Distribution of May Baptisms

The distribution of the 143 baptisms during the month of May is given in a letter from Carroll L. Olson to President Frederick M. Smith. The Herald is giving its readers this interesting information. If your branch or district appears at any disadvantage, let your effort be to overcome the handicap and present another condition for future months. "Men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause," and none is better than presenting the claims of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Brother Olson's Letter

During the month of May a total of 143 baptisms was reported. Of this total 2 were from the Isle of Pines, 39 from the stakes and center places, and 102 from branches and nonresident groups outside the stakes.

The following branches, outside of the stakes, had 3 baptisms or more: Archbald, Pennsylvania, 8; Brockton, Massachusetts, 7; Bisbee, Arizona, 5; Tulare, California, 5; Attleboro, Massachusetts, 4; Los Angeles, California, 4; Fresno, California, 3; Ludington, Michigan, 3; Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 3.

In addition to the above, twenty-six branches reported 1

baptism each, and fifteen branches reported 2 baptisms each. Four nonresident groups reported 1 baptism each, and one nonresident group reported 2 baptisms.

The stakes and districts reporting baptisms, together with the number for each, are as follows: Holden Stake, 16; Kansas City Stake, 12; City of Independence, 8; Far West Stake, 2; Lamoni Stake, 1; Central Michigan District, 3; Central Oklahoma, 1; Chatham District, 1; Clinton District, 1; Des Moines District, 1; Eastern Colorado, 2; Eastern Oklahoma, 2; Florida, 1; Idaho, 1; Kirtland, 1; London District, 1; Southern New England, 11; Mobile District, 2; Nauvoo District, 4; New York District, 2; New York and Philadelphia, 11; Northeastern Illinois, 1; Northeastern Kansas, 1; Northern California, 12; Northern Michigan, 2; Northern Saskatchewan, 1; Owen Sound, 1; Pittsburgh District, 1; Rock Island District, 2; Saint Louis District, 6; Southeastern Illinois District, 1; Southern California, 10; Southern Indiana, 1; Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana, 1; Southern Nebraska, 1; Southern Ohio, 2; Toronto District, 1; Western Michigan, 4; Western Montana, 2.

Missouri State Fair for 1930

The dates for the thirtieth annual session of the Missouri State Fair have been selected and advertised as August 16 to 23; eight days. The little Missouri city, Sedalia, less than ninety miles southeast of Independence, is the established home of the exposition.

No better introduction to the State Fair is needed than the page of its catalog written by Henry S. Caulfield, Governor. From this page I quote:

The Missouri State Fair is an idealized cross-section of Missouri. The 236-acre reservation on which the State's $1,750,000 Fair plant is located becomes a complete representation of the rich agricultural and industrial resources of a great State with an area of 68,735 square miles. Here Missouri is summarized; here is the essence of a vast State condensed into limits of easy walking distance. The four corners of the map are gathered together, for every county—from Pemisicot to Atchison, from McDonald to Clark—sends a representative.

And it is Missouri at her best that State Fair presents. Every man—whether farmer, manufacturer, artist or scientist—brings to the common meeting ground, provided at Sedalia, the finest product of his calling.

To understand and appreciate Missouri, one must necessarily see the State Fair. It is here that the Missourian learns, if he did not know before, why it is that he is proud of his citizenship.

The Missouri State Fair specializes exhibits of many kinds: Agriculture and animal husbandry, mines and forestry and education taking the lead.

A prolonged visit to a State Fair like the one at Sedalia, or some other of the Middle West agricultural States, furnishes a chance to broaden one's education. Such a visit is a necessity to the boy or girl of limited means who desires and needs to know his State. It is a necessity to the active man of middle age who is prosecuting any business of more than purely local patronage and service, and to every agriculturist, horticulturist, or fancier in any line of animal husbandry. And there is no better place for those who have retired from active life to spend a pleasant day or two.

Sacrifice Week

Sacrifice week as a spiritual experience will bring its maximum of blessings and spiritual development only when we actually consider this experience as our opportunity and not altogether as the responsibility of others.

The period of special sacrifice, June 22 to 29, is a time for us to sense our responsibility. We should pause and meditate upon the needs of the church in relation to its expanding missionary program. Out of this period of meditation and prayer there will evolve an eagerness to help, a willingness to share, and a determination to live up to our covenant to serve God to the best of our ability. If every Saint will participate and choose definite ways in which to sacrifice, it will undoubtedly center our thoughts upon the church and upon the purpose of sacrifice week.

By joining the church we have made it our church, but it will continue to be our church only to the extent that we completely identify ourselves with its mission, ideals, and purpose. What parent will not sacrifice for a needy child? Who among us with faith in God believes that he will not minister to our needs? and what Latter Day Saint once having a testimony regarding the Restoration will not only be willing but eager and determined to make a personal sacrifice that the gospel of good news may be spread abroad?

This is our church, and our loyalty to it can not but stimulate us to make a sacrifice offering to be used for the support of missionary work. If we owe tithing, our contribution should be given through that channel. If not, or in addition thereto, every one should make some offering as the measure of his ability and his willingness to help build and extend the kingdom of God.

Church Bonds Are Steady

In these days of destructive declines and intensive fluctuations in the market of stocks and bonds, there are some who read these pages whose attention should be called to the fact that church bonds are steady. Their value is not fluctuating. Their possessors are not feverish with excitement. Sleep has not and will not desert the room where lies the man who has purchased with his ready money a few hundred or a few thousand dollars of church bonds. Peace and security are his.

Church Bonds

THE desirability of church bonds has gained church-wide recognition because 5% plus safety meets two vital requirements of the investor. The consideration which prompts people in the selection of their investments are:

Safety of principal.

A good interest return.

Prompt and unfailing payment of principal and interest.

In these days when stocks and bonds of various kinds are uncertain and questionable, and when the future in many lines of business seems to be doubtful, it is a good time to invest your savings in church bonds, which are backed by the integrity of a hundred thousand people in addition to meeting the above requirements.

From every point of view they are a good investment, safe for you and a help to your church. No one who ever invested a dollar with the church ever lost a penny. Are you willing to invest your money where you have intrusted your hope of eternal salvation?

Church bonds are offered in denominations of $25, $50, $100, $200, and $1,000. Any denomination of these bonds may be bought on payments, if desired. Send orders for bonds to the Presiding Bishopric, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. Additional information furnished on request.

Significance of the Patriarchal Blessing

By Walter H. Cryer

Throughout the period of my association with several patriarchs, as a stenographic assistant, I have been caused to see the need of a continuous attempt being made to educate the covenanted children of God to an understanding and a better appreciation of that holy ordinance known as the patriarchal blessing.

While many of us fully recognize that the giving of patriarchal blessings is but one of the many sacred responsibilities contingent upon the evangelical order in the church, we feel that an endeavor to evaluate this particular and peculiar ordinance would not be amiss.

To be specific, the responsibility of bestowing patriarchal blessings is indeed a serious one, as will be partly seen by the following citation from Doctrine and Covenants 107: 29:

... that whoever he blesses shall be blessed, and whoever he curseth shall be cursed; that whatsoever he shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever he shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

At places of reunions, conferences, or other gatherings of the Saints for spiritual revival, whenever there is a patriarch present he is kept constantly busy in the bestowal of spiritual blessings. Altogether too frequently, however, the casual manner in which the approach is made by the person seeking a blessing is a source of worry to the patriarch, and causes a question to arise in his mind. He wonders just how he shall endeavor to preface his remarks so as to cause the candidate to come to a keener consciousness of the significance of the attempt that is to be made to enter into divine intercourse with almighty God, the Father of light. For indeed the patriarch, above everyone else, knows from experience that the place whereon he stands is veritably holy ground, and that the material aspects of life must be relegated to the background to make way for the Spirit of God if he is to succeed in transmitting the blessing God designs should come to his child. Hence, all requests for patriarchal blessings should be made only after prayerful consideration and a continuous endeavor to adjust our mental faculties to the point where we shall not only recognize but heed the promptings of the Spirit as they shall come to us.

On one occasion a young man who was sincerely desirous of receiving his patriarchal blessing hesitated and demurred for some time, fearing that God would lay bare the sins of the past in the way of a rebuke, or an open reprimand. This prompts us to emphasize with all the powers of our being that God is not an accusing spirit. Indeed, to the contrary, he is too wise, too loving, to stoop to the level of our human way of meting out justice. If God sees fit to especially admonish or perhaps chasten his children, he does it in such a way as to prick our consciences so as to make us understand his purposes, and unknown to the instrumentality he uses.

At times the spirit of promise is exercised to a great extent in the bestowal of patriarchal blessings. We would, however, remind our readers that when such blessings are promised they are always conditional, contingent upon our faith, and our endeavors to make possible the fulfillment of our righteous desires.

In the beginning God gave to man his agency. Today man still retains his free agency. To the end of time the human race will be endowed with the right to choose. Therefore, God's promises to us, whether individually or collectively as a church, can only be conditional. They can never be otherwise.

The supreme beauty that comes to the recipient of a patriarchal blessing is always and forever found in the peaceful spirit of communion that permeates the consciousness and quickens the intelligence. This comes as a reward for diligent preparation upon the part of the persons involved in the sacred ordinance.

God loves his children. He is always reaching out through his ordained channels to redeem the wayward and bring them back to the fold. He is ever ready to counsel, by the promptings of his Spirit, in the things we should do, and the manner in which we should do them. Quite often, however, God looking down through the stream of time is able to see our peculiar needs ahead of our present comprehension, and so he imparts that counsel which, if heeded and prayerfully applied, will keep our feet from slipping. Such is the watchcare of our heavenly Father akin, yet by far superior, to the shepherding of wise and loving earthly parents.

In the sight of God we are all children, prodigal sons and daughters, prone to stray from our Father's household into forbidden paths. Yet in the long run, though perchance our vitality has been exhausted by the doing of the worthless things of life, we find our Father's arms still outstretched, for he is ever willing to help us make the adjustment.

Let us endeavor to come to a full appreciation of our patriarchal blessings, and of all God's sacraments, for only through the gates of understanding can we enter into that abundant life, aspired to by many, achieved by few.

The Jewish Sabbath, or the Lord's Day

By C. B. Hartshorn

Origin of the Sabbath

When Jesus "came to his own" race, he found them well established in the observance of the weekly day of rest. Its history ran back over thirteen centuries or more.

While the Scriptures tell us that God ended the creation of heaven and earth on the seventh day and therefore he rested, blessed, and sanctified it (Genesis 2: 2, 3), we find no evidence of its being observed by Adam's posterity till the exodus from Egypt, when the covenant was given at Mount Horeb.

This covenant (the ten commandments) contains the first specific injunction to the race to "keep the sabbath day" (the fourth commandment) on record. And "the Lord made not this covenant with our fathers, but with us, even us, who are all of us here alive this day." (Deuteronomy 5: 3.)

It is significant that of all the historians and prophets in Israel, from this time down to the exile in the sixth century B. C., only two mention the sabbath. (See Amos 8: 5, and 2 Kings 4: 23.)

The Meaning of the Jewish Sabbath

It was to be a memorial day. "Remember that thou wast a servant in the land of Egypt, and that the Lord thy God brought thee out with a stretched out arm; therefore the Lord thy God commandeth thee to keep the sabbath day."—Deuteronomy 5: 15.

The selection of the seventh day (Saturday) has its basis in the example of the Creator, who ended his work and rested on the seventh day. (Genesis 2: 2, 3; Exodus 20: 11.)

The word sabbath probably comes from the Babylonian, meaning to cease, or desist; hence cessation from labor is the most conspicuous feature. Even the servants and beasts of burden were to cease labor on the seventh day. (Deuteronomy 5: 12-14.) A violation of the code, such as gathering sticks on the sabbath (Numbers 15: 32-35), was punishable by death. A group of Jewish soldiers, in the time of the Maccabees, who were attacked on the sabbath, perished by the sword rather than desecrate their holy day. As their enemies took advantage of this frequently, it necessitated a more liberal interpretation, which permitted defensive warfare on the sabbath to save them from extermination.

The Covenant Fulfilled

The Christian era was ushered in by the pronouncement of its leader, "I came not to destroy the law but to fulfill it." A few years later one of its chief exponents likened the law to a worn-out slave whose duty it was to bring children to the schoolmaster. "For," said this writer to the Hebrews, "the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did." (Hebrews 7: 19.)

Peter refers to this covenant as "a yoke which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear." (Acts 15: 10.) It was not destroyed by Christ so far as its moral precepts were concerned. These were restated and made a part of the gospel covenant. The law was fulfilled when Jesus gave it a larger and a spiritual significance.

Jesus' Attitude on Sabbath Keeping

Occasionally Jesus or his disciples were challenged on their failure to respect the Jewish customs of observing the sabbath. His ministry of healing was condemned by the Pharisees on the grounds that it was working on the sabbath. Luke tells of the ruler of the synagogue who witnessed the healing of a woman bound of an infirmity eighteen years. "He said to the people, There are six days in which men ought to work; in them come therefore and be healed, and not on the sabbath day." (Luke 13: 10-15.) But the Master pointed out that just as they would loose an ox from the stall for watering on the sabbath day, so had he loosed this woman from Satan after eighteen years of bondage. "For," said he, "it is lawful to do good on the sabbath days." (Matthew 12: 12.)

