard Church Troop

By E. E. Closson

Boys of the church between the ages of twelve and sixteen are looking for a program of activity that offers fun, excitement, competition, and above all membership in a real live "gang" of fellows with whom they have daily association. We must not blame the boys for wanting such experiences. It is much better for us to recognize their feelings in this respect and furnish a program that includes these things, plus definite instruction in more central fields of religious education.

The Standard Church Troop provides an ideal program of activities to be carried out through our own organization in the church school. Every branch should see that its boys have the benefits that can be derived from scouting. Intermediate superintendents should recognize that scouting supplements and enhances our program of religious education for boys of scout age in every way. Under the leadership of a good Latter Day Saint scoutmaster, it becomes a potent missionary agency and serves as a basis for more intimate spiritual contacts.

A pamphlet explaining the Standard Church Troop will be sent out without charge to any branch interested in providing its boys with this valuable program. Address The Director of Young People, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Minimum Requirements for a Standard Church Troop

1. The Troop Committee of three or more is composed of members of the church, including the pastor, and the director of Religious Education, where there is one, who function as a committee having general supervision of the scoutmaster and the troop.

2. The scoutmaster is a church member (preferably a member of the church sponsoring the troop).

3. The pastor of the church, or some one designated by him, serves as chaplain of the troop and maintains a personal interview relationship with each scout in the troop.

4. The "parent church" makes definite provision for a suitable troop meeting room for one night each week.

5. The troop calendar of activities, including all meetings in the building and away from the building, is approved in advance by the troop committee. (On this basis the troop's right to its meeting room will not be violated by assigning it to other purposes on the nights of the troop meeting. This provision also insures harmony of thought and action in regard to Sunday and week-end hikes.)

6. The troop, when chartered, is started off with a public investiture ceremony (preferably in a regular service of the church) in which the individual members of the troop committee are definitely charged with their responsibility to supervise the work of the troop according to the terms of the troop charter by which they are bound to guard the interests of the troop. (See page 14 of the pamphlet for Investiture Ceremony.)

7. The plan is adopted by vote of the troop staff and the boys in the troop.

8. A definite program of achievements which includes (a) Troop projects, (b) Patrol projects and (c) Individual achievements is maintained. Section II of the pamphlet covers these requirements specifically.

9. All scouts in the troop fulfill the requirements for scouts in the several ranks (as listed in Sec. II), and give satisfactory evidence that they are "faithful" in their "religious duties" as required in the Twelfth Scout Law.

10. Each scout in the troop below first class rank advances at least one rank during the year.

Some Rhythms and Suggestions for Their Use

By Myrtle A. Weber

The children's native love for music is real and spontaneous. Music "puts sunshine in the heart." We do not find it so much a problem to teach our children to like music as to choose the best from the abundance offered. The musical education of little children is divided into three phases—singing, rhythmic response, and listening for enjoyment. It is on the second phase that we shall place the emphasis in this article.

Instinctively we respond to rhythm. Rhythm is the element in music to which the children react. Before their ear can distinguish differences in pitch they will often move their hands or jump up and down to the rhythmic beat of the music. Children should be encouraged to interpret the music they hear. Interpretation enables the children to develop a deeper appreciation for beautiful music. To hear music is not sufficient for true appreciation; one must actually feel music. Allowing the children to give expression to simple little rhythms will tend to cultivate their ability to listen and to interpret accurately.

For the little child rhythms do have a definite function in the program of the church school. Music seems to lift our very souls toward God. The use of rhythms brings keen enjoyment to the children and helps them to a broader and deeper appreciation of God's handiwork. Such rhythms as those which cause one to think about the birds, the butterflies, and flowers definitely contribute toward this appreciation. The "Quiet Music" or "Music for Prayer" is particularly valuable in the conducting of the worship period. Marches, skips, gallops, trots, and the like are splendid avenues through which to allow the children to give vent to their pent-up energy. Wise is the superintendent who carefully plans for a wholesome, legitimate outlet for this natural energy. Many problems of restlessness and disorderliness will solve themselves. Realizing the value of rhythms in the church school, it is hoped that programs will be arranged so as to include many of them.

Below we suggest some rhythms and directions for their use:

RHYTHMS:

March, "First grade march," by Franz Adler. "Cadet's march," by Lange.

Skip, "Flowers of the forest," by Burns.

Butterflies, "Melody in F," by Rubinstein. "Spring song," by Mendelssohn.

Flying Birds, "Swallows," by Gillet. "Flying birds," by Czibulka.

Quiet Music or Music for Prayer: "Andante in E," by Beethoven. "Twenty-third Psalm," by Mendelssohn. "Child's prayer," by Behr. "Morning prayer," by Streabbog. "Meditation," by Haydn.

Suggestions for Using the Rhythms

Quiet Music: The use of quiet music and music for prayer is well understood and needs no further comment; but the suggestion is offered that mothers in the home play music of this character, either on the piano, violin, or the victrola, while their children are going to sleep in the evening. The effect on the child's nervous system, his æsthetic nature, and his disposition will be most beneficial. In the church school this type of music will tend to create an atmosphere of worship.

Marches: Marches for children should be clearly and strongly accented, and have what may be called a rhythmic swing; a swing so contagious that it carries the children along in correct time and step. If the children are inclined to march with a heavy step, this can be corrected through playing with a light touch and asking them to listen to the piano as they march. It is not wise to use the same march constantly, as the children lose the rhythm when the march becomes monotonous or mechanical, and they grow careless in step and in position of body. Good marching is secured in response to the life and spirit put into the music by the pianist.

Skips: This activity should be light and free. The music should be played with a light touch and not too rapidly.

Flying Birds: A moderate, running forward movement of the body with outstretched arms moving slightly up and down, imitating the flying motion of birds. The bird's flight is more direct and the motion of the wings is shorter and less sweeping than that of the butterfly.

Butterflies: A running movement which is more rapid than that of the flying birds. The arms should be moved rhythmically up and down, in long sweeps, between a point where the hands come together above the head and the natural position at the sides of the body. Either the finger tips or the backs of the hands may meet above the head.

Through a Stranger's Eyes

By John Blackmore

Rally Day for many of our congregations will launch the fall and winter program. The whole program will include all of the phases of congregational activities, such as well-planned missionary endeavors, the church school educational work, the social functions centering around the church home, and other services of worship. Undoubtedly, friends of the members will be invited into the various services. Occasionally strangers will come into the services to worship. The question is, What will these visitors see?

Appearance of Building

The affection you feel for the church, and your interest in some phases of the service, may blind your eyes to the ugly spots, if there are any. The visitor, however, will not have the same love and interest, and will notice the cracks in the plaster, the disarranged chairs, maybe the hats on the piano. On the other hand, they will be very appreciative of the beauty, cleanliness, and order which may mark the building and its arrangement. In a large measure these visitors will estimate the worth of the people who comprise this particular congregation and their message by the things they see.

Warmth and Ventilation

A church building that is usually too hot and poorly ventilated is a good suggestion to the visitor to stay away. Also if the building is not sufficiently warm the stranger will not care to come again. The freshness of the air and the comfort of the room in the worship services are in a very definite and practical manner related to the message of the minister.

The Hand of Welcome

"Friendship" is the basis of all ministry. The ministry of Christ was always identified with friendliness and love. The warm welcome and friendly greeting accorded to those who enter the doors of your church home this winter may win the heart of the stranger. A cold reception which lacks the pleasant elements of refined friendship will cause the visitor to pass by your church and go elsewhere.

The Message

The message that the visitor receives when he enters your church is not limited to the sermon or the prayers, or to the scriptural reading. The whole of the church atmosphere, including the behavior of the people, the type of reception he receives, the general appearance of the church building, the kind of singing and the music, are all parts of the message the stranger will receive when he visits your congregational services. The sermon is only a fraction of the total message received by the stranger in your midst.

Look at Your Church

Look at your church and its services through the eyes of a stranger. Watch the flow and feeling of each service through the vision of the casual visitor. Interpret the total message of each service as the friendly guest will understand it. Be a visitor in your own church occasionally, and look at your church services through a stranger's eyes.

REUNION NEWS*Maine Reunion

The Maine reunion was held at Brooksville, from August 16 to 24. A few days before the opening of reunion, the committee, consisting of Brothers Newman Wilson, E. F. Robertson, Archie Beggs, David Joy, and Pearl Billings, was on the ground working hard, that everything might be prepared beforehand.

Maine, like many other sections of the country, has been hard hit financially during the past year, so the committee wished to save the expense of hiring a large tent to be used as a tabernacle. These men went to the woods and cut down trees, peeled them for poles, and from sailing vessels came sails to be used for the canvas of the tent. By this bit of Yankee ingenuity and labor, the committee saved the reunion more than one hundred dollars.

From odd pieces of lumber, salvaged from an old building, a small place was built in which the young people might worship in comfort.

Saturday evening, the reunion was officially opened with a business meeting at 7.30. Apostle R. S. Budd was elected president of the reunion, and associated with him were: Bishop Albert Carmichael, Bishop E. L. Traver, E. F. Robertson, president of Western Maine District, and Newman Wilson, president of Eastern Maine District.

Sunday was beautiful, and the meetings throughout the day were well attended. Bishop Carmichael, Brothers Budd, Wilson, and Dowker were the speakers. In the afternoon Brother Newman Wilson had the pleasure of baptizing seven young people: Marshall Kelley, Riley Faulkingham, Walter Church, Harry Rogers, Lonzo Norton, Gertrude Foss, and Marion Butler.

At the tent every morning there was a prayer service at 8.30, followed by class work. At ten o'clock Brother Budd lectured on these subjects: "General epistle to the Saints," "The church," "The beliefs of the church," "Our missionary task," "The growth and resources of the church." At eleven o'clock Bishop Carmichael conducted class work covering the following subjects: "Church budget," "Family budget," "Thrift," "Tithing," "Church investments." The lectures by these two leaders were vital and inspiring, and presented to the people in no uncertain manner their duty to God and the church.

The young people held a prayer meeting every morning at the small tabernacle. These meetings were in charge of Brothers Dowker, Bertram Lewis, and Ralph Hardy. Then followed a half hour of recreation before they reassembled for a junior church service.

The afternoons were given to recreation, in charge of Bertram Lewis. Volley ball and swimming were the chief sports. One lovely afternoon Captain Pearl Billings took the camp for a sail in his vessel. It was a thrilling experience for those who had never sailed before and a pleasure to all.

The evening services were planned and executed as a series of missionary meetings, and many nonmembers were present. On Friday evening after the preaching service, there was a wiener roast. As the people were gathered around the camp fire, a short program was given by former Gracelanders.

Twenty-five young people, members of the Jonesport Zion Builder's Club, attended the reunion in a group. This loyal, consecrated group added much to the reunion.

On Sunday, August 24, an impressive ordination service was held. Brother Pearl Billings was ordained as bishop's counselor, to be associated with Bishop E. L. Traver, and Brother William Clark, who had previously been ordained a counselor. The following seven men were set apart as stewards over the Maine reunion property: E. L. Traver, New-

West Virginia Conference

The thirty-eighth annual conference of West Virginia District met with Parkersburg Branch Saturday and Sunday, August 9 and 10. The first service was a prayer meeting at eight o'clock, Brother A. C. Silvers in charge, assisted by C. W. Germon, of Parkersburg, and J. R. Biser, of Morgantown. About twenty-five were present. Several earnest prayers were offered for the success of the conference, and a good number took part in testimony. Parkersburg, Morgantown, and Indian Creek Branches were represented at this opening service.

At 9.15 J. R. Biser, president of the Morgantown Branch, gave an interesting talk.

Brother John R. Grice, of Southern Ohio District, was unable to attend our conference.

At 10.30 Brother A. C. Silvers, acting district president, called the conference into business session. Routine business was soon attended to, and most of the departmental and priesthood reports were read at this session. Most of the department heads had a good report to make, showing that they had done considerable work during the year. Very few of the priesthood reported. Parkersburg Branch reported one hundred per cent. There is need of more attention being paid by the ones who represent God among men; all should report their labor, so that the district may know what they are doing. This service was poorly attended, only twenty-one being present representing Parkersburg, Morgantown, and Indian Creek. Too many of our people do not keep in touch with the business of the church and, not knowing the program of work, can not help in carrying it out.

Dinner was served at the church from twelve to one o'clock. Sister Corda Germon was in charge of the kitchen and was assisted by Sisters Mary Baxter and Emma Bunner, of Parkersburg, and Sister Emma Smith, of Morgantown. Various others helped in serving and many other ways. Dinner was free to all. The Parkersburg Branch raised means by contribution to cover nearly all the expense of the meals. A refreshment stand was conducted by the Women's Department in the basement, and ice cream and soft drinks were served when no services were being held. Supper was also served at the church. This saved much time and gave more members a chance to attend.

The business session was resumed at two o'clock. Attendance was still small, and Clarksburg and Fairmont Branches still were not represented. Statistical reports of branches as follows: Parkersburg, 73; Clarksburg, 135; Fairmont, 22; Morgantown, 57; Indian Creek, 46; nonresident, 107; a total of 440 for the district. There were thirty man Wilson, Leon Crowley, Pearl Billings, William Clark, Guy Francis, Harlan Billings.

Those who labored hard for the reunion may well feel proud of its success. The meetings were well attended, educational, and deeply spiritual.

From the local paper printed at Woodbine, Iowa, comes the following comment concerning the close of one of the largest reunions of the church, the reunion of Western Iowa District: "A nice thing about a church reunion or convention, such as the Latter Day Saint people held in the city park last week, is that the city does not have to keep a lot of officers on the ground to keep order, police court is not in session every morning, and there is no bad taste after the meeting closes and everybody goes home."

baptisms and a gain of twenty by transfer, a total gain of 50. There were four deaths and fourteen transferred away, a loss of eighteen, giving the district a net gain of 32. The report of district treasurer, Harry B. Smith, showed $66.80 paid on the budget of $155, leaving unpaid $90.20. Parkersburg Branch is the only one to meet its quota of $23. Balance in the fund was $7.22 compared to a balance of $42.23 at the close of the year before. A committee was appointed consisting of May Griffin, H. G. Johnson, J. R. Biser, and E. L. Bumgardner to report on a budget for the coming year. Bishop's Agent Harry B. Smith reported that the district had paid in tithes and offerings during the year $2,374.62, compared to $1,311.43 the year before. All branches showed good increases. Fairmont had the highest per capita average, $26.58; Parkersburg second, $7.03; and Clarksburg was third with $4.12. Fairmont had the highest per cent of tithe payers, thirty-two per cent; Parkersburg second with twenty-seven per cent. Indian Creek led with number of contributors, having forty per cent; Fairmont second with thirty-six per cent; and Parkersburg third with twenty-nine per cent. Tithing increased from $1,024.33 the year before to $1,867.10 and offerings from $41.50 to $245.87, also Auditorium fund from $47 to $81.33. For the Kirtland Auditorium $48.85 was given. Contributors in the district increased from sixty-two to one hundred twenty-three, a one hundred per cent gain, and tithe payers from fifty-one to ninety-eight, a gain of ninety-two per cent. During the year fourteen inventories were filed and nine annual statements. There are three annual statements for year 1928 and fifteen for year 1929 not filed yet. The non-resident members are doing fine, having paid $354.43.

The district adopted the new plan of religious education without a dissenting vote. The district president was given power to appoint one- and two-day meetings. The election of officers resulted as follows: A. C. Silvers, district president; Haydee Bumgardner, secretary; Harry B. Smith, treasurer; G. W. Lawson, director of Religious Education; and Harry B. Smith was sustained as bishop's agent, and Mildred Griffiths as chorister.

At 4.15 A. C. Silvers preached on the missionary program of the church. He stressed group and individual effort to get our message before the people. Supper was served from 5.30 to 6.30. Brother Frank A. Minton was the speaker at 8 o'clock to a small but interested number. He spoke on the benefits and responsibilities of church membership.

The priesthood met at 8 Sunday for a prayer and educational service. All but one of the local men were present, and six from the other branches and Brother Gunn and Brother Bobbs from Wheeling District. Brother Silvers was in charge and gave an instructive talk. Some sick members were prayed for at this service.

Sunday school was at 9.30, May Griffin, local superintendent, in charge. A good number from Indian Creek came in by truck for this service.

Brother G. W. Lawson, of Clarksburg, spoke at eleven o'clock on religious or character education. Brother Lawson is principal of one of the grade schools at Clarksburg, and he gave an instructive sermon. Nearly one hundred were present at this service.

A business session was held at two o'clock to complete unfinished business. About sixty-one were present. The budget committee reported a budget of $130 to be used as follows: president $55, missionary $45; director of Religious Education $25; and secretary $5; and recommended that it be proportioned among the branches according to tithes, enrollment, contributors, and tithe payers as shown on report of bishop's agent. This report was approved. The question of a reunion was discussed, and it was finally voted to have one in 1931, time and place left to the district presidency. Brother Silvers selected Otis Forester and G. W. Lawson, both of Clarksburg, to act as vice presidents.

Sister Mildred Griffiths, of Clarksburg, district chorister, got out a nice songbook of twenty pages with thirty songs and a program of services. They sold at ten cents and made nice souvenirs.

It was late when the afternoon business session closed, so the 4.15 preaching service was canceled. Many left for their homes at the close of the business session. All branches had been represented except Fairmont. Several nonresident members were in attendance.

Brother A. C. Silvers was the speaker at eight o'clock. Brother F. A. Minton was in charge and was assisted by Brother C. W. Germon. A young boy was confirmed at this service. He had been baptized by Brother C. W. Germon during the afternoon. The boy makes his home with Brother and Sister McEldowney, of Elizabeth, West Virginia. Earl Boyers Smith, son of Harry B. and Martha Smith, was blessed by Elders Minton and Germon. About sixty were present at this service, which closed the two-day conference.

Detroit, Michigan

From Detroit's Beacon Light

Sunday, September 28, is to be recognized as Rally Day. September is rally month and is designated as the homecoming month.

The Women's Department held its opening meeting at the church September 9. Lunch was served at one o'clock by the Highland Park Group. This was an important meeting for the women, and it was announced that a reward is to be given the group having the largest attendance of members and visitors at all monthly meetings during the year. The department register has been inaugurated, and by attending your name is enrolled on the books commencing the work of the new century.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of George H. Booth, August 2, at 7.30, when Mr. Eldon Osborn and Miss Mabel Fetting, both of Detroit, were united in marriage. They were attended by Mr. Fetting, of Applegate, brother of the bride, and Miss Miller, of Detroit. These two young people are regular attendants at First Church and are highly respected.

We are pleased to note that during the summer months, even though vacations have been in vogue, the Sunday school has been well attended, a good interest has been shown. Now that vacations are over and the members settle down to the regular routine, it is hoped that everyone will give good support. A special invitation is extended all Sunday school attendants to meet at First Church on Rally Day, which it is hoped will for many be Decision Day, inasmuch as parents may decide not to send their children to Sunday school, but to bring them. About the middle of the month it is proposed to have a Sunday school banquet at First Church for all officers and teachers.

Three baptisms are reported by the Wyandotte Group, and good interest among the members and their friends. In the East Side Group considerable attention is now being given to recreational undertakings. It is hoped by this to stimulate interest among all ages. The Women's Department and the priesthood form active units in this group. The Saints of Roseville group have of late enjoyed several social events. River Rouge Sunday school had its picnic at Wojick Park, on Lake Erie, August 9, and everyone present had a happy time.

Three more babies have been added to the First Church cradle roll. Six of the little ones, being four years of age, have been promoted.

Sunday morning, September 21, there will be a service of blessing at First Church. Elder Hubert Case and the pastor will have charge, assisted by George Booth. The service is to be especially arranged for the purpose of blessing and will impress the congregation with the beauty of the statement of the Savior, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Beginning October 5 we hope to present to the Saints of Detroit a unified service on Sunday evening. According to the plan outlined in the Beacon Light for August, we hope to present in each of the five congregations a series of missionary sermons that bring to the hearers the very heart of our belief. Each speaker will choose a theme and present that theme for five Sunday evenings; each discourse to be self-contained yet a part of the general theme. We hope to make October, November, December, January, and February bring, during the Sunday evening services, a new insight into the beauties of the doctrines of the church.

Our sick seek the prayers of their brothers and sisters. A number are improving in health.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fourth and Washington Streets

The month of September in this branch was begun with a prayer service Wednesday evening, September 3, there being good attendance. After the service the congregation went to the basement for a farewell party for Brother Myron LaPointe and Brother John Hughes who were leaving for college, Myron to Graceland and John to Iowa City. Refreshments were served and presents given the boys.

Two evenings later a surprise party was given Sister W. Green, it being her birthday. Refreshments brought a happy close to an evening of merry-making, and the guests presented Sister Green a one-year subscription to the Herald.

The same evening the young people's division of the church school had a picnic at Leighton Park.

Sunday morning found a good attendance at the sacramental service, a meeting in which the Spirit of God was felt. Apostle D. T. Williams was the speaker in the evening. Brother Williams moved with his family to Ottumwa September 5. We are hereby happy to have them here. Their address is 1846 North Court Street, Ottumwa. Sister Williams has three sisters living here.

The branch is planning for rally day. There will be dinner at noon in the basement of the church. We would like to have the Saints living near Ottumwa plan to spend the day with us.

Church school workers met at the home of Sister Hughes September 9 to plan concerning the winter's work. Sister Hughes is the director of the church school and is alive to her task.

Houston, Texas

Houston Branch is trying to maintain its regular services once more after having taken some inspiring mental and spiritual tours with Elder J. W. A. Bailey, of Independence. Brother Bailey, with his pictures and descriptive powers, brought to the congregation each evening new revelations of historical, biblical, and divine truths. He gave us to understand that he does not succumb to flattery, and it is far from our intentions to permit our honest and enthusiastic feelings concerning his work among us to be considered in that light. We wish only to proclaim our joy at hearing the word of God delivered and at seeing it pictured in so able a manner.

The increasing number of those who attended from outside congregations, as the program was advertised in the city, filled the house during the latter part of the lectures. The response to these meetings convinces us that the series should be repeated in a larger auditorium, and that in some manner invitations should be issued to more of our friends.

Brother C. W. Tischer, president of the branch, has returned from a trip to Lamoni, Iowa, where he accompanied Leslie Kohlman who is entering Graceland College. Brother Leslie will be greatly missed by Houston Branch, in which he has been an active worker and by his fellow workers of the Auto Glass Company where he was employed.

C. R. BEVILL.

Independence

Stone Church

Today is the brightest and most progressive day the church has ever seen, is the opinion of Bishop C. J. Hunt, who was the speaker at the morning service Sunday. Let us, like Paul, be persuaded that "neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Bishop Hunt urged his listeners to be jealous of the good name of the church and to give their full support to it.

The Stone Church Choir, led by Paul N. Craig, sang the anthem, "The heavens are declaring," adapted from Beethoven by Dudley Buck. Robert Miller, organist, and George Miller, pianist, played as a duet offertory, "Meditation de Thais," by Massenet. Elder W. Wallace Smith presided and was assisted by Elder D. O. Cato.

"Loyalty to self" was the theme of the commencement service for intermediates conducted at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church. Elder George G. Lewis was the speaker.

Dedicated to the class of fifty-two intermediate boys and girls who next Sunday morning will begin their studies with the senior department of the church school at the Auditorium, this service opened with a song service led by Sister Daniel Lewis, Joy Harder accompanying at the piano. The story of Joan of Arc was told by Marian Louise McDowell and there was a piano solo by Willa Mae Redfield. The Scripture lesson, 2 Timothy 4: 5-8, was read by Intermediate Pastor W. Earl Page, who was in charge, assisted by Howard Cook.

The first Sunday evening of the fall and winter services at the Stone Church proved a pleasant occasion. The congregation assembled early and gave good response to Brother Paul N. Craig, who led the singing, Robert Miller at the organ. Special musical contributions were made by LeRoy Smith, who sang two baritone solos.

Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith had been announced as the evening's speaker, and with him in the stand were Elders H. O. Smith and H. G. Barto. From the revelations given to John on the Isle of Patmos, a text and supporting scriptures were chosen to form the basis of a sermon designed to strengthen the faith of the Saints in the gospel of Christ.

Departments and Clubs

With the approach of Promotion Day, September 28, activities in the various departments of the Stone Church School have increased, for Promotion Day affects more than seven hundred children of this congregation.

The evening of September 19 the church school gave its intermediate graduating class of fifty-two a banquet at the auditorium. This Friday evening more than fifty juniors who will leave the Campus and enter the intermediate department in the Stone Church, will be entertained at a banquet by the church school. Special entertainments and activities are also planned for the primary and beginner departments, as well as the seniors at the Auditorium.

Important among the organizations of the church in Independence is that of the White Masque Players. For the winter's theme, officers of this club have chosen "Development of the universal drama." The White Masque Players' initial meeting of the season occurred Monday evening at the Wahdemna Choral Club rooms. To a large number of members were presented "The oriental theater," a lecture by Leonard Lea; "The horns," from Plays of Old Japan, "Kamasaki" and "Tsunemasa," Noh Plays, reviews by Jo Zelma Taylor; and the dramatization of scene three "The horns," directed by Louise Jennings.

Programs and plans for the year are also occupying the time and attention of a number of other clubs which have met in the last few days, some of them for the first time this season. Among these are the Music Club, the Mothers' Club, the Patroness Society, and the Wahdemna Choral Club.

To increase its numbers and make more effective its working organization, the Stone Church Choir invites members of the congregation who sing to take part in a voice tryout for choir membership the evening of October 9. All desiring to have their voices tried by the committee should get in touch with Paul N. Craig, conductor of the choir, studio telephone Independence 3251; or Sister Ruth Holman, secretary of the choir, telephone 3485W. The tryout will begin at seven o'clock in the evening at the studio of Brother Paul N. Craig, Lexington and Bowen Avenues.

Walnut Park

Sunday, September 21, at Walnut Park, began right with a spiritual prayer meeting at the eight o'clock hour, in charge of Elder Fred Lanpher. There was an attendance of sixty at this service.

The church school hour was also well attended, and the degree of interest shown in the various classes was good. Bishop J. A. Koehler finished a series of three lectures which he has been delivering to the Galilean Class the past three Sundays. A large number have been in attendance to hear his discussion of group and community stewardships.

Bishop Koehler was also the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour. His discourse centered about the demands and opportunities of the present era of church history as compared with those of the previous fifty or sixty years. The prime purpose of the earlier period was to increase church membership in order that we might have the numbers necessary to put into operation those parts of our church law relating to social behavior. He stated that the degree of decline in the frequency and number of spiritual manifestations is a direct proof of the divinity of the work and the truth of the statements found in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. In this connection he referred to Doctrine and Covenants 70: 3: "In your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not grudgingly; otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld." Brother Koehler's closing sentence was that everyone has an opportunity to assist in our present church program and that the response we make to our opportunity determines our spiritual fate.

In the evening service, starting at 7.30, which was the first Sunday evening meeting at the church since the early part of the summer, the period of song and music was under the direction of Sister Minnie Scott Dobson, assisted by members of the choir. As a special number Brother Leonard Hoisington, who has recently moved into Walnut Park District, sang a tenor solo, "Spirit of God." This song was much appreciated and very well rendered. The choir also sang an anthem, "In heavenly love abiding," which added to the beauty of the service. Sister Dobson made an important announcement relating to the choir, inviting all who had ability along this line to join the choir, and stating that the choir was now working on a cantata which would be presented later in the fall. The Saints were happy to hear this and will support the undertaking in every way. Those who have vocal ability are urged to assist.

Bishop C. J. Hunt was the speaker of the evening hour, basing his sermon upon the statements of Jesus in the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew relating to the signs of his second coming and of the end of the world. In the course of his talk, Brother Hunt called attention to the importance of complying with the law of tithing and of seeing that one's inventory is filed and one's tithing paid as soon as possible. He also emphasized the importance of supporting the local church financially in the way of offerings for branch expenses and the building fund.

East Independence

The sacramental service, September 7, was fairly well attended and was quiet and peaceful.

College Day, September 14, the few who braved the wet weather, listened to an interesting discourse by Brother Walter Betts.

Sister J. C. Shannon, who has been suffering from sciatic rheumatism, is now better. She is able to be up.

Brother and Sister M. J. Friend are the happy parents of a daughter, born August 17, to whom they have given the name of Ellen Amarillys.

Sister Alene Friend, who had been in poor health for some time, recently underwent an operation at the Sanitarium. She is gaining strength as fast as can be expected, and her friends hope for her entire recovery.

September 21, the church school session, though small, was interesting. A speech very much to the point was made by Richard Smith. A solo was given by Lyndon Wagener, accompanied by Elizabeth Friend, followed without intermission by a sermon on finances by the pastor, L. W. Moffett. Some items concerning local finances were of an encouraging nature.

Night services having been resumed, Brother T. W. Thatcher was called upon to occupy Sunday evening. He quoted from the Psalms of David.

Spring Branch

The priesthood are again meeting at the church each Tuesday evening. And two by two they go out to make visits in the homes of the members. This plan of keeping in touch with the Saints of Spring Branch District worked most successfully last winter.

Sunday was local bishop Sunday, and Pastor J. E. Cleveland was the speaker. He emphasized the facts that if each family will do its share, it will be easier for all to meet the church budget each year, and that if we expect God's blessing we must do our part in helping to carry on his great work. Brother Cleveland's discourse was full of wisdom and admonition. Preceding the sermon a pleasing duet number was sung by Sisters Donkawich and Hendrix.

At 6.30 the church school met to organize for class work for the winter. Attendance was good, and after the long summer vacation the interest shown is encouraging.

The eight o'clock service was in charge of Brother J. H. Miller. A trio composed of Alma Dixon, Gladys Dixon, and Donald Mabbott, sang "Dear to the heart of the shepherd." Then Brother Robert Fish talked on the subject, "Baptism." Violet Van Dyke, small daughter of Brother and Sister Van Dyke, was baptized by Brother Cleveland. The baptismal scene was most impressive, the new font being used. All lights were extinguished except the one over the font. The trio sang "The old, old path," and W. H. Smith talked on "Confirmation and receiving the Holy Ghost." The candidate was confirmed by Brothers Mabbott and Tankard. In closing, the trio sang, "Jesus Savior, pilot me."

Young People Enjoy Study Classes

The young people of Northeastern Kansas District participated in a very successful institute September 20 and 21, at Fanning. Attendance was good from the very first, and the capacity of the church was taxed at all the Sunday services.

Games were enjoyed Saturday afternoon, followed by a wiener roast and an excellent program by the young people in the evening. The class work was especially interesting and beneficial. Over twelve locals were represented at the Sunday services, and five children were baptized by the district missionary.

It was voted unanimously to hold another institute next year, and a committee of young people was appointed to make the necessary arrangements. Other districts would do well to follow the lead of Northeastern Kansas in providing institutes for the younger members.

Kansas City StakeCentral Church*

"Mid scenes of confusion and creature complaints, how sweet to my soul is communion with Saints." This thought and reminiscences of the many pleasant associations at Central in days gone by, brought many former members to the home-coming September 21. It was an ideal day, with a tinge of autumn ushering in the Sabbath.

At nine o'clock the auditorium was well filled for the serving of the Lord's Supper, which was in charge of the stake presidency and stake bishopric. Preceding the blessing and serving of the emblems, the infant son of Brother and Sister Lyle Moneymaker was blessed by Elders C. E. Wight and C. G. Mesley, and given the name, John Robert. At the conclusion of the sacramental service, a number of interesting and spiritual testimonies were given.

From 10.30 to 11.30 occurred the class reunion period, at which a short lesson study was had and a reunion of classmates followed.

A committee composed of members from the various classes of the church school prepared an appetizing dinner, consisting of Virginia baked ham, escalloped potatoes, celery salad, Parker House rolls, grape jelly, and Boston cream pie. This was served on the church lawn to about one hundred and fifty. This proved to be one of the most entertaining features on the program, as the Saints were afforded the opportunity of visiting together over the rich repast.

At three o'clock the priesthood met at the call of the stake president.

At 7.45, with Sister Irene Wolfe at the organ playing the prelude, "Crusader's hymn," by Ashford, the choir assembled in its place. "Redeemer of Israel" was sung reverently by the congregation and choir; the invocation was offered by Elder C. G. Mesley. Under the direction of its new director, Brother George Anway, of Independence, the choir rendered the anthem, "O love divine." Sister Elizabeth Hitchcock then rendered a beautiful solo entitled, "O love divine," with Sister Wolfe accompanying on the organ. "Glorious forever," by Rachmaninoff, was the second anthem sung by the choir, after which Brother Frank White played a violin solo.

Doctor G. Leonard Harrington made the address of the evening.

Among out-of-town guests attending the home-coming services, Central people were glad to welcome Brother and Sister Rupert Wight, of Long Beach, California, former attendants, Sister Hazel Scott Withee, of Albuquerque, New Mexico, and many others not coming from such a great distance.

Next Sunday is Promotion Day. A number of vital and interesting subjects are eligible for study, and efficient teachers are in charge. Our goal is to continually press on toward the mark of our high calling in Christ Jesus.

Second Church

The pastor of this congregation, Elder F. A. Evans, recently baptized seven candidates. The conversion of these members makes a total of ten baptisms since the Centennial Conference. It is hoped a number of others will soon make their decision to unite with the church.

There was good attendance at the sacramental service for September.

Sister Mildred Lungwitz, the O. B. K. counselor for Second Church, is striving hard to gain the interest of the young people in behalf of the worthy organization she represents. September 7 a meeting was held to discuss further meetings and activities. Elder George Mesley was present and offered many helpful suggestions.

Of late our preachers have been F. A. Evans, E. S. Zink, E. P. Sanders, E. W. Lloyd, and George Mesley. Brother P. J. Raw has talked on the six principles of the gospel, one each Sunday, for the last six sessions of the Sunday school.

Brother and Sister M. J. Flynn ask the Saints to pray for their little son, whose severe illness has left a cloud on his brain which has affected his sight. If it be the Lord's will, we pray that his recovery will be complete, and we feel that the Lord will answer our prayers regarding him.

Oakland, California

From The Oakland Bulletin

August 24 we observed the anniversary of the signing of the Paris Peace Pact. This was a great achievement in statesmanship, and this year we rejoice in the further step which has been taken by our own country in association with Great Britain and Japan for the reduction of naval armaments. It would be the cruelest kind of irony to outlaw war as a means of settling international differences and at the same time make no provision for the reduction of the implements of war.

If religion has any of its potency left, there must be an increase of good will among men. Religion postulates God as the universal Father and all men as brothers. We must learn to live together peacefully, cooperatively, and purposefully. Our reconciliations must be accomplished by the power of religion, which is love.

The good will and fellowship dinner and program Friday evening, August 29, combined to produce a real achievement. The event was given a nautical setting, and guests bought tickets for a voyage on the S. S. Goodwill.

The closing Sunday evening in August found the Saints bidding farewell to the young people who this winter attend school at Graceland, Margaret Christensen, Ruby Welton, and Glenn Jacobson. We are sure they will be an honor to this congregation, and our wishes for success accompany them.

A baby boy was born to Sister Nelson, of Alameda, at the Saint Anthony's Hospital.

Sister Buswell and Sister Lillian Hare desire the prayers of the members.

We were happy to have Brother and Sister Joseph Wilson here on a recent Sunday. Our brother needs crutches, but we are grateful for his improvement.

Brother H. W. Savage, who has been visiting home several days, was the preacher August 31. Brother J. B. Carmichael recently was the speaker at Park-Presidio Branch.

Sault Sainte Marie, Ontario

September 14.—The annual branch business meeting was held September 5. A report of the work of the ministry showed fair progress for the year. We have adopted the new plan of religious education.

The following officers have been chosen for the new year: Pastor, G. A. Edwards; his associates, T. B. Campbell, church school director, and W. A. Bushila, home visiting director; adult supervisor, Sister T. Campbell; young people's supervisor, Sister George Hannah; children's supervisor, Sister M. D. Miller; secretary, Sister George Walsh; assistant, Sister Elizabeth Brechin; organist, Sister Mildred Miller; assistant, Howard Campbell; chorister, Sister R. Hudson; assistant, Sister T. Campbell; bishop's agent, George Walsh; treasurer, W. Braun; and publicity agent, W. A. Bushila.

Brother Dayton came here to conduct a series of meetings, but he had just started when he was called away to Port Arthur to administer to a sick sister. When he returned, the branch voted that he give a few lectures on the new plan of religious education during the short time that he was to be here. These lectures were much appreciated especially by those who were unable to attend General Conference or reunions. Brother Dayton, too, was pleased to see us adopt the new plan. He left the Sault for Manitoulin Island the next morning after business meeting intending to visit the Saints there before the district conference to take place October 4 and 5 at Grand Valley. After the conference he has promised to labor among us, and then we expect his help for a much longer period of time.

The fall fair was held in Sault Sainte Marie early this year, and the weather was fine.

The women of the branch were busy and cleared the sum of eighty dollars at the booth which they rented on the fairgrounds. This will be a great help in the financial undertakings of the branch. We are contemplating raising the church and making the basement available for class work.

Chicago, Illinois

First Branch, 4416 Gladys Avenue

Though First Branch is not often heard from in Herald pages, we want to assure the Saints that under the leadership of our able president, H. T. McCaig, we are laboring steadily for the redemption of Zion.

A spiritual feast was enjoyed at the sacramental service September 7, Brother Schmid in charge and Brothers McCaig, Skinner, and Bone assisting. The church was filled, and there were sixteen testimonies besides the usual prayers and songs. Sister Myrtle Gauchier very beautifully sang "My faith looks up to Thee."

Lately Brother McCaig has been ably assisted in the pulpit by Brothers Charles Irwin, Frank Almond, and Sidney Barrows.

The weekly prayer services are in charge of Brother Harry Passman, and while attendance is not all that we desire, the spiritual help gained by those who do attend has been of high order. It is hoped that the coming of cooler weather will cause many more to take advantage of this opportunity.

Several members from other branches have this summer been added to our branch. Among them are the bride of Brother Clyde Bullard, from Independence; Brother and Sister Casey and son, and Brother and Sister Whiteside from Moline, Illinois.

The former pastor, Brother Axel Edstrom, has taken his family to his new field of labor, Saint Louis, Missouri.

After a long absence due to illness, our aged Brother Jorgeson is meeting with us.

We are now operating Sunday morning services under the new program of religious education. Brother John Patterson is directing. We like the new program.

With much persistent effort Deacon Wesley Ballinger has beautified the church property with shrubs, flowering plants, and a pretty lawn.

Members or friends passing through Chicago or stopping for a short visit will find a hearty welcome at First Church, which is located at 4416 Gladys Avenue, within easy access of bus, elevated, or street car lines from all railway terminals. For detailed directions on how to reach the church call the city missionary, C. E. Schmid, Hemlock 0674.

Myrtle Point, Oregon

The Saints of this branch were lately made to rejoice by the visit of Elder and Sister Hiram Holt. They met with us August 24. Thirty-three years ago Brother Holt in company with Elder A. M. Chase started the latter-day work at Myrtle Point and at Bandon, Oregon. It has been twenty-six years since Brother Holt visited in this region, and the Saints who knew him then were especially glad to see him once more and to hear him preach the true gospel. Brother and Sister Holt did much good and encouraged many while on their short visit here, and they also held services at Bandon.

The Myrtle Point Herald gave generous press notice to Brother Holt's visit, and a crowd of encouraging size gathered at the little church on C Street the fourth Sunday morning in August to hear Brother Holt.

London, Ontario

A quiet pretty wedding was solemnized recently by Pastor J. E. McGregor when Edna M. Timbrell became the bride of Carl Herschleiber. A dainty lunch was served at the home of the bride's parents, Brother and Sister Fred Timbrell. The young couple will occupy their new home on King Street.

Another simple but beautiful wedding was solemnized by Pastor MacGregor at the home of the bride's parents, Brother and Sister Armstrong, when Myrtle Armstrong became the bride of Brother William Risler. They now occupy their new home on Highburg Street.

In the past month Boston, Massachusetts, Kirtland, Ohio, and Cleveland, Ohio, have sent visitors to London. These Saints were welcome among us.

The members are somewhat tired after the strenuous week at their dining hall at the Western Fair. Weather was ideal, and large crowds attended. The hall was well patronized, and the finance committee was satisfied with results.

Large attendance was had at the sacramental service September 7. A peaceful spirit prevailed. The pastor and his counselors presided.

Bishop J. C. Dent who for a time was ill with a severe cold, is again able to attend the regular services.

The bishop's solicitor reports tithes and offerings fairly good despite financial depression. The Lord's promises are sure when we observe the law of temporalities.

"Uncle John" Vashinder has returned from an extended business trip to Winnipeg, Calgary, and other northwestern cities. He reports conditions fairly good.

Denver, Colorado

With the passing of summer with its many interruptions in the regular routine of church service, we find the majority of the Saints back in their places, ready to do all they can to help the pastor carry on the active missionary campaign which he is planning. This does not mean that the Denver Saints are accustomed to taking a vacation from church duties; but, for a number of reasons, a considerable part of the membership is obliged to be out of town much of the time during the summer. Therefore, the attendance is smaller than usual.

Sunday, August 31, the services were well attended and thoroughly enjoyed and appreciated by all. We were privileged to hear two helpful sermons by Pastor Glaude Smith, the subject in the morning being "A workman unashamed," in the evening, "Our missionary task." Two solos were sung in the morning, one by Everett Shupe and one by Sister Myrtle Bennett. In the evening Una Holmes sang.

On Sunday, September 7, the theme of the love and sacrifice of our Savior was appropriately carried out in the morning service. During the church school hour we listened to the story of the Lord's Supper in Jerusalem, told by Ammon Wildermuth; a vocal duet, "Come close to the Savior," by Sisters Alice Milligan and Ruth Robertson; and a story of the Lord's Supper in ancient America by Virginia Jones. At the sacramental service Bishop G. W. Eastwood talked on the purpose of the oblation. A quiet, peaceful hour of prayer, song, and testimony followed. The evening address was by District President E. B. Hull; music, "Let all men praise the Lord," by the young people's choir.

Brother R. S. Salyards, jr., director of religious education, and Brother Smith are arranging interesting and inspiring worship programs, and in carrying out their plans are receiving ready cooperation from the members. Many favorable comments have been heard on the beauty and inspirational quality of the meetings since we have been having the continuous morning service.

Sister Alice Bozarth, of Wichita, Kansas, is spending a few weeks in Denver. Brother and Sister G. W. Eastwood, of Independence, are in Denver for a few days and worshiped with us Sunday. Misses Nelle and Blanch Sampson, also of Independence, were in our city several days, visiting old friends. Other visitors in the past few weeks have included Saints from various States.

Several young people are beginning their year's work in college. Lois Wildermuth and Mildred Fishburn have matriculated at Graceland; Mary Williams will begin her sophomore year at the University of Denver; and Everett Shupe will enter Northwestern University at Chicago for his senior year.

Brother and Sister Leo Shupe, who have been in Salina, Kansas, for the past year, have returned to Denver. We are glad to welcome them back.

On Thursday, September 4, the women of the adult group met and organized for the year's work. Sister Ethel Radcliffe was chosen leader, Sister Flora Walling her assistant, and Sister Etta Miller secretary-treasurer. They plan to make quilts and do other sewing, and later will take up some class work.

Forward in Australasian Mission

(From a letter to the First Presidency)

There seems to be a fairly good feeling among the missionaries in Australia. They are on their toes and looking forward to good success. The exception is Brother A. E. Loving, who is endeavoring to break new ground in Tasmania. A recent letter speaks more hopefully of his work than does his missionary's report. I expect to give him two or three weeks of my time at the beginning of November when on my way back from Victoria and South Australia.

I leave today (August 5) by boat for Brisbane, Queensland, where I shall conduct a missionary series and attend the district conference.

During the month of July I preached and ministered generally at Kerepeehi and Auckland, New Zealand, Balmain, Leichhardt, Guildford, Wallsend, Hamilton, and Teralba. My messages about General Conference and its incidence upon our work were well received. There is a fine spirit developing, and we look for good results.

We had a great day at Balmain, August 3, when the new plan of religious education was tried out along with some other improvements in the plan of worship. There was unanimous approval, and the new church school plan has been adopted. As Balmain is a large and influential branch, we have won a key position. Such changes as have occurred there will, I feel sure, put new life into every branch where they are adopted.

Card boomerang souvenirs were handed to every person who attended the opening church school service at Balmain. They were made by Elder W. J. Swain, associate pastor in charge of the church school. Attendance was one hundred and eighty-six at the morning service. This total has been surpassed but once, the occasion being our first attendance at Balmain church after returning from America when two hundred and three attended. This is good when we consider that there are two other branches in Sydney, and that they have been built up from Balmain members.

Brother Gillard is doing good work in the educational field. He has a few matters of business to attend to and can not take the field until these have been cared for. In the meantime he is at work in the metropolitan area.

I have had about two weeks of office work and am now about to cut loose from it for the rest of the year or until the affairs of Tiona claim my attention towards the end of November. Even then, my plans will keep me in the open air most of the time. I am feeling well and eager to help forward the good work at all points in the mission.

The following request comes to the Herald from C. M. Hoofman, of Memphis, Tennessee:

"Saints living in or near Memphis who would be interested in church services, please report at 142 Granville Place, apartment six, Memphis, Tennessee."

Herald readers think this is a good advertisement. Last time it appeared the orders began to flow into the office. How about YOU? Does it bite your bargain-hunting instinct?

A Correction

Correction has been made of a news item in the Sacramento, California, letter, page 1053, Saints' Herald for September 17. The paragraph beginning "Mrs. Inez Peterson and son," should read: "Mrs. Inez Petersen and children, Lawrence, Eddie, and Marie, of Oakland, are living here now. We are glad to welcome Eddie with his violin to our orchestra."

Our Departed Ones

HUNTSMAN.—Jana Huntsman, son of Jacob and Kathryn Huntsman, was born in Streeter, Illinois, March 1, 1856. When very young he moved with his parents to Indiana and in early manhood moved with his family to Redding, Iowa, where he engaged in the mercantile and livery business. Later he moved to Lamoni, Iowa, and later still to southern Missouri. In March, 1922, he and his family moved to near Mount Ayr, that they might help care for an invalid granddaughter. May 18, 1882, he was united in marriage to Margaret Ellen Fouch. To them were born thirteen children, three of whom preceded him to the beyond, Riley, Orville, and Dolly. Those remaining are: Ether, of Mount Grove, Missouri; Frank, Nampa, Idaho; Roy, Vesta, and Oma, of Mount Ayr; Deborah Clark, and Goldie Cerley, Mount Grove; Verda Lysinger, of Lamoni; Elsie Davenport and Otha Middleton, Mount Ayr. He united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints March 20, 1882, and by his conscientious living through the rest of his life he has shown to all who came in contact with him that it was not mere lip confession. His was a useful life in the home and community, and he will be greatly missed. The funeral was held from the Brick Church in Lamoni, T. S. Williams in charge, T. J. Bell preaching the sermon.

HEDLUND.—John H. Hedlund, an inmate at the Saints' and Liberty Homes for twelve years, died May 7, 1930. He was born August 21, 1841, in or near Chaping, Sweden. He was left an orphan, his father dying when he was eighteen, his mother two years later. In 1863 he immigrated to America, stopping at Nebraska City, Nebraska, where he lived for ten years. Later he went to Utah, having united with the Utah Church while he was in Sweden. After coming to America he was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church by Knute Johnson and confirmed by R. M. Elvin. For many years he labored as a priest. Married Miss Minnie Hensen while living in Utah. His companion died in 1905. He moved to Lamoni in 1918 and lived at the Liberty Home until the two homes were consolidated, after which he was cared for at the Saints' Home the rest of his life. For some time before his death he was physically and mentally failing. The funeral sermon was by J. D. Stead, assisted by J. M. Stubbart, at Lamoni, Iowa.

Sir Oliver Lodge and His Critics

Sir Oliver Lodge, whose fame throughout the world as a scientist is firmly established, has in recent years apparently become interested in some aspects of spiritualism. For his statements and attitude he has been severely criticized in some quarters. Recently Brother Charles Cousins, of Clay Cross, who frequently sends me British papers containing articles of interest, sent a clipping from the Daily Mail for September 10, which quotes the eminent scientist in a way which will doubtless be of interest to our readers. From this article we extract such statements as may give an understanding of Sir Oliver's beliefs as to the question of communications from the dead. Whatever we may think of his convictions, the learned man is entitled to our belief in his sincerity, and respect for the fearless way in which he has always presented his beliefs in spiritual and religious matters.

Since the death of his son, Raymond, who was one of the victims of the World War, Sir Oliver has apparently passed through some modifications of beliefs held previously. He seems to be firmly grounded at present in the belief that life continues beyond the grave, and that personality persists. This belief is shared with all Christians and many other religionists; but the question of the condition of the spirits, or those gone on before, is not one on which all agree; and whether the departed can communicate with those left behind, and how such communications can be had if at all, are spiritual mechanics little understood and on which a variety of theories might exist. Revelation or communication from divine sources to human is a belief held by many thousands; but that is essentially separate from that of communication from departed souls to friends or loved ones here.

From the article mentioned we extract the following, as given by a special correspondent of the Daily Mail:

Sir Oliver Lodge, the eminent scientist, in simple phrases and illustrations born of conviction, has just given me his reply to the criticisms by clergymen in today's Daily Mail of his striking address here last Sunday on the life after death.

"My attitude," he said, "is this: There are two camps, the spiritualists and the scientists. I take my stand midway between them, and all I seek to do is to show that there is a point at which their interests converge and meet.

"I say science hitherto has been working in the material universe. Now it should begin to extend its boundaries, for, to my mind, there have been discoveries in the spiritual universe. I don't say these discoveries have been made for the first time.

"I say science has discovered a scientific truth in what religious people have always held by faith to be true."

"I have had talks with my son [Raymond, who was killed in the war] and with others.

"I realize that the communications are trivial sometimes. That is often the best sort of communication for a start.

"This is best illustrated by an example. Suppose you are on the far end of a telephone and the people at the other end do not believe it is you—they think perhaps that you are dead. How do you make it clear that it is you?"

"You do not begin by talking politics or religion. You say 'This is so-and-so all right. Don't you remember me and how I fell down in the garden that day and cut my shin?' That is the first step in establishing identity.

"After that, when you know they are willing to talk and know who they are, you begin to hear about their lives on the other side and the communications are no longer trivial."

Sir Oliver tersely replied to those who criticize him on the score of having discovered something known to Christians for nearly 2,000 years.

"I do not criticize Christian truths as such," he said. "I simply say that scientifically they are not authoritative.

"I don't wish to interfere with people who are satisfied by the religious point of view."

It is always interesting to know the religious beliefs of prominent scientists and others. Perhaps there are many men eminent in scientific circles who carry with them a religion based on simple faith. For they, after all, are qualified to know how pitifully small is the sum total of human knowledge, and how vast is the field of the unknown. And, as suggested by Sir Oliver, the spiritual fields have been little explored by the scientists and mayhap when it is attempted we shall learn anew that we walk by faith, not by sight.

Australia, with a total population of about six and one half millions, is staggering under a national debt of about five billion dollars, or approximately one hundred and fifty dollars per capita. This necessitates a very heavy tax.

In connection with the statistics of Australia, it is interesting to note that the natural increase of population the first quarter of 1930 was near nineteen thousand, but that in the same period over four thousand migrated.

Some Things Our Ministers Should Do.— Number 13

Set an example in church meeting decorum.

Recently I was in one of our own churches where the musicians are alert and do what they can to enhance the regular services. A prelude was being rendered by the organist, her number being in fact the opening of the service. It was a beautiful selection and was being well rendered. I was trying to enjoy it and to catch the spirit of its message, but my enjoyment was marred by a disturbance. I located it. Two elders, sitting near the organ, were "visiting" about something (let's hope they were not "gossiping"). Their visiting was done in tones of voice that carried to all parts of the room.

At various times I have suggested that order in our churches could be greatly improved by the members' giving quiet and meditative attention to the selections of the musicians. The quietude of silent worship, in consonance with the spirit of the music, can not but enhance the effectiveness of the whole service. But how can we consistently urge the lay members to give quiet hearing to musical numbers, or in fact to all parts of the service, when the members of the priesthood are careless in their deportment?

This suggests another thing our ministers should do, viz, set the example of proper decorum. We owe it to both the musicians and the members to do so, as well as to whoever might be in charge. Besides, let me suggest that the members of the priesthood will find that it really pays from a spiritual standpoint to listen attentively to the musical numbers, for our meditations are enriched by proper music.

Let's do our visiting some other time than during preludes, interludes, anthems, etc.

Comprehensive District President's Report

Some weeks ago I attended the conference of the Northern California District, at least I was there the last day of it, and a feature with which I was pleased was the report of the district presidency, which was put out in sufficient numbers so that the delegates had copies. It was complete, and gave not only the program of the conference and hours of meetings, but presented recommendations on matters requiring conference action, a summary of tithes and general offerings for the year, the treasurer's report, a summary of missionary activities, report of the Sunday school, the junior church, the department of women, historian, and statistical figures of each branch. This set before the delegates practically all the work and business of the conference, and doubtless greatly expedited the work of the conference, conserving the time so that important matters could be given adequate discussion and attention.

Brother Levitt is to be congratulated on his method of expediting the work of the conference.

Censorship by Public Opinion

The American motion picture industry and theater have, especially for the past year, been coming in for a great deal of attention, pro and con. They have been "studied" by groups of all sorts; editorials, articles, and books have been written on their effects in American life; and Will Hays several months ago made a new "pledge of purity" on behalf of the industry itself!

Considerable indignation has been aroused abroad by American-made films. When Harold Lloyd's picture, "Welcome danger," was shown in a city in China, a mob stormed the box office in protest against the portrayal of Chinese characters in the film, charging rank misrepresentation. The Hankow Herald reported that this was the sixth time in three years that an American motion picture had been the storm center of a controversy caused by outraged national feelings! Other films, although not involving interracial feelings, have given some very disgusting and unrepresentative impressions of American life. Against this sort of thing, as well as the impression which many obviously vulgar pictures are making upon the minds of children, the tide of protest is directed.

Out of all the various methods used, probably no attempt at censorship has been quite so effective as that of a vigorous expression of criticism on the part of motion picture attendants. One such instance was described in an issue of the Christian Century some time ago. Doctor Charles M. Sheldon, of Topeka, Kansas, in company with his wife, the dean of women of a neighboring college, and a dozen students, attended a movie in Topeka. The feature picture had been recommended to them, and although it was all right for a while, it soon dropped into "the old rut of dirt and slime." Finally the group, by common consent, rose and left the show and protested to the manager. He blamed the "block booking" system for having the film, but refunded their money—and the next day withdrew the picture and substituted another!

Doctor Sheldon stated, "If the proprietor was so much disturbed by a dozen people registering a protest against a bad picture, . . . what would happen if a hundred people who had gone to a vulgar picture show got up in a body and walked out? The best way to register the rising feeling against the menace of the film to children and to grown-ups is to move out of the movie. . . ."

There's something to it!

For Christian Criticism

Socialism in New York City

The candidacy for congressional offices from Greater New York of two Socialists of prominence, Norman Thomas and Heywood Broun, has aroused much comment and discussion in the press. Some feel that since there is no threat of Socialist dominance, it would be a good thing to have the stimulus in Congress which these men would surely offer to members of the established parties. Others think these men can better agitate their ideas through other channels than representation in the National Legislature.

Thomas, candidate for President on the Socialist ticket in 1928, is advocating unemployment insurance, increase of income and inheritance taxes, public ownership and operation of public utilities, and a referendum on prohibition. Broun, known as "an iconoclastic columnist," is wet, advocates "freedom of speech to the utmost," and a limitation of speeches both in political campaigns and in Congress!

There is undoubtedly some truth in the Literary Digest "Topic in Brief" that said, "A minority party is one that thinks up ideas that the other one can steal to keep itself in power." But that gives the minority party a rather important place in the political world anyway; and perhaps Thomas and Broun will keep on thinking up good ideas, even if the people of New York do not feel disposed to send them to Congress.

Another Hundred-Percent-er

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, a former dry, is credited with the following statement in regard to his "conversion" to the wet cause: "In view of the fact that this administration and previous administrations have apparently been helpless in stamping out the evil, I am reluctantly forced to the opinion that national prohibition is a failure and that each State should be left to regulate the liquor traffic as a majority of its citizens deem advisable."

One wonders whether it ever occurred to the Senator that it was for this very reason that the majority of the States brought about national prohibition—because, although it improved conditions greatly, State prohibition could not stamp out the evil either. And the "majority of its citizens" thought the Nation could do a better job working as a unit on the problem than as individual States. Mr. Wheeler's (along with some others) slogan would seem to be: "Complete and absolute prohibition or none!" Such an absurd viewpoint might lead one quite naturally to doubt the reluctance with which he or anyone else is converted to the wet ranks, as also the depths of his convictions as to the liquor traffic really being "evil" at all.

For if a man really believes a thing to be evil, it is difficult to conceive of his being won over to forces which obviously and avowedly do not have that conviction.

Religion Prevents Suicide

Doctor Louis I. Dublin, statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, in an article in Harper's, speaks of religion and the churches as "a constructive force in the prevention of suicide." He says further:

Not only have they condemned it as a sin and a cowardly escape from the vicissitudes of life, but they have fostered a mental attitude that tends to make suicide impossible.

The religious point of view has always served to integrate the life of men and has given many a satisfying explanation of their origin and of their place in the universe.

By emphasizing the worth of each individual, and by giving a sense of security and reliance upon a loving Providence directing human destiny, religious faith has organized the spiritual life of the masses and has confirmed their desire to live.

Religious Education

"We would recapture, if we may, the vision of those ancient fathers of the church who saw the whole process of human history as the training of mankind by the tutelage of the educative word of God. We would realize our task as part of the age-long and universal movement of the Spirit of God who first brought order out of chaos, whose presence is manifested in the onward march of life, from whom humanity derives its every aspiration after perfection, and who is the source and ground of all Christian achievement. We in Christ are the agents, and should be the pioneers through whom that world-wide work is accomplished and God's kingdom comes. The new concept of education, wrought out by a multitude of students laboring in many fields, constitutes, as we believe, a signal means and opportunity for the extension of that kingdom. As such we would accept it for ourselves and commit it to the church, recognizing that if we are to use it rightly it must be by the example and in the fellowship of Him who in bringing many sons into glory was made perfect by suffering. Him who in this holy place Himself learned obedience by the things that He suffered."—Report of the Jerusalem Conference.

That the Scripture Might Be Fulfilled

By C. E. Hartshorn

The following is a paper that was written and read as a part of the required work for a college class in Des Moines, Iowa. This origin will account for the careful and academic manner in which the author has treated his subject.

The word fulfilled, and equivalent expressions, are used in the New Testament to mean: 1; completion, the filling out of the law or purpose; or 2; in harmony, accord, or agreement with; and 3; the carrying out of a prediction.

It was the first sense of the word, doubtless, Jesus had in mind to convey when he declared on the mount: "I came not to destroy the law and the prophets, but to fulfill." (Matthew 5: 18.) Doctor Weymouth translates this passage: "I have not come to amend them, but to give them their completion."

The argument that the word fulfilled has that meaning in this instance is supported by the fact that Jesus immediately proceeds to state the law, and then to give it a more complete application:

Ye have heard it said to them of old time, thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment; but I say unto you, Whosoever shall be angry with his brother shall be in danger of the judgment.—Matthew 5: 21, 22.

The most frequent use of the phrase, that it might be fulfilled, occurs in our second classification; that of agreement or parallelism. A careful examination of a few instances will doubtless suffice to prove this usage.

In Matthew's gospel it is related that Joseph was instructed in a dream that Mary was with child by the power of the Holy Ghost. She should bring forth a son, Jesus.

Now all this is come to pass that it might be fulfilled which was spoken through the prophet, saying: Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Immanuel.—Matthew 1: 18-23.

While this passage has all the earmarks of a prediction, we put it rather in our second classification of corresponding event, for the following reasons: Isaiah is moved by a local situation. He attempts to encourage the king of Judah, Ahaz, with the prediction that the menace threatened by the combined fury of Syria and Northern Israel will be spent before they can harm Judah. The assurance to him is not that of a son to be born six or seven centuries hence, but of a son born to a young mother just a few days in the future; and before the child should mature to the age of discretion in selecting the good from the bad food, both Syria and Israel should be made powerless and desolate. This prediction of the prophet was soon fulfilled by the Assyrian invasion and conquest.

In the second place, Mary's son was named Jesus, not Immanuel, the etymological significance of this difference being that between a son of God and a salutation of hope—"God is with us." (See Moffat's translation of Isaiah 7: 14.)

Our next case cites Matthew's account of Judas's remorse subsequent to the betrayal and conviction of Jesus. He came to the high priest and elders, who had plotted Jesus' arrest, and sought to correct his error. When Judas saw that his overtures were being scorned, he cast at their feet the thirty pieces of silver, the money involved in the crime. Since it was illegal to put "blood money" into the temple treasury, they agreed to purchase a burial place or potter's field for the burial of strangers.

This incident is seen by Matthew as a fulfillment of the words spoken by Jeremiah (though Zechariah is probably intended) which are quoted:

And I took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of the one who was priced, on whom some of the Israelites had set a price, and gave them to the potters' field, as the Lord had directed me.—Zechariah 11: 13. (Matthew 27: 9, 10.)

Turning to the Old Testament language, we find little, if any, thought of a prediction applicable to the situation at hand. The relation plays more on the similarity of the words used. The harmony in the two accounts being: 1, the amount of money involved; 2, the disdain with which it is thrown down; 3, the buying of a potter's field in each case.

The prophet, Zechariah, represents the scene as being dramatized at that very time. Notice the tense: "And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the Lord." The only sense in which this is fulfilled in the New Testament by Judas is by the correspondence of certain unimportant details, without any definite prophetic relationship.

A third instance of this use of the Old Testament scripture in the New Testament will no doubt suffice for my purpose. This case is taken from the writings of John (19: 24), and is the account of the soldiers dividing Jesus' raiment after taking his body down from the cross. Each of the four soldiers took a share. The seamless tunic, however, was spared from the knife by the suggestion that its possessor be determined by casting lots. The narrator, John, doubtless, was a believer in predestination. He must have shared the view of fatalism so prevalent in his day, and expresses it by saying, "This happened that the scripture might be fulfilled which says: They parted my garments among them and upon my vesture did they cast lots."

Since the Scriptures were believed to be the inspired word of God, that which they predicted must necessarily come to pass. Isaiah expresses this thought by saying: "My word shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and prosper in the thing whereto I send it." Of course, when we grant the point made by Isaiah, we still face the problem of determining whether Jehovah was actually predicting a future event through the Psalmist. An examination of the text shows clearly that the psalm was picturing an ideal sufferer of that day, the time being present or past, and not the future. "They part my garments among them, and cast lots upon my vesture" (Psalm 22: 18, A. V.). Doctor Moffatt translates it: "My foes are gloating over me, dividing already my very clothes." If therefore Jehovah is not here speaking through the Psalmist to predict a future event, there could be no fulfillment except in the sense of a similarity of language and events from which John attempts to draw a parallel.

We now take up the investigation of the third classification of uses of the term fulfilled, that of prediction. This interpretation presumes instances of divine revelation through prophetic gift. It starts on the premise that the great Creator of the universe does not leave himself without witness in any age, but exercises a Father's right and duty of care and direction over man, the acme of his creation. It does not compel its proponents to support the one-time popular but erroneous view of the infallibility of the scriptures or the prophets. It asserts the obvious truth that so long as Jehovah must manifest himself through human instrumentalities, the perfection of that expression or revelation will be modified in the proportion that the human limitations bears to spiritual development.

The fallacy of assuming plenary inspiration for all scripture is shown by Paul when he affirms: "The spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets." (1 Corinthians 14: 32, A. V.) Doctor Moffatt's translation makes this even more clear: "Prophets can control their own prophetic spirits." Paul carries this a step further in concluding his famous chapter on marriage, 1 Corinthians 7: 40, "But in my judgment she [a widow] is happier if she remains as she is; and I think that I also have the Spirit of God." (Weymouth's translation.)

This fact must, therefore, be reckoned with: there is the possibility of varying degrees of divine revelation, our interpretation of which will depend upon spiritual light and not the historical method or the scientific approach alone. For this scholarly writer of New Testament literature, who learned his gospel by "a revelation from Jesus Christ," and not from man, in the passage to the Corinthian saints, just quoted, was unable or unwilling to claim that he was then writing by the authority of divine revelation. He only infers probability.

For these and other reasons, which time does not permit us here to advance, we approach an interpretation of what appears to our finite mind to be actual prediction and fulfillment, without assuming that there is no imprint of the human on it, but also not ruling out the probability of contact with the divine; a communion with the Father which opens wide the door to the future, and at appropriate times when, and at places where God wills, shall also permit the prophet to speak words of wisdom which are above and beyond the possibility of human ken.

The first instance which I have selected to substantiate the prediction theory is that recorded by Matthew where Jesus healed the man with the withered hand and others on the Sabbath day, charging his beneficiaries "not to blaze abroad his doings" (Matthew 12: 16, Weymouth Translation), that it might be fulfilled which was spoken through Isaiah the prophet, saying:

Behold my servant, whom I have chosen; my beloved, in whom my soul is well pleased; I will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall declare judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not strive, nor cry aloud; neither shall anyone hear his voice in the streets. A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory. And unto his name shall the Gentiles hope.—
Matthew 12: 17-20.

Examining Isaiah's prophecy, we observe first; that he speaks of a future event. Second; that Israel shall some day be commissioned by the endowment of the Spirit of Jehovah to take true religion to the nations. Third; the servant whom God shall choose shall be gentle, lowly, kind even to the broken reed. The frenzy against foreign nations, so characteristic of prophets in Israel, shall be conspicuously absent. Fourth; this universal religion shall be sought after by all nations.

Now Matthew recognizes Jesus as that servant of Jehovah coming in this role. It does not require a blind faith to accept this interpretation. It is not essential to the theory that a particular person or name should have been revealed to or through the Prophet Isaiah, nor a particular time disclosed. And further, to establish our major premise, it is not incumbent upon us to assume that all the details shall conform to the two-year ministry of our Lord, our hypothesis being that Isaiah looked to the future for fulfillment, and that he spoke beyond his own knowledge. Jesus can well be identified with the major promise of this wonderful prediction.

Our second case is also taken from the record of Matthew. The narrative says that Jesus sent two disciples into Bethpage to get an ass and her colt, "that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet saying: Tell ye the daughter of Zion, Behold thy king cometh unto thee, meek and riding upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass." (Matthew 21: 1-6.)

As we now turn to the original prophecy of Zechariah (9: 9, 10) we shall discover that he is predicting first; a time when Jerusalem shall be entered by a triumphant king. Second; he shall enter peacefully upon an ass, at such a time as implements of war have been banished from Israel and Judah. And third; this king shall be mighty in word, which shall make for peace to all nations.

This appears to be a prophetic utterance which was given to the prophet from that divine source which on rare occasions illumines the minds of devout men. Since it did not have a prior fulfillment than Jesus gave to it, we can not put it in our second classification of parallel incidents. Even if we place the prophecy as late as 141 B. C., with Peake's commentary, the local Maccabean situation, with its militant "do-or-die" attitude, does not furnish a motivation for the prophet, nor fit the picture before him.

It is not expedient to present other cases here, so I shall rest the case of my third classification on these two illustrations.

I shall offer this further statement, taken from Religions, Past and Present, by Windle. The author quotes Doctor G. C. Brinton with approval where he says:

It is the belief that behind the sensuous, phenomenal world, distinct from it, giving it form, existence, and activity, lies the ultimate, invisible, immeasurable power of Mind or conscious Will, of Intelligence, analogous in some way to our own; and—mark this essential corollary—that man is in communion with it.

If I have not already offered convincing arguments for the case of the inspired prophet, I fear that a piling up of illustrations cited by New Testament writers would only tire you. If what has been offered appeals to you as being sound, there is no need to present others.

Hidden Treasures

Shakespeare said:

The jewel that we find we stoop and take it,
Because we see it; but that we do not see
We tread upon and never think of it.

The foregoing observation offered by the "immortal bard of Avon" is as novel as it is worth while, and its significance is worthy of consideration. How true it is and so human to accept at once the precious jewels so near the surface and the opportunities readily discerned. On the other hand the treasures which are secured only through great effort and the opportunities which must be made or found at the expense of toil and consecration are too often passed by or disregarded. While the earth and sea have yielded their treasures of the past, there is no doubt but there are priceless gems still hidden from the searching eye of man. May it not be possible that around us there lies hidden wealth, not only as it relates to the mineral kingdom but in the vegetable world as well which is without value because its worth or significance is as yet undiscovered, hence we "tread upon them."

From the elegy written in a country graveyard comes those beautiful words:

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
Beneath the unfathom'd caves of ocean bear;
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

The above may not be the exact words, but the significance is preserved.

There is no doubt, to my mind at least, that many of the plants which are now regarded as undesirable and in some instances obnoxious possess medicinal qualities which if men could see would "stoop and take," or use to great advantage; until their hidden wealth is discovered, they are valueless, hence trodden under foot of man.

The church is admonished to search out the wholesome herbs, for they are "ordained for the constitution, nature, and use of man." The implication is clearly evident that the virtues and qualities of many herbs are yet undiscovered; hidden treasures.

It is just possible that the depth, the value, and the significance of the Word of Wisdom have not as yet been sounded. I am quite sure that within this admonition from God are treasures yet to be gathered.

Perhaps Shakespeare was not altogether wrong when he said: "There are sermons in stones; tongues in trees, books in running brooks, and good in everything."

I am not so sure but there are some good things to come out of the State of Missouri; hidden treasures yet to be discovered in this land wherein Zion is to be builded, the land to which the Saints were admonished to gather. There is no question but that there were reasons for designating Missouri as a choice land.

In this land is the place designated not only for the building of the City of Zion, but out of this favored city shall go to the nations of the earth the significance of God's greatest mystery, the power of righteousness. This being true, would it be a stretch of imagination to believe that in the land of Zion there is hidden material wealth, at least somewhere in the regions near about? I am quite sure that the Lord did not choose Missouri merely because the Mississippi River washed its eastern shore or the Kaw River came out of Kansas. These factors may be associated with many other elements inviting choice.

A people who would build spiritual houses and temples must also build material houses and carry on in a businesslike way. Then why not believe that there is material wealth as well as spiritual power accessible to the people who are to dwell in the land of Zion.

Not only are there hidden treasures in the great material fields of God, but according to the Apostle Paul, there are great spiritual founts yet to be discovered, which when found will serve humanity infinitely beyond all earthly treasures. In the first letter to the saints at Corinth, we are told that there is a "mystery which has been hid from ages and from generations but now is made manifest to the saints to whom God would make known what is the riches of this among the Gentiles: which is Christ in you the hope of glory." The purpose of this power is "that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." According to the Apostle Paul this mystery is hidden from those who possess not this power which is the light of life; but lo, the Saints, the true disciples, it is the power of God unto salvation, a mystery accessible unto all who love the ways of God, a treasure from God's great storehouse infinitely better than the gems of the ocean or precious stones from the mountains. This hidden treasure may be forfeited but never stolen. It is indeed the light of life by and through which ignorance and superstition are destroyed and in their stead truth and righteousness are established. Again it is the power which divides truth from error and before which darkness gives place to light. It is the power by which through faith, Zion shall be built and the Saints of God be made to rejoice. Yes, the greatest of all mysteries is "Christ in you the hope of glory."

Questionnaire for the Local Church

NUMBER 2.—CHECK UP ON YOUR BRANCH WORKERS

By F. Henry Edwards

How are your workers chosen? What relative weight do you give to such considerations as character, ability, cooperativeness? Do you encourage or resent initiative? Are your branch workers respected in their various offices, or are they continually overridden in matters of importance? Do your branch executives and committees present constructive and carefully thought-out plans to the branch for criticism and approval, or do they merely carry out hastily conceived plans haphazardly originated in the business meetings? Are the members of your branch in the habit of seeking advice and information from every Thomas, Richard, and Henry, or are they habituated to seeking these from the responsible officers?

What do your branch executives actually know about their respective tasks? Are they keeping abreast of the times? Do they consult the special helps provided for them by the church? Are they impervious to suggestions? Can they cooperate?

Are the members of your priesthood growing? How does their spiritual status compare with what it was a year ago? Ten years ago? Are they studying for their respective tasks? Are the younger members of the priesthood growing into places of responsibility? Are you too dependent on a few men? Are you preparing for the changes which time will bring? Are your priesthood meetings gatherings for telling the pastor how to run the branch, or serious and cooperative associations of mutual aid? Do the members of the branch believe in priesthood more deeply or less deeply because of your priestly group?

When problems arise, are they immediately settled by the fiat of the pastor, or do those concerned grow through mutual endeavor toward a solution? Are disputes decided quietly, or does the whole branch know when two of its members can not agree?

Do your branch workers talk glibly to visiting workers about the gains they would like to see made, and then block suggested improvements until every detail of operation is approved? Is it understood that no one can avoid mistakes all the time, and that even the best executives are only right part of the time? Are the branch members willing to accept mistakes as part of the price of progress?

Do you suffer from a "credit-grabber"? Are the prominent positions in the branch centered in a few people, while those less prominent are neglected?

Do you play favorites? Do you make systematic effort to get every member of the branch to work? Do you then seek to praise and encourage these workers in direct relation to their need of praise or encouragement? Are you in danger of sapping the strength of your workers by overpraise, by invidious comparisons, by oversight? Do you overwork some so that they do not have time for self-improvement and go stale?

Are the branch priesthood active? Do they want to preach when the great need is for visiting? Are their visits formal or vital? Are their sermons well prepared or spontaneous? Is the branch being fed a balanced diet of spiritual food, or do they have to subsist on what scraps may be thrown to them by a conglomeration of individualistic chefs? Do the members of the priesthood recognize their responsibilities in prayer meetings? In the church school? Are they real leaders, or do they just wear the uniform?

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Church School

DETAILS OF ADMINISTRATION

By C. B. Woodstock

Intensive study, observation, and experiment have been in progress for months in the General Department of Religious Education to determine the organization and administration of religious education most desirable at the present time for use in all the branches of the church. A change from the previous plan of three separate departments to one unified department and a single program closely integrated with the church and its program, was recommended by the General Conference of April, 1930.

A preliminary statement of the organization for branches recommended by the general department has been variously presented in past months in the Department Journal, and recently in columns of the Saints' Herald. Our correspondence indicates that the change is being tried out, wholly or in part, in many branches and districts with more than ordinary satisfaction. Numerous reports have been enthusiastic over the evidences of new growth and renewed energy in church work due to an intelligent cooperation of all the forces of the branch centered in a unified program of endeavor.

The general department has hesitated to broadcast authoritative directions for a new type of organization. However, as we near the time when plans must be perfected for the new church school year, we feel we should submit to workers in the field of religious education the best advice to be given at this time. This will appear in an organized way in several installments in the columns of the Herald. The material will later be gathered and printed in pamphlet form for further distribution. Constructive criticism will be welcomed, especially after trial has proved the relative value of the advice given.

The new plan is the outgrowth of a demand made by active workers in the field of religious education in all parts of the church. It is in keeping with similar movements in other churches. At present, it is the combined product of the thinking, study, and experiment of progressive workers in our own church representing all phases of our church endeavor, and work in all types of branches.

The finally completed plan should be wholly suited to meet the educational needs of the church, in a closely integrated program in which the ministry and all departments and forces of the church join in a united effort to accomplish the tasks of the church as we go into a new century.

The present statement is an effort to set out certain details of local administration in which there should be unity of action. The present advice should be acceded to in so far as it can be done consistently, as branches undertake to work under the new plan.

A similar statement concerning organization will follow this, also definite plans for the organization and administration of Adult, Young People's, and Children's Divisions.

1. Responsibility

The pastor is recognized as chiefly responsible for the religious educational life and activity of the branch. The church school should be a most valuable asset in promoting the spiritual, intellectual, social, moral, cultural, and financial welfare of the branch and community.

The administrative officers of the school, of its divisions, and its departments are responsible in their fields for all of the people actually and potentially members of the congregation. With the teachers and leaders, they are responsible for the formulation and the administration of the most efficient all-the-week program possible in the community, which shall best meet the religious educational needs of the people, in harmony with the belief, the ideals, and the program of the church.

2. Qualification of Leaders

Officers and teachers should be chosen for leadership because of their qualification in personality, education, spiritual growth and activity, training in leadership, and willingness to serve. Each school must make definite provision for further training of present and future leaders in special and general fields of religious education. Local worker's conference, training classes, study groups by correspondence, local, district, and general institutes, the three standard books of the church, other books and magazines in the field of religious education, and the Church Work and Service columns in the Saints' Herald are means of training available. All workers should be urged to take training for credit toward graded Certificates in Religious Education and Leadership.

3. Supervision

Supervision, or the actual leadership in efficient methods of teaching and leading, is a most vital need of our church school work. The director and supervisors must become specialists in methods, materials, and principles of teaching and leadership, able to direct and demonstrate the most efficient ways of securing results.

4. System of Grading

The age-groups recognized in grading should be those in vogue under the previous Sunday school administration. A detailed statement of grading is to be given under "Organization." It is recommended that in the lower departments the public school grading be followed as a basis for promotion. This is largely on the basis of mental age or ability. Above the intermediate years the social life and grouping is an important factor. Wherever exceptions tend to occur, care should be taken to make a decision which will result in the greatest good, both to the individual and to the school as a whole.

5. Promotion

Since the quarterly lesson series begins in October, it is strongly urged that promotion within the school take place the last Sunday in September. Records of attendance should be carefully kept and those promoted from one department to the next who have spent the required time in the department. While we are anxious each should complete the work assigned to the department, it is doubtful if rigid requirements of attendance or attainment may be set as a basis for promotion.

Special promotion day exercises should be held, and certificates awarded those who merit them.

6. Growth through Study

From the ages of eighteen up, greater latitude should be permitted in the selection of study courses suited to the interests and needs of each particular group. The newly prepared current quarterlies of the young people and adult grades are most timely and important studies. From these and previously printed courses available, there should be chosen by each age group a series of courses for yearly study; one for Sunday morning, one for Sunday evening, and perhaps one or more for study occasions through the week. Over a period of years definite progress should be made toward personal and group achievement.

For successful class work, a quarterly or other study material should be given careful, studious reading and thought by each member previous to the class session. Teachers must insist upon this and order their teaching in a way to encourage personal preparation of lesson materials. The quarterly is intended to be a guide and helpful source book definitely planned and prepared to assist in the teaching work of the church. The endless, unorganized wandering of a class through one of the church books is usually to be discouraged.

7. Study Courses

The Gospel Series prepared by the general department are practically all one-year courses and, in most departments, are built upon a three-year cycle. From the nursery up through the adult grades, there are now thirty (30) one-year courses carefully built into a graded curriculum in an effort to cover the entire range of information and experience helpful in religious education. In the young people's and adults' fields there are also a number of specially prepared texts in pamphlet or book form supplementing the quarterly series. From the nursery up to the young people's department, it is most essential that the regular materials be used as nearly as may be in their order, and entirely, without omissions. Our own materials are designed to teach of life and truth, and the plan of salvation as contained in the standard books of the church, fundamental in the belief and program of the Restoration.

In accomplishing the work of the church, it is necessary that our own materials be used to teach our belief, to extend our faith, to establish confidence in the program of the church, and to build loyalty to its ideals and institutions.

8. Classes in the Church School

A class is a logical working group. It should be composed of individuals of common interests and needs, so far as conditions will permit. The membership of a class or a group naturally gravitate about a point of common interest. The drawing motive may be the class study of Sunday morning, the social opportunities afforded by the group throughout the week, interest in a group project, or some other worthy satisfaction. It is essential that there be a real occasion for the class group, and that through the provision made by the church school, encouragement and definite help is given for the constructive realization of the purposes of the group in harmony with the objectives of the church.

9. The Teacher-leader

Group leadership in the church school is a position of rich and broad possibilities. An ideal leader is one who is not only a wise and skillful teacher of the class on Sunday morning, but a sympathetic friend and companion of the group, willing and able to share and to lead in their varied religious, social, and recreational life throughout the week. A beautiful example was set in the ministry of Christ.

When necessary an assistant may be secured to help in any particular line of activity.

10. All-the-Week Programs

It is thus seen that for the purposes of a religious education which shall function in all the situations of life, our program must extend throughout the week. One phase may be just as important as another in developing character, in giving poise, strength, stability, and beauty to personality, and in establishing the ideals, habits, and attitudes necessary in building the kingdom of God.

Sunday morning is an important occasion for the group to be together for worship and study, but the teacher-leader should feel equal responsibility for the members of the group to share constructively in the prayer, worship, and other services of the church on Sunday, the prayer service, recreational occasions through the week, the project work of his group and of the church, and every activity which promises an enrichment of life and the rendering of a worthy service.

11. Organized Classes

Often distinct value is found above the Junior age in the organized class, especially if the organization may serve to carry on throughout the week and function in social, recreational, and project activities, as well as in study and worship. The plan and purpose of an organized class must always serve the best interests of its department or division, and of the entire school. Its program must always reflect loyalty to, and support of, the church, both local and general.

Care must be taken that any particular age group shall not become self-sufficient, exclusive, and out of sympathy with other groups of the congregation. Only in unity of purpose, mutual helpfulness, and good fellowship may the objectives of the church be reached.

12. Age Group Meetings

Provision must be made for the meeting of classes or age groups at times during the week for purposes recognized as worthy. Class teachers, department superintendents, division supervisors should be alert to the needs of their respective groups and resourceful in their leadership, making possible for all members of the congregation the most happy, wholesome development, through varied activities wholly consistent with the ideals, purposes, and program of the church.

While much freedom of personal and group initiative should be given in the matter of group activities, those responsible as leaders should be strictly accountable to the department, division, and church school leaders, and finally, to the pastor, for the entire program under their supervision.

13. Projects of the Church School

Under the term projects may be grouped all types of activities, usually group endeavors, growing out of a need or desire felt by the group, the doing of which meets some worthy end, the activity itself having distinct religious values to those participating in the project. Activities of this type should afford freedom of initiative in planning and in the constructive work of the project. Religion should find concrete expression in purposeful thinking, feeling, and doing; in projects of actual life.

14. Worship

Worship is not limited to the formal preaching and prayer services, directly under the charge of the priesthood. Occasions for worship should be found at many points in the week's program in connection with other services and activities; as a part of the Sunday school hour, in young people's meetings, junior worship, family worship, etc. A reverent spirit of worship should be encouraged and cultivated on all appropriate occasions, as a necessary part of religious education.

15. The Church Program

The principal work of the church school is to teach by precept, example, and practice the principles of the gospel of Christ as expressed in the faith, belief, and program of the church. Those who teach and lead must ever strive consistently to advance the interests of the church as a means divinely appointed to accomplish the purposes of Christ in the world. The work of the church school must be distinctly evangelistic and missionary as well as pastoral and educational in its ministry among the people. It must encourage and lead a hearty, intelligent response to the program of the church, thus supplementing the ministry of the priesthood.

16. Parents and Home Interests

Much valuable religious education should occur within the home. We must look to the parents of the church to become efficient teachers of religion in the home, in which atmosphere and example are vital factors.

The church school must extend its influence helpfully into every home of the community. The adult division is chiefly responsible for study courses and group projects making for intelligent and consecrated home building and family life within the community. The children's division and the young people's division share in the task of meeting the needs of Christian nurture and the development of Christian character in the home, in the church, and in the community.

Projects of child welfare are probably shared equally by the leaders of the adult's and children's divisions.

17. Parent-teacher Relationship

One of the most important relationships for good in the field of religious education is a union of the forces of the home and the church. Much can be accomplished through mutual understanding and cooperation between the parents and teachers of the church school. Through parent-teacher meetings of the school, of division, and of departments, there may come a sharing of experiences, a unifying of purposes, a placing of common emphasis upon details of the program. The church, the home, and the church school must work intelligently as a unit if we are to make the greatest progress.

18. A Real School of Religious Education

The term school implies studious effort under guidance, resulting in growth, development, "education" of the individual and of the group. Those responsible for the spiritual growth of the membership of the church must seek diligently to organize a program of activities rich, varied, well-balanced, calling for both individual and group participation through which a people shall become informed and progressively developed, physically, mentally, socially, and spiritually to live productively the gospel life anticipated in the message of Christ, and to be realized in Zion of the latter day. A "real school" should keep all the people growing, in all their ways, in all their days, into the likeness of the Master, able and willing to participate effectively in the actual building of his kingdom in the world.

I do not look for a miracle, but I look for a beginning. Before the world can have peace it must think in terms of peace.—Edward Bok.

Church School Worship Services

Arranged by Edith Harkness

It is fitting that a year's program of church school worship services should be introduced by the theme "Preparing for a year of Christian service." This is the theme for the month of October in the program arranged by Mrs. Harkness who desires especially to appeal to the young people to find their place in the work of the church.—Editor.

The theme for the month of October "Preparing for a year of Christian service" has been selected in view of the beginning of the new church year. A whole year is before us, and to do creditable work in and for the church, we should be prepared. These worship services should appeal especially to the young people. The first has to do with personal preparation, the last two with the preparation of the entire group. Local leaders should study these services carefully and then build the service which will meet the needs of his school.

SECOND SUNDAY: "Lord, speak to me."

Instrumental Prelude. (Close this with "Lord, speak to me," 208 Hymnal for American Youth.)

Moment of Preparation, by leader:

"Our theme during the month is 'Preparing for a year of Christian service.' The most important part of this preparation is prayer. We too often think of prayer as 'much speaking,' but one writer has learned that prayer is 'as much listening to God as it is saying words to him. As worship depends largely upon what we bring to it, let this be a time in which we quiet ourselves and prepare our hearts and minds to listen."

Pianist will play the above hymn through once again. The leader will remain standing, and as the music ceases will read quietly, but impressively:

"O God, Protector, Matchless Friend,
Upon the threshold of the day
We pause in grateful prayer,

"For safety through the night,
For peace of sleeping hours,
For rest which comes with morn,
And thank thee, God.

"As in this early hour,
We feel thee near us,
So wilt thou be this day
Our constant Guard and Guide.

"Tune our ears that we may know
Thy voice, and keep our wavering wills
Obedient to thine own.
We pray in Jesus' name. Amen."

Scripture Lesson: Psalms 42 and 43.

The leader will make the following explanation preceding the reading of the lesson by two young people:

Leader: "These two Psalms tell the experience of a man who, in the midst of trouble, was always sustained by his faith in God. The first reader will represent the man in his moments of despair; while the second reader represents his 'better self'—or shall we say, God speaking to him."

First: Psalm 42: 1-4.

Second: Psalm 42: 5.

First: Psalm 42: 6a, 7-10.

Hymn: "Take my life and let it be," tune 131 Saints' Hymnal. (School will rise.)

Take my life, and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to thee;
Take my moments and my days,
Let them flow in ceaseless praise.

Take my will, and make it thine;
It shall be no longer mine;
Take my heart: it is thine own;
It shall be thy royal throne.

Take my love; my Lord, I pour
At thy feet its treasure-store;
Take myself, and I will be Ever, only, all for thee.

Short Talks: "The best use of prayer" (two or three minutes long).

Suggested points:

"The value of a ten- or fifteen-minute period of meditation and prayer upon arising each morning."

"How to pray."

"How to overcome our doubts about prayer with prayer."

Season of Silent Prayer.

Leader: "During this season of silent prayer, we may pray for strength to keep the high resolutions we made in the worship service on last Sunday, or in the prayer service on Wednesday night. If we have not as yet made such resolutions, then let us make them now, that we may be ready for whatever task Jesus may have for us to do."

Allow about two minutes for silent prayer, then read quietly:

"Grant us the will to fashion as we feel,
Grant us the strength to labor as we know,
Grant us the purpose, ribbed and edged with steel,
To strike the blow.

"Knowledge we ask not, knowledge thou hast lent,
But, Lord, the will, there lies our need;
Give us to build above the deep intent,
The deed,—the deed."—John Drinkwater.

Hymn: "God who is just and kind," 81 Saints' Hymnal. (School will rise.)

Dismissal to classes and lesson study.

Congregational Hymn: "We bless Thee for this sacred day," 70 Saints' Hymnal.

Morning Message.

Closing Hymn: "Consecration."

Benediction.

THIRD SUNDAY: "Colaborers."

Instrumental Prelude.

Hymn of Praise: "Great God, attend," 9 Saints' Hymnal. (School will rise.)

Invocation, emphasizing our gratitude for the values that have come to us through the labors of those earnest workers who have carried on before us.

Moment of Preparation, by leader:

Center the thought upon the theme, "Colaborers," and stress the idea that we Latter Day Saints have a duty in carrying out God's purpose today—this is our task which we accepted in the waters of baptism—we must not make it just an "extra," or take it as a matter of little consequence. It is our life's work.

Hymn of the Church: tune 16 Saints' Hymnal. (School remain seated.)

I love thy Church, O Lord,
The house of thine abode,
The Church our blest Redeemer saved
With his own precious blood.

I love thy Church, O Lord;
Her walls before thee stand,
Dear as the apple of thine eye,
And graven on thine hand.

For her my tears shall fall,
For her my prayers ascend;
To her my care and toils be given
Till toils and cares shall end.

—Timothy Dwight.

Scripture Lesson: Philippians 1: 27; 2: 3-11, 14-16.

Poem: "What is Christianity?" by William DeWitt Hyde.

"In the home, it is kindness.
In business, it is honesty.
In society, it is courtesy.
In work, it is thoroughness.
In play, it is fairness.

Toward the fortunate, it is congratulation.
Toward the unfortunate, it is pity.
Toward the weak, it is help.
Toward the wicked, it is resistance.
Toward the strong, it is trust.
Toward the penitent, it is forgiveness.
Toward God—it is reverence and love."

Pastor's Message. A well-planned brief statement outlining the more important tasks to which the school should give its attention during the coming year.

Season of Prayer, a time of thoughtful meditation.

Hymn of Service: "May we who know," 116 Saints' Hymnal, verses 1 and 4 only.

Dismissal to classes and lesson study.

Announcements.

Congregational Hymn: "O happy is the man," 107, Saints' Hymnal.

Morning Message.

Closing Hymn: "Lord, at this closing hour, 229 Saints' Hymnal.

Benediction.

FOURTH SUNDAY: "The things which are before."

Instrumental Prelude: This may be one or more familiar hymns; if printed services are not used, have a group of young people or the choir prepare the following "hymn of progress." It is 183 Hymnal for American Youth, or the music to 230 Zion's Praises may be used. If printed services are used, use verse one only.

Hymn of Progress: "Forward! be our watchword."

Forward! be our watchword,
Steps and voices joined,
Seek the things before us,
Not a look behind.
Burns the fiery pillar
At our army's head;
Who shall dream of shrinking
By our Captain led?
Forward through the desert,
Thro' the toil and fight!
Jordan flows before us,
Zion beams with light.

—Henry Alford, 1871.

Invocation (should be missionary in its content).

Presentation of Theme, by leader.

"At the great convention of church school workers from all parts of the continent which convened in Toronto, Canada, last June, the young people centered their thinking in six great themes. These themes may well be included in the program of our church school. They can easily be designated as "the unfinished tasks of Christianity."

(Parts should be taken by six young people who will prepare in advance to emphasize in about two minutes each the duty of the school in each of these themes. The following materials have been selected and adapted, but are merely suggestive of the ideas which may be used.)

Worship—seeking to know the will of God—opening our hearts to hear his voice—joining with other Christians in praise and petition—gaining new power to live like the Christ.

Our best is but thyself in us,
Our highest thought thy will;
To hear thy voice we need but love
To listen, and be still.
We would not bend thy will to ours,
But blend our wills with thine;
Nor beat with cries on heaven's doors,
But live thy life divine.

—Henry Hallam Tweedy.

Christlike Conduct. Christians and Latter Day Saints are judged by their actions. Young people criticize older people when they do not live up to their ideals. In what way do we Latter Day Saint young people act differently from other Christians or from those who do not claim to be Christians?

(A well-thought-out prayer may be given by this speaker at the close of his talk. He should pray especially that the young people may love truth and righteousness so much that they will be willing to dare as did Jesus and Paul to stand for the right.)

Other Youth. What is the duty of our young people toward Christian young people of other churches? Toward young people in the community who are not now members of any church? Toward young people of all races?

Church Cooperation. How may we cooperate with other churches in our community? How can we be fair and unprejudiced in our thinking about Christians who differ from us?

A prayer along the lines of thought in the following may be given by this speaker:

"Our Father, we love thy church, and yet we are ashamed because it falls so far short of what thou dost desire. Its members have sometimes followed the ways of the world, and thereby they have been disloyal to thee. But we are even more ashamed of ourselves, for, in criticizing others who have failed, we are so blind to our own shortcomings. We would be loyal to thee and helpful to our church. Help us, in our lives and in our community, truly to build the church of Jesus Christ. We pray this in the name of our Savior and our Redeemer. Amen."

A Christian Society. Love for hatred—patience for anger—kindness for injury—forgiveness for malice—self-sacrifice for selfishness—these are needed. The Christlike way of life.

("These things shall be—a loftier race" may be used here as a solo, or in any way desired; or the hymn may be read by the speaker as a closing to his remarks. The number is 253 Hymnal for American Youth, and may be sung to the music of 34 in Saints' Hymnal.)

Jesus Christ: (The following thoughts may be woven into a splendid talk, or just one or two may be used.)

"In all things, Jesus shall be our Guide."
"As our Leader—to him we will give our loyalty."
"What we know of God, we learn through Christ."
"Daring Social Prophet—have we faith to apply his teachings?"
"Will Latter Day Saint youth respond to his call?"

Hymn: "O Jesus, Prince of Life and Truth," tune 171 Saints' Hymnal, omitting fourth line of music—or 14 Saints' Hymnal may be used.)

O Jesus, Prince of life and truth,
Beneath thy banner bright,
We dedicate our strength and youth
To battle for the right;
We give our lives with glad intent
To serve the world and thee,
To die, to suffer and be spent
To set our brothers free.

O Jesus, once a Nazareth boy,
And tempted like as we,
All inward foes help us destroy
And spotless all to be.
We trust thee for the grace to win
The high, victorious goal,
Where purity shall conquer sin,
In Christlike self-control.

Dismissal to classes and lesson study.

Values of the Church Nursery

By Anne Friend Roberts

1. It provides a childlike atmosphere with comfortable equipment: low chairs so his feet can rest on the floor; tables of the proper height for play material; pictures hung low so the child can see and point out objects that are of interest to him; books that appeal to the small child.

2. Here he finds children of his own age to play with, and he soon learns to share with others. A great many three-year-olds have no brothers or sisters. We sometimes call them selfish. The fact is they have been forced to play alone and had no occasion to share with others.

3. If the child has a happy, satisfying experience in the church nursery, it will be something for him to look forward to. Love for the church service when he is little will go a long way toward helping him love the church service when he is older.

4. In the child mind the church building is associated with the heavenly Father. There he learns reverence for the heavenly Father's house. He sees the picture of Jesus always before him. He is permitted to look at and handle the Bible, where we read the stories told by Jesus. He is taught to be very careful with this book, for in it we read what Jesus wants us to do. And he learns to love the Bible and believe the stories it contains.

5. Activities suited to the development of the child are carried on in the nursery. The nursery teacher tactfully mentions them to the parents, interesting them in the activities so that they will be fostered in the home during the week.

6. A shelf of good books for parents may be kept in the nursery to lend to parents to read, which gives the nursery teacher an opportunity to discuss the book with the parents. Magazines with marked articles can be loaned the same way.

7. The church nursery provides a way to meet the parents on a religious basis as nothing else does. When the child is older he is often sent to church school, but when he is in the nursery he must be brought by his parents.

8. It provides an opportunity to form a class in parentcraft for young parents who are interested in the same things, and these parents form new associations that draw them to the church. If the children are cared for during the preaching service, it is an incentive for the parents to attend the meeting.

9. The nursery affords great opportunity for religious education, as every activity should be planned for the good of the child. Every finger play used, every song sung, every story told, and every game played should be interpreted religiously, directing the child mind to the heavenly Father who cares for all.

10. Thus the nursery not only trains the child, but provides helps for the parents, and makes it possible for the nursery teacher and the parents to work together in rearing and training children for a life of service.

The Child's Bill of Rights

The ideal to which we should strive is that there shall be no child in America:

That has not been born under proper conditions

That does not live in hygienic surroundings

That ever suffers from under-nourishment

That does not have prompt and efficient medical attention and inspection

That does not receive primary instruction in the elements of hygiene and good health

That has not the complete birthright of a sound mind in a sound body

That has not the encouragement to express in fullest measure the spirit within which is the final endowment of every human being.—Herbert Hoover.

The above from the President of the United States constitutes a definite challenge to parenthood and other constructive child welfare forces of the country. What answer are we giving as a church? Is it a matter of our concern that children are unfortunately born and reared? That they suffer from malnutrition and are handicapped through lack of medical attention? That lives are clouded and souls dwarfed because education, and especially religious education, fails in its task?

The call to the church is to equip itself adequately for the service the Master would have us render to humanity in his name.

REUNION NEWS

Mobile Reunion

By Mrs. Verna Burt

Mobile district reunion, held at Mobile, Alabama, was in charge of the district presidency, Elders Franklin Steiner and George E. Burt.

Greater interest than ever before was shown in the class work, which was given from ten to twelve o'clock and from half past one to half past three each day. At ten o'clock a class in "Church beliefs" was conducted by Elder G. E. Burt; a primary-junior worship service was in charge of Mrs. Verna Burt, and the teen-age girls were taught art work by Mrs. Myrtle Gowey. At eleven o'clock Elder Glenn Davis discussed various subjects; the junior boys and girls did pine-needle work under the supervision of Mrs. Verna Burt, the Boy Scouts worked with G. E. Burt; the teen-age girls studied home etiquette and social behavior with Anna Mae Hough; and the beginners and primary children did hand-work under the supervision of Mrs. Myrtle Scarcliff. At half past one in the afternoon Elder G. T. Richards taught "Methods in personal evangelism," and at half past two Mrs. Verna Burt supervised a group of women and girls in pine-needle basketry. Elder Glenn Davis conducted the recreational activities, and Elder G. T. Richards was the speaker for the evening services.

Although the regular campers were few in number, everyone participated in the activities of the reunion, and those who came from their homes each day felt that the effort was very much worth while.

Mobile is looking forward to the beginning of a permanent reunion ground next year.

Michigan Reunion Responsive

By E. E. Closson

For a number of years Mrs. Closson and I have been attending reunions in the United States and Canada, but never have we met people more eager to advance the program of the church than those who attended the Michigan reunions this year. The young people were especially responsive. It was heartening to discuss life problems with from fifty to one hundred young people who showed vital interest in finding the most acceptable method of living that will bring maximum happiness and good.

At Indian Lake swimming, volley ball, and playground ball were the principal sports. Playing "water ball" in the lake captivated the enthusiastic swimmers. Brother A. H. DuRose and Brother William Osler assumed an active lead in this game. Camp-fire programs after the evening service revealed considerable unsuspected talent among all ages. Here amusing, interesting, educational, and worshipful incidents filled the hour from nine to ten with pleasant exercises.

After ten days of comradeship and cooperation with these people, we hastily moved on to Beaverton, where the Central Michigan district reunion was in session. Here we formed many new friendships with young and old. Brother "Danny" Williams became the central figure around which the young people rallied to play volley ball. In this way he won their highest respect and confidence. Their loyalty to him was evidenced by their mass attendance at all services where he was the speaker.

The class work was received by these people with open minds and an earnest desire to learn. Any teacher finds a class of this kind to be a stimulus for better teaching. We found numbers of young people here who are working to-

Sunday School Anniversary Services

Northeast Branch, Manchester, England

The thirty-fifth anniversary of the Northeast Manchester Branch Sunday school was celebrated Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, June 21, 22, and 23, last.

For several weeks a band of noble workers had been busy preparing for the week-end's activities, which proved such a huge success that all were well rewarded for their labor.

On Saturday afternoon at 3.30 a garden party was held on the grounds of Park House, North Road, Clayton, kindly loaned by Brother and Sister James Schofield. G. W. Leggott, pastor of the branch, opened the proceedings with a few words of greeting. Shortly after 4.30 over two hundred people enjoyed a substantial tea. Then they took part in and enjoyed watching the games, which included putting, clock golf, net the ball, and many others. Much amusement was caused by the bun-eating contest. Ices, minerals, sweets, and chocolates were in great demand during the festivities, and the stall holders were kept busy serving all the time.

A brass band had been engaged for the occasion, and it played many selections to an appreciative audience. Later in the evening, owing to the condition of the weather, a concert was provided in the schoolroom of the United Methodist chapel. A number of artists had been engaged, and the program was enjoyable.

We are greatly indebted to our friends who came to our ward a certificate in religious education. Surely our people are preparing themselves for more effective leadership.

Before going on to our next reunion we stopped for a few days with Brother A. H. DuRose and family in Flint. Here we enjoyed a pleasant and refreshing visit with friends. Thursday afternoon found us again in Beaverton, where we stayed for the night with Brother and Sister Fultz, whose kindness to us during the entire reunion is greatly appreciated.

The Park of the Pines was our next objective. This is a beautiful place, ideal for reunion purposes. Only a few of these Saints had we met previously, but Sister Louise Evans, the popular director of Michigan choirs, introduced us to her host of friends, and soon we felt at home with these excellent people.

A number of Gracelanders were located during the week, among them the Dirk Schreur family at whose home we were made most welcome.

In working with the young people at the Park of the Pines, we were pleased with the whole-hearted manner in which they entered into every activity—class work, recreation, or devotional services. The Doty family took a leading part in reunion activities. Truly they are a "happy family." One could easily detect the wholesome influence of the district president, Brother Allen Schreur, in the lives of the young people. They look to him as a "big brother," who can always be depended on to help them find happiness in right living.

None present will soon forget the evening when over four hundred ears of corn were roasted over the camp fire. Some learned for the first time why sweet corn is so appropriately called "roastin' ears."

Looking back on the summer's activity, one feels a satisfying thrill to know that hundreds of young and older people are answering the call of the church to come up higher. The memory of pleasant hours spent with friends old and new will serve throughout the year as an urge to better things.

assistance with tables, forms, etc., and for so kindly lending us their schoolroom, without which our day's festivities could not have ended so happily.

On Sunday morning the service in charge of Brother Harold Barrington opened at the usual hour. Sermonets were given by Brothers Edward Sloan and James Barrington which were well received by all.

A children's musical service was held in the afternoon under the direction of Brother Abel Hall and in charge of Brother Curtis Leggott, who is the assistant superintendent. Their voices, as children's voices always are, were sweet and melodious. It was good to hear them, and they enjoyed singing for us.

Brother Harold Dewsnup gave a short address and also demonstrated, with his class of boys, the six principles of the gospel. The boys in turn told in their own way, what they understood of the message revealed in these fundamentals. All were touched by the simplicity of the service; and at the close, appreciation was expressed for the admirable efforts made.

The closing service of the day commenced at 6.30 p. m. Brother James Schofield, the superintendent in charge, presented Brother Abel Hall as the speaker of the evening. His sermon was a splendid climax to a beautiful day.

Keen interest was shown in a solo by Miss May Holden and in the reading of Rudyard Kipling's poem, "The glory of the garden."

Continuing in the spirit of the services, on Monday evening we were to have had further social activities, tennis being included in the program. But it rained so heavily that after one or two attempts between the showers, we were forced to adjourn indoors, where refreshments provided by the school were served.

Thus ended our anniversary. It is gone but by no means forgotten. A glorious week-end that will long be remembered by all who participated.

Columbus, Ohio

First Branch, Tompkins and Medary Avenue

The summer months brought no cessation in church activities for members of First Branch. Though the thermometer registered unprecedented records, attendance held good at all meetings.

During the most torrid season, Brother and Sister John Blackmore conducted the Southern Ohio young people's institute, and attendance and enthusiasm were fine. We received great benefit from their teachings and hope to continue to progress along the lines of their direction.

During the past month we have listened to Brothers Matthews, Reeves, Welch, and Foster at the evening services. It is not often that we enjoy so unusual a variety of speakers in the span of one month.

We have been exceedingly fortunate in that Brother John Grice and his family have taken up their abode in Columbus. We have welcomed them and hope that in due time they will grow to feel that this is home.

Brother Gershom Myers during the past week was called on to preach funeral sermons in two nonmember homes. His sincere delivery of the message that he was able to bring caused his effort to be much appreciated.

The Sunday School Department is still booming, and the Department of Recreation and Expression is also on the increase.

Those interested in the department of music are expecting to start real work this fall. They have had a few weeks vacation during reunion time.

There is earnest endeavor in the various departments of the branch, all working with steadfast purpose and earnest zeal for the cause of truth.

Des Moines District

By Albert Loving

Missionary activity in the district is insistent in its demands upon the workers. "The harvest is great, but the laborers are few." During the past three months successful meetings have been held at Oskaloosa, Pershing, and Dunreath. In all of these places the missionaries helped to gather in some souls whose conversion was mainly due to the influence and work of the Sunday schools. At Oskaloosa Brother E. Crownover baptized five children, members of the church school. Meetings are held there every Sunday in the assembly rooms of the Y. M. C. A., and Brother J. Laughlin is in charge of the group.

During the middle of August I preached every night for a week on the street corner in Pershing. Good audiences of farmers and miners were present each evening, and splendid attention and interest were had during the meetings. Brother Walter Thomas is the pastor there, and he assisted with the open-air meetings. Brother Thomas is doing a good piece of work each week by having some of the members assist in the sale of from fifteen to twenty-five Ensigns in house to house canvass.

This is an excellent way to keep in touch with the public on a church basis as well as sharpen one's mind. No person can successfully do this class of work without coming to know the strong as well as the weak points of his message. In addition, it is splendid training in character development. To do it right one must keep his head and stand on two feet.

At Dunreath a successful series was concluded last Sunday by the baptism and confirmation of seven young people; this also was mainly due to the efforts of some of the brothers and sisters in maintaining a Sunday school during the past.

Workers in Dunreath soon learned that the Browns, Clarks, Mohlers, and Dietricks are limbs from old stock and mostly related.

At our closing Sunday evening service the young people of the neighborhood put on the program. I sat back and in one case substituted for another. Brother Marion Clark spoke for Graceland. He paid a high tribute to the idealism of the institution and her staff of instructors. The young people sang several choruses, and the two Harrington boys with their companions made a fine quartet. Miss Beatrice Brown skillfully handled the music on the piano. The last act taught us a lesson. Brother Ray Dietrick impersonated a hobo, and stumbled into the room with a bottle and a bag. After some bewilderment he discovered he was in a church and tried to straighten up and excuse himself for being a bum. Then he pointed out to us that for aught we know some of our children may become such characters. Appeal was then made for cooperation in the church school efforts, and he closed with the reading of "Let me live in a house by the side of the road."

The finishing touch to the series came when the hat was passed around for offering to assist the missionary to his next post and a sum of twenty-one dollars was contributed.

Scranton, Pennsylvania

September 14 was observed in Scranton, as well as all over the church, as College Day, and Graceland was well represented in an elaborate program given by the members of this local. Both morning and evening services were used for the program which was arranged by Elder E. Walter Lewis. The meetings were in charge of Pastor T. J. Jones, and Margaret L. Jones played the organ.

Elder R. J. Hawkins offered the prayer to open the morning service, and this was followed by an organ voluntary by T. J. Jones. Elder Ernest Davies then spoke on "The object of College Day." A special prayer in behalf of Graceland was offered by William J. Davies. Ernest Davies and T. J. Jones then sang a duet number. "Graceland College, its past and present" was the closing address by J. R. Jenkins, and Elder Evan Lewis offered the benediction.

James Jenkins offered the invocation in the evening, and there were two short lectures, "Education, the tie between the church and the college" by Elder R. J. Hawkins, and "The offerings and work of Graceland College" by T. J. Jones. The program was well received by the congregation, and many expressed the desire to help "our Alma Mater."

James B. Moses, one of our boys, is attending Graceland, and we look forward to the time when he will be of greater service to mankind through his experiences there.

Back on the Old Trail

By A. H. Parsons

After the passing of thirty-seven years, I returned with H. B. Mann last Saturday to New Park, now called Fawn Grove, Pennsylvania, where our brother, M. O. Matthews and his wife, Mary, lived in Harford County, west of the Susquehanna River. Thirty-seven years ago when I went over this road, it took us all day in a two-horse wagon. This time we covered the distance in two hours, and at that did not drive fast.

Brother Matthews was looked upon as a walking encyclopedia on Bible topics. He was firm in the faith. Later his brother, Edward, moved into the neighborhood and located near him. They each raised a large family, the members of which are married and live in different localities. Most of them, however, are settled near the old homestead, yet not one of the boys has taken up the work the father laid down a few years ago. He had three sons who are members of the church.

We proposed an all-day meeting commencing at ten o'clock in the morning October 5, in a grove near where we held the other service thirty-seven years ago. Brother Mann and I will return this Friday evening, to help them get a Religio started, which Brother Mann assisted them in organizing last Sunday evening after I delivered the sermon. At our all-day service everybody will be expected to bring lunch and stay for the entire program. A big crowd is expected. Several members of the Matthews family live in Philadelphia and other places, but we hope to find them and have them at the meeting. Everyone who has lived in this region is asked to return home for the event. Hoping for a blessing from the heavenly Father, let us gather with a prayer in our souls on this occasion.

Chase, Michigan

September 22.—Saints came from Reed City, Marion, Free Soil, and Hersey to attend the one-day meeting held in Chase. There were twenty-seven present. Elders present were E. Burt, Robert Morrison, J. E. Bennet, Samuel Long. All enjoyed the day's services and profited by the activities and associations. Not many nonmembers were present.

Nowata, Oklahoma

Elder Lee Quick, assisted a few nights by Elder J. Charles May, has just closed a two-weeks' open-air meeting at Delaware, a little town near Nowata. There were no baptisms, but much interest was manifested.

There was some very unfavorable weather during this meeting, but a good crowd was present each night.

Elder Quick gave fine counsel to the Saints of Nowata Branch, preaching here each Sunday morning. His coming is looked forward to in Nowata. Brother Quick opened the latter-day gospel work in this community about twenty years ago.

Brothers May and Quick are planning to hold a meeting here some time during October. The members have been strengthened by the efforts of these brothers and are taking much interest in the progress of the gospel message.

Graceland Chats

Faculty Recital

The thirty-fifth annual faculty recital was given at the Brick Church, Thursday, September 18. The Misses Rae Lysinger, piano, and Florence Thompson, expression, and Mrs. Linna Timmerman Hunt, voice, represented Graceland's departments of music and speech.

The program follows:

- a. "Song of the mesa," desert tone-poem .....Homer Grimm
 b. "By the sea" .....Schubert-Stoye
     Miss Lysinger
 "The dress rehearsal" .....Marjorie Urquhart
     Miss Thompson
 a. "Preguntas a las Estrellas" .....La Forge
 b. "El Cepiro" ..... La Forge
 c. "Voi lo Sapet, from Cavalleria Rusticana" .....Mascagni
     Mrs. Hunt
 Paraphrase on themes from Rigoletto .....Verdi-Liszt
     Miss Lysinger
 "Poor Aubrey" ..... George Kelley
     Miss Thompson
 a. "Over the steppe" .....Gretchaninoff
 b. "Songs my mother taught me" .....Dvorak
 c. "As we part" .....Ilgenfritz
     Mrs. Hunt

Each selection received enthusiastic applause.

Miss Thompson has been studying with Paul Stoye, of Drake University, this summer. Her poise and interpretation received much favorable comment. Miss Thompson was at the Phidela Rice School at Martha's Vineyard. She was so much at home with her audience that she seemed to be bringing the characters of her sketches before her hearers. Mrs. Hunt is new. She won her audience by her clear enunciation, ease, and friendly manner, as well as by the quality of her voice.

LULU ROMIG.

Football Prospects

The football prospects at Graceland this year are bright. Coach Gilbert has six letter men back and a number of new men from which to mold a team.

One of the biggest factors in building the team this year will be the line, as seven letter men were lost from last year's line. The men reporting for these positions this year are lighter than those of former years, but with the fighting spirit which is existing among them at the present time it looks as if a strong line will be built.

The backfield should become one of the finest Graceland has had for many years, as there are three letter men back and a number of good prospects. If there are no injuries, Graceland should have a football team this year of which she can be proud.

Tate Bathe of Lamoni is captain of this year's squad.

AL GRIFFIN.

Literary Societies Hold Initiations

The four literary societies of Graceland held their informal initiation on Saturday evening, September 20. This is one time in the year when Briggs Hall signifies a good time, so all proceeded to do their best toward this end.

In room 109 there was an awful moaning and groaning which, upon investigation, turned out to be the new Kaps trying to learn the Kap song. At the same time the old Kaps in the next room were preparing for them. The first production was supposed to be "Chinese opium smugglers," but they were caught by Mother Brooks and unmercifully criticized. Miss Thompson was shocked and indignant at the way Byrna Sandy tried to impersonate her and said so in appropriate language. Then came the close, bringing sandwiches, pears, and punch, and everyone went away happy after Byrna Sandy and Myron LaPointe were elected king and queen and made to wash the dishes.

The Niks were much surprised when ordered to meet at the depot with blankets, but were there just the same. One can imagine their feelings when, after being led through weird and mysterious passages, they found themselves in "Unk's" basement. Here each couple had to furnish an impromptu act, which suffered very much at the hands of critics. Peanut butter massages, tomato facials, etc., were issued free of charge. Presentation at an Indian court was the closing initiation stunt. As usual ice cream and cookies were served to top off the evening.

The Vics were disappointed in not getting to use the chapel but got along very well in rooms 110 and 112. They also went through the process of acting and being criticized, and after this they were lined up against the blackboard with their noses in rings. To turn around meant a paddling, and unruly ones were made to roll an onion across the floor with their noses, read nursery rhymes, and suck a bottle. Egg and tomato shampoos and peanut butter facials were issued to some. The Vic yell in this case appropriately topped off the evening.

Very warm receptions were given to the Pleiades, and some showed marked talent in caring for the younger generation and singing. The traditional apple pie a la mode mysteriously disappeared, and it was hoped that all freshmen next year might enjoy the same things from another viewpoint.

College Men Serenade Walker Hall

Oh! Oh! such a surprise! Such rushing up and down the hall! Such squeals of fun! And such shouts of "Who is it?" "What is it?" "What are we 'sposed to do?" "Can we go down like this? or must we change?" "Isn't this glorious?" "Oh, dear!"

It was about 9.15, and the dorm was just getting quiet when we heard, in the offing, the gentle strains of "Let me call you sweetheart" sung with true masculine zeal and enthusiasm. All the girls living in the east side rushed to the west to see what was causing the rumpus. Oh, my! the whole approach was covered with men!

The older girls knew what that meant, but the poor freshmen ran around asking questions (as usual) until they found out that it was the boys of the school serenading the girls. Then bedlam did break loose! I'm sure there wasn't one girl who took over one minute to get dressed and down the stairs. No one had known about it, not even the dean, consequently there was plenty to hurry for.

The boys came into the reception room while the girls drifted downstairs. Then there followed fifteen minutes of singing, during which the proverbial lollypops were served. Um! They hit the spot all right. All too soon for the girls, the men sang "Good night, ladies" and started homeward. Such excitement! We very nearly never went to sleep.

The Faculty Reception

The faculty reception, the first big social event of the year, went off very successfully. The reception affords the new student opportunity to get a glimpse of the social side of every member of the faculty. The sophomores and juniors are given the first real chance to renew the bond of friendship which exists between the instructor and student at Graceland.

Each person was tagged with his name and the State from which he came. Since Graceland's student body is a cosmopolitan group, representing about twenty-seven States in the Union and two foreign countries, the tagging proved quite a novelty and brought together people from all parts of the world.

The entertainment consisted of two outstanding scenes taken from Graceland life. The first was a presentation of the faculty as they appeared in the opening freshmen chapel. The second illustrated the elaborate music as furnished by the Graceland A Cappella Chorus.

The orchestra was another outstanding feature, adding much to the enjoyment of the grand march, which was the closing number of the evening.

After the refreshments were served, the guests and faculty returned to the dormitories and their homes feeling that the true Graceland spirit had predominated the entire evening and that the prospects both in the faculty and student body were the best of any year.

President Briggs Speaks at Chapel

On Friday morning, September 19, the general assembly had as its theme "The Constitution of the United States," and President G. N. Briggs gave an interesting address on the subject. The service was a closing exercise of "Constitution Week," the constitution having been signed one hundred and forty-three years ago. Throughout the Nation colleges and universities commemorated the event, and Graceland was doing her share. Prior to the address, Elder T. S. Williams led the assembly in prayer for clean citizenship, and the students sang "America."

President Briggs gave the student body to understand that upon their shoulders rested the burden of the support of the Constitution. It is the oldest one in the world, the constitutions of England, France, and other countries having been changed after ours had been written, while the documents of Germany, Italy, and Russia have been changed and ratified even during our own span of life. The speaker pointed out that peace and unity were obtained in the constitutional congress only after Benjamin Franklin, at the end of five weeks of dissatisfaction, introduced a resolution that every morning a prayer be offered before the conference started business. The resolution passed, and from that time on the work progressed. God himself was thus asked to take a hand in the building of our Constitution.

Oratorio Society Organizes

Under Graceland's School of Music there come a number of organizations which fulfill their part in making this department a success.

This past week has brought about the organization of the Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society for the year 1930-31. Graceland can well be proud of such an organization, for it is the largest organized choir in the State of Iowa. Last year a membership of one hundred and eighty-five was retained throughout the year, and it is expected that the choir will be fully as large this year when the tryouts have been completed. As a result of the election this past week, Miss Carlile was chosen director for the coming year by a unanimous vote of the choir. This position is more than rightfully due Miss Carlile because of the untiring effort on her part, for several years past to make the organization a success. Roy A. Cheville was likewise chosen president of the organization by a standing vote which proved one hundred per cent. Miss Iris Butts was elected secretary, succeeding Miss Anne Morgan, whose services to the organization last year were highly commendable and greatly appreciated. Neal Deaver was elected to serve a second term as treasurer. Paul Campbell, who has proved himself a valuable librarian for the past four years, was again elected to that office for the coming year. Few really appreciate the duties performed by the librarian and his assistants, and in this capacity Mr. Campbell's efforts have been unsurpassed. Harvey Campbell was elected assistant librarian. Don Chesworth was given the position of custodian.

The Oratorio Society has a successful year to look forward to this term because of the cooperation of the student body of Graceland with the music department. Besides the valuable service rendered every Sunday in church services, the choir is looking forward with pleasure to the preparing of the "Elijah" to be given in the spring. This will be the outstanding event for the year.

Stone Church

On Promotion Day more than six hundred boys and girls were promoted from one year of work to another in the church school of the Stone Church. Of this number more than two hundred were passed from one department to another. Forty-seven beginners were promoted to the primary department. From the primary department fifty-three boys and girls will next Sunday go to the junior place of study and worship at the Campus. Having enjoyed their annual farewell banquet on Friday, fifty-one lively juniors were ready to come to the intermediate department at the Stone Church on Sunday. At the same hour fifty-two new seniors met the superintendent in charge of the young people at the Auditorium and were assigned to classes.

Much enthusiasm and interest have been generated among teachers and students by Promotion Day activities, and plans for the winter are being discussed in all classes.

Bishop A. B. Phillips was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour in the main auditorium of the Stone Church, taking for his text, "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life," the words of Jesus from the gospel of Saint John. The greatest darkness man can know is to be incapable of placing the proper interpretation upon life, he said. The light which the Master gives to us is not alone permanent but permanently joyful; by this light men may grow and develop even to a position of equality with the angels.

Following the organ voluntary, the Stone Church choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, sang, "Lead me, Lord," a short anthem by Samuel S. Sebastian. George Miller played a piano solo, after which the choir sang a second anthem, "The sun shall be no more thy light," by Woodward. Edward Brackenbury, tenor, sang a solo, accompanied by George Miller, pianist. Robert and George Miller played an organ-piano duet, Rubenstein's "Kammenoi-Ostrow," as an offertory. The musical service, which was broadcast over K M B C, was brought to a close with "An old refrain," an organ number by Robert Miller.

Elder Harry Barto was in charge of the service and was assisted by Elder S. O. Smith.

"Loyalty to friends" was the theme of the sermonet by Brother Howard Cook at the intermediate worship service Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. Fine attention was given by almost one hundred boys and girls and a number of adult visitors. Musical numbers were contributed by Irene, Mildred, and Evelyn Shupe, and June Gault told the story of the friendship of Damon and Pythias. The intermediate pastor was assisted in the stand by Priest Gerald G. Phillips.

In an illustrated lecture Sunday evening at the Stone Church Elder C. Ed. Miller re-sketched stirring scenes of early church history. Starting from Cumorah, he carried his audience along the rugged pioneer pathways of the colorful history of the latter-day church. Harmony, Pennsylvania, Hiram, Ohio, the Erie Canal, Kirtland, Far West, Haun's Mill, the Santa Fe Trail, and Nauvoo were pictured. There were also interesting views of the Independence of years ago, among these being a scene of the laying of the Stone Church cornerstone. The original plat of Independence, made in 1833, with its plan for an imposing civic center was used as an appeal to the young to finish the work our forefathers began.

Elder W. Wallace Smith presided over the hour and was assisted by Brother Paul N. Craig, who was in charge of the music. Opal Good Doty was the organist and Blaine Bender the soloist.

Organizations and Personalities

A big lawn carnival was sponsored by the Mothers' Club the afternoon and evening of September 23 on the lawn of the home of Doctor G. Leonard Harrington, Independence. The proceeds are to be used in fitting up the nursery in the new Independence Sanitarium and Hospital. This club has for years cared for the nursery in the present Sanitarium, and it is now preparing to continue this responsibility in the new building. The carnival provided entertainment for young and old. Besides stunt and entertainment features and light lunches, a regular supper was served.

Members of the Independence Pen and Ink Club met September 26 to begin fall activities. Two vacancies in the executive committee were filled; Roy Davey was designated as president of the club, and Miss Nina Brooks was elected treasurer. The club will meet once each month.

The moving picture "Simba," filmed in Africa by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, closed the season of pictures at the Campus September 27. Despite general business depression, the Campus has this year enjoyed a fairly successful season. It has been the scene of many activities—tennis tournaments, baseball games, children's recreation, and the celebration of two holidays besides the regular Saturday evening pictures and the church services on Sunday.

Acting upon the suggestion of its executive committee, the Y. P. R. Class, which since early in the summer has met at the Campus on Friday evenings, resumed its Sunday evening services in the Y. K. T. classroom for the winter. Next Sunday a course in appreciation of music, art, Bible, science, and poetry will be commenced. This course is designed to continue into the month of February, and credits in religious education may be obtained by those who regularly attend. The hour of class meeting is 6.30. September 28 Sister Ida Etzenhouser addressed the class on the theme, "The dregs of society and why?"

The lower hall of the Auditorium was again the scene of a banquet on last Friday evening. The fifty-one juniors of the graduating class and their teachers and officers and visiting officials met for their annual feast and entertainment. A program of readings and musical numbers followed the meal, and there were short talks by R. R. Redfield, junior teacher; Teddy Beck, of the graduating class; Leta Moriarty, intermediate superintendent; and Elder G. G. Lewis, director of religious education in Independence. Sister S. A. Burgess directed the music.

The marriage of Miss June Whiting to Elder Leonard Lea was solemnized at the home of the brides' parents, Brother and Sister G. W. Whiting, Independence, at noon September 24, in the presence of a small group of relatives and friends. The double ring ceremony was performed by Elder C. E. Wight, of Kansas City. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Mae Lund, and the bridegroom had as his attendant Elder L. E. Flowers. Following the ceremony a wedding luncheon was served. The bridal couple left immediately for a trip to the East. After October 25 they will be at home at 1428 West Short Street. The bridegroom is an assistant editor of the Saints' Herald.

Martin Mills, of Independence, who is a freshman medical student at the University of Kansas at Lawrence, Kansas, has been elected president of his class. He received his A. B. degree from the university in June.

Organizations and Personalities

The national convention of the Service Star Legion is convening in Kansas City at the Hotel President. Women from all over the Nation are solving problems for the relief of disabled veterans of the World War and their families. The convention comes to Independence tomorrow evening, October 2, at six o'clock as dinner guests of the Service Star Legion, Independence Chapter. Mayor Roger T. Sermon and President F. M. Smith will be speakers of the evening. A patriotic pageant written by a past president of the organization, Mrs. W. E. G. Saunders, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, will be presented at 8.15 in the evening. Talent from Saint Joseph, Kansas City, and Independence will cooperate to make the evening a pleasurable occasion. The proceeds will be used for a free bed at the new Independence Sanitarium and Hospital and relief work. The patronage of the public is invited.

Second Church

With the close of the union services at the Campus on Sunday night, activities at Second Church began anew. Sunday evening, September 21, was the first of our local night meetings. The hour was characterized by good interest and fine attendance. Brother Hoisington addressed the Saints.

Elder T. A. Beck was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, when the church school program was carried out with only an intermission of organ music between the school and church sessions.

The choir at Second Church has been reorganized of late and has begun regular rehearsals for the winter. An anthem was sung Sunday morning which was much appreciated.

Pastor A. K. Dillee spoke Sunday, his subject being concerned with preparation for the Harvest Festival. The speaker in the evening was Elder G. G. Lewis.

Under the supervision and encouragement of Brother J. L. Conyers, a special prayer service for children has been instituted in the church on Wednesday nights. The idea originated in Group 15 and has grown in a very few weeks from an attendance of six or eight to a meeting of twenty-five. This service is for children and young people up to sixteen years of age, members of all the groups. The purpose of the meeting is to open for these children another avenue for the measure and expression of their spiritual growth. Brother Conyers deserves credit and thanks for the establishment of the service.

The twenty-five or thirty people who attend the early morning prayer meeting on Sunday are well repaid. Attendance, however, should be better.

Liberty Street

The decided "feel" of autumn in the air coupled with plans rapidly taking shape for the annual Harvest Festival give indication that the working season of the church year is here.

The Harvest Festival committee composed of George Fender and Sister Esther Latta, assisted by Fred Friend, Walter Curtis, and C. A. Mills, are plying carpenter tools and working out designs for a booth that gives unusual promise from the standpoint of interest and originality.

Promotions in the church school were effected Sunday, September 28. The devotional service was appropriately led on this morning by Harry B. Blake, church school director.

Daniel Christopher, infant son of Brother and Sister A. Robinson, was presented at the eleven o'clock hour, at the altar for blessing, Bishop A. Carmichael and Elder F. A. Cool officiating. At this service the choir, under the direction of Fred Friend, rendered an anthem.

It is necessary that Latter Day Saints have uniform conceptions of the religious terminology peculiar to our church if we are to progress as we should. Such words as surplus, consecration, tithing, etc., must have the same connotation to all if the law given to the church is to be obeyed, was a fact given primary emphasis in Bishop Carmichael's sermon the morning of September 28.

About forty-five children listened to the message brought by Walter Curtis at the junior hour. A vocal solo, "It was spoken by the Master," was sung by Mary Ethel Cool. This meeting was presided over by Raymond Wrigley and Cecil Walker.

An interesting arrangement of "The sinner and the song" was sung by the choir with F. A. Cool as soloist, at the evening service.

No one is more able to give us reasons for the hope that is within us than those missionaries who are on the firing line actively working for the conversion of souls. This fact was deeply impressed by the sermon of Bishop C. J. Hunt. A compliance with the spiritual law of the church is not enough he assured us. When we accept the church, we accept its whole plan, hence the financial law must be observed quite as rigidly as any other. This service was presided over by Vernon White and John Zion.

Central Church

Last Sunday was Rally Day throughout the church, and the day's program at Central Church was pleasing and profitable to all. Attention was given the promotion of classes and the initiation of new courses of study at the church school session in the morning, the exercises being given a splendid setting of music and worship.

The sermon of the morning was by Elder C. B. Woodstock; and the choir, directed by George Anway, sang a beautiful anthem. Irene Wolfe was the organist. Bishop F. B. Blair assisted in the stand.

Community singing at the evening service was led by Brother Eugene Christy, of Lawrence, Kansas. Elder John Blackmore was the guest speaker.

A splendid response was given the special offering campaign last Sunday. The total amount received was $331.88. Of this amount $138.10 was tithes and offerings and goes to the Presiding Bishopric for missionary and general church expenses; $113.25 was given for building fund; and $80.53 towards local expenses.

Next Sunday evening we will have our local Harvest Festival service. The fruit and produce donated at this time will be Central's contribution to the stake exhibit at the Auditorium Harvest Festival. This fruit is used for the Sanitarium, Saints' Home, and the needy in the center place. Bennington congregation has canned three hundred and fifty quarts; Northeast two hundred.

The stake young people's meetings will be held October 19 to 26. Apostle F. Henry Edwards will be the speaker. The theme of the meetings is to be "The twentieth century message of the church."

On Wednesday, September 24, Miss Eulala Smith was united in marriage to Mr. Winfred W. Sinclair. The ceremony was performed by Pastor C. E. Wight, before a beautifully decorated altar, in the presence of many relatives and friends of both bride and bridegroom, at Central Church. A reception was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Ross H. Moore, 433 West Sixty-seventh Street. The young couple left shortly after the ceremony for a honeymoon tour of the East.

Gladstone Church

September 21, at eleven o'clock, the College Day address was by Elder C. B. Woodstock, head of the Department of Religious Education. The choir sang a Graceland song, and a special collection was taken for the college. Brother Woodstock spoke on the necessity of our young people taking advantage of the privilege of attending their own college and the benefits and blessings to be derived from the association with teachers and leaders imbued with the high ideals of our church.

Fourth Church

Sunday, September 7, sacramental service was very spiritual, and those present were greatly edified. At the young people's service at night they were entertained with songs and readings. Brother Marion Snead commented on Matthew 13: 1, after which Bernice Abney offered prayer.

September 14 several seats were made vacant by those who have gone to attend Graceland College. These were workers in various departments and will be missed. Among them are Norman and Mitchel Carter, Wilma Smith, and others.

Eleven o'clock College Day service was given by former Graceland students. They gave talks and favorite college songs, and presented a play, "College life at Graceland."

Stake President C. E. Wight spoke at 7.45 on "The temple of God," referring to Graceland College as one of the strongest factors in the church for building well-rounded characters in the lives of our young people, as well as fitting them for future useful work.

September 21, at eleven o'clock a playlet was put on by Pastor J. O. Worden and Elder Julian Gough. It reminded the members that they had not given their all to make the house of the Lord an up-to-date spiritually fit place in which to worship God. Stake Missionaries G. T. Richards and H. H. Sevy started a two weeks' meeting at the evening hour.

Holden Stake

Marshall

Patriarch J. T. Gresty, with his stenographer, Sister Ethel Burnett, and her sister, Cleland, as her companion, have been with Marshall group the past week.

Brother Gresty was kept busy giving blessings by day, and he preached every night, ending Sunday, September 14. One night he told how the Lord helped and inspired him in the composition of the oratorio. We enjoyed singing the hymn "Onward to Zion," Brother Gresty directing.

Sunday morning his theme was, "Be strong and of good courage." This he preached in power and demonstration of the Spirit. Under this power he spoke to two of the brothers, telling them to move forward, to be strong and of good courage.

His theme Sunday night was "Consecration." This was a wonderful and impressive effort. Marshall has been greatly benefited and revived by the showers of blessings which have come to us through the efforts of our brother. The following young people contributed solos: Garland Tickemeyer, Ellis Rathbun, and Lillian McDonough sang, and little Catherine Thayer and Virginia Walton sang a duet.

The Lord was with us at our last sacramental meeting.

Nauvoo, Illinois

The past few months have been busy and eventful ones for the Saints of Nauvoo. The reunion brought renewed inspiration to the little band located here and a determination to press forward, come what may.

The Women's Department has been active in trying to earn money to purchase new seats for our little chapel. An ice cream social was held on the church lawn, and during reunion Major Bidamon's old work shop was fitted up for a refreshment stand. Since then two fish fries have been held in the Nauvoo House. The department also had birthday surprise parties for two of their members, Sister Isaac Jemison and Sister Clyde Fusselman.

The Pages have been busier than ever with visitors during the summer months. Over two thousand registered during the month of August. Brother Page has been made happy by a number remembering to send their old furniture and relics for the Old Homestead. L. D. Ullem, of Saint Louis, sent nine religious pictures, which have been hung on the walls of the old rooms. Mr. Emmert Seybold, of Blandinsville, gave an old desk that was taken from the temple; Sister Langford a small walnut table; and Sister Snively, of Burlington, sent a stand table and also a grease lamp and several smaller articles that were over two hundred years old. They had been given to her by her grandfather.

Sister Snively, who has been confined to her home on account of illness, was sadly missed during our reunion. It is the first she has missed in forty years. Her testimonies have always been a special feature of our reunions, as she was born in Montrose just after the exodus from Nauvoo, and lived in this locality all her life. She remembers going with her mother to see the new baby at the Mansion House, now President Elbert Smith, and many other interesting incidents. A few weeks ago her daughter, an only child, Sister Howland Smith, came from California to be with her mother during her illness. She left for a short visit to Chicago, and while there passed away very suddenly. Our hearts go out in sympathy to Sister Snively in her bereavement.

On learning that Patriarch Frederick A. Smith was to preach in Montrose on the Wednesday following the reunion, a number of the Saints hired the launch and crossed the river. They were well repaid by hearing a splendid sermon.

The tenth and eleventh of the historic programs have been given since the reunion, with the same splendid success that has characterized the giving of these programs from the first.

The yearly meeting of the Hancock County Sunday School Association of the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Latter Day Saint Sunday schools was held in the Methodist Church, with Arnold Ourth, president for the past year, in charge. Reverend Pancost, of Carthage, was the principal speaker of the evening. A musical number and a ten-minute talk were given by a representative from each school. John Williams represented the Latter Day Saint Sunday school and Jack Sanford gave a bell solo. Roberta Lewis has been chosen president for the coming year.

On September 7, Arnold Nicholas, the infant son of Brother and Sister Arnold Ourth, was blessed under the hands of J. W. Layton and A. L. Sanford.

The annual Sunday school picnic was held by the river on Labor Day, and Saints from Burlington, Fort Madison, and Montrose met with us. A basket dinner was served at noon in the dining room of the Nauvoo House, after which a program was given on the lawn of the Old Homestead. Brother A. M. Chase brought his portable organ, and all joined in singing familiar songs while he presided. District President F. C. Mussell was present and gave a short address on Labor Day. There were readings and guessing contests, and then those athletically inclined entered into a game of volley ball.

When the school year opened, we were called upon to part with several of our young people, who have been active in the work here. Irene Layton went to Independence to teach in the high school there. Mary Lee and Roberta Lewis left for Graceland. Myron Wood is attending the Gem City Business College at Quincy. These young people are sadly missed.

A piano recital was given one evening in the chapel by the pupils of Sister A. L. Sanford. Fourteen children took part, and a goodly number of their relatives and friends were present.

Graceland Day was observed with a short talk on "Why we need a church school," by Mildred Sanford; a sermon on "Education," by J. W. Layton; and Graceland's Alma Mater hymn was sung by Mildred and Jack Sanford. Arnold Ourth presided, and Elder J. E. Page gave a brief explanation of the scholarship fund.

A splendid program was given in the Mansion House on the afternoon of September 12 by the Wallet Trio, of Warsaw, and Mrs. Green and Mr. McDonald, of Ivy Wild, Hamilton. Mrs. Green is eighty years of age and a remarkable woman. She writes splendid poems and recites them for visitors to Ivy Wild, a beautiful estate that is open to the public, where her husband's paintings and relics of all kinds are on display. The Wallet Trio entertains over the radio broadcasting station at Carthage. Mr. Wallet and his daughter play violin duets while the mother accompanies on the piano. The daughter also plays on the saw and on an ordinary pitchfork with one string. Mr. McDonald is clever with the clappers and gave a demonstration, while Mrs. Green accompanied him on the piano.

The program was enjoyed so much by those present that they persuaded the group to give an evening's program at the chapel September 21. Apostle Clyde F. Ellis was here and gave a splendid talk on music preceding the program. Mrs. Green recited a lengthy poem that she had written of the early days of her youth, her recollections of Lincoln and of the Civil War, which was fine and much enjoyed. Mr. McDonald, her cousin, who is also a poet, read a poem that he had composed for the occasion in honor of Nauvoo and Emma Smith. Mrs. Green also accompanied on the guitar some of the musical numbers furnished by the Wallet Trio.

Apostle Ellis and family visited Nauvoo for the first time and were the guests of the Pages for a few days. Brother Ellis consented to meet with the Saints on Monday evening following his arrival, and delivered a splendid address, which was much enjoyed by the Saints.

There are many sad hearts in Nauvoo at present, owing to the closing of the First Trust and Savings Bank. Eighty per cent or more of the people of the town did business with this bank, which ranked well with the banks of the county. This being a thrifty German settlement, there were many large depositors, and they are finding it hard to part with the savings of a lifetime. The bank is now in the hands of the receiver. The reason for the failure is given as frozen assets.

Brother and Sister Bauer have gone to Burlington, where Brother Bauer has secured employment for several months. We look forward to their return.

HERRICK.—Fanny Mayhon Ahern, eldest daughter of John Augusta and Mary Simmons Ahern, was born March 8, 1858, in Louisville, Kentucky. On December 5, 1879, she was united in marriage to William Edward Herrick, in Newark, Missouri. To this union were born eleven children, six boys and five girls, three of the boys having preceded her in death. In 1887 she became a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, being baptized by Elder James McKeirnan. All through the years of her association with the church she lived a godly life, and was devoted and constant. During the last five years of her life she suffered from an affliction of her heart, as a result of which she passed suddenly and painlessly away, September 5, 1930. Those remaining to mourn the parting are her husband, William Herrick, and sons, John William Herrick and Lloyd Dixon Herrick, of Quincy, Illinois; and George Edward Herrick, of Kansas City, Missouri; and daughters, Mrs. Roselthis Graham, of Quincy, Illinois; Mrs. Mildred Miller, of Epworth, Missouri; Mrs. Marybell Ramell, of Salt Lake City, Utah; Mrs. Hellen Alto Blackwood, of Saint Louis, Missouri; and Mrs. Blanch Minton, of Independence, Missouri. She is also survived by two brothers and one sister, William Ahern, of Plevana, Missouri; Thomas Ahern, of Sacramento, California; and Mrs. George Campbell, of Los Angeles, California. There are also eighteen grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren, together with many friends by whom she was greatly loved. The funeral services were held in the Stone Church in Independence, September 9, Patriarch U. W. Greene in charge. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder James W. Davis. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

DEACON JONES'S LEGACY

Deacon Jones was sinking rapidly. He was speaking his last words to his son Silas, who leaned over the bed to hear them:

"Silas, I'm not leaving much money, and I think your mother will need all of it. But my subscription to the Herald is paid up for a year. I give it to you, and hope that you will never fail to renew it when it comes due. Read it, son, and you won't go far wrong." And the good old deacon passed on to a well-earned Christian reward.

A subscription to the Herald is like an insurance policy: the premium comes due regularly, but it offers cumulative benefits.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY

The Extension Course of the Centennial Institute

The demand for this material has been so insistent that it has been necessary to run a second edition which is now ready for distribution. The material in this course has been prepared in outline form by the Department of Religious Education at the request of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric.

The course consists of eleven outlines and is adapted for use in study classes at reunions, conferences, conventions, and rally days. The purpose of the course is to direct the attention of the Saints to some of the major aspects of church development and to an analysis of some of its fundamental beliefs and projects as they are related to our general church program of individual and group development, looking forward to the ultimate goal—the establishment of Zion.

The material as presented reviews the church program and projects in a new light and from a new viewpoint. If studied carefully these outlines will suggest new lines of approach and will prove stimulating to those who are continually engaged in preaching. The entire set should be purchased in order to get the most out of this course, due to the fact that each outline is interdependently an important part of the whole course. Each outline has a bearing on and helps to interpret and amplify the others.

The eleven outlines listed below comprise the course which is known as "The Extension Course of the Centennial Institute." The price is 10 cents each, or $1 for the complete course. All members of the priesthood, but especially missionaries and officers of stakes, districts, and branches, should secure these outlines immediately. The matters discussed are of vital importance to the church, regarding which every Latter Day Saint should be fully and accurately informed.

Orders should be sent to the Presiding Bishopric, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

To Our Tasks

Recently an elder, one on whom the responsibility of a local rests, wrote telling of his efforts to hold missionary meetings along with other activities. He had made "an opening," preaching every Wednesday night, and had started a Sunday school. He tells of this, then adds: "I believe that if we can persuade some of the members to come out and help, we can have a large Sunday school here; but it is hard to get help, as the Saints have largely lost the missionary spirit, and the radio is hurting the work in the country branches. Our folks stay home to listen when we need them most at church."

A spirit of indifference is threatening us, in more places than in the country branches. Some of our people, far too many of them, find one excuse or another to refrain from doing their duties in attending church and helping and encouraging those who are trying to carry on the work. These may think they will or do find greater pleasure in remaining away from church to listen to the radio or indulge in other things; but they can be assured that they are paying too great a price for these pleasures.

Refusal to do our duty will lessen the sum total of our pleasures; and no keener joy can be experienced than that which comes from a knowledge that our divinely pointed out duties have been performed and the temptations to divert our attentions from our tasks have been overcome. No greater joy can come to us than the consciousness that we have done our duty to God, to the church, to our neighbor, and to our family. To do this demands devotion to our ideals. And we must withstand the temptation to yield to the forces tending to turn us away from our tasks.

"Brother Elbert" at Home

Some time ago Brother Elbert A. Smith, one of the best-loved men in the church, returned quietly to his home from a period of rest and recuperation at Battle Creek, Michigan. His return to Independence was so quietly made that even the Herald failed to make either editorial or news note of it. But that in no way indicates the measure of our interest in him and his welfare. With all the church the editors rejoice that this splendid man is home once more with health conditions improved. And with all the church we join in heartily wishing his improvement will steadily progress. His ready pen, his logical mind, his eloquent tongue have freely been used to the good of the church, and the Saints still look for his literary contributions which sparkle with humor and challenge admiration by their display of good sense and effective logic.

"Brother Elbert," the Herald joins your hosts of friends in wishing for you the best of everything, and especially the return to good health.

Sacrifice Week in Independence

When sacrifice week was observed by the general church, the drive for funds for the new Sanitarium and Hospital building was on, and it was thought best not to have both on together in Independence. So Independence Sacrifice Week was set for October 5-12. As we go to press it is near the middle of that week.

It is to be hoped that our Independence Saints will appreciate the importance of the week to them and the church. To sacrifice for any cause is a spiritually uplifting experience. To sacrifice for an institution which gives expression to our relations to Deity is the acme of religious devotion. "Greater love hath no man than to give up his life for another." Such is the supreme sacrifice.

The experiences through which we, with others, have passed in recent months, should have taught us the necessity for closer walk with God. Had we as a church lived more closely to the commandments of God to us, we would have been in better condition to ward off the deleterious effects of the industrial depression, because we would have been in better position to extend the protection and support one to the other that God intends we should. By our sacrifices shall we bring about the consummation of our joint tasks. And sacrifice must be learned.

Remember God, his calls for service, the church and her great tasks, and learn to sacrifice to any extent we may be called upon by Deity to do.

Bishop Lewis Passes

Cablegram was received Monday from Australia bearing the sad news of the death of Bishop George Lewis. The message was from Brother Walter J. Haworth at Newcastle, and stated that he had been informed by telephone from Wallsend that on Wednesday Bishop Lewis had suffered a paralytic stroke, and remained unconscious until his decease on Sunday.

Brother Lewis has for many years been a faithful servant of the church, and has won a place in the hearts and affections of the Saints of Australia and elsewhere, which will cause this news to be received with great grief.

As the stalwarts pass one by one we are reminded of our own responsibilities and tasks; and our prayers ascend to God for grace and strength to carry on, and that he will prepare our youth to step into the places vacated by those who have had the thread of life cut by the scythe of time.

To the family and loved ones of Brother Lewis, we extend our sympathy as we grieve with them.

Decision Days

October 26 has been designated by the councils of the church as a special day to be observed by the Saints in every clime. It is called Decision Day, and is to be the point of emphasis of evangelistic endeavor for the latter part of the centennial year of the church.

With the approach of this day, named for the purpose that those who have heard the truth may seriously consider it, and make their decision to follow Christ to Jordan and to consecrate their best to his cause, we are reminded that all days are decision days. Daily we are confronted with choices which determine the course of our lives. And the question which often comes to our minds is: Am I choosing rightly?

History offers countless examples of people who chose the right course and also of those who decided upon the questionable way.

Decision Day came for two fishermen, Simon Peter and Andrew, his brother, as they were casting their nets into the sea of Galilee. Christ, walking by the sea, saw them, and he said to them: "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." And, we read, "they straightway left their nets, and followed him." It was also a day of decision for others. The scriptural account of the incident continues: "And going on from thence, he (Christ) saw other two brethren, James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets; and he called them. And they immediately left the ship and their father, and followed him." On that day Simon and Andrew, James and John made a very big decision and acted upon it at once; they followed Christ.

During Christ's short ministry, we are told, a young man came to him with this question: "Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?" His life accorded with the commandments of the Mosaic Law, but this young man felt that he yet lacked something. Christ's answer was: "If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me." And when the young man heard this, "he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions." It was his decision day!

For all men every day is a decision day, a time for choosing that which they will or will not do. God has given us our agency—the right and power to make our own choices. He has also given us our stewardship of time and talent and means, and we are hourly deciding how we use these gifts. Are we deciding wisely?

This morning a faithful brother full of years, one who for a long period of time has been doing a certain work, writes the editors: "I have been trying for a long time to get some one to take this task off my hands, but there is no one willing to try it. There are a number of our young people well qualified to do it, who would have the time if they would cut out just one movie during the month, but the spirit is unwilling." This censorship is given in the kindly spirit of one who has loved his work well, but who has gone beyond his strength. Can any of us escape it? Are not all prone to speak our good intentions and then with some little excuse reject the opportunity to give real service?

Are we individually and collectively choosing wisely? Are we making the right decisions? Are we following Christ? Let us remember that today is decision day in our lives and tomorrow and every day.

Book of Mormon Lectures on Radio

Sunday evening, October 5, Elder C. Ed. Miller, of Independence, gave the first of a series of four fifteen-minute lectures on the Book of Mormon over radio station KMBC. These lectures are being broadcast as part of the regular studio service of the church from ten to eleven o'clock each Sunday evening, and will continue throughout the month of October. Saints within receiving distance will be interested in this broadcast, and should take this

Admiration Plus

Articles from the pens of several different men prominent in the religious world have recently emphasized this idea: that much of the writing and talking about Jesus today centers about an admiration for the personality of Jesus, without going on to demand that those who admire him shall follow him!

Certain it is that a great deal of the material which has of late been "produced" in regard to this great Teacher is constructed to make a great popular appeal and yet to leave the lives of those who read relatively untouched so far as their individual daily conduct is concerned. And this is not enough!

As Henry Nelson Wieman concludes in The Christian Century:

The great importance of Jesus is not to provide a personality that can be appreciated and thus give us inspiration and stimulus, although he certainly may do all that. But he is more than a theatrical show, a drama or a sermon. His great importance is that in his life suggestions and clues may be found which will ultimately lead us to the discovery of how to attain that rich fullness of experience that he enjoyed.

The Important Referendum

In a few States next month the election ballots are including one form of referendum or another, centering largely around the question of prohibition. The wets are taking this occasion as pretext for predicting a big swing of popular sentiment in their favor. The dries are debating the question of whether or not to participate in the referendum voting, charging that the questions submitted are unfairly stated and holding that the propositions will be of no effect even if favored by the majority of those voting.

It is true that few, if any, of the referendum propositions carry with them anything that makes obligatory or even likely the enactment of legislation to put them into effect. The true referendum is invoked only after such legislation has been framed by the legislature. It is then submitted to the people for their approval or rejection. The present so-called referenda include no such prospective statutes, so far as we have yet seen; they merely call for an expression of opinion on certain stated questions. One paper has called them "legalized straw votes."

There is a proposition, however, in the fall elections to which those who are anxious to exercise their prerogatives of franchise should attend; namely, the proposition of placing in public office, both state and national, men who will stand for the principles and practices of government that work for the best good of the people of the country. Than this there is no more important referendum.

He Might Have a Mote in His Eye

Some of us have our minds so set to receive ill rumors about other people that it's a wonder we can ever see anything good in the world, even in ourselves! The city officials are stealing the community's money; the police force is just a bunch of grafters who never really enforce any laws; every man in public office has been bought off by the "big interests"; anyone who has money can do as he pleases by paying his way; the merchants are all in a conspiracy to keep prices up; the employers are all in a conspiracy to keep wages down; etc., etc., ad infinitum.

Anyone who feels this way all the time, even if he's right in some cases, is still wrong! If a fellow didn't know any people that were trustworthy, he might be inclined to believe such a tale; but as it is, each of us can think of quite a number whom we could trust not to steal what we have, even if given a chance. Suspicion and distrust are destructive in their very nature. I'd rather have a little faith in people, even if I sometimes lose.

How Can a Gangster Be Decent?

It oftentimes happens that the fellow who makes the most "holler" about laxity in law enforcement is one of those who makes it most difficult for officers to enforce law and order. He may be one of those who expect traffic regulations to apply to everyone but him; and who uses every means at his command to evade penalty when he has violated one of them. Or he may be one who obeys the rules of community and society when it is convenient, when there is an officer in sight; and at the same time rears his children with that attitude, perhaps unintentionally but none the less surely. He may even be one who furtively indulges in unlawful practices, and then proceeds with high and mighty talk about personal liberty to point out the failure of the laws he has violated. All of which was probably in the mind of the writer who recently came forth with: "How can a gangster be decent when he must do his business with the kind of prominent citizens who would do business with a gangster?"

And Beyond

Thoughts on Following the Ideal

By Ralph E. Herrick

While going along the road one day, our attention was drawn to a large signboard on which the people of the United States were urged to go forward, stating that the foundation of our Nation was sound and that nothing could stop us—using this to urge the people on to greater efforts and suggesting that greater things could be and would be accomplished by always looking forward. This sign ought to build up the faith of the people in their own country and in their own ability to achieve great things. Great things can be achieved, but only by looking and moving forward, because when people are busy looking forward they are obeying the basic principles of progress and success.

The following of an ideal or the selection of a goal is essential to the success of any project. Without it, success can not be attained. By looking forward, soon or late we start in that direction. Whether we start soon or late depends on what we see. Our speed forward depends on the clearness of our vision, and the distance we travel depends altogether on how much we see of that goal. If we get a full vision of the project, nothing can stop our onward movement to an ultimate success. That project may be business, a fabulous fortune, fame in a chosen career, or it may be an ideal. Success in any line can not and will not come in a day, but by a constant moving forward.

Lincoln said that he would study and prepare and perchance his opportunity would come. Was he looking forward? Not only was he looking ahead, but also slowly and surely moving forward toward the goal he had set for himself.

Setting a New Goal

During the last few years, in our church papers we have had the slogan of the church held before us. That slogan was, "Onward to 1930." On April 6, 1930, the gospel had been restored to the earth one hundred years. The gospel is an ideal. It is the ideal of Jesus Christ, and the church is an organization, organized for the purpose of planting that ideal in the hearts of all humanity. Has success been attained overnight? Has that ideal been planted in the hearts of all humanity? Will the church stop looking and moving forward now because April 6, 1930, has gone into history? Will it be satisfied with the 106,000 hearts in which we have planted the ideal of Christ, or will we again look forward to another goal? This time the goal must be the complete redemption of Zion, and the coming of Christ, our beloved Lord and Savior.

True, we may be a long way from that goal; perhaps it may be realized a long way in the future, but it is the only goal that is consistent with the ideal, and the distance in the future depends largely upon how unitedly and earnestly we work toward that goal.

The Importance of Individuals

Whether we start toward it soon or late depends upon us as individuals. It depends upon our individual looking forward into the future. The speed with which we shall travel depends upon how clear is our individual as well as our collective vision of the ideal. Whether we get there or not depends solely upon how much of the ideal we see as individuals, because the vision of an organization is as full as the vision of those individuals who make up its membership.

We may look, but not forward, therefore we would not start forward. We may start, but our vision might be dim, therefore our progress is slow. Our vision may be in part, not in full, therefore our travel toward the goal is erratic, spasmodic, and our efforts round-about, and some of us may be lost en route.

The success of the church not only depends upon us as individuals looking forward, but upon how we look forward. There is only one ideal; that is Christ and his gospel. And only one Spirit, that Spirit being the light that not only enables us to look forward as individuals, but which will teach us how we should individually look forward. And if that one and only Spirit teaches us all how to look forward as individuals, we will move forward as a church. And that new goal, the complete redemption of Zion and Jesus Christ's coming, will be fulfilled; because being taught the same principles, by the same Spirit, we will become a united people in thought, purpose, and deed. Then and only then will the church make the strides forward that it should. Then, we as a people will be in that condition that Christ prayed for in that wonderful prayer uttered just previous to his ascent into heaven, wherein he said, "May they be one as we, O Father, are one."

The Ideal Future Rests in the Child

Is it true that the parents as they look into the face of their newborn, dream dreams of achievement? Do they picture that little one succeeding in life—taking its place in the affairs of men and carrying on down, to yet unborn generations, those principles that can bring only good to the world? Do they even fancy that little one occupying in outstanding places where the eyes and even the acclaim of the world will be centered upon it? Perhaps they see in that helpless bit of humanity the answer to their desires to benefit mankind. Perhaps they see in it the way of accomplishing those desires of their hearts that they realize are just beyond their own personal powers. Perhaps those desires came to their hearts at a time when they could not see the fulfillment of those desires. But through this little one would go to the world those expressions and works that have lain smoldering in their hearts and minds as unfulfilled desires.

Therefore that little one has before it a double duty, and while it does not realize this, there comes to those parents the realization of their responsibility. First to the little one that has come to them, and second, to the world at large through their newborn child.

The purpose of all humanity is to progress in right living in all phases of life, and this can be accomplished only through each oncoming generation mounting to greater heights than the preceding one had risen to. Thus each generation would be more enlightened and would be better equipped to do the work before it, even though the task may grow more difficult and the responsibility heavier.

If the arrival of a child is received with seriousness; if there comes with that child the realization of the responsibility placed upon them; if they can view its arrival as a step in the fulfillment of God's great plan concerning them and the world in general, there will then come to them an appreciation of their blessing and a deep-seated desire for help to fulfill the obligation placed upon them by the arrival of that little bud of promise. Then will come to them the realization that they in themselves can not hope to fulfill God's purposes concerning the unfolding, into a life of service, of that little bud of promise. So they will start looking for the help needed in the building of the future of their babe.

And as they view their little one as a gift of God—no, not a gift, but a precious loan from God, for which they must some day account, they will turn to the Giver of that loan for wisdom and instruction in its care, and he will guide them. They must realize that to them has been intrusted those pliable years of their little one's life—years when impressions are easily and indelibly stamped in its mind, years when that little one will look up to them with a natural faith and will learn about life from the examples in their everyday life, years in which they must constantly, by prayer and every human way possible, guard against the creeping in of those things that children learn from children with which they must come in contact.

Preparing the Child for the Ideal Future

With the coming of its first words will come the teaching of the Lord's prayer at either mother's or daddy's knee. Prayer is a jewel in the life of all humanity and a help in time of need. It is the keystone in the foundation of its future. A child trained in the way it should go is not so liable to depart from it, or in case it does depart, will not step so far away as one not so trained, nor would it be so hard to bring back, because the first impressions never quite let go. Being God-loving parents, they will often be found in church and taking part in all department activities as much as possible, realizing the good that comes by association with those of kindred faith, thus placing the little one in an atmosphere that will be for its good, the atmosphere of the house of God, giving peace to those who enter, seeking peace. In this way they start work on the foundation on which there shall be built the superstructure of the child's entire life. And the usefulness of its life will depend upon how firm that foundation is laid for it by those that have it in charge. How firm that foundation will be depends upon the workers engaged and material used in building.

The first group of workmen consists of mother and father. They build by the way of example in family life and through the influence of the family altar. The second group shares responsibilities in laying this foundation. This group is composed of the leaders and teachers of the church in its various departments, of which the church school takes its lead as far as child life is concerned.

Upon the teachers who are intrusted with the care of the little ones during the study hour rests a good part in the building of that foundation. Their object is to build for the future. They seek by the way of simple words to imprint upon the minds of their little ones the goodness of God and his dear Son, and how much they love and care for little children. They seek to turn the natural faith of the children to the Giver of that faith; that being good and kind to all they meet, is the surest way to gain happiness for themselves; that to bring happiness to others is another way of gaining happiness for themselves. To show the love of God for mankind by his placing on earth the flowers, the trees, and countless other beauties of nature. Thus always looking forward, they seek to do their part in the building of a foundation on which may be erected the superstructure of a great life. They seek to be humble tools in the hand of God while he seeks to unfold and mold young lives into that condition where he can use them to bring about his own glory and the happiness of all mankind.

The Place of the Church School in the Task

The church school is looking forward. It is trying to develop workers for tomorrow, because there is a constant need for workers. The church is calling for consecrated young people. Where will they come from? The only answer is, they must come from the youth of today. We have been one hundred years in the wilderness, and yet we look with pity upon the children of Israel because they were forty years wandering in sight of their promised land. We are in sight of our promised land. Shall we go on or shall we close our eyes to the heavenly vision and harden our hearts to the call to go in and occupy? Shall we by our blindness rob our little ones of the promised land?

Let Us Work for the Ideal "Beyond"

Come, let us work together to lay a foundation in the lives of our loved ones which will stand when assailed by the storms of life. Let us strip from our own eyes the scales of selfishness and hold up before our children the vision of Zion and enable them to redeem it, if we will not. Let us always think of those who are following after us. Let us seek to build for them. At times in their lives they will be called upon to make difficult decisions. They will have to say yes or no. For them to say no will mean that the foundation was not firmly built. For them to say yes, will mean the accepting of duties that will bring great responsibilities. To say no, will mean going backward. What shall they say? Will the foundation stand? Will the vision be clear and complete? Both will be tried. What shall the answer be? Shall they be able to say in humility of heart, yet with firmness of purpose, "I am going forward"? Can you stand the risk of a foundation that is not inspired by Christ; one that is not laid with prayer by mother and father? The church and the church school? This kind stands the test. The storms of life are many. Many storms will beat upon that foundation and the superstructure they must build.

But we are not afraid of a foundation which was inspired by Christ and laid with prayer, nor the superstructure they build on that foundation, because it also will be inspired by Christ and secured by the prayers of those who know them. This is the kind of a foundation the church and the church school wishes to assist you in building in the lives of your little ones.

Will you help us to help you? Please do, if only for their sake. "Suffer the little ones to come unto me," saith the Lord, and the church school says, Amen.

Questionnaire for the Local Church

NUMBER 3.—CHECK ON YOUR BRANCH MEMBERSHIP

By F. Henry Edwards

What is the attitude of the members of your branch toward each other? Can they differ without bitterness? Can they cooperate without jealousy? Are they good sportsmen in the field of religion? What type of criticism is prevalent in the branch? Is it constructive or destructive?

Is the branch as a whole interested in the spiritual well-being of the various age groups, and are they interested in the well-being of the whole branch? Must the young people go to the "departments" to receive encouragement and sympathy, or are these evident at the "church services"? What is the feeling of the young for the old? Does specialization mean exclusiveness in your branch?

What proportion of your branch membership actually contributes to the progress of the branch? Is there an inner circle, closed to those not "in the run"? Do you suffer from cliques? Is your branch given to civil war or to conquest for Christ?

Do the members of the branch feel that the church is interested in them out of church meeting times? Are the sick visited and helped? Are the unemployed and the poor helped without humiliation? Do you make systematic effort to retain all your members in spiritual health, giving them special care and attention in time of spiritual despondency and sickness?

What is your branch reputation for persistence? Do you count the cost before you start, and then stay on the job until the work is finished? Children's Day, Rally Day, Decision Day, etc., are coming to be a definite part of our church program. Do you plan carefully for these and similar times of emphasis and then see that your good plans materialize?

Do you take advantage of special efforts to permanently enhance the team spirit of the branch, or do such efforts leave you disorganized for the continuance of permanent branch functions?

The Message of Malachi

By Ralpb W. Farrell

Before the days of rapid transit, when men were allowed time for reading as well as for eating and sleeping, many found it a happy and profitable pastime to read an entire book at one sitting. Of course I refer to that period of culture which comes after the day's work is done. A favorite work was the Gospel according to Mark. I suppose this was selected because it is the shortest of the four memoirs of Christ. I think it was Mark Twain who told us that he read the story through without interruption.

May I venture the assertion that you will never realize the full pleasure of even a partial understanding of these many sacred narratives until you have carefully read them from beginning to end, at one sitting. Of late I have been applying this test to the books of the Old Testament, and this morning very early, almost "before it was day," I selected Malachi, because I believe it has a message for our times.

As I read, I asked myself the question: Who was this Malachi? Does not the meaning of the name throw some light on the subject? It is a Hebrew word—Malaki—and means messenger. Some think it is a contraction from Malachijah, "messenger of Jehovah." And when we read the famous passage about the sending of a messenger, which John the Baptist, some four hundred years later, applied to himself, we are more inclined than ever to the belief that the title of the communication was suggested from that passage.

I believe that we have a synopsis of a series of messages delivered by one of the great prophets—possibly Nehemiah or Zerubbabel, and preserved in the Hebrew canon for its intrinsic value as a reminder to the priests to be truthful, devoted, and reverent; to the people to bear in mind always the fundamental fact of God's unchangeability, and his awful justice. Possibly the most practical teaching of all is the part which applies to every period of religious history; the reference to the support of God's house, of God's church and kingdom.

To those who are somewhat familiar with the critical study of literature, there is evidence which shows that the writer lived in the period of the fourth or fifth century before Christ. The date 410 B. C. can not be far from correct. And the text is very pure, and its rightful place in the canon of the Old Testament has never been questioned. Being reasonably assured of this fact, it is a pleasure to read it and extract from its clear, logical instruction one or two lessons applicable to our times.

Let us briefly sketch it.

There is no dallying. There is a burden to be pronounced on Israel, for Israel has grievously sinned and wandered away from God. Her very existence depends on her return to the grace and mercy, and even justice, of the Lord. As I said, the prophet is of a logical turn of mind, and speaks boldly. His style is ideal for the subject matter considered. He does not hold us by the beauty of figures, the poetry of imagery, for he uses little ornament of speech. He interests us with his sincerity and challenges us with his stinging truths which apply to every age of God's work among men. There are doubters among us, today, as there were among ancient Israel. "I have loved you, saith the Lord. Yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us?" And Malachi proceeds to place the cause for this doubting. The priests have sinned grossly. They have offered pollution to God, as if he did not exist, or was blind and careless himself. They showed their contempt for religion by the offerings they made of lame, sick, blind animals. It is the principle of the thing which offended the pure and unchangeable God. They had complained of weariness, and they had sought to deceive. And the rebuke of the Almighty to them is terrible: "I have no pleasure in you. . . . cursed be the deceiver."

"For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth: for he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts." And whether the priest be of the Aaronic or the Melchisedec Order, living before Christ or after, it matters not; for though the tenor of his message may vary, its truthfulness must ever be the same, and the exaltation or abashment of the people he serves depends much on either his integrity or defilement. Those men had departed out of the way, and many of the people had been caused to stumble at the law. Corruption had become national in its effect. Abominations were on every hand, the chief among them being disregard for the sanctity of the marriage covenant. Whether the prophet, in chapter two, verses 14 to 16, refers to the introduction of polygamy or simply intermarriage among the heathen, is not made plain by him; but that man was dealing treacherously against the wife of his youth, is plainly stated, and the displeasure of God was manifested and awful doom pending.

Then follow the last two chapters, which in the Hebrew Bible are not separated; and consistently one for it is plainly seen that there is no break in the narrative.

The true prophet breaks forth, for the first time in the story thus: "Behold," he cries, "I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me; and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple." We doubt strongly that Malachi knew the time of this fulfillment. His was not to know, but to declare. This great day was to come—that was sufficient. And when it did come, it would bring a reckoning. God would come in swift witness and judgment against the sorcerers and adulterers and false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not God, the Lord of hosts.

What did it matter when Jehovah should burst the clouds of heaven and come down? Sin is sin. Rebellion is rebellion. God's will is ever struggling to be done on earth as in heaven. His desire for the salvation of Israel is deathless. And whether his message come through Malachi or John the Baptist or Paul or later servants, it is always a message exhorting the people to repent and believe and obey. It is a ringing demand for justice. It is a call to man to return to God and his ordinances. Those ordinances may be few or many, dependent on the time in which they are given and required, as the case before and after Christ; but they are binding if of him.

Malachi puts the case very plainly, when he answers the question—"Wherein shall we return?" in these words: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

No reader of this ringing message from Malachi can consistently argue that at least the principle of the teaching does not apply to the age in which we live. God's house in any age can not be filled with meat if members of that household withhold their contributions. The work of the church can not be carried on without money. Money is simply a medium of exchange. There have been times (and they will come again) when literal meat and vegetables and wool and flax have been brought to the Lord's storehouse. But legal tender is the more convenient form of payment of tithes and offerings for the purpose of imparting not only material but spiritual blessings to those who are starving in the midst of plenty. Once was the time when to merely mention money was to bring from the restive and illogical the charge that one was begging ("always crying for money"); but this is no longer the case; for in this day of extensive business experience and when everyone must have money in order to live, few will object to the spirit and letter of such messages as the one delivered by him who declared that God did not change and therefore the sons of Jacob should not be consumed.

Possibly we can not close in more happy and important vein than by quoting from the work direct:

Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels; and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not. For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall.

And his last word, strange as it may seem (yet not strange, for Malachi's message is one of stern justice), is the word curse: "Lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." While the last word of the New Testament is this: "The grace of our Lord Jesus be with the saints." We serve Him because we love him, and because we love him we have no need to fear him; but whether we love him or fear him, we must abide the inevitable misery of a broken law if we do not serve him!

Let us all be "laborers together with God."

Infantile Paralysis

POLIOMYELITIS

Infantile paralysis is an ominous threat to the children of the country. Means of combating it have not advanced far, but some methods of moderating the force of the disease and of ameliorating the harmful effects have been found, according to late reports. The following excerpts, which should be of interest to all parents, are taken from the bulletin for September, 1930, of the Missouri Society for Crippled Children.—EDITOR.

Now that "infantile paralysis" is in our midst, and when Kansas is suffering from what appears to be a near-epidemic of the disease, the Missouri State Board of Health has issued several bulletins on the subject warning parents of the nature of the disease and its proper treatment. In the September 6 bulletin they said in part:

"The symptoms are similar to any of the indefinite illnesses of childhood, and in the presence of an epidemic it is well for parents and physicians to treat sick children having fever as probable cases of poliomyelitis where a definite diagnosis has not been made. The most common symptoms of this stage are fever, vomiting, constipation, drowsiness, and irritability, especially when combined with headache, a transient flushing of the face, abnormal sweating, or retention of urine.

"On account of the probably large number of unknown carriers in a community, definite protective measures are difficult, but much can be done if the cases come under the care of a competent physician early and remain under supervision until all symptoms have cleared up. The child should be kept at absolute rest for several days after the acute stage has subsided and the affected parts kept in a position to avoid deformity. Later, graduated exercises and muscle training will be of great benefit in restoring the paralyzed muscles. . . . Early massage before tenderness disappears usually does more harm than good."

. . . Every precaution should be taken by both parents and the public in protecting children, especially since so little is known concerning the transmission of the disease. The State Board of Health advises that crowds should be avoided and that every possible cleanliness should be maintained, including a frequent washing of the hands.

Unfortunately many children attacked show no definite symptoms of illness until the paralysis occurs. As a result both physicians and the family are practically helpless as far as prophylactic measures are concerned. Many children, however, give forewarning with symptoms such as are outlined above, so that ample opportunity is offered if an immediate diagnosis can be secured.

The use of "convalescent serum"—a blood serum obtained from persons who have had the disease some time previously—has not, to our knowledge, been generally adopted in Missouri, but it is recognized by the State Board of Health as "producing good results when used in the pre-paralytic stage." In this connection a recent report by the Department of Health for the Province of Ontario concerning its use there in the 1929 epidemic is noteworthy at this time. Nearly 500 cases were reported during the months of September, October, and November of that year for the Province of Ontario, which has a population somewhat less than that of the State of Missouri. Of this number 387 were known to have received convalescent serum, of which 80.7 per cent made a complete recovery. We quote from the report:

"Of those cases who received the serum on the first day of illness, all recovered, and there were no cases of residual paralysis. Even on the second day of illness 87.7 per cent completely recovered without paralysis, but with each succeeding day the percentage of recovery without paralysis became smaller and smaller until in those receiving it on the sixth day, 100 per cent remained paralyzed. . . .

The lessons from the study of this epidemic and the control measures used would seem to be as follows: The use of convalescent poliomyelitis serum in the treatment of the disease, especially in the pre-paralytic stage, would seem to be a rational measure attended with a high percentage of complete recovery. . . . Poliomyelitis is not a disease of infancy, but most frequently occurs in children of school age. . . . The early diagnosis and early administration of the serum before paralysis is evident, are essential for the best results from the use of the serum."

NOTE: Muscle training in the treatment of infantile paralysis, by Wilhelmine Wright, Ernest Gregory, Publisher, 126 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston, has been widely circulated by the State Board of Health among physicians in Missouri reporting patients with infantile paralysis. Other material on the subject can be obtained from the Missouri Society for Crippled Children in Jefferson City.

The Church and Individuals

The Christian is in danger of disappearing. He has a tendency to vanish in the church. In many churches the individual has become invisible. We have been asking, "What is the church doing?" That is a stupid question. You get nowhere by asking a question like that. The important question is: What is Mr. A. doing? He is a prominent man in the church. What is he doing? What is Mr. B. doing? He holds a high position in the church, but what is he doing? What is Mr. C. doing? He has belonged to the church for twenty years. What is he doing? That is the kind of question which is all-important and should be answered. It is the conduct of Mr. A. and Mr. B. and Mr. C. which is the key of the church problem. You hear men talking about the amount of money which the church has raised. How much did the church raise last year? It is a bootless question. The question of importance is, How much did Mr. D. give? and how much Mr. E.? and how much Mr. F.? What is the ratio between what these men spend on themselves and what they contribute toward the work of making this a better world? That is the question with which God is concerned, and it is not till that question takes the uppermost place in our minds that we shall have the key of the problem of church finance.—Charles W. Jefferson, in Cardinal Ideas of Jeremiah; The Macmillan Company.

Christianity is now teaching, as never before, that human values are the best key to the understanding of divine values.—Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Federal Council Bulletin.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Decision Day—October 26

By C. B. Woodstock

The councils of the church have set the above date as a focal point for evangelism during the latter part of the year. We welcome these occasions when, by concerted action, all the forces of the church are marshaled and directed to the accomplishment of a specific task. The work of the Restoration is so great and so important that it can not be done in a haphazard or mediocre effort. The task calls for careful organization, intelligent cooperation, and diligent, prayerful, continuous work under divine direction and blessing.

The plan of religious education is distinctly evangelistic. Continually are we seeking to teach the way of life, to reveal the will of God, to express his love and power, to draw boys and girls, men and women to the Master. But especially as we approach Decision Days, must our emphasis be placed upon the necessity of obedience and active membership in the church. In all our teaching The Way must be made plain. It is central in the Master's message. It must be central in the teaching work of the church.

Out of the depth of our own conviction and appreciation there must go an appeal to those not yet members of the church that will arouse and quicken their desire to join with us, not only in membership, but in activity and growth in the gospel life. The work of evangelism is by no means finished when one consents to be baptized. Our teaching, our example, our leadership must inspire the new member to an active, intelligent, participation in the constructive work of the congregation of which he becomes a part, a contributor to the general program of the church.

There must be made convenient occasion and provision for baptism, publicly announced, and definitely planned as a beautiful, sacred, worshipful ordinance. From within the church school, perhaps for several weeks before the day, special instruction should be given by the pastor, or some one selected, to a group of children or adults in the fundamental beliefs of the church, especially in the meanings, obligations, and advantages of membership in the church.

There must be definite cooperation on the part of all church school workers with the special evangelistic effort of the branch. If special services are being held, classes, groups, or the entire school should be enlisted in the campaign; advertising, house to house visiting, special music, and certainly by regular attendance at the services. The work of a missionary may be made many times more efficient if he can have hearty, prayerful cooperation in his effort.

Special articles are in preparation for these columns in the next few weeks, suggesting materials and methods for use in church school evangelism. We list below materials printed in the May and June, 1930, Department Journals. A number of copies are on hand at the Herald Publishing House which may be ordered, postpaid, at fifteen cents each.

Nursery Department Organization and Administration

By Bertha Constance Woodward

The Nursery is the name given to the department of the church school which sponsors the religious development of children from birth to four years. It not only includes the short Sunday morning program in the church, but it also refers to the organized procedure by which the parents and teachers of the church supervise and direct the growth and development of the nursery child in the light of the highest values which this generation can conceive.

The following article is the first of a series which will appear under the heading, "Nursery department organization and administration." It is hoped that the reading of these articles will result in the establishment of a nursery department in each local church.

The Value of a Nursery Department in the Church School

An adequately functioning nursery department is a definite asset to the child, to the church and community, and to the parents.

It assists in giving the nursery child a well-balanced beginning in Christian living. It provides material for the child's early development in the home. The importance of this early training has been explained so often that it need not be reviewed in this short article. As the child grows older, the nursery department relates him to the church, the agency of Christian living, for the house where he learns about God and Jesus and where he does many lovely things, becomes a definite part of his life. He comes to look forward to church attendance as his greatest pleasure. He senses that something is lacking if attendance is irregular. As he grows and comes to look out upon appealing environments, the church will have become the center of his world, and his choices will be made in the light of the applied teachings which the church has insisted upon.

The nursery department not only benefits the child, but it is also an asset to the entire church and to the community. It provides a Christian foundation for the coming citizens of the Nation and for the future membership of the church. While the undergirding of a nation must begin in the nursery departments of all Christian churches, the undergirding of our church must begin in our own church school nursery department, where the child's development is supervised by individuals who are intelligently motivated by the goal of our church.

Since parents are controlling factors in child life, the department attempts to educate them, through study classes and parent-teacher meetings, for their definite responsibility to the nursery child, and also cooperates with them in meeting the child's needs effectively. It furnishes curriculum material to be used with the child in the home, and it helps the parents to appreciate that just as the body may suffer in later life because of improper physical care given it in early years, so also will a child suffer spiritually if his morals and life philosophy are neglected.

The department also encourages a systematic plan of visitation of the homes, and thus creates a bond of understanding between the home and the church. One writer has suggested that the nursery department is one of the arms by which the church lays her hand upon the home. It has an effective way all its own because of its attention to the babies.

When the new babe is born, the parents experience a deeper sense of life's responsibilities, and attention to the child at this time often brings parents to have renewed interest in the church. There is also a time when the baby claims all of the time and interest of young married people, and they grow careless about church attendance. The nursery worker helps to carry parents over this period without their becoming indifferent.

Briefly, the nursery department furnishes incentive and training for parents and teachers which enable them to whole-heartedly attempt the greatest task in the world—the supervision of the development of a child's soul. It gives a foundation to the child which, if properly builded upon by other departments in the church school, should later show itself in worth-while membership in the church and community.