As his disciples plucked the barley while passing through the fields on the sabbath day, they were again brought into conflict with the Pharisees for doing that which was not lawful. But Jesus defended them, saying, "The sabbath was made for man and not man for the sabbath." (Mark 2: 27.) But the scripture leaves no doubt that Jesus put human interests above the legal technicalities of sabbath keeping when he healed the cripple at the pool of Bethesda and commanded him to "rise, take up thy bed, and walk." (John 2: 2-13.) By thus directing the carrying of a burden on the seventh day, he put himself in conflict with another of the Jewish laws of sabbath observance. Yes, "the Son of Man is Lord also of the sabbath." (Mark 2: 28.)

Origin of the Lord's Day

Jesus, being a Jew and reared under Jewish customs, it is quite natural that he would observe the sabbath as a day of rest and worship. But all days were holy days to Jesus. He was of the group of whom Paul wrote, who "esteemeth every day alike." (Romans 14: 5.) His going frequently to the synagogue on the sabbath does not give it any special authority as a day to be observed by his followers. It was simply a day which best suited his purpose to worship and teach.

Then came the closing scene: "Father, I have finished the work thou didst give me to do." (John 17: 4.) A new covenant is soon to be sealed in his blood. The old law was soon to be fulfilled. It was finished on the cross on Golgotha. But a better, a more glorious day than ever commemorated the crossing of the Red Sea soon broke upon the world. "For very early in the morning, the first day of the week" (Mark 16: 2; Luke 24: 1), the visitors to the tomb found that he had risen as he promised—on the third day. "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" was the inquiry put by the angels who were by the empty tomb, to these early morning visitors.

Yes; the hope of all ages had triumphed over the grave. Thus Sunday, the first day of the week, became the Lord's day.

The Christian Day of Worship

It was quite the thing to be expected that the day of Christ's resurrection should be observed with worship. And so we find the saints together on the eighth day after Jesus' deliverance from the tomb, and Christ came into their midst. (John 20: 26.)

On another occasion, on the first day of the week, we learn "the disciples came together to break bread, and Paul preached." (Acts 20: 7.) Again on Sunday the Corinthian saints were to make offerings as they came together. (1 Corinthians 16: 2.) John speaks of "the Lord's day." "I was in the spirit on the 'Lord's day.'" (Revelation 1: 10.)

That this custom was recognized and well established in the early Christian church is also supported by such early writers as Ignatius. (110 A. D.) "If then they who walked in ancient customs came to a new hope, no longer living for the Sabbath, but for the Lord's Day on which also our life sprang up through him—how shall we be able to live without him." Barnabas (120 A. D.), Justin Martyn (150 A. D.), Dionysius (170 A. D.), and others.

The edict of Constantine (321 A. D.) did not change the day of worship, as is popularly supposed. It gave legal protection to a day long recognized as a holiday (holy day) and applied only to city workers, judges, and craftsmen who were required to rest on Sunday.

Among Jewish Christians, both Saturday and Sunday were observed for a long time. But as the world-wide mission of the gospel became more apparent, and the distinction between Jew and Christian became more acute, Sabbath keeping became discarded. (See H. D. B., The Sabbath, p. 139, and H. D. A. C., vol. 2, p. 424.)

Proper Observance of Lord's Day

When the New Testament writers refer to the "sabbath" they mean the seventh day. It never refers to Sunday. There is no record of any writer calling Sunday "the sabbath" until about 800 A. D. when Charlemagne applied the fourth commandment to the Lord's Day.

The New Testament reiterates all of the ten commandments except the fourth—to keep the sabbath day holy.

In the summary of the law given by Jesus to the rich young ruler (Luke 18: 20), and in that given by Paul (Romans 13: 9), no mention is made of the fourth commandment.

The weekly day of rest and worship for Christians must stand upon Christian principles and not upon an "imperfect" law.

Paul wrote the Colossian saints, "Let no man judge you—in respect to an holy day, or a new moon, or of the sabbath days which are a shadow of things to come." (Colossians 2: 16, 17.)

The Puritan "Sabbath," with its exactitudes based on the observance of the fourth commandment and applied to Sunday, is not consistent. Jesus' principle seems to be that the day was made for the highest good for men. It should be viewed from its social and spiritual effects, not legal aspects. "The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life."

Experience has shown that production is most efficient with a weekly day of rest. God sanctioned it in the beginning. Man needs time for spiritual culture. There is no more appropriate time than the first day of the week—the day of our Lord's resurrection.

The church has a great part to play both in reducing crime and in reclaiming the delinquent. Hers is the power of the deepest of all influences, the experience of God in the soul. Her greatest opportunity, of course, is with the children and young people, cutting off crime at the source. If every child were in a competent Sunday school and a good church club, a great falling off in crime might be expected to ensue. But the churches should also be at work in every jail and every prison, with experienced persons in charge. The church, if aroused and using its resources to the full, could single-handed arouse public opinion in the several States to the enormity of the present jail and prison situation, and could turn the public mind to redemptive ideas.—Federal Council Bulletin.

The Case of the Book of Mormon

By J. H. N. Jones

Ruskin said: "The more I think of it, I find this conclusion more impressed upon me, that the greatest thing a human soul ever does in this world is to see something and tell what it saw in a plain way."

The Centennial Conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints begins today in their great Auditorium in Independence, Missouri. The church was organized one hundred years ago at Fayette, Seneca County, New York, on the 6th day of April, 1830, with six members. Joseph Smith was directed by revelation as to the exact day to organize. Possibly no other church in existence can trace its origin to direct revelation. I desire to tell "in a plain way," as Ruskin says, my version of that movement.

As I see it, this work of Restoration has three great outstanding phases of divine purpose and human achievement; three towering mountain peaks of human history and divine plan. These stand out distinctly from all other church movements in history excepting only, and then only partially, the founding of the primitive Christian church.

The first point is the discovery of the plates containing the Nephite and Jaredite records called the Book of Mormon, their translation and publication, including all the heavenly visitations associated with that wonderful achievement. The second is the restoration of the priesthood, Melchisedec and Aaronic, with the organization of the church upon the apostolic plan, with all its gifts and blessings as of old. The third is the revealment of the place and plan of Zion, including social ideals which if applied would solve the world's greatest problems and usher in a condition of peace unknown since the city of Enoch was taken away from the earth.

I shall particularly deal with the first of these three great events.

From the standpoint of historical precedence and vital importance in this great movement, the revelation of the Book of Mormon ranks first. It is the main pillar which supports the whole superstructure of what is termed Mormonism. Prove that false and all else, so far as authority and distinctiveness are concerned, must tumble like a "house of cards" before a gale.

Conversely, if the Book of Mormon is actually what its friends claim it to be, then it is obvious that Joseph Smith is one of the greatest, if not the greatest prophet the world has ever seen. If true, it follows that the latter-day Restoration is veritably the "marvelous work and wonder" visualized by the Prophet Isaiah, and as such should be accepted by all Christian men and women in the same spirit of faith as the Bible. If true, then God has spoken, and that which followed, such as the organization of the church and the revelations concerning the founding of Zion or the building up of the kingdom of God, were and are true also.

What does the Book of Mormon claim to be? or what did its translator claim and what do its contents reveal? On the first page, or flyleaf, we get a description thus:

"It is a record of the people of Nephi and also of the Lamanites their brethren and also of the people of Jared who came from the tower of Babel." It was discovered in the Hill Cumorah, New York, by Joseph Smith under the direction of an angel who said his name was Moroni, formerly a man who when on earth had deposited the records where found. The means of translation were with the plates, an instrument called the Urim and Thummim.

The record tells us that this continent was peopled by successive migrations from the Old World, who built and inhabited the great ruined cities of Central and South America which are today among the wonders of the archæological world. The first people spoken of are the Nephites, who under the Prophet Lehi left Jerusalem, the Holy City of the Jews, and migrated to this land, America, known to them as a promised land, choice above all others. From the first page of the Book of Mormon we learn that these people left the land of their fathers about six hundred years before Christ, during the reign of Zedekiah, bringing with them their sacred records, which included the prophecies of Isaiah and Jeremiah and a history of the Jews from the beginning. Our first reason for believing the book to be true is that it historically dovetails with the Bible.

The Book of Mormon says that in the reign of Zedekiah Lehi warned Jerusalem of impending destruction by the Babylonians because of their wickedness if they did not repent. But the record says they "mocked the messengers" and misused the prophets until the wrath of God was poured out upon them. Lehi and family, comprising about seven people, left the doomed city, being directed of God, and wandering through the wilderness, finally came to the seashore and built a ship, crossed the Pacific Ocean, and after many days reached the promised land—America—landing on the west coast of South America, about Chile or Peru.

Turning now to our Bible, in 2 Chronicles, chapter 36, we find the history of Zedekiah's reign and wickedness, also of the coming of prophets and the treatment meted out to them. The words are so closely identical that they are either deliberately copied by the Book of Mormon writer or the books are companion histories. It says, "But they mocked the messengers of God and despised his words and misused his prophets until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, and there was no remedy. Therefore, he brought the king of the Chaldeans," etc.

This dovetailing of the two books proves one of three things: Firstly, both books are true and companion histories; secondly, the latter book may be copied; thirdly, the agreement might be accidental.

To be accidental is almost beyond belief. To be copied and palmed off as true would be evidence of considerable Biblical knowledge, associated with a spirit of deceit and fraud quite unusual in such a student. The almost irresistible conclusion is that both are true histories and therefore the Bible being a sacred record and the word of God, the Book of Mormon is also true and the word of God. This conclusion is made stronger by the fact that Jeremiah the prophet was present on the occasion of the warning and captivity and wrote in his book the happenings. He wrote: "O vine of Sibmah, I will weep for thee with the weeping of Jazer: thy plants are gone over the sea" (39: 32) and also by Isaiah writing of the same event: "The Lords of the heathen have broken down the principal plants thereof, they are come even unto Jazer, they wandered through the wilderness, her branches are stretched out, they are gone over the sea." Nebuchadnezzar was one of the greatest of the lords of the heathen; he took captive the Jews to Babylon, but some of her "principal plants" or families went over the sea. The Book of Mormon is a history of that branch that came to America. The Book of Mormon says that the families of Lehi and Ishmael "wandered in the wilderness" for many days before building a ship and going over the sea. After their arrival on this continent, they divided into hostile factions and became known as Nephites and Lamanites, the names being derived from their first leaders. The Nephites were the more godly and civilized; the Lamanites wild and ferocious, of whom the Indian is a descendant.

Upon one of their expeditions a party of Nephites found the records of a people who had preceded them. One of their kings, being a seer, was able to read the record, and it was ascertained that these last mentioned people now extinct had come from the tower of Babel about two thousand years before Christ. This also agrees with the Bible and forms the second link in the chain of historical evidences.

In Genesis 11 we have a brief record of the scattering from Babel and the confusion of tongues. The people of Babel said, "Go to, let us build a city and a tower whose top may reach into heaven . . . lest we be scattered," etc. This was contrary to the design of God, who said, "Let us go down and confound their language, so the Lord scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth." (Genesis 11: 4-9.)

With this the Book of Mormon agrees. The people whose records the Nephites found came from Babel. The people were scattered into all the earth. America is a part of all the earth, therefore some must have come to America. The Book of Mormon contains their history and this is the second dovetail with Bible history, and it proves both books true or both false. Which side, or position, will you take?

The book of Ether, or record of Jared who came from the tower in ships to this land, bears on the face of it proof of its correctness and truth. On the first page it gives a genealogical table of twenty-nine kings from Jared to Ether, and a careful study of the book reveals the correct placing of these kings into the "warp and woof" of the history. This is strong collateral proof that Joseph Smith had the record before him, that he translated by the power of God, and that the Book of Mormon is true. This historical harmony is characteristic of all the books which comprise the Book of Mormon. One writer marveled at this and said that persons have a happy knack of coming up in their right connection even after the reader has almost forgotten their existence.

The Book of Mormon comes to us with a list of accredited witnesses such as no other sacred record can claim: Eleven men testified to having seen and handled the plates and sacred things. Three of these, Oliver Cowdery, Martin Harris, and David Whitmer, were shown the plates by an angel of God. Eight were shown them by Joseph Smith, which proves, so far as human testimony can be relied upon, that an angel showed Joseph the plates; and secondly, that the plates were real material and were handled by eight witnesses from the hand of Joseph himself.

These witnesses remained true to their testimony until death, though disagreeing with Joseph on other matters, which shows they were not under his control and that they were men of courage and firm decision. Disagreement makes their testimony stronger; in fact, unassailable. Their attitude is supported by a like condition among all believers in the Book of Mormon. It is notoriously true that all factions of so-called Mormonism remain true to their testimony of the divinity of that book, though they may fight bitterly upon other matters and separate into warring factions. The Book of Mormon is the sheet anchor of all Mormonism. Prove that false and we are undone. Many efforts have been made to do so, but all have miserably failed, and how wonderful is this in an age of such enlightenment, scholarship, and debate.

The contents of the Book of Mormon prove its divinity. It teaches or records the fact that Jesus Christ our Lord appeared on this continent to the Nephites after his ascension into heaven. That up to the time of his appearing they kept the law of Moses in accordance with the teachings of the Jews, that after the coming of Christ the law gave place to Christianity and the Christian church among both Nephites and Lamanites.

Doctrinally it agrees with the Bible, which it supports and does not supplant. The divinity of Jesus Christ is strongly affirmed; his atonement by sacrificial death, his oneness with God. There is no support found in the Book of Mormon for either polygamy or polytheism. It is monotheistic and monogamic to a fault, if possible. Its stated purpose is "to show unto the remnant of the house of Israel what great things the Lord has done for their fathers; and that they may know the covenants of the Lord that they are not cast off for ever: and also to the convincing of Jew and Gentile that Jesus is the Christ."

Family Insurance

Sermon by M. A. McConley, at the Stone Church, January 8, 1930. Mrs. A. Morgan, reporter.

We will continue the topic of the week, "Complete the family circle," using as our specific subject, "Family insurance."

Our text will be found in Galatians 6: 7:

Be not deceived; God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

In Genesis 1: 27 we are informed that man is created in the image of God. In Genesis, 2d chapter, Inspired Translation, we learn that since it was not good for man to be alone, God made an helpmate for him. And regarding the establishment of the home, we read:

Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they shall be one flesh.

I am glad I represent a people who believe in the divinely imposed relationships of marriage and the home. In the revelations of latter days, given to this church, on this subject the Lord says:

Whoso forbiddeth to marry, is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation.—Doctrine and Covenants 49: 3.

Marriage was designed to be a rather permanent affair. We are instructed regarding this in the section on marriage, Doctrine and Covenants 111: 4, as follows:

We believe that one man should have one wife; and one woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again.

Marriage is a sacrament, divinely instituted for a specific purpose. It is not a "companionate" affair. It is much more than a civil contract, by which a certain man and a certain woman agree to establish and maintain a home, according to the laws of the land. That society is living below this condition does not commit God to the lower plane upon which men choose to live.

The home is the foundation of society. According to the standards of the home, even so will be the standards of the society, which is the result of that home. The home is the foundation of both church and state. When the home is pure, and functioning as God ordained it should, the nation is safe, and the future of the church is guaranteed. When the home fails to function as the divine institution ordained as the means of supplying the world with a race of men who should honor God and obey his laws, naturally society suffers. The women today have a more important and honorable task than most of them realize, for there is much of truth in the old maxim, "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world."

Today there are many disintegrating factors which are tending to break down the home, and as a result many homes are not functioning as God intended they should. Numerous evil influences are at work in this direction. I will mention only a few.

Foremost among these, perhaps, is the failure to recognize God in the family union. The family tie is not held to be sacred. It is considered but a civil contract, which may be broken at will by either or both parties, or by mutual consent. Thousands of people entering into the contract of marriage seem so to consider it. From a material standpoint, these homes may be furnished better than the homes of the previous generation; but the spiritual elements, without which a home is not real, are sadly lacking. Ofttimes there is not proper respect between husband and wife. And in too many instances there is but little respect for the parents on the part of the children. The natural result is that thousands of homes are broken annually because of the real or imaginary offenses committed by one or both parties.

Go out to Reno, Nevada, and you will find conditions which bespeak something of which society should be ashamed. For modern Reno, with all of its beautiful buildings and its beautiful Alimony Park, has been erected upon the failures of the American home.

The false standards and wrong ideals thus created are difficult of correction. Regarding this matter a reformed criminal has recently said, "America should pay more attention to the high chair and less attention to the electric chair." And he is right. When we surround the high chair with proper spiritual environment, the problem of prison riots and how to cure them will be solved. The so-called "crime waves" that are sweeping over our country to its disgrace, and to the perplexity of our law enforcement officers, will naturally take care of themselves. And again we remember that God has said, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

America is reaping in a mild form today that which has been sown in the past. And since today there seems to be less of religion and right idealism being sown in the homes than there was ten years ago, we may perhaps be pardoned for asking, What will the fruitage be?

Today our homes are beautifully finished, inside and out. They have comfortable overstuffed furniture, beautiful rugs, and works of art. But many times they seemingly are overstuffed with "things" and lack those spiritual qualities without which a home can not succeed.

In my early missionary work in the Pacific Islands, I learned that a beautiful home life is not necessarily dependent on furniture. I have often been a guest in a home where a mat on the floor and two or three other mats rolled up and standing in the corner completed the home furnishings. One mat spread on the floor served as a table at mealtime. At night another sufficed for a bed.

As these people sat on the mat on the floor around their scanty meal, consisting perhaps of some dried fish and sour poi, a prayer of sincere thanks to God was offered. And before retiring for the night, they had pule ohana, or family prayer. Whether they were members of our own church or of some other, I found as a rule that the name of God was revered. And I have enjoyed the hospitality extended in homes of that character, sometimes, more than in our overstuffed, overfurnished homes of America, where spiritual things had been driven out by this epidemic of materialism that is seemingly so contagious, and with which so many homes have been contaminated. I call it "thingitis." Where an extreme case of "thingitis" prevails, the Spirit of God seems to be absent. But even in simple homes with crude surroundings, where spiritual influences are cultivated and developed, one may find sincere enjoyment and worth-while hospitality.

Do not misunderstand me. We wish for our people to maintain a normal standard of living, and as conditions make possible, to elevate that standard. But according to my observation, America today is living beyond the standards which the average individual can afford. A period of extravagance has gripped the world. Many people are trying to ape others of greater financial ability, appearing to believe that the success of a home depends on "things."

My friends, that which will guarantee the quality of the output of the American home—its citizens of tomorrow—is not determined by the cost of its home furnishings, or the style of your girl's clothes, or how up to date and well dressed your boy may be in school; nor is it the quality of the food you put in their stomachs, but it is the kind of ideals you plant in their hearts, and the sense of spiritual values which you place in their heads. These will determine what America will be tomorrow. Right examples of industry, and thrift, and economy, with a habit of regular savings developed from childhood, are of more value to your boy and girl than are overstuffed furniture and the latest model car, purchased at the expense of a mortgage on your next year's wages. Spiritual things should be emphasized as being of first importance. For if ever there was a time when these things were needed, that time is now.

There are dangers in a thousand forms which will confront my child and yours in the world today, of which most parents are not conscious. But I have been made to realize that if those who know of God will take him and his Spirit into their homes; will plant seeds of righteousness in the hearts and minds of their children; will cultivate in their homes an atmosphere in which the Spirit of God may abide; then, when the children are away from the protection of that home, God's protection will follow them and his power will overshadow them. That assurance is a comfort to me when absent from my home, and has emphasized the necessity of Latter Day Saint homes being genuinely Christian.

Starting out the centennial year of our church, if there is any one thing which can be improved it is the spiritual quality within the home. We may be unable to make great advancement in material wealth, and some may have severe financial reverses during the year, but we can all improve along spiritual lines in the home.

We are hoping to complete the "spiritual" family circle in many homes. That the power of God may be permitted to work to this end, it will be necessary that those now within the church take advantage of the opportunity to commune with God. They should be ready to respond to the uplifting influence of his Spirit. Their lives should be better, their ideals higher, their habits cleaner, by reason of their membership in the church.

The average man loves his home, and for its defense, if necessary, would be willing to give up his life. Every red-blooded man should be willing to join in a movement for the protection of the home. Though there does seem to be an increase in the physical dangers of the average city, these are not the greatest dangers that face us. Evil influences surround the world today that would destroy the manhood and womanhood of the rising generation. They would blight their young lives, mar their happiness here, and damn them for eternity. My friends, I am advocating a class of home insurance that would protect our homes from these evils.

The company which I represent is backed by the power of the universe. The policy is underwritten by Jesus Christ himself. Its benefits are guaranteed by the eternal God. The terms of the policy are reasonable. Yes, the insurance which Jesus Christ offers to the world through obedience to the gospel is indeed ample. It will meet every need of the human family today. And for our own good and the safety of those who shall succeed us, let us Christians examine anew the policy and see that this year we faithfully live up to our part of the contract and keep it in full force.

Many people think they are too busy to afford the time for family worship. Many are so busy they do not take time to study the Bible, or even to pray, except when they get into trouble. Of course when they get into trouble, they remember to pray. And this is one of the ways in which we locate many of those who move into the territory comprising the Pacific Slope Mission. It may be in California, Arizona, Oregon, Washington, or British Columbia. They may have resided there for years without making their presence known, or coming to church. But when they get sick and are afraid they are going to die, they call for the elders of the church. You would be surprised at the number of people in our field who have been located by us on that basis.

Of course these people when sick should call on the elders of the church, and we are glad they have enough faith left to do so. And we are only too glad to do what we can to help them. But if when well and favored by prosperity they had been doing their duty in the church, instead of following after worldly pleasures and the satisfaction of the carnal appetites, how much better they would have felt in approaching God in the hour of need. In such instances it would seem that sickness was a blessing in disguise.

Many times the assistance of the ministry is solicited by anxious parents on behalf of a wayward boy or a wayward girl. Naturally, the church is interested in wayward boys and in wayward girls. If the church can reach down a helping hand and assist in extending to them tolerance and mercy and love, she stands ready to do so. But often we find that the reason that boy or that girl is wayward is directly due to the lack of proper spiritual training in the home in their younger years, when under the protection and instruction of their parents.

Regarding parental responsibility, the Lord says:

And again, inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, . . . that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance; faith in Christ the Son of the living God; and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands when eight years old, the sin be upon the head of the parents; for this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized; and their children shall be baptized for the remission of their sins when eight years old, and receive the laying on of hands; and they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord. And the inhabitants of Zion shall also observe the sabbath day to keep it holy."—Doctrine and Covenants 68: 4.

We find many people looking for an excuse. Some always seek to develop an alibi. They say, "That refers to the people in Zion. Of course they should teach their children to pray and to be baptized. But we do not live in Zion, so that does not apply to us." But if in Zion children need to pray and to be baptized and to establish communion with God when eight years old, how much more do they need it where there are fewer church members and perhaps a lower spiritual environment.

Regarding the Sabbath Day, much might be said. The Lord says it is a day for rest and worship. And I find that the person who makes it a day of rest and worship is better fitted thereby to carry out the duties in the family circle and meet his responsibilities in both temporal and spiritual affairs. Never have I found where people lost financially by respecting the Sabbath Day. Yet some people feel that they just must work on Sunday. Sometimes it is fixing the family car. This task has been laid aside for Sunday; so neither he nor the family can go to church. Another brother is doing some repair work, or building an addition to his house. He wants to save a little money and get the work done as soon as possible, so he takes the Lord's Day for the work. Such methods may save a few dollars in carpenter bills, but I am wondering how much he cheats himself out of spiritual growth. I am wondering how much he marks down his moral standard every time he gives way to such an occasion, and how much the standard of the church is thereby lowered in that community.

My friends, if we expect to be saved in the kingdom of God, and to be among those whom God shall acknowledge as his, let us be found cultivating spiritual things on the Sabbath Day. Let us be found in the house of prayer and the house of worship, upholding the hands of those who are trying to carry on the work of God.

We want our homes to succeed. We want our boys and girls to be respected. There is no mother who, when her children grow up, would not like to see them accomplish something worth while, so they could say with justifiable pride, "That is my boy," or "That is my girl." I have a little daughter. I am hoping that the seeds of righteousness will be so firmly planted in her heart that, as she grows into womanhood, I may always be proud of that which she does. And I am satisfied a like desire is resident in the hearts of all parents for their children.

But girls grow up to be much like their mothers. Mother is usually their ideal. And boys incline to be men like their fathers. Giving them good teaching is not of itself sufficient. That teaching should be backed up by an honest Christian example.

Today there are many homes where only part of the family belongs to the church. My friends, who are not members of the church, we want you to know you are welcome in any house of worship maintained by this organization. We do not wish to force you to become members of the church, but we are appealing to our members to live in such a manner that those outside the church will want to come in and be counted with us.

We believe that obedience to the gospel of Christ will make your home safer and happier. It will help you to be a better father or mother. I believe that where husband and wife are united in Christ they will mean more to one another. A husband may love his wife, and she in turn may truly love her husband, but where there has been a refinement of that love through the power and influence of the Spirit of God, the union is thereby strengthened and made more sacred. For the standard of manhood and womanhood is elevated by this relationship with God. Parents mean more to one another, and children mean more to the parents and to each other than before, for a holy and divine relationship exists in a Christian home which can not be found elsewhere. It is possible to have a great deal more of "heaven" in the home than is enjoyed in the average home. To this end the church is today holding out an inviting hand.

Saints, in spite of all we can do, in some instances the wife may continue to remain outside the fold. Let us treat her with love and tolerance and make her welcome in our house of worship. In God's own due time she may yet come with us. In other cases, the husband at this time may not be awakened to the necessity of religion in his life. We are not seeking to compel any to join the church until they shall feel so inclined in response to the leading of God's Spirit. For a husband to join simply because his wife belongs, or for a wife to join merely because her husband is a member, is a poor reason. For religion is not something which can be passed out on a platter or forced down people's throats. It must appeal to the intelligence and touch the heart, and until that time comes the family circle can not well be completed from a Christian standpoint. Until that time comes, let us keep on living right, and hoping and praying.

People may argue with you regarding baptism or some phase of doctrine, but there is no argument that can be brought against a righteous Christian life. When people live as Christ wishes them to live, they are on a plane which is above argument. The Word of God advises, "Cast thy bread upon the waters; for thou shalt find it after many days." The example of a righteous life sticks like a cocklebur and is not soon forgotten.

My friends, every day this year there will come opportunities to do good, and especially in the family circle where the relationships are so close. Let us let our lights shine. Charity begins at home, and so does religion. A religion that does not function at home is not worth much on Sunday. Where religion is lacking in the home, we need not expect the members of that family to radiate spiritual power on Sunday when they go to church. When spiritual influences are not cultivated in the home, we need not expect to be in a fit condition for a Pentecostal shower after traveling a few city blocks to come to church on Sunday.

In the last analysis, if God were to weigh the spiritual condition of this church today, it would be no better nor worse than the homes of her people. What people really are and not the attitude they seek to assume on Sunday, is what their religion really is.