The New Plan Progresses in Australia

A letter from W. J. Haworth under date of August 28 brings interesting and encouraging news of progress in the church work of the Australasian Mission.

He reports the new type of organization in effect in Balmain, Leichhardt, and Brisbane. One district, Queensland, has already adopted the plan of a single department, and others are planning to do so.

An institute is being planned for the Tiona reunion at the Christmas vacation. Brother Haworth is devoting two pages of the Gospel Standard each issue to the advancement of religious education, much to the delight of the mission workers.

A copy of the Weekly Bulletin of Rozelle Branch is inclosed with his letter. This carries announcement of a day of splendid services. The church school occupies from 10 till 11.45 with worship, class, and service periods. Other services occupy afternoon and evening. Numerous activities are announced for the week nights following.

Brethren Haworth and Gillard are finding generous support on the part of the local ministry. They hope to have the church school plan in operation in all parts of the mission by Easter.

Kindergarten—Primary Worship Suggestions for October

By Mrs. Verna Burt

The author of these suggestions is a missionary's wife in Mobile, Alabama. The copy arrived too late for last week's issue, but as the material is not limited to any particular Sunday, we include the entire plans for four weeks.—EDITORS.

October brings many changes in both the plant and animal world. Everything about us is getting ready for the winter months. God has provided the wintertime when plants and animals may rest. Many of these changes are apparent to kindergarten and primary children; but I am sure we may help them to better appreciate some of the provisions made by a wise Creator.

Let our aim for the month of October be to create appreciation for God's plan of provision for the winter months.

The room may be decorated in such things as October provides, colored leaves, fruit, acorns, cocoons, etc. Let the children bring some of these things, if possible, and help to decorate. The leader will do well to provide some of the basic decorations; for after all example is the best suggestion.

FIRST SUNDAY

THEME: "Nature's Rest."

Quiet music.

Memory verse: "Sing unto the Lord all the earth." (Psalm 96: 1.)

Song: "How sweet and strong my Father's care," first verse, No. 113, Living Hymns.

Conversation period suggestions:

What season of the year is this? How do we know? (Some of the children will know and be able to tell about the various signs of the season.) What is the next season called? God gave us a winter season so that everything might have a rest from work. What do we have during the winter season that we do not have during the summer time? Why do you suppose God gave us snow to cover the ground? Yes, I think that is the reason. The snow covers the seeds and roots of plants and keeps them from freezing, so they will grow in the spring. Rabbits and other animals sometimes burrow into the snow and sleep there because the snow protects them from the cold. (Let the children think out these things as much as possible with the help of suggestions and questions.)

The leader may read:

"Come little leaves," said the wind one day;
"Come o'er the meadows with me and play;
Put on your dresses of red and gold,
Summer is gone and the days grow cold."

Soon the leaves heard the wind's loud call,
Down they came fluttering one and all;
O'er the brown fields they danced and flew,
Singing the glad little songs they knew.

Dancing and whirling the little leaves went,
Winter had called them and they were content;
Soon fast asleep in their earthy beds
The snow laid a white blanket over their heads.

Prayer: The children may be allowed to suggest the thoughts for prayer. The worship theme should predominate.

Songs: "Snowflakes," No. 52, Songs of the Child World No. 1; "Nature's praises," 1st verse, No. 23, Zion's Praises; "For ears to hear and eyes to see," page 53, Zion's Praises.

Story: "Rest time," Zion's Hope, October 6, 1929.

Pictures: Winter scenes from magazines; Zion's Hope cover, March 3, 1929; Zion's Hope cover, February 3, 1929; "This snow-white world," Parents' Magazine, February, 1930.

SECOND SUNDAY

THEME: "Trees and Plants Prepare for Winter."

Quiet music.

Memory verse: "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." (Psalm 24: 1.)

Conversation period suggestions:

God has planned that the trees and plants should rest and be protected during the winter months. By the time cold weather begins, trees and plants have done their work and are ready for their winter rest. (Let the children tell what they have seen which shows this preparation; for example, farmer storing grain, nuts falling, leaves turning colors, flowers seeded, etc.) The trees no longer take food from the soil for the leaves and fruit. The sap does not come up into the branches during the coldest weather so that the trees can better stand the freezing weather. The leaves fall from most trees and make a cover for the seeds and roots which helps to keep them from freezing. (Examine the thick covering of nuts and seeds which protect them from the cold weather.)

Songs: "My God, I thank Thee," verse 1, No. 21, Living Hymns; "Giving thanks," verse 2, No. 53,

Stories: "The little leaf," page 216, Our American Holidays (Arbor Day), Schauflier. "Why the evergreen trees keep their leaves in winter," page 153, How to Tell Stories to Children, S. C. Bryant.

THIRD SUNDAY

THEME: "Animals and Birds Prepare for Winter."

Quiet music.

Memory verse: "Every good and perfect gift cometh down from the Father."—James 1: 17.

Conversation period suggestions:

Let us talk today about how God has made it possible for the animals and birds to prepare for the winter months. (Let children mention things that they have observed; for example, squirrels storing nuts; birds going south.) Why do squirrels gather nuts in the fall? There are other ways in which animals prepare for winter. Some animals put on warmer clothing, their fur grows thicker and longer as the days grow colder; for example, rabbit, squirrel, sheep. Other animals keep warm during the winter by putting on a great deal of fat underneath their skin, for example, racoon and bear. These animals do not need to eat much during the winter. They stay in their nest and sleep and rest most of the time.

Some of our birds grow more feathers when it gets cold; but many of our birds go farther south where it is warm. (Show the pictures of some of the birds that stay north and some that go south.)

FOURTH SUNDAY

THEME: "Man Prepares for Winter."

Quiet music.

Memory verse: "O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good." (Psalm 107: 1.)

Conversation Period Suggestions:

Perhaps some child may be wearing a new winter coat or wool dress which may be used as a point of contact for today's lesson. Bring out the ideas that God has provided things whereby we may prepare for the cold winter months. We wear warmer clothing made from the wool and fur which animals give us. We prepare to keep ourselves warm by gathering fuel, wood, coal, gas, or electricity, which God has provided, to heat our homes during the winter.

We gather food and store it for use during the winter months. (Let the children think of something which has been done in their homes within the week to prepare for winter.) People who live in the cities depend a great deal on the canning factories to store their food.

Songs: "How strong and sweet my Father's care," No. 113, Living Hymns. "For food and shelter from the storm," page 53, Zion's Praises. "Nature's praises," No. 23, Zion's Praises.

Follow-up Activities

Make observation trips for signs of nature and animals getting ready for winter; for example, squirrels gathering nuts; birds flocking together; farmers gathering fruit, vegetables, and grain; leaves and nuts falling; covering of leaves over seeds and roots; thick fur and feathers.

Let the children bring samples of foods made ready for winter which later may be sent to some poor family, or outgrown clothing which will help some poor children to get ready for winter.

Collection versus Offering

By John Blackmore

"The deacons will now take up the collection." In our churches everywhere the same phrase or one very similar is used. It seems that this manner of speech has become an institutional habit. Perhaps it is because we have unconsciously imitated each other. It is evident that we have failed to think through the implications of this form of announcement.

"Collection" Emphasizes the Collector

Let us consider the significance of this form of statement. Under the laws of imaginative inference, the word collection immediately brings to consciousness the idea of a collector. In other words, the collector is emphasized and magnified in the minds of the congregation. Also in our modern use of the word, there is an odious element attached to it. In business the call of the collector means either the painful process of paying out, or of resisting him. To be sure, these thoughts do not consciously pass through the minds of the members of the congregation as they sit in church, but the unconscious emphasis of the statement is placed upon the collector. Unfortunately, the church and its officers become the collectors in the view of the people.

"Offering" Emphasizes Individual Responsibility

On the other hand the word offering places its emphasis upon the individual. He is not paying a collector, but is making an offering to God. Individual responsibility is stressed in this form of statement. The word also is softer and carries implications of religion which do not exist in the harsher word. There are no associations which relate the word with everyday business, and in no way does it stimulate our sales-resistance powers.

"Offering" a Better Word Than "Collection"

A story which will illustrate the difference of meaning associated with the words is that of a little girl who loved her dog. A few minutes before dinner she went around the table and selected some choice morsels of food which included the leg of a chicken, for Towser, her dog. Just as she was disappearing out of the door, mother spied her and insisted that she return these dainty and delicious portions of the meal to the table. After the meal was over, little Dorothy again circled around the table picking up a scrap here and a meatless bone there. With this plate of leavings she went forth to her dog. As she placed the scraps before him, she said, "Towser, I wanted to give you an offering, but I can bring only a collection."

The word collection suggests the smallest of coins, but the term offering suggests the greatest amount possible to give. The Saints should bring their offerings to God. The spirit and meaning of sacrifice and of love is associated with the word. The purses and pocketbooks will be opened with a deeper religious feeling and a greater spirit of giving when the congregation realizes that they are not giving to a collector, but that they are making an offering to their God.

The Better Form

No longer should we hear the announcement, "The deacons will now take up the collection," but a form more in harmony with the spirit of the pulpit, "The officers will accept of your offering to God."

Blessed is he that followeth the better way.

Boys' and Girls' Banquet

Promotion exercises at the Stone Church in Independence included a commencement banquet for all Intermediate boys and girls who were being promoted into the Senior department of the church school. This banquet was in charge of the Intermediate superintendent. Teachers and officers of the department were present to assist in carrying out the program.

After the dinner was served the young people furnished several excellent numbers. Many of the benefits to be derived from participation in the school's activities were brought to the attention of the young people by the superintendent of the church school. This occasion furnished an excellent opportunity for cementing ties of friendship, and for developing loyalty to the church program.

Every school should plan for a pleasant function of this kind for its Intermediate girls and boys at some time during the year.

It takes real strength of character not to do what everybody else is doing. It takes noble independence to order one's life according to the principles of the kingdom of love when those about us are spending their thought, time, and money in selfish indulgence.—M. E. Kern.

I am only one! But I am one!

I can not do everything,

But I can do something!

What I can do I ought to do,

And what I ought to do, by God's grace I will do.

There Are Shadows and Shades

By M. Gibson

Last week my only son lay in a hospital bed. Infantile paralysis had rendered the right leg helpless from the hip down. He will walk, but may limp. He will be bedridden for months to come.

It will be hard. It has been weeks already that I have been waiting to know, and now that I do know, I see a cross. And our strength fails us, sometimes, when we see a cross on the shoulders of our little ones.

I left the hospital praying for courage.

As I walked past the Shriners' wing, I saw two little cribs on the porch. On one lay a little four-year-old boy on his back in a plaster cast from his head down, only his face, ears, and arms free, playing with a little red automobile. He was slowly dying of tuberculosis of the spine. On the other crib lay a five-year-old girl on her stomach. She was in a cast from the neck down except for one leg. A doll was in her hands.

"Can you wiggle?" the little girl asked the boy.

"Yes," he answered happily, "I can wiggle my hands!" And he waved the little red automobile weakly.

"I can wiggle one foot!" the girl child proudly informed him, and she squirmed her tiny toes.

They chuckled as if at some delightful joke.

I went back into the hospital and up to the reception room to await visiting hours. Two men were sitting there in wheel chairs playing cards.

One had been in the hospital for a year with a badly broken leg. The other, with no legs below the knees, with three fingers only on each hand, would never leave it alive.

We talked, and during the conversation the Shriners' Hospital was mentioned.

"Dear God!" said the legless one, "there's where you see pitiful sights!"

A door opened across the hall, and a man and woman, sobbing brokenly, came blindly out.

The hospital doctor came out a moment later and stopped in to see us in the reception room. "That little boy just died," he said quietly.

I went into the ward where my little boy was waiting. He is alive, he has both legs, he can wiggle all his members; he may even walk perfectly. But if he does limp, what is that? I am strong enough to carry his cross while he is little, and during those years may he learn to know "You who delight not in the strength of any man's legs!"

Mikado, Michigan

September 22.—Beginning August 31, Marshall McGuire, former pastor, started a series of meetings. These meetings were well attended by Saints and nonmembers. The sermons were a source of encouragement for the members and also for the young people of this community.

On September 7 the Saints met at Killmaster and enjoyed a one-day meeting. Services began at ten o'clock, Sabbath school being the first session of the day. Communion and fellowship meeting followed. At twelve o'clock a bounteous basket dinner was served by the women. Elder Richard Stuart, of Greenbush, gave an interesting discourse at 2.30, and in the evening Brother Marshall again spoke.

A baptismal service was conducted September 21 at Oscoda, Michigan. Mrs. Ellen Adams was led into the waters of baptism.

Brother Marshall departed September 21 for his mission field in Northern Michigan. He left the Saints encouraged and strengthened by his visit here. We have a greater desire to reach the goals of the church. RETA MCGUIRE.

Australian Saints Learn about America

By J. H. N. Jones

Since our return from America and the Centennial Conference, I have been very busy making a tour of the Victoria District, and have had splendid interest in talks on our travels in America and the church there. Australians are intensely interested in first-hand news of Zion and her people. Much good must come to the church in this land from the visit to America of our own representative.

I am at present in the town of Euroa, about ninety miles northeast of Melbourne, where there is a small but live branch of the church, numbering about thirty not including children. This organization sprang into activity some five years ago and has not since looked back.

At present they are erecting a brick church by voluntary labor. This edifice is a blessing to the Saints and an acquisition to the town. Brother Harry Jacka, a local contractor, is president of the branch and is directing the construction as well as laboring on the building. His plant has been placed at the disposal of the church. There is only one paid tradesman on the job, a bricklayer. The volunteers are Brothers Jacka, Bush, Dowell, Broughton, and Crosby. A pleasing item is that help has been offered by nonmembers, and one friend, a Roman Catholic, donated a day's labor representing about six dollars. The size of the building is twenty-eight by thirty-seven feet with walls twelve feet high, two anterooms in front, a little lower than the rest of the building, giving a bungalow effect. The material is brick and the roof is tile. The bricks were made in Brother Jacka's kiln, molded by his men, but the wood for burning and the wheeling, burning, and carting were done by the volunteers above mentioned. The plot of land on which the church stands is ninety-five by fifty feet. This gives room for a tennis court. The church is in the center of a fine rural district and should prove a splendid starting point for missionary activity in the famous northeastern part of the state. The land was donated by Brother H. Jacka.

Australia is at present passing through the greatest financial crisis in her history. This is caused chiefly by the fall in price of our wheat and wool, secondly by extravagance, and thirdly through the importation of manufactured goods, such as motor cars and similar luxuries from America who buys practically nothing from us and thus creates an adverse trade balance. The results are seen in unemployment, especially in the cities, with consequent poverty and distress.

This goes side by side with smiling fields of grass and grain and abundant yields, also a great surplus of secondary products. But charity is the only solution known to legislators, churches, and philanthropists. It makes one who knows of Zion and her law groan in spirit and cry in his heart: "Lord, how long?" When shall Zion lift her head from dust and darkness and the dead? When will the day of the Lord and the emancipation of the poor from oppression arrive? We know of nothing better than working, living, and preparing in faith for that time which we see approaching.

The work is moving steadily onward in Australia, and though the conditions will make it trying we have confidence that with care, frugality, and faith we shall continue to enlarge and increase.

Sister Jones's health is not sufficiently good to allow her to accompany me in my work, and she is resting at home.

My health has been greatly benefited by my visit to America and the splendid advice and work of our brothers, Doctors Grabske and Harper, who spared no pains in caring for me.

Sister Jones and I desire to greet all our friends in Independence and at all points of our visit. We can not write to all of you, but rest assured that you have a green and sacred spot, a shrine, if you will, in our memory.

Boone, Iowa

September 24.—Sunday, September 14, was a red letter day in Boone Branch. Four missionaries were here, Brothers Loving, Crownover, D'Arcy, and Bishop Fry. Brother O. L. D'Arcy preached morning and evening. He and Sister D'Arcy stopped over Sunday from their trip to Canada.

Monday evening Bishop Fry began a series of meetings to last one week. Attendance was not large, but Brother Fry was blessed in presenting the word.

On Sunday, September 21, we concluded the series of meetings with rally day, having present four elders, Brothers Fry, E. E. Crownover, Henry Castings, and Clyde McDonald of the district presidency. Four children were blessed at the morning services.

Attendance was not large but all seemed to enjoy the day. Dinner and supper were served in the church parlors.

This branch seems to be moving on. In the last year several members have been added to the roll.

Sister Anna Johnson is mourning the loss of her aged father, Brother J. Stuart, of Alberta, Canada.

This part of Iowa has been very dry and hot. There has been little rain since July 4. The drought has made economic conditions more acute than otherwise they would have been. We are hoping, however, that better conditions will soon prevail.

Salt Lake City, Utah

336 South Fourth East

September 20.—Now that the reunion season and vacations are over, we come with news of the Salt Lake City Mission.

With Brothers Hall and Lohmolder assisting me in presiding over the branch, Brethren Gerwein and Robertson taking excellent care of the church school Sunday mornings, and Allan Wardle and the young women doing good work in the Sunday evening school, we are expecting some successful work this winter.

September 4 I had the pleasure of baptizing another fine man and his wife. The brother was a minister in another church. They are both musicians and will be of great help among the young musicians. We have some good prospects for new members and will need them in our work, as some of our best members are moving to other States.

Among the recent visitors whom we have enjoyed entertaining and showing the beauties of the Salt Lake region were President Smith, our beloved "Fred M."; R. S. Salyards, the former church secretary; the McCraes, missionaries to Honolulu; the Holmeses, missionaries to Los Angeles; the Maddens from Columbus, Ohio; the Sordens, on their way to Portland, Oregon; R. D. Weaver, of Southern California, and many others. This week we will have Apostle J. F. Curtis, who will hold meetings. Next week we hope to have Apostle M. A. McConley and Bishop J. A. Becker with us, to stay until after the district conference to be held the eleventh and twelfth of October at Ogden.

It was a pleasure to renew acquaintance with Sister Lucinda Madden, nee Nieman, who is now a successful attorney at law in Columbus, Ohio. It seems such a short time since I baptized her as a child when I labored in that field. We enjoyed talking over old times with Sister Nieman at whose home we have had many pleasant visits. It is gratifying to see so many noble men and women, not only willing, but able to give valuable contributions of time, labor, and riches to our wonderful church.

We are pleased to report that five baptisms have taken place at Ogden by Brother Roy Hewes.

We have been glad to fill requests for literature regarding the Utah situation, but we would respectfully ask that in the future such requests be accompanied by postage sufficient to cover cost of literature and mailing. It would seem but a small amount to care for one request, but the aggregate makes it expensive. CALVIN H. RICH.

Northeastern Kansas Institute

The first institute to be held at Fanning, Kansas, occurred September 20 and 21 under the auspices of the district Department of Recreation and Expression. Elder E. E. Closson, general supervisor of the young people's division of the Department of Religious Education, and Elder and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, of Independence, Missouri, conducted class work. Music was in charge of Sister B. F. Deller, district chorister.

At 9.30 Saturday morning a prayer service was held in charge of Samuel Twombly, assisted by E. E. Closson, William Twombly, and L. M. Pitsenberger. District Missionary W. A. Smith offered the worship prayer. Brother Samuel Twombly spoke of the merits of the institute and what it means to the district. Brother Closson stressed the need of preparation, consecration, and services. A short talk followed by District Superintendent L. M. Pitsenberger.

Eight accredited class periods were held. Sister Etzenhouser discussed such topics as "Choosing a companion," "Petting," "Ill-advised marriages," and "The engagement"; Brother Closson presented the field of recreation and young people's activities in relation to Zion.

At four o'clock in the afternoon, recreational activities were enjoyed by the young people under the supervision of Brother Closson. The wiener roast at six o'clock drew a large attendance, and twenty pounds of wieners were consumed.

In the evening L. M. Pitsenberger was in charge of a varied program of vocal and piano solos, duet and quartet numbers, readings, talks, and pep songs, written and arranged by Sister Fern Weedmark. At the opening of this hour Brother William Twombly welcomed the visiting Saints.

A young people's prayer meeting, held Sunday morning at 8.30, was in charge of E. E. Closson and W. A. Smith. Brother Closson likened the church to a river with its tributaries and streams and small drops of water. As Brother Twombly spoke of the advantages of the young people, comparing them with those of early church history, and told how the young people are now challenged to work to heights that our predecessors could only vision, a little girl presented Brother Closson a beautiful bouquet.

The children under fourteen years of age marched to the home of William Twombly at 9.30 to enjoy a junior church service, in charge of Brother Closson. At the same hour Sister Etzenhouser conducted an adult class at the church.

The lecture at eleven o'clock was by M. A. Etzenhouser, and the theme was "The home." A quartet of young people from Independence accompanied Brother Etzenhouser to Fanning and sang "Shine forth." Naomi Williams, Joy Carpender, Orville Hulmes, and Paul Carpender composed the quartet. A duet by Joy and Paul Carpender and a reading by Joy were also much enjoyed.

Preceding the basket dinner in Brother Tilden's yard just across the street from the church, the ordinance of baptism was administered to five candidates, children of Brother and Sister Johnson and Brother and Sister Marsh, of Fanning. District Missionary W. A. Smith officiated. The confirmation took place preceding the afternoon class period. Those assisting in this service were M. A. Etzenhouser, F. G. Hedrick, Samuel Twombly, and W. A. Smith.

Brother Pitsenberger had charge of the afternoon activities. A short business session was held, and it was voted to hold another institute next year at Fanning. Brother Closson moved that L. M. Pitsenberger as chairman, assisted by Fern Weedmark and William Twombly, act as a committee to arrange for the next institute. The motion carried.

As Brother and Sister Etzenhouser were leaving after her last class period, the audience sang, "We will miss you."

At the close of Brother Closson's class period, pictures were taken. This terminated a successful institute. We trust the influence of this meeting may be felt by many because of the effort and sacrifice put forth. The attendance was almost one hundred and sixty, and the registration shows fifteen towns and three States represented.

MRS. H. C. PITSEMBERGER.

Oakland, California

From the Oakland Bulletin

September 14 we considered in this branch the sacred mission of Graceland College. It is the work of the church college to inform our young that they may share in the treasures of experience and knowledge which through the ages have been accumulated. Besides this, through the atmosphere of religion, this institution seeks to impart the knowledge of the centuries, blending the truth of human experience with the truth of prophetic genius. Two collections were taken, one at the close of the morning service, the other at the close of the evening hour.

New members have been welcomed in this branch from Kansas City, Missouri, and some former members have returned from Lamoni, Iowa.

Brother and Sister Cecil Hawley and Brother and Sister Mark Fonda were visitors at Castroville last Sunday and report a pleasant time. A new branch of the church was organized. Brother Ray Lawn was elected pastor. We wish success to this new addition to the churches of this district.

At the service last Sunday morning two infants, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Peterson, of El Cerrito, were blessed by Bishop Ingham and the pastor.

The recent Tuesday evening workers' conference was well attended, and all were delighted with the help and counsel of our friend, Mr. Clifford Simpson, of Plymouth Congregational Church, who analyzed the Sunday school worship period and gave a number of good ideas.

The young people of the branch report happy times each week on some of the programs they have organized. A week ago they had a swimming party. This week it is a wiener roast at Lake Merritt.

Hazel Dell Branch

Weston, Iowa

September 22.—The Saints are still working in the Master's cause in old Hazel Dell Branch. Years ago this branch was known as the Weston Scandinavian Branch because many of its members were from across the sea.

Before reunion at Woodbine a friendly contest was held in this Sunday school between the Reds and the Blues. The purpose was to see which side could register the best attendance. The Reds lost and so had to treat the entire Sunday school.

Several of the members who attended the reunion at Woodbine reported a fine gathering.

Since that time two young missionaries, Elders E. Y. Hunker and Marvin K. Fry, have been holding meetings for two weeks in our church building. Many showed fine interest in the meetings and were present almost every night. Several of our neighbors who are not members were present, and the last Sunday two young men were baptized into the church. Their confirmation took place Sunday evening. The young people gave a marshmallow toast one evening after the service, and the women, not to be outdone, gave a wiener roast on another evening after the sermon.

Both speakers sang several songs with guitar accompaniment in the song services preceding the preaching hour each evening.

Graceland College was remembered September 14 with songs and a talk by Brother Hunker whose Alma Mater is Graceland. A collection of more than twenty-five dollars was turned to the Graceland fund.

This branch has been holding meetings at a schoolhouse about six miles north of here. Some nonmembers have shown considerable interest. We earnestly hope that good will come from these meetings. Elders Hunker and Fry are going up there to hold services for a week. We wish them success here and everywhere it falls to their lot to tell the gospel story.

Conference of Chatham District

Chatham District met in conference Saturday and Sunday, September 13 and 14, at Wabash, Ontario. Having ideal weather for the opening service, a fine crowd attended the business meetings on Saturday, and much business was transacted.

The Saints were sorry that District President D. J. Williams was not permitted to meet with us on account of the illness of Sister Williams, which necessitated their going to Independence. Though they were not present, we thought of them many times, and each member prays for Sister Williams's speedy recovery and return to this district.

It was a pleasure to have Apostle Clyde F. Ellis present. He with the two district counselors, Elders R. T. Brown and W. Badder, was in charge of the business session. The election of officers resulted in a few changes for the year: District president, D. J. Williams; counselors, R. T. Brown and William Andrew; secretary, Royal R. Wood; musical director, Sister Edith Moore; treasurer, J. C. Dent; bishop, John C. Dent; superintendent of church school, William Andrew; reunion committee: J. C. Dent, W. Reddick, Albert Bennet, and R. H. Jones with David Snoblen as honorary member. And according to the movements of the conference, we are to have a reunion in 1931.

Considerable work was done, a pleasant spirit was present, and the time sped away almost too rapidly.

Sunday dawned beautiful and bright. But during the night there had been a severe storm, and the big tent erected on the athletic grounds had been blown to earth and soaked with rain. It was impossible to have the tent ready for the Sunday services, and the anticipated crowd was too big to be comfortably accommodated in the church.

At the morning prayer service, however, a wonderful spirit was present. This continued during the services of the day, and one could not but feel encouraged and strengthened to go from the meetings better able to bear burdens which come to us daily.

On Saturday it surprised and pleased the conference to have Missionary B. H. Doty arrive. He was the speaker Saturday evening. Other speakers during the conference were Bishop J. C. Dent and Apostle C. F. Ellis. Elder John Shields spoke to the Saints in prayer service.

In the afternoon five young men were ordained to the priesthood: William Andrew to the office of elder; John Rotz to the office of priest; Howard Belrose to the office of deacon; Roy Jones, elder; and Basil Freer, deacon.

Splendid meals were prepared by the sisters of Wabash Branch and served free of charge in the hall a short distance from the church. For the noonday meal on Sunday between four and five hundred dinners were served. Much credit is due the worthy Saints for their hospitality.

The past few months have been busy and eventful ones and the members turned homeward to take up their vocations in life more able to fight the fight of faith by having been permitted to meet together. We hope to meet again in Sarnia in 1931.

Little Visits in Zion

Independence, Missouri, September 26.—It is a pleasure to report the good cause in Zion moving forward. The prayer meetings indicate an advancement in our spiritual plane of living. These services constitute an index of the spiritual condition of the church.

In the early part of August Sister Terry and I visited the Saints at Fourth Church in Kansas City and found Brother Worden, the pastor, at his post with his flock about him, all deeply interested in the glorious latter-day work. We tried to encourage them in the course they are traveling. We were taken to this branch and brought home in the car of Brother Snead.

On August 17 invitation was extended us to visit the members of Armourdale Branch, also in Kansas City. There is to be found another zealous and united band. We were in time for their Sunday school service. In this an earnest desire to learn the true way of living was to be seen. Much liberty was given me in telling the gospel story to the Saints at the eleven o'clock hour.

The following Sunday morning we were taken to Gudgeon Park Branch in Independence and found the Saints in fine condition spiritually. This congregation reminds us of our early missionary work in Saint Joseph, when we opened the Aspey Mission in a small house in an obscure part of the city. This mission grew and is now Third Saint Joseph Church.

I frequently visit the Sanitarium to do what I can to comfort the suffering ones. They enjoy kind words and often ask for administration. Always we find the splendid nurses busy in their duties of caring for the sick.

In memory we are often taken to the West to visit the Saints of Oakland, San Francisco, and other coast towns. Then we live once more some of the experiences of the past. I still carry a penknife that was presented to me by Brothers Joseph Presley and Archie Severy. It is well worn, but memory of the givers and the gift is always new. Then I think of the members in Seattle, Washington, and our eight years of service there.

My companion and I still rejoice in the blessed work of the Lord. We are assured of its final triumph.

J. M. TERRY.

Norfolk, Nebraska

September 25.—Special meetings were held at Norfolk September 20 and 21. Saints from several points in the district were in attendance, cars coming from Comstock, Meadow Grove, Inman, Page, Neligh, and Clearwater, and there was a good attendance at all meetings.

Our meeting place has been remodeled, and on this occasion presented a very neat appearance. The hall now has an attractive interior. The Department of Women, under the supervision of Mrs. Nina Cochran, helped to enhance the dignity of the room by purchasing shades and drapes for the windows. Additional furniture has been moved into the building from our church at Meadow Grove, which is being sold.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer was present, and delivered five lectures. A fine interest was manifest at all services. Brother Gleazer emphasized the need of the Saints moving to large centers. He also called attention to industrial conditions which point to the need of the establishment of Zion. Brother Gleazer has also directed the district missionary to spend sixty per cent of his time in Norfolk, assuming the task of building a branch, and establishing Norfolk as the headquarters of the district.

ELEANOR RUSSELL.

Independence

The Harvest Festival

The annual Harvest Home Festival opened at the Auditorium last night, marking the culmination of ten days and more of intensive activity on the part of booth builders and all others contributing to and interested in the event.

From year to year plans are made for the harvest festival, but the fall months see the greatest amount of actual labor in preparation and presentation of the harvest's first fruits. By Monday night of this week more than twenty booths had been assigned and the designs well worked out, not counting space allotted special organizations. Bushels of raw vegetables, fruits, and grains are used in decoration, and hundreds of quarts of canned products line the shelves and booth floors. Effort has not been spared to make the festival attractive, and artistry as well as novelty of design harmonize to produce a sight which is heartening to all visitors.

This is the twelfth annual Harvest Home Festival to be held in Independence and the fourth to be housed in the lower hall of the Auditorium, a place well adapted to the event. This year the festival has assumed the proportions of a fair. Shipments of products have been arriving for a number of days at the Auditorium from States in the East and in the West, and Hawaii has again remembered us with lavish contributions.

Upstairs in the main auditorium are to be seen about twenty-five booths set up by industrial organizations of Independence, Kansas City, and vicinity. Besides this the east corridors of the Auditorium house pens of rabbits and chickens.

Baking and cooking contests are attracting the housewives of the center place, and the judges are organizing to select the best of fruits and vegetables and grains, as well as the prize booths of the exhibit.

Evening programs will be conducted in the main auditorium. Tonight is Jackson County Night; tomorrow, Independence Night; and Friday is Kansas City Night. Special programs of music and talks are planned to entertain and interest the large crowds which are expected to attend.

Stone Church

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the eleven o'clock hour, with Apostle E. J. Gleazer as the speaker. He emphasized the twofold service that Jesus performed when he called his disciples together for the first Lord's Supper: he gave himself to them, as it were, a perfect and complete sacrifice, in the emblems used; and he invited them to go forth and carry on the ministry which he had begun. Brother Gleazer brought a message of hope. He brought also a challenge for the people of the church to accept the offering of Christ by going forth in his service.

Elder W. Wallace Smith presided, and was assisted in the stand by Elders R. T. Cooper, H. G. Barto, E. A. Thomas, T. A. Beck, and L. E. Flowers. Paul N. Craig led the congregational singing, and Robert Miller was at the organ.

This month the intermediate boys and girls, who meet for worship in the lower Auditorium of the Stone Church at the eleven o'clock hour, are "Adventuring with Christ in courage." The theme for the opening Sunday was "Courage to keep the covenant." Elder G. G. Lewis was in charge and told the story of the Last Supper. The principal talk of the hour was made by Elder E. E. Closson. Assisting in the stand were Priests W. Earl Page, Albert Brackenbury, Gerald Phillips, Roy Davey, Kenneth Morford, and Oral Andes.

The purpose of religion is to harmonize man with God and the world, affirmed Elder R. W. Farrell in his Sunday evening sermon at the Stone Church. The great problem of religion, he continued, is what is to be done with Jesus and his teachings? This question will not be answered until every tongue has confessed: "Thou art Christ the Son of the Living God." Then shall we know God and understand his purposes, for it is only the ear attuned to divinity which hears the message of divinity. The basis of Elder Farrell's discourse was read from the counsels of Paul to Timothy.

An especially attractive program of music was given by the Stone Church Choir led by Paul N. Craig, and by an instrumental trio composed of Gomer Watson, violinist, Fred Friend, celloist, and George Miller, pianist. The choir sang "Festival Te Deum," by Dudley Buck, soloists being Mrs. Nina Smith, Mrs. Alice Burgess, Edward Brackenbury, and Albert Brackenbury; accompanists, Robert and George Miller.

Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder William Cowan.

Organizations and Personalities

Members of the priesthood in Independence met at the Stone Church Tuesday evening, September 30, for special prayer service called by the First Presidency. Apostle E. J. Gleazer was in charge and gave the introductory remarks. Bishop A. Carmichael also spoke. Elder W. A. McDowell offered the invocation. Brother George Anway led the singing of hymns. Prayers were centered around four themes: The general missionary program of the church; the increase in number of stewards and the program of stewardships; financial support of the church; and local and general objectives of the church.

A rally service for officers and teachers and all workers in the field of religious education in the center place will be conducted at the Stone Church the evening of October 19. Seats will be reserved for those engaged in the work of the several church schools. This service is a forerunner of the religious education institute to open Monday evening, October 20, and continue to October 30, classes assembling in the Stone Church. The following courses will be offered: "Principles and methods in religious education," teacher's training courses (three classes); "The way to health," by Doctor Charles F. Grabske; "Appreciation of the Bible," John Blackmore; "In the field of religious education," F. M. McDowell; and especially for the priesthood "A functioning priesthood" (four classes). Other teachers besides those above named will be: C. B. Woodstock, Myrtle Weber, Ruby Williamson, E. E. Closson, H. G. Barto, C. Ed. Miller, John F. Sheehy, F. H. Edwards, and there will be one lecture each by President F. M. Smith and Bishop A. Carmichael. The evening of October 31 when the spooks are abroad, the institute will culminate in a Halloween party.

The month of September always brings a fresh group of eager, ambitious young women to the Sanitarium at Independence. Most of them are interested in the Sanitarium because of their belief in the church, and they come from various—sometimes remote—parts of the country. They come to be at home in Independence for three years while they prepare for more useful living. That you may meet them and greet them, we introduce: Miss Ethel Scott, daughter of W. B. Scott, a retired farmer of Clinton, Missouri; Miss Geneva Haden, from Lamoni, Iowa, daughter of the missionary of Clinton District, W. E. Haden. Geneva is a Graceland graduate. The Misses Betty and Ann Donaldson are a pair, and they claim Hamden, Ohio, for their home place; Ann is a former Graceland student; Marie Kugler, of Richmond, Missouri, another Graceland girl. Miss Edith Wingett comes from Walt Hill, Nebraska, and Miss Florence Phillips from Pekin, Illinois. Miss Mittie Rodgers—her name should be "Midgie"—deserted Oklahoma City for us. Miss Elizabeth Lively is the daughter of Brother and Sister

H. R. Lively, of Detroit, where Brother Lively is an active elder. Miss Kathryn Madsen, of Haehne, Colorado, expects to become a church member as well as a nurse. Miss Sarah King of our own city; Miss Iva Oliver, whose association with Little Sioux, Iowa, Saints has been influential in bringing her here. Miss Opal Jones, sister of one of the senior nurses; she is a native of our neighbor State, Kansas. Miss Veda Shupe, of Trinidad, Colorado; Miss Mabel Shippy, of Genoa, Colorado; Miss Beulah Eyman, of Skiatook, Oklahoma; and Miss Elsie Keairnes, of Dow City, Iowa.

Two hundred delegates to the national convention of the Service Star Legion, in session last week in Kansas City were guests of the Independence chapter at a dinner and pageant given at the Auditorium the evening of October 2. Sister A. L. Yingling, president of the local Service Star Legion chapter, presided at the dinner, which besides the delegates, was attended by a hundred citizens of Independence. A welcome to Independence was extended the delegates by Mayor Roger T. Sermon, and President Frederick M. Smith spoke briefly of welcome and patriotism. Miss Gladys Good sang two numbers. The pageant, "Columbia," written by Mrs. W. E. G. Saunders, of Emmetsburg, Iowa, was presented at the conclusion of the dinner. More than five hundred people witnessed this performance, which told the story of America's life. Sisters S. A. Thiel and Beatrice McNamara read the story as tableaux depicted the action. The scenes were presented by members of the Saint Joseph, Kansas City, and Independence chapters and their friends. The Auditorium Orchestra played softly during the entire pageant, assisted by a chorus of voices from the Stone Church Choir directed by Paul N. Craig.

The Tuesday Club held its first meeting of the year at the home of its president, Sister W. Wallace Smith, September 30. Sister E. G. Haberlein gave the first of a series of lectures on etiquette in the home.

The Commodity Shop, which has moved to its new location, 901 West Kansas Street, is open each Wednesday and Saturday from 9 a. m. to 5.30 p. m. This shop, under the supervision of the local bishopric and a committee headed by Sister Thomas Hartnell, seeks to bring together clothing and household furnishings from homes where they are not needed, remodel them to the best advantage, and pass them on to those who are in need. The cooperation of the Saints in Independence is solicited in this undertaking. You are asked to communicate with your Commodity Shop group officer and to keep in touch with the shop.

Walnut Park

On Sunday, September 28, the morning speaker was Elder Ralph W. Farrell, and the evening speaker Evangelist U. W. Greene. Both gave edifying and instructive discourses.

A union prayer meeting was held at the church September 24, in charge of Elder Fred Lanpher. A goodly portion of the Spirit was manifested in this service, resulting in the spiritual growth and encouragement of all. A joint prayer meeting with the Saints of Enoch Hill was held on Wednesday evening, October 1, in the Enoch Hill Church. A large number of the Walnut Park Saints attended this service, making a capacity crowd. The Enoch Hill Saints expressed themselves as happy for the opportunity to welcome those from Walnut Park as visitors, while the latter also rejoiced because of the occasion. Two messages of exhortation and encouragement were delivered to the congregation by the power of the Spirit.

The monthly sacramental service was held at the church yesterday morning, the service being in charge of Elder Fred Lanpher, assisted by Elders S. C. Smith, C. L. Olson, R. Barnhardt, George Bullard, and C. V. Hopkins. After the offering of material things involved in the giving of the oblation, two young couples presented their newly born children to the church for a blessing. Nadine Marie, daughter of Lloyd C. and Martha G. Lucas, was blessed by Elders Barnhardt and Smith; and Frederick Eugene, son of Hugh E. and Goldie

Mary Newell, was blessed by Elders Smith and Barnhardt.

At six o'clock Sunday evening a mass meeting was held for the purpose of considering the organization of study classes to be held at that hour during the fall, winter, and spring months. Elder George G. Lewis, who is in charge of the Religious Education work in Independence, gave a talk, explaining what courses were available. After considerable discussion it was decided to offer three courses simultaneously as follows: "Methods of teaching" (including storytelling, handcraft, dramatization, etc.); "The Book of Mormon in the light of today," and "Preparation for marriage and parenthood." These courses will begin the latter part of October or the first of November. Other union meetings for the Saints in Zion have been scheduled for the next two Sundays in this month.

The evening hour was devoted to a special service of thanksgiving and dedication for the products which have been contributed and prepared for the Harvest Home Festival. A total of over fifteen hundred quarts of fruits and vegetables have been canned as Walnut Park's contribution to this event. The special program of dedication consisted of the following numbers: an anthem by the choir, a reading by Miss Ruth Bryant, a talk by Elder S. C. Smith, and the dedication prayer by Elder C. V. Hopkins. A special confirmation service was also included in the program. Donald Minton, son of Brother and Sister Earl Minton, who had been baptized in the afternoon, was confirmed by Elders John Taylor and Frank Minton.

Enoch Hill

The church school program on Promotion Day, September 28, impressed all with the work of the school and the cooperation of teachers, officers, and classes. "With a steadfast faith" was the opening song; then the parents in the school sang a song to the tune of "America." A duet number by Brother and Sister Lewis W. Cross was gratefully heard, and a playlet, "The hope of rally day," was presented by Sisters Christensen, W. J. Brewer, Charles Warren, John Jones, and Joseph Martin. The promotion exercises included a welcome song by the intermediate girls, consecration hymn by the graduates, and the awarding of diplomas.

Bishop C. J. Hunt was the eleven o'clock speaker. His theme, "Think on good things," found a scriptural setting in the writings of Paul to the Corinthian Saints. In the evening Elder W. A. McDowell was the speaker.

The Erodolphian organization of young people met Tuesday evening, September 30, to elect officers and outline its program of activities for the winter. All officers were re-elected for another term. As guest speaker the young people had L. E. Flowers, who chose as his topic "The place of young people in the church and the world." This was Brother Flowers's first visit to Enoch Hill, and the Erodolphians hope he will come again.

The following evening Walnut Park Saints met in union prayer service with Enoch Hill members. It was most encouraging to the worshipers to meet together in this service, and the hour was spent to the profit of all.

Sacramental service, October 5, took on the nature of a special ordinance meeting. Two elderly sisters received administration for the healing of the sick, and four babies were given the blessing accorded little children by the laying on of hands. The infants were Charlene Ardell Larson, daughter of Brother and Sister M. A. Larson; Dayle DeLore Bronson, daughter of Brother and Sister A. Bronson; Elvin E. West, son of Brother and Sister Elmo West; Charles Russell Minton, jr., son of Brother and Sister Charles Russell Minton. The last named was blessed by his grandfather, W. J. Brewer, and his uncle, Frank Minton. Others of the ministry who officiated in this ordinance were Charles Warren, J. F. Petre, C. E. Beal, and R. E. Whitsett. The remainder of the communion hour was occupied by Brother Petre, who gave a splendid comparison of the work of the priesthood in the days of the New Testament and today.

The Saints of Enoch Hill regret to know that Brother

O. W. Sarratt, pastor, is again confined to his bed with rheumatism. A recent attack of the disease, more severe than his former afflictions, has rendered him unable to continue his daily work or to perform the many duties which demand his attention in this congregation. The Saints are praying that relief and healing may be a portion of the blessing given him.

Elder J. W. A. Bailey was the evening speaker Sunday, delivering a sermon which held the attention and interest of the members.

Gudgell Park

September, bringing with it the opening of school, made it necessary for us to effect some changes in local evening activities. The Tuesday evening volley ball play period was discontinued. The junior choir practice was changed from Thursday evening to Sunday evening at six o'clock. The Orioles meet Friday nights and are studying sewing.

Attendance at services during September was good.

The mornings of September 14 and 21 at the eleven o'clock service, the members listened to two earnest discourses by Pastor P. A. Sherman.

September 21 was the time for the first evening service in the branch. Brother J. A. Bozarth spoke.

The final Sunday of the month Brother G. W. Weston was the morning speaker and Brother C. E. Martin the evening speaker.

Attendance at church school last Sunday morning was good. Flowers are still abundant, as was shown by the beautiful bouquet which adorned the pulpit. Sacramental service was an hour enjoyed by a good number. The Spirit was felt by the worshipers, who were in charge of the local priesthood.

Gudgell Park is busy in the Harvest Festival this week in progress in Independence. Though the Saints in this congregation are few in number when compared to others of the congregations, we try to do our part to help.

Elder D. A. Whiting was the speaker Sunday evening, using as a text: "Add to your faith." The junior choir sang an anthem.

Far West Stake

Cameron

With the first of September came the close of the vacation season, time to settle down to intensive work. All who had the privilege of attending reunion came back with a clearer vision of the goal before us and with renewed determination to help build Zion. There is evidence of new activity in the various departments.

The women have resumed their regular meetings and are planning to serve a chicken dinner October 11. The junior department, under the leadership of Sister David Gamet, felt that the house of God where they worship should be made as clean and beautiful as possible, so each Sunday for a while they brought a special offering of pennies, nickels, and dimes for the purpose of painting the walls, tables, etc. With the assistance of some of the brothers and the Department of Women, the work of renovating the basement has been completed, and when we step into the basement we feel that the effort was well worth while, for the clean walls, new curtains, and bright drapes make one want to come back.

Sunday, September 14, was a rainy day, and attendance was below normal, but those who braved the weather were well repaid, for they enjoyed a splendid sermon in the morning by Brother G. T. Richards and in the evening by Brother F. E. Miffen.

The seventh of the series of historical playlets by Brother Elbert A. Smith, was presented preceding the splendid sermon by Pastor F. L. Hinderks Sunday evening, September 21.

Rally Day, September 28, found a goodly number assembled at the church. The speaker at the eleven o'clock hour was Brother Ward A. Hougas, stake president. His sermon on "Signs on the highway of life," was not only interesting but stimulated thought which caused those who listened to look about to determine whether they are on the main highway of life or camped on some rough detour. Brother Hougas met with the priesthood in the afternoon, and in the evening Brother Miiffen was the speaker.

The women won, as usual, in a Rally Day attendance contest and as a result were invited, by the men, to a water-melon feed at the home of Brother and Sister Arthur Baughman Tuesday evening.

Monday evening a group of young people enjoyed a wiener roast at the home of Brother and Sister Will Butler.

Cameron Saints are looking forward to a series of special services in the near future.

Coffeyville, Kansas

Washita and Eleventh

Elder Lee Quick, of Mapleton, Kansas, was with us on Rally Day, observed in this branch September 21. He preached on Thursday and Friday nights of that week and Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. That Sabbath the Saints went to Forest Park for dinner, and a large crowd enjoyed the meal. Immediately following the dinner Mr. Clyde McKee, of Wimer, Oklahoma, was baptized. Then the Saints returned to the church for the confirmation and another good sermon by Elder Quick. A large crowd attended the session of the Department of Recreation and Expression, and a good delegation represented Delaware, Oklahoma, at the evening service. Brother Harding, of Bartlesville, Oklahoma, was also present that evening.

Brother Quick was in Coffeyville August 10 and blessed two babies, the children of Brother and Sister Lloyd Martin and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Mills.

Sister Mike Heod and Brother W. C. Yeubanks are among the sick at this writing. We are hoping that both will soon recover and be with us at the services of the church.

Attendance at meetings has been fairly good at all times, especially at the prayer services.

Kansas City Stake

Of General Stake Interest

Kansas City, Kansas, schools have been ordered closed, beginning September 30 and continuing for two weeks or longer as the gravity of conditions may indicate on account of the presence of infantile paralysis. It is hoped by this means to check the disease. Thus far only sixteen cases are reported, and there are no cases among the ranks of the Saints. However, no children under sixteen years of age are allowed off their own premises, and church services as well as all other lines of activity will be much interfered with.

Central Church

"Prelude in E Flat," by Reed, opened the worship period of the church school session Sunday morning. A quartet sang "Prayer perfect," and the invocation and offertory prayer were offered by Brother J. H. Paxton.

The service commemorating the Last Supper of Christ with his disciples brought to the house of worship a large number of members.

In the evening the Harvest Festival of Central Church was held. All gifts of canned fruits and vegetables, to be taken to the Harvest Festival at the Auditorium in Independence, were on display in the local church. Kansas City Stake booth this year occupies a favorable position in the Auditorium, and Kansas City's skyline of 1932 has been designed as a background of a scene depicting industrial Zion. We expect to have in our exhibit a thousand quarts of fruit. The Ladies' Opportunity class, which last year made a soap model of Central Church, is this year making a large soap model of the Auditorium. Peet Brothers Palm Olive Company donated seven hundred bars of soap for this project.

Under the direction of Brother George Anway, the new Central Church choir leader, a beautiful musical program on Sunday evening added much to the service. The choir sang "The radiant morn hath passed away," by Woodward, and "Turn ye even to me," by Harker, Sister C. E. Wight, contralto soloist. There was a violin solo by Otis Swart, and the organist, Irene Wolfe, furnished a prelude and accompaniments.

The attendance and new member contest between the adult, the young people, and the children's divisions of the church school started Sunday. The members are invited to attend regularly and on time and to bring their friends. There is no intermission between periods of the church school.

Lamoni Stake

Missionary Services at Thompson

The rural Saints, who for a number of years have conducted a mission six miles west of Lamoni, are at this writing in a series of missionary meetings, with Elders James A. Thomas and T. S. Williams as speakers. The local members are giving loyal support, as are also two adjacent rural branches, Bloomington and Evergreen. The meetings were well advertised, Brother Ira Chamberlain, who is the local elder, in direct charge, and Brother Thomas calling at eighty-nine farm homes with handbills and personal invitations. Others have talked about the meetings, and altogether a good attendance has been built up. Local singers, and others from the two branches named, with some young folk from Lamoni and the college, have been supplying special music each night. The interest is well sustained among nonmembers as well as among the Saints, and some subjects are already announced for the third week of the series. It is the intent of the brothers to continue as long as the interest justifies.

Series at Allendale

F. L. Sawley, one of the "honor roll" ministers of the church, is holding a two-week series of meetings in Allendale, Missouri. Elder Sawley resides at the Saints' Home and has been assisting in ministerial work in the vicinity of Lamoni as his strength has permitted. His missionary fervor is finding expression, and he reports that he is happy in the good response he is receiving.

Rally Day in Lamoni

The evening service was planned for Rally Day. At the opening a group of boys from the junior department sang "O worship the King" as a voluntary hymn, and Kenneth Graham read two poems as a call to worship. The congregation sang with enthusiasm "We're marching to Zion," in readiness for the opening prayer. The primaries were represented in a missionary song, "The world children for Jesus," and the college students by a trio of girls.

Three talks were given. On this general day of renewal of spirit it was suggested that we rally—(a) To happy and constructive home life; (b) To the social and educational activities of the branch; and (c) To the spirit and service of the general church. These three phases were presented by Mrs. M. E. Mortimore, chairman of committee on women's work in the church school, Fred Condit, director of social and recreational work, and T. S. Williams, pastor of the Brick Church. "Rise up, O men of God," was the closing hymn.

Our Departed Ones

CORLESS.—Anna, the ninth child of Hugh and Catharine Stroh, was born in Oseola Township, Crawford County, Ohio, March 4, 1858. When six years old she moved with her parents to Steuben County, Indiana. During the fall of 1877 Anna Stroh married Jacob
Thomas, of Flint, Indiana. To them were born three daughters,
Mae, Katy, and Cora. Cora preceded her mother in death March 8, 1908. Mr. Thomas died on the farm in Maple Grove District October

6, 1902, and his widow moved to Coldwater, Michigan, where she made her home for the rest of her life. June 6, 1908, she married Brother Starr Corless, president of Coldwater Branch, and united her activities with the local work. Was baptized into the church May 4, 1884, by Columbus Scott, of Coldwater, and proved a faithful member. Her last illness was of long duration, but she was patient.
She passed away August 31, 1930, a wonderful mother, grandmother, and homebuilder gone to her reward. The funeral was from the Saints' church September 2, S. W. L. Scott officiating. Interment was in Oak Grove Cemetery, Coldwater. Left to mourn are her husband, two daughters, six grandchildren, one brother, one sister, and numerous other relatives and friends.

HAIN.—David Hain, son of Jacob and Catherine Hain, was born in Randolph County, Indiana, March 19, 1839, and was married to Miss Amelia F. Reynolds, near Lake City, Iowa, October 20, 1867. To them were born two sons and three daughters: Philip M.
Hain, of Winslow, Arizona; Mrs. Verna Hillman, Hammon, Oklahoma; and Mrs. Emma Roosa, of Waterloo, Iowa, with whom Mr.
Hain made his home. A daughter, Mrs. Jennie Brady, and a son, George, preceded him in death. Mr. Hain was baptized into the church July 4, 1874, by Elder Heman C. Smith, and throughout all the long, busy years of his life remained a loyal, faithful member.
He devoted his life to his family and the church. Passed peacefully away at the Saint Francis Hospital, Waterloo, Iowa, September 9, 1930, after a short illness and operation. Interment was in Cottonwood Cemetery, Lake City, Iowa. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder Guy Haynes, assisted by Herbert Hinds. Surviving are his wife for sixty-three years, three children, fourteen grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren.

SWAIN.—Henry D. Swain was born in Wayne County, Indiana, October 3, 1852. Most of his life was spent in western Iowa. He was married to Julia A. Tuck, and their union was one of old-fashioned love marriages of nearly sixty years' standing. To them two daughters were born, Mrs. L. W. Kibbler of Whittier, California; and Mrs. G. C. Duvall, of Lexington, Missouri. Early in life the deceased and his companion united with the Reorganized Church and have always been faithful in their devotion and interested in the advancement of the church. Mr. Swain's loving devotion to his invalid wife of the past ten years will always stand as a monument to his character; it has endeared him to all of his friends. His only regret in passing was that he was not spared to help care for her during the remainder of her life. All that loving hands and hearts could do was done for his comfort during the months of his intense suffering. He passed away August 28, 1930. Interment was in beautiful Whittier Memorial Park. Elder Eli Bronson delivered the sermon.

SNIVELY.—Margaret Snively, wife of Hugh N. Snively, of Burlington, Iowa, died at an Iowa City Hospital September 26, 1930.
Funeral services were held at the Burlington chapel in charge of Charles Fry who also spoke a few words at the grave at Montrose, where A. M. Chase assisted. Mrs. Snively was born (Margaret Simpson) at Montrose, February 16, 1851. In 1879 she married James L.
Wright, and they made their home in Burlington. A daughter, Marjorie, was born to them who preceded her mother in death one month and three days. In 1917 Mrs. Wright was married to Mr.
Snively who survives her. She united with the church in her youth and remained devoted to the faith until her death. Her work was always for the upbuilding of the church. In addition to home cares she gave much time and talent to nursing the sick, which work was her delight and success. Her life was full of good works.

HASSELL.—Mortimer L. Hassell was born in Elkhart, Texas,
May 2, 1869. He received the rite of baptism from the hands of Elder A. J. Moore February 25, 1882. Died in the Southside District Hospital, Mesa, Arizona, September 21, after a major operation. He is survived by his widow, Sister Christian Hassell, three sons, and two daughters: A. J. Hassell, Washington; M. J. Hassell, Texas; Noel Hassell and Mrs. Harry Olsen, Mesa, Arizona; and Mrs.
Cora Pense, of Oklahoma. Brother Hassell had been a resident of Mesa for thirteen years, serving on the police force for five years.
He was in the employ of the city when he died. The funeral was from the Meldrum Mortuary of Mesa, sermon by S. S. Smith. Interment was in the city cemetery of Mesa.

CARTER.—William H. Carter was born October 27, 1866, near Fulton, Iowa. Died September 14, 1930, at Maquoketa, Iowa, after nearly two years of suffering with cancer. He married Martha Shields May 1, 1897, and to them were born three daughters: Mrs.

and five grandchildren. United with the church August 5, 1911, and continued in the faith until his death. He had a cheerful disposition, was a kind father and husband, and a patient sufferer. Prayer was had at the home in Maquoketa, then the body was taken to Fulton. The funeral was held from the Saints' church by Elder John Heide, assisted by A. W. Heide. Interment was in Sutton Cemetery beside his daughter.

HANSFORD.—Nancy Anna Hansford was born at Macon, Missouri, July 15, 1895. The fullest measure of her life was spent near Cherryvale, Kansas. She was married twice. Her first husband was Henry F. Ford, and to him she bore Ora Katherine and Henry Franze. In 1922 she was married to S. J. Hansford. She joined the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints October 23, 1927. Passed away at her mother's home near Cherryvale, September 26, 1930, leaving her mother, husband, two children, a sister, ering the discourse. Interment was in Elk City, Kansas.

Spreading the Gospel with Church Publications

We are letting you in on a true story because we think you will like it. One day a member of the Quorum of Twelve came into the Business Manager's office on an errand. When business was finished the Manager asked him:

"Why don't you help us out by selling subscriptions for the church periodicals and books?"

"Why, I can't sell anything," replied the Apostle. "People won't buy anything from me."

"Maybe you never tried it," pursued the Business Manager.

"You're right; I haven't."

"Well, why don't you make one real effort. You never know what you can do till you try."

The Apostle thought it over for a minute. Then he said: "I'll try it."

And he did try it. Since that time he has placed himself among the leaders in this work, in addition to carrying on a strenuous program of work at reunions and branches. He has sold publications to values running well up into three figures.

More than that, he is leaving behind him, wherever he has gone, a silent but effective group of workers to carry on his task when he has gone to some other field.

Who was that Apostle? Roy S. Budd. And another who has been doing this work for years is Apostle Myron A. McConley. There are, besides, a few fine, active missionaries engaged in this good work.

If apostles, busy with a multitude of tasks, can find time to do this useful work, other people ought to: publicity agents, missionaries, local officers, and lay members.

Proof of Our Ministry

This age hears much of programs and goals. Industrial and commercial institutions have learned that it pays to set an annual goal as a step toward measuring their achievements for stated periods of time. And in the setting of such goals a variety of factors exert influence—the accomplishments of the past, the working force of the institution, the political and economic situation, the opportunities open to the institution.

As a church we cherish the greatest of all goals, the saving of mankind in Christ, and as a means to this end the establishing of Zion. For one hundred years in these latter days we have talked about this goal, we have preached it, we have prayed about it, we have dreamed about it. Lives have been given to this cause, ambitions have been consecrated, and great sacrifices made. All this comes as a heritage to the present generation of the church. We see that it is our task to do all we can to move toward that goal. It is our work, our ministry.

To aid us in our forward movement the officers of the church have devised a way of measuring our progress. They are making more definite the present undertakings; they are setting lesser goals as milestones along our course. They have given us one-year, two-year, and six-year goals in evangelical, spiritual, intellectual, social, and financial endeavors. And general church workers are reminding the membership of the many things to be accomplished by the General Conference of 1936.

Our work crowds us. There are innumerable things to do and so little time in which to do them. Thousands are waiting to be told the gospel story and to be convinced of its truth and bearing upon our lives. Branches of the church must be built and church schools organized; budgets must be worked out and adhered to; buildings erected; homes established; hundreds of little children trained; young people wisely directed and encouraged; the sick cared for; study classes organized; recreation grounds created and supervised; musical, dramatic, worship, and literary undertakings carried out. All these things and more lie before us in the establishing of Zion. Upon us falls the responsibility of teaching our children by precept and example the fine and noble art of living together in love and peace, honesty and consideration.

Our task is not an easy one. At every turn we are opposed by forces which challenge our best. Our course demands faith, loyalty, courage, love, honesty, industry, and temperance of those who would travel it to the goal of brotherhood in Christ. "Make full proof of thy ministry," wrote Paul to the young man Timothy, and that is our challenge.

A righteous life—the good we think and say and do—is the proof of our ministry. Paul was one who had "full proof." Toward the close of a courageous life, he wrote: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Full proof of his ministry! And because of his steadfastness, this assurance was given him: "Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

Are we making full proof of our ministry?

Statistical Report for September

In another column is to be found the monthly report of the statistician for September. This can not but be of interest to all who scan it. The gain of four hundred and five by baptism is cut down by the loss of 232 deaths assumed because of age. The net gain for the month, therefore, is not large.

Another item of interest is, that to a Michigan district goes the credit for being the first "over the top" in reaching the quota set. This ought at once to be an encouragement to this district to endeavor to increase its lead and to other districts to speed up their work.

The missionary spirit of the church should increase both in zeal and effectiveness as the work progresses. To be alert to the task of making converts is a very wholesome condition, and should be encouraged in every way. While those appointed for missionary work should continuously be the exemplars and the spreaders of the necessary zeal, yet all the local officers and also the members should be caught up in the desire to spread the good work as far and widely as possible.

And in the meantime, let the local officers be keenly aware that branch organization, its machinery and officers, exists for the purpose of leading the Saints (those who have been converted) on to perfection. Our responsibilities to the member begin when we have by baptism made him a member. So ritual, ceremony, teaching, exhorting, strengthening, prayer, and sacrament all must function towards making our way as a church towards our great goal.

May wholesome, earnest missionary zeal keep us alert to our possibilities and moving forward in our great tasks.

What of Our "First Fruits"?

It is harvest time, a season when there is much talk of the first fruits of the land, the choicest of the blessings God has given us. In Holy Writ "first fruits" and "choice things" receive frequent mention. We read of them, consider our store of blessings, and bring of the best of our harvest, our money, and our interest and concern to the church. These things are good and necessary, and they are, so far as they go, acceptable to the Lord.

Harvest time this year stirs up, as it always does, certain reflections, and we ask ourselves questions: What are our first fruits? What is to God the most acceptable gift? These should be seriously considered, for the answers put into action determine the trend of our own lives and of the church. God has given each of us the gift of life and placed us upon the earth to grow into the likeness of his Son. Is not the most precious thing in his sight a fully developed, consecrated, noble man?

And if man himself, prepared and willing to serve, is the choicest thing, are not his children the first fruits? Every day we answer these questions in the things we do in association with our children and the children of our neighbors. Are we interested in, seeing these children given opportunity to become men and women patterned after the example of Christ, interested to the extent that we are helping to give them this opportunity? Are we concerned about the place where our children obtain their religious training, the equipment they have, the teachers, the officers? Or do we spend our time and energy in the for-the-moment movements and lose sight of greater, more lasting things?

As a church we speak much of Zion and of the church of tomorrow, and yet many of us seem unaware of the fact that today the church of tomorrow is growing up in our midst, a church many times neglected because it is considered more important to sell aprons to pay for a new pulpit rug in the church; to plan a home-coming service principally for the entertainment of adults; to maintain a traditional service no matter how much it may hinder processes of religious education in the lives of our adolescents.

Too often the parent thinks he has done all the church can expect of him if he arises early enough Sunday morning to send his children to Sunday school. There they will be taught the things they should know about life and God and eternity—everything to save their souls. It seems never to occur to him to bring his child and with him seek to learn of the Savior. Too often, on the other hand, the average teacher thinks he has done his Christian duty if after an hour's desultory study of quarterly and Bible, he meets his class at Sunday school.

"I haven't the time" is the universal excuse. All of us use it. What architect has not the time to make a fine, strong, firm foundation for the beautiful superstructure he plans to erect? If we have not the time to help build the foundation, then all our work is in vain. One of the busiest men of history was Christ—the great Teacher—and yet it was he who said: "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me." Let us think twice of "precious things" and "first fruits" before we again say: "I haven't the time."

Every loyal Saint is challenged to qualify for service. This season brings opportunity to become better trained in all knowledges. There are day schools, night schools, colleges, universities, extension courses, educational conventions, and institutes. To the people of the center place comes rare opportunity next week in the Zion's School of Training in Religious Education. For ten days the workers are asked to give their time to intensive training in Religious Education methods, Bible appreciation, the functions of the priesthood, and other courses. And in the branches and districts outside the center place officers are planning and announcing special institutes and all-day meetings. Let us accept the challenge to qualify. Let us think more seriously of our "first fruits."

Pre-Aztec City Is Discovered in Mexico

Toluca, Mexico, July 29.—One of the richest archaeological finds in Mexico in many years was announced today with the discovery of the pre-Aztec city of Calixtlahuaca, a short distance north of Toluca.

Eleven temples, a number of pyramids, and many valuable specimens were found, according to first reports.

Several excursions are being planned in the hope of further discoveries.—San Antonio Express.

What of Prohibition?

An old adage says, "If you repeat a lie often enough, some people will believe you." Working by this principle, the "wet" interests of the country have been repeating their customary stories with tireless hope, in every form and in every place that they have found the opportunity. They call prohibition a failure, blame it as a cause of crime, and charge it with responsibility for the business depression, etc.

They intimate that if liquor were returned to its former status criminal drunkards would sober up, crime would abate, and business would improve. These intimations are, of course, the merest tosh.

Are Christians giving in to the continuous propaganda of the wet interests? Have they lost the strong conviction that promoted the great temperance movement, and enacted the prohibition legislation? Have they forgotten the terrible and sinister work of the open saloon?

The saloon men point to Canada as an example of what we might have if we return to liquor. The Canadian citizenry are sober and law-abiding. The condition of Canada is nothing like the condition from which we escaped.

We have won a great advantage, and we are invited, with silly logic, to throw it away. Let us not give up.

Kellogg to the World Court

The appointment of Frank B. Kellogg as judge of the World Court, is one of the most important items of the news. Famous, among other things, for his work on the Pact to Outlaw War, he is at the age of seventy-four one of the most important figures in international relations. His appointment should not merely be taken as satisfaction to American vanity or increase of our prestige. It is an indication of the growing interest and responsibility of America in international affairs.

The cause of peace is a part of the cause of the church and the cause of Christ. Any organization that promotes peace is of interest to us. Americans promoted the League of Nations, which has accomplished great good, but America rejected it. The rest of the world recognized the merits of the organization, and individual Americans have since contributed to it in service in spite of their country's indifference.

Men like Kellogg are a great influence for world good, and their participation in world affairs will bring the United States into better cooperation in world affairs.

The Influence of Woman

That male politicians are frequently ineffectual, occasionally elastic of conscience, and in a few instances actually corrupt, is not to be denied. But most of them have the discretion to be silent about their weaknesses.

It is unfortunate that the first woman candidate for the United States Senate should not possess that discretion. That she was willing to spend $319,000 to secure the nomination alone is an indication of her money power. That she is willing to talk about it so glibly is an indication of her brass. Smaller expenditures by men have been regarded as scandalous and seat-buying. Even the most toughened of politicians affect at least a show of remorse when they are found guilty of the expenditure of unethically large sums for campaign funds. But Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick is impenitent, as a wealthy woman who knows she is clever should be.

It is to be hoped that she will not be womanhood's first representative in the Senate. It is to be hoped that she will be defeated, as she deserves, no matter who or what her opponent may be.

The name of womanhood is not at stake in the conduct of Mrs. McCormick. But we hope that women may have a better and nobler champion.

World Temperance Sunday

Temperance Sunday is to be observed in church schools throughout the United States October 26, 1930. The need of teaching temperance, and abstinence from all forms of narcotic drugs is as great as it ever was, if not greater, since the commercial interests who promote their sale are better organized and use more persistent methods than ever before.

Our young people need to be saved, not alone from liquor, but as well from the floods of propaganda in its favor, as well as in favor of the other habit-forming drugs.

A statement from the International Journal of Religious Education for October, 1930, says:

"One of the most serious dangers to prohibition in the United States today is the fact that men and women seem prone to forget the terrible conditions that existed before prohibition went into effect."

The Calling and Ordination of Stewards

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC

By Albert Carmichael

In the "restoration of all things" it was needful that the Melchisedec priesthood should be first restored, for through it come the blessings of God to his children.

This priesthood holds the power to bless mankind; to set in order the church of Jesus Christ; to ordain all the officers of the church by the imposition of hands. This order of Melchisedec stands first in importance. Through it blessings come. Through it the church is made perfect. Through it "helps" are given to the body. It is God's chosen avenue of divine approach to man; through it the gap between humanity and Christ is bridged.

According to the Gifts and Callings of God

"All are endowed by God with certain gifts," and God calls all to occupy or use these gifts in the service of humanity.

"All are called according to the gifts of God unto them." To "labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all" (Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8), is the statement made, indicating God's purpose in this call.

Examples of This Calling and Ordination

Emma Smith

A few months after the church was organized and the priesthood was restored and functioning through his organization, the church, the Lord begins to instruct us how to proceed to eventually realize the ideals for which he built his church, that every member might "see eye to eye" with him; that every member might have the same mind as he had, understand as he understood and thus do as he does. He has restored to earth the priesthood. He desired to restore to earth, through this priesthood, his mind to man. He wishes mankind to "sanctify" all that he is and all that he has. Hear him!

"Hearken unto the voice of the Lord your God while I speak unto you, Emma Smith, my daughter, for verily I say unto you, all those who receive my gospel are sons and daughters in my kingdom." The Lord wishes all to know that while Emma Smith is his daughter, there are others who are just as acceptable to him—all who receive his gospel. He is no respecter of persons.

The Lord ends the revelation by saying, "Verily, verily, I say unto you that this is my voice unto all." Dear reader, this revelation is the voice of God unto you, especially if you have received his gospel and thus become his son or daughter.

"A revelation I give unto you concerning my will." How grateful we should be that we have God's will! How carefully we should follow it! The Lord tells Emma Smith that she is "an elect lady whom I have called." The voice of God to Emma Smith is the voice of God to all. "All are called." The Lord then proceeds to tell her what is her particular calling, in temporal work. First, a comfort unto her husband. Second, to be his scribe. Third, to expound the scripture. Fourth, to exhort the church. "For he shall lay his hands upon thee [here the authority of the Melchisedec priesthood is recognized], and thou shalt receive the Holy Ghost, and thy time shall be given to writing and learning much." Her further work is outlined in paragraph 2: "It shall be given thee also, to make a selection of sacred hymns. . . . Wherefore, lift up thy heart and rejoice and cleave unto the covenants [plural] which thou hast made." Here the Lord recognizes certain covenants made by Emma Smith and admonishes her to "rejoice and cleave unto" them.

The manner of the making Emma Smith a steward over her "gifts" and "callings" is very apparent. She was to be ordained under the hands of her husband. The Lord did not tell her that she might do so if she desired, but the language is "Thou shalt be ordained": a positive command. Significantly, then, the Lord finishes this very important revelation of his will by saying, "This is my voice unto all. Amen."

This being true, we may expect then to find God acting in harmony with his own declarations as we proceed to follow him in his further revelations to his church; always remembering that what he tells us to do or not to do is essential for our eternal salvation.

Bishop's Agents

(a) Sidney Gilbert.

In Doctrine and Covenants 53: 2, 3 the Lord instructs Sidney Gilbert to "Take upon you mine ordinances [plural] even that of an elder. . . . And also to be an agent unto this church. . . . Behold these are the first ordinances which ye shall receive, and the residue [remainder of the ordinances] shall be made known unto you in due time," "according to your labor in my vineyard."

Here the taking of the office of an elder is called an ordinance. Also the taking of the work of an agent for the bishop is called an ordinance. This makes the work of a bishop's agent a sacred task. It is classed with the work of an elder, as being an "ordinance" of the Lord. As such it should be a task of great responsibility and should be entered into with due solemnity and appropriate rites.

(b) Newel K. Whitney.

In Doctrine and Covenants 63:12 we find what this sacred rite is that should be had when a bishop's agent is called and appointed: "Verily, let him [Newel K. Whitney] be ordained as an agent unto the disciples . . . let him be ordained unto this power; . . . Behold, this is my will, obtaining monies even as I have directed."

Nothing could be plainer. God tells us that the getting or obtaining of money should be done even as he has directed, and he directed us to ordain the agent for his task. This is the will or mind of God. Surely it is a safe thing to do, to follow God's will.

A few months later came the call to make the same man a bishop. "My servant Newel K. Whitney is the man who shall be appointed and ordained unto this power. This is the will of the Lord, your God, your Redeemer, even so."

We are told in Doctrine and Covenants 70:3 that the bishop's agent is not exempt from this law of the calling and appointing and ordaining to his stewardship.

(c) Other agents.

That agents were to be thus ordained is emphasized by this historical fact as taken from volume 1, page 283, of Church History: "A council was called for the purpose of appointing a committee to purchase land in Kirtland upon which the saints might build a stake of Zion. . . . The council decided to purchase the farms and appointed Ezra Thayre and Joseph Coe to superintend the purchase, and they were ordained under the hands of Sidney Rigdon and set apart as general agents of the church for that purpose."

Thus we find that God is "no respecter of persons." A sacred rite is followed to make a man a steward over temporal affairs, as it is used in making him a steward over spiritual affairs.

Stewardship, a Sacred Responsibility

God desires every steward to make his vocation or stewardship a sacred responsibility.

And why should he not? Do you think you can become a coworker with God unless you shall "stand in holy places"? God wishes to work with you, and has commanded you to do certain things that will give you the right attitude of mind, without which he can not take you into partnership. "I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise." (Doctrine and Covenants 81:3.) Here the Lord solemnly binds himself to do his part as a coworker with us, provided we do our part. If our Lord is willing to bind himself to do his part, why should we not be willing and desirous to bind ourselves to do our part?

Saints, are you ready to take God as your partner? Are you ready to consecrate your every activity, believing with your whole hearts that in him do we live and move and have our being?

A Setting Apart to a Literary Task

In Doctrine and Covenants 55:1, 2 we find the Lord revealing his mind to us on the making of stewards and stewardships. We can well afford to note what he says. He tells us how he has provided for this work to be done.

The Lord instructs W. W. Phelps and says: "You shall be ordained to assist my servant Oliver Cowdery to do the work of the printing, and of selecting, and writing books for schools, in this church, that little children also may receive instruction before me as is pleasing unto me." The preparation of books of instruction for the youth of our church was to be done by those who were "ordained" for that work. Was it necessary that this should be done? If not, why did God command it? W. W. Phelps had obeyed the initiatory principles of the gospel. He had been baptized for the remission of his sins and had hands laid upon him for the reception of the Holy Spirit, and furthermore he had been ordained by the hands of Joseph Smith to be an elder unto the church. Yet after all this, when he was called and appointed to assist Oliver Cowdery to do the work of selecting, writing, and printing of a book, the Lord says, "You shall be ordained" for this work. Here again the Lord made it imperative—"you shall," not "you may." Why so strict a command if W. W. Phelps could have done the work just as well without this ordination?

The Board of Publication

We call the reader's particular attention to section 70, showing the way the Lord provided for the first group stewardship. Note the introductory statement, "Behold and hearken, O ye inhabitants of Zion [not of the world], and all ye people of my church, who are afar off, and hear the word of the Lord which I give unto my servant Joseph Smith, jr., and also to my servant Oliver Cowdery, and also unto my servant John Whitmer, and also unto my servant Sidney Rigdon, and also unto my servant William W. Phelps, by the way of commandment unto them, for I give unto them a commandment." That this is to be a very important revelation, one having to do with the welfare of all the Saints, is clearly shown by the Saints "afar off" as well as those who were near, being called to "hearken and hear." Now comes the commandment, but again prefixed with a warning to hear, "Wherefore hearken and hear, for thus saith the Lord unto them [these six men named], I have appointed them and ordained them to be stewards over the revelations and commandments which I have given unto them, and which I shall hereafter give unto them; and an account of this stewardship will I require of them in the day of judgment; wherefore I have appointed unto them, and this is their business in the church of God, to manage the concerns thereof, yea, the benefits thereof."

Here we have explicit directions; first, the manner in which the stewards are selected and set over a business. They were first called, then appointed and then ordained to be stewards over a certain business. The Lord tells them what this business is, the business of being stewards over the revelations and commandments which had been given or which would be given unto them. "This is their business in the church of God, to manage them [the revelations and commandments] and the concerns thereof [the machinery, etc., necessary in their management to print, bind, sew, etc.]; yea, and the benefits [the money received or made in this business] thereof."

Paragraph 2 contains more valuable instructions as to how this group stewardship should be managed to be acceptable to God.

"Wherefore a commandment I give unto them, that they [these six stewards who had been called, appointed, and ordained] shall not give these things [these printed revelations] unto the church [the members of the church must pay this group of stewards for the printed revelations], neither unto the world [people not members of the church must also pay for what they get]; nevertheless, in as much as they [these six consecrated stewards] receive more than is needful for their necessities, and their wants [in caring for the business properly], it [that for which they had no need; their surplus] shall [not may] be given into my storehouse [the Presiding Bishop's office], and the benefits [of this surplus] shall [not may] be consecrated unto the inhabitants of Zion, and unto their generations, inasmuch as they become heirs according to the laws of the kingdom."

We sincerely hope that every Saint will read this and note the plain directions given by the Lord as to the right way of handling a business venture. The Lord wishes to make the work of the publishing interests of our church holy, consecrated unto him. So he tells us just what he wills in this matter.

First, all engaged in the responsibility of managing it shall be called, appointed, and ordained as stewards. Second, they must give an account both in time and eternity; not only on the judgment day but to the church, thus to determine their surplus. Third, it was their business to manage (a) the concerns thereof (the necessary buildings, machinery, etc.), (b) also the benefit (the money received for sale of merchandise).

Then the Lord instructs these six consecrated stewards what they shall do with these benefits, or money received. They were not to give it to the church, nor to the world, for the simple reason that they would need what they received to carry on their business. But the Lord, remembering his great economic program in which the surplus or that amount not needed to carry on the business was to go to the church or group, added the statement that if they (these six stewards) did receive more than was needful, this amount not needed should go to the general church authorities, be paid into the church storehouse, the office of the general Bishop.

An Example unto All

Now notice the emphatic and clear declaration of God to all of us.

"Behold, this [the way these six consecrated stewards were commanded to carry on their business] is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man." Every man must be called. In fact, every man is called—"all are called according to the gifts of God unto them." (Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8.) Every man must be appointed (his specific work pointed out to him), and every man must be ordained (set apart by the imposition of the hands of those authorized so to do) to his specific work. None are exempt.

"Behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God; yea, neither the bishop who keepeth the Lord's storehouse [he should be called, appointed, and ordained and give an account of his stewardship], neither the agent [he should be called and appointed and ordained and give an account of his stewardship], neither he who [anyone who] is appointed [all are called and all must be appointed] in a stewardship over temporal things."

Now the Lord draws a parallel between those having what is known as a spiritual stewardship and those having what is known as a temporal stewardship.

"He who is appointed to administer spiritual things, the same is worthy of his hire [his hire is his needs and just wants] even as those who are appointed to a stewardship, to administer in temporal things [in both kinds of stewardship, spiritual and temporal, the needs and just wants measure the amount of their hire or wages]. Yea, even more abundantly, which abundance [surplus] is multiplied unto them [those having a spiritual stewardship] through the manifestations of the Spirit." Those occupying in the church in spiritual affairs are promised a greater abundance of the Spirit than those occupying in temporal affairs, because it is needed, but, "Nevertheless in your temporal affairs you shall be equal." (Men holding temporal stewardships must be equal. That is, they must have enough to carry on properly their respective business. One temporal steward may need more than another temporal steward. Equality is measured by their respective needs and not by all being on a dead level.)

This equality, each man having according to his needs, must be brought about by the stewards doing it ungrudgingly. If not done this way, if it is done grudgingly, "the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld."

Why All This?

Why all these definite and precise directions? The answer is found in paragraph four:

"Now this commandment I give unto my servants."

- (a) For their benefit while they remain.
- (b) For a manifestation of my blessings upon their heads.
- (c) For a reward for their diligence.
- (d) For their security (for the following named things):
  - (1) For food.
  - (2) For raiment.
  - (3) For an inheritance.
  - (4) For houses.
  - (5) For land.

"... in whatsoever circumstances I, the Lord, shall place them; and whithersoever I, the Lord, shall send them, . . . I, the Lord, am merciful, and will bless them and they [these stewards whom I have called and appointed and ordained] shall enter into the joy of these things."—Doctrine and Covenants 70: 4.

This, then, is the royal way, the only way promised by the Master that binds him to help us. Well has he said, "Behold, this is the way that I, the Lord, have decreed to provide for my saints, but it must needs be done in mine own way." (Doctrine and Covenants 101: 2.)

We call attention to the fact that W. W. Phelps, who had been called, appointed, and ordained to the Melchisedec priesthood was also called and appointed and ordained to work with Oliver Cowdery to prepare textbooks (Doctrine and Covenants 55: 1, 2), was again called, appointed, and ordained to be one of the members of this group constituting the Board of Publication.

John Johnson

In section 93 we have the will of the Lord as to the right way of continuing the group stewardship.

In paragraph 2 we are told: "It is wisdom and expedient in me that my servant Zombre [John Johnson] . . . should become a member of the order [Board of Publication], that he may assist in bringing forth my word unto the children of men; therefore ye shall ordain him unto this blessing."

Doctrine and Covenants 101: 10, 11 gives us further instructions and light on this group stewardship:

"But verily, I say unto you, I have appointed you to be a steward over mine house, even stewards indeed." The appointing of the steward was one of the things to be done to make him a steward indeed. He had been a steward in theory, but it required an "appointing" to make him a real steward. In paragraph 11 we find that when this group stewardship organized themselves preparatory to doing business, they appointed one among them to keep the treasury, "and he shall be ordained unto this blessing." We must believe that this ordination was necessary for the success of the business. Again we ask, If not, why did the Lord command it to be done?

Building the Temple

Here we have a piece of work to be done—a real business task. What was the will of God as to the men who should have this responsibility?

In Doctrine and Covenants 92: 3 the Lord says, "It is my will that you should build an house; . . . Let the house be built, not after the manner of the world, for I give not unto you that ye shall live after the manner of the world: therefore let it be built after the manner which I shall show unto three of you whom ye shall appoint and ordain unto this power." The Lord is telling us to make our life's work sacred. The world does not do this. The world can not do this, for they reject the means given of God through which our business tasks are made sacred. That means is the priesthood again restored.

Method of Procedure

"The bishop and his counselors, together with the other bishops of the church, and such other officers as the bishop may call together, with whom he may confer in council, are authorized to devise the methods of procedure; and they will be guided by the spirit of wisdom and revelation to do the work intrusted to their care."—Doctrine and Covenants 128: 3.

"The bishop should be directed and authorized to proceed as soon as it shall be found practicable by consultation with the general authorities of the church who are made the proper counselors in spiritual and temporal things to carry out the provisions of the law of organization which are by the law made the duty of the bishop.—Doctrine and Covenants 128: 9.

The present bishopric feel that this direction and authorization "to devise methods of procedure" authorize them to move forward in the accomplishment of the great task assigned.

In conformity with the directions given to consult "with the general authorities of the church who are made the proper counselors in spiritual and temporal things," the bishopric have complied. That which they are presenting and asking for a one hundred per cent compliance to, by the membership of the church, has been had in counsel with the "general authorities of the church, who are made the proper counselors in spiritual and temporal things to carry out the provisions of the law of organization which are by the law made the duty of the bishop."

We herewith have outlined what has been agreed upon, not only by these general spiritual authorities but also by the people themselves in General Conference assembled, as one of the necessary, initial, and preparatory things to be done that the "method of procedure" may harmonize with the law given us of the Lord.

Impressions of the Harvest Festival

By Leta B. Moriarty

"We've got something big here this year." The speaker, none other than President Frederick M. Smith, was snatching half an hour's time proudly showing an office caller through the Harvest Home exhibit in the lower hall of the Auditorium. "Every year the festival has grown, but this year it has assumed the proportions of a fair." One of the most interested visitors at the festival is President Smith, and whenever he can not be found in the vicinity of the office, the force hints that it is quite likely he is "looking over the exhibits."

"The crowds are bigger this year than ever before," declared C. C. Koehler, general manager, on the second day of the festival. "If the weather continues fine, we'll easily have fifty thousand people through here before Sunday night. The display we lost by two of our important central States failing to come in is made up by contributions of local groups. We have more floor space this year, not because the amount of produce is less but because the decorative arrangement of the booths is better." Since the early days of the Harvest Festival in Independence twelve years ago, Brother Koehler has been one of its "moving spirits."

"It's nice to spend your whole day here." This comes from a cheery boothkeeper, a member of one of the large congregations in Independence. "Of course I'm proud of our exhibit—there are fifteen hundred quarts of fruit in it, and look at that lighting!—and I'm glad to be here to tell the people about it when they ask me; but the main reason I arrange my work to be here nearly all the time is because there's not a better place in the world to meet one's friends. I like to tend the booth. . . . Oh, yes, I'm here evenings, too." Her smile proved the gladness of her heart in the performance of this service.

Yum! Yum! What is that delicious odor! Something frying. We are now in the Auditorium kitchen.

"To be sure we women are remembering the Harvest Festival, and this year we're thinking a lot about the expense involved—lights, gas, water." These are appropriate words for the wife of a Bishop, and Sister J. A. Becker, presiding over two pans of frying rabbit, waves a huge fork in the direction of the lunch counter wedged in between two booths. "We feed the visitors after they've tramped through the displays upstairs and down, and the money we make goes to the Auditorium. Our patrons have real appetites, and business is fine. It might interest you to know, too, that our lunch specialty this year is rabbit sandwiches. Have you

THE DO-IT-NOW CLUB HONORS TWO EMINENT MEMBERS

Walter S. Woodward, a young elder recently recruited for our missionary force, is making a splendid record. Among his achievements he has turned in $675 in subscriptions and sales for the Herald Office books and publications during the past few months.

Needless to say, he has been greatly helped by his wife, who was well known to the church as a worker and writer, Bertha Constance.

There is wisdom and judgment in Brother Woodward's plan. He labors in a community, and while he labors he makes sure that the church publications are in the hands of the people. Then when he has to move to the next community he knows that the publications are there to carry on the work that he has started.

tried one? The rabbits are donated." The rest of her story is drowned out by the sizzling of hot fat as she applies the fork to the turning of several well-browned pieces. They do look tempting—so tempting indeed that we decide to sample them, and almost immediately find ourselves perched on high stools at the counter devouring the rich "specialty." Long live the Auditorium fund!

Everywhere people cluster in front of booths feasting their eyes on the sights—some beautiful, some novel. Questions fly from stranger to stranger, who after all don't seem so strange, and all faces glow with enthusiasm. "Did you see that beehive in the Englewood exhibit?" "Can't you always depend on Walnut Park to give you something different?" "Have you seen Kansas City Stake? That skyline!" "Isn't that an excellent display for so small a branch as Gudgeon Park?" "Aren't you proud of the Stone Church—it's booth is so spacious, and they say it has between eighteen hundred and two thousand quarts of fruit!" "Did you smell Maine?"

It is no wonder they pause to stare. Of the Harvest Home booths themselves there are eighteen bordering the regions of "the pit," and these boast every color and trick of decoration. We agree with Brother Koehler that the booth decorations and arrangements this year are most unique and attractive. Hundreds of quarts of canned fruits and vegetables, bushels of raw products of field and garden, and many articles of handwork on display or donated to be sold for the Auditorium fund are "dressed up" for the occasion. Kansas City Stake has its 1932 skyline and "Heart of America" design; the Great Northwest Club presents in miniature a portion of Yellow Stone National Park; the Stone Church booth depicts the three big periods of church history—the burnt offering, the time of Christ, and the stewardship plan of the present; Hawaii has her volcano (which once each evening erupts) and tropical coloring; Maine her pine trees, lighthouse, and fish. Many others deserve mention, and all remind us of the hymn verse:

Come, ye thankful people, come,
 Raise the song of Harvest home!
 All is safely gathered in,
 Ere the winter storms begin;
 God our Maker doth provide;
 He our wants hath well supplied:
 To his house of worship, come,
 Raise the song of Harvest home!

By Thursday noon prizes had been awarded the booths. For the judging, the stalls are divided into two classes: Local groups (in Independence), and visiting groups (outside Independence). Blue ribbons, red ribbons, and white ribbons found place as follows: Local, first prize, Stone Church; second prize, Englewood; third place, Gudgeon Park; visiting groups, first prize, Kansas City Stake; second prize, a tie between the Great Northwest Club and the State of Maine; third prize, Hawaii.

But now that we have seen the booths, let us linger downstairs only long enough to note the space given other organizations of interest.

In the middle of the pit is the Harvest Home "centerpiece," a model of the Auditorium, constructed of hundreds of bars of Crystal White soap by the Ladies' Opportunity Class of Central Church, Kansas City. This is a real attraction.

There is also the Jackson County Farm Bureau exhibit containing all grain in the sheaves, from the winning exhibit at the Missouri State Fair. In the center is the silver trophy cup which Jackson County brought back from the fair this year for the second time.

On one counter pieces of needlework are displayed, on another are articles contributed to the Auditorium fund, among which are some beautiful tapestry pieces from the sisters at Elk Mills, Maryland. On another counter is the grain inspection exhibit showing cereal grains marketed in Kansas City.

There are also tables where baking products are set out. Here the judges have been leaving a trail of ribbons.

In one corner the scouts are represented, Troop 223, and there are belongings and insignia of the Little Giant, Lone Wolf, and Silver Fox Patrols.

Plenteousness and beauty everywhere! The Saints are happy over their Harvest Home. And as we ascend the ramps to the main floor, the confusion of glad voices dies away, the odor of fresh fruits and grains fades, but the color pictures linger in our mind's eye.

Upstairs in the lobby and the main auditorium is housed the first annual Industrial Exposition of Independence and surrounding territory, a place of sights and sounds to interest and attract. Here the merchants of Independence, Kansas City, and vicinity display their goods, sparing no pains to present them effectively. Every kind of article from furnaces to evening gowns, automobiles to toilet articles, candy to coal, are to be seen. The air is filled with music from radios and conversation of visitors.

Close inspection of the booths tells us that it has been "one big job" to fill up the immense space of the central room of the Auditorium as has been done. There are thirty booths, and each is a mute monument to the thought and work of its makers. For days, they say, this room has given the appearance of a beehive, as workers brought in lumber and worked out the designs of their stalls. In the lobby are displayed books, radios, fancywork, patterns, cedar ware, and other articles.

In two corridors on the east side of the building are the rabbits, pens and pens of them, white, black, gray, brown, and spotted. These, too, were visited by the judges, and on the second day of the exhibit flaunted an abundance of colored ribbons.

The Harvest Home Festival is a real event in the land of Missouri. More than ever it has created a flurry of interest among people of Independence, Kansas City, Far West, and Holden Stakes. Thousands nightly visited it and came away to exclaim and wonder.

The flower show on the fourth and fifth days of the festival drew many beauty seekers. Indeed so hearty was the response of the people to every feature of the festival that the event was extended one day, being open to the public all day Monday. Entertainment was afforded each night by local and Kansas City musical organizations. The peak of interest was reached Sunday, when the festival was host to thousands of visitors. In the evening more than four thousand people participated in a service in which the gifts of the Harvest Festival were presented to the church by Elder C. E. Wight, of Kansas City, and accepted by Bishop J. A. Becker. Monday night brought to a close a most successful harvest celebration of the church.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Junior Church Services

By Hattie K. Bell

General Theme: "GOD'S WORLD"

Theme for October 19: "God in Nature."

Quiet music: Medley of hymns played softly and with feeling.

Call to Worship (standing):

Leader: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork."—

Psalm 19: 1.

Response: "Holy, holy, holy," Zion's Praises, 131.

Scripture Reading (seated): Read Psalm 104: 1, 16-24. This may be used as a responsive reading, the leader reading the first verse and the children responding by the reading of the next verse, etc.

Offering (to be taken by two juniors): Music may be played softly during this part of the service. After the offering has been taken, have the baskets brought to the altar. The leader should offer a prayer asking God to accept this humble offering and help each one to feel that the giving of our offering is one way in which we can be coworkers with God and show our appreciation for God's many blessings.

Worship Talk, by leader: Show a picture of a beautiful fall scene, or the picture of "Saint Francis preaching to the birds," so as to suggest out-of-doors. Allow the children to enjoy the picture for a few moments. Talk of God's beauty as seen in the brilliant coloring of the flowers and leaves, of the clouds that sail the sky, etc. If the picture "Saint Francis preaching to the birds" is used, something like the following may be told to the children as they watch the picture:

In the sunny land of Italy there lived a goodly man who spent much of his time in God's great out-of-doors. He grew very friendly with the wind and the rain, the sun and the stars, the birds and the flowers. He talked to them as I speak to you, and they understood him and seemed to speak to him in return. One time while he was talking to the birds, the famous painter, Giotto, saw him. Giotto thought the picture so beautiful that he painted the scene so that you and I could enjoy it, too. This is one of the sermons Saint Francis preached to his little feathered friends:

"Ye birds, my dear little sisters, much are ye beholden to God, your Creator, and always and in every place ye should sing his praises; for he has given you the freedom to fly whither you will. He has given you a double and triple vesture and hath preserved the seed of you in the ark of Noah. You must be grateful to him for the element of the air which he assigned to you. You do not sow, neither do you reap, but God feeds you and gives you rivers and fountains whence you can drink; he gives you valleys and hills for your refuge; tall trees wherein to build your nests, and though you know not how to spin or sew, God clothes you and your young.

"How greatly, therefore, does your Creator love you, since he is so bountiful toward you: beware then, my little sisters, of ingratitude and strive always to praise God."—Quoted in Francis of Assisi and His World, M. Michael-Durach, Munich.

Saint Francis preached to himself as he preached to his bird friends. He followed the advice he gave to them. He was grateful in his heart to God for the simple comforts of life, and he sang and preached to the folk he met, of the wonderful kindness of the heavenly Father.

Prayer by leader:

Thank God for the beautiful world and ask him to open our ears and eyes to all the lovely gifts that surround us. Ask him to help us to show our thanks and pleasure for all that we receive from his hand.

Hymn: "Giving thanks," Zion's Praises, 53.

Sermonet: The speaker should discuss the theme of the day, thus helping the children to realize how much happiness we enjoy because of the beauty of the earth. Help them to appreciate that God, the heavenly Father, created all things to give his children joy. Help them to sense the interdependence of man upon nature and nature upon man. If we would have beautiful roses, then we must be willing to fertilize the soil and tend the growing plants. If we sow good seed and till the soil, then nature yields us a bountiful harvest in return. Many other such instances may be given. If we would get the greatest enjoyment out of God's beautiful world, then we must share in his creation.

Hymn (standing): "Praise ye the Lord," Zion's Praises, 87.

Story: "Pippa passes," in For the Children's Hour, by Bailey and Lewis.

Hymn: "Look for the beautiful," Zion's Praises, 147.

Benediction by leader:

Let the children suggest what they would like to say to the heavenly Father in closing. Offer the prayer, using the thoughts expressed by the children.

Theme for October 26: "God's Children."

Quiet music: Medley of hymns played softly and with feeling.

Call to Worship (standing):

Leader: "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork."—
Psalm 19: 1.

Response: "Holy, holy, holy," Zion's Praises, 131.

Scripture Reading (seated): Responsive reading, Psalm 19: 7-14.

Offering. (See suggestion for last Sunday.)

Worship Talk by leader: Show Harold Copping's picture, "The Hope of the World." In connection with this picture, tell the story, "How the artist forgot four colors." This may be found in Missionary Stories for Little Folks, First Series, by Margaret T. Applegarth.

Prayer by leader:

Thank God for his love and care for all people of every nation.

Hymn: "Faith of our fathers."

Introduce this hymn by telling the story connected with it. In A Junior Hymnal, by Sturgis and Martin, on pages 16 and 17, this story can be found. Teach the first verse of the hymn.

Sermonet: Today's theme, "God's children," should be the keynote of this talk. Help the children to sense their responsibilities as Christian folk.

Help them to appreciate the fact that in their homes and at their church they have the privilege of learning about God and his plans, and that there are many who do not have this opportunity. Quicken within them the missionary spirit, a realization of their responsibility toward others. As Christians, as Latter Day Saints, it is their privilege, their opportunity, their obligation to help others to be happy and to become acquainted with the gospel as we understand it. Emphasize the fact that true happiness is found in service for others. Give two or three concrete instances, from the life of Christ, from your own life, from the life of some public person.

Hymn: "Tell me the old, old story," Zion's Praises, 109.

Story: "Marjory's gift" or "Her roadway," in Special Days in the Church School, by Margaret Eggleston.

Hymn: "Faith of our fathers."

Knowing the story of this hymn, the children will enjoy singing it again.

Benediction (by leader or child).

Furnishing and Equipping the Kindergarten Room of the Church School

By Myrtle A. Weber

Whether your budget will allow an extensive buying of materials or limit you to the very minimum, you can select that material which will aid in the children's development and not merely amuse them. Any equipment is valuable only as it serves as a means to a desired end. When selecting materials, evaluate them in terms of their contribution to the child's religious development. Wise selection and use of materials may add greatly to the value of the church school sessions, while unwise choice and use may prove a serious handicap. Every item of equipment should have a definite and practical use.

All equipment should be of good quality. Do not sacrifice quality. You can not afford to be economical at the expense of the children. It is not economy to select something considering only the price. In fairness to the children you must choose that equipment which will be best for their development.

Suppose but half a dozen little children comprise your kindergarten department and only a corner of the church auditorium or a space on the platform is allotted your department, you still have need of equipment. Let us stop for a moment and consider the minimum materials essential to most effectively carry on our teaching.

Chairs. Little kindergarten children can not be expected to be comfortable sitting on chairs designed for adults any more than we adults would be sitting in a chair made for a giant. Of course the children will be wiggly and perhaps become disciplinary problems if compelled to sit in chairs or on benches that do not fit. You can appreciate this fact; therefore, wisely forestall trouble by providing chairs suitable for kindergarten children. Chairs for this age child should be about twelve inches in height, so that the child can sit on the chair and have both feet resting flat on the floor. It may be wise to have a few ten-inch chairs to accommodate the children who are a little below average height for their years.

Tables. By all means a table should be supplied for each class group. These need not be elaborate affairs. Surely there is a carpenter in your branch who would be willing to make the tables for you. The height of your tables should be about 20 or 22 inches, rectangular in shape, size approximately 30 by 45 inches.

Cabinet. A small cabinet could be made from a large packing box, painted, and kept in your little corner of the church building. A cabinet is a good investment. It serves as a storage for pictures, handwork materials, books, etc. To have a place to keep and preserve these materials will prove a money saver and an economizer.

Songbooks. In this department songbooks are not needed for the children. One or two good children's songbooks should be available for the teachers. Songbooks are an expensive proposition. Why not secure a music copy book in which you can copy songs from various sources? Thus, you will find that you soon have a valuable collection of splendid children's songs.

Screens. Again employ your carpenter friend. If you have more than one class group, have enough screens to divide your groups so that each class may have an individual classroom. If you have but one class, a screen will serve to make your corner more private. If you have your own room, a screen may often be used to hide an unsightly entrance or spot in your room. The screens may be hinged so that they can be folded and put away after using. A three-panel screen lends itself to a variety of uses and arrangement. A blackboard may be put on the center panel and a display board on either side. Composition or beaver board with light wooden frames is suitable material for construction. If you can not afford a piece of blackboard slate for the middle panel, use the composition board and paint it with blackboard paint. A little varnish applied on the frames of your screens will greatly improve their appearance.

Hooks for Hats and Coats. Have hooks placed on the wall near your class. These should be placed low enough so that the children can reach them and hang up their own apparel.

Picture Books. These need not be expensive. Watch the magazine advertisements and illustrations. Collect pictures from time to time from various sources and mount them. Each two dozen pages or so could be bound together into a book. You will find these very valuable and to answer more than one purpose.

Handwork Materials. Papers, crayolas, scissors, and paste are quite essential for profitable work. Free-hand drawing is the most satisfactory type of handwork, because it provides for self-expression in the fullest sense. Handwork materials should not be used just to keep the children occupied. Handwork of any type has no place in the church school unless it illustrates, interprets, or expresses a fact, a truth, an ideal that is vital in arriving at the objective for that particular Sunday. Keep these facts in mind when selecting and purchasing handwork materials.

Growing Plants or Cut Flowers. These are especially desirable in all children's departments. Avoid using artificial flowers; better to have none at all. Artificial flowers are gaudy and lifeless. Real flowers, as the heavenly Father's gifts, afford fine teaching opportunities.

Pictures. Pictures are one teaching device that the teacher of kindergarten children can not afford to be without. If you have only a corner, a framed picture could be hung beside your class. On the display boards that are on either side of your three-panel screen could be hung the temporary pictures, those dealing with the theme of the day's lesson. A few good, recommended selections for permanent pictures for this age group are: "Christ blessing little children," by Plockhorst; "Madonna," by Ferruzzi; "Feeding the birds," by Millet; "Song of the bluebird," by Kenyon; "The spring song," by Glucklich. For suggestions for temporary pictures, see the Kindergarten Quarterly. Caution: All pictures should be hung on the level of the child's eyes when standing.

Should you be fortunate enough to have a room of your own, additional equipment could be added to this list and used to good advantage; such as a piano, victrola, and records, superintendent's and secretary's desk, juvenile symphony instruments, wastepaper basket, flags—American and Christian, play materials, and a library for teachers, parents, and children.

Intermediate Worship Program for November

and W. Earl Page

During the five Sundays of November it is planned that the intermediate boys and girls of the Stone Church congregation will follow the course of "Adventuring with Christ in gratitude." Their worship services are conducted each Sunday morning from 10.45 to 11.45.

Music composes an important part of any worship service, and congregational singing is the most popular and appealing kind of music. All ages of people like to sing, but the boy and the girl of the teen age are particularly responsive to community-singing projects. And since this is a day of "theme" songs, one of the best harvest hymns has been selected for our intermediates to sing, "Come, ye thankful people, come." To form a background for this hymn of genuine thanksgiving, and create interest in it, it will be well to give a brief sketch of the life of the hymn's author. Dean Henry Alford is responsible for this song. He was born in London in 1810. Following in the steps of his father, he became a clergyman and, after his schooling in college and university, was a preacher in London. He was made dean of Canterbury in 1857, holding the position until his death fourteen years later. He was a student of Greek, and wrote many hymns the most popular of which is "Come, ye thankful people, come." The first verse of the song, as we sing it, is almost identical with the original verse of Dean Alford, but the other two verses have undergone considerable alteration.

November 2, Sacrament Sunday, "Gratitude for Christ's example."

Song service led by the chorister. Hymns: "Come, ye thankful people, come." (This hymn should be introduced, as suggested above, by a brief sketch of its author's life. The singers should be encouraged to memorize the verses during the month); "Holy, holy, holy"; and "Praise ye the Lord." Fifteen minutes.

Poem: "Give," read by the leader.

See the rivers flowing
Forward to the sea,
Bearing all their treasures
Bountiful and free;
Yet to help their giving
Hidden springs arise;
Or if need be, showers
Feed them from the skies.

Watch the princely flowers
Their rich fragrance spread,
Load the air with perfumes
From their beauty spread;

Yet their lavish spending
Leaves them not in dearth,
Their fresh life replenished
By their Mother Earth.

Give thy heart's best treasures,
From fair Nature learn;
Give thy life, and ask not,
Wait not a return.
And the more thou spendest
From thy little store,
With a double bounty
God will give thee more.

Number by stringed trio.

Thanksgiving talks: "The gospel of praise," given by four intermediates:

1. "It is a good thing to sing praises unto our God," said the Psalmist; and the psychologist says it is a good thing to sing praises unto men, "to perceive the good in them and realize it." One happy woman educated her spirit of praise with the homely lines: "In the morning when you first awaken and before you turn yourself in bed, first praise, then count the blessings on your head. Forgive, forget, call down a blessing upon all; and if you can't do that, just stay in bed and don't get up at all!" "Oh," says some one, "but I can't forgive, for when I try to do that, the memory of many wrongs comes up, and I can not forget!" Give, for the memory of the wrong, a thought of the good which has come to you through this experience. So let your honorable purpose strengthen your weak efforts every day until you awaken some bright morning with a new song in your heart.

What is the common sense view of praise? How do you feel when you want to praise everything? Joyful, free, open-minded. Watch the effect of praises on a child. Even dogs and horses respond to words of praise and rebel at blame or censure. Praise reacts in better service.

(Written by Mrs. A. A. Pearson.)

2. A spirit of praise characterizes the magnanimous soul. Anyone can pick flaws. The one who has a flaw in his mind is sure to do so. Anyone can praise. The one who practices it for a time will enjoy the grace above anything that he has hitherto known. Any heart that has been touched by the Christ will have the Spirit of Christ—that spirit of approbation that encourages by liberating the pent-up gifts of the soul.

(Written by Imelda Octavia Shanklin.)

3. To blundering Peter, now zealous, now skulking in the disloyalty of fear, Jesus said, "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jonah!" Because the Master saw faithfulness beneath surface fickleness he was able to establish his church upon the confession of Peter. . . . Large minds find what can be praised everywhere and in every one. Our ability to see God is exactly measured by the number of things we commend. The praise of good is a channel through which God flows from our hearts to the world.

(I. C. S. in Unity School of Christian Unity.)

4. When Rudyard Kipling published his poem, "The English Flag," Tennyson sent him a letter of hearty praise. To this communication Kipling made a reply with which the poet laureate was much pleased: "When the private in the ranks is praised by the general, he can not presume to thank him, but he fights the better the next day." . . . Praise should make us sorry we have not done better and determined to do better. Praise has a most useful part to play in Christian life.

(The Christian Herald.)

Hymn: "Awake, my soul, in joyful lays," Saints' Hymnal, 11.

Leader: Let us bow our heads in silent meditation: Are we thoughtful of others? Are we generous with our praise?

Silent Prayer: (soft music).

Questionnaire for the Local Church

NUMBER 4.—HOW DOES YOUR BRANCH STAND IN THE COMMUNITY?

By F. Henry Edwards

Is your church "just a meeting place"? This is not enough. The church is your spiritual home. To make that home attractive to both the family and guests is a matter of equipment, arrangement, and atmosphere; and the spiritual culture of the church family is enhanced in attending to these necessities.

How is your branch regarded in the community where it is located? Do your neighbors count on you to support worthy local enterprises? Is your church regarded as a local community asset? Are your branch members awake to their community responsibilities? Do you know the attitude of the individual members of the community toward the church? What are you doing to improve and utilize these attitudes?

Is the doctrine of the church being attractively presented in your branch? Do you have enough sermons and class lessons on the church and its purpose? Do your branch members receive stimulation to think through and to feel deeply the great affirmations of the church: the nature of God, the saviorhood of Jesus, immortality, Zion, etc.? Is your pulpit concerned in eternal verities or in petty trivialities? Are the Saints in your branch aided in interpreting their beliefs in constructive community life, in sacrificial cooperation, in expansive interests and understanding?

Is your branch too content? Does the branch have pride in its achievements? Is the branch in danger of spiritual complacency leading to spiritual inertia? Does the pride of the branch point to further achievements, even improving on the past? Are you making specific and intelligent effort to improve both the methods and the results of other years? Are you competing against other branches in a friendly endeavor to excel in good works?

Fifty-two Pleasant Evenings for the Home

By Bertha Constance Woodward

Parents, as home teachers of the church, have the responsibility of planning a constructive home program of religious education. Public-school teachers are careful to plan a program of work which will assist children to learn the school subjects, but parents often fail to recognize that their responsibility with the child is greater than that of the public-school teacher, and as a result no home programs are built.

The following suggestions for fifty-two pleasant evenings in the home will be helpful to parents in the building of home programs for the coming year. It is well if the home programs begin in October, along with the beginning of the church school year.

Most of the suggestions may be used many times. For example, music would be enjoyed for a short time on nearly every evening. Several of the suggestions might even be used on the same evening.

A well-planned worship period should follow each evening's program.

1. Let children serve the evening meal. Emphasize table manners.

2. Father's story-telling evening.

3. Game evening for the family. Checkers, etc. The Game Book contains many family games.

4. "Family sing" of familiar songs.

5. "Surprise evening." Let one member of the family serve a surprise refreshment, or furnish some other surprise.

6. Family newspaper evening. Each member of the family should contribute some phase of the paper but keep their contribution a secret until the night when the paper is to be read.

7. Measuring and weighing evening. This is the opportunity to make the physical inventories for the year.

8. Family program evening. Recite poems, give readings, sing songs, etc.

9. Stunt evening. Parents may make this evening very interesting if they are always on the look out for valuable stunts. A large number are suggested in The Game Book.

10. Family council. This is the opportunity for the family to check improvements made during the past year, and set goals for further improvements.

11. Mother's story-telling evening.

12. Family prayer meeting evening. Each member of the family should pray, sing, or bear testimony. The occasion should not be made formal. Such family services make participation in public prayer services easier for the children.

13. Shadow picture evening. Make reflections on a sheet, or make finger shadows on the wall.

14. Learn new songs. If children are old enough, let them learn to sing the parts.

15. Puzzle evening. Bring out all puzzles which the family may have collected.

16. Missionary evening. Plan and begin carrying out a program which will help some one to know the teachings of our church.

17. Dramatizations. The entire family may join in dramatizing stories, or the children may entertain their parents.

18. Father's reminiscence evening.

19. Family go for an overnight picnic and sleep under the stars.

20. Candy-making evening.

21. Recall interesting incidents for each member of the family and write them in the family diary.

22. Picture appreciation evening. (Master-pieces.)

23. Serve the evening meal in the shade of the backyard or a park, or take the meal with you and make a surprise visit at the home of a relative or friend where you know you would be welcome.

24. Have an evening for the telling of good, clean jokes which you wouldn't be ashamed for the children to pass on.

25. Tell our church history story, that the children may have a great appreciation of their church. If the children are old enough, have them help tell the story, after reading it from the Young People's Church Histories.

26. Trick evening. A time to play surprise tricks on various members of the family.
27. Father and children plan a surprise for mother on the evening of Mother's Day.
28. Tell stories of books read.
29. Have birthday evenings to celebrate the birth-days of each member of the family.
30. Appropriately decorate for, and celebrate all, special days. The children enjoy helping to decorate and make plans, and the experience is valuable.
31. Read the New Testament story of the life of Christ on Easter evening.
32. Mother and children plan a surprise for father on Father's Day.
33. Family story-writing or story-telling contest.
34. Visit some lonely or needy family. Make something to take as a gift.
35. Read a story the family will enjoy.
36. Music appreciation evening.
37. Give a party for the neighborhood, or for church friends.
38. Current events evening.
39. An evening on which parents sing "old-time" songs.
40. Children's story-telling evening.
41. Construction evening. Make things with tools.
42. Go for an evening walk.
43. If the children are old enough, have an impromptu family debate.
44. Pop corn one evening. Perhaps pop-corn balls may be made.
45. Fill a Thanksgiving basket.
46. Mother's reminiscence evening.
47. Crack nuts.
48. Riddle evening.
49. Evening for the checking up of the financial records of the year. Children should keep their record in the Junior Stewardship Record Book.
50. Plan the spring flower garden and arrangement of the lawns.
51. Make Christmas toys.
52. Make New Year resolutions, and plans for the keeping of them.

The Happier Life

Forget the ache your own heart holds
 By easing others' pain;
 Forget your hungering for wealth
 By seeking others' gain;
 And make your life much briefer seem
 By brightening up the years—
 For tears dry quicker in the eyes
 That look for others' tears.

While more baptisms were reported during September than during August, nevertheless the church is still considerably behind what it ought to be at this time of the year. However, as the result of the special emphasis which is being placed upon missionary work during this month, culminating in Decision Day on October 26, there should be an increased number of baptisms during October and November.

The branches and district nonresident groups which reported 4 or more baptisms are the following:

Onaway, Michigan .....	14
Tunnel Hill, Illinois .....	13
Buchanan, Michigan .....	11

In addition to the above, 15 branches and 2 nonresident groups reported three baptisms each; 25 branches and 3 nonresident groups reported two baptisms each, and 39 branches and 8 nonresident groups reported one baptism each. This makes a grand total of 104 branches and 18 nonresident groups which reported baptisms during the month.

The stakes lined up as follows:

Kansas City Stake.....	21
Holden Stake .....	15
City of Independence .....	4

Far West Stake.....	3

Total .....47

The following summary shows how the total of 390 baptisms was distributed:

	Baptisms
In the Stakes .....	47
In the U. S. and Canada Outside the Stakes .....	342
Norwegian Mission .....	1
Total .....	390

The outstanding district during September was the Eastern Michigan District, with a total of 21 baptisms. These baptisms were credited to six different branches in the district: Owendale with 10 baptisms, Cash with 4 baptisms, Shabbona with 3 baptisms, Huron Center with 2, and Port Huron and Minden City each with 1 baptism. Of those performing the baptisms we find that W. H. Sheffer had the most to his credit with 14; C. E. Harpe baptized 3; William Davis 1; William Grice, 1; Alma Ledsworth 1, and Tennyson Summers 1.

The Northern Michigan District ranked second, with 20 baptisms. Fourteen of these were performed at Onaway on August 31 by J. J. Ledsworth. The other 6 were performed at the Boyne City reunion at the Park of the Pines by Elder Allen Schreur on August 17 and 24. Three of the baptisms were accredited to Gaylord, 2 to Boyne City, and 1 to the Vanderbilt Branch. The Northern Michigan District is also to be congratulated because it has achieved a total of 104 per cent of its quota, being the first district in the United States to go over the top.

The Southwestern Iowa District again receives honorable mention with 19 baptisms for September. Eleven of these were credited with Council Bluffs, 4 to Underwood, 2 to Glenwood, and 2 to the Hazel Dell Branch. E. Y. Hunker performed 8 of the baptisms, Amos Graybill 7, and L. G. Holloway 4.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Where Man Digs to Read His Ancient Story

An American archæologist digging in a ruin beside a national highway in a Western State was so beset by inquisitive tourists that he sarcastically remarked, "All America seems obsessed by a gopher complex." Certainly everyone seems to feel the urge to dig. But a real archæologist is one who goes about the business in a scientific manner, who sets himself the problem of finding out what manner of life once flourished at the spot chosen for digging and then of proceeding so as to read in the earth and the objects uncovered the story of the past.

Many such scientific archæologists are now either hard at work or setting out for new diggings. The peak of the exodus comes early in summer, not so much because this is the season when the climate is the most favorable—for often it is not—but because many of the investigators are college professors or curators in museums, turning to the out-of-doors not merely to take a vacation but to renew their intellectual youth in the study of new things. It is also the best time for the student, the archæologist of the future, to get his professional training. Some kind of internship he must have, if he is to do his part.

It is the custom to say that on such an occasion one leads an "expedition." This is a high-sounding term, and to the uninitiated calls up visions of a great party, moving with pack trains, etc., and such is sometimes the case. But usually the archæologist sets out alone to be joined at the chosen site by one and rarely more than two scientific assistants. Once he is on the ground, local labor and assistance will be recruited as may be required. Some of the "expeditions" now operating in the ancient burial sites of Asia Minor employ more than two hundred laborers, but usually the number is small. Speed and mass production are of no avail in the work of the archæologist; even an ordinary shovel may be too much, for his best results come as he kneels in his trench, working with a penknife and a small paint brush. Some of his important finds are often so frail and so obscure that with a less experienced eye and cruder tools they would pass into the dump unnoticed and be lost for ever. Imagine how a surgeon would feel seeing some one about to perform an amputation with a cross-cut saw! That is just the state an archæologist is in when he sees a carefree would-be archæologist at work.

First let us see where these seekers for buried treasure and facts go. To what parts of the earth's surface do they turn? In our day, man seems to have overrun most of the earth, so any place with a reasonable climate might be worth digging into. But though there are some fourteen regions in which archæological work is or will soon be under way, these are by no means scattered over the world at random. About two thirds of them are grouped around the Mediterranean Sea; the other third around Middle America. This can at least mean one thing—that the centers of interest for archæologists lie in two areas. It does not mean that the rest of the world has no archæology. In every State in our country some work is carried on, and also in every country of the civilized world. But such investigations are incidental and often the work of local enthusiasts rather than of specialists. Almost without exception the outstanding archæologists of the world are to be found in the localities mentioned. The dominant interest seems to be in Egypt, Asia Minor, Greece, and Italy.

If one asks the why of this, the answer is not far to seek. The origins of Western civilization lie in Egypt, Palestine, Babylonia, Assyria, Greece, and Italy. These were the successive cradlelands of our cherished ideals. It is because the background to present-day life lies buried in these lands that archæologists flock there. Our religion has more to do with it than is usually supposed. In all Christian countries such names as Egyptians, Babylonians, Greeks, and Romans are familiar to all, and it is not so long ago that the only ancient history acquired by half our population came from the Bible.

Perhaps this is why there still lingers in our minds the notion that the height of luxury, glory, and riches was reached in the time of Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. How unreal and distorted such notions are the archæologist well knows, but we still like to believe them. This is why we were thrilled when the press of the land told us of the work of archæologists in the ruins of ancient Ur, where the tomb of a queen was found intact. When buried, the body of this queen—Shub-Ab, she is named—was wrapped in a richly ornamented cloak, while an elaborate headdress of gold and wonderful jewelry embellished all. In addition, a harp, suits of armor, chariots, and other unusual objects were recovered. Probably no one would wear this jewelry now because it is inferior in fabrication and design to our own, but we picture it as far superior and above all as objective proof that the myths of romance and riches concerning ancient cities are realities. Most of us feel a deep satisfaction in that the foundations of Solomon's Temple have been uncovered and that their appearance agrees with biblical description. The recent finding of Sodom and Gomorrah and the evidence that it was destroyed in the Bronze Age and never rebuilt is a case in point. And if the tomb of Abraham should be found, as some archæologists predict, that event will move the whole Christian world.

On the other hand, the archæologist is a serious-minded person; he discounts myths, for his object is to find what is the truth respecting our ancestors and what have been the steps by which man has attained civilization. We are still mystified as to how the ancients achieved what they did.

This season a number of American institutions will return to their diggings. At Ur, the archæologist in charge is Doctor C. L. Woolley, supported jointly by the British Museum and the University of Pennsylvania. The University of Pennsylvania, by the way, has long been interested in archæology and has worked almost continuously in the Near East for fifty years. Further, it may be interesting to note that an American and a British institution are cooperating at Ur, but this is not altogether unique because the Field Museum of Chicago maintains a similar arrangement with the University of Oxford in excavations at Kish, and Yale University with the British School of Archæology in Palestine. The Metropolitan Museum of Art continues its work in Egypt.

Other American institutions known to be supporting expeditions during the current year are the Universities of Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Chicago, and Johns Hopkins; Haverford College, Xenia Theological Seminary, and a number of similar institutions are also in the field. Last season from America and Europe some forty-five expeditions were out, distributed as follows: Egypt, 3; Mesopotamia, 4; Persia, 1; Palestine, 15; Greece, 10; Italy, 9; Turkey, 3.

It is thus clear that archæology in countries bordering the Mediterranean is in the nature of a going concern, supporting a personnel of large size, involving large expeditions and the employment of many hundred laborers. The classics and ancient history are still popular subjects among university students, most of whom must be content with what they read from books and see in our growing museum collections. But for the few who specialize in such subjects, these expeditions to dig up buried temples and cities give ample opportunity to acquire first-hand knowledge and experience.

Yet the record for Europe would not be complete without taking note of the search for the man of the Stone Age. In France the haunts of the cave man are still sought out. From Yale, the well-known authority, George Grant MacCurdy, will lead a party of students for practical work in excavating among certain French sites. From the University of Pennsylvania a party headed by Vladimir J. Fewkes will search for Neolithic man in the valley of the Danube. In England, Germany, Russia, Switzerland, Spain, Italy, and the Scandinavian countries local archæologists will carefully dig for the remains and works of early man. It is indeed a small well-organized army that goes forth every season to wrest from the bosom of Mother Earth the secrets of the past. Each year marks a gain, some new fact, some new insight into the evolution of human culture. We begin to see how and where art, industry, and religion began and feel as did that great philosopher, William James, when learning what the archæologist had to say of the cave man: "Bone of our bone, flesh of our flesh were those brutish ancestors of ours."

So far, we have said nothing of India. There are not wanting signs that that country is rich in archæological materials and due to reveal many surprising and revolutionary facts, but until recent years little attention was given to the subject. Now, however, under British auspices and through native scholarship, remains are brought to light which definitely connect ancient India with Babylon.

Interest is also growing in the archæology of China. Our readers are familiar with the triumphs of the Asiatic expedition sent out by the American Museum of Natural History under the leadership of Roy Chapman Andrews, and the traces of early man they have brought to light. Added to this is a growing interest upon the part of the younger generation in China in the prehistory of their own civilization, resulting in the excavation of several important sites. Unfortunately, unsettled political conditions and strong anti-foreign sentiment are discouraging American and European support to archæological work in China, and so long as these conditions continue little progress is to be expected.

National pride demands that we take note of the New World. No such glamour emanates from our antiquities as from biblical and classical lands. The classical scholar who feels that the only true culture came from the Old World puts little value upon the pagan civilizations of Middle America; for him they have nothing to contribute and are therefore no source of inspiration. Nevertheless, our public is interested, and it is still a fair question as to how long the ancient civilizations of America can be ignored, as a part of the world's history. The triumphs of archæologists in the Old World have not been in that they discovered wonderful museum specimens, but in that they could extend history; that even when writing was unknown they could give reliable relative dates to their finds and thus reconstruct history.

The knowledge that in Europe the Stone Age preceded that of Bronze is just as much a fact of history as that Henry Hudson saw Manhattan in 1609. The only difference is that we have a calendar date for the one and a relative date for the other, for we know the time relations between these two events. However this may be, it remains that those who choose American archæology are neither urged by Christian motives nor by the need for a better understanding of their own civilization. They are first of all merely curious about what went on here before the white man came upon the scene. Our forefathers were puzzled because what they observed was not consistent with the Bible, in which no mention is made of these ancient New World cities or of the people who must have built them. They seemed to have no place in Old World history, but that they did have such a place some were confident and so sought all that could be learned about them.

Those less intellectually alert dismissed the subject by regarding the mounds in the Mississippi Valley and the temples of Mexico as the work of the Devil, an effort on his part to undermine and belittle faith in God. It was upon this assumption that many records of Central American civilization were destroyed by Spanish rulers. But in the Colonies and later in the United States, the problem was regarded as one for history and science, the investigation of which has been championed by many leaders of thought from Jefferson down. One of the conspicuous aspects of this inquiring attitude has been the interest shown by the States and the National Government and their willingness to support this impractical and in some ways non-Christian research. Many years ago, there was established in Washington a governmental bureau for such study which has continued to the present, the staff of which devotes its whole time to research and whose publications are known throughout the world. Then the great museums of America—the National Museum in Washington, the American Museum of Natural History, and the Museum of the American Indian, Heye Foundation, in New York; the Peabody Museum of Harvard, the University of Pennsylvania Museum, the Field Museum of Chicago, etc.—have for many years maintained strong departments in the archæology of the New World.

This year many expeditions will be out. Taking them up in order, the State museums of Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Kentucky, etc., are actively engaged with the mound builder problem. Ohio still occupies the center of the stage. For twenty or more years, under the leadership of the late W. C. Mills, expeditions have been undertaken each summer, the results of which have been housed in the State museum at Columbus. It is now known that the metropolis of the great mound-building period—the period known to archæologists as the Hopewell Culture—was near what is now Chillicothe, Ohio. This period was not only characterized by gigantic and complex earthworks but by an unusual development in the carving of small stone images and the working of copper plates.

However, by far the greatest number of American archæologists will gather in the Western States of New Mexico and Arizona, or, as they call it, the Southwest. This is the land of the cliff dwellers. Every important museum and research institution in the United States supporting archæology will have a representative in this area this season. The investigators are so numerous and so specialized that each year they hold a conference at Santa Fe, at which time the results for the season are discussed and plans formed for the future. Last summer some sixty specialists were in attendance, a gathering which has come to be recognized as one of the most important events in American archæology. It is but fair to add that its inception and success are due to the personality and ability of A. V. Kidder of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, the leading authority on the archæology of the region. It was also due to the progress thus made that John D. Rockefeller, jr., gave funds for the establishment of an archæological laboratory at Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Mexico and the Maya area, lands of ruined and mysterious temples, will receive due attention, though winter is the most favorable time. First of all, the Mexican Government maintains a staff of archæologists and spends a relatively large sum of money in the work. Many of the most important ruins in its territory are partially restored and protected by watchmen, while in Mexican museums may be seen collections from the same. The leading American institution in this field is the Carnegie Institution of Washington, whose work was recently brought to notice by explorations from the air by Colonel Lindbergh. There are still many unsolved problems in this part of the New World and many important discoveries awaiting the archæologist. Each season reveals new wonders of these lost civilizations, whose artistic accomplishment and practical achievement astonish us.

Finally, there is the fascinating story of the Inca in Peru, not to mention other extinct South American civilizations. For many years the governments of Peru and Ecuador have supported archæological research within their own boundaries. The bulk of their present populations is directly descended from the builders of these ruins and still possesses some of the cultural heritage associated therewith.

Among the local investigators who will be at work this season are the well-known Max Uhle in Ecuador and Julio Tello in Peru. The latter is not only a great archæologist but a professor in the university at Lima, and a direct descendant of Inca stock. From Peru not only comes fine work in gold and pottery, but most renowned of all, textiles of unique quality, examples of which may be seen in our large museums.

All these expeditions go out for two purposes: first, to bring back museum collections, and second, to secure new information respecting their significance in time and culture. A little reflection will show that Americans, Englishmen, French, and Germans dominate and that their expeditions usually take them into foreign countries. It is not strange then that archæologists become involved in diplomatic relations. Few nations are willing to permit antiquities to leave their land. In the case of Mexico and the Latin-American countries, most of the population claims descent from stocks like the Aztec, Maya, and Inca, who reared the temples and cities now in ruins. Though they have acquired much from Spain, a part of their background still vibrates sympathetically with the spirit of the ruined temples. Hence, they look upon them as a part of their birthright. So it is that each of these nations maintains laws guarding these antiquities and preventing their leaving the country.

The same is true in the Old World. There was a day when the archæologist roamed the world at will and carried off whatever came to hand, but times have changed. Now permits must be secured from the governments concerned, often a matter of prolonged negotiation, and only a part, if any, of the collections made can be taken from the country. In the United States, there are laws prohibiting the taking of archæological objects from lands owned by the Federal Government, and consequently all work done upon such lands must be by permit. In the United States, the private owner of land is free to do what he will with such antiquities as his property may contain, but in most Latin-American and many Old World countries all archæological remains are the property of the state and can not be legally removed except by government agents. All of which makes clear the high regard all peoples have for antiquities and the relative importance and dignity of archæology as a profession.

Thus far we have recognized but one advantage to be expected from all this expenditure of effort and money. That is to increase our knowledge of the past or to extend history backward. However, the contributions of archæology to art are of real significance. Some of the priceless examples of ancient classical art come from archæological expedi-

Central Branch, Sixty-sixth and Honore Streets

Fall with its beauty of trees and shrubs, fields and gardens gives rise to many serious thoughts. This season is like the end of a perfect day, a preparation for something to follow, quiet, beautiful. It reminds us that our lives, if well lived, will too be beautiful and true after the pattern Christ has set us.

New zest seems to be in the air and to pervade the many activities of the church at Central Branch.

Midweek prayer services have been well attended, fifty and sixty souls being present. There youth as well as age mingle to rejoice, and are knit together through spiritual experiences.

Building Fund Sunday was observed August 31. Special music was by Sister Grayce Thoman. Sister Lela Eskridge was the leader. H. P. W. Keir gave the opening prayer. Brother W. Eskridge spoke on the life of Daniel, telling how he, with his three companions, chose to take the Lord as their keeper; and having been taught in their youth to take good care of their bodies by eating and drinking the right things, they grew in wisdom and justice, and God was with them in their time of need.

Evening services were in charge of Brother J. J. Oliver. Brothers Art Sherman and W. Eskridge sang "Nailed to the cross." "Zion" was the theme of Brother Ray Hurst who read from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. In his discourse Brother Hurst wove in a description of his recent visit to Kirtland Temple.

September 7, during the intermission between Sunday school and the communion service, a solo was softly sung by Brother Theodore Spuehler, "Nearer, still nearer." Sister Lela Eskridge accompanied. This formed a beautiful setting for the Lord's Supper. A calm and quiet hallowed the hour. Brother Eskridge offered the opening prayer. Brother Keir was in charge, and Brother William Cochran offered the remarks. The Saints were again assured of God's goodness to his children.

Brother H. P. W. Keir spoke in the evening, his theme being "Christ's temptation."

Graceland College Day was observed September 14. A male chorus sang "Graceland," and Brother Keir was in charge of the service. The choir contributed to the program "Graceland, we love thee," and Brother Cecil Schmid read Doctrine and Covenants 85, impressing the lesson that we must seek learning by study and by faith. God's Spirit must attend us in our study or it will be of no avail. The "Alma Mater Hymn" was sung, and Brother Keir offered the benediction. Brother and Sister Roberts, formerly of Graceland, were present.

In the evening Brother and Sister Arthur Sherman were tions. Even pottery, textiles, etc., from the pagan Aztec, Maya, and Inca civilizations are coming to be valued as examples of art. This is why some of our largest art museums support archæological expeditions and why artists not infrequently find inspiration in museums exhibiting American antiquities. Hence, the patron who supports an archæological expedition is not merely aiding a scientific inquiry, but contributing to the advancement of art and the humanities.—By Clark Wissler, curator of anthropology, American Museum of Natural History, The New York Times.

in charge of the music, and Brother Keir conducted the service. Brother Ed Lowe was the speaker.

Within the last month visitors have worshiped with us from Detroit, Kansas City, and other points. Some of our members have returned home from vacation trips.

Miss Mable Thomas was recently married to Mr. J. Miller. Our best wishes go with this young couple to their new home in Oklahoma. Sister Mable has been a member of this branch since childhood, and we wish her happiness.

During the past week the priesthood of the branch have been visiting each home in which there are church members, personally inviting them to be present at the Rally Day services September 28. Special music has been provided, and we anticipate a crowded house and much interest in the activities of the fall and winter season.

Brother Steve Lester lately spoke about the temple in the days of Hezekiah, giving a helpful blackboard talk.

Brother Clem Evans chose as a theme for his Sunday morning sermon "Responsibility of Sainthood."

The choir has taken on new life; some twenty-five responded to the call for singers. We are expecting big contributions from the music department.

Sister Lilly Nelson was happily welcomed home from her trip abroad. She gave her class in Book of Mormon a good description of her travels through the ruins of Bible lands.

A baby girl has come to gladden the home of Brother and Sister Joe Smart, and a baby boy arrived at the home of Brother and Sister Alvin Hall.

The sick are improving, and for the Father's blessings to them we thank him.

Sister Jessie Wainwright is coaching a play to be given by the women sometime in October.

Lincoln, Nebraska

In spite of the hot summer church attendance was good, and a surprising interest was manifested in the usual services and activities.

In the absence of Pastor E. J. Lenox the work of the branch was carried on in a creditable manner by local men. Brother Lenox and family spent July and August visiting relatives and friends in Wisconsin.

The Department of Women has been active. The women meet every week in the church to quilt and make garments and fancywork for the annual fall bazaar. They have taken up the study of the Book of Mormon, beginning with the Jaredite period. Sisters McWilliams and Weller take turns preparing the lesson and presenting it as the rest work. A lawn social was held under the auspices of the Women's Department. They served homemade ice cream and cake. The department also served a supper in the basement of the church, which was followed by a program. The two events netted about thirty dollars.

The Temple Builders have been active. They held a lawn social which netted them sixteen dollars.

Several games of volley ball were played at the fair grounds this summer by the Department of Recreation and Expression.

Each Sunday evening a program is given with a fifteen-minute lecture on the Book of Mormon. This has been instructive and interesting. The programs vary; sometimes there is a debate, sometimes a playlet, or music with readings. These are in charge of different people. September 7 the program was prepared by Brother Grover Wall. He had a list of questions from the Bible, and the class was divided into two sides, Brothers Lenox and Shrunken the captains. Brother Lenox's side won the contest.

The Saints who attended the Woodbine, Iowa, reunion report a pleasant gathering.

A happy event took place in the home of Brother and Sister A. A. Hale the evening of August 18 when Wilma Satterlee, of Norfolk, Nebraska, was united in marriage to their son, Cecil. The Reverend Hill, of East Lincoln Christian Church, read the marriage service. The happy couple have the best wishes of the branch.

Brother and Sister Ezra Oehring have moved to Kearney, where Brother Oehring's engineering work for the State takes him.

Brother and Sister L. W. Hale went to Pontiac, Michigan, September 2, where Brother Leslie will continue his recording and taking of traffic census for the Government. He was one of four recorders for the State of Nebraska the past year, and in Michigan will be one of sixty.

Among those who have of late visited this branch were Lawrence Brockway, of Wichita, Kansas, who was shaking hands in farewell for a time. He expects to continue his school work in California this winter. Sister Blanche Farrar, of Independence, was here a number of times this summer. Brother T. J. Chapple and son, Jimmie, of Independence, were here a few days.

Sister Elsie Hale has returned to Thune, Nebraska, to teach school this year.

Sister Margie Weller attended a family reunion at the home of her mother, Sister Rena Dievendorf, of Independence, June 29. Her sister, Mrs. Ruth Belle, accompanied her home. Relatives also spent some days in the Weller home this summer.

Sister Tabler went to Independence to attend the funeral of her father. Her mother returned to Lincoln with her, and is planning to make her home with Brother and Sister Tabler.

Church Work in Winnipeg

By Leonard Houghton

It will no doubt be of especial interest to the Saints in whose districts I have labored to know that I am this year in Manitoba, Canada, spending most of my time in the city of Winnipeg. Because of many years in missionary work, I have been unable during the past few years to labor as ardently as formerly, and so it is with considerable appreciation that I am able this year to do city missionary work, where I find it possible to keep more regular hours and room by myself. I am nearly eight hundred miles from home and find this a cold and changeable climate.

One of the trials of missionary work, I find, is the changing of fields of labor. It is natural that after years of association and mutual sacrifice there should spring up between Saints a fondness for each other, a desire to be helpful, to share joys and sorrows, good fortune and bad. Then it is that it is hard to turn one's face to distant and strange fields. Often I find myself, even in the midst of busy surroundings, thinking of Saints and events sacred in memory though separated from me by many years, miles, or perhaps death. Memories of these noble people cause me to feel at times that if there were no other reward in the world to come other than the privilege of associating with the brave and good members of mankind, all our effort would be rewarded and life would be well worth all sacrifices.

Winnipeg is a large city embracing several smaller cities or large suburbs, each having a city government of its own.

Our church building here has been greatly improved in appearance during the past year by two coats of paint outside and redecoration inside. Brother J. W. Davis, who labored here last year in mission work, greatly assisted in this endeavor. It is well done.

Winnipeg Branch is not large, but there are a few who are earnestly endeavoring to bring about better conditions. We have prospects for a new opening and baptisms.

Because of business interests, Brother and Sister W. H. Pratt, greatly beloved by the Saints of this city, have had to spend the summer in Alberta. Sister Pratt is now at home, and we are looking for Brother Pratt within a few weeks. Both these members are able workers.

Last winter the branch lost by death another efficient worker, Brother William Boyce. Brother Boyce was the Sunday school superintendent.

Brother and Sister Wellington Wilson are pillars in the branch here. We wish we had many more like them.

My home is still in the beautiful city of Madison, Wisconsin, where my wife, since the boys are grown and in distant cities, is the only member of the family except as I am able from time to time to make brief visits there.

Duluth, Minnesota

Sixtieth Avenue, West, and Bristol Street

The Saints who attended the Minnesota-Northern Wisconsin reunion at Chetek, Wisconsin, were well repaid for the effort made to be present. It was a time of rejoicing, a spiritual feast which gave us a greater desire to move forward in the wonderful work of latter days. Under such able teachers as Apostle J. F. Garver, Bishop G. Leslie DeLapp, and Sister Lydia Wight, the class work was of a character to lift us from the sordid things of life to a position in which we might reevaluate the gospel of Jesus Christ. We are not forgetting the splendid sermons and work of Bishop C. J. Hunt, Elders W. E. Shakespeare, Vernon Lundeen, Wesley Elvin, and C. J. Smith.

The Duluth Sunday school held its annual picnic at Pike Lake August 10. Junior church was conducted in the open.

July 21 there arrived at the home of Brother and Sister R. C. Tourville a baby daughter. The infant was blessed August 3 by Elders A. C. Bundy and Samuel Case.

The Saints surprised Pastor A. C. Bundy the evening of his birthday, July 22, and a happy time was enjoyed.

Sunday school officers and teachers are meeting once a month to get a clearer vision of the church school and its operation. They expect soon to adopt this plan. We are at present trying it out with success.

Robert Hannaman, son of Sister Luella Hannaman, of Moorhead, Minnesota, was baptized at the morning service in the church August 24 by Brother Robert Zuelsdorf. They were visiting relatives in Duluth.

Elder C. J. Smith, the evening of September 8, stopped on his way to Bemidji and delivered an inspiring sermon.

The Minnesota district conference met in Duluth September 20 and 21, Apostle J. F. Garver assisting the district presidency in charge. Brother L. S. Wight, district president, presided at the business session Saturday afternoon. Duluth members gave a program Saturday evening, including a play "Cook wanted," and there were instrumental and vocal numbers as well as readings.

Sunday's activities opened with prayer service at nine o'clock, church school at ten, preaching by Apostle Garver at eleven. In the afternoon Elder L. S. Wight spoke. That evening Elder Blair Jensen, of Omaha, Nebraska, was the speaker. In the afternoon Sister Lydia Wight spoke to the women.

Lorene Bishop, daughter of Mr. Don and Sister Veda Bishop, of Finlayson, Minnesota, was baptized by Brother W. C. Stauty and confirmed by Elders C. J. Smith and A. C. Bundy at 3.30 in the afternoon.

Elder Vernon Lundeen addressed the adults during the church school hour, defining the program of the church school and its relation to all the activities of the branch.

Saints were in attendance at this conference from many points in Minnesota and Wisconsin, and workers came from points in these two States and Iowa and Nebraska.

Praise is due each one who contributed toward the furthering of the work of the conference. The women ably cared for the community lunch in the basement.

Action was taken to change the beginning of term of office of district officers from January 1 to October 1. Present officers were sustained in their respective offices until the closing conference year in October, 1931. The time and place set for the holding of district conferences are the second Saturday and Sunday of March of each year at Minneapolis, and the third Saturday and Sunday of September at Duluth.

A better system of reporting was suggested to be carried out in the future by District President L. S. Wight.

As the result of another conference we have again been lifted to the mountain heights. We hope as we go into the valley of experience that our work shall be most effective for the establishment of the cause of Zion.

Sister A. H. Dathe, of Barnum, has been quite ill, but is slowly improving.

Rally Day for Crawford County (Kansas)

Saints

Saints from Arma Branch, Mulberry Branch, and Liberal Mission gathered at Gross Mission, lately started, to observe Rally Day. Because the Saints in all these places are few in number, the idea was conceived to concentrate our efforts at Gross, a place where need for encouragement in the gospel work is great. Though the number of worshipers was not large on this occasion, the Spirit was there, and everyone was blessed and pleased with results.

Elder C. O. Myers, of Arma, preached a fine sermon at 3.30 in the afternoon, his theme being "Love." He was blessed with excellent delivery, and the spirit of his office and calling rested upon him. A mist stood in many eyes as the speaker carried us with him through several scenes in which love was demonstrated.

All of us gathered at the Liberal Mission church and held Sunday school at ten o'clock in the morning; then we adjourned to the home of Brother J. L. Creviston, of Mulberry Branch, twelve miles away, and enjoyed a basket dinner. The Saints then went to Gross Mission, one mile north of Brother Creviston's home, and held the afternoon services.

The Saints went home from this gathering rejoicing and praising God for the opportunity of meeting together.

Liberal and Gross Missions are under the jurisdiction of Mulberry Branch. We are hoping all groups of Saints enjoyed the Rally Day.

Bemidji, Minnesota

In recent weeks Bemidji Branch has been blessed by visits from officers of the church, and meetings have been characterized by the spirit of unity and fellowship.

Sunday, September 7, nonmembers came from Cass Lake with Brother and Sister Bosshardt to enjoy the services and witness the baptism of two young sisters. The confirmations preceded the afternoon sacramental service.

Tuesday, September 9, Missionary C. J. Smith arrived. The Saints and friends gathered for one of Brother Smith's clear, encouraging, and timely discourses on "The growth and development of the church." Elder Smith and Pastor Day made arrangements for a rally day. Since Apostle Garver and Brother Smith could not be at Bemidji for the regular Sunday rally day, arrangements were made for a midweek gathering the evening of September 22 and an all-day meeting September 23.

September 21 we were happy to have present Elder Lester Whiting, of Battle Lake, Minnesota, who spoke on "Service." The Sunday school lesson and all programs, including Brother McBride's evening sermon, centered around the theme of "Service."

Monday evening the church was well filled with Saints from Cass Lake, Bagley, Thief River Falls, and Emo, Canada. We enjoyed an unusual treat in the visit of Apostle J. F.

Garver. His subject, "My hope," was delivered under the spirit of his office and calling. It was well received, giving to his hearers hope, comfort, and a strong desire to endure faithful to the end.

Missionary C. J. Smith, Elders Blair Jensen, of Omaha, Nebraska, and Vernon Lundeen, of Minneapolis, besides local priesthood were present for the Monday evening service. Elders Jensen and Lundeen departed for their work during the night.

Tuesday's meetings were a prayer service at ten o'clock in the morning and preaching by Brothers Garver and Smith at eleven in the morning, two o'clock in the afternoon, and eight in the evening. Time between services was filled with a basket dinner and hours of renewing old friendships and making new.

All were impressed by the timely advice and spirit of wisdom, kindness, and humility of Brother Garver. May the Lord bless him in all his labors that he may continue to the end in like manner. We feel such work is indeed recognized by the heavenly Father.

The Saints met September 28 with brightened outlook. The Lord's Spirit spread like a mantle over the congregation, remaining throughout the service. A spirit of rejoicing over the spiritual strength received during the rally-day meetings prevailed throughout the Sabbath services. Prayers and testimonies were filled with sincerity and earnestness.

The Christmas offering chart, presented at Sunday school, was received with quite a degree of enthusiasm. The Christmas offering committee was elected, and an initial offering given to start the thermometer toward its goal.

Sister Mary Michels, of Cass Lake, our new member, has gone to Saint Paul to enter Saint Luke's Hospital for nurses' training. We hope the Saints in that part of the district will remember our young sister and help her to feel that she is one of their number.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fourth and Washington Streets

The latter part of September has been a busy and happy period. The pastor had the full cooperation of the branch in preparing for Rally Day. The advertising was taken care of by Brother and Sister A. Goodwin, Miss M. Elliott, and the pastor. An attractive folder was arranged with a program printed by the workers, service sheets being arranged so that the meetings progressed without many announcements. A good write-up was had in the newspaper.

Looking to the event the church building underwent its fall cleaning. Everything was cleaned and polished. The outside of the church was neat in appearance, and the young people were given charge of the interior decoration. In this undertaking they excelled.

The day opened with prayer service followed by church school. The program of the latter was arranged by and in charge of Sister E. Hughes. It opened at 9.30. The first fifteen minutes were devoted to piano music by H. J. Fry, son of Bishop Fry; the invocation was offered; there was a reading by Miss R. Davis; a song was contributed by the choir; scripture lesson came from the boys' class. Next came a poem by Mrs. Freburg, a song by a chorus of girls, the offertory by Mrs. E. Goodwin; a song by Junior and Dorothy Goodwin. Class study was followed by an interlude duet by Brother and Sister Nobby Wilkinson, Albia, Iowa; and the sermon was by Apostle D. T. Williams whose theme was "Christian fellowship." To his hearers he brought a message which caused us to feel deeply the need of being more like the Master.

Dinner was served by the women's club in the basement of the church.

More than one hundred were present at the morning service.

At two o'clock in the afternoon there was piano music. The Wilkinson quartet sang several pleasing numbers, and Brother H. Fry offered a violin solo. Elder W. E. Prall, of Lamoni, Iowa, was the afternoon speaker and again in the evening. His messages encouraged all to assist in building up the kingdom of God.

After supper in the basement Brother R. Zimmerman and his orchestra, of Lavilla, Iowa, began a program at seven o'clock. In this program he was assisted by the quartet and songs from the congregation.

During the day a number of visitors came from various parts of the district—Hiteman, Burlington, Centerville, Salem, and Fairfield.

When the time for the close of the evening services arrived, all felt that they had experienced a wonderful day. The spirit of fellowship was in evidence, and numbers of Saints from outside the branch were privileged to meet once more those whom they had not seen for years.

The offerings taken up more than paid for the extra expense of the day.

Saints of Ottumwa are hoping that this day is the beginning of brighter times ahead. They feel that much good was accomplished, that the sermons and the association will inspire all to greater service.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

An excellent program was enjoyed on College Day, September 14, and a substantial sum of money was contributed to the Scholarship Loan Fund. Several speakers emphasized the religious, social, and educational advantages of Graceland. The loan fund, the endowment, and study courses were explained in detail. The Temple Builders, using the college colors, gave a pleasing exercise. Each girl wore a letter of the word Graceland. Musical numbers were contributed by the girls' quartet, the ten-year-olds, and the tiny children.

At the annual business meeting recently held, the branch voted to adopt the church school plan of religious education. Elder W. L. Christy was elected branch president, and he chose Elders Diggle, Gendron, and Beckman as counselors. The duties of these brothers are to arrange speakers for all services, to have charge of the sick and priesthood visiting, and to supervise the priesthood in their duties and preparation for service. Sister Christy is supervisor of religious education; Sister Grace Beckman, secretary-treasurer; and Sister Steves, organist. Sister Diggle was sustained publicity agent. A group of young men was called to the priesthood, most of them signifying their willingness to accept the responsibility.

Recommendations were submitted to the branch from the council held later as follows: 1. That Sister Waugh be supervisor of the adult division of the church school; 2. That Arthur Gendron and Frank Piedt supervise the young people's division; 3. That Sister Diggle serve as supervisor of the children's division; 4. That Sister Osler act as chorister in the morning services and Brother Christy in the evening.

The radio work will commence the first Sunday in October. Many inquiries have come in and numerous requests from nonmembers for its continuance. Brother and Sister Christy have been engaged in missionary activities throughout the district for several weeks, and report that everywhere they are hailed with open arms (and ears) by the nonmembers. They declare that people are ready to listen to the gospel everywhere they go, and that the radio appears to have removed prejudice from the minds of the people of Saskatchewan.

Another of our young girls recently joined the married group. Sister Kathleen Gendron was united to Mr. F. W. Hobbs by her father, Elder Louis Gendron, the ceremony taking place in the home of the bride's parents in the presence of intimate friends and relatives. Sister H. N. Few and Sister Diggle entertained at the home of Brother and Sister J. A. Beckman in compliment to the newly wedded couple and to Mr. and Mrs. Burton Asay (nee Elva Beckman) who have recently returned from Washington, District of Columbia. About thirty young people enjoyed games, contests, and musical numbers contributed by Burton Asay, Miss Asay, Alex Mackie, and Mr. Purvis. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostesses, assisted by the Misses Walker, Jean Waugh, and Margery Waugh. The evening closed with the singing of "For they are jolly good fellows."

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

After a short vacation, the Saints were glad to assemble in our newly decorated auditorium made especially beautiful for the sacramental service. A pleasing spirit was felt during the meeting, and the members rejoiced to meet together in the house of the Lord. J. E. Matthews preached in the evening, using the theme, "Law immutable."

The Women's Department met September 11 in the social room of the church. Potluck dinner was eaten at noon. There were present twenty-one members and one visitor. A very interesting paper, "Tuning in," was read by Mrs. Casloso.

September 14 District President A. E. Anderton preached on the text: "Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away?"—John 6: 67.

G. H. Kirkendall preached at the evening hour, taking for a text a portion of Isaiah 6: 8: "Here am I, send me."

The Temple Builders had a wiener roast Friday evening at Gregg's Dam.

Bishop H. E. French spoke the morning of September 21. For a theme he chose to discuss "The golden rule," and for a text took Matthew 7: 12: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

Lately A. H. Nieman preached on "Preparation."

In the evening Doctor W. B. Reeves preached on "Modern-day repentance," reading for a lesson a part of Neph 2.

Calgary, Alberta

A variety of activities and happenings have, during the past three months, interested the Saints.

Apostle J. F. Curtis and District President P. S. Whalley arrived in this city July 29. They began work at once, and August 1, in the evening, Brother Curtis spoke to the Saints. The evening of August 2 Elder P. S. Whalley united in holy matrimony Miss Vida McLean, of Calgary, to Mr. Cecil Diaper.

A special program was held August 3. At 9.35 in the morning, sacramental meeting was conducted, and a good spirit prevailed. Branch President J. R. Hockaday was ordained to the office of elder by Apostle J. F. Curtis and Elder P. S. Whalley. At eleven o'clock Brother Curtis, the speaker, discoursed on the theme "Prayer." Lunch was served at noon in the church.

The Saints again assembled at two o'clock in the afternoon, and Mrs. Ashley, of Strathmore, was baptized. Preaching services were held at three and 7.30 o'clock, Apostle Curtis the speaker. All services were well attended by local and visiting Saints.

September 6 a quiet wedding took place at the church when Miss Lillian House, of Winnipeg, and Albert Henry, of Calgary, were united in marriage by Elder W. McLeod.

The Saints are going to give a fowl supper and entertainment October 10, the proceeds of which are to help toward the decorating of the interior of the church.

We were unable to hold Sunday school during six weeks in August and September on account of a ban put on children under eighteen years of age, to prevent the spread of infantile paralysis. Sunday school recommenced September 21.

Brother and Sister Chandler, former members of this branch, were here as visitors last week. They are now gone to their new home near Edmonton.

The branch president was called away September 21, to preach at the funeral of Brother William Stuart, of Rimbey, Alberta. This service was largely attended.

Graceland Chats

The Acacia Leaves Dock

With shrill blasts from the whistle, the low throbbing of the engine, and the clanking of chains, the U. S. S. "Acacia" hoisted anchor this week to start on her nine months' trip. The "Acacia" has been in the Graceland dock for a few months undergoing repair and selecting a new crew. The boat was skillfully piloted past the rough breakers of finance by Albert Fisher, ably assisted by Edgar "Epsom" Salts, who took charge of the engines.

The new captain, Miss Eva Wallace, known to her best friends as "Little Eva," stood by the helm as her vessel left dock, and her enthusiasm and interest in her work inspired confidence. All feel certain that with Eva they are going to make a safe landing after a long and tedious journey. The captain has no assistant as yet, but she intends to promote a member of her crew to this position before very long.

The interior was not quite completed before sailing, and the first mate, Pauline Siegfried, has charge of the artistic work. The second mate, Max White, has had the job of collecting features.

"Little Eva" believes in the old adage, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and so she has made Mitchel Carter athletic superintendent.

The service boy, Arthur DuRose, collects such trash as snapshots, thinking, we presume, that they are best when collected and put out of sight. Frances Hartshorn, the maid-of-all-jobs, is busy typing for the other officials, besides caring for her other duties.

Last but not least the "Acacia" is taking a member of the old crew again this year. He is the only member that has sailed the "Acacia" for a number of years. Mr. Hansen again faces the sea with a smile, while he busies himself taking pictures for the passengers' passports.

GERTRUDE NEWCOMBER.

Mr. May Speaks in Chapel

On Friday, October 3, Mr. May, head of the business department of the college, talked to the student body on the subject of unemployment. He gave some interesting figures which disclosed the number of people who are without employment or who have employment only part of the year. As one cause, he cited instances wherein machines, operated by one man, are replacing many men in our industries. The establishment of an employment bureau by the National Government was suggested as one means of aiding the unemployed. Changes in some of the current industrial policies may be necessary to meet changing conditions.

Preliminary "Extemp Contest" Held

For a week before Monday, October 6, all those who consider themselves public speakers were delving deep into four important questions of the day: "The unemployment situation," "The recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States," "Indian unrest under British rule," and "The farm problem." All this exertion was due to the extemporaneous speaking contest which occurred Monday. Of the twenty speakers who delivered speeches, seven were Kapforeans, six Niketes, four Victorians, and three Pleiades. Six winners were chosen to compete in general Athenian Saturday, October 11, in the chapel. The results of the preliminaries showed that these six were: Walter Johnson and Roberta Lewis, Niketes; Viola Firth and Lloyd Ingram, Kapforeans; Vida Teeters, Victorian; and Lois Hatch, Pleiades.

Lambda Delta Sigma Meets

At seven o'clock Thursday night, October 2, the Lambda Delta Sigma Society held its first meeting for the coming year. Under the able guidance of the new president, Miss Charlotte Condit, the meeting was a success. Mr. Morris Mortimore, with the assistance of Eva Wallace, contributed to the program by giving an illustrated lecture on Graceland history. After this the members assembled in an adjoining room, where they were served refreshments. During the course of the entertainment they were favored with readings by Miss Florence Thompson and Pauline Siegfried.

Home-coming Plans Begin

Already there is a group of people at Graceland, enthusiastically planning and preparing for Graceland's annual home-coming. For those of us who have been privileged to enjoy a Graceland home-coming and all that it means, we might write that we are most eagerly awaiting the opening home-coming assembly which this year will be November 7, Friday at three o'clock in the afternoon. The home-coming spirit then carries over until eight o'clock that evening, at which time the Herald Hall men furnish a peppy entertainment at the Lamoni Coliseum, which not only provides an evening's entertainment but also acts as a preparatory event for the football game which follows the next day at two o'clock in the afternoon.

The club breakfasts this year will again give an early start to a busy Saturday. Following the club breakfasts, Walker Hall will hold open house during the period of 8.30 to 9.45. Allowing an intermission of only fifteen minutes, the home-coming pep meeting is scheduled for ten in the morning. Then the parade to the North Park and the game. This will find Graceland's eleven battling with the Burlington Junior College eleven.

The day will come to an end with the Athenian Program in the evening. This will automatically stop all of the gayer festivities, and Sunday will see a complete change.

Sunday morning will see the convening of the early morning home-coming prayer meeting, which will be held in the chapel. Because of the surroundings of the chapel, this meeting has ever been one to call back cherished memories. The eleven o'clock worship service at the Brick Church will end another home-coming, and we confidently feel that we shall have God's benediction on all of the home-coming activities.

Orchestra Organized

The Lamoni-Graceland Orchestra has organized for this year. Four new members were added, making a total of twenty-four. Four or five members have been with the orchestra for six years. It was thought that this year's orchestra would be greatly handicapped, because some of its best players left school last spring, but the outlook is encouraging and, with their weekly rehearsal, they hope to soon have reached their old standard of performance.

College Girls Meet Town Mothers

Saturday, October 3, 1930, between the hours of three and five, the home of Mrs. C. F. Smith was one of happiness and congeniality. This occasion was the introducing of the college girls to their town mothers. Each year the ladies of the Patroness Society try to make the college girls at home in Lamoni. It also helps the people of Lamoni to get acquainted with the youth of the college. The instigator, Mrs. Smith, with the help of Mrs. Gates, Miss Morgan, and Mr. Briggs, has made the movement an outstanding feature in college activities.

A fine program was given during the social affair, in which Vivian Castings, Alice Lane, and Mrs. Walden gave musical numbers. Mr. Briggs gave a short appropriate talk.

This movement has helped form many lasting friendships and adds many pleasant memories to college life.

Editor and Business Manager of Graceland Record Attend Conference

The editor and business manager of the Graceland Record staff attended the seventh annual newspaper conference held at the University of Iowa, October 3 and 4.

Several lectures were given concerning the success of a publication from an editorial and from a business standpoint. In addition there were excellent lectures on headlines, advertising, sales, revolution in typography, printing, etc., and general round table talks on newspaper promotion. The conference has aided the staff in helping to find a solution to some of the problems of the student publication.

Following the conference, the delegates were entertained by both the Rotary Club and the Chamber of Commerce of Iowa City. The newspaper men and women were also guests of the conference at the new Iowa Stadium at the Iowa-Oklahoma football game.

Activities for the two days were concluded at a genuine Graceland dinner party given at Voas Meredith's home Saturday night, at which Mr. and Mrs. Hillard Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Meredith, Dick Anderson, Paul Utneher, and Dave Morgan enjoyed themselves by recalling old times at Graceland.

The Strategic Board of Pep Gets Busy

The Strategic Board of Pep began public work Friday night, September 26, when it took charge of the funeral service of Penn's football spirit. Paul Utneher, Ralph Baldwin, and Myron LaPointe, the Board of Pep, carried out the plans of the ceremony.

The faculty choir, heralds, and chief mourners did their noble duty to make the ceremony more impressive. Many unique floral offerings consisting of onion tops, corn stalks, and milkweed plants were presented by the various social clubs.

Paul Utneher presided, Byrna Sandy read a memorial biography, and a quartet of girls presented an exercise of mourning. The memorial oration was delivered by one of the most prominent orators, "Unk" Cheville, dressed in ritualistic regalia. The cremating of the mummy took place on the track field immediately following the service. The congregation formed a circle around the fire and sang songs fitting for the occasion, such as "These bones won't rise again," and "Graceland forever." The Board of Pep then closed the meeting with the woeful death cries of "Go, Graceland" and "Who, Team."

The Pep club had the "old spirit," and the Graceland student body is ready to back them any time.

Ribstone, Alberta

Saints of this city are sad because they have just parted from Elder and Sister P. S. Whalley, workers here for about fifteen months. The worthy couple left September 19. A large number of members gathered at their home to bid them farewell. Previous to that time we had a little party for them, and the Sunday before the members ate supper together at the church. We appreciated having them with us and would like to have kept them, but we know they have work to do, and we wish them happiness in their new mission.

A new missionary and his family are coming soon. We have never met Brother E. E. Eliason, but we hope that together we may do much for the cause of Christ.

The fall season in this region is cold and wet, and farmers are experiencing difficulty in getting their crops threshed.

Independence

Stone Church

Bishop J. A. Becker was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service. The earth and all that is in it was made for the use and benefit of man, we have been told; we have been promised the good things of earth and also blessings from above, the riches of eternity. But these things can come to us only as we present our offerings in righteousness, said Bishop Becker. Only by fulfilling the law of the celestial kingdom can we enter into that kingdom with all its promises. If we are not receiving the promised blessings, let us examine ourselves for the righteousness that should be in our lives; let us present ourselves as living sacrifices to the Lord.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, sang two anthems, "Incline thine ear to me," by Himmel, and "Festival te deum," by Dudley Buck. For the first the solo part was sung by Alice Burgess; for the second, soloists were: Nina Smith, soprano; Edward Brackenbury, tenor; Alice Burgess, contralto, and Albert Brackenbury, bass. Robert and George Miller were accompanists. An organ-cello number was played by Robert Miller and Irving Jenkins.

Elder W. Wallace Smith presided, and Pastor John F. Sheehy was also in the stand.

The story of Mormon, one of the outstanding soldier-prophets of the Book of Mormon, was told at the intermediate worship service Sunday morning to illustrate the theme for the day, "Courage to be dependable." "Am I a soldier of the cross?" was the hymn-question of the congregation, and three sisters, Gertrude, Margaret, and Ethel Thomas, sang "The old rugged cross." Priest Gerald Phillips was the speaker. Following a piano solo by Emma Jeanne Etzenhouser, the congregation, led by Sister Nellie Hunker, new intermediate chorister, sang "I'll go where you want me to go." The pastor was assisted in the stand by Priest Oral Andes.

All week there had been little talk among the Saints of anything but the Harvest Festival, and nearly every local member had visited the display at least once. Accordingly, it was not surprising that a large crowd gathered in the lower auditorium Sunday evening, to witness the presentation of the products of this year's festival to the church.

The speech of presentation was made by Elder Cyril E. Wight, president of Kansas City Stake, who touched upon the significance of the festival in the lives of the people and its potentialities.

Grateful acceptance on the part of the church was expressed by Bishop J. A. Becker, who was the representative chosen to accept the first harvest festival offering in Second Church in 1919.

Elder C. C. Koehler, general manager, spoke on "The object and value of the festival," briefly sketching the history of the movement, the purpose for which it was instituted, and giving an estimate of its monetary and social value.

Patriarch F. A. Smith was then asked by the one in charge, President F. M. McDowell, to offer a prayer of dedication and blessing upon the gifts and givers of the Harvest Home Festival.

The scripture lesson, a psalm of thanksgiving, was read by Elder George G. Lewis. Elder T. A. Beck, actively in charge of this year's festival, offered the invocation, and W. S. Macrae, president of Holden Stake, gave the benediction.

Music for the evening was furnished by the Auditorium Orchestra, directed by Orlando Nace, a ladies' chorus from the Stone Church Choir, and George Anway, soloist, who sang, "Open the gates of the temple."

This service brought to a close Sacrifice Week for the people of Independence, and to their willingness and power to sacrifice local offerings in the Harvest Home Festival stand as a monument.

Organizations and Personalities

There was large attendance of the Messiah Choir of Independence which met Sunday afternoon for the first rehearsal of the season. This year the choir will give its thirteenth annual Christmas rendition of Handel's masterpiece, The Messiah. The singers have profited much from the rich experience in oratorio work at the Centennial Conference, and now are ready to give to the community their annual Christmas gift of music. This year's performance will be broadcast over KMBC with orchestral accompaniment. Rehearsals will begin at four o'clock each Sunday afternoon in the Stone Church, Paul N. Craig directing. George H. Hulmes is manager of the choir.

To the people of Independence the Harvest Home Festival this year has meant much. It stands out as a testimony to the achievements possible when Saints work together dominated by the spirit of giving and sacrifice. For many, economic prospects have been uncertain, but they have given their bit, and great has been the return. The festival is over; a big gift has been given to the church; and those who have sacrificed to make this gift possible are happy in the thought that some one's heart will be gladdened during the winter months by the offering they have made. Surely those who have helped in the Harvest Home this year have remembered the words of the Savior: "Love one another, as I have loved you." Like Christ the Saints have loved and have given their choicest blessings.

The fall of the year is always a busy season for the church, and at present the workers are engrossed with tasks leading to a successful winter's program. We can not speak for all the general church appointees, but perhaps brief mention of the comings and goings of the members of leading quorums will serve to indicate the trend of endeavor leading up to Decision Day and the months to follow.

Toward the latter part of last week Independence again "lost" President Frederick M. Smith. This time he went to Saint Louis, where, if present plans work out, he expects to take a southbound train to New Orleans. It will probably be the week-end of October 25 before the center place sees him again. President Elbert A. Smith has been in Independence some weeks. His return from Michigan, where he spent an extended period of rest and convalescence, was quiet, and few knew of it until he was again established at home. The Saints will rejoice to hear that "Brother Elbert looks really well." October 8 brought to Independence two workers who have been away since the month of June, President F. M. McDowell and Apostle F. Henry Edwards. Two days before, they landed in New York. During the summer they, in company with Apostle Paul M. Hanson, engaged in church work in the European mission. Home folks from time to time received news of their achievements abroad and were prepared to give them a warm welcome home.

Two members of the Presiding Bishopric are at present in Independence, Brothers A. Carmichael and J. A. Becker. It is thought by the office force that they will be here, unless something unexpected arises demanding their presence elsewhere, until after the session of the Board of Appropriations, which begins December 1. Bishop M. H. Siegfried is traveling through the northern central States, principally Michigan and Illinois, in company with Elder J. A. Gardner, of the Publicity Department. They are attending a number of district conferences and expect to be home the latter part of the month.

Brothers McDowell and Edwards left their coworker, Paul M. Hanson, "somewhere" in Europe. Wherever he is, those who know this veteran of foreign mission work are assured that he is encouraging the Saints with the story of the gospel. M. A. McConley is thoroughly engrossed with the work of the Pacific Slope Mission. The State of Wisconsin claims the attention of D. T. Williams, and he is at present at Madison. Brother R. S. Budd, who for a number of days has been in the Independence Sanitarium following an operation for appendicitis, has been seriously ill. He is now slightly improved. It is about three weeks ago that J. F. Curtis appeared in the editorial room of the Herald Publishing House, brief case in hand, and wished the editors God-speed; he was departing for the West. Now he is in Salt Lake City, Utah. Over the week-end Clyde F. Ellis left Independence with Pennsylvania as his objective. Last week J. F. Garver was making himself at home with the Saints of Omaha, Nebraska, and next week-end he expects to be in Saint Louis, Missouri. Texas is the present field of Apostle J. A. Gillen, who has just gone from Houston to San Antonio. E. J. Gleazer, recently in the office of the Quorum of Twelve, gave Omaha as his destination for this week-end.

Brother and Sister Leonard Lea returned last Thursday from their wedding trip in the East, and Brother Lea is again at his desk as assistant editor of the Herald. Many notable points were visited by this couple during the two weeks of their trip, but they declare that the "happiest part of the trip was getting home." The Leas are now at home in Independence.

For a period of more than three weeks Elder John F. Sheehy, pastor in Independence, was in the East. His trip took him as far as the State of Maine. He arrived home in time to be present at the closing events of the Harvest Festival.

The Saints of Independence as well as members all over the church were saddened last week to learn of the death of Bishop George Lewis, of Australia, who passed suddenly away at his home at Wallsend, New South Wales, October 5. Brother Lewis for about twenty-five years has been bishop of the Australian Mission. His last visit to America was during the winter of 1919 and 1920. A son, George G. Lewis, has for some months acted as director of Religious Education in Independence.

"The door to knowledge opens only to those who knock," and "The paths to wisdom are found only by those who seek," are mottoes reminding all teachers and officers of the church schools in Independence of Zion's School of Training in Religious Education, to be conducted at the Stone Church from October 20 to 30. Two classes may be attended for credit each evening. Saints are registering daily with the director of Religious Education in Zion, The Auditorium.

Members of the White Masque Players held their October meeting Monday evening, the lecture being "The Greek and Roman theater," by Ralph W. Farrell. "Antigone," by Sophocles, was reviewed by Nellie Blackmore, and the first scene dramatized under the direction of Allegra Luff. The hostess was Evalina Faunce. The meeting was held in the Waldemna Choral clubrooms. Next month the German theater will be studied by the club.

Walnut Park

The speaker of the morning hour October 12 was Elder Harry G. Barto, who is associate pastor and bishop's agent of the Stone Church congregation. His sermon centered around the text, "Seek ye first to build up the kingdom of heaven and establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." The choir gave a fitting contribution to the service in the anthem, "My faith looks up to thee."

A beautiful part of the worship service in the church school hour was the blessing of the infant son of John Nelson Ganson and Mabel Dorothy Ganson. The child's name is Robert Ward, and he was blessed by Elders R. Barnhardt and W. T. Gard.

The Galilean Class, which has been studying the subject of "Stewardships and Zion," had as a special speaker during the class hour Brother David Hughes, who is one of the men on the stewardship farms at Atherton. He explained some of the work that is being carried on there and the method of operation. The class greatly appreciated his coming and hopes to have him again sometime in the future.

Omaha, Nebraska

Central Branch, Thirty-sixth and Burt Streets

The work for this local opened in September with a thorough and systematic canvassing of the branch under the direct supervision of Elder David Lewis. Everyone is "card indexed" as to church publications that are received in his home, branch pledges, and the number of nonmembers in the immediate family. This survey revealed some rather startling facts and caused us to realize more than ever that our work in Omaha is just begun.

The sacrament of the Lord's supper for September was well attended and might be characterized by the one word peace. While there was no outward demonstration of the Spirit, yet its sweet, gentle calmness seemed to hover over and encompass all. Elder Blair Jensen's text at the evening service was taken from second Timothy, "Moreover in stewards it is required that he be faithful." Denial of the fact that we are stewards in no way lifts the responsibility, was the thought brought out by the speaker.

A surprise party at the church on September 9 for Pastor Jensen and his wife took the form of a pantry shower. To know that we had succeeded in surprising the Jensens, and that their suspicions had not been aroused prior to their coming to the church, was in itself an accomplishment. Games and refreshments were the order of the evening.

Two young members of the priesthood, Marion Cooper and Fremming Self, were in charge of the morning worship period of September 14, at which service Sister Nell Kelley sang a beautiful solo. Brother Jensen's sermon was pastoral in content, one wherein he outlined our program for the winter months. Graceland College Day was observed very fittingly at the evening hour, when Elder Ray Whiting, a former Graceland student, and now pastor of Council Bluffs Branch, was the principal speaker.

In Lamoni, Iowa, on September 19, a wedding ceremony was performed that was of interest to Omahans, as it meant a valuable addition to our branch. Sister Dorothy Gunsolley, daughter of Patriarch and Sister J. A. Gunsolley, became the bride of Brother Donald B. Stoff. We wish for them a lifetime of joy.

Since our last writing the B. M. Anderson family has taken up residence at Lincoln, Nebraska.

The worship period for September 21 was opened with a lovely duet sung by Sister Nell Kelley and Brother Harry Greenway. Elder A. E. Stoff, pastor of Wichita, Kansas, Branch, was guest and speaker at this hour. Brother Stoff is a former resident of Omaha, and we were happy to have him with us. His sermon was on the "Value of prayer service." Prayer elevates, prayer is indispensable, and it is in a prayer service that love is nurtured and penetrates to its deepest depths. Brother Stoff spoke in the evening on the "Laying on of hands."

The regular prayer meeting of September 24 was dispensed with, as Apostle E. J. Gleazer on that evening began an all too short series of meetings. Sister Marie Samardick was the soloist of the evening, and the songs sung by the congregation from Zion's Praises served as a good background for Brother Gleazer's remarks. The speaker gave as reasons for our lack of success, as a people, thus far, our limited conception, and partial application of the law of Christ. Partial comprehension is dangerous, misleading, and may prove to be disastrous. Sister Nell Kelley rendered the special solo for the service September 25, and Brother Gleazer's sermon was a continuation of his subject of the night before.

A cafeteria dinner was served at the church preceding the service of September 26. This proved to be a remunerative endeavor. Special music was given by the choir at the preaching service. "My Lord hath need of thee," and "Are we going to respond?" composed the burden of the message of the evening.

September 28 was observed as Rally Day, and it was on this Sunday that we formally initiated the new religious education program. There was a decided air of newness in the services, yet withal a sense of peace and divine approval rested over us. Every detail was nicely taken care of. Some of the congestion and confusion has been done away with, as the primary children are being cared for at the home of the pastor. Sister Grace Thiehoff has been chosen as our religious education director, with Sister Eva Ruffcorn in charge of the children's division; Sister Mabel Hill, the young people's division; and Sister Mae Wellman the adult group.

Apostle Gleazer chose as a text for his morning sermon, "Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power." He based his remarks for his closing sermon at the evening hour on "Modern altars." A baptismal service held at the South Side Branch in the midafternoon enlisted thirteen more for the church.

September 30 the priesthood enjoyed a beautiful meeting at their special prayer service, and it was at this time that they decided to hold meetings, such as this, prior to each sacramental service.

We were made sad to learn of the untimely death of Brother Edwin Wildermuth, jr., who was killed in an automobile accident September 30. Elder Blair Jensen officiated at the funeral.

Rally Days at Coldwater, Michigan, and Elkhart, Indiana

September 21 a fine congregation of Saints and friends responding to the call of Branch President Starr Corless, assembled at the church at Coldwater for Rally Day worship. People were there from Toledo, Jackson, Leonidus, Dowagiac, Battle Creek, East Union, Cornell District, and other points, and with the local membership gave splendid tone to the services of the day.

Sunday school at ten o'clock in the morning was enthusiastic, and the lesson theme, "Industrial education a necessity," was considered with interest and effect. At eleven o'clock the service was in charge of Elder Peer. A trio of girls rendered "I'm in this army." Elder S. W. L. Scott preached the sermon, "The world is waiting for its sunrise," a discourse full of hope and courage.

A bountiful dinner was served in the kitchenette, and a large crowd did justice to the wholesome repast. Much credit is given the sisters who served.

The afternoon service was in charge of the branch president, who conducted a round table. A number participated in the discussion of timely topics including coordination of departmental work in the church. The session was enlivened by musical numbers including one piano solo by our genial young brother, Judson Corless. A fine spirit pervaded the gathering during the day.

The oldest organized choir in Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan District rallied to the musical colors for this meeting. Sister Grace Peer accompanied, and Brother Scott directed. Many compliments were offered in the rendering of Professor McPhail's anthems written thirty years ago.

The following Sunday Elkhart Saints held Rally Day at the beautiful home of Brother and Sister Mark Wilsey. An unusually large gathering for Elkhart spent the day in social converse and divine worship.

"Zion" was the theme for three large classes of the Sunday school at ten o'clock. S. W. L. Scott, of Coldwater, had been announced through Elkhart papers as the speaker for the day. He occupied in three efforts, being assisted by Brothers Ferry and Walters. Sister Hough was director of music. The subjects treated by Brother Scott were "Zion as a cause," "Zion as a people," "Zion as a land," "Zion as a city."

Attendants from Gary, Berrien Springs, Buchanan, Mishawaka, South Bend, and Coldwater united in mutual interest to advance the latter-day work, and a number of nonmembers were present. Some of the latter brought and used notebooks and pencils.

A delicious dinner was served cafeteria style, and all enjoyed temporal blessings. An abundance was served and the food, like the widow's meal, furnished the evening's repast.

With heart and hand in the cause of Zion, Brother and Sister Wilsey gladly furnished the opportunity for Saints and friends to gather from various points to rally round the latter-day standard. Their home was open for service Monday evening, and some nonmembers returned to hear the word preached, promising to attend Sunday school the next Sunday.

Far West Stake

Stewartsville

Rally Day, generally observed throughout the church, was observed at Stewartsville Branch in connection with the promotion exercises of the primary and junior Sunday school classes. The promotion exercises were in charge of the assistant superintendent of the Sunday school, L. G. Ehlers, who gave a splendid address, and otherwise capably conducted the service.

At the eleven o'clock service Patriarch Samuel Twombly gave his usual helpful and uplifting sermon. Brother Twombly's kindly and hopeful efforts are always welcomed by the people here. His sermons at eleven o'clock, at half past two, and in the evening at eight o'clock were much enjoyed by a large crowd.

Six of our young people entered the waters of baptism following the afternoon service, which was one of the most eventful and pleasing features of the day.

In all we feel this was an enjoyable and eventful day for us. We hope that throughout the church there prevails a spirit rallying the members to the cause of Christ.

Brother T. A. Ivie, pastor, is much relieved from his afflicted condition. We hope he continues on the way to recovery. Brother Ivie has been handicapped in his work, and many will be glad to hear of recovery of health.

Hammond, Indiana

1153 Monroe Street

There was a season of quiet organ music; a quartet sang "Take time to be holy," and from the quiet and peace came a beautiful spirit, enhancing the first meeting of the month, the sacramental service. Covenants were renewed, and the sacred feeling of fellowship prevailed. We are happy for such experiences. This same feeling has been manifested in Wednesday night prayer meetings, and we are glad to have our circle gradually widened to include those who feel that they need the "spiritual refueling" from time to time.

In our busy life, College Day was not forgotten. There was a special program at the eleven o'clock hour. Graceland songs were sung and talks were given concerning various phases and outlooks on the life at Graceland. To those of us who have been benefited by Graceland and the scholarship fund, it means so much that we can never do enough to help others to understand and appreciate the great cause.

Brother Osler, district president, has been with us again, cheering us with his friendly counsel. On Sunday he preached an interesting sermon, using the twenty-third psalm as his text. In this time of depression the words of faith, "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want," are very comforting.

Last Sunday a large group of Hammond Saints met and worshipped with the Chicago Saints at the Central Church. We feel that these occasions give us new angles of approach to our religion and cheer us along the way.

The thought of Christmas offering has been uppermost in our minds of late. At present our school is engaged in a contest, the men versus the women. We have chosen the church colors for our banners, and hope to promote a friendly rivalry with the growth of our offering as the big objective.

The spirit of fellowship and good feeling prevailed as a result of a social evening held at the home of Pastor R. W. Smith. Songs, moving pictures, games, and eats were some of the evening's features. Another get-together was held at the home of Brother and Sister Clair Ellis to present Brother and Sister Herbert Myers with many useful gifts for their home.

Brother Clem Evans, of Chicago, has been here on three consecutive Sunday evenings, using different phases of Zion as the subject of his discourses. One can not help feeling the urge to do his part when such an earnest appeal is made.

Like many others, our vacations are over and everyone is back at his usual post of duty. Much effort is being expended to make our meetings interesting, worshipful, and worth while for all.

Wells, Michigan

Elder A. M. Boomer came to Wells, Michigan, about eleven years ago. The work was new here, and he found only three members of the church besides his own family. About a year later a fully organized branch was established. This branch has grown to one hundred and seven members. Eight have been ordained to the priesthood. A lively group was brought to the gospel standard in Wells, all departments of church work thriving. It was later learned that two or three members of the church were living in Gladstone, a town five miles from Wells. Street car service made it easy for these people to attend meetings in Wells.

Elder Boomer began holding meetings in Gladstone in the homes of the members, and arrangements were made for the district missionary to bring the district tent to that place and hold a series of meetings. One was gained through baptism.

Several months afterwards the branch bought a church building in Gladstone. Then arrangements were made for Elder Ernest Burt, district missionary, to come to the assistance of the Saints. After a few meetings were held in Wells and Elder Boomer was just finishing a series of replies to a local minister, the work of the Saints was brought directly to the attention of the people. The minister with whom Brother Boomer and the district missionary were engaged in controversy carried his lectures into the daily papers, which have wide circulation in the Upper Peninsula. This made many friends for our church. Following this, meetings were started in the Gladstone church, and continued for several weeks. Toward the close thirty people were baptized; and each year since, others have been added.

With the addition of members the problems of the local ministry have increased. Our pastor was alert to the needs of the flock. Classes were organized for study among the priesthood and also the members. Meetings were planned with the needs of all in mind. An active interest was taken in all departments, and the young people were given direction in fields of service.

We have known Brother Boomer to attend on the average seven meetings a week for months at a time, and to walk more than two miles through bitterly cold winter weather to comfort and administer to the Saints, many times when the hour was late. He never was heard to complain because of his arduous work. In time of trouble among the members he was willing to listen to both sides of the question and give all concerned consideration before a decision was rendered. Those who have known him for years have much confidence in his ability to serve as a pastor. He has great love for harmony and peace among the Saints, and his friends outside the church are numerous.

His decision to ask for release from the work of pastor was heard with regret by many who appreciate his services. We have confidence in and respect for him, our friend and helper.

To preside as pastor of the branch, Elder Warner Acker, of Rapid River, Michigan, formerly from Munising, was chosen, and we look to a year of continued growth and progress.

It is hoped that in time to come Brother Boomer's voice will be heard from the pulpit and in class work.

We hope to labor together in the work of Christ in latter days. It is our prayer that we may move forward in unity to accomplish the tasks before us, making our lives effective in bringing about Zion conditions.

Onaway, Michigan

August 25 Missionary J. J. Ledsworth and wife arrived in Onaway after attending the Park of Pines reunion, and they were received with a hearty welcome. On their way to the reunion from the northern part of the district, Brother and Sister Ledsworth stopped at Onaway. Brother Ledsworth held a few meetings and baptized three fine people into the church. Before he left he and Pastor Fred Truax organized a booster club and set everybody in the branch at work on family evangelism.

On August 25 Brother Ledsworth started another series of missionary meetings, and on August 31 he baptized fourteen more into the church, thirteen young people and one lady sixty-six years old. On the eve of the confirmation service, there were ten children blessed. A program put on by five young girls was very nice.

Brother Ledsworth baptized twenty into Onaway Branch in the month of August, and we believe there are others near the door of the kingdom. We hope it will not be too long before our missionary comes back again to hold meetings. He gives us some fine, spiritual sermons. May the good Lord help us all to do our part in his work is our prayer.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The chorus from "Maritana," by Wallace, was the musical prelude for the worship period of the church school service Sunday morning. Before classes were called, there were hymns, prayer, and a solo. The choir sang "Praise ye the Father," by Gounod-Rees, at the service period, and there was a sermon by C. G. Mesley.

Sunday afternoon the stake oratorio chorus met for its first rehearsal.

A specially organized octette sang for the evening service, "How lovely are thy dwellings," Liddle-Fagge. This group of singers plans to rehearse regularly and furnish the programs for the evening services. Brother Eugene Christy was in charge of the song service. Bishop J. A. Becker was the speaker.

At the Harvest Festival in the Auditorium about twelve thousand quarts were displayed in attractive booths. Kansas City Stake again won the blue ribbon, awarded groups outside of Independence, for its booth arrangement and contribution. We had more than fourteen hundred quarts.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards, who has just returned from England, will begin a series of talks to the stake young people next Sunday evening. He will discuss with them the twentieth century message of the church. Everyone is invited to hear the message for this generation.

Argentine Church

The speakers Sunday were Elder Harry M. Gunion in the morning and Elder Alvin Knisley at night. Brother Knisley discoursed on "Contacts with the clergy," his wide experience affording him a fund of material concerning many contacts with the ministry of other churches.

The infantile paralysis quarantine of Kansas City, Kansas, ended at noon Saturday, October 11, so the deferred Rally Day scheduled for September 28, will be held in Argentine October 19. All members and former members are expected to attend.

Gladstone Church

October 5 the church school was well attended. Several members were present who had not been attending during the summer months. Sacramental service at eleven o'clock was attended by several who have been absent for some time. A welcome is extended to all Saints who may worship with us, and especially those who live close to the meeting place, which is at Anderson and Van Brunt Boulevard. A sign has been set up bearing the name of the church and the hours of services.

At six the O. B. K.'s and the adults held a joint prayer service. The sermon was delivered by Elder C. A. Selbe, answering questions from the question box. The questions were placed in the box during the week preceding the sacramental meeting. A series of special meetings is planned to commence Monday evening, October 13, to be held in different sections of the neighborhood in the homes of the Saints. This will continue a week or ten days. Visiting and tracting are to precede these special efforts.

Holden Stake

Lees Summit

The Women's Department held an all-day meeting at the pretty country home of Sister Silsby, on Highway 50, the last Tuesday in August. A bounteous basket dinner was served cafeteria style, and the afternoon lesson was "Physical training," by Doctor Teel.

A lovely bridal shower in honor of Miss Dorothy Flynn was given recently by Sister Floyd Danielson. Many beautiful and useful presents were received, and dainty refreshments were served by the hostess and Gladys Silsby.

Sunday, September 14, after the morning services, the congregation went to the home of Sister Haas for a surprise birthday dinner. Dinner was served on the lawn.

The new religious education plan is progressing nicely in our branch. On Rally Day we had Brother Hoisington, of Independence, as morning speaker. The sermon was very good. Twenty-five members who do not attend regularly were present at the morning service. Pastor Gomer R. Wells has outlined a visiting plan that will put every ordained man to work.

Marshall

The Spirit was with us to comfort and to bless at the October sacramental meeting. Sister Ethel Burnett read a beautiful poem at the beginning of the hour.

The priesthood met for a five o'clock prayer meeting. They report a splendid meeting, each prayer being seasoned with wisdom from on high.

The infant son of Brother and Sister Robert Sparks was blessed by Elders Thayer and T. L. McCormick Sunday evening. Also the infant daughter of Sister Joseph James was blessed that evening.

On Tuesday evening, October 7, at the home of Pastor T. L. McCormick, occurred the marriage of Cassie Opal Johnson, daughter of Brother and Sister Marion Johnson, to James Owen Freeman.

The fall festival is in session this week in Marshall. This is a yearly event.

Skiatook, Oklahoma

Skiatook Sunday school attendance has grown, and interest is being shown in all services.

Annual election of officers was held, and September 28 the Sunday school officers were installed and promotion day exercises were had. The program was splendid.

The Women's Department is taking up winter activities and has opened a lunchroom in the church basement for the benefit of the school children. This undertaking is moving

She married Thomas W. Evans in Iowa in 1875. After hav-ing been a resident of Nebraska for thirty-five years she moved to California in 1925 and in June of that year was baptized a member of the church by D. R. Snively, at Stockton. Passed away at Stock-ton May 26, 1930. The funeral was in charge of the branch president and held in the Wallace Funeral Parlors. The body was interred in Norfolk, Nebraska. Mrs. Evans was the mother of nine children, four of whom died in infancy. Left to mourn are four sons: John A. and Samuel G., of Stockton; Grant H., of Portola, California; Charles W., Norfolk, Nebraska; one daughter, Mrs. Mary Gates, Broughton, Kansas; fifteen grandchildren, twelve great-grand-children; a host of friends and acquaintances. Mrs. Evans had a sunny and lovable disposition, was patient in distress and loyal to her church. She set an example of faith and endurance for all. Interment was beside her husband at Norfolk, Nebraska.

BARNARD.—Mary Annie Barnard was born January 23, 1854, in Denmark. Came to America in 1857. Was married to Anthony Barnard, and to them were born four children, one dying in in-fancy. Three daughters are left to mourn: Josie Barnard, Ida Barnard, Lilly Barnard, all living in Deer Lodge Valley, Montana. He was sick about four years and during this time spent twenty-seven months in the hospital. Between two extended sojourns at the hospital he seemed to gain strength and was fairly on the road to complete recovery, but during his last sickness his doctors seemed unable to do anything for him. He was administered to on several occasions. A service was held Sep-tember 27, at Port Elgin in the Saints' church, Elder J. A. Morrison, of Owen Sound, in charge. The funeral cortege then went to Owen

Redfield, Great Falls, Montana; Fred Hovey, Canada; Paul N. Hovey, Half Moon, Mont-ana. She joined the church in Canada, in 1907, and was faithful to her covenant to the end. UYEDA.—Koto Mae Shirota Uyeda, daughter of Ichijo and Masa Shirota, of Hilo, Hawaii, was born at Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii, May 31, 1910. Baptized by M. A. McConley at Hilo, Hawaii, August 25, 1918. Koto came to the States on a visit in March, 1929, remain-ing for about two months in the home of Brother and Sister Myron A. McConley, at Los Angeles. She then went to reside with her aunt, Mrs. Henry Yoshiga, of Gallup, New Mexico, and became the June bride of Frank Uyeda, of that city. She died August 17, 1930, at Albuquerque, New Mexico, leaving her husband and infant son and many relatives and friends in Hawaii and elsewhere to mourn her death. Koto's family are among the leading Japanese members of the Hilo Branch, where for several years she was the organist and a Sunday school teacher. Thus another member is transferred from the church militant to the church triumphant.

SCHABEN.—Peter Schaben, son of Gerhardt and Gertrude Schaben, was born in Cassville, Wisconsin, September 7, 1869, and departed this life October 5, 1930. He was united in marriage Aug-ust 30, 1892, to Emma Kueffer. To this union nine children were born: Godfried, who died at the age of eleven years; Hermina (Mrs. Earl Moore) of Bazine, Kansas; Flora (Mrs. L. Cooley), Bazine; Herman, Bazine; Wanda (Mrs. George O'Brien), Bazine; Odessa (Mrs. Hubert Libby), Bazine; Neville (Mrs. Philip Deines), Hooker, Oklahoma; Glenster and Norval, of Bazine. Besides his immediate family there are left to mourn the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. Sophie Petersille and Mrs. Kate Raskopf, of Ness City, Kansas; Mrs. Celia Holmes, Hasty, Colorado; Mrs. Maggie Meyers, Bazine, Kansas; Mrs. Anna Henderson, Spring Valley, Minnesota; John Schaben, Bazine, Kansas; William G. Schaben, and an adopted brother, Edward Schaben, of Bazine, Kansas. He moved to Ness County, Kansas, with his parents from Iowa at the age of ten years, where he resided till death took him. He was a devoted husband and a loving father. He united with the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints in 1917. Mr. Schaben was the Director of the Bazine Rural High School Board, president of the Bazine Oil Company, and a member of the Wheat Growers' Association. Be-sides his family he leaves many grandchildren and other relatives and a host of friends to mourn. The community loses a faithful friend and coworker. The funeral services were held at the Bazine Rural High School Auditorium, Wednesday afternoon.

A number of nonmembers are interested in the church teachings.

There is a nice group of young people at Skiatook, and a program is planned which will interest them in the church and its undertakings.

For the Local Church School

On another page will be found some suggestions for those who are responsible for local church work. These suggestions are not the product of any single person's pen, but are the result of the conference of many church workers. They are given as offering a new opportunity to those who wish to do all that they can to help the church to serve the needs of the members. These recommendations have the indorsement of the leading officers of the church, and it is hoped that they will be carefully read by all who are interested in church work.

It is believed that these suggestions point the way to a new step in the growth of our church work. Although there is nothing compulsory about them, it is felt that they will be thoughtfully received and acted upon, because their merits make them worth while.

Training for Church People

If any one thing indicates the present mood of the people of the church it is the readiness and enthusiasm with which they attend and support the organized efforts at self-improvement as members and as workers of the church. This is a most promising and commendable trend, and points to better things in the future for the development of the church.

Such training is not like a crop of wheat, from which the benefits are all reaped within the year. The benefits return slowly at first, but they continue to return over a long period of time, and in turn cause other benefits to come. Five and ten years from now, and even later, we will still be receiving good from the efforts now put forth.

Following close after the very successful Harvest Festival is the School for Training in Religious Education being held at the Stone Church in Independence, October 20 to 30. This work received a fine introduction on the evening of Sunday, October 19, in the Rally Day and special worship service, at which President F. M. McDowell delivered a stirring and challenging talk to a large audience.

Other institutes and series of services will be held elsewhere this fall. In Kansas City Stake, the O. B. K. organization is sponsoring a special week's services for the young people, for which Apostle F. Henry Edwards has been asked to deliver the sermon each evening at Central Church. In the first of the series, which began Sunday evening, October 19, the speaker delivered an inspiring appeal to the audience which filled the church.

These are but two of a number that will be held, and we hope to have news of more to come. Reports will be found in the news columns.

"And a Little Child Shall Lead"

One sunny morning early in October a little family in the Englewood congregation, Independence, was preparing to celebrate. In that home is a boy whose first name is Charles, and it was Charles's birthday. He was seven years old, old enough to be very much interested in Sunday school and church, which he attends every Sunday morning with his parents.

There had previously been a consultation between Charles's parents regarding the matter of a present, which must have run something like this:

"The child needs so many things, but we can't give him much." This from the thrifty mother. "It's hard to decide what he needs the most."

"He's growing up, mother; he's a little man. Charles is getting old enough to decide for himself. Suppose we put the responsibility on him. He'll decide."

And so they agreed to give the little boy a bright silver dollar for his birthday.

Now it so happens that the congregation to which this family belongs has, for more than five years, met for worship in a basement room, the start and foundation of a new church home. During all the time they have met "downstairs," they have dreamed of the superstructure, and the Building Fund is an important topic in the conversation of Englewood Saints. The membership has, in the recent past, increased to the extent that it is positively uncomfortable and almost impossible to meet all together for class work. The conference in Zion has considered the "Englewood building condition" and has put it first on the building program of the center place. It is hoped soon to complete the building.

there. And toward this end individuals and classes and groups are putting forth every effort to add to the Building Fund.

When Charles was presented with his birthday present, his father said, "This money is for you to spend as you please, son. It's your birthday, and mother and I want you to have something that you really want. There are many things you need, but you're to choose what you want the most."

The child's decision was quickly made. A happy smile broke over his face. He had thought of the thing next to his heart. "Mother," he burst out, "it's just what I wanted! Now I can pay something on the Building Fund!" And he did. That same week the whole dollar went to Englewood's bishop's agent, and Charles proudly displayed a receipt bearing the words: "For Englewood Building Fund, one dollar, given by Charles Betts." Charles's heart is indeed where his treasure is, and when the time comes that he sits in a new Sunday school room, it will be with a sense of ownership and responsibility.

In his decision this little boy reflects the attitude of his home and parents. Though he is too young to yet be a member, he feels the responsibility a member should feel. As an incipient business man Charles is sound, as a church man he gives promise of being a real Latter Day Saint.

Are we like this small boy, foregoing something we actually need to be able to make our contribution to the church? Where are our treasures? Our hearts? Here is another of the numerous examples in which a little child leads us. Are we good followers?

Fall Is the Time for Growth

In many ways, especially for the church, fall is the most important time of year. It is the time to make acquaintances, to renew friendships, and to build congregations. The nature lovers, who in warm weather boast that they prefer to worship the Father in natural temples, are now driven by sharp temperatures from their visits to hills and woods and are willing to worship within the sheltering walls of a comfortable church. It is the opportunity of the church once more to offer them a place to go; it should take this opportunity of awakening them to a sense of the values of religion and to make them regular attendants at its services.

Fall, too, is a time of planning, organizing, expanding. Children are growing up and must be taught. Young people are becoming men and women, and must be allowed to work and develop. New classes must be organized and new plans initiated.

At this time the churches frequently make whatever changes they plan for the year. It is a good time for such changes, as the church year coincides in many ways with the school year, and October is a much better turning point than January.

Fall is the time for church growth. If we falter now, can we complain when the spring shows us a barren year?

Christmas Offering News

First Chicago or Traverse City?

The following telegram is the first complete branch report to reach headquarters:

"October 13, 8.10 A. M.

"The Sunday school Christmas offering quota of three hundred dollars has been passed by First Chicago Branch and we still have over two months to go. Average membership eighty-three. Superintendent Elder John Pettersson.—Joseph Louis Gautchier."

Traverse City, Michigan, reported under date of September 22 that they had passed their goal with one hundred eighty-four dollars already raised. If this sum is one tenth or more of the branch budget for general church expense, Traverse City will lead the list, making First Chicago, second.

We congratulate these two branches on their energy and spirit of earnest endeavor. We are sure their gift made through willing sacrifice is pleasing to the Master, for whose sake it is given.

THE DEPARTMENT OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

These Times

Our motors pierce the clouds. They penetrate
The depth of oceans. Microscopes reveal
New worlds to conquer, while we dedicate
Our intellects to strength of stone and steel.
We are as proud as those who built a tower
To reach to heaven. Recklessly we rear
Our lofty Babels, arrogant with power.
How dare we boast of cities while we hear
The nations groping through the dark along
The road of life? What right have we for pride
Till Truth is steel, and Faith is iron-strong,
Till God and man are working side by side?
Then let our prayers and labors never cease;
We act the prologue of a masterpiece.

Doctor Fosdick's New Pulpit

Since his resignation as a Baptist preacher in the pulpit of New York's First Presbyterian church, during the recent heated fundamentalist-modernist controversy, Doctor Harry Emerson Fosdick has been more than ever before the center of attention for the eyes of religious America. Doctor Fosdick has long been the spiritual pastor of many who could not accept the established traditions of the churches, and yet would not give up Christ, and who have staunchly maintained, under Doctor Fosdick's leadership, their right to retain the message and gospel of Jesus.

The fundamentalists were mistaken if they thought they could deprive Doctor Fosdick of an audience by turning him out of one pulpit. Immediately the whole country became his parish and its people his congregation, with many interested listeners in other countries.

From the new Riverside church in New York City, which opened Sunday, October 5, Doctor Fosdick will continue to be the voice of inspiration to many who could not follow in the old ways. There, in the very heart of wealth and worldly skepticism, he will stand between the lines of the world and the churches to proclaim the message of Jesus as he understands it. In his present position he is compared by the Christian Century with Henry Ward Beecher and Phillips Brooks.

Whatever the rest of the Christian world may think of his opinions, they can not doubt the courage and integrity of Doctor Fosdick.

To Stop Lynching

Lynching is still one of the blots on the record of American history. It is to be regretted that some States which had clear records for some years have suffered a relapse, and there have been unexpected lynchings spreading to northern States.

Why is a lynching worse than an ordinary murder? It is in part, as well as an effort to overreach the law, an expression of the worst form of ill will, which is race hatred. This ill will, between neighboring countries, would bring war; between groups of nearly equal size it would bring revolution. But with a hopelessly outnumbered group like the Negroes of the United States, it is answered only with anxiety, suffering, and patience.

It should be noted that the Negroes, at least, are acting the part of Christians. They are pinning their faith on the belief that a thing so wrong and horrible, repugnant to normal healthy human nature, will die of itself. They sue for peace, and again for peace, and it seems that at last, much belated, their voices are being heard by the white man's conscience, which has had an exceedingly deaf ear.

Six leading Southerners have accepted appointment on a commission for the study of the causes and the formation of a program to prevent lynching. They are George F. Milton, of the Chattanooga News; Doctor Howard W. Odum, of the University of North Carolina; Julian Harris, of the Atlanta Constitution; Alex W. Spence, a lawyer of Dallas, Texas; Doctor W. P. King, book editor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and Doctor W. J. McGlothlin, president of Furman University and president of the Southern Baptist Convention. There will be an advisory committee composed of four of the leading Negro educators and college presidents.

A Great World Issue—Unemployment

The problem of unemployment is now more than an economic question. It is so great that it has become a political issue, and it promises to bulk largely in future discussions of church problems, especially for a church like ours that avows so great an interest in the full range of the affairs of men, and asserts so emphatically that religion must be carried into everyday life.

We have assumed that every man has a right to earn a living honestly. But it seems the world can not provide the means of his doing it. Must we always continue to hear the pathetic voice of hungry children crying for bread? Must mothers starve and suffer, while fathers, with idle time wasting their most productive years, wear out their thin shoe leather searching for work?

Something is wrong. There is too much food in the world, yet thousands of workingmen can not buy, because there is no place to sell the one thing they have to barter for it: labor. Warehouses are overstocked with cloth, yet many thousands need garments. What is the wall that stands between these great surpluses of unconsumed commodities and the impoverished market that needs them?

Unemployment is a problem for the best brains of the world, moved by the tenderest pity of aroused Christian feeling. We know that something must be done, but we know not what. We think that something can be done. Unemployment is a problem that will face industrial Zion as well as the rest of the world.

Health in the Home

IV. THE PLUMBING, WATER SUPPLY, AND SEWAGE DISPOSAL

In discussing these lessons with a home-maker friend, she most emphatically told me: "Make them practical. We all know we should have good homes without your telling us. What we want to know is something we can do to make our homes better." With this in mind we feel that this lesson ought to suit that friend. It is scientific as well as practical. That, too, is another qualification of the home maker and mother nurse—she must be a scientist—another of the "fifty-seven varieties" of professions embodied in the home maker. This subject may seem so dry on first thought you would wonder how you could be interested. I felt the same way until I began to look up material for the lesson. Then I found it very interesting. I hope this lesson may do as much for you.

Plumbing includes the water supply and sewage disposal. Leaking taps that can not be turned off should be repaired to prevent waste. If taps are turned off tightly each time used, the washer does not wear out so soon, thus preventing the leak.

Pure Water

Are you getting pure water when you turn on the tap in your home or go to the spring or well for water for your family? Impure water causes indigestion, diarrhea, dysentery, and typhoid fever. Samples of water may be sent to the laboratory of your state university for examination. All water contains bacteria. Some bacteria are not harmful, but you should have an assurance that there is a safe content of bacteria in your water. Avoid drinking at wayside wells and springs. When this is unavoidable, some authorities tell us that a drop of iodine added to the water helps to purify it. Boiling the water also purifies it, but this makes the water "flat," and your family will not drink as much water as they should. Drinking plenty of fresh, pure water is most important; at least two quarts daily for the average individual. There should be a plentiful water supply always, not only for cooking and drinking purposes, but for cleaning, washing, waste removal, and for fighting fire. In New York City the daily consumption of water is 135 gallons per person. The home that has an insufficient water supply has difficulty in keeping clean, which we discussed at such length in our last lesson.

In the country and small towns, where the source of water is from wells and springs, the water may be pure and satisfactory. They should be protected from contamination. It is a general rule that water for drinking should not come from a source at a lower level than a barn, privy, or other source of filth or dirt. A well should be provided with a cement top extended on the sides to prevent the seepage of the drainage into the top of the well.

Good water is clear and sparkling, without sediment of any kind, or any odor. Soft water is perhaps better than hard water for cleaning as well as drinking purposes, though there has been nothing positively proved regarding hard water actually injuring the tissues of the body. Carbonate of calcium is the element that usually makes water hard.

There is little that an individual can do about the water supply in the city, as that responsibility rests on the shoulders of the city government. We must rely on the integrity and intelligence of the city officials for this. Indirectly the health of home is often affected by the political machine of the city, so the mother nurse must also be something of a politician in order to protect the health of her flock, not only in the matter of water supply but sewage disposal, and a host of other health measures. Citizens should not be required to resort to the boiling of their water to make it safe; competent engineers should take that responsibility from the shoulders of the busy home maker.

Pure Ice

The question of a pure ice supply might be discussed in this lesson also. Bacteria may be in the water that is frozen, and freezing does not destroy many harmful bacteria. They have been found in ice that has been stored for six months. Manufactured ice is the most sanitary. The home maker can be absolutely sure of a pure ice supply—if her water supply is pure—if she has a Kelvinator, or any of the other like inventions for making ice in her own home; but many people do not have this convenience, and they must check the source of their supply. Electrical refrigeration also keeps food better than the old type of ice box.

Sanitary Disposal of Excreta

Waste materials given off from the body in the discharges from the alimentary tract and kidneys always contain bacteria. Aside from that they are offensive in odor and give a breeding place for flies. Flies lighting on such waste products of a person ill with typhoid fever and other diseases light on food or the baby's face and leave a trail of death and suffering in their wake. In the individual home without the advantages of a city sewer system, the common means of waste disposal is the outhouse or privy, which at their very best are filthy and disease producers. Where such privies have stood for years, even the soil surrounding the building becomes contaminated. Not infrequently the well is not far off. Let us be honest. Why do we find diarrhea and other digestive disturbances so frequently on our reunion grounds? Anyone who has given the matter a bit of thought can easily discover the reason. Some of the sanitation on our reunion grounds would be a disgrace to any religion, let alone Latter Day Saints? How can the Lord bless us when we are so slovenly? Even Moses in crossing the wilderness burned all the human discharges outside the camp. Will we ever come to the promised land? I have no hesitancy myself in positively saying "No" when we disobey the laws of hygiene and sanitation in this enlightened age. This is a task for our mother nurses that will call for valor and intelligence. Covering this filth with lime does not do much good.

And the Reunion Grounds!

Those in charge of reunion grounds should learn the manner in which these outside privies may be constructed in safety. Plans can be obtained from any Board of Health, or anyone desiring this information may make application of the Religious Education department of the church. There are instructions for making such a privy in Williams Hygiene and Sanitation, which may be purchased of W. B. Saunders Publishing Company, West Washington Square, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, for $1.50. To be candid, I think this entire book should be carefully studied from cover to cover by anyone who takes into his hands the responsibility of the health of a large group of people as attend our reunions. We can not give spiritual food with one hand, and disease with the other, and be intelligent (or Christian). I do not mean to say this harshly, but I do mean to say it emphatically.

Mother nurse, provide your home with sanitary plumbing if at all possible. The waste can then be delivered to a cesspool some distance from the house, and this will also serve for the disposal of waste water from your kitchen. If the cesspool is water tight, as in a septic tank, the overflow is directed to a series of pipes, and if not the pool must be cleaned at stated intervals.

Household Refuse

Organic waste, as paper, orange and lemon skins, vegetable husks, etc., should be burned in an iron basket. The noninflammable material must be removed and buried at times. There are methods for construction of an incinerator in connection with the chimneys of your home.

In the sanitary equipment of the home for the disposal of waste, plumbing is of the most importance. Plumbing pipes should be of wrought iron or brass, because the inside of a steel pipe corrodes and hence gets stopped up. All pipes must be water tight to prevent any leakage. Sewer gas given off from sewage material is not particularly dangerous to health but is mighty unpleasant. Traps in the sewer pipes keep this gas from coming back into the house.

A New Common Nuisance

In the home, swinging doors on the bathroom are not a necessity as in public toilets, where the hands should not touch a door knob. A shower bath in a public bathroom is the most sanitary. The feet should be encased in shoes or slippers in public bathrooms to prevent contracting "athletic foot," which is an infectious disease of the feet very prevalent since the World War. When your son or daughter goes away to school or on a trip, mother nurse, warn him of the health hazards of public toilets and baths.

Home Equipment

A tub in the home is almost indispensable, whether connected with a plumbing system or not. A shower is not practical for the bathing of children and old people. Children should be taught regarding the proper washing of the hands after using bathroom facilities. A high standard of living is an objective for the mother nurse. Practice in sanitary matters is in direct relation to the conveniences provided. If there is only cold water, there will be less washing of hands than when hot water is provided. If soap, hot water, and towels are handy, only the most careless person will fail to engage in these ceremonies of beautiful cleanliness.

We would like some suggestions as to what health topics you would like to see in these lessons.

The difference between pride and humility is like the difference between a head of wheat that is full and one that is empty. While the empty head holds itself boastfully aloft, the full head bows in humility.—Young People's Leader.

Windsor's Plan for Christmas Offering

Windsor, Ontario, reports a novel plan for the successful raising of their Christmas offering. Early in the year, the Christmas offering superintendent provides each member of the branch one envelope bearing the name and the amount pledged. On the face of the envelope, in ruled spaces, entries are made on the last Sunday of each month of the year. The offering is made monthly. Near the close of the year the pledges are checked up and those behind are visited. At the end of the year the envelope with its total entries is given to the member as his Christmas offering receipt.

This plan has much to commend its use. The Christmas offering superintendent for Windsor reports $184 on hand, of a set goal of $200.

The Meaning of Decision Day to Youth

By E. E. Closson

Today I read a statement similar to the philosophy of many young people. It ran: "Becoming Christian is not for the purpose of saving your own soul, but rather for the sake of losing yourself in service to others." Youth will rise to the challenge of sacrificial service, they will go to the extreme in helping others, but they no longer respond to this fearful threat: "Join the church or you are lost."

The church to me means a larger opportunity of doing good through an organized effort. Its saving power lies in the fact that it offers individuals the chance to reach a higher, better life through their efforts to bless others. Most young people of my acquaintance thoroughly believe that "he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it."

Decision Day to the young is an opportunity to sit down and look at life from many angles. What has the world to offer? What lasting joy and happiness is guaranteed through selfish hoarding, or through trivial amusements? Why is love a better principle to follow than hate? Do I need to worry about how others feel, or how they live—am I my brother's keeper? Does the restoration of the gospel mean anything to me? What avenues of service to humanity are open to me as a church member that I can not enjoy otherwise? And then a voice speaks above the din of worldly strife and sin:

Come, rouse thee, work while it is called today!
Onward, arise—go forth upon the way!

He who gives the most to life gets the most from living. When we all can see that truth and appreciate its significance, then we will gladly join our humble forces with others through the program of the church and give all that we have, all that we are, all we ever hope to be, to the church that offers everything desirable in return.

Becoming a member of the church opens to us the door of greater service. It gives us the chance to do things for Christ by doing them unto the "least of one of these."

Young people, in the vigor of your youth, accept the challenge of service offered to you through the church. Decide which course you will follow, and let nothing come between you and your soul's desire.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Organization of the Local Church School

THE DEPARTMENT OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION WITHIN A BRANCH OF THE CHURCH

This statement is an effort on the part of the general department to recommend a general plan of local organization of religious education and its manner of functioning as anticipated by the action of General Conference, April, 1930. This action provides in a single department for the religious education previously conducted in the separate programs of three departments, the Sunday school, Recreation and Expression, and Women's Department. The plan should be reasonably flexible to be adapted to the needs and possibilities of each locality, at least until the plan of a single, unified program has become well established in the church. The present advice should be acceded to in so far as it can be done consistently.

1. The Church School

The term church school is used to designate the organized provision of the branch or congregation to supplement the work of the priesthood in accomplishing the work of religious education. Under this plan the church school will function especially in the educational and creative aspects of study, worship, expression, social and recreational activities, and work projects within the congregation calculated to establish ideals, to build character, to develop an intelligent faith in the belief and program of the church, and to encourage loyal participation in activities and projects, both personal and social, in which the progressive purposes of its program shall be made effective.

2. The Church School Year

All yearly classes of the Sunday sessions of the church school properly start the first Sunday in October. Shorter courses may start when convenient. Promotion should occur the last Sunday in September, thus permitting the organization of new classes the following Sunday.

3. Organization

For purposes of class study and group activities, the church school will usually be divided into three convenient age groups or divisions.

The Children's Division—from birth to 12 years.
The Young People's Division—from 12 to about 24 years.

The Adult Division—about 24 up.

In large branches it may be desirable to recognize a further subdivision as follows:

The Children's Division:

Nursery Department—birth to 4 years.

Kindergarten Department—4 and 5 years.

Primary Department—6, 7, and 8 years, or Grades 1, 2, and 3.

Junior Department—9, 10, 11 years, or Grades 4, 5, and 6.

The Young People's Division:

Intermediate Department—12, 13, and 14 years, or Grades 7, 8, and 9.

Senior Department—15, 16, and 17 years, or Grades 10, 11, and 12.

Young People's Department—18 to about 24 years.

The Adult Division:

Adult Department—about 24 up.

4. Officers

The administrative officer of the church school in a branch is the director, who should be closely associated in his work with the branch president or pastor. The director should be the one person best qualified in personality, spiritual growth, general ability, training, and tact for the responsibilities of the office. An active man of the priesthood would have that additional qualification.

In most branches there should be three age-group supervisors, one each for the children, young people's, and adult divisions.

In large branches there will also be a superintendent for each of the seven departments below the adult division.

In a large branch it may be desirable for a women's activity leader to be chosen as an associate to the adult division supervisor. Her responsibility would be the direction and encouragement of week-day study or work groups such as child welfare, home building, sewing and aid, bazaars, church suppers, etc.

In a small branch it may be possible for a woman adult supervisor to meet all the needs of both supervisor and women's activity leader.

All projects having the making of money as an objective should be planned with the indorsement of the pastor and the branch financial agent.

A church school secretary should be chosen to keep the records of all church school activities within the branch occurring through the entire week. This may be the branch secretary or clerk, or one chosen as an assistant for this special responsibility.

Teachers, leaders, and other officers should be chosen or appointed as may be needed.

5. Elections

General officers should be elected at the time and in the manner usual for the election of other branch officers. Teachers and leaders should be chosen to take their places in October, when the program is built for the year.

Since the pastor is responsible for the administration of all activities of the branch, it seems reasonable that he should be accorded the privilege of placing a name in nomination as his choice for the director of the local church school. There should be freedom for other nominations from the floor of the business meeting. Final approval or choice should be made by the vote of the people.

In the selection of age group or division supervisors, the privilege of nomination should be extended, in like manner, to the director of the church school, after he has prayerfully canvassed the field and consulted with the pastor.

The membership may, by their vote, delegate to the pastor or director the power to choose other officers or leaders. But the choices should be submitted in a regular way for the approval of the branch.

Teachers and leaders of the children's division should be chosen by the division supervisor in a small school, or by the department superintendents in a large school with the approval of the church school council.

Teachers and leaders of the young people's and adult divisions may be chosen by concurrent action of the officers and classes or groups concerned.

6. Finance

It is strongly urged that the finance of the church school be upon the budget plan in connection with the other finances of the branch. All moneys would thus be received, disbursed, and accounted for by the branch financial agent. It is essential in this plan that there be but one treasury or depository for all funds of the branch, from which sums may be drawn as money is available for the most necessary expenditures at the time. Orders should be drawn by the proper branch authorities who have the supervision of all the interests of the branch.

The budget plan anticipates the making up of a branch financial program of proposed receipts and expenditures by each and all departments for the year. Until the branch budget is raised as a single fund, meeting all the needs of finance within the branch, the church school should budget or pledge itself to raise its reasonable share of the branch expense budget.

7. Councils

Frequent council is recommended among those responsible for specific phases of church school activity.

A church school council may consist of the pastor or branch president, the branch financial agent, the director of the church school, and the supervisors of the children's, young people's, and adult divisions. The church school secretary should act as secretary of the council.

This council should consider all major issues in the conduct of the school, frequently submitting its plans to the branch for approval.

A division council may consist of the supervisor and department superintendents within the division, with the pastor and director as ex officio members.

In very large schools a department council may consist of the department superintendent and teachers and leaders, with ex officio members.

8. Division Organization

Advice for the organization and work of the children's, young people's, and adult divisions will be prepared by the respective supervisors in the general department and printed in subsequent issues of the Saints' Herald.

Stake or District Organization

No elaborate set-up of machinery is planned for stake and district work in religious education. It is but a phase of the church work for which district officers are jointly responsible. It is recommended that a director of Religious Education be chosen to especially promote and direct the work of religious education in each stake or district. The director should be closely associated with the presidency of the stake or district to serve the best interests of the church in his territory, interpreting and carrying out the program of the general department.

The director should be an individual of strong personality, of extensive training in general education, and at least some special preparation and experience in religious education and leadership. He should have attained marked spiritual growth and possess tact and skill as a leader. He should be a student of religious educational principles, means, methods, and materials, and lead in the training program.

The man or woman best qualified, able and willing to serve as director should be chosen. If he be a man of the priesthood, he would have this additional qualification as a teacher and leader, and if serving in the presidency he would have a distinct advantage in his ministry.

The director will serve as an active exponent of religious education in his territory. He may assist in the organization of the church school and its administration in branches, under the direction of the presidency of the stake or district and under the advice of the general department.

With the presidency of the stake or district, the director will plan, organize, and encourage an effective program of religious education for his territory, endeavoring to carry out the purposes and plans of the general department. As other workers are available and the need develops, assistants to the director may be chosen in any particular line or activity.

Reporting

An annual report is expected from each branch pastor, covering the organization and functioning of the church school in the branch. This report is made directly to the First Presidency.

Further reports, perhaps quarterly, will be asked of each church school through its director and secretary, covering details of church school administration. These will be made out on blanks supplied by the general department and will be returned for record to the Department of Religious Education, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Information contained in the report will form the basis for helpful correspondence on the part of directors in the general department with the officers of the local church and with the director of the stake or district.

The director of stake or district will keep in close touch by personal visits or by correspondence with the local schools under his direction and will make such reports of the educational needs and progress within his territory and of his own activity as shall keep the general department fully informed of conditions, that there may be the most helpful relationships established and maintained for the carrying out of the purposes of the church in its program.

Man is born for action; he ought to do something. Work, at each step, awakens a sleeping force and roots out error. Who does nothing, knows nothing. Rise! To work! If thy knowledge is real, employ it; wrestle with nature; test the strength of thy theories; see if they will support the trial; act.—Flint Tidings.

The Preparation of the Child for Church Membership

By Bertha Constance Woodward

We should begin at birth to train our children for membership in a church which has a world work to do.

The eight-year-old child of consecrated Latter Day Saint parents usually wishes to be baptized. But does this desire come from a deeper motivation than that of the novel experience? Does the child understand what baptism means? Is he prepared to become a member of the church?

Since the child is to become a recognized unit of the church group through baptism, parents and leaders should be sure that he understands and sufficiently lives in conformity with the beliefs of the church to be a representative member. Every child member of the church can be a living example of that which to him is the program of the church. If a properly taught eight-year-old child could not have lived the teachings of the church, God would never have given the age of baptism by revelation. (See Doctrine and Covenants 68: 4.)

It is not expected that the child can understand the abstract terms used by adults, be able to interpret scripture, nor live the complicated life of an adult, but he can understand the fundamental principles which will help him to live close to God and nobly with his associates, if parents, teachers, and leaders take the time and make a prayerful effort to explain these principles to him in terms of his background of experience.

If parents and leaders are responsible for the interpretation which childhood places upon the principles of the gospel and the church program, they should be sure that their philosophy of life and religion is sound. The development of the immortal spirit seems to be the basic reason for life, and this spirit is developed as we live through the experiences of each day in keeping with the highest values we can conceive: moral values, health values, etc. These "highest values" can be adequately attained only when we believe in, and comply with, the principles of the gospel: faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment.

With the above philosophy as a basis, we can easily find the fields in which the child should be living at his best by the time he is eight years of age. The following questions will assist parents and teachers in making sure that their children are receiving adequate training for church membership. There has been no attempt to make the list complete. It is merely suggestive.

Points upon Which to Check the Child's Preparation for Baptism

1. Does the child understand that God wishes him to keep his body healthy? Does he know that he can grow to be a better and a more useful child if he keeps healthy? Are the Word of Wisdom and health rules understood and observed? Has the child been made to appreciate God's interest in health because of his provision for healing?

2. Is the child conscious of his responsibility in training his intellect? Does he realize that each day's school and home lessons, well prepared, will make him of greater service to the church group and to God? Is he developing his talents?

3. Will the child know right from wrong in the experiences which he is likely to meet? Has he been made to admire the story heroes who have met similar experiences? Has he formed the habit of trying to choose the higher value when there is opportunity for choice? Does he do right only because it pleases his parents, or has he also been taught the value of "right" to himself, to others, and to God?

4. Is the child neat in appearance, friendly, polite, and courteous? He limits his own happiness and his benefit to the world if he is not.

5. Does the child appreciate the material things over which man has been given dominion? Is he careful of property and personal belongings? Does he appreciate the value of money and that which it buys? Is he willing to give of his money to the church, or use it, when necessary, for the happiness of other people? Is he keeping his Junior Stewardship Record Book and paying whatever tithing he owes?

6. Does the child have faith in God? Has he made whole-hearted prayer habitual in his life? Does he enjoy taking part in the family worship and asking the blessing upon the food? Has he had experience in which he feels that God has answered his prayers? Does he know how to pray, and for what to pray? Does he take part in prayer and testimony meetings?

7. Has the child learned to repent? Does he appreciate the value of repentance? Does he know that repentance is necessary whenever he lives less than the best he knows in any field of experience—health, education, morals, finance, etc. Is repentance the easy and natural sequence of a wrong, or does the child hold a grudge? Has he been taught not to let the sun go down on his wrath?

The small child can not understand the word repentance, but he can easily be taught to right mistakes as nearly as possible and try never to make them again.

8. Does the child know the reason he should be baptized? Can he tell you how he should live if he is to be a baptized member of the church? Does he understand that he has a part in each sacrament service? Does he understand how a child can "renew his covenant"? Does he know the meaning of the words renew and covenant? Does he understand the symbolism of the sacrament?

9. Does the child know why hands are laid upon him in confirmation? Has he been told of the various ways in which the Holy Ghost comes to Saints? Does he know the names of the gifts of the Spirit and something of the nature of each?

10. Has he had the stories of the resurrection and eternal judgment explained to him in a way in which he can understand and appreciate?

11. Does he know some of the duties of each office in the priesthood? Does he know the officers in his own local church? Has he learned to appreciate and look forward to priesthood visits? Is his church attendance regular? Does he show reverence for the church house? Does his church-school teacher visit often in his home?

12. Has the child come to know and appreciate the wonderful stories of the life of Christ, of the Restoration, and of the history of the Saints who have lived faithfully that the Restoration movement might fulfill its purpose in the world? Does the child know the present general officers of the church? Does he know the outstanding projects which the church is now undertaking? Does he have an anxious desire to help build Zion? Is he being taught to feel that he can be a Zion Builder as he lives at his best each day?

Parents and teachers may use the questions as a basis for talks and lessons with the children. Most of the above suggestions can be taught in a simple way at a very early age.

If, as parents and leaders, we can teach the child to keep continually right with God, himself, and others, he will not feel a great load of sin being turned aside from him at the time of baptism. His normal development will not have been hindered by a feeling of guilt and fear. He will have felt that happy relationship of being one of God's family from his earliest recollections, and baptism, to him, will mean that he is now old enough to be depended upon to know right from wrong and can be publicly recognized in his desires and determination to assist his church group in making its contributions to the world.

To assist his church he must live rightly; therefore, he is converted to turn from whatever wrongs may exist in his life. He is born again—given a fresh start. This thought is a deep challenge to the child who senses the importance of his baptism. Just as the intensive training and practice of the school-teacher, doctor, and other professional people during their years of preparation bring to them an appreciation of the responsibilities which are soon to be theirs, in like manner the importance of the step of baptism can be sensed only by the child who has spent several years trying to live up to the beliefs of the church.

The Nursery Room

By Anne Friend Roberts

God gives us joy that we may give,
He gives us love that we may share,
Sometimes he gives us loads to lift
That we may learn to bear,
For life is gladder when we give,
And love is sweeter when we share,
And heavy loads rest lightly, too,
When we have learned to bear."
—Anonymous.

The Ten Commandments of the Nursery Room

1. Devote all of your time and attention while in the nursery room to the children in your care.
2. Let the children help in keeping the room tidy. Make them feel that it is their room.
3. Be truthful and sincere; keep your promises to the children.
4. Use a low voice and do not talk too much.
5. Never laugh at a child's questions; treat them seriously.
6. Willing, ready obedience is essential—have few rules and stay by them.
7. Ask children's advice about things, and respect their wishes.
8. Satisfy their curiosity. A child's capacity for understanding is equal to his curiosity.
8. Be as polite to the child as you would expect him to be to you.
10. Never permit a child to know that you are angry or out of patience. Set a good example at all times.

Helpful Suggestions for the Nursery Teacher

If a teacher is to utilize every opportunity for training in a nursery room, she must be alert to everything that happens.

If Helen gives her chair to the timid child, the teacher must be ready with a smile of approval. If Jimmie deliberately knocks down Joseph's house, his attention should be called to the unfairness of the act and he must be persuaded not to do it again.

If the child has helped to arrange and beautify the room, he will take more interest in it. He will feel that it is his room and that he is responsible for its condition.

Do not dictate too much as to how a child shall help. One day in the nursery a teacher asked, "Can you children think of anything we can do to make our room look better?"

James answered, "We can pick up our blocks."

"All right," said the teacher. "Let's pick up our blocks."

James had his own idea of how he liked to pick up blocks. He got the kiddy kar and rode on it while the other children placed the blocks on the space back of where he was sitting. He soon discovered this was a very slow process. So he placed the basket on the car and helped the other children pick up blocks. When the basket was full, he started to the far end of the room where the blocks were kept. But his load tipped over, and all the work had to be done over again.

The children only laughed as they cried, "We had a wreck!" But they were more careful the next time.

True it took much longer to pick up the blocks in this way, but the children turned their work into play that brought to them satisfaction and also taught them cooperation.

Children do not distrust others until they have cause to do so. It is exceedingly essential that children believe what the teacher says. The way to keep the faith of a little child is to tell the truth always.

Children are great imitators. If the teacher or parents speak in a loud, harsh voice, the children are quite apt to answer in the same tone of voice. Remember that our attitude and what we do counts for more than what we say. Give the child an opportunity to talk while you listen. You will thus learn what he needs so that you can say the thing that will help him to form right attitudes toward life.

Laughing at children sometimes brings serious results. When Jennie was a little child, her father moved to the country. She heard her mother mention that the shelf at the back of the house would be a good place to cool the milk. A neighbor said, "If you put your milk there, be sure to have it well covered. There is a big tom cat around here, and he will get into it."

Jennie had never heard of a tom cat, and as the shelf was quite high, she thought that this cat must be as large as a big dog anyway. There was a window near her bed. At night she would stay awake until she fell over from exhaustion for fear of the animal climbing in the window to get her. She would not ask about the cat, because she knew that her older brothers would laugh at her. This condition continued until one day when Jennie was in the yard with her mother, the cat ran across the garden, and her mother said, "There goes that old

One reader, ever watchful for items of interest to "Herald" readers, has sent in many valuable items. Extracts from a clipping taken from the "San Antonio Express" for October 9, are especially good.

Abilene, Texas, October 8.—Doctor E. D. Salkeld, pastor of the First Christian Church of Abilene for six and a half years, announced today he was withdrawing himself from all worldly activities and said, "From now on I will give my entire time to an attempt to develop a purely spiritual life."

He canceled his memberships in the Kiwanis Club, American Legion, and Masonic bodies, including the Shrine and Knights Templar.

He had his telephone removed, because he said, "Its incessant ringing is a distraction, with most of the calls unimportant and dealing with matters outside of my church."

"I have discovered," he said, in a statement, "that a preacher to work at his trade should give more time to study, preaching, and pastoral calling and tom cat." And Jennie saw that it was only a common cat.

Obedience to law is essential if we would be happy. The sooner we learn this the better. The little child who ran across the street, giving no heed to his mother's warning cry, was killed by an automobile. Ready obedience would have saved his life.

If we evade a child's questions, it makes him only the more anxious to gain that information, and he may not get the thoughts we would wish him to have. Therefore it is wise to answer his questions satisfactorily so that his mind will be at rest and his curiosity appeased.

Little Bennie would not help put his blocks away. The assistant teacher failed to get him to respond to her demands. So the teacher undertook to see that Bennie obeyed. As a last resort, Bennie, backed into the farthest corner and looking the teacher in the eye, said, "You didn't say please." This teacher will not soon forget this rebuke from a little child.

If you feel your patience slipping when dealing with a trying situation, tell the child that you will get chairs and sit down and talk it over together. This will give you time to gain control of your emotions. Do not use a loud voice, but speak firmly in a way that will carry conviction. A nursery teacher must be able to control her emotions and keep an even temper at all times if she expects the children under her care to develop into individuals with stable characters.

less to mere organizations and being a 'man about town.' The modern church is hopelessly overorganized and pitifully excited about matters extraneous to the kingdom of God.

"That is one reason why the quality of preachers has been deteriorating. They know increasingly more about secular politics and budgets and drives, but increasingly less about Christ. The average preacher has become the promoter of denominational organizations, highly organized and competing against one another. In my opinion, the church and the kingdom of God are not synonymous. We have been emphasizing the church as an organization far too much and to that extent have departed from true Christianity. Christ was not interested in mere churches. Salvation is the reward or result of one's life and does not come by observance of mere forms, rites, or ceremonies.

"My deepest instincts tell me a preacher is better off if he abstains from activity in politics, and my conviction in this respect is all the deeper in the light of my own past activities as an attempted political leader, in which I consumed time belonging to my congregation. During the war thousands of ministers—I among them—preached a doctrine of hate and incited the most barbarous butcheries, as well as broadcasting a lot of things that have proved to be falsehoods; and this, as much as anything else, has undermined the preacher's influence.

"I have been preaching since 1904, and all the time a public man, 'a man about town,' and now, at fifty-two, I find myself looking at the shortcomings of man with a new tolerance, and, I hope, a better understanding. One of the great lessons I have learned is that man can differ with me and be as honest in his convictions and possibly as right as I am."

A PASTOR JOINS THE DO-IT-NOW CLUB

Elder W. T. Lowe, of South Side Branch, Omaha, Nebraska, has just sent in two subscriptions to the Herald.

Every pastor should be intensely interested in the circulation of the church papers among his congregation. He should make a check-up to learn how many are receiving church papers.

The life of the church, as well as effective membership, depends upon frequent communication from the officers of the church to the people. Those who are out of communication will soon lose in the race.

Denver, Colorado

During the past few weeks the members of the priesthood, under the direction of the pastor and assisted by others of the branch, have been actively engaged in making preparation for the fall missionary campaign which Brother Smith has just begun. The city has been divided into sections, with an elder in charge of each. Friends and members are being visited and invited to attend all services. That much good is being accomplished is proved by the increased attendance, especially at the evening meetings.

September 25 a banquet was held in the basement of the church, as a preliminary to Rally Day, which was observed the following Sunday. A delicious dinner was prepared by the women under the direction of Sister Myrtle Bennett, and was enjoyed by one hundred and twenty-five members and friends. Sister Blanche Vosmer had charge of the tables and the serving, and was assisted by a number of the girls. An interesting program was presented by members of the adult's, the young people's, and the children's departments, after which Brother E. J. Williams, toastmaster, introduced Brother Richard Salyards, jr., director of Religious Education, who gave a brief talk on his ambition and desires for the progress of the work this winter. He then presented the heads of the various departments. Clarence Bruno, supervisor of the adult group, outlined his aims and plans for the activities of his department during the winter. Glenn Holmes told what he had in view for his group, the young people. Sister Louisa Fishburn, as head of the children's department, described what she and her assistant, Sister Ella Parker, hope to accomplish for the good of the little ones. A spirit of good fellowship prevailed, and if one may judge by the laughter and beaming faces, as well as the quiet attention during serious moments, the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The Rally Day services September 28 were quite well attended. An inspiring program for the day's activities had been prepared by the pastor and his associates. During the church school hour, Sister Louisa Fishburn gave a reading, "You can count on me," and R. S. Salyards, jr., talked briefly on our aims. For the organ interlude Mrs. E. W. Fishburn played "Reverie in D Flat." The choir sang, "Fear not, O Israel," by Max Spicker. The subject of the pastor's sermon was "Purposeful church activities."

A basket lunch was served in the basement at noon, and many of the Saints stayed for the half past two o'clock service, which was a round table discussion of branch activities conducted by Brother Smith.

From 7 to 7.45 an entertaining musical program was presented by the choir under the leadership of Sister Alice Milligan. At the evening service the choir sang "Love and praise." Sisters Alice Milligan and Ruth Robertson sang "How excellent is thy name." The sermon by the pastor was "Keeping first things first." The busy day was closed by the singing of "Consecration" by the congregation.

The adult group held a social gathering in the basement of the church on Thursday evening, October 2. Mr. William G. Mitchell, head of the South Denver School of Music, sang several songs.

The church was comfortably filled for the sacramental service Sunday morning. The pastor was assisted in this service by Elders G. F. Walling, E. J. Williams, R. S. Salyards, jr., and J. B. Wildermuth. Attendance in the evening was good. At this time Brother Smith preached the first of a series of Sunday evening missionary sermons. His subject was "What we believe," showing the reasonableness of belief in a supreme Creator.

Sunday evening, September 21, we were pleased to have a visit from Apostle J. F. Curtis, and to listen to one of his inimitable sermons.

Adam Kohankie, superintendent of Washington Park, has generously supplied the church with beautiful cut flowers for the Sunday services all summer. Mr. Kohankie is justly famed as a landscape gardener and a grower of flowers. Denver Saints deeply appreciate his munificence. His wife is Sister Laura Kohankie, who is well known to visiting missionaries.

Sister Melvina Cooper, who has been in Kansas City, Independence, and Colorado Springs, since last General Conference, has returned to Denver and is with her daughter, Sister Ruth Robertson. We are pleased to welcome her back.

In September Grace Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Holmes, and James Franklin Schaeffer, son of Mrs. Nannie Schaeffer, were married at Colorado Springs by Elder J. D. Curtis. They are making their home in Denver.

Des Moines, Iowa

717 East Twelfth Street

October 4.—Elder and Mrs. C. Malcor, of Aurora, Illinois, visited this branch August 17. Elder Malcor occupied the eleven o'clock hour, using for a subject, "Character; what is it and how build it?"

Priesthood meeting was held in the pastor's study August 30. Plans for the fall and winter program were taken into consideration.

"Youth's heritage" was the theme of the morning service conducted by our young people August 31. Splendid talks were given as follows: "Great personalities," Eva Cook; "Our spiritual heritage," Vivian Castings; "Our institutional heritage," James Parker; "Youth work today and tomorrow," Gladys Barr Lloyd; a solo, "I strive each day," Verba Parker. We are justly proud of our young people. Surely everyone present was spiritually uplifted as a result of this program.

Sunday evening classes were resumed September 7. Pastor C. B. Hartshorn is conducting a general class on "Jesus and his message."

Elder J. L. Parker has charge of the young people's class, Myrtle Cook, the intermediates, James Parker, the Pioneers, and Bessie Laughlin the primary class.

Fifteen members were present at the orchestra rehearsal September 19. This was their first meeting for several months on account of the illness of the leader, William Evans.

The choir has been reorganized under the leadership of Katherine Wolfe and meets each Wednesday evening for practice.

The Home and Service Group has published its attractive new yearbook. The theme for the coming year is, "Community interests." The first meeting of this organization for the season was held September 5 at the C. T. Kirkwood home. The speaker, Miss Margaret McKee, talked on "Commercial recreation and amusements." This group organized a class in home nursing September 11, with Mrs. J. W. Chapman, R. N., instructor. The class of twenty-three members meets from 7.30 to 9.30 each Thursday evening. An afternoon class is being organized.

The Home and Service Group held its October meeting at the church last evening. Mr. Grimwood, Iowa labor commissioner, gave the address on "Unemployment, its causes and cures." Other numbers on the program were a violin solo by Myrtle Cook and readings by Miss Helen Brophy and Miss Jean Heiny. Chicken dinner was served from six to 7.30 p. m., netting a profit of fifty dollars. This will be turned into the branch treasury.

Two new members have lately been added to our number by baptism, Sisters Margaret Callahan and Lorene Griffin. Pastor Hartshorn and Elder E. O. Clark officiated.

The branch had present September 14 two general church officers, Bishop M. H. Siegfried and Publicity Director J. A.

Gardner. Elder Siegfried's subject for the morning service was "Essentials of progress," and Elder Gardner preached in the evening on "Convictions of Latter Day Saintism." Both talked to the priesthood at two o'clock in the afternoon.

Several carloads of young people drove to the home of Sister Elizabeth Sheeler September 17, to sing carols. Sister Sheeler is the only living charter member of the branch and has been bedfast for over a year.

Lloyd, the twenty-year-old son of Missionary F. T. Mussell, was shot by a bandit who climbed into the back of his car the night of September 17. His condition for ten days was quite precarious, but he is now gradually improving. He has acted as our efficient chorister for the past year and had enrolled for a course in engineering at Ames College.

The morning of September 21 opened with ex-Graceland students on the rostrum. The invocation was by Byron Yarrington; scripture reading, Doctrine and Covenants 87: 3-5, by Verba Parker. A quartet composed of Sarah Chapman, Verba Parker, Eva Cook, and Doris Nelson sang the Alma Mater hymn. Talks were given by J. L. Parker, Eva Cook, Mildred Turner Maitland, Doris Nelson, and C. B. Hartshorn. The offertory was by Martha Kaestner. The congregation sang "Graceland forever," and benediction was by Charles Chapman.

A Des Moines Graceland Alumni Association was recently formed with Leta Yarrington, president; Verba Parker, vice president; and Doris Nelson, secretary-treasurer. Our members now attending Graceland are Vivian Castings, Margaret Anderson, Bernice Doil, and John Williams.

The branch enjoyed a visit from a former pastor, H. A. Higgins, and wife, of Kansas City. September 21. Sister Higgins gave a short talk at the Sunday school hour, and Elder Higgins preached the evening sermon.

Rally Day exercises were impressive. At the church school session forty-five pupils were promoted into new classes, their teachers rising to receive them.

The eleven o'clock service opened with the branch presidency in charge. The choir sang the anthem, "Rejoice, Jerusalem, and sing," the baritone solo by James Parker. Elder Clyde McDonald talked on "Home and mission work in Des Moines"; "Enriching life through the church," Verne Deskin; "Other ways of helping," C. B. Hartshorn. At the evening worship a ladies chorus sang "Behold a stranger," and the sermon was "As it is done in heaven," by Elder E. O. Clark.

New Philadelphia, Ohio

The month of September has been another busy period in this branch. Friday evening, September 5, the Women's Department gave a banquet for the choir in the basement of the church. Forty guests, including members of the choir and the members of the department, were seated at one long table attractively decorated with yellow and white and adorned with baskets of garden flowers. Short talks were given by Brother Samuel Mansell, choir director, and Sister Hazel Noble, one of the local representatives at the Kirtland reunion.

September 7 sacramental service was attended by a fair number of Saints.

College Day, September 14, was observed with a special program in charge of Sister Charlene Hensel, a former student of Graceland. Songs of Graceland College were sung by the choir, and Sister Hensel gave an interesting talk on the educational advantages offered to students at Graceland.

September 21 rally day was observed at a unified service with an attendance of one hundred sixty. Elder Charles Cramer gave a talk on "Sabbath school—past and future." Attorney E. G. Hammond, of Akron, was the principal speaker, but owing to the length of the program his discourse was brief. Brother Hammond is a welcome visitor in this branch. Special music was given by the choir, and the male quartet of the United Brethren Church sang two selections.

Elder William Goudy, the evening speaker, chose for his topic, "Truth." The service was well attended.

A son was born to Brother and Sister Melvin Bigler September 13. He has been named Sheridan.

It is the desire of the Saints in New Philadelphia to hold before us the ultimate purpose towards which we are working, and we pray the Father to continue to give us strength and wisdom, that we may comply with his law in all things and come into the heritage he has prepared for us—Zion.

Fargo, North Dakota

The Bungalow Church, 1423 First Avenue, South

October 2.—Autumn days are here again with cool breezes and falling leaves. Crops are quite good, and there are plenty of fine vegetables to grace our tables. Amid these pleasing conditions Fargo Saints arranged for a Rally Day September 28. Visiting members came from South Dakota; Hope, Sheldon, Clifford, and Valley City, North Dakota; Borup, Audubon, Cormorant, and Erhard, Minnesota. Elder J. E. Wildermuth, of Aurora, Illinois, and Gilles Blakely, of Canada, were also present. There were a number of non-members who attended from Fargo.

The young people met for prayer service at nine o'clock. Elders H. Ratcliff and C. J. Smith were in charge.

Sunday school and institute work began at 9.45. The adults and young people were in one group. Elder C. J. Smith ably presented for discussion the theme, "Thrift."

At the eleven o'clock hour a religious drama, "The glory of 1830," was presented. The cast was as follows: Joseph Smith, Courtney Rotzien; the angel Moroni, Leola Hennaman; Professor Anthon, Worth Couey; the three Nephites, Irma Walker, Ina Freeman, Virginia Walker; historian, C. J. Smith; the three witnesses, Kenneth Shackow, Harry Ratcliff, and W. G. Couey. Sister Elsie Brown had charge of the music. The stage setting for the woodland scene had for its background a painting of Hill Cumorah; shrubbery, plants, and flowers completed the scene. The lights were decorated with streamers of gold and purple crepe paper. Those taking part in the drama did well. The dramatization of the beginning of this work and the bringing forth of the Book of Mormon should strengthen the appreciation of the Saints for the gospel and arouse the interest of nonmembers. The entire cast at the close sang "Onward to Zion." Then the Saints went to the home of Brother John Rotzien, where a picnic dinner was served. The dinner committee consisted of Sisters Freeman, Brown, and Peterson.

Preaching at 2.30 in the afternoon was by Missionary C. J. Smith on the theme, "Right relationship." Righteousness, he said, means right relationships, and Christ said, "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness." An interesting sermon at eight o'clock by Elder Swen Swenson followed the theme, "Jesus' last prayer."

On Monday following Rally Day the Saints enjoyed a visit from Apostle J. F. Garver, who preached in the evening. His text was Proverbs 22: 28: "Remove not the ancient landmarks which thy fathers have set." Brother Garver encouraged all, especially the young, to go on with the church work.

After the preaching hour a social time was enjoyed and refreshments served under the auspices of the Women's Department. Elder Swen Swenson favored the Saints with two Swedish solos, and C. J. Smith and J. F. Garver led in some jolly songs. Then "Blest be the tie that binds" was sung and the benediction offered by Apostle J. F. Garver.

C. J. Smith and J. F. Garver left the next morning for Dunn Center to hold services, and Swen Swenson departed for Cameron, Missouri, to spend the winter. The services of these men were appreciated and the spirits of the Saints refreshed.

Eleanor Virginia, infant daughter of Brother and Sister

Jerome Stowell, was blessed Sunday, September 28, by Elders C. J. Smith and H. Ratcliff.

Pastor Thomas Leitch recently spent Sunday at Kempton, North Dakota. He has also preached at Clontarf, Minnesota.

Elder Harry Ratcliff returned from Kansas September 15, accompanied by his wife. Saints welcome these active workers to the branch. The Women's Department gave them a reception at the church Thursday evening, September 18. A short program was followed by refreshments.

A shower was given Sister Avis Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Walker, at the home of Brother and Sister Worth Couey September 2. A social evening was enjoyed and refreshments served. Avis was presented many useful gifts as tokens of love and esteem. She left the next morning for Seattle, Washington, where she was united in marriage to Howard Halbett, of Alaska. After a week in Seattle the young couple sailed for Kennecott, Alaska, where Mr. Halbett is employed and they will live. The Saints wish them well. We miss Sister Avis, who is a willing and cheerful worker.

Sister J. E. Wildermuth and Orliiss, Beryl, and Avela stopped in Fargo recently on their way home to Aurora, Illinois, from Andes, Montana. Brother Beryl is attending Graceland this year. While they were here the Saints met at the church and a social evening was spent.

The Temple Builders are planning a chicken pie supper and bazaar in the near future.

The theme for Sunday, September 21, was "Disciples for Jesus." The promoted pupils will assemble in classes October 5, starting the new church school year.

So far this year the Christmas offering amounts to fifty-three dollars.

The work of the latter days is going on to its final triumph, as Saints carry their cross with a smile and live the song, "Onward to Zion."

Saint Louis, Missouri

Grand Boulevard and Carter Avenue

September 6 and 7 the Saint Louis district conference convened at Lansdowne, Illinois. Attendance was good, and a spiritual atmosphere marked each session. Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith spoke in the morning on Sunday and Elder C. A. Edstrom in the evening. Bruce E. Brown had charge of the prayer service. The day was well enjoyed.

September 14 Brother Edstrom spoke in Saint Louis in the morning on "Walk worthy of your vocation," and in the evening on "The church of Jesus Christ." There was good attendance, and the speaker enjoyed liberty in delivering his messages.

A baby was blessed September 21. That day Brother Edstrom gave two good sermons, "What would Jesus do?" and "God and man."

A splendid program and good attendance were had on Rally Day the last Sunday in September.

The Women's Department has started its season's work with much zeal. The members intend to do much this year.

Attendance of the department was doubled October 2. Two of the women celebrated their birthdays at that time, and the program was by Sisters Brown and Crabtree. Themes which took the attention of the department that day were: "What would we do if we had $50,000?" "Our pet peeve," and "What would we do if we had our lives to live over?"

October 3 the Saints had a get-together. It had been originally planned to hold a social gathering in order that Brother Edstrom, our new pastor, might the better get acquainted with the members of the congregation; he was to have had charge. But on account of the sudden death of Sister Edstrom's father, it was impossible for the Edstrom family to be present, and Brother and Sister Bruce E. Brown, happening to be in town, consented to take charge of the evening.

Two baptisms were administered by Brother G. S. Trowbridge October 5. Sacramental service was held with good attendance. Brothers R. Archibald and Trowbridge were in charge. Brother Ed. Bell conducted the singing. In the evening Elder S. A. Burgess, of Independence, spoke on "The history of the church."

Artland, Saskatchewan

After the district conference which some from our branch attended, Apostle Curtis spent a few days in Artland, preaching twice for the Saints. Then he and some others motored to Ribstone, Alberta, about twenty-five miles from here, to attend the Alberta conference.

A number of young people were baptized here this summer, Zella Cornish, Phyllis Atkinson, Opal Harper, Orville Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Davies and five oldest children, also three Howard children.

Elder and Sister Ward L. Christy visited Artland in August. The members enjoyed the services they held here, and as a result we feel better prepared to take up the new educational plan.

September 21 we elected officers to take office the first Sunday in October. W. J. Cornish was chosen pastor; A. J. Cornish, associate pastor, and Sister Rudolph Cornish, educational leader.

Grand Rapids, Michigan

Zeno and Division

The work in Grand Rapids has been moving along as well as can be expected with summer reunions and vacations to interrupt the routine of local activities. The prospects are that we are to have an intensive program of work this fall and winter.

We consider ourselves fortunate indeed that the general church has appointed Elder James Pycock of Toronto, Canada, to labor here. He is a man of wide experience. This coupled with a well-informed mind assures us of good teaching. His sermons are of the highest order, and we eagerly look forward to the preaching services.

Graceland College Day was observed with Brother Ellis Whitehead the speaker. Being a former student of this institution, he was able to talk from actual experience, and we can say that we have never heard a better presentation of the value of our college than at this meeting. At this time the junior choir made its initial appearance, which added much to the significance of the service. Despite abnormal economic conditions a contribution of about thirty-five dollars was made.

As far as possible we are endeavoring to carry out the new church school idea. Our brief trial as yet does not merit a judgment, but we do know that more can be accomplished in a shorter period of time.

Wednesday evenings are devoted to the study of "Personal evangelism" under the leadership of Elder Pycock. It is interesting but only a small percentage of the membership is taking advantage of it.

The choir under the leadership of Louise Evans is doing some excellent work. None but the best music is sung. Last Sunday evening a Beethoven musical was given previous to the preaching service which was so appreciated by the congregation that again we will undertake the works of other master musicians. The prelude, opening hymn, response, and offertory were all works of Beethoven played by Ruby Cavanaugh. This was followed by an interesting talk on the master himself by Miss Blanche Cavanaugh.

The "Moonlight Sonata" was played by Mrs. Farrington, and the first movement of "Pathetique" was given by Bessie Taylor. Mrs. Paul Wheeler sang "Penitence" and Marie Eckert sang "Supplication." The choir rendered "The heavens are declaring." The technique and spirituality were equally developed to a notable degree throughout each number. The music of Cæsar Franck will be used at the next concert.

The Saints were much edified and entertained by the visit of Brother and Sister Pitt, as they were making their way homeward from the Michigan reunions.

Oelwein, Iowa

Oelwein Branch is moving steadily and surely on in its efforts to do its part in the Lord's work.

Attendance at services during the summer months was good considering the usual let down in church activities during warm weather.

We miss the happy smile of Sister Katharine Shippy, who passed away June 28. She was one of the faithful members and has left a splendid example. Her contributions to the work here were many, and the Saints are better for having known and worked with her. We also miss Sister Marie Shippy, who has secured a position in Anderson, Indiana.

During June Oelwein members enjoyed a visit from Brother Otho Clark and family, of Atherton, Missouri. Brother Clark gave several interesting talks about his work and experiences on a stewardship farm. About thirty Saints of Waterloo came to enjoy services and a picnic dinner with us. Brother Clark was the speaker of the afternoon.

C. A. Beil, of Clinton, Iowa, a member of the district presidency, was here in July and explained the new church school plan of operation.

Graceland Day was observed with an appropriate program. We were fortunate in having a former student, Sister Ruth Smith, of Hiteman, Iowa, who gave some of her experiences at Graceland. She is teaching here in the public schools, and being an able worker has already found plenty to keep her busy.

The annual election of branch officers was held September 18. Brother George McFarlane, who has proved himself a capable leader, was reelected branch president. The branch voted to adopt the new church school plan and elected Charles Shippy director. He has appointed the following supervisors: Adult division, Sister Jessie Sims; young people's division, Sister Ruth Smith; children's division, Sister Esther Shippy. Plans are being formulated and meetings for discussion held, and with study and prayer on the part of the Saints we hope to make a splendid success of the new plan for church activities.

Fanning, Kansas

September 7 there journeyed from Topeka to Fanning a carload of workers interested in young people's religious education. Among these were the district leader, L. M. Pitzenberger, and the local leader, O. E. Weedmark. Each of the visitors contributed to the program given in the evening, thereby creating more interest in this local along that line. It was decided before they departed for home to hold an institute in this district, Fanning the place, September 20 and 21 the dates.

September 14, College Day, was a rainy time, and no special college program was held this year.

The institute was conducted the following week-end, there being eight classes. A program on Saturday night was much enjoyed. Of general church workers there were present Elder and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, Elder E. E. Closson, and District Missionary W. A. Smith. A mixed quartet of young people, from Independence, came Sunday morning and helped at the services. A splendid crowd was present from over the district.

Five children were baptized at twelve o'clock by the district missionary and confirmed at two o'clock. Basket dinner was enjoyed at noon.

School-teachers teaching in Fanning and adjacent country are Lucille Jeschke, William Twombly, Mrs. Paul Marsh, Sylvia Chestnut, Wayne Simpson, Francis Burbridge, and Ines Pilcher.

The young people's department meets on Friday night, William Gurwell the leader.

The communion service October 5 was in charge of Brother Samuel Twombly and Brother William Marsh. The house was well filled, and the time was profitably occupied.

The Women's Department met last month with Sister W. H. Dittmore for business and program. They will meet October 17 with Sister Will Twombly. Sister Will Marsh will have charge of the devotional exercises.

Brother Steven Davies is a patient sufferer. He has been confined to his bed over a year.

San Jose, California

Spencer Avenue and Grant Street

Elder B. R. Gilbert was the speaker and had charge of the church school session the morning of August 17. He was assisted by Elder C. W. Hawkins. Slight attendance evidenced the influence of the vacation season.

That evening also attendance at the Religio session was meager. Elder C. J. Cady taught a class, the session of which composed the program of the evening.

The afternoon of August 22 Brother and Sister Hawkins were called to the home where Sister Annette Brown has been staying for some months. They found her in a deplorable condition. One of her eyes has been blind for some time, and the other has been troubling her. At the time of the visit it had almost completely lost its sight. Sister Brown has the sympathy of the Saints. She is one of the Lord's sincere, patient, faithful children, and a conscientious tithe payer. We bespeak for her the prayers of the Saints everywhere. Brother and Sister Hawkins had prayer with the sufferer, and she was administered to before she left for her home at Manteca in the San Joaquin Valley.

Sister Lizzie Leaman, another sufferer, is still with us and would appreciate the prayers of the Saints. Sister Minnie Bates, who lost her companion in death four years ago, has had a hard fight with the grim reaper. She bears faithful testimony to the work of Christ and is holding to the rod of iron.

Several of the aged are badly incapacitated for carrying on all the work required of them, but they manage to encourage others, and they are much interested in the progress of the church.

Brother W. H. Dawson was here August 24 and preached an encouraging sermon. His subject was "The nineteenth century Prophet." His effort was highly commended, one man being especially outspoken concerning the sermon. The speaker returned to Sacramento in the afternoon.

The morning of August 25 we were reminded that although we are far from the center place, the Lord has not forgotten us. For a time we were connected with the East by an electrical storm, which was most beautiful and awe inspiring.

Elder Herbert Hinton, missionary appointed by the last General Conference to labor in this district, came to our midst Wednesday evening, August 27, and met with the Saints in prayer meeting. He spoke at this service and remained in the branch for one week, visiting the Saints through the week and preaching on Sunday.

Sister Hannah Healey, of Los Angeles, a former member of this branch, was here September 14. We were happy to welcome her home.

A branch has been organized at Castroville, Monterey County. This will draw on San Jose Branch for forty or more members. We wish the new organization Godspeed.

Independence

Stone Church

Changes in the routine of the church school session in the main room of the Stone Church, where meet together the adult and the intermediate departments, were initiated Sunday morning to conform the latter department to the continuous program principle. Associate Superintendent Howard W. Harder was in charge. The intermediates now have a continuous session from 9.30 to 11.30 each Sunday morning, opening with Sunday school upstairs and closing with worship service downstairs. Because of the building facilities the working out of this program has many difficulties, but teachers and officers hope to present a weekly program which will be effective in the lives of the boys and girls.

This day was observed by all departments of the church school as Christmas offering Sunday, and there was a perceptible rise in the measuring thermometers of the various departments. The Christmas offering goal of the Stone Church is $3,200.

Elder George G. Lewis was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service, using as his text, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." The establishment of righteousness and the building of the kingdom of God on the earth is the primary task of the church today, Elder Lewis said. He urged the necessity of coordination and cooperation among the various agencies of religious education, such as the ministry, the home, and the church school. The great goals of the church are the same as ever, although our methods of working toward them may change to meet new conditions.

The Stone Church Choir, Paul N. Craig directing, sang two anthems, "The King of love my shepherd is," and "The God of Abraham praise," both by Shelley. Elizabeth Okerlind, contralto, and Lilly Belle Allen, soprano, were soloists. Robert Miller, organist, and George Miller, pianist, played special numbers, and as an offertory-duet played "Meditation de Thais," by Massenet.

Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the service and was assisted by Elder Vernon Reese.

Elder C. Ed. Miller spoke to the junior young people's church downstairs on their theme for the day, "Courage to be true," offering a number of instances in which people have had the courage to be true to the things they knew to be right. Carrying out the theme, Irene, Mildred, and Evelyn Shupe sang the Crusaders' Hymn, "Fairest Lord Jesus," and Ethel Thomas told the story, "Emma Smith, the elect lady." The pastor was assisted in the stand by Howard Cook.

To usher in the ten days of Zion's School of Training in Religious Education, which opened Monday evening, a rally service for all workers in the Department of Religious Education in Independence was conducted in the evening.

At an early hour a crowd of considerable proportions gathered, and officers and teachers of the various church schools were given place in the center section. Under the direction of Paul N. Craig, the Stone Church Choir sang two of its favorite anthems, "Come, Holy Ghost," and "The great day of the Lord," Robert Miller at the organ.

"And Jesus sat in their midst and taught," was the text chosen by President F. M. McDowell, whose theme was "Teaching with Jesus." The ministry of Christ, he asserted, was threefold: The ministry of preaching; the ministry of healing; and the ministry of teaching. And the Spirit of the Master Teacher is best conveyed in these simple words: "And Jesus, beholding the young man, loved him." Those who teach, study the work of the Master Teacher for his methods, and are stirred to activity by his assignment, "Go ye, therefore, and teach."

The viewpoint of the religious education worker was then discussed under the following points: (1) He believes in the gospel of sharing his life that others may live; (2) He believes in the principle of growth; (3) His is the conviction of the divinity of personality; (4) He believes in the sin of neglect. But above all things and motivating his actions, the teacher believes that there is a way to the higher society—Zion—and strives to find and lead in that way.

Elder George G. Lewis, in charge of the service, was assisted by Elder C. B. Woodstock, and Pastor John F. Sheehy conducted the congregational singing, "Hark, listen to the trumpeters," and "Stand up, stand up for Jesus."

Organizations and Personalities

This year the Independence Music Club has awarded two fifty-dollar scholarships, one in piano, one in voice. The contest for the awards was conducted October 17. The winner of the piano scholarship was Doris Long, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Long, of Independence, and pupil of Sister Howard W. Harder. A group of three girls, Irene, Mildred, and Evelyn Shupe, won the voice scholarship. The girls are the daughters of Sister Mabel Shupe, of Independence, and pupils of Sister H. C. Burgess. The decision to give the two scholarships was reached only a short time ago by the Music Club.

The largest enrollment in the history of the school is now on the books of the Institute of Arts and Sciences. This year the institute is indeed fulfilling its purpose—a school for those who must work but are willing to study. To it there go four nights a week numbers of young people who have been forced out of day school by economic pressure of the family. Nearly all the students are employed during the day and are contributing part of their earnings to the family. Among the most regular attendants is one young man who comes four nights each week from Kansas City, Kansas.

Forty-seven compose the largest class in the school, a class in Citizenship, and there are a number of other classes having thirty-five members and more. Class projects are practical and have direct bearing on the lives of the students; this fall the Citizenship class was asked to write papers on the Harvest Home Festival.

Of the dozen faculty members, more than half hold M. A. degrees. They cheerfully and willingly give their time and instruction to those who come to learn.

There occurred last Friday night, October 17, a wedding at the Liberty Street Church of especial interest to Saints of the Stone Church and Wichita, Kansas, congregations. Miss Doris Marie Bradford, daughter of Brother and Sister O. L. Bradford, now of Independence, and Philip R. Harrington, son of Brother and Sister E. C. Harrington, of Independence, were married by Elder C. E. Wight. Before the ceremony George Anway sang, "O promise me," and Frank White played a violin solo, Schubert's "Serenade." "Because" was sung by George Anway, and the wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Robert Miller. The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attended by her sister, Mrs. Reed Decker, matron of honor, and by Miss Helen Scott and Miss Bernice Van Winkle, bridesmaids. Little Ruth and Opal Dunham, nieces of the bride, were flower girls. William H. Harrington, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man. Richard Harrington, brother of the bridegroom, and Leon Elledge were groomsmen. A reception followed in the basement of the church. Mr. and Mrs. Harrington left for a short trip. They will live in Independence.

Almost four hundred religious education enthusiasts of the center place faced a snowy night Monday to enroll in Zion's School of Training in Religious Education now in progress at the Stone Church.

Elder George G. Lewis, in charge of the school, introduced the courses and made known the order of the school and the various class meeting places, and before eight o'clock the school was in session, three large classes. For the second hour (8.40 to 9.30) the entire school met in the main auditorium and held forum with President F. M. McDowell, the theme of discussion being "The program of the church as it affects Zion."

Much interest is being shown in the school, and every one of the nine congregations in the center place is sending its workers and representatives.

An Auditorium benefit show was sponsored Saturday night in the lower room of the Auditorium. Outstanding features of the program included the dinner, the circus parade, a talking picture, and the bazaar booths. All the booths left by the Harvest Festival were put to use by the Laurel Club. From some, candy and fancywork were sold; from others fortunes and palm readings were dispensed in true carnival spirit. Though attendance was less than expected, seventy-five people were served dinner, and a good sum of money was cleared for the Auditorium.

The enrollment of the Independence public school system at the end of the first month of school was 4,386. These pupils are found in nine grade schools, the junior high school, and William Chrisman High. Of the total number of pupils 2,511 are in the grades, 1,133 in Junior High, and 742 in William Chrisman High. The male sex predominates, there being 2,250 boys and 2,136 girls.

Second Church

The Sunday school attendance October 12 was unusually large. Ivan Dillee, who was home from school, talked a few minutes on his impressions of Graceland College after five weeks there.

Bishop J. A. Koehler was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour. He is one of the pioneers of Second Branch and a former pastor. His address was instructive and appreciated by all. Faithfulness and diligence to its tasks brought blessings to the church before, said the speaker. If we lack the spirit and inspiration of former days, the fault is ours; and it is our problem to create a condition which will insure to us these blessings.

Another fine sermon was delivered October 19, this by John Blackmore. He spoke in behalf of the religious education classes which began this week at the Stone Church. He brought out the idea that religious education is essential to the development of our people; not that it can possibly replace divinity, but, rather, supplement it. Unfortunately, attendance was very poor. Many members of the congregation missed the good things which were given. In the absence of Pastor A. K. Dillee, Brother William Inman and Brother Ben Sarratt had charge.

Liberty Street

At no service of the church is the continuous worship more to be appreciated than at the monthly sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The confusion formerly attendant at the period following the close of Sunday school caused a reaction wholly foreign to the spirit that should accompany the contemplation of renewing the sacred covenant.

The communion service for the month of October was presided over by the pastor, assisted by Chester Young and John Soderstadt. Without any negative teaching it will be impossible to impress on the members of our church the things we are doing that we must not do if the task assigned us is to be accomplished. The gulf between work done and that undone is so wide that the membership must be aroused to more intense activity. Such were some of the remarks made by the pastor in his message at this service.

William Calvin Johnson, tiny son of Brother and Sister Calvin Johnson, received the ordinance of blessing from Elder W. A. Stevenson.

The charge, "Occupy till I come," given his stewards by the Master in the parable of the talents, was the highly applicable text used by Elder Earl F. Hoisington in his sermon on bishop's day, October 12. How are we occupying relative to the talents given us? The great geniuses of history and of contemporary date show the extent to which they have increased their talents, or the way in which they have occupied. Are we doing as well?

It is true that one of the most effective ways of teaching is by graphic representation. As we viewed the pictured story of the diversified, often sad, but always inspirational history of the pioneers of the Restoration movement, we could not but mentally bow at the shrine of their memories. Elder C. Ed. Miller gave this illustrated lecture before a large congregation of Liberty Street Saints the evening of October 12.

Elder Wilbur B. Paul was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour October 19, using as his text, John 1:12: "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God." The choir, directed by Fred Friend, sang the anthem, "Come to my heart, Lord Jesus," the baritone solo being sung by Brother Harry Blake, and the accompaniment played by Lyda Thomason. The pastor was assisted in conducting this service by Elder Chester Young.

At the evening service, as a special number, Lucille Friend sang a vocal solo, "Paradise." Cello obbligato was played by Fred Friend, piano accompaniment being furnished by Lyda Thomason.

Elder John Blackmore preached in the interest of religious education and as a prelude to the school of religious education that opened in Zion Monday, October 20.

"Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap," was the text taken by Elder Blackmore. Life is a flow, having its ups and downs, depending on our quality of living. Hearing the preaching of the word is only one little incident in the flow of religious life. Unless the teachings set forth in the preaching are practiced in the everyday lives of the average Latter Day Saint, there is no merit in them. We have Zion as a purpose and as a vision, but unless we have a definite purpose at which we are actually working, the Lord's great work can not be done by this people.

The return of Mary Madden Smitherman to her post as story-teller at the junior service is hailed with delight by the members and workers in that department. Both large rooms of the basement are now utilized by the juniors. In the new large one, the class session is held, and then the group moves into the smaller room for the worship service. In this way the noise of rearranging chairs for the change in type of service is eliminated. George Fender, Raymond Wrigley, and Cecil Walker have been among those who have recently spoken.

Enoch Hill

The prophecy of Jesus, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," formed the basis of the sermon delivered by President F. M. McDowell Sunday morning on Enoch Hill. This was the first visit of our brother to our congregation since his return from abroad, and it was with deep enjoyment that the Saints heard him. Scenes from his travels abroad were used by Brother McDowell to show the fulfillment of this prophecy. In European countries today, he said, there are many evidences of the fulfillment of the prophecy. Everywhere are seen pictures and paintings of the Christ, and religious rituals are solemnly observed, and yet in so many instances the Spirit of Christ is absent. If Jesus is with us, we will have his Spirit, and we will pattern our lives after his. We are helping in the fulfillment of his prophecy if we are with him in mind, spirit, heart, and hand.

October 18 marked the golden wedding anniversary of two dearly beloved members of Enoch Hill congregation, Brother and Sister J. W. Merchant, and with them the members of this congregation celebrated. To Brother and Sister Charles Warren was committed the responsibility of planning an evening of happiness and good fellowship. To assist her Sister Warren chose her staff of officers and teachers of the children's department, and everyone responded to the call.

The church was beautifully decorated with asparagus fern and orange flowers, and a little garden scene was represented by an arch and pretty white fence flanked with greens and flowers. The church was filled with Saints who participated in the following program:

Song, "Blest be the tie that binds"; prayer of blessing by Elder W. J. Brewer; song, original words by a member of the congregation, sung to the tune of "Silver threads among the gold"; "That old sweetheart of mine," a musical reading by Nellie Mae Kramer; solo, "Comin' through the rye," little Clarice Stevens; a pantomime for which the following songs furnished an attractive background: "That's what the daisy said," and "When Kate and I were coming through the rye," by Mrs. Ray Hansen. This was acted by Brother and Sister E. H. McKean and little daughter, Betty Jean. Brother and Sister Harold Hattey sang "When you and I were young, Maggie."

Presentation of gifts from the congregation was by Brother Charles Warren, and an appropriate speech was made by Elder Blair Jensen, pastor of Omaha, Nebraska, Branch. George Anway sang very beautifully, "Juanita." Then there was a mock wedding by the children. William Warren represented the minister; Laverna Martin, the bride; Helen Larson, maid of honor; Betty Lou Hattey, flower girl; Jean Larson, ringbearer; and little Betty Jean McKean carried the veil. Myron Warren acted the part of the bridegroom, and Robert Young best man. The wedding marches were played by Sister Lewis Cross.

"Silver threads among the gold" was played on the violin and piano by Brother and Sister Lewis Cross while Brother and Sister Merchant stood in front of the arch to receive the congratulations of all. Refreshments were served to the congregation in the lower auditorium, and speeches were made by the elders who have been closely associated with the honored couple. Doctor H. A. Merchant, a son, of Omaha, Nebraska, thanked the Saints for their kindness to his parents. "Auld lang syne" closed the evening's celebration.

Oakland, California

From The Oakland Bulletin

The new social committee met for organization and preliminary work Monday evening, September 22. This committee consists of Gerald Hawley, chairman, Elwood Murphy, secretary, Rufus Smith, Mrs. Luella Hawley, and Miss Ingham. It is to supervise and schedule all entertainment features. The committee of the Department of Recreation and Expression resigned to make way for the new organization which is to be representative of the congregation. Another meeting of the committee a week later called all departmental heads to present their programs.

The Sunday school banquet one Friday evening late in September was very successful. It was an English dinner with Yorkshire pudding, roast beef, baked potatoes, plum pudding, and sauce, this in compliment to Pastor John W. Rushton. Decorations of the Union Jack were blended with the Stars and Stripes, and the program commenced with the singing of the national anthems of the two countries. Every number was pleasing.

Friday evening, October 3, a "golf tournament" was conducted on the grounds beside the church. Suitable prizes were awarded the winners. Refreshments and entertainment were had in the lower auditorium after the game.

The Rally Day services the last Sunday of September were well attended, and the messages of Brothers Levitt and Yager were much appreciated. Brother Levitt left Monday morning, September 29, for Stockton, and two days later Brother Yager sailed on the S. S. Makura for Tahiti, to begin his three years' mission in the Society Islands.

The trio, Misses Jacobson, Helen Ingham, and Freda Browning, sang Rubinstein's "The angel." In the evening Miss Presley pleased all with her solo, "Onward to Zion."

The Wednesday evening Church Night is much enjoyed. Attendance is not what we would like to see and believe it possible to have. The supper is an excellent meal beautifully served. The two classes are not only interesting but highly instructive. The prayer meeting is a helpful experience. The Saints are urged to make this a feature of weekly engagements.

The continued illness of Arthur Mellburg is brought to the attention of the members, and prayers are asked for him. Sister Holling, sr., has made a wonderful recovery from her serious illness and was able lately to visit relatives in Berkeley.

Priesthood meeting September 30 was well attended. The first part of the meeting was a devotional service. Some speeches were made. Brother C. Hawley expressed faith in the economic program of the church. The question of decorum in church was introduced. It is noted that our members are improving in their conduct.

The evening of October 5 a series of special Sunday night sermons was begun to lead up to Decision Day, October 26.

Middletown, Ohio

October 9.—Last evening capped the climax to our recreation ball activities when a splendid banquet was given to our soft ball team, closing the season for this year. Fully eighty-two persons enjoyed a sumptuous chicken dinner with all the trimmings, including creamed mashed potatoes; green string beans; Parker-house rolls and butter; a tomato, lettuce, and mayonnaise salad; and apple pie a la mode.

The decorating committee had arranged a splendid setting for the occasion, making the social rooms in the church very attractive and inviting by the use of the church colors, purple and gold.

The entertainment committee added its bit by the presentation of a program that was interesting, as well as unique. The banquet was served at seven in the evening. During the dinner a number of get-acquainted songs were sung. We were also entertained by the Thomas Brothers' Duo, with string instruments and songs.

Following the dinner, the guests went to the auditorium for the program of the evening. Under the leadership of the master of ceremonies, Claude Barker, the following program was given: Address of welcome by Pastor P. W. Barker; talk on "Athletics and the church," Heber Deardoff, team manager; talk on "What good sportsmanship means," by Leonard Barker, director of recreation; vocal solo, by Edith Pratt, accompanied at the piano by Addie Halb; piano solo by Dorothy Mae Barker; a number of folk songs by the Thomas Brothers' Duo. These brothers have entertained a number of times over radio station W K C Y. A sermonet was given by Elder Claude Barker from an epoch of the "Life of Christ." The benediction was by Elder W. H. Rhoades.

While all the members of the team are not members of the church, a spirit of fellowship and good will had been built up between the nonmembers and the church, as well as between the other teams that we have played in the city during the past four months. Our team has been playing four evenings each week during this time. It is hoped to hold the team intact, so that when the season opens next year, we can start with a "bang" for an enjoyable and fruitful season. Plans are being made now for the organizing of a basketball team.

Under the leadership of Pastor P. W. Barker, the branch is taking on new life for the fall and winter season. Everyone seems to be getting to his post of duty and working therein.

Elder Leonard Barker has been talking each week for the past two months from President F. M. McDowell's outline on the "New plan of religious education," which was recently adopted at the Centennial Conference. It is hoped that in the near future our branch can change to the new plan.

The pastor has been using Elders Claude Barker, Leonard Barker, and W. H. Rhoades for the preaching services during the summer months.

The Sunday school has begun to increase. September 21, attendance was fifty-nine; September 28, Rally Day, attendance was sixty-eight; the attendance last Sunday was sixty-nine. Superintendent Claude Barker announced the election of the following teachers for the new year, beginning October 1: Adults' "Life of Christ," rotating monthly, Sister W. H. Countryman, Elders P. S. Rhoades, and P. W. Barker; adults, "Stewardship," Leonard Barker; seniors, Julis Davis; intermediates, Bertha Stults; juniors, Emma Stults; primary, Edith Pratt; beginners, Edna Day. Religio teachers: Adults, "Life of Christ," Claude Barker; children, Edith Sintz; kindergarten, Minnie Barker.

The Department of Recreation and Expression activities and attendance are on the increase.

Sister Edith Sintz, leader of the Department of Women, has announced the resumption of activities in that department.

Sacramental and priesthood meetings are also improving in character and quality.

Beardstown, Illinois

A three weeks' series of meetings was conducted in Beardstown by Elder H. V. Minton opening September 14.

Branch President M. R. Shoemaker called a special business meeting September 14 to appoint and organize committees to assist in the meetings. Tracting, visiting, publicity committees, etc., were designated, and every effort was made to teach the people of this community the gospel and to search out the honest in heart.

A half-hour song service was held each evening before the regular meeting. The choir and orchestra also rendered special numbers.

To illustrate his message, Brother Minton used stereopticon pictures and a model church. The latter was built according to the blueprint, the Bible, with God the architect.

Brother Minton also called at the homes of those interested when opportunity afforded, and talked with them concerning the gospel. He was happy to have opportunity to answer their questions. In doing this he made new friends for the church.

As a result of the services, six children and one adult were baptized.

September 25 the Saints gave a chili supper in the basement of the church, and the proceeds were turned to Brother Minton.

Two days later the annual Sunday school picnic was held. Well-filled baskets and five gallons of ice cream were taken to the hills of Bluff Springs. The afternoon was spent playing games and participating in contests.

The district conference will be held in Taylorville October 25 and 26, and some of our members are planning to attend. We expect to have Apostle J. F. Garver with us at that time.

Moline, Illinois

Moline Branch has successfully finished a course of twelve lessons, taught by Brother E. R. Davis. This was an extension course of the Centennial Conference Institute. The interest was very good, average attendance being twenty-one; twelve members received credit. Several from here also attended a six-night class in Rock Island on "The teaching task of the church," taught by Brother Davis. We are planning a teacher's training class for the winter months, to begin soon.

Presiding Patriarch Frederick A. Smith stopped here between trains Monday, September 15, and came to class with one of the brothers. He was persuaded to preach, and we heard one of the most interesting and helpful sermons that it has ever been our good fortune to hear. Our only regret was that all of our members were not out to hear him.

Last Sunday was Rally Day. Attendance was very good, and the Saints hope to keep the record each Sunday as near this mark as possible—sixty-five present. We have grown from five classes to seven within the last few months, and with continuing interest we hope to grow spiritually as well as in numbers.

The Wednesday night prayer meetings are not as well attended as they should be, but those who go regularly feel well repaid for their efforts.

The Department of Women is planning a rummage and apron sale. We enjoy the study classes held every two weeks. Much has been learned, and we hope to pass on the knowledge gained to those who are seeking the truth.

Our prayers are for the leaders of the church and the accomplishment of the task that is before us.

Mitchell, Ontario

Rally Day was observed in Mitchell September 28, and in spite of the cold day the spacious living room in the home of Sister Sarah Blazey was filled with visiting Saints from Stratford, Rostock, Walton, and Listowel, together with members of Mitchell Branch.

Lessons and preaching service were omitted and the afternoon devoted to a splendid program, which consisted of the usual opening and closing exercises, also solos by Miss Erma Gray, of Mitchell; duets by Miss Mary Moore and Mr. Alma Moore, of Rostock; and the Misses Clara Schlotzhauer, of Stratford, and Myrtle Gray, of Mitchell; Sister Ed. Bell accompanied the singers on the organ. Addresses were by Brother Alma Gray, Mitchell; Elder William H. Gray, Mitchell; and Elder Amos Smith, Listowel. Readings were given by Sister William H. Gray, Sarah Blazey, Margaret Gray, and Brother John Blazey, all of Mitchell; also two numbers by Sister Edna Smith, of Listowel. The solo by Mr. Metherwell, of Rochester, New York, was much appreciated. The singer was given only a moment's notice, but in response to the invitation to take part on the program, sang his favorite, "Jesus, lover of my soul."

Minneapolis, Minnesota

Fifth and Queen Avenues, North

Summer with its heat has passed, and fall with its cooler, more invigorating temperatures is here inspiring us to greater activity and accomplishment. We are glad to say that this new vigor is being felt in Minneapolis Branch and that the Saints are looking forward to a busy and worthwhile winter.

In order that we might start the new church school year with interest and enthusiasm, a Rally Day was held September 28. Apostle J. F. Garver was present to preach morning and evening. He gave much good advice and much to think about during coming months.

At the beginning of the church school hour, an installation service was held for the officers and teachers. Brother Vernon Lundeen, pastor, gave the charges to this group and to the congregation. He impressed us with our opportunities and responsibilities in the church school and the necessity for making the most of them if the school is to be successful. Sister Lydia Wight, as director of the church school, with her council, has outlined some excellent plans for the coming year, and the cooperation of all is necessary if they are to be accomplished. Some interesting classes are being offered on Sunday morning, and it is our purpose that each Saint shall become a member of some class and attend each Sunday.

At the close of the sermon at the eleven o'clock hour, Sister Violet Emmerson had her baby daughter blessed. This provided a fitting close to the service.

A basket dinner was enjoyed by the members at noon.

In the afternoon an ordination service was held, at which time Brothers Harvey O'Hara and Edwin Bennett were ordained to the office of elder. These men are capable and active, and we feel that in this larger field of service they will accomplish much for the branch.

The choir, under the direction of Sister Jessie Watkins, gave splendid help at all the meetings.

The Saints feel that the Rally Day was a day well spent.

Attendance at all services was good. The spirit of love was felt by the members, and many remarked about the help and inspiration they received. We hope this feeling will continue to grow and that all the services will be inspirational and helpful to us. This is possible if each one will give his best to the work. Let us, at the beginning of this, a new year, resolve to do all that we can for the work, and then keep the resolution.

Brother Blair Jensen, of Omaha, visited Minneapolis September 21, and preached in the morning.

The evening of October 1 Elder Swen Swenson attended prayer meeting here. He was on his way south for the winter. This veteran's testimony of his experiences and God's goodness to him gave courage to the Saints.

Lowbanks, Ontario

We had a splendid reunion this year, and the classes were most instructive. Bishop J. A. Koehler's talks and Elder John Blackmore's classes were just what were needed, and the help of Apostle Clyde F. Ellis was also much appreciated.

We have again taken up Sunday school sessions, and every Sabbath after the class work we have a program from the classes, first from the Bible Class, then from the intermediates, and so on until each class has had a Sunday in which to present its program.

Rally Day was held the last Sunday of September, Elder D. Clatworthy in charge of the classes. Roll call was answered by everyone giving the number of years since his baptism and a penny for each year. This was an interesting experience; some had forgotten the number of years since their baptism, but most of the members responded promptly, and quite a sum of pennies was received. Lunch was eaten in the basement. Saints were present from Toronto, Niagara Falls, Bridgebury, and other places. Brother MacDonald, the oldest member of the branch, and family, of Niagara Falls, were present.

The Women's Department is busy collecting money to purchase Saints' Hymnals. Several have ordered quilts from this group of workers.

Brother Clarence MacDonald and family, Sister Clarence Barrick, and Elder Clatworthy and family are at the Toronto conference as delegates from Lowbanks.

Dallas Branch and Fort Worth Mission

Dallas Branch and Fort Worth Mission are on the upward trend. At a business meeting some time ago, Dallas Branch accepted and put into action the new program of religious education in the church. Since that time more enthusiasm has marked the progress of the cause to which we have pledged ourselves.

At the workers' council meeting the first Sunday in September, the members authorized the branch presidency to formulate a letter to be sent to the home of each member, inviting all to attend a picnic September 16 and Rally Day September 28. Their cooperation was solicited in the coming year's activities. A Temple Builder, Eva Fern Worley, typed and prepared some sixty-seven of these letters for the mail. This movement did much to stimulate the spirit of cooperation among the membership.

A movement to buy a tent for missionary services was started by Sister J. E. Nicoll with the sanction of the branch. This was a complete success. Brother and Sister Nicoll went to the home of each member and personally solicited the funds, an act which required much time and expense on their part. We are now looking forward to a visit from Missionary J. W. A. Bailey to make use of the tent.

Brother Bailey recently completed a series of meetings at Fort Worth and Handley, Texas, where he met with a degree of success.

Quarterly business meeting occurred September 20, the principal item of business being the election of officers for the new church year in line with our new program. Most of the officers were sustained by unanimous vote. We have as branch president, W. R. Standefer; Brother H. H. Davenport is counselor. J. E. Nicoll is supervisor of home visiting; supervisor of the church school, Sister L. R. Wells; supervisor of adult division, Sister J. E. Nicoll; supervisor of children's division, Sister W. E. Everett; supervisor of girls' division, Sister D. A. Fuller; publicity agent and treasurer, J. E. Nicoll; branch clerk, D. A. Fuller.

The Women's Department met Thursday, September 25, to sew for a family of Saints in which the mother has been ill for some time. The object was to prepare the children of the family for school. The Temple Builders sewed for this family October 3.

The Temple Builders are using the book Our Girls, edited by Lenoir Woodstock, and are also taking home study.

A rummage sale recently netted the Women's Department more than thirteen dollars.

All the children met at Mrs. W. E. Everett's home one evening to hold a slumber party. Upon arising at five o'clock the next morning, they hiked to Tennyson Park for breakfast of roasted wieners, bread and jam. A few games were played; then they hiked home. Sister Everett intends to sponsor another hike soon.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

The Sunday school held its election of officers September 7. It has been our custom to conduct the election of officers each year on the last Sunday in December, but by reading the Herald we noted that the general church plans to begin the church year in October. At this year's election almost an entirely new set of officers was chosen, with Brother E. E. Williams as superintendent; assistant, Daniel Bealor; secretary, Mabel Culp; assistant, Ora Altman; treasurer, Hulda Culp; librarian, Richard Culp; teachers: Adult class, Charles Altman; senior grade, Lizzie Hill; intermediates, Ora Altman; juniors, Rosa Pollock; kindergarten, Sister Julian Culp. These teachers were given the privilege of choosing their assistants, and we feel that much good will be accomplished by them in the coming year of Sunday school work.

Missionary Jacob Halb, of Middletown, Ohio, held a series of meetings here this summer. Of late he has been with us several Sundays. He is holding a series of tent meetings at West Portsmouth and Valley View at this time. Interest is fair, and we hope much good will be done and a new branch organized there in the near future.

Brother Halb preached the funeral sermon of Tiley Hiles, a nonmember, September 23, at our church.

May God bless every effort put forth by the church to establish his kingdom here on the earth.

Calumet, Oklahoma

This branch is trying to maintain regular services once more after closing a series of successful meetings. District Missionary Ammon White was the speaker. Large crowds were present, and splendid interest prevailed throughout the course of meetings. Seven juniors were baptized at the close, and Brother White left the Saints much encouraged. His sermons and visits among the Saints did much to uplift.

We are planning for Decision Day October 26, which we hope to make a day of deciding for many.

The Women's Department has not been active of late, but the members plan to resume the regular program of activities at an early date.

All during the summer the Sunday school was well attended, and interest was good.

Savanna, Illinois

October 13.—Savanna Branch is showing activity in various departments. The Sunday school is growing and taxes the building for class-work space.

The young people have organized a choir under the leadership of Sister Theresa Stemm, a graduate of Graceland and teacher in our public school. Sister Theresa is a great help in keeping the young people interested and active in church work. They meet once a week at the different homes and practice the songs from Zion's Praises, have a little class instruction on the Book of Mormon, then a social time. We feel that we must give our young people opportunity to help in local affairs, and encourage them to meet for study and social events.

The Women's Department meets every Thursday and studies the Book of Mormon. The members want to grow in knowledge of the Lord, and they feel that these meetings are a big help in their spiritual development.

Six members have recently been added by baptism, in some instances completing the family circle.

We have been very sorry that District Missionary Amos T. Higdon has been ill and unable to continue his work. Our prayers have included a petition in his behalf, for he is an enthusiastic, capable, and impressive exponent of the latter-day gospel, and we need him.

A number of the Saints express their intention of attending the Davenport conference and hope to receive much good there.

Hibbard, Indiana

The Saints are trying to keep the faith and to carry on the gospel work to the best of our ability and opportunity in Hibbard.

We miss our two leaders, the Brothers Listenberger, father and son, who left us for the life beyond last February. But the Lord has been with us in our bereavement. Elder William Osler, district president, came in September, conducted meetings, ordained Brother Bennett to the office of priest, and installed him as leader. Brother Bennett is also Sunday school superintendent.

Elder S. W. L. Scott came from Coldwater on a recent Monday evening and visited our sick at the Kelley Hospital, Argos, Indiana. Sister Lola Wade has been ill in that institution since July. Also Brother S. S. Reed went to the hospital for X-ray examination and picture. He has been very sick for a long time. The prayers of the Saints for these afflicted ones will be appreciated.

Brother Scott opened a series of sermons on "The signs of the times" on Tuesday evening. There was nice attendance of members and nonmembers. In these sermons the financial depression, the long rainless season, the unemployment problem, and the conflict between labor and capital were used to illustrate the condition that is to exist just before Christ comes a second time. It was suggested that if the industrial system, proposed by the Lord in latter days and set forth by divine revelation, could be fully established, we would have a practical demonstration to solve the problems which menace the peace and integrity of society.

This section of country has not been struck so hard by drought as some others. Crops are almost normal. The Lord has blessed this people.

Sister Wise came from Phoenix, Arizona, a few weeks ago, and is helping to nurse her daughter, Sister Wade, at the Kelley Hospital. This is her former home. She ranks among the charter members of the branch.

The new church building progresses somewhat slowly. It seems this must be so while the depression is on. We are occupying the main auditorium for church services and departmental work. The basement is given over to social functions. The Women's Department is very active in furnishing the building committee every possible penny.

Brother Ollie Listenberger is faithful in working on the church. He donates his time and work. May he be blessed. Workmen with teams have been busy hauling dirt, grading the church ground, and widening the street south of the building. This work is not yet finished.

Park-Presidio Branch

This congregation moves on, gathering up here a little and there a little with the result that our meetings are being well attended by a representative group of friends.

Elder John W. Rushton is doing a wonderful work in this district.

October 1 was the weekly meeting of the Park-Presidio Kiwanis Club, and J. W. Rushton was the speaker. He was not a stranger in the midst of this organization, and received a hearty welcome and applause. His talk was entitled "Straws in the wind." The president, Harry Wissman, remarked that he regretted that Brother Rushton was limited to twenty-five minutes in his talk, and hoped to have him again at an early date as the speaker; we will gladly give him an hour next time. Mr. Wissman has attended two of the meetings of the branch and was much impressed by Brother Rushton's sermons.

A representative of one of the largest public service corporations was also present at the club meeting and immediately arranged for another talk on that subject by Brother Rushton.

It is an old story that no one can live unto himself alone, and we feel that if the Saints have the right spirit and attitude they will be glad to mingle with those not of the church. If this is properly done, our church work will grow very rapidly. It will not hurt church members to join a worthwhile association or club, and by so doing their circle of acquaintances and associations is widened. The only way to make contacts is to mix with various groups. Our success in making friends is being evidenced by the wonderful attendance we enjoy at meetings.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Sunday evening Apostle F. Henry Edwards preached the opening sermon of a series of young people's meetings sponsored by the O. B. K. organization. The unique things for which this church stands in the twentieth century composed the general theme of the talk by Brother Edwards, who called his discourse "Rebels for God." During the week the meetings are being conducted in the nature of a forum, when questions relating to the subject are discussed and answered. Because Central congregation is the host of these meetings, all members of the local were urged to attend regularly.

Next Sunday is Decision Day, and opportunity has been given all who contemplate joining the church to get in touch with the pastor. Brother C. E. Wight, pastor of Central Church and president of Kansas City Stake, is always willing and happy to discuss the program of the church and its operations with members and nonmembers.

The sessions of the church school Sunday morning were made attractive by appropriate musical numbers by the choir and by instrumentalists of the congregations. Always the contributions of these willing helpers are deeply appreciated by the congregation. Brother George Anway, of Independence, who for the past several weeks has been directing the choir, wins from the singers an excellent response. The stake oratorio choir now rehearses every Sunday afternoon.

Then, without intermission, will come a sermon by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis. Sunday afternoon will be dedicated to choral work. It is hoped that several of the branches will be represented by their choirs and that each group will give one or two numbers; after which the combined choirs will sing as the district choir. Instrumental work will be sought out and used. Sunday evening the institute will close with special music and a sermon. Meals will be served in a restaurant at the corner of Crosier and Main Streets, a short distance from the church. Special notice: At the last business session of the conference, the recommendation to adopt the program of Religious Education was deferred with the statement that action could be had on the matter at any district gathering. ## Our Departed Ones

PARKER.—Byron C. Parker was born in the State of Iowa, April 24, 1853; was baptized into the church at Scranton, Kansas, October, 1897. Died at his home in Colorado Springs, Colorado, October 3, 1930. He is survived by his wife, Cora Parker, a son, Floyd Parker, of Goodland, Kansas, a daughter, Mrs. Fay Wakefield, of Denver, Colorado, and six grandchildren. Funeral services held at Swan's Mortuary, sermon by Elder E. B. Hull. Interment was in Evergreen Cemetery, Colorado Springs, Colorado.

SEARS.—Sally Jeanette (Bearse) Sears, familiarly known to the church as "Aunt Nettie Sears," was born at Dennisport, on Cape Cod, October 28, 1856; passed away at her home in West Bridgewater, Massachusetts, August 13, 1930. She was baptized February 22, 1880, by Elder William Bradbury. For the greater part of the fifty years of her church life, she was a resident of various places on Cape Cod. In 1917 she removed to Brockton and became enrolled with Brockton Branch. August 1, 1875, she was united in marriage to John G. Sears, by whom she is survived. Two sisters, Mrs. Bessie Sears and Mrs. Hester Weston, both of Wareham, and one brother, Thomas Bearse; and the following children are left to mourn her passing: Mrs. Nettie Ava Horrigan; Miss Addie Sears, Lloyd W. Sears, Mrs. Myra Grey, Mrs. Rena Garfield, and Mrs. Iphigean P. Snell. She also leaves thirteen grandchildren and thirteen great-grandchildren. Always an ardent Latter Day Saint, her testimony and faith were strong to the end, and her presence is greatly missed in Brockton Branch. Funeral services were from the Sampson Funeral Home, and interment at the cemetery in East Dennis. Elder H. A. Chelline, pastor of Brockton Branch, officiated.

PASCOE.—Mary Jane Cox was born at Cornwall, British Isles, December 19, 1852. Immigrated to Moonta, South Australia, when about ten years of age. Was married to Edward Pascoe in June, 1869. Of four children born to them only two survive: Edward Theodore, Sydney, Australia; and Adelaide Mary, now Mrs. Gomer R. Wells, of Lamoni, Iowa. One child died in infancy. When her eldest daughter, Catherine Jane Patterson, died in 1897, Mrs. Pascoe mothered her five children for about five years. One of these, William Patterson, of Providence, Rhode Island, afterwards joined the church and became a missionary. Mr. Pascoe died in 1898. Mrs. Pascoe joined the church under the ministry of Elder Gomer Wells in 1896. She booked passage to America in August, 1921, in company with her grandson, William Patterson, and John Blackmore who were coming to enter Graceland College. She suffered a paralytic stroke a few days before landing. Later, she only partially regained her strength at her daughter's home. On account of the daughter's failing health and removal to the hospital, she entered the Saints' Home, Lamoni, Iowa, in November, 1922, where she lived until a second stroke took her away October 4, 1930. She had many friends. The funeral was from the Home chapel October 6 in charge of Elder Thomas S. Williams. Elder A. L. Loving delivered the sermon. Interment was in Rose Hill Cemetery.

Historical Program for November

FOR LOCAL BRANCHES

Subject: The Return to Zion.

In 1852 a little band of Saints in Wisconsin set up the first temporary organization that was later to develop into the Reorganization. They had waited for eight long, weary years since the death of the Martyrs, hoping and praying that God would again speak to his people. And they were to wait eight more long years for the coming of "Young Joseph" as their prophet and leader. But when their patience and their prayers were rewarded and he did come, the faces of the Saints were again turned Zionward, and the return to Zion had begun.

Suggested Program

Song: "One hour with Jesus," number 337, Saints' Hymnal.

Prayer: With special thanks for the heritage of the Reorganization.

Reading: Doctrine and Covenants, section 98, paragraph 4, beginning with "And they that have been scattered shall be gathered," and ending with "to build up the waste places of Zion."

Music: Special number.

Short talk: Review of the immediate history of the Reorganization movement. References: Church History, volume 3, chapters 9-11; article, "The Reorganization," by Inez Smith Davis, in November Vision.

Play: "Young Joseph takes his place," number eleven (and last) of "Conversations," by Elbert A. Smith; published in November number of Vision.

Song: "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet," number 353, Saints' Hymnal.

Short talk: "Accomplishments of the Reorganization; or, on the road back to Zion."

Song: "Glorious things are sung of Zion," number 110, Saints' Hymnal.

Benediction: Praying that we of today might keep our faces turned Zionward until it is reached, and keep our hands set to the tasks which yet remain.

The New Voice of Science

"We live in a world of beauty, a world of motives, and a world of values based on standards other than the metric system."

"To suppose that to accept the latest revelations of science means the decadence of things most worth while is to misjudge completely the purpose of scientific endeavor. Science and religion, when rightly scanned, give supplementary views to a picture of life vastly deficient when looked at from either standpoint alone."

"Into this world of mystery . . . man comes to play his part," which "depends quite as much upon his religion as upon his science."

Thus writes Doctor Harlan T. Stetson, Professor of Astronomy and Director of Perkins Observatory at Ohio Wesleyan University, in an article in the New York Herald Tribune Magazine, as quoted by the Literary Digest.

It is not as if another voice from the men of science were needed. The early utterances of Larkin, and the more recent statements of Millikan and many others have shown not brave individual stands, but the movement in a trend that is taking place. Two roads to a knowledge of the truth, once sharply diverging, are now seen to draw together again.

"Don't Organize Christ Out of Your Life"

A reader clipped the above striking statement from a Baptist Sunday school leaflet, and sent it in.

This word of advice is for all those who dodge behind the alibi, "I'm too busy!" when they are asked to do something for the church.

Some place there is room for Christ in your life. And some place there is a great need. You may deprive yourself of Christ for a time, but you are sure to suffer the loss later.

Suppose that one should come, spiritually hungry, into the presence of the Master, asking for help; and he should say as some of us say, "I'm too busy."

President Briggs, of Graceland, always had one answer for those who said, "I'm too busy"; he told them: "Rearrange your schedule." It is good advice for all of us. We should rearrange our schedules. We should not organize Christ out of our lives.

Constructive Work

Once, when I had moved into a new section of a city, I entered a provisioner's shop for supplies. I noticed that his packaged goods were dusty, that the leaves on some heads of lettuce were bruised and wilted, and that in a separate show case the meat was dark with age and oxidation. It was immediately apparent that I had got into the wrong kind of place, but the merchant was after me before I could escape. Nauseated, I purchased a ten-cent can of pepper to keep from telling him that I did not wish to buy of him.

Over this purchase the shopkeeper told me a marvelous story. It was mostly about the other merchants. All of them, it seemed, were dishonest, save only he. They all charged exorbitant prices and robbed the poor. I was a newcomer, he could see, and he felt obliged to warn me against them, lest they should deceive and rob me as they did so many others. I could solve all my difficulties, he assured me, by trading exclusively with him!

I needed provisions, but I could not use his goods, even though I should go hungry. I entered a shop up the street whose proprietor my erstwhile protector had bitterly denounced. I found the goods neat, clean, and fresh; and when I inquired about prices I found them not unreasonable. With this second merchant I traded for many months with such satisfaction that we became friends. The first merchant with the long story and the poor goods was soon out of business.

This story has often returned to me with compelling force, especially when I think of methods of evangelization, and the missionary work of the church. I recall one little church I once visited. The people had the perfect plan of salvation, but their floor was dirty. They were absolutely right on baptism, but apparently immersion had used all the water and left none to clean the windows. The minister told the congregation "the truth that makes you free," but his clothes were untidy. He spoke as one who had the authority, but very little preparation. And above all, the first article of faith at that church was that all the other churches of the community were wolves in sheep's clothing.

The merchant failed in business because he was a bad merchant. And his attacks on his fellow merchants was one of the signs of his doom. The little church was failing because it was dead to the Christian gospel.

We can not survive by attacking other churches.

We must win by living the gospel of Christ, and by building Zion. The better business men win, not by fighting their competitors, but by selling better goods. The better churches win, not by attacking other denominations, but by teaching the gospel of Christ and by living better lives.

We must live and work affirmatively, constructively. If our program appeals, and we demonstrate that we have something of real value, nothing can stop our growth. If not, nothing that we can say to undermine other churches will help us any slightest bit.

The Salvation Army on Prohibition

There is no doubt about the benefit of prohibition in the mind of Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army. She is quoted as saying:

"I've had a chance to observe the situation at first hand, both before and after the Eighteenth Amendment came into effect. And I am convinced as a result of that observation that there is no part of the United States that has not been improved by the prohibition law."

No organization maintains a closer contact with the people of the great cities, where liquor is known to flow most freely, than does the Salvation Army. It is said that before prohibition the Army cared for 1,200 and more men and women in a single night in the Bowery of New York alone—men and women who were too drunk to care for themselves. Now the number has dropped to about seven per night! Surely this is a commentary worth notice.

So reports the Bluefield, West Virginia, Sunset News, from an article in the Christian Herald.

No one can read the words of Jesus, much less follow in his footsteps even a little way, and not discover that he lived in a world of which Cæsar knew nothing. All the strange powers of the soul were assembled in him, held in harmony by a sanity of mind and a purity of heart, transfiguring the dark mystery of life with meaning and mercy. The unseen, unknown empire of the spirit, over which the legions of Cæsar had no authority, was his dominion. He heard the voices of the world; he read the heart of man; he reached and ruled that inner realm where abide the issues of life and destiny. His dazzling conception of the kingdom of heaven has no equal in its depth and grasp and grandeur. It has in it the breadth of the sky, the curve of the world, and all the journeying years. The dream of Cæsar was vast, but the vision of Christ is vaster. All the wondering races of men are embraced in his humane and heavenly vision of a redeemed humanity; and he saw in a far time his vision fulfilled.—Joseph Fort Newton.

Why the Church Must Teach

By F. M. McDowell

The Ministry of Jesus

The ministry of Jesus was threefold, the ministry of preaching, the ministry of healing, and the ministry of teaching.

Jesus healed not only the bodies but the souls of men. He sought not only to remove the effects of sin and disease, but he left with men a philosophy of life which if followed would remove the causes of such. It was his mission not only to heal but to prevent the ailments of mankind.

Then, too, Jesus was a master of the art of preaching. Convinced of the divinity of his mission, thoroughly informed as to the needs of mankind, and wholly devoted to its welfare, his preaching was such as to set on fire the hearts of men. One does not belittle these first two aspects of the ministry of Jesus when he states that the profound impression left upon the reader of the New Testament is that of Jesus as a teacher. Is it not significant that the so-called "Sermon on the Mount" is introduced by the words: "He went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him: and he taught them"?

The Spirit of His Teaching

The spirit of the ministry of Jesus was that of the true teacher. A striking illustration of this is the occasion of the coming of the young man to ask concerning the way of life. After Jesus had questioned him rather severely and the young man had replied frankly and earnestly, the text reads, "Then Jesus, beholding him, loved him."

It is this love for those he would teach that characterizes the ministry of Jesus. It is such a love for all men that must ever mark the ministry of his church. The church must teach because the heart of its message is that of a passionate devotion to the welfare of humanity.

The Nature of His Message

The message of Jesus was the gospel, and the gospel was good news to men. This good news came to men. It was for men. It was about men. It revealed to men their sonship to God. It told men that all have within them the power to become. Through obedience to the laws of the gospel, men would grow physically, mentally, socially, and spiritually. For this purpose, Jesus taught. To this end, the church which represents Jesus on earth today must teach. It must so organize its effort that all men shall be given an opportunity to grow always in all their lives towards the standard of manhood set by Jesus towards that quality of individual life that will make possible a new society.

The Method of His Ministry

Jesus recognized that he was divinely commissioned. He gives us every evidence that he realized the seriousness of his task. He was ever conscious of the limited time that was at his disposal, and yet with all of this he chose to teach.

In all of his teaching Jesus emphasized the central place of the growing person in each teaching experience. His illustrations were drawn from the concrete everyday experiences of his hearers. He recognized that we learn to do by doing, and that we grow best when we share our experiences with others. He was a master of the art of questioning and shrewdly led his pupils to formulate their own conclusions.

Many of the best of modern educators recognize the method of Jesus as authoritative. Perhaps without exception methods which we speak of as "modern" can be pointed out in the masterful skill of the Great Teacher.

The church that would really represent Jesus must teach.

His Commission

At the conclusion of his ministry, still conscious of his divine call, vitally concerned that his message should reach all nations, undoubtedly aware of the difficulty and magnitude of the task, Jesus trusts his work to the ministry of teaching, his great assignment being, "Go ye and teach."

The mission of the church seems to have been formulated by Jesus in terms of a teaching ministry. Men are to be taught to observe all things, whatsoever he had commanded. If the church is to be loyal to his mission, it must teach.

God Is Not Dumb

God is not dumb, that he should speak no more;

If thou hast wanderings in the wilderness
And findest not Sinai, 'tis thy soul is poor;
Which whoso seeks shall find; but he who bends,
Intent on manna still and mortal ends,
Sees it not, neither hears its thundered lore.

Slowly the Bible of the race is writ,

And not on paper leaves nor leaves of stone;
Each age, each kindred, adds a verse to it,

Texts of despair and hope, of joy or moan.
While swings the sea, while mists the mountains shroud,
While thunders' surges burst on cliff of cloud,
Still at the prophets' feet the nations sit.

—James Russell Lowell, from Bibliolaters.

What Is Your Life?

By Christiana Salyards

"For what is your life? It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away."—James 4: 14.

It was the world's greatest Teacher, who knew the human heart as no other does, who said, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

There always has been a scramble on the part of men for an abundance of material things, those that minister to our physical life and enjoyment; and in the anxiety for material wealth, the majority have overlooked the value of the most precious possession, the germ of endless life within the human spirit. Engrossed in the pursuit of that which is transient, they have neglected the riches that are eternal, the spiritual virtues and graces.

The question asked by Lord Tennyson is a serious one: "What are men better than sheep or goats, that nourish a blind life within the brain, if knowing God, they lift no hands of prayer, both for themselves and those who call them friends?"

What are men better than sheep or goats, that nourish a blind life within the brain? What differentiates between men and sheep or goats, that give all their attention to living the physical existence? If the life within the brain of man be as blind to all other objects as is that of the sheep or the goat, in what is the man superior?

A notable difference between man and the lower animals is the inventive power in the human brain, the creative ability that links him with the One who made all things. But if men use their inventive power only to cater to the physical life, what still are they better than sheep or goats? The difference is only in degree of power; the use of that power is to the same end, the care of the physical life.

The materialistic man has greater perception of the values of the physical world than has the beast. He sees how to utilize its resources to advantage. Men are to be commended for having gone far in obeying the command to subdue the earth. God must approve the progress they have made in discovering the use of the various materials with which our earthly home has been so richly endowed. He must approve the industrial projects and achievements of men, their scientific research, and their intellectual development.

I believe he works with men in these activities and that they have not of themselves alone attained the plane upon which the world stands today, but the invisible God has worked with them, giving them the due reward of their efforts. He is working also to bring us to realize the value of the life that is infinitely finer and more precious than that which is like the life of the sheep or the goat. He is bringing us to the high conception that we are his offspring, his children, destined to be heirs of all things with Jesus Christ, if we prepare ourselves to enter upon our inheritance.

It is a great human achievement for a man to stand before a microphone, with his voice scarcely raised above the conversational pitch, and send it out over land and sea, to be heard by millions of people. Men talk across the sea. They say they will talk around the world. They are trying to talk to Mars, though they do not know certainly that it has inhabitants.

How many believe we can talk with heaven? How many believe it possible to get a response from heaven? How many believe a great Spirit of goodwill presides in the midst of heaven who is willing to be approached by his children of the earth, so often in need of his comfort and counsel? How many lift hands of prayer to him, both for themselves and those who call them friends?

Sincere efforts to reach God would be well repaid. Throughout all the Scriptures runs the assurance that he always may be approached by those who come in the appointed way. Why do so few believe this? Because spiritual understanding is weak and but scant attention is given to the development of spiritual life and power. We grasp for the transient things of this world, oblivious to the importance of studying the life of the spirit and fostering it. The world, even the church, needs nothing else so much today as it needs to give attention to spiritual life and growth. It needs the life that comes from the living Fountain through Jesus Christ.

We go our individual ways, each one chasing his favorite phantom, giving little attention to the priceless gift offered by Him who said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." We are thinking too little of our spiritual life. We are giving too much attention to material things, often to petty, trivial things. This is why we are not more deeply conscious of the greater life, that which is of the spirit.

It has been suggested that we should make this life a happy valley and not a valley of tears, but this involves the right conception of happiness and how it is attained. In the distant past there was a valley of rare charm, but the people in its cities lived only for the enjoyment of sensuous pleasures which do not "enrich the soul." Proud, selfish, and given wholly to physical pleasures, they sank below the level of the stolid sheep or goat. And one day there fell upon the five cities of the plain a pall of desolation so complete that even their site is not known now with certainty. They were blotted out for ever.

Across the river, only a few miles from where the once smiling valley lay, there opened up a long, barren gorge between bare limestone hills. A road ran through the canyon, a toilsome, rugged road that wearied those who climbed it, for it led continually upward toward Jerusalem. That was the upward path which Jesus followed on his last journey to Jerusalem, the one that led to the rude cross on Calvary. But that weary journey led him farther than the cross. It led him to victory over death and to the right hand of the Majesty on high, to the joy of a Redeemer of men.

The way that leads upward may be a stern, toilsome one, but it will be the way of happiness, if it leads from the low plane of pleasures that are merely physical to the lasting joy of the life of the spirit, a joy that begins even here as we toil upward.

Let Your Hands Be Strong

By Blair Jensen

The first cycle has been completed. The church has existed upon the earth in these latter days for a hundred years. From an organization consisting of six members, it has expanded until today over a hundred thousand have covenanted to make it great. This day is our day. This new century upon whose threshold we pause, belongs to us, given by the faithful ones of the century which has just closed. Because these noble forefathers gave heed to the cry of the ancient prophet, "Let your hands be strong," they have, with glory to themselves and honor to God, sped the work of redeeming mankind. We pause to honor them, to vision the greatness of their service, and in this very act we strengthen ourselves for the task which yet lies unfinished before us this day.

From the very birth of Christianity we can trace the stalwart character and the mighty stamina of her adherents as we see them giving up their lives in the Roman arena, whose pit ran red with the blood of Saints slain by the ruthless onslaught of the starved beast from the jungle. We can hear their cries as their bodies are torn limb from limb in those cruel machines that only the nightmare of an Inquisition could produce. The darkened night of Haun's Mill and the overshadowed day when Nauvoo mourned her slain prophet, have been pictured to us by the lips of those whose eyes saw and ears heard the awful horrors of those days. Though wounded and maimed, they were true to demands made upon them. They strengthened their hands. Their faith survived unshattered. With this heritage we enter the new century. With the wonderful example of those of the first century before us, we can but pledge ourselves to continue during this century the noble work for which they gave so much.

Redemption of Zion

Zion will be redeemed. That time and condition so long awaited will come. God has said so. If our covenant of membership in this organization means anything, it means that we must give ourselves unreservedly to the serving of mankind through the instrumentality of this church. We can leave an imprint of our earth journey upon mankind in no other way than through our ministering to their needs.

Omar and Ahmed, brothers and mighty warriors of the desert, desiring that the memory of their great deeds of valor might be heralded down through the ages, planned to create monuments that would keep these memories bright. Ahmed caused a huge shaft of stone to be quarried, and engraved upon it a history of the great things he had done. When, after a great effort, this was pointing towards the heavens, he thought that truly all ages should learn of him. Time and the cutting action of the wind-blown sand of the desert soon completely destroyed it, and Ahmed and his great deeds have long been forgotten. Omar dug down deep into the bowels of the desert and brought forth a gushing stream of cool and refreshing water. To this day, as the Bedouins camp around and are invigorated by partaking of it, they recount the mighty deeds of the valiant Omar. His memory lives, for his monument ministers to the needs of mankind.

A Fruitful Program of Life

There are four factors which we wish to consider, four things that must be developed within our lives, if we would that our hands be strong for the needs of our century: We must adhere to the temporal law of the church, consecrate our talents, grow in love, and develop to a greater degree the spirit of humility.

In reality, no man or woman can be a Latter Day Saint and not be true to his temporal obligations to the church, for they, too, are ordained of God. It is through obedience to the temporal law that the means is obtained whereby the message of salvation can be carried to those who have not as yet heard of it. Consecrated wealth is a means of expressing the depth which this message has reached in us. A thing has a value to us directly proportional to the cost we have paid for it or the sacrifices we will make for it. The profession of being a Saint, when accompanied by the failure to respond affirmatively to the temporal law of this church, constitutes hypocrisy, real and undiluted.

Don't Omit the Last Verse

At the conclusion of a meeting of a group of women, their chairman announced that they would close by singing a certain hymn, omitting the last verse. A member objected and called their attention to the first verse of the song they were to sing:

Take my life and let it be,
Consecrated, Lord, to Thee.
Take my moments and my days,
Let them flow in ceaseless praise.

This verse, she said, was the one which they always sang so feelingly; and then she called their attention to the way the verse started which they were going to omit:

Take my silver and my gold,
Not a mite would I withhold.

Saints, this is our difficulty; we too many times omit the final verse. We withhold our silver and our gold. It was fresh from the persecutions of Missouri that a poverty-stricken people erected the beautiful temple at Kirtland by the giving up of their keepsakes and precious things, often even the common necessities of life.

Too High Price for Precious Stones

Rome was surrounded by a barbarian enemy. Her walls were strong and well manned. Sufficient food was in her granaries. Her citizens were not given to worrying, for they could well withstand the siege of the enemy. But one of her daughters was dazzled by the glitter of the jewels and silver and gold worn by the enemy. She consented to open a certain gate during the nighttime. Her price was to be all the valuables worn by them, to be cast into the darkened corner where she would be standing. True to their agreement, these barbarians cast upon her everything that had jewels or silver and gold. Rome, betrayed by her, was sacked and looted that night, but she perished beneath the weight of the jewel-studded shields and helmets which were flung upon her, the purchase price of her faithlessness.

Latter Day Saints, too, can die under the very weight of their prosperity, when they forget the purposes of God's blessings to them. To strengthen our hands, let us be obedient to the temporal law of the church, for Zion will be redeemed, and in part by the consecration of our silver and our gold.

Consecration of Talents

God has given talents to all of us. To some have been given talents of one kind and to others those of another. To some they have been given to a greater degree than to others. From all of us he demands returns according to that which he has given. It behooves us to study ourselves, finding out what our talents are and then developing our potentialities to the end that we can render a most efficient service. Phillips Brooks has told the story of the natives of India taking a beautiful sundial which had been presented to them and building a roof over it. Even as its function was thus thwarted, so do people who do not put their talents to right uses thwart the purposes of God in them.

Our talents may not be as great as some others, but if we do our best with them, it is well and good. To win a second or a third prize in competition is greater than to take a first without effort. The men and women whose hands have been strong in every age have been those who have continuously sought to grow and who have used the opportunities which have come their way to develop and consecrate their talents, thus rendering a most efficient service to God. By the living of consecrated lives will Zion be redeemed.

Keep Love Alive and Growing

Jude says, "Keep yourselves in love of God." In the strengthening of our hands for the tasks of this century, we must keep ourselves within the love of God. Much of our sorrow and our suffering has been brought upon us as a result of our failure to grow sufficiently in love. If we would love our fellow men, we must place ourselves in the condition whereby we can bask in the love of God.

An American tourist returned from Germany bringing with him a phosphorescent match case. While recounting his adventures to a number of his friends one evening, he thought of this novelty and at once took his guests into the darkened basement to show them the workings of his toy. He removed the cap, but the room was not lighted. Examination revealed the instruction that this match case must be opened and placed in the sunshine a certain number of hours each day in order that it might absorb sufficient sunshine to give forth light in darkness. Like this match case, we must be continuously exposed to the divine in order that divinity might be radiated from us. In no other way can we secure the strength whereby we can withstand the shocks of life and in our lives reveal in fullness the message of this church.

We must lean upon Him and lean hard. We are indebted to Fidelia Fiske for this thought. She recounts how when worn and well-nigh exhausted on a mission to Persia, and yet trying to force her pain-racked body to sit in the circle on the floor, she was attracted by the whispering of a little native girl who had placed her back against her, and leaning closer heard these words, "If you love me, lean and lean hard." God's promise holds good if we will but lean upon him. Try him. Take him at his word, if you would let your hands be strong.

Humility a Refining Influence

Humble men are godlike men. We are humble when we see ourselves as we would have been and thus recognize what God has done for us. We can thus glean something of our responsibility to him. The searchlight of introspection should never be dimmed.

An oriental vizier always carried about with him a small casket of sandalwood. Frequently he would open this and gaze within it for a few moments. A servant timidly approached him and requested permission to look within the casket. The permission being secured, he was surprised and disappointed to see only the ragged and worn garb of a peasant. Upon voicing his surprise, his master said, "These are the clothes in which I was dressed when my emperor took me and elevated me to the position I now hold. When I tend to forget and lose my humility, I gaze within this casket and see myself as I once was and as I would be now were it not for the grace of my ruler."

So should it be with us. Realizing that God has done so much for us, we should show our appreciation to him by humbly assisting others. Opportunities are constantly at our door. Our failure to conduct ourselves humbly may have a world-wide effect. Of late the papers have been quite full of news concerning Mahatma Ghandi and his resistance to British rule in India. It is said that in his early youth he had determined to be baptized a Christian and journeyed some distance to the home of a minister for this purpose. He found the spirit of humility to be distinctly lacking in that man and turned away from him and went back to the great religion of India. We dare not venture to suggest how far-reaching has been the effect of this experience upon the national life of India.

We plead, "Let your hands be strong." Pledge your obedience to the temporal law of God's church. Develop and consecrate your talents to serving God through ministering to mankind. Grow in love of God and of your fellow men. Cultivate humility. Lincoln instructed Admiral Farragut, saying, "Your country demands success at your hands." God is this day demanding success at your hands. You must be true. Zion must be redeemed. You are a Latter Day Saint. Others have given their all, have even gone to their death for this great cause. Let us live for it and pledge God that by his help we will in this century see a redeemed Zion builded upon the foundation which has been so nobly constructed.

God's Advice to Young People

By Arthur Oakman

It is a commendable faculty in young people that they thirst for knowledge. "Knowledge is power," one man has said. Yet sometimes I fear that those who go to college sometimes neglect the brightest avenues through which truth can come to them. Modern insistence upon the scientific method has served to throw a disproportionate emphasis upon the processes of the intellect in the search for truth. Because, over a long period of time, science has appeared to obscure God behind a universe that has developed in accordance with law, many of the treasured and comforting anchors to life, engendered by loving parents of more simple faith, and sustained by the Christian techniques of faith and prayer, many young people experience heartaches about the treasures of their earlier life, and in extreme cases openly rebel against these "simpler" beliefs.

Whatever we are, it is certain that the universe has produced us, and moreover from it we draw our sustenance. It has given us all our faculties, our feelings, our wills, our intelligence. If therefore we seek truth about that which has produced us, surely we must trust all these as valid instruments upon which to rely during the process. The scientific method is not the only process valid in the approach to truth, nor have its conclusions always been consistent. Many scientific postulates have had to be reconstructed in the light of fuller investigation. Other men besides scientists have perceived truth about the universe, which has the power to commend itself to us with no degree of uncertainty. Consider the great artists. They experienced reality and have endeavored to convey their findings to us in various definite ways. I have repeatedly perceived mental states conveyed by the power of music; for instance, poets, philosophers, and prophets have testified to their deep spiritual convictions, desiring that we shall share with them the profounder things of life. After all, the test of truth is its power. If over a long period of time anything has the power to continually commend itself to men, and so work upon them that they are moved to bigger and better things, we should by all means seek its possession.

The greatest influence through the ages is Jesus Christ. He still has the power to commend himself to the enlightened spiritual and scientific understanding of the age. He did so rather concretely to Joseph Smith; and through him to us comes the advice to seek learning by study, also by faith. Now it may be that we can not at one time find agreement between two seemingly conflicting ideas, and this may be due to our limited powers of perception, and deficiency in the finer traits of character. Yet we must live. Let us not forget the simple techniques taught at the knees of our parents. Prayer is just as valid an instrument in the attainment of truth as is the scientific method of experimentation, classification, and generalization. Jesus prayed and turned the world upside down, not simply because he got down on his knees and said things, but that through his prayer and faith was generated a deep spiritual conviction about God and the universe which has served and still does serve to order the lives of thousands, nay millions.

"Let the solemnity of Eternity rest upon your minds," is enjoined in the Doctrine and Covenants. Take our problems to the God who inspired this utterance, not merely in an effort to get beyond thought, but in an honest endeavor to think through our problems in light of the consciousness that there is a personal Being who cares and who is striving to make himself known to us through all the avenues possible. He invites us to share with Him.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Kindergarten-Primary Worship Suggestions for November

By Mrs. J. E. Lentell

THEME FOR THE MONTH: "PRAISE AND THANKSGIVING."

The aim for the month of November should be to direct the thoughts of the children toward God as the giver of all the good gifts which we enjoy, and to develop within the child a desire to express thanksgiving to God for these gifts. Gratitude to God is best shown by doing his will, and by giving to those of his children who need help.

The children should be reminded of the season's changes throughout the month; for the leaves, the harvest, the nuts, and the winter are all gifts from God.

FIRST SUNDAY

THEME: "Our Daily Bread."

Aim: To direct the child's thought to the heavenly Father's daily gift of food. Lead him to desire to express thanks for this gift.

Conversation Period: Exchange greetings. The children's spontaneous interests may be recognized; then the theme of the morning should be discussed.

Quiet Music: "Gavotta, in F Major," Padre Martini, found in Religion in the Kindergarten, Rhodes.

Song: "Thank you' song," Carols.

Offering Song: "Like the little brook," Primary Songs No. 3, M. Cook.

Offering.

Response or Prayer:

"Take this offering, dear Jesus,
From thy friends, we pray,
As a gift of love we bring it
On thy day."

Story: 1. "Breakfast in the fields," Primary Story Worship Programs, Berg. Introduce this story by showing pictures of Armenian children or the picture, "Hope of the world."

A very fine introductory talk will be found preceding the story.

2. "The little loaf," Ethics for Children, Cabot.

The two above stories may be adapted to meet the needs of a particular group of children. The first story is especially adaptable.

Prayer. By children. The story and talk will give food for prayer thought.

Prayer Response (tune, "Luther's cradle hymn"):

"Be near me, Lord, Jesus, I ask thee to stay
Close by me forever, and love me, I pray,
Bless all the dear children in thy tender care.
And help us to love thee and willingly share."

March to Classes.

SECOND SUNDAY

THEME: "The First Thanksgiving."

Aim: To deepen the children's impressions of God's care.

Picture: "Pilgrims going to church," Perry Pictures Co.

Conversation Period. Talk of God's care, of the children's activities, and of Thanksgiving.

Quiet Music. (See first Sunday.)

Call to Worship: "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord."

Song: "God's goodness," Carols.

Prayer Song: "Thanks for daily blessings." Song Stories for the Sunday School, Hill.

Prayer. By several children.

Prayer Response. Same as on first Sunday.

Reading: "How the corn grew." (Let one child give this.)
Finger Plays, Poulsson.

Offering Song. Same as first Sunday.

Offering.

Offering Response or Prayer: All things come from thee,
O Lord, and of thine own have we given thee.

Story: "The first Thanksgiving," Primary Worship Programs, Berg. "A Boston Thanksgiving story," In the Child's World, Poulsson.

March to classes.

THIRD SUNDAY

THEME: "Thanking God by Giving."

Aim: To help the children show their thankfulness to God for his good gifts by giving to others who need their help.

Materials: A picture which expresses thankfulness. A plain, good-sized basket decorated for Thanksgiving.

Conversation Period, greetings, and other activities.

Quiet Music: "Night song," Schumann.

Call to Worship. Same as second Sunday.

Songs: "Giving to others." Discuss the bringing of food for the basket. Plan with the children to give this basket to some one in need. The food should be brought next Sunday. If there is a family to whom it would be appropriate to carry food, plan a trip for next Sunday and carry the basket to them. Since children often come to think of those to whom they give food as inferiors, it is sometimes wiser to present the Thanksgiving basket to the deacon of the local church and ask him to give it to some one in need. If a story is desired, the following one illustrates the lesson very well: "The children's surprise basket," Primary Worship Programs, Berg.

Prayer song, Prayer, and Response. Same as on second Sunday.

Offering. Same as on second Sunday.

March to classes.

FOURTH SUNDAY

THEME: "Making Some One Happy by Sharing."

Aim: To develop an unselfish attitude.

Picture: "Hannah bringing Samuel to Eli." (She gave her all to God.)

Song: "Can a little child like me," Living Hymns.

Collecting of Food. Arrange in basket.

Prayer. Thank God for blessing the children and their parents with food which they may share with people who were in need.

Collection Offering. Same as other Sundays.

Presentation of Basket. This should be made a very impressive incident. If the deacon receives the basket, he should be told to show appreciation, for the children should experience the joy of giving. If it is thought best for the children to take the basket to an old couple, or to a needy family, it might be better to make the trip during the week, since the Sunday morning Sunday school time would be short. In a large department the basket would have to be taken by representatives from the various classes.

Story: "How Patty gave thanks," In Child's World, Poulsen.

FIFTH SUNDAY

THEME: "Showing Thanks by Doing God's Will."

Aim: To strengthen the child's desire to show gratitude to God for his gifts.

Pictures: A picture of fruit, one of birds, an autumn nature picture, and a picture of a father and mother. These pictures may be cut from magazines and mounted.

Conversation Period. Show the pictures and let the children talk about them. Help the children to appreciate that these are some of God's good gifts to us. Direct the children's thinking so that they will realize that they are helping God when they love and obey mother and father; they are helping God when they care for the birds.

Quiet Music: "Good night," Nevin.

Song. Sing any of the Thanksgiving songs.

Prayer Song: "How strong and sweet my Father's care," Carols.

Prayer.

Prayer Response:

"Father, we thank thee,
Father, we thank thee,
Father in heaven,
We thank thee."

—Songs and Games for Little Ones, Walker and Jenks.

Special Number. This may be a special musical selection played on the piano or violin, simple enough for the children to appreciate; or, a beautiful record played and a picture shown which matches the music; or, a soloist asked to sing for the children.

Collection Service. Same as given on other Sundays.

Story: "Sharing the last meal," Knights of Service, Bradshaw. Dramatize this story, either this Sunday or the following Sunday. This is the story of Elijah and the widow's meal.

Birthday Service. Remember the birthdays for the month with a candle service. Plan this as a happy time for the children.

Suggestions for Candlelighting Birthday Services

By M. A. W.

"How far that little candle throws its beam—"
What joy a birthday candle brings a little child!
Have you passed so many mileposts on the road of life that you are unable to recall your own delight when the candles on your birthday cake were lighted?

A candlelighting birthday service, as no other custom, never fails to interest all the children and to bring a thrill of joy to the birthday child. If the candlelighting is carefully handled, there need be no danger in it. There are various ways in which this type of service can be conducted.

In a large department some one or more little children's birthdays come almost every week. The children enjoy guessing whose birthday it is. They can usually detect the birthday child by his tell-tale grin or burst of enthusiasm. Tiny candles may be placed on a wooden or heavy cardboard birthday cake which has been painted white, pink, or chocolate color to imitate an iced cake, or placed in little holders that will set on a low table in front of the teacher. As each candle is lighted an appropriate comment may be made by the teacher or children concerning what Harry could do when he was one year of age, two years, three years, and what he can do now; such as "When Harry was one year old he had learned to walk. When he was two years old he had learned to say many words, and he could walk and talk. When Harry was three years old he could put on his own shoes and stockings. Now that he is four years old he comes to Sunday school.
We are glad that Harry is old enough to come to our kindergarten, and we want to help him to be happy on his birthday." When all the candles are lighted, the birthday child may drop his pennies one by one in the basket, and then choose a favorite song for the group to sing, or the birthday song may be sung to him. The birthday child may blow out the candles, or he may bring his little friends, one at a time, to blow out the candles. As each little friend blows out the candle he may wish the child a happy birthday. The children and teacher together may formulate or repeat a little prayer for the birthday child, asking the heavenly Father to take care of him and to help him to grow to be a strong boy and a good helper. Then, one of the children or the teacher may select a birthday card or other little gift (flower, picture, etc.) for him.

It may be more advisable to set aside a portion of the last Sunday of each month for the celebration of birthdays. All the children who have had birthdays during the month may be invited to sit in a special place where they can be seen by the rest of the group. If there are not too many birthday children the candles may be lighted and re-lighted for each child. Should this consume too much time the candles need only be lighted once. Light as many candles as there are birthday children. As each candle is lighted, name the child for which it stands, tell how old he is, and make some special comment about him. Let each child drop his pennies in the basket while the others count. The birthday pennies should be consecrated to a special purpose. After the pennies have been counted, the children may sing the birthday song. Each child may blow out his own candle, invite a friend to blow it out, or all the birthday children may blow out the candles simultaneously. A prayer for these children may be prayed, and a birthday card given to each child.

A candlelighting birthday service provides a splendid opportunity for the teacher to get close to the child, and to call his attention to the significant advances in his growth, physical and social, and also to let the child share his happiness with others.

Church School Worship Services

By Edith Harkness

November, with its Armistice Day and Thanksgiving Day, brings with it opportunities for many rich and wonderful experiences. The past is recalled whenever Thanksgiving Day is mentioned; while a vision of a new and better day comes with the thought of what the Armistice brought to the Nation, urging us to build a new and better America, to discover our glorious land again.

FIRST SUNDAY

"Discovering America Anew—Building Zion"

Musical Prelude. (This should close with the music of "Jesus calls us o'er the tumult," Hymnal for American Youth, 128, after which the leader shall read:

The Call to the Quest

Come, share the road with me, my own,
Through good or evil weather;
Two better speed than one alone,
So let us go together.
And as we go, we'll share also
With all who travel on it,
For all who share the road with me
Must share with all upon it.

—John Oxenham.

(This entire poem will be found in Gentlemen—the King, copyrighted by the Pilgrim Press.)

Response to the Call (read by a young man; he need not be on the platform):

"All the past we leave behind:

We take up the task eternal, and the burden, and the lesson,
Conquering, holding, daring, venturing, so we go the unknown ways,

Pioneers."—Selected.

Scripture Lesson (read by the leader): Hebrews 11: 8-10.
Hymn: "Onward to Zion!" by President F. M. Smith. (School will rise.)

Short Talk: "The New America." (The following may be used but should be read over a number of times, so that the reader may make it his own.)

"History tells us of the dreams of Columbus. The life of the Old World grew and pushed out into unknown fields; as a result, knowledge increased, and it was then that Columbus dreamed of new ways of doing things, and while endeavoring to make his dreams come true, he discovered a whole new country.

"The lesson that this event brings to us is, that by striving to realize our dreams of noble living among those who are building Zion, we may build a new America. We have much on which to build.

"O Native Land, how fair you seem,
With lakes as lovely as a dream,
And, stretching far from sea to sea,
Great mountains, high in majesty!

"Thy gracious farms, with fields unfurled,
With wealth to feed a hungry world;
How fair thy mission, how divine,
To give thy aid, dear land of mine.

"But we have far to go toward the building of Zion, or the rediscovering of a New America—brotherhood, purity of thought and action, loyalty to Christ, the entire consecration of our lives.

"O God of nations, help us grow
In kindness, as in power; to know
The freedom of true brotherhood;
And wealth of love the highest good!

"But there is a joy in the task and feeling of peace as we achieve. Just as the end of Columbus's search resulted in the beginning of many new and far-reaching searches as America grew, just so, as we vision the New America—Zion—must we seek the better ways of living together, working together, playing together. "Seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you."

Prayer Hymn: "O bow thine ear," Saints' Hymnal, 67, (tune 90 in Saints' Hymnal). (School will rise.)

Prayer by leader (the following suggested):

"Our Father in heaven, we praise thee for the beautiful land which thou hast given us in which to dwell—the place of the 'New Jerusalem,' Zion. We thank thee for those daring, persevering ones who have gone before us, leaving us to new discoveries and achievements.

"We plead for thy guidance in the search for clarity of vision, for strength and earnestness in the tasks that are ours.

"We bless Thy name, and pray these favors through the name of thy Son, even Jesus the Christ."

Hymn: "Consecration."

Dismissal to Classes and Lesson Study.

Announcements.

Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

SECOND SUNDAY

"The New Americans"

Musical Prelude: "My task."

Call to Worship by leader (school to remain seated):

"Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Prayer Response (school in unison, seated):

"Savior, hear us, we pray,
Keep us safe through this day;
Keep our lives free from sin,
And our hearts pure within. Amen."

Testimony of a Searcher:

"Hear this, all ye peoples;
Give ear, all ye inhabitants of the world.
Both high and low, rich and poor together."
—Psalm 49: 1, 2.

"Behold how good and how pleasant it is For brethren to dwell together in unity."
—Psalm 133: 1.

Hymn: "Join the children of the Lord." (School will rise.)

Challenges of the Great Searcher: Matthew 18: 21, 22; 20: 25-28; 25: 34-40; John 15: 12-14; Luke 2: 49b.

Solo: "My task."

Talk: "How we may help":

We are called to be the Discoverers of the New America, and we are taught that "as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." If there is to be a New America, it must be discovered first in the hearts and lives of present citizens. We must have very definite attitudes if we would realize the high social order that will be the New America. For example:

a. A desire to grow, which must arise from knowledge of and dissatisfaction with the present conditions.

b. A respect for other people's personalities.

c. A sincere love for others together with an earnest desire to serve and to help build the new nation.

d. There must be a guiding principle in our lives such as governed William Penn, the rich Quaker who builded the great city of "Brotherly Love," Philadelphia: "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

The following immortal lines may well be indelibly stamped upon our memories and in our hearts:

"The Holy Supper is kept indeed
In what we share with another's need;
Not what we give, but what we share,
For the gift without the giver is bare.
Who gives himself with his alms feeds three, Himself, his hungering neighbor, and ME."

Prayer: (Read in unison, if possible. If not, read by a good reader, the school to give the Amen.)

"God send us men whose aim 'twill be,
Not to defend some ancient creed,
But to live out the laws of Right
In every thought and word and deed.
God send us men with hearts ablaze
All truth to love, all wrong to hate;
These are the patriots nations need,
These are the bulwarks of the State. Amen."

Hymn: "Blessed are they that do," Zion's Praises, 224.
Dismissal to Classes and Lesson Study.

(The closing hymn of the morning service, following the sermon, may well be "America the Beautiful.")

THIRD SUNDAY

"The City Beautiful"

Musical Prelude.

The Call to Worship, by leader (school standing):

"Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised in the City of our God, in the mountain of his holiness.

"Beautiful for situation, the joy of the whole earth, is mount Zion."

Hymn: "Glorious things of thee are spoken," Saints' Hymnal, 279.

The Lord's Prayer (unison).

The Call to Action, by the pastor:

We have learned in the services of the past Sundays that we are called to build a New America. We have been challenged to a great task—the redemption of Zion. The time for action is at hand; a definite setting forth of the beautiful ideals which, if built into a nation, will enrich the lives of all. We, who have been privileged to become members of the church of Jesus Christ, should put into practice in our lives those principles and teachings which have been taught us by those who have gone on before.

It is the time to stand firm upon the foundation laid by the Christ, and the time to do that which we know is right regardless of what the world is doing all about us.

There are many precious things which must be incorporated into our lives, some of which are Truth, Health, Charity, Happiness, Friendship, Humility, Temperance, and Love, if we are to build Zion, the City Beautiful.

Many beautiful thoughts have been given us by the poets and bards of old. From Lowell, we have these lines:

"New occasions teach new duties;
Time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still, and onward,
Who would keep abreast of Truth."

And these lines of Longfellow from "The Builders":

"For the structure that we raise,
Time is with materials filled;
Our todays and yesterdays
Are the blocks with which we build.

"Truly shape and fashion these;
Leave no yawning gaps between;
Think not, because no man sees,
Such things will remain unseen.

"Build today, then, strong and sure,
With a firm and ample base:
And ascending and secure
Shall tomorrow find its place."

There are others, but these are enough to urge us onward in our task of building Zion. Will we answer the Call to Action?

(A short prayer by the pastor at the close of his talk, asking God to arouse his people to the work at hand.)

Scripture Lesson: Revelation 21: 18-27; 1 Corinthians 3: 10-14.

Hymn: "Hail the glorious Golden City," Hymnal for American Youth, 225. (This may be sung to the music of 143 Zion's Praises.)

"Hail the glorious golden city,
Pictured by the seers of old!
Everlasting light shines o'er it,
Wondrous tales of it are told:
Only righteous men and women
Dwell within its gleaming wall;
Wrong is banished from its borders,
Justice reigns supreme o'er all.

"We are builders of that city;
All our joys and all our groans
Help to rear its shining ramparts;
All our lives are building stones.
Whether humble or exalted,
All are called to task divine;
All must aid alike to carry Forward one sublime design.

"And the work that we have builded,
Oft with bleeding hands and tears,
Oft in error, oft in anguish,
Will not perish with our years:

It will live and shine transfigured
 In the final reign of Right;
 It will pass into the splendors
 Of the City of the Light."

—Felix Adler, 1878-1909.

Dismissal to Class and Lesson Study.

FOURTH SUNDAY

The fourth Sunday is left for the celebration of Thanksgiving, and no program is provided here, as local churches can best work out their own programs for that day.

FIFTH SUNDAY

"Thy Kingdom Come"

Musical Prelude.

Call to Worship (school standing):

Leader: "The hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship him.

School: "Let us search and try our ways, and turn again to the Lord.

Leader: "Serve the Lord with gladness; come before his presence with a song.

School: "My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee."

Hymn: "Glory to God on high," Saints' Hymnal, 53.

Prayer (with musical Amen):

"God of the nations, Father and Creator of all, thou who hast called the children of men, through thy Son, the Prince of Peace, into a kingdom not of this world, send forth thy Spirit into the hearts of men, putting to shame the false idols of every mind; bringing faith to the doubting; zeal to the careless; increasing the workers. Commit thy word to the lips of faithful men, that soon the knowledge of thee and thy kingdom may cover the earth as the waters cover the mighty deep. So let thy kingdom come, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

*Talk: "Requisites of a citizen of the New America."

Scripture Lesson: Isaiah 9: 2, 6, 7; 40: 9-11; Micah 4: 1-5; Matthew 28: 18-20.

Musical Response to Scripture Lesson. (Piano and other instruments may play a part of Handel's Messiah beginning with "The kingdoms of this world.")

Hymn: "To us a Child of hope is born," Saints' Hymnal, 121.

Dismissal to Classes and Lesson Study.

(The closing hymn following the sermon may well be "Onward to Zion," by President F. M. Smith.)

*Requisites of a Citizen of the New America

In the building and redeeming of Zion, or, as we have thought of it during the few weeks just past, discovering a New America, we find that we must leave the past behind, take up the new tasks, carry the burdens, learn the lessons set for us, conquer, venture, dare. This requires faith such as Abraham and others of our foreparents had; but with the toil we shall find joy as we work toward the great brotherhood in which shall be found purity of thought and deed.

To be citizens in this New America, we must have a desire to grow; respect for and sincere love for others, making for deeper friendships; an earnest desire to share and to serve, for "he who gives himself with his alms feeds three, himself, his hungering neighbor, and me."

Our foundation stones must be Courage, Truth, Health, Home Life, Charity, Light, Happiness, Friendship, Love, Immortality, Humility, and Temperance, remembering always that we can not bring the kingdom of God into the world until we have it in our hearts.

The Master taught us to pray, "Our Father who art in heaven." What then should be our attitude toward those of different race or nation? The New America must be one where God's Spirit reigns and men are truly brothers, not only to the white races but to all colors—an America which will be shared."

Madison, Wisconsin

219 Jackson Street

The young people met at the home of Sister Walkers for a bunco party September 19.

Many of the Saints of Madison Branch went to Beloit September 21 to attend the all-day service.

September 16 Henry Woodstock was called to Saint Paul to attend the funeral of his brother, Alma.

As superintendent of the church school, Brother Woodstock attended the meeting at Beloit. He was in charge of the church school session. He also preached in the morning, reading Romans 14 and taking for a subject, "Our great responsibility." His text was, "None of us liveth to himself." Am I my brother's keeper? he asked. Some one is using us for a pattern of conduct, and we are helping or hurting by the things we do. Are we helping? What is our attitude toward youth? Can we expect our young people to be enthusiastic when they see our carelessness and indifference? Are we consistent and dependable? Are we helping God?

In the evening the sermon by Harold Carpenter, "Why Jesus must return," had for a text, "In my Father's house are many mansions."

Rally Day for this branch occurred September 28. A lecture was given by Brother Berve to the adults at the church school hour. At the same time Brother Henry Woodstock talked to the children in the lower auditorium.

Prayer service at eleven o'clock was in charge of Brother Berve. Words of comfort and advice were given through him. In the evening the sermon was by Brother Berve.

The following Tuesday evening the branch president called together the priesthood and teachers and officers of the various departments for prayer service.

Apostle D. T. Williams was here October 4 and called the priesthood together for a meeting. On Sunday he went to Rockford and returned the following day to conduct a special business meeting of the branch. After making a close survey of the situation in Southern Wisconsin District, Brother Williams suggested a change of presiding officers in our branch. Madison is the capital of Wisconsin, and here is located the most promising branch of the church in the State. It is so situated that it is within a few hours' drive of all the branches except two in the district. Brother Williams suggested that Brother Berve, who is making his home here, be made president of our branch and that he spend considerable of his time in attending to the needs of the work here. He asked Brother Berve to arrange his plans so as to be in Madison for one service each Sunday. He also suggested the advisability of developing the congregation here as a future basis of operation. Besides those already named, there are several other reasons for choosing Madison as the center for such a movement. It is one of the chief industrial centers, it is the educational center, and it is the center of all State social activities.

A rising vote of thanks was given Brother Floyd Griswold, whose resignation as branch president was presented and accepted at this service. During his term of office he has given faithful service.

At the recommendation of Brother Williams, Brother Berve was made branch president and then district president. Brother Berve spoke briefly with regard to the work of the future.

This was a very good business meeting. Brother Williams left the thought: "If you expect great things of God, do great things for him."

October 12 Henry Woodstock preached in the morning and Floyd Griswold in the evening. The text of the latter was,

"As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men."

The Saints are preparing for the district conference to be held October 18 and 19.

Waterloo, Iowa

The evening of September 26 a fair crowd enjoyed a musical presentation of the Religio. The theme thoughts suggested the subject, which is as old as creation and as new as each individual experience—forgiveness and welcome to the returned wanderer of the family flock. Those participating in the program ranged in age from tiny two-year-old Frances Myers to Sister McCoy, who says she is over seventy. She seems much younger, and her voice rang out clear and strong as she sang her solo. The instrumental accompaniment was by Roberta Allen at the piano and Forrest Hinds with the violin. Each member of the cast performed creditably. The presentation was arranged by Howard Grapes.

W. H. Wood and family are conducting an eating booth at the Cattle Congress again this year.

David Hain, ninety-one years old, father of Sister Emma Roosa, died a couple of weeks ago. The funeral services were held at Kistner's Chapel, Guy Haynes preaching the sermon. Interment was in Lake City, Iowa, the former home of the deceased. Brother Hain was a kindly old man and well liked by all during his short stay in this vicinity.

Australian Conference Wins Generous Press Notice

Elder W. J. Haworth, lately returned to Australia after attending the Church Centennial Conference in America, recently mailed to the office of the First Presidency a news report of the annual Northern New South Wales district conference, conducted at Wingham, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday, September 6, 7, and 8. The Wingham Chronicle and Manning River Observer devotes three full columns to an account of the conference, giving a summary of the addresses delivered, the names of the ministry in charge, and a statement of our beliefs. Attention is chiefly directed to the Sunday afternoon services held in the Memorial Town Hall.

Good attendance characterized the conference sessions, numerous places being represented. On Sunday afternoon District President G. H. Parker was in charge of the service, and with him on the platform were Elder W. J. Haworth, Bishop George Lewis, Elder G. Gillard, Evangelist A. V. Robinson, Mr. L. O. Martin, M. L. A., and Mr. H. E. Baines (deputy mayor of Wingham). Talks upon this occasion were delivered by the district president, Mr. L. O. Martin, M. L. A., Mr. H. E. Baines, and the principal address was by Elder Haworth.

In a letter which accompanies the press story, Brother Haworth tells of recent events in that district and touches upon the conference itself. He says:

"I have just returned from a visit to Newcastle District and to the Northern New South Wales conference, held at Wingham. There we had a very successful time. We were able to arrange the district officers under the new plan of Religious Education and to give two exhibition sessions of church school.

"The Saints were greatly interested in our story and in pictures of General Conference and the American trip. Brother Gillard's talks were also listened to with keen attention. As far as the effects of our visit to America concern Australia, the fillip that is being given to the work everywhere we go shows that it was a good investment.

"Sunday afternoon and evening the services were held in the town hall, and we had a goodly gathering of nonmembers. Elder Parker got the member of the State Legislature to open the gathering, and the deputy mayor of the town and representatives of the press were invited. Proceedings were reported in the Wingham Chronicle. I inclose a copy. We are glad that we got the statement of belief in this account without alteration. There is much in this report to do good in the town.

"At the conference Geoffrey Gillard was ordained to the office of elder by myself and A. V. Robinson. Brother Gillard is spending a couple of weeks in the Northern New South Wales District and will then work in the Newcastle District for the remainder of the year.

"Elder Corbett has done an attractive leaflet in connection with a missionary series to be held in Sydney branches and groups between Rally Day and Decision Day. Similar efforts are being made in the Newcastle branches. My work during this period will be in Victoria and South Australia, and I have advertising matter out for series at Richmond, Westgarth, Norwood, and Geelong. I leave for the south by steamer on Tuesday next (September 16)."

Saints Participate in Sunday School Convention

The Farmers' Creek Sunday School Association meets semiannually, the first Sunday in June at Fulton, Iowa, and the first Sunday in October at Iron Hill, Iowa. All Sunday schools in the country may attend, join, and take part.

The Saints of Fulton take an active part each time the association holds convention. This fall we had a junior class sing, and the young people were active with recitations and readings. Then there were talks by different preachers and others, such as county superintendents, representatives of the State, etc. We believe that here is opportunity for the work of the Saints to be brought before the people in such a way as to earn the good will of the public.

A collection is taken at each session, and when there is more than enough to care for the expense of the convention, the remainder is divided equally among the participating schools. Twice the Saints have received an equal ratio. As we work among these people, we are endeavoring to make the name Latter Day Saint honored and respected among them. And here we find many warm friends.

Through the courtesy of my daughter and her husband, the writer was privileged to attend the state fair for one day and two nights. And one incident there brought to mind most vividly the question: Are the Saints proud of the banner of King Immanuel, and do they show its colors to the world with gladness? The more our minds are centered on God's work, the more his Spirit will radiate from us to others.

We attended Sunday school and preaching services at Lamoni the last Sunday in August and heard Apostle John F. Garver speak.

We now have three sons living in and near Lamoni, so we had a picnic dinner in the Lamoni park with the children and grandchildren and other friends.

The Fulton Sunday school had a picnic early in August at the Moorhead Caves, now owned by the State. This is a fine place for such gatherings, the scenery being of the grandest and the camp equipment ample.

Elder E. R. Davis was at Fulton in the spring and helped the Saints. He delivered an illustrated lecture at the home of Brother Wylie Campbell. It was necessary to conduct this lecture in a home, for the church building has no lights. The people who gave us electric service for the church have moved their plant.

We believe we are holding our own in this region, and those who come to help are energetic in the Master's work. There is only one elder near here, and one deacon. However, there are other good helpers. Other Saints and ministers are invited to come and help us.

Sunday, September 28, my grandson opened the meeting for us. It made me thankful to realize that father, son, and grandson are now holding aloft the banner of Christ.

For Sunday school, attendance is about forty-five, and thirty or thirty-five compose the congregation for the preaching services.

JOHN HEIDE.

Burlington, Iowa

The Burlington Branch has been working under a cloud of sorrow for several months. Mrs. Marjorie Wright Smith, of California, a former member of this local, passed away August 23 in Chicago after an illness of one week following an operation. She often visited her mother, Sister H. N. Snively, of Burlington, who was under a physician's care at the time of her daughter's death. News of the passing of Mrs. Smith was so severe a shock to her mother that her health rapidly declined, and September 26 she, too, passed on and was buried beside her daughter at Montrose, Iowa.

Pastor F. T. Mussell was called home to Des Moines by the serious injury of his son, Lloyd, who was shot by a bandit in an attempted hold-up and robbery.

The following young people have moved from Burlington and are making their homes elsewhere: Mr. and Mrs. Earl Cummings have gone to Moline, Illinois; Robert F. Moerke and wife, Melva, have moved to Iowa City, where Robert is taking a course in medicine; Frederick, Hazel, and Ethel Kunz are visiting in Kansas City, and we hope they are not planning to make their permanent home there. Others of the members have been away on visits.

While we lose some members, we gain others. Sister Dixon and daughter, Pearl, of Carman, Illinois, now live in Burlington, where the latter is attending high school. Sister Hulda Sherman, of Fort Madison, is also making her home here.

Our Rally Day has been postponed until the last Sunday of October, which is also Decision Day. We hope for a large attendance, and trust that our branch members of Winfield, Mount Pleasant, New London, Salem, Farmington, and other places, will be present to enjoy the day's services. There will be meetings, morning, afternoon, and night. A covered dish dinner will be served at noon to all present.

Sister Floyd Returns to Palestine

Algiers, September 29.—I know there are some few who take an interest in my whereabouts and roamings, so I wish to say that so far this has been a pleasant journey and very different from the last time I went over to Palestine. It was just after the war then, and I was alone. The world was very unsettled, and the people on the boat feared striking a mine. We were told that the very next steamer which went through the straits of Messina was blown up, and I thanked God for our deliverance and my safe arrival in Palestine. Also that was the only time for years that I had to go through New York City alone. My brother was not there to help me. His office was closed, and he was in California. But God found for me good friends, and Saints who met me and took me in. Elder Squire met me at the station, and Brother Rich, I found, knew some of my relatives in New Hampshire. He went with me to Washington and helped me to get my visas and passport. This was a big undertaking, but after long waiting I was off and arrived in safety in Palestine, as you know.

As I have said before, this trip is very different from that of 1919. With me are my only son, A. W. Leighton Floyd, and his son. My brother, Frank C. Clark, of Times Building, Broadway and Forty-second Street, was back from the summer cruise to Oberammergau where the "Passion Play" was given this year. He was there and ready to help us.

I was sorry not to have had opportunity to meet the Saints in Brooklyn and New York, but we were there so short a time that we did not let them know we were in the city; I have not their present address. I extend to them best wishes and many thanks for their services of previous years.

MARY J. FLOYD.

Everett, Washington

Elder Harold I. Velt, formerly of Australia and now the conference appointee and president of Seattle and British Columbia District, conducted one of the most enthusiastic and successful series of missionary services ever held in Everett Branch. Brother Velt was ably assisted by his companion, Sister Velt, and our former district president, Elder M. H. Cook. Sister Velt sang several vocal numbers and furnished much of the instrumental music during the series, as well as operating the lantern during the lantern lectures. Brother Cook assisted with the preaching on Sundays and took charge of the evening services.

There were really two series of services. The first series continued for one week. The theme for this series was "American archaeology and its relationship to the Book of Mormon." The second series dealt with Bible prophecies and the coming forth of the Restoration movement and its contributions to present world thought.

There were two baptisms as a direct result of the series. Brother Howard, who previously had attended our services, was very much interested and convinced of the divinity of the gospel message. Brother Benjamin Pilbeam who has for years been a faithful "dry-land" Latter Day Saint, entered the kingdom through the waters of baptism. But in addition to the two conversions, several excellent contacts were made which should add three or four more to the present membership in the near future if proper care is given by the local priesthood.

Everyone joined hands to make these services a success. Prayer services were held, and spiritual enthusiasm was aroused. Our prayers, as individuals and as a branch, ascended to the throne of grace daily for the success of the services. We felt that indeed we were united in a common task worthy of the best each had to offer.

The College Day program was delayed one week because of the duration of the missionary services. But the spirit of the branch in the interest of Graceland was not lessened by the delay. The two Graceland alumni of the branch had charge of this program. Graceland songs, four talks on the need of Graceland to the church and the need of the scholarship fund, and the offering and offertory prayer made up the entire program. The largest offering ever made by the branch for this purpose was given at this service.

Everett Saints are rejoicing over the return of Elder Carl F. Oliver to regular church activity. Brother Oliver preached two excellent sermons in the past month. He has also consented to teach our teachers' training class, using the course as outlined by the general Department of Religious Education.

The church school Sunday morning services are being improved under the leadership of Sister Edith Davis. Interesting and worshipful programs are arranged for each Sunday morning preceding the study hour.

The local priesthood are concluding their study of Apostle M. A. McConley's outline, "The church home and those who worship there." It is hoped that the class will be continued in the study of other church endeavor.

The pastor's daughter, Annamae Brundage, is attending Washington State College at Pullman this winter. Enthusiastic letters to homefolks assure us that Annamae will give her best to succeed. And the branch rejoices to have its young people willing and ready to qualify for a greater service to humanity.

We are looking forward to Decision Day, when we hope others will decide to join hands with us in our endeavor to bring to pass, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as in heaven." We, as a branch, desire to contribute our share in attaining the goal and high ideals of the church of Jesus Christ.

GRANVILLE L. SWENSON.

Mallard, Iowa

The Spirit of God was felt to a marked degree in the communion service for the month of September. Members from Cherokee and Albert City were present. Brother Crippen, of Cherokee, gave an interesting sermon in the afternoon which cheered and encouraged. We always enjoy Brother Crippen's sermons, for we feel that he has a great desire to do his part to help in the latter-day work.

September 10, those who were permitted to attend the district reunion gave a report. We were pleased to hear the expressed desire of the young people to attend next year's gathering.

There was no special program Graceland Day. Violet Hahn is as yet our only student from that institution. She gave a talk concerning her alma mater and answered many questions about it.

September 21 we were pleased to see Betty Jean Peterson and Kenneth Pierson, of Albert City, led into the waters of baptism by Elder Edwards, of Pomeroy. The confirmation took place at the lake soon after the service of baptism, Brother Edwards officiating. These families from Albert City have much for which to be thankful. We have four generations of them who attend our branch, and we understand that all who are old enough belong to the church. Our prayer is that these two children may always have the Spirit to guide them.

That Sunday Brother Edwards was the morning speaker.

We are enjoying a visit from Robert Fish, of Independence, Missouri. Brother Fish was the shepherd of this flock for several years, and it seems like old times to have him here. We hope that Sister Fish may accompany him next time.

MRS. FRED HAHN.

Cleveland, Ohio

September 28 the church was made cheery by a large basket of autumn daisies, and the Saints enjoyed themselves in an all-day rally. At eight o'clock that morning twenty-five members met for prayer service. At 9.30 there were seventy-five who took up the studies of the church school. Pastor P. E. Farrow was the eleven o'clock speaker, his text being taken from 1 Corinthians 3:9.

The Women's Department then took charge and helped a goodly number to enjoy a basket lunch in the basement dining room.

In the afternoon a musical program was presented: Organ overture, "Lento espressivo," Kettelbey, by Byron Neville; soprano solo, "The Lord is my shepherd," Clara Farrow; reading, "A challenge to the youth," Raymond Troyer; piano solo by Belva Kelsey; tenor solo, "Spirit of God," George Neville; organ selection, "Pastorale," Byron Neville; A talk, "Music appreciation in our church," by George Neville; organ, "The old, rugged cross," by Byron Neville.

Byron Neville, one of our young Graceland boys, is to be commended for the way he plays the organ. The Saints deeply appreciate and enjoy his help. We hope, now that he lives near Cleveland, he will often grant us the privilege of hearing him.

The speaker for the evening was Elder Cecil Neville, who gave a fine discourse on "Faith and our greatest heritage." His text was from Hebrews 11:10. The choir sang "Consider the lilies," under the direction of the new chorister, Elder John Campbell. After this service, the Saints parted for their homes, feeling strengthened and encouraged after a busy day together.

Brother and Sister Jerome Andes, of Montana, lately came to Cleveland, Brother Andes to take a professorship in one of our universities. We are fortunate to have them here.

The sacramental service the first Sunday of October was a lovely meeting. The Spirit of God was there to bless and encourage us. A prophecy was given through one of the elders, and several brothers and sisters were commended for their work. The general assembly was given admonition and a blessing.

Brother Raymond Troyer, a former Graceland student, is here. We hope he will be able to locate a position in Cleveland, for he is much help to us.

The choir has started its fall work in full strength. It is an asset to our services and brings courage to the speakers and joy to the congregation.

Sister Margaret Oswald, who for the past five months has been vacationing with her mother in Germany, has returned to Cleveland Branch.

B. E. TALBOT.

Escatawpa, Mississippi

Though it has been some time since this branch has been heard from, we are striving to keep the work of latter days progressing in our community. Attendance is small, but interest is good. Nine children have been baptized since our last letter. Others will follow soon.

Recently the church building was repaired, and we bought a piano. This helps us in the song service.

The church school gave a program, August 28, to a large audience.

We are expecting Elder G. E. Burt, of Mobile, Sunday, October 12, to begin a series of meetings.

Several members from Escatawpa went to Mobile September 28, to hear Apostle J. A. Gillen preach.

Oshoto, Wyoming

Oshoto Saints met at the Little Missouri Schoolhouse September 28, with Brother Fred Cousins in charge. Brothers L. O. Wildermuth and Charles Wildermuth, of Kyle, South Dakota, were also present.

There was a basket dinner, and L. O. Wildermuth was the speaker in the afternoon and Brother Charles Wildermuth in the evening.

Brother Fayette Cole's baby was blessed and given the name Elbert A. Cole. Brother L. O. Wildermuth stayed with us the following week and held services. There were also a basket dinner and all-day meeting Sunday, October 5.

The Women's Department met for an all-day session October 6 with Sister McElroy. Plans were made for a bazaar to be held later in the fall in order to help raise money for the new church which we hope soon to build.

MRS. W. H. MCELROY.

Grand Island, Nebraska

Elder E. J. Lenox was here a few days including Sunday, October 5. Sunday school was conducted as usual at ten o'clock in the morning, there being preaching by the visiting minister at eleven o'clock. Dinner was served at the hall at noon, and at 2.30 a sacramental meeting was conducted. Lunch came at five o'clock, then Brother Lenox preached in the evening.

October 6 four little girls were baptized by Brother Lenox and confirmed at the evening service.

The women gave a social October 15. A program and lunch were principal attractions. Fifty-one plates were laid. This is the first social undertaking of the women, who are well pleased with the response. The women's organization meets each Wednesday afternoon for a study hour.

MRS. R. B. CONGROVE.

Graceland Chats

Home-coming Is Near

About the campus, talk of the annual home-coming is in the air. Committees have been appointed. Rehearsals are scheduled. Students are expecting visits from friends and relatives.