The religion of Christ is not bound up in a certain creed, nor does it consist of certain forms and ceremonies. All these are but a means to an end. True religion is evidenced by deeds. What people do on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday determines the value of their religion.

Whether we are real Latter Day Saints is evidenced in the home life, with its trials and perplexities. Sometimes the lord of the manor comes home a little extra tired. Perhaps things in the business have not gone smoothly during the day. The wife also may have had a hard time at home. The baby has been cross from cutting teeth. The household duties have been unusually heavy and irksome. Such times are a real character test. They determine whether your religion is really working.

With apologies to Ella Wheeler Wilcox, we offer the following:

It's easy enough to be happy,
When everything goes slick and trim,
But the man worth while is the man who can smile,
When he has to go home on the rim.

It is indeed the little things in life which show what we really are. "Straws show which way the

The Week-day Church School in Kansas City Stake

By George Mesley

The Week-day Church School Movement which originated in Gary, Indiana, in 1913 has made rapid growth until practically every State in the Union is now favoring some form of week-day religious instruction for day-school pupils.

In Kansas City, Kansas, the movement directed by Mrs. Higby has been developed in a thorough and really educational manner. There the various grades are released from school at different periods every Wednesday, and the pupils are enrolled in any denominational school selected by their parents. The seventeen denominations using eighty-five churches, each with a principal and a trained staff of teachers, are endeavoring to take advantage of the wonderful opportunity that such a well-organized effort for week-day religious instruction presents. Last year these schools had an enrollment of 12,545 pupils with an average attendance of 11,765.

Of this number over 300 were enrolled in three schools conducted by our church. Malvern Hill, principal Florine Hands, had an enrollment of 210; Grandview, principal Mrs. May K. White, had an enrollment of 73; and Argentine, principal Mrs. Shireman, had 14 pupils.

The missionary possibilities of this day-school movement are unlimited. Two hundred and fifty out of the three hundred pupils enrolled in our schools are children of nonmembers. Many of their parents do not attend or belong to any church, and a large percentage of the children do not attend Sunday school. With adequate Sunday school facilities and missionary-pastoral care, a large number of these nonmember children and their parents could be interested in the message of the Restoration.

The Kansas City Council of Religious Education promotes training courses for the teachers and has recognized standards of school grading, promotion, and work. Our schools rank well above the average. The Malvern Hill School has for its musical director Mrs. C. E. Wight. Under her direction the music has reached a creditable standing. Forbidden by the Saints to let the "week-day children wear out the Zion's Praises," she started in with some old reunion song leaflets, then the following year purchased Hymnals for American Youth which have been in constant use ever since. Most of the hymns sung by the group are first memorized. Several programs have been given over the radio. On one occasion Sister Wight was ready to broadcast a program, when the operator suddenly remembered another engagement and promptly left her to both announce and direct the program. She assures me that Reorganized Latter Day Saints were on the air that day.

As a graduation program this year, over eighty boys and girls from the Malvern Hill School sang the memorized cantata "The Child Jesus" in Kansas City Central Church.

In contrast to past graduations, when only half a dozen parents patronized the occasion, this graduation was attended by over two hundred parents and friends. Many favorable comments and appreciations were voiced. Later the singers were asked to repeat the cantata at a meeting sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association Council. At this meeting Doctor Walter L. Wilson was the speaker, and the closing prayer was one of thanks for the lovely theme and music of our boys and girls.

The thanks of the parents and entire church are due these groups of loyal and consecrated teachers who week after week give up many cultural opportunities and much valuable time to the preparation of their lesson studies, their teaching, and their traveling to and from the schools. Without their devoted and skilled efforts, such a school could not function. The fine thing about their service is that every teacher is enthusiastic about the teaching and about the missionary possibilities of their work with such a large number of nonmember children. Many of our missionaries travel far and work for years to make a few good contacts. Here in our day-school work hundreds of boys and girls are released to us from public school ready to be taught, and just as many parents' doors are open to the missionary who could work with these children and then visit them in their homes.

In Kansas City, Kansas, the work for the year closed with an immense parade of day-school children, their teachers and pastors. A vast throng of adults witnessed the parade and heard the governor of the State address his thanks for the wonderful possibility that such a work contains.

In all these schools our teachers along with the devoted teachers of other participating denominations are planning to do better and more effective work next year. The support of the church and the thanks of our people are theirs.

Thirty-fourth Commencement Exercises

Fifty-four certificates and diplomas were presented at the annual commencement program June 6. Over half of these were from the college of Liberal Arts. Seven completed the three-year course in Public School Music.

While Mrs. J. A. Lane and daughter, Thelma, played an organ-piano march the graduates filed to the section before the rostrum of the Brick Church, and the faculty and members of the board of trustees took place on the platform. In the presiding chairs were the president of the college, G. N. Briggs, the President of the church, F. M. Smith, and John F. Sheehy, the chaplain of the service. The A Cappella Chorus, also, was on the platform.

President Smith's address was tense and direct. He pictured the shifting of moral standards with the consequent letting up in several fields. This situation affects the moral tone of the church. In former days the process of selection of membership from outside through proselyting and the external pressures from other religious groups promoted the development of a pride in our moral standards. For instance, few members of the church were to be found in penal institutions. Times have changed. Today we are relying more upon increase through natural youth. This presents the problem of consciously developing a high moral tone among the youth who are born in the church. To this task Graceland students were summoned.

The singing of "Graceland forever" closed the college year.

"Hiawatha's Wedding Feast" Presented

The commencement concert on Wednesday evening was a fit closing to the year's work of the Music Department. With Mabel Carlile conducting, the oratorio society pre-wind blows." But if we keep near to God from day to day, we will find our religion is equal to the test.

To what extent the family circles in the church may be completed this year, I do not know. But I can confidently predict that if those who are now members of the church will live their religion, a great many family circles now incomplete will be completed. Let those who are now in the church cooperate with the church and with God to that end.

sented "Hiawatha's wedding feast," by Coleridge Taylor. Arthur Oakman sang the tenor solo—one of the most popular tenor arias. Dorothy Prall gave spirited and finished accompaniment on the piano, and Mrs. J. A. Lane supported on the organ in her usual sure manner. The chorus caught the spirit of Indian music and gave some good interpretations. The cantata lasted forty-five minutes.

There was a short intermission, and the Lamoni-Graceland Orchestra came to the platform and played a group of two selections, "The Romp" and "Circumstance march," by Elgar, which were received most enthusiastically.

For the final number, chorus and orchestra combined in "The song of the marching men." This is a vigorous, modern-spirited number that breathes the air of progress, vigor, conquest, and hope of those who lead the world. It was a fitting and dramatic close to the concert.

"So This Is London," Is Commencement Play

On Tuesday night the College Players presented "So this is London" to a receptive audience. The clever plot, the well-chosen cast, and the excellent staging by Florence Thompson combined to effect a gala performance. The story of the play centers around the old hostility between the English and the Americans. The mingling of these two cultures in the Graceland life gave zeal to the play.

The cast was typical of Graceland's cosmopolitan student life. They were: Voas Meredith, Birmingham, England; Hugh Hand, Council Bluffs, Iowa; Mrs. Marcella Menge Clark, Cincinnati, Ohio; Anne Morgan, Seymour, Iowa; Ferne Roberson, Benton, Illinois; Richard Anderson, Des Moines, Iowa; Dorothy Elliott, Brooklyn, New York; Frank Anthony, San Bernardino, California; Fred Davies, Wigan, England; Wallace Sinclair, Boston, Massachusetts; and Don Pierson, Independence, Missouri.

The Graduates' Banquet

One hundred and forty graduates, students, and alumni attended the banquet in the dining room of the Coliseum Thursday evening. Festoons in college colors, and a replica of "the old west door" back of the speakers' table gave a distinctly collegiate air. The spontaneous singing of college airs and ditties gave a happy informality to the evening.

President Briggs acted as toastmaster in his usual clever manner. The program of toasts centered about the old Ad Building and was vividly portrayed from these angles: "The famous doors," Frank Parsons, Max, Nebraska; "The lobby," Helen Anthony, Lamoni; "The chapel," Noble Kelly, Pontiac, Michigan; and "The tower," Alice Chappelow, Independence, Missouri.

The toastmaster called the banquet the last family get-together of the year. A rousing "Go Graceland" yell and an enthusiastic "Graceland forever" closed the evening's program.

Class Day Exercises

The students filled the chapel Thursday afternoon for the class day exercises. LeRoy Dick, Traverse City, Michigan, was class president and presided. Anna Lynn Vanskike read the proclamation announcing the coronation of the queen of the Graceland Spirit; the march began, Mendelssohn's "Spring song," and eyes turned expectantly toward the center aisle for the approach of the queen and her court. These were chosen from the several classes. Anne Morgan of Seymour, Iowa, was selected queen this year, and Marion Langton, of Ramsey, North Dakota, prince charming.

The class program was then presented before the queen's court. The future destinies of the class were foretold by Dorothy Springer, of Perry, Iowa, and the last will and testament of the class of 1930 was drawn up and read by Dirk Schreur, of Gaylord, Michigan. Corners of the campus, customs, habits, and personal peculiarities were named for individual students who would be returning. Dorothy Elliott accepted the bequests on behalf of the graduating class. It was announced that the memorial of the class was in the form of a contribution to the flag pole fund and that this would be presented next home-coming.

Honors Chapel

The closing chapel always carries an air of excitement. Awards and honors of the year are named. This year the assembly was held in Zimmermann Hall at 9.30 Friday morning.

The orchestra played, the faculty and guest of honor marched to the platform, and F. A. Smith offered prayer. President Briggs gave a brief summary of the work of the year and the purpose of awards to students winning special recognition in various attainment throughout the year.

A. R. Gilbert, head of the department of physical education, presented twenty-seven men who received the official "G" through participation in varsity athletic and by virtue of good sportsmanship. The men huddled and gave a farewell yell for the coach and for the school just before leaving the platform. Mrs. Gilbert awarded the yellow "G" to twenty-one girls on the basis of intra mural athletics and clean sportsmanship.

The gold seal awards of the college were distributed as follows: To three young men went the seals of scholarship—Francis Tousley, Max White, and H. Voas Meredith. In the journalism field, Gertrude Laird and Richard Anderson for Acacia work and Raymond Troyer and Paul Utnehmer for Record work were honored. Four students were awarded the seal for work in both A Cappella Chorus and orchestra: Helen Anthony, Juanita Nixon, LeRoy Dick, and Verna Schaar. Arthur Oakman received a seal for his outstanding work in music, since he, perhaps more than any other student, has brought honor to Graceland through the field of singing.

Miss Martha Jones, of Chicago, was present to present the Franklyn D. Jones block and gavel to the winning literary society. This year the Niketes scored highest. She also awarded the ten-dollar award given annually by Mrs. Fannie Jones as a memorial to her son to the winner of the oratorical contest. The first award went to Edith Van Alstin.

One special award was most impressive and is worthy of mention because it expresses something unique in Graceland's spirit. President Briggs called Miss Pearl Darrington, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, to the platform and presented to her a gold seal in honor of her outstanding work in the home of E. E. Weddle, of the department of buildings and grounds. Last summer Sister Weddle passed away rather suddenly, leaving a family of small children. This fall Miss Darrington assumed as her industrial assignment work in the Weddle home. She gave more than is mentioned in any contract—she gave the homelike air to a family life when most needed. The large audience was deeply moved by the presentation of this special award.

Forensic honors were named, press club members presented with pins, the new members of Lambda Delta Sigma, honorary scholastic society were introduced, and the newly elected Crescent girls formally presented.

The Departures

Friday night and Saturday found students and visitors leaving in all directions and in all kinds of vehicles. To California and to New England went parties of Gracelanders. The bus attracted several. Some went on the railroad, Saturday evening sending away a good delegation. To hear a group of friends singing "Graceland forever" as the train pulls out of the station is an experience that will never be forgotten. Only a genuine Graceland can appreciate the pull that comes to the heartstrings when the family circle of a year of college life is broken and the friends go to all directions of the country.

"Her sons and daughters carry to others,
Her fame throughout the land."

Coffeyville, Kansas

Washita and Eleventh Streets

A few of the loyal members are very busy in this small branch. Attendance is average at all services, and we hope soon to see it increase. The young people are going to begin to present the programs outlined in the Herald and Department Journal.

A few from here attended the conference at Joplin, and they report a meeting resulting in much enjoyment.

Two of our young women have recently married and moved to homes in other States. Miss Evelyn Yeubanks was married May 15 to Clyde McKee, of Wimer, Oklahoma, and Miss Thelma Walton became the bride of W. T. Cline, of Kansas City, May 30. Both were active members when at home, and we hope that they may have opportunity to do much good in their new homes.

We are glad to report that the Saints in Coffeyville Branch are enjoying average good health and that all the wage earners are employed. For these blessings we are deeply thankful.

Denver, Colorado

At the branch business meeting Monday, June 2, the Saints voted to adopt the new plan of religious education recommended by the General Conference, and will put it into practice as soon as possible. R. S. Salyards, jr., was elected supervisor of religious education; C. L. Bruno, supervisor of adult group; Glenn Holmes, supervisor of young people; and Sister Louisa Fishburn, supervisor of the children's group.

We are sorry to lose Elder H. E. Winegar and family, who are moving to La Junta, Colorado. There Brother Winegar will be located as missionary.

This is commencement week for all Denver schools. Three of our girls are graduated: Lois Wildermuth from East High, Mildred Fishburn from South High, and Elizabeth Williams from the University of Denver.