The Home-coming Chapel

The program begins with the chapel on Friday afternoon at 2:45. Students will make the old chapel ring with their Alma Mater song. Then back into the early days of Graceland they will go. "Olive and Mort" (Mrs. and Mr. M. E. Mortimore) will deliver an illustrated lecture on "Early days of Graceland." "Mort" has been going through old albums of snapshots and photographer's shops to discover pictures of "the good old days." Strange photographs of bewhiskered founders and professors, coeds in ruffles, frills, and picture hats, gridiron teams in sweaters of a couple of decades ago—these are some of the pictures that will be converted into lantern slides for home-comers who arrive early.

Herald Hall Presents "Kapers"

At eight o'clock Friday evening the curtain will rise at the Lamoni Coliseum for "Kampus Kapers," the annual show of the Herald Angels. "Jo" Anthony's orchestra will be playing a rousing version of "Graceland forever." A one-act play, coached by Florence Thompson, will appear first, a one-act comedy, "The dress suit." Then a quick change, and the orchestra, led by Stan Barrows, will center the stage. Tumbling, skits, stunts, and singing will lead on to a merry medley of college songs, ending in "Forward now, Old Gold and Blue." A cheer leader in white will mount the stage for a rousing "Go Graceland," and the curtain will ring down.

Walker Hall Open House

Visitors are interested in the "new girls' dorm," and Gracelanders are proud to show it. To accommodate home-comers, Walker Hall will hold open house Saturday morning from 8 to 9.30. Visitors may see the dormitory in full college setting.

The Pep Meeting

This is the main event of the morning. By ten o'clock, the scheduled time for beginning, the chapel will be filled to overflowing. An orchestra will spread the atmosphere of expectancy and enthusiasm. The committee has promised to have the faculty quartet make its annual appearance, but they have refused to divulge the personnel. John Garver will probably be on hand for a bit of reminiscence of the old days' forecast of the game. Other features are not advertised in advance.

The Parade and Game

At 12.45 the festivities will be resumed. The "Home Ec. girls" will be on hand with caps and pom poms. The band will be playing out on the campus as the collegians gather to march to the game. The yell leaders have promised some new stunts for entertainment.

At two o'clock the sidelines will break out in the traditional "Go Graceland" as the whistle blows for Graceland to meet the team of Burlington Junior College. This match promises to provide a tussle to suit the fans of the game.

The Athenian Program

At 7.30 the chapel will again be crowded to capacity. Last year many could not find standing room. There will be a one-act play, readings, music—all those features that make up an Athenian program. Of course there will be a copy of The Athenian Mirror. Home-comers would be disappointed if this item were omitted.

On Sunday

A few years ago a new item was inaugurated in the program. An early morning prayer service was added. It was a venture, but the venture was a success. Now this has come to be a regular feature. So this year at 8.45 a worship service will be held in the old college chapel. Many have spoken of returning to have their "spiritual cups replenished." At eleven o'clock the service at the Brick Church will follow the theme of the day.

Independence

Zion's School of Training in Religious Education

Outstanding during the first week of Zion's School of Training in Religious Education were the interest taken in the general forum conducted during the second hour (8.40 to 9.30 p. m.), the average attendance of about three hundred and fifty workers, and the serious note struck in all classes.

The school has continued at the Stone Church each evening this week, and closes with tomorrow night's sessions. It is hoped by those in charge that not only the people of the nine congregations in the center place but also surrounding groups and friends will be helped by this class work.

Throughout the course of the institute, the class of Doctor Charles F. Grabske, "The way to health," has received generous response in attendance and interest, as have also "Bible appreciation," taught by John Blackmore and the methods classes taught by Myrtle Weber, Ruby Williamson, and E. E. Closson. These have occupied the attention of students during the first hour each evening.

On Monday of this week the general forum of last week's second hour was divided into groups, the priesthood to consider "A functioning priesthood" as follows: elders taught by F. Henry Edwards; priests, C. Ed. Miller; teachers, John F. Sheehy; and deacons, H. G. Barto. The remainder of the students were divided according to the age of the group with which they work in the church school: Adult group workers taught by John Blackmore; young people, by C. B. Woodstock and E. E. Closson; and children's division workers by Bertha Constance Woodward.

Stone Church

Decision Day opened propitiously at the Stone Church with an early morning baptismal ceremony in the lower auditorium. There seven little children were inducted into the kingdom by Elder W. Wallace Smith. The service was in charge of Elder George G. Lewis. The seven candidates, Wyona Lewis, Wayne Cannon, Donald Beaverstock, Dewey McLelland, William Temple, Vera Thrasher, and Glen Moore, were confirmed during the Sunday school hour before a congregation composed of the primary department. Elders W. Wallace Smith, Vernon Reese, S. A. Thiel, and George G. Lewis confirmed.

Already the continuous program plan of the church school session for the adult and junior young people's departments, in the main room of the Stone Church, is bearing fruit in better decorum. The young people are proving most responsive to the program. Sunday morning each of the seventeen classes of that department elected a representative to act on the junior young people's council, and the council will hold its first meeting next Sunday afternoon. As a special number for the opening exercises of the church school hour, the Mothers' Quartet sang a hymn of consecration.

The scripture reading that presaged the discourse of the eleven o'clock hour delivered by Pastor John F. Sheehy was taken from Matthew 28 and Acts 1 and contains the commission of Christ to his disciples before his ascension into heaven: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

The speaker dwelt on the courage with which Peter and others of the disciples set forth with this great message to the world. He next called attention to the fact that one hundred years ago this month this church sent out its first missionaries. Four young men, Oliver Cowdery, a school-teacher; Peter Whitmer, a farmer; Parley P. Pratt, and Ziba Peterson, started out on their mission to tell this same message. They were the first commissioned to go out and preach again.

Sometimes we emphasize that thought that we must live the gospel, said Brother Sheehy, and this we should do, but we must also remember to tell the gospel story. The story of the Restoration must be told today, the story of the gathering of Israel, the life and death and resurrection of Jesus must be told, and his second coming made known. People must be brought in closer touch with God, and in this we are the instruments—we must tell them the story of Zion. Are we today actuated by the spirit and power possessed by the disciples when they went forth after Christ's ascension and cherished by the four young missionaries on their journey westward one hundred years ago?

The morning musical program given by choir and soloists was deeply appreciated by the congregation. The Stone Church Choir sang two anthems "As pants the hart," by Spohr, and "Turn ye even to me," Evan Fry directing. There was a violin duet, "By the river," by Gomer Cool and Orrin Fry, accompanied by George Miller, and a vocal solo, "Consider and hear me," by Wooler, by Albert Brackenbury.

Evangelist U. W. Greene was in charge of the service.

The theme of the day for the junior young people, "Courage to follow Christ," was effectively carried out in their Sunday morning worship period from 10.40 to 11.30. Since it was Decision Day and all thoughts were centered about the making of right decisions, stereopticon slide copies of famous paintings of Christ and his life were used by the speaker, Elder John Blackmore, as the basis for his sermonet. Music was contributed by the pianist, Joy Harder, and by a girls' quartet composed of Marcine Turner, Mildred Shupe, Evelyn Shupe, and Betty Good. The scripture reading by the pastor was Matthew 4: 18-22, which tells of the decision of Peter and Andrew and James and John to follow Christ.

The speaker at the Stone Church Sunday evening was Elder Leonard Lea, who used for his subject, "Decision Day." The theme was taken from the life of Joshua, and the text was his final charge to the children of Israel: "Choose you this day whom ye will serve, . . . but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." The importance of choice in the building of Christian character, and the necessity of choosing Christ were emphasized throughout the discourse.

Opening the evening service there was music by the congregation and by the Mothers' Quartet composed of Sisters I. A. Smith, J. D. Gault, M. H. Siegfried, and B. J. Scott. The quartet sang "Brethren, breathe one fervent prayer," the words by Joseph Smith, and quartet arrangement by Evan Fry, and later in the service "My pledge to Jesus."

In the stand Elder H. G. Barto was assisted by Brother William Bronson.

Organizations and Personalities

The Auditorium Athletic Club has been organized to include all members of the young people's division of the church schools in Independence. Under the sweep of this movement the lower hall of the Auditorium in the last ten days has seen considerable improvement and change preparatory to accommodating the activities of the club. Basket-ball backboards have been erected, volley ball courts laid off, etc. There is room in the hall for ten volley ball games to be in progress at once. Volley ball teams are now organizing and playing, and in about six weeks basket ball teams will make their appearance.

A three-night-a-week program of athletics has been agreed upon by the authorities as a "good start," and so the Auditorium doors will be open three nights a week to the young people of Independence, one evening being especially set aside for junior young people (twelve to sixteen years of age).

To insure the proper degree of control over activities in the hall, those in charge have organized the club, and cards are issued to the members good for a period of ten weeks each. These cards must be presented at the door. Craig Siegfried is in charge of athletics.

The Auditorium Orchestra is an organization which gives much of its time to church and civic affairs in Independence and surrounding towns. During the summer and fall it responded to calls from Kansas City, Holden, Knobnoster, the Harvest Home Festival, and has played in several of the branches of the center place.

Backing it, this group, under the leadership of Brother Orlando Nace, has a splendid history of usefulness, and ahead is the future, offering greater helpfulness to the church. These musicians are enthusiastic in their outlook and untiring in their practices. They have now begun rehearsals on Handel's Messiah, planning to give the Messiah Choir orchestral accompaniment in the presentation of the great oratorio this Christmas.

One Monday night during watermelon season the musicians put away their instruments and forgot practice. In a body they went to the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hawley, nine miles southeast of Independence, where melons and games and conversation helped them to pass a pleasant evening.

Not only is the director interested in making of the orchestra the best he can, but in his own congregation, Walnut Park, and among all those with whom he is acquainted, he is watching for signs of musical talent. When these signs are made apparent, Brother Nace lends every effort to the cultivation of the talent. Above all things he wishes to see the orchestra grow, and to aid in this process he is constantly seeking new and promising material. The people of Independence very much appreciate the Auditorium Orchestra.

Two couples of the Auditorium general church force are the proud parents of new sons, both babies arriving Sunday. Brother and Sister E. E. Closson announce the arrival of Edward Eugene Closson, and Brother and Sister Earl F. Hoisington are happy to tell everyone about Earl Everett Hoisington.

Following the second hour of the institute at the church Friday night, a group of about thirty religious education workers and close friends of Brother and Sister Leonard Lea surprised the couple with a visit and informal gathering at the Lea home. The affair was a gesture on the part of the group to welcome home the couple from their trip east and to see their new residence. A happy hour was spent with conversation and refreshments.

Walnut Park

The outstanding item in the church service on the nineteenth was the program of the Walnut Park Orchestra and Band under the leadership of Orlando Nace, which was given in the evening between 7.30 and 8.30. The orchestra gave several numbers for the first period of forty-five minutes, after which they reorganized as the Walnut Park Band and gave a few band numbers. This service was very much enjoyed by those present, and congratulations are to be given to Brother Nace and the members of the orchestra and band for their achievements along these lines.

The orchestra has also been assisting in the regular Sunday meetings of the church school, which music greatly adds to the beauty of the worship service during that hour.

Elder Leslie Flowers was the speaker on Decision Day, October 26. The thing that he emphasized in his talk was that conversion to Christ is the biggest part of becoming a member of the church. Christ should be the center of our thinking as it was the central theme of the message of God to us through Joseph Smith's vision, in which the Lord said: "This is my beloved Son, hear ye Him."

A special musical number, consisting of a vocal duet by

Sisters Marian Campbell and Carletta Norman, was provided during the early part of the service, the number being entitled "Hold thou my hand."

In the evening the speaker was Elder Fred Lanpher, who chose as his text John 3: 16: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish; but have everlasting life." The choir sang the anthem "Lead me, Lord."

Englewood

The girls of the senior class on a recent Friday night presented two plays to an audience of about two hundred. The plays "Pictures" and "This is so sudden," presented by the girls in the church assembly room, were supplemented by another one-act comedy entitled "Suppressed desires" given by the White Masque Players of Independence. These productions were immensely enjoyed by all who attended "The evening of smiles," sponsored by the class. It is the hope of this group to give the set of plays twice more, charging admission each time. The proceeds from each performance will be given to the building fund.

Last Sunday a week ago, Glen B. Closson, deacon's agent in Englewood Branch, announced that the church had succeeded in raising the necessary one hundred dollars to match the sum which Brother and Sister Earl Moore had promised to give as soon as the branch had raised that amount. Brother Closson reports that the money for the building fund is now coming in in increasing quantities with good prospect of raising the amount necessary for the budget, outlined by the bishop, to obtain the new addition this year.

Plans are being made by recreational directors of the branch for a Halloween celebration with masks and costumes. Last year the church met at the home of George Gould in Independence for this celebration.

Members of the congregation met one Friday night of late for an evening of entertainment under the direction of Brother Arthur Welch.

The Englewood Choir started the season in an enviable fashion. It is, however, somewhat short of male voices. Sister Alta Hougas is the director of the group.

Enoch Hill

A good degree of the Spirit blessed Sunday's meetings beginning with the eight o'clock prayer service in charge of Brothers Warren and Martin. In the school service four young people, Ruth Quick, Alberta Cox, John Quick, and Lawrence Martin, beautifully painted some of the things before us, and inspired us to make more worthy decisions, that we may work with our Savior in accomplishing his purposes.

At eleven o'clock it was evident that the good Spirit was with Elder C. B. Woodstock who gave the message based on the words of the Lord through Joshua, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." It made us feel a keen desire to be numbered among those Saints who have entered into their religious life with a whole-hearted, joyous service that counts nothing so important and worth while as intelligent and efficient work for the Master.

At this hour the intermediates and juniors met in the lower auditorium with Brother John Quick and Sisters Charles Warren and Nellie Kramer who have charge of this service. There they enjoyed a worship period and a talk by Brother C. E. Beal.

At three o'clock thirteen elders of Enoch Hill and Second Church met with Pastor O. W. Sarratt. Brother Sarratt has been confined to his home for some weeks. For an hour they engaged in a season of prayer interspersed by the singing of hymns. A number of wonderful prayers were offered, led by Brother Whitsett, then Elders D. A. Whiting and A. K. Dillie administered to Brother Sarratt. Everyone present felt the influence of the Spirit during this ordinance. The pastor was given a message of courage and comfort in which he was told of the divine watchcare that has been his all his life, and was assured of an important work yet to be accomplished by him.

As a fitting close to the day's services Bishop B. J. Scott asked the Saints to "Examine yourselves," to see if they are growing, developing, and enjoying the Spirit and true love of God. If the answer to this examination is what it should be, the members may look forward with confidence to the realization of Zion.

Holden Stake

Holden

During the week of October 6 to 12 the Saints enjoyed the visit and spiritual instruction of Patriarch J. T. Gresty. He was kept very busy giving blessings, which made the demands of his office work so heavy that we did not get to enjoy him in the homes as we would have liked to. The few days that he was here he gave thirteen or fourteen blessings. The competent help of his stenographer, Miss Ethel Burnett, made it possible for him to accomplish much more than it would have been if he had depended on other help. We appreciated the help of both Brother Gresty and his stenographer while they were with us and shall look forward to future visits.

October 12 three children were baptized, Everett, Ester, and Bernadine McLanahan. The font was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves, asparagus, and bittersweet. The ceremony was carefully planned so as to make a lasting impression upon the candidates; an effort was made to impress them with the sacredness and importance of the baptismal ordinance. Brother Gresty, who was then present, charged the parents and the congregation with their responsibility to these new members.

During the past week, Holden conducted a street fair, and the ladies of the branch saw an opportunity to help in the financial needs of the local church. They gave their time and labor, and liberally donated of what they had, making it possible to successfully operate a short-order stand. The returns made them feel that they were well repaid for the effort. We are glad to give the women the credit that is theirs for their helpfulness.

Brother W. S. Macrae, branch pastor and stake president, has been absent for two weeks in answer to matters in the different branches over the stake that demand his attention. Last week he held a week's services at Blue Springs, and this week he is working with the Saints in Lexington. Sister Macrae has been in poor health all summer and was confined to her bed the first part of this week. But rather than see the Lord's work neglected, Sister Macrae sacrifices personal needs and feelings. If more of us were willing to make similar sacrifices, the kingdom of God would be built first and some of the lesser things, which are now put first, would be least and last.

Brother Charles Prather died last Sunday evening. He was bedfast for about a month before he died. He was a man seventy-two years of age.

We are making some advances in the work of religious education and feel encouraged with results that have been evident. We are looking forward to better work and more success as our class work progresses. We have some courses outlined in "Food hygiene," "Better homes," and "Priesthood duties." We are expecting real benefit and hearty cooperation on the part of the members.

Marshall

Sunday, October 12, two young daughters of Sister John Deileman were baptized by Brother Ralph M. Ridge, and were confirmed by Brothers Thayer and McCormick on the following Sunday night. Sister Dieleman is a daughter of Brother and Sister E. W. Akerley, Kingston, Missouri. She has brought up her large family in the faith and has been very faithful. Sister Zilta Ruth Ackerley, when a young woman, served as nurse in the Sanitarium at Independence.

We are very proud to say that little W. Harlis Smith, the year-old son of Brother and Sister Walter Smith, received the blue ribbon prize for boys of that age at the Fall Festival this year. He was required to pass twelve points and was examined by two physicians and the health nurse of Saline County. He was awarded $2.50 in gold and photographs.

A series of meetings will be held here by Elders Ellis Rathbun and J. W. Davis, missionaries of Holden Stake, beginning October 26. They are to be assisted in the music by Miss Frankie Thayer, who devotes a great deal of time to the various departments of the group outside her school work. We like to encourage such faithful workers as Frankie, and hope to see them looking ahead for further service in our great cause for Christ.

Brother and Sister T. L. McCormick and their two sons, A. D. and Walter, met in a family reunion with their son, E. L., and wife at Holden, Missouri. They were joined by Jay, who is attending college at Warrensburg. During their visit they attended a beautiful baptism service in the Holden Group. They took along, as a guest, Miss Frankie Thayer.

Saint Thomas, Ontario

This branch held Rally Day services September 21.

Communion meeting was largely attended October 1.

The conference of London District was held October 11 and 12 and had good attendance. At the evening services the local choir led the singing. This group of singers appeared for the first time in new robes given by donations and made by the Women's Department under the direction of Sister Kelley. The garments are a credit to Sister Kelley's ability.

Apostle Clyde F. Ellis held some beneficial and uplifting services Monday and Tuesday evenings following the conference. After the Tuesday service, Brother Nelson Kelley was called to the office of priest. We trust God's blessing will attend him.

The Religio is renewing activities for the winter.

Brother Ira Kinsmon has so improved after his operation in the Memorial Hospital that he was able to be removed to his home. We wish him a speedy recovery.

The following account of the conference appeared in our local paper:

The annual conference of the London district of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was held in the local church Saturday and Sunday. Business session opened with Apostle Ellis in charge. Encouraging reports were read by the secretary and treasurer. The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, James Winegarden, London; first counselor, J. E. MacGregor, London; second counselor, C. L. Duesling, London; secretary, Clara Schlotzhauer, Stratford; treasurer, Clarence Weeks, Delhi; superintendent of church schools, C. L. Duesling, London; music director, David A. Withrow, Stratford; bishop's agent, Clarence Weeks, Delhi.

Saturday evening was given to lectures by Apostle Ellis, Arlo Hodgson, London; Ray Best, Corinth; Miss Grace Perry, London; solos were rendered by Bert Richardson and Mrs. Preston Ford and an instrumental duet by Raymond and Harold Neal.

Sunday morning the conference met for prayer service at 9.

The 11 o'clock Sunday preaching service was by Apostle C. F. Ellis of Independence, Missouri, who discoursed on John 1:12. He emphasized the relationship made possible for man through Jesus Christ in becoming sons of God, and the need of subjecting ourselves to every law having to do with this spiritual relationship. The rights of a spiritual are made possible and protected by law just as surely as are the rights of a physical child.

At 3 o'clock Bishop John C. Dent was the speaker, using as a text Matthew 18:3: "Except ye be converted and become as little children ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." He stressed the necessity of a continuous conversion until perfection is attained. This can be done only by observance of the law of tithes and offerings as well as every other principle.

In the evening Apostle Ellis was again the speaker and used the words of Jesus in Matthew 16:18, "I will build my church," as his text. He dwelt upon the salvation made possible for man by Christ, then his atonement, and the agency of His church. This discourse was a clear presentation of the efficacy of the means of redemption for man which was made effectual through the "making of his soul an offering for sin."

At one of the sessions of the conference a vote of thanks was tendered August Pletch for the beautiful floral offering which he presented to the assembly.

Special services are being held in the local church Monday and Tuesday evening, Apostle Clyde Ellis in charge.

Member of the First Presidency in European Mission

(From a letter to the First Presidency.)

It is a matter of gratification to me that the European Mission has been seen through the eyes of another of the Presidency. This is a good thing for this field, and will prove of value to the Presidency and the general church.

More than three months ago President F. M. McDowell, F. Henry Edwards, and myself took our departure from New York for Liverpool. After a month in England of intensive class work, preaching, considering various problems, and traveling, Brother McDowell and I wended our way to the continent. There was a continuation of good meetings and joyful associations in Scandinavia, Germany, and Holland. Contacts of precious worth were established with a number not members of the church.

"Mac" adapted himself finely on all occasions, and in the various countries visited won his way to the hearts of the people. Elders V. D. Ruch, Carl F. Green, and Frank Veenstra served respectively as interpreters in Norway, Germany, and Holland.

Many acquired, through Brother McDowell's ministrations, a clear insight into the purpose and ideals of our church. Viewed in its missionary aspects and congenial associations, the trip is held by me in pleasant memory.

There is manifest disquiet among the European nations, doubt and discouragement about the future. The industrial situation is especially noticeably bad in England and Germany; long lines of unemployed often are seen in the cities. World wide is the economic depression. No conflict like the Great War could leave other than what has been and is being experienced. The time spoken of by Jesus is here, when men's hearts are failing them for fear for "looking after those things which are coming on the earth."

There is in the world a lack of confidence. Suspicion often lurks under a veneer of diplomatic negotiations. Competitive military preparations continue apace.

How interesting is the interpretation of the present age as revealed of God to his people in ancient and in latter days! And his salvation revealed through the words and life of the Man of Galilee, made resplendently clear in the "marvelous work and a wonder" revealed in this age through the instrumentality of the Prophet Joseph Smith and men associated with him, prompts one to join with the psalmist David in saying: "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

A couple of weeks ago Brother McDowell and I separated in Germany, he to move southward and sail from Naples, and I to places northward and then to England. Brother Edwards sails today (September 27) from Southampton, so both are now on the water en route home. Brother Edwards did intensive work all the while in England, his labors being received with marked appreciation. His returning to his parents and native land after an absence of nine years, was an experience that all rejoiced in sharing.

It is our purpose to consolidate, retain, and energetically and systematically build on what has been achieved in the mission.

PAUL M. HANSON.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Indian summer in all its glory ushered in a beautiful autumnal Sabbath day October 26, and the organ prelude "Break of dawn" played by Sister Irene Wolfe, found the lower auditorium well filled for the opening of the church school at 10.45. The attendance contest sponsored by the officers of the school wherein all members on time receive a blue card, which scores two points for their department, and the late comers a red card which scores only one point, has created considerable enthusiasm, and about eighty per cent of the total attendance is on time for the opening of the service.

Brother George Mesley told the morning story to the children, which was followed by assembly for the lesson study.

The morning preaching service was in charge of Elder J. H. Paxton. The choir, under the direction of Brother George Anway, ably sang the anthem "Send out thy light," by Gounod, which served as the foundation for the splendid discourse that was given by the pastor, Elder Cyril E. Wight.

At 2.30 the stake chorus, under the direction of Brother Evan Fry, met for the usual Sunday afternoon rehearsal of "The Messiah," which it expects to give during the holidays.

The stake young people's meetings sponsored by the O. B. K. (Our Brother's Keeper) Council, closed a very profitable week of meetings Sunday evening, October 26. In these meetings musicians and speaker combined to produce the best in the form of program and instruction, and brought their efforts to a fitting climax in Sunday evening's service.

On the last night Apostle F. Henry Edwards was again the speaker. The choir, led by George Anway, was in its place, and the congregation was most responsive. During the first four sessions unfavorable weather had its influence, but a check-up of attendance disclosed fifty-four in number present every evening.

The subjects of the seven sessions of the series were "Rebels for God," "Divine intervention in an orderly world," "The miracle of rebirth," "The reality of priesthood," "The necessity for the church," "The redemption of society," and "What is a Latter Day Saint?" In developing the last-named subject Brother Edwards said that in terms of function a Latter Day Saint is one who does things; he is a newborn man as Paul was a newborn man.

At the close of the meetings Brother Edwards was the recipient of a token of the love and esteem of the congregation, as were also Brother George Anway, Sister Irene Wolfe, organist, and Sister Lucy Bowser, pianist. Suitable responses were made by Brothers Edwards and Anway.

Elder George Mesley is president of the O. B. K. Stake Council and was the moving spirit in organizing the force of helpers which quietly and efficiently cared for the attendants.

The Stake Leadership School will open for a two weeks' session Sunday evening, November 9. Credit courses will be offered in "Our stewardship program," "The importance and use of the Doctrine and Covenants," "Youth and the church," "Eugenics," "Use of the Bible in religious education and working with children." Leading church teachers are preparing these courses. A good enrollment is anticipated.

In the midst of their own security and comfort, the people of Kansas City did not forget that there are many unfortunate ones who must depend on others for help, and that the needs this winter are going to be far greater than ever before. Kansas City responded freely out of the abundance of the great hospitality and love its citizens bear, and opened its heart to the poor and needy, exceeding its quota in the Allied Charities Campaign by $33,478, the total subscription being $1,148,478.

Quindaro Church

The work at Quindaro is moving along. Now that summer vacationists are all at home, the prospect looks good for an intensive program of fall and winter work.

Sunday evening's program of recreation and expression was sponsored by Brother and Sister John Gross and daughter, Mona. It consisted of two orchestral numbers, a violin duet by Pauline McCann and Avis Tyree; saxophone solo by Clarence Tyree; piano duet, Flossie Tomlinson and Lorine Gross; vocal selection, Alma Campbell; number by a girls' quartet, Mona Gross, Mary Belle McMannis, Sarah and Marie Sharp, pianist, Mary Helen Reed.

Thursday evening a dinner will be served in the church basement under the auspices of the aid department. Proceeds are to go to the local fund.

November 2 will be observed in this branch as home-coming and rally day. All old-time members have a special invitation to come home. Basket dinner will be had in the basement at noon, and services will continue throughout the day. Sacrament is to be served at eleven o'clock, Pastor H. A. Higgins in charge. Elder John F. Sheehy, pastor in Independence, will be the evening speaker.

Under the direction of the church chorister, Otis Swart, the choir of about thirty voices is rehearsing the Christmas cantata, Hail Messiah, by Ira B. Wilson.

Elder R. D. Weaver, missionary to southern California, will occupy the pulpit here November 16 in the evening.

Fourth Church

From September 21 to October 12 inclusive, Brothers G. T. Richards and H. H. Sevy, stake missionaries, held a series of services which were most instructive to Saints and non-members.

Rally-day meetings, September 28, were well attended, and an enjoyable time was had. The rostrum was decorated with greenery and flowers, which gave a pleasant background to the services.

October 5 the young people held a prayer service, which was most helpful.

The following Sunday evening the young people presented a fine program. Miss Abney read an interesting story on the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew. Brother Marion Snead gave a short talk on the commission of Christ, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel."

Sunday, October 19, Elder J. L. Gray, of Independence, used Genesis 8:22 as a text for the morning sermon. No service was held in the evening on account of the young people's meeting at Central Church.

Terlton, Oklahoma

Terlton recently enjoyed a series of meetings by Brother S. Simmons, of Jennings. The meetings lasted two weeks, and four people were baptized. On Sunday Brother Simmons preached three sermons, and the baptismal service occurred in the afternoon, Brother Simmons officiating. He also assisted in confirming the candidates, administered to the sick, and participated in consuming the bountiful basket dinner provided by the women of the church. The Saints feel that the Lord blessed Brother Simmons physically as well as spiritually in his effort, and we look forward to another season of instruction and growth.

Rally Day was observed in Terlton.

Good Sunday school sessions and splendid midweek prayer meetings and women's meetings are characteristic of this locality, and yet we do not seem to progress as fast as we wish.

Brother Simmons feels that if his meeting is followed up soon at Jennings, many will be brought into the fold.

It is with interest that we watch the Herald news department for letters from various members and places.

Anamosa, Iowa

October 19.—Rally Day was observed here October 12, and the Saints of this branch gathered with other Saints and friends at the farm home of Brother and Sister Charles Bobst. Altogether fifty-six persons partook of a plentiful basket dinner spread on a long table in the yard. Then as the members sat under the bright October sky, Brother E. R. Davis delivered an inspiring sermon. The text was taken from Luke 10:25: "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?" and touched the hearts of those who were there for their spiritual good.

The home of Brother and Sister Bobst has for years been open when the Saints desired to gather for a spiritual or social time, and the Wapsipinicon River, the quiet waters of which flow nearby, has been the scene of many baptisms, most of which have borne good fruit.

We trust that the rally will be productive of good results and that the Saints who attended left for their homes with hope renewed and the desire to push onward strengthened.

Elders present were Brothers Beal, Penington, Wellday, and Davis. The Reverend Mr. Caldwell, of a union Sabbath school now being held at Fairview which is attended by Saints and Methodists, was present and some Methodist friends. We rejoiced in the spirit of fellowship which was experienced.

Splendid Feeling in Northern Wisconsin Conference

Many will be interested in hearing of the splendid district conference of Northern Wisconsin District, held on October 11 and 12, at Black River Falls.

As is sometimes the case at this time of the year, the weather man does not always furnish the best of weather, and as earlier in the week we had rain, we were anxious about what kind of weather he was going to furnish us for the conference. It seems, however, that we were especially favored, for the weather could not have been nicer. It was as warm as summer, and many of the Saints and some who are not yet numbered with us took advantage of it and swelled the numbers until we had the best attendance we have had at a district conference since I have been in this district.

The Saints of the branch did a fine job in taking care of the large crowd. The meals were served at the church in the basement. On Sunday for dinner one hundred and three people were served.

We were disappointed in that we could not have with us Apostle D. T. Williams, who was called away by other matters of importance, but we were glad to have Bishop C. J. Hunt.

Throughout the entire conference the spirit of good fellowship and unity prevailed, and everyone seemed to enjoy the good feeling present. Three young men were ordained to the priesthood, and a special ordination meeting was provided. The meeting was impressive and had a good effect upon everyone, there being not only a goodly number of the Saints present but also a number who are not members of the church.

We feel that in many ways the work in Northern Wisconsin District is moving forward. However, we are falling very much short this year on our quota of baptisms. But what we are losing in this direction we are gaining in spiritual strength and in making preparation for a better work in the future.

W. E. SHAKESPEARE.

British Young People Meet in Institute

The young people's institute of Midland District was held Saturday and Sunday, September 20 and 21, at Priestley Road, Birmingham, England. It was organized by Apostle F. Henry Edwards as a last appeal to the young people of Midland District for more zealous work on behalf of the church.

Saturday, after the Saints were given welcome, was devoted to recreation under the leadership of Brother F. Schofield, of Birmingham. Everyone enjoyed this live session and forgot his cares in a merry evening.

Sunday commenced with an hour's class work conducted by Brother Edwards. This was a new experience for the Saints and was thoroughly appreciated by all. At eleven o'clock Brother Edwards delivered a sermon which made the members, especially the young people, ask themselves the question: "Do I deserve to succeed?" This question was the speaker's subject.

Following dinner, at 2.30 came a fellowship meeting. It was the desire of Brother Edwards to witness a real old-fashioned prayer meeting, as he calls it, and we think the Saints did their best to grant this wish.

In the evening after being introduced to newcomers, by Apostle Paul M. Hanson, Brother Edwards addressed the Saints.

Brother Hanson was with us fresh from his work with President F. M. McDowell on the Continent. He, however, took no great part in the services, as he wished to give the time to Brother Edwards. This was Brother Edwards's last week-end in England.

The Saints of Midland District wish to thank Brother Edwards for his work in this region and to express deep appreciation of his effort.

EMILY NORTON.

Oakland, California

From The Oakland Bulletin

The service of the Lord's Supper Sunday morning, October 5, was well attended, and the spirit of the occasion was much enjoyed. It was good to meet together and speak well of the name of the Lord. Among the visitors who shared the service was one from Kansas City.

An entertainment was held in the lower auditorium of the church the evening of October 18 as a church fund benefit. Sister Kaeha Ingham Meyer was in charge, and there was a re-show of pictures of the church and congregation.

The opening Sunday evening of the month the pastor commenced the special series of sermons to continue through October and lead up to Decision Day, October 26. His theme on the first night was "The psychology of conversion"; the second Sunday it was "The psychology of faith."

The Wednesday evening Church Night is proving an enjoyable event. The women deserve credit for the excellent supper they serve. The two classes are proving increasingly popular. The prayer services are better attended, and a splendid spirit prevails. We hope that others will come to share this experience.

Saturday and Sunday, October 18 and 19, was special rally time for the congregation. The program Saturday evening consisted of music, readings, and pictures. Sunday was observed by the usual morning and evening services, the pastor being the speaker. In the afternoon there occurred a social service for prayer and testimony. Meals were served at noon and in the evening.

Subscribers to "Herald"

It is interesting to note the varying degree of activity shown by the missionaries or General Conference appointees, as well as by local officers in the matter of securing subscriptions for the church publications. There are a few outstanding instances where subscriptions and book sales have amounted to rather large figures.

I do not hesitate to urge general and local officers to interest themselves in this matter, for the more widely our church literature is circulated among the Saints, the better for them. In our periodicals and other literature we are striving constantly to present church ideals, teachings, and objectives, in appeal to all interested to come up higher. Hence the more widely this literature is read by the Saints the better.

Recently one of our general appointees, working locally, in a letter to me says:

"I take it as a part of my work to encourage the Saints to take the Herald and other church papers. I am sending in fifteen subscriptions to the Herald today which I secured at —, also seven to Ensign, and two to Vision. I always make it a part of my business in talking to the Saints to find out if they take the Herald. I have been surprised to find so many who do not. I hope to continue my help along this line. I am sure there should be several thousand more Heralds going out each week."

This is commendable work, and we hope many more appointees are doing as well or better.

I should like to hear from others on this matter.

F. M. S.

R. S. Budd Greatly Improved

The many friends of Apostle Roy S. Budd will be glad to hear that he is at last on the road to recovery. Attempting to regain strength after an operation, he suffered a severe relapse which confined him to the Sanitarium for a number of weeks, during which time his friends and family were gravely concerned. Now he is gaining weight, and the various tests show that he is improving steadily. He will not be able to resume his work, however, for some weeks, and the medical advisers caution him "to learn how to take it easy."

The Adult Division

In the department, "Church Work and Services," is presented a statement of the organization and work of the Adult Division which is the product of extensive study and experimentation. The action of the last General Conference provided for a Department of Religious Education which was to organize and sponsor the various activities which were formerly administered by three departments. The recommendations here presented are in harmony with the action of conference but present in greater detail the operation of the plan as it affects the Adult Division. These recommendations have already been successfully tested in many of the branches of the church. It is urged that as rapidly as consistent the workers in the various branches cooperate with branch officers and the general department in putting into operation this program as herein outlined.

F. M. McDOWELL,

For the First Presidency.

Dedicate New Sanitarium November 11

It is planned to dedicate the new Independence Sanitarium and Hospital on Armistice Day, November 11. A more detailed account of the ceremony will be found in the news columns of this issue, and will be found to contain some interesting bits of information. The dedication will be an occasion of importance to the church at large and to the people of Independence.

The work on the new Independence Sanitarium and Hospital is going ahead steadily, despite low temperatures and a cutting wind. The workmen finished "pouring" the concrete for the third floor on Thursday afternoon of last week. Under the direction of the Builder, Lyle Weeks, the work is progressing as rapidly as the setting of the reinforced columns and floors will permit.

To the uninitiated, the sight of the construction work is both weird and impressive. Fires roar up into the very maws of the large concrete mixers. An elevator flies up and down the steel mast which looks like spider web against the gray of a cold sky, while an angry little power engine whirrs and barks pugnaciously below. The workmen run, climb, lift, and carry things with an unbelievable energy, unmindful of the wind which bites deep into an office man's skin. The heavy columns and walls, and the thick floors look as if nothing could ever shake them. Myriad pipes cross and recross in trenches and on the floors. Long pieces of rod and strap iron protrude from the walls. The skeleton of a good building is strong, but homely. Only when one stands back where it may be viewed from a perspective does he begin to see the beauty that it will have when completed.

The Architect, Henry C. Smith, quite unmindful of the cold, smiles happily as he sees another of his plans being worked out in concrete, brick, and steel; then he turns back to his office where the blue prints of this and other buildings are piled high on the tables, fairly hiding the faithful, blue-smocked young woman who is draughting there.

The new Sanitarium will not be just another hospital building. It will conform with the most modern scientific plans and methods of structure, with a view of working in the current trend of attempting to reduce the cost of hospitalization, which has heretofore been too high. President Smith, in company with the Architect and Miss Copeland, have recently been in touch with the leaders of the convention of the American Protestant Hospital Association at New Orleans, who pronounce the plans to be in accordance with the best and most advanced principles that have been worked out for hospitals. They were enthusiastic about the building.

The church is deeply grateful for the splendid cooperation and the loyal help and service of the citizens and officials of the city of Independence in this fine project.

"Here Am I"

It requires bigness of heart and mind, purposefulness of life, self-honesty, and decision to espouse a good cause and say, "Here am I." And no cause is greater than that for which Christ lived among men and gave his life. Indeed the Christ cause challenges in every man, woman, or child his very best and biggest effort. History is full of the responses of men to less worthy causes, but the lives of those who were able to say, "Here am I," and live it, will longest remain in the memory of men. These were the ones who caught the greater vision and gave themselves to its realization.

In time of a severe test Abraham looked into the heavens and uttered the memorable words, "Here am I." He spoke simply but acted obediently and bravely. "Here am I," said the lad Samuel to Eli the priest, and was instructed to return to his cot and answer when the Lord spoke again. Holy Writ is crowded with the lives of men who have in word and deed answered to the Lord's call, "Here am I."

During the Dark Ages and the Reformation, these words fell from the lips of men who were entering the gates of a martyr's death for a purpose which they were convinced was righteous, or from those who were devoting their efforts to undertakings which they deemed worthy and glorious.

To us comes the program by which our fathers regulated their lives—the instructions of latter-day revelations:

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart, with all thy might, mind, and strength; and in the name of Jesus Christ thou shalt serve him.

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

"Pray always."

"Remember faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence."

"Thou shalt offer a sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in righteousness; even that of a broken heart and a contrite spirit."

"Be clean, be frugal, cease to complain of pain and sickness and distress of body; take sleep in the hours set apart by God for the rebuilding and strengthening of the body and mind."

"Thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High; nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days, and at all times."

"Teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom; seek learning even by study, and also by faith."

"It is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people."

"Learn to impart one to another as the gospel requires."

"Sustain each other in peace."

"Thou shalt thank the Lord thy God in all things."

If our lives are governed by these instructions and many others contained in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, we have this promise: "Inasmuch as ye do these things, with thanksgiving, with cheerful hearts, and countenances; . . . the fullness of the earth is yours."

Are we listening for the call to service? Are we awake to the great needs of the church? Do we realize our individual responsibilities as members of the latter-day church? Are we preparing for service? Are we ready to answer, "Here am I"?

Why the Church Must Teach

The Purpose of the Church

By F. M. McDowell

The purposes of God center in men. "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth," and said, "Let us make man in our own image."

The will of God as revealed to us in the sacred word, in the message and mission of Christ, and through the service of men is essentially concerned with the welfare of mankind. I can conceive of no better way to define the purposes of God than in terms of humanity.

The Purpose of the Church

The church exists to authoritatively represent God among men. If the purposes of God center in men, we may expect to find that the purpose of the church can best be stated in terms of men. The church exists because God commanded it. God commanded it because humanity needs it.

The church which is to represent God consists of persons, deals with persons, and its product is something essentially personal. Through the transformation of persons, the church expects to usher in a new society. A society transformed is one of the best means of transforming persons. The church exists to change all men in all of their lives, that the purpose of God might be fulfilled. An essential instrument of the church in this great task is teaching. To this end the church must teach.

The Teaching Tradition of the Church

A study of the history of Christian education reveals the fact that the early church found it necessary to organize schools to prepare persons for membership and to train leaders who would be capable of meeting the needs of a changing society and a constantly growing church.

In the Middle Ages the history of the church is the history of education. During the Reformation among various protestant nations and during early American history, the church was the chief promoter of education. It is impossible even to imagine what the development of education in the United States would have been were it not for the influence of the church. A large number of the largest colleges and universities of today were established and are still maintained by churches.

Our one hundred years of church history well illustrate the significance of education to a religious movement. Wherever the Saints have settled, schools have been builded. Not only have results justified the use of education as a means of carrying out the work of the church, but repeatedly and in various ways God has placed his stamp of approval upon such. The church must teach if it is to be in harmony with the continued practice of the church and in harmony with the revealed will of God.

The Perpetuation of the Church

However one may define the work of the church or the nature of religion, or whatever may be listed as the fundamentals of our church philosophy, we must admit that in the last analysis the perpetuation of the church and its program is in a large measure dependent upon the teaching method.

Is worship an essential element in the church program? If so, then the church most certainly must teach suitable forms of worship and encourage reverent sharing in such upon the part of all.

Must the ideals of Christian living be preserved and made the beacon light of every succeeding generation? If so, then the church can and must teach the content of these ideals and furnish opportunity for their practice in daily living.

If in its preaching ministry the church sincerely desires the salvation of souls, then let it realize that salvation comes through growth, and growth through guidance, and that guidance is teaching of the best sort.

Must the organization of the church be preserved, its doctrines perpetuated, its history understood and appreciated? How can such results be expected save through wise and continuous teaching?

Is the financial program of the church to be something more than a money-getting device? If so, then let it be so presented that it becomes in itself a method of character building. The principles of such a program must be woven into the fabric of complete individual and social living. This weaving process is but another name for teaching.

Does the church covet for its members a God consciousness, a sense of communion and partnership with him? If so, then let it furnish instruction as to how this relationship can be obtained, while fully aware that such blessings can not be given to others outright. Let it provide that sort of spiritual leadership which will bring each pupil to the great fountain of life where he may drink. What a glorious opportunity here for divinely directed teaching!

The Hope of Immortal Life

By Frederick M. Smith

A sermon delivered on the occasion of the funeral of A. Otis White, at Lamoni, Iowa.

We come today to participate in the obsequies of him who was Lamoni's foremost citizen. As a man, as entrepreneur, citizen, as husband, father, neighbor, brother, and friend, he has left a record that is surpassed by few. There is presented to me today a task most difficult to perform and yet one which contains a sweet pleasure; for to stand beside the bier of a fellow worker, a close acquaintance, and a dear friend, wrings the heart, but to speak words of praise of one I have known and learned to love is sweet.

The messages which have been brought to us by the musicians have been sweet; they have been comforting, and I doubt not they have found a response in the heart of every auditor; for when one has been touched by the great experience of the world—pain—which is experienced more frequently beside the bier of a departed one in the form of sympathy, he is prepared for thoughts that give a response to beautiful sentiments which are experienced at no other time. I doubt not that there has been on the part of all who have listened to the message a determination to emulate the life of him who has passed.

As a text for the thoughts around which we will move today, I take one which is familiar to all Christians and yet may be too little appreciated. He whose advent was heralded by the star in the east has said, "I am the resurrection, and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believest thou this?"

The fear of death has been present with all men, I might say with all creation since the beginning of time. Even the animals when they approach that hour give expression in such a way that we know they have been dominated for the moment by a fear of the coming of the grim reaper. With man this has grown to such an extent that death has a horror which is perhaps incomprehensible to those who have been reared in Christianity. But the Christ came into the world that this fear might be banished to be replaced by a composure and faith that shall cause them to face the grim reaper with joy rather than with fear. Christ came to save man, and to save man from death and the fear of death.

The lesson which I have quoted was addressed to a single person, and those who are familiar with the story will know I refer to Martha. Lazarus, her brother, was dead. Lazarus had been a faithful follower of the Christ, and had accepted without reserve his philosophy and had been actuated and upheld by the faith that comes to one whose soul has awakened to the Christian touch, and he knew the buoyancy which bears one up who has an unflinching trust in God. And yet he died. And Martha, his domestic sister, had wept bitterly because her Master had not been present. So when Jesus came he was greeted by Martha by these faith-expressed words: "If thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." Jesus said to her, "Your brother shall live again." And Martha said, "I know in the resurrection he shall live. But if thou hadst been here he would not have died."

She still expressed faith, in the mystic and magnetic presence of Jesus, that if he had been there Lazarus would yet have been there in the land of the living. And then Jesus spoke the words that I have quoted as a text: "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

Then as a test of her faith he said to Martha (what Jesus would say to you and me today): "Believest thou this?" In other words, Jesus had been giving to them the truth that he came to deliver. He had been attempting to lead them to the heights where they would no longer fear death. But their conduct was such that there was doubt that the import of his message had been comprehended, and so he asked, "Believest thou this?" Did he mean to say by this, Has my message of hope been so faintly impressed upon your minds and hearts that I have not lifted you above fear? We can not but believe that in Martha's words and conduct Jesus saw the reflections of a faith which today challenges your faith and mine, and which has aroused in us a desire to emulate it.

Belief! It is fundamental to the workings of the Christian gospel in our hearts and souls. Without faith there is little that can count in the lives of His followers. Paul has said to us, with a meaning far deeper than most of us can comprehend, that "we walk by faith, not by sight."

We must all pass through the process of dissolution we call death; God has so ordained. And one of the richest blessings among all those given to mankind is that of an unflinching trust in God, and in the commandments and promises he has given us, a trust that will permit us with composure to face the moment when the scythe of time shall sever the thread of life and launch us into eternity. What promise is couched in the words of Jesus, "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." Does it not hold out a promise to us that even though we have not always kept the full commandments he has given us, still there is in the majestic power of Christianity a depth of mercy that will reach into the very realms of death and recall one who has passed on. "Though he were dead yet shall he live."

Coupled with that is something more significant; for Jesus said, "And whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die."

He doubtless intended to hold out to us the idea that his gospel is one of work, that his gospel is one of achievement, one that makes an appeal to every human being to work out his own salvation. And therefore, one who believes and works in Jesus shall not taste death. What is meant by that? Does it mean that he shall escape that change from mortality to immortality? that he shall take this human body into the celestial field without that transformation, or is the meaning he intended to convey rather the idea that there is such an approach to death as but a moment in the whole process of the continuity of personality, that the transformation would well be one of joy, rather than one distorted and agonized.

The promise then is greatest to those who both live in and believe in the Christ. One who believes in Christ keeps his commandments and one who lives in Christ never forgets the touch of his genius and soul and ever squares every act and word and deed by the plumb which has been placed with us whereby we can know when we are walking erect and in the paths of righteousness.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him might not perish but have everlasting life," is a promise which has brought and brings joy. Couple this with the statement used as a text and you have the structure which upholds all Christian peoples. As we face death, which is always in our midst, for in the midst of life there is death, let us not forget the rich promises which have been brought to us by the one whom God sent to the earth that the fear of death might be wholesomely and rightly removed.

Our brother was one who was from childhood supported by an unswerving faith. There have been few men with whom I have come in contact, who have a richer or a finer or a more ever-present faith in God and in his work and in his church. Those who knew him well can testify that his was an ever-present developing and unfaltering trust that enables one to compose himself even in the face of calamities or death. From his earliest childhood he has left an exceptional record. He was as a boy and man clean in his life, in his thoughts, and in his deeds. Would to God there were more men like him today when there is great need for those who are clean in word, thought, and deed. He was a godly man, not only before the altar and in his devotional exercises, but as well in his home, in his business, and with his friends. To him all men were brothers, and when there was a need he was ever ready to serve. That was evidenced by the fact that there has seldom been an activity in this splendid little community which did not have his direct or indirect support when it was a movement for good or betterment. He was a man of tireless energy, and fearless when it came to standing against those things which tended to work against those whom he loved and served. He devoted his life to ideals, and ever wrought to make them become realities.

I have no doubt there were many hours and days when he took, from needed hours of recreation and rest, time to serve others who had placed on him burdens that he willingly accepted. Fortunate indeed is any community which is served by men of his character and his type of idealism.

As a churchman and as a church officer he was ever ready to give his time and talent to the church to which he gave his allegiance. To him religion was real; it was life; and his life was made to reflect honor because of the devotion and adherence he had given to a philosophy that reached to the great hereafter. His religion guided him at home, at work, at play. He did not fear death. Those of us who were close to him in his last earthly hours know there were very few minutes when he gave more than a passing thought that perhaps his time had come to go; and if he were conscious that his end was near, never once did he manifest any shrinking; never once did his faith break. His faith was real, his faith was the assurance that reaches beyond the grave. To him death came as a kindly messenger from the Great Ruler of the universe to translate him from the imperfect conditions of earth to the all-perfect, peaceful, and beautiful conditions of the life beyond. To him the grave is but a heavenly portal through which he has stepped into the larger and more beautiful life in that city not made with hands which God has prepared for those who faithfully serve him.

Today as we stand beside his bier, we who are present to honor him as friend, as citizen, as loved one, may well think of his exemplary life and determine that we shall so live that we can approach death with the same confidence and composure he did.

I am sure that he would say to us in the words which have been a comfort and a challenge to every Christian who has read or heard the lines of "Thanitopsis":

So live that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan, which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

Such an approach to the hour of dissolution can be made only by one who is supported by an unswerving faith in God, one who has lived his life actuated by the principles of the Man of Nazareth who came under divine impulsion to free the world from the fear of death. Such a faith can be manifested only by the true follower of the Christ; and such a follower you and I might well once again determine to be, so that we may approach the hour of death as but the transference to the more perfect conditions beyond, that we might approach that hour with the smile of divine peace rather than with the cringings and shrinkings of fear.

May such religious beliefs and supports comfort those who at this hour mourn. May God bless all those who loved, trusted, and respected our brother and who will miss him, and enable them so to live that they, too, might pass through the hour of death to the reward God has promised to the faithful with the smile of peace and trust illuminating their countenances.

Blessed in the sight of the Lord is the death of his Saints.

Morals and Movies

PART I.—CONCERNING STANDARDS

By Howard W. Harder

The quality of the morals of any people can be expressed in four words: right or wrong, or good or bad. Right and wrong refer to the content of behavior; and, therefore, they refer to conduct as it is affected by motives and choices. Good and bad refer to the effect of any behavior—to what grows out of it regardless of intentions.

The notion of right and wrong was originally derived from the idea of the greatest good of the group. Conduct was right if it tended to promote the welfare of society, and wrong if it did not. Since the highest welfare of the individual will coincide with the highest welfare of the community or the race, that conduct is right which is good—that is, any act which is beneficial to the average individual must of necessity be for the best good of society.

Moral Standards Change—Not Absolute

This idea in the main is true, but in judging the "right" or "wrong" of behavior, allowance for individual differences in early environment, training, and conscience must be made; which brings us to the proposition that what may be moral for some may be immoral for others. So, in the end, the idea of what is moral or immoral in moving pictures must depend somewhat upon the individual. However, there must be a point somewhere where conduct can be said to be either moral or immoral, depending on its effect on the majority.

Take, for instance, the question of time and its use. The way I may choose to spend my time can have a distinct effect on my morals. If I do not make the best use of my time, whatever I do with it is morally bad for me, whether it is attending movies, visiting an art gallery, spending an afternoon at bridge, or what not. If there is a better way in which I am free to use my time, I am immoral, because I am not pursuing the course that is best for me; and when I am doing what is bad for me I am doing what is wrong for society, and my conduct is immoral.

This idea also postulates the possibility of a changing morality—that is to say, there may be a change in what is moral. Many of us can remember when it was considered immoral to wear a bathing suit that exposed the arms below the elbows, and the lower limbs at all. A very few years ago it was not only considered immoral but it was also illegal to wear less than a two-piece bathing suit. Today we do not consider a young lady immoral when she wears a backless one-piece swimming suit.

This tendency for our moral standards to change I believe to be both for the better and for the worse. As a people, we are becoming less dogmatic than formerly, and are far more tolerant of those things that do not fit in with our standards, and in many ways that has made us happier. But the danger, as I see it, exists when constant contact with what is bad blunts our moral sensibilities not only to the point of toleration, but to actual participation.

The Beginning of Pictures

Most of us are familiar with the evolution of pictures. The first pictures we know of were made in the Stone Age when paleolithic men hewed out their picture writings on the walls of the caves in which they lived. In ancient India teachers drew pictures in the sand to illustrate their lessons. In the seventeenth century Comenius definitely stated: "Children must learn not only from words, but also from objects along with words." He issued the first illustrated textbook, Orbis Pictus, "The World Illustrated." From pictures for education to pictures for amusement was but a short step. When moving pictures were invented, they were a novelty and were first shown to amuse. This struck the popular fancy to such an extent that for years nearly all moving pictures have been produced for entertainment purposes only.

Amusement

Entertainment—mere amusement—is a fundamental need of normal folk. This is necessary to a well-balanced life, a life lived and not merely existed. Relaxation is as necessary to the health of the human body as is proper diet. There is no sharp line between amusement and education. One always grades into the other. What we do in fun educates us, and what we do in self-training becomes pleasurable.

It is the task of business to give us what we want, to supply those things which we have been educated to believe we can not get along without. It is the task of art to make us continually want something better. The two are beginning to join hands in moving pictures; and this is one way in which pictures are beneficent and helpful. Moving pictures stimulate in many of those who see them almost frenzied desires to reach a position in life where some of the ultra luxurious things seen on the screen can become theirs. Where the individual has the proper hereditary and environmental background, this is very commendable, since often only the stimulus is lacking to make a person's life happy.

However, the very picture which encourages some to greater efforts along recognized and commendable lines toward better conditions may also stimulate others to reach the same heights by any means, fair or foul. That is to say, when stimulated to see the desired result, the early training of some may be such as to allow them to use any means possible to attain it, whether such means be good or bad. Here we come back to the proposition that what is moral in movies depends largely on the previous training of those who see them. This postulates, again, that movies may be either moral or immoral according as they are viewed.

In the movies one sees the happenings of many months or even years portrayed in the short space of an hour. It is often physically impossible to be as detailed in action as one might wish. Especially is this true since talking pictures have slowed up the action of the players. In the silent film, for instance, courtship extending over some months or even years could be shown by several scenes. Now the action is necessarily so slow on account of the dialog that the business of winning a mate must be shown almost entirely in a few minutes. Even under the most favorable circumstances, such an interesting concomitant to almost every picture as courtship culminating in an engagement appears to be the result of what is picturesquely termed "falling in love."

How "Talkies" Teach False Ideas

And there we can put our finger on one of the evils of the movies. If every picture a young girl sees from the time she can remember depicts the essential business of courtship as but an instantaneous, spontaneous, mysterious emotional upheaval by which means the picture star secures a husband of wealth and power, can she be expected to look for love to come in any other way? And is she to be condemned in her natural desire for a husband, a home, and children, if to gain these ends she uses the only methods known to her, those so successful in the movies?

Love may come to some in the manner universally shown in pictures; but to most of us it does not come that way. I believe such a phenomenon as "falling in love" is but the result of physical attraction, and on that basis alone can not continue long to hold two people together. Love, to be effective in continuing a happy union, must be based not alone on physical attraction, but also on mental and spiritual attraction; and it is almost unthinkable that these three elements in one person on the spur of the moment can find an affinity in another.

The Real Character of Sensible Mating

Love comes to most of us in a way similar to conversion. Not many of us were converted in an instant, as was Saint Paul. Very few of us "fall in love." We meet a person who strikes our fancy, or in whom for some reason we become interested. If this person is interested in us, or can be induced to be, interest may ripen into friendship. Then begins a period of investigation by both persons of habits, attitudes, likes and dislikes, education, training, earning ability, and companionableness—in short, a period of courtship. This period may be long or short as we feel the necessity for time to make the decision. And finally, when we become convinced we have found a life companion, the engagement follows, and, usually after some weeks or months, marriage. How different from the methods of courtship and marriage shown on the screen!

This mistaken idea of courtship may work to the disadvantage of the phlegmatic type of girl. This person, believing the screen method to be the accepted and successful way to be wooed and won, may refuse several offers of marriage while awaiting in vain the appearance of him who will sweep her off her feet with his passionate love. While innocently living in a world of daydreams and make-believe, longing for her ideal lover, she is growing older and her chances for marriage are diminishing.

Marriage is the highest and most important of our social institutions and is sacred when consummated between two persons physically, mentally, and spiritually suited to each other. "Falling in love" is not an essential condition to a happy conjugal union. There are many phlegmatic people who could not love suddenly and violently. These people perhaps do not reach the sublime heights of love until the passing years have taught them the real worth of the character and friendship of their companions. To these people marriage is permanent, "until death does part." Such people do not crowd our divorce courts. On such, the wide prevalence of divorce shown in the movies has no effect. The breaking up of the family and the consequent unfortunate lot of the children does not make a pleasant picture, so these things are very rarely shown in our movies. The dark side of the picture gets little publicity. Here is where the movies fail us. In this, they are not true to life.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

The Adult Division

For the Department of Religious Education

By John Blackmore, Director of Adult Division

Introduction

Religious education in the church is not synonymous with mere "teaching" or "instruction," but it involves the educational method in all of the church activities. It is therefore essential that a broader and more comprehensive viewpoint of adult education should be promoted in all congregations. The program for adult religious education must include not only the impartation of doctrinal and scriptural truths, but also activities which involve the practice of truth in a great cooperative endeavor.

The curriculum should include a much wider range of activities than has heretofore been customary. The supervisor of the adult division with his, or her, staff should cooperatively work to stimulate a more virile educational program for adults, which will also include a group of correlated activity projects.

Objectives

The objectives of the adult division should be considered in terms that are more expansive than the mere acquiring of scriptural and religious knowledges. Somehow the crucial problems of a modern world must be intelligently considered and definite solutions sought after. Individual and cooperative activities which will result in increased capacities and strength of personality should be promoted among the adult membership.

The present adult program in religious education calls for an expanded interpretation of teaching in terms of creative leadership in a great forward movement. After all, the purpose of adult religious education in the church is the development of the whole adult membership in terms of Christlike characters, so that each may take a constructive place in the work of the Restoration.

The Congregation a Cooperative Group

The local organization should be adapted to meet the need of the particular local situation. The same detailed machinery will not function adequately in every branch. Some are large, and some small; some have rural situations to meet, while others are confronted with city conditions.

Further, the church school is not an organization separate from the pastor's administration, but is organized with its officers to assist the pastor in his work of shepherding the flock. In some instances the whole organization may be modified to meet the particular situations of the branch under the administration of the pastor.

It is further pointed out that it is not necessary for all of the activities listed to come under the church school. The pastor may sometimes arrange for clubs and groups of workers who are working under his direction, yet cooperatively functioning in the whole scheme of branch organization and congregational endeavor.

Officers

The adult division supervisor may be appointed or elected according to the local practice. The various group leaders may be chosen by the adult division supervisor, or elected by the groups according to the local practice. If there is no established local practice, it is wise for the pastor and his counselors in consultation with all officers involved to advise as to the method of selection.

Group Organization

All groups, such as study groups or activity groups, may be organized in such manner as will best serve the purpose for which they are organized. Each group would arrange its own organization in a manner essential to the accomplishment of its task, always working in cooperative harmony with the total congregational activity.

Division Councils

In the large branch the supervisor of the adult division with the group leaders constitute the divisional council, with the church school director and the pastor always as ex officio members.

In the small branch a particular council may not be required, so the work is carried on under the division supervisor, who is in constant consultation with the church school director and the pastor.

The divisional council should not be considered an administrative body, but rather an advisory group conferring together for the practical work of correlating and stimulating the complete program of adult religious education in terms of an expanded curriculum.

Finances of the Division

The method of financing the projects of a group and the disposition of the money earned should be determined by the group in consultation and agreement with the pastor and the financial agent, and with other officers involved.

Activities

The divisional officers in cooperation with the pastor should stimulate the activities here listed. Emphasis should not be placed by the divisional officers upon the administration of these activities, but rather upon the task of encouraging and stimulating them.

In some cases the activities here listed will undoubtedly be arranged for outside of the administration of the church school by the pastor and his councilors. The emphasis must be placed upon creative cooperation rather than upon administration.

The following is a suggested list of activities which should be encouraged and stimulated by the adult division, though not in every case administered by the church school.

Class Work to Be Stimulated and Sponsored

Church school quarterlies.
Bible studies.
Various church books.
Church history.
The Christian family.
Child psychology.

Child nurture.
Social principles of Jesus.
Religion in business.
Health and physical development.
Hygiene: Mental; Physical.
Home budgeting.

Social and Service Functions to Be Encouraged

Sewing circles.
Home service work.
Church service groups.
Bazaars.
Dinners and suppers.
Organized social visits.
Recreational evenings.
Men's social dinners.
Women's social dinners.
Home beautifying projects.
Church improvement projects.
Community projects.
Charity projects.
Group picnics.
Men's clubs and social groups.
Women's clubs and social groups.
Church school parents' and teachers' organizations.
Workers' conferences.

Activities for General Participation

Public School, parent-teacher associations.
Missionary work.
Participation in the work of the choir and church music.
Teaching in the church school.
Children's division.
Young people's division.
Adult division.
Church school officers' and teachers' work.
Special activities requested by pastor.
Educational institutes.
Neighborly visiting.
Home worship.
Congregational services.
Visiting teams.

Note: In addition to the above, other avenues for study and activity may be initiated and stimulated. It will be observed that some of the class studies and group activities because of their nature will be permanent, while others will be of temporary tenure.

Organization of Adult Division

As previously stated, the local organization of the adult division should be adapted to meet the particular need of the local congregation and its general activities. The same detailed machinery of organization will not be suitable or practical in every branch.

Three graphs outlining types of organization suitable for different size congregations are submitted, not necessarily to be rigorously followed, but as suggestive of the general principle underlying the divisional organization in harmony with the plan of religious education adopted by the General Conference of April, 1930.

Each local in its organization is advised to follow the general principle as outlined in these graphs.

Large Branch Organization

In this plan of division organization for the large congregation, the adult division superintendent has three assistants who will stimulate these different activities as outlined in graph.

Medium-size Branch Organization

In this plan of adult division organization for the medium-size congregation, the adult division superintendent has one assistant who will take immediate oversight of and stimulate the activities as outlined in the graph.

Small-size Branch Organization

In this plan the adult division activities are all under the direction of the adult division superintendent, who undoubtedly should be a progressive and sympathetic person, preferably a woman who is capable of leadership and has time for this work.

Medium-size Branch Organization

Small-size Branch Organization

Conclusion

It is obvious that adult religious education is a process in cooperative group and individual experiences. The church school with its adult division operates in conjunction with other agencies as an integral part of the general and local church. Therefore, as the field is so broad, the emphasis must be placed upon cooperation and correlation of programs in harmony with the administration of the pastor and his corps of priesthood officers.

In every case the pastor is the chief administrator of the whole congregational endeavor, including all phases of church school work in the field of religious education.

The adult division of the church school exists only to assist the whole adult membership to cooperate in activities which will result in soul culture expressed in Christlike personalities who are actively engaged in the creative work of building the kingdom of God on earth.

Suggestions for November Enterprises in the Children's Division

By Myrtle A. Weber

November, Thanksgiving! What splendid opportunities this month offers to church school workers! Are your thoughts not set astir? Do not a host of meaningful enterprises pop into your mind? Just what are we going to make Thanksgiving mean to the children? How shall we help them interpret it?

To develop within the children a keen appreciation of this holiday season, it will be necessary to create an atmosphere characteristic of it. This can be affected by decorating your rooms with autumn leaves and harvest pictures. Real pumpkins and corn stalks with corn on them will add greatly. Encourage the children, particularly those in the primary and junior departments, to contribute to and help plan the decorations. As the whole month should be one of thanksgiving, it is advisable to let your room decorations be the result largely of the children's own enthusiasm. The wise superintendent will contribute just enough suggestive decorative materials to quicken the children's enthusiasm. Once the children have caught the idea, they will need only guidance and suggestions from their teachers. The first Sunday of the month a few autumn leaves and a harvest picture will be sufficient to stimulate and direct the children's thoughts toward the coming holiday. In your conversation period, invite the children to discuss and plan the room decorations and activities for this month.

Undoubtedly, children, particularly those in the kindergarten and primary departments, need opportunities to feel and express gratitude; to feel gratitude toward parents, friends, teachers, and to the heavenly Father; to express gratitude to all of these. Hence, it is for us to provide for the children those experiences which will have the greatest religious value. When selecting activities, we must be largely guided by the children themselves and their particular needs. Thanksgiving provides an opportunity for a departmental project. To kindergarten and primary children, a general group enterprise is more meaningful, more interesting, and the results are more satisfying than if carried out by a single class.

Too frequently the mistake is made of narrowing down the thanksgiving holiday to a one-day affair. Let us make the whole month one of thanksgiving, eventuating in Thanksgiving Day. Our songs, stories, pictures, conversation, worship services, etc., should be of such a nature that they will lead and direct the children in thought and activity to the great realization we wish them to sense.

Each superintendent, each teacher, must ask herself: "How thankful am I? Do I prattle piously about Thanksgiving, or am I deeply and humbly grateful for the blessings I enjoy? How thankful am I—enough to act like it? Emerson said, "What you do speaks so loudly that I can not hear what you say." How true! Certainly it is to our credit to return our thanks to God for his every blessing, but if we are truly grateful for his many kindnesses, then we should live out that gratefulness by showing kindness to those with whom we live. We must help our children to realize that if we desire to please God we must form the habit of thanksgiving as well as that of thanksgiving. If we appreciate God's blessing of health we can live out that appreciation by being thoughtful of and helpful to the sick and crippled. If we are grateful that we are young and spry, we can live out that gratefulness by running errands for the aged and infirm and lending them a helping hand. If we are thankful for our church and Sunday school, we can prove it by inviting other boys and girls to share our religious experiences. These are some of the things that are meant by "thanksgiving." We love God best and we thank him best as we serve others, and at Thanksgiving time, particularly, those in need.

Both the primary and kindergarten quarterlies supply stories and suggest songs, pictures, and activities which will tend to foster the spirit of the thanksgiving season. In all three departments of the children's division, the theme for the worship period may be: "Thanking God for good gifts."

During the week many activities may be engaged in which will help to prepare the children for the Sunday worship service. The following suggestions are offered:

1. Plan to prepare and give from the children's division one or more Thanksgiving baskets to needy families.
  - a. Let the children decorate these baskets.
  - b. Help the children to ice some cookies, or stuff dates with peanut butter for the baskets, or make fruit paste for the baskets.
  - c. Every child should be encouraged to bring some money he has saved or earned to help buy things for the basket.
  - d. Decide with the children what things should be put into the baskets for good, wholesome Thanksgiving dinners. The following list is a possibility:

Chicken, 6 pounds .....	$3.00
(Turkey, duck, or goose may be provided if desired.)
Cranberries, 2 quarts .....	.40
Potatoes, half peck .....	.40
Peas, 1 can .....	.20
Tomatoes, 1 can .....	.15
Apples, half peck .....	.50
Bread, 2 loaves .....	.20
Butter, 1 pound .....	.60
Celery, 1 bunch .....	.15
Sugar, 5 pounds .....	.40
	$6.00

- e. Appoint a buying committee to purchase the eatables. The marketing and packing may be done on the day before Thanksgiving.
- f. If it would not be wise for all the children to deliver the baskets, appoint a committee to do so.
- g. Place cards may be made for each member of the families to which the baskets are going.
2. Stuff dates for the homefolk for the Thanksgiving dinner.
3. Make place cards for the home Thanksgiving dinner table.
4. Let one department plan a party for another department, or one class of a department plan for the other classes of its department.
5. Plant narcissus bulbs for the department room; some to be placed in the church auditorium; some to be given to a shut-in.
6. One class plan a dramatization, song, or picture story to share with the whole department.
7. The junior department could plan a simple dramatization of the story of the Pilgrims, which could be given, with permission of the pastor, the Sunday preceding Thanksgiving before the entire church school. Allow the children to make their own costumes and do any decorating necessary.

As you know, it would be impossible for anyone to plan a program for your particular group. Each group has its own peculiar needs. While it might be possible for the children's division of one branch to undertake to provide a Thanksgiving basket, it might be unwise for that division of another branch to try to foster such a project. It is for each superintendent to choose and adapt the enterprises here suggested to her particular group and its needs and abilities. May your children develop religiously, because you provide for them activities that will help them to meet their everyday problems.

Present Plans for the Church School

DISCUSSION MATERIAL FOR THE NOVEMBER WORKERS' CONFERENCE

By C. B. Woodstock

Throughout the church there is intense interest in developing efficient means, activities, and an organization to care for the work of religious education. This is no new movement by any means, but an interest which has been gaining momentum over a period of years. An action of the last General Conference indorsed the recommendation from the First Presidency that the three departments, Sunday School, Recreation and Expression, and Women, already working as a unit in the general offices, be definitely united as a single Department of Religious Education and charged with the development of the most efficient unified program possible to assist in accomplishing the educational task of the church. It was further ordered that the officers of the single department "work closely under the supervision of the First Presidency, and that the department make every effort to correlate and integrate its activities with the activities of all other phases and departments of church endeavor; that its staff, working in cooperation with the general officials of the church, take such steps as necessary to reorganize the work of religious education in stakes, districts, and branches in accordance with the proposed plan, it being understood that the changes shall be brought about only as found wise and practicable, and as conditions in the various stakes, districts, and branches would seem to justify."

General Organization

The form of organization in the general department as set out in the recommendation was put into immediate operation at the close of General Conference. The Joint Council approved the appointment of three men of the general ministry to work in the newly created department. By appointment of the First Presidency, F. M. McDowell is the general director of religious education in the church, C. B. Woodstock is associated with him as director and has special direction of the curriculum and training. John Blackmore is director of adults, E. E. Closson is director of young people, and Mrs. Bertha Constance Woodward is director of the children's division.

The general department thus organized has entered actively into the task of organizing the forces of religious education in branches, districts, and stakes in a unified program of studies, activities, and projects designed to help accomplish the purposes of the church in our day. We are coming more and more to realize that the work of religious education is quite coextensive with the work of the church; it is the teaching phase of church responsibility. This is primarily the assignment of the priesthood, together with the authority to minister in the ordinances, and the administrative functions which inhere in leadership. But the call to teach is not confined to those who have been ordained. Parents in the home, group leaders, and class teachers; in fact, all who share in the process of molding human personality and in building character, are called to serve in the educational program. The future workers of the church are largely being builded today in the rank and file of our congregations.

It is to be noted that all of the work of the church school in a branch is under the direction of the pastor; who, under his calling and choosing, is the shepherd of the flock. It is to be presumed that he is keenly aware of his responsibility and alert to his opportunities to foster and direct the teaching work of the ministry, both of the priesthood and lay teachers and leaders. The local church school is organized in harmony with a church-wide plan to assist the pastor in his work, particularly that concerned with class and group organization for purposes of religious education.

Discussion

On the basis of the foregoing statements, discuss the general organization as typical in form of what is needed in each branch.

In what ways has there been manifest a "forward educational movement" within the church in recent years? To what extent has your local branch participated?

What relationship may be seen between the urge for progress and development within the work of the church and similar movements in secular education, in industry, in social conditions, and government?

What relation may such a movement have to our ideal of the gathering? of Zion? of the endowment?

In what respects is the task of religious education coextensive with the work of the church?

It should be noted that the assumption that "the teaching task of the church is all religious education" does not in any way reduce the authority nor the responsibility of the priesthood in the church.

What significance is seen in the fact that the pastor is recognized as in general charge of the work of the church school as a part of his pastoral responsibility? Because he can not do all of the teaching and all of the leadership, the church school is organized to assist him and the priesthood of the branch in the great work intrusted to all. Only in exceptional cases would it seem wise for a pastor to permit himself to be chosen as director of religious education.

If further discussion is desired, refer to the article entitled "Organization of the local church school," Saints' Herald for October 22, 1930, pages 1167 and 1168.

A discussion of plans for the administration of religious education in the stakes and districts is given in the Herald referred to above.

Training for Service

By C. B. W.

At the fall term of the School of Religious Education in Sacramento, California, under direction of the International Council, fourteen of our local church school workers are enrolled. Our church furnished the second largest enrollment of all the churches in Sacramento. At the spring term our church was first, and it held second place in the two previous schools.

At Long Beach, California, nineteen of our church workers are enrolled in training classes under the local council of Religious Education. In many other cities we have people taking training in interdenominational training schools.

We think this participation in standard training work is commendable, especially when our workers may go with an earnest desire to learn, that they may gain in knowledge of method and in skill in the technic of teaching, that they may be able to render a better service in the church. It is quite necessary, in addition to the available courses in method, that we maintain the integrity of our own faith through a training program of our own in the standard books and in the program of the church.

In this connection it is interesting to note that sixty-five International units have been submitted to our department office for transfer, for recognition of credits, to our point system. This is done on the basis of two points per class hour for completed courses.

At the same time, 338 people have received credit for attendance at 18 reunion institutes during the past summer, and 186 people have been reported for credit for attendance at local institutes and study classes in the period from May to November.

To the Missionary

By J. A. Ferris

They are not lost, my friend, those hours of service spent
In the great cause of the Matchless One; he has sent Others also who were repulsed—misunderstood.
Hold fast thy ministry; and unto all do good.

A Foreign Missionary Returns to His Mission

October 13.—There are certain incidents in everyone's life that are not pleasant. Sometimes such incidents occur in a missionary's life.

Wednesday, September 17, found me awake at 3.15 in the morning and ready for the first part of the journey that would separate me from relatives, friends, a wife, and a bonny four-year-old daughter by approximately seven thousand miles for a period of from one to three years. While I may be rated as one who takes the usual and the unusual events of life as they come, I must confess that bidding farewell to loved ones at that time taxed my endurance to almost a breaking point. As I type these lines I marvel at the courage and missionary zeal of such men as, K. Hanks, Noah Rogers, B. F. Grouard, and Addison Pratt, who, in the year 1843, left loved ones behind in America as they sailed from New York to become the pioneers in this South Sea Mission, when travel conditions and chances of communication with the ones left behind were much less encouraging than they are today. I am also led to wonder what would be the limit of achievement in our missionary and Zionie program if that same zeal and courage were found in every member of the church today. But I started to write about going to my mission.

I traveled by auto from Warton, Ontario, where I had left my family, to Detroit, Michigan, and by train to Chicago and Kansas City, where I spent several days before going on to Denver, Colorado, and San Francisco. From the last-named place I sailed a few days later. The journey was without important incident save for one.

I completed my arrangements for sailing, visited for several days with Doctor Bush and J. W. Rushton, in Berkeley, and on the day for sailing loaded early so that I would not be rushed at the last minute. I stood alone on deck watching the confusion incident to the departure of an ocean-going steamer until the gangplanks were lifted and the cornet began to play, "Till we meet again" and "Smile a while." I found it hard to smile with no one to smile at and no one to whom to say good-bye. It was then that something started to happen.

I found my cabin a good retreat, where I could think things over. It was there that the steward found me sometime after and handed me a letter and a telegram from a faithful companion. The latter read, "We are all praying for you," and was signed "Lillian." That was the important incident. Somehow things looked different then. Worries about possible sickness of loved ones at home and my dangerous trips on small boats among the coral islands left me. They have not returned.

Ten days at sea aboard R. M. S. Makura, and I faced again the familiar green mountains of Tahiti. Later I stood on deck, as we neared dock, straining my eyes to discern familiar native faces and the faces of our missionaries, who have been carrying on during my absence. They were all there, and after the usual immigration and customs gauntlet had been run, I was quite at home again in friendly Tarona (headquarters).

I found Brother Ballard and family doing nicely and Brother Farthing looking better than when I left seven months before.

In Brother Farthing I feel that I have a sympathetic friend, for he, too, is separated from his wife and baby by almost seven thousand miles.

Everything looks most prosperous around headquarters, and before I hardly knew it I was talking myself into the affairs of the mission. This mission has the one effective remedy for my ailment and the ailments of many other men—work.

I will soon be traveling to the low coral islands, looking after the local and missionary interests there and will later awaken from my concentration on mission affairs to find that my three years are finished, and that I am back home again among relatives and old friends in America.

Union Branch

Clitherall, Minnesota

One family circle has been completed here during the past summer, that of Brother Carl Christianson, of Battle Lake. The older son, Edward, was baptized at the Chetek reunion, and Sister Christianson and the younger son, Clark, at their home near Battle Lake.

We were fortunate in receiving a second visit from Elder Swen Swenson early in September. He left the members stronger in faith and courage.

About the middle of October Apostle Garver and Missionary C. J. Smith made a flying visit to Union Branch and held one evening's service at the home of Pastor Lester Whiting. Brother Garver gave just the right kind of a talk for a small, scattered, and dwindling branch. Because we can not see the results of our labors, we may sometimes become discouraged; but the leaven works unseen. The few need the administrations of the gospel and the opportunities it offers for development just as much as the many who are in a gathered condition. He left the workers much encouraged.

Sunday school, prayer meetings, and preaching services are held regularly.

Tawas City, Michigan

It is a pleasure to report the progress of the branch in Tawas City. For the past twelve years the Saints in this locality have been working for the realization of that one great thing which means so much to all true members—the building of Zion.

October 5 we celebrated the twelfth anniversary of the organization of the branch here. It has been through the untiring efforts of Branch President M. A. Sommerfield that we have kept steadily pressing onward. There have been trials and discouragements, but always we could see the sun shining just "beyond." Brother Sommerfield has been to the Saints in this part like the shepherd of the flock. We have gone to him for advice, and always we have received wise counsel. Several times we know that his responsibilities were almost too great, but because of his love for the church and his fellow men he was always ready to do his part. He organized the branch and with the exception of one year has served as its pastor.

August 24 an all-day service opened a series of meetings held by District President J. W. Peterson and Missionary Arthur Oakman. On Sunday afternoon between services, four young girls were led into the water of baptism by Elder Sommerfield. Much interest was shown at the services, and Brother Oakman's special songs and music brought many nonmembers to the meetings. Brother Oakman made many friends, not only among the members of the branch but among the people throughout the community.

Monday night, September 1, several of the young people of the community enjoyed a marshmallow and wiener roast given by Myrna Lou Sommerfield at Island Lake for Elder Oakman. Brother and Sister Ervin Uiman chaperoned the party.

The district conference convened at Beaverton October 12 and 13. Services for Sunday were not held in Tawas City, because most of the members attended the conference.

Sister J. W. Peterson, who came with Elders Peterson and Oakman, is making her home in Tawas City. It is a pleasure to have her here.

Historic Figure Celebrates Natal Day Anniversary

On October 13, 1930, Don Carlos Millikin, of Hamilton, Illinois, was eighty-seven years of age. He was the first-born son of Lucy Smith Millikin, the youngest sister of the Prophet Joseph Smith.

The writer, with his wife, was invited to come to the home of this aged brother and visit on his birthday. We enjoyed a wonderful day, and while there learned the following interesting facts:

Brother Millikin's father, Arthur Millikin, and mother, Lucy Smith, were married in Nauvoo, June 4, 1840. Don Carlos was born in Saco, York County, Maine, October 13, 1843, and the family moved back to Nauvoo before the martyrdom of the Prophet. He remembers the burning of the Temple at Nauvoo, October 10, 1848. He lived at Webster, and Fountain Green in Illinois. In 1856 they moved to Colchester, Illinois, which is twelve miles east of Nauvoo, and in 1874 to the place where he now lives, seven miles north-east of Hamilton. He was baptized into the church June 21, 1873, at Colchester. He married Mary Sophias Gridley about the time of the close of the Civil War, who died in 1881. To them were born four children, two boys and two girls. Both sons have passed away, one daughter lives in Texas, the other in Keokuk, Iowa. Brother Millikin is again married to a splendid wife.

He was a soldier in the 153d Illinois regiment, a justice of peace for sixteen years, a school director for the same period, and served as postmaster of the post office at Millikin, Illinois, for over twenty-one years (1884-1905).

This veteran is in fairly good health, comfortably situated, and claims a strong faith in the gospel and its power as restored by his uncle, Joseph Smith. He is very likely the oldest living descendant of Joseph Smith, sr., and Lucy Mack Smith.

Sacramento, California

Twenty-fourth and Kay Streets

Ernest Doremus, preceding the prayer service, was baptized by W. H. Dawson October 8. Elder E. C. Burdick assisted in the confirmation.

Sacramental service for October was well attended. The day was begun with a spiritual prayer service at 8:30. Elder Hiram Holt and wife were visitors. He gave a vigorous testimony of spiritual blessings received during his long service as a missionary.

Our district president, G. P. Levitt, closed a week's series of meetings October 3, showing a beautiful set of pictures on "The life of Christ." The other evenings he showed historic pictures of the church.

Rally Day was observed September 28, with promotion exercises during the Sunday school hour. The superintendent, Sister Gertrude Bidwell, read an interesting paper, accompanied her daughter, Betty, in a pleasing vocal solo, and later presented the promotion certificates. Priest J. Elam gave a talk on promotion. The juniors sang "A church that makes you happy" and recited "Some things are hard to remember." Kathleen Nulliner gave a reading. Eddie Petersen rendered a violin number. Sisters Orah Johnston and Hazel Blohm made impromptu remarks on the presentation and acceptance of the promoted children. Priest J. B. Dawson offered the benediction. A beautiful effect in lighting was accomplished by our electrician, Ives Honeychurch. The wall back of the rostrum was illumined with colors, and in the center was visible a large picture of Christ, shown from a hidden projector.

Priest Roy Weldon, of Lafayette, was the speaker at the church hour. He spoke on "Zion," aptly illustrating his talk with a blackboard and chalk and a lump of adobe. Drawing three circles to illustrate the spiritual, animal, and mineral kingdoms, he showed that as man reached from his kingdom to plant, nourish, and produce life in the mineral kingdom, so God has reached down to mankind, planting the gospel through his son, Jesus Christ, to produce spiritual life for man. Thus has he maintained the law of continuity.

Sister Julia Crocker, of Loomis, is in the Sutter Hospital with a broken hip, caused by a fall on a concrete floor in a local department store.

Sister Naomi Hutchinson is convalescing after a lengthy illness.

London, Ontario

Elder William Fligg, London district missionary, was here on a recent Sunday and occupied the evening hour. His many friends were pleased to again see him in this field. He intends to labor in Delhi. Of late he was called to Independence, Missouri, by the serious illness of Sister Fligg.

London Branch has adopted the continuous service plan for the balance of the year. It is proving quite a benefit to the church school.

Brother Arlo Hodgson, one of our promising young priests, had an interesting paper on "Socializing the group" for the evening program at the district conference held last week at Saint Thomas. Elder James Winegarden, counselor to Pastor MacGregor, was chosen district president by the conference at Saint Thomas last Saturday.

Douglas George, infant son of Sister Weese, was blessed during the evening service October 5 by Elders W. Fligg and J. Winegarden.

Elder David Withrow, president of Stratford Branch, occupied our pulpit the other Sunday evening. There have been present of late a number of other visitors from Stratford and also from Blenheim. During the past month Pastor J. E. MacGregor, Bishop J. C. Dent, and Elders F. Gray, J. Winegarden, and G. C. Tomlinson, of Saint Marys have occupied the pulpit. Their sermons were most helpful.

The last sacramental service was largely attended. The Spirit of the Lord was richly experienced by the membership. Elder Fligg presided and was assisted by the pastor.

October 5 was Rally Day. A special program was carried out at the church school, which was enjoyed by large attendance. In the evening, speakers were Missionary W. Fligg and Elder Frank Gray.

Sister Rosa Small, of Independence, spent a few days here last week. She was called to London by the accident which was fatal to her brother, Mr. Davis, a C. P. R. engineer.

"Uncle John" Vasbinder is around again after an illness of flu for about a week.

Elder S. Tomlinson, lifelong missionary of this district, is with us again after spending a few months with his daughter in Toronto.

The young people of the branch gave a miscellaneous shower to Sister Edith Armstrong, a bride elect, at the church on a recent evening. A suitable program helped to make the evening enjoyable to all.

Two promising young people of this branch, Winnifred Timbrell and Frances Latt, have gone to Toronto. The accounting department of the Bell Telephone Company in which they are employed, has moved its headquarters.

Plano, Illinois

The first union sacramental service was held here September 21, when Saints from Sandwich, Aurora, and DeKalb united in a fine meeting. Brother C. C. Malcor, of Aurora, gave the evening sermon.

The Sunday school held Promotion Day exercises September 28. At the close of a pleasing program, seventeen received certificates of promotion.

Bishop M. H. Siegfried and Elder J. A. Gardner held special services here Monday evening, September 29.

The Oriole Girls, under the leadership of Sister Hazel Gregory, held a bake sale last Saturday.

Last week Sister John Moore and R. E. Wildermuth were called to Omaha, Nebraska, by the death of E. A., only son of Edwin and Florence Wildermuth. Relatives from Aurora also went.

Jerome F. Wildermuth, district president, was here September 1.

Brother and Sister Foster Walker are happy to announce the arrival of Luther Allen Walker, their second son, September 29.

Sister Clara Southwick is again able to attend services after several weeks' illness.

Brother and Sister Joseph Ewing and daughter sold their business here and moved to Arkansas. Sister Pauline Blakely is in Chicago with her son for the winter.

College Day program this year helped us to more fully realize our college needs. Dick Wildermuth gave a short talk and led in the Alma Mater Hymn. Irene Johnson has returned to Graceland this year.

Since March 1 this branch has lost five members by death and some by removal.

Sister Jennie Wildermuth and son, while visiting relatives in Ohio, attended the Kirtland reunion one Sunday.

Priscilla Ann Reedy is with her grandparents, Brother and Sister Walter Sanderson, while her mother is in the hospital at Aurora.

MRS. AURILLA MOORE.

Northern District (England) Conference

Northern District has just held its quarterly conference, and it is gratifying to be able to report a splendid gathering at all meetings.

One of the best features of the conference was the church school demonstration staged by the director of Religious Education, High Priest Nephi Dewsnup. We have in the district a fine body of young men and women, and the plan of the director was to harness the forces of these workers and give a practical object lesson of the church school at work. This was designed that the branches represented might have opportunity to observe first hand how the plan works.

The school was a success and did much good; it saved considerable special class work along these lines. Many will now be able to use this method in reaching the whole membership of their branch by unified church services.

The evening service was given to the writer, and I related some of my experiences at the Centennial Conference in Independence. Judging by the expressions upon the faces of the congregation, they enjoyed hearing of the great church gathering, and once again I lived through the never-to-be-forgotten scenes of that world assemblage of Saints. I count myself a fortunate man to have been permitted to participate in those grand meetings and to be a first-hand witness of the struggle of the leading authorities of the church to place the feet of the Saints on the highway to Zion.

Great and vital changes are taking place in the minds of the Saints here. We move along towards the ideals set up for us by those whose duty it is to point the way. Our young people are working as they never worked before, and they are easing the burdens of the older Saints. We have opened up the way for their services to be rendered to God through the church, bidding them take notice that every function of individual and branch activity should benefit the program of the church.

My prayer is for God's blessing on the pioneers of the faith today headed by our Prophet.

W. H. CHANDLER.

Four Baptized at Home-coming Series

It will interest Herald readers to learn of the home-coming meeting of which I wrote in my letter published October 1, 1930, under the title, "Back on the old trail." The gathering was planned to take place fifty miles west of Elk Mills, in Harford County, Maryland, near Fawn Grove, Pennsylvania, on October 5.

The weather was too cold to hold services out of doors as we had planned, so we conducted the meetings in the home of Brother Stewart Matthews. Some fifty people in the house and on the porch were attentive listeners. Indeed, the interest shown by the people demanded that we continue the services during the week.

Brother H. B. Mann, who took me to the meeting place and assisted on Sunday, returned home Monday and left Brothers Smith and Matthews and myself to carry on the services. It was my work to do the preaching, and every night I spoke to a full house. Brother Mann returned Saturday night and preached. Sunday I preached morning and evening to an interested congregation and enjoyed excellent liberty.

When I had concluded my effort, Daniel Knopp, who has known the latter-day work for many years and has a Latter Day Saint wife, came forward and said, "I can not stay out longer. I desire baptism." Another man about the same age had come to the same conclusion, and two young women said they too were ready. These candidates were baptized by Brother Mann, and as a result two more families were united in the bonds of truth.

I plan to return to that place the fore part of next month, weather permitting, to continue the effort.

A. H. PARSONS.

Los Angeles, California

East Branch, 1153 South Gage Street

Sunday evening, October 12, closed a three-week series of missionary meetings in East Branch and took from our midst to another field Missionary R. D. Weaver, whom we had learned to love and esteem. He came as a stranger three weeks ago but so quickly and so completely adjusted himself to this local that he was at home with us. His message was one of beauty, grandeur, and simplicity, and at the same time powerful, definite, and positive, winning the hearts of many who were bitter or indifferent to the latter-day work. Good attendance of nonmembers prevailed throughout the meetings, and splendid interest was manifested. One young man, Earl Moore, was baptized by Brother Weaver at the close of Sunday school and was confirmed by Brothers Weaver and Sutherland at the evening service. Many others are near the kingdom, and the good that Brother Weaver did for members through his personal visits as well as his word pictures of the Christ life and other phases of the gospel can not be measured.

The Sunday school held annual promotion exercises September 28. Each department had its group to be promoted, and the candidates contributed their part to the program and received their diplomas. Then they were given a welcome by the classes to which they had been promoted. Those promoted into the junior department were presented Bibles by the school. This is an annual custom. More than one hundred and fifty were present to witness the exercises, giving the children public recognition of their progress. Brother Weaver, the morning speaker, used as a theme "The more excellent way."

The Shakualto Chapter of Temple Builders produced a magazine, The Orange Blossom, in September. This publication contains stories and poetry written by the girls, a recipe page, an etiquette page, jokes, the story of an interesting trip, a page about interesting people, and other features.

The Department of Recreation and Expression has changed its time of meeting from Friday evening to 6.45 Sunday evening. The young people have a dramatics class Friday evening. Brother Joseph Farley is at present in charge of the department. JEWELL THORSON.

Independence

Stone Church

In the main auditorium of the Stone Church at the eleven o'clock hour the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed. President F. M. Smith presided, and was assisted by Bishops M. H. Siegfried and R. T. Cooper, and Elders John F. Sheehy, W. Wallace Smith, and Stanley Kelley. Paul N. Craig led the congregational singing. Evan Fry played the organ.

Before the partaking of the sacrament President Smith recalled to the minds of the congregation the sacrament and its historical settings. He discussed the origin and significance of the sacrament. He said that the sacramental service is a ceremonial renewal of our covenant with God, and, to us, the deeper meaning of the symbolism of the sacrament is an expression of our testimony to each other that we will protect the sacredness of the personality and life of our brother.

This discourse was followed by the reading of the story of the Last Supper, after which the entire congregation engaged in a few moments of silent prayer. During this season of prayer "'Tis midnight and on Olive's brow" was played very softly on the organ.

"Gratitude for Christ's example" was the theme thought of the junior young people's communion service in the lower auditorium. It was estimated that more than two hundred boys and girls were present to hear the talk of Elder Leonard Lea on the topic of the morning. This month the junior young people in their continuous Sunday morning service are "Adventuring with Christ in gratitude." In the stand with the speaker were Elder George G. Lewis, who was in charge, and Priests W. Earl Page, Albert Brackenbury, Kenneth Morford, Paul Elliott, Oral Andes, and Gerald Phillips.

In the afternoon the newly elected junior young people's council, representing the seventeen classes of the department, met to organize for an active six months' term of service. Margery Sheehy, daughter of Pastor and Sister John F. Sheehy, was elected president of the group, and Emma Jeanne Etzenhouser, daughter of Brother and Sister R. D. Etzenhouser, was chosen secretary. The council will meet every second Sunday to consider administrative problems of the department. The superintendents and pastor are sponsoring the council. A message was sent by the council to the monthly teachers' meeting held last night.

The Young People's Department at the Auditorium has been using the fall months to definitely organize for the winter program. A number of church school interests are engrossing this group of young people. They have raised three fourths of their Christmas offering quota; they are recruiting new members; and as fast as possible they are deciding upon study courses for the coming months. Perhaps the largest attendance yet was had Sunday morning when two hundred and five were present. Elder E. E. Closson has been appointed by the pastor in Zion to have charge of the young people's division of the Stone Church School.

The Auditorium Orchestra, directed by Orlando Nace, and the Stone Church Choir, conducted by Paul N. Craig, gave an attractive musical program to a congregation which filled the church on Sunday evening. "Gloria in excelsis," by Farmer, was the anthem sung by the choir accompanied by the orchestra, solo parts being sung by Nina G. Smith, Alice M. Burgess, Edward Brackenbury, and Albert Brackenbury; Robert Miller at the organ. "The great awakening," by Kramer, was sung by Nina G. Smith, who was accompanied at the piano by Lorena Kueffer and at the organ by Robert Miller. There were also special numbers by the orchestra.

The trend of religious thought and practice of the English people from early centuries to the present, as given expression in their places of worship, formed the basis for the illustrated lecture by Apostle F. Henry Edwards. Photographs, many of which belong to the set taken by President Frederick M. Smith in 1920, were used by the speaker to give his words a pictorial setting, and showed places of worship in the British Isles from the Stonehenge to our own present-day church homes there. There were some especially beautiful photographs of famous cathedrals.

Elder H. G. Barto was in charge of the service.

Organizations and Personalities

Universal observance of the Halloween season has characterized the past week and has taken the form of a great variety of parties, hikes, and picnics.

The past ten days have brought home to Independence several general officers of the church, among whom are President F. M. Smith, Church Architect Henry C. Smith and family, Apostles J. A. Gillen and E. J. Gleazer, Elder J. A. Gardner, and Bishop M. H. Siegfried. The last two named arrived home from a thirty-three-day trip made for the purpose of teaching the program of the church and the budgeting system. The trip included branches in two districts in Illinois and six districts in Michigan. Everywhere they were received with eagerness and given good audience, and altogether thirty-three congregations were addressed. Gaylord, Michigan, was the most northern point visited. During this tour it is estimated that Brothers Gardner and Siegfried came in contact with two thousand church members, and they have brought home with them pleasant memories of these associations and assurance that the Saints in outlying districts are deeply interested in the general church program and its execution. In the thirty-three days half a ton of church literature was sold or distributed free of charge.

Sister Mark H. Siegfried underwent a major surgical operation at the Sanitarium Saturday morning. She is reported to be doing remarkably well.

Apostle John F. Garver appeared in the Auditorium offices Monday. As usual his visit to Independence was brief, mission field activities demanding his presence elsewhere.

Bishop Roderick May, who was eighty years old in September, is convalescing at the Independence Sanitarium. Two weeks ago he underwent two major surgical operations, and this week his nurse says that he is "doing well." Brother May was born September 15, 1850, in Glasgow, Scotland, and has served the church in many capacities at home and abroad. His first ordination to the priesthood followed his baptism by a year, when he was called to act as a priest July 18, 1877. He was ordained a bishop April 21, 1900. Brother May is one of the oldest residents in Independence.

A number of the Saints are making plans to attend the sessions of the annual Missouri State Sunday School Convention, to be held in Independence, November 11 to 14. It is estimated that twelve hundred persons will register for regular attendance at the sessions to be held in the First Christian Church. Of this number three hundred officers, teachers, and workers from the churches of Independence are expected to register.

Second Church

Pastor A. K. Dillee spoke at the morning service October 26, which was Decision Day, explaining the necessity of a church in everyone's life and extending to nonmembers an invitation to complete their family circles in the faith.

In the evening Elder C. Ed. Miller illustrated one of his Book of Mormon talks with lantern slide pictures.

All of the services November 2 at Second Church were well attended. Those who were present at the eight o'clock prayer meeting enjoyed a good service in charge of Brothers Anial Burke and J. T. Curtis.

The sacramental hour at eleven o'clock was marked by reverence and spirituality. Earl, the young son of Brother and Sister J. W. Willoughby, was blessed by Elders A. K. Dillee and D. A. Whiting.

The speaker in the evening was Elder W. A. McDowell.

During the week Miss Lora Weir planned and sponsored two Halloween parties in the basement of the church. The one for juniors and intermediates was held October 28, and the other for adults was on Friday night, October 31, about two hundred and thirty people attending. Miss Weir entered into this undertaking with her customary enthusiasm, and the parties conformed to precedent. Everyone likes church parties when Lora plans them.

Enoch Hill

Enoch Hill did not forget Halloween. All ages made merry in spooky array. Through the courtesy of Brothers Scott and Bullard, a vacant, two-story house on South Pleasant Street, was secured for a ghostly rendezvous. There the children of the church school division held tryst on Wednesday evening, the young people on Friday night, and the Girl Scouts on Saturday night. The house had the appearance of Halloween from attic to basement.

Brother C. Keohn suffered a stroke the middle of last week, and was found unconscious in the field. He remained unconscious until Saturday night when nine elders went to his bedside for a season of prayer. Since that hour he has been conscious and rational.

Teachers and officers of the church school of this district gave almost one hundred per cent response to the call of Zion's Training School in Religious Education, conducted at the Stone Church from October 19 to 30. And they are now in the home congregation, enthusiastic over the ideas they have gained and the facts they have learned. It is planned in the near future to initiate class work at six o'clock on Sunday to include many of the suggestions gleaned from the institute classes. Enoch Hill members would like to see the religious education institute conducted here more frequently than once each year.

The sacramental meeting Sunday morning was conducted by Associate Pastor R. E. Whitsett, who was assisted by members of the local priesthood. A period of peace and communion gave the Saints opportunity to reflect upon the significance in their lives of the covenant they have made with Christ.

The words of God to Moses, as given in latter-day revelation (Doctrine and Covenants 22:23): "This is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality, and eternal life of man," were used Sunday evening by Elder Earl F. Hoisington for a text. His talk presented the thought that we are engaged in the Lord's work and that he uses human agency to carry out his purposes. He has provided for man everything necessary for the carrying out of his work—the plan, the means, the opportunity. As men and God's children, it is our task to move forward and occupy the place he has given us.

In the report of the election of officers in the Idaho district conference, conducted during the reunion at Hagerman, in the month of August, and printed in Saints' Herald for September 10, page 1022, the name of the district secretary was unintentionally omitted. Sister Bethel Cato, of Meridian, a talented high school student, was elected to this office.

Brooklyn, New York

Since our last letter to the Herald Brooklyn Branch has closed another chapter in its history by the sale of the church located at Park Place and Schenectady Avenue. About twenty-five years ago this property was purchased and the Saints erected a church thereon, which at that time was adequate to their needs. Lately, however, it has been thought wise to sell and move to a new location. Accordingly a sale was completed, and by September 1 the new owners had taken possession. This leaves the branch here without a building, but few of the regular services have been missed. At present we are meeting in an Odd Fellows' Hall on Putnam Avenue near Ralph Avenue. Anyone wishing to attend services should get in touch with the pastor, T. J. Elliott, 1475 East Sixty-third Street, telephone Navarre 8749, to find the quickest means of reaching the new location.

Brooklyn's group of young people has been greatly diminished this fall, as many have gone to Graceland. The three who were there last year, Dorothy Elliott, Frances Harts-horn, and Billy Nichols, in the fashion of true Gracelanders, decided to return for a second year. And, also in the fashion of true Gracelanders, their influence has helped to draw three more to the old West Door. Paul Jacques, George Potts, and Barbara Mueller are now in attendance there. While we miss these young people in the activities of the branch, we are glad to have them go, and are eager to add more to their number, youths alert and interested in the church attending the church college. Another whom we hope to see go to Graceland a year from now is Walter Suydam. Walter is one of whose success at Graceland we need have no fear. He and his violin have been a recognized part of the services in solo work, as well as in the orchestra for the past few years.

The Saints have been fortunate in having several visitors in this branch in the last few weeks. Blanche R. Farrar, church librarian, who with her sister, Mrs. Wendell Forbes, of New York City, sailed for Europe September 6, spent a few days at the Howard Mousley home. Brother and Sister Peter S. Whalley stopped with the Elliots on their way to take up their duties in England. At the Wednesday night prayer service Brother Whalley was ordained to the office of high priest, T. J. Elliott officiating. In his testimony Brother Whalley expressed his willingness to give himself unreservedly in service to God and the church.

At the October sacramental service we enjoyed a talk by Apostle F. Henry Edwards, who had just returned from a visit with home folks in England and church work in the British Isles. President F. M. McDowell, sailing from a Mediterranean port, arrived later in the day from his European trip, and at the evening service he and Brother Edwards gave interesting talks. They were entertained at the home of Brother and Sister Charles W. Harris.

Two visitors whom the branch hopes to see often in the future are Ruth Ortleb, of Chicago, who is attending Columbia University, and Ralph Hall who has recently arrived here from New Zealand.

September 5, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William White, occurred the wedding of Violet White and Lester Abbott. Preceding the ceremony a solo was sung by Dorothy Potts, and the ceremony was performed by Elder Ephraim Squire. In the bridal party were Dorothy Potts, maid of honor, and Allan Binnie, best man. The young couple will live in Brooklyn.

Brother Charles Hield returned September 20 from his European tour and is beginning his fourth year as an instructor in New York University. Sister Hield and Shirley arrived on the 19th from their visit in the Middle West.

Although the sale of the church has deprived the Women's Department of a place in which to meet and carry on activities, the members are by no means idle. On Tuesday, every two weeks, a luncheon is held at one of the homes, the proceeds of which go into the department funds. Twenty were present at the first meeting, held at the home of Sister

Beardsley; and at the second, held at the home of Sister Katherine McKenzie, attendance was eighteen. Other features which show the work of the Women's Department are a bake sale which netted thirty-three dollars and a rummage sale which brought eighty-three dollars. Another bake sale is planned for the near future. Every woman in the branch is asked to give five dollars as a Thanksgiving offering to add to the building fund. Another enjoyable event sponsored by the Department of Women was the Eagle luncheon September 19. As an advertising feature, the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, Brooklyn's leading newspaper, gives a luncheon to groups such as ours, tickets costing fifty cents each and the proceeds being given to the group. One of the requirements is that there shall be at least one hundred tickets sold. This we were able to do, and the luncheon was such a success that we have arranged to have another in 1931 according to the same plan.

Mobile, Alabama

September 10, 1930, Mobile Branch voted to adopt the new program of Religious Education. The following officers were elected to take office October 1: Supervisor of Religious Education, G. E. Burt (pastor); supervisor of adult division, Franklin Steiner, associate pastor; supervisor of young people's division, Anna Mae Hough; supervisor of children's division, Verna Burt. The one service plan which combines the church school session and the morning preaching service has also been adopted, and we find that it promotes quiet.

Rally Day was observed September 28, and Apostle James A. Gillen was speaker. Special music for the morning service was given by Anna Mae Hough and Ethel Cooper, who sang "Face to face," accompanied at the piano by Elsie Smith. In the evening the choir sang "Creation," a favorite of Brother Gillen's, and after the sermon "Soft shades." The church was prettily decorated with cut flowers and ferns, and the dark-blue drapery around the choir loft, which the Women's Department purchased in time for the special day, added greatly to the appearance of the pulpit. Many who are not regular attendants and visitors responded to the invitation to be present. Every seat was filled, and all classroom chairs were brought into service.

Meetings continued throughout the week, Brother Gillen preaching fine missionary sermons to an attentive congregation each evening.

At the sacramental service the following Sunday, an unusually large crowd was present. A quiet, peaceful spirit prevailed, and the sacredness of the hour was felt by all. At the evening service Brother Gillen was again the speaker, closing the series of meetings with a forceful sermon on "The great need of the church." Special music at this time was rendered by Sister John Isaacks who sang "Give me thy heart." Sister Isaacks also assisted with special music for the meetings during the week.

The enrollment of Mobile Branch now numbers two hundred sixty-four, and the enrollment of the church school is two hundred, there being an average attendance of one hundred and sixty. Two classrooms in the new building are occupied by beginners, four and five years of age, and one room by the nursery class, including babies from six months to three years. The little building at the rear of the church is occupied by the primary and junior classes, six in all. A junior service is held each Sunday at the eleven o'clock hour except on the first Sunday of each month, when the boys and girls meet with their parents in the church for the sacramental service. Sister Burt has charge of the juniors and is making a service worth while in training the children with regard to behavior and helpfulness.

The flower garden between the two buildings, planted by the children under the supervision of their leader, is still pretty with many-colored zinnias and large red princess feathers. This little flower garden has not only added to the appearance of the grounds but has furnished cut flowers for the church for several months. The shrubs around the new building are growing nicely, and the lawn grass has spread rapidly and is now a thick green carpet around the church. The rich green of the shrubbery and the lawn against the gleaming white of the building gives the church a pretty setting. The paving of the street on which the church is located adds also to a nice appearance and connects two paved thoroughfares, making a convenient approach in all kinds of weather.

The Women's Department gave a lawn party at the church the evening of September 9, at which they cleared a nice sum for the building fund. They are now getting ready for another party scheduled for October 28, at which time they plan to have enough chicken gumbo for all.

During the summer months the women have been interested in learning pine needle basketry. Some pretty baskets, decorated with pine cones and having large handles, make attractive receptacles for cut flowers. The wall pockets, sewed fruit baskets, and hot dish mats made by these workers are also pretty and useful. The women are taking orders and making these articles for the benefit of the building fund. The two groups of women met the afternoon of October 8 at the home of Sister Isaacks, to get acquainted and bid her welcome to Mobile. We are glad to have the Isaacks family here for the winter.

IRENE DAY.

Independence Teachers and Workers Go to School

"There is work within the vineyard;
There is service to be done."

Four hundred voices sang the words of the hymn, "Master, use me," and the hearts of the singers were full of purposefulness, and four hundred heads bowed in the old Stone Church for a moment of silent prayer. The hour was ten o'clock last Thursday night, and Zion's Training School in Religious Education was over for another year. For the tenth time in succession in the last two weeks the doors of the church were thrown open, and the workers after a last handshake separated to their many homes.

The worth of this school is estimated more in terms of fellowship and understanding now existing between the leaders and teachers of the congregations of Independence and vicinity than in credits earned toward certificates. All those who regularly attended class and many of the visitors are, as a result of the instruction and discussion of the group, fired with new hope and courage as they return to their home congregations; they plan to apply the things they have learned. Many were the public discussions and private conversations concerning actual situations, and such expressions were frequently heard in class and between classes as: "I wonder if any other branch has this condition to combat"; "Our biggest Sunday morning problem is this"; "How about adult activities?" "We have an active group of young people who think . . ."

In Independence there are at present two hundred and ten religious education workers—teachers and officers—active in nine congregations. Numbers of these and their friends were present every night and participated in the class work, forums, age group considerations, and worship exercises of the institute. Other evening activities were temporarily put aside by the students and instructors of the training school. The cooperative spirit of every member throughout the sessions was commendable.

"I think it was the best religious education institute we have yet had in Independence," stated a worker of thirty years' experience with boys and girls of the Stone Church congregation, "because this year we seem to be getting down to a consideration of the real needs of our church school. In our study groups we are considering the actual problems that arise every Sunday, and other days too, of the year. As a result, I think, the teachers will be better able to build up programs for their particular classes which will have real effectiveness in the lives of the young people."

The machinery of this ten-day institute, under the guidance of Elder George G. Lewis, moved smoothly. Class periods were occasionally interspersed with worship exercises, and musicians were generous in their efforts to heighten the beauty and solemnity of these occasions.

Again the Stone Church has housed a school for teachers and workers. New friendships and understandings have been established, and students, according to their choices, have learned the ways of health, a deeper appreciation of the Bible, a better understanding of the functions of the priesthood and the workings of the program of Religious Education. Surely, as a result, the church in the center place will speed forward.

With the energetic wife of a local pastor, the workers agree: "Such schools as this are splendid. They build friendships. They add to our experiences and knowledges. We can not estimate their worth."

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

An outstanding event of the young people's meetings, sponsored by the O. B. K. Council from October 19 to 26, was the honor roll service.

Every evening a special group was invited to the platform. Sunday came the stake officers; Monday, the O. B. K. Council; Tuesday, the young women; Wednesday, the young men; Thursday and Friday, the pastors and their wives. Sunday evening was roll of honor night. There were fifty-three who had not missed a night in the series. Conspicuous among this group were fine showings from Chelsea and Mount Washington Churches.

Previous to the honor roll service the O. B. K's in each group had voted to select from outside the organization the local workers who had been the most help and inspiration to them. The following people were selected and invited to the platform: From Central, C. E. Wight, C. C. Babb, Sister C. C. Babb; from Second Church, Sister P. J. Raw; from Fourth Church, J. O. Worden and E. W. Lloyd; from Bennington, Orville Helm and Harley Sampson; from Mount Washington, Sister H. A. Gould and May Price; from Northeast, Henry Davis and Sister Burge; from Gladstone, Elijah Day and Bob Davis; from North Kansas City, H. R. Higdon; from Argentine, R. E. Browne and Sister Shireman; from Armourdale, R. L. Goold; from Chelsea, R. J. Crayne and Abe Sears; from Grandview, Joseph Coakley and Juno Cook; from Heathwood, Clair Green and Blanche Green; from Malvern Hill, Finis Beebe; and from Quindaro, H. A. Higgins, Ernest Hawkins, and A. H. Hallier.

As the young people think back over the many inspiring thoughts of the meetings, they are conscious of many challenges—the challenge to live a re-born life, the challenge to demonstrate individually and socially the life of Christ in the world today, the challenge to do for others as Christ has done for us: To take up the cross and the challenge to be a rebel for God, a rebel against all ungodliness. "Now God be thanked—he hath matched us with this hour," wrote Rupert Brooke.

A large number listened to a helpful sermon by Apostle James A. Gillen last Sunday evening. The choir on this night gave its regular monthly concert and then left to prepare for a radio program which was given from ten to eleven o'clock.

Next Sunday evening President F. M. McDowell will give the address opening our third Stake Leadership School. The dates of this school include November 9 to 21. Six courses, three each week, will be offered. The members are urged to enroll for the two courses which they most need.

The sympathy of Central congregation and all Kansas City Stake is extended to the family of Sister Josephine M. Walker. Sister Walker departed this life only a few days ago. She was a Saint in thought and action.

To Lay Corner Stone of New Sanitarium

The ceremony for laying the corner stone of the new Sanitarium unit, new under construction, is being planned for 2:00 o'clock, November 11, Armistice Day.

Concrete for the third floor of the new building has been poured, and it is expected that brick work for the walls of the building will be begun this week.

With favorable weather, it is expected that the superstructure will be completed and the building practically inclosed by January 1, and the work is being rushed with all possible speed to this end.

The ceremony of laying the corner stone, which will be placed at the right of the entrance facing the north, will be in charge of F. M. Smith, president of the Sanitarium Board, and officials of the city and Independence Chamber of Commerce will take a prominent part in the actual work of laying the corner stone and in making the principal addresses planned for the occasion.

A copper box 11½ inches square will be used as the receptacle for the documents bearing record of the occasion and giving the history of the institution. This box will be placed in the recess prepared in the block of stone to be used for the corner stone and will be hermetically sealed before being placed therein. The corner stone itself will then be sealed and brick masons will build up the corner with brick which forms the wall.

All citizens of Independence are invited to attend, and if the weather permits a large crowd is expected to witness the ceremony and enjoy the appropriate program which is being prepared.

The laying of the corner stone marks the reaching of another milestone in the progress of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, as it has sought to extend its usefulness as a service institution, owned and directed by the church.

The Floyds Near Their Destination

On board the Alesia, Farber Line, Constanza, Roumania, October 8.—As you see by the heading we are about through with our long journey and are now in the Black Sea. It was beautiful coming through the Bosphorus, and old Constantinople, now called Stamboul, is a place to be remembered.

Although this is the ninth time I have crossed the Atlantic and gone the full length of the Mediterranean Sea, this has been like a new trip to me, as we came a different route and have seen new places. It is fine traveling again, not at all like the trip when I returned to Palestine in 1919 after the World War. Now one has every comfort and luxury on board. There is music every day, an orchestra playing at meal time and in the evening and morning when we are not in port.

In a former letter I think I told you that this trip I am not alone. My son, Albert W. L. Floyd, and grandson, Howard, are with me, so I go on shore more often than when I make the trip alone. We took a nice drive over town and out to the summer palace of the king yesterday. We are stopping here three days, leaving tomorrow afternoon. This is our last stopping place. Next comes Jaffa, our destination.

We stopped at the Azores Islands: 1. Horta, 2. Angora, 3. Torta Delyanda; also at Algiers, a fine city, the Paris of Africa, and the seaport Piræus of Greece. As we go back through the Bosphorus, we will not make any stops but will pass Stamboul again.

It is a lovely sight coming through from the Mediterranean

Sea to the Black Sea. We had our roughest night on the Black Sea, but early in the morning entered the harbor of Constanza Roumania, where they are loading wheat.

MARY J. FLOYD.

Soldiers' Grove, Wisconsin

Saints of this vicinity were surprised one day with the announcement of the coming into our midst of Apostle D. T. Williams. With him he brought a stereopticon machine and pictures on the history of the church.

Soldiers' Grove Branch is located about three and one half miles from town, and the building is not electrically lighted. Therefore two of the brothers went to Soldiers' Grove to see if we could get a place for the lecture and showing of the pictures. We were fortunate in securing the Electric Theater, a fine place for a lecture of this kind. On October 9 Brother Williams gave a wonderful lecture, beginning with the incident of the boy Joseph going to the woods to pray. There were scenes which told of the bringing forth of the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated, and many which portrayed the suffering of the Saints, as well as those of points of historic interest to the church.

The lecture brought courage and cheer to the members and did much to change the trend of thought in this community toward the latter-day work. Many here were much prejudiced against the church and its doctrines. We were invited to return for other lectures. We rejoice because of the changed attitude of many of our neighbors.

WESLEY DAVENPORT.

Pittsburgh Priesthood Institute

Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania.—In the Pittsburgh District a priesthood institute was held October 18 and 19, and the men were made happy that we could have present as speakers Apostle Clyde F. Ellis and District President Thomas M. Carr.

The services on Sunday morning were prayer meeting at 8.30, Sunday school at ten o'clock, and at eleven Apostle Ellis addressed the gathering, bringing a message filled with wisdom and inspiration of great benefit to the priesthood and to all members.

This was followed at 2.30 by another sermon by Brother Ellis, which contained a fund of sound advice and was very uplifting and instructive to the Saints. In the evening he gave an illustrated lecture on the South Sea Islands. His visit was much appreciated by the Saints, for he has endeared himself in the hearts of all. He and Elder Carr are visiting all the branches in this district.

EARL BRENNAN.

Houston, Texas

Houston Branch is progressing perhaps not so rapidly as it could, but it is not at a standstill. There are a number who are investigating the work, and from time to time some one is baptized. The sad thing which confronts the branch is the fact that many are not active. Of course each one thinks his excuse for inactivity is sufficient, but all are needed, and we assure them that they are missed. God asks of his own a willing and consecrated service.

Apostle James A. Gillen made Houston members happy by his presence during a recent week. We have great esteem and love for him, and the thoughts he gave will linger long. We wait patiently for the appearance in our midst of his smiling face and undertsanding heart, and are sure God will bless the messages he gives us.

The Saints were saddened last sacramental service to hear of the sudden death of Brother Bevills. This brother had belonged to the church but a short time, yet he worked diligently.

The Saints welcome Brother and Sister J. H. Post back to Houston. They were missed while away.

MRS. ETTA SMITH.

Conference Minutes

LONDON DISTRICT.—Annual conference was held in Saint Thomas October 11 and 12. The business session opened Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Apostle Clyde F. Ellis in charge. The main points of business discussed were the new program of Religious Education, and the general church request that each branch keep track of all contributions of its members, in order that credit may be given each member for contributions made. The officers elected for the coming year are as follows: District president, James Winegarden, London; first counselor, J. E. MacGregor, London; second counselor, C. L. Duesling, London; secretary, Clara Schlotzhauer, Stratford; treasurer, Clarence Weeks, Delhi; superintendent of church schools, C. L. Duesling; musical director, D. A. Withrow, Stratford; bishop's agent, Clarence Weeks, Delhi. Saturday evening's program consisted of instructive lectures on church school work, Apostle C. F. Ellis speaking on "Planning the church program"; Arlo Hodgson on "Socializing the group"; Ray Best on "The adult church school"; and Grace Perry on "The junior church school." Musical numbers during the evening were provided by Bert Richardson, who sang a solo; Mrs. Preston Ford, a solo; and an instrumental duet by Harold and Raymond Neal. The prayer service commenced at 9 o'clock Sunday morning with District Missionary William I. Fligg in charge. This meeting proved a spiritual feast to all. Apostle Ellis occupied the pulpit at the morning and evening preaching service, while Bishop J. C. Dent occupied in the afternoon. A vote of thanks was tendered a nonmember friend for a beautiful bouquet of dahlias which he had donated to the conference. The entire conference seemed so encouraging and uplifting that when the last meeting was over the Saints were reluctant to leave the scene and go to their homes. Apostle Ellis remained in Saint Thomas to hold special services in the local church on Monday and Tuesday evening.

NORTHERN WISCONSIN.—District conference convened with Black River Falls Branch, October 11 and 12. Started with prayer service at 10 o'clock October 11, William Shakespeare, district president, in charge. Round table occurred at 11 o'clock, C. J. Hunt in charge; business session at 2 o'clock. W. E. Shakespeare and C. J. Hunt were chosen to preside over the conference. Minutes of last conference and joint reunion were read and accepted. Statistical, district officers', and ministerial reports were read, there being good and complete reports from all. The following resolution was moved by C. J. Hunt, supported by Lewis Updike, and carried unanimously: Whereas the church through the Presiding Bishopric (over a year ago) prepared and published a complete and useful local funds account book and also a special receipt book, and have urged that they be used in collecting and expending all funds of the district and branches and separately organized groups, therefore, be it resolved, that the Northern Wisconsin District approve the aforesaid request of the Presiding Bishopric and the action of the last General Conference, and that we adopt the use of the regularly provided books and report blanks, for the branches and district of Northern Wisconsin. Summarized bishop's agent's report by C. J. Hunt was adopted. It was moved by O. A. Knapp and seconded by J. H. Howe that the conference accept the recommendation by Frankfort Branch of the following names for ordination: Clive Metcalf to the office of elder; William C. Holden, priest; Willis Metcalf, teacher. The recommendation was approved and the ordinations provided for. Motion was made by Mary Mair and seconded by J. H. Howe that the conference approve the recommendation coming from Goodnow Branch, that Paul Utneher be ordained to the office of priest, and that we recommend to the officers of Lamoni Branch that his ordination be provided for. This carried unanimously. Recommendation by District President W. E. Shakespeare that Isaac Brockman be ordained to the office of elder was accepted and the ordination provided for. The motion was made by Sister G. E. Hemstock, seconded by I. H. Bowen. District officers elected are: President, W. E. Shakespeare; secretary, Mary Mair; treasurer of budget, Horace Scafe; chorister, W. E. Shakespeare; librarian, Sister G. E. Hemstock; member of auditing committee, Sister Clinton Scafe. The choice of a district director of Religious Education was left to the district presidency. Next conference was voted to be held with Frankfort Branch, time to be left to the district presidency. Preaching at 8 o'clock was by W. E. Shakespeare. Sunday prayer service convened at 9 o'clock, C. J. Hunt and I. H. Bowen in charge; Sunday school at 10 o'clock in charge of W. E. Shakespeare, preaching at 11 o'clock by Bishop C. J. Hunt. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the brothers before mentioned were ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Hunt and Elders I. H. Bowen, S. E. Livingston, and W. E. Shakespeare, except William Holden who was not present. Preaching at 2.30 was by W. E. Shakespeare, at 8 o'clock by C. J. Hunt. The Sunday evening meeting brought the conference to an end.

Our Departed Ones

HUDSON.—Ernest Oliver Hudson, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Hudson, of Eldorado, Kansas, was born at Iuka, Kansas, December 31, 1910. He died October 8, 1930. Was baptized into the church in 1926. During a playful scuffle at the conclusion of a party at his home, Ernest, age nineteen years and a senior in the Eldorado High School, stepped backwards into the glass pane of a door, breaking the glass and inflicting a wound that severed the jugular vein. He died about an hour later at Saint Luke's Hospital from the effects of loss of blood. Ernest had been a member of a Boy Scout troop there for years and at the time of his death was a leader of one of those organizations. He was a splendid friend and leader for the younger boys. His work with scouts brought him in contact with the Eldorado business men who sponsor the troops. He lived in Eldorado most of his life, and all who knew him recognized him as an honest and worthy friend. The funeral was in charge of the Reverend Seimerd, of the Presbyterian Church; the sermon by Elder A. E. Stoft, of Wichita, Kansas. This funeral was one of the largest ever held in Eldorado.

She first married David Walker, who passed away in 1910. June 9, 1912, she became the wife of James Alfred Loucks, of Trossachs, Saskatchewan. She passed away August 13, 1930, at the general hospital, Weyburn, Saskatchewan. Left to mourn are her husband, eight children, sixteen grandchildren, and many friends.

SURBROOK.—Jane Potts was born at Port Huron, Michigan, February 24, 1841. Died October 19, 1930, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Whitehead. She married Peter W. Surbrook, of Lexington, Michigan, September 6, 1857, and he departed this life January 16, 1906. To them fourteen children were born, ten of whom are living: William Surbrook, Lexington; Mrs. Dora Mark, Tawas City, Michigan; Mrs. Sylvia Flynn, Crosswell, Michigan; Mrs. Emma Whitehead, Crosswell; Mrs. Nellie Sunny, Crosswell; Mrs. Bessie Gilbert, Crosswell; Mrs. Pearl Dimmick, Crosswell; Myron Surbrook, Detroit; Mrs. Maud Doner, Detroit; and P. J. Surbrook, Mount Pleasant; also fifty-eight grandchildren and thirty great-grandchildren as well as many friends. In early life she became a member of the church and was a devoted Christian. She was a true and loyal wife and kind mother, and was loved by all who knew her. The funeral sermon was by William M. Grice. Interment in Lexington Cemetery.

How Decision Day Worked in One Branch

From Brother H. L. Livingston, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, we have received a letter which tells of the results of Decision Day in the Philadelphia Branch. The letter so succinctly sets out the day's achievement that I here quote the whole letter, for it surely will be of general interest, and may be of more than local value in the way of encouragement to make Decision Day of greater value.

Brother Livingston writes:

"Following out the suggestion in your circular of September 15, we made Sunday "Decision Day," with the result of eight baptisms. The church was crowded, and a very good spirit prevailed and directed the activities. Not only were there a large number of Latter Day Saints, but a very splendid number of visitors, friends, and relatives of the candidates to witness the event. Three of the converts were on our prospect list secured some time ago.

"We made a special service for baptisms and used the entire time for that purpose. The decorum was perfect, even though there were many young children present.

"The best part of the day, or rather the best result of this day, was the new contacts that we made in the homes of the new converts. We were warmly invited to visit them, and one lady, the mother of one convert, told me that she would expect visits from me and that she would attend church as regularly as possible hereafter. To my surprise I found that instead of the Prospect List being decreased by the baptisms, it will be greatly increased.

"The baptisms Sunday made a total of forty new converts in this branch for 1930, and I have found that these baptismal services have helped the branch very much. The Saints are stirred with a fine feeling of missionary zeal. I hear them talking about this person, friend, or their relatives that they are trying to bring into the church; and, Brother Smith, when our people are continually talking about the gospel they can not help being benefited.

"God has been very good to us here, and we hope to keep the work moving, that he may be able to give further increase, for the field is surely ripe, ready for harvest."

We shall watch with interest the reports from other branches where Decision Day was definitely set and ceremonially celebrated.

The fixing of a day for decisions can not but be of value, for it gives a goal to work for, and speeds up activities, arouses additional interest, and widens the numbers who are interested in reaching the goals set.

One of Our Principal Inventions

The other day I happened to be looking over a list of "Principal American inventions." Down near the end of the list I came to this entry: "Machine gun . . . Isaac N. Lewis . . . 1912."

1912 . . . and only two years later the nations of the earth were engaged in a conflict in which such an invention as this was put to its most destructive use. Row upon row of soldiery were mowed down by its voracious fire. The killing power of man had been multiplied many times. And in the four years of the World War the machine gun had established itself as one of the most deadly among weapons of warfare.

As I read, I wondered how it would feel to be the inventor of the machine gun. I wondered how it would feel to know that my mind had created an instrument so well adapted to the purposes of destruction and death that I had made it possible for the ravages of war to be increased a hundredfold.

It is now a dozen years since that greatest of wars ended. But in those years the machine gun has continued in use. It has spoken again and again from the hands of the lawless in their war upon organized society. The vicious rattle of its deadly fire has struck fear to the hearts of peaceable citizens. It is still and shall always be the instrument of death.

There are other inventions and other names on the list which I was reading—Morse, Bell, Edison, and others whose work and whose products have amplified the knowledge and the enlightenment of the world, upon whom the blessings of millions fall, and who have taken justifiable satisfaction in their service. But I have wondered how it would feel to be the inventor of the machine gun.

Where a Prospect List Is Working

An excellent letter concerning the use of the prospect list comes to us, by courtesy of a fellow editor, from Henry L. Livingstone, the pastor of Philadelphia Branch. We would particularly wish to commend the unnamed sister for her action in contributing to the list. A part of the letter follows:

Last Saturday one sister came to me and told me of a young lad that was talking of baptism and wanted me to go see him. I went, and the result was a baptism. Not only this but we were able to talk about the church to the boy's parents, and his mother said that she never enjoyed anything so much in her life. She told her neighbor that she would like to have had us over to see her sister before she went to the hospital, for she thought we would make her feel better. The thing that impressed me was the fact that this splendid acquaintance would never have been made had not the sister pointed out the prospect. Who knows how far-reaching the effect of that visit will be? If the Saints tell us when these cases arise, much good can be accomplished. Every member can do good for the church. We have so many prospects that we will have to organize definitely to visit them properly.

A Warning by Conditions

In a letter from a district president, recently received at the office, language is used which touches the heart. He says: "We are very glad to report that conditions are good as far as the spiritual conditions are concerned. We regret to say, however, that so many of our people are out of work. It is really deplorable; and when we see how much suffering there is, it makes our hearts ache for those who are so unfortunate. Considering the conditions, the coal fields having practically shut down, and the depression in industrial lines, I really marvel that the Saints are so patient, and that they do as well as they do in their financial contributions. We hope conditions will soon improve."

This brief story probably reflects conditions in several localities, and it brings again to the fore thoughts of what might have been if we as a people had moved out along lines we should have done in response to divine mandates and suggestions. For reasons difficult to analyze we have apparently been reluctant, not to say fearful, to move out along lines of industrial stewardship and compact organization for greater mutual helpfulness. Had we done so years ago, I doubt not that we could easily take care of the matter of unemployment among our people.

But we have moved too slowly and reluctantly if at all. And we are now paying one of the prices, and may yet have more to pay for our dilatoriness.

The question arises, Shall or will we profit by our experiences, and be from now on more prompt in responding to divine directions?

Our people are patient under suffering; they have always been. And I hope, earnestly hope, that they are clinging tenaciously to a sense of responsibility to Deity, and that duty along all lines of church relationship will loom large in their lives. Because we may have failed in the past to move with promptness in obedience makes it necessary now that we be the more alert. The pressure of the times, mild in comparison to what they might be, reminds us of unfulfilled duties, and should spur us to greater righteousness, finer religious zeal, and a keener desire to do our full duty.

Centralia and Its New Hydro-electric Plant

I recently had opportunity to see a special edition of the Centralia Daily Chronicle, September 30, in which at considerable length there is told the story of an outstanding municipal achievement.

The city of Centralia, Washington, led by some wide-awake officials, has made the bold step of building and owning a hydro-electric generating plant which guarantees a supply of low-priced power which will not only supply current at fair prices for domestic purposes, but ample quantities for industrial purposes. This is of great importance to Centralia, since the lumber business continually decreases, and other industries are needed to increase the commercial activity of the city. But with dependable electric power at fair rates, it is not at all unlikely that there will be attracted to Centralia industries which will swell the income and the amount of labor utilized. The city is to be congratulated on its forward move, and the boldness with which it has moved into the field of municipal ownership of public utilities.

A matter of special interest in this case to us is that the city clerk of Centralia is Sister Jessie Ward, and as an officer she has had an active role to play in the development and progress of the plans. A picture reproduced in the Chronicle of the issue mentioned shows the five "city officials and department heads on whom most of the burden of carrying through the mammoth project has fallen," and among the five is Sister Ward. We congratulate her on the opportunity to serve her home city in so important an undertaking, and from our own knowledge of her ability we readily venture the guess that she did her part well.

We congratulate Centralia on having forward-looking officials who are willing to whole-souledly and unreservedly throw themselves into developments looking towards the future welfare of the city, and who are willing in their service to submerge self-serving interests below the community interests.

Why the Church Must Teach

Religion Is a Fundamental Need of Man

By F. M. McDowell

The foremost authorities in history and social life maintain that they have discovered no human group anywhere or at any time that was not definitely religious. Arising out of man's needs or revealed to him as he needs—perhaps both—religion and religious attitudes seem ever a part of man's total life.

Religion Essential to a Stabilized Personality

To build a strong, stable, healthy personality is a task for a master builder. Doctors, educators, and ministers agree that such an achievement requires the presence of some strong integrating and motivating force. Somehow the various and apparently conflicting elements of one's personality must be unified and woven together into a symmetrical whole. Life must be furnished with a compelling motive, urged onward by some great purpose, urged upward through its devotion to some worthy cause.

When it comes to unifying life and giving it an impelling purpose, there is no other resource that can compare with religion. Doctor William S. Sadler, a noted physician, says, "Religion is one of the basic human emotions. It is able to dominate the entire personality and to control the most powerful feelings and emotions—it is the master mind cure, the superlative therapeutic agent designed to relieve the mental attitudes of fear, doubt, unrest, dissatisfaction, monotony, and loneliness."

Religion the Best Guarantee of Morality

Morality depends upon three basic elements: habits, ideals, and motives; and the greatest of these is "motives."

Habit alone is not a sufficient guarantee of moral stability. Witness the lapse in the habits of athletes after the training season or the variance between the personal habits of the student under the strict control of the teacher and the same individual a few years later when left to his own whims.

There must be something back of a habit as a safeguard to morality, and that something is an ideal. The Iowa Plan of Character Education was deemed worthy of a Twenty Thousand Dollar Prize. Its contribution may be summed up in a sentence. If education is to furnish a safe basis for morality and character, let it "furnish the mind richly with symbols of right living."

This is good as far as it goes, but there is still lacking the most important element in morality—the motive. Says Fiske, "If the love of Christ is real in the heart of youth, the Christ ideal, concrete, personalized, powerful, will dominate his imagination, control his imagery, and motivate his conduct. There is no other sure basis for Christian character."

Life must be spiritualized before it is morally safe.

Religion Necessary in the Development of Character

Christian character is not inevitable but it is attainable. Such a character is not ready made. One is not born with it. On the contrary, character partakes of the "candidate" quality. The greatest thing about an individual is his power to become.

One is born with a capacity to learn, to grow, to become. What he becomes is determined largely by the forces which are brought to bear upon his life. The supervision and direction of these forces to the end that a Christian character may result is the task of educational agencies.

We hear much these days of "moral education" and "social education." These movements have done much to reclaim our public education from a rather narrow commercialized type of instruction that frequently exists. Under their influence, teachers have been led to consider the welfare of the child and the safety of society as paramount to the making of money as an end in education.

Many educators now agree that moral education and social education, however excellent, will not guarantee the highest type of Christian character. Something must be added, and that something is religious education. Character must be undergirded by that sort of belief in God and man that we can call distinctly religious for "God in the religious sense of the word is to human personality what food and breath are to the body. We sicken and die without Him."

The safety of our civilization today and the new society that is to be the kingdom of God's good will upon the earth, awaits a certain quality of manhood. We can never have a reborn society without reborn men. We shall never produce reborn men without instilling in them a God-consciousness. Religion is a fundamental need of man. His happiness and welfare, the happiness and welfare of society depend in the last analysis upon religion, a religion that will stand the test of time and the light of intelligence, but, nevertheless, religion.

The task of weaving into life this fundamental element so that a stable personality, a sound morality, and a Christian character will result is fundamentally the task of the church.

The church must teach.

The Oblation

By A. Carmichael

The day of rest! The day of all days—the day that is emblematic of the crowning triumph of the Master's mighty work—the day on which the atonement of the human race was finished—the first day of the week.

The Voice of God

Regarding this day comes the voice of God to us his people:

And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High; nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days, and at all times; but remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments, unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren, and before the Lord. And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart, that thy fasting may be perfect; or in other words, that thy joy may be full. Verily this is fasting and prayer; or, in other words, rejoicing and prayer.

A Definite Message

There is no dubiety in this statement as to the duty of the Saints. There is no "may" in it. Every command comes to us with a "shall." "Thou shalt [not may] go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; . . . thy vows shall be [not may be] offered up in righteousness on all days, and at all times; but remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt [not may] offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments, unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren, and before the Lord. And on this day thou shalt [not may] do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart, that thy fasting may be perfect."

The Two Outstanding Things

Two things stand out in this command which the Lord requires of us on this his holy day. Two things we must offer to God:

- (a) our oblation
- and
- (b) our sacraments

An oblation is an offering—a sacrifice. We have already paid our tithes and our surplus as required by the law. We now come to make an offering, an oblation, or a sacrifice. We bring back to God the thing he brought to us—a sacrifice. For he gave the dearest thing he had, his beloved Son. No father could give more. He sacrificed for us; we must show our gratitude by sacrificing for him. Having offered up our oblation, we then must offer our

Sacraments

By sacrament we mean a solemn covenant.

Having demonstrated in a practical manner our love for our fellow man by sacrificing for his needs, we are now entitled, yes, privileged, to make a solemn covenant with God through his Son Jesus Christ as to what we will do. We make the most solemn agreement that could be made by mortal man.

The Part of the Priesthood

Let the priesthood note here the part they take in this holy compact. While Christ stands as the only infallible Savior between the human family and our heavenly Father, the priesthood stands, in a limited way, as saviors between Christ and the people to whom they minister.

The priest officiating repeats the covenant or sacrament saying:

We [the priest or priests administering the sacrament] ask thee in the name of thy Son Jesus Christ [for through Christ come all blessings], to bless and sanctify this bread to the souls of all those [the congregation] who partake of it, that they [the congregation] may eat in remembrance of the body of thy Son, and [now comes sacrament or sacred covenant that the congregation will make] witness unto thee, O God, the Eternal Father, that they [the congregation] are willing to take upon them [the congregation] the name of thy Son, and always remember him and keep his commandments which he has given them [the congregation], that they may always have his Spirit to be with them. Amen.

Note the sacred agreement of the covenant or sacrament.

First, the priest asks God through His Son to bless and sanctify (make holy) the bread. And then the congregation "witness" (bear testimony, give evidence) to God that they will do these things:

- (a) Take upon them the name of Jesus Christ.
- (b) Remember him.
- (c) Keep his commandments which he has given.

They do this that certain needful results will follow:

They will have God's Spirit to be with them always.

The priest stands between the Lord Jesus Christ and the congregation over which he presides, pleading with and for them. What manner of a man should he be—a Savior to his little congregation: lifting up one of his hands to Christ and reaching down with the other to his congregation, endeavoring to bridge the gap between them and their Master, through this most sacred of all ceremonies, the Lord's supper.

A Solemn Compact

Lightness of thought, of speech, and of action have no place here. Standing in the presence of the King of kings; coming to him with uncovered heads and bowing in his presence, surely we ought to make an offering commensurate with the occasion—an offering that will witness unto God and humanity that we do desire really to sacrifice for our needy brethren; and having so done we can lift our faces toward the throne of God and take fearlessly, courageously, and honestly the sacred pledge, the words of which have been given us direct from God himself.

Saints, reverently and humbly come to the table of the sacraments of our Lord. Meet him there on his terms and receive his divine blessings.

Morals and Movies

By Howard W. Harder

PART II.—CONCERNING EDUCATION

False and Harmful Teaching

In the moving pictures, divorce is always shown as pleasurable and easily secured. It is difficult to believe that two people who have lived as one and suffered and rejoiced together over their ups and downs for even so short a time as one year can suddenly decide to separate without a single pang of regret. And yet such suffering is rarely shown on the screen. To everyone who sees, the movies shout the glad tidings that the remedy for incompatibility is divorce. Very rarely is there portrayed on the screen any serious effort at reconciliation. When you make divorce fascinating, you stand with the forces that hurt the family. When you hurt the family, you strike at the very foundation of our society. Divorce as a device to separate one person from another who has violated the marriage vows is a far different thing from divorce as a means of merely trying to find another more likeable companion.

The movies are replete with marriages of convenience—marriages to gain wealth, title, rank, position, or social advantage. Obviously, such marriages are not ethically moral. Usually love does not follow such unions. And yet from the apparent satisfactions which follow such screen marriages, the young person of today can not be blamed for thinking well of this particular sort of marriage.

Very often in films the climax of the love-making scene comes when the girl half reclines on a sofa or lounge and the man leans over her showering her neck and lips with kisses. This love-making posture I believe to be positively pernicious in its suggestiveness, and it probably has indicated to many a young girl the exact method to be used in capturing her lover. Why not? Since this maneuver is so successful on the screen, why should it not work in life? It does—and the sad result of such methods is seen every day in our divorce courts.

The Unfortunate Effects on the Young

The extravagant dress of movie actresses is a challenge to any girl. Since the average girl can not have such clothes as she sees her favorite actress wear on the screen, she must find a way to provide an approximation. The credit clothier offers the way out. But it usually is not until the young lady has contracted to buy several expensive garments that she finds herself unable from her regular earnings to keep up the necessary payments. She must have more money. Remembering her movie experience, and following suit, she easily finds it—at the expense of her early training in self-respect and morals.

The private lives of the popular stars exercise a very considerable influence on all, especially on the child. Everyone knows about the actors in the movies. It is quite the thing to be up on all the doings of the idols of the moment. Their pictures, their divorces, their scandals are features in every newspaper. Their biographies appear in the most reputable magazines. They furnish the model for styles of hairdressing, for clothes, for sports, for love making, for heartbreaking. They are, in short, the models par excellence for everything that appears desirable to the youthful shiek or flapper.

Artificiality of the Movie Life

Moving pictures are not true to life. How many of us have ever lived in an atmosphere similar to that created for us by a "Western" film? How many of us know society as pictured in dress suits and evening gowns? How many of us are familiar enough with the dressing rooms of chorus girls to meet on a common ground pictures showing such scenes? These types of pictures do not reflect the average life. They show an artificial, false life into which most of us do not enter and in which the majority of people have little interest. Nor do the situations met in these films bring to us solutions for our everyday problems. The stars of our feature pictures do not do the things we do. Will the things they do ever seem so desirable to us that they will eventually become the things we do?

"Thou shalt not kill" is a commandment as old as the Hebrew law, yet in the "play acting" of those before us on the screen murder seems so necessary as to be indispensable to the plot. Killing is such a convenient method of getting rid of some one who interferes with the pleasure or opportunities of the principals in our pictures that almost every film is punctured with a bullet or a dagger.

Viciousness of the Movie Example

Bernadine Freeman, in a recent article, states: "What is the moral effect of the movies upon growing, and even mature minds? We can judge only by evidence and inference. We do know that the movie contains the most sexually suggestive elements. It shows lawlessness and crime and drunkenness in all their horror and brutality. Home and family relations are made subjects of jest and ridicule. The movie serves to glorify indecency and immorality solely by its graphic presentation. We know surely that crime by youthful offenders has increased tremendously in the last twenty years. The blame for this can not be attributed wholly to the movies. There have been contributing factors. But no other single element has continually, consciously, and consistently presented to the youth of the Nation, pictures of licentiousness and crime every night of the week."

With such a condition it is not difficult to predict the ghastly spectre of a race of children made not only unmoral, but immoral, by the deleterious environment and suggestive forces which surround them. The child with no power of discrimination can not discard as immoral that which he does not know to be so. Power of discrimination comes only by discriminating. And in order to discriminate, there must be training in making choices, choices between things or actions of differing value. This places the burden squarely upon those primary agencies of child welfare, the home, the church, the school. Most motion pictures of crime carry a moral to the intelligent adult; but that which impresses the mind of the mentally young, and colors their imagination, is the excitement and bravado accompanying the criminal act, while the moral goes unheeded.

There are certain situations in life entirely appropriate for dramatic treatment which children should not see. Herein arises the matter of parental responsibility. We do not place in the hands of our children all books, nor let them see all stage plays. Such oversight is even more essential in pictures. We find that educators as far back as Quintillian, Aristotle, and Plato have insisted upon including in the reading of adolescents only such passages as would inculcate ideals and build character. Have we advanced to such a stage that we may without qualms send our children to view the thrills and excitement of the hectic dramas with the full belief that a beneficent power will, notwithstanding, mold in them the foundations of a solid morality?

The influence of the motion picture is so great that truth and error, good and bad, are stored away with equal tenacity. The movie exerts such a great impression upon the child's mentality because it provides vicarious experience. The child accepts as black what is labeled black. He does not refuse to accept false logic. He does not distinguish vulgarity from humor.

The Benefits of Movies

I do not want you to think I believe the movies are all bad, that there is no good in them. I do not think that. In many ways movies are helpful to us.

Perhaps the greatest real good to humanity from moving pictures lies in the vicarious satisfactions to be derived. Pictures show us a make-believe world, and when viewing them we enter into that world and identify ourselves with the action and often feel almost as though we were there in person and could have some bearing on the results of the plot. In this way we tend to forget our own life situations and become for the time beings apart from our bodies.

Many of us at times suffer great discouragement and see life only through "blue glasses." We do not seem to accomplish what we would; we feel we never have had a chance; we are getting on in years and begin to realize our ideals can not be reached. At such times the movies "take us out of ourselves," and we become identified with the hero or heroine, and for an hour we are children again, "living in the land of make-believe." At such times, too, we take a new lease on life through having had the happy experience of achievement. True, this satisfaction comes vicariously, but it is none the less real and valuable. Drab life is made bearable by this hour spent in the realm of phantasy.

Love and fighting are two basic human emotions. Hence, when boys and girls in their teens flock to the motion picture theaters, they go to do what civilized mankind must always do—experience the basic human emotions vicariously. Fighting of some sort is part of character. Is it not better for your boy to get his fill of fighting on the screen than on the street? As to contrasting pictures of purposive and purposeless fighting, I can perhaps cite you to no better examples than Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood," whose men fought in defense of the downtrodden common people, and Clara Bow's "Down to the sea in ships," where the sailors fought for the possession of the favors of a red-headed girl.

Pictures can be a wonderful spur to the ambitions. It must have a good effect on a boy with ability but no particular ambition to see in the movies how some poor boy, by dint of hard work and resourcefulness, has forged to the top in industry, art, music, or drama. Many of us are so constituted that we lack only a strong incentive. Good movies often furnish that.

Through moving pictures the absent or past can be brought into the present. Countless amounts of time and money have been expended by producers to film the Arctic wastes, the Sahara desert, the pinnacles of the Alps, the depths of the tropical jungles, the palaces of royalty, and the huts of the distant and unknown peoples. This has provided for those who saw them vicarious experiences of travel and association with many peoples of the world. Pictures bring to the viewer faithful representation of objects too large, too rare, too expensive, too dangerous, or otherwise too inconvenient to handle. They overcome time and space.

Our movies are not what they should be. We would like more and better pictures showing the things we believe to be both good and right. We want more pictures we are not afraid to have our children and young people see. But let us not blame the movies for all the ills of society. Let us as parents take some of the blame for the conduct of our children. In many ways movies are immoral to our children only because they have not been given that power of discrimination which makes it possible for them to choose between the real food and the husks in every picture.

In conclusion I want to make to parents two suggestions I think pertinent: 1. Help the child select such pictures as are not of the worst type, and if possible attend with him so that objectionable scenes may be explained and their bad effect minimized. 2. Teach discrimination in choices in all things so that character may be built so strong as to defy the subtleties of modern movies.

Christmas Offering

Oelwein Passes the Goal

Oelwein, Iowa, reported on October 24 that their branch of 67 members had passed their Christmas offering quota with $51.03 on hand, and two months yet to go. This offering may be made the means of a splendid missionary appeal if undertaken in a spirit of desire to help spread the Angel Message. Every member of the branch, old and young, should be urged to participate. Even isolated members and those residing at a distance from a branch should be sought out. They, too, will enjoy making an offering and will grow spiritually through the experience.

Capitalism, Unemployment, and Economic Progress

By Alonzo Beryl May

(Synopsis of Chapel Talk at Graceland College.)

We, today, live in a world that is dynamic, a world of changing values, a world that is ever discarding old ideas and practices in favor of new ones. The more one ponders this truth, the more one is convinced that the only constant thing in the universe is change.

Some stoutly assert that this change is good for us. Perhaps it is. We must recognize, however, that it brings about in the business world an economic uncertainty—the most dreadful nightmare a man with a family has occasion to encounter. This economic uncertainty is becoming more acute. Engulfed in this situation are found white-collared $12,000 per year executives as well as 40 cent per hour day laborers. Quite recently New York City established a free employment bureau to assist men who formerly earned from $3,600 to $10,000 per year, to relocate themselves in the business world.

Unlike England, we have no method of determining the number of our unemployed. The Republican Party as a result of the census last spring admits five million are unemployed. The Democratic Party, of course, is certain that seven or eight million is a more correct figure. A labor authority on the west coast asserts that fully eighteen million employable men are out of work sometime during the year. This latter figure represents able-bodied men who would work if they could obtain a job. Most economists agree that fully four million employable men are out of work during our so-called periods of prosperity. A conservative economist probably would estimate the number of unemployed in the United States to be somewhere between eight and ten million.

The writer counted 340 men on one freight train in North Dakota during August of this year. These men were looking for work in the northern wheat harvest belt. North Dakota ordinarily pays harvesters $3.50 to $4 per day plus board for shocking small grain. Many men shocked wheat for their board in North Dakota last August.

Unemployment in America today probably is not due to any one specific cause but to many causes. A few of these causes may be listed as follows:

1. World-wide depression since the conclusion of the World War. No doubt this is an important factor. England, France, Germany, and many others of Uncle Sam's best customers have had adverse trade balances with the United States since the close of hostilities in Europe. Since we have purchased little from them in return, largely because of our tariff barrier, they have found themselves without funds to buy our goods. Hence, we have found our foreign markets suddenly closed, resulting in less production and less need for labor.

2. Overproduction. Business, it is claimed, has overexpanded. Old machines have been scrapped to make way for new ones with greater production capacity. Here, however, arises the question whether there is such a thing as overproduction. There are sufficient grounds for believing that the term overproduction should be substituted by the term underconsumption. It is asserted that as long as there is a price for a commodity it is impossible to have overproduction. It is true that some of Mr. Ford's cars may go begging at the price of $600. But, if he were to cut the price in half, a condition of underproduction might result.

3. Machinery taking the place of men. Quite recently eastern coal-mining companies installed machines each of which did the work formerly done by fifty men.

4. Mergers of business organizations. When two or more companies consolidate into one big company, many white-collared executives are "merged out." Fewer advertising men and salesmen are needed in the new concern.

The four factors above commonly bear the brunt of the blame for America's unemployment problem. Yet, there is another factor worth considering. Perhaps the modern industrial system is out of date. The world in its progress toward the economic millennium has found economic orders out of date. Maybe this increasing uncertainty of economic life today is merely indicative that basically the modern industrial order is becoming old-fashioned and that over the horizon awaits a new order more adaptable to our needs.

The economist thinks of man's economic development historically as follows:

1. Direct appropriation. In this stage man hunted, fished, and picked the wild fruits and berries for a living.

2. The Pastoral stage. Here man domesticated animals, tended herds, and had no fixed abode. His wealth was reckoned according to the extent of his cattle holdings.

3. The Agricultural stage. In this stage man domesticated plants as well as animals. He inhabited a fixed abode and tilled fields.

4. The Handicraft stage. This was an economic order in which most of the retailers were their own manufacturers. The business man commonly manufactured a commodity in the rear of his home and retailed it in the front end.

5. The Industrial stage. This is the stage in which we now live. It is characterized by a division of labor, mass production, world-wide interdependence.

The world has passed through five economic stages. When one became out of date, it was superseded by another which conformed more to man's needs. On the basis of this reasoning, is there any foundation for believing that the industrial stage as we know it today is the final stage?

There is a sort of tyranny about the past. It is always trying to dominate the present and the future. We need to use more our mental wastebasket. Many of our ideas should be scrapped. So much of our thinking has been done by others before us that one sometimes wonders if modern civilization itself isn't merely a conglomeration of traditions many of which are questionable as to desirability. Let us hope that the near future will give us a man who will think through to another economic order in which unemployment is eliminated.

A Good Record of Baptisms

The outstanding item in the above report is the number of baptisms reported during October. The total of 402 baptisms is greater than the number reported last month and well above the average for the month of October. During the last ten years the average number of baptisms during October was 316, which shows that this year the church is over 27 per cent above the average.

This brings the total number of baptisms for the year to 3,762, which is 62.7 per cent of the year's objective. While it is not probable that the church will achieve its goal for the year, namely 6,000 baptisms, nevertheless there is a good chance to make a fairly creditable showing in comparison with other years. If the degree of missionary activity shown in October will continue during November and December, the grand total may well go over the 4,000 mark. There are many Decision Day baptisms which have not yet been reported, and if the ministry will be diligent in seeing that these are reported promptly, it will greatly assist us in having our next month's report for the church up-to-date.

Northern Michigan Led Baptisms

During the month of October the leading district in the number of baptisms was Northern Michigan with 31. Twenty-nine of these were performed at Onaway by J. J. Ledsworth, 21 on Decision Day and 8 at other times during the month. Boyne City and Wells were each credited with one baptism. This brings the total up to date for the Northern Michigan District to 114, which in terms of the year's objective of 80 means that it has achieved 143 per cent and is leading the church.

Others for Honorable Mention

The Northeast Nebraska District also made a noteworthy showing this past month with a total of 24 baptisms. Fifteen of these were performed at Omaha on September 28 and October 26 by H. A. Merchant and C. A. Kress. Three more were performed by H. A. Merchant at Fremont on September 14, and 6 at Blair by C. A. Kress on October 12 and 26. The total number of baptisms for the district up to date equals 102, which in terms of the goal of 100 makes its present standing 102 per cent.

The Holden Stake ranks next in the number of baptisms for October with a total of 21. Fourteen of these were performed on October 16 and 19 as a result of a series of missionary services conducted by Elder James W. Davis at Sugar Creek, Missouri. Three baptisms were performed at Holden, Missouri, by W. H. Eliason, and the others at various places in the stake. The present total for the Holden Stake is 108, making it 77 per cent of its year's objective of 140.

The Spokane District also did very well this past month with 15 baptisms. Six of these were performed at Yakima, Washington, by Patriarch Richard Baldwin on September 15; 5 at Ione, Washington, by Elder George Leach September 3 to 8; and 4 at Wynndel, British Columbia, by Elder George Leach on October 19. The present total for the Spokane District is 52, or 69 per cent of the year's objective of 75.

The Des Moines District reported 14 baptisms during the month, 13 of which were performed at Des Moines on Decision Day by Missionary E. E. Crownover. The grand total up-to-date for this district is 83, giving it a standing of 69 per cent of the objective of 120.

A total of 12 baptisms was reported by the Eastern Colorado District, being performed by Elders H. E. Winegar and E. B. Johnston. The Southern Missouri District was also credited with this number, all 12 taking place at the district conference held at Kennett, Missouri, on October 5 by W. E. Haden.

The Alabama, Southern Ohio, and Western Oklahoma Districts each reported 11 baptisms. The Alabama baptisms were all performed by W. J. Williamson, 3 of them being credited to the Flat Rock Branch and 8 to the Lone Star Branch. This brings the total for the Alabama District to 56, which is 24 per cent over its objective for the year. The present total of the Southern Ohio District is 95, or 70 per cent of its objective; and of the Western Oklahoma District 27, or 54 per cent of its objective. In Western Oklahoma, 7 of the baptisms were performed by Patriarch Ammon White at Calumet on September 28, 3 at Eagle City by Lester E. Dyke on October 6, and one at Oklahoma City on October 5 by Z. Z. Renfroe.

Objectives Attained

The eleven highest districts, stakes, and missions, all of whom have obtained three fourths or more of their objectives for the year, are the following with the percentage ranking as indicated:

Northern Michigan District .....	143%
Alabama District .....	124%
Hawaiian Mission .....	120%
Northeastern Nebraska District.....	102%
Idaho District .....	91%
Northern Saskatchewan District.....	84%
Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana.....	84%
Southern California District.....	83%
Western Michigan District .....	83%
Winnipeg District .....	80%
Holden Stake .....	77%

The grand total of 402 baptisms was distributed as follows:

The stakes and center place.....	44
U. S. and Canada outside the stakes.....	349
Foreign missions .....	9
Total .....	402

Of the above 44 baptisms credited to the stakes, Holden Stake had 21, Far West Stake had 14, Independence had 6, and Kansas City had 3. Of those reported by foreign missions, Hawaii had 4 baptisms, Holland 4 baptisms, and the British Isles one baptism.

The following branches, missions, and district nonresident groups in the United States and Canada reported four or more baptisms each:

Onaway, Michigan .....	29
Omaha, Nebraska .....	13
Kennett, Missouri .....	12
Eastern Colorado nonresident.....	11
Detroit, Michigan .....	10
Pershing, Iowa .....	9
Spokane nonresident .....	9
Blair, Nebraska .....	8
Jonesport, Maine, .....	8
Lone Star, Alabama .....	8
Marion, Michigan .....	8
Sioux City, Iowa.....	8
Beardstown, Illinois .....	7
Calumet, Oklahoma .....	7
Lansing, Michigan .....	7
Highland, Ohio .....	6
Terlton, Oklahoma .....	6
Yakima, Washington .....	6
Crescent, Iowa .....	5
Fairview, West Virginia.....	5
Roundup, Montana .....	5
Salt Lake City, Utah .....	5
Southern Nebraska nonresident.....	5
Burlington, Iowa .....	4
Centralia, Washington .....	4
Dunbar, Pennsylvania .....	4
Elk Mills, Maryland.....	4
Grand Valley, Ontario.....	4
Paris, Tennessee .....	4
Poplar Creek, Illinois.....	4

In the above list there are 24 branches, 2 district missions, and 4 nonresident groups represented. In addition, 10 branches and 5 nonresident groups had three baptisms each, 18 branches and 3 nonresident groups had two baptisms each, and 35 branches and 2 nonresident groups had one baptism each. This means that a grand total of 87 branches and 16 district nonresident groups or missions in the United States and Canada outside the stakes reported one or more baptisms during October. This is a very creditable showing and indicates the widely diffused degree in which missionary activity is obtaining results throughout the church.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Church School Reports

By C. B. Woodstock

Due to changes in organization of the work in religious education advised by the last General Conference, the former Sunday school now becomes a part of the local church school. This term includes all class work and other activity of a religious educational nature occurring throughout the week.

A splendid response has been made to the recommendation of the conference and to the plans submitted by the general department of Religious Education. The change has been made already in a large number of branches, and fully one half of the remaining branches are planning to make the change at the annual election near January 1. By April 1, 1931, the churches generally should be working on the new plan.

The New Report Plan

A new form of reporting has not yet been worked out in detail. It is desirable to reduce the task and expense to a minimum consistent with efficient results. At present only the following are contemplated:

1. An annual report of the local organization and activities of the church school and its program by the pastor of each branch. This report is made out on special blanks sent out from the office of the First Presidency for report about February 1.
2. A quarterly report from each local church school made on blanks sent out from the general department of Religious Education and returned to the general department.
3. A quarterly report from each local church school to the stake or district director of religious education. This blank has not yet been prepared.
4. An annual report from the stake or district director to the general department. This blank has not yet been prepared. It will not be statistical in character, but rather a report of actual conditions, needs, recommendations, and movements in progress within the district. These will be sent out from the general department office.

It should be noted that no printed report blanks are now to be had from the Herald Publishing House. The former supply is used up, and new ones will not be printed and for sale until the new plan is perfected. We are much more anxious for needed work to be done out in the branches than we are to manipulate a lot of useless reporting machinery.

Memory Work for Juniors

By C. B. Hartshorn, Pastor and Director of Religious Education in Des Moines, Iowa.

While our faith in the value of memory work, as a means of producing desirable changes in conduct, has been considerably shaken in the past decade or two, yet I can not conceive of any thoughtful educator who would maintain that memory work should be entirely abandoned in the field of religious education.

It has been conclusively proved that a pupil may be able to repeat: "Be kind one to another," in a faultless manner, and yet may shamefully fail to interpret the thought in his play or work. However, the old system, which made much of memorizing scripture passages, memory verses, and texts—encouraging it with a scheme of reward cards, or Testaments, and with public performance in "superintendent's reviews"—bore some remarkably good fruit. It gave working material which has served well in time of personal need, or in teaching children in home or in Sunday school. It provided a fund of worship material which undoubtedly has made public devotion more enjoyable and the sermon more interesting.

The Junior age (9, 10, 11) is the golden age for memory work. The pupil memorizes easily and has a lifetime ahead of him for application.

It is the conviction of the writer that, somewhere in our religious educational program, memory work should be stressed. Well-selected materials having permanent value of both practical and literary character should be introduced as a part of the church school curriculum. It may be introduced in a Sunday evening class (some branches may prefer a week night), or it may be introduced as supplemental work to the regular Sunday morning lessons.

Convinced as I am that this work is important in the religious development of the child, I do not hesitate to recommend that it be stimulated by the use of credits, honors, and rewards; and also by competition in drills, spell-downs, and games similar to Bible baseball.

Now comes the question: What knowledge will prove most helpful to the Latter Day Saint boy or girl? What shall we endeavor to fix in the minds of our junior pupils that may prove of most permanent value? Opinions about this may vary among our workers, but a rather conservative selection would doubtless include some of the general facts of the origin and nature of the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, so that an intelligent inquiry would receive an intelligent and luminous reply from any boy or girl who had passed through a Latter Day Saint church school with serious purpose. It would also include some general facts about the Bible and some of its outstanding passages which have proved comforting and helpful throughout the ages.

Specifically, then, we would use the following content in our memory work for Juniors:

I. Concerning the Bible:

A. Learn its 10 divisions (following Hurlbut's teacher-training lessons, chapters I to III).

Old Testament:

1. Books of the Law	5

5. Minor Prophets	12	39

New Testament:

1. Biographical books	4
2. Historical book	1
3. Pauline Epistles	13
4. General Epistles	8
5. Prophetical book	1	27

Total 66

B. Memorize the names of the sixty-six books.

C. Memorize these choice passages:

- (1) The Lord's prayer, Matthew 6: 9-13.

- ##### A. What is the Book of Mormon? Answer: It is a sacred record of the ancient inhabitants of the American continent, which was miraculously preserved and was translated by divine help.

B. Memorize its five divisions (following the Book of Mormon Normal.)

(1) Jaredite Period	1 book
(2) Migration Period	6 books
(3) Unity Period	1 book
(4) Judges Period	2 books
(5) Nephite Christianity	5 books

Total 15

C. Learn the names of the 15 books.

D. Name the three witnesses and memorize their testimony.

III. Concerning the Doctrine and Covenants:

1. What is the Doctrine and Covenants?

Answer: It is a sacred book containing the latter-day revelations to the church through its Prophet.

2. Are all prophecies put in the Doctrine and Covenants?

Answer: Only those which are received by the President of the church and adopted by vote of the General Conference.

3. Memorize the sacramental prayers. See Doctrine and Covenants 17: 22, 23.

If the teacher and superintendent will persist in the teaching of this course, it can be mastered by an average pupil in his three years in the junior department. When this has been accomplished and these boys and girls have grown into their life's tasks as parents and church leaders, they will find that while the general lessons have left only a vague deposit of good on their minds, the materials of this Junior Memory Course will be like "apples of gold in pictures of silver," remaining to bless and enrich life so long as they shall live.

Teaching Children Generosity

(Who does not admire a nature that finds half a loaf with a friend more enjoyable than a whole loaf alone? It is the sincere desire of every parent to have his children unselfish and generous. The wise parent appreciates, with his children, the real struggle that is often necessary before children can share cherished toys or half their candy, apples, etc., with other children. It takes parents of firmness endowed with ingenuity, enthusiasm, sympathy, and understanding to make sharing a delight. Parents, unconsciously of course, often encourage their children to be selfish, both by example and by speech. Generosity is one of those characteristics which can not be taught by "talk" alone but must needs be exercised in everyday living. The following article by Marion Brownfield, author of The Courtesy Book, and issued by the National Kindergarten Association, will give some valuable hints and ideas of how to teach your children to be generous.—M. A. W.)

Some children do not have to be taught to be generous. They are as impartial in giving as sunshine itself! But many children are, if not actually stingy, inclined to be selfish. In a family where there are several children, it will often be noticed that either generosity or stinginess is a marked trait in each child.

The "only" child is often little to blame if he grows up selfish, for he hasn't the opportunity for sharing that one of several children in a family has, and his parents often unconsciously encourage him to be selfish. But unfortunately, adults may also teach children, blessed with brothers and sisters, to be selfish, both by example and by speech. The "holding-on" habit is easy to learn. It grows, and it is hard to break! The mother who hoards, unnecessarily, in her household, the father whose garage is a junk pile from which he won't spare a scrap, or the aunt who can't bear to pick a flower in her garden because "they look so much prettier growing," all teach children to be opposite of generous.

Contrast with these the mother who encourages Johnnie to collect newspapers in his own home and neighborhood to salvage for charity or, better still, the parents who from the child's babyhood by suggestion and example make him eager to share his seat, his playthings, his candy, with brother or sister or even the forlorn little child of the laundress playing at the back door. "Not what we give, but what we share." Children are like putty at the beginning, and those first impulses, educated in the right way, may become the cornerstone of generosity.

When a little girl sees mother share her "company" dessert with a neighbor, remember those at Christmas who can't "exchange gifts," lend her magazines and books, and give willingly to various benevolences instead of spending all her spare change on trifles for herself, the child learns the real joy of generosity. The spiritual doesn't need to be voiced. It will be felt.

But how carefully must the opposite teaching be avoided. The mother who says, "Go and borrow that magazine back from Mrs. Brown. She's had it all day; that's long enough! I want it myself this evening," is unaware, doubtless, that she is grafting an unlovely bit from her own character onto her child's! By this act she is likely to impede even the child's material success in life.

As unselfishness is a fundamental of generosity, it can be impressed on children that sharing does not always refer to material things. They can easily understand that to share a friend, to show others a pleasant walk or a beautiful sunset is often a most delightful kind of generosity. It is worth while to help them to cultivate it.

Hints for Speakers and Writers

NUMBER 1.—KEEP TRYING

Those who attempt to do any good work are bound to make some mistakes and meet some reverses. Some of their most conscientious attempts will be found impractical or unusable.

The hardest thing for people to learn is to keep trying. If it is speaking, and the audience walks out or goes to sleep, they quit. If it is writing, and they get rejection slips, they either quit altogether, or write an indignant letter and quit until the next time.

But there are some who do not quit, and who can keep sweet tempered when they meet reverses. They are the jewels of humanity, and if they are inadequately rewarded here, it is certain that they will be rewarded Elsewhere.

A recent incident moves us to nominate, as one of the kindest souls in existence, our good Brother C. J. Spurlock, of Holden. His verse teaches us to be cheerful and to keep trying. He sent us these stanzas after having a manuscript returned to him.

I have written for the Herald,
And for others papers, too;
But my writings were not published,
Or at least but very few.

But I'm not at all discouraged,
And sometime may try again.
If I try and fail quite often,
It's not so great a sin.

—C. J. Spurlock.

Stonington, Maine

Some services at Stonington have been omitted the past two Sundays on account of Eastern and Western Maine conferences, held at Jonesport and Vinalhaven respectively on October 11 and 12, and 18 and 19.

The young people of Stonington decided to hire a truck, that all from here might go together to Jonesport. They were fortunate in securing a practically new machine and an excellent driver, and nineteen members began the journey the morning of the eleventh, a gloriously bright and pleasant morning. There were a little more than one hundred miles to travel. The road lay along the coast, where at intervals we caught glimpses of the water, and the hills and forests were gorgeously colored, a panorama of beauty. Several carloads besides the truck made the trip, and there were in all thirty-eight persons from Stonington who went. We were royally entertained at Jonesport, and the young people enjoyed themselves socially as well as spiritually.

As our conference was to take place the following week-end, a crowd of Jonesport people arranged to come to Vinalhaven. A load of young people started out in a truck, but the weather did not prove so favorable as it had the previous week. They encountered rain on the way and got wet, but being a group of Zion builders, they did not turn back. However, when they reached the landing at Sargentville, where they were to have been met by a boat to continue the journey, the captain decided the sea was too rough to make the trip, and they were indeed a disappointed crowd. They had been very eager to visit Vinalhaven, which is on an island some distance from the mainland, and some of the crowd had never been there. They decided to cross the reach and come down to Stonington. The group was invited to the home of "Aunt Marcia" Billings, noted for her hospitality, and given a good dinner. Then they came on to Stonington.

Preparations were hastily made to have a social in Stonington church that evening. The Stonington young people rallied, and a delightful time was spent. During the evening a captain with a good boat was located who said he would take a load to Vinalhaven Sunday morning starting at seven. Accordingly it was a happy crowd, numbering more than thirty, about half of them from Jonesport, who set sail on a clear morning. We arrived in Vinalhaven in time for the first meeting of the day. The services were fine and spiritual, and attendance was all that could be desired. A delicious dinner was prepared and served in the church. The Saints of this branch certainly understand the art of hospitality. Among the crowd were members from Boston, Rockland, Camden, Rockport, Dixfield, Jonesport, and Stonington.

While there was a general feeling of disappointment that Apostle R. S. Budd could not be present, the men who occupied the speaker's stand included Bishop E. L. Traver, Elders Newman Wilson, J. L. Clark, and E. F. Robertson. These seemed at their best and were given a good response by the congregation.

The many friends of Sister Erminie Carter Billings were shocked and saddened at news of her sudden death September 13. This young sister was the first member of the church we met on our arrival in Maine two years ago, and we found her a Saint indeed.

Brother Henry Eaton has been afflicted with heart trouble, so that he has not been able to do his work as foreman in the stone quarry, but has improved his time by doing more church work than usual. He is a faithful and dependable brother. We hope to see him regain his health.

The various groups of the Women's Department are preparing for an active winter's work.

A Halloween social was planned and carried out in the interests of the Christmas offering.

Birmingham, England

"O Master of the beautiful,
Creating us from hour to hour,
Give me this vision to the full—
To see in lightest things thy power;
This vision give, no heaven afar,
No throne, and yet I will rejoice,
Knowing beneath my feet a star,
Thy word in every wondering voice."

The Saints in Birmingham are happy to send greetings to the church, happy to express their gratitude to God for all his blessings. We feel that we are at the beginning of a new era. We have been visited by one of the Presidency, "Brother Mac," who will ever live in our hearts and memories, and by Apostles Hanson and Edwards. We have been lifted to the heights by the ministrations of these brothers. Now we have Elder Peter S. Whalley sent as pastor. He has come to us with a heart full of divine love, eager to serve, to instruct, to minister to the needs of all.

Brother and Sister Whalley arrived October 7. A reception was held October 14 in their honor to give opportunity for all to get acquainted. Already the pastor has won the hearts of the congregation, and we feel that we have known him many years instead of two short weeks. Our hopes are high, and we believe we shall go forward taking the gospel in our lives to those less fortunate than we.

Brother McDowell's last words to our young people and to all were: "I am expecting great things of you." So we feel that we can not, must not fail. We must go forward to Zion.

Harvest thanksgiving services were held October 19. A beautiful display of fruits and vegetables and flowers was the result of generous offerings of the Saints. Meeting in the morning service, a kindly spirit was present, and the members felt that our gifts were acceptable to God. Brother A. Kendrick was the speaker, presenting many fine thoughts. The church school held its session in the afternoon, Franklin Schofield being the speaker. He presented to the children the suggestion that only the fine and the beautiful seeds should be sown and developed in their lives, that they should preserve their bodies by cleanliness, and he emphasized the value of truth, patience, and generosity. In the evening the Saints again met to sing songs of thanksgiving and to hear what great things the Lord has done for them.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson was the speaker. He read Psalm 95 and delivered a forceful discourse in keeping with the theme of the day. Apart from the material things which are daily provided for us, he observed how great and powerful are our spiritual blessings—love, friendship, beauty, faith.

This day was beautiful in every sense of the word. We were happy as we met and happy as we parted with a greater conception of the bountiful hand of our Father. The infant son of Brother and Sister A. Edwards was presented to the Lord for a blessing and received the name, Ronald James. This ordinance was cared for early in the evening by Apostle Hanson and Elder A. Kendrick. The mother of the babe was formerly Sister Mavis Meredith.

During the last month we were made happy to receive into membership of the church Brother Cyrus Allen. He has long been associated with us, and we pray that God will further bless him and give him an increased desire to serve. He was baptized by Elder F. H. Edwards, sr., and confirmed by Elder F. H. Edwards, jr.

An arts and craft class has been formed, Sister A. Meredith the teacher. She has a number of students and progress is reported.

Southern Wisconsin Conference

Conference of Southern Wisconsin District was held at Madison October 18 and 19. Saturday morning at ten o'clock prayer service was in charge of Elders Henry Woodstock and C. J. Hunt. At 11.15 Brother Hunt preached on "Growth of the church," dwelling principally on the Harvest Home Festival and its success.

The business meeting was called to order by Elder Amos Berve at two o'clock that afternoon, invocation being offered by Apostle D. T. Williams. The motion carried that the district presidency assisted by Apostle Williams preside over the conference.

Brother Lee Root assisted the secretary in her work. The report of the district president showed that the general spirituality of the district is on a decided upward trend. Financially the Saints responded fairly well, considering the economic depression which has affected every department of commerce and industry.

Two-day meetings have been held in Lancaster, Beloit, Milwaukee, and Delavan and were successful in every respect.

The presidency stated that they deemed it a wise move when, at the last district conference, the reunion was postponed for one year at least, and recommended that the district not hold a reunion in 1931, but that the present reunion committee be continued and instructed to keep in touch with the reunion committee of Northeastern Illinois District. The recommendation was accepted and approved.

The individual and financial report of the bishop was read. It showed receipts for five months to the amount of $694.53 and for the nine months of the year $1,206.25. The district treasurer's report from June 18 to October 17 showed receipts of $40.89; disbursements $19.33; district budget fund, $65.50; disbursements, $13.40; missionary fund receipts, $22.46; total receipts in reunion fund, $265.19; total in district treasury, $361.31. The report of Harry Wasson, supervisor of Religious Education, and the report of Leda Colbert, superintendent of Department of Women, were accepted. Brother Berve had prepared a summarized report of work done by the priesthood, which was read. Statistical reports were also read.

Brothers Hunt and Berve spoke on discontinuing the reading or posting of tithes and offerings of individuals. It was suggested that those who pay and wish to know the total amount of their tithes or offerings consult Bishop Hunt.

Apostle Williams was then asked to take the chair, and held election of officers. Brother Berve was nominated district president, and a motion was carried that the secretary cast a unanimous ballot for Brother Berve. He was given the privilege of selecting his associates. Those chosen were Henry Woodstock and George Noble. Leda Colbert was elected district clerk; district treasurer, Charles Hoague; supervisor of Religious Education, Harry Wasson, who was given power to choose his assistant; Leda Colbert was chosen. Carl Wirth was elected superintendent of music with power to choose his pianist. The apportioning of a district budget was for the years as follows: District president, $100; supervisor of Religious Education, $35; district clerk, $15. The total amount is to be divided in the following portions for each branch: Madison, $25; Soldiers' Grove, $28; Milwaukee, $18; Beloit, $18; Lancaster, $24; Evansville, $20; and Janesville, $17. The amount is to be paid quarterly on the first of January, April, July, and October.

The time and place of next district conference were left to the district presidency. Remarks were made in regard to an institute for the coming year, time and place being left to the district presidency. The business was successfully completed, leaving time for a round-table discussion conducted by Brothers Williams and Berve.

The sermon in the evening was by Apostle D. T. Williams.

A prayer service opened Sunday's meetings, the district presidency presiding. This was a spiritual hour in which the Lord spoke to his people through one of his faithful servants. Words of comfort and cheer were also given certain members.

Church school commenced at 9.45, Harry Wasson and local officers in charge of the adult department. Leda Colbert conducted the primary exercises.

"Jesus said, Many things I have to say unto you, but ye can not bear them now," was Apostle Williams's text Sunday morning, and the theme was "Appreciation and revelation, the proof of true religion."

The words of Columbus, "This day we sail westward which is our course," was the text for Brother Williams's afternoon sermon. There was a solo by Guy Allen. An offering amounting to almost twenty dollars was taken at the close of the hour. Brother Williams left for Milwaukee where he was to preach in the evening.

Before the service closed announcement was made of the call of Guy Allen to the office of priest and of Orville Dahlm to the office of deacon and that their ordinations would be cared for in their respective branches. Brother Allen is a member of Beloit Branch, Brother Dahlm of Madison.

The women of Madison served lunch and dinner each day in the lower auditorium.

The weather over the week-end was disagreeable, and not as many came from other branches as were expected. Evansville, Janesville, Beloit, and Lancaster were represented, and members were present from Rockford, Illinois. Nevertheless, this was one of the best conferences held in this district.

Moorhead, Iowa

The past few months have been busy and profitable ones for the Saints of this city. Services were dismissed during the Woodbine reunion, and all who could do so availed themselves of the opportunity of participating in the splendid services. Several also attended part of the Decatur, Nebraska, reunion.

Special programs and entertainments have been provided in harmony with the various occasions, such as Children's Day, College Day, Rally Day, etc. Attendance and interest were especially good at these services.

Members of the priesthood attended the recent special services held at Council Bluffs and Woodbine.

Affliction and death have not passed us by. Besides the usual number of common ailments in the group, the pastor, T. O. Strand, some weeks ago suffered serious injuries when a chain broke and let a heavy log roll completely over his body. His condition, however, is now much improved, and the Saints hope that he will soon be able to meet with us once more and be about his duties. Sister Simpson, who has been afflicted for years, is in a critical condition; she has been unconscious for some length of time. Sister Nettie Kesterson has been able of late to attend some of the services, although she suffers severely at times with rheumatism. After several weeks of suffering, Mr. J. B. McElwaine, husband of Sister or "Aunt Lanie" McElwaine, and father of Sister Glenn Wilson, passed away at their home. The funeral was conducted at the Christian Church September 28. Sympathy is extended the bereaved ones.

September 4 the community was shocked to learn of the sudden death of Brother Perry Mann. Although he has been afflicted for several years, he departed from home in his usual health, driving his car to the farm. Before noon word was sent by his tenant of his demise. The funeral sermon was preached by Brother T. O. Strand, assisted by John Boswell, on September 6 from the local church. He leaves to mourn his wife, two children and families, besides a host of other relatives and friends.

During October Saints and friends have met in social gatherings at the home of Sister J. B. McElwaine in honor of Sister Nettie Kesterson's birthday, and at the home of Brother and Sister David Outhouse in honor of the birthday of their daughter, Ethel. Ethel has for several months suffered with a broken limb. Also October 18 the annual gathering at the home of Grandma Townley was held. This was in honor of Sister Townley's ninety-fifth birthday. For one of such an advanced age Grandma Townley is well preserved. During her daughter's absence on a visit this summer and early fall, Grandma kept house alone for several weeks and as usual was making rugs. Her faith is still strong and firmly grounded in the gospel.

Brother and Sister Joseph W. Lane recently spent a week visiting among the Saints of this branch before departing for Lamoni, where he expects to spend the winter. His work is always appreciated by the Saints.

Coffeerville, Kansas

Saints of this local were pleased to have Brother and Sister S. W. Simmons here on a recent week-end. Brother Simmons preached four good sermons. On Sunday afternoon Mrs. Floyd Simmons, of Sedan, Kansas, was baptized by our pastor, O. E. Pender, and confirmed by Brothers Pender and Simmons. Floyd is a son of S. W. Simmons.

Brother and Sister Simmons went on their way to other fields of service attended by the good wishes of this branch. We understand that they will spend the winter months in Texas.

Sister Head and Brother Yeubanks were able to be out to hear Brother Simmons' sermons.

Woodbine, Iowa

Woodbine is endeavoring to follow the new program of Religious Education as far as possible. Brother K. C. Harder has been appointed supervisor of religious education. He is an efficient man for the place, and has selected for the head of the adult division Sister Isaac Jarvis, for the young people's division, Sister Gladys Chiles; for the children, Sister Verna Garver. We have a splendid group of leaders all working together, and a profitable year is anticipated.

Brother Samuel Smith, of Independence, was here Sunday evening, August 31, and gave a splendid sermon concerning conditions in Zion.

Communion service September 7 was well attended.

The church entertained the faculty of the Woodbine school the evening of September 5 in the basement room. After refreshments were served a social good time was enjoyed.

The Graceland College program consisted of the "Alma Mater Hymn" and five-minute talks by former Gracelanders: a chalk talk, "The Graceland skyline," by Oliver Cooper; "The faculty," Verna Garver; "Graceland's social life," Charles Young; "Religious influence at Graceland," Helen Stewart; "The spirit of Graceland," Ollie Smith; "The scholarship fund," Myra Harder. The closing song was "Graceland forever." A large congregation attended the program, and Saints from Dunlap and Bigler's Grove were present. The offering for Graceland College was more than seventy dollars.

Eleven of the priesthood attended the priesthood meeting at Council Bluffs September 21 at 2.30 in the afternoon. Brothers M. H. Siegfried and J. A. Gardner, of Independence, were the instructors. After a profitable meeting the men came home stirred by a greater desire to serve the Master.

Elder Gerald Gunsolley called a meeting of the priesthood to convene at Woodbine October 5 at 2.30. Fifty members were present. Brother Gunsolley's theme was "The church program." He explained his subject in an efficient and clear way. We are much in favor of the program of Religious Education.

The priesthood have been preaching in Dunlap, Magnolia, Logan, Persia, and Pisgah. The ministry is growing in number and unity.

E. A. ROSENBERGER.

Northwestern Ohio Conference

The Northwestern Ohio district conference convened at Saint Mary's, Ohio, September 27 and 28, at the little church on the corner of North and Perry Streets. The meeting opened Saturday morning with prayer service in charge of Apostle Clyde F. Ellis and District President William R. Grice.

The afternoon business session was presided over by the brothers above named, and the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, William Grice; vice president and leader of church school, E. L. Ulrich; secretary, C. V. Holmes; treasurer, F. Slye; musical director, Sister Ulrich.

In the evening there was an entertainment. The Saint Mary's young people presented the pageant, "Zion builders," which was a worth-while effort, one much appreciated by all. There were other numbers from Toledo and Bradner which helped to make the evening enjoyable.

Sunday morning church school was conducted by Brothers Telejohn and Ulrich, and a lesson demonstration given by Sister Mary Smith, of Bradner, was very interesting to all ages. Several pieces of the Bradner and Toledo orchestras were present and furnished music during the conference.

Brother C. V. Holmes, of Toledo, was ordained an elder.

The Sunday afternoon prayer service was one of benefit to all. This meeting was followed by preaching by Brother Ellis.

The conference adjourned to meet again at the call of the presidency of the district.

Saint Mary's Saints were given a vote of thanks for their kind hospitality and the good food which they provided. All those who were present went home with the feeling that it is good to get together with those of like faith.

MRS. E. L. ULRICH.

Lansing, Michigan

During the last few weeks six persons have been baptized in Lansing Branch, one adult, three young people, and two children. More are expected to join the church on Decision Day.

The church school plan was put into operation October 1. Since adopting this plan we have more organized effort in the branch and more enjoyable and interesting services. For the Friday evening service the congregation has been divided into two groups, one in charge of Eleanor Easlick, the other in charge of Sister William Engler; each to take turns in presenting an entertainment, part of the time being turned over to class work and the rest to the programs. One Friday evening the Boy Scouts entertained, and October 17 one of the groups gave a mock court trial.

On October 5, Elder O. J. Hawn, district missionary, was here in the sacramental service and preached at the evening service.

Elder William Osler, district president, was here from October 7 to 13, preaching Wednesday and Thursday evenings as well as twice on Sunday.

A farewell party was given on Tuesday, October 7, in honor of Elder Albert Stanke and family, who are moving back to their farm near Ionia. Brother Stanke is a fine worker and a promising church school director. We shall miss them very much. A new director will be elected soon. Until then, John Luce, assistant director, will have that responsibility.

Birthday parties have been held recently for LeRoy Andrews, Sydney Ferrier, Clyde Robinson, and Sister M. B. Wharton.

Mark H. Siegfried of the Presiding Bishopric and J. A. Gardner of the Publicity Department were in Lansing October 20. Saints were present from Battle Creek, Coldwater, and Hammond, Indiana, as well as a good representation of Lansing. These men gave inspiring accounts of the progress of the church in the past and at present, as well as what is expected of us in the future. We were encouraged to learn to "know our own church" better and to know what we have, as a church, that we might be better able to present it to others.

Lansing Branch is advancing, not only in numbers but also in spirituality. More interest is being shown, and especially since the church school has been put into operation and officers elected have we had more unified effort, a greater spirit of helpfulness and cooperative endeavor.

Society Islands Mission

Papeete, Tahiti, October 9.—Word has reached us that Kehauri a Farina, a former native missionary, has recently died at his home island of Tikehau, Tuamotu, at the advanced age of about eighty years. Brother Kehauri was a Saint of exceptional stability and bore an unsullied reputation to the day of his death.

On October 3, Teumere, the wife of Aririma a Natua, one of our native missionaries, died at Tarona, mission headquarters, and was buried on Sunday morning at eight o'clock in the new addition to Paurani Cemetery at Papeete. This was the first funeral to be held in the new subdivision and was attended by a large crowd of Saints and friends. Much sympathy is felt for Brother Aririma, as this is his second wife lost by the same kind of affliction, and in each case he was working on the stone church being built for the Niau Branch when the wife became ill.

Paia a Metuaaro is recovering from a lengthy illness caused by diving at the island Hikueru.

Horahitu recently returned from America and is now at the above-mentioned island. The natives, of all denominations, are much interested in his reports of experiences in America. Many remark that no other church here has sent a representative to America to see the headquarters of its work, while the Saints have sent three, Metuaaro, Paia, and Horahitu.

R. J. FARTHING.

Twenty-two Added to the Church on Decision Day

Flint, Michigan.—Decision Day, October 26, was an eventful day in the church at this place. Twenty-two children and young people were added to the church by baptism and confirmation, this being the largest class to be received into the fellowship of the branch at one time for several years. The rite of baptism was administered by the pastor, Thomas L. Clarke, at 9.45 in the morning, followed immediately by the imposition of hands in confirmation. Because of the large number to be confirmed, the group was divided, eleven being confirmed in the upper auditorium of the church, and the other eleven in the lower. Elders Albert Leighton, Allen C. Pohly, Fred Z. Harder, Benjamin McGeatchy, Manley D. Winters, James Phillips, and Wesley E. Alldread were spokesmen in the confirmations. The presence of the Spirit was felt to a marked degree, which accounts for the fact that no one became weary, notwithstanding the fact that we were in session for almost three hours.

The baptismal ceremony was given a beautiful and impressive setting by the pastor. The font was decorated with artificial grass, palms, ferns, and flowers. At the side of the steps approaching the font stood an electrically illuminated cross on a grassy mound. Before the rite of baptism was administered, the pastor gave to each candidate a white flower, explaining that it was given as a symbol of the gifts and talents with which God had endowed each one of them, and that as they came forward to be buried with Christ in baptism, they should place the flower at the foot of the cross, as a witness to God and the three hundred people who were present, that they were consecrating their all to the service of God and the cause of righteousness in the earth. Every eye was dampened with tears of joy as the candidates made their vow.

After the confirmation, the new members were presented a little pamphlet entitled "A word of welcome and counsel," which gave them much instruction concerning their duties as children of God. After the benediction the choir sang "Blest be the tie that binds," while the congregation quietly passed from the church.

Much credit must be given Brother Theo Bush, missionary supervisor of the city, for having such a splendid group ready for baptism on Decision Day. He has worked faithfully at his task, and we look forward to even greater things from him in the future. Several of our members are engaged in missionary work under Brother Bush's direction, and are doing wonderful work. Sister Bell McNamara has won at least six of the people who rent light housekeeping rooms in her apartments. She is a real missionary. Sister Ethel Marks brought together a group of little children in the evenings preceding Decision Day, and prepared them for baptism by proper instruction.

Those who were baptized are: Juanita Francis, Vance Dimick, Lloyd Ingram, Alfred Hooper, Winona Porter, Glen Scott, Keith Scott, Allen Crumm, Harold Crumm, William Decker, Mary Hough, Bernadette Decker, Marjorie Hough, Roselene Mogg, Arlee Hunter, Betty Hunter, Clarissa Mogg, Dorothy Williams, Laura Clark, Winnifred Aitken, Kathleen Grennay, and Dorothy Riley.

The Saints of Flint are enthused with the evangelistic spirit, and the work they are doing with nonmembers is producing a revival among our own people.

Conference of Central Illinois

November 1.—The Central Illinois district conference was held at Taylorville, October 25 and 26. On Saturday afternoon the business meeting was conducted. In the evening there was a short musical program in charge of Leah Denton, supervisor of music. Apostle J. F. Garver delivered a sermon.

The next morning at nine o'clock a prayer service convened. Junior church opened at 9.30, and at 10.45 Brother Garver again preached. Brother R. L. Fulk preached following the noon hour, and at this service Brother Lewis, of Beardstown, Illinois, was ordained a deacon by H. V. Minton and M. R. Shoemaker. Sunday was Decision Day, and ten new members were added to Taylorville Branch, two adults, and eight children. Brother H. V. Minton officiated in the baptizing. The confirmation service took place immediately after the baptism.

Elder Garver preached in the evening.

Elder R. L. Fulk and wife, of Benton, Illinois, were among the visiting Saints and enjoyed meeting old friends as well as making new ones. The members were happy to have Brother Garver as a guest and worker of the conference, for we always feel "repaid in full" by a visit from him.

Saturday and Sunday the Women's Department of Taylorville served meals in the church basement.

Visiting members and local workers considered the conference a great success. Everyone gained good from it.

Conference Spirit Lives with Members

Williamsdale, Nova Scotia, Canada, October 30.—We met many of our brothers and sisters of the gospel at the Centennial Conference last April to whom we would like to write, and we take this opportunity to tell them through the Herald that we often think of them.

We arrived home safe May 1 and have been busy with the farm and home. Frequently we recall our experiences in Independence, and we hope, if our lives are spared, to greet many of those whom we met this year at the 1932 conference.

Last month Brother Johnson went to Amherst, forty miles away, taking with him Brothers Hyatt and Fillmore, who live at Glenville, ten miles distant. They held sacramental service at the home of Brother Boyd Johnson, seven partaking of the emblems. Brother Johnson there secured orders for five new books.

The Herald and Ensign keep us in touch with the work of the general church.

We also take this opportunity to thank Independence Saints for their kindness and hospitality to us during our visit.

MRS. LEANDER JOHNSON.

Independence

Stone Church

A musical treat was given the adult and the junior young people's departments of the church school Sunday morning when the Auditorium Orchestra, directed by Orlando Nace, played several numbers during the half hour of program which precedes the lesson period. The first Sunday of the month two readings helped to make the program attractive, one by little Dorothy Savage, the other by Kathalea Sprague, a member of the junior young people's group. The school appreciates the contributions of those who help it to start the day well.

Bishop M. H. Siegfried was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning. He emphasized the importance of every person in the church doing his individual part in supporting the church's program. He challenged the people of today to work with the same spirit of devotion and far-sightedness that the pioneers of the church had. What shall those who live one hundred years from now, looking back, say of us?

The Stone Church Choir, under the direction of Paul N. Craig, sang two anthems: "Come, Holy Ghost," an unaccompanied number by Palestrina; and "Gloria in Excelsis," by Farmer, with orchestral accompaniment, the quartet parts being sung by Nina Grenawalt Smith, Alice Mae Burgess, Edward Brackenbury, and Albert Brackenbury. The Auditorium Orchestra, directed by Orlando Nace, played Rubenstein's "Melody in F." Edward Brackenbury, tenor, sang "Hymn of the Last Supper," by Demarest. Robert Miller was at the organ.

Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge, and was assisted by Elder C. B. Woodstock.

November 9 was Book of Mormon Sunday for the junior young people of this congregation, and the theme of their morning worship downstairs was "The first thanksgiving in America." Appropriate Thanksgiving numbers were sung by the junior young people's chorus, conducted by Sister E. Y. Hunker and accompanied at the piano by Joy Harder; there was a story of the early wanderings of the Jaredites, and the scripture reading from the Book of Mormon told of their crossing the sea; a vocal duet selection by Joy and Paul Carpenter was accompanied at the piano by Naomi Williams. The pastor and his assistant were in charge of the service. Special Thanksgiving services will characterize the programs of the remaining Sundays this month.

The first of a series of four illustrated lectures on the Book of Mormon was delivered Sunday night by Elder C. Ed. Miller, who sought to impress upon the congregation the fact that America is the land "choice above all other lands," the land which Isaiah saw "shadowing with wings," the land of Joseph. Scriptural promises, blessings, and prophecies and incidents of American history were associated to prove that God has raised up men who have carried out his purposes in regard to this land and its peoples. The text of the lecture was taken from Paul's oration on Mars' Hill: "Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you."

Elder H. L. Barto was in charge of the hour, assisted by Elder W. Wallace Smith. Congregational singing was led by Paul N. Craig, Robert Miller at the organ. "Fear not, O Israel" was sung by Albert Brackenbury.

Organizations and Personalities

For the first time this season the Auditorium Orchestra rehearsed Sunday afternoon with the Messiah Choir of Independence. Combined rehearsals will be the order from now until the rendition of Handel's great oratorio, The Messiah, at Christmas. Intensive practice was given the choruses: "All we like sheep have gone astray," "Behold the Lamb of God," "Surely he hath borne our griefs," and "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain." Paul N. Craig directed.

Elder Earl F. Hoisington, recently elected teacher of the Y. K. T. Class of the Stone Church School, gave his first lesson Sunday morning on "The growth of the church."

Among the members who have lately passed away was Brother Orestas Resch, whose death occurred November 7, of cancer. He was born February 9, 1876, and has been a member of the church since May 27, 1894. Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Cora Resch; two daughters, Mrs. Hazel Blade and Mae Resch; two sons, Evan Resch and Louis Resch, all of the home; his mother, Mrs. Sarah E. Resch, and five brothers: B. F. Resch, W. F. Resch, Clarence A. Resch, Louis Resch, and Clifton Resch, all of Independence. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at the Stone Church, and interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Members of the White Masquae Players were given a special treat Monday evening at their November meeting when President F. M. McDowell reviewed The Passion Play, which he saw given at Oberammergau, Germany. Using a postcard projector, he gave his informal lecture an attractive pictorial background. Many of the pictures used were taken by himself. The theme for the evening, continuing the club's winter study program, was "The German theater," and the principal lecture was by Sister Henry C. Smith. Sister J. F. Frazier was the hostess.

Liberty Street

Fortunate indeed is the branch that has an actively functioning organization of women. Sister Esther Latta as leader of the women's work in the adult department of the church school is proving her capability for such endeavor. Recently these workers turned over to Harry Blake a contribution of twenty-five dollars to be applied to the local basement debt. On election day, November 4, meals were served to raise more money.

Elder C. V. Hopkins, lately of Grandview, Missouri, now of Walnut Park, was the speaker October 25 at the eleven o'clock hour. The example of Christlike living and its effectiveness in destroying prejudice formed an important part of his sermon. If Latter Day Saints could become united, each giving loyal support to the whole group with less negative criticism, happy as a people would we become.

The communion service for November was presided over by Elders B. H. Buntun, Walter Curtis, and F. A. Cool. A marked degree of reverence was felt at this meeting that could not but uplift the soul.

Self-examination formed the basis for the sermon delivered by Bishop B. J. Scott the evening of November 2. What does it matter if my brother disregards this commandment or that precedent so long as I myself am not perfect? was a pertinent question asked by him. The faults of others will not assume such staggering proportions if we focus our critical eye on ourselves and the weaknesses so evident there.

A vocal duet by Fred Friend and F. A. Cool preceded the sermon.

Elder H. L. Barto was the selection of the bishops in Zion as our speaker Sunday, November 9. Stewardships must be put into effect and the whole law observed if the church is to demonstrate to the world the social teaching of this religious group.

At the junior service a lovely a cappella number was sung by three young sisters, Irene, Evelyn, and Mildred Shupe. Raymond Wrigley gave the talk of the morning, centering his remarks around the building of character. Good ideas, right attitudes, and a strong determination to do the right must become a part of us early in life if we are to develop into the grown man or woman we aspire to become.

The Armistice Day sermon was brought to this congregation by Elder John Blackmore. Isaiah 2:4 formed the foundation for this excellent message on the beauty and glory of peace. It is necessary that people allow a feeling of world brotherhood to supersede national and race loyalties and patriotism if world peace is to be realized. The adventure of war is not comparable with the adventure of peace if the latter could be given a fair trial. A violin duet, "Berceuse," was the contribution of Gomer Cool and Orrin Fry at this service. They were accompanied by Lorena Kueffer.

The presence of Elder Glenn Davis is appreciated. He has returned to Independence to take his family with him to his mission field in Alabama. It is with regret that we see them leave, for after they are located in that State, their visits to Independence will be much too infrequent.

Walnut Park

The regular monthly sacramental service of Walnut Park congregation, held on the first Sunday of the month, was well attended, and a fine spirit of devotion and interest was shown. There were approximately three hundred and twenty-five present. Elder R. Barnhardt was in charge of the service, assisted by Elders S. C. Smith, C. L. Olson, George Jenkins, C. V. Hopkins, Fred Lanpher, and Alvin Christensen.

In the evening Elder George Jenkins preached to a large and attentive congregation, and his discourse was much appreciated. This was a farewell sermon on the part of Brother Jenkins, because he is moving, with his family, to Eldorado Springs, where he will have charge of the local and missionary work in that vicinity. Brother Jenkins is a missionary in the church with long years of service to his credit. The Saints at Walnut Park regret to see him and his family leave, but trust that they will be happy in their new location and that they will be able to continue the good work which they have been doing in Walnut Park.

The speaker of the morning on November 9 was Elder J. A. Gardner, general publicity agent for the church. His discourse centered about the question "How much do you love your church?" In particular he emphasized the importance of rallying to the slogan "My church first." The choir gave a fitting contribution to the service with the anthem "The King of Love my Shepherd is."

The evening speaker was Bishop B. J. Scott, formerly pastor at Walnut Park and for many years an active member of the priesthood of this congregation. At present he is a member of the Stone Church congregation and regularly teaches a class in the Stone Church school. Brother Scott used two readings as the basis for his discourse, 1 Samuel 7:3-5 and Amos 4:11, 12. His text was taken from 1 Samuel 7:3: "Put away the strange gods from among you and prepare your hearts unto the Lord and serve him only: and he will deliver you out of the hands of the Philistines." Brother Scott gave many words of fatherly counsel and encouragement to the Saints. As his closing remark he stated that his purpose was to awaken a desire to have our lamps trimmed and burning. The choir sang an anthem which harmonized well with the spirit of the sermon, "They that trust in the Lord." During the song service preceding the sermon, Brother Carlos Smith sang a solo entitled "The lamplit hour." This beautiful song was much appreciated by the congregation. Miss Delta Nace assisted at the piano.

The special Sunday evening classes, meeting from 6 to 7.15 in the evening, are well under way. The first session was held a week ago and the second session last Sunday. Two courses are being offered, one by Sister M. A. Etzenhouser on the subject "Preparation for marriage and parenthood," and the other by Miss Myrtle Weber on "Methods of teaching." Both classes are well attended, and keen interest is being manifested. There were approximately one hundred in attendance at both classes Sunday.

The eight o'clock prayer meeting was also well attended Sunday, and a fine spirit of devotion and consecration was manifested.

The Walnut Park Orchestra, which is a part of the Auditorium Orchestra, made a visit to the Stone Church during the church school hour on Sunday. The Saints of this district are happy to have a good orchestra, under the capable direction of Brother Orlando Nace.

Spring Branch

Attendance and interest seem to be growing each week at all services.

The Tankard family is again in Independence and meets with Spring Branch congregation. Sister Tankard decided that she did not care to spend the winter on the farm while Brother Tankard was working in Kansas City.

Of late Kansas City Branch and Sugar Creek Mission have held baptismal services in Spring Branch font. Also Madlyn Smith, daughter of Brother and Sister W. F. Smith, was baptized by Brother Cleveland.

Sunday the eleven o'clock service was in charge of Pastor Cleveland, and Elder Earl Hoisington was the speaker. Attendance at the church school at 6.30 in the evening was over one hundred. The program was greatly enjoyed.

Elder A. K. Dillee, pastor of Second Church, was the speaker in the evening.

East Independence

The people of East Independence are kept busy by various activities. We enjoyed a basket dinner not long ago, when old friends and new spread their lunches under the trees on the church lawn. The children fluttered about happily, and the grown-ups enjoyed themselves talking. After the meal an impromptu program was arranged by Brother and Sister Charles Edgerton.

Of late Halloween parties among the young people have helped them to have a happy time.

Brother and Sister T. W. Thatcher have a new daughter at their home. She arrived October 11, and has been named Mary Marcella.

The sacramental service for November was characterized by a fine, peaceful spirit which all felt, and which continued in the evening meeting.

Elder Vernon Reese was the speaker the morning of November 9. He began his discourse by saying that proper judgment of values is necessary to success. Many times we fail to have the necessary comprehension of gospel values and the values of things of the world. In the evening Brother M. M. Turpen brought to the congregation many experiences gleaned from years of service.

Gudgell Park

The Oriole Girls held a box social at the church on October 14. The building was decorated with Oriole colors, black and orange. A short program was given by the girls. Besides the boxes which were sold, there was a grab box and ice cream was sold. A tidy sum was made by the sponsors of the program, and a happy evening was spent by the people of this congregation.

Two days later the young people of Brother C. E. Martin's Sunday school class, about eighteen in number, met at his home for an old-fashioned candy pull.

Brother S. H. Fields gave a good sermon on "Faith" the morning of October 19. The evening speaker was Brother Hayes. And the following Sunday morning Brother C. K. Green preached.

Attendance at the November sacramental meeting was unusually good. The local priesthood were in charge. Elder C. Ed. Miller was the evening speaker.

Brother Story invited the members of the junior choir, about twenty in number, to his home in the country for dinner and an afternoon of games November 2.

Elder Howard Andersen was the morning speaker last Sunday, and in the evening Elder T. C. Kelley occupied.

Lancaster, Ohio

1111 West Fair Avenue

The work at Lancaster has been making slow progress the last two months because of religious prejudice. However, attendance has been good, and practically two thirds of the congregations have been nonmembers.

On September 7, a good Sunday school service was had. Elder Gray, district Sunday school superintendent, was here and gave an interesting talk after Sunday school on his visit to the Kirtland reunion. There was no church service. In the evening we had a good attendance and a good service with special music by a nonmember.

Elder William P. Vickroy held a series of meetings at The Plains, Ohio, beginning Saturday evening, September 6. He preached to a good gathering Saturday evening. On Sunday morning there was a crowd for Sunday school and preaching service. Keen interest was shown by the nonmembers who came.

Sunday afternoon and evening Brother Vickroy was assisted by Priest Elmer H. Caldwell. The afternoon attendance was larger than any of the other meetings as was that at the night service. Interest increased as the meetings progressed. It is believed that if a member of the priesthood would hold regular meetings at The Plains, much good could be accomplished, for there are many there who are very much interested in the latter-day work. Visiting Saints at these meetings were a source of encouragement to the Saints of The Plains.

Attendance was good at all services on September 14 at Lancaster. Priest Elmer Caldwell spoke at the morning service and Elder S. E. Dickson, pastor, spoke at the evening service.

Elder W. P. Vickroy gave an interesting discourse at the morning service September 21, and Elder S. E. Dickson spoke at the evening service.

The pastor was not here on September 28, and Brother Vickroy spoke both morning and evening.

The month of October has been a good month for us in spite of the fact that we were compelled, by reason of cold weather and the lack of a heating system for one Sunday, to dismiss services. Services are being well attended, and prayer meetings are becoming more spiritual. We pray that God will strengthen us, that we may continue to grow in grace so that great things may be accomplished in Lancaster.

The sacramental service October 5 was very well attended. Several visitors from First Branch, Columbus, Ohio, were present. Elder Fred Welch and family, Priest Gershem Meyers and family, and Elder Gray and family, of New Lexington, were also here as well as visitors from Dayton Branch. A spiritual service strengthened many.

On October 12 Priest Elmer Caldwell spoke at the morning service, and Pastor S. E. Dickson preached at the evening service. Several numbers of special music added much to the evening service.

We had no service on October 19. Priest Elmer Caldwell visited the Saints of Nelsonville, Ohio, and taught a large class at Sunday school, then spoke at the preaching service. Many visitors, members and nonmembers, heard him. There was a good representation of the church at The Plains, Ohio, present.

On October 26 an all-day meeting occurred at Lancaster. Brother A. E. Anderton, district president, was in charge. The meetings began with a social service at 8.15 in the morning, Elder Gray, of New Lexington, in charge. At 9.30 Mr. G. H. Coleman, federal locomotive inspector of Columbus, Ohio, spoke on the "Signs of the times." At 10.30 Elder John R. Grice, one of the district missionaries, gave a fine discourse. Elder A. B. Kirkendall, of Creola, Ohio, was in charge. At noon basket dinner was served in the basement.

A. E. Anderton, of Columbus, Ohio, spoke at two o'clock in the afternoon on "The atonement of Christ." Brother Anderton gave another fine sermon at the evening service.

Southern Ohio District was well represented in the services of the day. There were visitors from Nelsonville, Columbus, Dayton, Welston, Jackson, Chillicothe, and Creola, as well as many nonmembers from in and near Lancaster.

Lancaster Saints are very desirous of carrying the work forward with all possible speed, and we ask the prayers of the Saints that we may be found faithful, so that we may be prospered.

ELMER H. CALDWELL.

Growth in Santa Barbara Branch

Seven and one half years ago Brother and Sister Clarence J. Lant left Kansas City, Missouri, and went to Santa Barbara, California, to establish their home. It was during the railroad strike that the removal took place, Brother Lant who is a builder having found it hard to make a living in Kansas City. California offered the best opportunity for one of his trade, and though it meant isolation from church privileges, the little family made the sacrifice. They landed in the city where they planned to make their home and, of course, found no Saints there, but they were not discouraged. Brother Lant began to write to the church papers, and soon was receiving addresses from Saints of surrounding towns and vicinity. The unexpected visit of Brother H. W. Savage gave them encouragement. When it was arranged to hold a series of meetings in the Lant dining room, the gathering of a small group of members and their friends and relatives was begun. As a result, a sister was found who gave to the use of the group two large rooms in the upper part of her house, and a Sunday school was organized by the two conference appointees, William Anderson and H. W. Savage. Brother Lant was chosen superintendent.

This Sunday school has continued to function as a regularly organized body, and now, at the request of the members, Brother Lant writes of the organization and growth there. He continues his story: "Later Apostle James A. Gillen, District President Chapman, and Missionary G. H. Wixom organized us into a mission. This group has continued active. Although we were forced out of a meeting place by the earthquake in 1925 which wrecked the building, Sunday school and midweek prayer service continued at the different homes. At the time of the disaster we were buying a lot and had quite an equity in it. Brother Ira Lytel, a teacher, was in charge of the work here and acted as bishop's agent. Others moved in from time to time and the Sunday school attendance numbered about seventy-five. Brother Chapman came many times and held services, and we learned to love him. A wonderful interest was created at that time and still grows. Then the district president sent Brother Herbert Pedersen, of Long Beach, California, to take charge of the mission. This act gave us an elder and placed us in closer touch with the general church. Later the brother of our pastor, Elder Harry Pedersen, of Saint Joseph, Missouri, moved here with his family and then more men were called to the priesthood, and one of our dreams was realized—we were organized into a branch. Since that time many have been baptized, until the branch bids fair to become a big one."

At present the branch is moving forward with every department active. Brother Carl Heth is now the superintendent of a progressive Sunday school. Musical talent has for many months been put to use in an orchestra that "any branch would be proud to have," and there are singers among these Saints who are consecrating their time and voices to the enhancing of the branch services. Among those who have been baptized or who have moved to Santa Barbara are men and women who have teaching ability. The Department of Recreation and Expression is actively functioning. And as an index of their ambition Brother Leonard Younger has drawn a set of plans for a new building which has been approved by the city engineer's office. Some Saints come regularly a distance of forty miles to attend the Santa Barbara services.

"We now have," writes Brother Lant in conclusion, "two elders, four priests, two teachers, a deacon, and several promising young men who will in years to come no doubt find place in the priesthood. I have written this letter to help encourage those who are passing through the discouragements which attend early local struggles for organization. Our experience here will help them to realize that the future means reward for their present labors."

Burlington, Iowa

Sunday, October 26, was a day the Burlington Saints will long remember. It was Decision Day and Rally Day in one. Our Rally Day was postponed from the last Sunday in September because of some unavoidable and unpleasant coincidences which happened just prior to that time.

The church school opened at 9.30, in charge of Sister Emma Bromann. "Cross bearers" was the theme for the day. Appropriate songs were sung by the school. Instrumental music and a duet were special numbers. At the church hour Elder F. C. Bevan, of Ottumwa, was the speaker. The quiet and attention of this service was very good, and the spirit of love and reverence brought one of the gifts which is rarely witnessed on such occasions. After the speaker had preached for some time, he was carried away by the power of the Lord and addressed the Saints first in commendation of past conditions in the branch, second in prophecy of that which is in store for them, and third in admonition to heed the Father's counsel and be found ready and willing to execute his will. A bright future is in store for Burlington Branch if each one who bears His name will keep His laws.

This was indeed a Rally Day for us. It put away that feeling of "I can't" and filled each heart with a desire to say "I'll do what you want me to do, dear Lord."

Luncheon was served at 12.30 in the lower rooms of the church.

Baptismal service was performed at 1.30, Pastor F. T. Mussell baptizing two and Brother Bevan two. The candidates were Lorena Pearl Dixon, Marjory Matilda Pendleton, Evelyn Lorena Dixon, and Elsie Walters. There are prospective members who were unable to decide at this time.

The church was beautifully decorated for the day with ferns and potted flowers. A large basket of yellow, white, and lavender chrysanthemums, and vases of white and yellow fall flowers made an appropriate setting for the services.

The confirmation service followed the baptismal exercise, a short time being given to testimony, song, and thanksgiving. Then an important decision was made by members of the branch. They have set out to raise one thousand dollars for the building fund, to be paid within the month of November. Individuals responded, and the various auxiliaries have pledged. This is a demonstration of the extent of the transition from the "I can't" to the "I can" spirit.

At 7.30 in the evening there was a song service, followed by a short talk by Brother Bevan, after which the playlet,

"The challenge of the cross," was presented by members of the branch.

Every seat was filled for these services, a large per cent of nonmember friends being present.

MRS. MARTHA WEISHAUP.

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho

The afternoon of October 8 Patriarch Richard Baldwin and his faithful helper, Sister Baldwin, came to Coeur d'Alene. The members are greatly encouraged at the success of their endeavors and the interest shown in other branches and groups in Spokane District where they have been laboring. We were ready for Brother and Sister Baldwin. Sister Baldwin's class work in religious education preceding Brother Baldwin's sermon each week-day evening was very instructive. His sermons were inspiring and caused the members to feel that we should dedicate our lives anew to the cause of Christ. The meetings closed Sunday evening, October 19.

On the morning of that day the branch adopted the plan of Religious Education as outlined by the general church. Our school is small, only sixty-one members being enrolled. Nevertheless we feel that we will make a success of this new undertaking.

September 21 Elder A. C. Martin closed a successful series of meetings conducted for two weeks, and as a result two adults were baptized, James Bond and Myrtle Palmer. By the baptism of Brother Bond, another family circle was completed. Other nonmembers have been attending services quite regularly and are becoming much interested in the message.

MRS. L. E. HOLMES.

New Castle, Pennsylvania

The branch at New Castle is thriving under the direction of Elder William McCune.

The Saints were glad to welcome Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, of Independence, and Elder T. M. Carr, president of Pittsburgh District, for two nights. The night of October 29 they showed slides and talked of the pictures which Brother Ellis brought with him from his former mission in the islands of the Southern Pacific. On Thursday night Brother Ellis talked on "Religion." The Saints enjoyed their brief stay, and hope they will soon return.

The branch is soon to follow the new church school program, which we are studying at the present time.

FLORA DAVIS.

Portland, Oregon

Portland Branch is growing spiritually as well as in other ways. There is larger attendance at all meetings than heretofore, which evinces a keener interest on the part of members and friends in the gospel.

Elder Daniel Sorden, the new pastor, who with his family has worked himself into the hearts of the people of this district, is finding that the members here are extending the hand of appreciation. All can readily see the efforts of the Sorden family in the Lord's work.

Each evening of the week of September 28 Brother Sorden conducted a class on "Personal evangelism," convincing the members that each should be a messenger bearing to the world the glad tidings of the gospel. He also conducts a class each Monday evening on teacher's training and the study of the Bible. This class is mostly attended by young people.

Harley Morris, branch secretary, has instituted a card index system to care for the membership, and this gives us a clear conception of local development and growth.

October 26, Decision Day, a baptismal service was held, two candidates being baptized, Ruth Kellum, a young woman, and Phyllis Laird, eight years of age. After the confirmation of the new members the remainder of the morning service was devoted to the testimonies of several in the congregation, who related experiences which led them to the latter-day light or of the spirit which attended their baptism. There are others here who, we feel, will soon be ready for baptism.

Brother Mark Yeoman gave a lecture illustrated with colored slides of Zion's National Park and other Utah and Arizona scenery October 10. A short program followed the lecture. A silver offering taken was applied to the deficit on the church building. October 23 a rummage sale was held by the Women's Department, the proceeds being also donated to relieve the church debt.

During the past summer and fall the members of the priesthood have been visiting among the Saints, doing what they could to keep the spirit of the work alive in every heart.

Topeka, Kansas

621 Jackson Street, Floor 3

During the Kansas Free Fair the Women's Department of Topeka Branch operated a lunch stand. Though it required strenuous effort, the workers felt repaid when the net proceeds were added to the building fund. The women are studying the Book of Mormon, several working for credit in a correspondence course. Sister C. J. Sheets has charge of the class. Their regular monthly social hour for September was conducted at the home of Sister Perla Elerick.

Pastor Phillips and family have suffered the loss of their eldest daughter who passed away while undergoing an operation September 9. Eleanor was loved by her many friends. Saints join with a host of friends in Topeka and elsewhere in extending sympathy. The funeral was held at Saint Joseph, Missouri.

We are glad to again have the children in regular services. The ban is now lifted after a threatened epidemic of infantile paralysis.

Several members attended the institute held at Fanning in September, and nine received credits for class work.

Members of the priesthood occupying the stand are O. E. Weedmark, F. O. Kelly, and G. G. Phillips. All have made splendid contributions in the presentation of their themes.

Several nonmembers together with the Saints enjoyed a benefit supper held at the home of Brother and Sister C. J. Sheets the evening of October 10.

College Day was appropriately observed with an impromptu program in charge of O. E. Weedmark. Those contributing were Sisters Sheets, Kelly, Deller, and Brothers F. O. Kelly, and L. M. Pitsenberger.

Some splendid cottage prayer meetings have been held of late at the homes of various members.

Rally Day services were conducted October 19. Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith was present and gave three excellent sermons on the themes, "What does your church mean to you?" "Charity," and "The Restoration." There was a solo by Sister Emma Happe, and a piano solo by Vernon Goodfellow at the morning service. A basket dinner was eaten at noon.

A musical program by talent from Chelsea Church, Kansas City Stake, was held in the evening preceding the preaching service. This program was sponsored by Sister O. E. Weedmark. The visitors who gave the program were Jessie Belle Taylor, Mabel Snell, Fred Snell, and Raymond Blyle. They were accompanied on the trip by Ralph Snell, Mayme Wells, and Earl Bearse.

Sister Vida Zirkle and husband are the proud parents of a boy born October 13. They have named him Howard Quinton.

MRS. H. C. PITSENBERGER.

Little Deer Isle, Maine

Rally Day, September 28, was observed in this branch. Sunday school convened at one o'clock in the afternoon, Sisters Laura Eaton, superintendent, and Grace Eastman, assistant, at their posts. Every officer and teacher was present. Fifty-five were in attendance, which was encouraging, our average attendance being about thirty-five. The opening was preceded by a song service. Elder H. H. Billings offered the invocation and then came class study.

Following a brief intermission at the close of the class study, a social service was opened, Elder H. H. Billings in charge assisted by Priest Willie Haskell. As a result of official visiting in the homes, twenty-five members were present out of an enrollment of one hundred and twenty. A number of earnest prayers and testimonies brightened the hour, and a good degree of the Holy Spirit was enjoyed.

The evening preaching service began at seven o'clock, Elder H. H. Billings presiding. Priest Eddie Eaton offered the invocation, and the scripture was read by Brother Billings, Matthew 7, from which he selected two verses as the foundation for his evening topic. A ladies' quartet sang an acceptable number, and an offering was taken to defray expenses on a case of clams sent by the branch to the Harvest Festival at Independence. Half a hundred were present at the evening hour.

Not being a member of this branch but having resided here a few years, I wish to commend the local group. The ranks of Little Deer Isle Branch have been somewhat diminished of late by death and the removal of three families, yet the faithful few are actively following the leadership of Brother Billings, who has been in service for several years. They are ready to respond to the financial aid of the church, and during Sacrifice Week their offerings amounted to one hundred dollars. One year ago two young men were called to the priesthood, Cecil Billings to the office of priest and Tommie Eastman to the office of teacher, and recently another young man, Garfield Billings, was called to be a priest. The harvest is great and the laborers are few, but God is calling young men into his service who must qualify for their respective duties. May the blessings of the Lord attend them.

E. M. BILLINGS.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The third Stake Leadership School commenced Sunday night when President F. M. McDowell delivered the opening address. His subject was "And Jesus taught." Preceding the address there was a special musical program. Many members and friends heard Brother McDowell's sermon.

Class work in "Youth's church problems," "Doctrine and Covenants, its message for today," and "Beginner's course in story-telling" opened promptly at 7.45 Monday night. The members of the stake were asked to select those subjects which best met their needs. Courses in "Stewardship essentials," "Use of the Bible in Religious Education," and "Youth's responsibility to the next generation," will be offered next week. In this school Central Church and all Kansas City Stake has another splendid opportunity to hear interesting topics discussed by leading church workers.

Beautiful music, a profitable class period, and the spirit of friendliness characterized Sunday's sessions morning and evening.

Gladstone Church

Church school and preaching service sessions were well attended October 26. Elder Alvin Knisley was the speaker. In the evening Elder Charles G. Lewis preached. He was the speaker for the meetings held at the home of Brother Barham, 3600 Morrell Street, for two weeks. A good attendance at the home meetings was encouraging to those in charge. Since November 3 these meetings have continued at the home of Elder A. R. Moore, 335 South Drury Avenue.

Our Departed Ones

McFEE.—Edison McFee was born at Kingston, Missouri, September 13, 1881. He was baptized into the church by Elder T. W. Chatburn in the days of his youth, and to the faith he remained true till the end. He passed away after a lingering illness October 20, 1930. Is survived by one son, a brother, his father and mother. The funeral was held at the home of his father near Hamilton, Missouri, the sermon by Elder F. L. Hinderks, Cameron, Missouri.

She also reared Charles F. Klusman, whose mother died when he was six months old. Four children preceded her in death. She was a faithful member of the Reorganized Church for thirty years and did all she could to advance the latter-day work, always making a great effort to be present at church and meetings of the Women's Department. She was strong in the faith and testimony and a steady reader of the church papers. She passed away October 12, 1930. The funeral was held in Yuma, October 15, 1930, and the interment was in Yuma Cemetery, Elder J. D. Curtis, of Colorado Springs officiating.

Deacon Brown's weekly story:

Last week I went out with the young folk to gather nuts in the woods. When the cars stopped they hopped out, raced up the hill, and out of sight.

While I was sitting there waiting, I looked across the road. There was a big tree, practically bare; but I knew it was a walnut.

The ground under the tree was nearly covered with fine large nuts. I gathered a good big sackful, and sat in the car and waited.

Then the kids came back. The boys had torn their breeches, and the girls had scratched their arms. All of them were tired and dirty. They had a few poor little nuts to show for their trouble.

"Why, Deacon," they asked, "where did you get them?"

"Right here on the road," I said.

Individual Responsibility to Church Finances

Many organizations finance themselves by dues and fees which are payable periodically, and good standing in the organization is closely related to prompt and full payment of such dues. Of course such organizations can not entirely escape the pressure put upon them by times of industrial depression, and their membership total is likely to be affected by suspension for nonpayment of dues; but such societies are not affected in the same way as are those in which funds are raised by voluntary contributions. In the latter the "budget" is likely to be less certain of achievement, as there is an indefiniteness of income more variable than are the expenses fixed by the budget appropriations.

In our church, to a large extent financed by voluntary contributions, we are quite certain to feel sharply any pronounced general industrial depression, for the simple reason that persons are quite likely to meet other obligations before making contributions for church support. This throws a degree of confusion into our church finances which should not be, and at present we find ourselves in a condition which might have been prevented, and can yet be remedied, if the moral responsibility of each member to contribute towards church support were more generally considered as an obligation as binding as any other.

Bishop Carmichael's administration as chief financial officer is characterized by the distinct and constant effort he is making to impress upon every member of the church the obligation each member of the church has to live up to the financial law. Conscience and desire to keep divine law properly prompt obedience to the law of faith, repentance, and baptism; conscience prompts scrupulous observance of the rites and ceremonies of prayer meeting, family devotion, attendance at and participation in the Lord's Supper; and conscience and a sense of obedience to God's law will as deeply impress the sense of responsibility to comply fully with the law of tithing, consecration, and surplus, and, I might add, stewardship.

When the time comes, as it must come, that all church members sense the very close relationship of the financial or temporal law of the church to the spiritual ones, in fact, sense the unity between them, then greater blessings will come to the church as a whole and to members as individuals than ever before. And when that time comes (and we hope it is near), the work of the church will move rapidly towards its consummation, and we shall happily approach our goals.

Have you done your duty?

The Gospel of Gratitude

At one time during his ministry Christ taught his followers a lesson of faith closely linked with gratitude. He was going to Jerusalem and in the course of his journey passed through Samaria and Galilee. The Scripture version continues:

And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off: and they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us. And when he saw them, he said unto them, Go show yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed. And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God, and fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a Samaritan. And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine? There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger. And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole.

History gives to the world countless examples of those who lived the gospel of gratitude—men and women who did more than their "duty," who were truly profitable servants, who served humanity gladly and gratefully because it was their gracious privilege to have a great vision and a great determination and a great patience.

Today there are among us many spiritual and moral lepers who are seeking the cleansing and healing blessing of the Savior. To such, when they come to him in humility and true repentance, Christ speaks gently: "Behold, the kingdom of God is within you," and they are given a new vision of things as they are—the beauty of the earth, the mercy of heaven, the generosity of mankind. In return Christ expects them to "give glory to God" in words and deeds.

It was the Great Teacher who taught men the lesson of gratitude, who lived the gospel of gratitude. And in return he asks of us our thankful help in carrying forward his work, not only at this season of the year when our attention is especially called to thanksgiving but at all times. His great love and his righteous life remind us that it is our pleasure to serve God with gratitude and thanksgiving for the greatest gift the world has known—the Christ.

"We are writing a gospel,
A chapter each day,
By deeds that we do,
By words that we say;
People read what we write,
Whether faithless or true.
Say! What is the gospel
According to you?"

From a Book of Old Hymns

There is sometimes a beauty in simplicity, and even in a simplicity that is not perfect in artistic form, that can not be found in many other places.

Not so long ago I dropped into a certain house and was waiting for a friend of mine. As I waited, there came from the next room the sounds of some one playing the piano, playing from a book of old hymns, at first picking them out with one hand, now and then adding a bit of the bass clef. And somehow, in spite of the errors here and there, the note clumsily struck, the irregular starting and stopping, there was beauty in it all that touched my heart.

To those who lived in this particular house the sounds of the piano perhaps brought no such experience; this particular person may have played away at the piano so often that they tired of hearing the hymns picked out in this manner. But to me it brought a sense of something beautiful.

Probably one thing that caused it be so was the nature of the music, the hymns, themselves—tunes and words that came out of the deep religious experiences of men and women of the past and which have through the years and perhaps hundreds of years been sung and oftentimes lived anew by those who have felt the urge to seek and follow after the Almighty. Probably there was stirred in my own heart some memories long forgotten—feelings that had for a time been unmoved—and perhaps it was well that these simply played strains should be thus borne to my ears, to stir me thus. For I had a feeling as of something neglected, of something I should have been doing and had not. I had also a sense of having been sore and wounded, and now for a moment healed by the power of this faltering music.

Doubtless, too, there came in the midst of these simple strains a sense of worshipful self-expression on the part of the one whose fingers wandered over the keys, a sense of kinship with those out of whose rich experience the melody was born. This, too, was simple—but most beautiful. L. E. F.

Speaking to Youth

A year ago there was a man who could not talk to juniors or to junior young people. He spoke an old man's language; he pondered an old man's thoughts. He steadfastly refused invitations to speak to younger audiences, because he had the fixed idea that he could not. It had become almost an article of his faith that it was his calling to speak to adult audiences.

But the need of speakers for junior audiences is great, and the lack of them is the despair of all superintendents.

One day a superintendent asked him to speak to her intermediates. She pleaded with more than the ordinary persistence: there was a note of pathos and despair in her voice. With many misgivings he consented.

Before the audience of youngsters he felt dreadfully inadequate. His knees trembled, and he fumbled through columns of long words that stood like a forest between him and his audience; but he tried to reach them. He finally managed to get through his pointless little stories and his dry advice.

He felt that he had failed, but he saw the need; and when he was asked the next time he tried again, with somewhat better effect. He found the experience exhilarating. He kept trying, and he learned to improve his stories. He reduced the amount of didactic and abstract material. As he went farther, he found some of the youngsters sitting forward in their seats. They whispered less, and paid better attention, and sometimes their eyes shone. He found that he loved them, and he had reason to believe that they liked him.

It was strange to him that for so many years this type of religious experience had been unknown to him, strange that he had so completely ruled out of his life this means of service and this source of happiness. He took a greater interest in all younger people, wherever he met them. He found them endlessly fascinating and enjoyable. His whole personality changed somewhat, and he seemed younger.

Perhaps there are many who are like this man, depriving themselves of happiness and an opportunity for service, simply because they think they can not talk to younger auditors. They should try a few times to live with younger people, and share their problems and experience. The result might be startling. L. L.

Why the Church Must Teach

Religion Is a Fundamental Need of Society

By F. M. McDowell

Just now the weight of the world's great social problems almost overpowers us. Law enforcement, prohibition, world peace—these are the concerns of our greatest statesmen and of all of those who care for world progress. Upon the solution of these problems depends the very destiny of civilization.

Through bitter experience we have been compelled to learn that legislative enactments and constitutional amendments do not bring obedience to law and that peace pacts alone do not abolish war. Back of all these we now know that there is something far more fundamental. Some claim that this far more fundamental thing is the education of mankind in the arts of obedience, temperance, and international cooperation. We believe this view to be correct as far as it goes, but what kind of an education will produce these results?

The great social virtues of obedience, temperance, morality, tolerance, and peace are an essence, something spiritual. They arise out of the sublimation of the great inner urges of mankind. They appear as the fruitage of spiritual rebirth. They are sought as the product of religion in its best form. Nothing short of the highest type of religious education can produce these virtues in men.

The Fundamental Needs of Society Center in Persons

Education has long been recognized as a fundamental instrument in preventing social ills, assuring social stability, and stimulating progress. Why? Because society can rise no higher than the character of its citizens, and those agencies which have to do with the production of good character in the members of a society are most fundamental to its welfare. Of such agencies, religion must be given the first place.

We submit the opinion of three of the many students of our social life, who might be quoted. George Walter Fiske says:

The loss of religion demoralizes people and degenerates a nation. The moral foundations of society have never been safely laid except in religious sentiments, convictions, and ideals—religion is the soul of civilization itself without which it reverts to crass materialism—in the moral realm there is absolutely no safe substitute for the sanctions of religion—there is no sane basis for democracy except in righteousness and no sure basis for righteousness except in religion.

Henry F. Cope in a similar vein says:

The simple fact is that a world without the social control of the spirit of religion is unthinkable. The only motive under which men can live together in the future is that of unselfish love—the life of a religious society is the only hope for all social living in the future.

And finally, Doctor Charles Ellwood, in support of the same viewpoint, says:

Idealistic social morality without any religious sanction, so far as social science can see, is an impossible dream; and the more complex our social life becomes, demanding more complex and difficult adjustments on the part of the individual, the more impossible a high social morality without a correspondingly high social religion becomes. The death of religion would accordingly mean the death of all higher civilization.

Religion Is Fundamental to the Preservation of Our Social Institutions

Industrial investments, banking exchange, our monetary system, democracy, family life—all rest upon faith. Men must believe in each other if these institutions of our society are to endure. The canker that eats out the very soul of these institutions is the loss of faith in men, the lack of the firm belief in the supremacy of personal values. Such a belief must be more than mere intellectual assent. It must be a deep abiding conviction that will persist though all hell be arrayed against it. Such a deep and abiding conviction is the very essence of Christian religion. It will arise in an enduring form only in the souls of reborn men.

Religion Is a Vital Factor in Bringing about the Reconstruction of Society

It is not mere preservation of society that we desire. The dreams of God and man center in a reconstructed society based upon world brotherhood. Alas, how easy it has been to dream such dreams! How freely we have talked—how slow and difficult has been our progress—what fundamental changes must take place in the hearts of men before we can have a new society—what leaps of faith—what courageous adventuring will be required.

The reconstruction of society awaits the willingness of men to pay the price of the effort. That price includes the willingness to fight for certain "sublime assurances." It includes faith, prophetic vision, courage, self-sacrifice. Nothing less than the gospel of Christ carries the power to transform the hearts of men.

On the church which professes to represent Christ on earth today rests the responsibility for leadership in this field. Inspired and guided by the presence of the Spirit of God, aided by all the carefully tested methods of teaching which have appeared as the result of the experience of the race, conscious of the vital needs of men and society, desirous above all else of building the kingdom of God, the church must teach.

Corner Stone Laid

For New Independence Sanitarium and Hospital November 11

The ceremonies attending the laying of the corner stone of the new Independence Sanitarium and Hospital were held on the afternoon of Armistice Day, Tuesday, November 11, at 2 o'clock. President Frederick M. Smith, chairman of the Board of Trustees, was in charge of the program. Roger T. Sermon, Mayor of Independence and member of the Board, also spoke and directed the actual placing of the corner stone. E. B. Street, Independence superintendent of schools, was presented, and he in turn introduced a number of men and women on the stand who had served actively in the hospital campaign.

On the platform with members of the Board of Trustees and the campaign workers were members of the medical and supervisory staff of the hospital, members of the dental profession, and a group of uniformed nurses from the School of Nursing.

The audience of several hundred people sang "America" as the opening number, under the direction of Elder John F. Sheehy, accompaniment being played by a quartet of instruments. Reverend H. P. Hunter, minister of the Watson Memorial Methodist Church, offered the invocation.

The Board of Trustees of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital under its amended articles of incorporation consists of: Mayor Roger T. Sermon; Robert Barr, judge of the eastern division of the Jackson County Court; Frederick M. Smith, Elbert A. Smith, and F. M. McDowell, of the First Presidency; Albert Carmichael, J. A. Becker, and M. H. Siegfried, of the Presiding Bishopric; and Doctor A. W. Teel, church physician. L. E. F.

Address of President Frederick M. Smith

I think we are all agreed that this is an auspicious occasion, not only for this particular institution but for the community itself when we can feel that there is being accomplished something very definite in the way of progress toward facilities to enhance the interests of our community health, and we trust that this is a symbol of continuous progress, so that eventually we can feel that radiating from this center are those influences which shall make themselves felt in all parts of the community for a better condition in sanitation and a better and wider knowledge of the laws of health, and that as citizens we may have herein laid foundations for a general euphoria that will be progressive and beneficial.

The improved conditions which this building will afford to those engaged in the preservation of health encourages us and will undoubtedly result in better work being done than has been done before, and we trust and firmly believe that it is but a start toward a better plan and a larger and more influential health center for this community.

Independence is a community, which while closely connected socially and industrially with the greater community of which we are a part, is more or less independent; and the time has come in its history when Independence itself must be concerned about its response to demands that will maintain more or less of its independence and that at the same time will put it on a firm foundation toward meeting its own needs and taking care of its own citizens, especially in regard to health.

I doubt not that this institution will not only enlarge its scope so as to become of larger community value, but eventually, because of our location, because of conditions, this institution will make itself felt throughout the entire county.

So, today, it seems to me we can congratulate ourselves on making a step in this direction and seeing definite signs of progress towards that time when Independence can furnish more of the needs of the community. As a rapidly growing center, Independence has need for its own hospital system; hence, we are today seeing the promise of that which, without doubt, is destined to meet these needs in a larger and a much more effective way. Let us hope that this enlarged hospital symbolizes the progress we are making as a community in supplying our needs; and as this work goes to completion, may it still be a symbol of the progress our community is making in supplying still other needs that our spirit of progress, our heritage of history, and the bright promises of the future demand.

We must bend every energy toward the completion of this hospital, not only this section that you see here, but the enlarged hospital of which this is a part, which when it is completed will eventually have not less than five hundred beds.

I am not going to take much of your time, because without any doubt Mayor Sermon, as he lays the corner stone, will want to tell you a number of things he has in his mind. But let me just suggest to you an idea of the burden being carried by the Board of Trustees of this institution by saying that the hospitals which have been completed in this community and other places average a cost of from $2,700 per bed up to as high as $10,000 per bed; and yet we are undertaking to build this hospital of 150 beds at a cost of less than $2,000 per bed. That means we are watching expenses closely; we are studying every engineering problem that can be studied, so that if possible we can still maintain the necessary efficiency in the building. If any of you folks think this is an easy task, come over some time while we are discussing the problems involved and see how pleasant it is to have to meet this situation. In this job we promise you this, that we are going to do the best we can to spend the community's money in such a way that they will get the most possible for every dollar that has been contributed.

Address of Mayor Roger T. Sermon

Doctor Smith, Ladies and Gentlemen: This is indeed a very pleasant occasion for me. I am sure that all of the work I have been able to do in this campaign for the raising of funds for this building and subsequently meeting with the Board in planning this building has been most pleasant. May I at this time review briefly the history of this project.

For several years the civic leaders of Independence and eastern Jackson County have realized the need of a larger, modern up-to-date hospital for our community. It was no small task to find a method whereby we might procure such an institution. Through the generosity of this church, this Latter Day Saint Church, this has been made possible.

On February 12, I believe it was, several citizens appeared before the directors of the Chamber of Commerce and talked about building a new hospital in Independence. The president of the Chamber of Commerce was authorized after that meeting by his Board of Directors to appoint a committee from that body to meet with President Smith and his associates. This resulted in several meetings. The thing uppermost in our mind was to get some feasible plan of raising the money necessary for this project.

You all are more or less familiar with the campaign, the wonderful energy injected into it by the individual workers and those in charge of that campaign. I want to say here that Independence is to be congratulated upon her generosity, upon her citizenship in this campaign. I would like to have time to name each and every individual who took part in this civic enterprise, and I want to say that it is a civic enterprise.

The church offered to match dollars with the community in the erecting of this building. Those of us who investigated the matter were a little bit afraid we could not raise $125,000. That is a lot of money for a small community, as we have here. But, strange to say, it was comparatively easy after we got started, and instead of $125,000, there was raised $138,000. Again may I congratulate the people of Independence upon this splendid achievement.

I want to speak a word of commendation for those who have had direct charge of this campaign. I think it is due them. This group that you see gathered here are to be congratulated upon their part in this splendid achievement. I want to say that they gave hours and days to this project. I want especially to say that the church board lent its influence as well as its energy in making this campaign a success.

Not only was Independence and eastern Jackson County generous in this project, but others were generous, and largely through outside aid was this goal reached.

It is now my pleasure to attend to the corner stone laying. There are certain things that very properly belong in this box which will be sealed and placed in the corner stone. The first thing is a copy of the amended Articles of Incorporation of the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital.

[Then follows a list of articles placed in the box, listed in the Independence Examiner of November 11. Then the box was sealed with solder and placed in the recess prepared for it, and the stone was lowered. After this ceremony, the Mayor continued his remarks.]

To those of you who have pledged to this enterprise, may I beseech you to be faithful in discharging your obligations. It is indeed important. The Hospital Board is going ahead with this work upon the theory that those who have pledged will pay their obligations promptly.

Concerning Your Health

ATONIC DYSPEPSIA

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

This form of dyspepsia is of the motor insufficiency type; that is, the musculature of stomach lacks functional power, both as respects gastric secretion and movements. It is often secondary to constitutional diseases. Vomiting is absent, but there is usually fullness and oppression in the chest after meals. The tongue is flabby, furred, tremulous, and the papillæ for instance, small raised places on the back of the tongue, are more prominent than normal.

The urine may be normal or highly colored from urates. This form of stomach trouble usually has its beginning in youth, especially among young women, and may persist through life.

The diet is of utmost importance in such cases. It may be made more liberal as improvement is manifest; therefore it is necessary to be patient and follow instructions. Don't get worried if you lose a little weight, for remember, you are giving your entire body a rest, and what you lose you will regain as soon as you come back to health.

One trouble you will encounter is everyone's advice. It will be a great help if you cultivate a hobby of some sort, whether work or play, in order to get your mind off your condition.

You should chew your food at least twice as long as you think necessary, being careful not to gulp your food. Drink between meals only, and do not drink anything while food is in your mouth. Do not soften food by dipping in liquid, such as soup, coffee, tea, or milk. Be cautious about overeating. Bear in mind that it is much better to undereat than to overeat. Leave the table just before you are satisfied. The food should be of moderate temperature, not too hot or too cold. Fruit juices are extremely important. They may be used either mixed with water or plain, without sugar.

Exercise moderately in order "to work up an appetite." Live in the open air as much as possible. If any food disagrees with you, eat a smaller amount. You may then be able to gradually increase the amount, but should you become satisfied that it disagrees with you, discard it.

You may eat the following foods: Unsweetened orange juice, apple juice, fresh grape juice, strawberries, orange marmalade, milk and milk preparations, baked potato with butter, sour milk, buttermilk, or cultured milk, grape fruit, cereals very well boiled, green vegetable salad, cauliflower and very young carrots, macaroni and butter sauce, jello, junket and custard, egg soft boiled or poached if they agree.

Avoid in general: All fried foods, bulky foods, pork, veal, ham, bacon, liver, goose, duck, salmon, shad, eel, lobster, crab, shrimp, milk with meals (especially meat meals), sweets in general, pastry, etc. Coffee, tea, or cocoa with meals. Fats and fatty foods. Too much of a variety in the menu. Coarse vegetables as boiled cabbage, beets, radishes, old carrots or turnips, onions, cucumbers, dried peas or beans, mushrooms; soft, hot, fresh breads; grid-dle cakes, sour foods, such as pickles, olives, etc.; spiced, smoked, pickled, or salted foods; rich gravies, sauces, or desserts with meals; liquids with your meals, as soup for starting. (Soup should be used alone as a meal.)

Enthusiasm is the doorway toward greater things; Earnestness is the password.—Selected.

Faith—the Opportunity

A MEDITATION

By Harold Dewsnup

In a quiet hour of meditation, at the close of a day's experiences, typical of the hurry and bustle of present-day commercial life, there was opportunity for contemplation of spiritual things. Infrequent as such occasions are amidst the complexity of modern surroundings, their value should not be underrated on that score. From a tired mind, pent up in a weary body, varying thoughts surged through with increasing magnitude, until it became necessary to jot down the truths revealed. Out of them all, one phrase predominated and gave particular encouragement. Perhaps if passed on it would benefit others.

"Faith realizes human limitations but visualizes spiritual expectations."

One evening, many months later, intent dwelling on the theme brought to mind new thoughts, which sought expression in an attempt to comprehend fully the depth of meaning in the message given. As received, they are passed on.

Faith in humanity is dependent on human power. Necessary as it is to have faith of this character, its efficacy is confined to certain limits. Marvelous results have occurred when men have had faith in each other, and yet, sad to relate, the opposite has come to pass when that faith has been betrayed, or when weakness of body or mind has frustrated fulfillment. The fact that men fly through the air is first of all the result of faith. In the press we read of epoch-making journeys, in respect to distance, speed, altitude, and duration. As we view the rapid strides of advancement in this direction, we look with the eye of faith to further and greater conquests. Alas, we are made sad though, for there are still dangers to be faced, dangers which prove the undoing of even the confident and experienced. Loss of life and limb are often reported. Faults in the make-up of both men and their mechanized creations cause great sorrow and anxiety daily.

Do these set-backs deter the maimed, or the comrades of those who have flown ahead? No! The task is deemed more necessary, and added knowledge leads to increased determination to conquer. Faith is still at work, even in spite of the realization that perhaps, after all, absolute safety in the air is unattainable because of the mightier power of the elements.

If faith in gospel language and experience meant even this, the results could not be other than far-reaching. If the human family made up its mind to conquer self and environment in spite of all seeming obstacles, the beauty of true life and being would change the outlook of nations. The true view surpasses this, however, as faith is not only to be defined as "life in scorn of consequences," but belief in the Creator of man and the Giver of the life that is man's stewardship.

Faith understands the human limitations, for man is prone to err and often slow to grasp the needs of the hour, but he is given the opportunity to visualize that overcoming here means entrance and ingoing to a realm of celestial life.

The message of faith is emblazoned in heart-stirring language, in ever-present viewpoint. Shall we interpret aright and live forever, or shall we fail to reach the heights of expectation, through constant thought of life's limitations?

"Take Time to Be Holy"

(From a Radio Sermon)

By Evan Fry

These words come to us from a well-known and beautiful hymn. I need not dwell on the speed with which we move in modern life. Everyone is too familiar with the speed of modern transportation and communication to need any enlightenment on that subject. But it begins to seem that speed has trapped us in a vicious circle. As things go faster and faster, our nervous tension increases in proportion, and man craves and demands greater and still greater speed. And when he has saved his minutes or hours of time by reason of his increased speed, instead of enjoying his leisure time in some sensible and beneficial way, he invents new things to do that must be hurried. You know that is true; you and I have been doing it so long that we can't remember when we started. The favorite expression of the average American citizen, child or adult, has come to be, "I just can't find time to do that"; or "if I just had the time, I'd do so and so." Time is valuable now as it never was before, and therefore it is becoming more and more vital that we spend our time in pursuits that will be of most value to us—that will give us the greatest return for our valuable investment. In the midst of these conditions, I repeat that the admonition of the hymn becomes increasingly pertinent and timely, and we may do well to heed its homely warning.

Time and Determination

It is significant that the hymn says take time to be holy. If you wait until you find the time to be holy, you will be waiting through all eternity with the time still unfound. The Christlike life must be a life of constant and vigorous activity. Holiness, like most other things that go to make up character, is almost entirely a matter of habit. The only way to become permanently holy (if such a thing be possible) is to make a conscious and determined effort each day to be holy until the process becomes a matter of habit. In other words, holiness is a matter of practice. People are always saying to me, "I wish I could play the piano," or "I'd give anything if I could play the piano," yet nine out of ten of those same persons can't play and never will play for just one simple reason—they can't find the time to practice. Holiness has somewhat gone out of fashion, so people don't go around saying, "I wish I could be holy," any more, but if crowded into a corner and asked about their religion, they would probably respond with the same excuse: that they haven't time any more to pray, or to sit down quietly and think things out, or to reason their problems to a conclusion with the aid of the old family Bible.

Seeking God

If you have a friend whom you love very much, and whose companionship and affection you desire, you are going to take time to renew that friendship and association frequently. Yet how many Christians who profess a deep love for God and for his Son are totally unacquainted with either one! Jesus has said, "Seek, and ye shall find; ask, and ye shall receive; knock, and it shall be opened unto you"; and we calmly read his words, and trust in his promise, but neglect to take the time to seek and ask and knock. We just can't find the time to talk to God as a friend, and to cultivate that friendship until it can become a very real and tangible and soul-sustaining thing in our lives. Then when some great upheaval comes which tries every fiber of our spirit, we look for God, hoping to find in him the friend that we need. Of course he is always there, and he is always the loving Father who is ready and anxious to greet his prodigal sons when they return, but how pathetically futile it is to try to establish in one day a friendship, the cultivation of which should have extended over a lifetime! Happy is the man who can go to God when in need, knowing that he is going to a friend with whom he has had daily communion and a long period of tried and proved acquaintance.

Holiness in Solitude

There is another significant verse in the hymn which has thus far suggested the thoughts of this meditation. "Take time to be holy; be calm in thy soul." The man who takes time to be holy, who has established the habit of holiness, who knows God as his very dear and intimate friend—will be calm in his soul. He has mastered the art of withdrawing himself from the mad rush of things of the world—of retiring into the sanctity and quietude of his own soul. The whirlwinds of speed by which he is surrounded do not draw him into their mad whirl. The contagion of speed which can hardly be escaped as long as we must deal with worldly things, can not enter his blood to poison his spiritual life. And happy also is the man who can be calm when everyone about him has lost his head in a mad whirl of speed and fast and riotous living.

An old adage says, "Do not waste time, for time is the stuff life is made of." We can all agree that time is valuable and that it should not be wasted; can we also agree that the most important thing in this life and in the life to come is happiness? We shall all do well to consider then whether we are spending our time in a manner that will produce lasting happiness. Think it over, and you will come to the conclusion that we could all afford to take more time to be holy!

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

The Young People's Division of the Department of Religious Education

By E. E. Closson, Director of Young People

The young people's division of the church school consists of three age-group departments, the junior young people (or intermediate), twelve to fifteen years of age; the senior young people, fifteen to eighteen; and the older young people from eighteen to twenty-four. All young people in a branch are members of this division and should be encouraged to participate in its program of activities. Perhaps many of the young married people will find their interest changing from the more active program for young people to one where they prefer the association and class study provided in the adult division. This will be especially true of young parents desiring study courses in child training and parentcraft. On the other hand there will be some individuals between twenty-five and thirty years of age who still find themselves congenial and their interests compatible with this older group of young people. No birthday should mark the advancement from this division to the adult division. It is more a matter of interests, development, and congenial association.

Aims and Objectives

The aims of the young people's division should be definitely set out by each local organization. No longer can the church be satisfied with a short period of indifferent study on Sunday. We learn to do by doing; therefore our program of religious education includes all phases of activity which develop character and help the individual to meet life situations religiously and adequately.

It may seem unnecessary to provide such an amount of detailed organization as is herein suggested through which to carry on the program for young people, but it should be remembered that the mechanics of maintaining many offices and committees to which there is considerable responsibility attached helps to stimulate personal interest, and the organization itself becomes an activity project. Locals should plan to stimulate a thorough organization in the young people's division in order that it may become the means of developing young men and women in a practical way for more serious positions of responsibility in the church.

Through-the-week socials, recreation, and other activities should be encouraged because of their intrinsic value to the individual rather than merely as a means of holding our youth to the practice of attending the Sunday services. The objective of the young people's division may be stated in terms of a well-planned program including opportunities for acts of service, fellowship groupings, social and recreational activities, worship and devotional services, cultural and expressional development, specific responsibilities, study courses, and for establishing standards of conduct that will help young people to choose the best that life has to offer them. Through all these activities must run the thread of brotherly love, reverence for God, and service to humanity; clean thoughts, kind words, noble deeds shall be the goal of every individual in his endeavor to develop a character that will reflect the Spirit of God.

Local Organization

The following complete organization is recommended for large branches where provision must be made for several hundred young people. In smaller branches it may be well to organize into only two groupings, the junior young people and the senior or older young people. Those under sixteen would be in one department while those above this age unite to form the other. When there are but few young people in the branch a still more condensed form of organization will be necessary. We should not be satisfied to minister only to the few who are now in regular attendance. The scope of our program makes ample provision for such a variety of activities that the interests of indifferent church members can be aroused, and young people who are not members of the church will be attracted. The local young people's division may be built up by stimulating interest in a program in which the young people find satisfaction through active participation.

Large Branch Organization

There should be organized a Young People's Executive Council consisting of:

1. The president of the young people's division, who is president of the Executive Council.
2. The secretary of the young people's division, who is secretary of the council.
3. One councilor representing the junior young people, who is the president of that group; one councilor from the senior young people and one from the older young people who preside over those groups or departments, respectively.

4. Activity workers in charge of worship, recreation, music, etc.
5. The supervisor of the young people's division.
6. The director of the church school and pastor of the branch are ex officio members of this council.

General meetings of the entire young people's division should be provided for throughout the year. Regular meetings of the executive council should be held at least once a month.

Each department in this division maintains a council of its own to regulate its affairs. The personnel of any one of these councils is made up of the president and secretary of the department, presidents of organized classes and activity groups, teachers or leaders of organized groups, the superintendent of the department, and the supervisor of the young people's division.

Regular meetings of these councils should be held monthly.

Medium-Size Branch Organization

An executive council similar to the one recommended for large branches should be provided. Each of the two departments maintains its own council which meets regularly.

MEDIUM-SIZE BRANCH ORGANIZATION

Small-Size Branch Organization

Under this form the executive council is made up of the president and secretary of the young people, presidents of organized classes, teachers and leaders of organized classes and activity groups, the supervisor of the young people's division, director of the church school, and the branch pastor. Regular meetings of the council should be provided.

SMALL-SIZE BRANCH ORGANIZATION

Activities within the Division

Each branch will find that local conditions will determine in a large measure the scope and nature of its activity program. The following general suggestions are made in the hope that they will serve to stimulate locals to venture further more energetically in providing through-the-week activities of an interesting, varied, and wholesome nature. Much of the work of planning and initiating these activities will be taken care of by the young people themselves in their council meetings and through their own officers and committees. Adult supervision is provided in the personnel of the young people's supervisor, the director of the church school, and the pastor.

These activities should be encouraged and participated in by the young people, though not always administered by the church school.

The above form of organization and the activity projects listed are not final. We feel that any minor changes that may later be found necessary can be made without seriously affecting the status of the plan as herein suggested. Branches are urged to adopt this form of organization for the young people as soon as local conditions warrant. We urge that the young people themselves cooperate with the pastor and other leaders in the constructive work of the branch. The general officers will be glad to assist the locals in their endeavor to plan and carry out a constructive program of religious education among the young people.

Junior Young People's (Intermediate) Worship Program for December

Arranged by Howard Cook, Leta B. Moriarty, and W. Earl Page

Christmas carols add lilt and sparkle to December's worship programs. Among the carols especially attractive to junior young people are "Silent night, holy night," Tyrolese air; "Once in Royal David's city," Alexander; "Away in a manger," Luther; "O little town of Bethlehem," Brooks; "I heard the bells," Longfellow; "Joy to the world," Watts; and "It came upon the midnight clear," Sears.

"It came upon the midnight clear," has been chosen as the month's theme song for the junior young people of the Stone Church because of its joyful music and its message. This hymn is No. 140 in Zion's Praises. It should be taught verse by verse to the entire group until it is memorized and made a vital part of their worship experience. This Christmas carol was written in America. A Boston minister, Doctor Edmund H. Sears, wrote it as a poem, but the next year the music was composed for it and it was adopted as a carol. The inspiration for the writing of the hymn came to the composer while reading Saint Luke's account of the angels' visit to the shepherds on the hillside of Judæa. A few moments before, everything was peaceful upon the hillside. The shepherds were resting on their cloaks, the sheep were huddled together asleep within the inclosure, the dog was on guard. Suddenly, overhead, there is a bright light. The shepherds start up, shading their eyes from its brilliance. The frightened sheep do not know which way to run; the dog cowers close to his masters. Then comes a wonderful vision. In the sky there appears an angel, and a voice announces to them the birth of the Lord and Savior. The angel points to a spot just a short distance away, where the village of Bethlehem is hidden among the trees, above it the brilliant, new star. And then the heavens are lighted and an angel host sings the message, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

This is the message of Christmas to the world; accordingly our junior young people are "Adventuring with Christ in peace and good will" during the month of December. In their worship the message of the angels to the shepherds, given a beautiful musical background, will leave in the hearts of the boys and girls a note of harmony and peace.

December 7, Sacrament Sunday, "God so loved the world." Song service led by the chorister. Hymns: "It came upon the midnight clear," Zion's Praises No. 140; "Glad tidings," Zion's Praises, No. 149; "Sing of his mighty love," Zion's Praises No. 110.

Call to worship:

"God is love; and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him. . . . We love him, because he first loved us. If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar: for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen? And this commandment have we from him, that he who loveth God love his brother also."—1 John 4: 16-21.

Self is the only prison
That can ever bind the soul;

That can bid the gates unroll;

And when he comes to call thee,
Arise and follow fast;
His way may lie through darkness,
But it leads to light at last.

—Henry Van Dyke.

People: We dedicate ourselves, O Lord.

Leader: To the sacred tasks of mental enrichment that through books and study and honest thinking make our minds alert,

People: We dedicate ourselves, O Lord.

People: We dedicate ourselves, O Lord.

Leader: To the happy privilege of learning thy will and of helping to achieve it in the world.

People: We dedicate ourselves, O Lord.

In him no South or North;
But one great fellowship of love
Throughout the whole wide earth.

In him shall true hearts everywhere,
Their high communion find;
His service is the golden cord
Close-binding all mankind.

Join hands then, brothers of the faith,
Whate'er your race may be,
Who serves my Father as a son
Is surely kin to me.

In Christ now meet both East and West,
In him meet South and North;
All Christly souls are one in him
Throughout the whole wide earth.

—John Oxenham.

Poem, "Christ wants the best," by the leader.

"Christ wants the best. He in the far-off ages
Once claimed the firstling of the flock, the finest of the wheat,
And still he asks his own in gentlest pleading,
To lay their highest hopes and brightest talents at his feet,
He'll not forget the feeblest service, humblest love;
He only asks that of our store we give to him
The best we have.

"Christ gives the best. He takes the hearts we offer
And fills them with his glorious joy and peace,
And in his service as we're growing stronger

The calls to grand achievements still increase.
The richest gifts for us on earth, or in heaven above,
Are hid in Christ. In Jesus we receive
The best we have.

"And is our best too much? Our loving service
For his sake? Oh, friend, let us remember
How once our Lord poured out his soul for us,
And in the prime of his mysterious manhood
Gave up his precious life upon the cross!
The Lord of lords, by whom the world was made,
Through bitter grief and tears, gave us
The best he had."

Hymn by the congregation, "We're marching to Zion,"
Zion's Praises No. 37.

Prayer of blessing on the achievements of the old year and the hope of the New Year.

sader's Hymn.

Taking up of offering.

The story of the Children's Crusade to Jerusalem.

Hymn, "Onward to Zion," by the quartet.

Address, "Going forward with Christ." The setting for this talk is the incident of Christ's farewell to his mother at Bethany and his words to his disciples telling them to follow him to Jerusalem.

Hymn by the congregation, "Glorious things are sung of Zion," Hymns of the Centennial, No. 63, Saints' Hymnal, No

gregation stands for dismissal:

"O Master, let me walk with thee
In lowly paths of service free;
Tell me thy secret; help me bear
The strain of toil, the fret of care.

"Help me the slow of heart to move
By some clear, winning word of love;
Teach me the wayward feet to stay,
And guide them in the homeward way.

"Teach me thy patience; still with thee
In closer, dearer company,
In work that keeps faith sweet and strong,
In trust that triumphs over wrong;

"In hope that sends a shining ray
Far down the future's broadening way,
In peace that only thou canst give,—
With thee, O Master, let me live."

Benediction.

Soft piano music as the congregation leaves the service.

Missouri State Convention of Religious Educa- tion Is Held in Independence

By C. B. W.

Latter Day Saint workers in religious education in Missouri and especially in Kansas City and Independence, were extended a cordial invitation to participate in the sixty-fifth annual convention of the State Sunday School Council, November 11 to 14.
While our church as a denomination is not a member of the International Council, our leaders in religious education, both in Independence and in many other cities, have enjoyed a very courteous and friendly relationship with representatives of the council. Attention was called recently to the large number of our church school leaders who are securing training in local schools under the direction of the council.

While we enjoy the confidence of other leaders in Christian education and have extended to us many evidences of courteous consideration, we should be extremely careful that our deportment and cooperation in earnest Christian citizenship shall merit their confidence, on the one hand, and yet that we maintain the integrity of our position as a church, on the other. We must not forget the specific objectives for which the latter-day message came to the world, nor cease our efforts to enable the church to accomplish its tasks. This calls for earnest, consecrated devotion to the work now before us. We must effectively demonstrate in our church life, individually and as a group, the saving principles of the gospel of Christ. Perhaps a supreme challenge comes to us in maintaining mutually helpful relations with other religionists the while we seek to make our special contribution to the building of our Master's kingdom.

A number of Latter Day Saint workers in various fields of religious education were present and shared in the sessions of the state convention. In the main, the addresses were stimulating and very helpful to our people. It is quite evident that we have already made good progress in the work of a single department of Religious Education—the very movement now being urged so strongly by other Christian churches—a unifying of all programs and agencies of the local church making for religious growth.
But we still need to perfect our materials, to develop successful methods, to train our teachers and leaders, and to learn to work together as efficient units under the general direction of the pastors. This was the burden of the effort of the convention, expressed in the theme, "That in all things He might have the preeminence." (1 Colossians 1: 18.)

The pageant, The Pentecost of Youth, was beautifully given on Tuesday evening, participated in by a number of our people with others in a Kansas City training school. On Thursday evening a banquet for youth and leaders of youth was held, in which our church was generously represented. The Wahdemna Glee Club, as Happy Hollow singers over KMBC, sang several numbers, winning the hearty appreciation of all present, and reflecting much credit upon our church young people.

An unusually significant occasion was a dinner on Thursday served by the Laurel Club at the Auditorium, in which Doctor Percy R. Hayward, of Chicago, director of Young People's Work in the International Council, Doctor Irvin E. Deer, Kansas City, secretary of the Council of Churches, and Reverend L. W. Harper, pastor of the local Christian Church, were the guests of President F. M. Smith and the working force of the Department of Religious Education.

Book Review

EVERYDAY PROBLEMS OF THE EVERYDAY CHILD;
BY DOUGLAS A. THOM, M. D.

For earnest parents who seek aid in understanding their children and their actions and how to intelligently deal with them, we wish to recommend Doctor Douglas A. Thom's book, Everyday Problems of the Everyday Child.

Parents, teachers, and others responsible for the training of children will find this book a practical help to them in interpreting the relationship of the mental life of a child to his physical and social welfare. In discussing behavior problems, Doctor Thom does not attempt to stress any particular side of the child. He does not dwell at length on the physical child, the mental child, or the social child, but rather points out the fact that behavior problems to be met intelligently and sympathetically must be studied in the light of the physical, mental, and social needs of each individual child. After reading Doctor Thom's book, you, too, will appreciate the importance of the first five years of life during which period fundamental physical and mental habits and social attitudes are formed.

Doctor Thom is the director of the Habit Clinic of Boston, and from his experience there and elsewhere in dealing with children and parents he has gathered the material for this book. He discusses the behavior problems, not from the point of abnormal children, but the normal, who, as he declares, are capable of meeting and adjusting to the everyday problems of life as found in the social, racial, and economic level to which they have been born. Purposely he has omitted the discussion of theories and mechanisms that can be understood and applied only by specially trained people. His illustrations and discussions are written to serve the large army of parents and teachers who are responsible for the mental health of children. This book has been prepared particularly for parents, and suggestions are given as to treatment of the everyday problems as seen in normal children.

Are not these familiar questions: Why do children have temper tantrums? Why are they jealous? Why have they not learned physical control? Why must children be coaxed to eat? Why are they afraid? Doctor Thom attempts to help parents and others concerned to get an intelligent understanding of the motives for conduct rather than the conduct itself, so that they will be able to answer these questions.

Do not these following chapter headings invite you to read Doctor Thom's book, Everyday Problems of the Everyday Child?

CHRISTMAS AT THE INN

By Elva T. Sturges

This play, written by one of our talented young authors, was presented in Boston by the Drama Department of the School of Religious Education, Boston University.

It is a very superior piece of work, well adapted to production in churches for the Christmas program.

This and many other good features appear in the December VISION

Omaha, Nebraska

The fall, with its invigorating air and its swirling mass of varied hued autumn leaves, can not but inspire activity, and the month of October for the Greater Omaha Branch has been a busy and profitable period.

"Zion," that word that clutches at the heartstrings of every true Latter Day Saint, was the theme for the prayer meeting October 1.

The church school on Sunday mornings is opened with a twenty-minute family worship period. "The entrance of thy word giveth light" was the theme for this period October 5, and the subject was, "Joseph Smith the prophet." Songs, scripture reading, talk, and the prayer blended to give this service a note of solemnity. We caught a "vision from the mountain top" at the sacramental meeting, which was characterized by activity in testifying, especially among the younger members of the congregation. Pastor Jensen spoke to nearly a capacity house in the evening. His thoughts for the evening were gleaned from the parable of the prodigal son.

The desire of this people to gain knowledge was manifested in this branch when over sixty people engaged in class work on Tuesday night, October 7. The two periods of forty-five minutes each are taught by Pastor Blair Jensen, on the subjects, "Psychology," and "You can learn to teach."

In order that the young people might function as a unit in the Religious Education program, a get-together party was held at Central Church October 9. The publicity chairman of the young people's class of the church school has handed in the following: "The young people's class has been reorganized for the coming year, not only in the personnel of the class, but also in the spirit of activity. The officers from the president to the visiting and membership committees have definite duties to perform each month, thus increasing the general activities of the class. The name, 'Re-La-Da-Sa,' is the name of the class and represents the thought uppermost in each of the members—Reorganized Latter Day Saints. The class motto, 'Learn to know,' was selected along with the name, that the activities may be directed along certain lines. At present there are about forty young people regularly attending, and the goal of the class is to bring to church every Sunday the one hundred and thirty young people of the branch who should be in attendance. Under the leadership of Elder W. T. Wellman, the teacher, the class looks forward to a year of interesting study and lively discussions." We might pause right here and say for the young people, that of the forty-one workers that comprise the personnel of the church school of the Greater Omaha Branch, twenty-four come from the ranks of the young.

October 10 will be remembered as a very important milestone in our history, as it marked the dissolution of the two Omaha branches and the reorganization into one branch to be known as the Greater Omaha Branch. Pastor Blair Jensen was chosen president. With the combining of our forces, we can look forward with greater enthusiasm to the accomplishment of our immediate goal—a new and completed church by June 1, 1931. It was at this service that the architect's drawing of our new edifice, by Elder W. T. Wellman, was displayed. Since that time it has occupied a very conspicuous place on the front wall, and serves as a constant reminder to urge us on.

The conference of Northeastern Nebraska District convened at the South Side Church on October 11 and 12. At the business session of this body, Doctor H. A. Merchant, who has efficiently acted as district president for the past seven years, resigned, and Elder Blair Jensen was selected to serve in this capacity. We deemed ourselves fortunate to have as our guests during the conference Apostle E. J. Gleazer and Bishop A. Carmichael. At the evening session Brother Carmichael gave an interesting talk on "Harmony in the interpretation of our three books."

The subject for the family worship period October 12 was Oliver Cowdery, at both the Central and South Side Churches. Brother Carmichael's sermon at the morning pulpit service at Central was on "God-mindedness." Brother Harry Greenway was the soloist. At the South Side Church Sister Nell Kelley's solo, "The ninety and nine," fitted in every beautifully with Apostle Gleazer's sermon on the return of the prodigal and the lost sheep. Three ordinations were taken care of at a special meeting on Sunday afternoon, that of Brother W. T. Wellman to the office of elder, Brother Fremming Self to the office of priest, and Brother Earl B. Lasely to the office of deacon. The closing sermon of the conference was by Bishop Carmichael, and was a continuation of his remarks of the morning, wherein he told us that we will never solve our problems until we are God-minded.

A quartet number, "The King of Love my Shepherd is," sung by Brother Harry Greenway, Sister Anne Hicks, Sister Constance Borders, and Brother R. W. Scott, opened the pulpit service for October 19. Elder C. T. Self was the speaker and chose as his subject "The evangelization of the world." Elder C. A. Kress delivered the discourse of the evening at a union service of the Greater Omaha Branch. Are we sacrificing today so that others may live more abundantly?

Elder C. A. Kress, district missionary, held an interesting and profitable series of meetings at the South Side Church from October 12 to 26, and his efforts, and those of others who helped make the services a success, were rewarded at a baptismal service on Decision Day. Elder Kress preached at the morning hour on October 26 at Central Church, and chose for his text, "And the Lord added to their number daily such as should be saved." He reminded those of us that are in the church that Decision Day is also for us.

At the union service on Decision Day, Pastor Jensen began a series of Sunday evening sermons under the general theme, "Essentials to salvation." His topic of the evening was, "That primary fruit of the gospel—virtue." Virtue is an active thing is not passive, and is revealed in our actions to mankind and God. Quoting from the Hebrew Talmud, "The virtuous of every nation shall participate in eternal bliss."

The night when the spooks walk was celebrated by the young people at a masquerade affair at which all present got a real "shock." A lively time was had.

Saint Louis, Missouri

Grand Boulevard and Carter Avenue

This month has been an active one in Saint Louis Branch. Pastor C. A. Edstrom has been conducting a series of missionary services each Sunday night. He has given some inspiring and spiritual sermons, and our congregation has increased in number, for which we are thankful. The titles of the sermons were as follows, "What would Jesus do?" "The love of God"; "The Apostasy"; "Why I am a Latter Day Saint"; "The Restoration."

The Wednesday night prayer services have increased in number attending, and a wonderful spirit has been felt. Our people have come fasting and praying for the sick and needy and also for the success of these meetings, and God is blessing us.

The Women's Department has been progressing, has been increasing in number, and Sister Brown and Sister Crabtree have charge of the program. We usually have singing and other features to make it an interesting day. The women have been busy making apple butter. This is the second time they have made it to sell for the benefit of their treasury to help in the branch work.

The children seem to take an interest in the junior church school in charge of Sister Edstrom, Brother Billinsky, and Sister Brown.

It is now an ideal time of year, when all the trees are ablaze with glory, to take the classes to the parks and woods to have wiener roasts, to gather persimmons, nuts, etc.

Our Halloween party was Friday, October 31. A happy time was had.

Some of our sick have been blessed, and some of those out of employment have obtained work. ALICE GRIMES.

Many Visit Nauvoo's Historic Homes

It will be of interest to Herald readers to hear of happenings at the old homes of Joseph Smith at Nauvoo, Illinois. Visitors keep coming in increasing numbers as a little comparison will show. The year 1918 was the first year a caretaker was sent here by the church, and in the month of August of that year there were two hundred visitors registered. Ten years later the month of August, 1928, one thousand registered; 1929, one thousand and three hundred; and this year one thousand and five hundred are recorded. The total number of visitors for these years were: 1918, 1,000; 1928, 5,000; 1929, 5,100; and this year up to date 5,600 have registered, so we will run over six thousand. This represents between sixty to seventy-five per cent of the people who visit these properties. And now that a hard road has just been completed and opened up running into Nauvoo from the north, we confidently expect a great increase in the number of visitors.

These visitors represent every walk of life, and we enjoy immensely our work of telling them the true story of Joseph Smith and the gospel as restored by him. There are a few exceptions who say, "If the house is furnished just as Joseph Smith left it, we would like to come in and see it," or "We only want to see the secret room"; or "We just want to see the bullet hole in the door."

We have the Busy Man's Tracts to give to interested visitors, and we sell the tracts, "The early history of Nauvoo" and "What the Latter Day Saints believe"; also postcards of the principal buildings and men who have played an important part in the church. No admission is charged to the properties, but a plate is on the registration desk inviting an offering which averages about fifty dollars a month during the season of summer and fall.

It seems to us the time is here when the homestead should be furnished as planned, and the monument erected to the Martyrs. We would like to tell you the interesting things that have been given and collected since we have been here, and hope it will encourage others to make offerings in antiques to furnish the Homestead. If you have anything you are willing to donate, first write us and describe what you have, and we will send instructions about sending it to us.

The list of articles and the donors follows:

One old style hall tree, one old kitchen cupboard, one large mahogany bookcase. Brother and Sister August Lee, Nauvoo, Illinois.

One Governor Lathrop desk that was in the temple at Nauvoo. Emmet Seybold, Blandinsville, Illinois.

One water yoke, one frow, one old draw knife, one old wood potato masher, some temple stones, one old sugar bowl, one iron gem pan. Ed C. Knipe, Nauvoo, Illinois.

Forty Indian arrow heads. Gerald Knipe, Nauvoo, Illinois.

Twelve framed Bible pictures, three government pictures, one piece of Kirtland Bank money. Elder Lorenzo D. Ullom, Bellaire, Ohio.

One black walnut stand table, one grease lamp, two dishes over two hundred years old, one Bible owned by Harmon Simpson, a seventy in the early church. Sister Margaret Snively, Burlington, Iowa.

One German Book of Mormon, 1873, Edition. E. W. Wilke, Burlington, Iowa.

One old baby cradle. Mrs. D. D. Heady, Nauvoo, Illinois.

One pair of portieres, two framed pictures, two old chairs, one settee, one round rug. Sister Carrie Parrish, Holden Home, Missouri.

One stone step from the Times and Seasons Building, Nauvoo, Illinois. John Hudson, Nauvoo, Illinois.

One old hammer, one Indian ax. William Kachle, Nauvoo, Illinois.

One old rocking-chair. Mrs. Helen Steel, Nauvoo, Illinois.

One stand table, claimed to have been Joseph Smith's. Mrs. Eliza Lankford, Burnside, Illinois.

One old grain cradle. D. M. Grindle, Carthage, Illinois.

We bought from Mrs. Lena Marchall, of Niota, Illinois, a rocking-chair and a dresser. The rocking-chair at one time belonged to Emma Smith.

Many people's attitude is changed by merely seeing the pictures of the two Josephs. We very likely make more contacts with strangers to the work than any one man of the ministry, so we believe a friendly reception to our visitors is valuable to the church as a missionary endeavor.

Nauvoo is, as its name implies, a beautiful place, quiet and restful. The soil is rich, and vegetation grows in abundance. We have wondered why the Saints have not located here in greater numbers. BROTHER AND SISTER JAMES C. PAGE.

San Antonio, Texas

First Branch, Rookwood Court and South Cherry Streets

Saints of this branch are rejoicing because of their new church home, which is located at the above address. After several years of waiting and working and praying when some had almost lost faith in our ever being able to build a church, we are established in our new building. There were long hindrances, but after plans had been worked out and a vote taken to empower the building committee to start the work of building, the Saints felt that they had begun well. Everyone was anxious for the work to go forward, and as Brother Mannering remarked in the first sermon preached in the new building: "After they once got started, the building went up like a mushroom."

The formal opening of the church was held Rally Day, September 28. District Missionary George H. Wixom was here and preached two stirring sermons to big audiences. In the afternoon a short program was given, E. L. Henson in charge. T. J. Jett, jr., talked on "The new church program"; R. W. Jett, bishop's agent, gave a short talk on financial lines, encouraging the Saints. Then Sister Ruth Harp gave a brief history of the church home we had just vacated.

The new church is fully equipped with Sunday school rooms and a baptismal font, which has been used on two occasions. The first one baptized in the font was little Marian Sanger, of Second Branch, who was conducted into the kingdom by her great-uncle, T. J. Jett, sr.

Apostle J. A. Gillen has just closed a series of meetings, which lasted ten days. The inclemency of the weather hindered attendance to some extent, but at the last two services the building was filled almost to capacity, especially at the evening hour. A number of nonmembers were present and seemed to be impressed by the sermons. It seemed to us throughout the series that Brother Gillen was endowed with more power than we have ever before seen rest upon him. We are thankful that the Lord blesses his servants in latter days with wonderful power and assurance. If the people who attended these meetings will put into practice the lessons brought to them, they will advance along spiritual lines, and as advancement is made, others will be drawn to see the light of the gospel.

First Branch has adopted the new church school program, Sister Flossie Waite being in charge of Religious Education. Brother T. J. Jett, jr., was elected pastor and E. L. Henson, assistant pastor. Sister Emma Jackson was chosen to act as musical director.

Programs were worked out for the choir for each service and a special number arranged for each service, which took work and practice.

On the last Sunday afternoon five precious souls were led into the waters of baptism, all of them Sunday school children, three girls and two boys. They were grandchildren of Sister Julia Galbraith and Sister Josie Haught. It was a beautiful sight to behold them as they went forth to the watery grave. Brother Gillen had charge of the service, and Brother Rouss Eastham officiated in the sacred ordinance. They were confirmed by J. A. Gillen, E. L. Henson, R. E. Miller, and T. J. Jett, jr. May the time not be long before many others will follow the example of these children and be numbered with the followers of Christ. RUTH HARP.

Kirtland, Ohio

The Kirtland Temple congregation observed Rally Day and Decision Day October 26. Under the guidance of the pastor, Elder John L. Cooper, and other officers, a unique program brought together in worship, praise, prayer, and song a large number.

The Bible school period opened at 9.30 with an organ prelude. Psalm 24 was read as a responsive reading. A short but effective program followed the close of the class period.

The pastor delivered the morning sermon. There was a solo by Sister Kathryn Moore, and a pleasing duet was sung by Sisters Agnes Martin and Mabel Thomas.

It had been previously decided that it would be well for the Saints to eat dinner together, and accordingly at noon they assembled in the Auditorium.

The afternoon was filled with activity: Song fest directed by George Neville at 2 o'clock; testimony meeting, 3.00; rest period and visiting from 4.00 to 6.00; young people's prayer service, 6.15; song service, 7.00; sermon by Elder George T. Neville at 7.30.

All day a fine rally spirit was sensed among the Saints, and the young people's hour of prayer was especially fine.

Conference at Vinalhaven, Maine

From one of the newspapers printed in Rockland, Maine, is taken the following news story of the Vinalhaven conference:

"The Latter Day Saints opened the Western Maine convention here October 19 with business session at 2.30, followed by preaching at seven o'clock. Supper was served in the church vestry. Visitors were present from Jonesport, Rockland, Camden, Stonington, Boston, and Dixfield. Sunday was a busy day with prayer meeting at 9.45 in the morning and preaching at eleven by Elder E. F. Robertson of Stonington, formerly of Nebraska. Dinner was served at twelve o'clock, and at 2.15 there was a baptism, ordination services at 3.30, priesthood meeting and preaching at seven in the evening by Elder Newman Wilson of Jonesport. There was special singing, a solo by Mrs. Morris Brown and duet by Mr. and Mrs. Newman Wilson. There were over one hundred visiting Saints, and the main church room was crowded at every service. It was a wonderful convention, and Bishop E. L. Traver, of Boston, member of the Rotary Club, and bishop in this church, gave an address which will long be remembered."

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

A. E. Anderton, district president, preached at the evening hour the first Sunday of October using for a text: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."—John 15: 13.

The Women's Department met October 9 with twenty-three members and four visitors present. A greater friendship is developed from the association of the women and the potluck dinners held frequently. Interest is growing in the group. A new member was taken in, Sarilla Wemlinger. A round-table discussion was directed by Sister Nieman.

At the morning hour, October 12, our young brother, Edgar R. Kimball, preached his first sermon on "Building." In the evening J. E. Matthews discussed "Authority."

The Women's Department gave a chicken supper at Druid's Hall October 16, the proceeds to be applied to the church debt.

Bishop H. E. French preached at the morning hour October 19, taking for a theme "The art of being good." Doctor W. B. Reeves chose for a text in the evening Matthew 5: 48: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect."

The Temple Builders are taking serving lessons under their leader, Lucinda Nieman Madden, and they meet each Friday evening to study.

C. W. Clark, pastor of First Branch, preached in the evening October 26, using for a theme, "Les Miserables."

Prayer meetings for the month were good and of high spiritual order.

Eight of our teachers are taking a six weeks' course in religious education at the Y. M. C. A. VASSIE SHEETS.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

The Sunday school held its business meeting September 7, and new officers elected are: Superintendent, Emery Williams; assistant, Donald Bealor; secretary, Mabel Culp; assistant, Ora Altman; librarian, Richard Culp; teacher of adult grade, Charles Altman; senior, Lizzie Hill; intermediate, Ora Altman; junior, Rosa Pollock; kindergarten, Julia Culp.

October 12 seventy-three were at Sunday school. Brother and Sister Matthews, of Columbus, Ohio, were here that Sunday; also H. J. Huffman and wife, of Columbus. Brother Matthews preached in the morning and also in the afternoon. Many McDermott Saints were here to listen to him.

Elder Jacob Halb, of Middletown, was here for nearly two weeks preaching. He went from here to West Portsmouth, Ohio, preaching there in a small tent purchased some weeks ago by members of the church. They had good interest for some time, then moved the tent to Valley View. There Brother Halb preached for a time and baptized three men, Armstead Christwell, George Cobern, and James Cheffen.

The district Sunday school superintendent, Brother Gray, was at the tent meeting October 19 to organize a Sunday school. Walter Culp was chosen superintendent, Harry Culp assistant, Anna Christwell, clerk and treasurer. The last Sunday of the month thirty-two attended the tent Sunday school, and November 2 the number had risen to fifty-six. Communion service was held at the tent, there being a goodly attendance.

Brother O. A. Rexroad, of South Portsmouth, Ohio, preaches at the tent every Sunday evening. Church work at this place is being greeted with success, and we feel that eventually this group will be the nucleus for a branch organization.

Holden Stake

Holden Stake Conference

This stake holds two and sometimes three conferences a year. This one was at Knobnoster, November 7 to 9. Friday night the first session was a musical and literary program, in which the Nace family orchestra from Independence helped, and it closed with a play by Holden young people, "The conversion of Paul."

The Saturday program began at 8.45 with a prayer meeting, during which many prayers and testimonies were offered, and the session was a fine beginning for the day's work.

At ten o'clock the conference organized with the stake presidency, W. S. Macrae and F. A. McWethy, in the chair, assisted by James Davis, of the stake missionary force; Gladys Beebe and G. R. Wells, secretaries; Bernice Hampton, director of music; Amos Allen, in charge of building, ushering, etc.; Brothers Hancock, McCormick, and Baker, administration committee.

The report of the stake bishopric showed the following: For stake operating fund: On hand February 28, 1930, $32.68. Received since from Atherton, $12; Blue Springs, $12; Lexington, $15; James Hansen, $1; Atherton conference, $79.60; total, $152.28. Disbursements, for conference expense, Atherton, $17.50; traveling expenses of stake officers and missionaries, $127.14; total, $144.64. Cash on hand October 31, 1930, $7.64. Report for stake building fund: Cash and securities on hand February 28, 1930, $745.88; contributions, from Atherton, $5; Blue Springs, $14; Lexington, $5; Lees Summit, $44; from Square Deal Dining Hall (part proceeds), $132.12; total, $200; disbursed to Atherton church building, $334.65; on hand October 31, 1930, in cash and securities, $611.35. Statement of Atherton building account: Expended as given in previous report, $2,576.92; expended as in this report, $334.65; expended from Atherton local funds, $1,309.43; total to October 31, 1930, $4,221. (Much labor was donated from brothers from various branches. This will be reported later, to make building cost complete.) The foregoing was approved.

The stake presidency reported: "To the Saints in conference: We are now in the beginning of the second century of our existence as a church. The evidences of inequality in the possession of material things in the world and in the church are as numerous as when the Lord spoke his displeasure of the same and gave the basis for a remedy in revelations to the church in 1830. The gathering of the Saints and their study of the problems involved in the establishment of a community life devoted to the solution of them was also a matter of direction to the young church. The importance of proper diet and expert medical instruction to conserve health and develop body and mental vigor were pointed out by inspiration. The church has treated lightly these things, and as a result our progress has been slow. As a body we seem not yet to have sensed the fact that to accomplish this tremendous task we must have trained leaders. (See Doctrine and Covenants 85: 21.) The church is attempting to supply this need in her Department of Religious Education. The field of our opportunity is large, inviting and ripening.

"Stewardship. Interest in the development of stewardship is gratifying, but our pressing need is a demonstration. The church is centering its resources in man and material power at Atherton, Missouri, where we own several hundred acres of fine land. Families are actually at work on the church's land there as stewards. Their progress could be more marked if means and labor for construction and development were available. Every member in the Holden Stake should show an active interest in this church project.

"Missionary work. This has been promoted chiefly by our two stake missionaries, J. W. Davis and Ellis Rathbun. But a revival of interest is also noticeable in the priesthood and members of the branches. (See statistician's report.) There it will be seen that we are below our quota in achievement.

These figures are a challenge to every Latter Day Saint in the stake, especially the priesthood.

"Churches. Atherton has moved from the standing as a smaller branch to that of second place (149 members) in the stake. They now have a brick building with a seating for 250 and separate rooms for classes. It is located with a view to serving the needs of a growing community and also fitting into the plans for a stewardship group. Amos Allen is pastor, with George W. Beebe assistant. The number at Bates City is about the same, but they have the highest average attendance. Additions have been made by transfer, but are scattered various distances from the church. Frank Cottrell is the pastor. Blue Springs meets in a rented hall over a store and is badly in need of a more adequate room for all services, especially the Department of Religious Education. H. W. Hattey, of Independence, is pastor, giving faithful service. His wife also gives of her time in charge of Religious Education. Grandview has the services of Gomer R. Wells as pastor, but only for part time. Charles Martin is his assistant. C. V. Hopkins, pastor from the time of organization, resigned and moved to Independence. Lees Summit is improved in condition. G. R. Wells has been their pastor for the last eighteen months. He has some excellent helpers there. They also profited by the addition of the John T. Smith family from Oklahoma. Holden: W. H. Eliason, a recent conference appointee, has located and has been assigned an important work there, acting as assistant to the stake presidency, who are the pastors. He has charge of the religious education work, and is organizing Holden in harmony with the new plan adopted by the late General Conference. Gratifying results are already visible. The enrollment is now 336. Jefferson City is maintaining an organization which is being cared for by A. H. Wintermeyer. R. F. Moorman and family are moving there and will be a welcome addition. There are now thirty-four members, renting a neat church. Knobnoster has lost over one hundred members since the church was built, but they are making a commendable showing. J. T. Nutt is pastor. Lexington is growing under the pastorate of Luther W. Payne, ably assisted by Ray Eddleman and Leman Johnson. At Marshall, T. L. McCormick is pastor with a worthy assistant. This group is in good condition. Post Oak has a fine group of young people, who have promising possibilities if they were located where cooperation with other groups were practicable. Sedalia is losing its pastor and a family of helpers with the removal of Brother Moorman to Jefferson City. As in many other places the industrial situation there is discouraging. At Warrensburg G. W. Hancock and G. R. Norris have been ministering to the Saints with considerable handicap from pressure of other duties. Beginning with the school year, Edward Larsen, a student at the State College, has been helpful. He has recently been chosen assistant pastor, and is organizing in the work assigned him.

Evangelist John T. Gresty has held meetings in Sedalia, Marshall, Knobnoster, Post Oak, Warrensburg, Holden, Lees Summit, and Grandview, and has arranged to visit nearly all the other groups. His work is highly spoken of by the Saints, and he is well liked.

"Department of Religious Education. Owing to the pressure of two pastorates, G. R. Wells resigned his post as superintendent of this work in the stake, and the stake presidency appointed W. H. Eliason to fill the unexpired term. Several branches have adopted as far as practicable the new plan: Holden, Atherton, Lees Summit, Blue Springs, and Warrensburg. Results have been gratifying.

"The gathering. The Saints from distant points continue to gather into the stake but not in any one place in numbers or purpose that would be of practicable benefit to the work as a whole. We can not direct these, but suggest that changes and removals in the stake be taken up with the stake bishopric.

"Recommendation. The action of a former conference, requiring the stake presidency to send to each branch copies of the minutes of our conferences to be posted in a place in the building for reading adds an expense which results do not seem to justify. Few have read these minutes. Therefore, we suggest that this action be rescinded. (signed) W. S. Macrae, for stake presidency."

By regular motion, the foregoing recommendation of the presidency concerning minutes being rescinded was adopted.

Statistical. In lieu of a report from the stake recorder, the following from the head statistician was read: Present membership of stake, 1,876; adults, 1,264; young people (8 to 19 years), 477; wage earners (estimated), 721; 14 high priests; 2 seventies; 36 elders; 46 priests; 25 teachers; 30 deacons. Under conference appointment, 9; number of branches, 14; church schools, 15; baptisms, January 1 to October 1, 87 (62 per cent—should have 76 per cent), which is below the objective for this last quarter. Our objective is 140. Number of baptisms during the centennial year was 102.

The stake quorum of elders reported by G. F. Baker: Sermons, 248; baptisms, 27; children blessed, 13; administered to 354 sick; marriages, 5; pastoral visits, 210; tracts distributed, 265; house-to-house calls, 252.

Department of Women. Sister Edith Koehler, superintendent, reported that the former "department" is gradually being absorbed by the organization of the church school under the new plan. Activities are composed of study classes, sewing, and other activities for money-raising to help in local expenses, the work of teaching, etc. "I believe the women of the stake, on the whole, are ready to assist in any way possible. It is our hope that within the next year there will be no women's department, as such."

The director of music, Sister Bernice Hampton, reported that she had been prevented from putting in necessary time for the work in stake on account of her school work at the state college. She had, however, helped in her home branch.

In the election of officers the courtesy of the floor was extended to visiting members. By separate votes the stake presidency and stake bishopric were unanimously sustained. The stake presidency nominated the following, and they were unanimously elected: For stake secretary, Gladys Beebe; stake recorder, ElMarie McCormick; musical director, Bernice Hampton; superintendent of Religious Education, W. H. Eliason. A former conference requested the reorganization of the stake high council, but the stake presidency reported that they were not yet ready to proceed with reorganization.

Missionaries Davis and Rathbun reported that the stake missionary tent is in need of repairs and urged that it be reconditioned. This was by motion referred to the stake presidency, bishopric, and council with power to act. Good work by these brothers was reported this last season. Brother Davis also addressed the conference on the outlook in general.

After an excellent musical treat, following the dinner hour, by the Nace family orchestra, there were three lectures: "Ill-advised marriages," by Sister M. A. Etzenhouser; "Organization and administration of religious education in the church school," by W. H. Eliason; and "Petting," by Sister Etzenhouser. Following this period there was a wiener roast out in the country for the young people, in charge of Brother W. H. Eliason.

The time and place of next conference was left with the stake presidency. The matter of holding a reunion had been referred to the stake presidency, who reported it inadvisable and proposed instead other spiritual and educational activities for the stake. It was moved to send a greeting to Brother and Sister Lester Macrae, now laboring in the Sandwich Islands.

Sunday meetings began with a young people's prayer meeting at 8.30 a. m. Following was the session of church school, and at eleven o'clock a sermon by Bishop J. A. Koehler on "The hope of the kingdom."

After an excellent dinner, served cafeteria style, the afternoon prayer meeting was held from two to three o'clock. Attendance was larger than usual, and there was not an idle moment. It was heartening to note the large percentage of young people present. This meeting indicated a deep desire on the part of the Saints to draw near to God.

After a priesthood meeting, the conference came to an end.

Warrensburg

Warrensburg people are enjoying wonderful autumn weather. The woods have donned their gay colors. The days of radiant sunshine and the crisp nights are invigorating.

At the beginning of the fall term of school at the Central Missouri State Teachers' College, Brother E. Larsen enrolled as a student. His active interest in church work, his thorough understanding of church problems, and his holding the office of elder, have made him a valuable addition to this group. He was chosen as second assistant pastor at a recent business meeting. The young people especially appreciate his presence.

A new furnace is being installed in the church. Nearly all have contributed to this new improvement in some way.

A Halloween party, sponsored by the Department of Recreation and Expression, was held at the home of Brother and Sister G. R. Norris the evening of October 31. At the appointed time, weird and ghostly creatures appeared, each in silence staring at his neighbor. Some in less dignified disguise entertained by their pranks. After the masks were removed, games were played, then pie and chili were served. Proceeds from the refreshments went to the furnace fund.

We have some afflicted and sick ones among us who need our prayers. George Allen Hancock, ten-year-old son of the pastor, had the misfortune to seriously injure his eye last week. He was hit by a stick while cutting wood. It is not determined yet if the sight can be saved. Brother Leroy Morgan has been in very poor health for some time. Lately he has suffered considerably. The Saints met at his home for prayer meeting November 5. Brother Morgan has been diligent in service and has lived here many years. We pray his health may be restored if it is the heavenly Father's will. Sister Hartman's condition shows little improvement. She has been courageous in her sore affliction, having been confined to her bed for more than a year with cancer. Such courage is an example to us who are well.

Marshall

The meetings by J. W. Davis and Ellis Rathbun are having good interest. Two were baptized Sunday by Pastor McCormick. They were John Dieleman and son Nickolas. Brother Dieleman's aged mother and brother from Ray County arrived at the church in time to join the procession of automobiles that went to the river for the baptism. Confirmation followed immediately at the church by Elders Smith, Rathbun, and McCormick.

The Saints renewed their covenants at a splendid sacramental meeting in the morning.

Sister Zella Lee James surprised the Saints Sunday by resigning as Sunday school secretary. It later became known that she was married September 20, 1930, to Gerald (Jerry) Stewart, at the Auditorium, in Independence, by H. A. Koehler. The happy pair will go to visit his parents at Newman Grove, Nebraska, and they take with them the best wishes and congratulations from their many friends in Marshall. Mr. Stewart is a graduate of Marshall Flying School, and has been employed by the airplane company here for the past two and one half years. Sister Zella graduated from Marshall High School in the class of 1929.

Graceland Chats

Home-coming, the Chief Interest

The town took on its annual home-coming atmosphere Thursday, as the colors of old gold and blue were placed in the windows of the business houses. . . . The sun smiled its warmest and brightest greetings to visitors to the town and college. By Friday afternoon the visitors, as one student expressed it, "were coming in mobs." There is an untold thrill to be gained even if one is a total stranger, by standing aside following the annual performance at the Coliseum Friday night and listening to the expressions of gladsome reunion. . . . Such joyousness of youth can not be duplicated. Such was the experience in a great measure this year, for the crowd attending the annual home-coming was large—The Lamoni Chronicle.

The Opening Chapel

The home-coming began officially at 2.45 Friday afternoon. The restlessness and expectancy of the assembly calmed to the voluntary, "Graceland beloved," and President G. N. Briggs introduced "Mac" for the opening prayer. At a chord, the assembly was on its feet for the college hymn, "Sons of Graceland."

In a collection of fifty slides, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Mortimore carried present students and visitors back to days of yore. It was a humorous portrayal of costumes and pranks, an historical review of beginnings, and an inspirational urge to the days ahead. The closing picture brought a hush—it was the chapel.

The Pep Meeting

Every home-comer attended the pep meeting Saturday morning. All available standing room was utilized. Old-timers from 1900 on were found in the assembly. "Unk" Cheville, chairman of the home-coming, was in charge. There were songs, pep speeches, and greetings as are usually expected.

At the announcement of the annual faculty quartet, eyes looked toward the door in expectation. In came Barbara Muller, of New York, as G. A. Platz, with a group of girls as a chemistry class. Students of recent years laughed with understanding as the pseudo-professor briskly announced that there could be no faculty quartet since the quartet had forgotten to petition the C. A. C.'s for the right to sing at pep chapel.

John Garver carried the assembly back to the days of 1900-02, and called the athletes of former days to the platform for a cheer for the coach and their alma mater. Morris Mortimore appeared for a decade later in the football regalia of that day. With him were a group of classmates—Doctor Grabske, Mr. and Mrs. George Kelley, the H. H. Golds, the James Thomases, the McDowells, and "Mrs. Mort." Their yell, the old "Gong-gong-g'way," brought riotous applause.

Graceland Defeats Burlington

The score of the game was 19-7. At first it looked like a walk-away for Graceland, but the Burlington team tightened down and prevented any easy repetition of the first touch-down of the early part of the game. Until the latter part of the third quarter, Burlington had been unable to get the ball past the 50-yard line, and it seemed as if Graceland might hold them scoreless. The weather was ideal and added to the joy of the home-comers on the long end of the score.

Sunday Morning Service

At 8.45, in the chapel, another type of gathering was held—the prayer meeting. On the platform were F. M. McDowell, E. Y. Hunker, and Roy Cheville. "Mac" came with expectancy and set the theme when he asked, "What are the values I expect to get here?" He mentioned how many students returned to have their spiritual cups refilled. The Graceland Tower has this to say concerning it:

"Sunday morning the home-comers and students met in the chapel at 8.45 for the home-coming prayer meeting. The question has often been asked as to what makes Graceland different. The home-coming prayer meeting may be pointed out as one way in which the difference shows. Of the hundreds of home-coming gatherings throughout the country, Graceland is one of the few institutions to incorporate in the program a time for prayer meeting. The meeting has become a tradition, and alumni look eagerly forward to attending it."

Independence

Stone Church

Pastor John F. Sheehy was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning. His theme might be stated as, "Restoring Christ." Individuals as well as nations need Christ, in order that they might have peace. There is a need that Christ shall be restored to the hearts of men, to the family altar, to our ways of thinking and living. We need to seek after and know him better, so that he may speak peace to our souls.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, sang two numbers: a hymn, "Alas, and did my Savior bleed"; and the anthem, "God is our refuge and strength," by Dudley Buck. Orrin Fry and Gomer Cool, violinists, played "Berceuse de Jocelyn," by Godard, with piano accompaniment by George Miller. Robert Miller was at the organ, and played as an offertory, "An old refrain."

"The Pilgrims and their Thanksgiving" was the theme of Elder C. Ed. Miller, who spoke to the junior young people downstairs Sunday morning. A series of colorful picture slides of scenes from early American history gave his lecture a pictorial background. Appropriate music was furnished by members of the department and their friends. Brother Howard Cook was in charge of the service, assisted by the pastor.

At the Campus the junior department listened to Elder G. G. Lewis during their worship service period. Of late this department has experienced some excellent services. Attendance continues good, and since the first of October the older members of the department as well as teachers and officers have been doing their best to make the new group, formerly of the Stone Church primary department, at home and happy in their new surroundings. Sister Hazel Moler is superintendent of the junior department, and Elder Will Bolinger is pastor.

The senior young people who meet for church school class work at the Auditorium are rapidly organizing and establishing themselves in age and interest groups for the winter's work. Brother and Sister Jack Gardner were introduced Sunday morning and given charge of the senior young people. L. E. Flowers has supervision of the older young people's group. Next Sunday afternoon at three o'clock the young people of the Stone Church school between fifteen and thirty years of age are invited to meet in the publicity office at the Auditorium for the first of the young people's Sunday afternoon meetings. Doctor Charles F. Grabske will speak, and there will be other program numbers.

Elder C. Ed. Miller continued his Sunday night series of Book of Mormon lectures, basing his discourse on Isaiah 18: 1. A song fest, directed by Elder J. F. Sheehy, opened the evening services and gave a musical introduction to the lecture, "Book of Mormon hid for ages," "In the light," "When earth in bondage long had lain," and "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet." A solo was sung by Blaine Bender. Elder J. F. Sheehy was in charge of the meeting, assisted by Elder W. B. Paul.

Among the members who have lately passed away is Sister Matilda Maud Fligg, wife of Missionary William I. Fligg, who died November 15, and whose funeral was held at the Stone Church yesterday afternoon. She had been ill for two years. Elder William T. Rushton was called away November 15, in Independence. The funeral was held this afternoon at the Stone Church. James W. Henson passed beyond November 10 at the Independence Sanitarium, and funeral rites were conducted at the Stone Church November 12. Word arrived in Independence of the death of John Edward Farber, a former resident of this city. Heart trouble took him away at his home at Sedalia, Missouri, November 12. The bereaved families have the deep sympathy of the church.

Second Church

Since the last report from Second Church this congregation has lost another Saint in the death of Sister Melisa Willis. She had been ill for several months. The family has lived on the south side of Independence many years, Sister Willis rearing her children as members of this congregation. Elder D. A. Whiting conducted the funeral service at the church, Patriarch T. C. Kelley preaching the sermon. Music was furnished by the ladies' quartet. The interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

A short Armistice Day program preceded the class work at Sunday school November 9. The speaker at eleven o'clock was Bishop A. B. Phillips. The sermons of this brother are always characterized by a scholarly correctness which we find helpful. In the absence of the chorister and pianist, Sister Gladys Good was in charge of the music. With her she brought two girls who sang a duet, one of the singers being her younger sister.

Elder C. B. Woodstock spoke in the evening. "What lack I yet?" was his text.

Brother Will Inman preached the morning of November 16, his sermon being appreciated by a large congregation. In the evening Doctor Charles Keown spoke.

Walnut Park

The outstanding event at Walnut Park on Sunday was a trip in the afternoon to the stewardship farms and community at Atherton. This was planned and arrangements were made by members of the Galilean Class, taught by C. L. Olson, and of the adult class taught by John A. Taylor. Inasmuch as both of these classes have been studying the quarterly courses on stewardships and Zion, this trip was a logical part of the study work. It gave the members of the classes opportunity to observe first hand what is actually being done in the line of practical Christian stewardship.

An invitation was extended to other members of the church school and congregation who might desire to make the trip at this time, and a good response was had. After meeting at the church at one o'clock, the party motored out to Atherton and gathered in the new Atherton church for some words of explanation by the pastor, Brother Amos Allen, who is also a member of the Holden stake bishopric and one of the directors of the stewardship community. He gave a brief history of the movement, its purposes, ideals, and progress, and discussed the points to be visited in the trip of inspection which was to follow.

After his talk, which was much appreciated, he escorted the party of sixty or more Walnut Park folk to the new, modern, and scientifically constructed poultry houses which have been newly built and some of which are still under construction. One of the stewardship families is living in one of these buildings until a more conventional place can be provided, and finds that it makes a good home.

The party then returned to the cars and made a trip of inspection over the remaining part of the almost three thousand acres under the supervision of the Atherton Improvement Association. Most of this land is devoted to grain farming, and the excellent condition of the crop in spite of the drought last summer testified to the abundant fertility of the soil in this tract of land.

The Saints left Brother Allen with thanks for his courtesy in showing them about the properties and an invitation from him to come again. It is probable that a similar excursion will be planned next spring or summer, that those who were unable to make the trip this time may have the opportunity to do so.

The speakers for the morning and evening services were Patriarch F. A. Smith and Elder Carl V. Hopkins. Both discourses were instructive and much appreciated by the Walnut Park congregation.

Announcement was made of the coming Thank-offering Sale, to be held on Tuesday and Wednesday before Thanksgiving. This sale is to be conducted in the Tillery Building on Alton Avenue near Noland. The women are making preparations for this sale, and the work has been well organized under the leadership of Sisters Schafer and Pennell. Contributions of food products, canned goods, and used clothing are being solicited, and a ready response is being shown.

Englewood

Friday night, November 7, nearly one hundred and fifty members of Englewood Branch and a few visitors attended the Halloween party at the church on Northern Boulevard. When the crowd had gathered at the basement, all of the masked figures paraded around the room five times and a group of judges chose the best-dressed Halloween personage.

After the prizes were given, the crowd passed into the back room where they had pie (pumpkin, of course), apple cider fresh from the press, doughnuts, and pop-corn balls.

Following the refreshments the crowd played a few games and then were entertained by an extemporaneous program from the people who attended.

Instead of the regular testimony and prayer service for sacrament Sunday, President Floyd M. McDowell gave a talk after the sharing of the emblems. Brother McDowell based his talk on his experiences and observations while on his trip to Europe during the last few months. The theme of his talk was the statement of Jesus: "I will be with you always, even unto the end of the world." He illustrated this point by showing how many remembrances of Jesus are to be seen all over the world. While he was going through Switzerland on the train, the speaker said, there was never a time when there was not at least one small church in sight, and many times there were more. He brought up the point that people will beat paths to the best soap makers in the world, or the best candy makers in the world, and asked if the world will beat a path to see the best specimen of manhood in the world.

Spring Branch

The 8.15 prayer meeting Sunday morning was in charge of Elders Snively and Teeters. A good meeting was had.

Pastor J. E. Cleveland was in charge of the eleven o'clock service. After an extended vacation for the singers, it was good to see the choir again in its place. Under the leadership of the chorister, Dorothy Mabbott, they sang the anthem, "Jesus, lover of my soul." The infant daughter of Brother and Sister Walter Gibler was blessed by Brothers J. E. Cleveland and F. M. McDowell. For the theme of his sermon, President F. M. McDowell chose a portion of a scene from the Passion Play. The words of Jesus, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you and shall be given to the people who bring forth fruits thereof," were applied to us of latter days. Some of these fruits are faith, repentance, and courage.

Following the 6.30 church school class work, the program was given by the young people's class. The evening speaker was Brother Morris Jacobsen, whose theme was "Light."

Yuma, Colorado

The members of Yuma group were saddened in October by the death of a faithful member, Sister Lee Korf. She passed away after an illness of a few weeks which did not seem serious until the last few days of her life. "Grandma" Korf, as she was called, was an ardent worker, always present at Sunday school and the department meetings. She will be greatly missed. Elder J. D. Curtis, of Colorado Springs, came to preach the funeral sermon. "Grandpa" Korf is making his home with his daughter, Sister W. D. Hoch.

Brother and Sister Charles Commons returned October 19 from a thirty-day trip to Oregon, their former home.

Lefa Lutz is now a pupil at the Barnes Business School in Denver. She occasionally spends a week-end at home with her parents, Brother and Sister J. L. Lutz.

Brother and Sister Louis Korf and family are leaving very soon for an extended trip to Illinois and other places. They expect to be away the greater part of the winter. We will miss them in the branch, for Sister Korf is a faithful teacher.

Brother Auld, of Otis, preached October 26. On November 16 he and Brother Vincent will be present at an all-day service. The Saints of Yuma pray that the whole church will be blessed in its work for the year, and hope that our little group may be remembered in your prayers.

CLEO B. COMMONS.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The response to the leadership school is gratifying, some two hundred having enrolled for the courses offered. The school will continue this week, three new courses being added. One treats the problems of stewardship, Bishop A. Carmichael the teacher; Elder John Blackmore is giving an interesting course in the use of the Bible in Religious Education; and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser is meeting the young people interested in the problems of youth in the field of marriage, heredity, and eugenics.

Despite the cold rain that arrived late Saturday afternoon, Sunday dawned beautiful and clear. Attendance at Sunday school was very good, the greater percentage being on time. The adult division is still ahead in the attendance and new member contest, but they do not lead the other divisions by a great margin. They stand a good chance to be overtaken by one of their competitors, the young people's division, before the thermometer reaches the boiling point. Letters have been sent to over a hundred prospective members, and enthusiasm is high.

The opening hymn at the church school was "Earnest workers for the Master," and prayer was offered by A. D. Hitchcock. George Mesley gave the children the morning story. "The Holy City" was reverently sung by Sister Marguerite Johnson Blaine, Sister Irene Wolfe at the organ.

A beautiful baptismal service was performed by Stake Missionary G. T. Richards, who conducted Lillian Starter into the fold. Sister Starter was confirmed at the church period by Brothers Richards and Harvey Sandy.

Elder G. T. Richards was the speaker at the service period Sunday morning, quoting from the gospel of Saint John. He gave an enthusiastic discourse, and urged the Saints to examine themselves and attain to that high standard which Christ set for us. Frank White rendered a violin solo at this service.

At the 7.45 service Eugene Christy directed the community singing, after which special music was furnished by the octet consisting of Elizabeth Hitchcock, Helen Scott, Luella Wight, Estelle Moore, Clayton Wolfe, Eugene Christy, E. P. Nelson, and A. D. Hitchcock. They sang "Bless the Lord, O my soul," by Ippolitof-Ivanof.

Elder H. H. Sevy, missionary of the Kansas City Stake, spoke at this hour.

The stake conference will convene Sunday, November 23, at eleven o'clock in the morning, Stake President C. E. Wight being the speaker. At 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon there will be a sacramental service and a choir concert and preaching service in the evening. The Women's Club will serve at the dinner hour, also lunch in the evening. Business session will be as usual on the following Monday evening.

Sister Suzanne Lewis has been confined to her bed for the last several days. Also E. P. Hitchcock suffered severe shock and injuries in a recent automobile accident. It is hoped that both Sister Lewis and Brother Hitchcock will rapidly recover.

Quindaro Church

Rally Day and home-coming were observed in this branch November 2. All meetings were well attended. Pastor H. A. Higgins, assisted by Brothers Albert Hallier and Ernest Hawkins, had charge of the communion service. Sunday school convened at 9.30.

The meeting at 2.45 in the afternoon was in charge of John Tucker, one of Quindaro's pioneer workers. Many others instrumental in advancing the latter-day work here took part in this service. One feature of this hour was the unveiling of a beautiful oil painting of the late Sister Phoebe Tucker, wife of Brother John Tucker, who passed to her reward last March. Sister Tucker did much in establishing the work of the church in this vicinity and always was an enthusiastic worker. The painting was a donation of the Heathwood Church to the art gallery in the Auditorium. It was beautifully framed, and the presentation was made by Elder H. A. Higgins. A violin solo was played by Otis Swart, Sister Eola Hawkins at the piano. Sister Emily Foley sang a solo.

The seven o'clock program was in charge of Brother J. Gross and family and was much appreciated.

Elder John F. Sheehy, pastor of the Stone Church at Independence, preached at 7.45 to a large and appreciative audience. His discourse centered around the redemption of Zion. As a central thought he used the text, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve."

At the expression hour on November 9 numbers were given by Sister Emily Foley, solos by Margery Hawkins, and a reading by Viola Baker. There was also a duet by Frank Murrah and Charles Scrivener. Mr. Le Roy Cook, park commissioner, of Kansas City, Kansas, was present and told of the work which he is conducting for the city and the children.

The stake missionaries, Brothers Richards and Sevy, are at work in this branch. They are energetic men, and we hope much good will result from their help.

Chelsea Church

The work of the young people of Chelsea congregation is progressive. The Wednesday evening prayer hour is well attended, especially by the young members. Other services have fair attendance.

Thirteen of our O. B. K.'s were present every night at the young people's meetings recently held at Central Church, and Chelsea has a good representation at the leadership classes which started November 9.

The young people's and adult divisions had a masquerade party Halloween night in charge of Roy Conklin and Charlie Banks. Sisters R. J. Crayne and L. Johnson looked after the refreshments. Everyone had an enjoyable time.

The O. B. K.'s served a supper at the church the evening of November 15, the proceeds to be used for the purchase of a new basket ball.

Recent speakers have been Elder D. E. Hough, Pastor J. A. Harrington, and on October 9 Bishop C. A. Skinner was here. He delivered an interesting discourse on "Building character which makes real men and women."

Miss Arline Bernard was baptized into the church October 9 by J. A. Harrington.

The junior choir is rehearsing a cantata for Christmas. We are happy that so many of our young people are willing to put their time and talent into something worth while.

A Faithful Member Passes On

Sister Margaret M. Martin, mother of Evangelist John F. Martin, passed to her reward Monday, November 10, according to a telegram received last week in the office of the First Presidency. Sister Martin was born April 14, 1855, at Steubenville, Ohio. She became a member of the church June 27, 1894, being baptized at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. At the time of her death she was a member of the Wheeling, West Virginia, Branch. She had suffered with poor health for some time.

Lamoni Stake

Graceland Home-coming Service

The Brick Church was well filled on Sunday morning, November 9. The programs giving the order of the service read, "Morning Service of the Brick Church, in conjunction with the Graceland Home-coming." Organ music bridged the program of the church school with the eleven o'clock service, and continued as the choir took its place.

Choir and congregation joined in the alma mater hymn, "Sons of Graceland," with vigor and joy. The prayer was offered by Lonzo Jones, now of the faculty of the University of Iowa. The A Cappella Chorus sang Christenson's "In heaven above" as an offertory and also a prayer response, "Hear us, our Father." The choir in full number was at its best and under Miss Carlile's leadership sang Parker's "Before the heavens were spread abroad." Apostle F. Henry Edwards delivered a masterly sermon concerning the necessity of vision. Pastor T. S. Williams presided.

Armistice Day Observed

The evening of November 9 the Brick Church observed Armistice Day. The congregation joined in the hymns with good response, for they were songs of peace and world fellowship printed for the occasion and sung to familiar tunes. An octet sang "America the Beautiful," and Colin Ferrett gave one of his dramatic bass solos. John F. Sheehy, pastor of the Stone Church, was the guest speaker, and in his direct and earnest manner found response in the congregation. In closing, the hymn, "God send us men," was sung with fervent expression.

Ordination Service

The November sacramental service was outstanding. The beautiful fall weather brought out a good congregation. After the serving of the sacrament, the pastor explained that the Northern Wisconsin District had recommended the ordination of Paul Utnehmer to the office of priest and had requested that the Lamoni Branch take care of the ordination. The congregation joined in two stanzas of "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and G. N. Briggs offered an ordination prayer. Then from the balcony an octet sang "He leadeth me." Meanwhile the candidate for ordination and the ministers officiating had taken their places on the rostrum. The ordination was performed by Roy A. Cheville with M. E. Mortimore assisting. At its close the octet again sang softly one stanza of "My faith looks up to Thee." In a single expression of appreciation, Roy Cheville extended to the young man just ordained the hand of fellowship. Paul, or "Ute" as he is known about the campus, is a junior and is editor of the college paper and manager of the commissary. After the ordination, the pastor spoke briefly of the responsibility of ordination for all ministers.

Meeting of Workers of Church School

On Thursday evening, October 23, was held one of the most important gatherings of the local church. Directors, teachers, and committee workers of the church school met for a dinner and forum of discussion. A group of ladies of the church served a warm dinner in the basement of the church. Mrs. W. H. Blair, director of music in the church school, led hymns of service; and Roy A. Cheville, the director, outlined the general purpose of the local program of Religious Education. Martha Young, Ethel Bandy, and Harry Lorance spoke concerning the work of their departments. At the close there were numerous requests for similar gatherings.

Decision Day

At 8.30 four children were baptized, Roy Cheville officiating. At the primary session of the church school these were confirmed as a part of the worship period. At two Elder James Thomas baptized a father and son who are to be enrolled with the Davis City Branch. At 2.30 Roy Cheville again officiated in baptizing three young women, two of them students at Graceland. At the eleven o'clock service the pastor preached on the subject, "What does the church mean to me?"

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Howard and Ontario Streets

Fall finds us in a veritable bevy of activities—spiritual, scholastic, recreational. We are moving forward, recognizing in our moving that we are truly living in the sifting time. Some are becoming stalwart Saints, while others are falling by the wayside.

On the last Sunday in October, Decision Day, eight more were added to our membership. The junior church is producing fruit. These eight young people are regular attendants there. The baptismal service, held in the evening in place of the usual preaching service, was impressive. The candidates and Brother Livingston were dressed in white. The organ solo, special choir music, and the singing of "Youth's prayer," by William Beekman, together with decorations of palms and flowers, gave impressiveness to the service. The following Sunday, the first Sunday of the month, the confirmation took place, and directly thereafter the new members were served the sacrament. Youthful though they are, we noted a beautiful change in them as they realized their ambition in covenanting with the entire congregation to lead clean lives. Our quota for the year 1930 now lacks three of being full.

A great number of our people are taking advantage of the evening schools here. We feel this is a step in the right direction apropos to the statement, "Ye are the light of the world." Our German Saints are also using these schools to advantage. They are becoming more accustomed to American habits and the use of the English language.

Although the new plan of Religious Education has not been put into action by a branch vote, our programs take that trend. The church school has a large attendance and an active leader. The junior church is aiming to take care of its group in recreation and Religious Education. They were fortunate in having some real Latter Day Saint talent for their Halloween party. The Clark family have been in Philadelphia for a few weeks, and everyone knows of their ability to make a party lively.

Great activity is being shown to gather funds for the new Independence Hospital and Sanitarium. A bazaar, sponsored by the Clover Club, together with individual efforts, will bring our goal near—an endowed room. We are glad to welcome Brother and Sister Austin and family into our branch. New material often means new zeal to the ones who long have been on the job. It is our aim to help all remain steadfast to a cause that is all-consuming.

EVANGELINE SHAW.

Elder A. C. Barmore III

Letters from Sister L. Barmore and Elder Matthew Liston brought news to Independence last week of the serious illness of Elder Alma C. Barmore. On the morning of November 8 Brother Barmore underwent an operation for gallstones at a Port Huron, Michigan, hospital. He was in the operating room two and one half hours. His nurse says that he is doing as well as can be expected, and Sister Barmore is with him almost constantly.

Brother and Sister Barmore arrived in America early in the year with the delegation from Australia, and the Centennial Conference assigned him Eastern Michigan District as a mission, Port Huron as his objective. Since leaving Independence for his mission field, our brother's health has declined, but he has been kept busy preaching and performing other tasks which devolved upon him.

All Saints in the district are urged to attend.—Glenn Davis, district president; Will Drake, secretary, McKenzie, Alabama.

Semiannual district conference of Northwestern Iowa District will be held at Woodbine, Iowa, November 29 and 30. This will be a very important conference, as matters pertaining to our future work are to come up for discussion as follows: The amending of the resolution relative to the holding of conferences, the organization of the district in harmony with the new program of Religious Education, the election of officers in harmony with the new plan, the adoption of a budget to finance our work for 1931, and any other matters that may come before us for discussion. Pursuant to a resolution passed at the last district conference, will the Saints please come Sunday with their basket lunch? We will give a demonstration of a "Group Stewardship in eating," and thus not deny the Saints of Woodbine the services in asking them to provide for our physical needs. Another resolution passed at the district conference suggests that near-by branches close their services on this day and that more distant branches send as many representatives as possible, at least one. In meeting together we move forward in a common cause. All members of the priesthood, please send in reports to District President G. Gunsolley; and, branch clerks, send statistical reports to District Secretary Ruby Adams. As the time is very limited for getting your reports to us, will you please attend to these at once. We expect Brother Garver to be here, and may we ask that the Saints begin to make preparation for this gathering to the end that God will meet with us and lift us to higher ideals, and imbue us with greater zeal to carry on.—Gerald Gunsolley, district president; Ruby Adams, district secretary.

Institute Notice

Saints in the Southeastern Mission will convene for an institute at Mobile, Alabama, November 28, 29, and 30. All members living in Alabama, Florida, and Mobile Districts are urged to be in attendance. The Mobile Branch is making preparations to care for all who attend. An interesting program is being arranged. The principal speaker will be Elder John Blackmore, of Independence. Other general workers who will be present are Elders G. E. Burt, Evan A. Davis, and Glenn Davis. Class work will be provided. An interesting recreational feature will be a volley ball tournament between the three districts. Everyone should plan to attend the institute.—Glenn Davis.

Our Departed Ones

EASTWOOD.—David Eastwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Eastwood, Stratford, Ontario, was drowned the afternoon of August 4, 1930. The accident occurred about two miles from his home, just outside the city limits. For two hours experts worked with the body in an attempt to revive the spark of life that seemed to be there. David was in his sixteenth year and was a promising young man. He was baptized a member of the church in his childhood and had just reached the age that he was taking active interest in the local branch. At school he was a scholar and an athlete. After his graduation from the Stratford Collegiate Institute, he planned to attend Graceland College and there make preparation for some field

He leaves a noble father and loving mother to mourn the loss of two splendid sons. There were only the two children, Alex and David.

A PHILADELPHIA CLASS QUALIFIES FOR THE DO-IT-NOW CLUB

Charles Langjahr of Philadelphia writes: "Perhaps you would be interested to know that we have a Research Class for the young people. We study the three books of the church and collect five cents dues each week. This money goes toward buying these books or any other church book that they might want to buy. From April of 1930 until now we have bought $35 worth of books. We are trying to do what we can in getting these books into every member's home."

This plan of building private libraries in the homes of members is a very commendable one. Other groups throughout the church may be interested in the plan and wish to try it. Build a Library of Church Books.

Thanksgiving and Our Ideals

By Frederick M. Smith

In a season of the year usually abounding, in agricultural sections at least, in rejoicing because of bounteous crops gathered and sold or securely garnered, there is the general feeling of euphoria which springs from a sense of well-being augmented by a feeling of security arising from conscious provision against a season of winter cold and the physical comforts needed while awaiting the natural return of another season of crop growing and Nature's evidences of abundant provision for her children.

Even in sections where industry and manufacture of goods chiefly occupy the attention of the people, it seems a natural and easy thing to fall into a spirit of thanksgiving at the harvest home period, especially when prosperity has kept the shops open and the pay roll full and regular.

So it seems logical that a people who, under adverse conditions and new environments which had tested their powers of adaptation to the limits, had, under the blessings of Deity, and in a deep spirit of reverence and religion, successfully wrought out their industrial salvation, should (when prosperity had come and peace rested upon their banners, and they sought ceremonially to give expression to their gratitude in acknowledgment of divine grace and benevolence) select as the season of such rejoicing a time when their granaries were full, their flocks were fat, and bounteous store promised a comfortable winter beside their home fires.

We Follow Puritan Customs

That custom of ceremonial thanksgiving initiated thus logically and earnestly by our Puritan forbears and fixed in the month preceding the rigorous winter has long ago become fixed by custom, and we quite as a matter of course expect the annual proclamations of national and state executives calling the citizens of the Nation to their knees in thanks to the beneficent Author of our existence, for mercies and favors of all kinds.

Thanks through Feast

It seems to have followed quite as a matter of course that (heeding again the example of our Puritan ancestors) we, on the great day of Thanksgiving, pass from out the walls and away from the altars of our cathedrals, temples, and churches when our ceremonies of thanks are formulated and expressed, and repair to the well-laid board in the family dining hall, and there, still in the spirit of thankfulness, partake lavishly, if at times unwisely, from the bounteous board laden with the prepared viands from field and store.

So, through years of plenty and sometimes scantier ones, our custom of Thanksgiving goes on, with its annual recurrence, in so matter of fact a way, that we, not knowing or having forgotten the purposes of its origin or the causes for its continuance, accept its appearance each fall as any of the many holidays, and participate in the feasting features of the day and the celebration, sometimes with little regard for the deeper religious or spiritual motivations, and thus "give thanks" quite perfunctorily if at all. And it may be said that the bounteous hand of Nature has so regularly displayed her generosity to us that we seldom have to consider other than her extravagances and excesses, and have not foreseen that there might be times when our thanks would be returned for a less bounteous store or when our prosperity would be confined to far narrower limits. So generally is this true that we are proverbially impatient with anyone who attempts to raise his voice in warning against extravagance, or in prophecy of leaner times to come, increasing the numbers who are in need.

The Present Thanksgiving Season

This year, however, there have run together a concatenation of events which makes the approach to Thanksgiving Day quite different from many which have gone before.

Nature, for some reasons doubtless quite well known to Deity and probably well within the limits of His purposes, has so directed its forces that there has been a distinct curtailment of crops in many parts of the world. Added to that, a general depression has brought prices of agricultural products to a low level without a marked reduction in prices to the consumer. Work has slackened, or has been turned over to labor-saving devices until unemployment has grown to the largest proportions known in many years. An inevitable consequence is that the less provident of the people have been thrown into conditions of want and destitution and this to a degree not often seen. And I doubt not that in many homes this Thanksgiving Day the "festive" board of the family will be far from "groaning" beneath its load. It may easily be possible that from many tables even the essentials of an ordinary meal will be absent.

A Warning

To us as a people this very situation has a significance we may not well overlook. It is what I am firmly convinced is but a gentle reminder of what might yet come, and which will come, if prophecy to us is to reach a consummation; and it demonstrates clearly, and (let me express the hope) convincingly to us, how easy it is for the best-laid plans of men to go awry in a common or group sense as well as in individual cases, and how quickly and completely an apparently impregnable defense of industrial lines and works may fall into disorder and chaos, throwing man back upon more primitive natural resources and methods for support, sustenance, and protection. Once again, and impressively too, is taught to us the great truth that dependence is a social force of inestimable importance and is divinely instituted. It ought to appeal strongly to us as a people as a step towards moving us into a condition where we shall perforce of circumstances be compelled to recognize our responsibility to our fellow men. It will be well for us if now and here we shall take due warning, and once more with renewed vigor and with richer understanding take up our task (a task which is, as we firmly believe, a divinely imposed one) of bringing about the religious and social conditions which shall constitute the basic structure of our "golden age" to which we have been looking forward so long. It is well for us again to envisage, if we can, the great ideals and objectives of the church.

Obedience to Law

Everyone who becomes a Latter Day Saint, or when he comes to himself as such (whether at baptism by water or later under the expanding and illuminating power of the great baptism of the Spirit) is impregnated with a deep and saturating conviction, which illumines mind and soul, that the first requirement of a child of God is to render obedience to divine mandates and give due respect to divinely instituted authority and forces.

This is the essence of spirituality, based as it is upon the foundation stone of belief in a Supreme Being of omniscience and omnipotence. Reason, it is true, is a power given to man which lifts him above the brute creation and towards the great mind of the universe; but reason proceeds from premise to conclusion, and in the selection of our premises we fall back upon innate convictions. This is true in the realms of both scientific and religious thinking, and in determining from innate convictions the premises of our religious cogitations we utilize a divinely implanted power by fanning into flame the spark God planted in man when he "made man in his own image and made him to feel after God." Obedience, to the Latter Day Saint, means something deep, cogent, and pervasive as a force-developing spirituality, a prime essential for all religious and real social progress.

Spirituality Prompts Social Endeavor

Such spirituality will and must prompt religious cooperation towards the achievement of better social conditions and the development of a people who possess richer spiritual resources. Purity of heart is a Latter Day Saint ideal. The pure in heart in this sense is one in which every emotional impulse is religiously motivated, and springs from an ever conscious relationship to God. A relationship such as this is incalculable and unattainable without due consideration of fraternal relations, and of our consideration of fraternal relations, and of our re- with whom we have being. To have our ideas of God and what he would have us do towards the welfare of our brother, issue in saner, wiser, diviner, social relations is the essence of Latter Day Saint responsibility to God—our spirituality.

Business of the Church

This ideal connotes, aye, demands the collective or group handling of some very practical and everyday things, forces, and conditions which have a distinct bearing upon social as well as individual well-being and well-feeling.

The ideal or objective towards which the church must work in this direction is to develop a religiously social or socially religious consciousness that will create, develop, and maintain within the soul and mind of every member of the church a conviction that he has not served, can not serve, God as best he can, until his every act, every thought, and every word issue into being with an accompanying consciousness of our responsibility and amenability to God—a consciousness that we are but utilizers rather than owners of all that God has given to us in the way of strength, capacity, talents, or goods; and that in the utilization of these the measure of our success will lie close to the amount of good, joy, and happiness we have brought to others.

Houses of Worship

From the beginning of the Deity's dealings with man, God has always seemed pleased to see man worshipping in buildings of such a character that the longings of the soul of man for harmony, beauty, majesty, and grandeur are answered by surroundings of grace and dignity. To worship beneath the trees when all the conditions are those of delight and comfort, is uplifting and inspiring, but to be able to worship at all times amidst conditions so under our control that the surroundings are pleasant and conducive to spiritual tone, is even better. So the possession of temples and houses wherein we may meet and commune with those forces establishing contact with Deity at times when needed, becomes an objective of any people who follow after godly things in a collective way. We have been assiduous in building houses of worship, and in this we must not slack so long as need exists and means are at hand to supply that need. But towards the higher aspects of buildings of worship, we have not yet addressed ourselves as assiduously or as effectively as we could or should. Towards this ideal may we longingly and purposefully look and labor.

Shall We Give Thanks?

In the light of these ideals, what have we as a people for which to be thankful at this season?

In this year of restricted blessings our people have felt the pinch of untoward conditions along with others, and the group as well as the individuals will suffer curtailment of material blessings; but we may well be sincerely thankful that not yet has the worst been experienced, so far as possibility is concerned. We, as a people, still have enough of this world's goods so that if we are motivated and actuated by the deep religious purpose which should characterize Latter Day Saints, we may yet by sacrifice and rigid economy make offerings upon the altar to the extent that the work of the church shall go onward.

We may be thankful that while we have not yet brought about the social conditions out of which shall be reflected the glory of God, we have withal made some progress in demonstrating the feasibility of our plan; and we may by the very present experiences and curtailments of prosperity be led on, under the inspiration of our cause and work, to put into operation and effect a social program and condition in which through mutual as well as reciprocal endeavor we may keep individual suffering at a minimum by increasing the fund of common wealth and social surplus, always and ever a reserve against temporary depressions if sufficiently distributed to prevent selfish accumulation with consequent lack in complementary quarters.

It is to be hoped that we may yet be thankful for learning the lessons and heeding the warnings of our present condition.

The Spirit of Devotion Here

We have cause to be thankful that even amidst the unpleasantness of the present depression and in spite of some inescapable sufferings, there is a spirit of devotion and service which is leading us surely on towards better conditions. And let us hope that our devotion will be deeper as a consequence, that in the momentary curtailment of means to carry out our work there may be gathered power for the greater efforts which must follow. And with our zeal enriched by suffering for a loved cause, our love for God deepened by the revelation of his surely moving plan, and our determination to serve him fortified and expanded, let us move conscientiously and safely into a closer unity of action and into the completion of our tasks leading to the conditions where brotherly service and fraternal social conditions will issue into reality by the spiritualizing and vitalizing of the brotherly love and concern we profess to have.

President McDowell on the Radio

During the month of December, radio listeners will have the pleasure of hearing President F. M. McDowell in four sermons on the 10 o'clock program Sunday evening from KMBC. These sermons, growing out of President McDowell's visit to Europe, are: "I have seen Jesus," touching on the ever-present Jesus in the art and architecture of Europe; "Playing the part of Jesus," the story of the Passion Play; "Challenging events in the story of Jesus," based on outstanding lines in the Passion Play; and "I would see Jesus," an appeal for the application of the teachings of Jesus to the modern world. Each Sunday evening in December, tune in on KMBC, 950 kilocycles, at 10 o'clock, and hear President McDowell.

The Week's Best Saying

I used to think that it was my first job as a missionary to get people under the water. That was eight years ago. Now I see that it is my main duty to get them converted. And it is better and easier to convert them before they are baptized.

The Wind and the Paper

Last Saturday I paused a few moments between "stints" of work and wandered aimlessly over to my front window, where I stood staring rather listlessly and vacantly out into the street, seeing everything, yet noticing nothing. The cars were whizzing up and down along the car line with the abandon that seems customary among Americans in the absence of a motorcycle patrolman. All at once I noticed a large double sheet of newspaper which some tidy person had thrown out of his car. I noticed it particularly because a south breeze seemed to be blowing it my way. For some reason my front yard seems to catch all the loose papers for blocks around, and I had visions of having to go out again to pick up this latest acquisition. But as it lay momentarily idle in the middle of the street, a speeding auto bore down upon it and whizzed past at somewhere around forty miles an hour. As if the paper had heard a sudden summons from somewhere, it rose in the air and billowed off to the west in the direction of the car; but it had no sooner gotten a good start in that direction than another car zipped by at about the same speed, this time going in an opposite direction. The paper fluttered to the street, wavered a moment as if rather undecided which way to go, and then decided to follow the second car eastward and towards town. Soon its zeal for that direction also cooled off, and it sank listlessly once more to the street, waiting for another object to chase. As it happened, the next thing was not an automobile; it was nothing more than the good stiff south breeze which had been blowing all day, and in less time than it takes to tell it the paper was plunging off northward towards my front yard. As I turned away from the window in more or less disgust, I thought to myself: "How like some people that I know!"

Variable Hearts

Some people never seem settled or satisfied with their religion. They are not certain that they know anything, and they are constantly being blown about by every little gust of wind that rattles their spiritual foundation. Not all of them are affected by the same thing. Some people like to change leaders about every so often, and they will follow any kind of leader and any kind of doctrine, just so it is quite modern and up to the minute and new fangled. Of course if they are to keep up to date, they must change about every so often; the wind shifts into a new direction, and away they go aimlessly after it. Perhaps that fact will at least help to explain why a man can propound almost any kind of doctrine and promulgate almost any kind of preposterous mythology or theology and gain a following, at least for a time.

Other people feel perfectly satisfied with their church and with their religion until some man, who they thought was just a little lower than the angels, makes a misstep, slips, and goes down in disgrace. Then they yield to the impetus of that breeze and blow away after the fallen brother—their faith in the church and in all religion destroyed because one man has fallen.

Still other people make a great deal of fuss about the letter perfection and sanctity of creeds and dogmas and doctrines. I have known college students to blow clear away from church and religion as soon as the first gust of scientific truth struck them in college. They have been taught at home that God created the earth and all things in it in six days, and when they find out that some men believe God took a few million years to perfect the job, the gust of wind that follows sends them scurrying away from all religion in quest of the theory of evolution. Some men will get violent and call each other names, if they do not positively hate each other, over such inconsequential things as whether or not the story of Jonah and the whale is true, or whether angels have wings, or the disputed meaning of some obscure prophecy in the Bible. And countless thousands of other people are constantly being blown about by the latest worldly fancy—blown about on the winds of chance and change, but always in the direction away from the church and away from God.

An Anchor for Souls

There are only a few things that really matter in the field of religion. We must be sure that there is a God, who is creator and ruler of the universe, who is our father and our friend; whose power and might are boundless, but whose watchcare stoops to notice the lowliest man of his creation. We must be sure that Jesus Christ is his Son and our Savior; that he established his church and promised that the gates of hell should not prevail against it. We must be sure that men are brothers in fact as well as in pretty-sounding theory. Leaders may come and leaders may go, but if your leader is God, you will never need to yield to every fickle wind that breezes past you. Men may fall and may desert the church, but if you know that the gates of hell can not prevail against it, you will be unafraid in spite of man-made mistakes. If you are firmly grounded in the idea of brotherly love, quibbling about unimportant points of doctrine and vacillating with each new argument for or against will have no charms for you. If you are steadfastly set upon serving God, worldly distractions will be powerless to draw you away from the object of your devotion. The peaceful man—the contented man—is he whose hopes are grounded surely and firmly upon the fundamentals of faith; who is not swayed by every chance breeze that frolics across his path.

Centuries ago, Paul wrote to the Ephesians advising them that they "henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive." God grant that we in this present age may always have our faith securely anchored in the few great fundamentals, and that passing winds may find us unshaken and unshakable.

PEN POINT PICKUPS

Turbulent Waters

Not long since, while on my westward journey from Mobile, I had occasion to stop over night in New Orleans, the Crescent City. There being no members of the church there, I sought shelter and rest at the Monteleone Hotel. Having refreshed myself with a good washup, followed by a satisfactory meal, I started out to see some of the near-by points of interest peculiar to this Southern city. My wanderings took me down to the foot of Canal Street, where the Mississippi River, the "Father of Waters," was fast losing its identity as a river, soon to be swallowed up by the Gulf of Mexico. Some few miles distant, standing upon the levee, looking down into the boiling, restless flow, I thought: Turbulent waters going on to the sea, carrying with them the filth and rubbish gathered from the up-state country in its onward course. Small craft and ferryboats were doing service to the demands made in various ways. Again I thought: Busy waters, rolling, roaring waters going on to the sea. The night was fast coming on, so I began to retrace my steps.

As I advanced toward the shopping district, I found that the night was turned almost to day. The streets were aflame with bright lights, some of which were serving as advertisements under brilliant designs in order to attract the eye of the passer-by, while others were doing public service in a modest way.

Beneath this colorful display of gorgeous splendor was a moving, seething mass of humanity, comprising representatives, perhaps, from every country in the world. Once more I moralized: Turbulent waters, not streams of water, but streams of people going on apace, ever seeking but never satisfied, rushing madly on, yielding to the varied impulses of this "fretful fever" we call life; turbulent, storm-swept turgid waters, gathering in its flow some good, many bad, and very few who serve to compose or stabilize the general current of restlessness—confusion everywhere, a veritable Babylon. Not so much a confusion of tongues, but a confusion of ideals, with greed and selfishness in the ascendancy—with crime and lust decidedly on the increase and withal having no definite or fixed goal in view—busy, restless waters going on to some great sea. Surely the whole world is afloat on the sea of idolatry, ignorance, and superstition.

If the Apostle Paul were in our midst today, his great heart would be "stirred within," no doubt, as it was in days of old when he waited for Silas and Timotheus at Athens.

One looks over churchdom as a whole, and beholds the outward devotions, the many steeples pointing heavenward, and thinks of the inscription found on the altar: "To the unknown God." And one feels like saying with Paul: "Whom ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you."

Paul would perhaps remind us that many strange gods had been set up, before which many heads were bowed in worship. Furthermore he would account for the turbulent condition now prevailing to our failure to recognize the true and living God, "Who made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands." The world today is deluged with the waters of confusion, and this contrary to the wonderful teachings of our blessed Lord, who wept over Jerusalem and sought to bring his people out of bondage long ago.

Will he have occasion to weep over Zion now? He sought to bring peace on earth when here among his disciples; he is seeking to bring peace to his people now.

That which will bring peace out of confusion, lasting joy out of this "feverish life," can be brought about only through obedience to the divine plan submitted by the Master of men. This means that a nominal faith must be substituted with a living, active faith, so that the purposes of God shall be our purpose. The power with which the Christ worked shall be the power which will dominate and control us; then the love with which our Lord worked will become the dynamic force in our every act.

The task now appearing great will challenge every virtue within us to the complete accomplishment of the great cause intrusted to our care. The now turbulent waters will in time become the peaceful river in the midst of a people called Zion.

PEN POINTS.

The Most Essential

By J. E. Vanderwood

Religion, like life, may be made up of many things. But it is quite certain that either a true life or a true religion must be the outgrowth of true principles. Here, as in all things, cause and effect are important factors. He who is careless and indifferent can not in the very nature of things come into possession of that which is of greatest value, nor can one secure the best if he is willing to be contented with the inferior. One can have but little chance to get up if he is constantly looking down. In order for one to arise, he must aspire; he must dwell in thought on the thing he would become; he must reach out and desire to possess that which he would some day have, for the laws of nature have provided that we get only what we work for, whether it be physical, mental, or spiritual. Nothing happens by chance; nothing comes where it is not solicited; and where no effort is made to acquire, nothing is obtained.

Striving for the Best

The reason why the religion of Christ is superior to all others is obvious: he lived a higher and purer life than others did. Here we are reminded that life and religion are inseparably connected, one can not have true religion without at the same time becoming the possessor of true life. He whose religious concepts are false is sure to reveal a life that is defective. Cause and effect hold good here also. The question that here confronts us is, Why should man content himself with anything but the best? Is there any reason why we who are endowed with intelligence should neglect the most important thing in the world? Can we hope to attain unto the things that are worth while unless we are willing to put ourselves to the task of determining what is of greatest value to us here? No excuses can justify our failure to consider rightly and judge properly the issues of life which, from day to day, are inviting our most sacred thought and consideration. There is no way for us to escape the consequences of our choice, for it is eternally true that I can be no more than what I will to be. The volition of man, then, has much to do with his success or failure, either in this life or in that which is to come.

Volition Is Essential

The religion of Christ was superior to that of other men because his life was superior, and in the measure that we come to possess the religion of Christ, to that degree will we be able to transcend others in our manner of living. Too frequently we fail to weigh the matter involved in the message of the Master of men; we lose sight of the things that are most fundamental to our success in life. He chose to do the thing which was divine; his volition enabled him to transcend all men in his manner of life and teaching. He willed to do what his Father willed to have him do. He therefore taught, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." He desired to have us understand that if we are to become partakers of that which is highest and best, we must will to do so. He who lacks volition must of necessity fail; there can be no escape for him, for only as we learn to choose can we hope to attain. Here the message of the latter-day prophet rings true. He wrote: "Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind, and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days."

Religion in Action

No wonder that Luke should record in the Acts of the Apostles the circumstance concerning the early ministers of Christ, and of the Master himself, that "He went about doing good." He who has put his heart into a thing that is worth while, he who has willed to reflect Christ, can do no other than be found going about doing good. Undoubtedly this is what the Master wished to convey when he said, "By their fruits ye shall know them." Religion becomes vital to us when we put ourselves into it.

He who possesses the most essential things then, a heart and a willing mind, will be found teaching wherever he goes, for his life will be so outstanding that men everywhere will be made conscious of the power that is associated with his presence. He who has the most essential thing will be a real missionary, for he will be disseminating the spirit and power of his message wherever he may be found.

Surely we are pursuing the right course when we are willing to give ourselves to the thing that is intended to make this world a more fit place in which to live. The restored gospel brings to us the more abundant life, and he who is aflame with its message can not hold his peace; he must teach, he must instruct, he must invite all to come to Christ.

It is therefore very essential that man should discover the need of finding a true basis for his religious life; he should find the thing for which Christ gave his life, and then he should put his whole soul into it; he should will to do and to be all that the Master would have him do and be; and, regardless of the cost, he will find that he is more than paid for every effort he puts forth in this matter. For there is no way to escape the conclusion, that "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

When we have learned to give our hearts to the best, and we have willed to do the best, nothing but the best can come to us.

CHRISTMAS AT THE INN BY ELVA T. STURGES

This play, written by one of our talented young authors, was presented in Boston by the Drama Department of the School of Religious Education, Boston University.

It is a very superior piece of work, well adapted to production in churches for the Christmas program.

This and many other good features appear in the December VISION

Concerning Health

CALORIES

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

The comparison of the body to that of the "blacksmith's forge" is a good one, the lungs being the bellows and food the coal, for the air we breathe actually burns the food we eat. The greater part of food is used as body fuel, consequently food is measured in fuel-units called calories. One calorie is the amount of heat needed to heat a kilogram (about 2.2 pounds of water one centigrade). The number of calories required has been estimated by Atwater as follows:

Farmers' families, U. S. A.....	3560
Mechanics' families, U. S. A.....	3605
Professional men, U. S. A.....	3851
Army, U. S. A.....	3851
Navy, U. S. A.....	4998

In general it is usually computed that a man weighing 70 kilograms requires in calories as follows:

Sedentary life .....	2500
Light muscular work .....	3000
Medium muscular work.....	3500
Very hard muscular work.....	4000 or more

An undertsanding of the caloric value of foods is important in correcting over and under weight and assists in maintaining health.

From what has already been said, it is evident that a balanced ration or diet is necessary; that is, a diet consisting of a correct and sufficient proportion of each class of food. The vitamins and mineral salts are taken care of if the proteins, carbohydrates, and fats are properly selected. As an example I refer you to Doctrine and Covenants 86: 3, which is as follows:

"All grain is good for the food of man, as also the fruit of the vine, that which yieldeth fruit, whether in the ground or above the ground. Nevertheless, wheat for man," etc. This combination contains all the elements necessary for growth, maintenance, and health. Wheat is especially rich in vitamins and mineral salts, protein, and carbohydrates. Supplement this with the fat of milk and carbohydrates of honey or unrefined sugar, with their additional vitamins and minerals, and "we have a diet fit for a king," and a perfectly balanced diet.

An unbalanced diet helps fill our hospitals, asylums, and jails. The "destroying angel does not pass by." It produces under or over weight, decayed teeth, constipation, falling hair, lassitude, pimples, and other troubles of even a more serious nature.

Church School Worship Services

By Edith Harkness

THEME FOR THE MONTH: "THE COMING OF THE KING."

The month of December is with us, bringing with it the Christmas season and a wealth of worship materials, such as hymns, carols, and stories, that the entire month may be enriched with them. As soon as the month comes into view upon the calendar, everyone begins to look forward to the happiest day of the year, and never tires of the theme until the day has passed. The worship service offers an opportunity to keep the real meaning of Christmas before the school, also helping them to become familiar with the carols and hymns that belong to this season. The biblical narrative is so beautiful that it should be memorized and portions recited during the month.

FIRST SUNDAY

"The Shepherds' Watch"

Picture: "Announcement to the shepherds."—Plockhorst. (A picture for each Sunday is suggested and may be purchased from the Perry Pictures Company, Malden, Massachusetts. They will add much to the service if framed and placed in front where all may see.)

Piano Prelude: "The first Noel," Hymnal for American Youth, 77.

Opening Thought, read by the leader:

"In the lonely midnight,
On the wintry hill,
Shepherds heard the angels
Singing, "Peace, good will."
Listen, O ye weary,
To the angels' song;
Unto you the tidings
Of great joy belong."

"For God so loved the world that he gave his Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Hymn: "Hark! Hark! the notes of joy," Saints' Hymnal 153 (school standing).

Scripture: Luke 2: 8-14, "The shepherds and the angels" (memorized).

Story: "The shepherd who turned back," from Educating by Story Telling, by Cather; or "The shepherd who didn't go," by Jay T. Stocking, in Christmas Stories and Legends, Curtis.

SECOND SUNDAY

"There's a Song in the Air"

Picture: "Arrival of the shepherds," Lerolle.

Piano Prelude: "There's a beautiful star," Hymnal for American Youth, 86.

Opening Thought, by the leader:

"There's a song in the air!
There's a star in the sky!
There's a mother's deep prayer,
And a baby's low cry!

And the star rains its fire
While the beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem
Cradles a King!"

"Where is he that is born king of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him."

Hymn: "It came upon the midnight clear," Zion's Praises, 140 (standing).

Poem: "The three kings," Henry W. Longfellow.

Leader's Talk: "The song in the air":

Our theme this morning is "The song in the air," and we want you to think for a time about the carols of the Christmas season. We have not time during this one short worship period to make a study of the carol, but we want to bring you a little of the lovely music which the birth of Jesus has inspired throughout all these years, music which we do not often sing. It is hard to realize how this one theme, the prophecy of the coming of Jesus and his birth, has captured the singing world down through the ages. Almost every country has given to us messages in song called forth by this great event.

Scripture: "Story of the first Christmas carol," Luke 2: 8-14 (memorized).

Talk: "The Christmas Carol":

Ever since that night of wonder so long ago, when the shepherds out on the hills near Bethlehem heard the angels singing, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men," the Christmas season has been celebrated in songs of mirth, gladness, joy, and adoration.

It was at least twelve hundred years after this first carol of the angels that the Christmas carol took definite form. In Grecia, a small Italian village near Assisi, the great mystic, Saint Francis of Assisi, made the first Christmas creche, or crib, and the people sang Christmas songs in honor of Jesus the Christ.

At this time there had spread a doctrine called Manicheism, denying the virgin birth of the Christ, and also many other things contrary to the teachings of the church of that period. Saint Francis became very much wrought up over these things and set about to restore to the minds of the people the true meaning and a knowledge of the doctrine of the Divine Babe.

Saint Francis was spending the season in Grecia in 1220. He obtained permission to have all the trappings of a stable prepared in the church—the manger, ox, and ass, and everything that would make a visible and realistic representation of the holy night. The people rallied to the call of Saint Francis. They gathered around the church with tapers and torches, lighting the December night with glory. Those within the church and those without sang the night through in praises to God. The friars sang new carols which were listened to with much eagerness, for in those days this was their only means of learning. Later, this simple presentation led to the Mystery Play, a play dealing with life of the Christ.

There are so many classes of carols, even among the semi-sacred and sacred, it is hard to choose. The carols of all the nations include: Carols of nature, legendary carols, carols of the Virgin Mary, lullaby carols of the childhood of Jesus, carols of the angels and the shepherds, and Carols of the wise men.

We can sing only a few today. (Select carols of different nations and classes, singing about four if possible. After singing these, close the talk with the following):

These are only a few of the large collections of great carols. Besides all of these, we have many sacred Christmas carols. May we now sing together the one which is our theme this morning?

Hymn: "There's a song in the air," Zion's Praises, 180.

Prayer: As we have come again to the Christmas season, we desire to worship thee, our heavenly Father, and thy dear Son, even as the angels and the shepherds and the wise men did worship, with hearts filled with love and devotion, and hands ready to do thy bidding. May the thoughts that come to us at this season cause us to rejoice as did those of olden days; may our hearts be as ready to receive the Christ Child as were the humble shepherds on the fields of Bethlehem; may we be as earnestly seeking the star of the Savior as were the wise men on that first Christmas. We would help to swell the "Song in the air," tuning our voices to those of the angels as they sing, "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth, good will to men." We plead thy continued blessings; may thy Spirit hover over as we endeavor to worship thee, we pray in the name of thy holy Son, even Jesus, the Babe of Bethlehem. Amen.

Dismissal to Classes and Lesson Study.

THIRD SUNDAY

"Silent Night, Holy Night"

Voluntary.

Musical Prelude: "Silent night" (violin and piano).

Call to Worship, by leader:

"Angels, from the realms of glory,
Wing your flight o'er all the earth;
Ye who sang creation's story,
Now proclaim Messiah's birth:
Come and worship, come and worship,
Worship Christ the new-born King."

Quartet: "Watchman, tell us of the night."

Poem:

"Star of the East! Show us the way
In wisdom undefiled
To seek that manger out and lay
Our gifts before the Child—
To bring our hearts and offer them Unto our King in Bethlehem."
—Eugene Field.

Scripture: "The birth of Jesus," Luke 2: 8-20 (memorized).

Hymn: "Silent night," Saints' Hymnal 88 (school standing).

Talk: "The birth of the Christ Child":

(During the reading of this, have the violin, with mute, play very softly, "Silent night"; let the violin begin and play five or six measures, then the reader will begin to read quietly and smoothly.)

On the birthday of our King, can there be anything more fitting than the Christ story itself, which gains in loveliness and significance with each retelling?

It was near the close of the day. The shadows were growing long, and the quiet of the twilight was settling over the beautiful little town of Bethlehem. Two travelers, a man and a woman, drew near to the place. They were footsore and weary, for they had come a long distance. They breathed a sigh of relief as they found themselves drawing near to the place where they hoped to find rest from their journey.

With many others they had come on an important errand. All day long a constant stream of people had poured into that little town, and now, when these tired ones reached the inn and asked for a place to stay, they found that every place had been taken.

"No room at the inn!" They looked into each other's eyes in dismay. Could it be true? Every effort failed, and at last they found there was but one thing to do, take refuge in the stable that had been offered them.

It was while they were there that Mary gave birth to her firstborn son. She wrapped him in swaddling clothes and laid him in the manger, for there was no other cradle. With the lowing of the cattle for a lullaby, he slept; and the young mother felt her heart swell within her with that beautiful love which in all ages has filled the mother heart.

In this humble way was begun the life which has meant more to the world than all other lives combined. It does not seem strange to us that the word of this birth should have been carried first to the shepherds who, in that same country, were watching over their flocks by night; nor that it should have been carried by an angel. The shepherds were afraid, but the angel reassured them and gave them the wonderful tidings: "For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."

Then the angel was joined by a "multitude of the heavenly host," and there burst through the air that chorus which has come down through all the ages, and has never lost its sweetness nor its power:

"Glory to God in the Highest, and on earth peace, good will to men."

Prayer by leader.

Hymn: "Angels, from the realms of glory," Saints' Hymnal, 330 (tune Hymnal for American Youth, 73; omit Hallelujah chorus).

Dismissal to Classes and Lesson Study.

FOURTH SUNDAY

"Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men"

Voluntary.

Prelude Solo: "I heard the bells on Christmas Day."

Call to Worship, by leader:

"The crest and crowning of all good,
Life's final star is brotherhood;
For it will bring again to earth
Her long-lost poesy and mirth,
Will send new light on every face,
A kingly power upon the race;
And till it comes, we men are slaves,
And travel downward to the dust of graves."

Hymn: "O Child of lowly manger birth," Hymnal for American Youth, 93.

"O Child of lowly manger birth,
On whose low cry the ages wait,
Lead us thy way, and every day
Guide us to see what made thee great.

"O Jesus, youth of Nazareth,
Preparing for the bitter strife,
Wilt thou impart to every heart
Thy perfect purity of life?"

Scripture: Luke 2: 21, 22, 25-35.

Introduction to the hymn "Joy to the world":

May we turn to the old carol, "Joy to the world, the Lord is come." This carol sums up the Christmas message and the program of Christ's kingdom. Let us note the thought in the first verse as we sing, "Let every heart prepare him room." The music is arranged from Handel's Messiah. (Sing verse 1, Saints' Hymnal, 141.)

In the services of this month, the thought of Christ being born in us as a basis upon which to build a character like unto that of the Christ, has been emphasized. Upon such a foundation must depend so many big things, one of the greatest being the message the angels sang: "Peace on earth, good will to men." One writer states it thus:

"Except the Christ be born again tonight
In the dreams of all men, 'saints' and 'sons of shame,'
The world will never see his kingdom bright."

President Herbert Hoover has said: "Peace is not made in documents, but in the hearts of men." You will notice that the writer of this hymn, Isaac Watts, follows his thought of the personal acceptance of the Christ with the thought of Christian gladness and good will when the reign of the Christ is ushered in, for then "saints will their songs employ," and calls on all nature to rejoice. (Sing verse 2, Saints' Hymnal, 141.)

Another poet has given us these verses on "world peace":

"Nor with the high-voiced fife,
Nor with the deep-voiced drum,
To mark the end of strife,
The Perfect Peace shall come.

Nor pomp nor pageant grand,
 Shall bring War's blest surcease,
 But silent, from God's hand,
 Shall come the Perfect Peace."

Then shall we have the conditions which the writer visions in the last verse of this beautiful carol:

"He rules the world with truth and grace, and makes the nations prove the glories of his righteousness." (Sing verse 3.)

Talk: "World peace":

A cartoon in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle for December 15, 1927, featured Lindbergh on his good-will tour in Mexico. It showed the plane casting the shadow of a cross on the ground, and on the cross these words, "Peace on earth, good will to men."

The prelude solo, "I heard the bells on Christmas Day," was written by Longfellow on Christmas Day, 1864, when the Civil War was at its worst. Longfellow pictures his sorrow and despair at the strife, between brother and brother in the words, "There is no peace on earth, for hate is strong and mocks the song of 'Peace on earth, good will to men.'" But he is encouraged and his faith renewed in the next verse, by the message of the bells, "God is not dead, nor doth he sleep; the wrong shall fail, the right prevail, with peace on earth, good will to men."

One of our later-day poets, Edwin Markham, gives us these beautiful lines:

"There is no time for hate, my wasteful friend;
 Put away hate until the ages end.
 Have you an ancient wound? Forget the wrong."

Let us think on the message of the poem, "The hymn of peace," by the same author:

"What was the prophetic word that rang
 When down the starry sky the angels sang,
 That night they came as envoys of the birth—
 What word but peace—peace and good will to earth?"

"And what was the last word the Master said
 That parting night when they broke brother-bread,
 That night he knew men would not let him live—
 Oh, what but "peace I leave," and "peace I give"?"

"And yet behold: near twice a thousand years
 And still the battle wrath, the grief, the tears,
 Let mercy speed the hour when swords shall cease,
 And men cry back to God, "There shall be peace!"

Prayer.

Hymn: "At length there dawns the glorious day," Hymns for Living Age, 365.

Dismissal to Classes and Lesson Study.

Relax

By T. A. B.

It is good for you to relax, to be frivolous, and to let a spirit of fun run riot for a time. Being always dignified causes stagnation of the mind, while a play spirit helps you to do your work. A task is lighter for the heart's being light.

Neither mind nor body can be kept constantly under tension without impairing its usefulness.

The spirit of play keeps one young. Many a trifling annoyance can be turned into a humorous incident by a merry heart that has readiness to see the amusing side of things. A happy, cheerful temper promotes good health, and good health promotes a happy, cheerful temper. Don't be afraid of seeming foolish when you play.

The more serious your occupation, the heavier your cares, the more you need a play spell. However great you may be, however important your occupation, forget them both for a time. Let yourself loose from the tension of cares, and become a child in spirit. You will live longer and do better work.

Work, don't worry. It is not the revolution that destroys the machinery but the friction.

That man is happy who has within himself fine ideals and lives according to their dictates; ideals of knowledge, ideals of beauty, ideals of patriotism, ideals of virtue.—Pasteur.

NEWS OF CHURCH AND HOME

Please address all news and letters to Editors of the Herald, Box 237, Independence, Missouri.

To Our News Contributors

A few years ago news from the branches was somewhat spasmodically reported. The editors decided to build up the news department, and now have the satisfaction of seeing it regularly furnished with news from most quarters of the church by a corps of contributors who have conscientiously put themselves in training for the better performance of their work. For their faithfulness the editors take this occasion to express their gratitude.

The news is now coming in larger volume than the columns of the Herald can handle under present conditions. The editors wish to use all letters and reports, and not to delay their appearance, but there have been great difficulties. Much condensation has been necessary. At this time we are requesting our contributors not to be offended if their material is condensed, and to remember that one of the characteristics of a good writer is to say much in a few words.

Rock Island Conference

Rock Island District convened at Davenport, Iowa, for its annual fall conference, October 24 and 26. The weather was delightful, and a record number of visitors assembled from distant and neighboring branches. Bishop M. H. Siegfried and Publicity Agent J. A. Gardner, who have been making a tour in this territory, were here throughout the conference. District President E. R. Davis had planned an interesting program of services, the young people of Davenport provided the entertainment, and delicious meals were served in the basement by the Women's Department. Everything was done to make it a pleasant and memorable convention, and our one regret is that Missionary Amos T. Higdon was unable to meet with us. He is still at his home in Independence recuperating from a serious illness, and we trust that he may soon enjoy a return to complete health, for we need him badly and regret that he has been handicapped so long.

Friday evening was devoted to a program under the direction of Ruth Benson, formerly leader of Recreation and Expression. Doris Gray, of Davenport, played a piano solo and accompanied her sister, Helen, who played the violin. Elizabeth Suttin, of Peoria, also gave a piano solo. Leslie Davis, of Moline, favored us with selections on the ocarina. "The tell-tale heart," by Poe, was effectively read by Paul Richards, of Davenport, and Roy Benson gave an original talk on archery. This fitted nicely with Brother Siegfried's talk on "Burning and shooting your way through school," which described a Boy Scout project.

After a general prayer service Saturday morning, a class in "Church finance" was conducted by Brother Siegfried. The branch budget was discussed in detail, with suggestions that spell efficiency. It was decided that all resources and expenditures should be estimated at the beginning of the year, and that a systematic method, such as the envelope system, should be adopted to stimulate regular contributions and insure accurate receipting. Labor that is donated should receive due credit at a fair price on the branch ledger.