Attendance at sacramental service last Sunday was not so large as usual, a number of the Saints were out of town, but we enjoyed a calm, peaceful hour of prayer and testimony, and all there were much benefited. Brother Glaude A. Smith talked beautifully and impressively on the necessity of love in our hearts one for another, and many testimonies of God's goodness were given.

Brother E. F. Shupe, who was for many years the main stay of the work in Denver, was seriously ill in the winter, and his recovery has been slow, but he is now able to meet with us quite regularly.

Sunday, June 8, Virginia and Clodah Jones, sisters, and Artie Radcliffe were baptized by E. J. Williams. Brother Smith gave an excellent sermon on the subject "Expanding our capacities."

Decatur, Nebraska

Elder C. A. Kress, of Independence, Missouri, is preaching at the Saints' Church. A very good spirit prevails among members and nonmembers.

June 2 the sectarian ministers held their conference at Decatur, inviting Elder C. A. Kress to participate. A very friendly spirit ruled the meeting. These ministers will hold their next conference at Oakland, Nebraska. They have invited Brother Kress to give the only address. The subject chosen by the people is "Operation of the Holy Spirit."

The reunion committee of Northeastern Nebraska District held a special meeting June 1. The following arrangements and decisions were made: Date of reunion to be July 25 to August 3, 1930, at Decatur, Nebraska. Ground equipment in charge of Ira M. Mann, who was empowered to choose his assistants. Brother Mann chose Brothers Orrin Butts and Mark Wilson. Brother Ira C. Lewis is to have charge of the reunion. Elder H. A. Merchant is to order all individual tents for use on the camp ground. The program committee is Doctor H. A. Merchant, Elders Ira C. Lewis, C. A. Kress, Blair Jensen, and R. W. Scott, Doctor Merchant chairman. The dining hall is in charge of Decatur Women's Department and the district superintendent of that department. Elder E. M. Oehring was chosen financial agent for reunion and Elder C. A. Kress publicity agent. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend this reunion. We hope the people of Central Nebraska and Western Iowa Districts will remember the date and come.

MILDRED PATRICK.

Beloit, Wisconsin

236 Saint Lawrence Avenue

The Saints of Beloit were happy to hear Bishop C. J. Hunt May 25. This was the first time he has spoken in Beloit, and the Sunday school brought together all classes above the junior age in one big class to hear the newly appointed bishop. The class instruction and the sermon at the preaching hour were immensely enjoyed by the Saints. We assure Brother Hunt that he will receive the support of all the members of Beloit.

The Department of Recreation and Expression was fortunate in having Brother Amos Berve, district president, to instruct the stewardship class May 29.

We are glad to welcome Brothers Enos, Frank J., and Archie Loomis and their families to our branch. Surely they will find plenty to do in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

The Saints mourn the death of Sister Addie Garber, who passed away May 5. She met with an automobile accident, which caused her death. She was fifty-one years old and leaves behind three sons and seven daughters. The body was taken to Harshaw, Wisconsin, for the funeral service.

Butler, Missouri

Butler Branch is located in the beautiful little city of Butler, county seat of Bates County, in the midst of one of the best farming and stock raising communities in the State. We have a faithful group of seventy-four members. The Saints have bought a church and are trying to build up this part of the land of Zion.

The Women's Department is busy helping in the branch undertakings. They have put the Book of Mormon and the Call at Evening in the Butler Public Library, also they send the young people's magazine, Vision, to the library.

I have not the gift of writing as have some, but I love the latter-day gospel, and I know that there are many who want to hear how Butler Saints are striving to spread the truths of the gospel. For these reasons I write.

The General Conference of the church is over, and we are well started on the second century of latter-day history. Now is the time when everyone is needed to be up and doing, and our motto is "Onward and Upward." Let us be ready to help in the Lord's harvest, for it is great. The stewardship plan is most comprehensive. We are studying now how to best help through it, and as we study we are made to realize that if we say we love this gospel, and fail to lend our financial aid, we are slackers; we are not really converted. God is always willing and ready to bless his people when they come up to the standard he has set for them and obey his will.

The Saints of Butler Branch are united. There are no factions in our group. We are located sixty-three miles south of Independence on federal highway 71. Our church home is in Butler, one block southeast of the square on Mechanic Street. We pray that God will help us in our work here and the Saints everywhere.

SISTER W. A. SEARFUS.

Holden Stake

Holden

Misses Gladys and Myrtle Carr attended the graduation exercises of the William Chrisman High School in Independence.

Apostle M. A. McConley was here Sunday, May 25. His sermon on "The living church" was very worth while for each member of the church, and aroused the question in our minds: "Are we helping to make the church a live one, or are we expecting some one else to bear the burden?" At night a lecture accompanied with slides was given. Surely no one could doubt the need of beautification of the church surroundings on hearing Brother McConley's lecture.

Attendance at Sunday school denotes interest on the part of members and nonmembers.

Brother and Sister W. H. Eliason, of Pittsburg, Kansas, who have been appointed to Holden Stake have moved to Holden. We welcome them.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson was here Sunday night, June 1, and delivered an illustrated lecture on "The ruins of Mexico and Central America," which was much enjoyed by the large audience.

Robert Baker has finished a year in Central Business College, Kansas City, Missouri, and is home for the summer vacation.

Marshall

Stake President W. S. Macrae, of Holden, and Brother and Sister Lester Macrae, of Cameron, were with Marshall Saints Sunday, June 8. Lester and wife visited his sister, Mrs. El Marie McCormick, before leaving for their mission to Hawaii. Brother W. S. Macrae presided at the morning business meeting, giving counsel and encouragement. Heads of departments were chosen as follows: Ralph M. Ridge, assistant pastor; treasurer, Will S. Ridge; branch secretary, Harold G. Thayer; librarian, Robert E. Sparks; superintendent of Department of Music, El Marie McCormick; pianist, Frankie Thayer; superintendent of Women's Department, Sister T. L. McCormick; publicity agent, Sister George A. Thayer; Sunday school superintendent, Marion Johnson; Sunday school secretary, Jay McCormick; Recreation and Expression, Bertha Bowler; chorister for the Sunday school, Dixie Spohrer; Sunday school pianist, Dorothy Ridge.

At night Brother W. S. Macrae gave a splendid sermon, using as text the words of the Lord to Moses at the Red Sea, "Speak unto the children of Israel that they go forever."

A quartet composed of Brother and Sister Lester Macrae, El Marie McCormick, and W. S. Macrae, sang, "The sinner and the song," Brother Lester singing the solo part. We wondered when we would again hear his voice in song. After the sermon he gave a beautiful testimony of his call to his mission. God be with them till we meet again.

Business meetings for the election of officers in the various branches of the stake were held in the month of May, with the exception of the mission at Sugar Creek, near Independence. Brother Ira G. Clutter is looking after the interests of this mission in addition to his secular work in the Kansas City post office. The stake pastors are as follows:

Atherton, Elder A. E. Allen, Independence, Missouri; Buckner, Garfield Coleman, Buckner, Missouri; Bates City, Frank Cottrell, Bates City, Missouri; Blue Springs, Harold Hattey, Independence, Missouri; Grandview, Gomer R. Wells, Grandview, Missouri; Holden, stake presidency, Holden; Jefferson City, A. H. Wintermeyer, 1200 East Atchison Street, Jefferson City; Knobnoster, John T. Nutt, Knobnoster; Lees Summit, Gomer R. Wells, Lees Summit; Lexington, Luther W. Payne, Lexington; Marshall, T. L. McCormick, 468 West Gordon Street, Marshall; Post Oak, James Duffey, Post Oak; Sedalia, R. F. Moorman, R. 1, Sedalia; Sugar Creek, Ira G. Clutter, Independence; Warrensburg, George W. Hancock, East Gay Street, Warrensburg.

Lamoni Stake

Lamoni

The closing of college makes a large impression upon Lamoni. For a week this year commencement events engaged the interest of the Lamoni folk—the baccalaureate service with sermon by President F. M. McDowell, the commencement concert by the orchestra and oratorio chorus, the dedication of Walker Hall, and the commencement exercises with address by President F. M. Smith. Then on Sunday following the close of school the departure of the college students made a considerable difference in church activities.

But the Brick Church goes on. This year a beautiful Sunday followed the close of school, and a large congregation attended the services. So with the exception of the size of the choir, the departure of the college students seemed to make little difference. The leaders of the several fields of church activity planned their work so that renewal of interest took the place of the slump that many expected.

A Boys' Service

The boys' work is being conducted by the church school. A committee of five, of which Harry Lorange is chairman, is appointed to supervise. It is aimed to form a program that employs the scout and cub movements, coordinating with the Sunday morning instruction and following the grade division of the church school. It is hoped to effect a continuous program for the boys of the third and fourth grades who will be junior cubs to the high school, using the scout movement for the upper grades.

The Sunday evening service centered about the boys' work. While a march was played, two scouts in uniform placed the colors on the platform and boys took their places. The congregation sang "America," and the boys saluted the flag. Freddie Weddle, a scout of thirteen years, led the singing. Fred Condit spoke on "The boy and the home," Don Pierson, scoutmaster, on "The boy and the leader," and Roy Cheville on "The boy and the church." The boys repeated the scout laws and the pledge.

The purpose was to develop an intelligent interest in local plans for the boys and to enlist support. The work of organization is just getting started. Two patrols of scouts took a two-day hike last week.

The Second Miler Camp

The organized group of young people has been camping out at Radnich's Bend near Davis City. Monday morning a truck load of tents, cots, and equipment left Lamoni. That evening found all equipment in place and twenty-five young people enjoying an out-in-the-open supper. A few have been remaining at camp during the day, but most of them return to Lamoni for work.

Evening times were spent in games and camp-fire circles. The woods and slopes provided an excellent arena for "Run, sheep, run." On Tuesday evening Elder H. W. Savage and Horahitu, of Tahiti, were guests and talked to a camp-fire circle of forty. On Wednesday evening a prayer service was held.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Condit and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cheville were chaperons.

Horahitu Visits Lamoni

Last Wednesday visitors from Tahiti were in Lamoni. In place of the usual prayer services, all groups combined in a service in the lower auditorium. H. W. Savage and Horahitu, who have been seeing the historic places of the church and outstanding scenes of America, stopped in Lamoni. They inspected the Saints' Home, Dairy Farm, and the college, and visited the Lamoni young people in their camp at Davis City.

The Wednesday evening service was an inspiration to Lamoni folk. The far-away South Seas were brought near, and the Saints of the Islands seemed real brothers and sisters. Elder Savage interpreted in his frank, easy manner as Horahitu spoke of his home and the gospel. In closing, he sang the last verse of "Consecration" in his native tongue. After the service was over the Saints crowded round to meet him.

Independence

Quarterly Conference in Zion

Sunday was conference Sunday in Independence, and it was also Children's Day set aside by the Centennial Conference of the church. All local congregations honored their children at morning services.

At the Stone Church the beginner, primary, junior, and intermediate departments of the Sunday school combined at the eleven o'clock hour to present a program which was justly appreciated by the congregation. Older people found it necessary to give favorite pews to the more than four hundred children who were seated in reserved sections. Near the opening of the service the beautiful ordinance of blessing little children was witnessed as a part of the exercises when Ruth Ellen Edwards, the infant daughter of Apostle and Sister F. Henry Edwards, was blessed by Elders George Mesley and W. Wallace Smith.

The program of recitations, solos, chorus numbers, a pantomime, a story, was given in the midst of a bower of roses, daisies, and foliage. The attractive decorations were arranged under the direction of Sister J. F. Frazier, superintendent of the adult division of the school. Superintendent S. A. Thiel offered the invocation and announced the program, and Pastor Sheehy dismissed the congregation.

Before nine o'clock Sunday morning three children were baptized in the Stone Church font, Arthur Douglas Flanders and Betty Jane Dunfee, by Elder S. A. Thiel; and Robert Trumble, of Liberty Street congregation, by his grandfather, Patriarch Frederick A. Smith.

"The general church program" was the theme of the 2.30 union service at the Auditorium Sunday afternoon, President F. M. McDowell in charge. Preluding the talks of the hour a group of members of the Auditorium Band contributed several selections which were happily received by the gathering congregation of workers. Speakers were Apostle F. Henry Edwards, who discussed "The missionary task of the church"; Bishop Mark H. Siegfried, "The financial task of the church," treating the topic from a general church viewpoint; Elder T. A. Beck, counselor to the bishop in Zion, "The financial task of the church," from a local viewpoint; and President F. M. McDowell, who spoke on "The religious education task of the church."

The first of the summer season Sunday evening union meetings of the Saints' congregations occurred June 15 at the Auditorium, a large crowd gathering to hear President Frederick M. Smith preach a sermon observing "Hospital Sunday" for Independence. The Ministerial Alliance of Independence, indorsing the community movement for a new Independence Sanitarium, had set apart June 15 as "Hospital Sunday."

A fine musical program preceded the evening's address. The Auditorium Orchestra, conducted by Orlando Nace, gave selections of pleasing harmony; a rendition of "The old rugged cross" by members of the Wahdemna Choral Club who stood in the shadows of the organ loft while a colored spotlight illuminated the cross was most effective; and the Messiah Choir of Independence sang two beautiful anthems, "The King of Love my shepherd is," by Shelley, and "Send out thy light," by Gounod. Paul N. Craig directed, and Robert Miller played the piano.

Elder John F. Sheehy was in charge of the service, and Apostle F. Henry Edwards assisted. Pastors of the congregations of the church in Independence were seated on the platform. President F. M. McDowell introduced the speaker.