At the business session Saturday afternoon, we voted to reinstate our entire corps of district officers for the following year, including our approval of the district appointees, as follows: District president, E. R. Davis; first counselor, Edward Jones of Kewanee; second counselor, C. A. Beil of Clinton; treasurer and bishop's agent, L. A. White of Rock Island; secretary, Sister Winifred Stiegel of Moline; historian, Sister Nellie White of Rock Island; chorister, Sister Orpha Holmes of Joy; and missionary, Amos T. Higdon, of Independence. The new officers added to the staff were: District auditor, L. W. Stiegel, of Rock Island; supervisor of Harvest Home Festival, L. A. White; publicity agent, L. W. Stiegel; budget committee, district presidency and district treasurer; and superintendents of Religious Education, district presidency.

The supervisor of the Harvest Home Festival activities has been assigned the task of making our district earn a place of honor in the 1931 exhibit. By beginning early and planning a definite project for each worker, we hope to be able to do more than we have in the past.

The publicity agent is to work with the branch presidents and publicity agents in arranging suitable programs for special days and events. He is also to secure orders for the new hymn book, so that we may be able to take advantage of the one hundred lot rates and induce more branches to adopt them.

Counselors Edward Jones and C. A. Beil have been visiting the branches in the interest of the new program of Religious Education. Each has visited six branches to date, and report good interest in the new plan. Brother E. R. Davis, who has been taking the part of both missionary and president in Brother Higdon's absence, has been conducting a series of lectures in institute work at several places in addition to his illustrated lectures and regular preaching services. These have been well attended and appreciated by all who are interested in such class work.

Brother L. A. White reports a total of $1,828.04 in tithes and offerings for the past four months. District balance on hand, including $278.08 which has been reserved for a building and loan fund, equals $553.89, and we have not yet filled our budget for this year.

The district now numbers 1,635. Twenty-four baptisms and nine deaths have been reported since February, and the net gain, including transfers, is twenty-three for the period.

Saturday evening Brother Siegfried and Brother Gardner addressed a large audience. We were reminded of the small number who organized the church and of their untiring zeal in promulgating the gospel work. If, with our present number, we increased in the same ratio, it would not be impossible to convert almost the entire world. The spirit of the Restoration should carry us forward to accomplish all that we dream and long for when we speak of Zion.

At the close of the service the young people assembled in a spacious hall to enjoy the evening in a social way. Games and refreshments were provided by the Davenport girls, and almost seventy were present to share in the fun and favors. The small group which provided the fine entertainment and delicious luncheon certainly deserve our highest appreciation.

Sunday school was divided into three large classes Sunday morning, Brother Siegfried teaching the adults, Brother Gardner the young people, and Sister John Stiegel the children. This was followed by the regular preaching service with Brother Gardner as the speaker. At this time Brother John Lindburg, of Matherville, was ordained to the office of elder, and Edwin, the infant son of Brother and Sister Edwin Gunlock, was blessed under the hands of Brother Gardner and Brother Siegfried. As our regular chorister, Sister Orpha Holmes, was not present, Sister Theresa Stem, of Lamoni, was placed in charge of the music. At the request of Brother Gardner, she also sang, "I would be true," which furnished the theme for his sermon. There are so many people depending upon us, so many things awaiting our faith and fidelity, that we can not afford to be other than true to the very best that is in us. It is easy to live according to our high ideals in solitude, and it is easy to do as the world thinks proper when we are in the crowd, but the real man is the one who can live according to his high ideals when he is in the crowd. We should manifest our discipleship by the cheer and courage we impart to every fellow traveler on the highway of life. We trust that the Christ shall not find us asleep when he depends upon us in the crisis.

Sunday afternoon Brother Siegfried and Brother Gardner occupied, addressing a large audience, and bringing a message of challenge and inspiration.

We feel that the conference has been a milestone in our road to progress. The large number of pamphlets, books, tracts, etc., which has accompanied the Saints to their home branches, should be fruitful in perpetuating the spirit and faith we enjoyed there. MRS. JOHN STIEGEL.

Missionary Work in Des Moines District

Because of the great heat and drought of the summer months, Des Moines District suffered spiritually as well as physically. However, since the beautiful Indian summer has arrived, the Saints and nonmember friends are enjoying a much greater interest in their spiritual welfare. The prejudice and persecution which any church has to meet at its inception has practically disappeared, and the friendly spirit of the people at the present time greatly facilitates missionary work.

Elder A. L. Loving and I labored at Knoxville Branch the three weeks from October 5 to 26. Attendance was fairly good, and the interest was excellent. Stereopticon slides of the New Zealand Maori tribes and early church history were shown at times with good results.

C. F. Hull, pastor of Knoxville Branch, has been doing a wonderful work and offers an excellent example of what a local man with missionary zeal can do. As a result of his faithfulness and the good accomplished by the series, nine candidates from Knoxville and two young men from Melcher were baptized by myself in the Des Moines church font on Decision Day, October 26. These eleven people, with two women baptized by C. B. Hartshorn, pastor of Des Moines Branch, were confirmed immediately after the baptismal service by Elders A. L. Loving, C. B. Hartshorn, George Orr, and myself.

There are wonderful possibilities at Knoxville. We feel that the work has just begun there. Truly the harvest is ripe. The Saints should prosecute the ideals of the Restoration with all diligence.

That our efforts may not be in vain, let us implore God to direct us with his Holy Spirit. ERNEST E. CROWNOVER.

Plymouth, Massachusetts

Red Men's Hall, Middle Street

The work of the church goes on in Plymouth. Attendance is good at all services.

Graceland College Day, September 14, was remembered with song and story. Sister Doris Giovanetti responded as a volunteer to prepare an essay on Graceland for that occasion, and much fine feeling for the church college was imparted to all.

Good attendance greeted Rally Day, September 28.

The Women's Department continues with the study of the Church History. We have completed the reading of volume one and about two thirds of volume two. Sister Elva Buttner is unceasing in her efforts to push the work of this department.

All look forward to the inspirational meetings of the Department of Religious Education under the direction of Doris Giovanetti.

The Department of Recreation and Expression holds a meeting each Sunday evening, when a general outline of literature is considered. The first social since reunion was held in the new, unfurnished home of Brother Arthur Gordon. A large number gathered, and a good time was had. A Halloween party was held October 31 at the home of Sister Buttner.

On Decision Day a fine appeal was made by Pastor Benjamin W. Leland. He took his scripture reading from 1 Corinthians 12 and particularly stressed individual responsibility to the group both local and general. As members of the great church body, we hope to fill our little niche in life and further the great cause. MARGARET MILLMAN.

Frankfort Branch

Arkansaw, Wisconsin

Rally Day was observed September 28, there being a fine crowd present and every attendant enjoying himself socially and spiritually. Each one felt the urge to renew his efforts in the different departments.

Elder W. E. Shakespeare was here and gave two fine sermons. He also favored the congregation with two solos.

Twenty-two from this branch attended the district conference at Black River Falls. Branch President Clive Metcalf was ordained to the office of elder. Brother Willis Metcalf was ordained a teacher. Brothers Hunt, Shakespeare, Bowen, and Livingston officiated.

The Black River Saints royally entertained visiting members. Next year the conference will meet with this branch.

October 16 a large crowd enjoyed Apostle D. T. Williams's fine lecture on church history, beautifully illustrated by slides.

The Women's Department has resumed its work.

Elder Whitehead, of Muskegon, Michigan, is here and has delivered several fine sermons.

The Recreation and Expression Department meets regularly. A Halloween party was held Friday evening in the church basement. About forty were present, and after the "initiation" and games, a nice lunch was served. The following Tuesday there was a wiener roast at the home of the leader, Willis Metcalf.

Saints in this vicinity hope to accomplish much in the next few months.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

307 West Pierce Street

The new church program was put in operation the first Sunday in October, and is meeting with much favor and success. Those in charge are optimistic. O. A. Currie has charge of the adult division, Merle Spence the young people's division, and Sister Vinnie Hatch the children's division.

The Monday night school is in full swing at the present time. This season it was decided to hold only one class period, starting at 7.30 p. m., and continuing until 8.15. Brother Blair Jensen, recently appointed pastor at Omaha, is conducting a class on "Educational psychology." Those attending this class feel that much benefit has been derived and that by continued attendance they will be able to improve their talents, which we have been admonished to do. The other two classes, which are of equal importance, are training classes for teachers and others whose work brings them in contact with children. One class deals with children from the nursery to the primary age and is under the direction of Sister Vinnie Hatch, while the other class deals with the child through the junior and intermediate age, and is conducted by Sister Nell Harper. These teachers are able instructors, having had valuable experience, and those having the care of children up to the adolescent age, whether in Sunday school or the home, are urged to attend these classes.

Wheel No. 7 of the Women's Department gave a social

Tuesday night, October 28, in the lower church auditorium, which was well attended. A good program was furnished by those in charge, and all seemed to enjoy the spirit of fellowship which prevailed. There was not only a "grab bag" for the women (the men were not prohibited), but a fish pond for the children; also an ample supply of pop-corn balls and delicious homemade candy was available. These entertainments are well attended, as the proceeds are applied to the church budget, and we are all desirous of assisting in keeping our budget up-to-date.

The choir is in charge of a new director, Sister Donald Stoff. It is hoped a greater number of singers will avail themselves of the opportunity to cultivate their talents along this line, and assist in a work that is so necessary in our worship.

Starting simultaneously with the new choir, Pastor Ray Whiting prepared a series of six sermons for the evening services. The increase in attendance is encouraging to the pastor as well as the choir.

A short time ago we lost two of our diligent workers, due to the removal of Brother and Sister J. R. Epperson. They will be greatly missed, especially in our school work. They now reside in Shenandoah. Such changes are to be expected in any branch, and make our church school and training classes the more important in order to avoid the necessity of depending entirely on a few to carry the responsibility of the work.

Houghton Lake, Michigan

November 4.—Although this branch is seldom heard from, we are striving to keep the latter-day gospel moving in this vicinity. Attendance at meetings is small, but we hope and are working for improvement. Sickness and death have taken away some from our number.

Recently three have been baptized.

Elders J. W. Peterson and Arthur Oakman were in Houghton Lake and held meetings for ten days. Their help was most inspiring. Though few nonmembers attended, those who did come seemed much interested, and the members were encouraged. Two were baptized at these meetings, a young daughter of Brother and Sister Jesse Bailey, and a young man, the son of Brother and Sister William Jordan.

The young men were organized into a club by the elders, and now the Women's Department is planning a similar movement for the girls.

The services of Brothers Peterson and Oakman were much appreciated. Brother Peterson has given many years of missionary service to the church and is worthy our support. Brother Oakman is just starting and is a promising helper. He made many friends among the people here.

Wichita, Kansas

Osie and Water Streets

A two-day institute was held here November 1 and 2, Apostle E. J. Gleazer and Bishop Albert Carmichael being present. Their time was well occupied in giving lectures and sermons. The law of stewardship was presented in such a way that a little child could understand. Meetings were well attended and good interest was manifested.

Rally Day for the branch occurred September 28. This had been planned for an earlier date, but owing to the quarantine for infantile paralysis our children under sixteen years of age were unable to attend church school. A contest had been held to determine the class bringing the most visitors and having the largest attendance. The reward was a loving cup. Sister Balman's class of young people received the highest number of points. Sister Ray Cook presented the cup to the winning class.

Rally Day was observed by the installation of the new corps of officers for the church school for the year. The officers are: Superintendent of church school, Sister Minnie Mae Barraclough; superintendent of adult division, Sister C. C. Jacquith; superintendent of young people, Sister Balman; superintendent of the children, Margaret Williams. Pastor A. E. Stoff was in charge of this service. A charge was given the officers, and the speaker also addressed the congregation concerning its responsibilities. Special music was by the choir. In the afternoon a baptismal service was held. To our membership have been added Mr. and Mrs. Balman and Geraldine Dace.

The choir, under the leadership of Mrs. Paul Nelson, is an asset to the church services and brings courage to the speaker and joy to the congregation. The leader is commended for her work.

Sister Charles Pooler and daughter, Margaret, are recovering from operations for appendicitis. Sister Pooler, of Independence, Missouri, is with her son and family during their sickness.

Sister Alice Anson, a nurse from the Sanitarium, is at home with her parents, Brother and Sister Anson. She is taking a rest cure and expects to be here for the winter.

MRS. I. R. FIELD.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fourth and Washington Streets

There has been increased attendance at Ottumwa since Rally Day in September, also a deeper expression of fellowship and friendship which we hope will terminate in greater spiritual blessings.

The department of music is progressing. We are fortunate in having Sister Alfred Goodwin, who is helping in this department since the illness of Sister G. A. McMickle, organist. Harold Fry is ably assisting the musicians.

At a recent meeting of the workers' council, it was decided that Brother William Williams should direct the choir.

A number of members attended the Rally Day service at Centerville October 5, where Pastor Bevan was the speaker at the morning hour. We were happy to have here on that day Brother and Sister E. R. Williams and family, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

Elder F. T. Mussell was the speaker the morning of October 19, and in the evening Elder Charles Fry. Brother Fry also spoke on October 26.

Pastor F. C. Bevan held a short series of meetings in Burlington preceding Decision Day. He began October 19 and concluded October 26.

The committee for October, who are members of the women's club, raised sixty dollars toward the building fund through various activities. The men's club had a supper October 30, followed by a musical program and talk by Attorney William Hunt, of Ottumwa. He stressed the need for the men of the church to take a more active part in the work of the church.

The young people's division, under the supervision of Sister E. E. Santee, had a Halloween party October 31.

Brother Tess Lee and his two sons have moved back to Ottumwa. We are happy to have them here once more.

The morning of November 2 following the sacramental service, the pastor, assisted by District President F. T. Mussell, raised over nine hundred dollars in cash pledges toward the building fund, Saints in Ottumwa and outside the city contributing.

The Saints had charge of the service at the Sunnyslope Sanitarium November 9 in the afternoon. There was a musical program, and the pastor talked. This institution cares for tubercular patients, and at present has fifty-one inmates.

It is our hope very soon to have a series of meetings in Ottumwa.

Atchison, Kansas

Ninth and Santa Fe

A pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Brother and Sister William Gildehaus October 15, when Sister Hyla O. Henderson, of Atchison, was married to Mr. Ralph W. Bolton, of Nauvoo, Illinois. Sister Mercine McClaren, of the vocal department of Atchison High School, sang, "Ah, sweet mystery of life." The bridal couple entered the room to the strain of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Isabel Gildehaus. Frank G. Hedrick read the ceremony. Immediately after the wedding the couple left on a bridal tour of Lamoni, Des Moines, and Detroit. They will live in Nauvoo, where Mr. Bolton is engaged in the automobile business.

Sister Bertha Brink underwent a major operation at the Atchison Hospital last week. Through the administration of the elders, she was remarkably blessed and is making a rapid recovery.

Sister May Burns, wife of J. W. Burns, died October 13. The funeral was held the next day from Harouff's chapel, the sermon being by Brother Webb, of Saint Joseph. The deceased was one of the early members of this branch, having belonged for nearly forty years.

This group deplores the removal of Brother and Sister Moroni Stewart and family, who left for Council Bluffs the first of the month. Their return in the spring is hoped for.

The rank of active workers in Atchison is being depleted by removals to other branches. Yet we keep the regular schedule of services in all departments in operation and pray for an ingathering that will build numerically and spiritually.

November 30 Atchison will be host to the institute workers of the district in an all-day session. We expect this to be a big day with representatives present from Independence.

Thomas Frederick, father of Sister Robert Johnston, died November 3. The funeral was from the Harouff parlors. The sermon was by Frank G. Hedrick.

The Sunday school began the new school year the first Sunday in October by electing and installing the following officers: Superintendent, Gilbert F. Hedrick; secretary, Carrie Scarcliff; chorister, Anna Lentz; pianist, Isabel Gildehaus.
FRANK G. HEDRICK.

Colorado Springs, Colorado

November 3.—Apostle J. F. Curtis visited this branch September 21, and delivered a much-appreciated sermon in the morning. All were sorry that he was unable to stay and talk again in the evening.

Rally Day was September 28. First came the regular Sunday school service. During the preaching hour short talks were given by departmental heads: Brother J. E. La Londe, branch solicitor, on "Branch finances"; J. E. Ebeling, branch president, on "What we expect of the young people"; Sister E. E. Conway, chairman of the children's division of the church school, on "Work of mothers in the nursery department"; Sister F. V. Engstrom and Sister E. P. Darnell sang "Face to face." The talks were resumed by Sister Richard Harrison, chairman of the adult division, on "How old people may help."

The women served a delicious dinner in the basement.

After dinner the juniors remained downstairs for a lecture composed of Bible pictures and references. The picture machine has become a real friend to the younger members of this branch. Similar pictures are shown each Sunday.

During the junior meeting the older members were carrying on a discussion, "How to help the branch." Several other short talks were given.

Good attendance and spirit characterized all meetings. Perhaps if our meetings on Sunday took up a little more time and covered a little more territory, we could see ourselves progressing more rapidly.

District President E. B. Hull has been somewhat limited in his work by the condition of his throat. He is unable to be out much at night. Brother Hull has been a great help to us, and we hope for him a rapid recovery. He would appreciate the prayers of his friends throughout the church.

Sister Mona Vangel passed away, after a long illness, November 2. Her many friends extend sympathy to her mother, Sister William Rogers, and family.

CHARLOTTE DARNELL.

Wagner, South Dakota

With the election of officers for the new church year beginning in October, came renewed interest and enthusiasm for making advancement over activities of the previous year. The officers elected for this period include: Superintendent of Sunday school, Nina Amundson; assistant, Sister Will Coffman; secretary, Roberta Wood; organist, Sister Will Coffman; chorister, Kleta Finley. Teachers for the classes are: Adult, Sister Will Coffman; intermediate, Charles Hare; junior, Sister Ruth Buhler; beginner, Kleta Finley.

The women of the church are studying as a class "Religion in the home," by Sister Wight. Cleaning and redecorating of the interior of the church and beginners' furniture was undertaken as a project for October. The women are now completing plans for the bazaar and bake sale December 6. Each person is contributing eight articles, representing one for each of the eight weeks from the beginning of the church school year until the date of the bazaar.

The Christmas offering goal has been reached, and now we are striving to double the amount set as the goal. Since all local expenses are cleared, offerings for that item until December 31 are being turned into the Christmas offering.

A visit from a missionary would be appreciated. We have only one member of the priesthood in the branch.

KLETA FINLEY.

Lincoln, Nebraska

Twenty-sixth and H Streets

On Rally Day several students in our church school were promoted, and two new classes were formed. These classes are taught by Miss Marcia Omev, a university student, who has boys and girls ten to twelve years old, and by Brother Francis Schrunck, who teaches young adults. Both have had teaching experience and are proving successful.

Fourteen have been baptized in Lincoln since January 1, three of these being added recently. A few more names have been handed in and will be cared for in a baptismal service in the near future. Six new inventories have been recently filed, all by persons baptized this year by Brother Lenox.

A number of Lincoln people attended the district conference at Nebraska City, September 27 and 28.

Brother Robert Burgess, of Knobnoster, Missouri, visited his sister, Ethel Umphres, for three weeks in October. He worshiped with us several times, preaching once, and had a splendid testimony for the Saints at sacramental service October 5.

The coming of Brother B. M. Anderson and family to Lincoln has brought inspiration to this group. Brother Anderson is assisting in every way possible, and Sister Anderson helps with the music. She is reading to the women each Wednesday afternoon as they work at quilting and on fancywork for the bazaar. She has also opened her home to the young people every second Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, conducting an interesting class. The Andersons are living at 837 South Fifteenth Street.

Three new members of the church, moved here from other points, have been lately located by the pastor and are now in touch with the church. If there are people who have friends in Lincoln interested in the church, their names and addresses should be sent to Pastor E. J. Lenox, 3071 S Street, or to the secretary, Francis Schrunk, 2771 Randolph Street. Plans are being worked out to make Lincoln a greater missionary center in harmony with the general church program.

Sister Schrunk gave a Halloween party for her Sunday school class October 24.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer and Elder O. L. D'Arcy visited Lincoln October 26. The latter preached in the morning and the former in the evening. Their sermons were most helpful.

KATIE L. HALE.

Springfield, Missouri

November 13.—Patriarch and Sister J. A. Gunsolley made Springfield a visit November 1 on their way to the district conference, to be held at Kennett, Missouri. Springfield members had been expecting them for some time and were pleased to receive them and their messages for one week. A number of patriarchal blessings were given by Brother Gunsolley. He was here also to act as adviser at the annual branch business meeting. J. B. Ansley was elected pastor of the branch and chose as counselors, A. W. Duemlar and G. P. Palmer. These three in turn recommended, and the recommendation was approved, for branch officers: Secretary-recorder, Janet L. Bootman; treasurer, Millard Palmer; solicitor, Francis M. Bishop; supervisor of Religious Education, A. W. Duemlar; supervisor of music, Hattie Bishop. This gives a working basis upon which we may enlarge in keeping with the general church plan of work.

Brother and Sister Gunsolley continued their journey to Kennett the evening of November 11.

At six o'clock Sunday evening, November 2, another family circle was made complete in the gospel when Robert Henson was baptized. In the near future four little ones are to be received.

JANET BOOTMAN.

Little Visits in Zion

Recently Sister Terry and I visited Spring Branch Church. They still hold a service formerly called "Religio," but which has now been given a new name and new function, the church school. There we met our enthusiastic brother, Swen Swenson, who taught a class on stewardships. In the course of the lesson he related several of his experiences. Elder J. E. Cleveland is the president of this branch and is supported by a faithful congregation. They spoke of their spiritual sacramental service. At the usual hour I spoke to the Saints, trying to tell them what a wonderful work they are engaged in. When I preach I often remind myself that nowhere in the scriptures are we commanded to tell people how mean they are.

We greatly enjoyed a very spiritual service on Decision Day, being on that occasion with Fourth Kansas City Church. Their Sunday school hour was of a spiritual nature. Every number harmonized with the whole of the program, and from it I received inspiration for the message which I delivered the following hour. Brother J. O. Worden is a good leader. Brother Marion Snead drove us there and back in his fine car. At Fourth Church we met Sister Fifer, now Sister Cockran, one of the old-time Saints of Saint Joseph, Missouri.

Though eight years have passed since we left Seattle, Washington, we recently received a tangible evidence of their continued love when a silver loving cup and flower vase arrived. Carved on the piece is the church emblem, the lamb and the lion, with the word, Peace, also "Sixty-first wedding anniversary, Seattle Saints, 1930." Elder D. S. McDole, their pastor, sent a letter explaining the gift as an evidence of continued gospel love and good wishes from the Saints. My pen can not express our appreciation and gratitude for this gift.

President F. M. Smith gave a splendid talk at the sacramental service at the Stone Church in November, which brought to the vast congregation a spirit of worship and reverence. Nineteen priests were active in distributing the emblems to the congregation, and four more downstairs served the boys and girls in their own service.

One hundred and thirty lately attended the afternoon prayer service at the Stone Church. A good spirit was felt on this occasion, nevertheless we must remember that evil is constantly trying to creep in.

Frequently I visit the Sanitarium in an endeavor to comfort the sick. In this institution are many of the faith and many who are not members. The universal verdict is that they are well cared for by the nurses. Apostle R. S. Budd, who has been a patient there for some time, is about ready for his usual active life as a missionary and church official.

We recently attended a group prayer service, which was very spiritual. The majority of those present were sisters whose spiritual activities made the meeting a great success.

J. M. TERRY.

San Jose, California

Spencer Avenue and Grant Street

September 28 was Rally Day in this branch, and Elder B. R. Gilbert was in charge of the Sunday school. District Missionary Herbert Hinton was the morning speaker, delivering a good sermon. Attendance was small.

The Department of Recreation and Expression held a session at 6.45 in the evening, Superintendent George Thompson in charge. After class a drama was presented, "The early days of California." This play caused the minds of the older members to revert to the days of childhood in the fifties, when we ate bread made of barley ground in a coffee mill, and did the evening's reading and studying by the light of a tallow dip made from beef tallow.

October 5 sacramental meeting was in charge of Elder C. J. Cady, assisted by Elders B. R. Gilbert and C. W. Hawkins. Twenty-eight partook of the sacrament. Out of town visitors came from Oakland and San Francisco.

This month the Department of Women met at the home of Sister C. W. Hawkins. By invitation Elder C. J. Cady met with them as instructor in lesson work. The meeting was highly profitable.

Elder Hiram Holt was the morning speaker October 12, and on the following Sunday Elder C. J. Cady spoke. Visiting members at the latter service were Sister Wardel and son and daughter, Sister Vanderwood and husband, from Sandy, Utah. Brother and Sister Vanderwood had their baby blessed at this service.

That evening the Department of Recreation and Expression presented a drama, "Evil walking in the night."

District President G. P. Levitt arrived October 22 and remained over the following Sunday, holding meetings each night except Saturday and three services on Sunday. Three of these programs were screen lectures on church history. The rise and progress of the church from 1830 to the present time was interestingly sketched.

Bishop Cecil Hawley was also in San Jose October 26 and taught the adult class of the church school, giving instructions along financial lines. The visit of these brothers was much appreciated.

C. W. HAWKINS.

Hibbard, Indiana

November 16.—On November 2 we began a series of meetings in Hibbard, and attendance has increased each night until we have been preaching to about one hundred, the majority being nonmembers. The weather has been beautiful, which favored our services. On yesterday we baptized ten splendid people, all adults except one.

These meetings will close November 21, and then we go to Bay City, Michigan, to open a series. We are hoping for good results there, also.

O. J. HAWN.

Independence

Stone Church

It was appropriate that the first service of the day opening Thanksgiving week should be an hour of peace and prayer, an adult worship meeting in the main auditorium. Prayers, songs, and testimonies were characterized by the spirit of thankfulness for the blessings enjoyed by the Saints.

Thanksgiving exercises marked all the meetings of the day and were particularly outstanding in the various departmental programs of the Sunday school. In the main auditorium of the Stone Church, where meet the adult and junior young people's departments, a Thanksgiving story was told by Miss Dolly Linkhart, and a piano solo was played by Esther Bolinger.

"Spiritual imperatives" was the subject of the sermon by Apostle F. Henry Edwards at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning. His purpose was to show that, regardless of the popular revolt against things that are imperative, there are some things which must be done—that is, if we are to have certain things which follow as the result of such doing.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Evan A. Fry, sang two anthems, "The woods and every sweet-smelling tree," by West, and "O Lord, how manifold are thy works," by Barnby. Edward Brackenbury, tenor, sang the solo part of the first anthem. Lilly Belle Allen, soprano, sang the solo, "Thanks be to God," by Bickson. Robert and George Miller played an organ and piano duet.

The service was in charge of Elder W. Wallace Smith, who was assisted by Elder Earl F. Hoisington.

"The gospel of praise" was the theme of the junior young people's service downstairs, and four girls and boys were the speakers, Lucille Watkins, Margery Sheehy, John Smelser, and Edmund Gleazer. Music for the program consisted of a selection by an instrumental trio, and hymns of praise by the congregation, Joy Harder playing the piano. The first Presidential Thanksgiving Proclamation, issued in 1789, was read by the pastor, who was assisted by Howard Cook.

Seventy-five young people were present at the Auditorium Sunday afternoon to hear Doctor Charles F. Grabske speak on "The opportunity of youth." Youth's greatest opportunity is to get ready to do something, Doctor Grabske said. Youth is a period of power, vitality, and enthusiasm; it should also be a period of training for some definite work in life. The man or woman who makes wise use of youthful years will have achieved success when the vigor of youth is past.

Other numbers on the program were: two violin selections by Orrin Fry, with Paul N. Craig accompanying at the piano; a reading, "The popular Mr. Watkins," by Eunice Porter; two quartet selections by the Campus Crooners, accompanied by Joy Carpenter; and a piano solo by Velma Resch.

The program was held in the young people's room, and was the first of a series of young people's Sunday afternoon programs to be held throughout the winter, sponsored by the young people's division of the Stone Church congregation.

In the third of his Book of Mormon lectures Sunday night, Elder C. Ed. Miller exhibited to a large crowd of members and friends some beautifully tinted photographs of ruins in Central and South America showing crosses and other archaeological evidences of an acquaintanceship with the Christ on the part of ancient American peoples. These findings confirm the Book of Mormon story that Christ did appear to the inhabitants of these continents. In connection with the lecture the congregation sang songs from words flashed on the screen. There was a solo by LeRoy Smith, baritone, and organ music was by Robert Miller.

Walnut Park

Walnut Park was privileged to have as speakers on Sunday Elder R. Barnhardt, who spoke in the morning on the theme, "Confidence in the promises of God," and Elder John Blackmore, who spoke in the evening on the subject, "Our united purpose." The worshipful character of both services was greatly augmented by the contributions of the choir under the leadership of Minnie Scott Dobson, which sang two Thanksgiving numbers, "Praise the Lord, O my soul," by Smart, and "O give thanks unto the Lord," by Spence.

During the church school hour two special musical numbers, in addition to the regular contributions by the orchestra, were given. The first was a soprano solo by Miss Delta Nace, and the second a piano number by Lavona May Crabb, the ten-year-old daughter of Sister Olive Lavona Crabb.

The congregational singing was conducted by Earl Cox. Brother and Sister Cox moved to Maywood in the early part of the year, and the Walnut Park Saints and members of the Galilean Class, to which they formerly belonged, were happy to have them back as visitors. Brother and Sister Kenneth Morford were also visitors at both morning and evening services, and their assistance in the choir, together with that of Brother Cox, was greatly appreciated. Another visitor Sunday evening was Sister Ethel May Jackett, who was baptized in and was formerly a member of the Vancouver, British Columbia, Branch. She has been in Independence for about a year but heretofore has been attending at the Stone Church.

Elder R. D. Weaver, who has been engaged in missionary work in Southern California for the past six months, is again back at his home in Independence and was present at the early morning prayer meeting and the evening preaching service. Brother Weaver is greatly in demand as a speaker when he returns to Independence and preached at Second Branch in the morning. He was asked to be the speaker for the evening service at Walnut Park, but requested that he be not so called on because in the last six months he had heard only one sermon besides his own.

The eight o'clock prayer service on Sunday morning was characterized by a high degree of devotion and spirituality. In spite of the chilliness of the atmosphere, there were over fifty present at this service.

The evening classes are continuing to hold the interest and support of the Saints of Walnut Park, and the efforts of Sister Ida Etzenhouser and Sister Myrtle Weber are greatly appreciated. There was an attendance of over a hundred in both of these classes, which are conducted preceding the evening service.

The song service beginning at 7.30 was very appropriate to this season of the year. The opening song was "Praise ye the Lord." Sister Dobson then read the full text to the Thanksgiving poem, "The breaking waves dashed high." There are several more verses in the poem than appear in connection with the hymn by this name printed in the Saints' Hymnal. The congregation then sang the hymn, following which four short readings were given by Sister Ruth Bryant. "We thank thee, O God, for a Prophet," and "Bow, ye mortals, bow before Him" were sung by the congregation.

Enoch Hill

On Monday night, November 10, the teachers of the children's division met at the home of their superintendent, Sister Charles Warren, for an instructive hour. Elder S. A. Thiel kept all absorbed while telling a story, then Sister Myrtle Weber demonstrated how to teach a class of juniors after making real preparation, gathering outside material to supplement the quarterly. The interest of the class, repaying the teacher for her effort, was clearly shown.

It was good to have Elder R. D. Weaver here the morning of November 16, and Patriarch F. A. Smith at night. Both sermons gave the Saints much to consider. In the morning Elder W. B. Paul talked at the junior service on "Gratitude."

Elder E. A. Curtis in his vigorous manner spoke the morning of November 23 from the text, "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness, and then shall the end come," and at night Elder J. A. Gardner brought a Thanksgiving message, causing the congregation to sense anew our gratitude to the heavenly Father for his many blessings. This service closed with a little drama portraying how "Thanksgiving" and "Joy" came to the rescue of "Faith," who was beset by "Doubt" and "Fear." Parts were taken by Sisters Nellie Kramer, Rilla Johnson, C. S. Warren, W. J. Brewer, and Lulu Burrows.

The church school is progressing. Particularly worthy of mention is the young people's class led by Sister Agnes Hartman. This group is showing much interest in the study of stewardship, and is growing numerically.

The general teachers' meeting November 16 was so interesting it was difficult to bring it to a close, everyone wanting to take part in the discussion of methods.

Pastor O. W. Sarratt has had some wonderful blessings in visits and administrations but is still confined to his home. His congregation hopes and prays that it will be the Master's will to relieve him of the suffering through which he has been passing and to restore him to us once more and to the work he loves so much.

We are planning a week of fasting and prayer for the needy members and the spiritual growth of this district. All who will be asked to fast a meal or two each day, ending this period on sacrament Sunday in December. We are thankful for our many blessings and wish to be better qualified to serve him efficiently.

Kansas City Stake

Stake Conference

The conference of Kansas City Stake convened at Central Church Sunday, November 23. Church school opened at 9.45 with a brief worship period marked by organ music, a hymn by the congregation, a fervent prayer by Brother G. T. Richards, a solo by Lester Fowler, tenor, a recessional hymn, and the dispersion to classrooms.

At the church period Pastor C. E. Wight, who is also stake president, delivered an excellent sermon. The stake missionaries, G. T. Richards and H. H. Sevy, assisted in the stand, and music was by a special group of singers from the choir, there being also a solo, "A glad prayer," Stenson, by George Anway, tenor.

The conference dinner was served by the Central Women's Club at noon.

At 4.30 in the afternoon the stake high council went into session.

A fine spirit characterized the service of sacrament, which opened at 2.30 in the afternoon. Among the ministry presiding and assisting were Bishop C. A. Skinner, and Elders C. E. Wight, S. S. Sandy, C. D. Jellings, and C. G. Mesley.

President Frederick M. Smith was the speaker in the evening, talking to a house crowded with attentive listeners. The choir was present to give its conference evening concert, and instrumental music was by Otis Swart, violinist, Irene Wolfe, the organist; and Lucy Bowser, pianist.

Kansas City's third leadership school is closed. The total enrollment was 236. The work of this school will be carried on far into the years in the various groups.

The stake missionaries have been conducting successful cottage meetings. Before Brother Richards baptizes a person, that candidate is familiar with the financial law of the church as well as the principles of the gospel. Three members, recently baptized, filed their inventories and made substantial payments on their tithing. Another filed his inventory before baptism.

The conference business session was held Monday evening.

Bennington Church

Bennington Church members have been busy the past few weeks installing a furnace, the work being done by local men.

A large number have been attending the leadership classes at Central the past two weeks, much interest being shown in the class on "Stewardships."

One more precious soul has been added to the church by baptism, Sister Harris, who was confirmed at Central Church.

Next Sunday morning Stake Missionary G. T. Richards will be the speaker, and in the evening Stake President C. E. Wight. Sister George Bininger, superintendent of the primary department, gave a practical demonstration Sunday morning of the first Thanksgiving. Each child brought gifts for the poor.

Nauvoo, Illinois

The regular business meeting for the election of branch officers was held October 7, and Elder J. C. Page was chosen pastor; Sister Leon Bauer, secretary; John Williams, treasurer; Arnold Ourth, solicitor; Mildred Sanford, director of music; and A. L. Sanford, director of Religious Education. Brother Page and Brother Sanford later chose as their assistants, L. H. Lewis, supervisor of the adult division; Arnold Ourth, supervisor of the young people; and Florence Ourth, supervisor of the children. An installation service was held the following Sunday evening, when the pastor addressed the officers and teachers who were taking their places for the year. The heads of the departments met with the pastor a few days later and planned activities for the month.

Sister Mildred Sanford organized the young people's class into a choir, and they have rendered an acceptable anthem each Sunday morning.

The monthly problem meeting, which has been held in Montrose during the summer months for the benefit of the workers throughout the district, was held in Nauvoo October 14. The Saints here planned a royal welcome, and refreshments were prepared, but unfortunately it was a stormy night, and Brother and Sister A. M. Chase's car was the only one to come through. They drove twenty miles in order to go one mile. The Saints at Montrose had planned to cross the river by boat but, owing to the storm, thought it not advisable. Brother and Sister Chase took three in their car, drove to Fort Madison, crossed the bridge, and came down on the new hard road, where they met with some thrilling adventures in passing the sand piles left by the construction crew. However, a pleasant evening was spent, on their arrival, in discussing problems of the church school.

On Sunday afternoon, October 19, a beautiful baptismal service took place at the river, when Brother Elmer Sherman baptized Mrs. Raymond Furrow, of Burnside. Following her baptism, a wonderful outpouring of the Spirit was enjoyed at the confirmation service held in the Mansion House, the confirmation being given under the hands of A. L. Sanford and E. Sherman.

Apostle Neal, a Zionist of Chicago, addressed us at the chapel on the evening of October 15. He was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blum, who reside opposite, and as they have always been very loyal to our services, we were glad to extend to him this courtesy. Apostle Neal was grateful for the privilege and gave a splendid talk on the signs of the times. Mrs. Blum sang two beautiful solos.

October 12 Mrs. Green and Mr. Johnson of "Ivy Wild" were again with us and gave several splendid readings of their own composition. They said they had never experienced a more appreciative and attentive audience, and expressed a desire to meet with us often. They extended a cordial invitation, in rhyme, for all to visit "Ivy Wild." They have dedicated this beautiful estate to the public, where all may feel free to hold picnics and enjoy the lovely flowers.

The postmasters of the fourteenth congressional district were guests of Nauvoo October 14. A banquet was served at noon in the parish hall, our pastor and wife being among the guests. The afternoon was spent in visiting the historical places, at which time Brother Page addressed them at the Mansion House.

Sister Hyla Henderson, who left here three years ago to enter training at the Independence Sanitarium, returned to us as the bride of Ralph Bolton, a young man who has always been highly respected by the people of Nauvoo. The couple were married at the home of Elder Frank Hedrick, pastor of Atchison (Kansas) Branch. The voice teacher of the high school sang "Ah, sweet mystery of life," and Isabel Gildehaus played Mendelssohn's wedding march. The house was prettily decorated, and refreshments were served to eighteen guests. The following day the couple left for Lamoni, to visit Russell Pendergraft, brother of the bride. They have furnished an apartment up town, and we are all feeling very happy to have Hyla with us once more.

Miss Mary Faith Carr, teacher of music and art in the school here, gave an interesting lecture one Sunday evening on her trip abroad, telling of the customs she observed while in the British Isles. The following Sunday evening she was again with us, and the young people's class had the pleasure of hearing of her experiences in France.

The tenth of the historical plays was successfully carried out last Sunday evening, with a solo by Sister Lee and talk by L. H. Lewis.

The young people's class held a Halloween party in the basement of the church the evening of October 30.

The following evening Apostle D. T. Williams was here and gave a very fine illustrated lecture on church history.

The women of the branch met one week to clean the Nauvoo House and the following week cleaned the church. Then a number of days were spent sewing strips of carpet and, with the help of the men, carpeting the rostrum and aisles, which has added greatly to the appearance of our building.

MABEL A. SANFORD.

Tulsa, Oklahoma

Fourteenth and Cheyenne

The grass and leaves have changed from their cool green dresses to warmer coats of red. Some flowers still bravely bloom, their colorful faces a brilliant contrast to the brown of Mother Earth's newest attire. The wind is no longer the soft breeze of summer days. Everywhere change is manifested.

Never in the history of Tulsa Church has there been so marked a change in the spiritual levels of the Saints as now. Since the arrival of Pastor O. A. McDowell in May, this change, emanating from his teachings, has been felt. Tulsa Branch has grown in almost every way, in attendance, responsiveness, cooperation, love, and appreciation of friends, financing, and programming. Although we yet feel far from perfect, we are conscious of improvement and are thankful to the all-wise Father for it.

Under the supervision of Elder McDowell, the Sunday school program has been changed. The four adult classes are more nearly like a real school, with a new teacher and subject each thirteen weeks and certificates of graduation at the completion of the courses. The young people are hearing the "Fundamental principles of the law" interpreted in everyday living by Falice Cunningham. The young married people's class is being taught how to live God's way financially. Sister Maude McComb is depicting this in a series of lessons on the "Land of promise," where prosperity and love prevail. The theme of Elder J. L. Lancaster's lessons is "Why the church—its belief and its missionary task." This brother's already large class is growing each Sunday. "God's purpose in the Book of Mormon," and how it can be applied to our lives is told along with the wonderful history of the people of that time by Harry A. Robinson and Levi Skinner. Each thirteen weeks these capable instructors will change classes, until, at the end of the year, the entire school will have received the same lessons, and be equal in the knowledge gained of God's work.

Another change has been made, this concerning the nights of our midweek services. On each Thursday, dinner is served by the Women's Department from 5.30 to 6.30. Then tables are removed and chairs arranged for the study hour from seven until eight o'clock. Pastor McDowell is the teacher.

At this same hour the choir meets in the upper auditorium for rehearsal. From eight till nine o'clock both groups meet in the lower auditorium, and prayer meeting is held. At nine o'clock the meeting is dismissed, and the Department of Recreation and Expression entertains with a program and games. This one-night-a-week service has enabled more parents with small children to attend all meetings, and we hope will continue successful.

Pastor McDowell and wife motored to Independence, October 10, for a week's visit with relatives and friends. Brother McDowell's father and mother came back with them, and made many friends during their two weeks' stay in Tulsa. Elder W. A. McDowell preached at both services October 19, and conducted prayer meeting the following Thursday. He preached at Sperry the night of October 26, and returned home with his son, Floyd M., and Sister McDowell.

On Decision Day this branch had President F. M. McDowell at the morning and evening services. At eleven o'clock Pastor McDowell was in charge. The prelude was played on the organ by Maude Moore, Hazel Atkins, choir director, conducting congregational singing. Following the offertory Frances Roberta Skinner sang "I do believe," by Ernest R. Ball. "The earth is the Lord's" was the anthem sung by the choir, Alma Adams and Hazel Atkins, soloists.

President McDowell's sermon brought to mind the necessity of the right decisions we must make in the small things of the day as well as the larger things of life. The benediction was by Elder W. A. McDowell.

Dinner was served in the lower auditorium. The women brought food prepared at home and spread it on long tables.

A baptismal service was conducted at Sperry at three o'clock in the afternoon. Roberta Cunningham, youngest child of Elder and Sister F. H. Cunningham, was the only Tulsa person baptized.

In the evening President McDowell told of his recent trip abroad and of the many Christ-reminders to be seen at home and abroad.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin

Church work during the past month has revived interest among the members of Milwaukee Branch. Our number is small, but we have had good average attendance and cooperation which have made it possible for new methods and a new program to be adopted under the splendid supervision of Brother E. R. Williams, of Port Washington. The junior church services, recently inaugurated, have been well attended, and much interest is shown.

Rally Day was observed with a program under the direction of Sister Leta Hansen. In spite of the inclement weather, there were several visitors.

The members are saving every penny, as we need every one to build that mile of pennies to be applied to the building fund. The project is under the supervision of Sister Carrie Vanderhoof.

The Sunday evening services are held in the homes of the Saints. Brother E. R. Williams has delivered some very interesting discourses.

Sister Carrie Vanderhoof and Mr. Steven Janesik were quietly married October 25, and are making their home in Sheboygan, Wisconsin.

Brother Everett Lindsay and Miss Nora Krieger were married October 2, and are making their home in Milwaukee.

The superintendent, Sister Nora Williams, gave an inspirational talk on the subject, "Decision Day."

We have had as visiting missionaries, Apostle D. T. Williams and Bishop C. J. Hunt.

The Halloween costume party at the home of Brother and Sister Bernard Hansen was well attended. The guests were the victims of many pranks. The mysterious ghost and the clever fortune teller created much merriment.

We are very sorry to lose the E. R. Williams family as members of this branch. They have taken up new residence in Burlington, Iowa. They have contributed much toward the building up of this branch and creating new interest among the membership.

The new month began with a spiritual sacramental service. Brother C. J. Hunt and Brother E. R. Williams presided. Brother Clarence Williams was ordained a deacon. Splendid interest was demonstrated by the unusually large attendance. This inspires new hope in the leaders of our small group.

LETA M. HANSEN.

Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania

Summer is gone, and we have again taken up our class work, missionary effort, and the work of the women. Some of the members were able to attend the district reunion held at Deer Park and to receive the fine spiritual food given by our brothers, who have been faithful in carrying the banner in the great work of God. Others attended the district conference held at Elk Mills, Maryland. But owing to labor conditions here, many were deprived of meeting with those of like faith.

Sunday, September 28, an ordination service was conducted. Three young men, who had complied with the requirements of the law and were set aside for ministerial work, John Shaffer, priest; Jack Hyde, teacher; William Hyde, deacon. Elder T. J. Elliott, of Brooklyn, New York, had charge of the service, assisted by Pastor Walter Lewis and District Patriarch G. W. Robley, also R. J. Hawkins, from Scranton. The opening prayer was by Brother Robley, and Sister Elsie Hyde sang the hymn, "Have thine own way, Lord." Brother Elliott spoke to the candidates in regard to their work and the responsibility they had taken upon them in accepting the priesthood. He also admonished the members concerning their duty in helping these men with their confidence and their prayers. A fine spirit was present, and we feel that these young men will be a blessing to the work here and a credit to the church. Brother Elliott remained in this branch and delivered a fine discourse in the evening.

Rally Day came October 9. Members from Roarsburg and Mifflenville were present, and the Saints and friends had a wonderful day with special music, and there was preaching at both services by District Patriarch G. W. Robley. We made a special missionary effort among our friends and neighbors. Three new openings have been gained, and the gospel preached with power by Brother Robley. The Saints have been blessed, and souls are interested. One was baptized. Brother Robley's visits to Bloomsburg have been a blessing to the work here, and souls have been added to help in the work of latter days.

Class work is conducted each Thursday night. The women meet twice a month to do their part.

Local activities are progressing, and we are praying for the progress of God's work and the redemption of Zion. Saints passing this way will always find welcome at Bloomsburg.

A Correction

In the last paragraph of the Moorhead, Iowa, letter, page 1247, Saints' Herald for November 12, there occurs an error. This paragraph tells of the recent work of Elder Joseph W. Lane among the Moorhead members, and the first line reads: "Brother and Sister Joseph W. Lane recently spent a week." All who know Brother Lane know also that Sister Lane passed away more than nine years ago and that since that time he has gone on alone in the gospel work. No one went with him to Moorhead, but a member of the local priesthood was with him when he visited among the members of the branch. The editors are sorry that this mistake slipped into the news.

Detroit, Michigan

The dramatizations by President E. A. Smith are given each month at First Church and are proving of much interest. Sister Henrietta H. Forbes has been arranging these programs and deserves honorable mention for her untiring efforts. She is ably assisted by a large number.

September 30 at the call of Pastor E. J. Lancaster, a large number of the priesthood met for a prayer service. The general expression of the prayers and testimonies seemed to be a desire to serve more effectively.

Sunday, November 2, the junior school of First Church experienced for the first time a separate sacramental service. Children present ranged from three years to fifteen, and all, especially the smaller ones, are to be commended for the mannerly way they conducted themselves. Nine children bore their testimony for the first time. One little girl, a nonmember, experiencing an unusual degree of the Spirit, asked in her testimony that we remember her and also her parents, that they let her become a member of the church.

That day a new mission was opened in Brightmoor, on Schoolcraft near Burt Road. The first day of services proved very successful. Elder Hubert Case, city missionary, has visited many homes in that community and finds in general the people eager to hear his message. He will conduct a Community Bible Class Sunday mornings and preaching in the evening.

Final plans are being arranged for the new church home to be erected on Oakman Boulevard, near Linwood. We are trusting the time is near when we shall be able to break ground.

Among those who have of late assisted in the missionary undertakings of Detroit, with outstanding contributions, are Apostle D. T. Williams, Elder O. J. Hawn, Brother A. Blakeslee Smith, Brother Gault, and Brother Fred Anderson. Personal and family evangelism is the aim of missionary endeavor this year.

Since Rally Day there has been an increasing attendance at the Central Sunday school. Plans for the year are being worked out, and there is splendid coordination of effort. The biggest changes are among the juniors, who run their session through the two hours in five periods for phases of the work. The children seem to like it, and adapt themselves to the new order. Elder Case is teaching the big class as usual. The orchestra is helping to make the services attractive and also plays on Sunday evening. The choir is to be commended for its faithful service.

September 21 a pleasing service was held at First Church when ten children were blessed.

Sister Nellie Harkness, while visiting her parents in Windsor, was suddenly stricken with appendicitis, making it necessary for an operation in Hotel Dieu Hospital. Her many friends and coworkers anxiously await her convalescence. Her condition favors a speedy recovery. Sister Nina Rhe, who has spent three years in the hospital, is improving rapidly, and it is reported that she will be able to leave it in about five months. There are a number of others who have recently been ill and need the prayers of the Saints.

Frederick W. Wendt, father of Brother Arthur Wendt, of First Congregation, passed away at the age of seventy-three years. The funeral was held at the Cooper Brothers' Undertaking Parlors.

The Harvest Festival October 5 met with the approval of the membership. The response in contributions was much appreciated. Sister Hunter is directly in charge of this work.

During the month of October a check for two hundred and fifty dollars was presented the city secretary of the Department of Women by Group No. 8. The presentation occurred at the regular mass meeting of the women held at First Church. Group No. 8 was in charge of the service.

An opening meeting of the Patroness Society was held November 18. A good program was presented, consisting of lectures and music. Anna Jacobs is secretary of the society.

Our Departed Ones

HALL.—Tryphena Redfield was born at Nauvoo, Illinois, January 6, 1853, daughter of William H. and Mary Scott Redfield. Her girlhood was spent near Shenandoah, Iowa, where her parents moved while she was very young. January 6, 1875, she married William David Hall, and soon after they moved to Creston, their home for several years. Twenty-six years ago they moved to Des Moines, Iowa. She united with the church July 7, 1863. Her father was one of the early elders of the church, assisting in building the Kirtland Temple and following the struggles of the infant church as far as winter quarters at Council Bluffs, but later returning to Nauvoo where the deceased was born. She died at Des Moines, November 14, 1930. Was the mother of ten children. Alice, May, Fred C., and Mabin preceded her in death, as also did her husband who died May 4, 1917. Those left to mourn are his wife, Clara Ann, one daughter, Laura Evelena, and three sisters: Laura J. Saunders, Fisher, Arkansas; Alice Payton, Pine Bluff, Arkansas; and Millie McCartney, Rammel, Arkansas; also a host of other relatives and friends. He lived in and near Fisher, Arkansas, for many years. There he became acquainted with the latter-day gospel and was baptized July 10, 1912, and on May 21, 1921, was ordained a deacon. In this office he gave faithful service until his death November 6, 1930. The funeral was held from the Saints' church at Fisher, November 8, in charge of Elder A. E. Ziegenhorn. Interment was in Fisher Cemetery.

LODWIG.—Clifford George Lodwig was born in 1888. He became a member of the church July 29, 1923, being baptized by Elder V. A. Hall. Passed away November 8, 1930, having been an inmate of the Blackhawk County Infirmary in Iowa, for the past five years. He was a sufferer from paralysis. His father and mother preceded him in death several years ago. Left to mourn are four brothers and two sisters. The deceased was a faithful member of Waterloo, Iowa, Branch. The funeral was in charge of the Reverend Warren L. Steeves, Baptist minister. Interment was in Memorial Cemetery.

FLIGG.—Matilda Maud Fligg was born February 10, 1872, at London, Ontario, Canada. July 5, 1882, she was baptized a member of the church at London by John H. Lake. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Quick, and was married to William I. Fligg September 23, 1898, by R. C. Evans. November 15, 1930, she passed away at her home in Independence, Missouri. Left to mourn are her husband, William I. Fligg; three daughters: Mrs. Cora E. Bullard, Independence; Mary Louise and Verlyn A. Fligg, of the home; three sons, James Alma Fligg, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Kenneth Irving Fligg, Kansas City, Missouri; and Myron Andrew Fligg, of the home; one sister, Mrs. T. G. Turcott, New Rochelle, New York; and two grandchildren. She suffered greatly during the last two years of her life. A faithful mother, wife, and Saint has gone to the life beyond. The funeral was held from the Stone Church November 18, in charge of Elder F. A. Smith and Elder J. M. Terry. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery, Independence.

KUYKENDALL.—Emma Marian Kuykendall died at her home in Council Bluffs, Iowa, November 14, 1930, quite suddenly. She was born at Brodhead, Wisconsin, October 12, 1865; married William Kuykendall September 21, 1884. She was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints September 24, 1896. She leaves her husband, two daughters, nine grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, one brother, and two sisters to mourn her departure. She was a faithful and humble Saint. Funeral services were held at Dunlap, Iowa, by Elder J. F. Mintun, assisted by Elder P. H. Heuermann. Interment was in Dunlap.

MARTIN.—Margaret M. Martin, widow of Elder O. L. Martin, and mother of Evangelist John F. Martin, passed from earth life at her home in Wheeling, West Virginia, November 10, 1930. She was born April 14, 1855, in Steubenville, Ohio, where she lived until sometime after marriage, when the family moved to Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. While living in that city they came in contact with the church, with which they soon cast their lot and remained faithful to the end. They moved to Wheeling, West Virginia, in 1900, and at once became active in branch and Sunday school work. A marked feature of their work was shown in their efforts in behalf of the young. John F. Martin, the youngest of nine children, is the only surviving member of the family. Other survivors are five grandchildren and one sister, Mrs. Ross Vaughn. Funeral services were held in Wheeling, the sermon being preached by Anostle Clyde F. Ellis, assisted by O. J. Tary. Interment was at Steubenville, Ohio.

MERRITT.—Betty Alberta Merritt was born at Hugo, Colorado, in 1923. Died October 7, 1930, of membranous croup. Left to mourn are her mother, grandparents, five uncles, and four aunts. Interment was in Forest Grove Cemetery, at Lamar, Missouri. The bereaved family desires as soon as possible to have the little girl's funeral service which could not be held at the time of her death because the family was quarantined.

WILLIAMS.—Malicy Jane Lee was born September 19, 1845, in the State of Tennessee. She was married to Elbert E. Willis in October, 1860. Fourteen children were born to this union. Eight of them, together with twenty-six grandchildren, twenty-eight great-grandchildren, and a large number of friends, are left to mourn her departure. In 1886 she was baptized, and remained a true and faithful member of the church till her death, which occurred at the home, Independence, Missouri, after a long, useful life. Funeral services were held at Second Church, Elder Delbert Whiting in charge. Sermon by Elder T. C. Kelley. She was a faithful member of the church, a devoted mother, a true friend to all.

ERVIN.—Thomas Ervin was born July 21, 1851, at Knoxville, Illinois, and departed from this life September 12, 1930. He was united in marriage to Sarah C. Dodson at Pleasanton, Iowa, July 1, 1883. His companion preceded him in death two years ago. He moved from Iowa to Nebraska, where he resided for a number of years. He was baptized into the church July 12, 1896, at Stockville, Nebraska, by George W. Johnson, of Eustis, Nebraska. He then went to Colorado and lived for a short while, after which he moved to Independence, and was a resident of this city for over thirteen years. He leaves to mourn one son and three daughters: William T. Ervin, of North Platte, Nebraska; Mrs. Grace Stoner, of Independence; Mrs. Sarah Johnson, of Rosehill, Colorado; Mrs. Becky Jane Curtis, of Proctor, Colorado; a number of other relatives, and a host of friends.

WHITNEY.—Susie C. Carver was born in Addison, Maine, April 11, 1846. She was baptized June 17, 1879, by S. O. Foss, of Jonesboro, Maine. She was the wife of Wellington Whitney, who died a few years ago. She lived an exemplary life, keeping her first love for the gospel. In the community where she lived she was honored as a Christian woman. She passed away at Jonesboro, Maine, September 25, 1930. The funeral service was held at the home of her step-grandson, Willington White. The sermon was by Newman Wilson.

FALLON.—Ella Estelle Fallon, wife of Harold Fallon, of Springdale, Connecticut, died a few hours after the birth of a daughter September 19, 1930. Mrs. Fallon was born in 1897, and was baptized a member of the church October 16, 1927, by Elder A. E. Stone and confirmed by Elder A. H. Parsons. Besides her husband she leaves three small children to mourn. She will also be greatly missed by members of the Broad River Branch of which she was a member. The funeral services were conducted by Elder T. J. Elliott, of Brooklyn, New York, and in charge of Elder Charles H. Franke, president of Broad River Branch.

WHITCHER-TRAVER.—Friday evening, October 24, 1930, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Traver, 20 Winchester Road, Arlington, Massachusetts, Miss Frances Whitcher, of Sioux City, Iowa, was married to Mr. Edward L. Traver, jr. The double ring ceremony was performed by Bishop E. L. Traver, father of the bridegroom. The maid-of-honor was Miss Katherine Schafer, of Philadelphia. The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Myron C. Fisher, jr., and the ushers were Mr. Ralph M. Hardy, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, and Mr. Sanford L. Fisher. Before the ceremony, Miss Thelma Dowker sang, "The bells of St. Mary," and "I love you truly," accompanied by Mrs. Harve H. Elefson. Mrs. Elefson played the "Lohengrin wedding march," and after the ceremony played Mendelssohn's "wedding march." The wedding was attended by more than a hundred friends. After the ceremony, the bride and bridegroom left for a wedding trip through the White Mountains and Canada. After November 8 they will be at home at the Dorothy Q Apartments, 40 Butler Road, Quincy, Massachusetts. Both Mr. and Mrs. Traver, jr. (or as they are better known "Ed" and "Fran") are former Graceland students. Ed was captain of the Graceland football team in 1929-30, and under his leadership the team enjoyed a successful season. Ed also is a member of the Royal Thirteen, All-over-Six, and "G" Clubs, College Players and the Niketes Society. Fran is a "K," a member of the girls' "G" Club, College Players, and Niketes Society. Mr. Traver, jr., is associated in business with his father, being in charge of Sales and Service at the Ashmont Division of the White Cross Laundries.

Let Us Give Thanks—and Service

It seems to have been the history of the past that with enlarged means and opportunity to indulge himself in the pursuits of pleasure, man is prone to slow up in his devotions to Deity, to neglect his religious duties and ceremonies, and to weaken in his appreciation of social responsibility to his fellows. And so we see the cycles run: earnest endeavor prompted and guided by conscientious religious convictions resulting in growing prosperity, followed by indulgences in ease and pleasure seeking, and accompanied by departure from righteousness, these to be followed in turn by decadence and even disaster, which again recalls man to a sense of his divine responsibility.

It has not yet been clearly demonstrated that such decadence is inescapable; however, the story of Enoch holds out better hope. But this cycle has recurred with sufficient frequency to constitute a perpetual warning against permitting selfishness and self-serving interests to become dominant in our social relations to the extent that our religious ideals are stunted or warped.

We have much for which to be thankful this season, even in the midst of conditions which might not be fully to our liking; and not the smallest factor in the equation of expression of our thankfulness is the warning to us couched in present conditions, that we should not in the days of our prosperity forget God and our duties to him and to the church.

Let us give thanks to God for the blessings we enjoy, entreat him for others still needed but most earnestly pray that we may, for our safety and future good, have ever in our consciousness the great fact that our greatest blessings and our greatest security are found in faithful service to God and his cause, by keeping all the law and the prophets, and remembering the channel through which our best service is rendered.

F. M. S.

An ancient Persian proverb says: Two things indicate a weak mind—to be silent when it is proper to speak, and to speak when it is proper to be silent.

An Offering

It was a group of twenty-eight women, met to discuss work which they had in mind to do for the church. That same group had for some years been active in accomplishing work for our institutions. They were dining, and the conversation turned to the present conditions in general and to those of the church specifically. Some one of the group suggested that they then and there see what they could do in the way of an offering to the Bishop to help out. Twenty-eight dollars and ten cents was the offering made; and an analysis of the group shows that of the twenty-eight ten were widows and six were wives of missionaries.

The giving was spontaneous, without previous contemplation or preparation; and it was an indication of fine devotion and willingness to give support to the cause they love. And from what I know of that group, they will do more at any time it is necessary.

Qualified Men Always Wanted

Another paragraph comments on a letter from Brother McConley in which he speaks of the unskilled laborers among the Saints of Spokane being the first to lose jobs. In this connection it is interesting to note a letter from one of our brothers who is a manufacturer. He says:

“We have been endeavoring for nearly a year to find the type of man who would fit into our business here as a general superintendent. We have not found him yet.”

He then comments upon the lack of qualification manifest, in training, reputation, and character in some Saints who applied for the position in response to advertising in the Herald, and then he significantly adds:

“Some men unfortunately are out of work because depression forced itself upon them. Others, we believe, are acquainted with the facts of why they can not find work or keep a position after they find it. We are beginning to wonder just what Latter Day Saints really expect of themselves to be able to assist in the tasks that lie before us. Many, too many, are aiming too low, carrying heads down instead of chins up."

I pass to our readers this comment by an employer of labor in the hope that his comments, tersely made, will become another factor in stimulating some of our people to greater efforts towards preparation, and closer application to their jobs in the interests of efficiency. Our people should ever be alert to the task of doing the best they can in whatever place they may find themselves, and give the best possible service in whatever task is at their hands.

All the while looking towards the goal of Zion with its glorious as well as arduous work.

F. M. S.

Spokane Conditions Encouraging

In a recent letter from Brother M. A. McConley to the Presidency he says:

"From Brother Porter's recent survey of his field it appears that the crops have been good and that there is very little unemployment among our people. Some of our unskilled men are unemployed, which seems to be the common condition all over the country. The moral is to encourage all of our young people to prepare definitely along some certain line for their life's work."

This comment by Brother McConley is interesting. It is good to know that in that district there are few of our people out of work and that conditions are better than in some other places. Brother Porter, referred to above, is the district president, and evidently is alert to the necessity and value of keeping well informed as to the conditions prevailing among the Saints of his district. I would like to have reports from other district presidents along similar lines.

It has always been my custom to adhere, both when addressing congregations of Saints and when conversing with individuals, that our young people prepare for a definite field of endeavor; and to find the field in which they are best qualified to serve. It is always true that in periods of industrial depression the unskilled laborer is the first to find himself out of work. More skillful and better-trained men adapt themselves to changes more easily, and hence have a larger field in which to find work.

There are many lessons for us to learn from present conditions. I wonder how well we shall learn them.

The Lonely Missionary

That church which ceases its missionary functions has resigned itself to a postponed but an inevitable death. There is no standing still: a church either loses or gains. A certain amount of work is necessary to maintain numbers against the depletions caused by removal, defection, and death.

An interest in missionary work carries with it an interest in the missionary. If the work is important, the man is important. Our care and concern for him may well be taken as an index for our care and concern for the work. And then one expects mere largeness of heart, independent of Christian motive, to stir generous impulses leading to action in behalf of the man who is going to carry the gospel into a strange land.

He Who Scorned God

My neighbor boasted of his moral and intellectual strength. My neighbor scorned God. He laughed at me and my habit of daily prayer. He was a strong, proud man.

Years afterward I saw a man who had a strange but familiar face. He was my neighbor; he had, rather, the body of my neighbor, while his eyes showed that he was one in whom the soul had died.

Trouble had come upon him—not with the mild discipline of pain, but with the terror and destruction of a storm. His strength and pride had crumpled all at once. There were no spiritual resources in his soul for a time of need.

He who had scorned God had suffered a death from which there is no resurrection: the disintegration of character, the loss of will, the renunciation of hope. A fool had said in his heart, "There is no God."

Short Articles

Readers have noticed that short articles have largely taken the place of longer ones in the Herald. We have been forced to make the change, not only by the demand for space for a new type of material, but by a change that is taking place in the tastes of the readers.

We take this means of informing those who contribute and those who might contribute that we welcome good short articles of a high quality, of general interest to readers. Selections are difficult, but they are made as wisely and as justly as possible under the circumstances.

For those who are interested, short articles by various authors will appear from time to time entitled "Hints for Speakers and Writers." These are recommended to the attention of those who wish to learn.

Why the Church Must Teach

Making Religion Function in Life

By F. M. McDowell

Religion, if it is to be effectual, must be made to function in life. Such is the oft-repeated admonition of pulpit and press. In fact, this statement has been made so often that it apparently can be uttered, heard, or read without having much effect upon any of the persons involved.

The implications of the statement are, however, not usually recognized. Neither do we seem to be conscious of the painstaking effort that will be required to carry that into effect in the program of the church. Religion must be made to function in life. Yes, but how? The method of achieving this all-important result would seem to be a vital matter.

Limited Conceptions of Religion

Religion is sometimes considered as a form of knowledge, a matter of belief, a way of thinking or reasoning, a matter of intellectual assent only.

Sometimes religion is considered largely, if not entirely, as a matter of feeling or emotion, and the person is considered to be most religious who gives the greatest evidence of the presence of such feelings or emotions in his life.

Similarly, religion is sometimes limited to form of ceremonies or ways of acting.

Religion is conceived by some as merely a preparation for future life or a private transaction between the individual and his maker. More often it is considered as some special faculty or interest or phase of life. Thus we speak of a man's domestic life, his business affairs, his intellectual interests, and then add "religion" to the list as though it were some rather limited or partial aspect of the total life of the individual.

Religion and Life

Possibly no one of the above concepts of religion is entirely wrong. The great fault of each is that it limits religion to one or more of its important aspects. Religion is more correctly considered as the best of all of these conceptions put together. Religion is right thinking plus right feeling plus right action, as such would center in God on the one hand and the godlike way of living on the other.

Religion, as some one has said, is a "way of living" vitally influenced by belief and intelligence and obedience to the ordinances, but also extending its influence to give color and tone and spiritual significance to every phase of life.

Somehow we must come increasingly to think of religion in terms of the unification and intensification of all the values of life: something that has to do with the total meaning and worth of life; something that helps us to evaluate all of life in terms of its relation to God.

The Development of Religiously Vitalized Life

According to the above viewpoint, religion is not something apart from life. Nor yet is it correct to think of it as merely a part of life. In a very vital and meaningful sense, religion is life itself. It is that which gives meaning and unity and purpose and direction to all of life.

If life, therefore, is to be made to feel the influence of religion in any effectual way, it must come to be unified, purposed, guided in all its aspects by that consciousness of God which is the essence of religion.

Making Religion Function in Life

The problem for the church to consider is that of the method through which this very desirable result can be achieved. If we do this in the light of those great principles of teaching which have come to us out of the experience of the race as well as in the example furnished us by the Master himself, we will find some helpful suggestions.

It is the conviction of the writer that religion will be made to function in the life of an individual only when that individual has had long and continued practice in the art of meeting and solving the problems of life in terms of religion. Just as the best violin lesson is not merely a lecture about violins but consists rather of practice in playing a violin under supervision, so the best kind of a lesson in religion would be one which provides for practice in the art of living religiously under guidance.

To say that the church must teach is to say that the church must give those for whom it is responsible daily practice in the art of living religiously. In this way religion will be woven into the very fabric of life, becoming inseparable from the garment itself. To state the same truth in another way, religion thus will become the dye that gives color to the warp and woof of the entire garment, the leaven that leavens the entire loaf.

The directing of the varied experiences of the growing individual in such a way that those attitudes and convictions and knowledges that go to make up what we here call religion shall be made to give meaning and purpose and color and tone to all of life is the task of religious education. To this end the church must teach.

A Pertinent Question: What the Answer?

Is there any real reason why the missionaries' allowances shall not be paid in full by Christmas?

Confronted by this question, the general officers have been forced to share with the church as a whole the responsibility for its answer.

Letters have been sent to all persons holding positions of responsibility in the church organization, including bishops and bishop's agents, stake and district presidents, pastors, branch presidents, and solicitors, and several thousands of the church membership. These letters have kindly and yet frankly called attention to the present need of the church and made an appeal for the loyal cooperation of all. Local officers were requested to organize their forces so that every member of the church might receive before December 15 a personal invitation to comply with the financial law of the church by making a contribution now, either in the form of a tithe or an offering or both if circumstances permitted.

Attention was called to the fact that altogether too large a per cent of the church membership in the various districts had made no financial contribution to the general church this year, this situation being most unfortunate, since it placed the load of carrying forward the church work upon the shoulders of a few and brought unnecessary hardship to those who are dependent upon the church for their support.

It was emphasized that this appeal was to be in the form of an urgent invitation to each member to comply with the law of the church. The financial program of the church is God's program. By means of it the church is to be financed; through compliance with it, church members are to find their spiritual development enhanced. The church needs the financial contribution of its members now, and the members of the church need the experience of sharing in the task of the church. These two things are inseparable.

The response to this request has been characteristic of the membership and the ministry when a real need is sensed. Beginning at the center place, plans are already matured to reach every member and ask him to share definitely in supporting the church financially, that the church's obligations to the ministry and their families may be fulfilled before Christmas.

Each of the four stakes—Lamoni, Far West, Holden, and Kansas City—has organized its stake and branch forces and is planning immediately to reach every member with an appeal for tithes and offerings.

Many district and branch presidents have responded to the letters of the Presidency as follows:

Henry Livingston, pastor at Philadelphia, writes: "No stone shall be left unturned to get this before our people by the personal work of the priesthood."

H. P. W. Keir, pastor of the Central Chicago Branch, writes: "At a special meeting of the priesthood last evening, six teams were appointed to work under the supervision of the branch solicitors to make a personal visit to each family of the branch to stimulate activity in contributing to the needs of the church."

Henry Sparling from Springfield, Missouri, writes: "We realize the serious situation in a financial way which faces the church. The church needs a united effort on the part of all. I feel like the sentiment expressed in the good old song we sing, 'The Lord can depend on me.'"

D. S. McDole from Seattle, Washington, pastor of the Seattle Branch, makes this statement: "I feel sure that we can enthuse the priesthood to assume the task of contacting every member, and with a good organization and a definite working system we can see every member and present the needs of the church, urging them to respond."

Walter Ryder, pastor of the Grand Rapids Branch, writes as follows: "We have decided upon a plan of sending out a letter to every member to be followed by a personal visit of the priesthood. The letters have been mailed, and we have called a priesthood meeting for next Sunday. We will do our best to help out."

Gerald Gunsolley, president of the Northeastern Iowa District, in a letter dated November 17 makes this observation: "I am confident that when our people are approached in the proper way and told of the needs of the church, they will arise to meet the situation."

On November 24 Apostle Edwards met with the president of the Minnesota District, Leslie Wight, and the district bishop's agent, Edwin Bennett. Vernon Lundeen, president of the Minneapolis Branch, was also in the conference, and plans were laid to utilize district and local forces in reaching every member in the district.

Apostle Edwards also talked with Henry Castings, president of the Des Moines District, and C. B. Hartshorn, pastor of the Des Moines Branch, which is the largest congregation in the district. Arrangements have been made for members of the Des Moines Branch and the other congregations in the district to be visited personally by district and branch officers. Those whose tithing is past due will be invited to discharge this responsibility at the earliest possible date.

The Council Bluffs congregation, under the leadership of the pastor, Ray Whiting, has already begun work, and the members are being invited to help.

In the Northwestern Iowa District, Apostle Edwards has been in consultation with Elder Gerald Gunsolley, district president, and Missionaries E. Y. Hunker and L. G. Holloway. Plans to make a canvass of every member in the entire district are well under way.

In the Holden Stake, mass meetings of two or more branches conveniently located have been held each night last week. Stake President W. S. Macrae and Bishop J. A. Koehler have been active in calling these meetings and presenting the needs of the church and asking for a response in tithes and offerings.

These many cases of concerted action promise well for the attainment of our immediate goal and objective. It is hoped that other officers and other districts will do as well in this highly important work.

The test of faith, of conviction, and conversion, is the willingness to sacrifice for the sake of the gospel and one's fellow men. It is not sufficient that one shall be able to lift himself, or be drawn, into the presence of the Spirit of God. Only a selfish man can be satisfied with his own salvation. If he is satisfied, he is not saved, and the Spirit of God has not even begun to work in and with him.

The whole meaning of religion is that life must issue in unselfish service, devotion to ideals, and the effort to build the social order as well as the home and business on which they depend. If religion satisfies an individual with his own comfort and the feeding of his own appetites, it is not only a useless religion: it is primitive, destructive, and anti-social. The religion of Jesus Christ involves not only a concern but an actual responsibility for the welfare of others. And no class of people are more deserving of care than the missionaries and their families.

That They Might Have Life

By Edmund J. Gleazer

The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.—John 10: 10.

The thief comes to steal, and to kill, and to destroy. That which curtails or prevents the fullest expression of life is a thief and should be avoided as a thief should be avoided. That which takes away, whether it is a habit, an appetite, an attitude, or a manner of conduct, is a thief. It leads us to steal from ourselves.

We witness daily the curtailment and destruction of human life. Few of us can say, like the Master, that we have come that others might have life. If one were to judge the purpose of life as it is revealed in the conduct of men in government and business, it would seem that they have come that they might get wealth regardless of the consequences. Human life is daily sacrificed that men might heap up material possessions. In too many instances those that we elect to positions of trust in the government forget the purpose for which they have been elected and pass that legislation which serves the selfish purposes of private interests. Government is intended to make it possible for human life to be protected and more fully expressed.

What we say of government is equally true of business and industry. The abuses we see daily in the modern business world prompt us to ask as Jesus asked so many years ago, "Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?" Today we hear of the great surplus in wheat, oil, and cotton; yet thousands of people are in need of these commodities. To the extent that souls are denied the commodities and services they need, to that extent is life being curtailed and wasted. Modern business and industry is not especially concerned in making it possible for people to have life and have it more abundantly, except in so far as it may be done with a good profit. Modern business and industry operates that its proprietors may make profits. We manufacture that which will bring to us the greatest financial return from the least investment. When the average manufacturer reaches the point of increasing costs per unit of production, he immediately curtails production regardless of the need of society for the article he is manufacturing. The farmer has been advised to curtail his production of wheat, not because he is producing more than society needs but to insure a curtailment that will create a greater demand and thus bring to him more dollars per bushel.

The present practices of government and industry are not only curtailing and destroying life, but are producing effects that will eventually lead to civil strife. Self-interest, or selfishness, is twice cursed: it curses him that withholds benefits, and those from whom benefits are withheld. The fullness of life is not to be found in seeking one's own interests. "He that seeketh to save his life will lose it." Life is found in serving. Jesus said to one who came seeking life, "What is written in the law? how readest thou? And he answering said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself. And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live."—Luke 10: 26-28. Whom we love we serve. If we would enter into life we must serve God with all our heart, with all our soul, with all our strength, with all our mind: and our neighbor as ourself. If men in government and business or industry today were functioning in a manner to serve God and their fellows with their might, strength, heart, and soul, they themselves would have found life, and their fellows would be enjoying that more abundant life that Jesus would have them enjoy.

Jesus came that we might have life. Every commandment that he gave, every ordinance that he instituted, and every doctrine that he taught was taught in order that we might have life and have it more abundantly. The commandments, doctrines, and ordinances of his church were intended to bring men to that standard of life where they would serve God and their neighbors with all their heart, soul, strength, and mind. This service will make it possible for the individual himself to enter completely into life. "By this we know we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren." The love of the brethren will produce conduct conducive to life, and will align us with the Prince of Life, who came that we might have life and that we might have it more abundantly.

Concerning Health

TREATMENT OF TUBERCULOSIS

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

Tuberculosis may be well called a house disease. This "great white plague" is one of the greatest scourges of mankind. It reaches its greatest maximum in the tenement quarters of great cities. It is prevalent as indoor living is prevalent. It might be well named a bad-air disease. The average modern dwelling is far from being ideal. Air is the first necessity of life, for without air we can live only a few minutes. We can live a few hours without water and without food for several days. Therefore we must consider our air supply the first rule of hygiene.

The robust Negro, and the Indian who formerly roamed the open, since they adopted the modern civilized methods of housing and living fall easy prey to tuberculosis.

Pure Air Needed for Treatment

The supreme importance in prevention and cure of this disease is a properly constructed house that insures adequate ventilation. It remained for Doctor Mullet, a Brooklyn physician, to discover the value of outdoor sleeping as a cure by having some shoe factory workmen sleep out of doors. In spite of their unsanitary home life, many advanced cases of tuberculosis were much improved and many were cured in a few months. This experience rapidly led to the recognition of the value of uncontaminated air in the treatment of tuberculosis and various other respiratory diseases. Quite recently it has become recognized of great value in prevention of nearly all diseases by building up the bodily resistance. For this reason many persons of all classes, including infants and children, have adopted outdoor sleeping to promote endurance, physical vigor, and working power.

Remedial Diet

The following diet is suggested, but should be checked over by the attending physician:

On arising. A cup of hot milk, plain or flavored, sipped, not gulped, not sweetened.

Breakfast. (One-half hour after rising.) Choice of one of the following combinations:

1. Orange juice or other fruit, unsweetened; well-cooked cereal with cream.
2. Two poached or soft-boiled eggs; toast, butter, and milk.

At 11 a. m. If you desire, take an eggnog (raw egg beaten up with milk).

Lunch 12.30 or 1 p. m. (Don't eat unless really hungry.)

1. Lentil or fresh green pea or lima bean or vegetable soup; toast or zweiback; butter.

2. Baked potato, cream or butter, lettuce salad (lemon and oil dressing).

3. Boiled rice or hominy grits, lettuce salad, bread, butter.

Afternoon meal, 4 p. m. Either zweiback and buttermilk or eggnog, if desired.

Dinner, 6 p. m. Choice of one of the following:

1. Bowl of creamed soup; zweiback, hard crackers, or toast, well buttered; Jello.

2. Lettuce, macaroni.

3. Baked potato or cream cheese with bowl sour cream; toast, butter, milk, Jello.

At bedtime (if desired). A glass of milk, either plain or mixed with cream or buttermilk, sipped slowly—not gulped.

You may eat combinations of the following foods:

Eggs—not fried, spaghetti, lettuce—French dressing, eggnog, olive oil, fresh peas or lima beans, junket—custard, Jello, spinach—creamed, boiled rice, oranges, fresh pea or bean soup, ground nuts, baked apple, wholewheat bread—crackers, cream cheese, cream, Graham or rye bread, grape juice, buttermilk, hot milk and barley, baked potato, milk toast, prepared breakfast cereals, fruits (no sugar), milk, butter—peanut butter, cereals—cook well, honey, tender vegetables.

Avoid the following foods:

All bulky vegetables, boiled cabbage, etc.; all acid foods, as pickles, vinegar, etc.; spiced, salted, smoked, pickled foods; pork, veal, ham, duck, goose, kidneys, sausage; strong tea, coffee, especially with meals; all fried foods, cooked fats, gravy, etc.; all sweets in general, candy, jelly, etc.; white and fresh breads, griddle cakes; rich desserts, bananas (unless baked); rhubarb, cranberries, melons, mushrooms; lemons, grapefruit, very sour fruits.

If for any reason you should get an attack of indigestion, then stop all vegetables immediately and substitute milk and milk preparations, crackers and milk, milk toast, until relieved. Skip a meal until the indigestion is better.

Avoid too great a variety at one meal, as it has a tendency to upset digestion. Foods that do not seem to agree with you should not be repeated. Change the combinations.

If the taste of milk becomes disagreeable—try adding a little grated cinnamon or raisin juice or a bay leaf or a little coffee or chocolate to flavor it. Chew food a long time. Don't eat too much unless really hungry. Be patient and hopeful. This diet is only suggestive. Consult your physician before adopting it.

The Christmas Offering

DULUTH ADOPTS A NOVEL PLAN

The Christmas offering goal set was $100. One half of this is already in hand, but the other half must be raised by December 20. The report states:

"A superintendent was selected by the director of religious education, with the approval of the pastor. The entire names of the branch membership were written on slips and placed in a hat, and drawn by lot to form two teams with captains.

"A trip by special trains to Portland, Oregon, will be taken, advancing one mile for each cent turned in by each side. We will return over same route by airplane, advancing two miles for each cent turned in. The losers of the contest are to give a social time to the winners. Pie socials, apron sales, soliciting from members living outside of the city, etc., will afford means of raising the fund. The plan not only increases our Christmas offering, but it develops more activity among the members.

"It has also been suggested that we buy only fifty per cent of our usual Christmas gifts this year, the other fifty per cent to go for Christmas offering."

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Kindergarten-Primary Worship Suggestions for December

By Minnie E. Epperson, Council Bluffs, Iowa

The following worship suggestions may be adapted to local situations and be used at whatever time seems advisable. If the children are not kept together during the entire morning, it might be arranged to have a worship program during the church school period.

It is urged that the children meet with the adults in the sacramental service.

FIRST SUNDAY

Theme: "God's Love for Us."

Bible reading. (If Bible reading is used rightly with the small children, it will help develop an appreciation for the book.)

"Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God even our Father, hath loved us."—2 Thessalonians 2: 16.

Song: "Jesus loves me," in Primary Worship Services, Humphrey, page 35.

This song may also be found in the old Winnowed Songs and in other books.

Use only the first verse as printed.

Second verse:

"Jesus loves me! this I know,
For the sunshine tells me so;
Tells me by its golden light,
As it shines from morn till night."

Prayer Song: "Little eyes," Zion's Praises, page 91. (Use the first and last verses.)

Prayer, by one of the children. (With a little encouragement from the leader, and from mothers, the children will soon learn to stand in front and offer the opening or closing prayer.)

Song: "He loves me, too," Beginner and Primary Songs, page 62, David C. Cook Publishing Company. If this book is not available, use "Nature's praises," Zion's Praises, page 23.

Offering. Use whatever plan you have found most successful in your department.

Offering response: "God loveth a cheerful giver."

"Our hearts, our lives, our offering take,
And bless them for our Jesus' sake. Amen."

Stories: Use either of the following:

1. "The little Jewish girl," Zion's Hope, July 7, 1929.
2. "A scooter keeps Philip home," Zion's Hope, December 8, 1929.

(If the above program is used for church school, it may be followed by a fellowship period or by class work. If used in primary church, a short sermon should follow the story.)

SECOND SUNDAY

Theme: "Our Love for God."

Bible reading: "I will love thee, O Lord, my strength."—Psalms 18: 1.

"O love the Lord, all ye saints."—Psalms 13: 23.

Song: "Jesus loves me." (Add the third verse.)

"Jesus loves me, this I know!
And my love for him, I show
When my happiness I share
With his children everywhere."

Prayer.

Prayer song: "Here in our Father's house," Primary Worship Services, Humphrey, page 34. If this song is not available, use the one suggested for last Sunday, "Little eyes."

Song: "God's little star." Sunny Songs for Sunny Singers, Tuller-Meredity, page 30.

Use the picture in Zion's Hope for January 5, 1930, with this song.

Offering. (Same as last Sunday.)

Conversation period. Lead the children to sense the fact that only by obedience can we show our love for God.

Stories:

1. "Better than flowers," Zion's Hope, May 12, 1929.
2. "When the house caught fire," Zion's Hope, August 11, 1929.

THIRD SUNDAY

Theme: "God's Gift to Us."

Bible reading: Read parts of the Christmas story which you are sure can be understood by the children.

Song: Luther's Cradle Hymn: "Away in a manger," October, November, December, 1930, Primary and Kindergarten Quarterlies.

Prayer.

Prayer song. Same as used on second Sunday.

Song: "Christ is King," Zion's Praises, page 31.

Offering.

Offering response. Same as used on first Sunday.

Stories:

1. "The first Christmas," Children's Stories, by Berg, Esenwein, and Stockard, page 275.
2. "The Christmas visitors," same book, page 273.

Note: A poster may be made with a golden star in one corner, the picture from Zion's Hope, December 22, 1929, in the other corner, and underneath the following stanza may be written:

"Sweetest of months is December,
Month when the merry bells chime,
Month when the stars shine the brightest,
Telling of glad Christmas time.
Dearest of months is December,
Ring out the carols so gay,
Jesus, the Bethlehem Baby,
Came on the first Christmas Day."

The children will enjoy memorizing the verse and saying it in unison.

FOURTH SUNDAY

Theme: "Our Gifts to God and Others."

Bible reading: "Of all that thou shalt give me, I will surely give the tenth to thee."—Genesis 28: 22.

"Be ye kind one to another."—Ephesians 4: 32.

Prayer Song: "Little eyes," Zion's Praises, page 91.

Prayer.

Song: "Jesus bids us shine," Zion's Praises, page 51.

Stories. In teaching the children to desire to give to God, the little story on the first page of The Saints' Herald, October 22, 1930, could be simplified and used. In teaching giving to others, the following stories might be used:

1. "The kindergarten helps Willie," Zion's Hope, August 4, 1929.
2. "His chosen task," Zion's Hope, August 25, 1929.

Note: Stories were chosen from the Hopes because these papers are available to all workers with children.

December Joys for the Children's Division

By Myrtle A. Weber

"Glory to God in the highest,
And on earth peace,
Good will toward men."

Does not the imagined sweetness of that angelic choir thrill your hearts at this season of the year, as it thrilled the hearts of shepherds out there on the hills of Bethlehem nearly two thousand years ago? Every year, because of the gift of which the angels sang, this prosaic old world is turned into one of happy mystery, of brimming cheer, of love.

Every heart beats a trifle faster at the Christmas season, and the air teems with plans of joy and happiness. As church school workers we, too, are imbued with the Christmas spirit, and we are anxious to impart our joys to those we teach. In our zeal to stir a kindred spirit within our children, we are very apt to cheat them of the opportunity to have a genuine Christmas experience. Therefore, this year, before making Christmas plans for the children's division, let us pause for a moment over these questions:

What is the child's part in all this? Is he merely to be overwhelmed by receiving his heart's desires and more? How unfair if this is the only experience we give our children at Christmas! As real lovers of childhood, let us plan and re-plan, if necessary, our December programs so that they will provide many wide and rich experiences for the children, through which they may find great happiness by sharing Christmas joy with others.

Enriching Christmas Hymns

To us who are older and more susceptible to the appeal of sentiment, the splendid old Christmas carols will ever hold a place in our hearts. The children sing these carols over and over again, in their day-school assemblies and again when they come to the church school. Did it ever occur to you that they might tire of them just a little, or sing them without thinking of their meaning? For fear this suggestion be true, let us endeavor to enrich these beautiful old carols and make them more meaningful to the children. Consider for a moment the carol, "O little town of Bethlehem." There are many interesting things connected with this hymn. It would be well to relate but one or two of these facts each time the song is used, thus keeping interest keen and increasing the children's reverence for this carol. Here are a few facts connected with it.

Phillips Brooks, the author of the words of this beautiful old hymn, wrote them some forty years ago for his Sunday school. At the time, he was pastor of Trinity Church in Boston, and Mr. Redner, the organist, wrote the music which has immortalized the words. Phillips Brooks had visited the holy lands and had spent the Christmas previous to the writing of this hymn in the "little town of Bethlehem." There he had attended a Christmas service in the church which has been built where it is believed the stable stood in which Jesus was born. On Christmas Eve, Mr. Brooks walked in the fields where the shepherds had watched their flocks in the starlight of the first Christmas Eve. He tells us that out there in the fields of Bethlehem the stars seem very near.

At Christmas time the children of Bethlehem decorate their houses with little clumps of soft moss which they find growing in cracks between the rocks. They call it "Jesus' bed," and place it on the hearthstone, a warm, safe place for the child Jesus to sleep. As our trees help us to celebrate Christmas, so the little clumps of moss help the children of Bethlehem. They light no Christmas candles, but they have the stars, which in Palestine seem nearer and larger than the stars that we see.

Other helpful and interesting facts may be found in a Bible dictionary, or other reference book, under such words as Bethlehem, Emmanuel, Star, Light, Phillips Brooks. Like information can be obtained for the other carols. At the library, books containing hymn stories may be secured, and these will prove helpful. Vitalize these fine old hymns and make them live in the lives of the children.

Gift Making

Plan with the children the making of some Christmas gift. Half the fun is in the planning, you know.

A picture book may be made for baby brother or sister, or some other baby. Let the children cut pictures from an old magazine, the kind of pictures a baby would enjoy. These may be neatly pasted into a cloth book which can be made from inexpensive, colored cambric. Black is the most serviceable color, and the pictures will show up well on it. To be really lasting, the pages of the book should be stitched together on the machine. The children could purchase the material with their own money which they have earned and saved.

If you want some beautiful pictures of scenery for framing, or the making of calendars, these may be obtained from the Goodenough and Woglom Company, 296 Broadway, New York City, at a very reasonable price. None of the pictures are over fifteen cents apiece, and many cost but five or ten cents. They are done in lovely colors.

Many other gifts could be made. There is no better way to let the children really experience the true spirit of Christmas than to encourage them to be Santas.

Spreading Christmas Cheer through Caroling

This project would serve to stimulate and keep interest in the Christmas hymns. Learn at least two or three carols very well and have them ready to sing around the family altar, as well as in the church, or at a municipal celebration. But best of all, plan to sing these carols below the windows of shut-in friends.

Providing a Christmas Worship Experience

Make a little ceremony of unveiling and hanging a thoughtfully selected picture of the Christ, one which shall linger in the minds of the children. Provide a fine story that will make the picture and the spirit of Jesus live in the lives of the boys and girls. A beautiful musical selection would add much to the service.

The Christmas Party

Of course, the holiday season would not be complete without a party! But here, again, let us not do all the planning. The children will enjoy it much more if they share some of the responsibility.

Have the children of one department make the favors for the children of another department. For instance, the children of the Kindergarten department could mold some small toys from clay and paint them for the Primary children's party; the Primary children could make pretty Christmas place cards for the Juniors; and the Juniors could make pop-corn balls and wrap them in bright-colored paper for the Kindergarten children.

The children, particularly the Juniors, could be encouraged to bring their games. Have several tables. On each one place a game. Different groups of children may play each game. One group may play "Old Maids" and when finished change tables with the group that was playing "Jack Straws," etc. This will give the children a splendid opportunity to share their games and to enjoy the games of each other.

Make two large-sized Christmas wreaths and suspend from the ceiling of the room. Attach bells on each wreath so that they hang in the center of the wreaths. Provide two soft, white rubber balls to represent snowballs. Divide the group into two teams. Allow each player three throws. Count the number of times each team succeeds in throwing the ball through the wreath and ringing the bell. The team who scores the highest is the winning side.

Many other appropriate games may be found in The Game Book, by E. E. Closson. This book may be purchased from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, for $2.

No Christmas party would be complete without at least one good Christmas story.

If it is the custom of your school to give gifts to the children, the party serves a more appropriate time for the giving than the Sunday school hour. A small, inexpensive gift is far more advisable than the proverbial box of candy to which many a wise parent justly objects. For the Kindergarten folk, each teacher can make bean bags for her class. The Primary teachers could make a game similar to the one called "Whip." Save the labels from fruit and vegetable cans. Cut out the fruit or vegetables and mount them on cards, about 4 x 2½ inches in size. Each set should contain duplicate pictures. You may have as many cards as desired. About twenty-four make a good-sized set. Of course, you may use any kinds of pictures and secure them from many sources.

The Juniors would appreciate a good book. A very appropriate one for this age, to be given as a Christmas gift, is John Oxenham's book, entitled The Hidden Years. These are merely suggestions, which may help you to think of some gift suitable for your particular group of children.

The District Director of Religious Education

By C. B. Woodstock

A new field of opportunity has opened for stake and district directors. Formerly district superintendents have responded to a demand for statistics, and much time and energy have been spent in an effort to secure a detailed quarterly report from each Sunday school. Certain items have been tabulated and passed on to the general office in an annual district report. Informations thus gathered have had some value, especially as those in charge have taken occasion to make the data a basis for constructive advice and helpful suggestion. But we have always been duplicating our effort in trying to direct an efficient branch program of education from three general offices, and the reporting system has been slow and generally inadequate. Some earnest and energetic superintendents have been able to accomplish much good in a particular field, but help from the general office has usually been slow in reaching local needs.

Qualifications

The change in administration from three departments to a single department of religious education centers our effort in a stake or district within a single clearly defined field. The director for the district is a specially chosen emissary, a missionary, if you will, of religious educational means, methods, and materials. He has no side lines to sell, no competitive interests to champion. He is not a collector of statistics. He is not an administrative officer except as he carries out the directions of the general department, on the one hand, or of the stake or district presidency, on the other. He is a servant of the people, especially of the children, ministering to their needs, seeking to unify all the constructive educational forces available, stimulating where needed, encouraging as may seem best, giving direction and helpful advice. Always he should be a willing assistant, a wise counselor, a sympathetic spiritual leader.

The director should be the one person sought out in the stake or district who has the peculiar qualifications of personality, educational training, judgment, spiritual growth and willingness and freedom to serve fitting him for the task. He must have a growing idea of the meaning and purposes of religious education and its place in the program of the church. He must be a consistent student of materials, means, and methods of religious education. He must be consecrated to the work of the church, leading by influence and example as well as by precept. He must be humble and full of love, ready to cooperate with his fellow laborers, if he is to assist in the work of the Lord.

Responsibility

The stake or district director is responsible for the interpretation and advancement of the program of religious education of the church within his stake or district. He should attempt to understand and carry out the program advised by the general department in close cooperation with other stake or district officers and under the direction of the stake or district presidency.

The director will attempt to keep in personal touch with local directors and the work of religious education in each branch in his territory. He should give assistance at any point needed to help strengthen the work and to develop teachers and leaders. With the advice of the district presidency, he should organize schools where called for within his territory and assist in the organization of the most efficient program possible within each branch. He should seek to give his help always in those places where most needed.

Reporting

A simplified form of reporting should keep each local church school in close touch with the general department and also with the stake or district director. It seems unwise at this time to attempt to forecast the exact nature and extent of the new reporting system. Changes to the new form of organization are being made rapidly. It is thought that more than half of the branches will have made the change before April, 1931. We trust that all will have made the most satisfactory adjustment, wholly or in part, before April, 1932.

In the meantime our reporting system must be flexible enough to meet the changing conditions. Certainly there must be no waste time, effort, or expense in gathering and reporting useless data, yet without close personal touch between the local, the stake or district, and the general office we can not expect to make consistent progress.

For the present there will be four types of reports, as follows:

1. Branch president's report to the First Presidency. This is an annual report made out by the branch president on blanks sent out with a letter from the office of the First Presidency in January, to be filled and returned by February 1. This report will list the various officers of the branch, report activities for the past year, and outline the program proposed for the new year.

2. Report of the local church school to the general department. This report will be made twice each year, on April 1 and October 1. Blanks will be sent out from the general office, and the report will cover the organization and program of religious education within the branch, not only the Sunday school, but all activities throughout the week. The report should be made from the records kept by the church school secretary.

3. Report of the local director to the stake or district director. This report will be made twice a year, January 1 and July 1. The nature of this report has not been determined. It probably should not be statistical, but rather descriptive and personal in character, setting out the progress of the program and calling attention to particular needs. If the stake or district director can make personal visits to the branches, his service will be most helpful, and a formal report may not be necessary.

4. Report of the stake or district director to the general department. This will be an annual report due February 15, summarizing the general aspects of religious education in the stake or district and outlining the program proposed for the new year. A report form will be sent out from the general office early in January.

Each report, whether local or district, should contain only significant data. Reports asked should be sent promptly. Each report deserves a prompt, encouraging, and helpful reply based on the information contained in the report.

The Church Pulpit of the World

It is said, "A drop of ink may make a million think." Our Herald Publishing House uses gallons of ink every week, giving to the reading public thousands of pages in choice doctrinal books, tracts, gospel quarterlies, and other publications, including the Saints' Herald, Zion's Ensign, Vision, and Stepping Stones. Are you patronizing your own publishing house as much as you should and procuring the very best of religious literature for yourself and to loan or give to others? Please write today for a free catalog. Holiday season is here with its golden opportunities for giving presents. Our church publications cause people to think along right lines, hence the good to be accomplished by giving the proper literature can not be fully estimated in this life.

It was the Apostle James who wrote, "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth." (James 3: 5.) Paraphrasing that statement we might say, "Behold, how great a soul, family, or community might be converted by printers' ink used in books, tracts, and other publications bought from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri. The precious ones you convert in this way may share the joys of the millennium with you.

Presbyterian Synod for Tithing

The Wisconsin State annual convention of the Presbyterian Synod favors the observance of the tithing law as a part of their doctrinal teaching. We are pleased that the preaching and observing of that law, for over a century by the Latter Day Saints, has helped other denominations to see its value in character building. It is true that in recent years several religious societies are teaching tithing. Churches who do not advocate that gospel principle are "following afar off," and Latter Day Saints who do not pay their tithes and offerings are liable to be seen following afar off. Brother R. J. Farthing, one of our missionaries, desired to encourage delinquent tithe observers by the following verse:

"Almost persuaded," do it today;
 "Almost persuaded," no longer stay;
 Now to the word give heed,
 Making the gospel speed,
 Sharing with those who need—
 Do not delay.

Good Books, Good Medicine

The physicians and officials of a Presbyterian hospital have announced plans for opening a training school for hospital librarians, explaining that the reading of certain books has distinct therapeutic value—medicine for the mind, hence helpful to the body. "Peace of mind and spirit aid recovery from sickness." It is also asserted that, "such maladies as ignorance, indifference, prejudice, hardening of conscience, dullness of sympathy and of imagination may have been among the diseases which the library intended to correct." "The well-stocked public library is an institution of social healing."

Good Use of Leisure Deters Crime

Mrs. Frederick Dow, Chicago, past president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, is reported to have said that when children are taught how to make profitable and constructive use of leisure time criminality will decline. She advocates wholesome activities outside of regular classroom duties for pupils. Judge Lewis L. Faucett, justice of the supreme court of the State of New York, wrote in part as follows: "Permit me to state that in my experience during twenty-three years on the bench, in which time over four thousand boys under the age of twenty-one years were convicted of crime before me, of whom but three were members of a Sunday school." Secretary of State Simson said, "Progress in civilization comes only from the affirmative cultivation of habits of good." Sunday school workers should not be discouraged in their good work.

Annual Cost of Cosmetics and Beauty Specialists

A noted statistician wrote, "About $500,000,000 is spent yearly in this country for rouge, powder, bath salts, creams, lotions, and their containers. Another $500,000,000 is spent for the services of beauty specialists."

Comment on such extravagance ought not to be necessary in a Latter Day Saint church paper.

Paragraphs of Interest

An inactive missionary may want his job prolonged. A member who is slow in paying tithing doesn't want the millennium to be ushered in.

"Any man who goes to work to the tune of a word battle with his wife is just three times as liable to bungle as the man who is mentally at peace."

Bishop J. A. Koehler is quoted as saying, "It is easy to be a soldier in time of peace, or a mariner in time of smooth sailing." It is not easy to "lift up your heads and rejoice" in times of adversity.

A competent janitor that keeps a church house comfortable in all seasons of the year, does more to retain an audience than a poor preacher.

If you believed the end of the world would come tomorrow morning, would you go to a neighbor or call your family together and tell all the bad things you ever heard about So-and-so, or would you forget his faults and try to rectify your own? The Saint who sees faults in a member and does not mention them, exercises true charity.

To what family did the Sunday school child belong who quoted a Bible verse as was observed in the home, "Go ye into all the world and spread the gossip to all the people"?

Church Work in Australia

In the four months since landing in Australia, we have had a very busy time. The Saints at all centers have been eager for our story and pictures of the experiences of the Australian delegation to the Centennial Conference. The pictures, particularly, have done a lot to bring the official personnel of the church nearer Australians. Now that they have seen the big, yet humble men who are the leaders of the church, moving and talking with members in front of the Auditorium, they feel that they have a personal acquaintance with them; we have given a formal introduction at each lecture. Then, the pictures of the Auditorium, the church buildings, and other institutions in Zion, and these which illustrate stewardships in operation, Graceland College, the Saints' Home Farm at Lamoni, the Saints' Home in that town with Sister Pascoe, a good Australian, living and moving and talking before them, have all conspired to bring Australians near to the Americans they love in the gospel. Then, again, has been accorded them the privilege of seeing in life-like form many of the good and noble men and women whom in past years they learned to love as missionaries to this country.

The effective missionary work being done by the church is brought home to them as they view the pictures of missionaries and members in Tahiti and Honolulu and as they view a picture of the international group assembled in front of the Auditorium one afternoon during the Centennial—Germans, Swedes, Norwegians, Danes, Dutch, Swiss, English, Tahitian, Hawaiian, Chinese, Japanese, Australians, etc. We are happy to have the opportunity of sharing the Centennial trip with our fellow Australians, especially in view of the fact that it is working for the advancement of our glorious cause and making for greater zeal in the missionary work.

Since returning, we have met with the Saints of Queensland, Northern New South Wales, and Victoria in conferences and in many of the branches. We are now with Adelaide Branch, in South Australia. In all these places the new plan in Religious Education has been adopted, and is working successfully in almost all centers in the Australasian Mission. Other changes in our methods of worship have added dignity and sacredness as well as new interest to local services wherever they have been adopted.

Rally Day was generally observed, and in most places good work has been done preparatory to Decision Day. I have had the pleasure of assisting with missionary series in Westgarth, Richmond, Geelong, Balmain, and Adelaide during that period. I spent Decision Day with the Adelaide Branch, and we had a glorious time during the whole period.

During the month previous, preparatory classes had been held in the homes of the Saints, to which prospects had been invited. Intensive tracting had been carried out, and the Saints had fasted and prayed for the success of the missionary series I was to conduct towards the end of the month. The meetings during this series were well attended, especially those on Sunday nights and the picture lectures Saturday nights. Still the preaching services held during the week saw attendances little smaller than on Sunday nights. The feature that was especially pleasing to me was that fully one third of the attendance at each meeting were nonmembers. Decision Day witnessed the baptism of seven, five of whom were adults.

Adelaide Branch is doing well. Elder C. A. Davies, the young missionary who succeeded Elder H. I. Velt as pastor here, is making good and is ably supported by a fine body of local priesthood. The spiritual tone of the branch is high, and we believe this is largely due to their decided missionary zeal. Here is a center where personal and group evangelism are popular with officers and members. While this continues, they will succeed.

Our spring itinerary was interrupted by the illness and death of the late Bishop Lewis. I was called from a missionary series at Geelong, and reached Wallsend two days before our brother's death. Evangelist Jones and I performed the last sad offices at the church and graveside. The whole mission mourns, for a great man in Israel has fallen. The funeral over, I returned to Geelong, finished my work there, and came on to Adelaide. My mission here will close tonight, and I shall leave for Sydney tomorrow. It had been my intention to spend three weeks in Tasmania on the way home, but certain adjustments of a pressing nature, consequent upon the loss of our bishop, makes it imperative that I should return to mission headquarters.

We regret that Elder A. V. Robinson is an inmate of Newcastle Hospital, where he has undergone an operation for the removal of his gall bladder and appendix. He has had a painful and anxious time, but reports that he is now on the way to recovery. It will doubtless be some time before he is strong enough to resume duty. He has been a great sufferer during the past three years, but has valiantly remained at the post of duty. We trust that his health will now be greatly improved.

Australians greatly enjoyed Sister Siegfried's article in Vision, "Australia by proxy." We have been kept busy explaining to inquirers some of the subtlety of Sister Siegfried's wit, and taken all in all the article has been received with great applause in this country.

W. J. HAWORTH.

Los Angeles, California

Central Branch, 3851 South Grand Avenue

Although no news has been sent to the Herald of recent months, it does not mean that Central Los Angeles Branch has not been busy. We have been especially active in all departments. Attendance at the services is increasing, and interest in all lines of the work is growing. Eli Bronson and Frank Holmes are furnishing much food for thought in their interesting and instructive sermons, and the work in Los Angeles is very much on the upward trend. The new system of group leadership seemingly is working out satisfactorily, although we find it more difficult to gather the news of the various activities. Then, too, Brother Arlie Austin, who is publicity agent, has been spending much time traveling the past few months, and it is for this reason that news letters to the Herald have been neglected.

The new class for men which Brother Bronson started some time ago is meeting a demand of long standing. This class meets on Monday evening, and two hours are devoted to study. At the first hour the subject is "The science of human behavior," and the second hour is used in the study of "How to preach."

Brother Frank Holmes, soon after his arrival in Los Angeles, organized a young people's dramatic class, which is meeting every Sunday evening and is filling a much-needed demand for something to occupy the minds of our young people at the Sunday evening service, as well as to bring out the talent along these lines. A comedy-drama is now in process of rehearsal which these young people expect to have ready the latter part of November. Sister Stella Brockway, who has recently come to Los Angeles, is assisting Brother Holmes in the direction of this play.

There have been several parties of interest during the past few months, and particular mention might be made of the party in honor of Brother Bronson's birthday on June 14. This party was sponsored by the Idola Club, and a good crowd attended. On Tuesday evening, August 26, the Idola Club had its regular monthly meeting at the home of Brother and Mrs. W. D. Gillen. This was a specially augmented gathering to honor Brother Frank Holmes and his wife, who had just arrived to make their home in Los Angeles, Brother Holmes having been sent by the general church to assist with the work in this city. We are glad to have Brother and Sister Holmes in Los Angeles and trust that they will be happy while working among us.

The Mizpah Chapter of Temple Builders gave a Halloween party October 30 in one of the bungalows of the Polytechnic High School. Also the Idola Club had a Halloween party on Friday evening, October 31, at the home of Brother and Sister Frank Gregg.

October 24 the Idola Club sponsored a carnival, which was held in the Recreation Hall of the church. This carnival had been well worked out under the plans of an able committee with Garnet Sames as chairman. Sister Nell Crum and Sister Bertha Austin assisted materially in requesting and picking up donations from the various merchants of the city. Sister Hazel Klein was supervisor and director of decorations, and each organization was represented with a booth. All the "eats" which are usually found at carnivals were served; whistles, horns, and confetti were abundantly in evidence, and the evening was one of noisy and hilarious merrymaking. Special booths were a "Family Skeleton" booth which held baby pictures and pictures of long ago of many of the different members. One of the women conducted a booth in fortune telling. Also there was a "beauty parlor," and a "player piano." An attractive box was made for the depositing of nickels and placed on the piano. A nickel in the slot called for a selection. All of these ideas and booths netted a nice sum of money and furnished an evening of merrymaking and entertainment. Some of them are given particular mention here, that they may give ideas to others who read these letters and are interested in putting on such things in the various branches. The Idola Club cleared about seventy dollars at this carnival, which money has been voted to be used for the purpose of building in and fixing up a new study for the pastors.

The women of the aid society have also been working, and particular mention might be made of the fact that they recently voted to donate fifty dollars toward the purchase of a mimeograph machine for the church.

We are glad to have added to our congregation Thad Howland, who has recently returned home from Graceland College. Brother Howland is a splendid addition in many ways and particularly in the musical line. Sister Stella Hodges, director of music and of the choir, is turning much of the choir work over to him, and he has also organized a junior musical club, which is making splendid progress. We hope to hear some fine work from these young people under Brother Howland's able direction.

A number of cottage prayer meetings have been arranged by the pastors and their workers, and are being held each Wednesday evening at various homes in the city. This is meeting an urgent need in Los Angeles. The city covers so much territory that it is almost impossible for the Saints who live far away to attend the services at Central Church.

November 2 the Sunday evening service was observed as Guest Night. Each member was urged to bring one or more guests, and a beautiful service was arranged. Laddie MacKay, a promising young organist, played the organ prelude. A contralto solo, "The Cross," Harriet Ware, was sung by Miss Mildred Nesser. Cecil Covalt, young violinist, played Massenet's "Thais." A splendid cast, under the direction of Sister Laura Freie, presented the pageant, "The challenge of the Cross." Brother Bronson then gave a short sermon on the subject, "The challenge of the Cross." This was a beautiful service, and the church was filled. It was very gratifying to the many who gave their time and talent toward making this a lovely and impressive service to be repaid by the attendance of such a large congregation as filled the building on this Sunday evening. We hope that Los Angeles workers will give many more such splendid programs.

District conference will be held at the Central Los Angeles Church this week-end, November 7, 8, and 9, and plans have been carefully worked out to take care of the many who always attend these district conferences.

Oakland, California

From The Oakland Bulletin

Among the ministry who have lately helped this congregation with words of instruction and cheer are R. S. Salyards, of Independence, Missouri, J. B. Carmichael, and Cecil Hawley.

The pastor was the speaker at both services on Rally Day, delivering in the evening the third of the series leading to Decision Day, the theme being "The psychology of repentance."

The question of equipping our church with an Oliver pipe organ was discussed Sunday, October 19, and it was unanimously agreed to go forward in the undertaking. About three hundred dollars was pledged toward the fund. A committee was appointed to make inquiries and report.

The November communion service was an enjoyable occasion. At its close several confined to their homes by sickness and infirmities were visited and shared in the feast of the Lord's Supper.

Following the sacramental hour a vote was taken authorizing the finance committee to negotiate for the purchase of an Oliver organ for the church on the terms announced by Bishop Cecil Hawley.

Sister Holling, sr., of Park-Presidio Branch, suffered another stroke a short time ago and is very low. The list of those who are sick and request the prayers of the Saints includes Sister Rae Davis, Sister Landis, of San Raphael, Mr. Melberg, and Sister Kaeha Meyer. Brother Savage is at home and ill with influenza. His son, Victor, is also in bed with an attack of bronchitis.

The first wedding to be solemnized in the new church was that of Hazel Werner, daughter of Brother and Sister W. Werner, to Mr. Eddie Gan, of San Francisco, November 15. All the members of the branch were invited to the ceremony, and the reception was held for all in the lower auditorium.

The Halloween party was given large attendance, and a hilarious time was had.

Congratulations are extended Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Kreuter, of San Francisco, who were married November 8 at the home of Brother and Sister Kreuter, parents of the bridegroom. The pastor officiated.

Sacramento, California

Twenty-fourth and Kay Streets

November 15.—A pretty wedding was solemnized in the church following the prayer service November 12 when Miss Margaret Barmore, of Newcastle, and Claire Goldsmith were united in marriage. Elder G. P. Levitt officiated. With Miss Ruth Bergtholdt, of Newcastle, as bridesmaid, and Joseph Inderkum as best man, the wedding party entered to the strains of "Lohengrin's wedding march," played on the organ by Sister Edna Burdick.

Another spiritual sacramental service was enjoyed this month. Two young people's prayer services have been held at 8.30 in the morning on Sundays, Elder Joseph Bussell and Priest John B. Dawson in charge.

Annual branch election was held Thursday evening, October 30. The two evenings previous, District President G. P. Levitt, with a lantern and slides, explained the new plan of Religious Education. This plan was adopted at the business meeting, and officers were elected for a period of nine months, so that we may begin our new year's studies and work in October. Those elected and appointed to take office in January include: W. H. Dawson, pastor; E. C. Burdick and Joseph Bussell, associates; Orah Johnston, clerk; Gertrude Bidwell, director of Religious Education; Joseph Bussell, publicity agent; Zayda Hook, historian; Birdie Clark, superintendent of music; and Adele Taylor, librarian.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, Sister Marian Burton, superintendent, has provided a number of entertainments. A Halloween party was given with decorations, costumes, gruesome sideshows, and refreshments all in season. Early in the month a jamboree, sponsored by the Idola Service Station, was enjoyed. The orchestra, led by Edwin C. Burdick, provided the program, interspersed with piano and vocal numbers. Ernest Doremus was the radio announcer. The country store and food sale netted over twenty-seven dollars. A nut party was shared by the seniors and young people last Friday evening. After the evening's fun, a surprise came with the refreshments in the form of a wedding cake provided as a compliment to the newlyweds present, Brother and Sister Claire Goldsmith.

The Idola Club, E. C. Burdick presiding, at their last meeting, announced they had attained their goal by completing the payments on the branch's grand piano. With Sister Ella Dawson as chairman of the business committee, over one thousand cakes were made and sold in about twenty-three sales. This, with rummage sales, paper drives, and other efforts, accomplished the undertaking. Sister Cora Taylor has been appointed chairman of this committee for the next year, and the goal now set is the payment of the debt on our gas-steam heaters, something over nine hundred dollars. The club also donated one hundred and twenty-five dollars to the branch treasury.

The Idola Service Station, a private stewardship, has just paid the forty dollars balance due on the chancel draperies.

At our branch business meeting the disorganized Rocklin

Branch donated its balance of $25 to us, and this was gratefully received.

Sister Julia Crocker, confined in a local hospital with a broken hip, developed double pneumonia, but is now improving. Sister Grace Ensley is in a hospital convalescing from an operation.

HAZEL BLOHM.

Tower, Michigan

Forty-three baptisms during one series of meetings is our record to date. Elder J. J. Ledsworth began a series of meetings October 6 in Tower, and though the Saints here have no church, we were able to get the use of the Baptist Church. The first night about fifty people attended, but the interest increased so rapidly that it was only a short time until from one hundred and fifty to three hundred and fifty were present each evening.

Every night the missionary showed photographic slides which were most educational. On October 26 he baptized nineteen into the church, and on October 31 he baptized nine. Then on November 7 fifteen more entered the waters of baptism under Brother Ledsworth's ministrations. Others also have asked for baptism, and there will be another service of this kind November 15. After the service November 15 there will be a social in the lower auditorium of the church.

Apostle D. T. Williams and Elder Allen Schreur, district president, are expected to be present Friday evening, November 14, the former being the speaker. A crowded house is anticipated. Surely the Lord is blessing his work. Let us "thrust in our sickles and reap, while it is day. For the night cometh when no man can work."

Cleveland, Ohio

November 12.—During the month two very interesting affairs were arranged and carried out by Cleveland Saints, and inasmuch as both events were in the nature of anniversary celebrations that may be of interest to other Saints, it is fitting that an account be given regarding them.

On the evening of November 3 about thirty-five members of East Side Branch called at the home of Brother and Sister John Farnfield and proceeded to stage an evening's entertainment in honor of Brother Farnfield's eighty-first birthday. Vocal selections by Sisters Anna McNeil and Mae Sheppard and piano solos by Sister Belva Kelsey added much to the pleasure of all, and talks were given by Brother Farnfield and Brother McNeil who have been friends and coworkers for many years. Games were played, reminiscences exchanged, and after partaking of a delicious lunch the crowd joined hands and sang "Auld Lang Syne." They returned home wishing the Farnfields God's blessing and many more happy years together.

Another anniversary on the evening of November 10 was observed. This was indeed one of the most pleasant social affairs held here for some time.

This date marked the first wedding anniversary of our pastor and wife, Brother and Sister Percy E. Farrow, and also the birthday of Sister Farrow. During their sojourn here, Brother and Sister Farrow have endeared themselves to us and have given unstintingly of their time and talent in working with us and for us. To show our appreciation we decided to give them a surprise party and a few tokens of our esteem.

One of the sisters found urgent consultation with the pastor necessary on that evening and incidentally practiced some solo accompaniment for Sister Farrow. While this was in progress the crowd was assembling in the lower auditorium of the church. Presently music could be heard, faintly at first, then gradually growing louder, and as the words of the song, "Blest be the tie that binds," came to their ears, they opened their door to see the large crowd of Saints and friends who had come to help them observe the occasion. Brother and Sister Farrow were too much surprised at first to realize what it was all about, but soon entered into the merrymaking and helped to make the party a success. An impromptu program was given, each one responding willingly to do his bit. The West Side Branch was well represented, and as a token of esteem and appreciation the Saints presented the Farrow's with a plentiful supply of all kinds of good things that will tax their storage space to its capacity.

A crate of apples and a bushel of hot pop corn were consumed by the crowd, and all departed wishing Brother and Sister Farrow good luck and God's continued blessing.

Anaconda, Montana

September 14 Anaconda Branch voted to adopt the new program of Religious Education. The following officers were elected to take office October 1: Pastor, Elder Joseph Beck; supervisor of Religious Education, Fred Kendall; associate pastor, Elder P. Helstrom; supervisor of adult division, Sister M. Matchett; supervisor of young people's division, W. E. Staton; supervisor of children's division, Sister D. L. Allen. The combining of church school and morning worship has strengthened the desire of everyone to be searchers for all truth.

A teacher's training course, with an enrollment of thirteen, is progressing, everyone working to become better teachers. Twenty-one adults are enrolled in the church school class and will receive credit at the end of the year. Our branch enrollment is sixty, ten of whom have moved away. We have about forty members who are working for the advancement of the branch.

Rally Day, September 28, was successful. The services encouraged all in the great cause. Some came from Butte to participate. The initiation of officers and teachers was one of the morning features. Late in the afternoon we closed by renewing our covenant with the Lord in a service of sacrament.

The Women's Department gave a Halloween party, the proceeds of which went to the building fund. We are renting a church in which to worship until a sufficient amount can be raised to build a church home of our own. The committee in charge is planning a number of social events with a view to adding to that sum as rapidly as possible.

MRS. ANNA STATON.

Bay City, Michigan

Bay City Branch, under the leadership of Branch President Burt Turner, is doing very well. A good attendance is had at most of the meetings.

On November 16 two young candidates were conducted into the church. They were baptized by Elder Charles Bellinger. After the confirmation Cyrus Myril Lambkin was ordained to the office of teacher by Elders J. W. Peterson and Burt Turner.

The departments of the church are working well under the direction of their leaders. The Saints have at all times the aims of Zion before them.

Church school meets every Sunday morning for class work. On Friday nights we have a short session of study, followed by a program. One night a month is turned over to the social committee, which plans recreational activities. We have a number of nonmembers attending these meetings. The church school is under the direction of Brother Roland Bellinger.

The Department of Women meets every Thursday afternoon and is well attended. The department is under the leadership of Sister Daisy Mamerow, who has planned many worth-while things for the women to do.

The choir is composed of young people, some nonmembers.

Officers are as follows: Chorister, Hazel Turner; choir leader, Roland Bellinger; president, Walter England. The young people are interested in music and eager to learn. The district chorister, Brother Lambkin, has attended some of our meetings.

The branch has been favored with visits from District President J. W. Peterson and our district missionary, Arthur Oakman, and has profited by talks. We enjoyed Brother Oakman's singing.

Bay City is planning a series of meetings which will begin November 30.

On Thanksgiving Day the branch is having a dinner at the hall of the Odd Fellows' lodge. Midland and Saginaw Saints have been asked to take part in this. In the afternoon and evening we are going to have a program. Brother and Sister Hawn, Brother and Sister Peterson, Brother Arthur Oakman, and Sister Louise Evans, of Grand Rapids, are to be here. These people are also expected to conduct the series of meetings. With the Saints cooperating with the workers, success will surely mark this missionary campaign.

EDNA BELLINGER.

West Haven, Connecticut

Our numbers here have increased, and now there is an attendance of twenty-six for church and Sunday school nearly every week. There is also good attendance at the evening study hour, and the Saints are learning much from this study period and are better able to sense the object and significance of Zion.

The services of sacrament are spiritual and uplifting, and the midweek prayer meetings by their nature encourage a good response on the part of those who come together to worship.

October 29 an enjoyable Halloween social was had. The usual spooky decorations were used, and games were played. Refreshments consisted of homemade pumpkin pie, doughnuts, and cider. With November 1 came the children's party.

Nearly all the services and socials have been held at the home of Brother and Sister Donald Crowell.

The members are glad to hear that Brother R. S. Budd is improving. Our prayers are for his complete recovery.

Arrangements are now under way for Christmas programs and festivities.

We send best wishes to the Saints everywhere for a happy Thanksgiving, and assure them that in this vicinity we are going forward.

ALICE CROWELL.

New Westminster, British Columbia

Tenth and London Streets

This little branch can say that it is making progress, and reports good attendance at all meetings. Pastor Pope has done much during his eighteen years of faithful service to build up a branch worthy of the church, and his efforts are being blessed.

September 9 two brothers were ordained to the priesthood, A. S. Coburn, a priest, and H. F. Morrison, a teacher.

A few weeks ago the Saints welcomed with pleasure one of our own boys, Clarence Butterfield, and his bride from Modesto, California. It is pleasant to see two such young people sail out on the sea of life, strong in the faith and with church work their objective. They have our best wishes for a long and happy life.

The newly organized orchestra is a helpful unit in the Sunday school and Religio organizations. This week the organization made its initial bow in public, assisting the Vancouver Branch in a program.

A member of New Westminster Branch is this year attending Graceland College, Walter Gerow. On the evening of his departure the members of Vancouver and New Westminster joined to give him a surprise social at the church and presented him a pen and pencil set.

On World Temperance Sunday this local was favored with the services of the Reverend R. J. McIntyre, organizing secretary for the Prohibition Association of British Columbia, who gave an appealing address, setting forth astounding facts and figures regarding our system of "government control."

Brother and Sister William Hartnell are spending a holiday in Washington. We will welcome their return.

Sister Pope is ill. Her daughters, Lillian Pope Cross, of Independence, Missouri, and Irene Rannie, of Chicago, have come home to care for her. The prayers of the branch are that Sister Pope may be restored to strength and health and to her old place among us, where she was always an inspiration to do well.

MRS. M. GEROW.

Hearne, Texas

November 15.—This branch is not progressing as fast as it could, but the members are hoping for more accomplishment in the future. Many are not as active as they could be, and we are praying that each will in the year to come be more deeply impressed with his responsibility in the Lord's work.

Elder J. W. A. Bailey, of Independence, Missouri, held services here each night for two weeks. Because of sickness and bad weather, attendance was not so good as it might have been, but much knowledge was gained from the Book of Mormon lectures. Elder Bailey left here to go to New Baden, where he expects to continue his work. This branch looks forward to another visit from him.

RUTH NUNLEY.

Oshoto, Wyoming

The Saints of Oshoto meet every Sunday for Sunday school at 10.30 and preaching at 11.30.

October 12 two cars went to Spearfish and met with the members. We were sorry not to have Apostle J. F. Garver present, but Elder C. J. Smith delivered a fine sermon, and every member felt paid for the trip. Some were eight hours on the road to this meeting and know from experience that Wyoming mud gets very heavy when the rain continues.

The Saints assembled for a business meeting October 15.

The following day Brother and Sister Roy Truman, from Belle Fourche, brought Elder C. J. Smith to preach for us. Everyone was thankful to have the elders call, and hopes that they will continue to remember our needs.

Brother Horace Hartshorn was the speaker October 19, Decision Day.

On November 2 Brother Fayette Cole spoke, and a good sacramental service was had, the Lord blessing us with his Spirit.

A community church at New Haven was dedicated November 9. Some of the Saints here helped to build the church. A Baptist and a Christian minister and Brother Cousins, our pastor, helped in the dedicatory service, and a peaceful and friendly feeling marked the program.

November 11 the Women's Department met for an all-day session with Sister Tom Grey. Eight women were present. This is the best meeting we have ever had. Plans were made for a bazaar, and the winter work was blocked out. Unity marked this meeting. We hope to accomplish much.

Brother and Sister Vaughn McElroy are happy over the arrival of a little son who will answer to the name, William Vaughn.

MRS. W. H. MCELROY.

The Early Church on the Western Coast

From an article by J. H. Yager in the Herald for November 5, 1930, I quote: "I marvel at the courage and missionary zeal of such men as K. Hanks, Noah Rogers, B. F. Grouard, and Addison Pratt, who, in the year 1843, left loved ones behind in America as they sailed from New York to become the pioneers in this South Sea Mission."

Among the passengers on that ship were Seth S. Lincoln and wife, and my father and mother, the two latter traveling for my father's health. Father was a Baptist preacher. Learning that there were Latter Day Saint missionaries aboard, he thought it was his duty to convert them and show them their errors. His efforts in that direction were not a success, for before they reached their destination they converted him; and when they reached Tahiti, my father and mother were the first persons baptized. When they had baptized enough members to organize a branch, my father was made the first president. He and mother remained there until 1847, when they and their two sons came to San Francisco, then called Yerba Buena. Here they found a branch of the church which had sailed from New York in 1846 on the ship Brooklyn under the leadership of Samuel Brannan. There were about one hundred and fifty members. They united with this branch, and my father was made president. How long he served in that office I do not know, but from an old branch record I have copied the following: "Elizabeth Pool was baptized in San Francisco Bay November 3, 1847, by Seth S. Lincoln."

Some years later he and mother took a trip to their old home in Massachusetts, where I was born. On their return trip father died on board the steamship Cortez as they were coming through the Golden Gate into San Francisco Harbor, December 5, 1852. GEORGE S. LINCOLN.

San Francisco, California

Little Brown Church, Caselli and Danvers

Rally Day was a wonderful time for this branch. Ninety-eight were present at the morning services. Edmund C. Burdick, of Sacramento, was here and spoke on the stewardship plan, which plainly gave our duty in regard to Zion's principles. A splendid program occupied the morning, there being solos and readings.

At night Elder John W. Rushton came from Oakland and spoke.

The Department of Women is busily preparing for its annual bazaar in an endeavor to help pay off the indebtedness on the church building. October 23 the women gave a home-made ravioli dinner.

Sacramental service was well attended in October, and the gifts of the Spirit were given. The Saints were told that there is no other organization on the face of the earth like this one, and that the Lord is with us to comfort and lead. We were told to rejoice in the gospel.

October 12 Brother G. P. Levitt was again here to instruct the members concerning the gospel.

Sister Lou Rood has been elected president of the Happy Hour Club. She is an active worker, and we expect good from her efforts.

The boys are practicing basket ball, hoping to win a number of games from neighboring branches.

The music class, under the direction of Sister Ruth Evans, is practicing for a concert, to be given before the end of the year.

Brother R. S. Salyards was here October 16 and spoke morning and evening. He is from Independence and is spending a few weeks in this vicinity.

Brother Shippy and family have returned from Los Angeles and intend to remain in San Francisco if conditions permit. MARDEL HOLDEN.

Skiatook, Oklahoma

Skiatook Branch is progressing under the leadership of T. P. Greenwood, the only member of the priesthood living here. Brother T. G. Williams, teacher, lives at Walco, thirteen miles north of Skiatook, and works in the oil field. He does not often get to meet with the Saints. We are praying that our priesthood quorum may be filled.

Attendance and interest are commendable. The prayer services are remarkable, almost one hundred per cent taking part in prayer or testimony.

Skiatook's membership is eighty-five, but many are scattered over the country, living at Nelogany, Bartlesville, Hominy, and some have moved away and can not be located on our records. When the records are considered locally, we have about forty members.

The branch is endeavoring to live up to the program of the church. We think it will not be long until we are working under the new plan of the church school. We are studying everything put out by the church along this line, so that we may act intelligently when the change is made. The Sunday school is supervised by Loyd Carter. This work is new to him, but he does well.

Promotion Day and the installation of officers aroused much interest. The children promoted were provided with graduating gowns and caps, and the pastor presented each a certificate. The program was reverently given, there being talks, readings, and music. Officers and teachers, who were seated on the stage, stood while the pastor gave the charge of responsibility to them and offered a special prayer of blessing upon them. Then he turned to the congregation and charged the parents and members concerning their responsibility and duty in behalf of the children of the school.

The Department of Women, under the supervision of Sister Earl Greenwood, is active. The members serve school lunches to the children each school day. We meet each Thursday at 9.30 and have a session of prayer. The day is spent in quilting, piecing quilt blocks, or canning fruit, which is stored in the cellar for dinners or banquets. Most of the fruits and vegetables are donated by the sisters. Once a month a bake sale is held at one of the grocery stores. Occasionally there come calls for special baking or sewing. The department has held a flower sale, bazaars, chicken dinners, and in other ways has helped to meet and solve the financial problems of the local. It serves as the financial arm of the branch. The third Thursday of the month is set aside as missionary day; the sisters seek to get neighbors and friends out. Church doctrine is discussed, and we always try to have a program of talks. We are studying the Doctrine and Covenants and lectures of Doctor Teel from the Herald. Some nonmembers are interested.

It is hoped that a series of meetings will be held here this winter. Brother and Sister S. W. Simmons were here a few days early in October, and his sermons were most encouraging.

September 28 Sister Leona Wheeler came to visit Brother and Sister T. P. Greenwood. Sister Wheeler is from Washington. She has been active in church work in Everett and Seattle. She found employment here and is active in church work among the young people. She is also helping in the musical department, the musicians meeting on Thursday evenings for orchestral work and on Friday evening for song service.

The branch met in the church basement for a Halloween social which was successful with pranks, stunts, and merriment. Sisters Leona Wheeler and Georganna Vickery had charge of the entertainment.

A copper coin of 1830, found by Cecil Pierson, son of Brother Everett Pierson, Freeland, Michigan, has been sent in by Elder J. W. Peterson to the Graphic Arts Bureau, to be turned over to the church museum. The bureau is glad to receive all contributions of historic value.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

November 23 to 30 special missionary services are being conducted in Saskatoon, Elder Ward L. Christy speaking each evening.

October 1 the chapel was the scene of a pretty wedding when two active young people in this branch, Ethel Cruce and Henry Piedt, were married by Brother Christy. Preceding the wedding ceremony, Sister Sidney Taylor sang, "O promise me." The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by Sister Steves. The bride was given in marriage by her father and was attended by Opal Cruce, bridesmaid, and Eileen Diggle and Pauline Cruce, flower girls. Little Earl Cruce and Orval Pettet were ring bearers. Frank Piedt was groomsman, and Clifford and Dan Moran ushers. As the bridal party left the beautifully decorated chapel, "Mendelssohn's wedding march" was played. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Brother and Sister M. G. Beckman. Brother and Sister Piedt are making their home here. A consecration service was held at the home of the newly wedded couple a few days after their marriage.

The various groups are intensely interested in class work, under the supervision of Sister Christy, director of Religious Education, and the membership is enthusiastic over the church school.

Last month the adult group enjoyed an evening study of parent problems, followed by a social hour. Refreshments were served. Not to be outdone, the young people arranged a Halloween party at the home of Brother and Sister Henry Piedt, where ghosts and witches were much in evidence. The children's department also spent a hilarious time from four o'clock to 6.30. After playing a group of Halloween games, twenty-seven children sat down to a gayly decorated table to eat sandwiches, cat cookies, apples, and pop corn, after which Brother Christy, dressed as an old witch, dispensed homemade candy.

A fowl supper was held in the basement of the church November 7, and a good sum was realized to supplement the radio fund. About forty per cent of those present were non-members. A program of instrumental and vocal music, tableaux, and pageants was enjoyed. The evening was voted a huge success.

Several of our members have been recently bereaved. Sister Baker lost by death her sister, Mrs. Archibald, who was active in public work and served as an overseas nurse. Brother and Sister Howard Loucks and Brother and Sister Hurley are mourning the loss of their father, and Brother and Sister Weingarten have lately lost their grandchild, Billie McCammon.

LOTTIE CLARKE DIGGLE.

Elkhart, Indiana

Sunday, November 16, was the date announced for our reply to lectures on Mormonism given in two churches in Elkhart, by Mrs. Lulu Shepherd, employed by the National Reform Association. We occupied Moose Hall at the two o'clock hour of a busy day.

The Sunday school conducted a profitable session at 2245 Morton Avenue at ten o'clock that morning, and I preached on "The harvest—the end of the world."

The group of members in Elkhart had set cards of announcement in the windows of many business establishments as well as residential sections of the city, had written special invitations to various points, and at two o'clock in the afternoon a crowd was in evidence at Moose Hall. Mrs. Shepherd had said some colorful things about Utah Mormonism and placed the entire responsibility on Joseph Smith, the Martyr. She perpetuated the ecclesiastical chain without dropping a single link from Palmyra, New York, to Salt Lake City, Utah. I spent almost two hours in the reply. The general publicity department of the church had sent a large assortment of tracts, and these were distributed at the entrance of the hall. In replying to Mrs. Shepherd, I used the Bible,

Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, Spalding's Romance, Congressional Reports, Senatorial Investigation in the Reed-Smoot Case, and other books and documents containing well-authenticated matter. Sister Wilsey mailed Address to the Clergy to the pastors of the city churches.

Thus are we trying to combat the work of Mrs. Shepherd. Such religious controversies many times develop the child of God in bravery and courage, giving him a deeper understanding of and appreciation for the truth he represents. From four to six persons have expressed a desire to be baptized before the holidays.

People from Mishawaka, Gary, South Bend, Niles, and other points attended to hear the reply to Mrs. Shepherd. Professor Mays and Sister Coonfare, of Mishawaka, led the congregational music with violin and piano. It was a great meeting.

The Elkhart Truth in its editorial column came over to our side before we replied to Mrs. Shepherd's lectures, printing an article of considerable length. This paper has a wide circulation in Michigan and Indiana, and we think the stand it has taken has done much good.

Columbus, Ohio

First Branch, Tompkins and Medary Avenues

The little building which First Branch calls home has been a very busy place for the past six weeks. Few indeed are the times when no lights gleam from this church on the hill. It is hoped that this will continue, and that still more activities will throw open our doors.

Sermons during this time have been varied as the speakers themselves, and all of them conducive to the upbuilding and progress of the church. From Second Branch we have been pleased to have present Brother Emmet Madden and Brother J. E. Matthews. Besides our own speakers we have two who recently made their debut as teachers, Brother Don Gabriel, and Brother Nathan Weate, for many years branch chorister.

The Sunday School Department is well attended and growing in spite of the fact that many of the older and faithful members are devoting their time to the newly organized mission in the West End of Columbus.

Religio, too, is offering interesting as well as educational features and stimulating enthusiasm in the development of talent.

The new dramatic society has adopted the appropriate nomen, L. D. S. Players. They are working hard and hope soon to present something worth while.

The scout troop is gaining popularity under the leadership of Brother Paul Vail. Splendid cooperation among the boys and those who are qualifying for leadership has been the keynote of this progress. We know they will soon rank with the finest troops of the city.

It is hoped that united effort and well-directed zeal will see us through 1930 and on to new fields of attainment.

MRS. GLADYS H. CARTER.

Saint Louis, Missouri

Grand Boulevard and Carter Avenue

November 21.—The Sunday morning and evening services have been increasing in number present, and Pastor C. A. Edstrom has been blessed in delivering sermons.

A manufacturers' dinner and bazaar were had the first Friday in November.

The Women's Department has been doing well. The members finished one quilt donated by a sister, for the bazaar. Now they are at work on another. This group has splendid programs. This week they are having a pound party for the pastor and his wife.

November 23 will be gift Sunday, and those who have been blessed with plenty during the past year are asked to remember the less fortunate ones.

The district conference will convene here November 29 and 30.

Brother Bell is conducting a class on Thursday evening in the rudiments of music.

There is also a training class every Wednesday evening from 6.30 to 7.55, two subjects being presented: "The Book of Mormon," by G. S. Trowbridge, and "The teaching task of the church," by Carl Edstrom. MRS. ALICE GRIMES.

Delta, Colorado

Under the direction of N. L. Booker and wife, Delta Branch is making progress.

During the early part of September Apostle E. J. Gleazer visited Western Colorado District, making a few days' stay at Delta. The night of September 8 he called a special meeting of the Saints to better organize the branch. At this time he declared Montrose Branch disorganized and requested that Brother C. L. Olson be notified to enroll its members with Delta Branch. An election of officers then followed. N. L. Booker was elected branch president; church school supervisor, Sister Olive Hubbard; supervisor of Religious Education, Sister N. L. Booker; music director, Lilah Harshman; treasurer, Lewis Park; clerk, Jewell Harshman. Under these workers the branch moves onward.

We realize God's loving-kindness in the location with us of Brother and Sister Booker. The Saints are in need of their help and counsel.

The church school plan of continuous services is carried out. Special musical numbers, readings, and other exercises are provided for each Sunday.

The last Sunday in October Brother Booker held a dedication service, dedicating first the officers and teachers, and second the entire membership to pledge themselves to do their best in church work. This was a beautiful ceremony, one blessed with an outpouring of God's Spirit.

Sacramental services are well attended, there being a number of Montrose members present. The fact is that Delta Branch has a large attendance every Sunday.

Brother Booker has for a number of weeks spent long hours remodeling the church home. At present the upstairs is in good condition, with kalsomined walls, one partition torn out making a double room curtained off for two classes; plenty of seats, an organ, and a radiator, so that the rooms may be warmed from the stove downstairs. We plan soon to install a new stove. A new flue has been built, and Brother Booker hopes to make the two rooms downstairs into one, so that we may have more space.

The young people held a Halloween party, charging admission and five cents to go through "death valley." The sum they collected was used to make ready their upstairs classrooms.

The theme for the services during the month of November has been and will continue to be "Thanksgiving." This is carried out in scripture reading, recitations, and songs. A Thanksgiving program and supper are planned for Thanksgiving eve. Elder Booker, much to our regret, will not be with us at this time. He plans to visit Monte Vista Saints for a few weeks, leaving Delta about November 20. During his absence Brother Albert Rose will be in charge of local activities. JEWELL HARSHMAN.

Dow City, Iowa

Dow City Branch has been called upon to sustain a great loss in the death of its president, J. L. Butterworth, who passed away November 12, 1930, following an operation in an Omaha hospital. He had suffered from physical ills for some time. Brother Butterworth was shepherd of this flock for a number of years, and his help is greatly missed. He was faithful to his charge and a father to all. Young and old went to him for advice.

Mallard, Iowa

Brother and Sister Benjamin Fish attended the Harvest Festival at Independence. Robert Fish returned to his home in Independence after husking corn with his brothers for three weeks. He told friends here that the longer they live in Missouri the better they like it.

We were fortunate to have three district officers here October 18 and 19, Gerald Gunsolley, president; Brother Adams, district bishop; and L. G. Holloway, missionary. Brother Gunsolley explained the new program in regard to church school, and we think it will be a big help to our work here. We want soon to put it into effect. Brother Adams discussed his line of work, and we were disappointed to learn that so few in this district are paying tithing. We hope that the economic condition of many will improve and that all will obey the financial law of the church. We are eager to see more missionaries in the fields and their families taken care of as they should be.

Brothers Gunsolley and Adams left for home after the afternoon meeting on Sunday, but Brother Holloway remained two weeks, holding a series of meetings. A good number of nonmembers attended the services, and although no one was baptized we feel that some were interested.

November 1 a surprise party was held at the Benjamin Fish home in honor of Brother Holloway. The evening passed with the playing of games, visiting, and eating lunch. A purse was presented Brother Holloway by the branch in appreciation of his services.

Violet Hahn attended home-coming at Graceland. She reports a fine time meeting with old friends.

MRS. FRED HAHN.

Nauvoo District Conference

Nauvoo district conference was held in Ottumwa, Iowa, November 15 and 16. District President F. T. Mussell could not be present but was represented by his two counselors, A. M. Chase and A. L. Sanford. Brother Sanford was able, however, to stay only until after the business session on Saturday. Bishop Charles Fry and Pastor F. C. Bevan, of Ottumwa, were present.

The conference opened Saturday morning at ten o'clock with a prayer service in charge of Brothers Fry and Chase. A fine spirit was felt during this hour.

At eleven o'clock there was a round table talk on problems of the church school. And at two in the afternoon the business session was held, including the election of officers for 1931. F. T. Mussell was reelected district president, and given power to choose his counselors; W. Gunn, of Fort Madison, was reelected district secretary; F. Henry Broman, of Burlington, was reelected treasurer. The choice of directors for the various phases of work in the Religious Education Department was left in the hands of the district president.

The next conference will be held in Burlington in June, 1931. The bishop's report showed that the district has a little over eight hundred dollars more to raise in tithing and offerings to reach its quota of seven thousand dollars for 1930.

Brother Chase gave an illustrated lecture on Saturday evening.

Priesthood meeting began Sunday morning at eight o'clock, and was well attended. Church school at 9.30 was in charge of local officers. At eleven o'clock Brother Chase was the speaker. Music was furnished by the Ottumwa Choir at these services, and there were violin numbers by Harold Fry, of Ottumwa.

Social service came at two in the afternoon, and at 3.30 a play, "The Challenge of the Cross," was presented by members of the Burlington congregation. This was preceded by a sermon by Ottumwa's pastor.

In the evening Bishop Charles Fry brought a forceful message on sin and its results to the congregation.

Meals were provided on Sunday in the basement of the church by the Women's Club, of Ottumwa.

Attendance at the conference was very good considering the weather. And appreciation for the services was expressed by all who were present.

Webb City, Missouri

Oronogo and Second Streets

Several months ago this branch voted to try out the new church school plan for study and worship. It was immediately put into operation and is proving very acceptable. Everyone is well pleased with it. We hope that all branches which have not yet tried it will do so. Our service opens at 9.30 and closes at 11.30, two hours of church school on Sunday morning.

Rally Day was marked by special meetings, and Elder Lee Quick of the missionary force of this district was here to deliver two sermons.

On November 9 in the evening, in keeping with the approach of Armistice Day, the choir sang several patriotic hymns, and the church's service flag, with thirteen stars, including one gold star, was on display. A reading, "Just at the break of day," a war poem, was given by Mrs. A. L. Newton. Elder Ira Waldron, who served in the A. E. F., overseas, told of his war experiences, his talk being a description of the Saint Mihiel offensive. Brother Waldron is now pastor of this branch.

Sister Frank Stokes, who was ill for some time, has about recovered, and her friends are happy to see her back in church work.

Church school study hour is held every Thursday night. The young people's division has for a teacher Frank McDonald of Joplin, Missouri, the district president. The adult division has been studying the "Church," Ira Waldron teacher.

F. L. FREEMAN.

Dunlap, Iowa

October 9 three girls of primary and junior age were baptized in the font at Woodbine by Elvin Baughman, and the following Sunday a confirmation service was held, Elders F. A. Fry, D. A. Holcomb, and Elvin Baughman confirming the new members. A group of older girls sang beautifully, and six children were blessed. An afflicted sister received administration. Elder Fry, in his remarks, called attention to the fact that three of the four ordinances, for which the laying on of hands is authorized of God, had been brought before the people in this service. Sixty-three were present to witness the ceremonies, some being nonmembers.

The members of this group need a church building. We meet as yet in a private home.

Two families from Gallands Grove have recently been added to this congregation. The greater part of this mission at one time belonged to that historical branch, and many memories of that place are cherished by those who are now laboring to build up the work where, at the present time, the field seems more fertile. Conditions are such that this branch is now inactive. Many of the Saints have moved to other localities. The work that has been accomplished here in past years has gained the respect of the whole church. Gallands Grove Branch has given much talent and missionary ability to the latter-day cause.

We are yet studying F. M. McDowell's outlines, and feel that we are understanding better the new plan of Religious Education.

A peaceful sacramental service was enjoyed November 2.

A request for fasting and prayer in behalf of an afflicted one was observed.

Elder Fred A. Fry spoke at the evening service.

Independence

Stone Church

"Your financial responsibility to the church" was the subject of President Frederick M. Smith's sermon at the eleven o'clock service. In his analysis of the present "hard times," President Smith pointed to lack of confidence as one of the principal factors. There is plenty of money in the country, but it is not circulating normally, he said. Those who have been improvident have been subject to the most distress. He recommended the budgeting of individual and family incomes as of great value for stability and economy. The ideal of the Presiding Bishop toward having "Every member a tithe-payer," was stressed as a means of enlisting everyone to help with the task of the church.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Evan A. Fry, sang two anthems: "God is love," by Shelley, Albert Brackenburg taking the bass solo; and "Fear not, O Israel," by Spicker, with a quartet composed of Edward Brackenburg, Ina Hattey, Elizabeth Okerlind, and Albert Brackenburg. "Cavatina," by Raff, was played by Irving Jenkins, cellist, George Miller, pianist, and Robert Miller, organist. Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the service, and was assisted by Elder S. A. Burgess.

A service of thanksgiving concluded for the junior young people, who meet in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church, a month of the theme, "Adventuring with Christ in gratitude." A thanksgiving story was told by La Von Budd, and short talks on "How we may show our gratitude" were made by four boys and girls, Ardyce Brown, Willie Russell, Harold Brower, and Maxine Budd. The girls' chorus sang "My God, I thank thee, who hast made," by Maker, and Dorothy Fairbanks and Muriel Bain sang "A little prayer," by Preston, Wilma Ruth Luff accompanying at the piano. The piano offertory and music for congregational singing was by Joy Harder. Briefly the pastor summarized the month's lessons on gratitude and read the story of Christ healing the ten lepers, Luke 17:11-19. Assisting in the stand were Brothers Roy McNeil and Howard Cook.

To conclude his series of four Book of Mormon lectures, Elder C. Ed. Miller on Sunday night presented outstanding criticisms made of the book and his own clear-cut, convincing answers. Stereopticon pictures brought out the points and proofs of his arguments, and his text was one used throughout the series, Isaiah 18:1. A large congregation of Book of Mormon students and their friends filled the church and followed the lead of Elder J. F. Sheehy in congregational singing. Elder S. O. Smith assisted Brother Sheehy in the stand.

President F. M. McDowell was the speaker at the special Thanksgiving service last Thursday morning at 9.30, his subject, "The first Thanksgiving." He made an appeal for the renewal and cultivation today of the courage and devotion which moved the early American pioneers.

Pastor John F. Sheehy presided and read a scripture lesson of praise and thanksgiving. Patriarch U. W. Greene offered the Thanksgiving prayer. Evan A. Fry played organ music for the service. The congregation participated in a period of meditation and in the singing of appropriate hymns.

Second Church

Few men who come to Second Church are more greatly appreciated than Elder R. D. Weaver. November 23 Brother Weaver was at his best when he addressed the congregation on "The background of the years." Sunday school was unusually well attended, as was also the eleven o'clock service.

The groups of Second Church met in a union prayer meeting at the church on Wednesday. The gathering was blessed with a fine thanksgiving spirit, Brothers J. M. Robinson and A. K. Dillee in charge.

The annual Thanksgiving service was held Thursday morning at 9.30. Elder T. A. Beck was in charge, and his wife, Sister Sunshine Beck, played the organ. Elder G. G. Lewis delivered a sermon, and music was by the ladies' quartet of this district.

Bishop Albert Carmichael was the speaker last Sunday. His sermon was appreciated by the congregation. He stressed the urgent need, as he, the Bishop, plainly sees it, for aid and support of the church members. An appeal was made for everyone to give what he could of food, clothing, and money, to the church, to care for the poor this winter.

Walnut Park

The speaker of the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning was Elder R. D. Weaver, who gave a forceful sermon on the subject, "Put first things first." He urged everyone to put the Lord's work first, and especially to support the church in the present financial crisis. The choir sang the anthem, "Lead on, O King Eternal," by Marzo. There was unusually good attendance at this service.

A meeting of the priesthood of Walnut Park was held in the afternoon for the purpose of discussing the problems which they have to meet and of getting better organized to carry on their activities. Elder H. G. Barto, recently selected by Brother J. F. Sheehy to supervise the group work in Independence, was the special speaker of the afternoon.

At the evening service Elder George G. Lewis gave the discourse, on the subject, "Witnessing for and adventuring with Christ." He pointed out how all could be heroes and adventurers, even at the present time. During the song and worship service, a duet was sung by Erwin E. Moorman and Carletta Norman, and an anthem by the choir, "How beautiful upon the mountains," by Buck.

S. C. Smith, the pastor, has been ill since Thursday and was not able to be present at the Sunday services. He has been improving rapidly, however, and expects to be up and about again in a day or two.

A special Thanksgiving service was held at the church on the morning of Thanksgiving Day, beginning at 9.30. The order of the service was as follows: Piano prelude, scripture reading, song by the congregation, invocation, reading of the President's Thanksgiving Proclamation, congregational singing of "Come, ye thankful people, come"; talk by Pastor S. C. Smith on "The first Thanksgiving"; a vocal quartet, "The breaking waves dashed high"; a period of meditation followed by a prayer of thanksgiving; singing of "America" by the congregation, and closing with a reading of the Mosaic benediction as found in the sixth chapter of the Book of Numbers. This service was greatly appreciated.

Persia, Iowa

Since Persia Branch last reported there has been considerable ministerial work here. Elder L. G. Holloway began a series October 5. Those who are acquainted with this worker know that his services were worth while. Everyone profited from the lessons taught from the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Doctrine and Covenants. Clearly, simply, and forcefully he told the people the answer to the question: What must I do to be saved?

Judging from attendance during the two weeks of services, our brother gave general satisfaction. He left a good impression in this community, and further help from him will be much appreciated.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

There has been a marked increase in attendance and punctuality since the beginning of the church school attendance-and-new-member contest between the three divisions. The members help their division by (1) being present every Sunday, one point; (2) being on time, one point; (3) bringing new members to enjoy the class studies, fifteen points. Special points are also awarded for visitors.

The session of the church school last Sunday morning from 9.45 to eleven o'clock was devoted to thanksgiving exercises and observances. Preluding the morning's special activities, there was organ music, hymn singing, and the invocation. The primaries observed the order of the day with music and readings and songs, and the adults listened to music from the organ, choir, and soloist, Brother Eugene Christy.

Congregational singing in the evening was directed by Brother Eugene Christy, and the octet from the choir sang. Patriarch F. A. Smith was guest speaker.

The stake O. B. K. basket ball league matches began Tuesday evening at the Woodland gymnasium, Eighth and Woodland. Six Latter Day Saint teams entered this year. On Tuesday, Central played Gladstone; Chelsea tussled with Bennington; and Mount Washington played Fourth Church. Bill Ely, Central coach, has a fast team.

The young people and adults are reserving New Year's Eve for a big church party and vesper service.

Gladstone Church

Attendance at the Sunday services is increasing. November 23 the scripture reading at the church school was taken from 2 Thessalonians 5 by Brother A. D. Moore; and Sister Lucy Williams told the Bible story, using the life of the boy Christ for her theme.

Stake Director of Religious Education George Mesley has been meeting with the O. B. K's the past few Sunday evenings, giving interesting talks and helpful suggestions.

November 16 Bishop Skinner met with the O. B. K's and gave an interesting chalk talk, followed by Brother Burlington, of Fourth Church, who spoke to the young people on the responsibility and the promise for them in the future of the church. Brother Mesley occupied at the 7.30 preaching hour.

The O. B. K's had an old-fashioned taffy pull at the home of Robert and Dorothy Parsons, November 25, and a rabbit supper at Central Church December 1.

Holden Stake

Lees Summit

Saints of this branch enjoyed a good thanksgiving sermon on Sunday morning by Elder H. L. Barto, of Independence, Missouri.

The women's auxiliary met with Sister J. T. Smith on Thursday to hold an all-day meeting. There was an interesting lesson on "Religion in the home." The women are making a quilt for the Sanitarium.

A business meeting and social time were held at the home of Sister Dorothy Maddux November 18.

A thanksgiving program was held Wednesday evening, November 26 at the church.

The young people are planning a Christmas play.

Atherton

November 16 the Holden stake presidency, high council, and bishopric visited Atherton. Some arrived early enough for the Sunday school, and all were present for the preaching service at eleven o'clock. When Brother McWethy, of the presidency, preached, he used as his subject, "What is the truth of the matter?" and told us to ask this question and

Pastoral

To the Saints of Manitoba; Greetings: There are many families of church members living in Manitoba, isolated from attending church services. Many do not even have the church papers, to read from week to week the good news of the gospel and the great work the Lord is doing in this "hastening time." But through the Herald I hope to communicate with many who are scattered throughout this district. I have been appointed to labor in missionary and pastoral work here, spending most of my time in Winnipeg. Here we have a fairly good church building at 247 Kensington Street, Saint James, the western part of the city. This is located on Portage Avenue street car line going west from the center of the city. We have services each Sunday morning at ten and eleven o'clock, also in the evening at seven. There are other meetings during the week. We would be much pleased to have all Saints who have opportunity to meet with us, to make themselves known. For further information call Wellington Wilson, Beverley Block, Notre Dame Avenue; telephone 88545. The general church is moving forward in missionary and other work looking to the establishment of Zion. The trying times through which we are passing tell us that there are great events in the not far distant future. Uncertainty is on every hand; great men of the world are perplexed concerning what is to come from year to year. I am wondering how many of the Saints of Manitoba would like to have part in the great work of the Lord in building Zion. Are you taking the official church paper, the Saints' Herald, which comes each week laden with good news? Its price is two dollars a year. Or do you take the missionary paper, Zion's Ensign, a very interesting weekly periodical at only one dollar a year? These papers are filled with good sermons, articles, and letters which are especially attractive to members who are unable to attend meetings. You can send your subscription either direct to the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, or to my address as given below. Also, fellow Saints, have you felt the necessity of paying your tithing this year? Even though the amount you feel able to pay seems small, it is important in the Lord's sight. And in time to come you will be glad that you have even in small part assisted the Lord in the great latter-day work.—Leonard Houghton, 618 Toronto Street, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada.

Conference Notices

Southwestern Kansas district conference will meet with Wichita Branch Saturday and Sunday, December 13 and 14.

seek its answer in any rumor we wished to give consideration.

These brothers met after church and were addressed by Bishop J. A. Koehler on "Stewardship," following which a tour of the stewardship properties was made. In the afternoon a large delegation of Walnut Park Saints came to Atherton and met in the new church with Elder Amos E. Allen, who explained stewardship and the program as it is being worked out at Atherton. After this meeting, they, too, toured the farms.

Bishop A. Carmichael recently spent a day at Atherton, preaching morning and evening, explaining the principles of stewardship. In the afternoon he met the stewards.

Last Sunday Bishop J. A. Koehler preached in the morning on the theme, "The qualifications necessary to become a steward." In the evening Brother C. V. Hopkins, a member of the stake high council, preached an optimistic sermon.

The young people recently gave a play portraying a helpful lesson. Sister L. L. Bogue had this in charge. A glee club has been organized by our young people, and Sister Myron Holman has charge. Much interest is shown.

Was baptized there by J. C. Foss nearly sixty years ago. She moved to Jonesport and married Joshua S. Walker and was one of the corner stones of the church work in Eastern Maine, devoting her life to the cause of the gospel. Her husband died in 1907. In 1923 she went to Little Deer Isle and in August, 1924, married Elder J. J. Billings. He preceded her to the future home by a few years. She leaves a brother, James Chase, of Alameda, California, and a sister, Lucy Ober, of East Machias, Maine. The funeral service was held at Jonesport before a large congregation of friends. The sermon was by Newman M. Wilson, November 2, 1930.

Who Shall Dwell?

As is well known, a move has been made to meet present emergencies by increasing the number of Saints who are doing their duties in a financial way. Too few have been carrying the burdens. It is felt by general as well as local officers that to awaken every member to a full sense of his duty to the church, and stimulate him to a compliance with the duties in the line of tithes, offerings, surplus, and stewardships, will be to improve the spiritual condition of that member. And this is logical. Hence, any move to establish contact with all church members, to ascertain attitude, willingness, and ability to comply fully with duty, is a distinct move towards general betterment of the church.

In this light, it is pleasing to note a portion of a report made to the Presidency from the Lamoni Stake. A call to the priesthood resulted in a well-attended meeting in which the whole situation was freely discussed, was followed by the perfecting of an organization by means of which a "personal canvass" of the entire stake was to be made, the object in view being to have in hand soon "data concerning every member of the stake, concerning abilities and attitude." And the report significantly adds:

"In Lamoni this has not been a sensational but an educational movement. The goal of the stake workers is towards a general understanding of the church's financial affairs and the creation of a disposition to share responsibility. Certainly more of this aspect of the church's program has been taught during the last three weeks than in any preceding equivalent time."

It is easy to predict that such a program will result in better understanding and better spirituality, with the inevitable result of greater happiness because of duty being more nearly discharged in full.

In the midst of trying times, when the forces of the hastening time are at work, it is well to ask, as did David of old (Psalm 15):

Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?

He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart.

He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor.

In whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoreth them that fear the Lord. He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not.

He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be moved.

"Messiah" on Columbia Chain

Saints and their friends everywhere will receive with joy the news that Handel's famous oratorio, "The Messiah," will this year be presented to the radio world by the choir in Independence over the network of the Columbia Broadcasting System. For the first time this rendition will thus be broadcast with facilities that will enable listeners in all parts of the United States and neighboring countries to tune it in without difficulty. Some forty or more stations associated with the Columbia system will be receiving and re-broadcasting the program sent out from the studios of K M B C in Kansas City.

This special broadcast will occur in place of the "Cathedral Hour" program, 1 to 2 p. m. (central standard time), Sunday, December 21. The oratorio will be sung by a chorus of 100 voices selected from the Independence Messiah Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, which will give its thirteenth annual rendition at the Stone Church in Independence the evening of the same day.

Soloists will be: George Anway, tenor; Mrs. George Cowden, soprano; Mrs. Raymond Havens, contralto; and Arthur Oakman, bass.

The broadcasting of "The Messiah" over the Columbia system is being made possible through the courtesy of The Midland Broadcasting Company, operators of Radio Station K M B C. It has been suggested that the Saints gather in groups where radios are available to listen in for this program, or arrange special services in the churches where sets may be installed especially for the reception of this oratorio broadcast.

On Observing Birthdays

When a person has a birthday, it is the privilege of his friends to help him observe the day with their presence and gifts. These are marks of esteem, appreciation, and love.

It is now almost nineteen hundred and thirty years since that Holy Babe of Bethlehem lay in a manger, the long-promised Messiah. About him knelt the shepherds who on the hillside of Judea had just witnessed a marvelous thing. To the humble birthplace came wise men from the east. When they saw the Child and his mother, Holy Writ tells the story, they fell down and worshiped him, and then they opened their treasures and presented to him gifts of gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

On Christmas we will observe once more the natal day of our Savior. How are we planning to make this event this year an outstanding experience in our lives? In another issue of the Herald, Sister Lizzie A. Vincent, of Sandwich, Illinois, writes a splendid answer to this question in a letter entitled "Whose birthday are you celebrating?" Her idea is worthy our most thoughtful consideration.

Bishop May Passes

In the passing of Bishop Roderick May on December 3 at the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, there goes out into the Great Beyond another of the stalwart group who in the early eighties of the last century planted the work of the Reorganized Church in Independence, and who in the midst of unfavorable conditions carried on with courage and zeal. Their fine devotion has made it easier for those who came later to build on the foundations they laid.

Thus one by one those of the older generation lay down the burdens of life, and we must take up the tasks where they left off. It was quite appropriate that Brother Joseph Luff should be called upon to speak at the obsequies, for these two men had labored shoulder to shoulder in the past, and both were prominent in the work of bringing to completion the "Stone Church" in which the services were held. While Brother Luff presented his analysis of the Christian's hope, my mind was very busy as I gratefully considered the works of those who have preceded us. I could only hope and pray that we who are now bearing heavy burdens may be able to build so well that our successors may be assisted to carry the work forward, as we were assisted by Brother May and his associates. And may we always be able to show as unswerving devotion and fine zeal as they have shown. For over fifty years of his life he exercised the functions of the priesthood, and was always ready to make any sacrifice within his power for the cause. May we who follow be as faithful and as ready to sacrifice.

The Birth of the King

The wise men who came from the east sought Jesus, asking:

"Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him."

Jesus, however, was to be more than the king of a small nation of people. His was a spiritual, not an earthly kingship. When Pilate asked him, "Art thou the King of the Jews?" Jesus answered:

"My kingdom is not of this world: . . . To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth."

But it was only the disciples who fully understood the spiritual significance of the place of the Christ in the kingdom of heaven. This is best expressed in the language of Peter who, in response to a question, answered: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

Christ came as the Savior, not alone of the Jews, but of all men. This the apostles and ministry of Judea learned through Peter's experience at Joppa. When Peter came up to Jerusalem, they charged him with associating with the Gentiles and taking to them the word of God. Then Peter related to them the vision given him and his experience with the Gentiles, concluding his story with these words: "And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them, as on us at the beginning. Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost. Forasmuch then as God gave them the like gift as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ; what was I, that I could withstand God?"

And the scripture version goes on to record: "When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying, Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life."

Jesus' spiritual kingship was, from the beginning, intended to comprehend the whole world. His message was universal in its application, his truth everlasting. We are told this in the following language by a writer who loved the Lord: "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

The divine and world-wide mission of the Savior was sensed by John in Bethabara beyond Jordan where he was baptizing. Looking up he saw Jesus coming to him, and he said, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."

Why the Church Must Teach

A Task Which Can Not Be Shifted

By F. M. McDowell

Of all the institutions of society, there are three which are fundamentally responsible for the personal character of its citizenship. These are, of course, the home, the church, and the school.

On a number of occasions when the writer has outlined the position taken in previous articles, namely that the church is to be held responsible for the establishment of a sound basis for personal character and social order, the question has been raised as to the place of the public school and the home in this task. On the one hand there are those who contend that the public school with its emphasis on moral and social education furnishes an adequate safeguard for character and social stability. Others, admitting that religion is essential for such a result, claim that the home is the one institution to be held responsible for its teaching.

The Public School

American schools, as other American institutions, soon broke from European traditions. The frontier life, the rapid expansion of business, and the increase in material wealth, demanded many new ideas. It is not surprising that in such an atmosphere a competitive spirit of sectarianism appeared among churches.

This, however, led to consequences which were hardly anticipated. Sectarianism led to denominational ambition, and denominational ambition led to strife and jealousy. Finally out of the travail of such conflicts emerged as the confirmed policy of America the doctrine of the separation of church and state. The result was that religion was and is practically banned from the curricula of our public schools.

We shall not here discuss the various advantages or disadvantages of this situation. The fact is that little if anything can be expected of the public schools as far as teaching religion is concerned. In some of the States, even the reading of the Bible in the public schools is prohibited by law.

The movement to emphasize moral and social education in the public school is an excellent one, already justified by its results. It is our contention, however, that a system of education, no matter how efficient, that omits religion will not be effective.

If religion is to be taught, we can not expect the public school to do it, and since religion is of paramount importance to the development of character and a stable social order, the church must teach religion.

The Modern Family

The oldest and most fundamental institution of society is the family. In olden times every function of civilization was cradled there. Practically all the activities of life were centered there. Because of the close and personal relationship of its members, and because of the unifying of all its activities and the giving and taking that was demanded, the old-time family life was in a very vital sense religious. In modern times the functions of the family have largely been usurped by church school, the community center, the Boy Scouts, etc. Too often the family has been altogether too willing to turn over its work to these agencies, which at best can not effectively take the place of the home.

The closest of relationships have always existed between a family and religion. The best assurance against broken homes is family religion. And the best means of perpetuating religion is the family. The one is essential to the other.

If the modern family could really be brought to fill its old-time functions, we might safely leave the teaching of religion to it, but how are we to rebuild the temple of home religion? How are we to develop the type of parents that will establish the religious family? How is the family to become again the source of religious inspiration? There is but one answer to these questions, and that is, the church must teach.

No Way for the Church to Escape

Let us state our conclusion in other words. In a very vital way the destiny of men and nations rests upon character. Character in turn must be undergirded by certain deep-seated convictions which go to make up what we call religion. The public school has been compelled to eliminate this very factor from its curriculum. At best we can not therefore expect it to meet this most fundamental need.

On the other hand that institution from which we have a right to expect most in the meeting of this need is in many respects failing to measure up. There are many who believe that the modern home has been weighed in the balance and found wanting. If the home is to teach religion, it must be religious. If it is to be religious, those who build it must possess that virtue.

The church can not avoid the issue. It can not and must not shirk its task. It is the one institution that is expected to put religious values first in all its considerations. The church must teach.

Spiritual Growth

By S. A. Burgess

In the time of our grandparents fifty years ago, the conventional division was in force in the schools dividing things into the mineral, the vegetable, and the animal kingdoms. The latter two were recognized as living. But later research has caused questions to arise as to the first, as the crystals of any salt are always in the same form. Some believe that indicates life, because even in the mineral kingdom the cells seem to have definite and continued form.

A story is told of one of the emperors of Germany when quite old, that he visited a school and took on his knee a little golden-haired girl. He took out of his pocket an orange and asked to what kingdom it belonged. She answered at once to the vegetable kingdom.

"Right, my dear," he said, and gave her the orange.

Then he took a 20-mark piece out of his pocket. This coin was then worth nearly five dollars in gold, and asked her to what did this belong.

"To the mineral kingdom," she replied.

"Right again!" and he handed her the coin.

Then he looked around the room and finally pointed to himself and said:

"To what kingdom do I belong?"

The child looked up at him in surprise, looked at the teacher, looked around the room. What could she say? She could not say her emperor belonged to the animal kingdom. She looked at him almost frightened, looked again around the room, looked at the teacher, and then her face broke into smiles as she turned to him and said:

"To the kingdom of heaven!"

Tears came into his eyes as he answered, "No, my dear, not yet, but I hope soon."

This brings definitely to our mind that there is a kingdom above the animal kingdom. We can trace the growth of the child, first the infant in arms, then the tot just learning to walk, next the child able to walk but needing oversight and care, some one in attendance, then the youth able to go alone. But there is a later stage when the boy perhaps is taken into his father's confidence. He has grown to manhood's estate and is able to see the world with the eyes of a man, not only self-reliant but such a man as others can depend upon.

Perhaps this is going too far, as it does not depend simply upon physical development. We should first consider the fact of the child just beginning to understand, then the child just learning to talk, its gradually unfolding intelligence. A six-year-old mind in a six-year-old body is normal; a six-year-old mind in a five-year-old body shows unusual development, but a six-year-old intelligence in a thirty-five-year-old body shows a serious deficiency.

The child mind grows, and then at a sufficient age the child goes to school and develops year by year. It is here his knowledge becomes more certain, and self-reliance develops. After school, comes continued development, in high school, and after that in college. As the mind becomes more sure of facts, it means intellectual development. As the intellect gains, we have intelligent adulthood, the 22-year-old mind in a 22-year-old body. Some may reach this point a year or two before others, some may for various reasons reach it a year or two later, but those who have closely observed will agree that graduation from college is after all a commencement, and only partly fits for practical life. There should be a continued growth of intelligence. Now the son may be put to work by his father and may later come to a time when he is taken into full confidence of the father, and knows his aims and hopes and purposes.

As there is this growth physically and mentally, so there is need also for a spiritual growth. When Nicodemus came to Jesus, he was told he must be born again. He answered quite naturally, "How can a man be born again when he is old? Can he enter again into his mother's womb?" Can he become again an infant? The reply was, "Thou must be born again, or thou canst not enter the kingdom of God." It should be only the beginning and not the end of our spiritual life, but alas there are many who still need to be carried after years in the church. They have to be, to use an everyday expression, "babies." Their feelings are too easily hurt. They get along well as long as they are still babes in arms.

There is, at times, something to be said in favor of this condition. A song that we used to sing in Sunday school says:

"Safe in the arms of Jesus, safe on his gentle breast."

That is a splendid place for a baby, and in a certain sense there is a time when any of us may feel that need. In trouble, in time of extreme sickness or approaching dissolution, in time of very severe trial, we may hope for the everlasting arms to bear us up. Even though adults, Israel could still rejoice in that promise of the everlasting arms, Deuteronomy 33:27: "The Eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."

As there is a physical childhood, so there may be a spiritual childhood representing a second stage, a time when we feel safe only with our hand in his. We are able to walk if we have his hand or even a finger upon which to hang. At first we may grow a little tired and want to be carried. Still, when we consider how far below the divine we are and how poorly at times we seem to carry out his purposes, it may well be a comfort to feel that we can, when need be, place our hand in his, and that if we stumble and fall, he is there to help us up again and on the way.

There is a third stage, when we are willing to go with him. We feel unsafe to go alone.

"If Jesus goes with me, I will go all the way."

And then comes that stronger time of self-reliance as indicated by the song that is frequently sung near the close of General Conference when the appointments are read:

"I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
Over mountain or plain or sea;
I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord.
I'll be what you want me to be."

This feeling is also illustrated in another song:

"Call me forth to active service."

Of course we rejoice in coming home again and having the father's welcome, but we are ready to go where the Master sends and willingly do all that he desires us to do.

But there is a greater possibility before us, that of divine communion. Many times in the Scriptures we are told in various ways that we are not servants, but sons of God even as in 2 Corinthians 6: 18:

And I will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

Again in John 14 we learn that just after Jesus was taken, when he was asked why his disciples should see him and the world not, he said:

If a man love me, he will keep my words: and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

This is the height of spiritual growth, that a man should come to the stature of a man in Christ Jesus. For this purpose has he set the officers in the church, Ephesians 4: 13. John comments on that in his letter to the church:

Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.—1 John 3: 2.

This is a completion of spiritual growth, a coming to the stature of a man in Christ Jesus and becoming indeed a son or daughter of God, to be like him.

When we are spiritually very small and young, we are too self-centered and sensitive. All our thought is for ourselves. But when we are able to be about our father's business, then our horizon is enlarged; we not only realize there are others, but know that our sympathy should be first for them. Then we no longer need to be carried, but we ourselves are able to help carry and sustain others. There are blessings all along the line and wonderful evidences of God's love, but we should keep before us always the need of our development until we indeed put on the divine likeness and the full stature of Christ Jesus.

A Parable of the Father's Vineyard

By Evan Fry

From a radio sermon.

A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first, and said, Son, go work today in my vineyard. He answered and said, I will not: but afterward he repented, and went. And he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered and said, I go, sir: and went not. Whether of them twain did the will of his father? They sayeth unto him, The first.—Matthew 21: 28-31.

Not every one that sayeth unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my father which is in heaven.—Matthew 7: 21.

This pointed little parable was uttered to fill a particular need on a particular occasion. Christ used it to illustrate to the chief priests and elders of the Jews the fact that the publicans and harlots who repented and turned to do their father's will were more worthy of reward than the priests and Pharisees who openly professed to do their father's will but who ignored his precepts in their everyday lives. Under other circumstances Christ might have completed the parable as follows:

A Possible Modern Version

A certain man had five sons; and he came to the first, and said, "Son, go work today in my vineyard." He answered and said, "I will not," but afterward he repented and went. And he came to the second and said likewise. And he answered and said, "I go, sir," and went not. And he came unto the third and said, "Son, go work today in my vineyard." And the third answered and said, "I go, sir," and went to the vineyard. But during the whole day he made merry with some friends in the shade of some trees close by the vineyard, and when evening came he had accomplished nothing. Nevertheless, he came unto his father and said, "Father, I have been an obedient son, and this day have I spent in thy vineyard as thou hast commanded." Now the fourth son had also been commanded of his father that he should work that day in the vineyard, and he also had responded, "I go, sir." Forthwith he went into the vineyard, and through the long day he labored in the heat of the sun; and when evening came, behold the work of his hands was good, and the vineyard waxed lovely in his sight. And he also came and said unto his father, "Father, I have been an obedient son, and this day have I spent in thy vineyard as thou hast commanded." But the fifth son, being commanded of his father that he also should labor in the vineyard, waxed wrathful, and did rail against his father, and openly vowed that he would not so much as lift a finger to do as his father commanded. Now which of these five sons, think you, obeyed the will of his father?

We can have respect, if not always love, for three of the boys of the parable. The one who refused at first, but later repented and remedied his former error, is worthy of our sincere commendation. The boy who promised to go, and who worked sincerely and conscientiously throughout the day is worthy of substantial reward and praise from his father. The boy who rebelled and refused point blank can at least command our respect for his plainness and the frankness with which he stated his intentions and followed them out to the letter, even though we deplore his lack of respect and obedience for his father. But far worse were the two brothers who pretended to obey the father's will and then deceived him by playing traitor to themselves and to him. No reward is due them, and it is only a matter of time until their father finds out that these two sons have been deceiving him, for the fruits of the vineyard will tell the tale of neglect and abuse.

Practically every citizen of these United States could be arbitrarily placed in one of the five categories suggested by these five boys. There are the people who stubbornly refuse to have anything to do with religion. And by religion, I don't mean organized religion, the church, but the religion of good deeds and brotherly love and happiness. Some people deliberately rebel and choose a life of outlawry against God and man. It is these rebellious souls that I class with the fifth son of our parable. About the only thing we can respect about them is their lack of pretense or sham. Another class of people consists of those who have sinned grievously in refusing to follow God's commandments, but who repent in time and turn from their wickedness. It is over such that the angels of heaven rejoice. Then there are those godly souls who have made their early choice of service to their heavenly Father, and who have constantly and conscientiously and thoroughly performed the works given into their hands by that heavenly Father. But it sometimes seems that far in the majority are the other two classes—those who have professed religion and have then given it not so much as a further passing thought, and those who have professed religion, and continue to profess it periodically, but who spend their time in seeking worldly things while the work of God waits and his vineyard languishes for want of sufficient care.

The most despicable person in the world is the hypocrite. Christ's bitterest words were reserved for him, and every normal man hates him. Yet how many of us, who are normal men, are hypocrites in some degree! We have professed to believe in Christ; we have taken upon us his name; we have promised to keep his commandments. Are we always found laboring with might and main in his vineyard? Where are we going to spend today? Shall we sit with the third son in the shade and make merry while others work? Shall we forget all about the vineyard and go with the second son? Let us rather join the fourth son and labor during this day and all coming days, that the vineyard may grow and prosper; that we may be accounted worthy sons, and that the Father may be glorified and well pleased in us.

What Young People Are Doing

By E. E. Closson

The young people of the Stone Church congregation in Independence have formulated some plans for activities during the winter months that may be interesting to other groups or branches. In cooperation with their leaders, the young people between the ages of fifteen and twenty-four are furnishing a room in the Auditorium which will be used for many of the proposed activities.

Just a bare unfinished room to start with, the place is being made attractive by the addition of cretonne drapes for the windows, rugs for the rough cement floor, reading lamps, library tables, armchairs, and other pieces of furniture that lend an atmosphere of homey good cheer to all gatherings of either a formal or informal nature.

A piano has been secured to be used indefinitely. One family loaned the young people a fine four-sectional bookcase, and an effort will be made to fill it with good books by having each member bring one or two from his own library. A heavy oak table and armchair to match have been placed in such a position that they may serve for the speaker's desk and chair when formal meetings are held.

One evening last week a group of the young people met, the girls to sew curtains and the boys to repair cast-off furniture which had been donated.

A small quantity of varnish and a few yards of cretonne to cover cushions can make even the most ancient armchairs very comfortable and attractive. Each week finds something added which helps to make the room more comfortable. The young people are enjoying this project of hunting up and repairing furniture. This in itself becomes a very worth-while activity.

The object of all this is to fit up a room that may be used as a social center during the week and as classroom, reading room, and lecture hall on Sunday. Excellent programs are being provided each Sunday afternoon. It is hoped that young people will get in the habit of thinking of this room as being their own—a place to come and visit, and a place to meet and mingle with other young people of similar ideals. It is planned to have a host and hostess who will always be present to introduce new comers and make everyone feel at home.

Class study, music, interesting talks and lectures, recreation, parties and socials, visiting, reading, informal games, and literary programs will all be sponsored. The idea of having a place where young people of the church may meet and mingle, and where all forms of approved recreation and cultural development may be provided, is going to knit the youth of the church into a more solid brotherhood. Why should not every branch make some such provision for its youth?

Concerning Health

FOCAL INFECTION

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

Focal infection is a collection of bacteria at some special place in the body. The germs, after gaining entrance, multiply very rapidly, and the toxins are readily absorbed into the blood and lymphatic systems, producing so-called rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, and nearly all conditions or diseases of this nature. X-ray and laboratory tests have revealed why the old remedies fail—because the real trouble could not be found and located without their help. If a patient submits to an examination before bodily tissue changes have taken place, the removal of the focal infection would in most cases restore the patient to normal. Otherwise, if the case has been neglected too long the disease can be eradicated or improved by medical hygiene or physical agents. Physical agents are often beneficial in relieving pain and encouraging elimination with the application of heating pads and electricity. If it is possible only to improve the condition, the result is welcomed by the sufferer.

Sites of Infection

High blood pressure or low blood pressure, chronic heart disease, and kidney troubles may be due to focal infection. Somewhere in the nose or mouth are the usual places where disease germs are located, especially roots of the teeth, tonsils, middle ear, and sinuses. Some of the less frequent sites are the appendix, intestinal tract, gall bladder, reproductive organs, and wounds of long standing. Tooth cavities and tooth sockets may be affected a long time, even years, without the patient's knowledge, because of the lack of symptoms. Fortunately, the X ray frequently reveals their location, and many cases are relieved that would cause a lifetime of miserable existence. Anyone complaining of rheumatism, sciatica, and kindred ills should have a careful examination made of his nose accessories, sinuses, and teeth. Pulpless teeth are frequent sources of great danger, and these should be examined by the X ray at least once a year. Tonsils may appear normal and yet be a site of dangerous focal infection. Cultures are sometimes necessary in order to determine whether they contain dangerous bacteria. When diseased, they should be treated, if possible; but usually their removal is better than palliative measures.

It is often a wise procedure to have the back of the tongue examined for lingual tonsils, a mass of lymphoid tissue at the back of the tongue. The ear and nasal cavities often harbor bacteria and such bacterial infections. The source or site of the infection should be sought for there, but usually the sites of infection are found in other places.

Chronic infections of the reproductive organs are fairly frequent and occur in both sexes, often being preceded by a very severe acute infection. Laboratory tests and in some cases instrumental examinations are necessary to locate the trouble.

The intestinal tract, appendix, and gall bladder may be the sites of infection, possibly having its origin in the digestive tract. Laboratory tests, including an X-ray examination, may assist in locating the trouble. Old wounds, especially those of the bones, may be the means of absorption of poisons from bacteria into the blood stream, and should be eliminated. An affected tube or tonsil or one of the sinuses may be the cause of infected joints.

Focal infections are often the cause of many of the mental derangements, but these as a cause are frequently exaggerated. But whether the cause or not, all sites of focal infection should be eradicated. Chronic focal infections may exist for years without the patient being conscious of the fact until it is too late to repair the damage. Such a serious menace to health is a good argument in favor of periodic health examinations.

Faith and Works

By M. J. Crowley

"Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."—Hebrews 11:1. No definition of faith has excelled this one. Faith is the research principle of the law of life. "Seek and ye shall find," is the challenge to all men of all time. "Knock and it shall be opened unto you," is the invitation ever before the seeker after truth.

As the believer, not satisfied with mere belief or a passive acquiescence, delving into the religious debris of centuries, seeking evidence of the yet unseen mystery of godliness, unearths the substance of things he hoped for, his heart rejoices, and he enters the realm of faith. Spurred by his discoveries, he continues his research until his life is filled with evidence that the unseen lives and reigns. Faith is no longer the shield of ignorance; he "knocks," gains admission, and knows that his Redeemer lives.

Isn't it strange that religion is the only science under heaven wherein men drop anchor at belief? If the harbor of our soul's desire is so shallow, the rocks of skepticism and unbelief but await the first storm and the dragging of our anchor. If Columbus had dropped anchor at belief, who would have discovered America? Was it belief that gave Daniel courage to face lions rather than do wrong?

When Moses took on the gigantic task of leading an illiterate people from the presence of a hostile king, was belief the source of his inspiration and strength? When we drop anchor at belief, we invite disaster. The believer is wafted about by every wind of doctrine.

Strange as it may appear, this shallowness of religious thought, this indifference to the fundamentals by which the higher powers of man are manifested, is found not only among the common people but among our so-called intelligentsia.

"Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name, thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven" was given precedence over, "Give us this day our daily bread," but the near vision of the believer blinds him to the realities of the cultured life to be had in trying to establish the former; and in the great academy of life, he majors in jungle law—the survival of the fittest.

Mr. Believer, have you ever looked through life's telescope (faith)? What did you see? Nothing? You are looking through a glass darkly. Because of your near-sightedness you must adjust the glass to your vision. You can not as yet see afar off. But as you pick up things nearby, your vision will become strengthened and clarified and presently the Lord himself will enter the field of your vision.

Faith elevates us to knowledge.

Christmas Offering News

MIAMI, OKLAHOMA, AND TRAVERSE CITY, MICHIGAN, HAVE EARLY CLAIMS

Miami reports under date of November 17 that their official goal (one tenth of the branch quota of the general church budget) was passed on February 23, with a fund of $40. The branch had set its own goal at $200, and on November 16 had a fund of $210.09 with six weeks yet to go before Christmas.

Miami has a membership of 71, with an average church school attendance of forty-five. Their Christmas offering record for four years has shown a fine increase.

1926	.....$ 56.10	1928	.....$171.60
1927	..... 112.20	1929	..... 208.00

Under date of November 19, we are given the following interesting items from Traverse City, Michigan:

Our Christmas Offering goal (one tenth of branch quota of the general church budget) was $96.80. Our offerings for the first four months of the year were January, $7.43; February, $30.54; March, $36.76; April, $29.43, making a total of $104.16 on April 29.

We did not hold any sum over from last year. We started using the "thermometer idea" February 2. That is the reason for the large increase over January.

We did not know what our branch quota was, so we set our Christmas offering goal high. Because of reunions, one-day meetings, and vacations during the summer months, we planned to raise all we could during the spring months.

We raised our money by various means. Each class set its own goal. Some classes had socials. Some saved their pennies, nickels, or dimes. Some who worked gave their extra earnings. Some pledged a certain amount each Sunday. Everyone seemed to take on a "Christmas offering spirit."

Our branch membership is 123.

Our Sunday school enrollment is 75.

The average attendance of the Sunday school during the first four months, including visitors, was fifty-one plus.

We hope to start the next year with the same spirit and reach our goal sooner than ever.

This evidently places Miami at the head of the honor list, followed, according to present data, by Traverse City, First Chicago, and Oelwein, Iowa.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Finding New Members

By Albert W. Beaven

The following article appeared in the regular department of "Church Management" entitled, "Ask Doctor Beaven." It is reprinted by kind permission of the Editor. The article is especially recommended to pastors.

Question: As pastor of this comparatively small church, I feel that an increased membership is absolutely essential. Aside from a religious survey of the city, how can I find prospects for membership in a city of 15,000? What are the sources of information? How can I organize for finding new members? How can I break down the conservatism in my own people and the indifference on the part of those who should belong to us?

Answer: You give a large order. I shall, however, give you the best answer I can in the space I can allow. You are right in your first assumption; you should have new members. A church is meant to grow; people need to be brought within the blessings of the Christian life and the fellowship of the church, whether they realize it now or not; your church will be far more healthy with new blood in it, and you can undertake things that are now impossible; further, your people will be developed spiritually by winning others. On every count you are wise in your objective.

I believe strongly in the method of house to house personal visitation method of evangelism. As your question intimates, it involves prospects to visit, people prepared to visit them, and a special time of visitation and ingathering. A very full description of the method can be secured by reading books by Kernahan or Cooper on the subject, and I have a full chapter on the subject in my own book, Putting the Church on a Full Time Basis, if you care to read it. Here I will give a digest.

Your prospect list can be built up from various sources. You, no doubt, have some children and young people in your church school who should head the list; then the nonmember parents of pupils also furnish a good number usually. If children are in a church school, you have a real point of contact for winning their parents. Some morning at church, and also at church school, I should pass out cards and ask my people to write down the names of neighbors and friends who were not members of other local churches who might be won if rightly approached. I should also ask them to watch and be prepared on the following Sunday to give further names, especially of any new comers to the city. It might be possible to get from the Chamber of Commerce the names of some new arrivals. I usually found a few strangers in the congregation each Sunday morning, and either by my meeting them at the door or by having others on the look out for them we got their names and addresses. I wouldn't advise against the use of the general survey, but personally I found that it exhausted my people in doing that, and there was little strength left for the real task.

Your prospect list should be kept on a card index, so that it can be gone over each year and useless prospects taken out.

Then set a date for a campaign of visitation evangelism. Preach on the necessity for, and the Christ-likeness of, this method. If you can get some one who is skilled in it to help you, particularly the first time, that is a real gain. Failing that, I should read up on the method rather fully.

Select some workers to do the visiting. Pick your best folks first, and personally get them to see the matter fairly and pledge support. Use their acceptance as an argument with the others. Hand pick your workers. Get at least two for each fourteen or sixteen prospects. When you approach them, ask them to give each evening and Sunday afternoon for two weeks.

Prior to the time of visitation, preach evangelistic sermons and sermons on personal responsibility for winning others. Also I should send one or preferably two letters to each prospect preparing them for the visits of the friendly callers from the church.

At the time of the visitation, arrange for supper to be served at the church at least three nights each week. Have all the workers attend each time. Two evenings might be given over to preparation. A careful explanation of the purpose and method of the visit should be given and time taken for prayerful and devotional consideration of the task. Usually about an hour is spent at supper and in the talk and in the prayer period, and then the visitors go out two by two to visit the prospects. They should be instructed to come at once to their subject and not make it a prolonged social call. It will aid them if they have some special meeting to which they can invite people, but this should not take the place of going as far as possible at that time with pressing the claims of Christ and the church. Whatever the immediate spiritual results, each visitor should strive to leave the friendliest feeling with those called upon.

The campaign should head up at a definite time, when people are to publicly make their confession by joining the church. A plan for working them into the life and activity of the parish should be worked out just as fully as you plan for securing the first decision.

I know of no way that will go further toward breaking down the inertia of your own parishioners and also serve to impress the community with your real interest in winning others. It establishes contacts so that those who are invited have some one whom they know who can introduce them to others and will usually take personal interest in their life in the church.

One further word to you as pastor: you will find that your people will discover a goodly number whom they can interest but not bring to a decision. Don't hesitate to tell them that they should tell you of places where they think it would be particularly valuable for you to call, and during the days of the visitation I should spend a good deal of my time in following up those who have been impressed by the visits of the people.

Christmas Giving

Christmas giving evidently had its origin in the gifts of the Magi to the Christ Child. It expresses our love for God and Christ, and for the world for which Christ gave himself. Gradually the custom of making gifts to share our joy with others grew to a giving to others as an expression of our love for them and a desire to increase their joy. Today we justify our giving on the ground that the spirit of Christmas is the spirit of love and good will.

It seems unfortunate, however, that so great an amount of our Christmas giving is devoid of the true Christmas spirit. Much of it is prompted by a desire to win or hold the favor of another, or to return a gift where one is expected, or to give merely because it is customary.

A fairly large percentage of our Christmas giving is directed where it is not needed, while various enterprises whose aim it is to give Christ and his gospel to the world are sorely handicapped through lack of funds. It seems opportune to suggest in this time of business depression and consequent shortage of funds in the hands of the Presiding Bishopric, that we may well curtail all wasteful Christmas expenditures, and divert the means saved to the Christmas offering or other church funds.

We suggest the following plan:

Reduce to a minimum the purchase and mailing of greeting cards and of presents to relatives and friends. Let the holiday season be one of simple joys, avoiding expensive luxuries. In the spirit of love for the Master and for his work, let us set aside the amount thus saved and make of it a special Christmas offering.

The plan should not lessen the sacred joys of Christmas; it should greatly increase them. It need not detract from the relief we would bring to those in need of physical and spiritual comfort, nor need it rob the children of a day most precious to them. As we share together in the Christmas gift, there should come to all a finer appreciation of the beautiful significance of Christmas. C. B. W.

Activity Suggestions for Children's Division

By Grace L. Perry, London, Ontario

Activity is of vital importance in the life of a child, and should, therefore, play as great a part in our children's services as in the day school programs. Too frequently our class work is developed largely by the lecture method, in which the pupil listens, but does practically nothing—except wiggle! Why not utilize these "wiggles" by putting more activity into our programs?

In the Children's Division in the London (Ontario) Branch, the kindergarten, primary, and junior departments meet together. Yet we have introduced activity to a large degree into our programs, and have found that our efforts have been richly rewarded.

Much time has been spent on handwork in the division, and similar work can be carried out in any other Sunday school, no matter how small. Anyone with the time and initiative can work wonders with paper, scissors, water colors, and a pot of paste if he will just undertake it.

Birthday Service

To every child, his birthday is one of the outstanding events of the year. Why not add to this event by having a special birthday exercise for him? For this purpose we made "crowns" from cardboard, covered them with gilt paper, and printed "Birthday" on the front. We left it open at the back and fasten it with a paper clip, to fit the different head sizes. What child does not love to be crowned king or queen?

All children who have had a birthday through the week come to the platform and sit in special chairs. The superintendent of the department crowns each one. The children drop their birthday offering in a little fancy basket, while the class sings a birthday wish. They then choose some one to fasten flowers, one for each year, around the top of the crown. (We pasted a narrow strip of corrugated paper along the upper inside edge of each crown to receive the flower stems.)

A name card is then fastened on a "Birthday Calendar" for that particular month. This calendar is made of mounting paper, with ribbon streamers for the name cards. Posters suitable for the month are colored and pasted on the calendar. The name of the month and a suitable verse is printed on the center of the calendar. A new calendar is made for each month.

A book of Poster Patterns for Each Month of the Year can be secured through the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, at a cost of one dollar. These posters are ready to trace and color, with instructions as to how to make the calendar.

The name cards may be punched and the streamers run through the holes. We used pieces of adhesive paper instead, and stuck one end of the sticker on each name card, ready for use. A gold star is placed on each name card when the birthday offering is given.

We also hang on our wall a picture of some renowned church or civic character (preferably church) who has a birthday in that month. In June we used a picture of King George. How proud one of our boys was to share the king's birthday and crown one Sunday!

Attendance Board

To increase our attendance and to decrease tardiness, we had an "Attendance Board" made. This is a piece of beaver board about a yard square, on an easel. We shellacked this and then printed the name of the department across the top. We pasted small red-edged labels on the board, arranged in classes, each label bearing the name of a pupil or officer. Over each label we put a small cup hook. This board is placed at the door, and as each child enters he places a small pink ring, from a near-by box, on his cup hook, thus marking his own attendance as well as giving him something to do. If a child is late, he puts on a black ring instead of a pink one, this being a "black mark" for him. We use chicken bands for the rings. The department secretary marks her attendance record from this board.

Baptismal Calendar

We have also made a "Baptismal Calendar" similar to the "Birthday Calendar." We secured the picture of Brother Gleazer baptizing his son, from a cover of the Ensign, and pasted it on the calendar. Names of all children in the department who are baptized this year are suspended on streamers from the calendar. This serves as a source of pleasure to those whose names are on the calendar, and a reminder to those not yet baptized.

Songbooks

Good songs can be secured by cutting the songs from the back of the beginner quarterlies, and from other sources, and making a loose-leaf binder of them. We find these books really more suited to our needs than many regular songbooks.

Sick Box

We have a "Sick Box" placed in a convenient place, in which the children drop a voluntary offering. This offering is used to buy a little gift for any member who may become ill. This gift usually takes the form of a storybook or game—or flowers for an adult member. These little "love gifts" are much appreciated by the parents, as well as the pupils themselves.

Program Scrapbook

We are making a scrapbook of the suggested programs, stories, etc., taken from the church papers and have found this material very helpful.

Pictures

Of course all kinds of mounted pictures can be used at any service. These can be secured from any supply house, but many can also be taken from quarterlies, magazines, etc., and mounted ready for use.

We have found the Herald Publishing House and the general church Children's Division very helpful and willing to supply material or information for our work.

Junior Stewardship for 1931

By C. B. W.

Stewardship is a key word in Zion building. To acknowledge definite responsibility to God for the use and management of all one has and is, and for all one may acquire or become, is the very soul of religion. Much effort is being made to persuade the adult membership of the privileges and obligations of mature stewardship and the necessity of faithful accounting as a divine provision for the development of the souls of men and, incidentally, for the securing of means to accomplish the tasks before the church.

As a matter of pedagogy and good logic, the time to introduce the principle of stewardship and to begin the creation of fundamental Christian desires, habits, and attitudes toward one's possessions, is in childhood. Then we have no established habits of self-seeking to combat, no selfish, entrenched ambitions to overcome, no accumulation of wealth which must be placed on the altar. Indeed, childhood is eager for new experiences which promise satisfaction. It is necessary only that we make provision for desired experiences in a natural, yet systematic and orderly way. Childhood has an abundance of energy and time and is eager for adventure. It is our duty to furnish the occasion with sympathetic guidance and wise encouragement.

The Junior Stewardship plan may not be widely known throughout the church, although some 2,000 Junior Stewardship Record Books have been in use in 175 branches during the past year. The venture has been something of an experiment on the part of the General Bishopric, carried on through the Department of Religious Education. Not all the records have been kept faithfully, but many sponsors report most encouragingly. The boys and girls who have been faithful in their accounting for at least six months preceding December 31, 1930, and are so reported by their sponsor and Bishop's solicitor, will receive a special certificate of commendation from the Presiding Bishop of the church.

The following expressions are taken from sponsors' reports:

"Junior stewardship is of great value to boys and girls; saving and tithing become habits." "A wonderful field of service for a sponsor."

"The children realize the value of money when they keep a record of receipts and expenses. They see more meaning in tithes and offerings. It makes the parents feel their responsibility, too."

"Just what we have needed for years. This is building a sure foundation in the habits and attitudes of childhood."

A limited number of the Record Books are to be available for use in 1931. The books are 5x8 inches in size, 32 pages, with heavy manila cover. Seven pages are devoted to definitions and helpful directions for the keeping of the record. A double page is ruled for a monthly record of daily receipts and expenditures, with a tabulated monthly summary and tithing account. While planned for the use of boys and girls from eight to sixteen years of age, the simplified form of accounting may well be used by older young people and by many adults.

Junior Record Books may be purchased outright for individual use from the Herald Publishing House at fifteen cents each.

For class use in a cooperative project, the Record Books may be purchased at five cents each by a branch through the Bishop's solicitor or a sponsor approved by the branch. These orders should be sent to the Presiding Bishop, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. On this plan it is expected that the books will be used under the supervision of a sponsor who will see that the principles of stewardship are carefully explained in personal and group talks, that the children are encouraged in their record keeping, that homes are visited and the cooperation of parents solicited, and that reports are made on request to indicate the progress of the project.

As the supply is limited, orders should be placed at once. Record Books should be on hand to begin accounts with the opening of the new year. The Presiding Bishopric, through the Department of Religious Education, will keep in touch with sponsors of the movement and give needed help.

Religion in the Home

A QUARTERLY STUDY BY LYDIA WIGHT

Of all recently prepared lesson material, this series now being published as one of the two current adult quarterlies appears, in many respects, most vital. Traditionally we like to study about historical religion. It is comfortable to talk about the mistake of Lot's wife, to criticize the wanderings of the children of Israel, or to speculate about the prophecies of Daniel.

Is it not time to turn the search light of truth into the religious atmosphere of our own homes? The author has made of herself an authority in this field. She brings forcefully to our attention not only the most valuable researches made by present-day authorities, but bases her treatment upon the Word of the Lord as contained in the standard books of the church.

No problem is more vital in the church today than that of building and maintaining homes where health, happiness, intelligence, and the Spirit of God may rule. Happy, successful, righteous homes do not come by chance, nor are healthy, intelligent efficient young people prepared for the service of God in homes of careless indolence, irreverence, or selfishness. The progress of the church depends in no small measure upon the home life we maintain.

Religion in the Home, a study for fifty-two weekly sessions, treats of the whole range of home-building and child-rearing problems, as a matter of vital concern to fathers and mothers, to be shared as a sacred responsibility. The discussions are thoroughly practical as well as logical and scientifically sound. Religious values are found in every appointment, relationship, and activity of the home.

The lessons may be used as study material for the Sunday morning class of parents, or other study occasions during the week, by women's study groups, or by parents in the home.

Price 15 cents per quarter, 50 cents by the year. Beginning classes should ask for the first quarter, October, November, December, 1930.

The Value of Music to the Little Child

By Clara S. Thumm, Philadelphia

Edgar Allen Poe has said: "It is hard to discover a better method of education than that which experience of so many ages has evolved; and this may be summed up as consisting in gymnastics for the body and music for the soul."

Today almost everyone must hear music, whether he wishes to or not. If he turns on the radio, or goes to church, theater, moving pictures, or any place where people are gathered, there is music of some sort whether it be good or bad. In early childhood the proper music should be heard and understood.

In child life the ear is active almost from birth, and a child of a few months will show pleasure at hearing music played or sung. On account of the physical condition of the child's throat, he can give but the most simple vocal expression in early childhood.

Since music can play such an important part in the life of man, it is our duty to permit the child to become acquainted with the best the masters have given, the beautiful lullabies and other beautiful melodies. Music should be a part of the daily life of the child. The happy days of childhood are associated with fairy-land which too soon fades away. Music has the power of taking one to a magic realm that can continue through life.

A child can not sense rhythm until he has moved. Very little children attempt to do what the music says. We may develop the idea of rhythm by asking the child to walk or to march in time with the music. Lead the child to discover whether the music says "walk," "run," "hop," "skip," or "jump." Children love action and play. To step as high-stepping horses, to pretend to rock a cradle, to imitate the waving of trees in the wind, to fly as birds fly—all these simple devices tend to develop within the child a sense of rhythm. In our church school it is possible to "act out" our songs. In the song, "Little lambs so white and fair," why shouldn't we have a "tender shepherd" leading little lambs "into pastures green and sweet"? "Waiting to grow" and many other songs afford action response.

Music must have more than rhythm to be beautiful. There must be melody. There are many beautiful melodies in the world. One of the first experiences of the infant child is the hearing of a lullaby sung by his mother. We all love lullabies because they came from our childhood and their tune has become a lasting, pleasant memory. How wisely mothers should choose their lullabies! In choosing a song to give our children, it is well to ask the following questions:

1. Is its content good poetry and is the meaning suitable for children?
2. Is it worthy of a place in the impressionable mind of a child?

It is good teaching to appeal to the child through things already known. Mother Goose songs serve this purpose and have a definite place in the young child's life. Their jingles form a basis for the development of tone. Cradle songs of different countries offer excellent material. "The Norwegian cradle song," "Going through Lorraine" (French), "Jasmine flower" (Chinese), etc., will be found very delightful.

The following list may be found helpful:

Flower Songs:

- "Sweet pea ladies," Gaynor.
- "Poppy lady," Gaynor.
- "Tulips," Gaynor.

Bird Songs:

- "Mr. Rooster and Mrs. Hen," Gaynor.
- "Robin red breast," Gaynor.
- "The owl," Gaynor.

The Gaynor Song Book contains many lovely nature songs.

Lullabies:

- "Sleep, little baby of mine" (suitable for Christmas), Charles Denney.
- "Slumber boat," Gaynor.

Mother Goose Songs:

- "Baa, baa, black sheep"; "Peas porridge hot"; "Hickory, dickory dock"; "Diddle, diddle, dumpling"; "I love little pussy"; "Georgie Porgie"; "Little Jack Horner"; "Mother Hubbard"; "Sing a song of sixpence"; "Ride a cock horse"; "Tommy Tucker."

The book, Finger Plays for Nursery and Kindergarten, by Emilie Poulsson, contains good material that can be used by all mothers. It is well illustrated; the material is well chosen and the melodies are pleasing. (Price, $1.50.)

The Grade Teacher, published by Educational Publishing Corporation, 441 Lexington Avenue, New York, New York, contains a song each month and an article on music. It would prove helpful to our church school workers. (Price, $2.00.)

One of the purposes of education is to help the child make wise use of his leisure time. If parents would give their children a musical education, it would be a means toward helping them spend this time wisely. Music puts "sunshine" in the heart. Music seems to lift our very souls toward God. Children have a native love for music; hence, it is our problem to choose the best music has to offer.

Any of the books mentioned above may be ordered through the Herald Publishing House.

Fargo, North Dakota

Bungalow Church, 1423 First Avenue, South

Thanksgiving Day dawned bright and clear after a raging blizzard which assured us that we still live in the State of North Dakota. The Saints gathered at ten o'clock for a devotional service. The call to worship was: "The Lord is in his holy temple: let all the congregation keep silence before him." Then came a piano prelude, "Lead, kindly light," and "O sacred head now wounded," by Elsie Brown. The congregation sang "The breaking waves dashed high," and there was prayer. Worth Couey read Psalm 100, and the congregation sang "Come, ye thankful people, come." Elder Harry Ratcliffe gave a good talk on the meaning of thanksgiving, telling of his visit to the New England States. Sister Ratcliffe sang a solo, and a thank offering was taken for the missionary fund. Elder Leitch read the commandment to us to "love one another," and set forth the blessings of sainthood in latter days. "His loving-kindness" was softly sung by the congregation; then there was a period of prayerful meditation. The doxology brought the program to a conclusion.

The Sunday school gave a thanksgiving program November 23. Before a beautiful, decorative setting above which were the words, "Let us give thanks," four boys, dressed as Indians, took charge of the Christmas offering service and received gifts brought for distribution to the poor, placing them in the Thanksgiving basket. These articles of food and fruit were distributed on Thanksgiving eve by members of the school. The Christmas offering thermometer now registers $73.37.

The branch gave a chicken pie supper November 11 at the home of Brother and Sister Worth Couey. More than twenty dollars was cleared. The Department of Women held a food sale November 15, clearing more than eighteen dollars.

Elder Thomas Leitch visits isolated members. He spent November 9 at Lakota, North Dakota.

On Decision Day, October 26, Mrs. Viola Gartman was baptized in the church font by Elder Leitch and confirmed in the evening by Elders J. E. Wildermuth, Thomas Leitch, and Harry Ratcliffe.

Halloween was observed by the smaller children with an afternoon entertainment of games, music, and refreshments. At eight o'clock a dress-up party was had for the young people and adults.

Elder J. E. Wildermuth preached twice during his recent stay. For the basis of his talks he used Hebrews 6: 19: "Our hope is an anchor to the soul."

Promotion Day exercises were held at the Sunday school hour, there being a good talk on the meaning of promotion by Brother Ratcliffe. Sister Henneman sang a solo, and the children sang "Like Jesus." After a reading, "My opportunity," the certificates were presented, the pledge to the Christian flag was given, and a short class assembly in the new places was closed by the song, "Onward to Zion."

The theme for the month of October was "Preparing for a year of Christian service." "Gratitude" was November's theme.

"On time" cards are being used as an incentive for promptness to service, and a contest is on between the Busy Bees and the Willing Workers for credits in attendance, good lessons, and other lines of endeavor. The school is now planning a Christmas program.

Saints were present from Deer Creek, Minnesota, for the sacramental service November 2.

Elders Thomas Leitch and Harry Ratcliffe have been the speakers on Sunday evenings. "The church—its needs," "The church and society," and "Why man needs the church" are some of the themes of Brother Ratcliffe. Brother Leitch's discourses have followed the missionary trend.

The annual business meeting will be held December 17. Missionary C. J. Smith is expected to be present.

The Department of Women is conducting the study class on Sunday evenings at 7 o'clock. The men are also included in this class. The subject for discussion is "The new plan of Religious Education." Elder Ratcliffe is presenting the lessons. We hope that before many days this branch will see fit to adopt the new plan of Religious Education.

Valley Center, Michigan

The Saints of Eastern Michigan District met in an all-day service September 21 with Valley Center Branch. All services were well attended, and speakers were District Missionary C. E. Harpe, Elder A. C. Barmore, District President Myron Carr, and Elder William Sheffer. Music was furnished by the Valley Center Choir and Sisters Barmore and Whitford. This day opened a three weeks' series of missionary meetings conducted by Elder C. E. Harpe, assisted by Pastor H. E. C. Muir and Elder E. D. Finken. Brother Harpe ably presented the gospel message, and as a result of the services three requested baptism and the entire membership was strengthened.

Sunday morning, October 12, about one hundred people were gathered on the banks of a winding stream to witness the entrance of three souls to our faith, Mrs. Clara McLeod, Mrs. Eva Muir, and Miss Arvella Muir. These will be workers of worth in this branch. Pastor Muir was in charge of the ceremony, assisted by Brother Finken, and Brother Harpe led the candidates into the water, where he officiated in the ordinance of baptism. During the ceremony the power of God was experienced to a remarkable degree by members and nonmembers, and every heart was touched.

The confirmation followed at the church at ten o'clock, where the Spirit continued throughout the service and was witnessed in much power in all the exercises.

The meetings of the Saints in this local are quite spiritual. Social services and preaching hours have attendance of ninety-five per cent of the membership. The preaching is done by the pastor and Elder E. D. Finken. Sunday school is directed by Thomas Isles, who superintends seven large classes. Interest in the class work is marked.

Officers are arranging to put into operation the new plan of the Department of Religious Education, inaugurated in the church by the Centennial Conference. We expect to effect all changes to harmonize with the unified service January 1, 1931.

After being idle during the summer months, the Women's Department, led by Sister H. E. C. Muir, is again active. November 20 this group served a harvest supper at Brother Isles's store, clearing about eighty dollars, which will be applied to the purchase of a new piano for the church. Attendance was large, many coming several miles. All the business men and their families from near-by towns attended and showed a friendly attitude toward our church activities. About three hundred were served.

The Christmas program, under the direction of Sister Muir, is under way. A ready response is being given by the members of the church and a number of friends.

Another missionary campaign is being planned for Valley Center. The Saints are consecrated in their endeavor to take to the world the gospel message and to assist in the redemption of Zion.

Bothwell, Ontario

Anniversary services were observed in this branch November 2. Sacramental service opened at nine o'clock that morning with Bishop J. C. Dent in charge, assisted by Apostle C. F. Ellis, and Elders William I. Fligg and R. T. Brown. A number of earnest prayers and testimonies were offered. Elder Fligg, of London, preached a forceful sermon in the morning on "Missionary endeavor."

Elder William Andrews, superintendent of the Department of Religious Education, spoke on the new organization of that department at 1.30 in the afternoon.

Apostle C. F. Ellis was the speaker at three o'clock and 7.30, his subjects being "Christ within you" and "Christ's second coming." The choir contributed appropriate music.

Though weather was disagreeable, attendance was large. Dinner and supper were served in the basement by the Women's Department.

The London Dramatic Players entertained a large audience Monday evening with the comedy, "Mammy's lil' wild rose." The play was exceptionally well staged and enjoyed by all. A violin solo and orchestral numbers between acts completed an enjoyable entertainment. This group of players is to be commended for its work.

Otter Lake (Michigan) Branch

Otter Lake Branch is moving forward. In a recent week five have been added by baptism.

Elder Boos, from Pontiac, has held the weekly services here with good success. We are glad to see such young men taking an active interest in Christ's cause.

May the gospel continue to go to those who are in darkness and are seeking the light is our prayer.

JOSEPH J. RUSNELL.

Spokane, Washington

Plans for Thanksgiving and Christmas are the present principal issues in Spokane Branch. On Thanksgiving sixteen young people presented "Thanksgiving through the ages," which, under the direction of Ona Andrews, was fine. Then on Sunday evening following Thanksgiving a playlet, "The first Thanksgiving," was given during the church school hour. The playlet was written by Miss Gladys Silver, a young sister of whom the members are proud.

Muriel Whiting, branch chorister, has planned a lovely vesper service for Sunday evening preceding Christmas. This will be the second of this type of service.

Sunday, November 16, the church school functioned with officers as follows: Church school supervisor, Henry E. Kinney; associate supervisor, Margaret Kenny; adult supervisor, M. Howard Harris; young people's supervisor, Dave V. Coleman; children's supervisor, Alice Kinne. Edith Wood is assisting Brother Harris.

All are eagerly looking forward to the institute work which has been promised Spokane District, to be held in Spokane December 5, 6, and 7. We hope to have A. C. Martin, district missionary, here, also Patriarch Richard Baldwin and Sister Baldwin. The women are planning an oyster and chili supper for the evening of December 6.

Two baptisms have occurred within the past few months, those of Lillian Whiting and Florence Everoth.

Brother and Sister Lloyd Whiting are spending the winter in Saskatchewan, Canada.

Two marriages of interest have occurred of late in Spokane, that of Sister Rachel Story and Brother Frank Weeks, and that of Sister Audrey Weeks and Phillip Archer.

The church building has been given a roof of new shingles, which is a great improvement.

Brother and Sister Arliegh Weeks are the parents of a son who has been named Harry Albert.

Brother Frank Taylor had a fall recently in which his leg was broken. He is improving at the Sacred Heart Hospital.

Spokane Saints have much for which to be thankful. Though a few are sick, we are glad the number of afflicted is small.

Detroit District Conference

The annual conference of Detroit District met with Pontiac, Michigan, Branch Saturday and Sunday, November 8 and 9. The opening service convened at 10.30 a. m. Saturday, and such matters as organization and reading reports were attended to.

The afternoon session was called to order at two o'clock, and new business was brought before the body. Election of officers, district organization, and the 1931 reunion were the outstanding subjects handled.

In the evening a fine musical program was enjoyed. All numbers were by members of Flint Branch. The writer's opinion, and I believe the opinion of all present, was that a finer district musical program has not been heard in years. A short address, "Music appreciation," was delivered by Elder Allan C. Pohly, of Flint, for which effort the brother certainly merits a degree of honor.

Sunday began with a soul-satisfying prayer service, strengthening the people for the tasks that lay before them. At ten o'clock in the morning church school was held, and the Pontiac junior choir presented an anthem deserving considerable praise. Due to the effort of Apostle D. T. Williams the preaching service was outstanding. His sermon, "Forward to 2030," spurred the members to a greater realization of the responsibility that is ours. Two anthems were sung by the Detroit First Church robed choir under the direction of Fred Anderson. Dinner followed this service, being served to a large number by the Pontiac women.

At 2.30 in the afternoon the speaker was J. Charles Mot-tashed, and the theme was "Prosperity." Music was by the Orion singers. The conference closed with this service.

ALVIN E. BOOS.

Dayton, Ohio

Woodward and Howell Street

The midweek prayer meeting is a source of comfort for many. President F. Rockwell is usually present to introduce some special theme for prayer and meditation. Recent themes have been "My need of God," and "God's need of me."

September 28 was Rally Day. Out-of-town visitors came from Springfield and Lancaster. At the morning devotional service, Elder S. E. Dickson gave a clear and inspiring discourse on "The things of the kingdom," using for a text the promise of Jesus, "All these things shall be added unto you." The church school gave a program, after which dinner was served in the basement. In the afternoon Elder Francis May handed to the presiding officer a "surprise" program entitled, "The Smiley Family reunion." Sixty persons were present for the exercises, representing about ten families. There were nine souls in the W. E. Watson family, the "greatest" family. The various families were grouped together; a suggestive program was presented; consultations followed; explanations were made; and in ten minutes the "reunion" was in full swing. Speeches of welcome were made; responses were given; and then family groups appeared on the platform. Pictures were taken, and each family gave its program. Everyone caught the spirit of reunion and made the program attractive.

A sermon in the evening by Pastor Rockwell completed a happy day.

Seven members of the local were remembered in a birthday social October 14. After a grand march led by Nellie Greer, everyone went to the basement. Francis May presented some general exercises. Glen Bishop excelled in "magic" numbers. Group exercises followed. Mamie Colvin and Mary Lyon were in charge of the children; Nellie Greer of the young people; and F. May of the adult group. Refreshments were served, mementoes awarded, and everybody went home realizing that we were learning to play together.

Brother F. Rockwell was master of ceremonies at the Halloween social. About twenty-six came masked. Witch stories, songs, and readings gave realistic touches to the entertainment.

Group activities are being stressed in an active manner. Our pastor finds time for the children's training during the devotional hour beginning at 9.30 in the morning, while the adults in the main auditorium are listening to a sermon. Brother F. May, in charge of the adult group, is sponsoring home visiting, also assisting a class in teachers' training.

Some strangers are visiting with us, one each at the Riske, Raney, and Smith firesides. All belong to the cradle roll. Sister Smith's baby was blessed and given the name Billy Dee. The names of the other babies await their formal blessing.

The women's club is busy, occupying the basement once a week, and serving meals.

Good reports are coming in from Graceland representatives, Albert Griffin, Russell Rockwell, and Myrtle Boeckman. We have given these young people to Graceland, that they may be returned to us ready for greater service.

FRANCIS MAY.

Saint Louis District Conference

Conference of Saint Louis District convened November 29 with Saint Louis Branch to transact district business and elect officers for the coming year. Apostle F. Henry Edwards was present and was asked to assist in presiding over the meeting. Reports were received from almost half the branches of the district, this being partly the result of a campaign conducted from the secretary's office.

Sawyerville Branch recommended the name of Ray Russell for ordination to the office of priest. The recommendation was approved, and the ordination provided for. District President Bruce E. Brown was asked to care for this matter on his next visit to Sawyerville.

Bruce E. Brown was re-elected district president, and G. F. Barraclough and Granville S. Trowbridge were made counselors. Brother Trowbridge was chosen as director of Religious Education, and the following were designated to assist him: Supervisor of adult division, Sister G. S. Trowbridge; supervisor of young people, Eddie Nicholson; supervisor of children's division, to be appointed later. Charles J. Remington was again selected as district secretary, and chose as his assistant Roy Remington. Clinton Dickens was sustained district treasurer, and the usual mode of voting to sustain general church appointees in the departments was concurred in by the district. Action prevailed that the program of the district conferences be put under the supervision of the presidency and that a copy of the same be mailed to the various branches of the district at least two weeks prior to the convening of the conferences.

Following the close of the business session, Apostle Edwards addressed the congregation concerning our duties and our attitudes towards our duties.

Notwithstanding a downpour of rain, about seventy attended the business session.

Clouds came with Sunday, but by the opening hour the sun was shining, and a bright spirit rested on the congregation. In the morning Apostle Edwards's theme was "What is a Latter Day Saint?"

The Women's Department was entertained by Grace Bilinsky, who gave an account of her European travels. Sisters Lloyd and Moore, of Saint Louis, sang a duet, and Mary Brown spoke on the new work before the department in the activities under the newly adopted program of Religious Education.

Apostle Edwards addressed the priesthood on timely topics, and time was allowed for questions and discussion.

At three o'clock in the afternoon, the font was opened, and little Grace Patience Remington was baptized by Bruce E. Brown. She was confirmed at the social service by her grandfather, Elder Charles J. Remington, and Elder J. D. Hull. Brother Edwards and the district presidency were in charge of the social service.

The activities of the day were crowned by a wonderful discourse by Apostle Edwards at 5.45. This brought to a close a successful conference.

Monetville, Ontario

Elder H. A. Dayton was here for a week during the last of July and the first of August. Several nonmembers heard his sermons, but because it was haying time and the farmers were engrossed with harvest interests, our brother left somewhat discouraged. Nevertheless, his visit cheered and strengthened the church members.

Brother and Sister James Mercer and two sons have moved back to their farm here from Saint Louis, Michigan. They arrived about the middle of October. Two brothers from Saint Louis came with them and were present at prayer service. I think we all enjoyed the Spirit to a greater extent because of the increase of our number and the presence of our visiting brothers.

At prayer service October 1, Mr. and Mrs. F. Richer requested the blessing of their two little boys. October 5 this couple were baptized in Mercer Lake before the sacramental service held in the afternoon. This came as a pleasant surprise to all. Brother Richer made his request known to Elder J. L. Fryer only that morning. They are now enjoying the Spirit, and Brother Richer, who is afflicted with asthma, is much better. He had no trouble in conquering the tobacco habit, another sign of God's power.

Brothers William Smith and J. Kendrick, of Essex, Ontario, were visitors at the home of J. L. Pryor for two weeks. Monetville members find that visits from brothers and sisters from other points are very strengthening. They remind us that God is and of the truth of his message to man. What a wonderful thing this unity of spirit! We pray that God will strive in the hearts of those who oppose his message, and that one day this community will be as one big family of God's children.

We received our thermometer chart two weeks late to start the Christmas offering. Having so small a membership, we set our goal at five dollars. We are now $1.75 over our goal. The Sunday school collection goes to this fund.

The Department of Recreation and Expression is doing well. We meet every other Friday night at the home of different members, and sometimes young people of nonmembers join us and have an enjoyable evening. We do many interesting things, among which we have a paper called The Loud Speaker. We are planning a Christmas concert if a few of our nonmember friends can be induced to help. A few have consented and some have refused. We are greatly handicapped by having only two girls in our group.

A young man and his wife, a newly wedded couple, recently moved to this community. Though nonmembers, they attend service almost every Sunday. Some of our strongest opposers have relented since four of them attended services Sunday, November 9, and this family has consented to help us with our Christmas program.

All in all this little group is slowly but no less surely putting forth much real effort. We hope to grow in number and in quality of living so that our friends may sense the beauties and truth of the gospel.

ELENA MERCER.

The Men's Debate

Enthusiastic endeavors on the part of the men debaters of the different societies in developing the question, "Resolved that the nations should adopt a policy of free trade," has created much interest and competition between literary organizations of the school. At the present time this question is being given outstanding recognition the world over, and is proving popular among colleges and universities of our country.

The four literary societies are represented by the following young men of the college: Kapforean Society, Asa Fowler, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Loyd Ingram, Chicago, Illinois; and Clifford Long, Independence, Missouri. Pleiades Society, Max White, Lamoni, Iowa; John Barber, Glenwood, Iowa; and Albert Mehlich, Fairmount, West Virginia. Victorian Society, James Moses, Scranton, Pennsylvania; Arthur Wellman, Crosswell, Michigan; and Ivan Dillee, Independence, Missouri. The Niketes Society, Walter Johnson, Sydney, Australia; Harold Leland, Plymouth, Massachusetts; and Mitchell Carter of Lamoni. Considerable interest was shown in the preliminary debates held November 25, in which the Victorian and Niketes were placed winners over the Kapforean and Pleiades Societies, both winning the decision with affirmative arguments. The final debate, in which the Niketes have taken the affirmative viewpoint and the Victorian the negative side of the question, will be given December 13.

Students Hear of Church's Finance

The youth of the church have again been called upon to express themselves. At last Friday's chapel Bishop DeLapp and Dean Gilbert, with the cooperation of the student body, sought a little light in the mental reaction of the students to the present straitened financial circumstances and general condition of the church. Questionnaires were circulated, comprising three groups of questions—first, questions dealing with the general status of the church and its finances; second, questions revealing the student's knowledge of the church laws regarding finances; and third, a general statement indicating the students' reaction to the church and its program.

"Home Ec" Girls Organize

The formal organization of the Vestæ Filia was held Saturday, November 22. For a number of years there has been a need at Graceland for a home economics club, but it was not until this fall that the opportunity for organization was presented. The club plans to carry out a yearly program which will be beneficial to its members, and to all others who are interested in certain phases of the field of home economics.

The charter members and officers of the organizations are: Sponsor, Mrs. Mae Warren, "Home Ec" instructor; president, Geraldine Clinkenbeard; vice president, Barbara Muller; secretary, Bernice Lenz; treasurer, Frances Hartshorn; reporter, Aleta Jensen; Marie Barnett, Lulu Romig, Irene Schulte, June Lane, Wana Black, Elizabeth Aelick, Edna Mae Redfield, and Daisy Black.

Phidelah Rice Visits Lamoni

On November 20, Graceland was again honored by the presence of Phidelah Rice, who is one of the great readers and interpreters in America. Those who heard him read last year needed no special invitation to hear him again this season. This year he presented a four-act play of Arnold Bennett's, The Great Adventure. For an encore he gave a little piece, authorship of which is skeptical but which is attributed to Mark Twain, about the miner who kept "a rammin', 'n a-rammin' 'til he blew up."

After the recital Mr. Rice was conducted to Walker Hall where all the girls were privileged to meet him. The reception was informal, and I am sure that not one of us will forget the charm of Mr. Rice's personality. The faculty then held a small party in Miss Morgan's reception room.

Friday morning Mr. Rice read in chapel. His selection was a one-act play entitled, "The new word," which is a comedy centering around the reticent relationship of a father and son. As an encore, he read "If I had the time," the poem that held us spellbound last year.

Mr. Rice deserves all the praise given him. He is charming, interesting, decidedly true to life in his characterizations, and above all, he is human—even though he is famous.

He says that he likes to read for us, and I am certain that every drama lover here is looking forward to his return to Lamoni and Graceland next year. PAULINE SIEGFRIED.

Basket-ball Hopes Optimistic

Basket-ball prospects at Graceland are bright this year. Coach "Willie" Gilbert has two letter men and three members of last year's squad for a nucleus around which to build this year's quintet.

The letter men are Delmar Jones, Taylorville, Illinois, star guard of last year's five, and Herbert Sprague, Lamoni, Iowa, center of the 1928-29 team. The three members of last year's squad are John Barber, Glenwood, Iowa; Almer Sheehy, of Independence, Missouri; and Arthur Martin, Saint Charles, Missouri. Other available men that survived the first cut which reduced the squad of twenty-seven to eighteen are King, White, McPeak, Carter, E. Wood, and G. Jones, all of Lamoni; Cook, of Cleveland, Ohio; Aima Smith, of Independence, Missouri; John Marx, of Niles, Michigan; Glen Jacobson, of Berkeley, California; and Raymond Linehan, of Akron, Ohio.

The squad has been working hard on fundamentals since December 1. A light scrimmage was held last Thursday.

As yet no game has been scheduled before the holidays, but Coach Gilbert has hopes of one December 16.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

The November sacramental service was in charge of local officers, Elder Walter Culp, Priest E. E. Williams, and Priest Donald Bealor. A good number participated, and the Spirit was felt.

Sunday school is progressing under the able management of the new superintendent, E. E. Williams.

The Women's Department meets frequently, Sister Lizzie Hill the president.

Brothers E. E. Williams and William L. Altman are conducting a Bible class every Saturday evening at 7.30 which is educational.

November 9 at the prayer service the congregation was given divine admonition, and one brother was particularly instructed. Many were deeply moved at this hour.

At the tent in Portsmouth, where meetings have lately been held, the communion service for November had fair attendance. Elder Jacob Halb, of Middletown, Ohio, who had been preaching at Ironton, returned to the tent near Portsmouth, on Monday, November 10, and preached that week. The growth of tent work since the opening was made in that community has been most encouraging. On October 19 Brother Gray, district Sunday school superintendent, organized a school there. Twenty-eight were present. During the following Sundays the rate of increase was: October 26, 36 present; November 2, 56; November 9, 67; November 16, 73. On the last-named date Brother Halb conducted nine precious souls into the water of baptism. Two of these candidates were from Adams County, one from McDermott, and six from Valley View. They are Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Waldon, Lida Crabtree, Edward Christwell, Ethel Cheffen, LeRoy Cheffen, son of the late Ralph Christwell, Anna Catherine Crabtree, and Sarah Jane Rollins.

Far West Stake

In the main a very definite improvement is evident in the work of the church in this territory.

During the short time he has been here, the new stake president, Ward A. Hougas, has visited nearly every branch in the stake. These were far more than mere official visits. In company with Elder John Hovenga, of the stake bishopric, he made personal contacts with the Saints in their homes. We feel this is a praiseworthy object, for, after all, the success of any phase of our work depends entirely on the relationship of officers to the membership.

Local conditions in Saint Joseph have taken on an encouraging aspect during the last several months. R. E. Jones, city missionary, has been actively on the job visiting the Saints, and preaching in the homes of nonmembers as opportunity afforded.

Elder Walter S. Woodward and wife are at present busily engaged in missionary work at Trenton, Missouri. Previous to his present engagement, Brother Woodward worked at Guilford for several weeks. Though new to his work, Brother Woodward is doing fine; in fact, the general nature of his work would do credit to men of greater experience in the mission field.

During the past several weeks Elder S. E. Mifflin found plenty to do at Maple Grove Branch and in the Pleasant Grove territory. At present he is engaged with a series of meetings at Stewartville in the confines of the Stewartville Branch.

Recently news reached us of the premature passing of a young member of the priesthood. About two weeks ago Lloyd Graybill contracted blood poisoning as a result of a cut thumb. Within ten days death overtook him. He leaves a wife and two little children, as well as a host of friends. Our religious experiences bring solace in the consciousness that Lloyd has but preceded us into a more active sphere of service. May God ever keep a directing hand over his wife and little ones, that strength may be given them to meet the issues of life bravely.

To offset these losses which must inevitably be, we must steadfastly recognize the need of developing our young people along practical gospel lines. We are fortunate indeed to be able to number so many talented young members among us. God grant that our every effort be bent to inspire them to qualify for the time, rapidly approaching, when they must fearlessly assume greater responsibilities in upholding the standards of King Immanuel.

Prospects for Far West Stake are promising. The general spiritual condition of the Saints, though to some extent affected by both economic and social pressure, is decidedly encouraging. Under the diplomatic leadership of stake and general officials, results will become more apparent as time passes.

Cameron

October 11 the Cameron women served a chicken dinner and supper. The proceeds netted a nice sum, and the women believe that the success of this project can not be measured in dollars and cents alone but largely by the attitude of co-operation, fellowship, and good will which was manifested.

The evening of October 12 a series of services opened with Brother S. E. Mifflin as speaker. Brother Mifflin had preceded these services by two weeks of labor among the Saints, visiting them in their homes, endeavoring to encourage and strengthen them. His sermons were clear, definite, and of a constructive nature. Those who took advantage of the opportunity to listen to this series of discourses were greatly benefited. Three were added to the church by baptism.

The Saints and many friends of William Keyport were made sad when, after a short illness, he was called beyond. Sister Keyport, who was seriously ill at the time, is much improved. That feeling of sadness again rested upon us when Sister Milbert Kinneman passed away and in less than a week was followed by her husband.

Bishop Burnett visited Cameron November 30, meeting with the priesthood in the afternoon and occupying the pulpit in the evening.

We pray that we may have the faith and determination to keep the whole law, and go on unto perfection.

Kirtland District Institute-conference

This institute-conference was held at Akron, November 7, 8, and 9.

On Friday evening the subject was "Hymnology." After brief descriptions were given, the congregation was invited to sing the hymns from the screen. Famous Christian hymns were used, and it was shown that these are loved by Latter Day Saints. Also hymns that represent the spirit and genius of the Restoration movement were used proving that Latter Day Saints have made an illuminating contribution to Christian hymnology.

The service was enlivened by two numbers given by the Akron Junior Choir led by Josephine Smith Ebeling. She also sang a contralto solo from Handel's "Messiah," "He was despised."

The next meeting was Saturday afternoon, when the district adopted the new program of Religious Education. William Webbe was elected superintendent of church schools and Miss Mae Gill financial secretary. The district will hear from these people, for they are capable and consecrated. After this a round table discussion was led by Sister Haynes, the district chorister.

Then came one of the events of the conference. William Webbe had organized a trip to the Akron airport, and we all went in a bus that had been provided. Probably the development of this airport, the air dock and the building of the Akron Z. E. S. IV., stand among the most remarkable achievements of the world of today. Here are some figures that must be of great interest to all:

Dimensions of the air dock: Length of building, 1,175 feet; width, 325 feet; height, 211 feet; floor space, eight and a half acres. If the side covering of the building were laid out flat, it would cover eighteen acres. It is the largest building in the world without interior supports. Ten football fields can be laid out in it. Each door is divided into two parts and opened and closed by electrical power. Each half door weighs six hundred tons and moves on tracks of about the same gauge as a railroad. The cubical content of the building 45,000,000 feet. From the experience of attempting to heat the Lakehurst Air Dock, the managers of the Akron Air Dock have concluded that it is impossible to heat this building. The steel in the doors amounts to 1,800 tons. In the air dock and the shops there are 5,350 tons of steel. On Sunday visitors to the building range from twenty to thirty thousand people.

The airship is the largest in the world. The normal gas volume is 6,500,000 cubic feet, whereas the Los Angeles has 2,478,000. The length is, over all, 785 feet; maximum diameter, 132.9 feet; usual lift, 182,000 pounds; gross lift, 403,000 pounds. It has eight engines with a total horse power of 4,480. The maximum speed per hour is 84 miles, cruising range without refueling at fifty miles an hour, 10,580 miles. This huge airship can carry and operate five airplanes while in flight. The gas used is helium. When completed the machine will weigh seventy-six tons. The structural material is duralium, a composite of aluminum, copper, and magnesium. The gas cells will be made of a rubber composition. There will be twelve separate cells. The ship will carry a crew of forty-six, ten officers, and five airplanes. There will be a control room, the only room outside the ship. Over the control room will be the commander's office. State rooms, a council room, two storerooms, thirty-six bedrooms, a kitchen, a living room, laundry, radio room, and switch room are also included in the plans.

This ship is being built for the United States Navy and is to be ready by the first of June, 1931. The structural work was about two thirds complete on November 20.

Saturday evening John L. Cooper, pastor of Kirtland Branch, preached a spiritual sermon with great zest. This was his first visit to a conference and to Akron.

Sunday opened with a worship session, which included a period of devotion, a class period, and a sermon period. The sermon was by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, and it was well received. The junior and senior choirs of Akron helped in the morning service.

In the afternoon it had been arranged that several of the choirs would render choruses, and then the combined choirs, under the leadership of Sister Haynes, would sing. Some unfortunate circumstances prevented the New Philadelphia Choir from coming and almost upset the plans of the district chorister, but a song fest was given, which was highly appreciated. To edify the people, Elder James C. McConaughy was invited to the stand, and gave his testimony of the work. Afterwards Elder Joseph A. Jaques, now of Brooklyn, New York, was invited to speak, and in his vigorous manner spoke with conviction of the need of preparation for service. The service was concluded with the presentation of a bouquet to Sister Haynes, district chorister, and with a blessing pronounced upon the congregation by Patriarch A. R. Manchester.

The leader of Akron Choir was on the job and helped with his good work and solo singing. Mention must be made of the graciousness of the Cleveland singers that came to the conference, Sister Josephine Ebeling, and Miss Neville and others, for their interest in this conference.

The evening sermon was by District President James E. Bishop. It was his first sermon after a tonsillectomy operation. It was spoken with conviction and with the liberty of the spirit. Elder Percy Farrow, pastor of Cleveland Branch, and wife were present, and their work was appreciated.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni

Two major interests have dominated activities at the Brick Church during the last two weeks. These were the observance of Thanksgiving and the concentration upon the financial interests of the church.

Thanksgiving Services

On the evening of Thanksgiving Sunday, the Methodist Church combined with the Brick Church in a pre-Thanksgiving service. The full choir sang two anthems and hymns and a prayer response. T. S. Williams presided, and the Reverend Walter Telfer of the Methodist Church preached. The spirit of the harvest was enhanced by a large table before the rostrum that was piled with corn, fruits, and vegetables.

On Wednesday evening preceding Thanksgiving the usual prayer services were replaced by an operetta at the church, "Bobbie Brewster's rooster." This was presented by juniors and directed by Floy Roberson and Sister W. H. Blair. Comments of appreciation spoke very highly of it.

Half past nine on Thanksgiving morning found the lower auditorium filled to capacity. Familiar hymns were played on the piano as the worshipers entered. Roy Cheville and Leslie Kohlman sang without accompaniment "My Jesus, I love Thee," and Bishop G. L. DeLapp offered prayer. The theme of the morning was presented by the pastor. A somber spirit of gratitude prevailed during the testimonies, which followed with little pause. After the benediction, a group of young men sang, "We thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

Financial Needs Presented

A meeting of stake officials with the general church officers began a stake-wide program of personal presentation and solicitation. On Friday afternoon, November 21, the stake high council met. Frankness, devotion, and hopefulness characterized the session. These men were interested in getting to the bottom of affairs and in meeting the current needs. They left the council meeting determined to carry out the program in the branch and stake.

On the succeeding Sunday afternoon the lower auditorium was crowded with members of the priesthood and other church workers, who gathered to discuss the same problem. The room resounded as if in supplication with old hymns such as "I need Thee every hour," and "Pass me not, O gentle Savior." Bishop DeLapp outlined the annual budget and our present situation with regard to raising it. Opportunity for questions was had.

At the close about forty workers of Lamoni were detailed to go out two by two among the membership of Lamoni in a personal canvass. This work is now going on. The bishopric and presidency had gone over the entire list of membership of the branch and made assignments to workers by districts. Cards for each family were distributed to the workers. This work has been going on quietly and consistently.

In this way the stake bishopric plan to have in hand, by the first of the year, data concerning every member of the stake, data concerning their abilities and attitudes.

In Lamoni this has not been a sensational but an educational movement. The goal of stake workers is toward a general understanding of the church's financial affairs and the creation of a disposition to share responsibility. Certainly more of this aspect of the church's program has been taught during the last three weeks than in any preceding equivalent time.

Every department of the church school has been considering this problem. Leaders and teachers have outlined lesson plans and programs. On Sunday, November 30, many classes followed a lesson plan prepared by local workers on "The budget of 1930." Outlined as an educational problem, it considered such questions as these, "What is a budget?" "How is the church budget prepared?" "What items are included in the budget for 1930?" "How is the money to be raised?" "How much has been raised?" Many teachers had lesson plans of such nature that they could not be interrupted by this special discussion.

During the past two weeks the stake officers have been going out into the branches of the stake, making personal calls on the membership and holding meetings.

The outcome will not be known for a few weeks, but the continued support and spirit of devotion assure good prospects.

Zion City, Illinois

I know of four Latter Day Saints in Zion City. Perhaps there are others. We hope to get the latter-day work started here. Three times I have tried to start meetings but failed. I have found a number here who believe in Joseph Smith as a prophet. There is a man living here who, when he was a young man, helped to mob Elder J. J. Cornish in the State of Michigan, thinking he was a Mormon elder. The mob afterwards learned its mistake. One of the members of this group afterwards joined the church and became an elder. This man, who lives here in Zion City, never tires of telling of the good points of our church members. He says that this elder and he were boyhood chums and are great friends yet.

B. A. WING.

John S. Roth Passes

The passing of John S. Roth on November 25 will be sad news to the many friends and church members who have known and heard him during his long and active career as a missionary and a member of the Seventy. He brought many converts into the ranks of the church. The obituary will appear in a later issue of the Herald.

Independence

Stone Church

Christmas is in the air. The various departments of the Stone Church school are devoting weekday hours to play rehearsals and chorus practices in preparation for the holidays. The juniors at the Campus will present a Christmas play December 21, Sunday, and special exercises of the primary and beginner departments will commemorate another birthday of the Savior. The junior young people (intermediates) will present the beautiful story of Christ's birth in drama form on Christmas Eve at the church. Groups of carol singers are also rehearsing for entertainment on Christmas Eve.

The need for each individual to keep his own covenant with God was emphasized by Bishop A. Carmichael and Patriarch U. W. Greene, both of whom spoke at the adult sacramental service Sunday morning. Bishop Carmichael urged the need for repentance as a constant process in our lives. Brother Greene made a plea that each one should live up to his calling as a child of God, regardless of what other people say or do.

The service was in charge of Elder W. Wallace Smith, who was assisted by Elders H. G. Barto, G. G. Lewis, H. L. Barto, R. T. Cooper, and L. E. Flowers. Organ music was played by Opal Goode Doty.

"God so loved the world" was the theme of the communion service of the junior young people downstairs, and Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge and made the principal talk on the text from John 3:16. At the close of the pastor's address, a chorus of girls sang "Silent night, holy night," unaccompanied. Congregational singing included the hymns: "Tell me the old, old story," "Joy to the world," "Sing of his mighty love," "Love divine," and "God is love." Assisting Brother Sheehy in the stand were Priests W. Earl Page, Roy McNeil, Paul Elliott, Oral Andes, Gerald Phillips, and Roy Davey.

"I have seen Jesus," the opening of a series of four Sunday evening illustrated lectures by President F. M. McDowell, gave the Saints of Independence opportunity to see a number of slide pictures the speaker brought home from his trip abroad. Noted cathedrals of Europe and paintings by the masters convinced the congregation that the people who builded and painted these put the Christ experience of their lives into that which they produced. One can not travel in Europe, says Brother McDowell, without being made to feel the presence of Jesus in art and architecture.

Music from the congregation was led by Pastor J. F. Sheehy, who was assisted in the stand by Elder J. E. Kelsey. "The omnipotence," by Franz Schubert, an anthem by the choir, was directed by Paul N. Craig. Robert and George Miller played an organ-piano selection, "Grand Aria," by Demarest, and Alice M. Burgess, contralto, sang the beautiful solo, "Eye hath not seen," from "The Holy City," by Gounod.

Organizations and Personalities

Colder weather has not stopped work on the new Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, and, according to Lyle Weeks, superintendent of construction, there will be no break in the continuity of the various schedules unless an unexpected cold spell makes this vicinity a visit. Preparations are now being made on the job for the pouring of the sixth floor and the roof. As soon as the main structure is under roof, a great deal of work may be continued in spite of rigorous weather. "This community hospital project," says the Independence Examiner, "at this time has provided many local men with employment during the winter period and at a time when the community is faced with a scarcity of employment, especially in the labor classifications."

Another veteran of the faith has gone to the beyond, Bishop Roderick May, who was more than eighty years of age. His death occurred December 3 at the Independence Sanitarium, where he had been for seven weeks, during which time he sustained two major operations. He had been a resident of Independence forty-seven years, where he was known in business and as a churchman. Born at Glasgow, Scotland, September 15, 1850, he was baptized into the church by J. J. Cornish May 7, 1876, at London, Ontario. He was ordained a priest in 1877, an elder in 1892, a high priest in 1894, and a bishop in 1900. In 1911 he was sent to England by the church, where for ten years he was bishop of the British Isles Mission. Surviving are his widow, Sarah J. May, and five children, all of whom live in Independence: Nephi May, J. Charles May, Alvin R. May, William H. May, and Mrs. Pearl Crick. The funeral was conducted from the Stone Church Friday afternoon, Doctor Joseph Luff, friend and coworker of the deceased for almost fifty years, making the address. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

The Messiah Choir of Independence, numbering two hundred and thirteen voices, will present Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah," in its thirteenth annual concert at the Stone Church the evening of December 21—a Christmas gift to the people of Independence. The choir will be directed by Paul N. Craig and accompanied by the Auditorium Orchestra and Robert and George Miller, organist and pianist. Soloists for the evening performance have been called from the ranks of well-known church soloists: George Anway, tenor; Nina G. Smith, soprano; Gladys Good, contralto; and Arthur Oakman, bass.

One hundred voices picked from the choir will give the oratorio to the radio world over the network of the Columbia Broadcasting System from the studios of K M B C in Kansas City the afternoon of December 21. This special broadcast will occur in place of the "Cathedral hour" program, from one to two o'clock, central standard time.

In the last ten days there have been very profitable meetings of such organizations as the Mothers' Club, the Pen and Ink Club, the Wahdemna Choral Club, various classes of the church school, teachers' councils and quorums of the priesthood.

The White Masque Players have for their December study "The medieval theater," and at the monthly program last night listened to a lecture on that theme from L. E. Flowers. "The Towneley play" from Miracle Plays was reviewed by Irene Layton, and the dramatization of scene VI, "The Towneley play," was directed by Sister J. A. Gardner. Music was arranged by Marcine Smith. The Stone Church dining hall was the gathering place for the club, and Margaret Hunt was the hostess of the evening.

Following the regular weekly rehearsal last Thursday evening, the Stone Church Choir took action to reinstate for the coming year its entire corps of officers: President, Evan A. Fry; vice president, Clarence Resch; secretary, Ruth Lewis Holman; treasurer, Muriel Kirk Stover; librarian, Essie Isenhart. Paul N. Craig will continue to conduct the work of the choir, and Robert Miller will be the accompanist.

Walnut Park

The outstanding event of the week at Walnut Park was the presentation by the Walnut Park Choir of Maunder's sacred cantata, "Olivet to Calvary." It was presented very effectively, and all the parts in the program moved forward smoothly and reverently. This cantata fitted in nicely with the purpose and spirit of sacrament Sunday, inasmuch as it depicted the closing scenes of Christ's life upon earth, including the institution of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The choir was directed by Sister Minnie Scott Dobson, assisted by Sister John Reynolds at the piano and the following soloists: Sisters Marian Campbell and Lyle Weaver, sopranos; Carletta Norman, contralto; Brothers Leonard Hoisington and Erwin Moorman, tenors; and Kenneth Morford, bass. The choir was composed of twenty-five voices.

One of the beautiful features of the presentation were the responses from the balcony sung by the Walnut Park quartet, composed of Delta Maurine Nace, soprano; Arlon Chapman, tenor; Myrtle Carr, alto; and Milford Nace, bass.

These responses were sung without piano accompaniment and had a wonderful effect upon the congregation.

While the offering was being received between the first and second parts of the cantata, Brother Earl Cox played on the cornet "Nearer, my God, to thee," the beautiful strains of this hymn being wafted up from the basement. As was announced, the purpose of this offering was to start a fund for the purchase of the new hymnals for the Walnut Park Church. There was an attendance of about three hundred ten at this service, the crowd almost filling the main auditorium, with eighteen seats occupied in the balcony.

The morning sacramental service was in charge of the pastor, Elder S. C. Smith. The new bishop's agent in Independence, Elder J. Stanley Kelley, gave a very fitting talk preceding the oblation, as also did Elder C. Ed. Miller preceding the sacrament. Others assisting in the service were Elders W. W. Scott, C. L. Olson, Fred Lanpher, and R. Barnhardt. A total of almost three hundred and ninety were present at this service.

Englewood

The month of November ended at Englewood Church with a dinner the night before Thanksgiving followed by services and a large crowd at Sunday school and church the following Sabbath. Two members of the Presidency, F. M. Smith and F. M. McDowell, were present for the dinner, which was served to one hundred and eighty-seven members. Elder J. F. Sheehy offered prayer. There were short talks by Brothers Smith and McDowell. A special program was also given.

The communion service for December was in charge of Brothers Dewey McNamara and Perry Hiles, the opening remarks being made by Brother Goombridge, from Michigan.

Sister L. W. Fike, superintendent of the primary department of the Sunday school, is practicing the children for the Christmas program, which this year will be given the Tuesday before Christmas. She is assisted in this work by Sister McNamara. It has been rumored around the church that Santa Claus will appear that night to take the last orders for Christmas and that perhaps he will have a small treat for the children.

Enoch Hill

December's church school program opened propitiously last Sunday morning with a Christmas story concerning the shepherd who turned back, read by Sister Agnes Hartman. Superintendent Charles Warren was in charge of the session.

The communion service which followed was one of Enoch Hill's outstanding experiences of the year. A peaceful, helpful spirit pervaded the congregation, and the meeting progressed under the leadership of Pastor O. W. Sarratt, returned after his long illness, and the corps of assisting local priesthood. No time was allowed to slip by unused, the Saints being very active and sincere in testimony. All sensed the blessings for which we should be thankful this centennial year and sought to express gratitude for them and hope for the new year. A baby was blessed.

In the evening the Saints listened to a splendid discourse by Elder Carl V. Hopkins.

The union prayer service at the church last Wednesday evening brought together Saints of all the groups on Enoch Hill and ended a week of fasting and prayer for the condition of local Saints and the general church. A fine worship response was given by the large congregation in charge of Elder W. J. Brewer.

Kansas City Stake

Stake Conference Business Meeting

The business session of the forty-eighth Kansas City stake conference was held November 24, at 7.45 in the evening, at Central Church, in charge of the stake presidency, C. E. Wight, C. D. Jellings, and C. G. Mesley, and the stake bishop, C. A. Skinner. The opening prayer was by Elder C. D. Jellings. Minutes of the former conference were read and approved. The message of the stake presidency was read by Elder C. E. Wight and referred to the work of the stake secretary and recorder, elders' quorum, and report of the stake bishopric, all of which showed a healthy condition. It commended the work of the stake missionaries, G. T. Richards and H. H. Sevy, and spoke of the basket ball league started last year and continued this year by the O. B. K. organization.

The recent leadership school continued to carry forward the high measure of success attained by previous annual schools. The work of the priesthood has been in many instances an inspiration to the presiding officers. Real educational work carried on for the purpose of better developing those in a position of leadership will be had. It is expected that those chosen for priesthood duties will be given a course of training before ordination. Stake statistics include the following: Children blessed, 27; marriages, 41; ordinations, 5; divorces, 3.

A report from the boys' department, W. O. Hands, leader, stated that during the past six months advancement had been made, the most active scoutmaster being Brother Frank Tuttle of Argentine Church, who has a troop in his own home town and is also helping the Armourdale Church to get its scout program in operation. A troop has been organized at Bennington Church; and the troop at Chelsea Church, led by Brother Abe Sears, is active.

A good report from the elders' quorum, Elders W. S. Brown, president, E. W. Lloyd, secretary, and J. R. Lloyd, instructor, was read. Brother Clair Green, of the Heathwood Church, was recommended for ordination to the office of deacon; also from the same church Brother Thomas Devenney was recommended to hold the office of priest; Brother William Powell, of Armourdale Church, to the office of priest, all by the high council of the stake. These names were approved by motion, and ordination was provided for.

The list of officers was completed for Gladstone church school: A. R. Moore, director of adult division; Bob Davis, director of young people's division; Sister C. A. Selbe, of the children's division. This action was approved.

Because of resignations of some of the officers of the Armourdale church school, the following were presented: Director of religious education, Ed. Sanders; young people's division, Sister Ed. Sanders; children's division, Sister E. R. Babcock. This too was approved.

Elder G. T. Richards, stake missionary, made an oral report for himself and Elder H. H. Sevy. They held cottage meetings in Grandview, Quindaro, Fourth, and Gladstone Church districts, a number being baptized and some interested.

Central Church

On Wednesday evening, December 3, Saints of Central Church heartily accepted the invitation extended by its officers to partake of the evening meal at the church. About one hundred and fifty attended. The dinner was prepared by the Central Women's Club and consisted of roast loin of pork and dressing, candied sweet potatoes, jellied baked apple, green beans, bread and butter, spiced cup cakes, and whipped cream. Bishop C. A. Skinner acted as toastmaster and Brother Clayton Wolfe led the community singing. Everyone entered into the spirit of the occasion. This was thought to be the best manner in which to get the people together to outline the 1931 program. The church school was represented by its head, Elder George Mesley; the bishopric by Bishop F. B. Blair; the Woman's Club by Sister Minnie Paxton; finance committee, Elder Harvey Sandy, who has been a great aid in this line; and Elder Cyril E. Wight, the pastor, put on the finishing touches and sent those present home with more determination to make 1931 a bigger and better year than any other in the history of the church by meeting their obligations in the way of tithing, free will offerings, and local expense, that the present handicap for lack of necessary funds be overcome and the work of the church go forward. Rebecca Dunn gave a fine reading.

The opening exercises of the church school at 9.45 Sunday morning consisted of a hymn sung under the direction of Eugene Christy; the invocation offered by Brother Roy Pritchard, after which "One hour with Jesus" was sung by a ladies' quartet composed of Marcene Murphy, Amy Blankenship, Dorothy Eden, and Melva Blankenship. Sister Alice Smeeton assisted at the piano.

Following the lesson study with the assembly in the main auditorium, preparation was made for the serving of the sacrament. Elder George Mesley was in charge of this service, assisted by Bishop F. B. Blair. Prior to the blessing of the emblems, the little son of Brother Charles and Sister Alice Massie was blessed by Brothers Blair and Mesley and given the name Charles Lewellyn, jr.

At the conclusion of the sacramental service a number of short, inspiring testimonies were given, the general trend being a summing up of the year 1930 with all its blessings, each one expressing a desire to press forward the coming year.

Preceding the 7.45 evening service the choir gave its usual half hour monthly concert under the direction of George Anway. They sang two anthems, "O come to my heart, Lord Jesus," by Ambrose, and "Appear, thou Light Divine," by Morrison. Bishop C. A. Skinner was the speaker of the evening.

The Women's Club of Central have arranged a bazaar to be held on Friday evening at the church, the proceeds to go to the bishop to aid in the building fund.

Basket-ball season is again here, and last week Central team defeated Gladstone by a score of 21 to 11. Last night they met Chelsea at the Woodland School.

Quindaro Church

Bishop C. A. Skinner was the speaker November 16, his theme being, "The finished product or the making of Zion." In the evening Elder and Sister R. D. Weaver were present, and Brother Weaver preached on the text from 1 Corinthians 12: 31: "Covet earnestly the best gifts."

Stake Missionaries Richards and Seevy are actively visiting and encouraging the Saints. Afternoon meetings are being held at the homes of Sisters E. N. Palmer, Charles Schrivener, and Sister Gaunce. Several nonmembers have been present and manifested interest in the gospel story.

A thanksgiving service was held at the church from nine until ten o'clock on Thanksgiving Day by Pastor H. A. Higgins and Brother Albert Hallier. The prayers, songs, and testimonies showed a spirit of thankfulness for the blessings received during the past year.

Argentine Church

Elder Ellis B. Rathbun, of Holden Stake, was the speaker on a recent Sunday evening, drawing a lesson from Matthew 24: 4-6; Isaiah 62: 10; 58: 10, and Revelation 6. His effort

Our Departed Ones

WILLIAMS.—Daniel W. Williams was born in Mayes County, Ohio, December 13, 1877. After an illness of but a few hours, he passed from this life November 15, 1930, at his home in Tulsa. He had lived in Tulsa the past seventeen years, moving here from Adamson, Oklahoma. His vocation was that of a licensed engineer. He became a member of the church in February, 1892, living a true Christian life, loyal to the church to the time of his death. He was united in marriage at Wilburton, Oklahoma, September 27, 1902, to Mary Bedwell, who survives him with two sons, Clifford and Vernon Williams, one stepson, Bert Williams, two grandchildren, all of Tulsa. Two daughters and one son preceded him in death. He also leaves an aged mother, four brothers, and three sisters, of Columbus, Ohio. Funeral services were conducted from the Saints' church in Tulsa, Monday afternoon, November 17. Elder William Bath offered prayer, and the sermon was by Elder O. A. McDowell. Interment was in one of Tulsa's beautiful cemeteries.

was to show that things predicted in these scriptures are coming to pass at the present time, and he impressed his hearers that we must be careful not to be deceived, for many are coming in His name to lead men astray.

Argentine and Armourdale are joining to practice a cantata for Christmas. It will be given at both churches on December 21 and 28, respectively.

He Came

Not to the great or powerful,
Not to the throne He came;
Not for the might of majesty,
Not for wealth or fame.

But as a child in a mother's arms,
A child like the sons of men
Whose lives were passed in toil and care—
He shared their grief and pain.

He was a man, but the Son of God,
He died for the sake of others;
He died at their hands for one small thing—
He tried to make them brothers.

—L. L.

Christmas Greetings

The Presidency and other editors of the Herald extend to our readers, and all the Saints, fraternal greetings of love and saintly regard. May the rich meaning of Christmas have full play in your lives; and as joy, peace, good will, and cheer find their way in varying degrees into the homes and hearts of our people, may we look up to God with deeper faith, firmer trust, broader outlook, less reserved consecration, and with greater determination to serve him more faithfully, and bring that determination into fruition by finer service to the church and our fellow men.

We have cause to rejoice because we have made progress towards our ideals; but our rejoicing may well be refined by the consciousness that we have much yet to do which will require strength and courage which spring only from a conscious contact with the Spirit of God.

May the spirit of the Christ Child gladden our hearts and homes, and may we clearly see in the manger-cradled Babe the symbol of the great love in which Deity made his gift to man. And as we envisage the picture of that humble birth-chamber graced by the adoration of the wise men who prophetically saw and sensed the great importance of that event, let us try to see how that picture is glorified and beautified by the shadings and colorings of the life work and experiences of that divinely led child as he took his world-affecting march to Calvary where his record was sealed, and his testimony given signature by the episode of the cross. Let our joy at his birth be refined by a comprehension of his majestic life. Thus Christmas will be sanctified with a joy divine and a peace which will encompass our fellow men in good will.

Christmas greeting, readers of the Herald! May peace and happiness abound. F. M. S.

Week of Prayer

A week of prayer will be observed January 4 to 11, and the themes and suggestions for use during the week appear on page 1372 of this issue of the Herald.

It is well that these seasons of prayer shall be observed, and it is hoped that the Saints will enter upon this period with zeal and earnestness; for it is well that our minds shall be fixed upon our objectives and our interest kept alive; and there is no finer way of doing this than the observance of prayer with definite things for which to offer our oblations and petitions. May the Saints be blessed in their observance of prayer week. F. M. S.

Behind the Gift, the Spirit

"God so loved the world that he gave . . ."

And thus was set by Divinity himself the spirit of Christmas. Giving is an outgrowth and concomitant of love; and the deepest and richest love gives without reserve the best. It never asks, What is the smallest gift I can make? but always: What is the most precious gift within my power?

And so God gave his Son.

The priceless value of the Gift is matched only by the purpose for which it was made. That was the ransom of man's salvation.

The spirit of Christmas, the day on which the Supreme Being made his gift, is still a day of giving. We buy our gifts, we create them, we prepare them for those to whom we wish to express our love. And what pleasure in preparing them for the occasion when they pass into the hands of those for which the Liebesgaben were secured!

God's gift was to all who "believed on Him." To comprehend that great gift and thus be able to emulate it in spirit one must sense the Weltschmerz or world pain, which is sympathy in its broadest sense. If God, then, gave his Son for us, is it not a logical conclusion that our best celebration of Christmas is to be found in giving to the Master, or for his sake? He gave his life. What limit, then, shall we place upon our giving? None short of our all when it is for his sake.

Man's proneness towards selfishness is responsible for the lowering of the standard of Christmas giving by limiting it to the circle of those with whom exchanges are made, rather than to causes which have for their ideals the larger services of humanity and the fulfillment of Divine purposes.

I would not have anyone fail in trying to strengthen the ties of love binding those who move in the smaller circles of common experiences and interests, by family ties; but to us who strive for larger ideals, our goals whose gaining will involve the welfare of thousands, every occasion of religious significance should give rise to thoughts which should lift us above the realms of self-serving interests into that group of ideas which cluster about service to humanity. God so loved the world that he gave us the Christ. The Christ so loved us that he gave us his life. Let our giving, then, be influenced by the Christ idea. This will give to the whole Christmas idea a higher tone, a richer signature.

I can conceive how a family, caught up in this higher conception of the meaning of Christmas, might by common consent and planning pool their giving powers, and in the spirit of the season sanctified by memories of the Christ Child, make gifts of sacrifice and consecration which have for their objective helping a cause which is leading to broader service for humanity. Such would be purposive giving of a higher order, an advancement towards some of the more spiritual conditions which we have long had as a goal.

Let us give, and in our giving remember the spiritual significance of the Great First Christmas Gift.

Indianapolis Goes Over

From Indianapolis comes an encouraging telegram, which shows the Saints of that branch to be very alert and earnest in their desire to respond to the general appeal to the members of the church. The telegram follows:

Report just sending to bishop's agent will doubtless offer encouragement to you. Our pledge to your appeal of December the fifteenth was one hundred dollars for Indianapolis. Actual results are two hundred and one dollars and fifty cents for tithes and offerings alone. Branch response is ninety-eight per cent. I am happy to offer such a report.

ARTHUR W. GAGE.

A church-wide response such as the Indianapolis Saints have given will enable the Presiding Bishopric to accomplish their objective announced three weeks ago, "Every missionary's allowance paid in full before Christmas."

"Messiah" Broadcast by These Stations

By J. A. Gardner,
Department of Publicity.

The announcement that the Independence Messiah Choir will broadcast Handel's Oratorio, The Messiah, Sunday afternoon, December 21, from 1 to 2 p. m. (Central Standard Time), has been eagerly received by music lovers throughout the church.

In response to many requests for information regarding the stations accepting this program from the Columbia Chain, we are printing the call letters and names of the cities where these relay stations are located. This will enable those who wish to hear this broadcast to tune in to the nearest station. It is again suggested that members of the church who are planning to hear this program gather in groups where receiving sets are available. Another suggestion is that receiving sets be installed in churches which will make the program available to an even much larger number of people. The list of stations is as follows:

W A B C	New York City.
W 2 X E	New York City.
W P G	Atlantic City, New Jersey.
W C A O	Baltimore, Maryland.
W B R C	Birmingham, Alabama.
W N A C	Boston, Massachusetts.

OFFICIAL

The Spirit That Wins

Communications from all quarters have reached the Presidency's office telling of the intensive, unified effort that has been made to provide every member of the church an opportunity to comply now with the financial law. A score of letters every day tell a story, a story of that sort of unity of purpose and consecrated devotion that always wins. But the goal has not been reached yet.

Making Every Day Count

It is very necessary that this survey of church membership be completed at once. Those who are dependent on the church for support should receive their allowances in full before Christmas. We are sure that no one would have it otherwise.

Every day must be made to count. Every member must be visited. Every member must be given a chance to share. The first opportunity, of course, should be given to those who have not contributed this year, but no one should neglect the opportunity of giving. Only a very few days remain for the task. No one should feel that his help is not needed. Everyone should contribute in order to give proper support to the missionaries and church workers.

hundred dollars have already been collected, and they hoped to finish their canvass by December 10.

Bert S. Turner, bishop's agent of the Central Michigan District, reports that he with the district president, Elder J. W. Peterson, and District Missionary Arthur Oakman, have been getting the district organized in an attempt to reach every member of the church in that locality. He reports fine cooperation.

David E. Dowker, pastor of the Boston, Massachusetts, Branch, reports that twenty-eight new persons have been secured on the contribution list this month. Sunday, December 14, was designated as a special day for the district bishopric, to emphasize the appeal for tithes and offerings.

R. Melvin Russell, president of the Central Nebraska District, reports that the district presidency and the bishop's agent have worked out a plan for organization and that they are not only determined to reach every member in the branches but also the isolated members in that area.

F. C. Bevan, in company with Bishop Charles Fry, has been working successfully in the Nauvoo District and reports that the district is but $800 short of its $7,000 quota for the year. Plans are being made to visit the isolated members in the district.

A letter from Frank McDonald, president of the Spring River District, contains the following paragraph: "I think you may depend on the Spring River District to carry its share of the load. It will probably do more than could reasonably be expected under the circumstances."

A. M. Chase, pastor of the Montrose, Iowa, Branch, reports that the local priesthood are making a personal call on the members of the branches, and a large number have promised to be "counted" during December. He reports that a canvass is also being made in Keokuk, Iowa.

A letter from George Mesley, of the Kansas City stake presidency, states that the local ministry are carrying the appeal to every member in Kansas City that can be reached, and hope to finish the canvass in a few days.

E. F. Robertson, president of the Western Maine District, reports that work of solicitation is being presented and organized in several branches in that field. He believes that the members in Maine will respond.

E. J. Lenox, president of the Southern Nebraska District, and Brother E. M. Anderson have organized the forces of the Lincoln, Nebraska, branch and are calling at the homes of the members and presenting the appeal for tithes and offerings.

The pastor of the Minneapolis, Minnesota, Branch, Vernon Lundeen, reports a complete organization in that branch and anticipates a good response.

A report from James Skelding, pastor of the Saint Thomas, Ontario, Branch, reports a substantial contribution in tithes and offerings as a result of direct solicitation, and expects to forward an additional amount before the end of the month.

The pastor of the Wichita, Kansas, congregation, Arthur E. Stoff, reports a good response as the first fruits of the solicitation being made in Wichita. He is quite confident that an additional amount will be added before the end of the month.

It is evident that the branches in the Northwestern Iowa District are fully organized and alert to the needs of the church. The branch at Missouri Valley up to December 10 had collected $855 and reports that the canvass of every member is still going on.

Steven Robinson, counselor of Bishop Charles Fry in the Des Moines District, writes: "Every branch in our district is making every possible effort to help the Des Moines District reach its goal. The priesthood of the district are active and taking the lead in paying their tithing. The Des Moines Branch thus far will furnish $1,000 in tithes on or before December 31. When the reports for other branches in this district are completed, this amount will be considerably increased."

Bishop's Agent Lee White, reporting for the Rock Island District, states that members in most of the branches are rallying to the support of the church and are anxious to see the missionaries' families receive their past-due allowances. He reports: "We have individual contributions in tithes and offerings which seem to be indicative of the fine purpose and high spirit of the Saints in the Rock Island District."

W. E. Rogers, pastor of the Jonesport, Maine, congregation, states: "We are well organized and ready to do our part and have been working to reach our quota of $500 for Christmas offering. We have nearly reached it. We are also doing our utmost to help our district reach its quota of $5,500. We have over $4,000 now, and many favorable reports indicate that the district will very likely send in the full amount. We have baptized twenty-two this year, and each one is converted to the whole gospel law."

T. J. Elliott, president of the New York and Philadelphia District, writes that their forces were put to work immediately on receipt of the first announcement of this church-wide appeal for tithes and offerings. A very definite attempt is being made to reach all members of the church in this area. District and branch officers are cooperating, and a substantial response is anticipated.

Doctor P. L. Weegar, president of the New York District, writes as follows: "We have organized an 'every member canvass week,' beginning Sunday, December 7. We hope to have a favorable report by December 15, with substantial results.

The spirit and energy of these responses convinces one of the vitality of the organization. Of course it is difficult, with hard financial conditions putting every organization to a test, and making the utmost demands upon individuals, to keep up the volume of voluntary contributions. But the work of the church should continue moving and growing in spite of temporarily adverse conditions. We hope and trust that the membership will provide the necessary means for it to do so.

Why the Church Must Teach

SITUATION—OPINION—TESTIMONIAL—CONVICTION

By F. M. McDowell

The morning paper tells of the arrest and conviction of two seventeen-year-old boys who last week held up an oil station and deliberately shot the man in charge. That such things are happening almost every day in the United States constitutes a situation that ought to give every thinking citizen the most serious concern.

Just a few days ago I chanced to overhear a casual remark of a prominent churchman to this effect: "It will take something more heroic than religion to stem the tide of juvenile crime." This is opinion.

The Best Moral Stabilizer

Made freshly aware of the fact of juvenile crime this morning, remembering too the expressed opinion of the prominent churchman, I turned in my notes to a testimonial recently furnished by Judge Lewis L. Fawcett, a judge of the New York State Supreme Court who has served for twenty-three years on the bench. His statement follows:

"Permit me to state that my experience during twenty-three years on the bench, in which time over 4,000 boys under the age of 21 years were convicted of crime before me, of whom but three were members of a Sabbath school, has satisfied me of the value of Sabbath schools to the community, in helping safeguard it, to the extent to which Sabbath schools exist, from the growth of criminals.

"My experience also satisfies me of their value to the individual.

"In 1,902 cases of suspended criminal sentences, in each of which a minister, priest, or rabbi became interested at my request, only sixty-two of the boys were brought back for violation of the conditions of parole. I believe the reform in the remaining cases, over 1,000, was prompt and permanent.

"In fact, I regard our Sabbath schools, including those of all faiths, as the only effective means to stem the rising tide of vice and crime among our youth. Society carries the heavy burden of criminality, chiefly because of the lack of religious training of the youth."

The editor of one of our large city newspapers in commenting upon the above testimonial has this to say:

"You can afford to read that over a second time. Even those who believe the Sunday school should be expanded and developed into something much more than it is in the average church will not deny the desirability of religious training for youth. It is the finest, most efficient moral stabilizer the world has yet evolved."

Conviction

The purpose of this series of articles has been to express what has come to be a deep-seated personal conviction. This conviction has been summed up repeatedly in the words, The church must teach. Support of this conviction has been found in the message, the method, and the divine commission of Christ. Consideration, too, has been given to the fundamental needs of man and society. All of these discussions have left us with the conclusion that religion is absolutely essential to the production of a stabilized character and an enduring social order, and that consequently the teaching of religion is of utmost importance.

It is to the church that we must look for the perpetuation of the fundamental religious ideals and values which appear to be so essential to social welfare. Other agencies may aid in this work, but the church must take the lead. From this responsibility there is no logical way of escape. This is our conviction.

A Vital Task

The task before the church is vital. It involves the fulfillment of God's plan for humanity. The interests of "the kingdom" are at stake. For this work the church will be required to call repeatedly upon that great fund of knowledge, skill, and technique which has accumulated as a result of the study and travail of men through all the ages. The church dare not overlook these experiences or the lessons which they teach.

Most certainly a valuable part of this accumulated experience is found in our mastery of the teaching art. Teaching is the human means we have found to be most effective in the building of individual character and in bringing social control. Such tasks are so closely allied with the work of the church that they can not and must not be separated.

In its teaching the church is merely attempting to cooperate intelligently and efficiently with God. To fail to make use of the rich educational experience of the race would be the worst of folly on the part of the church. Unless the church is to fail in its mission, it must teach—teach more scientifically, more systematically, more patiently, and more in the love of God than ever before.

The Spirit of Meekness

By J. E. Vanderwood

The meek shall inherit the earth; and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace.—Psalms 37: 11.

Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.—Matthew 5: 5.

Let your preaching be the warning voice, every man to his neighbor, in mildness and in meekness.—Doctrine and Covenants 38: 9.

A commandment I give unto you, that ye shall declare whatsoever things ye declare in my name, in solemnity of heart, in the spirit of meekness, in all things.—Doctrine and Covenants 97: 2.

As the years crowd in upon us, and as our experiences are widened, we are made to see many things that through our youthful illusions escaped us. It is therefore not at all strange that we should see in the gospel of Christ now many things that once were hid from our view. In earlier years there was a tendency to write and speak in a rather dogmatic way, to make the argument in a forceful and impetuous mood, and to have but little regard for the feelings of others. While these characteristics accompanied our work, the foregoing scriptures were read with very little meaning; they were vaguely understood, and the stress was placed upon the things that seemed to have a strong, compelling force. Today I smile as I think of the zeal of youth, of its ambitions, and how little the undeveloped mind is able to appreciate the richer truths of the gospel.

Jesus knew how to approach men, and he was able to give us both by example and by verbal instruction the methods to be employed in our endeavor to teach men the things that belong to the kingdom of God. It is indeed surprising to see how the spirit of meekness characterized him in practically all that he did and said as he taught among men on the earth.

Constantly he reminded them to learn of him, and to follow him, and if we do this we are required to learn somewhat the meaning of the spirit of meekness. Quite often we fail to evaluate properly the message that comes to us because we have not properly understood the terms in which it is to be expressed or conveyed to others. Let us consider the meaning of the term meekness, that thereby we may be the better able to understand. "Meekness," says Doctor Charles Buck in his Bible Dictionary, "is a disposition that is not easily provoked to resentment." And Doctor William Smith says that it is a tendency to "rather suffer wrong than to do wrong," so that according to these definitions we are able to understand better what the word is intended to convey as used in the Scriptures. Without question Jesus was meek in his manner of approach and in his instruction to the people. He would have us learn of him if we would become proficient in the work unto which we have been called.

Meekness and Ability

I have heard brilliant men, of scholarly training, who have lacked the humility that should characterize a minister of Christ; and therefore they lacked the ability to cause others to understand Christ. I have seen other men who were lacking in both brilliance and information, but who radiated from their very person the spirit of meekness, and because of this they were able to win men to Christ. Again I have found well-informed men who were possessed of the spirit of meekness, who constantly improved their ability to express in words the message they bore. This reveals to us the secret of the power that accompanied such men as J. J. Cornish. Everyone who is acquainted with this good man will readily see how fully he carried into his message the instruction given to the early ministry of the church, for his message was surely declared in solemnity of heart, and in the spirit of meekness. Yes, it was the mildness and the meekness of this servant of the Master that enabled him to win so many souls for Christ.

A Fine Example

This, then, should be a reminder to all of us, that the most essential thing for those who would represent the Master is to come into possession of the spirit of meekness that shall cause all with whom we come in contact to realize that we have been with Jesus. I know a man who can neither read nor write, and it has been my privilege to share his hospitality and to be acquainted with his inner life. This man was a very successful man in winning people to Christ. He went about among his neighbors and friends, and also the people of the community or city in which he resided, and his spirit of meekness was such as would commend him to any man. He talked gospel so far as he knew it, and he carried tracts with him wherever he went. He knew their contents very well, for he had learned them through having his wife read them to him. He would say to the people, "I have this little booklet which treats of this subject, and I would be glad to have you read it." He would meekly decline trying to answer anything that was beyond his knowledge. He would say honestly, "I am unable to answer that. I will get some one who can answer it for you, or I will bring you some literature that will give you the information you desire, but I am unable to give it myself." The meekness of this good man enabled him to win many people to the church. While he could neither read nor write, he was nevertheless educated, for he knew how to be a gentleman, and he knew how to reveal Christ in his conversation and in his conduct toward others. His preaching was the warning voice, in mildness and in meekness. It was surprising, too, how convincing his reasoning became to the people who knew him, for his sincerity, his honesty, and his meekness would command the admiration and respect of anyone who had the least appreciation for that which is pure and lovely. I have sat at the feet of masters, but never have I learned more than I did from this humble man who was able to reveal Christ in all his life and actions among men. As I studied him, I said, this man has a personality, and that personality is fashioned after the one whom he has come to admire. This man was a humble follower of Christ, and he was filled with the spirit of meekness and gentleness.

And Kindness

Meekness is always coupled with kindness, therefore the meek man will be a bearer of a message of kindness. He will not be concerned in winning notoriety for himself, but he will be greatly concerned in winning men to the spirit of the Master. He will very graciously surrender his own life and its possibilities to the spirit of meekness that he finds in the life and character of Christ. He will constantly employ a kind and sympathetic method of approaching and appealing to those whom he would win to the cause for which Jesus gave his life. The gentleness of his reproof, if such be given, will penetrate to the heart, and the mildness of his speech will speak in tones louder than the thunders of Mount Sinai; for after all it is the mildness of the message of our blessed Lord that makes it so wondrously forceful.

That men of this nature shall inherit the earth, there can be no question, for everything must ultimately yield to the spirit of meekness, and when the people of the church have come to understand fully the spirit and meaning of the message that has been given unto us there will be no question about the growth and development of the church itself, for the very presence of God shall accompany the people who by the spirit of meekness reveal him in their dealings with the children of men. The man who would conquer by force shall himself be conquered by force, but he who through the spirit of meekness has brought himself into subjection to the divine law, and thereby has become a partaker of the divine nature, shall inherit all things. In its last analysis meekness reveals strength. There was no one so meek as Jesus, and no one ever possessed power beyond him. When we have learned to possess his meekness we may also come to possess his power, but until then we shall find ourselves weak and like other men.

Meekness is never expressed in wrath, therefore we may know that the wrathful man is not the meek man. It is interesting here to read the word of counsel to the members of the Presidency as they were to make their return from Zion to Kirtland. They were instructed to lift up their voice and proclaim the message of life to the people as they went on their way. And they were instructed to lift up their voice, "and declare my word with a loud voice, without wrath or doubting." I have read this many times but not until today did it carry to me such a forceful message. Wrath and doubting go together; they are both the opposites of meekness. The meek man is never wrathful, nor is he doubting. In the same revelation instruction is given to the eldership in general concerning their preaching among the wicked, so it is evident that it has to do with the message of repentance, and we read, "Not in haste, neither in wrath nor with strife." Surely when we come to study the message of God to us we see that the elements of haste, of wrath, of doubting, of strife, are all restricted. If we analyze these things, we will find they are the opposites of meekness. Therefore, if we would successfully overcome our own weaknesses and represent the Master of life, we must come to deport ourselves in meekness, and by this means cause our fellow men to understand his message and desire a part in it. Surely this offers us opportunity for a magnificent work. Are we willing to arise and meet the demands it makes of us?

A Christmas Prayer

We thank thee, O Christmas Christ, that thy cradle was so low that shepherds, poorest and simplest of all earthly folk, could yet kneel beside it and look level-eyed into the face of God. We thank thee that thy cradle was so high that Magi, lords of learning and of wealth, could yet come to it by a star's pathway, to hazard their wisdom's store into thy baby hands. We thank thee that, having grown in stature, and being a carpenter, thou didst fashion a Christmas altar, which should be the possession of the ages, and where no priest save love should serve; so that all human necessity, all knowledge, all simplicity, all wealth, all poverty, all joy, all sorrow, all righteousness, all sin might find sanctuary there. Be this our Christmas haste, O Christmas Christ, to seek that altar, and at this season of thy birth, unafraid of the time's complaint, may we be found kneeling still. Amen.—Robert Nelson Spencer.

Teeth, Food, and Health

By J. A. Ferris

In the October number of the American Magazine there appears an article written by John Griffin under the heading, "How to do dodge the dentist."

Mr. Griffin describes with considerable detail the work of Doctor Percy R. Howe, head of the Forsyth Dental Infirmary, lecturer at the Harvard Medical and Dental School, and one of America's leading authorities on dentistry.

Doctor Howe is the active head of this great Boston infirmary, which has a four million dollar endowment.

This article advises the drinking of a quart of milk a day, the eating of plenty of fruit and vegetables (raw vegetables preferred) if we would "dodge the dentist."

Doctor Howe is quoted:

Tooth decay is one of the penalties of civilization. Archæologists have revealed that primitive man, who dined on raw, natural foods, had perfect teeth. And that is what started me on my experiments. The monkeys you see in those cages have been my helpers. This [he picked up one of the skulls on his desk] is the head of one that was fed on orange juice and raw vegetables. Notice the even, well-preserved teeth. [He dropped it, chose another which contained only a few scattered teeth.] And here is a fellow who lived on cooked meat and cereals.

Doctor Howe contends that if the proper foods are eaten to establish sound teeth, the whole body will be benefited, and good health will result:

Decay of teeth is not, as many people still believe, caused by bacteria. It is a form of bone degeneration resulting from improper food, food lacking in mineral salts and the mysterious vitamin C, the substance which preserves and builds up our bones. Orange juice is particularly rich in this vitamin, and other fruits and vegetables contain it in varying degrees.

Americans suffer from many diseases, many of which have their source in the stomach.

The average American eats too much, and, in addition, makes a wrong selection of food. Meat is consumed in large quantities by the average individual. Eaten very moderately in connection with the proper vegetables and fruits, meat is of value.

Many people attribute their long life and good health to a vegetable or near-vegetarian diet. As a result of the growing interest in health, we find in cities like New York and Los Angeles many vegetarian restaurants. Their increase in the future should be rapid because of the wide publicity given to articles written by reliable authorities favoring a milk, fruit, and vegetable diet.

"Wheat for man" was revealed by divine revelation to the church about one hundred years ago. Every modern food expert that I know of agrees with this revelation. A number of experts have advised eating whole or cracked wheat only partly cooked, and one authority states that wheat soaked overnight and eaten raw is very beneficial and gives the teeth (grinders) a proper amount of work. Personally I can testify that I have proved the worth of whole and cracked wheat. This has been soaked in water overnight and cooked slowly. Latter Day Saints can cut down their food bill at least twenty per cent by eating wheat and reducing their meat consumption. In every case their health will improve.

All grain is good for the food of man, as also the fruit of the vine, that which yieldeth fruit, whether in the ground or above the ground.—Doctrine and Covenants 86:2.

The best food experts will agree with this part of the Word of Wisdom (as well as every other part); and the proof of the pudding is in the eating. Will you try it out? "Every fruit in the season thereof" God revealed one hundred years ago. Is fruit valuable as a food? The greatest food experts of the day say it is.

Yea, flesh also of beasts and of the fowls of the air, I, the Lord, have ordained for the use of man, with thanksgiving. Nevertheless, they are to be used sparingly; and it is pleasing unto me that they should not be used only in times of winter or of cold, or famine.

Doctor Howe, in agreement with this thought, states that man was not created to be a heavy consumer of meat, although meat, used sparingly, is a valuable food for man.

With all the foregoing, bathing the body, giving it plenty of sunlight, breathing fresh air day and night, and exercising according to the age and environment of the individual are necessary.

In conclusion let me quote from the Strength magazine for October regarding a special work undertaken by the University of Texas:

Down at the University of Texas there is a corrective physical training department, in which Nature's own methods are drafted into use in rebuilding broken bodies, a department originated and made successful through the efforts of this one man, Major S. N. Ekdahl.

Unique methods, devised by the founder of the department, have proved so successful and are becoming so widely known throughout the State that today many students are enrolling in the university primarily to enjoy the benefits of Major Ekdahl's training. Over one hundred and fifty health seekers are now under his individual care.

There is behind him a lifetime of experimentation with physical rehabilitation in which he has constantly sought to replace the surgeon's knife with Nature.

Thus the gospel of correct eating is being spread by many and various agencies, and the work of changing man's bad habits and poor health to sane practices that will lead to happiness and strength, goes on. Our own special teachings should strengthen us in the determination to profit by the rules of health and to teach others to do so.

Understanding Youth

By C. B. W.

Frequently papers written as a part of our correspondence courses in Religious Education and Leadership make some most valuable contributions to our literature and uncover some outstanding personalities who should be given encouragement in further work for the church.

The following is quoted from an examination paper:

"Not having a boy of my own, I do not know very much about the boys of my neighborhood, only as their mothers tell me. I know that at one time we had a fine group of boys, and their leader was a Latter Day Saint boy. He was a boy that had come up through surroundings and environments that would cause most boys to go to the bad. But there was that something implanted in that boy's heart and mind by his mother, and his loyalty to the church, that made him a boy that was a worthy leader. He had started out selling newspapers on the streets at a very early age. His home was not the most pleasant place in the world. His father was not religious and often cursed the children. Because the mother had to take in washing, she did not have the time to devote to keeping her house as neat and tidy as it might otherwise have been, yet in spite of these things this boy grew to be loved and respected by all who knew him. He had the qualities of a leader and a personality that attracted others to him. He had perseverance, bravery, reason, shrewdness in handling boys, and a love for them. He had charge of the newsboys on the streets; then he became a Boy Scout and had charge of a troupe of scouts. He studied and trained for the place. He had ability to cooperate and to grow, and as I said before, he was loyal to his church. This boy exercised a great influence over the boys of this community and no doubt saved many of them from going wrong. I do not know of one of those boys who is not still trying to follow the example set by their leader. He went away to college to qualify better for the work he loves—working with Boy Scouts."

"I think an appeal can also be used to good advantage in teaching our young people to guard against doing things that would reflect against their family or the church. I know a certain young woman whose father was a missionary when she was growing up. Her mother taught her that anything she did reflected on her father. The daughter idolized her father, and was careful that she should not do anything that would cause anyone to think her father was not a good man. The mother taught her the same regarding the church.

"The years passed; she became a young woman and was keeping company with a young man who smoked, attended card parties and dances. He insisted on her going to these, but she steadfastly refused. One evening the parents had retired early, but that did not signify that mother was asleep, for she never slept until that daughter was asleep, too. The young people were sitting on the porch. The mother, in her anxiety to know that all was well, crept to where she could hear what was being said, and this is what she heard her daughter telling her friend: 'You wonder why I am not like other girls of my age, going to dances and out on wild parties. Well, I will tell you why. In the first place, you know my father is a minister, and I have been taught against such things. However, I would love to dance, for music and rhythm are appealing to me, but I could not do so without people talking about my father and saying he had not taught me right. Then another reason is, I love my church. I know it is the church of Christ, and not for anything in this world would I do anything that would bring reproach or disgrace on it. I would rather die first.'

"The mother stood with tears streaming down her cheeks, and there she breathed a prayer of thankfulness that she had been able to instill that love of family and of church so firmly in that daughter that it was tiding her over the temptations and pitfalls of life. This young woman's devotion to her church and its ideals led the young man to give up his bad habits, and he, too, became a member of the church. If every family could get this across to their children, what a help it would be, not only to the community, but to the church as well."

Hints for Speakers and Writers

2. "DOUBLE SPACE"

This hint is especially for writers, though speakers who put their work into permanent form will also be interested in it.

Typewritten manuscripts of two sorts come into the editor's office: "single spaced," and "double spaced." Single spacing puts the lines as close together as possible, and gives six lines to the inch on a standard modern typewriter. Double spacing allows a blank line between each line of typing, and gives three lines to the inch.

Many manuscripts that come to the editors contain some good material which can be used, but they require many changes before they are ready for publication. If single spaced, there is no room for editorial corrections or for copy editor's marks, and the article has to be recopied at the cost of both time and expense. If anything is trying to the editor's nerves it is to receive a single-spaced manuscript. It bothers his eyes; it bothers the proof reader; and it bothers the linotype operator. Single spacing increases the possibility of rejection.

Single spacing is the poorest form of economy there is. Use cheap paper, use thin paper if you must (no transparent or onionskin paper, please!), use paper of odd or bizarre colors if economy forces you to it; but if you value the editor's good opinion of you, do not use single spacing in your typewritten manuscripts.

The speaker will find his notes easier to follow if he double spaces. The wide lines give him a chance to insert the often very necessary last-minute changes or corrections. His notes will be far better for preservation, and his pages will look neater.

Mimeograph, multigraph, and other forms of circular letters are often single spaced, which is a necessity. Business letters are neater in the single-spaced form. But they are different from manuscripts for publication, which should always be double spaced.

"Even as a Child"

By Sallie Hamilton Forties

Jesus said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Unless we become as little children, we can not enter the kingdom. We can not actually go back to our childhood. That golden era in our lives is passed, but another opportunity is open to us.

Whether we are parents or teachers, we may guide and help the children to enjoy richer and fuller lives, and in helping them we are bound to get a broader vision and a better understanding of Jesus' words, "Unless you become as a little child, you can not enter the kingdom."

We can learn many lessons from the child; in fact, we can be transformed with a new outlook towards life if we instill into our own souls the perfect trust and faith of a little child.

Let us become one with God, even as a little child is one with his mother. Let us have an open mind, even a child's eagerness to learn.

As we work with the children, we should show by our daily lives that we have the fruits of the Spirit, love, joy, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, etc. If we do not possess them, how can we hope to pass them on to our children?

The love of God must be in our own lives and our spiritual experiences of such value that the children can not fail to see the importance of such relationship with the Divine. Without these spiritual experiences, life would become monotonous.

We must draw constantly on divine power for strength if we go on. We must be on guard constantly at the door of thought and become as a little child, in faith, love, and humility. As we purge our own lives of all evil, doubt, and mistrust, empty the old vessel, as it were, and fill it anew with spiritual experiences and make these experiences of paramount importance, then the children will become ready and eager to be led into experiences of like nature. We then can sow the "seed of truth" assured that it will live and bear fruit in the lives of our children.

It is our task to become as a little child, and it is also our pleasure and privilege to bring the little children to a knowledge of a fuller and richer life in Christ Jesus.

"He is a happy man who keeps through a turbulent lifetime the heart of a child."

The Golden Rule

By John Blackmore

We fail to appreciate the loyalty and love of many non-Christian peoples to their religions, because we are not familiar with their sacred writings, which are to them as Holy Scripture. A comparative study of the Golden Rule as it is stated in various religions is enlightening. A clipping from the Missionary Review of the World contains the following:

"The Golden Rule as contained in the holy writings of each of the seven great religions is as follows:

The Hindu: "The true rule is to guard and to do by the things of others as you do by your own."

The Buddhist: "One should seek for others the happiness one desires for oneself."

The Zoroastrian: "Do as you would be done by."

The Confucian: "What you do not wish done to yourself, do not to others."

The Mohammedan: "Let none of you treat your brother in a way he himself would dislike to be treated."

The Jew: "Whatsoever you do not wish your neighbor to do, do not unto him."

The Christian: "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them."

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Our Junior Young People and the Church School

By Leta B. Moriarty

What Is Education?

In this age of economic change, of industrial expansion, of scientific development, and of intellectual progress, there is much talk of education, its need, its desirability. Few people yet remain unconvinced that an education of some form is necessary to "get along." But there are long discussions and many interpretations of the term education.

What is an education? How is it obtained? Why have one? The state has attempted to answer in the form of compulsory public schools, special training schools, colleges, and other institutions of learning. The church has come forward with the church school. Indeed it is the high aim of the church, though the methods employed are debatable, to "produce a religious experience on the Christian level which will at one and the same time affect the learner's entire life organism, intellect, emotions, and bodily reactions." (Shaver, Present Day Trends in Religious Education.)

George Albert Coe, in his book Education in Religion and Morals, speaks of education: "If we believe that complete self-realization requires not only human society, but also fellowship with God, then it follows that for us education is the effort to assist immature human beings toward complete self-realization in and through fellowship with both their fellows and God." And later he adds: "Religious education is simply education that completes itself by taking account of the whole child, the whole educator, and the whole goal or destiny of man."

In early Bible times the people went through periods of training or education. As the son of the daughter of Pharaoh, Moses obtained an Egyptian education before he went to the land of Midian. From the scripture story we understand that Joshua learned many of the principles of leadership from the mighty Moses. Samuel's mother "lent him to the Lord; . . . And the child did minister unto the Lord before Eli the priest." The people of Job's time thought of education in this sense: "That which I see not teach thou me; if I have done iniquity, I will do no more."

Christ invited all men, "Learn of me."

Latter-day revelation admonishes us to "seek learning by study, and also by faith." In another place in the Doctrine and Covenants, we are given the purpose of this learning: "It is my will that you should . . . obtain a knowledge of history, and of countries, and of kingdoms, of laws of God and man, and all this for the salvation of Zion."

"The Salvation of Zion"

Webster defines salvation as the "act of saving or delivering." In another sense it is liberation from bondage or sin—a redemption.

The great goal of the church is the redemption (salvation) of Zion which, we are taught, can be brought about only by a people of pure heart and mind working together according to the will and design of God.

As a church our Zion ideal makes us distinctive. Many hope for Zion. Many pray for it. Many think of it. And many are working to bring about Zion. It is characteristic of our people that they are busy, but busy doing what? Some look to Zion with very earthly eyes and employ themselves at temporary tasks, the doing of which puts Zion "afar off." Others with greater vision are not forgetting the instruments of Zion's salvation—our boys and girls!

How often do we read in Holy Writ and secular history of children being the instruments in the accomplishment of great works. Adults have thus far failed to redeem Zion; they must turn to their children. The Master loved little children, blessed them, and said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

If we would have Zion, we must look to the growth and training of our children. We must put away our theological quibblings, our priestly prejudices, our quarrels, and remembering that all that is "in the world" is not "of the world," go, as Christ went, into the midst of spiritual illiteracy, low standards of morality, and the problems of international and interracial adjustment and bring our children out to bigness of heart, broadness of mind, and righteousness of purpose. Of such will Zion be.

Our Instruments in the Making

Some one has said, "Our lives are what we make them." He referred principally to adults. An axiomatic truth is: "Up to a certain age, depending on the individual, the child is what his parents and teachers make him."

Childhood is the biggest source of raw material for church work. From it come the instruments in the making for the achievements of the future. The committee which brought together the information contained in The Teaching Work of the Church describes the early adolescent group (junior young people) as follows: "Here, then, is our young person, overgrown, awkward, independent, possibly defiant of authority, restless, sensitive, inconsistent, critical, elusive, clannish, sentimental, irresponsible, self-conscious; yet loyal, eager, enthusiastic, ready to cooperate and even to be self-sacrificing within the limits of his self-chosen social group; desiring freedom but shirking duty—a difficult, lovable, tantalizing, and exasperating age."

The above is a formidable array of adjectives very descriptive of the boys and girls with whom we deal. In fewer words let us say that they are young, problematic individuals much more responsive and much easier to get along with than adults. Frankness, freeness, independence, restlessness do indeed characterize these boys and girls, half men, half children. They have reached the age of many adjustments. They are almost swamped with powers—physical, mental, and spiritual—which yesterday they knew nothing about. They are interested in loyalties and motives. They are hero worshipers.

And these our instruments in the making, so for the time overwhelmed with a seemingly not understandable selfness, rapidly awake to find themselves in a world with its "problems of 'rubbing elbows' nation with nation, of complex social organization, of scientific law, of extending democracy, and of higher ideals." They begin to sense the challenge and to know that this is "a world to be mastered, a world to be used, and a world to be enjoyed." (Shaver, op. cit.) Their need for some one to help them learn of Christ is very great.

The Christ Method

The period of Christ's ministry and teaching was short, yet the influence of his teachings exceeds that of any other teacher. For a schoolroom he chose a grass-covered mountain side, a mossy well curb, a dusty highway, or a field of golden grain. He followed no set of rules in methods of teaching save those of life experiences; he had no definite hours in which to teach. But as he and his disciples passed through villages and down the highway, he stopped to teach where he saw need—physical, mental, spiritual. There were many object lessons, and in answer to questions he often used parables (little life narratives from which he drew a moral), that they might the better understand his point. Christ's method of teaching today covers every phase of human need for instruction. He was the Master Teacher. We may well learn of him.

Let us here quote direct from the Inspired Version of the Bible an incident which sets forth the Master Teacher's simple method:

And, behold, there was a man which had a withered hand. And they asked him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath days? that they might accuse him. And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the Sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it and lift it out? How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath days. Then said he to the man, Stretch forth thine hand; and he stretched it forth, and it was restored whole, like unto the other.—Matthew 12: 8-11.

The Children's Division of the Department of Religious Education

*By Bertha Constance Woodward,
Director of the Children's Division.*

This article explains points of organization and administration in the Children's Division as it functions under the "New Plan" adopted by the General Conference, 1930.

As workers in the Children's Division it is our responsibility to be carriers of God's message to the childhood of our generation. To comprehend this message fully and interpret it in harmony with the interests, needs, and capacities of childhood is a difficult undertaking. To be sure that childhood lives this message is even more difficult. Only as we can experience, as Christ did, the very foundation principles by which spiritual life can be built, will we be able to guide the childhood of today into the Zion of tomorrow. The following plans for organization and administration express the attempt of the children's division of our church in this generation to comprehend the fundamental principles, and to prepare for the carrying and living of the message.

Objectives

The objectives of the children's division contribute to the reaching of the church objectives. The ultimate objective is to bring about the complete and perfect development of the immortal spirits of childhood, that they might be contributing units in accomplishing the mission of our church. Each child must be given the necessary preparation for the living of a normal religious life at each age. The objective is to be reached by leading the child to live the highest and best we can cause him to comprehend, in each area of his experience.

Grading

The children's division consists of four departments, as follows:

Nursery department, birth to four years.

Kindergarten department, four and five years.

Primary department, first, second, and third grades. Let the age requirements for entrance to the first grade of the public schools of your community determine the age at which children shall be promoted into the primary department. For example: If children who are six before February 1 are admitted to the first grade at the opening of school, the church school should promote such children to the primary department at the September promotion. These same children should have been promoted from the nursery department into the kindergarten department just two years prior to this. Such grading will allow the child to remain in each department long enough to have the complete program which the church has planned for him.

Junior department, fourth, fifth, and sixth grades.

Irregularities in Grading

There are always children who fail to make their grade in school because of sickness, or other reasons. Such children should be considered irregulars, and they, together with their parents, should be allowed to choose whether or not they will be promoted with their church school class or drop back with the class which most likely will be their classmates in the public school the coming year. The church school should not be made dissatisfying to a child because of public school failures, neither should a child be allowed to do less than his best in church school.

Organization

The children's division must be well organized if it is to reach its objectives. Organization is the machinery by which objectives are reached. Each worker must be able to see the objectives and must know the part she must play in reaching them. Adequate organization makes this possible.

The details of organization must be determined by the local situation. The three graphs which follow will suggest a way of organizing in the large, the medium, and in the small-sized local church.

1. Large Branch Organization

A supervisor of the division and a superintendent for each of the four departments are needed.

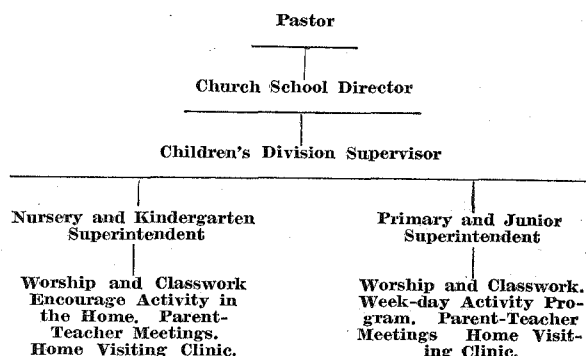

The children are organized into four departments and have separate rooms. The superintendents of departments are in charge except in cases where all departments are brought together. The supervisor is left free to give direction, advice, and help wherever it is needed, and, if qualified, can supervise the teaching. She must assist the superintendents of the departments in making sure that every child in the division is having an opportunity for well-rounded religious development.

The department superintendents, with the help of teachers and other officers, are held responsible for the carrying out of the outlined programs for their respective departments.

Worship, class work, recreation, week-day activities, home visiting, parent-teacher meetings, clinic, and other activities are essential as means in accomplishing the objectives of the departments.

2. Medium-size Branch Organization

In this plan of organization a supervisor of the children's division and two superintendents are needed. The nursery and kindergarten departments are combined, and also the primary and junior departments.

The responsibilities of the supervisor and superintendents are similar to those suggested in the large branch organization.

3. Small-size Branch Organization

In a small local church where the children are not grouped into departments, the supervisor of the children's division may lead the group meetings of the children, such as church school, recreation, etc., or she may allocate some of her responsibilities to the teachers. In either case, she is responsible for the carrying out of the program for the division.

Where there is only one class of each department age, it is often advisable to consider the teacher of the class as superintendent of the department. Although the class makes a small department, this plan often challenges the teacher to enlarge her group.

Councils

All matters of minor importance in the children's division should be decided upon by the children's division council, which is composed of the supervisor, the four superintendents of departments, and the pastor and director as ex officio members.

The supervisor of the children's division is also a member of the church school council, to which she may carry problems of importance. Problems which affect more than the children's division must especially be taken before the church school council.

A council within a department would consist of the superintendent of the department, all of her officers and teachers, and the supervisor as an ex officio member. The pastor and director may also be considered ex officio members and be invited to attend the department council whenever their help is needed.

In a small-size branch organization, the division council would be composed of the supervisor of the children's division and her teachers and officers.

The Wise Men and the Shepherds

A SUGGESTIVE OUTLINE FOR THE CHRISTMAS SERMON

By Thomas S. Williams

Introduction:

The universality of the message of Christmas is noted in the fact that it was revealed to both wise men and shepherds. It was suited to all stations of life.

The wise men were students, observers, and thinkers. The shepherds were men who worked with their hands.

Revelation may be conditional to types of mind and experiences of life. There seem to be many ways of presenting Jesus to the world.

The Shepherds: Luke 2: 8-20.

This group was evidently giving attention to other than the mere care of sheep, their daily task. Spiritual experiences like anything else must have a background of preparation.

He who thinks only of his business misses many of the greater values of life.

The shepherds saw the angels and heard the message, because their eyes were inclined to see and their ears attuned to hear.

Every spiritual experience has as its center a message which, if it be heard and understood, must have receptive hearts and minds. This receptivity is the result of cultivation.

While the shepherds experienced great joy in hearing the message of the angels, they were not satisfied. They desired to see for themselves, "Let us go now and see this thing," and they "came with haste and found."

This being "good tidings of great joy," they felt the urge to tell it to others, so they made known abroad what they had heard. When one hears a choice bit of news, he is not satisfied with the mere hearing of it.

Those who step aside from the tasks of life to venture in spiritual things return to their tasks feeling better. Therefore, "the shepherds returned glorifying and praising God."

The Wise Men:

They, as the shepherds, were evidently acquainted with the promise of the Savior.

They not only had knowledge of the promised King but had evidence of his recent birth. "Where is he that is born king of the Jews?"

While the divine may be attuned to the receptive mind, it can be better comprehended by those who have had previous experience in that field.

The wise men had convincing evidence of the Lord's birth but were uncertain of the exact location. Since the babe was born King of the Jews, the wise men thought the Jews would know of the exact place.

Geographical nearness is not always conducive to appreciation. Things near at hand are not always valued. Wise men were prepared for recognition of the "sign" of the King's birth, but the Jews, who were more vitally concerned, had to search the scriptures, and this after their attention had been called to the matter. Recognition of greater value seems to be psychological rather than geographical.

Conclusion:

Wise men and shepherds, through previous experience, had been prepared to receive the message of Jesus' advent. Immediately upon getting the evidence, they proceeded to see for themselves.

Before and after seeing, they spread the good news abroad. Following the expenditure of effort, they experienced the "afterglow" which usually succeeds the discharge of duty.

"WHY I AM A MISSIONARY"

J. Colin Cornish, appointed to Victoria, New South Wales, Australia, is the youngest missionary of the church now in active service. W. A. Smith, Northeastern Kansas, is the oldest missionary in the field. Brother Cornish has completed nearly five years as a missionary, while Brother Smith has been in this work about thirty-five years. Both have written short articles on the subject, "Why I am a missionary," to appear in the January number of Vision.

These articles fit in very well with the cover picture and article of the first 1931 number. The series of cover pictures, "Each in his own calling," representing the various professions and occupations is being continued, and the January issue presents, "The Minister," the accompanying article being written by F. ## The Season's Greetings

The time of year is almost here when all of us will be commemorating the birth of the Babe of Bethlehem. Another anniversary of the birthday of our Lord is here, and as together we listen to the old, old story in song and drama, we wish for all News contributors and readers—wherever they are, whatever they are doing—a deeper appreciation of the angels' message given to the shepherds on the hillside of Judea, "Peace, good will toward men." May we in the coming year learn to truly live that heavenly injunction.

This Christmas brings us to the close of the centennial year of the church in latter days. Many plans have been carried out this twelve months, and there is record of great improvements and achievements, yet the opening vista of the New Year brings brighter hopes, grander undertakings, and new fields of accomplishment.

With the church the Herald wishes to go forward, every department answering the need of every reader. The goal for the News of Church and Home Department for this year is each week a group of representative communications bringing to notice the real events in every section of the church, briefly, entertainingly, and helpfully told. This is our task. What of the new year?

THE EDITORS.

Madison, Wisconsin

219 Jackson Street

November 2 Orville Dahlem was ordained to the Aaronic priesthood to the office of deacon by H. W. Woodstock and Floyd Griswold.

Elder Amos Berve, branch president, organized a class of the priesthood in homiletics November 9, the session to be conducted every Sunday morning at 8.15.

At the morning hour on a recent Sunday two of the Aaronic priesthood spoke on "The relationship between pastor and congregation," and Brother Woodstock summed up their talks in connection with the entire program.

Each Sunday evening at 6.45 Brother Berve teaches a class on "Church projects," using for an outline the Centennial Extension course. The people are much interested, and he has a large class.

The young people hold a class each Thursday evening, and they have elected as teacher Brother Berve and chosen to study contemporary religions, public speaking, and parliamentary law. Enrollment is about twenty. They had a debate December 4 on the question, "Resolved that fire has been more destructive to mankind than water." Three boys affirmed, and three girls denied. After the debate the girls served sandwiches, cake, and jello to the audience. Following the holidays there will be another debate, the question being "Resolved that Mohammedanism has done much for Christianity."

Ormand Kimball, of Chicago, is attending the University of Wisconsin in Madison, taking an agricultural course, and is most helpful in the branch.

Since Brother Berve is able to be with us more this winter, interest in prayer meeting has increased. New thoughts and ideas are continually being presented, and passages of scripture on fundamentals of the gospel looked up and memorized. Each evening a few minutes are devoted to silent meditation. The members are making these services one hundred per cent.

The young people of Sister L. Houghton's class had a happy time at her home the latter part of October, when they were entertained with a treasure hunt followed by fritters and maple syrup.

November 28 the young people sponsored a program, Archie Root in charge. The purpose of the program was to revive old musical numbers. The audience was given a setting for the music by a speech preceding the numbers and by pantomime.

Bishop C. J. Hunt was here October 22 and preached on "The son of man cometh." This was associated with the text, "The gospel came not in word only, but with much assurance."

On Sunday evenings Brother Berve has been concluding his series of sermons on the three C's—Concentrate, construct, and consecrate. His text has been, "I will build my church."

Elder W. A. McDowell was the speaker morning and evening November 23. He was on his way to visit his brother, who is afflicted, at Soldier's Grove.

The Christmas program is in the making, "The nativity of Christ."

Death has lately saddened the hearts of the members by taking Edwin Root, son of Clarence and Lenora Root. Edwin, who was born July 17, 1911, died at the Lake View Sanatorium, near Madison, October 26, of tuberculosis of the lungs. He was baptized at Wyeville in 1920 by Elder E. J. Lenox. His father preceded him in death August 20, 1925. The deceased moved with his mother, brother, and sister to Madison in January, 1926, attended high school, and was taken to the sanatorium in March of this year. He was a young member of much faith. Services were conducted in Madison, Brother Berve offering consoling words and following the bier to Wyeville, where the funeral was held. Interment was in the cemetery of that city beside his father. Left to mourn are his mother, sister, brother, and other relatives, and friends.

The Significance of the Sacrament

Marshall, Missouri.—To me one of the greatest examples of God's love and mercy for the human family is the provision of the sacrament, that often we may meet together and partake of the emblems of his supreme sacrifice for us, and there have our sins remitted, our slates wiped clean, and again go forth with strength gained from the united efforts of our brothers and sisters, blessed by the Holy Spirit. Here in this service the Holy Spirit gives us courage to again go on with firm determination to do right and work for the cause we love so dearly.

We hasten to take advantage of a measure that will benefit us in the material world. How much greater are the things of the spirit and eternity!

The sacrament is not taken seriously by many. It is not our mere duty; it is a rare privilege and an opportunity given us to express our gratitude to our Lord and Savior. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son." And Jesus so loved the world that he gave his life for us. It was he who said: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Let us not disappoint our Savior and leader but try hard to follow his beautiful life example, that we, his church, may draw to us all just and hungry souls.

It is also given us to express the beauty of the spirit in temporal things bringing about Zion, the city of the pure in heart. Our spiritual and temporal work, according to the design of God, can not be separated. Hitherto we have been prone to express our spiritual desires in temporal things. Let us go forward with love and faith.

MARION THAYER TERRELL.

Lancaster, Wisconsin

We have much for which we are thankful. Crops were good in this section. In addition to temporal blessings, we have been greatly blessed spiritually. Elders Amos Berve, C. J. Hunt, and F. A. Smith held services here lately and visited the members, helping them to press on and not grow weary in well-doing.

The Saints were saddened when Sister Luella Houghton passed away in a local hospital. She had been a sufferer for several months.

November 3 Brother and Sister Jesse Crossley celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

District President Amos Berve met with Saints November 9 at the Flora Church. At eleven o'clock we met for annual business meeting. Elder G. E. Noble was elected president of the branch.

In the afternoon preceding the preaching service, the young son of G. E. Noble was blessed by Amos Berve and G. E. Noble, and given the name Stanley Melvin.

The Women's Department has been busy quilting. One quilt was sent to the Harvest Home Festival at Independence, Missouri. At present the women are quilting for Sister Gertie Noble, the proceeds to go to the Christmas offering fund.

Beginning November 17 Elder Amos Berve held a series of meetings, continuing through the week in the town hall at Beetown. The gospel had been preached there a number of years ago, gathering a few into the fold. But for some time prejudice prevailed to such a measure that the Saints were urged to send a minister there to present the gospel in its fullness. The members assisted Brother Berve with their presence and prayers, and many friends were won to the cause.

Brother Berve spoke at the Flora Church November 23 in the morning.

Some time ago we read a letter in the Herald from Brother Leonard Houghton. We wish to tell him that he is not forgotten in his old home town. Blessed indeed is the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love.

Northeastern Illinois Conference

The conference of Northeastern Illinois District convened with First Chicago Branch, 4416 Gladys Avenue, Chicago, November 14, 15, and 16. An attractive program in charge of local officers was given Friday evening.

The Saturday morning prayer service at ten o'clock was in charge of R. E. Davey and C. C. Simpson.

Conference convened at eleven o'clock, the district president, Jerome Wildermuth, in the chair. Brother Wildermuth, with Apostle F. Henry Edwards, was chosen to preside over the conference and to complete the organization and make all necessary arrangements for the conducting of the services. As reports had been printed, there were only a few read besides the statistical reports. Northeastern Illinois District now has a membership of 1,363 according to the latest information recorded. Bishop's Agent A. O. Skinner reported receipts to the amount of $10,066.89 for the past year. District Treasurer C. C. Simpson reported receipts, $485.35; disbursements $424.56; cash balance, $60.79.

A resolution was presented by Belvidere Branch with reference to the call of Brother Charles Vickers to the office of priest in the Aaronic order. This was approved by the body and referred to those having authority to ordain him.

The budget committee presented the following budget for the year 1931: District presidency, $200; Department of Religious Education, $150; Department of Music, $50; publicity, $100; bishop's agent, $75; budget committee, $50; missionary, $250; reunion, $460; total, $1,420. The budget was adopted.

It was deemed wise to have a district publicity agent, and the appointment of this officer was left to the district president and the general publicity agent.

It was decided to dispense with the reunion this year, owing to conditions in the district, but the reunion committee was continued.

Brother Wildermuth was retained as district president, and he chose as his counselors H. P. W. Keir and C. C. Simpson. This was ratified by the conference. Other officers are: Clerk, Grace E. Johnson; district treasurer, C. C. Simpson; director of church school, Hattie K. Bell; director of music, Ruby Newman. The district treasurer was authorized to appoint the other two members of the budget committee. Brothers Ray Hurst and A. W. Eskridge were elected district auditors. The time and place of the next conference were left to the presidency.

The conference voiced appreciation to the branch for its hospitality. The music was in charge of Ruby Newman. Preaching by Apostle F. Henry Edwards and Elder R. E. Davey was instructive. Much good was derived from the round table discussion conducted by Brother Edwards.

The conference inspired us with new courage and zeal and a stronger desire to be colaborers with God for the salvation of mankind.

GRACE E. JOHNSON.

Haverhill, Massachusetts

November 25.—Haverhill began its fall activities by joining the Dover Mission in observing Rally Day. A picnic lunch was enjoyed en route, and a hearty welcome was given the visiting members.

The following Sunday some of the Dover group joined Haverhill Saints in their Rally Day exercises. Bishop M. C. Fisher was the speaker morning and evening. The fellowship manifested on these two occasions encouraged the members of both branches.

October sacramental day proved outstanding. As many as could sought a near-by pond where, in the seclusion of the morning hours, the rite of baptism was administered to Robert Randall. Pastor Jordan officiated. Immediately following, communion service was enjoyed, and the hearts of the members rejoiced because of the blessing of God's Spirit.

A very successful picnic was had by the Sunday school October 12. The weather was warm enough to discourage some of the more strenuous activities indulged in in previous years. Nevertheless the majority shared in games, and a wiener roast added much to the fun.

Two young Utah ministers were present. They had attended the previous Sunday's service. The members of our branch were the first people of the Reorganization these young men had met.

Sunday evenings the Saints devote to studying Brother Mortimer's book on geology. The adults find this material very good, and young people add to their store of knowledge from it.

Margaret Randall won several first and second prizes on canning at the county fair and a school exhibition. She also won a first prize on judging the canning contest held at the fair. Irving Jordan, an eleven-year-old brother, won the second prize.

The unemployment situation in this city is pitiful. The majority of the Saints are fortunate in having work, such as it is, and we can not complain when we compare our lot with that of the city at large.

Brother H. Thayer is again in poor health. He has been able to attend church until within the last two or three weeks.

Several members attended a recent departmental conference at Boston. There many were introduced to the new method of conducting church worship. The day's program demonstrated careful planning, and the results were gratifying.

Elder David Dowker's sermon on the stewardship of time led us to examine more closely our busy (?) lives to see if we, like Martha, are not cumbered with many things, and are neglecting the way of life. In the mad rush of life it is well to take time to be holy.

Independence

Stone Church

Apostle James A. Gillen was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service. He made a plea for a quality of life among the Saints in keeping with the great claims which the church makes. Never before was there such opportunity before the church as today, he said as he asked the question, "Where do we go from here?"

The Stone Church Choir, under the direction of Paul N. Craig, sang two anthems: "More love to thee, O Christ," by Speaks; and "The Omnipotence," by Spicker, with Lilly Belle Allen singing the soprano solo. Lorena Kueffer played an organ offertory number. Piano accompaniment for the musical service was played by George Miller.

Elder W. Wallace Smith, who presided, was assisted by Elder S. A. Thiel.

The junior young people in their worship service continued "Adventuring with Christ in peace and good will," the theme of the month, using for the morning's topic, "The great gift of self." Two brief talks were given by members of the department, "Love makes us thoughtful," by Virginia Long, and "Love makes us forget how to quarrel," by Philip Weeks. The story of the birth of Jesus as it is recorded in Luke 2 was read by the pastor, who was in charge; Sister George G. Lewis told the story of the Children's Crusade; a girls' chorus sang the Crusader's Hymn, "Fairest Lord Jesus," and the high point of interest was the responsive reading, "A service of dedication." Brother Howard Cook assisted the pastor in the stand. Joy Harder and Wilma Luff were pianists.

Bishop Mark H. Siegfried was the speaker on the young people's program at the Auditorium Sunday afternoon, his subject being "Voices from the dust of Nawwoo." His talk was an appeal for the expression by the young people today of the same courage and vision had by our pioneer fathers of the Restoration.

Layard Smith played a trumpet solo with piano accompaniment by Margaret Mills. Albert McCullough, baritone, sang two numbers. He was accompanied by Joy Carpenter. Group singing was led by L. E. Flowers.

At the Stone Church Sunday evening President F. M. McDowell gave the second of the series of illustrated lectures about his trip to European countries. This lecture, "Playing the part of Jesus," dealt with the Passion Play given this year in the little city of Oberammergau in the Bavarian Alps. Many of the slides used were beautifully and naturally colored, giving a fairly accurate representation of scenes as they appeared in the play. Of particular interest were pictures of homes of the people in this city of about two thousand souls which cares for a host of visitors numbering from five to six thousand every day the play is given.

An excellent musical program was given by a chorus of girls directed by Sister H. C. Burgess. Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge of the hour, assisted by Elder G. G. Lewis.

Second Church

Meetings for December 7 began with eight o'clock prayer meeting, Elder T. A. Beck in charge. At the monthly communion service Apostle E. J. Gleazer gave a splendid talk. Brother Beck was in charge. The church was filled with members who enjoyed the meeting. Elder W. A. McDowell was the speaker at the evening service.

Instead of the usual Wednesday night prayer meetings for December 10, the annual business meeting was held at the church, Elders George G. Lewis and Stanley Kelley in charge. The following officers were elected for the year: Pastor, A. K. Dillee; associate pastor, T. A. Beck; director of church school, F. N. Mortimore; director of department of music, Sister Sunshine Beck; bishop's agent, W. N. Inman; custodian, D. A. Whiting. These officers were granted the power to complete the organization. With these capable, willing people prospects for another year look bright.

Doctor C. F. Grabske occupied the pulpit last Sunday. In his instructive talk, he pointed out the necessity of having our bodies fit tools for our souls, the kind of men and women Christ would have us be. Brother W. A. McDowell preached again in the evening.

Englewood

Brother and Sister C. B. Woodstock and Sister Myrtle Weber visited the Englewood Sunday school Sunday. They came out to get acquainted with the program of religious education in this branch. Brother Woodstock, an officer in the general church school organization, gave a talk during the Sunday school hour on Christmas offering. Sister Weber, writer of the beginner quarterlies and a worker in the kindergarten division of Sunday school work, visited with the primary and kindergarten department and complimented that group on its system of junior services from 9.30 to twelve o'clock. Brother Woodstock was also the speaker during the morning hour, preaching on the Christmas offering and the work of carrying the gospel.

At the business meeting held in the church last Thursday night, Brother D. S. McNamara was nominated by the First Presidency to continue as pastor for the next year. Brother Perry Hiles was nominated to continue as his assistant, and Brother Alma Hougas was elected for the third consecutive time to head the department of Religious Education and the Sunday school for the next year. Brothers Hiles and Hougas are assistant pastors. Brother Glen Closson was reelected bishop's agent for the district for the next year, and Brother Earl Ross custodian deacon. The organization of the group will be completed for the next year at some later date when the officers already elected have had time to confer.

Apostle James A. Gillen preached to an attentive congregation Sunday evening, his words being received with appreciation.

Next Sunday morning the Englewood Choir will occupy the morning hour with the cantata, "The new-born King." Sister Alta Hougas will direct the choir. The evening services next Sunday night will have Brother L. W. Fike as the speaker. Brother Fike is a local man.

Next Tuesday night the Christmas program will be given. This promises to have one of the largest attendances of any church service this year. After the program is over, if Santa Claus is able to follow out the schedule he has outlined he will be present in person with a bag full of what he considers his necessary equipment.

Gudgell Park

Attendance at the services for November was unusually good. Every Sunday morning the Sunday school was crowded, and interest has been apparent.

November 16 Elder Howard Andersen was the morning speaker and in the evening Elder George G. Lewis.

The following Sabbath two local men, C. E. Martin and Ivor Davies, were the speakers. Both sermons were full of encouragement and instruction.

Sacramental service for December was marked by the presence of a large number of this district, and the Spirit pervaded the hour.

Last Sunday nearly the entire Sunday school remained at eleven o'clock to listen to the sermon by Elder Carroll L.

Olson. A special number was given by a mixed quartet. Brother J. A. Holsworth was the evening speaker.

Next Sunday evening the junior choir will give the cantata, "The child Jesus," on which it has been working for some weeks. Sister Esther Hook, the director, is being assisted by Brother Johnson.

East Independence

Only by teamwork can we accomplish our great latter-day task of redeeming Zion. This was the message of Brother C. V. Hopkins the morning of November 16. That evening Pastor L. W. Moffet gave many reasons why the members of the church in this district should be encouraged and grateful.

Elder G. G. Lewis spoke instructively and entertainingly the following Sunday morning, and in the evening T. W. Thatcher, bishop's agent for East Independence, displayed real interest in his particular work. He desires that all may understand and obey the financial law.

A thanksgiving service occurred Wednesday evening, November 26, the Saints gathering to tell in song, prayer, and testimony the blessings for which they are grateful. There was a sermon by Roy Young.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Bailey announce the birth of Thomas William, jr., November 25, to be known as "Billy."

Communion service for December was a season of the Spirit's presence and blessing. Brother Roy Young, who is leaving this district, made a farewell testimony of faith and trust in divine leadership for himself and for those who are taking up his work here. We shall miss Brother Young.

The infant daughter of Brother and Sister T. W. Thatcher was blessed at this hour by Brothers Moffet and Frank Minton.

W. L. Morey spoke in the evening, delivering a sermon concerning which many words of appreciation were spoken.

We are now busy preparing the Christmas program. In this all ages are to take part.

Bishop A. B. Phillips opened the pages of the scriptures the morning of December 14, teaching an impressive lesson on the text, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." "How do you think?" was the question topic of Brother C. I. Carpenter in the evening.

Holden Stake

Sedalia

Sedalia Branch, though few in number, has been trying to keep the work of the church going forward. Most of the men in the group have been affected by industrial conditions, some having had to move to other places. Among this number was Pastor R. F. Moorman and family, who recently went to Jefferson City. Although Brother Moorman could not be at home all the time they lived in Sedalia, he will be much missed, and Sister Moorman was the church school director. Both helped in the music.

W. A. Connally and Sister Connally and family have returned from Colorado, where they have been for two years for his health. He is much improved.

The young people held a Halloween party in the basement of the church October 30.

During the summer months volley ball was played on the church lawn on recreation nights, and since colder weather, the young people meet at the various homes. A study class has been arranged for Sunday evening at 6.30, the Bible being the subject. A contest in Bible reading is also in progress, the young people competing against the married people.

Brother J. E. Farber, who had been in poor health for some time, passed away at his home here November 12. Funeral services were held November 15 in charge of Stake President W. S. Macrae. Interment was in Independence, Missouri, where services were conducted November 16, the sermon by Elder W. A. McDowell.

The young people gave a play, "The first Thanksgiving," the Sunday evening before Thanksgiving. They plan to present other plays in the future.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

During the worship period of the church school Sunday morning, the story was told by C. G. Mesley, a solo was sung by Helen Scott, soprano, the invocation was by T. B. Dunn, and there was organ music. Then came the class work. The sermon at eleven o'clock was by Elder Leonard Lea, and the choir, directed by George Anway, sang "In heavenly love abiding," Brown. Irene Wolfe was organist, and Lucy Bowser, pianist.

"Christian, the morn breaks sweetly," Mendelssohn, was sung at the evening service by the octet from Central Choir, the music director being Eugene Christy. Sister J. H. McPherson, soprano, sang "There's a song in the air," by Speaks. A prelude arrangement of "Silent night" gave the entire service a reverential setting.

About sixty people saw the stake basket-ball matches at Woodland School December 9. Central defeated Chelsea 29 to 19. Last night there was another three-game play at Woodland School, Central playing Fourth Church.

The special Christmas program next Sunday morning will present a dramatization from the primary department and the junior cantata, "The Child Jesus."

The turkey dinner and bazaar conducted by the women's club last Friday was successful from every point of view. The dinner was delicious, the fellowship enjoyable; and the gift selections, moderately priced, covered a wide range. The net proceeds amounted to about two hundred dollars, and there are still articles to be sold.

Armourdale Church

Mrs. Fern McNeese was baptized by Pastor Ralph L. Goid December 14.

The sacramental service December 7 was a spiritual session. Eighty-two were present.

Attendance is increasing at all meetings.

The Recreation and Expression services are held each Friday evening. Interest is being shown in these activities.

The children of the church school are making the Christmas entertainment a real experience in religious education by sacrificing part of their Christmas gift money for relieving the financial stress in the church. Their donation is to be made in individual red and green stockings, which will compose a part of the Christmas tree decoration.

Chelsea Church

At the morning hour Sunday, the pulpit was occupied by Elder W. S. Brown, and at 7.45 Elder H. W. Goid discoursed.

Fourth Church

Elder J. M. Terry, of Independence, preached the morning of October 26, using as a text John 3: 13.

A rabbit dinner was greatly enjoyed by the Saints October 30.

Brother Vernon, of this congregation, preached the morning of November 9. In the evening of the following Sabbath, Elder W. O. Hand gave an interesting talk on health and other topics. He used picture slides and again on the following Sunday illustrated his lecture.

The Progressive Club held its pre-holiday bazaar and chicken dinner December 4.

A spiritual communion service marked the opening Sunday of this month, the congregation consisting mostly of young people. In the evening Elder H. A. Higgins, of Quindaro Church, preached, using a portion of Timothy 3 as the foundation for his sermon.

Argentine Church

Elder John Davis was the guest speaker Sunday morning and evening, accompanying Brother and Sister Richard Day, of Independence, formerly members of this stake. The speaker, a vigorous man at seventy-five, presented important phases of the gospel under the theme, "Knowledge is power."

Gladstone Church

Sister C. A. Selbe has been chosen head of the children's department.

The O. B. K.'s had charge of the evening services November 30. Following several songs Frank White and Lucille Sandy, from Central, gave a musical number, Mr. White playing a violin solo, "The rosary," accompanied at the piano by Miss Sandy. Then came a piano solo, "Les Sylphides," by Mrs. L. C. Connelly. A short talk was given by Pastor C. A. Selbe on the events leading up to the reorganization of the church. This served as an introduction to the play given by seven young people of the O. B. K. group under the direction of Myrno Tanner, "The rise of the Reorganization," by Elbert A. Smith. The program was much enjoyed by a good crowd, and the young people are to be commended for their effort.

The Saints were shocked by the tragic death of Brother William Pence November 26, who was shot down by bandits while he was on duty on one of the Manor Bakery routes. The young widow, Dorothy Bundy Pence, a teacher in the primary department of the church school, has the sympathy of the church.

The Gladstone O. B. K.'s wish to thank the groups of the stake who contributed to the rabbit supper held at Central December 1. Special thanks are extended the Salvation Army group, who assisted in the program following the supper.

Southern New England Conference

Departmental conference of Southern New England District convened with Boston Branch November 15 and 16. The business transacted at the Saturday evening session consisted mainly of organization of the conference and action adopting the new plan of organization and program of Religious Education. This provided for the election of a director of Religious Education. Sister Lucie Sears, of New Bedford, was chosen at a later meeting to fill this office.

Following the business session, a program was presented under the direction of Sister Jennie A. Dowker, superintendent of Department of Women. "Responsibility" was the title of a paper read by Sister Susie Sinclair. Sister Harriet Nichols read two original poems: "The tick of the clock at midnight," and "Over and over again." District Chorister Helen Coombs sang three solos: "Ave Maria," "In May Time," and "I know a hill."

Prayer meetings were held Sunday in the upper and lower auditoriums. These were presided over by Brothers Patterson, Traver, W. A. Sinclair, M. C. Fisher, and Edmund M. Brown.

The church school, under the direction of Sanford L. Fisher, occupied the first part of a united service. The theme was "Fellowship." The united choirs of Attleboro and Boston, directed by Sister Helen Coombs, sang the anthem, "The heavens are declaring," Sister Beatrice Gunsolley at the organ and Sister Winnifred Elefson at the piano. The sermon by David E. Dowker was on "The stewardship of time." In the afternoon there was a message from District President William Patterson, and a sermon by Bishop M. C. Fisher on "The economic value of stewardship." The offering by the choir was, "The harvest hymn."

Brother Patterson preached the sermon at the closing session on "Stewardship, a spiritual heritage." Helen Coombs and Thelma Dowker sang, "How long wilt thou forget me?"

The conference was presided over by Elders Patterson and Dowker and Bishops Fisher and Traver. Brother Frank S. Dobbins was secretary and David E. Dowker press committee. The ushering was in charge of Charles Cockcroft. Dinner and lunch were served at the church by the women of Boston.

A message of good cheer, expressing a hope for a speedy recovery, was sent to Brother Budd by the conference.

Attendance was very good in spite of inclement weather. All parts of the district were represented. The meetings were of high order, and a goodly degree of the spirit was present.

Bisbee, Arizona

This branch was much pleased to receive a visit from Apostle M. A. McConley, who arrived November 22 and preached that evening to a good crowd. He spoke again Sunday morning to a goodly number of Saints. Some members brought basket lunches and ate together and enjoyed a social time.

Branch President Goldie decided to hold the regular business meeting while Brother McConley was here, and at three o'clock in the afternoon the apostle took charge, and the following officers were elected: Branch president, S. D. Condit; associate pastor, Henry Goldie; clerk, Daisy B. Short; treasurer, Lizzie Payne; publicity agent, Minnie Enyart. William Somers was elected Sunday school superintendent, and it was left to him to elect the other Sunday school officers.

That evening Brother McConley preached to a crowd which filled the house to capacity. All were happy to hear him. We are now looking forward to a visit from Elder George H. Wixom the middle of this month. He will probably visit us on his way home for Christmas. Brother Wixom has many friends here among nonmembers as well as Saints.

Missionary visits are always much appreciated.

MINNIE ENYART.

Press Notice for Quarryman

Brother Albert A. Lippitt, veteran member of the church, was the central figure of a feature story in The Providence Sunday Journal Magazine for November 2, 1930. There the story of his sixty-one years as quarryman is entertainingly told. These are the introductory paragraphs:

"Indians had nothing to do with the settlement of Graniteville. That town, lying beside the Putnam Pike in the town of Johnston, just beyond Centredale, owes its establishment, as well as its name, to the outcropping in that region of hundreds of ledges of granite.

"But an Indian, or at any rate, a descendant of the Narragansetts, Albert A. Lippitt, has done much, in the last half century, to add to the fame throughout Rhode Island of that small town.

"In fact, the names of Graniteville and Albert Lippitt are synonymous to everyone who knows anything about that town and its chief product. Mr. Lippitt has been quarrying and cutting and selling granite since he was a lad of 15—and he is now 76 and has just retired. For more than a half century he has been supplying Cranston, and for between 40 and 45 years Central Falls and Pawtucket, with granite curbing and corner stones."

Brother Lippitt became a member of the church August 3, 1890, and by his life has inspired in others steadiness, faith, and truth. He has many interesting stories to tell of his work, and his products—great granite blocks cut out of the hillsides of Rhode Island and trimmed by his own hands or the hands of his workmen—still form the foundations of many of the oldest buildings and landmarks in Providence. Now he has retired from active work in his trade and turned the business over to his grandson, Gerald Fielder, with whom he makes his home.

Beloit, Wisconsin

236 Saint Lawrence Avenue

Beloit Branch during the past few years has undergone some trying times, but the future looks bright.

Harry A. Wasson, assistant pastor, has worked diligently during the absence of the regular pastor, W. L. Hartnell. The latter has found it almost impossible to labor here as he would like because of his present occupation which calls him away from the branch. He lives in Janesville.

Local members lately received much encouragement from the visits of Bishop C. J. Hunt, Apostle D. T. Williams, and District President Amos Berve.

The church school is established with Ephraim Johnson as director. We look forward to the time in the near future when we shall have developed a long prospect list with every member a missionary.

Those who know of Saints or friends in the vicinity of Beloit who are not in touch with the branch, please notify Harry A. Wasson, 1413 Linden Avenue, Janesville, Wisconsin.

GUY L. ALLEN.

With the yuletide season approaching, all departments of the church are uniting in the preparation of a Christmas program, to be given at the Sunday school hour December 21. Music, stories, readings, and tableaux will portray the story of the birth of Christ.

December 6 the women of the church held a bazaar and bake sale to increase the local fund and Christmas offering.

Brother David Chambers, of Magnolia, Iowa, was called December 6 to administer to Brother Will Coffman, who has been ill with quinsy for the past month. Brother Coffman is improving rapidly.

Sister Ruth Buhler was administered to at the sacramental service Sunday morning. Brother Chambers spoke in the afternoon at 2.30 on "Cling fast to the rod of iron," and again in the evening on "The second coming of Christ." Special music was furnished by Sisters Nina Amundson and Kleta Finley, accompanied by Sister Will Coffman at the organ and Brother Parley Gamet on the violin. Brother and Sister Gamet, of Colorado Springs, are visiting in the Coffman home.

Prays for Isolated Members in Alberta

Rimbey, Alberta, December 3.—I am sending renewal for the church papers, as I would be lost without them. We have been isolated here on a farm in central Alberta for the last twelve years. My husband passed away September 20 at the age of seventy-five. Now my unmarried son and daughter and I feel our loneliness more than ever. Elder Hockaday, pastor of Calgary, Alberta, came to us and spoke words of comfort which gave us courage to strive on. A large gathering of neighbors and friends heard the message and seemed to receive it favorably.

These strenuous times are hard on everyone, but we should remember that God is with us and go to him for strength and help. I pray for the progress of the work in this large field where the Saints are so widely scattered. I know of one woman with a family who desires baptism. May the Lord prosper his work everywhere and the hungry sheep be fed.

MRS. WILLIAM STUART.

Kansas Young People's Meeting

Sunday, November 30, the young people of Northeastern Kansas District came to Atchison, for a one-day meeting, arranged by the institute committee. Local officers officiated at the first part of the unified service. At eleven o'clock Elder Leonard Lea, of Independence, Missouri, gave an inspiring discourse on the subject, "Faith."

At two o'clock in the afternoon a meeting was held for the purpose of organizing the young people of the district. Brother L. M. Pitsenberger, committee chairman, was in charge. The young people chose the name, "Young People's League" (Y. P. L.) for the new organization. The following officers were elected: Vice president, Verna Crooker; secretary-treasurer, Jane Brittain; director of music, Anna Lentz; assistant director of music, Isabel Gildehaus; devotional leader, Fern Weedmark; publicity agent, Isabel Gildehaus.

Brother Lea talked to the young people at three o'clock in the afternoon, giving some helpful thoughts concerning organization of young people's groups and young people's problems.

Even though the young people in this district are scattered, much good work is expected from them under the new organization. We feel that now the young people have a particular field of interest in which to work.

FERN WEEDMARK.

Houston, Texas

Times are hard in Houston as in other places, but the Saints are keeping their jobs, only a few being out of work. We are sorry that we are not doing better with financial support to the general church fund, but think that soon we shall improve. We must realize that "the church must teach," and that if we do not pay our tithes and offerings, its work will necessarily be impaired. This is December, and people are thinking about Christmas gifts. Let us make our Christmas gift list shorter this year and give to the church fund. God's work must not suffer in these trying times. We shall have joy of spirit when we know that we have really sacrificed for the work of God.

Our little sister, Thressa Tartaglia recently was laid to rest. She was fourteen years of age. We extend our sympathy to her loved ones, who know as well as we that her reward is sure. How it pays to be faithful! What a solace it is to the aching heart to know that our loved ones go to a realm of greater service and opportunity.

May God bless his children and give them faith and courage to overcome the difficulties as they come.

MRS. MARIETTA SMITH.

Bishop's Agent Calls

Saints of the Southern Missouri District: The year 1930 is drawing to a close. Let us look back and see what we have done in its twelve months that has brought honor to God and to his church here on earth, and note wherein we have failed. Let us make up any failure on our part in the coming year, 1931, by resolving that "I will be a tithe payer." We owe this to God, and each of us should have our names on the Bishop's books as a tithe payer. God has promised to help us if we will bring our tithes to his storehouse. Join with me and make out your inventory at the first of the new year. I would be happy to see Southern Missouri District composed of one hundred per cent tithe payers during the year 1931, and will be glad to give any information desired.—G. A. Davis, Thayer, Missouri.

A Correction

In the letter of George S. Lincoln, "The early church on the western coast," Saints' Herald, December 3, page 1321, second paragraph, a wrong impression is given the readers. He says: "Among the passengers on that ship were Seth S. Lincoln and wife, and my father and mother, the two latter traveling for my father's health." The italic words should not have appeared, for Seth S. Lincoln and wife were the parents of Brother Lincoln, and to them he refers.

New Address

A. C. Barmore, 513 Saint Clair Street, Port Huron, Michigan.

Correction of Date

Florida District will meet January 3 and 4 instead of 11 and 12.—Evan A. Davis, district president; S. G. Allen, secretary.

Last August he was appointed as associate with the district president of Idaho. He was loved and revered by all who knew him. He was faithful and loyal. Brother Hull was employed as foreman mechanic at the Boise Payette Lumber Company for several years, and his fellow workmen held him up as a true Christian gentleman. Shortly after his death she moved to Chatham, Ontario, where she lived until her death November 11, 1930. Left behind are five sons: Frank, George, Warren, Walter, of Raleigh, and William, of Dover; a stepson, Samuel Hoyles, of Raleigh; and an adopted daughter, Mrs. James Concanon, of Chatham. Later, with a number of church members, she moved to Stewartsville, Missouri, and then to Lamoni, Iowa, where she was for a time dean of the girls' dormitory at Graceland and then matron of one of the homes for the aged. She passed away at Oakland, California, November 16, 1930, strong in the faith of the restored gospel to which her life had been a loyal testimony. Numerous relatives, friends, and church members attended her burial service at Lafayette, California. Services were in charge of J. B. Carmichael.

The New Year

The unusual conditions confronting us at this season cause our approach to New Year's to be different than in other years. Always when we face the future and attempt to peer beyond the mist of uncertainty which shrouds the coming years, we are swayed by the strange emotions always accompanying the contemplation of the mysterious. Of course we try to gauge the trends of the times and thus prognosticate the probabilities, and the feelings or emotions aroused within us by the conditions now prevailing are large factors in coloring the forward-looking endeavors.

So today the troubled conditions, the prevalence of working factors difficult to judge, the collapse of some institutions, conventions, and customs which have long prevailed, the uncertainties which have quite suddenly crept into social conditions, all present a group of factors which enter into our forward-looking today, which gives to the present New Year's season a setting quite its own.

The strange social factors, the economic unrest, the industrial uncertainties, strained financial conditions, all have their influence upon us as we attempt to judge the conditions into which the church must move in the year just before us. The times are uncertain, and seem to be troublous; yet there are many reasons why we as a people should move forward with our faith increased. For we have seen how readily conditions may be changed by the overruling powers, and how quickly progress may be checked or favorable conditions be changed to untoward ones. Of such times we have been forewarned. So we may rejoice that God has warned us in the past, for it encourages us to believe that he will still warn us of what is before us in the way of trial and tell us how we may escape the destroying effects of disaster.

We must not forget that with the warnings from Divinity have come instructions of preparation for the coming of unfavorable times. We should be greatly concerned about measuring our progress along the lines of instruction given. Are we prepared against the day of overturning which has been suggested in the conditions prevailing? I fear we have been dilatory.

Our task now is to face the future in faith, faith in God, faith in the church, and faith in ourselves. But we must do more than have faith, for we must justify our faith by our works. It is not enough to say we believe, we must do according to our belief. It is not enough to say we believe in Zion, for it is demanded that we work to the end of making Zion a reality.

Faith in an ideal should not only arouse us to endeavor in the realization of the ideals, but should prompt us to the necessary sacrifices, consecration, and devotion.

I grieve because we have so slowly passed towards our goals; but I still rejoice because the tasks assigned to us as a people are so large, so great, so far-reaching, that the very best in us is challenged.

Let us, my people, face the tasks of the year with grim determination to do our best, and make that best better than what we have yet done. Let us keep our faith firm and warm, and so nourish it by vitalizing labor, labor in our great cause, that it will grow and expand, till our whole soul and being are absorbed in it and our devotions correspondingly increased.

I can not but wish for every Herald reader, and every Saint, a most happy and prosperous New Year. I heartily extend such wishes. But along with these wishes I find myself wondering what would be our progress as a church if every Saint were doing his full duty. So, in facing the joys and pleasures, the successes and failures, the goods and ills, which the year may have in store for us, let us not forget God and our duties to him, and enter the year determined to discharge our duties and responsibilities to him first, and display the same loyalty to him and his cause as was shown in the exclamation of a servant of old when he said: "Though he slay me yet will I trust him." Our trust has been in him, and still is. And well for us that we always keep it there.

Dear readers, my wish for you is that the New Year will be for you happy, peaceful, and prosperous; but above all, that you will have abundant opportunity to serve God and his cause, and that you will be faithful to every trust. Onward, Saints, to the completion of our tasks. F. M. S.

"Messiah" Broadcast a Success

The broadcasting of the Messiah over the Columbia Broadcasting System by a chorus of 100 voices, mostly selected from the Independence Messiah Choir, and assisted by a number of Greater Kansas City singers, was a fine success. Within ten minutes after the broadcast had been completed, there were telegrams at the studio of K M B C in Kansas City from Omaha, Toronto, Chicago, and Leon, Iowa. Shortly afterward telegrams came from New York, Philadelphia, Flint (Michigan), California, and Lamoni, Iowa. Reports from other places, continuing to pour in, will have to be mentioned in next week's Herald.

It is said that the chain linked together a network of forty-two stations, and a radio man who is in a position to know estimates that the program may have been heard by as many as thirty million people. A number of congregations of this and other churches installed radios in church buildings so that the program might be heard by all who wished to hear.

The broadcast was given as the regular "Cathedral Hour," which has become famous for the high quality and fine character of its programs. The operators of K M B C have received congratulations from men high in the radio world on the clarity and beauty of the broadcast.

Congregations and individuals who listened to the broadcast are asked to write immediately to the Herald Editors, in order that we may have an idea of the extent to which our people received it.

Excellent solo work was done by George Anway, tenor; Mrs. George Cowden, soprano; Mrs. Raymond Havens, contralto; and Arthur Oakman, bass. The director of the chorus, Paul N. Craig, is receiving congratulations on the performance of the singers. A fine part of the contribution was the good support of the K M B C Salon Orchestra, directed by P. Hans Flath.

Providing for Missionaries' Families

The official column this week carries the good news that the generous response of the people of the church to the appeal for funds has enabled the Presiding Bishopric to mail checks to the families of missionaries covering back allowances for three months. This money was sorely needed by these families, and in some cases distress was felt in its absence. The splendid effort of the priesthood in organizing the gathering of the funds, and the willingness of the people to give have brought relief and happiness to many a family. It is very reasurring to know that even in these times of depression the Saints are willing to sacrifice for the welfare of those who must carry the gospel to the world.

Christmas Meditation

Each week have the editors of the Herald visited our readers, and each Christmas season for seventy years have these columns carried seasonal greetings at the time of the year when the birthday anniversary of the Christ is celebrated. It is quite logical that the editors while penning their messages to the Herald family should in mind, if not in expressed thought, attempt to evaluate conditions making for good or otherwise in their effects upon each Christmas season. I wish I could adequately express to our readers my feelings at this season; but I fear that I can say little more than that it will be well for our people this season if each will take careful inventory of his spiritual stock in store and try to measure up how far into his life the principles of the Christ doctrine have penetrated. Upon the two great laws that Jesus laid down as the foundations of his philosophy hang all the law and the prophets. Our spiritual safety therefore is commensurate with the extent to which we have made these principles the motivating forces and factors of our lives. We as a people have passed through experiences in recent months, experiences had in common with other peoples, which will have a direct bearing upon our future developments. These experiences have held lessons of great spiritual import, lessons which it has been intended by Deity we should learn, and which also contain warnings we should heed. Will we learn and heed?

It takes only a casual examination of the present to become aware that there has been an increase of the forces which may weaken our faith if not well nurtured, shatter our trust if not well grounded, and slacken our group progress if we are not unified in endeavor. To avoid the disunity which has always been a weapon of offense against the church, we must constantly keep our minds on the ideals of the Christ mission, and our souls saturated with the message of his gospel.

May the Christmas season be not only one of joy, but also one of deep meditation in which the mission of the church, the goals of its endeavor, the methods of its work, and the duty of its members and officers shall have prayerful consideration. F. M. S.

Best Saying of the Week

"It is a finer thing to win the consent of the people by love than to rule them by authority."—Arlo Bernham.

"Good Things"

At a time when the world is suffering from social, political, and economic unrest, many men are prone to look upon the dark side, to consider the disturbing unusual rather than the peaceful routine of daily existence. No place is this tendency more strongly shown than in our daily papers. News, as they interpret it, chiefly consists of crime, scandal, lawbreaking, disaster; and so full are their columns of this sort of material that there is not room to tell of the thousands of law-abiding citizens and their work. That's not news, the papers object; it is expected of normal people to work and sleep and play, and have their friends and go to church. Everybody does it.

Scanning through a magazine which has an optimistic editor, I find this title, "Let's talk about the good things awhile." Conceding that the church and the world are today faced by such large problems as money, unemployment, poverty, evangelization, broken homes, which must be solved, let us consider for a space those who have paid their tithing, given offerings, sacrificed; those who are employed and comfortably situated; those who have carried the gospel to their neighbors; and those whose homes are happy and peaceful. Let us think of them and of a merciful Father who sees the needs of all and cares for his own, and thinking, our faith will be renewed, our courage made greater, and our purposefulness increased. Thinking about good things will make of us as we enter the new year a happier and more hopeful people.

Let us listen to the words of a wise helper of ancient times, Paul: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." To those who do this is given the promise: "And the God of peace shall be with you."

Greetings

The First Presidency, on behalf of the general officers and quorums of the church, extend to all our coworkers in the field, in the branches, in the districts and the stakes, a hearty wish for a Happy New Year. May peace abound, and our opportunities for work be greater than ever before, and may we occupy wisely and efficiently, for the Master's sake.

Financial News

The increase in general church revenue from tithes and offerings received up to Saturday, December 20, has enabled us to release three months' allowance checks due missionaries' families. As fast as additional funds are received, more checks will be sent.

Other definite arrangements have been made to pay current bills, obligations, and interest charges due January 1. Therefore, all income from tithes and offerings received in December will be used to pay allowances to missionaries' families. No investments are being made, and none are contemplated. The rapidity with which general church funds can be transmitted from branch solicitors to bishops and agents and from there on to the Presiding Bishop will determine how quickly we can pay the missionaries' families the remainder of the amounts due them.

The actual receipts in tithes and offerings received thus far indicate a cordial response to the present needs of the church. Reports from over three hundred branches show that the standing ministry have been active in reaching their members. It is our belief that the priesthood of the church have reached new and higher levels in thus functioning. This activity has brought the inevitable result. They have experienced a heightened quality of spiritual power and effectiveness in their ministry of leading, preaching, and teaching.

The point of importance is this. Priesthood leadership, which is largely responsible for the present response of the Saints, should be sustained. District and branch officers should see to it. Present contacts with members should be maintained throughout the coming year and through all the years as a fortification against the invasion of uncertainties and doubts which unfortunately characterize these times.

The church should take full and immediate advantage of the present situation and convert and conserve every gain to the glory of God and to the building of his kingdom. There must be no let down. The priesthood should take the lead. They should emphasize this deciding thought. Let ministry and members, each emphasizing their well-defined functions, welcome the coming year hopefully and courageously as an opportunity to advance the cause of Zion.

"I Will Draw All Men"

By Evan Fry

And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life.—John 3: 14, 15.

And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.—John 12: 32.

Christ's parting admonition to his apostles was that they should go into all the world and preach the gospel. That charge, delivered to all apostles for all time, carries with it also a responsibility for each Christian lay member, for although it is not possible for each one of us to go into all the world, or even to preach the gospel, it is possible for us to let our light so shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify our Father who is in heaven by loving and serving him as we do. In the words of our text, it is possible for each of us to be lifted up by the gospel of Jesus, so that from our own exalted station, we, like Christ, may draw men unto us, and from that station may point them on still farther to the Christ, who is higher than the highest of us.

It is our privilege and our divinely imposed duty that we should so lift ourselves above the common things of everyday living that people seeing our exalted station should be drawn to seek and avail themselves of the same means which we have used in reaching that position. But how shall we ourselves attain that exalted position? How shall we be lifted up so that all men shall be drawn unto us, and through us, to the Christ?

Humility

What is lifted up must first be brought low. The exaltation of Jesus was bought with complete self-abnegation and abasement—with agony and suffering of soul and body—with lingering torture and death. The man who would be lifted up in order that he might draw souls unto Christ must suffer the pangs of remorse and repentance, and must crucify himself until the old man, full of selfishness and worldly lusts, is dead and buried and resurrected into a new and perfect man who is actuated only by love for mankind. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." The man who continues to be dominated by his evil nature will abide alone; people will be repulsed rather than attracted by him. The man who has buried his evil past deep in the grave symbolized by his immersion in the waters of baptism—who is really a new man—will soon find that he can not abide alone; that his new life will draw others to him in ever-increasing numbers, until he has brought forth much fruit.

If we are to draw all men unto us and unto the Christ, we can not do it merely by shouting loudly from the housetops that we are the chosen of the Lord. If we do that, what we really are, as indicated by our actions, will speak so loudly that people will not be able to hear what we say. If you would draw all men unto you, get down from your housetop or high perch, wherever it may be; get down to the level of common humanity, and let them that are greatest among you become the servants of all. Forget your pride in self-achievement, and live for others alone. Forget all about being the chosen of the Lord, and search out the least of these his children that you may bring them to light and life and happiness. You can point them to the way without pointing them to yourself, but if you are a fit example for them to follow—if your life is a reflection of that divine life which gives us all our pattern, others will point to you, and will be drawn unto you in increasing numbers until your life has brought forth much fruit.

Modern Religious Snobbery

Somewhere along the line we modern Christians have lost a part of the flavor and zest with which Christ went about his work. With very few exceptions, the modern church member would regard it as disgraceful in the extreme if he should be caught hobnobbing with thieves or women of the streets, or drunkards, or gamblers, or with any of those classes which we so calmly label inferior and immoral and sinful. We regard with suspicion the churchman who has acquaintance with any such creatures. When we hold revival meetings, we concentrate our efforts on the "better classes"—in other words, on the people who live on the right side of the railroad tracks or the river or whatever the dividing line may be, and who have plenty of fine clothes and shiny automobiles and money to help pay the preacher and raise the budget. If we do approach any of the great unwashed and unredeemed classes, the chances are ten to one that we do it with an offensive holier-than-thou attitude, a pocket full of feebly insipid tracts, and a mouth filled with pious gibberish and sanctimonious cant. Having gotten rid of everything but the holier-than-thou attitude, we heave a sigh of relief that after all they have spurned us, and go on our way rejoicing that none of those people will be out to disgrace our church during Sunday services.

Christ's Attitude toward Sinners

I hope that it is neither sacrilegious nor blasphemous to say that Christ drew numbers of his most loyal and most valued friends from among the despised classes of people of his day. His great heart went out to all people, sinners as well as saints, and he didn't mind meeting with any of them from the least to the greatest, and from the worst to the best. Those who came into his presence were brought gently but irresistibly to the realization of their own sins, weaknesses, and shortcomings. They were drawn unto him; he didn't have to hunt them down and buttonhole them and browbeat them into submission to his doctrines. Only one kind of sinner did he ever condemn face to face—the hypocrites who thought themselves almost perfect, while as a matter of fact they were full of evil and corruption. Christ associated constantly with other classes of sinners, and yet he seldom or never told them that they were sinners, or reminded them in words of their sin. His own perfect life reminded them forcibly enough of that, and he had no need of embarrassing them with one accusing word. He loved each one in spite of the sin; and though he hated the sin, yet he loved the victim of that sin, and pitied the human weakness that allowed the sin to hold sway.

A slight incident shows perhaps best of all that kindly regard for the sinner which Christ manifested at all times in spite of his undying hatred for sin in all its forms. You will remember that when the woman who was taken in adultery was brought before him, he stooped down, and wrote in the sand. Do you get the significance of those two words? The woman was guilty; there was no doubt of that. She had been caught red handed, and had been dragged through the streets by her accusers. Her hair and clothes were disheveled, and she was covered with shame and confusion and honest repentance. Now Christ had condemned adultery perhaps more sweepingly and vigorously than had Moses, for Moses condemned only the deed, while Christ condemned the thought which might lead to the deed, as being equally sinful. The law of Moses decreed that the offender should be stoned to death. What would Christ say? The most appealing thing about the whole story to me is that Christ stooped down to write in the sand. He might have been very pompous, very righteous, and very indignant at such manifest wickedness. All of the bystanders felt that way about it, but Christ knew that the woman stood there with scores of hostile and accusing eyes already overwhelming her with embarrassment and confusion, and in his great kindness he refused to add to her confusion by staring righteously at her himself; he stooped down and wrote in the sand. When all her accusers had slunk away before the self-condemnation called up in the mind of each by the Master's reply, he raised his eyes, but only for a moment, while his kindly voice and sympathetic eyes asked, "Where are thine accusers? Neither do I accuse thee; go thy way, and sin no more." Then he stooped again, that he might add no more to her confusion. His hatred of the sin had not tricked him into hating the repentant sinner, and although the record is silent as to whether or not this woman became one of Christ's followers, I should think that anyone would go through fire and water and even through all hell itself for a friend who could love and forgive as Christ loved and forgave—in spite of past sin.

Separating the Sinner from His Sin

How many of us hate and shun the sinners as well as their sins? In that respect we are no different from the very human people of Christ's time. One of the most shocking of Christ's actions, to the Pharisees at least, was his feasting with publicans and sinners. They couldn't understand why he wanted to be around such hopelessly disreputable people—he who called himself the Son of God. Didn't he know that respectable people should shun those below them? Simon the Pharisee blushed to the roots of his hair on the occasion when the repentant Magdalene intruded and washed the Master's feet with her tears of sorrow, and dried them with her hair. "Doesn't the Master know what kind of woman this is?" he said to himself. "Surely he can't be a very good prophet if he is not able to see such an obvious thing." Poor Simon! He, like so many of us, hated the sinner as well as the sin, instead of loving him and helping him to be free from that sin.

Keeping the Soul Unstained

Though Christ was constantly associated with and loved by sinners, yet he never partook of their sin. He could mingle with the dregs of society, and yet keep himself undefiled, for his own perfect nature kept him at all times above sin. Whether the wine he drank at the marriage feast in Cana was sweet or fermented, I care not; one fact remains undisputed—he did not wake up next morning in the gutter surrounded by a group of sodden revelers enjoying bad headaches. Much as he loved the repentant Magdalene, he never patronized one of the scarlet sisterhood. The woman of Samaria who met him at the well learned to love him, though he gently accused her of having as many divorced husbands as a twentieth century movie actress. Though he often accepted the hospitality of Pharisees and Publicans and people of all social classes and all manner of reputation and character, he never partook of the pride and hypocrisy of the Pharisees, nor of the mediocrity of the publicans, nor any of the manifold sins of the flesh to which he was constantly exposed. Though he often was thrown among the learned men and priests, their sanctimonious cant and complicated theology never even remotely affected his own simple and straightforward message.

The Mud and the Lily

There is an old saying which has been widely used by Christians as an alibi for shunning sinners. It is to the effect that he who touches pitch must be defiled. I'm not even sure that this proverb is true, for the lily seems to do a pretty good job of keeping pure although its roots are steeped in the slimiest of muck and mire; and although its own life blood comes from such filth, the lily is everywhere the emblem of perfect purity. But granted that the proverb about the defiling pitch is true—so many people make the mistake of supposing that the sinner himself is the pitch that contaminates, when it is only the sin. We can associate with the sinner and still be undefiled by his sin if our own hearts are pure. Unto the pure, all things are pure, even pitch.

If we would draw all men unto us then, we must die to self and sin—and be spiritually resurrected a new man. This death of sin in us will remove all hypocrisy and false pride, and will engender in their place a love of all mankind, which will find expression in service to all mankind. This love, reinforced by the works of love, and unhindered by any overbearing sense of superiority, will draw all men unto us, and even though they come to us defiled by sin, if our own hearts are pure we need not fear being defiled by their sin. And it may be that through us they can find the Christ, the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world.

Lights by the Wayside

A MEDITATION ON THE LIGHT OF LIFE

The pathway of life begins with birth and, as far as earth's pilgrimage is concerned, terminates with death. Its course may lead through shaded vales, or over sun-touched hills; along the "cool-sequestered" way or into parched and burning plains. The entire pilgrimage may consist of a few short weeks, or the travel-stained garments may declare long years of toil and service; but long or short, the pathway of life, if properly followed, is the road which leads from mortality to immortality.

The Royal Road

The purpose of this royal road is to lead from darkness into light; from death unto life, and from bondage into everlasting freedom. It is to be presumed that this long and difficult journey should have lights along the way to guide the traveler.

To the successful traveler, a great heritage has been promised; a condition of plenty, peace, and everlasting joy. To the faithful children of light there will be given the privilege of drinking long and deep from the waters of life. From the curse of sin such as are worthy to enter into the Promised Land are entirely freed, and from the bonds of death. Their toil and struggles have been swallowed up in victory; and they are become the children of light.

And there shall be no night there; and they will need no candle; neither light of the sun; for the Lord giveth them light: and they shall reign forever and ever.—Revelation 22: 5.

The Voice of the Prophets

Prophets and patriarchs in the days of long ago saw this wonderful condition yet to be, for they had the assurance of the coming of Christ by the royal pathway. They no doubt longed for the Zion which would in time bring about perfection and happiness. They also saw in vision the coming of a day when out of darkness would come a great light which would indeed be the "light of life." This great light, the power of Christ, would be the hope of subsequent glory. This royal road would receive its illumination from the sun of God. At intervals landmarks would be placed so that the wayfaring child would not err. Messages would be given at intervals for man's encouragement. Assurances would be offered from time to time to the effect that God rules, lives, and loves those made in his image. Moreover, evidences would be given that Christ was indeed the Son of God. So to Isaiah, the prophet and poet of ancient Israel, there appeared a light which shone into the future sketching the advent of the world's Savior, and he presented to succeeding generations the following:

"Behold I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and a commander to the people." Yes, this was a light by the wayside! Surely this was the light whose rays pierced the clouds finally resting on Bethlehem where the lowly prince lay cradled in the manger.

The Coming of the Savior

In the city of David the Savior of men was born, who was Christ the Lord, glorified then by the heavenly hosts, and later when his great work was completed and the salvation of man was assured, to be glorified by the saints of all ages. The light of prophecy and hope through the coming of our Lord brought greater light and truth. Moving along the highway of life the voice of the Master was heard in justification of his work, presenting in no uncertain sound these words:

"I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

What a wonderful assurance this statement offers, bearing conviction to the souls of men! What could be more encouraging to earth's pilgrims than to know that the light of Christ is accessible to all men. Again lest men should doubt or become discouraged, His voice is heard:

"I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me."

To reassure his disciples of his divine power as well as his concern as to the continuance of the plan of life, he says: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth; go ye therefore and teach all nations; teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

The Voice of Paul

The Apostle Paul witnessed the power and significance of the "light of life." Under the transforming power of life, he was required to reflect the light of Christ, to the opening of their blind eyes, turning them from darkness to the light, and from the power of Satan unto God. To this great task Paul had been committed, for he had been touched by the light of Christ, which was reflected to succeeding generations.