As a basis of his plea for support of the new hospital movement, President Smith chose to read portions of Doctrine and Covenants 86. Emphasis was placed on the teaching that the Creator rejoices in perfection of physical beauty and strength, and has ordered the universe so that all men, if they obey the laws of God, may be healthful and happy. Zion, we are taught, is to be a place out of which beauty and perfection shall shine; and it is, therefore, our duty to become and keep full of health in both a physical and a spiritual sense. In attaining this condition we need a place where the laws of health will be taught to all by those having a knowledge of and a skill in practicing these laws, a place where people may find spiritual relief and calm which come from contact with God.

The outstanding consideration of the conference business meeting Monday evening was the approving of names recommended by the pastors and supervisors and approved by the First Presidency for ordination to offices in the Melchisedec and Aaronic priesthood. President F. M. Smith, who was in charge of the service, read the following names and presented them separately to the conference: To the office of elder: A. G. Hougas, J. Stanley Kelley, Evan A. Fry, Charles S. Warren, Vernon A. Reese, and Doctors John R. Green, Charles Keown, Charles F. Grabske; priest, D. Howard Cook, Gerald G. Phillips, W. Earl Page, Paul Elliott, Robert Hampton, and Almer Sheehy; deacon, Jay S. Weeks, Donald DeTray, Lawrence Martin, Charles Stover, and George Fender.

At the conclusion of the service the Saints were invited to the front to bid farewell to President F. M. McDowell and Apostle F. Henry Edwards, who leave this week on their foreign mission. Through these men the Saints of Independence send greetings to European Saints.

Among the People in Zion

This week three officials of the general church will sail for Europe in the interest of the missionary work, President Floyd M. McDowell, Apostle F. Henry Edwards, and Apostle Paul M. Hanson. More than a week ago Apostle Hanson left for the East. He will join Brothers McDowell and Edwards at New York June 20, and the following day the trio will sail on the Cunard steamship, Samaria. The members of the party will visit every mission where the church is represented and will give attention to making a survey in anticipation of increased missionary activities abroad in the near future. This is President McDowell's first trip abroad, and also it is the first visit of Apostle Edwards to his native country and his people, who live in Birmingham, England. On the other hand, this mission makes Apostle Hanson's seventh trip abroad, he having given eleven years of ministerial work in foreign missions. This service includes three trips to Australia, three to Europe, two visits to Jerusalem and the Holy Land, and one trip around the globe.

The list of graduates of Kansas University from Independence, as given in "Independence News" last week, was incomplete. The day after the Herald went to press brought to the editors names of other graduates: Ronald Gibson Smith, son of President and Sister Elbert A. Smith, received his Ph. D. in Mathematics; Craig Siegfried, son of Bishop and Sister M. H. Siegfried, received his B. S. in Business Administration; and Harold Morgan, son of Sister Vida Morgan, received his B. S. in Medicine.

A party of four institute workers is leaving Independence tonight and tomorrow en route to Toronto, Ontario, to attend the International Convention of Religious Education from June 23 to 29. Besides attending the convention in Toronto, the members of the group plan to conduct institute work in local branches of the church as follows: Elders John Blackmore and L. E. Flowers at Detroit and Owen Sound, and Elders C. B. Woodstock and Leonard Lea at Toronto and London. Brothers Blackmore and Flowers will be accompanied by Almer Sheehy, son of Pastor J. F. Sheehy, whom the young people of the Stone Church have chosen to represent them at the convention.

Attendance at the junior service at the Campus Sunday morning was about one hundred and thirty-five. Brother Moore played the chimes for the children to be quiet. Tithing was taken up. The opening song was "O gentle Savior." After the classes were dismissed, the children were taken in cars to the Stone Church eleven o'clock service.

Second Church

As in each of the churches in Independence, June 15 was Children's Day at Second Church. Instead of the regular Sunday school, the time was devoted to a program composed of various numbers by the children. Orison Murdock, twelve-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Murdock, led the invocation.

Following a scripture reading, Brother Floyd Mortimore spoke briefly to the children who were to be baptized and to their parents. There has been a special class at Sunday school for several weeks for the children who desired to be baptized on Children's Day. This was to instruct them in detail and to prepare them in addition to their parents' teachings.

To organ music played by Lena Mortimore, the congregation passed to the basement of the church for the baptismal service. The font was carefully decorated with asparagus and roses.

The six boys and girls who had signified their desire to become members of Christ's church were then baptized, Brother A. K. Dillee, pastor, and Brother D. A. Whiting officiating.

There is probably no more beautiful ordinance in the church than the baptism of young children. It is truly a wonderful power which lights up a child's face at the waters of baptism, and nothing but God's Spirit could make a child smile with holy happiness as he rises from immersion.

These new members of our faith are: Vergie Davis, Robert Bishop, Carolyn Binger, Jethro Sandage, Lloyd Thomas, and Hazel Bishop.

The congregation then returned to the upper auditorium for the confirmation. Mrs. Hazel Davis, who had been baptized earlier in the morning with several from Enoch Hill, was also confirmed. This ordinance was taken care of by Brothers J. L. Conyers, Mark Gross, W. N. Inman, O. W. Sarratt, J. T. Curtis, A. K. Dillee, F. N. Mortimore, and T. A. Beck.

On Wednesday, June 11, Group 16 met with Brother and Sister John Miller on East Morgan. Forty-nine were present to enjoy an excellent prayer meeting. Groups 17 and 18 met for worship on Wednesday evening.

Walnut Park

On Sunday, June 8, services at Walnut Park centered around the theme "Pentecost." At the early morning prayer meeting a portion of the second chapter of Acts was read, giving a setting for the service and the following activities of the day. The opening talk followed the theme suggested in the scripture reading. The prayers and testimonies were fervent and manifested the desire of the Saints for another day of Pentecost. Toward the close of the hour two prophecies were given, exhorting the Saints to draw near unto God, and promising blessings to follow their faithful obedience.

The speaker of the morning service was Bishop G. W. Eastwood, who dealt with the temporal aspects of the law as related to Pentecost.

Elder J. M. Baker preached in the evening, developing the spiritual phases of Pentecost. Both discourses were much appreciated by the branch.

Enoch Hill

The Children's Day exercises, presented by the beginner, primary, and junior departments of Enoch Hill, had a beautiful setting of flowers and vines. The platform was decorated to represent the Garden of Love to which the children were admitted by performing loving acts. Sister Charles Warren, superintendent, and her assistants did splendid work in directing the little ones. In this surrounding of love and calm Brother and Sister L. M. Sarratt and Brother and Sister Leonard Crowl brought their babes for the blessing of the elders.

Three candidates from Enoch Hill were taken into the waters of baptism in the Second Church font Sunday morning by Brother Charles S. Warren. They are Sister Drilsa Street and her daughter, Ellen Street, and Carroll Sarratt.

Enoch Hill is happy to have other members added to its corps of priesthood. Monday night at the quarterly conference business meeting the name of Brother Lawrence Martin, one of our staunch young men, was recommended and approved for the office of deacon. Brother Charles S. Warren, of the local priesthood, was recommended and approved to hold the office of elder.

Spring Branch

A beautiful Children's Day service was witnessed by those present at the morning services Sunday at Spring Branch Church. Three babies were blessed, and twenty candidates were buried beneath the waters of baptism. There was no Sunday school service, and at ten o'clock the meeting opened with the singing of "Jesus, my Shepherd," followed by prayer by Brother Tankard. After this a cantata, "The Child Jesus," was sung by the junior choir. The introductory scripture reading preceding the cantata was read by Brother J. C. Mabbott. At the close of the cantata a quartet from the junior choir sang, "Bring the little children." Then came the blessing of the infant daughters of Brother and Sister Hampton, Brother and Sister Curtis, and Brother and Sister Bilquest. Those officiating in this ordinance were Brothers Snively, Bozarth, Terry, Cleveland, Mabbott, and Tankard.

The attractive, new baptismal font was dedicated by prayer by Pastor J. E. Cleveland; then the candidates were inducted into the kingdom. Those officiating in this ordinance were J. E. Cleveland, J. E. Smith, and Brother Adkins. Members baptized from Spring Branch are: Franklin E. Jennings, Viora Mary Jacobsen, Evelyn Arlene Roberts, J. Richard Smith, Dorothy Sue Frisby, Gordon Lee Resch, Gerald Elmer Resch, Joyce Pauline Bilquest, Martha Lou Edwards, Charles Anderson, Bernard Davis, and Bobby Gibley; Bennington Heights: Bettie Mae Schwartz, Clyde Cunnings, and Mildred Cunnings; East Independence: Myrtle Anna Stowell, June Alfora Wagner, and William Crabb.

The organ was played softly during the baptism. Because insufficient time was left, the confirmation service was postponed until next Sunday at the eleven o'clock hour.

Spring Branch is proud of its new baptismal font, which is just completed. It is in the center of the platform and above the floor so that it can be seen from all parts of the church. It is inclosed by beautiful purple and gold velvet curtains, and adds much to the appearance of our church. The members wish to thank all who have given their time and talent to build this font. Especially are we grateful to Pastor J. E. Cleveland for his untiring efforts and the time spent in seeing that it was made ready for the Children's Day service.

Every seat was taken Sunday morning, a number of chairs were brought in, and still a large number had to stand. If the branch continues to grow, our basement room will soon be too small, and we shall have to build the superstructure.

A luncheon for the priesthood and their wives was had last Thursday evening at 7.30. More than fifty were present. As guests of honor we had present Apostle F. Henry Edwards and Elder G. G. Lewis. Both Brother Edwards and Brother Lewis gave talks on missionary efforts for the summer. A general good time was had, and we hope to have more of such social gatherings in the future.

A new folding organ has been purchased for the primary department and to be used at times upstairs. This has long been needed by the primaries.

Englewood

Sunday was Children's Day at Englewood. After the regular class and study period, we had a splendid program by the children. Dorothy Dean and Lois Jean Welch, Betty Lee Whitehead, and Tommy McNamara took part from the cradle roll department. The primary and junior departments sang two songs, and Harold Welch, Wilma Clow, and Helen Reich gave readings.

Effa Lora Jurdan was baptized. The baptismal font was beautifully decorated with flowers. Following this service the two-month-old daughter of Brother and Sister G. B. Closson was blessed.

The address at eleven o'clock was by Elder T. A. Hougas, of Council Bluffs, Iowa. His subject was "The Sunday school one hundred and fifty years ago and today."

We expect to have Elder George Lewis, the director of Religious Education in Independence, with us next Sunday. All are invited to meet with us, especially the Saints living in this community.

East Independence

Sacramental service June 1 was quiet and peaceful, a gentle and hallowed spirit being felt by those who met to worship. We are happy for such experiences. Brother W. L. Morey, who occupied the pulpit in the evening, preached on the topic, "Why we come to church," and showed that we come in order that we may know more about God and be more fully prepared to help him in his work.

Elder Amos Allen, the morning speaker of June 8, mentioned the pentecostal services that the day would see conducted among all Christian people, and used the occasion to present many things concerning Pentecost which we must apply to our everyday lives if we would help build Zion.

In the evening the young people presented a short play, "The most precious gift," in which the gospel truths were brought out as plainly as they would have been in a sermon. Vocal and instrumental music filled in between scenes, and the congregation felt highly repaid for attending.

June 15 the Sunday school hour was occupied by the Children's Day program, the little tots performing their small parts in a sweet and artless fashion. The decorations were designed by Sister Iva Edgerton, who also planned the service.

After the program, according to previous arrangements, all drove to Spring Branch Church and joined with them in a baptismal service. Three East Independence children were baptized, Myrtle Stowell, June Wagner, and William Crabb.

A Veteran Speaks of Visit to Centennial

Elder James Baillie, an aged and experienced elder, of Scranton, Kansas, upon his return home after he and his wife had visited the Centennial Conference, writes a personal letter to one of the editors, from which is quoted the following:

"We can not help but see and rejoice with you because of the progress that is being made by the church. . . . Many of our brothers have found that in order to have God work with us we must work with God. . . .

"I love Zion's Ensign. It is worth more than its weight in gold because of the words of life it contains. . . . I have been one of its readers since its first publication. It is food for our thought, and I can not do without it. If we want to progress with the church, we must know what the church is doing, and for this reason must read our church publications, or at least all we can get of them. I have tried to read what I could get since I came into the church."

Terlton, Oklahoma

Saints of this branch recently enjoyed a week's meetings conducted by Elder William Bath, and we hope seed was sown that will later bear fruit. The Saints welcomed Brother Bath back to our district, and hope he will be in our midst again soon.

The branch is slowly progressing. The Sunday school is well attended. Good prayer meetings are had every Wednesday night. Preaching from two to four times a month is by the local priesthood.

At the last sacramental service a good spirit prevailed, and all seemed filled with a desire to press forward in the Lord's work.

The women are doing good work together each Wednesday afternoon under the president of the department, Sister Sadie Pearson. They are planning an ice cream social in the near future.

The branch is preparing a Children's Day program for June 15.

Commences Sixth Mission to Scandinavia

By P. T. Anderson

Brooklyn, New York, June 13.—Before leaving the homeland I wish to write a few words to the church. I left my home in Council Bluffs, Iowa, June 7 in the evening, and the next morning I arrived in Chicago, where I was met by friends from Denmark with whom I became acquainted on former missions to Denmark. I spent Sunday and Monday visiting among them and had a happy time there. I met Brother Fred Davies there Monday, and together we left that evening for New York. Brother Davies, an English student at Graceland College, is returning home to work in the British Mission.

I had thought of stopping at Cleveland and going to Kirtland to visit the Temple, but when we arrived in Cleveland it was raining very hard, and the prospects were that the downpour would continue all that day. We, therefore, concluded to continue on to Buffalo. There we stopped to visit Niagara Falls, which proved most interesting to me, as I have never before been there. The sunshine was bright.

We left Buffalo at 9.55 in the evening, and next morning at 7.30 arrived in New York, where we were met by Elder T. J. Elliott, of Brooklyn. Brother Elliott took us sight-seeing and showed us some interesting places in and around the city. We left New York in time to attend the prayer meeting in Brooklyn, and there with a group of Saints had a very good hour of worship and prayer. Brother Davies and I were called upon to make a few remarks. We did the best we knew how, and felt that the Lord was with us in the meeting.

Last evening we were invited to supper with Brother R. Squire and family, and a happy time was spent together.

Tomorrow at eleven o'clock in the morning we leave New York, and I begin my sixth mission to Scandinavia. Through the Herald I wish to express my thanks to the Saints in America wherever I have been for their kindness. Especially do I thank the Saints in Northeastern Nebraska District, in Bedison, Missouri, and in my home branches, Council Bluffs and Hazel Dell, Iowa. My prayer for you shall ever be that you shall be richly blessed by the Lord. May we all continue faithful to our trust, and may God be with us until we meet again. I send best wishes to the church in general.

Monetville, Ontario

June 2.—Another branch has been organized in Owen Sound District. We wish to say that we are glad, though our number is limited, that God has elected to put us on the Latter Day Saint map.

Apostle Roy S. Budd and District Missionary H. A. Dayton arrived here the night of May 23. Apostle Budd was the speaker Sunday afternoon. It was decided to hold a short series of meetings starting Sunday evening and continuing until Wednesday evening. These services were well attended by the Saints, and a few nonmembers were out. Brother Budd was blessed with the Spirit and deeply impressed his message upon the minds of young and old. The children loved him.

Elder Dayton spoke for a short period of time Wednesday evening. During his all too short discourse he imparted a beautiful thought which I would like to pass on: There is no sacrifice save in the imagination; rather is it an opportunity to serve.

After this the business of organizing a branch in Monetville was taken up. We had heretofore been organized into a group. During the meeting which followed, two of the brothers were ordained to the priesthood, Arthur Mercer to the office of deacon, Kenneth S. Crabbe to the office of priest in the Aaronic order. Elder J. L. Fryer, who resides here, is branch president; Brother Kenneth Fryer, recorder; Brother Kenneth S. Crabbe, organist and chorister; Brother Arthur Mercer, treasurer. Though situated four miles from the post office, it was decided to call this branch the Monetville Branch.

We feel that God has blessed us by the calling of our brothers to his work and also by the short sojourn with us of one so high in the church as Apostle Budd. As a result our faith is renewed and strengthened, and we will work harder to make our branch a success and to increase our membership. We are looking forward to having Elder Dayton with us again this summer.

ELENA MERCER.

Hammond, Indiana

1153 Monroe Street

June 8.—On Mother's Day we paid respect to our mothers—those with us and those who have passed on—with a playlet typifying the effect of mother's teaching on our lives. Every mother in the branch was presented a pink carnation as a token of honor.

District President William Osler and his wife were with us the last week in May. Brother Osler showed us again the only type of person that would dwell in or help build up Zion. He encouraged the Saints materially, especially the priesthood. He explained the new method of teaching religious education to the priesthood so that it was easily understood. Many had gained a knowledge of the plan at General Conference, and could see how it was another milestone in our progress. Brother Osler could not stay with us long, so after seeing his wife off for her home in Canada, he returned to other duties in the district.

At a recent business meeting the new program of religious education was thoroughly explained to the Saints, and by vote they agreed to try it out as rapidly as is practicable. We hope it will work to the good of all and make our church life an eternal round of activities for every member of the branch—a seven-day week project in building Zion.

Memorial Day all gathered at Morris Park, in Hammond, for a social time. The weather was cool, but a warm friendliness prevailed among the Saints. Children availed themselves of the swings, teeter-totters, and slides, and the older folk put the ball diamond to its intended use. At lunch time all brought their baskets and spread an array of food on the grass. We felt that the day was well spent and that the exercise and sociability were necessary for a balanced development.

Last Sunday night two plays "Conversations," by Brother Elbert A. Smith, concerning "The organization of the church," and "The church at Kirtland," were presented. These plays have been well received, and they give one a keener appreciation of church history. Work is started on the next play in this historical series.

Brother H. G. Cresse, branch solicitor, has worked diligently to teach the children the importance of the junior stewardship work. Junior stewardship books have been given to those promising to keep their accounts faithfully for the year. Financial statements have been made and tithing paid. The children have shown a good interest in this new movement.

Brother and Sister D. H. Smith were the only ones from our branch who were able to attend the district conference at Clear Lake, Indiana, June 7 and 8. Adverse economic conditions make it necessary for many of our members to be available on short notice.

Next Sunday, June 15, we are observing Children's Day with the play "Zion redeemed." Baptism may also take place at this time. Much energy has been spent to make this a memorable day for the children.

Oakland, California

From The Bulletin

June 1.—Today is the monthly sacramental service in which the Saints will memorialize the great sacrifice of the heavenly Father made in behalf of his children. Worship on this occasion should be deeply appreciative.

Brother Virgil Etzenhouser, who endeared himself to this congregation because of his ministry and genial loyalty, spent a few days among his friends en route to Honolulu. He left Thursday on the S. S. Sierra.

The pastor is visiting Ukiah to preach the baccalaureate sermon celebrating the graduation of the high school students. He will also minister to the local church of our own communion there.

We regret to report a serious relapse for the little son of Brother and Sister Tasto. He lies very low in the Merritt Hospital. The latest news is that he is improving. Fred Mattern was in an automobile accident but is improving.

This morning Sister Carlotta Davis's class has charge of the devotional service in the Sunday school.

It is expected that the Children's Day services June 15 will be held in the new church.

A telegram received by Brother C. Hawley from President F. M. Smith announces that he will be in Oakland for the opening services of the new church.

June 8.—Today throughout the Christian world is being celebrated the nineteen hundredth anniversary of the gift of the Holy Spirit. After the ascension of Christ, this power of God was breathed into the infant church, making it invincible against all opposing powers, taking the weak things of the earth to subdue the mighty. Hebrews, Romans, and Greeks surrendered to the new kingdom which was not of this world.

In the claims peculiar to our church, the Restoration meant not only doctrines and ceremonies and church institutions, but more than all these the power of God by which the same spiritual exploits were to be performed. As in the ancient days this power met the existing needs of men and women in the real world in which they lived. Likewise today this power must meet the needs of the twentieth century.

This morning the pastor will be the speaker at Park-Presidio Church, San Francisco, and in the evening will preach at Oakland. This morning Brother Roy Weldon will occupy the pulpit here.

We are happy to report improvement in the condition of the sick ones of this congregation.

An offertory solo, "How beautiful upon the mountains," was sung by Juanita Hofsess, soprano. Sister Hazel Scott played the organ.

Next Sunday will be observed in Central Branch as Children's Day. There will be special services of baptism and confirmation at the morning service.

The junior boys will be hosts to their parents at a church dinner next Friday evening at seven o'clock.

Fourth Church

"Faith" was the subject of Brother A. H. Chrestensen's sermon at the morning hour May 18. He read the eleventh chapter of Hebrews, and his text was from the fifteenth chapter of Romans, verse eleven. He also read from Revelation 21.

The testimony of God's goodness and great love for his workers in the mission fields was the theme of Patriarch Ammon White's sermon in the evening.

At the family service at 9.30 in the morning June 1, Sister Eleanor Sandy, of Central Church, gave an interesting talk on the young people's camp at Nauvoo.

The sacramental service was richly seasoned with the Spirit of Jesus Christ. Testimonies from the depth of the soul were many and came close one upon another until past the regular hour of dismissal. God spoke very gently and kindly to the young people, admonishing them to be clean in body as well as in spirit. All were given the blessings which come to those who have prepared themselves to receive divine support and assistance.

At the 6.30 hour in the evening Elaine Smith read a paper on music among the Israelites and other ancient people.

The morning service June 8 commenced with the reading of "A general epistle to the Saints," by Pastor J. O. Worden, who then delivered an instructive sermon on the topic, "Tuning in and listening to God." His text was Psalms 49: 4: "I will incline mine ear to a parable."

Brother A. H. Chrestensen, of Kansas City, occupied the pulpit in the evening, reading Psalms 14. His instruction along the line of economics were made plain by the simplicity with which he handled his subject.

Bennington Heights Church

Elder Hugh W. Goold was the speaker at eleven o'clock, reading as a lesson Psalms 15. His sermon was very interesting. Brother Goold is a former pastor and is always welcome at Bennington Heights.

A short devotional service prepared by the pastor, Orville G. Helm, was had before the commencement of the Sunday school period. This devotional service proved popular and may be continued.

At 7.45 Brother Frank McDonald, of the general missionary force, was the speaker, impressing his hearers with his forceful delivery of the necessity for a godly walk in Christ Jesus.

Some of the Sunday school young folks have made a good record, attending three hundred Sundays in succession.

The interior of the church building is being redecorated. Wedding bells recently rang for Floyd Kelley and Grace Groenaman.

Castroville Mission

Monterey County, California

June 11.—Testimony that the gospel is taking root in the hearts of the people in this vicinity is evidenced by the growing list of members here. Fifty-one have been baptized in the last two years. Of this number, thirteen have joined the church since December 1, 1929. This work has been done largely through the efforts of Brother A. Ray Lawn, of Watsonville. On March 16 six were inducted into the kingdom. On April 20, Easter Sunday, Robert Lowrey, of Castroville was baptized by Brother Lawn in the Pacific Ocean. Again on May 25 a happy group of Saints motored to Moss Landing, where Orville Dick and Wilma Buak were baptized by Brother Lawn. Brother Dick is sixty-three years of age, and Sister Wilma eight. Preparations had been made to have an outdoor basket lunch on the beach sands after the ceremony, but due to the chilly wind we drove back to Castroville and enjoyed a fine lunch and visit together. At the evening services the candidates were confirmed by Brothers Lawn and Hinton.

All of the meetings are progressing. As most of the members here are new in the faith, the program and work have the aim of bringing development and enlightenment to all. Saturday evening, May 24, about fifty-five of the Saints and their friends met at the church and gave a surprise reception to the new missionary in our midst, Herbert Hinton, of San Francisco. A fine spirit of brotherly love was present, and all were cemented more closely together in the bonds of Sainthood.

On June 1 a spiritual feast was enjoyed by the Saints at the sacramental service. The priesthood present included several visiting members. Elder Hyrum L. Holt, of Whittier, Elder John Lawn, of Hollister; and Priest A. Patterson, of Modesto, assisted Elder A. Ray Lawn, Elder Herbert Hinton, and Priest J. A. Jones of this mission. A reverential and peaceful spirit was present, and during the meeting the Spirit spoke to us. We were told our place of meeting together is an humble church, yet so is the gospel an humble gospel. We were advised to labor together in meekness, humility, and love and to help one another. The message also told of calamities at our door that grieved the Father.

At the evening service it was announced that three young people have given their names as candidates for baptism, which gives us much joy.

There is a good deal of sickness in this locality, yet God is merciful to his children, and many can testify of his blessings of healing in their behalf. HERBERT E. HINTON.

The Sanitarium

Some twenty-one years ago the Independence Sanitarium opened its doors and began the task of caring for the sick who sought admittance; and since that time the number of patients has steadily increased. Despite the increased number of available beds made possible by "hook or crook" changes in and additions to internal space, the limit of capacity has steadily been pressed. And for many months the demands have at times exceeded the capacity of the institution.

For several years those in charge of the Sanitarium have been aware of the necessity of more room and better building, and repeatedly have made requests for appropriations for the purpose of securing the needed increased capacity. But because of the large number of urgent demands made upon the church treasury, the Sanitarium was largely left to shift for itself.

In its work since its inception, the Sanitarium has been more of a hospital in its work than a sanitarium, because the demands made upon it by the community in which it stands were largely for hospitalization. And in responding to these demands the growth of the institution has been in hospital work and equipment. Thus the Sanitarium has become the hospital for Independence and eastern Jackson County.

The community needs for larger hospital service and a knowledge of this on the part of the Sanitarium authorities suggested the cooperation of local (city and county) forces with those of the church, to supply the demand. The church through the Sanitarium Board expressed its willingness to cooperate with local authorities, and the Chamber of Commerce of Independence met this approach by undertaking to raise in contributions from the citizens one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, to put with a like amount from the Sanitarium Board. A drive was organized, and the task of raising one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars from the citizens of Independence and vicinity was begun, under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce. It looked like an insurmountably large task; but as we go to press, the campaign is nearing its close with every indication pointing to the successful culmination of the endeavor. To this appeal there has been a fine response from the citizens of Independence, irrespective of race, politics, or creed. The need for larger hospital facilities is generally recognized, as is also the work of the Sanitarium in the past in doing the work of a community hospital.

The results of the campaign will be to put on the present Sanitarium grounds a new building at a cost of approximately one quarter of a million dollars, modern, well-equipped, and designed for expansion to care for increased demands. The movement results in a change in board personnel, as well as in the name of the institution. The board will be enlarged to include two ex officio members—the mayor of Independence and the "eastern" judge of Jackson County; and the institution will be called the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital.

In making these changes, the board has not for a moment lost sight of the original purposes of the institution. It is intended that not only will it continue to function as a sanitarium, but that this feature of its work will expand. We look forward in hope that this expansion will be rapid.