Thus throughout life's course, here and there along the road which leads from this life to the promised heritage, mankind has been favored with lights along the way: the "light of life." Even as we approach the shores of the last great river between this life and the next, a light appears to cheer and comfort in entering the cold waters we call death. This is brought to us in the death, burial, and resurrection of our Lord: "And very early in the morning the first day of the week, they came to the sepulchre on the rising of the sun; and they said among themselves, who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre? and when they looked they saw that the stone was rolled away: for it was very great."

The light of hope shines through the portals leading to the shores beyond, where light and happiness never cease. PEN POINTS.

There are 21 branches and 1 nonresident group represented in the above list. In addition to them, 16 branches and 2 nonresident groups reported two baptisms each, and 26 branches and 3 nonresident groups reported one baptism each. These figures refer to the United States and Canada outside of Zion and the Stakes. The latter lined up as follows:

The following materials are provided for a brief worship service held for the entire membership of the congregation, usually preceding the classwork of the church school. Its spirit should be deeply reverential. It will be well for children to sit with their parents in a family pew. The service should be brief, not to exceed fifteen or twenty minutes. Such parts of the program should be used as may be best adapted to local conditions.

The programs are to be provided each month for the entire year.

And only his hands have the cunning to put it in place.
Yes, the task that is given to each man, no other can do;

Blessed are they that have understanding hearts;
To them shall be multiplied kingdoms of delight."

11. Sentence Prayer.
12. Offertory: Quiet instrumental music.
13. Reading:

The Joy of Labor

He is the man and happiest, too,
Who idles not his life away,
But goes serenely to the tasks
That call and beckon him each day.

For he who fills the fleeting hours
With purpose and accomplishment,
Gets most from life and finds each day
The deepest measure of content.
Oh, think not happiness can lie
In easy ways, in shirking tasks;
Man's greatest gladness and reward
Come from the toil that labor asks.

Then seek not days of emptiness,
Nor think your work a galling chain;
Life's best contentment comes to man
From honest toil of hands or brain.
—Katherine Edelman, in the Irish Independent.

14. Hymn: "Look for the beautiful," Praises, 103.

15. Prayer.

The Children's Division of the Department of Religious Education

By Bertha Constance Woodward, Director of Children's Division

Officers

The number of officers chosen will depend upon the size of the children's division. In addition to the supervisor and superintendents which have already been mentioned in the large branch organization, there should be a secretary-treasurer and librarian. Other officers may be added as needed.

Officers may be selected in any way that is customary in the local church. We recommend the following plan as a satisfactory one:

The children's division supervisor may be nominated by the director of the church school after consultation with the pastor. Other nominations may be made by the people at the time of the election at the branch or church school business meeting.

Department superintendents may be nominated by the children's division supervisor after consultation with the director of the church school. Other nominations may be made by the people at the time of the election.

Teachers and other department officers are chosen by department superintendents after consultation with the division supervisor, and after being approved by the church school council.

Specialists

Specialists in music, games, handwork, story-telling, nursing, etc., may be called upon by the leader to assist in carrying out the program if the leader has not yet qualified herself in these fields.

Finance

There may be a budget for every department in the children's division, and this budget should be considered as a part of the local church school budget. The children's religious development should never be neglected through the failure of adults to plan for their needs and to find ways and means of financing them.

The Teacher

The teacher is of great importance because of her opportunity for personal relationships with the child. Sunday teaching is a very small part of her responsibility. Teachers who do not have time for all of the duties outlined may have an associate teacher or teachers who will work very closely with them.

We recommend that a teacher remain with her class during the entire time the class is in a department, if she is found to be a successful teacher with the particular age she is teaching. This enables her to know her pupils and results in her ability to serve them better as a friend and teacher-leader.

When children are promoted into another department, it is then better to change teachers if possible. This allows teachers to specialize in one department and permits children to have a change of teachers and to be not limited to one personality.

Supervision of Teaching

The supervisor of the children's division in every local church should be interested in providing teaching materials, and encouraging the use of adequate teaching methods in both the church school and home. Write the Department of Religious Education for helpful suggestions on supervision.

The Parents

The parents are the home teachers of the church and should cooperate with the teacher-leader of their children in carrying out the program which the church has planned as necessary for the religious development of the particular age groups to which their children belong.

Parents should respect her work, her choice of helpers, and cooperate with them heartily.

The Program

The program (including study, recreation, worship, service activities, etc.) for each department and class should be planned for the entire week, and should minister to the child's well-rounded religious development. No phase of childhood experience should be left untouched, for all valuable experiences should be motivated religiously.

Since the religious education resulting from the Sunday morning session at church is limited, the program must be followed up by week-day help from the teacher with the cooperation of the parents.

The quarterlies for the children's division are written to assist the teacher and parents in carrying out the above program for the good of the child.

The record book and birthday calendar is also an asset, for it enables the teacher to check the child's development.

A Week-day Session

A week-day session of the church school is necessary with most primary and junior children. Read "A week-day session of the church school," by Ruby Williamson, in the March, 1930, Department Journal. The week-day session makes an excellent opportunity for primary and junior classes to carry out their activity program.

An Activity Program

The activity program is to be considered part of the children's church program. Children must have activity, and if this activity is a part of their church program, church will be among their most enjoyable experiences in life.

No organization is necessary unless the children desire it.

If the juniors desire a name, we recommend that the girls be called Blue Birds, and the boys Knights.

Time of Meeting on Sunday Morning

If the departments can meet separately, or alternate in the use of an assembly room, we recommend that the children's Sunday morning service convene from 9:45 until 11:45 or to the close of adult service with the exception of sacrament Sundays, and occasional preaching services throughout the year. The new quarterlies offer some help for the carrying out of this two-hour program. It is urged that the first twenty minutes of the morning period be spent in worship with the adult and young people's division.

Where the entire children's division has to meet in one room, a junior service could well follow the church school. Where the entire church school meets in one room, some provision should be made to have sermonets for children on certain Sundays, or preceding each adult sermon.

Parent-teacher Meetings

The superintendent of a department is in general charge of the parent-teacher conferences for her department. Time is allowed for the teachers and parents to plan and discuss the details necessary for the continuous development of their particular children.

Much of the time used by the superintendent of the department could be spent in directing the study of the religious interests, needs, and capacities of the children of the particular department. Study courses will be recommended upon request.

In the small branches where children are not divided into departments, the supervisor will have charge of the parent-teacher conferences.

The frequency of parent-teacher conferences will depend upon local arrangements. Once each month is perhaps often enough to meet. Care should be taken that no two departments set their meeting dates for the same week.

A Note to Workers and Parents of the Children's Division

Many of the letters which we have received recently indicate that workers with children are facing common problems. We are wondering if an occasional Herald letter relating to some of these problems might not be valuable.

Perhaps the problem which is found most often is one caused by a change in terminology. It is now recognized that children four and five years old are no longer beginners in the church. The responsibility of the church begins with the babies, and not with the four-year-olds. To eliminate the misleading name, the term kindergarten department is now substituted for that of beginner department.

We have adopted the term nursery department for work with children under four years of age, both those attending the church on Sunday and those enrolled for home visitation. Babies are no longer merely assigned names on a cradle roll, but they have an integral part of the church's educational program. The term cradle roll department is no longer meaningful.

Some of our materials and publications bear the older titles, some the newer ones. It takes some time for such changes to become effective throughout the church. As quickly as possible the terms kindergarten and nursery will supplant the other two.

If the above notes suggest problems which you are facing, we shall be most happy to try to help you solve them. Write us about them.

BERTHA CONSTANCE WOODWARD,

Supervisor of the Children's Division,

Independence, Missouri, The Auditorium.

From Mid Pacific

Honolulu, Hawaii.—Wife and I were at the Union Station in Kansas City, Missouri, at 5.30 June 25, 1930, with us several relatives and friends who had come to bid us farewell and Godspeed on our mission to the Hawaiian Islands. The train rolled away from the station on schedule time; the earth seeming to slip rapidly from beneath us as we were carried farther and farther away from our home and loved ones. As long as the station platform was visible, the figure of Brother John F. Sheehy could be seen, his hat waving in the air.

Denver, Colorado, was the first stop, where by previous arrangement we were met by Glaude A. Smith, who with Sister Smith took us about the city, showing us as many places of beauty and interest as our limited time would permit. After a hastily eaten lunch we boarded the train at 1.30 and looked forward to our next stop, Salt Lake City.

We arrived in Salt Lake City June 27 and through the kindness of Brother Calvin Rich saw as much of the city as we could between the hours of seven in the morning and five in the afternoon. We had driven through this city three years previous but did not have opportunity to visit many of the places to which Brother Rich took us.

The last lap of the trip by rail was the longest, and we looked towards its completion with anticipation, as we could then get away from dust and coal smoke.

John D. Macrae, my father's brother, met us in Los Angeles and took us twenty miles to his home at Hermosa Beach, where we rested for a few days. This being our first trip to the coast, there were many things to interest us. Chief of these was the beautiful beach. I received there the same initiation most bathers do—in spite of a cloudy sky I was severely sunburned and as a result was sick several days. Because of this we were unable to attend the church services in Los Angeles on Sunday and therefore failed to get in touch with Saints there.

The day of sailing arrived, July 1, and we made our way to the ship. Since we had not succeeded in communicating with Brother McConley, we did not know if he would be at the pier to see us off. We found a place on the ship which commanded a good view of the crowd and attempted to locate familiar faces. About ten minutes before sailing I discovered Brother McConley and some others coming through the crowd. I hobbled down the gangplank (I could only hobble because of the sunburn) and spent a few minutes visiting with them, Brother and Sister McConley and Alice, Brother Bronson, and Sister Pahau, of Hilo. When the final "All on board" was heard, I returned to my place beside Sister Macrae, and we waved farewell to the Saints on the mainland.

All went well on board with us until after dinner. As we walked about the deck, we realized that one must not think about seasickness; yet there kept creeping into our consciousness a feeling of fear as to whether or not we were good sailors. Before 7.30 p. m. we had reached a decision in the negative, and remained in our room until three in the afternoon of the next day. After that we enjoyed the trip. We made a number of acquaintances. With some of these, happy hours were spent, and the week passed rapidly. Never have I seen such gorgeous sunsets as we saw on the ocean.

On the morning of July 3, the day we landed, everyone was astir early, to get the first glimpse of land. As one approaches the Island of Oahu, on which Honolulu is located, the barren side of the extinct volcano crater, Diamond Head, gives him a rather weird feeling about the island, but as he glides slowly around that point, the green hills, which lie in a long range just back of the city change that opinion.

It was interesting to see the native boys swim out to meet the ship and to watch them dive for the coins that were thrown over to them. Their shouts and laughter were heard until the ship was made secure to the pier, when they were lost in the excitement and greetings exchanged between passengers and friends on shore.

The pier was crowded with people, but their faces were all strange to us. As we had notified Brother Waller concerning the time of our arrival, we knew there would be some one to meet us, but who they would be and how we should know them were questions in our mind. As soon as the gangplank was lowered to place, several came aboard. We selected one of the group whom we thought was Brother Waller, and this proved to be correct. With him we went ashore, where we met several native Saints and Brother V. E. Etzenhouser. From each we received a beautiful flower lei.

We were then taken to the mission house, where several sisters had prepared lunch. As we gathered around that table, there went out from our hearts a feeling of appreciation and thanks to God for a safe journey and for the blessings and pleasures that had been ours to enjoy.

Almost five months have passed since our arrival, and we have enjoyed many pleasant experiences. Of these we will later tell the Herald.
R. LESTER MACRAE.

Whose Birthday Are You Celebrating?

If my friends made a big feast and brought nice gifts on my birthday and then gave the gifts to others and ate all the goodies themselves, not giving any to me, how do you think I would feel about my birthday celebration? How would you feel about it? What does Christmas mean? To whom were the gifts given nineteen hundred and thirty years ago? No mention is made of anyone receiving a gift save the Babe of Bethlehem.

Then why all our needless waste on Christmas? Must I answer in the end for what I have foolishly thrown away on a mere custom. It is a well-known truth that a large part of gifts given are made because we feel that we must give because our friends will give to us, not because we have a great desire to give.

Christ was a wonderful gift to all humanity. Does it not seem to you that if a gift is given on his birthday, it should be made to him? I believe that the sooner the church catches this viewpoint the better it will be for every member.

I remember a story a missionary told to a group of Saints. A little boy had lived where no Christmas was mentioned and was free of the conventional Christmas habit of giving many gifts. When he came with his parents to the city to live, preparations were made to observe Christmas as it was observed in other homes. The small boy asked his father what Christmas meant and was freely informed. He saw gifts for everyone on the tree, and as he read each name he saw that all the gifts were for those who had no birthday on Christmas. Finally, much puzzled, he asked of his father the question we should ask ourselves: "Where is Christ's gift?"

This Christmas the Bishop will carry about a burdened heart unless all of us do our part to bring a gift to Christ. Send your gift money to him and furnish joy for the missionaries and their families with whom Christmas is going to be small if you and I fail. Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto the least of these my little ones, ye have done it unto me." We can in this way give our Lord his birthday gift. Fifty cents from each one of us would mean a sum of more than fifty thousand dollars; however, in this time of business depression, we know that all can not do this. For that reason those who can send more should remember the Savior whose birthday we shall soon be celebrating.

"Ye are mine if ye do what I have commanded you," said Jesus. Surely we desire to be his. Let us take up this subject in each group of Saints and heed the call of the Bishop. He is burdened, and it lies within our power to lighten that burden.

We have a church debt here in our group (Sandwich, Illinois) and it keeps us busy finding ways and means to meet it, but the heavenly Father helps us, and we are going to send our gift to our King. No gifts are put on our Christmas tree at the church. We have candies, nuts, and fruit for our children, and all share alike, and all are happy. Certain members here are this year donating pretty and inexpensive gifts of equal value for each faithful Sunday school child. Children like surprises, and these gifts will be a surprise to them.

The poor also should be made happy with Christmas cheer, but, dear Saints, let us cease this thoughtless spending of money only because we must "keep up" with other people or comply with custom. Let us bring our gifts to the manger Babe.

LIZZIE A. VINCENT.

Portland, Oregon

District President D. B. Dobson, of Tillamook, was the speaker here the morning of November 9, his theme being "Faith." Such sermons as Brother Dobson's on this subject always seem to hit the mark. He and his family live far from Portland, and their visits are much appreciated. Brother Dobson also spoke in the evening.

A wedding ceremony was performed at the church the evening of November 5. Wilma Bryson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Bryson, was married to Mr. Edwin Schuld, Brother Mark Yeoman officiating. Earl Davis was best man, and June Bryson, sister of the bride, maid of honor. The Reverend Coffman, the bridegroom's pastor, offered the invocation. Music was furnished by the ladies' trio of the church, and Sister Carson sang, "O promise me." The wedding marches were played by Perry Hunt. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

On a recent Sunday afternoon the baptismal font was prepared, and the use of it donated to Vancouver, Washington, Saints. Five candidates, all under ten years of age, took the oath of allegiance to Christ and the church, administered by Elder Albert Livingston, and were then led into the new birth by Brothers Vale and Webberly, of Vancouver.

The Lord on two occasions of late has seen fit to answer our prayers in behalf of the sick and afflicted. Brother Whorlow, pastor of Vancouver Branch, being confined to the Emanuel Hospital for a major operation, was in a condition uncertain of recovery until after the administrations under the direction of Brother Sorden. He is now getting well. Sister Francis Sheeder, who has been bedfast for some time, has recently shown marked improvement after administration. Her condition is one that elicits much sympathy; she has been blind and almost deaf since being stricken.

A recent arrival in Portland Branch is Norma Joyce, born to Brother and Sister J. L. Verhei, November 16.

The women of the adult division of the church school are busy when possible, donating their services to relieve the local church debt. November 20 they served a chicken dinner in the lower auditorium of the church at fifty cents a plate. Needless to say the preachers were present to partake. A tidy sum was realized.

Elder Sorden was lately absent from Portland. He spent a week with Saints in Condon, Oregon, holding services and conducting classes in "Personal evangelism."

A number of the choir members are enrolled in the Portland Choral Society, a symphonic chorus, under the leadership of William Van Hoogstraten, director of the Portland Symphony Orchestra. "The Messiah" will be given at the Sunday afternoon concert December 28.

Denver, Colorado

On Thanksgiving morning at ten o'clock a large number of Denver Saints gathered in the church to express their gratitude to God for his abundant mercies and blessings during the past year. An excellent program was given. Pastor Glaude Smith opened the service with a solo, after which the congregation sang "Come, ye thankful people, come." Brother J. Arthur Davis offered the opening prayer. Short talks were given by G. F. Walling, R. S. Salyards, jr., and E. J. Williams. The young men's quartet, composed of Fred and Farr Kemp, Glen Holmes, and Burrell Shupe, sang, and Garnetta Riggen sang a solo. The congregation then sang "Praise ye the Lord," after which a short period of prayer, testimony, and song concluded the service.

The past month has been full of good things for Denver Branch, not the least of which have been the helpful sermons of the pastor. The missionary services on Sunday evenings have been well attended.

The evening of November 23 a class of about thirty young people from the United Presbyterian Church visited our church for the purpose of learning something of our history and teachings. These young people are making a study of comparative religions. Brother Smith talked to them from seven to eight o'clock, telling them as much as he could crowd into this short time. Mr. Walter Johnson, a representative of the Anti-Saloon League, then gave a forceful talk on the subject of prohibition and law enforcement. He paid tribute to Latter Day Saints everywhere for their vigorous campaigns against liquor traffic and all other violations of the law.

An illustrated lecture on colonial life in America was given the evening of November 26. The lecture came from Brother Smith, following the regular prayer service. We are indebted to Brother A. E. Norris for securing these pictures from the Graphic Arts Bureau of the church.

On November 13 the adult group held a social in the basement of the church and surprised the pastor and his wife with a shower of good things to eat. Brother and Sister Smith sang several songs at the request of the crowd.

Elder R. D. Weaver stopped in Denver for a few hours on November 9 on his way from California to Independence. He was the speaker at the morning service.

Some of the young men have formed a basketball team and have been admitted into the church league of Denver. They played their first game November 13 and made an excellent showing against an experienced team from the Augustana Lutheran Church. They will play their first league game in Aurora, December 2.

Miss Althea Riggen, daughter of Mrs. Pearl Snyder, was married on October 26 to Mr. Theo K. Williamson of this city. The ceremony was performed by Brother Smith at the home of the bride's mother.

The women of the church are working hard, preparing for the bazaar, which will be held December 4, 5, and 6.

President George N. Briggs, of Graceland College, was the speaker at the evening service November 30. A large group of young people from Colorado Springs motored to Denver for the service, at the close of which Brother Briggs offered opportunity for asking questions, and willingly gave the information desired.

The young people's group held a "kid" party the evening of November 22 at the home of Ammon Wildermuth. A good attendance and an enjoyable time were reported.

We are glad to report that Sister Myrtie Fenn and Sister

Elizabeth Beardsmore, who have been seriously ill, are now able to be out.

At the business meeting December 1 the following officers were elected: Pastor, Glaude A. Smith; counselors, G. F. Walling and E. J. Williams; director of religious education, Clarence L. Bruno; supervisor of adult group, Sister Ethel Radcliff; supervisor of young people's group, Glen Holmes; supervisor of children's group, Sister Louisa Fishburn; treasurer-custodian, L. R. Holmes; clerk and recorder, Bertha R. Black; secretary of church school, Burrell Shupe.

NELLIE M. WILLIAMS.

Coldwater, Michigan

We note by the attitude of the people that the latter-day work is gradually winning its way to the deep consideration of the thoughtful in this city and vicinity.

Thanksgiving services were accompanied by clearness of vision, gladness of heart, and unity of desire. Our city paper printed the following program for the service of November 23: Saints' Church. Thanksgiving Sunday. 10 a. m., Sunday school. This is the children's hour and "inning." 11 a. m., the church school. An address by Reverend S. W. L. Scott. Subject, "The very choicest thing for thanks." Governor Green says: "One day of all the year is little enough to unite in this service without distinction of race or creed." The Bible enjoins: "O let the nations be glad and sing unto the Lord with joy. Go into his house with thanksgiving." This means attend church that day. 6 p. m., "The school of expression." A fine study hour with discussions, and program of musical and literary character. Brief. Come, the Lord needs you. You are wanted and welcome.

The church school, in charge of Sister Maude Corless, was beautiful. In answer to the supervisor's question, nearly all the juniors and intermediates with the seniors arose and stated what things they were thankful for. Tears came to the eyes of many as the heart's desire was expressed.

At eleven o'clock in the morning Brother Scott discoursed on the texts announced in the paper. It was a sermon which reached the hearts of all. At the close of the sermon, Warren Dean, son of Sister Deana (Corless) King, from Bristol, Indiana, was blessed by Brothers Scott and Peer.

The School of Expression, Education, and Recreation in the evening, conducted by Sister S. W. L. Scott, was an hour of uplift and study, followed by a brief program of readings by Sister Stroh and music by the juniors. The day was one characterized by a happy spirit.

Sister Brace, formerly of Toronto, Canada, worshiped with us Thanksgiving morning, and in the afternoon telephoned her pleasure and appreciation for the opportunity of attending. Her husband is not a member. "I told him," she said, "what a fine, friendly people he would meet at the Saints' church." Other Saints were present from Bryan, Ohio, Hondunk, and near Quincy.

Branch President Corless, who recently was bereft of his companion by death, is visiting his daughter, Sister J. J. Parker, of Dowagiac. Everyone misses him.

Brother Scott preached the funeral sermon of Mr. Miner last Thursday afternoon. He was a former Branch County treasurer and an esteemed citizen. Many of his grandchildren and great-grandchildren belong to Coldwater Branch.

Sister Melvin Johnson, who submitted to surgical treatment for cancer at Wades Memorial Hospital, Coldwater, is recovering nicely. Brother and Sister Hyrum J. Corless were in their pew Sunday morning. Brother Corless has been afflicted for some time, but with his wife is a faithful worker of forty years' standing.

The fall season has been gorgeous in southern Michigan. The weather has been warm; and bright, balmy days have been numerous.

The Saints are usually well and happy and have a fine new roof on their church. We are praying for the day when Zion will put on her beautiful attire and "bless the kindreds of earth."

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

Sacramental service November 2 was a pleasant meeting, God's Spirit being felt to the encouragement of all. In the evening J. E. Matthews preached on "Who is my neighbor?"

November 9 Edgar R. Kimball preached, reading for a lesson Luke 21 and using as a theme "Soldiers." G. P. Myers was the evening speaker, his text being, "I must work, for the time cometh when no man worketh."

The Women's Department met November 13, twenty-six members being present. A potluck dinner was served at noon, and a varied program was given in the afternoon, each one taking part.

The chicken dinner at Drud's Hall netted more than ninety-two dollars, and the Women's Department donated enough to make one hundred dollars. The sum was turned over to the committee to help pay on the church debt.

Bishop H. E. French spoke November 16 on the text: "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

Temple Builders, Orioles, and Blue Birds are meeting regularly with good attendance.

"Character" was the theme of R. E. Madden November 23. And "Thanksgiving" was the evening topic of Doctor W. B. Reeves.

Gard H. Kirkendall, who has been sick for some time, is better and will soon be able to meet with us again.

Mr. and Mrs. Winston Simmons are the proud parents of a baby boy born November 30.

District President A. E. Anderton preached November 30, taking for a theme "Stewardship of life."

C. W. Clark, pastor of First Branch, preached in the evening on "The right road." MRS. VASSIE SHEETS.

Muskegon, Michigan

December 3.—Violet Marie, the seven-months-old daughter of Brother and Sister Forrest Winters, passed away October 28 after an illness of three weeks. Funeral services were held October 30, Elder E. E. Loomis officiating.

Elder Pycock, of Grand Rapids, gave an illustrated lecture on the life of Christ and parables, Thursday and Friday evenings, November 6 and 7. Great interest was manifested, and a large crowd attended both evenings.

Sister Mardis, seventy-four years old, had the misfortune to fall November 3, at the home of her son, Brother Howard Mardis, of Sullivan, and broke her hip. She is in the Hackley Hospital, and due to her advanced age her progress in recovering is slow.

Elder Whitehead is in Wisconsin working and is also holding a series of meetings which, he writes in a letter received by Elder Loomis, is well attended and marked good interest.

Rally Day at Muskegon Branch, September 28, was largely attended and greatly enjoyed. The out-of-town speakers were Elder Pycock and Elder Ellis Whitehead, of Grand Rapids, and Brother Ward, of Detroit. The Women's Department served dinner and supper in the basement.

A baby girl was born to Mr. and Sister Brentana November 26, at Mercy Hospital. She has been named Arlene Jean.

The Women's Department gave a fine entertainment on the evening of November 13. After the program sandwiches, coffee, and pie were served in the basement.

Elder Ellis Whitehead, of Grand Rapids, gave a fine sermon at the church Thanksgiving night. A good crowd was in attendance.

The Christmas program committee consisting of Sister Taylor Evans, Sister Alma Ward, and Brother and Sister DuWayne Pickard, is working hard on the program which will be given Christmas Eve at the church. These workers are receiving splendid cooperation.

Arrangements are under way for a Rally Day to be held Sunday, January 4, at which time we are expecting to have several out-of-town speakers. The Women's Department is planning to serve dinner and supper in the basement.

MRS. E. E. LOOMIS.

London, Ontario

Raymond Neal, a member of the Sunday school orchestra, had the misfortune to break his collar bone while playing a game of football.

The sermon on October 19 was given by Fred Heddington, teacher, who read Matthew 19. Elder James Winegarden, district president, occupied the pulpit in the evening, preaching a splendid sermon on the Restoration. Pastor J. E. MacGregor was in charge, assisted by Bishop J. C. Dent.

October 26 in the evening Pastor MacGregor took as his topic, "Service," emphasizing the thought that all should serve the Master and showing how all can be of service. The choir sang, directed by Fred Heddington.

The first Sunday of November Elder Frank Gray spoke in the evening on the unchangeability of God. Jeremiah 29 gave him the basis for his sermon.

This branch celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of the opening of the church building November 16 and 17. Apostle D. T. Williams was here, and his sermons were helpful. On Monday night the Women's Department had charge of a banquet and the dramatic club the program. Elder J. Winegarden was chairman. A happy time was experienced, and with Brother Williams went an invitation to visit us whenever opportunity affords. On Sunday afternoon he gave an excellent talk on priesthood. With Sister Dorothy Abell at the organ, the choir gave excellent service. A beautiful solo was sung by Sister Vera Sutter.

A pretty wedding was solemnized October 21 at the home of Brother and Sister Armstrong when their second daughter, Edith, became the bride of Mr. Nathaniel Smith, of Hillsburg, Inverness, Nova Scotia. The couple received many tokens of respect and the good wishes of the branch. Sister Edith was a worker among the young people and will be missed by them. Elder MacGregor officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will live in Hillsburg where Mr. Smith owns a farm.

Another wedding occurred November 15 when Miss Alice M. Tanton became the bride of Elder Clarence Duesling. The event took place at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. H. A. Tanton. The Reverend E. Young, pastor of Dundas Center United Church, officiated, assisted by Bishop J. C. Dent. The couple left immediately on their honeymoon in Florida and Cuba.

On a recent Sunday afternoon, the Sunday school conducted an impressive graduation service, members of the two junior classes being promoted to a higher grade. Superintendent Frank Gray had charge and addressed the scholars concerning their greater responsibility. Sisters Judkins and Heddington were teachers of the classes promoted. Sister Grace Perry had charge of the junior department and supervised the program.

The Sunday school is getting busy on the program for the annual Christmas tree and entertainment.

Saints in this branch were very sorry to learn of the death of Sister Tillie Fligg, wife of our district missionary. Brother and Sister Fligg were honored members of London Branch for many years prior to moving to Independence. We extend sympathy to Brother Fligg and the family in their time of bereavement.

Pisgah, Iowa

We are nearing the close of another year. Our branch record could be better, but there is a worshipful band of Saints in Pisgah.

The services are interesting under the leadership of Brother Meggers, president, and his corps of helpers.

The last sacramental service was beautiful. Special Sunday services have also been conducted with pleasing results.

Graceland College Day program was excellent, and the collection the largest ever given here.

Elder J. W. Lane has been in this branch in his tour of the district. He visited the Saints in their homes and preached on Sundays. We are thankful for his message.

The district conference convened at Woodbine November 29 and 30. Some Saints from here attended, and spoke of the spirit of unity which prevailed.

November 30 President F. M. McDowell was the speaker. A fine crowd of attentive listeners greeted him. We greatly appreciate the work of the ministry who visit us.

East Saint Louis, Illinois

Thirty-eighth and Forest

In the last quarterly business meeting of 1930, the Lansdowne Branch elected a new corps of officers, the duties of which for the coming six months became immediately effective.

Brother Prosper Carl, recently ordained a priest, was given the honourable task of pastor. Although Brother Prosper is young in years and experience, he is an enthusiastic and willing worker, and the members have faith in his ability. He expects, with the support of his associate officers as well as the aid and counsel of the local priesthood, to generate during the coming six months within the branch a more earnest and consecrated spirit of endeavor.

Each Sunday evening service for the past several weeks the Saints have enjoyed hearing as speakers the following men from district branches, Elder Russell Archibald, sr., of Saint Louis; District President Bruce E. Brown; Elder Clarence Archibald, Brentwood; and Elder Roy Remington, of Maryland Heights. All gave excellent sermons, and the Lansdowne Saints are grateful.

A social gathering in the form of a Halloween costume party occurred October 31, sponsored by the Women's Department. The lower auditorium was attractively decorated with bright autumn leaves, bitter sweet, cornstalks, and lantern pumpkins. Under the supervision of Brother Harpley, many interesting games were played. Refreshments of hot wiener sandwiches, pumpkin pie, and lemon soda were sold. The proceeds were applied to the piano fund.

The first Sunday evening in November, a musical program was given: Piano selections by Grace Billinsky, Earl Harding, and Grace Smith; vocal solos by Rose Carl, Irene Lindsey; a reading by Bertha Cook with Grace Smith accompanying at the piano; two saw solos by Prosper Carl. The wealth of local talent was noted by visiting members. The music department will endeavor to continue this feature each month during the winter.

Thanksgiving Day was observed by a general assembling of Saints at eleven o'clock for an hour of devotion. "With thankful hearts, we meet, O Lord," was the opening song, and during the course of the hour there were prayers, songs, and testimonies of thankfulness for the many blessings which we enjoyed. The spirit of peace and thanksgiving was very present. A chicken dinner was served at noon by the Women's Department.

The afternoon program began at two o'clock and consisted of a series of games for all ages. These were in charge of Brothers Harpley and Prosper Carl. Brother Harpley has recently come to East Saint Louis from the State of Ohio, and we welcome him to our midst. At five o'clock everyone again gathered around the festive board. The day closed with songs and happy farewells as the members went to their homes.

The Church in the Southwest

The church work in Southwestern Texas District is progressing, and the Saints are actively going ahead. Members of First San Antonio Branch have builded a good church at the corner of South Cherry and Rockwood Court, one block east of South Presa in the thirty-three hundred block. This is a favorable location, and it is hoped that the work will prosper here and many souls be won to the gospel. Elder T. J. Jett, jr., was elected pastor and Elder E. L. Henson, assistant pastor. Sister Flossie Waite was selected to take charge of the Department of Religious Education. Here rally and opening day were combined in a splendid program September 28.

Second San Antonio Branch elected Elder John A. Robinson, pastor. Brother Robinson is also vice president of the district and in charge of the Department of Religious Education. He is ably supported by a band of enthusiastic workers, and with the Lord's help they are assured of success. This branch meets at 912 North Colorado Street, one block north of the West End or Lake View car line.

Having been selected to act as moderator for Elder A. M. Baker in a debate held at Sedan, New Mexico, October 27, I arranged to be present, but before I reached the place I was informed by Brother Baker that the debate had been called off by the Reverend E. Arsenaux, of the Church of Christ, the minister selected to represent that church. Accordingly, I changed my plans and held a series of services at Fort Sumner, New Mexico, where we have a live group of members. Then I proceeded to Portales, where I had been announced to speak in the courthouse.

While at Portales I was informed that Sister W. T. Cothorn's grandson, a boy of about eight years of age, had met with an accident and had caught his big toe in a cog wheel. The toe had been crushed off just back of the big joint. The injury was most painful, and the boy suffered greatly. The flesh was sluffing away from the bone, and the doctor told the mother that the foot was not doing as well as he had expected. They were anxious about it. The accident occurred a week before I arrived. When I was called to administer, the child was suffering intensely. After the ordinance, he ceased to cry and said that the pain had been entirely removed. Word from the family tells us that the boy's condition improved from that hour. When the doctor saw the foot, he was astonished at the improvement in so short a time. The members at Portales conduct a Sunday school and are doing all they can for the work there.

My next series was held at Borger, Texas, where several very large gasoline refineries are located. The few Saints there arranged for the services and gave me a hearty welcome. I plan to follow up the splendid interest developed there by Elder J. R. Sutton, of Genoa, Colorado, and others. It seems a favorable opening.

Lately I have held services near Medina and at Pipe Creek, Texas, where there are some fine workers. This part of Texas was at one time occupied by Apostle Lyman Wight and his followers, and later such men as Heman C. Smith and H. O. Smith labored extensively in the field. It is a pleasure to meet with so many loyal and true Saints who have withstood the bitter attacks that have been made on their faith by men who worked with them as shepherds but who proved to be embittered and no longer representing the church or its message loved by these Saints for many years.

Our attitude toward those who have become discouraged and gone from us should be one of love and kindness yet firmness and steadfastness in defense of the truth, that the work we love may not be hindered. I was baptized into this church when a boy nine years of age, and I have always enjoyed my work in the church. After spending a number of years as active missionary and having made careful study of the restored gospel, that I might be prepared to defend it properly and to present it in an acceptable and effective way, I do not doubt the divinity of the work, and today I love and appreciate the gospel as taught by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as I never did before. It has ever stood one hundred per cent for the gospel as taught by Jesus and his apostles in the first century and as restored in 1830 and continued down to the present time. The Master provided for only one church while he was on earth, and he provided for only one in 1830, laying a foundation so strong and sure that all who withdraw from the true church and attempt to build a new church or claim to be the continuation of the true body, are easily detected. There is but one plan and that plan is clearly set forth in the Doctrine and Covenants. Even the courts of the land, when asked to decide as to the merits or demerits of the claims of the Reorganization, did not hesitate to declare that the Reorganized Church is the true and legal representative of the church organized in 1830. This disposed in a legal sense of the claims of all others who presented themselves as the true church. No one need be deceived, for the Lord made it plain in Doctrine and Covenants 43:2 that the members of this church are to reject the teachings and claims of all who refuse to teach or accept the message as set forth in the Doctrine and Covenants. The Lord gave this as a law to all the members of the true church, that they might not be deceived.

It is my experience that all who love the great latter-day work and are busy trying to promote its interests are very happy, while those who have become discouraged and left the church are very unhappy. Let us try to win them back to the fold with kindness and love, and may the Lord bless the Saints' Herald and its splendid staff who are working to build up the kingdom of God and to further the cause of Zion.

G. H. WIXOM.

Union Branch

Clitherall, Minnesota

We feel that the branch and the people of this county generally have obeyed the instruction found in Doctrine and Covenants 95:2 (wherein we are advised to uphold good and honest men in office), in the election to the State legislature of our pastor, Lester Whiting. We feel that increased honor and respect will accrue to the church from the wider contacts made possible by this election.

Services have been discontinued in the church for cold weather, though the members occasionally meet in the homes and enjoy the same spirit of harmony experienced at the regular assemblies.

In spite of unemployment and the past unfruitful season, we feel that it is possible for the spirit of peace and good will to prevail, for that is a condition that is governed largely from within.

Thayer, Missouri

Church work in Thayer during the past year has revived. Several new members have been added to our number since the tent meeting held here in July by Elder W. E. Haden and others. The Saints are building a fine stone church and hope to have it finished in January.

Members locating in this region of the country should know that they have a nice church in which to worship the Lord. Association with those of like faith is a great blessing.

If there are Saints who are considering coming to this vicinity, I would like to hear from them. I have lived here about sixty-five years and know the country. I will help them all I can. My address is Alton, Missouri, Route 3, Box 77.

Far West Stake

Splendid Interest Attends Priesthood Institutes

About one hundred members of the priesthood of Far West Stake enjoyed the privilege of one or more of the priesthood conferences held in Far West Stake December 12, 13, and 14. Apostle J. F. Garver was the speaker at the five sessions held each day. "The meaning of our ministry" was the general theme of the lectures.

The opening conference was held at Cameron on Friday. About forty members of the priesthood gathered for the day. This included the three stake missionaries, R. E. Jones, S. E. Mifflin, and W. S. Woodward. Elder G. T. Richards, of Kansas City Stake, was a welcome visitor. The meetings were presided over by the stake president, Ward A. Hougas. Representatives were present from the following branches: Cameron, Trenton, Maple Grove, Stewartsville, Oakdale, Saint Joseph, and Richmond.

Two class periods were held each forenoon and afternoon, with one class or preaching service at night.

Cameron Saints entertained the visiting members of the priesthood in their homes during their stay in Cameron.

Saturday found Brother J. F. Garver in action at Guilford. Here the representatives of Ross Grove, Bedison, and Guilford Branches met. A general preaching service was held at night. The Women's Department served free meals to the visitors in the basement of the church.

The climax of the entire series came at Saint Joseph Sunday night, when the four congregations of the city gathered at First Church to hear Brother Garver speak on the subject, "The call to minister."

Four priesthood services were held at the Y. W. C. A. building during the forenoon and afternoon. While the group consisted mainly of the priesthood of the city, there were also representatives from Kingston, Fortescue, and Stewartsville Branches, as well as from Fanning (Kansas), Branch. Arrangements had been completed for speakers from out of the city for the four Saint Joseph pulpits, so that the priesthood of Saint Joseph might be free to attend. The four topics discussed in class were as follows: "The meaning of our ministry," "Ours is a ministry of life," "Our ministry to the family," and "Our ministry of visitation."

Lamoni Stake

A Pre-Christmas Service

"A worship service of Christmas music" was the heading of the programs for the evening service of December 14. The full choir, the A Cappella Chorus, and soloists combined in one of the most appreciated musical services ever presented in the Brick Church. The building was well filled. Baskets and festooning of evergreen and holly decorated the rostrum.

Just before the hour for the opening of the service, the choir sang Christmas carols in the lower auditorium. In an introductory statement, Roy Cheville stated that the service was not to be considered an array of musical talent in a concert, but that the singers came in the spirit of the stanza from Longfellow:

"God sent his singers upon the earth
With songs of gladness and of mirth,
That they might touch the hearts of men
And bring them back to heaven again."

Then came the entrance of the choir.

There was no sermon. The story of Christmas and its attending spirit was related in music, prayer, and two scripture readings, one from the Old Testament and one from the New Testament. Arias from The Messiah were sung by Colin Ferrett and Arthur Oakman. Elizabeth Smith, harpist, brought an appreciated offering in "Angelus" and "Silent night." One of the outstanding numbers was Rubenstein's "Seraphim song," an accompanied number of the A Cappella Chorus with Lois Garver, violinist, Elizabeth Smith, harpist, and Linna T. Hunt, soprano. After the benediction the congregation was seated, and the choir sang "Silent night," a fitting close to the service. Mabel Carlile directed.

Branch Business Meeting

On Tuesday evening, December 9, the branch held its annual election. The meeting for reception of reports will be held in January. A friendly and interested attitude prevailed throughout the meeting. The stake presidency, T. S. Williams and Roy A. Cheville, were sustained as pastorate, and the stake bishopric, G. L. DeLapp and James A. Thomas, were retained as treasury. Charles F. Church, who for so many years has served as custodian deacon, was reelected, as was Earl Lewis, for direction of ushering. Mabel Carlile continues as chorister.

The election of officers of the church school drew much interest, since it offered opportunity for inquiry concerning the organization of religious education. In Lamoni there has been no sharp change to any "new plan"; there has been instead a gradual transition to more effective organization. There has been no attempt to fit into any set plan of the general department, but rather an adaptation of the general scheme to local conditions.

At the recent election, Vesta Stevenson was selected for the superintendency of the children's division, which include the departments up to the high school. In the young people's division will be included the high school, college, and older young people. The adult department will be superintended by D. M. Vredenburg and Walter Johnson.

The department of directors of special activities was left to the director of the church school, Roy A. Cheville. This includes directors of social and recreational work, music, boys' and girls' work, etc.

Events in Nauvoo District

Burlington, Iowa, December 9.—The assignment of the Centennial Conference gave me a new field in which to labor, one not unlooked for. I say it was not unlooked for because from time to time evidences had been given me where my help would be needed, but I wanted to have my impressions fully confirmed. Accordingly in the month of May I entered the new field unheralded, but was accorded a generous welcome by the people in Burlington, and my stay with them to the present has been fraught with saintly fellowship.

During the summer months I was engaged in the work of this district, attending the young people's camp, and visiting some of the branches. The reunion season found me endeavoring to provide what was necessary to help make the gathering of this district successful. And while some conditions were adverse, the gathering was pronounced a success by those who attended.

Then began preparation for the fall and winter work as well as activities required to look after the needs of the local congregation. Everything seemed to be going smoothly when, on the night of September 16, a telephone call from my son Lee informed me that another son, Lloyd, had been waylaid by a bandit and shot twice. It was thought that the boy's condition was not serious, still my family asked me to come home. At eleven o'clock the next day I arrived at the station and was met by a relative who told me that Lloyd was doing as well as could be expected and that one shot had taken effect in the right arm while the other had entered the left side ranging down and was now lodged below the seventh rib.

For days life seemed to hang on a very brittle thread, but, thanks to the heavenly Father, the prayers of the Saints were heard, and the lad was spared. I want at this time to offer all those who remembered him with us in our hour of trial thanks and gratitude. May the rich graces of His bounty ever be yours. It is now the twelfth week since his injury, and he is beginning to get about and once more to have, to some extent, the use of his right side. We are told that his return to normal will be rather slow but that it will come in time.

This condition in my family hindered me to some extent in carrying out plans for church services. Yet with the help of dependable associates, things were kept going, and good has been achieved.

It was thought advisable to postpone Rally Day here for one month, holding it then in connection with Decision Day, and while that has in a measure been reported in the Herald columns, I feel it will do no hurt to add a few more items concerning it.

In my experience I think I have never witnessed to such a degree what a special day meant to a group of people as did this one. From the opening to the close was one grand spiritual experience. The musical prelude centered thought about "The old rugged cross," and an illuminated cross hung above the rostrum. Then the Sunday school lesson gave special emphasis to "Personal evangelism." The morning sermon was an inspiration, the speaker being fired with the divine influence so that he was able to admonish, commend, and in some measure rebuke, yet there was still held out promise of continued recognition if those present would remember their covenant and try to fully comply with its requirements.

At noon dinner was served in the basement. All stood around the tables, while three of the brothers invoked the blessing in song.

A baptismal service at 1.30 witnessed the induction of four young women into the kingdom. The service consisted of a procession of the minister, candidates, and their relatives to the front of the platform where a short ceremony was conducted. A charge was given the candidates, a vow taken, and a charge was also given the congregation to help these new members keep their pledge. Then came the ordinance. The confirmation followed, and a little later an experience and testimony meeting. At this hour two men were divinely designated to work in the priesthood, and others were commended for their faithfulness.

Concluding this service the Saints were reminded that this was Rally and Decision Day. To rally means to awake from lethargy. Decision is the process of deciding. The people were impressed that on this day they should do both. They were asked to decide to reduce the local church debt one thousand dollars. If consternation at such a suggestion reigned at first, it was soon allayed by the announcement that a check for half the amount was already in hand. In twenty minutes one thousand and twenty dollars was subscribed.

The evening service was a continuation of the spirit and influence experienced throughout the day. The speaker for fifteen minutes brought to the assembly the significance of "The challenge of the cross," after which the play by the same name was presented by members of the congregation.

The next district gathering was the conference held at Ottumwa. Owing to conditions at home, I had asked my associates, Brothers A. M. Chase and A. L. Sanford, to look after the arranging for this gathering. I had expected to be present at the sessions of the conference; but at the time of the opening, word came that a worthy Saint, Brother J. L. Butterworth, of Dow City, had passed to his reward, and I was asked to conduct the last services. I was signally blessed in this effort, and the services were conducted in the Methodist Episcopal Church at that place, their minister assisting.

Reports from the conference are to the effect that it was a profitable gathering without one discordant note, having present the largest number had for some time.

Thus in this district we go forward, all striving for the "faith that was once delivered to the Saints."

F. T. MUSSELL.

Cleveland, Ohio

At the close of the conference at Akron, October 9, some of the Saints accompanied Apostle C. F. Ellis to Cleveland, where all listened to an excellent sermon on "Repentance," by Brother Ellis. The scripture reading was from Acts 3, and the text was Revelation 3:19: "As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten: be zealous therefore, and repent." Other admonitions concerning repentance were quoted from ancient and modern revelations. Under the direction of John Campbell the choir sang an anthem, "Looking beyond," by Lincoln Hall. "Open the gates of the temple" was sung by Mr. McCracken, with violin obbligato by Floyd Kelsey.

Cleveland Saints held thanksgiving service November 30. The juniors had a program in the morning worship hour, under the direction of Sister Clara Farrow. The choir and congregation sang hymns, and prayer was offered by Brother C. Thomas. Deuteronomy 8 was the scripture reading by Elder J. A. McNeil. The junior chorus sang; there was a reading by Virginia Webbe; a dialog by Clifford and Clinton Saxton; solo by Ruth Wilson; solo by Beverly Smith; offertory by Sister M. Mason; sermonet by Elder J. A. McNeil; benediction by Brother C. Thomas.

Our choir director, John Campbell, also directs a Lyndhurst Community choir which joined our choir at the thanksgiving service Sunday evening. The program was as follows: Prelude, "Souvenir De Vieniewski," violin, Mr. F. J. Kelsey, piano, Mrs. Kelsey; hymn, "The reapers," congregation; anthem, "O give thanks unto the Lord," choir, solo, obbligato, Mrs. Andes; soprano solo, "The heavens are telling," Mrs. Jacobs; contralto solo, "Thanks be to God," Mrs. E. A. McNeil; anthem, "The harvest time is passing by," choir; baritone solo, "Nature's anthem of praise," Mr. Beaumont; anthem, "O Father almighty," choir; pastoral prayer and offertory, "Meditation de Thais"; hymn, "O reapers of life's harvest," congregation; tenor solo, "Creation," Hayden, by Mr. McCracken; soprano solo, "Grateful, O Lord, am I," Mrs. Farrow; number by quartet composed of Mrs. H. Jacobs, Mrs. Beaumont, Mr. Campbell, and Mr. Beaumont; address, the pastor; soprano solo, "Thank God for all," Mrs. Andes; duet, "The harvest song," Mrs. J. Campbell and Mr. McCracken; contralto solo, "There is a flower," Mrs. Armstrong; anthem, "Thanksgiving and praise," choir; hymn, "Gather the reapers home." At the close of the service the choir and congregation sang a thanksgiving hymn to the tune, "America"; then came the benediction and postlude.

For the thanksgiving services the church decorator, Sister E. A. Mehlisch, had arranged throughout the building receptacles containing bright-colored autumn foliage. On one side of the rostrum was a basket of foliage, on the other a large horn of plenty, filled with fruit. E. A. Webbe made out of gold cardboard, in old English lettering, the words, "Thanks be to God," which were placed at the front of the church on the pipes of the organ.

Oakland, California

From the Oakland Bulletin

Pastor John W. Rushton returned from Independence Sunday, November 23, where he was called by the death of his father, William T. Rushton, November 15. Brother Rushton was a member of the Episcopal Church from childhood until 1888 when, with his family, he united with the Reorganized Church in Leeds, England. He served as an elder in the church for many years. The funeral was conducted by Elder B. R. McGuire, and Elder Joseph Luff preached the sermon. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery in Independence. This branch extends sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Sympathy also goes to Sister Mellberg and family for loss of Arthur Mellberg, who died November 19 after a short illness. Though he was not a member of the church, his allegiance and support were given to the local churches of Oakland and Park-Presidio. The funeral was conducted by the pastor, and the body cremated at San Francisco.

The preachers the last Sunday in November were Brother Ralson and Brother J. B. Carmichael.

The basketball team defeated a brilliant team of Chinese players, from the Chinese Congregational Church, the evening of December 1 by a score of 34 to 13. The following Wednesday they won from the Bethany Lutheran team by a score of 42 to 18. This puts our team at the head of their division, and a series of games with division leaders will next be in order.

Chicago, Illinois

Central Branch, Sixty-sixth and Honore Streets

Three communion services have passed into history since the Herald last heard from this branch, each sacrament inspiring the people to move forward.

Prayers are being offered for those who are sick. This list includes at the present time Sister Sherman, Brother and Sister H. P. W. Keir, Sister Schmid, Sister Pement, Sister Rachel Brown, and Sisters Tonks and Wainwright.

God has been good to his people in this locality. In spite of business depression and unemployment, they are being cared for, and many can testify of the answer to their prayers.

The music department gives valued service in our meetings. On Rally Day the choir sang at three different services, and its help is noted and appreciated at the regular services.

Among the speakers on Rally Day were Sister Hattie K. Bell, who talked to the teachers, and Elders J. Wildermuth, J. A. Gardner, and Bishop M. H. Siegfried. Brother Gardner brought us each a message from the President: not only to rededicate our own effort to the Lord but to become a missionary and seek out our brothers and sisters grown weary in well doing and encourage them to rededicate themselves to God's service.

Brother and Sister Karl Kueffer made Chicago a brief visit and worshiped with us once before returning to Oklahoma City. With them they took home Brother and Sister J. Decker, parents of Sister Kueffer, who will live there. Our best wishes go with this pair, who have been members of the South Side Branch for several years.

Among other visitors in this branch are Elder O. C. White and wife, of Independence. Brother White preached a good sermon on "The values of Jesus."

Other splendid sermons have been delivered from our pulpit of late by the following ministers: F. Henry Edwards, R. E. Davey, C. E. Schmid, H. P. W. Keir, Donald McPeak, W. Eskridge, Clem Evans, and Brother Hurst. Brother Eskridge is showing slides with his Sunday evening missionary lectures. "The other wise man," and "The quest of the King" are some of the titles of his talks thus far.

A special prayer and fasting service was recently had at the church by the priesthood in behalf of the young son of J. J. Oliver.

On Thanksgiving, at ten o'clock in the morning, special services were conducted that all might be given opportunity to express their praise and gratitude.

Sister Burr, despite her eighty years and more, bears a faithful testimony to the truth of the gospel and the many blessings God has given her. She admonishes Saints old and young to seek Jesus as the only true friend.

The young baby of Brother and Sister Joe Smart passed away October 21. C. E. Schmid spoke a few words and offered prayer at the grave. Brother Cotton, of West Pullman, passed to his reward November 23. He had been a great sufferer. Sympathy goes to the sorrowing ones.

A friend of Elder David Dowker, Mr. H. E. Harris, worshiped here one Sunday. He met Brother Dowker in California but now lives in Chicago. He had come in contact with our city missionary and had a nice visit with him. This visitor seemed well pleased with our service and said that he would come again.

A play, "The rebellion of youth," given by the South Side women, was very successful and will be repeated December 8 on the West Side, half the proceeds to go to that group, half to go to the group represented by the performers.

Sister A. Sherman, sr., is slowly improving. Brother Sherman met with an accident which will keep him at home for a time.

The last branch birthday social was held at the home of Sister Cora Keir.

The choir young people had a good time at a party at the church given in honor of Brother W. Eskridge by his wife, who is in charge of the choir work. Also a birthday party was given at the home of Sister Dorothy Boehm in her honor.

Central Branch wishes to work in accordance with the program outlined by the leaders. Its weekly prayer services are of a high type and serve as a force moving us forward.

The last district conference was well attended and composed of very profitable sessions.

MRS. EUGENE HORTON.

Independence

Stone Church

The Christmas spirit pervaded the morning services of all the departments on Sunday, and special readings, musical numbers, exercises, and treats made the children happy. In the main auditorium the worship period preceding the lesson study was in charge of Elder G. G. Lewis, assisted by Elder H. W. Harder. Two carols were sung by a chorus of girls directed by Sister Bertha Burgess, and the scripture story of the birth of Christ was read. Christmas carols were also sung by the congregation, and the invocation was a prayer of blessing upon all during the yuletide season.

"The necessity for continued growth in the church" was the theme of the Sunday morning sermon by Bishop Albert Carmichael, whose central thought was that there is inherent within this church the spirit of growth and that this spirit is shared by all forward-looking members.

"The Star of Bethlehem," a solo by Edward Brackenbury, tenor, org an music by Robert Miller, and congregational singing combined to give the morning's talk a musical setting. Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the service.

The big event of Christmas Sunday at the Stone Church was the thirteenth annual rendition of The Messiah, Handel's oratorio, to a crowd of people which thronged into the church and sat appreciatively through the performance from the organ-piano "Overture," to the last number, the magnificent "Hallelujah" chorus. This was the Christmas gift of the Messiah Choir of Independence to the church and the community. Soloists were Nina G. Smith, soprano, Gladys Good, contralto, George Anway, tenor, and Arthur Oakman, baritone. Paul N. Craig directed, and the chorus members were accompanied by the Auditorium Orchestra; Robert Miller was organist, and George Miller, pianist.

In the afternoon one hundred voices of the Messiah Choir gave the oratorio to the radio world over the Columbia network from the K M B C Studio at Kansas City, Paul N. Craig directing. Accompaniment was by the K M B C Salon Orchestra, directed by Mr. P. Hans Flath. Soloists for this hour were Mrs. George R. Cowden, soprano; Mrs. Raymond Havens, contralto; George Anway, tenor; and Arthur Oakman, baritone.

The funeral services of Sister Albert Rall and her two small sons, Myrle, nine years old, and Donald, five, who were found dead in the family motor car in the garage of their home in Independence, victims of carbon monoxide gas, by Brother Rall when he returned home from work the evening of December 18, were held at the Stone Church at three o'clock Sunday afternoon. Elder John F. Sheehy preached the sermon. Hundreds of friends in this city and elsewhere extended deepest sympathy to the bereaved husband and father. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Liberty Street

"I have seen Jesus" was the startling statement made by President F. M. McDowell in introducing his talk at the December communion service. After a brief review of the Passion Play, witnessed by him in September, and the many times he saw Jesus in the great art displays of Europe we were convinced. This was the first visit of Brother McDowell to our local since his return from Europe. Elders F. A. Cool and Walter Curtis were in charge of the service.

The senior missionary of the church, Elder W. A. Smith, in his characteristically emphatic and convincing way proved to his hearers in his sermon Sunday night, December 7, that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God. The enthusiasm of this active and earnest man, after thirty-four consecutive years in the missionary work of the church, can be explained only by the unusual appeal this work makes to those who love it. Patriarch I. M. Smith offered the invocation.

After a particularly uplifting sermon on the complete change that must be effected in the lives of individuals before they can be truly successful church members by Patriarch I. M. Smith, the morning of December 14, a wedding was solemnized. Lohengrin's "Wedding march" was played by Lyda Thomason as Lomax Odom, best man, and Gladys Vernon, maid of honor, and Agnes Calloway and Elbert Mock, the principals, took their places on the platform, facing Patriarch I. M. Smith. After the processional Gomer Cool played as a violin solo, "I love you truly," accompanied by Lyda Thomason. The single ring marriage ceremony was read by Patriarch Smith. The best wishes of the congregation go with this young couple.

In the evening Patriarch U. W. Greene prepared the Saints for the approaching Christmas season. Music was in charge of Fred Friend.

The Christmas program occurred at the morning hour December 21. Harry Blake was in charge of the devotional service and Walter Curtis at the period following class study. All departments contributed liberally to the program, and Margaret Mills told the Christmas story. After the benediction treats of candy and nuts were presented to the children. Pastor F. A. Cool spoke at the evening hour.

At the annual branch election held December 9, F. A. Cool was sustained as pastor, and he will have as associates Harry Blake, Walter Curtis, and Chester Young.

Recent converts gained to the church are Sister Beulah Walker and David Guttridge, baptized by Priest Harry Blake, and Bonnie Lee Curnutt, baptized by her grandfather, Priest George Adkins.

Walnut Park

The annual business meeting for the election of officers for the year 1931 was held on Friday evening at the church, Elders John Sheehy and J. Stanley Kelley in charge. After a short talk reviewing the accomplishments of the past year, Brother Sheehy presented Elder S. C. Smith as the nomination of the pastorate in Zion for Walnut Park pastor during the coming year. It was moved and seconded that this nomination be accepted and approved by the Saints of Walnut Park. The motion passed unanimously.

The following assistants to the pastor were elected at the meeting: Elder Carroll L. Olson, Elder R. Barnhardt, and Elder Fred Lanphear. Brother J. Stanley Kelley presented the name of Fred Horne for the office of bishop's agent, and of Fred Wille for the office of custodian. Both of these nominations were unanimously approved. Brother Orlando Nace was nominated and unanimously elected as director of music during the coming year.

On Sunday morning, December 14, two special musical numbers were presented during the church school hour by an instrumental quartet composed of Erwin Moorman, playing the alto horn, Fred Mollison, the trombone, Milford Nace, the baritone horn, and Guy Reynolds, the sousaphone. In the evening a clarinet trio, composed of Arlo Chapman, Thelma Moorman, and Alfred Waters, presented a number, "Moon Glade."

The speaker of the morning was Elder John Sheehy, pastor of Zion, who talked on "The needs of today," using as a basis Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8. The choir rendered an anthem, "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace," which was greatly appreciated by the congregation.

In the evening Missionary R. D. Weaver started a special series of pre-Christmas services. These services were held every night last week with the exception of Saturday. A song service began at 7.30 and special musical numbers were provided by the Walnut Park Choir, Walnut Park Quartet, and members of the orchestra.

Brother Weaver's sermon Sunday night was on the theme, "The nature of God as reflected in the work of his hands," using as a text Romans 1: 20. Miss Lilly Belle Allen, who frequently appears as soloist over K M B C, gave two soprano solos during the song service, "God so loved the world" and "O Lord, correct me." The Walnut Park Choir also assisted in the service with the anthem, "They that trust in the Lord."

The sermons on the following evenings were equally interesting and valuable. There was an average attendance at the services of from one hundred and fifty to one hundred and seventy-five. Brother Weaver closed the series on Sunday night with a particularly effective sermon based on the text, "What will ye do with this man Jesus, whom ye call Christ?"

Sunday morning, December 21, was the time and place of the children's Christmas program, which consisted of readings, songs, and exercises by the children, with the usual good spirit and Christmas wishes accompanying. For several weeks the children had been saving pennies, nickels, and dimes to add to the sacrifice offering, which was taken up during the program. This was presented to the Bishop through Brother Charles Blair, who received it for Brother A. Carmichael. The wonderful spirit of sacrifice among the children was manifested in their willingness to give up their annual Christmas treat and gifts from their teachers this year. The offering of the children amounted to $19.70, and in addition the rest of the school gave a special Christmas offering of $17.92. This makes the total for the year $242.71, or $42.71 over the quota.

A chorus of eight young men and eight young women sang "Silent night," with a tableaux of wise men and shepherds around the cradle of the Baby Jesus. This was a good introduction to the sermon by Brother Weaver, which followed a short playlet picturing the missionary's plight when tithing is withheld and the happy occasion of the Bishop and Brother Etzenhouser receiving a gift such as the one which came from the Walnut Park Sunday school at this time.

Enoch Hill

Elder George G. Lewis was the morning speaker December 14, discussing for the congregation those that are in the church and those that are of the church. The church is what we make it, is Brother Lewis's belief, and we must have an active interest in what the church is doing if we would be of the church.

Branch business meeting occurred December 19, Elders F. M. McDowell, Stanley Kelley, and O. W. Sarratt in the stand. Elder O. W. Sarratt, the pastor, was reinstated, and given Charles Warren, Joe Martin, and R. E. Whitsett to assist him. Brother Warren is church school superintendent; adult division supervisor, Brother Martin; children's supervisor, Sister Warren; women's leader, Sister Christensen. Group leaders in the women's work are: Thirty-three north, Sister Pearl Cox; thirty-three south, Sister Albert Cox; thirty-two, Rilla Johnson. Sisters Dolly Mastisen and Kramer were chosen friendly visitors and harvest festival workers.

Last Sunday morning Apostle J. A. Gillen delivered an impressive sermon on the topic, "Unto us a King is born."

Downstairs the children commemorated the anniversary of the birth of Jesus with song and recitation.

A pictorial history of the church from its Restoration to the present time was given by Elder C. Ed. Miller Sunday evening. He used an attractive set of stereopticon slides from the Graphic Arts Bureau to give us this treat, and his lecture was very helpful.

Graceland Chats

President Briggs Visits the West Coast

Mr. Briggs has recently returned to Graceland from a trip to the west coast, where he attended a conference of the American Association of Junior Colleges, which met in Berkeley, California. The purpose of the conference was to make a survey of the junior colleges throughout the United States, and to study the type of work their graduates are doing.

Among the problems discussed, three important questions were asked, and the relative percentage of the answers of the public and church junior colleges is interesting to note.

1. Is the atmosphere of the junior college satisfactory? Forty-two per cent representing the public junior colleges voted that it was satisfactory, while 86 per cent representing the church junior colleges voted in favor.

2. Are you in favor of the large classes of the university or the small classes of the junior college? Votes in favor of small classes were 33 per cent for public junior colleges and 52 per cent for church junior colleges.

3. If you had the opportunity to take your education over again, would you go to a junior college for the first two years? Forty-six per cent of those from public junior colleges, and 72 per cent of those from church junior colleges voted in favor.

By the above votes one can see that men of the educational world are intensely interested in the junior college movement.

Mr. Briggs made his trip to Berkeley over the scenic route through the Royal Gorge with its famous hanging bridge and the Rio De Las Plumas, commonly called Feather River Canyon. The beauty of the Royal Gorge was in its height and massiveness, while the colorful rocks, the falling leaves, and the thin blanket of snow made the Feather River Canyon outstanding.

President Briggs visited many places of interest while he was on the Pacific coast. He said the view from the Berkeley Hills was remarkable. A similar view from the hills of Hong Kong is the only one in the world that could be compared with it. Other points of interest on the trip were his visit to President Hoover's home at Palo Alto, Stanford University with its beautiful sunken gardens and tropical vegetation, the ferry trip across San Francisco Bay, and the view from Twin Peaks which overlook Market Street, the widest street in the world, and the many lights of San Francisco.

Mr. Briggs was heartily welcomed throughout his journey. He found former Graceland students taking active parts in civic life and in church work. He visited the home in California where Marietta Walker died. That home seemed to embody the spirit of interest in the church and the ideals she had for Graceland College.

MARGARET CHRISTENSEN.

The 1930 Football Banquet

At the football banquet, December 6, "Bob" Kelley, of Lamoni, was elected to pilot the 1930 football team. It was the chief social event of the first semester. The Graceland Tower reports it in this manner:

"It may be fashionable to be late, but those who arrived first and had their choice of balcony seats had the privilege of seeing quite an elaborate fashion parade as the couples came up the aisle of the Coliseum from the lower entrance. They remained there until 'Uncle Roy' called off their names for the grand march, and then to the tune of football songs of the various colleges throughout the country the procession moved to the banquet hall. Everyone found his place, and after "Sons of Graceland" had been sung, and grace said by President Briggs, the company sat down to do justice to the first course of an excellent dinner."

After describing the antics of a male quartet, "The Bandana Bandits," and the skits and songs between the dinner courses, it continued with an account of the toasts and elections:

"By this time the banquet proper was over, so the toasts were in order. 'Unk' lived up to his reputation as a speech-maker and added to it the abilities of a poet as he introduced the various speakers. Dot Elliott aptly described the feelings of those who go through the season as rooters on the side lines. Art Locke gave several little personal happenings in the locker room, and interesting side lights on the activities of certain team members. We feel sure that the administration will see to it that 'Beans' Jones gets the A in speech that Miss Thompson failed to give him last year. He gave an interesting speech looking from 1950. The climax of the evening came when Willie Gilbert gave his toast, "Looking from the close of the season," and presented the three highly prized footballs to G. R. Bathe, Jim Smith, and Bob Kelley. It was Tate's privilege to announce as next year's captain, by the vote of the team, Bob Kelley. The banquet ended with an enthusiastic "Graceland forever," followed by a rousing "Go, Graceland." The annual football banquet was over.

Des Moines, Iowa

Pursuant to the call of the priesthood to prayer by the First Presidency, twelve of the local ministry met at the church at the time appointed, and all took part in the service. The spirit of devotion and consecration was manifested.

When the financial needs of the church were brought to our attention, a meeting was called at the home of the pastor to which the district president and the counselors to the pastor were called with the branch solicitor and branch treasurer. Plans were laid for strenuous work, to begin at once. Each man present was given six other members of the priesthood to notify. On the following Saturday night, through personal notification, the entire priesthood were invited to meet at the home of Brother Rudkin. Twenty-three were present, including Bishop Fry and Missionary E. E. Crownover.

Splendid talks were made by the bishop and counselor, Stephen Robinson, the district president, and the branch solicitor. Then all the men were asked to express in turn how they stood on the financial program of the church. Every man expressed himself favorable to making out a financial statement and paying his tithing as soon as possible. Brother Castings led by filing his statement and paying his tithing in full. He has observed the law for many years. Others handed their tithing reports to the bishop and stated that they had made arrangements by note or otherwise to meet their obligation to the Lord. All expressed themselves willing to sacrifice for the church so that the missionary allowances might be paid by December 25. Bishop Fry remained Sunday, addressing the Saints morning and evening.

Sunday, December 7, was set for a branch meeting in the interest of the tithing budget. After the sacrament was served Apostle F. Henry Edwards addressed the assembly for a short period on "The duties and obligations of Saints," then District President Henry Castings took charge, and in twenty-one minutes seven hundred dollars were pledged as payment on tithing due. More than three hundred and fifty of this was paid by December 11.

The branch business meeting was held on Monday night,

December 8. C. B. Hartshorn was sustained as president, and selected as his counselors V. L. Deskin and E. O. Clark. R. D. Williams was sustained as secretary; Stephen Robinson, treasurer; Joe Brown, trustee; Dale Finch, auditor; N. V. Anderson, junior church pastor and publicity agent; Kathryn Wolfe, chorister; W. J. Anderson, librarian; Will Evans, orchestra director; Sister J. L. Dalbey, adult department supervisor; Sister C. T. Kirkwood, young people's department supervisor; Gladys Lloyd, children's department supervisor, and Sister J. L. Parker, home and service department superintendent. J. W. Rudkin was sustained branch solicitor, and C. E. McDonald was elected correspondent.

A program was presented by the pastor, which was adopted in part, leaving the administration of the departments, arrangement of classes in a state of flexibility that will insure more general satisfaction to be worked out by the branch at future business meetings. Considerable discussion was had in regard to the status of the women's work or place in the program of the church.

We are hoping that there will be a closer cooperation of the priesthood and membership during the next year and more advancement along spiritual lines.

C. E. McDONALD.

Toronto, Canada

The annual business meeting of the united branches of Toronto and North Toronto occurred December 1. After reports had been received officers were elected for 1931. Elder J. L. Prentice was again unanimously elected president; Elders S. G. Clark and Solomon Bell are the counselors. Lillian A. Farthing, the faithful secretary, was reelected. It was decided not to adopt the church school system until the two branches are fully amalgamated and settled in the new church building. Accordingly, Sister Mary Wilson, superintendent of the Department of Women, W. F. Clifton, superintendent of Recreation and Expression, and William J. Bavington, superintendent of Sunday school, were reelected to serve until further notice. The departments gave fine reports of their activities. Special mention should be made of the Department of Women, which gave thirty-five hundred dollars to the building fund during the year.

A special ordination service followed the December communion meeting, the following brothers being ordained: Priests, James Whiteman and William J. Bailey; teacher, Gerald Parfitt; deacon, Bertrum Gozzard, Ernest Newton, and Harry Hutchinson. Sister Blanche Needham sang "I'll go where you want me to go," after which Bishop A. F. McLean gave the charge to the priesthood, and in closing the prayer of blessing was voiced by Elder James A. Wilson.

The Department of Recreation and Expression held a concert in the public school auditorium in Humber Bay December 11, using our ladies' orchestra and practically all our talent. The proceeds went to the pipe organ fund. Brother Clifton has undertaken to pay for the organ in his department. The Department of Women is supplying the needs of the kitchen, and the Sunday school is collecting one thousand dollars to equip the schoolrooms of our new church.

The new building should be open in about a month. It is looking better every day. The Saints are showing a wonderful spirit of sacrifice. Besides the cash payments the following donations have been made: All the glass for the building, the three sets of oak front doors, glazing the glass, the large gas range, one hundred dollars for the three platform chairs, one hundred dollars for the silverware for the kitchen, an electric clock, four hundred dollars for folding chairs for the basement, wicker collection plates, carpets, and other articles.

Recent speakers have been Patriarch John F. Martin, Bishop A. F. McLean, Elders B. H. Doty, S. G. Clark, B. H. Hewitt, James A. Wilson, and Brother Charles A. McLean.

When the new church is opened, we hope to have Brother Martin with us for several Sundays to carry on a series of meetings.

G. E. PARFITT.

Kansas City Stake

North Kansas City Church

This small group is progressing, and there is hope for future undertakings. Everyone has been taking an interest in and discussing conditions favorable to the spread of the gospel. Tracts are being distributed and other measures employed to advertise our belief. Many in the church as well as our friends outside the church have yet to be taught that God is and not that God was, and that there now stands a church which God himself has set apart, that communication between heaven and earth may continue. We ask the Saints to remember us in their prayers, that we may more diligently apply ourselves to the learning and teaching of the gospel truths.

Until September it was impossible for this branch to hold prayer meetings, due to the difficulty had by Pastor H. R. Higdon in attending. September 24 our first prayer service was held. Arrangements had been made for Brother E. W. Lloyd to take charge. Midweek services of this nature have enabled the members to assemble in closer communion than in any other meeting. A prayer experience especially dominated by the Spirit was had October 15. Many unusual testimonies were given. On this evening one young man found that which he had long looked for, and the testimony which he was able to bear was enough for anyone to see that the Spirit had been purposeful in its influence.

On November 2 the young man so endowed and blessed at the October prayer service was baptized. The ceremony took place at Central Church in Kansas City in the afternoon, Brother Lloyd baptizing and the associate pastor of Central Church, C. G. Mesley, confirming.

We are looking forward to many more baptisms in the near future. It is our hope and joy to build here the kingdom of God, and this depends on our consecration of time and talent to the Lord's work.

Saint Louis, Missouri

December 9.—The conference of Saint Louis District convened in Saint Louis November 29 and 30, and although the weather was disagreeable, there was good attendance.

At the business session it was voted to carry on the new church school program. An invitation was also extended and accepted to hold the next district conference in Saint Louis.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards spoke twice on Sunday, his sermons inspiring the hearers.

The women have been meeting to quilt and to do embroidery work. Sister Mary Brown introduced the Bible character game, which interested the workers.

A large gathering enjoyed a barbecue and social time, singing, and games the evening of December 6.

Good attendance and a splendid spirit of worship marked the communion service, in charge of Pastor C. A. Edstrom.

Saint Louis is looking forward to the young people's meeting of the district to be held December 19 and 20. Apostle F. Henry Edwards is to be here.

Several in this branch have passed from earthly life to the great beyond. Sister Eliza Maher, a real missionary in her neighborhood through whose efforts several were led to baptism, is among the number. Sister Saunders's son was also taken.

On the sick list are still those who need the prayers of the Saints, Brother Sherman Johnson and his son. Brother Marvin Baker has received many blessings, but is still confined to his bed. He would appreciate a word of encouragement from Saints who wish to write. His address is 1418 Hampton Avenue, Saint Louis, Missouri. Numbers of our members have been blessed through the prayers of the church, and for this we are grateful. ALICE GRIMES.

Jonesport, Maine

Jonesport is the easternmost branch of the church in the United States. Perched, as it is, on the Nation's edge, far from the center place of Zion, there is not much heard from us through the columns of the church papers. We seem to have left it all to our venerable and widely known neighbor, "Seth Parker," to let folks know that we are still existing as a community and have not as yet been engulfed by the rolling waves of the old Atlantic.

Although our activities do not often appear in print, we are very busy as a branch of Saints, making our best contribution to the cause of Christ. We wish to be thought of by all our friends as being very much in earnest about the business of the church.

At the beginning of 1930, our Sunday school has just been successful in raising three hundred dollars as Christmas offering for 1929. In determining what our goal for 1930 should be, a forward-looking member suggested that five hundred dollars be the amount of our offering. This, after a little discussion, was agreed upon. The middle of October found the branch with a little over half the amount, so rather than fall short of our goal, we set to with a will to reach the top. A Halloween social by the Zion Builders, a Harvest supper by the Sunday school, and a Thanksgiving offering by the adult members of the school put us over the top with five dollars to the good, and still we have three Sundays to go. The Sunday school has an average attendance of seventy.

One of the most valued assets in this branch is a Zion Builders' organization of some sixty young people between the ages of thirteen and thirty. This group meets every Friday evening and has grown to be the center of interest for a large number of young people, especially high school students. Eight members of the group were baptized during the past summer, and when one looks over this promising company of young people who have grown to be so helpful a part of the branch activities, he feels that the future of the church work in this community will be well cared for by them.

The quota for Eastern Maine District this year is $5,500. Like all the rest of the world our humble fisher folk have had to pass through a lean season, but it looks now as though we would raise that amount. The priesthood in Jonesport organized themselves under the direction of W. E. Rogers, branch president, and Charles F. Cummings, solicitor, and called on every member to explain the needs of the church. The results of these visits were most satisfactory. The sisters are willingly giving the proceeds of this year's fair and supper to the general church.

There is also a group of Saints at South Addison who are holding a sale and giving a supper to assist the district in raising its quota. The spirit of activity prevails in this section when it comes to church work. We were pleased to have a visit from Elder Pearl Billings, of Rockland, Maine, during the last week of November. He came at the request of Bishop E. L. Traver, to assist us in financial lines. He is one of Brother Traver's counselors. His work was well received and very helpful to us.

We were taken by storm the latter part of September when Elder John F. Sheehy and wife paid us a visit, coming all the way from Independence. Brother John enjoyed looking over his old field of labor, which was also his first missionary appointment, and greeting old-time friends. He preached in Jonesport on Rally Day, which was made the occasion for calling together the whole district. About three hundred interested listeners heard John once more. He spoke to the young people at the eleven o'clock hour. We appreciated his presence and sermons.

Our labors and prayers are for Zion and its redemption. To this cause we want to pledge anew our powers of body and mind. May the Saints of Jonesport and Eastern Maine be remembered in this way.

N. M. WILSON.

Our Departed Ones

SKIDMORE.—Margaret Slothower was born in York County, Pennsylvania, January 22, 1848. As the bride of L. A. Skidmore, she went in 1872 with her husband to Iowa, where she made her home. For fifty-two years she had been affiliated with the church, firm in her convictions, never failing to bear testimony of her faith and belief. Her illness lasted more than four months, and she was bedfast fifteen weeks. She was an outstanding woman in her community, deeply interested in woman's suffrage, and never failing to vote. Death came December 1, 1930, and the funeral was conducted from the home at Carroll, Iowa, by Elder F. T. Mussell. Left to mourn are three daughters: Mrs. P. C. Neu, Carroll, Iowa; Mrs. R. L. Towne, Carroll; and Mrs. Perry Starks, of Boone. Interment was at Boone beside her husband.

GRAYBILL.—Lloyd E. Graybill was born July 24, 1896, and died November 7, 1930. He married Ione Anderson May 23, 1923, and to them two children were born, Rogene Ione and Kenneth W., who with his wife, mother, father, three brothers, and three sisters survive. He became a member of the church in 1914 and was ordained a priest in the fall of 1918. In this office he worked faithfully. His death followed a brief illness at Richmond, Missouri, where they had lived for four years. Services were held in Richmond, Missouri, in charge of W. G. Hamann, after which the body was taken to Council Bluffs, Iowa, where services were in charge of J. A. Hansen assisted by Ray Whiting. Interment was in the Downsville Cemetery.

STEWART.—Bessie Chatburn was born June 5, 1883. She became a member of the church when she was sixteen years old. Married Bert Weeks July 7, 1902, and to them five children were born: Mrs. Clara Belle Harrington, Independence, Missouri; Mrs. Helen Foster, Kansas City, Missouri; Andrew Weeks, Corning, Missouri; John and Mary, of the home. Her husband died November 28, 1918. In August, 1928, she married A. O. Stewart. Passed from this life November 19, 1930. She has been a member of the Mapleton Branch in Kansas since its organization. Was a faithful worker. Left to mourn are her husband and five children. The funeral was from the Saints' Church in Mapleton. The sermon was by Lee Quick, and prayer by Halley Dennis.

NUTT.—Sarah Alice Hill was born December 16, 1865, at New Haven, Missouri. She became a member of the church May 28, 1901. Passed away at the home of her son, Albert Nutt, at Douthat, Oklahoma, November 23, 1930. The last eighteen years of her life were spent in total darkness. Though blind, she loved to make Jesus the sunlight of her soul, and her favorite hymn was "Land of sunshine." Her greatest desire was that she might reach that country of light. Left to mourn are three sons and two daughters: John Nutt, Knobnoster, Missouri; Cleve Nutt, of Quapaw, Oklahoma; Albert Nutt, Douthat, Oklahoma; Mrs. Ray Sharp, Douthat; and Mrs. A. J. Miller, Seldon, Kansas. The funeral service was held in Friends' Church at Alba, Missouri, sermon by A. J. Jones. Interment was at Purcell, Missouri.

MAY.—Roderick May was born September 15, 1850, at Glasgow, Scotland. He was baptized a member of the church May 7, 1876, at London, Ontario, by J. J. Cornish who also confirmed him. He was ordained a priest July 18, 1877, at London, Ontario, by W. W. Blair and J. J. Cornish. His residence was transferred from Ontario to Wyandotte, Kansas, in April, 1879. In 1883 he moved to Independence, where he has lived continuously except for a period of residence in England. Was ordained an elder September 11, 1892, at Independence, by Joseph Luff and John A. Robinson and to the office of high priest April 19, 1894, at Lamoni, Iowa, by John H. Lake and William Anderson. He was ordained a bishop April 21, 1900, at Lamoni, by Alexander Smith and Joseph Smith, and for a number of years served as bishop of Independence Stake. Was sent to England as bishop of the British Isles Mission in 1911. There he spent ten years in the service of the church. He married Sarah Jane Lively September 27, 1877, at London, Canada, and to this union were born six children, one of whom preceded him in death. Surviving are his wife, four sons, and one daughter: Nephi, J. Charles, Alvin R., William H., and Mrs. Pearl Crick, all of Independence; a sister, Mrs. Jessie Duncan, Winnipeg, Canada; and a host of friends. His passing occurred at the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital December 3, 1930. The funeral was held at the Stone Church in Independence, December 5, President F. M. Smith in charge and the address by Doctor Joseph Luff. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

DIGGLE.—William E. Diggle was born in Lancashire, England, December 13, 1851, and departed this life November 29, 1930. He came to America with his parents in 1852 and lived in and near Neola, Iowa, all his life. Married Janette Haggard October 2, 1879, and to them thirteen children were born, nine of whom, five daughters and four sons, survive. He became a member of the church September 3, 1868. The funeral service was held in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Neola, December 1, in charge of J. A. Hansen, assisted by Joshua Carlile. Interment was in Neola Cemetery.

CASTEEL.—Harriet Belle Davis was born January 11, 1861. She married Joseph Casteel December 21, 1876, and to them ten children were born. Was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by Lee Quick in January, 1910. She passed from earthly life November 17, 1930, leaving to mourn her husband, ten children, thirty-one grandchildren, four great-grandchildren. She was respected and loved by all who knew her. The funeral occurred at the Saints' Church in Mapleton, Kansas, prayer by Halley Dennis, sermon by Lee Quick.

"I Will Help"

Many letters have come to us from various parts of the field which are encouraging because they reveal the fine spirit of devotion which exists among so many of our people. Here is an example:

One branch president, to whom was sent a letter of instruction relative to the move to get a larger number of the Saints to observe the temporal law of the church, writes acknowledging receipt of the letter and says that he had called upon the Saints and that "most of them have promised to do all that lies within their power." Then he adds: "As times are so hard, some of the Saints are so hard pressed that they have been unable to meet their taxes for this year. As for myself, I have not had any wages for seven months, but will try to help out in some way. It is our hope that the other branches are not so hard hit as are we."

Those words display a devotion which is a fine asset to the church. As a matter of course, under present conditions, we of the church are quite likely to be affected by any depression which may exist generally or perhaps locally, or until such time as when we can as a people be organized under and working on the plan which God has intended we should. But it is well for us as a people that there is such devotion as is reflected in the above extract from the letter of a branch president.

I join with the brother in hoping that our people are not so hard pressed in other places, and reports to our office are encouraging in this respect; but I feel to warn our people again, as they have been warned before, and as the signs of the times should remind us, that our present task is to prepare for conditions which may bring upon us far greater suffering than has the present depression. The promises as well as the predictions and forewarnings of the Lord will be put to the test in due time, as will our faith; and we should be reminded of the tasks which must be performed if we would see fulfilled the conditional promises of safety in times of trouble. Our place of safety is not yet secure. And for it we must continually work.

Let us, like the branch president, be ready, whatever our condition may be, and willing to say with him, "I will try to help out in some way."

Is the Eighteenth Amendment Valid?

The recent ruling of Judge William Clark, of the Federal Court for the District of New Jersey, that the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment is invalid is, to say the least, unusual. It has been hailed by some as an epoch-making decision. By the wets, quite naturally, it is being made the occasion of much rejoicing. The dries, on the other hand, are for the moment on the defensive—it is said. The ordinary citizen probably sees no reason for great excitement.

It is not altogether startling that out of all the federal judges in the Nation there should be one to take such a position with regard to the Eighteenth Amendment. The logic of his opinion may be more difficult to understand.

Judge Clark's position is that the ultimate sovereignty in the United States rests with the people, and that the Federal Government is one of delegated powers granted it by the people. The adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment was invalid, holds the judge, because it was ratified by state legislatures and not by constitutional conventions in the States, as should be the case, since the latter method more nearly represents the people.

Judge Clark is, of course, a student of law and of the history and science of government, but to this lay mind he has failed to make clear two points in particular: That the founders of the Constitution expressly intended that amendments of this sort should be ratified by the convention method; and that this ruling should apply to the Eighteenth and not to a number of other amendments which invest the National Government with powers not previously held, and which were proposed and ratified in the same manner. The press says: "He dismisses the idea that his arguments would necessarily apply to other amendments than the Eighteenth." Such ideas are not ordinarily so easily disposed of!

It is difficult enough in any case to prove what the "intentions" of statesmen a century and a half ago were; it is especially difficult to consider Judge Clark's decision established in the light of the following specific statement from the Constitution itself, Article V, particularly the line which we italicize:

The Congress, whenever two thirds of both houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two thirds of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three fourths of the several States, or by conventions in three fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress.

Again, to the lay mind it seems a bit too much to believe that the writers of the Constitution and those who ratified it should intend that the convention method of ratification be used—and yet leave to Congress a choice between two methods in the proposal of amendments for ratification.

And at present writing (along with everyone else that has expressed an opinion on the subject), we venture the guess that the Supreme Court will promptly reverse the decision of the judge of the Federal Court for the District of New Jersey.

A Son's Tribute to His Father

That son who can treasure precious memories of his deceased father has a solace against the sorrow of bereavement and the loss of a loved companionship. The loss may drive the sharp thrust of grief deep into his heart, but the memory anchors him to the eternal.

The passing of Elder William T. Rushton, father of Elder John W. Rushton, is noticed elsewhere in the Herald. We were lately permitted to see a letter containing tributes of the son to the father. And some of them are worthy of the notice of all who are either sons or fathers.

"My father," the letter said, "was a very remarkable man." And it gave a summary of the events of a long and active career in which the words honor and duty had a real meaning. "I have memories of going with him——" and in this one line we sense that companionship and abiding trust which existed in the intimate relations between them. On Sundays he "would read aloud," and we know that there was a father who gave something of indestructible value to his home and his family—who did not consider his duty fulfilled when he had paid the expenses.

Other phrases of tribute follow: "had great poise," "never ill-natured," "I never heard him use any language that was unclean, . . . and never knew him to do a dishonorable thing." He "never wavered in his loyalty to the cause." And he believed in the young, and loved them, for he organized the first Sunday school of the church in Leeds and became its first superintendent.

There is something about such a life that does not die. There is an immortality for such a soul and character that lives on in the hearts of men and women made happier, and in the world made better.

Change in Danvers Street Church

A landmark in our work on the western coast for many years has been the Danvers Street Church in San Francisco; and a stalwart and standby in the work of that branch has been Brother John A. Saxe. He has been a faithful worker through storm and sunshine, giving according to his ability, and ministering as he could to the needs of the Saints.

In a report from Brother M. A. McConley recently received, the Presidency learns of a change in the Danvers Street Church official corps. Brother Saxe relinquishes the responsibility of president, being replaced by Brother Herbert Hinton, one of the younger men.

So, after years of active service in the local, Brother Saxe gives way in his official position to a younger man. It is a natural course, and I doubt not that Brother Saxe rejoices to know there are younger men willing to take upon their shoulders the responsibility he lays down. And it is equally as certain that the older man will stand ready to help by counsel, advice, and in actual service the younger man who now carries the burden. We congratulate our good Brother Saxe on being able to shift the burden to younger shoulders, and for the Danvers Street Branch we have only the best wishes for steady progress and great success. May the work there go forward.

"The Messiah" for Next Year

Immediately after the rendition of The Messiah over the Columbia Broadcasting System by the Independence Messiah Choir and assisting artists, a request came from the Columbia people for permission to book the performance for the same time next year. Our readers can estimate the importance of this recognition and appreciation. All who were concerned with that memorable production are to be congratulated for their good work, and we hope that they do equally well next year.

Some new aspects of the broadcast were brought out afterward in conversation. The rendition of this masterpiece requires the highest quality of artistic ability, and every condition must be at its best for a good performance. The work of the soloists was never in doubt, and they had the splendid cooperation and perfectly timed assistance of the orchestra. But the conductor of the orchestra and the director of the choir had been somewhat worried about the choral parts. The atmosphere was tense, and there was an element of uncertainty up to the time that the choir was in the studio. After the opening prayer, however, the uncertainty vanished, the choir, the soloists, and the orchestra worked as one, and there was never any doubt about the successful completion of so difficult a task. In and about the studio, where people are accustomed to the excitement of broadcasting, they are usually hardened against a display of emotion; but after the performance everyone was visibly affected and happy. Everyone regarded it as a remarkable experience. The atmosphere was definitely spiritualized by the beauty of the work, the sacredness of the theme, and the solemnity of the occasion.

Letters are coming to the Editors concerning the reception of the program, and many more are expected, which will make it possible to estimate how far the program was heard.

The Stone Church

Nearly if not quite forty-five years ago Independence Branch determined to erect a church building. The "Stone Church," as it is generally called, was the result of that decision. A church to cost about $60,000 was to be built. As a matter of fact about $80,000 can be charged to construction costs. At that time the membership roll of the branch was less than five hundred, or about 465. Sixty thousand dollars divided by 465 gives 129, which means that the obligation assumed was about an average of $130 per member enrolled upon the branch records. Today there are enrolled upon the Independence records about six thousand members. To undertake a building program equally pretentious according to the present number in Independence, with the present dollar worth about one half what it was worth then, would be to start on a building program of over one and one half million dollars.

Something worth thinking about lies in such a comparison.

The Courage of Christianity

One of the finest qualities of the Christian gospel is the courage that it imparts to the people. Even in the darkest of times and the most trying of circumstances they have hope of a better future and courage for the battle of life.

The Christian undertakes an adventure, and he who embarks upon the glorious exploit of spiritual expansion takes an adventure's chances of success or defeat. And, like the true and hardy explorers who opened paths in the wilderness, no one defeat and no one succession of reverses can dampen his ardor nor blight his courage.

OFFICIAL

The fact that hundreds of new names have been placed on the list of contributors in November and December does not indicate the greatest return from the present church-wide endeavor to enlist the support of every Latter Day Saint. The "dollar and cents" return is not the only goal anticipated nor reached; for while the additional contributions have helped to meet our financial needs, the total results of the visitation campaign have been far more important. "Splendid cooperation" has been the report from practically every district. Ministry and members have worked together, which has resulted in a heightened quality of spiritual mindedness toward all aspects of our church work.

As this paper goes to press, the last report received is characteristic of the situation in other districts. Bishop E. L. Traver wires as follows: "Eastern Maine District more than $100 over their quota for 1930 in spite of greatest depression ever known in this district. Splendid cooperation from all workers and real sacrifice on part of members has accomplished the task." A letter received in today's mail from Bishop Traver states that Western Maine District has nearly reached its quota for the year. What is being done in Maine is also being done in other districts.

The call made upon the church in November and December was not a new one. It simply emphasized the importance of the duty that devolves upon every Latter Day Saint to be just as consistent in contributing tithes and offerings as he is in putting into practice the principles of faith, repentance, and baptism. From the standpoint of importance there is no difference.

January is the best time to file our annual financial statements and to square our tithing accounts with God. The activity of the local ministry which has been so largely responsible for the increased contributions in November and December should be continued in the coming months. There should be no let down. The entire obligation of the church to its ministry has not been fully discharged. The best fortification against the uncertainties of the future is for the church to keep up the kind of work that was done in November and December. District and branch officers should be constantly alert to see that this is done, and by example as well as precept inspire the local ministry to perform their priestly functions. The entire church must be ceaselessly and untiringly engaged in those pursuits that will not only build up but permanently sustain the work of God.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By ALBERT CARMICHAEL.

A Missionary to California

By S. A. Burgess

In considering the work of the early missionaries, we should first know something of the industrial development of the country, so as to appreciate the better their trials and obstacles. In a recent Zion's Ensign (July 10, 1930, "Charles Wesley Wandell" on page 439) there appears a clear error. Communication was slow, but there was a telegraph line across the continent in 1862 and a railroad in 1859.

Conditions of Early Travel

It is related that when, shortly after the Revolutionary War, the question of Oregon and the Pacific Slope was being considered as part of the Union, objection was made that it was too far, as it would take more than a year to make the round trip from Washington, so there could be no true representation. When Lewis and Clark crossed from Saint Louis to Oregon in 1804, it did take them more than two years to make the round trip from the Mississippi River. But they were explorers, and this time was soon cut down. As late as 1860 it took an ordinary caravan a few months to cross from the Missouri River to Utah, to say nothing of the trip to the Pacific Slope. Stagecoaches made better time, but freight took much longer, as it had to be hauled in wagons.

The trip across from the Atlantic seaboard to the Mississippi was considered tedious, so ships from Europe landed passengers for Saint Louis at New Orleans, often taking one or two months to make the trip to New Orleans from Liverpool. Then the outfitting and the trip up the Missouri often took weeks longer.

Changes were so rapid, however, that it would take a long article to do justice to the real situation as it unfolded. But there was a new method developing which was soon to displace the wagon for long trips.

The early decades of the nineteenth century saw the development of the locomotive. By 1830 there were nearly forty miles of railroad in the United States, by 1850 there were nearly 6,700 miles, and 80 miles of it west of the Allegheny Mountains. By 1870 there were nearly 54,000 miles, and 12,000 of it west of the Mississippi River. The decade of greatest expansion was 1880 to 1890, when the increase was some 70,000 miles.

The railroad had reached Chicago by 1852. By 1854 the Rock Island had tracks to the Mississippi River. But prior to that the first railroad in the valley was from East Saint Louis to the Bluffs to the coal mines about 1837. And on July 4, 1851, the Missouri Pacific was started from Saint Louis. However, it was held up and did not reach Kansas City until 1865, while the Hannibal and Saint Louis, started later, appears to have been the first to reach the Missouri River, and the Galena and Chicago reached Council Bluffs in 1866. Jealousy of Saint Louis hindered connections with the east through that city and also to the west through Kansas City. The Union Pacific was started on from Omaha in 1862 as a military measure and also from Kansas City to Denver.

In the meantime the necessity of rapid dispatch to the West caused the creation of the Pony Express, that made the trip to the coast in ten days, though once it was made in seven days and seventeen hours. The stage line took thirty-four days for the overland trip by the southern route.

The pony express lasted only sixteen months, as the telegraph line was completed in 1862. In 1869 the Central Pacific and Union Pacific were joined a little west of Ogden, and the first railroad across the continent was a fact.

Connections were often poor; lines not always convenient or direct. The Northern Pacific, started in 1870, reached Portland in 1883. The Southern Pacific was built about the same dates (1869 to 1881). The Santa Fe, started in 1869, reached San Diego by 1893.

We have heard many stories of crossing the plains in 1856, 1859, and 1865 by our own relatives; quicksands, hot sun, buffalo chips the only fuel. It is not easy to realize that in 1869 there was a railroad and the time was greatly cut on that one line.

E. C. Briggs had gone to Utah in 1863, but the mission of Alexander H. Smith to California will best illustrate the changes wrought by a few years. In 1866, May 20, he left Nauvoo for the West, and again left his home in Plano on May 20, 1869.

These trips are written in much detail in the Journals of History for 1911, 1912, and 1913, but we shall draw a quick picture.

Alexander H. Smith

He had a wonderful experience, when his father and Uncle Hyrum appeared to him and called him to the work of the holy priesthood, so when the call was presented through the proper authorities he had the evidence and could not but assent. In 1866 he was appointed to take charge of a new mission, called the California Mission, which included the Pacific Slope and Nevada, and March 12 he was ordained a high priest.

May 20, 1866, he left home, but turned back to leave his last fifty-cent piece at home, so he set out on foot without means to pay the ferry fee. But half way to the ferry landing he met a boy who offered to take him over the river in his skiff. At Montrose he met William Anderson. There they decided they would go without two coats, so Elder Anderson sent back his new overcoat, and Elder Smith his alpaca coat. As they started out, a wagon drove up and the driver said "Jump in" and took them to their next place, String Prairie. There the Saints collected a purse to help them on their way, so they took the train to the western terminus, Ottumwa, Iowa. From there they booked by stage to Leon, Iowa, which they reached a few days later with just fifty cents between them. But a fellow traveler bought their supper, so they had just enough for a bed.

The next morning they started without breakfast and without a cent for Pleasant Plain (Pleasanton), Decatur County, Iowa. The road was very muddy and the going hard. Finally they mutually agreed to stop in the woods and pray, and received the answer that they were to prove the world, and how could they unless they made their wants known? So at the very next house they stopped and stated their case—missionaries traveling without purse or scrip—no breakfast, no means to pay for any. They were not only fed, but had a good talk, and left the people of that home rejoicing in the message that they had brought. This encouraged them, and they hailed the first team they saw and found a relative of the man they were seeking.

There they visited with the Saints, and were helped on by a ride in a covered wagon to their next point, a trip of more than two days, but they reached Manti in western Iowa just one week after leaving Nauvoo. After the Sunday services there, they were helped into Council Bluffs again by the wagon of Brother Green. Next they tied their grips under the rear axle and rode on a plank on the running gear for fifty miles north to the mill of Amos S. Chase. There they spent Sunday (June 10) to Wednesday, holding meetings, while Bishops Gamet and Heywood endeavored to secure a team and outfit for crossing the plains, as they were now at the frontier. The team was small, so they had to skimp on provisions, yet had to have enough to carry them across the plains.

June 13 they started, but soon found the team too light. They had to walk to lighten the load, were stuck in a mud hole four miles long, and had to pay to be pulled out. At Columbus Brother H. J. Hudson insisted they must have a better team. Thus with their financial help at the last town of the frontier, they secured a good team of mules and left for the West July 2.

It is not surprising that small things seemed remarkable, and were to them. Opposite Fort Kearney they had difficulty getting across. Brother Anderson went over in a skiff with another man to save the $4 ferry fee, secured his letters, but could not get a letter for Alexander H. Smith. They were in Indian country, and it was unsafe to travel alone. A train of eight wagons was passing on, so they felt they must leave the letter. But shortly one of the wagon wheels broke in the train, and Alexander was able to go back with the wheel for the letter. As he was a month and a half from home, that was important.

On the 11th they met a band returning from Utah and baptized three. But they were losing time. Some days because of sand they made only five miles, others seven or eight miles, but rarely fifteen miles in a day. After a certain date no more were permitted past Fort Laramie. They were on the north side of the Platte, all trains were on the south side; they were in bad Indian country, yet on August 1 they left the train and pushed on alone. On the south bank was the last train that would be permitted to pass Fort Laramie. They were ninety miles from Laramie, yet on the 3d drove in. They reached a point opposite on the night of the 2d and there found the only Indian they had seen, who told them it was not safe to camp on the north side, so he called the ferry for them. The ferryman charged nothing extra for the late crossing, and took them in for the night, as the fort was closed.

At Laramie they were given provisions. This was the key place of the trail and famous on that account. The agent there also arranged for them to travel with a train of Mormons going west, without fee, and told them to telegraph back at every station between there and Fort Bridger, so he could know they were safe.

After fifteen days in Salt Lake City, they continued their western trip. They had many interesting experiences, baptized several, and had some close calls. A day's drive west of Carson City, Nevada, they were much surprised to have a woman rush down to the fence, for here there were good fences, a good farmhouse, and signs of thrift. She opened the gate and called, "Drive right in, brethren!" She called them by name, shook hands, and added, "I saw you in vision several days ago, and I have been looking for you ever since. I recognized the very clothing you have on." These people were members of the church, and there were others comparatively near. They conducted services in five or six places around there. Here they sold their mules and wagon and went on by stage. It was evidently late in the year when they reached Sacramento. They had reached Nevada (Austin), and they were at the mission conference in San Francisco November 23 to 26 (six months after leaving Nauvoo).

Of their splendid work there we will say little at present. They found confusion, because of a defecation, but were blessed in their work, baptized many, and united the Saints. After a little more than a year, they took ship November 15, 1867, to return via New York. December 9 they landed. The return trip was much quicker than across the plain. How long the trip took, via Hamilton and up the river road to Nauvoo, does not appear. It is clear that the telegraph was not so common that it occurred to him to use it. So the family only knew he had left San Francisco, but not that he had landed until he drove up. It was so big an event that they sat up all night talking over the past scenes.

Later Trips

When W. W. Blair was appointed in charge of California Mission April, 1868, he went by way of New York. But when in 1869 Alexander and David Smith were appointed to the Pacific slope they went by rail. May 20, 1869, he is again leaving his family, but at Plano this time. From Nauvoo the two brothers started out in early June. June 10 they reached Council Bluffs. They labored in western Iowa for a time, gathering means for the trip, and July 11 took the train at Columbus, Nebraska. Naturally it was a time of comparison with that first trip, for they could go by rail from the Mississippi River clear to California. The trip from Ogden to Salt Lake City was still by stage, thirty-five miles. There they held services, called on Brigham Young, and baptized many.

This trip was much easier, yet they received help, such as a pass on the railroad from Leland A. Stanford, ex-Governor of California and president of the Overland Route. They stayed in Utah from July till December, some five months. So it was not until December that they reached their mission on the Pacific Slope. Their labors there were cut short by the growing ill health of David, and by a message in the early spring from home that the wife of Alexander was dangerously ill with "lung fever." This was doubtless the result of privation and of lack of sufficient proper food. The trip both ways was by rail across the continent, and not taken by stage or team. But side trips still had to be made by stage or team.

David later went to Utah, in 1872. And Alexander did a great work in California in 1873 to late December, 1875. He went and ordained Charles W. Wandell and Glauod Rodger before they went to Australia in 1873. He was again in charge of that mission in and around 1885.

But these two trips, of 1866 and 1869, indicate the rapidly changing conditions of the communication. The great trails of the forties became bases for the great railroads of today. Have we preserved the devoted spirit of sacrifice of these men and women of the past?

Deliver Us from Evil

By Evan Fry

And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil.

For centuries Christians have been praying this prayer, sometimes fervently as they foresaw a temptation immediately ahead; sometimes as, mechanically, they repeated the Lord's Prayer, like a well-oiled automaton. It seems strange that through all the centuries man has been praying this prayer, and yet it seems that he is subject to about as many temptations as ever, and that the average man yields to temptation about as often as men did in the days when Christ gave this prayer to his disciples. Doesn't God hear our prayers? And if he does, why is it that temptations are presented to us time and time again, even as we pray to be delivered from evil?

Many of us—good Christians—are prone to show a wide streak of inconsistency between our prayers of "lead us not into temptation," and our actions following the prayer. There is something fascinating about evil. It is surrounded with a glamour and an allurements that draws the attention and excites the curiosity. Yielding to this fascination, many a Christian has thought that he could dangle upon the outskirts of temptation, there to view all its glamorous allurements, and yet keep himself from actually participating in the sin. Many another Christian has thought to yield just once to some temptation for the sake of finding out just what sin is like, only to find that the first indulgence is merely the means of breaking down all barriers and leading to an unbroken line of similar yieldings. Such Christians are inconsistent in that they pray that they may not be led into temptation, and then deliberately and of their own free will they seek out the temptation for themselves and hesitatingly but none the less surely yield to its spell.

Let me illustrate with a very trivial example: I am inordinately fond of candy, and unless I watch myself very carefully, any candy within my immediate vicinity is bound to disappear with alarming speed, regardless of the quantity involved. Now of course a little candy is a good thing, but too much of it is decidedly a bad thing, and I never seem to know when I have had enough. Knowing myself as I do, I should be decidedly foolish to keep a box of chocolates before me all the time. I know that I can not resist that particular temptation, and it would be the height of presumption and hypocrisy for me to pray that I should not be led into temptation, when I knew all the time that I was deliberately permitting the temptation to stay within reach of me, if not actually seeking it out. The only safe and sensible thing for me to do is to buy my candy in small quantities—preferably in five-cent bars, and to leave the temptation of larger quantities at least as far away from me as the candy store. If you know that you have difficulty in keeping your hands off other people's property, don't stand around and covet that property; don't fondle it with your sticky fingers and wish that it was yours. If you do, you are courting temptation. If you believe that dancing in a public dance hall is wrong, yet you find that the dance has a strong appeal for you, don't pray to be delivered from temptation and then head for the nearest dance hall on the pretext that you are merely going to listen to the music and watch the pretty lights. I doubt whether you are wise in a case of that kind to dance even in your own home; for if you do, the temptation of the public dance hall will be that much harder for you to meet.

It seems to me that there is an inconsistency in the wording of this prayer itself. We believe that God is a merciful and just and wise Father, who ardently desires that his children should be as nearly perfect as possible. Yet every time we pray this prayer we indirectly accuse him of being some sort of unnatural monster, who leads his children into temptation, as far as I can see, for the pure sport of gambling on whether they will resist it or submit to it. Personally, I refuse to believe that God ever tempted anyone, or that he ever deliberately led anyone into temptation. The 13th verse of the first chapter of James says, "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God, for God can not be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man. But every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed." God may allow us to be led into temptation, that by our resistance to evil our fortitude may be increased, for it is a spiritual law as well as a natural law that only through struggle and labor is strength acquired, but he has promised that no man will be tempted beyond what he can endure. If man yields to temptation, it is not God's fault, but man's, for man has been drawn away after his own lusts. In the light of this verse from the epistle of James, the rendition of this prayer for deliverance as found in the translation of the Bible used by the Latter Day Saints seems to be superior to the one in common use. Latter Day Saints pray, "Suffer us not to be led into temptation, but deliver us from evil."

We close with another verse from the first chapter of James: "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation, for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life which the Lord hath promised to them that love him."

How to Pray

By Jasper O. Dutton

In the Herald for December 17 we read with pleasure of the Week of Prayer beginning January 4. The suggestive topics are good. I was impressed very much with the first one. As we read the Book of Mormon, we see that at different times the Nephites were obliged to confess they had sinned, and they sought forgiveness. The Lord forgave them, and great blessings followed. So we as a people should not be slow to acknowledge in prayer that in many ways we have become worldly, and truly need to repent, as others have done before our day. What a fine time it would be for our people to drop unwholesome worldly connections and return in singleness of heart to the service of the Lord.

Conditions of Prayer

First. We must pray in faith. "All things whatsoever ye ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." (Matthew 21: 22.) "Let him ask in faith, nothing wavering." (James 1: 6.)

Second. We must desire the thing we seek. "Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when you pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Or as the Inspired Translation states, ". . . and ye shall have whatsoever ye ask." (Mark 11: 24.)

Third. We must be persistent. "I say unto you Ask and it shall be given unto you; Seek and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." (Luke 9: 11.)

Fourth. We must pray in Jesus' name, and knowing our oneness with him. "Whatsoever you ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If you ask anything in my name, I will do it." (John 14: 13, 14.)

Fifth. We must pray in the Spirit. "God has sent forth the Spirit of his Son into our hearts, crying Abba Father." (Galatians 4: 6.) "Pray in the Holy Ghost." (Jude 20.)

Sixth: We must pray as obedient children. "Whatsoever we ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight. And this is his commandment, that we should believe on the name of his Son

Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment." (1 John 3: 22, 23.)

Seventh. We must ask for that which is according to his will. "This is the confidence that we have of him, that, if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us: and if we know that he heareth us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desire of him." (1 John 5: 14, 15.)

The Family Altar

A Thought for the Week of Prayer

By M. J. Crowley

What is the family altar?

It is the spiritual center of the home, where, united in a service of worship, the family offers its prayers to God, consecrating to him all the labors of the day, and thanking him for his blessings and watchcare.

The family altar is that part of the home life which makes for the betterment of the community, the strengthening of the nation, and the establishment of the kingdom of God.

At the family altar, our peace offering, repentance, is made.

Before it the adversary of our souls stands rebuffed.

Beside it stands the recording angel.

Above it are the ministering spirits.

Around it, peace, and good will to men.

MINISTERIAL PROBLEMS

Reverence in the Church

By Louise Evans

Because of her long experience with church music and programs, the author is qualified to make the observations and give some of the good comment contained in the following article.

This day of economic distress is teaching us valuable lessons. That which we once thought indispensable to our success or welfare has now been eliminated as waste. We are discovering that scattered and unorganized effort means delay and possibly defeat; that the times demand a clearly thought-out plan closely adhered to, and a concentration of our activity that we may reach the desired end. We are fast learning the advantages of getting the maximum for the least expenditure of either time, effort, or money.

Our successful spiritual or religious growth is quite dependent upon this same principle of conservation, yet we seem rather slow in coming to a realization of this seemingly obvious truth.

There are those who keenly sense that we are not getting full spiritual value for the amount of energy spent, and thus we find among the many endeavors the effort to establish the church school. Not that we occupy more time, but rather that we receive more for the expenditure of possibly less time.

"What needs to be done to give our common worship greater value to all who participate in it?" seems to be the problem our leaders are striving to solve. Such a query calls forth many remedies, but I hope we are not like the scholar that answers all questions with "Be good." Most of us have to be shown the ways of goodness or some valuable virtues we desire to acquire are overlooked.

It is to be regretted that in many of our churches there is not the proper decorum conducive to the best spiritual atmosphere. Our time would be well spent if we would occasionally visit other denominations where they have acquired the art of a dignified and reverent service, and at the same time retain a friendly spirit. They have much that we need.

But decorum is like "be good"—there are many ways. That which is fitting in one place would be out of order in another situation.

A large and prosperous Congregational church has the following terse statement on the front page of its weekly bulletin: "Worship begins with our entry into the church." Do we believe this? Or do we forget the object of the gathering? Generally as we enter we congregate in groups and visit in audible tones. Perhaps we block the entrance and stare at a casual visitor. Do we eventually get to a seat only to slam it down with a bang, possibly open and shut a pocketbook with its accompanying distressing click, look the congregation over and make mental comments, never forgetting to turn around and gaze at the habitually tardy ones? Perhaps all this has been enhanced by the pastor being forced to have the congregation sing one of our beautiful hymns in an effort to drown out the noise of belated ventilation. After all this effort we are ready to settle down and think we are here to worship! Perhaps we complain that the meeting wasn't very spiritual, never thinking that we are to blame and possibly hindered others from receiving a needed blessing. Do you suppose this is the reason that we have to be continually urged to "not let the time go to waste"? If so, let us rid ourselves of the "wastes" as we are doing in the temporal affairs of life.

A dove is very sensitive—it fairly quivers—easily frightened away—yet the Spirit of God has been likened to it. It can not stay in confusion. Our minds and hearts are not open. If we truly want God in our midst we must eliminate the waste of disturbance and come with the spirit of worship which will show its fruits in our actions as we first enter the church building by quietly taking our places, sitting in as dignified a manner as possible, taking active part in all that goes to help toward a spiritual service. Thus we shall we getting the maximum value for the time spent and depart refreshed and strengthened.

Such meetings would result in a better attendance. Many wish to bring their nonmember friends that they too might hear the truth, but often are denied this privilege because of the lack of decorum on our part. The gospel of Jesus Christ deserves the best setting we can afford.

"Whoever thou art that worshipest in this church, enter it not without the spirit of reverence, and leave it not without a prayer to God for thyself, for those who minister, and for those who worship here."

To Leaders of Young People

The young people of the church are needed to share in its burdens, to assume responsibilities, and to develop in leadership. It is a part of our task to help and guide them in the development which is necessary for the important places they must fill.

They need inspiration; they need instruction; they need something which will convey to them a sense of their church-wide fellowship; they need something to give them a program of practical suggestions for the work they are to do.

All these things are within the compass and a part of the object of Vision, our church magazine for youth. Vision carries stories of the idealism of youth, gives information about the church and its history, and furnishes suggestions for activities and programs. All in all, it is now the indispensable publication for pushing forward the work and organization of the young people.

You who work with young people are urged to see that your young people receive and read Vision. They need it, and you need it. Let us give the church a chance to function in the lives of our young people by and through the helps that Vision offers.

It is suggested that young people's leaders can do good work by getting at least a half dozen young people in each congregation to subscribe for Vision.

Who Bears the Brunt of Crime?

By C. B. W.

The following incident, quoted from the Christian Evangelist, tells a pathetic story, but one that is all too prevalent and too true, not only in the extreme measures of this incident, but in all degrees of human delinquency. One does not live his life alone, however much he may profess his independence.

The result of crime does not fall most heavily upon the criminal. The good law-abiding people pay the price, even if the criminal himself pays the penalty. In Washington, District of Columbia, a young man is being tried for the murder of a young woman. The aged father of the dead girl and the aged father of the young man on trial for life met in the courthouse lobby, greeted each other sadly, shook hands, and embraced. They are both honorable men. It was an affecting scene—and a terrible moment. Crime hurts all society and brings untold agonies to the hearts of good and true people who are relatives of criminals.—The Christian Evangelist.

Yet this is only one side of the picture. Parents, husbands, wives, children, often the church and the community, must bear in bitter silence the shame and disgrace of misdirected energy which finds expression in selfish indulgence. Seldom is grief as poignant as that caused by shattered hopes in the consistent ambitions we have cherished for our loved ones. Our lives are inextricably linked with others. The result of our deeds, good and bad, are reflected along the line. We are divinely created that way.

But the other side of the picture is bright and joyous. Nature has also planned that the joys of achievement, of honor and success are shared by parents, children, loved ones, and friends. What is more joyous in declining years than the realization that one's children are successfully meeting the

Junior Worship Suggestions for January

By Mattie Wight Gunsolley

The following worship suggestions may be adapted to local situations and be used at whatever time seems advisable. If the children are not kept together during the entire morning, it might be arranged to have a worship program during the church school period.

It is urged that the children meet with the adults in the sacramental service.

FIRST SUNDAY

Theme: "Making Ourselves Worthy by Giving"

Quiet Music: "Jesus, my Shepherd," Zion's Praises, 117.

Call to Worship: "O give thanks unto the Lord; call upon his name; make known his deeds among his people. Sing unto him, sing psalms unto him; talk ye of all his wondrous works."—Psalm 105: 1, 2.

Song: "Giving thanks," Zion's Praises, 53.

Talk on Giving: Comparison of the widow's mite (Luke 21: 2-4) and the gift of Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 5: 1-10). What can be given besides money? Allow the children to help suggest ways in which they may give:

By singing; by knowing their lessons, and by welcoming strangers; by giving money for songbooks, quarterlies, Stepping Stones, and Hopes, for pictures, curtains, coal and light; or by sending greetings to sick members of the church or to poor persons that need help.

Song: "We'll scatter good seed," Zion's Praises, 115.

Story: "Appleseed John." (Either prose or poetry. Found in many books of children's stories.)

Song: "Carry blessings with you," Zion's Praises, 25.

Benediction by a Junior.

Note: Giving for a special cause, such as helping a visiting missionary, or for foreign missionary friends, or for some much needed improvement in the church, might be made very effective. The children could march forward and deposit their offering in some receptacle during the singing of an appropriate song. Be sure the children are notified beforehand, that they really want to give, and that they understand why they are giving.

SECOND SUNDAY

Theme: "Making Ourselves Worthy through Obedience"

Quiet Music: "Jesus, Savior, pilot me," played very softly.

Song: "Trust and obey," Zion's Praises, 4.

Preparation for Prayer: Memorize and repeat in unison:

challenges of life; that faith, confidence, and love have not been misplaced; that the mutual experiences of home have builded loyalty to worthy ideals which promise an abundant fruitage of success and happiness!

While nature has decreed that parents must bear the brunt of crime, there are equal compensations in the law. "A wise son maketh a glad father."

"The Lord is in his Temple Holy;
Let all his children silence keep;
Let every head be bowed most lowly,
And eyes be closed as if in sleep."

Prayer. This may be given by one of the ministry, who will use language that the children can understand; or by the leader of the group.

Song: "God will take care of you," Zion's Praises, 58.

Story: "The treasure." The story is briefly told here.

Ambition whispered to four girls who started out to find The Treasure. To each one the message had been the same: "Hidden in the way that is ahead, you will find the treasure. It is of all treasures most valuable. It will bring you comfort and happiness all the days of your life. Seek and ye shall find."

Not even to each other did they tell the secret that Ambition had whispered to them. Each in her own way began to seek, and for a time their paths led in the same direction.

But one day they came to the place where their ways parted. Many roads led from their road, and on every road were many people.

"Surely this is the road," said one looking down a beautiful, long roadway. "Here are lights and music; songs and merriment; here are people who seem as happy as the day is long. I shall enter here, and after I have played and danced with the brightly dressed girls that I see, I shall hunt for the treasure."

But the way of Pleasure did not lead her to the treasure.

The second chose the way of Gold, and though all about her way were traces of treasure, and of people hunting, she found that there was no treasure that brought her comfort and happiness all her days.

The third entered the way that looked steep, and that had but few who were traveling in it. Said she, "Many times treasure is hidden in the hillside; I shall climb here and search."

So she entered the way of Fame, but after years of fruitless search, she found herself without the treasure and very lonely.

The fourth girl looked about her and wondered which road to choose. Just then an old man asked her to help him. She led him till he found a resting place. Then a child's voice called to her to help him up a hill. Then a boy needed help carrying a load, and she was so busy helping others that she forgot she was hunting for treasure.

Then one day she saw a bent old lady with a book and a basket in her hand. "Let me carry your basket. Lay the book on top, and I can carry them both," she said cheerily.

Then a smile came over the face of the woman as she said: "The basket has in it a great treasure. It is yours, child, all yours. Let me read to you from the book."

Slowly she opened the book and read, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

Then the cloak fell aside, and her garments were shining as the sun, and as she handed the basket to the girl she said, "'Tis the command of the King—to him that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance! Take your treasure—the love of the people all along the way, but take also the gift of the King—comfort and happiness all the days of your life. For you have entered the way of Love and Obedience to seek for your treasure, and where love is, there God is also."

Song: "Calling for you," Zion's Praises, 111.

Talk, or sermonet: "To obey is better than sacrifice." Call attention to some of the people in history that have been obedient, and disobedient.

Obedient	Disobedient
Jesus	Lucifer
Obedient Son	Prodigal Son
Moses	Jonah

Closing Song: Zion's Praises, 13.

Benediction.

THIRD SUNDAY

Theme: "Making Ourselves Worthy to Be Trusted"

Quiet Music: "Loving each other," Zion's Praises, 83.

Song: "Never pass them by," Zion's Praises, 42.

Scripture Reading: Psalm 121.

Special song by some of the children: "Let us all be brothers."

Preparation for Prayer:

Leader: "Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise."

Group: "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord."

Short Prayer. This may be followed by the group giving the Lord's Prayer in unison.

Instrumental Music: If this is not possible, No. 79 in the Zion's Praises may be used.

Short talk on trustworthiness: Examples: Joseph in Egypt; Daniel in the lion's den; Nephi, Book of Mormon character; The Three Nephites; Joseph Smith, the Martyr; Emma Smith, his wife.

Song: "Look for the beautiful," Zion's Praises, 147.

Story: 1. "Dust under the rug," in Mother Stories, by Lindsey.

2. "Choosing an errand boy," in January-February-March issue of the Junior Religio Quarterly, 1927.

Song: "I would be true."

Benediction.

FOURTH SUNDAY

Theme: "Making Ourselves Worthy through Helpfulness"

Quiet Music: "Look for the beautiful," Zion's Praises, 147. Play softly.

Song: "I love to scatter sunshine," Zion's Praises, 136.

Call to Worship:

Leader: "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord, or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart."

Response: "Give me clean hands, clean words, clean thoughts; help me to stand for the right against the wrong; save me from habits that harm; teach me to work hard and play fair. Forgive me when I am unkind, and help me to forgive those who are unkind to me; keep me ready to help others at some cost to myself; send me chances to do some little good every day. Amen."—William DeWitt Hyde.

(The response may be written on a blackboard, or printed on slips of paper so all children and teachers can take part.)

Short Prayer.

Song: "Dare to do right," Zion's Praises, 79.

Talk: "Little things can help." Use the acorn and its helpers as an illustration. Sun, wind, and rain helped it grow. Mother tree held it fast until it grew hard. Leaves flew away and made a nice cushion for it to fall on. Wind covered it with leaves; rain washed earth over it; frost fairies wove a soft white blanket to cover it. Acorn slept all winter. Spring called all sleeping things; sun warmed the earth, the rain made it soft, and the little acorn burst its shell and came up a tiny oak tree, glad to begin a new life.

Mention some of the children's helpers: Hands, feet, eyes, ears, mouth, voice, etc. Call attention to what it would be like if we were deprived of the use of some of these helpers.

Have a general talk among the children as to how they might help in the home, at school, at Sunday school, and in the community.

Story: 1. "Johnny and the three goats," in The Book-house and in many children's storybooks. (This story is to be used when younger children meet with the Juniors.)

2. "Pippa passes," found in most libraries.

Song: "We'll scatter good seed," Zion's Praises, 115.

Benediction by a Junior.

Kindergarten-Primary Worship Suggestions for January

By Virgie Fulk, Benton, Illinois

The following worship suggestions may be adapted to local situations and be used at whatever time is advisable. If the children are not kept together during the entire morning, it might be arranged to have a worship program as a part of the church school period.

It is urged that the children meet with the adults in the sacramental service.

FIRST SUNDAY

Theme: "Purity"

Quiet music: Victrola.

Memory verse: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."—Matthew 5: 8.

Offering: This may be taken in small baskets by two or more children. After the offering is taken, let the children stand with their leader in front of the group, and with bowed heads join with the other children in singing the following song:

Offering Song: Tune, Zion's Praises 31.

"Father, bless the gift we bring Unto the today,
Use it all for Christ our king,
In his name we pray." Amen.

Object lesson: Adapted from lesson one, Object Lessons, by Wood.

Cut two large hearts from cardboard and hang them before the children. On one heart paste a lovely flower picture. Leave the other heart plain. Black some gummed paper with ink. When dry, tear into pieces of different shapes.

Talk about how white and clean the heart is, and lead the children to suggest that they would like their hearts to be just as clean and white.

Have the children tell what there is at home, in school, and on the street that is apt to make them mean or cause them to do wrong, and as each one tells his or her own story, stick a black spot on the heart. By the time all the children in the room have talked, the heart will be covered with spots. Thus, the children are shown how one sin after another will spoil their hearts and make them black.

Call attention to the pretty heart which is beside the spotted heart, and have the children tell that the flowers represent the good things we do.

Song: "Be pure in heart," Zion's Praises, 103.

Conversation Period: Show one of the following pictures, and mention that God's greatest gift to us, Jesus, was a pure and holy child: "The birth of Christ," "The visit of the Wise Men," "The shepherds' visit." Help the children understand the word purity by allowing them to suggest some pure thoughts and acts.

Story. Tell the story of Simeon blessing the Christ Child. Emphasize that Simeon took the baby in his arms—as our pastors take our babies in their arms today—and blessed him. (Kindergarten Quarterly, October, November, December, 1930; Favorite Bible Stories, Old and New, by Krottjer; Luke 2: 23-40.)

Song: "Story song about Jesus," Carols, 57.

Prayer Period:

"Two hands now we show,
Two hands bring down just so.

Now fold them while we pray,
And think of all we say."

The great thing in the world is not so much where we stand as in what direction we are moving.—Holmes.

Prayer. The leader may form the prayer, a sentence at a time, and have the children repeat each sentence. Remember to keep in mind the theme for the day.

Prayer response: Tune, chorus of 207 in Zion's Praises.

Oh, hear our prayer and answer make,
As this we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen.

SECOND SUNDAY

Theme: "Working for Jesus by Being Helpful and Happy."

Quiet Music: Same as first Sunday.

Memory verse: "I must be about my Father's business."

—Luke 2: 49.

Offering. Same as first Sunday.

Song: "Earnest workers for the Master," Zion's Praises, 99, or "Jesus our friend," Carols, 58.

Conversation period: Lead the children to understand that by helping mother and father at home, helping their teachers, playmates, and other people, they are helping Jesus. Show pictures of Jesus and tell of his helpfulness. Zion's Hope, March 23, 1930; January 13, 1929; July 21, 1929.

Story: 1. "About His Father's business," Zion's Hope, January 13, 1929. 2. "The boy in his father's house," Hurlbut's Story of the Bible. 3. "The lame boy," Ethics for Children, Cabot. 4. "How a fairy breeze helped," "The missing Fauchette," "Johnny, Pick-a-bean," Today's Stories of Yesterday, Cook.

Song: "The Child of Galilee," Zion's Praises, 36.

Prayer Period:

"We fold our hands . . .

We close our eyes . . .

We bow our heads as we draw near,
The king of kings, our Savior dear."

Prayer by leader.

Prayer response. Same as first Sunday.

THIRD SUNDAY

Theme: "Jesus, Our Kind and Loving Friend."

Quiet music.

Memory verse: "O come, let us worship the Lord."

Offering song: Carols, 12. (Carols may be purchased from the Herald Publishing House for 35 cents.)

"Dear Jesus, our offering we bring thee;
With gladness this tribute we pay,
To him who looks down on the children
And never turns any away."

(This may be repeated or sung.)

Short prayer, by leader. Ask a blessing upon the offering.

Song: "Jesus is the children's friend," Zion's Praises, 179.

Conversation period. Try to deepen the children's love for Jesus and give them a desire to be like him. Teach them to be kind and loving to all, as was Jesus.

Show the picture of Jesus being led into the water of river Jordan to be baptized, Zion's Hope, January 20, 1929. Tell the children that if they would follow in Christ's footsteps they must be good; they must be helpful and happy.

Song: Special number: "O to be more like Jesus," Zion's Praises, 128. Omit the word sinner, and insert the word children in the first line of the chorus. In the second line of the chorus, living or dying may be omitted, and never cease trying may be repeated.

Story: "Jesus healing a sick man," Luke 5: 17-26.

Mark 2: 1-12 may be used as a sand table lesson. "The man let down through the roof," Hurlbut's Story of the Bible, 546, is also good for a sand table lesson. (See Sand-table Book, 10th edition, Faris.)

Prayer period: If the school is small, each child may be asked to pray. Use the prayer exercise which was suggested for the first Sunday. The leader may pray first.

Prayer response: Same as first Sunday.

Other stories, if needed: "Lincoln's unvarying kindness," Ethics for Children, Cabot. "How the daisy chains came," Today's Stories of Yesterday, Cook.

FOURTH SUNDAY

Theme: "Cleanliness."

Quiet music.

Memory verse: "Be ye clean, in your bodies and in your clothing."—Doctrine and Covenants 19: 3.

Offering song: Carols, 12, second verse:

Junior Stewardship

By C. B. W.

As an activity or project provided through the church school for ages 8 to 15, junior stewardship is being enthusiastically received. Last year the record books were in use in 178 branches of the church in America. The first twenty-three sponsors' reports, received near the end of the year, give the following totals: Books in use 211, number of satisfactory records kept 105, number of junior tithe payers 118, tithing paid by juniors (March to September) $143.78, juniors giving oblations 67, juniors reporting savings accounts 74, sponsor's talks to junior stewards 101, talks before junior groups 46, talks before school 34, talks before the branch 17, home visits 33.

The plan is wholly an educational one, designed to teach industry, thrift, savings, responsibility, money values, the principle of tithing, and the method of determining the amount of tithing one should pay. It offers splendid opportunity to do effective teaching both to children and adults.

The Record Books may be purchased outright for personal use for 15 cents each at the Herald Publishing House. Where undertaken as a group project under a sponsor appointed by the pastor, the bishop's solicitor and the director of the church school, the books will be furnished by the Presiding Bishopric at 5 cents each.

The supply for 1931 is limited. Orders should be placed at once, so the records may begin with January 1.

Religion and Neighborly Visiting

By John Blackmore

The religion of Jesus is more than a statement of theology, it is more than a system of abstract beliefs, it is more than a group of religious platitudes. It is a way of living, a manner of life, and reaches into every nook and corner of man's personal and group behavior. The religion of Jesus is not adequately expressed in the life of the individual by mere attendance at church services.

To meet the requirements of the religion of Jesus in these modern days, our personal religious thought and behavior must meet the social conditions and problems incidental to the kind of world in which we live. In the intricate life of society, religious knowledge is not limited to the sacred writings of scripture; it must reach out into the field of social relationships. Unfortunately in our religious life, too often we know each other churchly, but are not well acquainted socially. In other words, our religious fraternizing has been limited to church attendance and an occasional greeting at service time. This is not sufficient, for there should be a deep sense of brotherhood and friendship. Neighborly visiting in a friendly, social way is a part of the religious activities of a saintly congregation.

The divine instruction, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," implies more than a religious anxiety that my acquaintances shall know my theology. It involves more than a handshake and smile at the church services. It means that in the practical affairs of life there will be a genuine expression of comradeship. Neighborly visiting in a warm, social manner will assist greatly in developing a greater brotherly love among the Saints.

To be sure, neighborly visiting does not mean neighborly gossiping, which is a reprehensible practice. Yet, the social basis for all ministry is close friendship upon the higher level of sympathetic understanding and love.

The supervisor of the adult division of the church school should stimulate this social fraternizing among the adult members of the church school. Periodical "get-together" meetings to develop fellowship among the members of the congregation should be planned. Social entertainments have a great value in promoting valuable friendships. The supervisor does not necessarily take charge of these social functions, but it is his or her responsibility to stimulate these social gatherings and to cultivate wholesome friendly relationships among the members of the church school.

It is suggested that an effort to promote wholesome neighborly visiting is definitely an activity of the church. It will bring enjoyable results and rich experiences in practical religious education. For from social intercourse and rich friendships are derived some of the highest enjoyments of life. Religion is social as well as personal and can reach its higher expression only in increasing friendships and social affections.

President Hoover Defends the Children

Editors all over the country are praising the speech delivered by President Hoover at the opening of the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection. There is no need to multiply its praises here, but it is important to give our readers the benefit of some of his splendid statements:

The fundamental purpose of this conference is to set forth an understanding of those safeguards which will assure to them [the children] health in mind and body. There are safeguards and services to childhood which can be provided by the community, the State, or the Nation—all of which are beyond the reach of the individual parent. . . . If we could have but one generation of properly born, trained, educated, and healthy children, a thousand other problems of government would vanish. We would assure ourselves of healthier minds in more vigorous bodies to direct the energies of our Nation to yet greater heights of achievement. Moreover, one good community nurse will save a dozen future policemen. . . .

It is not the delinquent child that is at the bar of judgment, but society itself. . . . Industry must not rob our children of their rightful heritage. Any labor which stunts growth, either physical or mental, that limits education, that deprives children of the right of comradeship, of joy and play, is sapping the next generation. . . .

Human progress marches only when children excel their parents.

Clearer and clearer, I am seeing how Jesus made the common things of common life the media through which he communed with the Father. The roadside, the well-curb, the harvest field, the wedding supper, the sorrow-shadowed cottage—these were the trysting places of his love.—William H. Boddy, International Journal of Religious Education.

Six Baptized at Oslo, Norway

Bon, Norway, December 10.—We are very happy to write of a delightful experience recently had at Oslo, when six souls united with the church by baptism, and one young man was ordained to the priesthood. Three of these candidates were from Bon and the other three from Oslo.

Oslo is the capital of Norway and is the largest city in the country. Very little missionary work has been done there by the representatives of our church. Several years ago Apostle Peter Anderson and Brother Muceus put forth an effort in the city, but because of the heavy expense connected with renting halls and advertising there the effort has not been continued.

During the past summer I received a request from a local elder of the Utah Church to come to Oslo and explain the difference in the two Latter Day Saint Churches. I complied with the request, and have visited the city quite regularly since that time and have held meetings in a private home, where several friends gathered to hear the messages that we had to present. On August 21 I had the privilege of baptizing a lady who was formerly a member of the Utah Church.

As the winter season approached, the way opened for me to begin holding public meetings. I rented a hall and have held one public meeting a week since October 1 and have conducted house meetings on other evenings. Bon is not very far from Oslo, so I have traveled back and forth between these two towns, taking care of the work in both places each week. The attendance and interest in our public meetings in Oslo have been excellent from the start, better than we had anticipated, and several people are investigating our teachings.

Three people finally requested baptism. We rented a baptismal font in another church in the city, and the date for the baptisms was set for November 30. About that time the Spirit of God began working at Bon in a greater measure than it had been, and interested friends received some beautiful spiritual experiences. The result was that three of them requested baptism.

With a total of six candidates for baptism at the same time, all adults, we were very happy indeed, as we seldom have the privilege in these countries of baptizing that many at once. Two of them, a young married couple, insisted on being baptized out in the open, instead of in the font in the church, so I took them out to the sea on Saturday evening and baptized them in the cold salt water. In spite of the winter weather here, we felt the cold very little. In fact, we were all three quite warm when we came out of the water. Never have I heard of anyone getting sick or suffering any harm from complying with the commands of God, whether it be in the winter or summer.

The next day a carload of Saints from Bon and a carload from Kragero and Porsgrund came to Oslo, and we gathered at the church at three o'clock in the afternoon. A large crowd of Saints and friends were present. We carried out a beautiful and impressive service with songs, music, scripture reading, silent prayer, and two short talks. The Spirit of God was present in power, which moved the audience to tears. Several nonmembers were deeply touched by the Spirit present. After the baptism we proceeded at once with the confirmation. Brother P. T. Andersen, missionary to Denmark, who is spending the winter in Norway, had come to Oslo that day with Brother Nilsen, a local elder from Kragero. I was pleased to have these two brothers present to assist in the confirmation. A beautiful spirit was present during the confirmation, and some timely instruction and admonition were given some of the candidates.

That evening at eight o'clock, thirty-three Saints and friends met in a private home, where a sacramental and ordination service was held. A young man twenty-six years of age was ordained to the office of priest. We are glad to welcome him to our corps of local workers here. He is the first to be ordained to the priesthood in Oslo. We trust that it will not be long until others will be called to assist him.

The good Spirit that had been present with us in the afternoon continued in the evening. Brother P. T. Andersen delivered a prophecy in which God told us that he had given his Spirit in rich measure that day as a testimony to friends as well as members that we were his people and accepted of him. Two young men who had been baptized were admonished to study and prepare themselves for the priesthood, because God had a great work for them to do, and if they would be faithful, they would be a blessing to many people. In answer to secret prayer for some evidence as to what the future had in store for the work in Oslo, I was also spoken to and told that God had many people in that city and that it was his will that we continue our efforts there. If I would be faithful and humble, working among the people in love, God would bless our efforts and permit us to bring many souls into his kingdom. But we were also warned that we would meet many disappointments and much opposition. We are thankful to our heavenly Father for these words of encouragement and this voice of warning.

We have several more friends who are deeply interested in our work, and we trust that it will not be very long before we receive more requests for baptism. It is our great desire to establish our work on a firm basis in this capital city. With the able assistance of Sister Ruch and the Saints, I am going to do all within my power to build up a branch there. We now have eleven members in the city.

We ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints in all the world that God will bless our feeble efforts to build up his work in this part of the world. May the rich blessings of heaven come to each one who is engaged in the service of the Master is our prayer.

V. D. RUCH.

Petrolia, Ontario

December 9.—Since Elder Grant St. John, through the efforts of Alvin T. Perry, of Sarnia, visited us on his way to and from the Centennial Conference, we have thought of sending in a few words from Petrolia. How we wish that we could keep that beautiful, spiritual uplift of conference time which is but a taste of the joys yet to come to the faithful ones.

The Saints also felt much blessed and strengthened a little later by a short visit from our worthy district president, D. J. Williams. Though a stranger to us at first, Brother Williams when he left seemed like an old friend. Such are the friendships of the gospel. Also an interesting and appreciated discourse from Elder J. Yager on his experiences in the islands was ours to enjoy.

Such treats have been rare in Petrolia, but we are expecting great things in the future.

The branch has a little building of which we are proud on a lot within practically a stone's throw of most of the other churches of the town. The church and lot have been made attractive and have brought much favorable comment from nonmembers by the painstaking and conscientious efforts of the local president, F. A. Babcock, who has labored unceasingly almost alone, doing much of the carpenter work, repairing and strengthening the building after moving, and changing an ugly and hard-to-clean eye sore into a pleasing church lot. We also feel grateful to surrounding branches for material help. Kimball Branch helped royally with labor at the time of plastering, and also Glenroe Branch. To Brother Perry we owe our electric lights. He took up a subscription among members of different branches.

To Brother Perry, who is now our vice president, we owe a great deal. We can never forget the helpful influence of his spirituality at a time when it was so greatly needed. He and his wife, sometimes bringing others, have motored the sixteen miles from Sarnia practically every Sunday for many months to assist us, and the prayer meetings through his leading have been life saving. It is refreshing to see the helpful influence our president and vice president seem to have over each other. We have also been benefited from Brother Perry's sermons. Elder Freear, of Glenroe, has also preached many sermons and is helping us splendidly as a Bible class teacher.

We have prayer meeting, Sunday school, and preaching service each Sunday morning with preaching generally again at night, also priesthood meeting once each month in place of the morning sermon.

We purchased our church building from the Methodists, and the endearment they gave it comes as a continual source of inspiration to us.

We hope to be able in the future to make our church and grounds more attractive, a strength-giving holy spot, and as we work we pray that we too may give back again inspiration to those souls who labored faithfully for it in its early days, and to all others who behold it, that it may be as a beacon light set on a hill.

San Jose, California

Spencer Avenue and Grant Street

Regular meetings are being conducted by all departments. The preaching of late has chiefly been by local elders, some forceful discourses being delivered.

Missionary Herbert Hinton was here November 13 and visited the Saints during the remainder of the week. He preached the morning of November 16 before leaving for Watsonville in the afternoon.

The Recreation and Expression Department gave a social at the home of Brother and Sister G. W. Cowden November 21.

A special sermon on the financial needs of the church was preached by Pastor R. E. Cowden November 13, introducing the effort the Bishopric is making to raise money to pay the missionary families. The good response of the Saints is proof of the carrying power of this message.

Annual branch business meeting convened December 3. The new church school program was adopted and officers were elected and appointed: Branch president, R. E. Cowden; secretary, Evelyn Holmes; treasurer, B. R. Gilbert; director of Religious Education, C. J. Cady; music director, Ruth Bradley. C. J. Cady was reappointed publicity agent.

The regular sacramental service occurred December 7, thirty-five being present. Visitors from Independence, Missouri, were present at this service, also members from Ivermore, Palo Alto, Gilroy, and from Kansas City, Missouri. Sister Lizzie Leaman, who is sorely afflicted, was able to be present and partake of the emblems. The little child of Brother and Sister Schall was administered to after the meeting for his hearing.

The evening of December 6 the Saints met at the home of Brother and Sister C. W. Hawkins and gave them a surprise Christmas shower of good things to eat. The abundance of their gifts filled the dining table and covered the floor. The recipients are deeply grateful for these evidences of love and remembrance.

The Women's Department reports interesting meetings. The members are studying the Inspired Version of the Holy Scriptures. Sister Pearl Cowden is superintendent.

Salt Lake City, Utah

December 10.—Church work in Salt Lake City is progressing. Attendance and interest have not been better since I came to this mission. During the stay of Apostle J. F. Curtis in November, we had unusual attendance, and much good was done. One fine family was baptized by him, also two children of Brother and Sister Wardle, of Smithville. The new members are doing well, and the father of the family will be a welcomed addition to the musical department. Yesterday morning we had the pleasure of baptizing another fine young man into the church.

The financial depression, felt all over the world, has been felt keenly here. We have had to give more assistance this fall and winter than for many years. Quite a few Saints have come here looking for work and found none, as thousands are out of work. These have had to be helped on their way. We mention this that others contemplating trying for work here will know the situation. The finances of the members have been strained to the point where we are unable to help any more. It is hoped that before spring a new post office building and a new sanitarium will give work to many. The unusual and continued cold weather has contributed to the suffering of the poor people. The rich leaders of the dominant church seem to be doing little to alleviate the suffering of their own people, and the difference in financial station is decidedly marked. We hear of many instances of refusals to help those in need.

Some repairs, badly needed, have recently been made. We have new cement steps for the church and a new large sign. The sign was painted by one of the new members, Brother Zellner, who is talented along many lines. He and his estimable wife are planning to move to Missouri in the spring. They will be a great help wherever they go.

Northwestern Iowa District

Northwestern Iowa district conference convened at Woodbine, November 29 and 30. District President Gerald Gunsolley and President F. M. McDowell were in charge. The opening session was Saturday morning at 9.15—a prayer service. A splendid spirit was present from the beginning until the close of the service. About sixty-five were present.

A short session at 10.45 was in charge of President F. M. McDowell, in which he set forth some important factors regarding the new program of Religious Education.

The morning business session of the conference was then begun. Statistical reports show a small gain in the district. Two branches failed to report. Gain by baptism, 103; gain by transfer, 114; total, 217; loss by death, 25; loss by transfer, 143; total loss, 168; net gain, 49.

At 2.30, business session was resumed. District treasurer's report shows a balance on hand: Receipts to date, $224.78; disbursements, $146.26; leaving a balance, $78.52. Bishop Adams reports tithes and offerings to November 1, $13,745.04. It is encouraging to note the increase in obligations. The total at this time is $706.68. The goal was set by Bishop Adams at the opening of the year at $1,000, and it is the general opinion that it will be reached by the close of the year. A budget of $400 for the district for 1931 was presented to the group and adopted. The bishop reports that he has visited all branches in the district, and he finds an increasing desire among the Saints to know more of the financial law.

The following persons were chosen as the district officers for the year of 1931: District President, Gerald Gunsolley; assistants, W. R. Adams and O. B. Myers; district secretary, Mrs. Ruby Adams; district chorister, Mrs. Ruth Gunsolley; superintendent of Religious Education, Mrs. Bertha Van Eaton.

By vote of the conference, the secretary was instructed to send an expression of condolence to Sister J. L. Butterworth in her bereavement in the passing of her husband, Brother

J. L. Butterworth, who for so many years served the Saints at Dow City. This closed the business session of the conference.

Brother L. G. Holloway was the speaker at 7.30 Saturday evening, his subject being, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel."

The Sunday morning prayer service at 8.30 was in charge of President McDowell, assisted by district officers and priesthood. Brother McDowell suggested a theme, "Our gifts." This was a very fine prayer service, the outstanding features being the many splendid testimonies expressing a deep devotion to the church. At the close Brother Hunker offered a prayer of consecration of the "testimonial gifts" to the Saints.

President McDowell conducted a class period on "Spiritual engineering" at 9.45. He also delivered a fine discourse in the morning on "I have seen Jesus."

The conference carried out a resolution passed by the previous conference that all come with basket lunches on Sunday in order that none be denied attending the services.

A beautiful ordination service was conducted at 1.30, when Brother Cecil Burnett, of Sioux City, was ordained and set apart as an elder. President McDowell, Gerald Gunsolley, and Milo Burnett officiated.

Brother McDowell talked to the group on the "Needs of the church," and more especially to the priesthood of the various branches in organizing them for intensive work throughout the district. This was the closing session of one of the best if not the best conference ever held in the district. Large attendance characterized all sessions. Every branch in the district was represented except Coalville. We felt favored to have President McDowell with us.

MRS. W. R. ADAMS.

Central Nebraska District

September 21 marked the commencement of worship services in the much-improved hall at Norfolk. Since that time attendance at services has shown a gradual increase. Punctuality, regularity, decorum, attention, application to worship themes, and offerings bespeak the unity of the group. Brother J. C. Vaughn, director of music, is proving his training, ability, and experience in the constructive program he is undertaking. The recreational activities have been amply provided under the direction of Otis Porterfield. The Halloween party held in the hall merits special mention. The entire evening program was so carefully arranged that everyone participated joyously and recreatively. We believe that every phase of the work at Norfolk is onward.

The new organization in Clearwater Branch has been a decided benefit. It has resulted in a better understanding, and a definite program has effected a spirit of unity. The services are characterized by a true spirit of worship. The work of the Department of Women is especially encouraging.

The series of lantern slide lectures recently conducted at Comstock was, according to local authorities, the best-supported campaign in years. The editor of the Comstock News, to express his approval, gave us much free publicity. The use of slides is an impressive method of teaching the history of our church. We believe the Comstock community now has a true appreciation of our work and philosophy.

My missionary charge has made it necessary for me to visit many isolated Saints. Several times I have been touched to see these people hungering for the privilege of worshipping and associating with their brothers. But several of our scattered members, in spite of adverse conditions, continue faithful and express their loyalty by giving financial support.

Recently we have been conducting a personal canvass for tithes and offerings. One brother, who never had the privilege of attending any of our district meetings, and who had already paid one hundred dollars tithing, gave fifty dollars more. Such a spirit of devotion is indeed encouraging.

The missionary work of Central Nebraska District has been extended to include Wagner, South Dakota. We now are arranging the 1931 program, and assure all locals that if they give the district program the necessary support, every group will be given all the attention possible. We are asking you to join in an extensive missionary program the coming year.

R. MELVIN RUSSELL.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

307 West Pierce Street

A special business meeting was held about the middle of November, at which time it was decided to dispose of the Riverside Church at Thirty-first Street and Avenue C, an offer having already been received. The Belmont Church had been disposed of some time previously.

After business meeting, President Floyd M. McDowell, who was with us, gave an interesting account of some of his recent travels in Europe, including a description of the Passion Play. This was illustrated by views thrown on the screen, which made a profitable evening for those in attendance.

The following week a special meeting was called in which the officers of the branch organized members of the priesthood and other workers, sending them out to visit the homes of every member, in connection with the financial call of the general church. We feel that good response will come from this solicitation.

Potluck dinners are being held once a month in the lower church auditorium. These dinners are being sponsored by the different wheels of the Women's Department and are meeting with much success. Two have been held so far, with an average attendance of eighty-five. After dinner various problems of the church and school are discussed.

The branch felt that Thanksgiving week would be an appropriate time to show their appreciation of the work being done here by Pastor Whiting and Sister Whiting, and after the Monday night school session, went to their home for a surprise pound social. In addition to an ample supply of groceries, a purse was presented to Sister Whiting.

A bazaar, chicken dinner, and supper were held by the Women's Department December 6 which netted around $235. This money was applied on our branch budget.

The branch was saddened by the death of Sister Iona Graybill December 7. She was preceded by her husband, Lloyd, by only a month and two days.

Two Temple Builder and two Oriole circles have been organized in the girls' division. This work is in charge of Sister Kerns. These circles meet every other Tuesday night.

From Southeastern Kansas

Our number in this region is small, only thirty members in Mulberry, Gross, and Liberal, and some of them are out of work. They are seeing their hard times, nevertheless they want to do their part to help the church, and are sending to the general church several dollars at this Christmas time.

I am practically alone in the ministry to look after these three places. Meetings have been arranged so that I can meet with each group once each Sunday. I accordingly have three preaching services and two Sunday schools, one at ten in the morning, the other at 2.30 in the afternoon. We wish there were other members of the priesthood here.

An eight-night series of meetings has just closed at Liberal (Missouri) Mission, and I am pleased with the effort. Though attendance was not large, the same people came each night. I believe there will be baptisms there in the near future.

The new mission started at Gross in July is doing well. Last Sunday forty-five were in classes, and about a dozen of these are almost ready for baptism. Brother J. Charles May plans to help us here near the first of the year.

Detroit, Michigan

From Detroit's Beacon Light

During the past few weeks Elder Hubert Case, city missionary, reports the assistance of Brothers George Negeim, Carlisle Whitehead, J. A. Gardner, and M. H. Siegfried from out of town. Local men have also done much to assist in the city missionary operations. At present the missionary movement in Brightmoor looks promising. Missionary meetings opened in River Rouge Church November 25. Interest is being stimulated at East Side Church by Blakeslee Smith working with Wilbert Richards. The work at Roseville has been somewhat handicapped by the illness of Brother Leland, who is working with Leo Willisie.

All over the city of Detroit the Saints in the various branches are busy with Christmas plans and programs. Children, young people, middle-aged souls, and the aged are looking to the services commemorating the birth of Jesus. In the church schools the lessons are about the Christ Child, in the women's departments activities are at present largely governed by the season's needs, and the Saints in general are being reminded of the needy.

The sacrament observed December 7 helped the members to realize that they were entering upon the closing month of the year, and many were the expressions of joys experienced during 1930 and gratitude for God's blessings.

Social events in every group have brightened the lives of the members and in some cases have added to the church funds.

Wells, Michigan

December 9.—We have enjoyed work among the scattered members and friends. Some of these have subscribed for church papers and other literature, and are helping in a financial way.

We succeeded in getting together a group interested in church school work. About thirty new helpers have been enlisted in this activity, some the children of nonmembers.

The sacrament was administered to eleven members, some of whom had not had this privilege for quite a while. Among them was an aged sister who is bedfast most of the time, but is staunch in the faith.

This group has some distance to go to church, and traveling expenses are limited. To solve this problem we take the church to them.

At the communion hour I explained the purpose of the oblation offering. One brother who drew three dollars on his last pay day, a man who works twelve hours a day at strenuous labor and has a large family to support, stated that he had not helped with this offering for some time and gave one dollar.

Among the scattered members we find some very willing to help. Others need encouragement. Though some seem discouraged and indifferent, a few friendly visits bring them out to meeting. Others have invited us to hold meetings in their homes, and then they attend when the services are conducted elsewhere.

The good work goes on, and seeing results, we are happy.
A. M. BOOMER.

Lake Orion, Michigan

At a special business meeting on December 3 we voted unanimously to adopt the new plan of Religious Education and will begin working under this plan the first of the year. The following officers were elected: Branch president, Vincent D. Schaar; secretary, Julia Hammond; treasurer, Emma Schaar; chorister, Mona Knight; librarian, J. I. Dunlap; and publicity agent, Mona Knight.

The following week a short business session was held and the officers were chosen for the church school work, as follows: Church school director or supervisor, Julia Hammond, assisted by Mona Knight; adult supervisor, Mae Forbes, assisted by Ada Drager; young people's supervisor, Ralph Dunlap, assisted by Livingston Schaar; and children's supervisor, Harriet Schaar, assisted by Phyllis Schaar.

We hope to see the work move forward next year, and are sure it will, as we have a fine lot of young people who are always ready to assist in every way for the advancement of the church.
JULIA HAMMOND.

San Diego, California

Events combined to make November 19 an outstanding day—a wedding, a baptism, a feast in the church basement, a beautifully decorated church building, and fine music.

Sister Phoebe A. Berringer, of Long Beach, and Joseph P. Kieffer, a business man of San Diego, were married at the church by Pastor Elmer Aylor. Preceding the ceremony Sister Charlotte Aylor Kenny sang a solo, and the bridal party entered to the strains of the wedding march played by Sister Long. Dignity and simplicity characterized the service.

At eleven o'clock Elder Walrath preached a fitting sermon. Promptly at 11.45 little Julia Kellerby, the sixth and the last of the Kellerby family to enter the kingdom, accompanied by her maids, came in from the lobby of the church to the place where Sister Julia, her mother, waited. Sister Thompson played the march and, while the candidate was preparing for the ordinance of baptism, favored us with a song, and the little maids sang from the hymn book. The tender and reverent way in which Pastor Aylor baptized the child was inspiring. The confirmation took place through the instrumentality of Elder W. F. Kellerby. The baptismal maids were Sister Arnold, Mabel Kellerby, Pauline Munroe, Julia Belle Thompson.

Much credit was due Sisters Harder, Dolan, Kellerby, Long, Thompson, Aylor, and Munroe for the decorations and the sumptuous dinner.

Pastor Aylor, in the short time he has served here, has done much to prove the good judgment of the Saints who selected him to complete the term of Brother Sherman, who left to make his home farther north.
W. F. KELLERBY.

Springfield, Missouri

A wonderful spirit of unity and love prevailed at the sacramental service the morning of December 7. Pastor J. B. Ansley was in charge assisted by his associate pastors, A. W. Duemler and G. P. Palmer. These were seated on each side and followed by the quorum of priests of the branch. Prior to the blessing of the emblems, an a cappella trio number was given, "Were you there when they crucified my Lord?" A somber spirit of gratitude prevailed during the testimonies.

In the evening a unique program was given by the four pianists of the church and church school assisted by the supervisor of music, Hattie May Bishop. The organ and the two pianos were used in this entertainment.

We are to have a radio installed in the church on December 21 for the purpose of bringing to the Saints The Messiah, broadcast from K M B C at Kansas City, Missouri, by a part of the Independence Messiah Choir. Then in the evening our choir will present the cantata, "King all glorious."

A chili supper and get-together meeting were much enjoyed December 9. We are trying different methods of stimulating interest and enthusiasm in our members, especially the young, and although we meet with trials and difficulties at times, we hope to gain the interest and unity of all the congregation.

Des Moines, Iowa

1717 East Twelfth Street

The various departments of the branch have been very active for the past two months and should be commended for their untiring efforts in helping with the upkeep of the branch budget.

October 11 the intermediate girls' class taught by Elizabeth Terrell held a doughnut sale, with good results.

The Home and Service Group gave a dinner at the Odd Fellows' Hall October 29.

The Busy Bee Club has recently given two dinners at the church. This little group meets at the church each Thursday and spends most of its time quilting.

The C. W. A. W. Class, taught by Sister J. W. Rudkin, held a fall festival and bazaar in the lower auditorium, netting a profit of more than one hundred dollars.

It was with regret that we learned of the death of Elder J. S. Roth. Brother and Sister Roth visited at the C. B. Hartshorn home in October, and while here he preached a fine sermon on "The result of disobedience and unbelief."

Services were well attended on Decision Day. At the Sunday school worship service all enjoyed the beautiful story, "Peter's second chance," told by Cora Wildey. The sermons were by Pastor C. B. Hartshorn and Elder J. L. Parker. Two adults were baptized.

An afternoon nursing class was organized October 28. The members seem very interested in their work and appreciate the efforts of Sister W. J. Chapman, who so willingly gives her time and talent to make their work a success.

District Missionaries A. L. Loving and E. E. Crownover labored in Des Moines the first two weeks in November. The former gave two illustrated lectures on New Zealand and sea life. November 9 Elder Crownover preached the morning sermon, his subject being "No salvation without the gospel of Christ." Emma Sackrider sang a solo. In the evening Brother Loving talked on "Priesthood responsibility." Mella Price and Janetta Morey sang "Come close to the Savior." The missionaries also held cottage meetings at several homes.

Sister Tryphene Hall passed away at her home November 14. Funeral services were held at the church on Sunday afternoon. Interment was in Shenandoah.

"Young People's Day," November 23, was observed as a thanksgiving and home service. The pastor asked that every home be represented and that the families sit together. Recognition was given the R. D. Williams family, the largest family present, six in number. Sister Clara Brockett was the oldest church member there, having been baptized fifty years ago. The oldest married couple was Mr. and Mrs. O. Olson, the youngest married couple Clayton and Gladys Lloyd.

The morning worship service was in charge of Donald Cackler, and the theme was "Thankfulness for home and country." The program was: Invocation, Faye Williams; Anthem, "Thanks be to God," the choir; address, "Religious liberty and American equality," James Parker; violin duet, Jane Brown and Bernice Davis; address, "Character foundations in American home life," Gladys Lloyd; vocal duet, "The beauty of the earth," Verba Parker and Mary Louise Mussell; benediction, Faye Williams.

The 7.30 program was in charge of Marjorie Steelsmith, and consisted of a piano solo by Catherine Nickels; reading, Lorene Simbro; violin solo, Jane Brown. The evening service was in charge of Virginia Parker, and the theme was "Thankfulness for Christ and his church": Invocation, Raymond Thompson; cello and violin duet, Marjorie Morey and Loretta Montgomery; addresses, "Christ as our leader and example," Herbert Germar; "The church as a means of salvation," Thelma Green; "Christ as our Redeemer and Savior," James Maitland; "The church as an agency of service and personal development," Myrtle Cook. Miss Cook read two original poems, "Service," and "Our pastor." Illustrated solo, "The old rugged cross," Ardith Olmstead; benediction, Raymond Thompson.

Prayer service was conducted at 7.30 the morning of Thanksgiving Day, C. B. Hartshorn, C. E. McDonald, and V. L. Deskin in charge. This meeting was outstanding. All rejoiced because of the presence of the Holy Spirit. The gift of prophecy brought comfort to the members.

Bishop Charles Fry was here to preach two splendid sermons November 30.

Attractive features of the services are the splendid musical program given by the choir and the concert, presented by the orchestra each month, also individual numbers.

A recent Sunday was home-coming day, and Patriarch F. A. Smith was present. He preached on the topics, "The church and its purpose," and "Why join the church? What are its benefits?" The ladies' octet and male octet furnished special music. Meals were served that day in the lower auditorium.

Foraker (Oklahoma) Branch

Saints of Foraker Branch recently enjoyed a spiritual uplift as the result of the visit of Brother and Sister S. W. Simmons. He preached nine sermons, endeavoring to stir up our minds to remember the things required of us in the gospel. We were much impressed, for like holy men of old, he spoke as he was moved by the Holy Ghost.

It is well for the branch that Brother and Sister Simmons have come to spend the winter where they can be with us in our meetings.

December 7 Jack Wostum, eight years old, who for three years has been looking forward to the time when he would be old enough, was baptized by Edward Workmon.

The Women's Department has been busy this fall making quilts to assist in raising the Christmas offering.

MRS. EMMA SWAIN.

Kansas City Stake

Of General Interest

Kansas City is in holiday attire. For ten days and more it has been the rendezvous of home-coming students and visitors. They crowd the station, the busses, the street cars, and the downtown streets, gay of spirits, happy for vacation. Various business centers about the city are vying with each other in street and building decorations, and the result is a city gay with colored lights, festoons, and wreaths.

Central Church

Services at Central on Sunday, December 21, were planned to bring to every worshiper the message of Christmas. A Christmas worship period of prayer, music, and scripture reading preceded class work, and then came the morning Christmas hour. The program was: Organ prelude; hymn, "Hail the blest morn," by the congregation; violin solo, "Twinkling stars," Bobbie Forties; a Christmas pageant, primary and beginner group, Sister E. L. Alter, director; organ interlude, "Silent night," Ashford; processional, "On patrol," Evans, Paul Babb, pianist; cantata, "The Child Jesus," Houts-Flagg, junior choir, director, Sister C. E. Wight; prayer, C. G. Mesley.

In the evening the pageant, "The nativity," by Rose Kimball, was effectively given by a group of young people, under the direction of Roy Thrutchley. George Mesley was the reader; Eugene Christy directed the music. Florence Short was the organist, and the octet from the choir accompanied with carols of Christmas.

Bennington Heights Church

The morning service December 14 was in charge of Pastor O. G. Helm and in the evening was presided over by Elder Joseph Curtis. At the latter hour the infant son of Brother and Sister J. E. Curtis was blessed. Both meetings were well attended, and the sermons were helpful.

Sister Mary Helm and daughter, Dorothy, have been in quarantine for the past two weeks, and we are glad to see them out again.

A farewell party was given at the home of Brother and Sister W. A. Helm for Brother and Sister Fred Waters, who left for the South where they expect to make their future home. The Sunday school class of which Sister Waters has been the teacher, presented them a beautiful traveling bag. We join in wishing them happiness in their new home.

Recently a number surprised Sister Clea Leaverton, who left for Long Beach, California, to visit her parents.

The morning of December 21 the service was conducted by Stake Missionary G. T. Richards, and in the evening the sermon was by Patriarch Ammon White, who is home on a vacation during the holidays.

Last Sunday Elder Henry Smith was the morning speaker, and in the evening we listened to Apostle F. Henry Edwards.

Holden Stake

Warrensburg

The church here is moving steadily ahead in interest and efficiency. Edward Larsen, a former student of Graceland College who is attending the Central Missouri State Teachers' College here, has shown much interest in the church work. He was unanimously elected an assistant to G. W. Hancock, the president. Brother Larsen came from Denmark three years ago to attend school in this country and to develop in the church work that he may be able to carry the gospel convincingly and effectively to his countrymen. The young people under his direction are very active. They already have carried out several projects.

The Thanksgiving supper served in the church basement was an event long to be remembered by all who were in attendance as a profitable social gathering. The elevating influence was of inestimable worth. The congregation met in the auditorium and was ushered in a body to the basement, where were rows of beautifully decorated tables. After the meal everyone present in a few appropriate words expressed thanks for blessings received during the year.

Elder James Davis, of Independence, one of the stake missionaries, recently conducted a series of lectures in the church here. He is an enthusiastic speaker. We especially liked his illustrated lecture on Hawaii. Our best wishes go with Brother Davis.

The vesper service given the Sunday night before Christmas was much appreciated. We had occasion to be proud of the musical ability exhibited by a number of the young people. After the service the young men and women went to the home of Sister Hartman to sing their Christmas carols. Sister Hartman, who has been sick for over a year and unable to attend services, was grateful to the singers for their thoughtfulness.

Saint Thomas, Ontario

Nelson Kelly was ordained a priest by Elder James Winegarden and Elder MacGregor, of London, and Elder James Skelding.

The sacramental meetings and other services show considerable increase in attendance.

Annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, Elder James Skelding; counselors, Elder James Cordery and Priest Nelson Kelly; deacon, Brother Pantling; secretary, Lily Burger; treasurer, Sister Nelson Kelly; solicitor, Sister Nelson Kelly; chorister, Lily Burger; assistant chorister, Sister Preston Ford; pianist, Emily St. John; assistant pianist, Hazel Ford; publicity agent, Hazel O. Ford.

Brother Williams gave this branch a brief visit December 11. The branch is responding well to the call for help.

The annual election of officers for the Sunday school resulted as follows: Superintendent, Nelson Kelly; assistant superintendent, Charles Skelding; secretary, Donald Duncan; assistant secretary, William Burger; treasurer, Harry Rock; chorister, Sister F. Hitch; assistant, Sister Lenore Rock; organist, Sister Preston Ford; assistant, Sister Harry Rock; librarian, Kenneth Duncan; assistant, Jack Burger. The Sunday school is practicing for a Christmas program to be given December 22.

HAZEL O. FORD.

Dunn Center, North Dakota

The Saints are zealously endeavoring to carry on the gospel work and can see decided progress since the Herald last heard from us. The Sunday school is increasing with interest among the scholars. They prepared a thanksgiving program which they were invited to give at the home of Sister Archie Moffett on Thanksgiving Day. All brought lunch and ate together; then the program was given in the afternoon. Games followed. Everyone enjoyed a happy day, and a vote of thanks was given Brother and Sister Moffett for their hospitality.

The Sunday school is preparing a Christmas program which promises to be good. It will be given the evening of December 24.

The branch was favored September 30 and October 1 by a visit from Elder C. J. Smith and Apostle J. F. Garver. Preaching services each evening were well attended. On the afternoon of October 1, one candidate, Mr. Ollie N. Prolow, of Taylor, North Dakota, was baptized, the confirmation preceding the evening sermon.

Brother and Sister G. C. Adams and family are back for the winter months. Brother Adams was elected second assistant Sunday school superintendent, and we are now assured there will be some one to carry on the Sunday school during the coldest part of the winter when those out of town are snowbound.

Thus far we have been favored by the weather. Services have been regularly conducted except on two or three Sundays. The prayers of the Saints will help us to put forth every effort to do all we can to carry the gospel to our neighbors and friends here.

Carthage, Missouri

Patriarch and Sister J. A. Gunsolley made Carthage a visit on December 4. Carthage members were glad to have their help for eleven days. A number of patriarchal blessings were given to the young people by Brother Gunsolley.

Sunday, December 7, was home-coming day in Carthage Branch, and the Saints felt fortunate in having Brother Gunsolley as the speaker. A basket dinner was served at noon. A program was given in the afternoon. We were much pleased to have a large number of members from Webb City Branch including the branch president, Brother Ira Waldron, and family, with us.

December 13 Sister Clara Hobbs entertained Brother and Sister Gunsolley, Branch President Van Talcott, wife, and family, and members of the young people's and intermediate classes.

Carthage members bade Brother and Sister Gunsolley good-bye Monday, December 15.

Seiling, Oklahoma

On December 1 Patriarch Ammon White began a series of meetings at the church here which lasted for nine days. There was good interest, and the sermons were appreciated by the Saints. As a result a number have filed their inventories. Several received patriarchal blessings.

Brother White left with the best wishes of the Saints. He will be welcome any time he returns.

E. L. BALLINGER.

Stone Church

For a week Christmas festivities have occupied the attention of the people of Independence, and now they are thinking of the new year. Home from college have come the young people happy to meet again with friends and former schoolmates. The evenings have been crowded with programs, parties, and fireside visits, and the Sundays have been a joy to all.

Every department of the church school appropriately observed Christmas. One of the chief attractions was the story of the birth of Jesus given in pageant form by the junior young people on Christmas Eve. Once again the main room of the Stone Church presented scenes of Bethlehem and the hillside in Judea. A beautiful musical background was given the production by a chorus of girls directed by Sister Bertha Burgess, a group of thirty-two carol singers, and by Sister Louise Lewis at the organ. Eighty-five boys and girls participated in the giving of the play, directed by Helen Page Brackenbury, and in the music.

Carol singing was an activity for groups of all ages on Christmas Eve, and some of the homes visited were those of President Elbert A. Smith, Pastor John F. Sheehy, Elders J. M. Terry, S. A. Thiel, H. W. Harder, and Brother James Armour.

Apostle J. F. Curtis was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning, basing his remarks on scripture readings of the Christmas theme, and also looking forward to the New Year.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Evan A. Fry, sang two anthems: "Psalm 150," by Cesar Franck; and "I waited for the Lord," by Mendelssohn, with Lilly Belle Allen, soprano, and Alice Mae Burgess, contralto, singing the duet. Elizabeth Smith played two harp solos. Robert Miller was at the organ and played a special offertory number. George Miller played piano accompaniment for the musical service. Elder D. O. Cato presided, and was assisted by Elder C. B. Hartshorn, pastor of Des Moines, Iowa, Branch.

"We will go forward with Christ" was the theme with which the junior young people in their own worship service closed the year. During the period of meditation the pastor summed up the "Adventures" the boys and girls have had with Christ during the year—adventures in loyalty, in truth, in gratitude, in love, and in peace—and then introduced as speaker President F. M. McDowell. It was the first time since Brother McDowell's return from abroad that this group of young people have heard him in their own service, and his talk on the morning's theme was given excellent attention. As the climax to a number of songs about Zion sung by the congregation, Brother Albert Brackenbury sang as a solo "Onward to Zion," Robert Miller accompanying at the piano. Willa Mae Redfield, pianist for the morning, played an offertory solo. In the stand Howard Cook assisted the pastor.

The senior young people in their afternoon meeting listened to a lecture by A. Max Carmichael, professor at Ball State Teachers' College in Indiana, and to music by an instrumental quartet and a male quartet.

The third of Brother F. M. McDowell's series of Sunday evening lectures, "Challenging events in the story of Jesus," brought to the church a large congregation. Passages were read from the scriptures to challenge men to give their best for Christ, and the speaker's review of portions of the Passion Play was splendidly illustrated by pictures of scenes from the play. The musical program given by the Wadema Choral Club, directed by Paul N. Craig, harmonized well with the lecture, and two solos proved most acceptable, "A new commandment give I unto you," by LeRoy Smith, baritone, and "Open the gates of the temple," by Ina Hattey, soprano. Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge and was assisted by Elder S. A. Thiel.

A pre-Christmas wedding occurred December 20, when Miss Alice Seedorff, of Independence, became the bride of Matthew Rawlings, recently of New York City, at the bride's home in Independence. Elder John Blackmore officiated in the ceremony. During the service Gomer Watson played on the violin "Love's old sweet song." The Christmas candles on the altar were lighted by Miss Myrtle Grapes. A small group of close friends witnessed the ceremony. The bridal couple are taking a honeymoon trip by motor including New York City, Washington, District of Columbia, and other eastern points, as well as places in Minnesota and Iowa. They will be at home in Independence about January 15, at 1117 West White Oak.

Second Church

The first of several activities sponsored by various groups during the Christmas season was a bazaar and supper at the church on Friday night, December 19. Sister E. E. Weir's class sponsored the bazaar. This was followed by "Light House Nan," a three-act play presented by ten intermediate boys and girls. The production showed a great deal of work under the direction of Lora Weir.

Church school on Sunday, December 21, carried out the theme of the season in the choir music and a story read by Lucile Street. A vocal solo was sung by Arthur Koehler. President F. M. McDowell delivered a wonderful sermon on "This man Jesus."

The evening service was carefully planned by Vera Redfield, choir director. It consisted of solos by Dorothy Peek, Sister Mary Edmunds, and Arthur Koehler, an organ duet by Sunshine Beck and Mrs. Grabske, a reading by Blaine Bender, and a musical number by the quartet and the choir.

Christmas Eve marked the fiftieth wedding anniversary of Brother and Sister J. T. Curtis. The event was celebrated by the reenactment of the ceremony. Preceding this was a play, "In the light of the star," written by Blevins Davis, English instructor at the high school. He brought eight of his pupils to the church for the presentation. Music for the wedding was furnished by Sister Gladys Inman on the organ. The ladies' quartet, Katherin Inman, Amy Deming, Grace Nave, and Sister Floyd Mortimore, sang "Silver threads among the gold." Sisters C. R. Curtis and I. M. Curtis, daughters-in-law who live at Atherton, sang "Love's old sweet song." Mildred Fulk, granddaughter of Brother and Sister Curtis, also sang. The double-ring ceremony was read by Elder Delbert Whiting. The bridal procession was composed of members of the family and their children. The church was appropriately decorated in white and gold. All of the members of the congregation at Second Church and many friends of other sections joined in congratulations for fifty years of happiness and the wish for many more.

The last Sunday of 1930 began with an eight o'clock prayer meeting and good attendance at Sunday school. Apostle J. A. Gillen was the speaker at eleven o'clock. Brother Gillen delivered a good sermon with characteristic vigor and sincerity. Elder R. D. Weaver preached at the evening hour.

Enoch Hill

The New Year was given consideration at all the Sunday services on Enoch Hill. Elder R. E. Davey, one of the active missionaries of the church, spoke to the Saints in the morning, picturing to us some of the opportunities of 1931 in the delineation of his theme. Downstairs the junior service was in charge of John Quick and Sisters Charles Warren and Nellie Kramer. Parts were taken by several boys and girls, a story was told by Nellie Kramer, and the New Year's sermonet was by E. H. McKean.

In the evening Patriarch Ammon White delivered a good sermon.

The principal Christmas program of the branch was given Tuesday evening, December 23, when special music was contributed by the choir and there were stereopticon pictures on the life of Christ shown and explained by Elder C. E. Miller. A playlet was presented by the children, "Elsie's Christmas Eve," under the direction of Brother Charles Warren, director of the church school, and there was an appropriate reading by Sister S. A. Thiel.

Decatur, Illinois

1174 West King Street

December 22.—We are happy to report to the many readers of the Herald that after a series of meetings held the first part of this month by Elder H. V. Minton for a period of two weeks, he was able to baptize four splendid people into the kingdom. Others are much interested. The branch has accepted, and adopted the new church school program, and a full set of officers has been selected for the year. The Saints have taken on new zeal and seem to sense more fully the great responsibility that rests on them. They are humbly and happily carrying on this work.

Holdenville, Oklahoma

Elder William Bath came to Holdenville December 3 and preached every night except Saturday until December 14. His sermons were well attended and much enjoyed. As he spoke he was clothed with the power of the Spirit. May the Spirit of God continue with him wherever he goes. He plans to return to this branch next summer to conduct another tent meeting. We are praying that his efforts to teach the gospel will prove fruitful.

E. T. BROUGHTON.

Toronto, Canada

The long-looked-for event is about to happen. The opening of the new church in Toronto is arranged for Sunday, January 18, 1931. We expect a large attendance. President F. M. Smith, Apostle R. S. Budd, Patriarch John F. Martin, Elders B. H. Doty, James Pycocock, William I. Fligg, and many other general church officers are to be with us. This is to be one of the outstanding events in the history of the church in Toronto. Do not miss it.

Conference Minutes

ROCK ISLAND.—District conference assembled in conference session at 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon, October 25, at Davenport. Elder E. R. Davis called the meeting to order with the usual opening. It was voted that the district president associated with M. H. Siegfried and J. A. Gardner preside over the conference. Reports were received from district officers. Brother Davis gave a very complete report, listing 15 sermons, 7 illustrated lectures, and 34 lectures in institute work at the 15 branches visited. Counselors Edward Jones and C. A. Beil each reported six visits to branches in the interests of the new plan for Religious Education. The statistical report showed a net gain of 23, with 24 baptisms, and 9 deaths noted, making our present membership 1,635. District secretary listed 57 pieces of mail and a telegram sent out at a total cost of $1.92. District treasurer and bishop's agent, L. A. White, noted $1,828.04 received in tithes and offerings for the four months ending September 30; total receipts for the district budget for 1930 since January 1, are $209.33 with expenditures of $123.16. Balance on hand, including $278.08 in the building and loan fund, equals $553.98. Acting upon the recommendations given in President E. R. Davis's report, the following actions were approved by vote: 1. That the district budget remain the same as for 1930, totaling $330, with appropriations and apportionments remaining unchanged except that the Department of Religious Education receives the combined amounts formerly apportioned to the Sunday School, Department of Recreation and Expression, and Women. 2. That the district presidency be authorized to use the building and loan fund in helping any branch which, in their judgment, needs help. 3. That a supervisor of Harvest Home Festival activities be elected to cooperate with the branch supervisors in arranging for a suitable contribution from each branch and an attractive booth to represent this district next year at the Auditorium. And that each branch supervisor, who shall be elected at the branch annual meeting or next regular business meeting, be authorized to choose two assistants. The purpose of the branch organization is to begin the first of the year to arrange for the participation of the branch in the next Harvest Home Festival; to encourage those who have gardens to set aside some ground for the raising of produce for the above purpose, and to encourage the production of handwork, or other offerings for the same purpose. 4. In order that the Rock Island District might be among the progressive districts of the church, this conference shall elect a district publicity agent whose duty it shall be to work with the branch publicity agents and branch presidents. The purpose is to arrange suitable programs and publicity for observance of each special event, such as Rally Day, Decision Day, Children's Day, Thanksgiving, Christmas Offering, Sacrifice Week, Prayer Week, etc. The district publicity agent will be expected to cooperate with the district presidency, and work on each special event should begin at least one month before the date of observance. 5. That a district auditor be elected whose business it shall be to audit the books and accounts of the district treasurer prior to each district conference. 6. That the district secretary supply each of the following with a copy of the conference minutes as soon as convenient after the close of the conference: Branch presidents, district officers, the First Presidency, the Presiding Bishopric, the members of the Twelve in charge of the field and the Saints' Herald. 7. That the matter of purchasing the new Hymnal in one hundred lots be left in the hands of the district publicity agent, that he may secure as many orders as possible so that we may be able to take advantage of the special rates. 8. That we approve the recommendation of Brother Davis and of the Matherville Branch, that Brother John Lindburg be ordained to the office of elder. 9. That, for the present, the work of the Department of Religious Education be handled conjointly by the members of the district presidency, as it has been since last district conference. 10. That each member of the priesthood within the jurisdiction of the district be requested to make a yearly report of his ministerial activities to the district president on or before the last day of January. This report shall cover the year ending December 31. Since Brother Davis reported a deficit of over $60 in his personal accounts, it was voted that he be reimbursed from the district fund, as this seems ample to care for the need. By a blanket motion, all district officers were reinstated for the following year. District appointees were also reapproved, which makes the list as follows: District president, E. R. Davis; first counselor, Edward Jones; second counselor, C. A. Beil; district secretary, Winifred Stiegel; treasurer and bishop's agent, L. A. White; historian, Sister L. A. White; missionary, Amos T. Higdon; chorister, Sister Orpha Holmes. For the new offices provided by the conference, the following were elected: District auditor, L. W. Stiegel; supervisor of Harvest Home Festival, L. A. White; budget committee, district presidency and district treasurer; district publicity agent, L. W. Stiegel. It was moved that the conference should stand adjourned at the close of the Sunday night service. Approved.

SOUTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.—District conference convened the morning of November 1 at Springerton, Illinois. The invocation was by J. F. Garver. Action was taken placing Brother Garver and the district presidency in charge of the conference. Charles Wesner acted as secretary until Sister Choate arrived. The president was given power to complete the organization by appointment. Then time was given to talks by John F. Garver, Virgil Sheppard, Herman O. Plumb, and R. L. Fulk. The benediction was by E. Slover, W. M. Clements; Ernest Roberson; Priests M. W. Brown, E. W. McKenney, and Ancil Burroughs. Brother Garver was in charge of the election of officers: District President, R. L. Fulk (elected unanimously); Sister Myrtle Choate was chosen to succeed herself as district secretary; bishop's agent, Charles Wesner (sustained); counselors to the president, Charles Wesner and Ernest Roberson (unanimously retained). It was moved and approved that the district presidency care for the district organization of the church school. Action was also taken that the district authorize the expenditure of money for the making of benches to seat the district tent. The conference was well attended, and the good Spirit prevailed. It adjourned to meet at the call of the presidency.

District Officers' Meeting

To them were born five children, one of whom, a baby daughter, preceded the mother in death many years ago. Mrs. Harlow was baptized at Brockton by Elder Frank M. Sheehy March 1, 1896. Besides her husband she leaves her father, Elisha Beach, two daughters: Mrs. Vivian B. Walker, Easton, Massachusetts; Arvesta I. Harlow, of Avon; two sons, Elmer C., West Bridgewater, and Merrill A. Harlow, Avon. Although her health has for some time been impaired, the seriousness of her condition was not apparent until about three weeks before her passing. Her death was a shock to members of Brockton Branch. The funeral occurred November 30, H. A. Chelline preaching the sermon. Interment was at South Street Cemetery, Bridgewater. The deceased was a niece of Joseph and Emma Burton.