The drive for contributions from Independence citizens has been conducted quietly, but efficiently, and the headquarters of the Chamber of Commerce has for a few weeks been a very busy place. The solicitors are well organized, and the daily lunches in the Memorial Building, at which generals, majors, colonels, and captains make their reports are interesting occasions somewhat unique in Independence history. A fine feeling towards the Sanitarium seems to pervade the community, and holds good promise of the future success of the institution.

President Elbert A. Smith Benefited by Surgery

Sometime during the Centennial Conference President Elbert A. Smith took his departure for the Sanitarium at Battle Creek, Michigan, for the purpose of securing needed rest and the physical benefits the institution could offer him. He was badly spent and suffering.

Having remained there for two months under observation and in favorable surroundings, some improvement in his health had been obtained. But the doctors decided that, due to Brother Smith's hypertrophied condition some relief might be given him by operating for thyroid. The thyroid operation was accomplished June 19, and on the 19th and 20th the patient was reported as doing well and remarkably well.

The Saints of the church will be glad to hear of his satisfactory progress.

We Need Christ Loyalties

We are told a beautiful story in simple words in the gospel according to John. Jesus was going about gathering together his disciples. Here is the incident in its scriptural setting:

The day following Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me. Now Philip was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter. Philip findeth Nathanael, and saith unto him, We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph. And Nathanael said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see.

Nazareth was a city despised by the Jews. Their fathers had despised Nazareth for generations, and the feeling toward the little city had become a Jewish tradition. All self-respecting Jews despised Nazareth and looked for no good to come from her. For this reason Nathanael's question was not unexpected to Philip, the question of a little loyalty. Philip did not argue with his friend, he did not try to convince him with words that Nazareth could produce good; he merely answered: "Come and see." How much this man who later became Jesus' follower must have grown in loyalty to high ideals in his association with the Master! That conversation with Philip and the response to his invitation formed the turning point in the life of Nathanael. From that time his loyalties began to expand.

Today we believe and teach that as the child grows his experiences involve constantly growing and expanding loyalties. At first he knows only the home, next it is the school and the church, the community, the town, the State, the Nation. And now men are endeavoring to add to that list an international consciousness and to expand the loyalty of every man, woman, and child to include consideration for and confidence in all mankind.

Christ's life was crowded with great loyalties. He was infinitely loyal to the Father who for a divine purpose had sent him to live among men; he was loyal to that purpose, and he was loyal to himself and his friends. His daily life gave constant expression to his big loyalties, his utter lack of jealousy and provincialism. He had come to earth for a great purpose, and he was true. He said, "Follow me."

To be a true follower of the Christ calls for a broad-visioned, big-hearted people, a people whose lives are ruled by the same ideals and loyalties which took the Savior even to the cross. His stride is too rapid for those who hesitate and doubtfully ask, "Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth?" His task is too great for the souls who spend their time jealously watching the achievements of others. His purpose is too divinely important to be committed to those who allow their lives to be circumscribed by little loyalties.

It is easy for us to think ourselves loyal when we are fired with the enthusiasm generated by a General Conference, a convention, a reunion, a big undertaking successfully completed. The real test comes when we settle back to routine work. Then as we endeavor to apply that which we have learned, to utilize our zeal advantageously, do we need to keep constantly before us the vision of Christ loyalties.

"Philip saith unto him, Come and see."

In the Midst of Sacrifice Period

This number of the Herald comes into the homes of the Saints in the midst of the period of eight days set apart as Sacrifice Week—a period fraught with many possibilities of renewed progress for individuals and for the church.

Soon after one of the most depressing periods of our church existence, the spirit of sacrifice in a woman who had all her life been devoted to the interests of the church prompted her to send a one hundred dollar check to the Bishop as a sacrifice offering. She had the progress of the church as the objective of her act, but without doubt there came to her tears of joy when she realized how effective for good her example had proved. She brought a personal benefit to herself as she sought to bring about a unity of spirit in the church.

God has so arranged affairs as to leave himself always free from debt. He permits no child of his to do work or put forth effort or sacrifice for him without seeing that he gets his munificent reward. Men are generally deeply in debt to God, and many have debts of long standing they have not attempted to adjust with him. God does not permit his debts to run delinquent.

This sacrifice period is the opportunity of the Saints to pay off some of their old debts. It is their opportunity to help forward the missionary and organization work of the church. Every Saint should make a determined effort to unite with his brothers and sisters in the spirit of sacrifice.

Winning Districts in the Oratorical Contests

It was found impossible to compile the complete data on the Centennial Oratorical Contest until after the finals, which occurred on April 6. A careful check of the points to be allowed on the basis of responses shows that first place has been secured by Graceland College, which was treated as a district in Region 10, of which C. B. Hartshorn was regional director. Two scholarships will be given this district for winning the most points.

Second place was won by the Seattle and British Columbia District in Region 7, of which Granville Swenson was regional director. One scholarship will be given this district.

Third place was secured by the Southern California District in Region 6, of which G. P. Levitt was regional director. A complete set of playground equipment will be awarded this district.

By referring to pages ten, eleven, and twelve in the handbook of instruction, it will be seen that the districts winning first, second, and third places are made the basis for awards by the general church. Branches may be awarded prizes for securing the highest number of points by the district in which they are located. The awards to districts winning first, second, and third places apply to the entire number of districts in the church, and not to the districts winning in each of the sixteen regions. It will be readily appreciated that if awards were given to districts in each region, the amount involved would run into large figures.

The publication and distribution of these awards to districts is the final act of closing the Centennial Oratorical Contest. This is the first contest of its kind to be made church wide in its scope, and it has developed an experience which will be invaluable in initiating and conducting future contests, of which, we hope, there will be many in the coming years.

The contest has been the means of stimulating a church-wide review of the ideals and purposes of the Restoration of the gospel in the latter days, as believed and practiced by this church. It has brought to a great number a personal knowledge regarding the authoritative mission of the church. It has brought a personal testimony of its divinity to an even greater number, and on the whole the influence of the contest has extended to many thousands of Saints in addition to the one thousand and six who registered in the contest.

It has given to the church a new book entitled Youth and the Restoration, which contains the six orations given in the final contest with the pictures of the participants, and twenty-four other orations of outstanding merit. This book has missionary possibilities, and represents a cross section of the thoughts and experiences of the young people of the church who necessarily had to make a careful and analytical study of their subjects to survive the many elimination contests and to be selected out of several hundred as deserving a place among the thirty best orations. It is a splendid book to give to nonmember friends of the church, and year after year will undoubtedly bear a convincing testimony and prove a constant witness to the ideals and purposes of the Restoration.

Sacrifice Week

An elderly sister leaving for California handed her sacrifice offering to one of the bishops the day before starting on her trip, and made the comment that she wanted it to be counted among the first, and preferred to make her offering before she started rather than after she arrived at her destination.

Over a long period of years this has been the attitude of this sister. When there was work to do, she was among the first to offer her services. When money was needed, her offering has always been among the first to be received. With consistent regularity she has paid tithing.

The Christian character developed in this sister has not come to her because she has dreamed herself into this high standard of Christian living, but because she has actually given of her time, service, and money to help build the kingdom of God. In doing this she has built a Christlike character.

This week of sacrifice is a special time in which the church is called to prayer, meditation, and sacrifice. There are thousands who doubtless have observed the same course as did the sister mentioned above. They will be counted as spiritual supporters of the church, as thoughtful observers of its needs, and as helpers in supporting the church financially.

But also we are interested in those other thousands who forget the church until sickness comes or disaster or disappointment overtakes them. Then their first thought is of the church, which all through the years of their forgetfulness has been kept on its onward course by the dependable Saints.

During this sacrifice week, will you be counted as a dependable kingdom builder, or among those who neglect to keep their lamps burning? The parable of the ten virgins is not far removed from human experience today. Now is the time for you to determine if you shall be counted among the wise. Sacrifice week gives you an opportunity to make this decision.

Church Bonds

THE desirability of church bonds has gained church-wide recognition because 5% plus safety meets two vital requirements of the investor. The consideration which prompts people in the selection of their investments are:

Safety of principal.

A good interest return.

Prompt and unfailing payment of principal and interest.

In these days when stocks and bonds of various kinds are uncertain and questionable, and when the future in many lines of business seems to be doubtful, it is a good time to invest your savings in church bonds, which are backed by the integrity of a hundred thousand people in addition to meeting the above requirements.

From every point of view they are a good investment, safe for you and a help to your church. No one who ever invested a dollar with the church ever lost a penny. Are you willing to invest your money where you have intrusted your hope of eternal salvation?

Church bonds are offered in denominations of $25, $50, $100, $200, and $1,000. Any denomination of these bonds may be bought on payments, if desired. Send orders for bonds to the Presiding Bishopric, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. Additional information furnished on request.

Advantages of Further Education

By G. N. Briggs

Education has been defined in about as many different ways as there are writers on the subject. No two persons ever attain the same education. One might as well expect two children in the same family to be alike because they eat from the same table. The personal nature of education is very important. A man is himself plus his education.

What are some of the advantages of a higher education?

In the first place it should be distinctly understood that within the walls of a college or university is not the only place where higher education can be secured. Many well-educated, refined, and cultured people never attend college. However, it has been found that within the college higher education can be secured more quickly, at less expense, and in most cases more efficiently, than in any other way. The readers of this are urged, as they proceed with the article, to remember that there are other ways of becoming educated than by attending college.

Frequently attempts have been made to express the value of an education in precise terms—indeed, with mathematical precision. One who considers all the circumstances will easily perceive that all such attempts must be more or less futile.

What is education worth? It is easy to ask; very difficult if not impossible to answer. What is the value of life, of love, of religion, of friendship? Who can answer?

Many attempts have been made to express the value of education in terms of personal honor and renown, in service, or in dollars and cents. One such estimate is as follows: "In the United States as a whole, the average college graduate earns $2,000 a year, the average high school graduate $1,000, the average elementary school graduate $500. A college education is worth $72,000 and a high school education $33,000. Each day spent in high school is worth $25 to each pupil; each day spent in college $55.55."

One need not take too seriously these attempts to put the value of an education in terms of money. They are by no means conclusive, but have only certain significance. What is the chief aim of higher education?

Is It Service?

The worth of a college education in training for service to one's fellow men, and in ability to participate in democratic institutions in a country such as ours where the people are responsible for the form of government they enjoy, is certainly of prime importance. Education is a "patriotic duty" was emphasized during and after the war; it is of even greater importance in times of peace. President Coolidge has said that democracy depends on an educated citizenry. The patriot is not merely he who serves the country in war. Patriotism is even more needed in times of peace. The full capacity to serve the country, the church, and God comes only with ample training.

The United States Bureau of Education in a publication a few years ago makes the following comparisons:

The efficiency of an illiterate people in competition with an educated nation is as the crooked stick against the sulky plow; the sickle against the reaper; the bullock cart against the express train, the ocean greyhound, and the airplane; the pony messenger against the telegraph, telephone, and wireless; the individual harangue against the printing press, the newspaper, the library; the spinning wheel against the factory; the pine fagot against the electric light; the peddling of skins and herbs from the oxcart against the bank, the check book, the railroad, the department store; the log hut against the steel skyscraper; the unaided eye against the microscope and telescope; incantations and magic against the chemist, the hospital, the modern physician and surgeon. Take away from one entire generation all education, and society must revert to the stick plow, the oxcart, and such primitive means, because steel implements, locomotives, steamships, electricity, telephones, telegraph, waterworks, steel buildings, mining and chemical industries, factories, modern sanitation, hygiene and medicine, books, newspapers, courts of justice, and laws that protect and defend the rights of the weak are all impossible without education and are efficient only in proportion as educated intelligence is applied to them.

Is It Pleasure and Joy in Living?

One of the great objectives in life is to get the greatest amount of joy and pleasure possible while we pass along the road of life. Only by so doing can we give it to others. Education of the greatest value is that which brings the largest amount of personal satisfaction, pleasure in art, literature, music, religion, all the higher things of life. These are best appreciated by the educated, not necessarily the college educated, but by the refined, the cultured of God's people.

To be in touch with the world's great minds of the past and the present, to comprehend the problems that confront civilization, to partake of the world's culture, and to be in attunement with the Infinite brings the highest degree of satisfaction and joy.

Is It Leadership?

The worth of an education was demonstrated during the recent war as perhaps never before so markedly in all history. Men with a college education occupied the positions of leadership—held the commissions. They were found to be able, on short notice, to do the necessary things, to meet the emergencies arising every day, to be of the best help to their country in her greatest crisis when we were plunged into the worst catastrophe of all the world's history. The prepared man met the country's supreme need. A recent war bulletin gives us the following:

With no schooling the child has only one chance in 150,000 of rendering distinguished service; with elementary schooling he has four times the chance of one without it; with high school education he has 87 times the chance; with a college education he has 800 times the chance.

Is It Distinction?

Wealth is a poor basis for the judgment of a man. Anyone can earn a living. The question is one of making the best use of money earned, not a question of the high cost of living as much as the cost of high living. Many have based the value of an education on the distinction attained. One of the usual methods is to compare the names in "Who's Who" with those not there. In a recent edition of "Who's Who," 24,278 names were recorded. Of them

- 74% had a college education.
- 10% had a high school education.
- 7% had a common school education.
- 2% were self-educated.
- 7% had no educational report.

These figures are certainly striking. The inference seems clear that those who may be ambitious to rise greatly increase their chances by obtaining a college education. And yet distinction is not the most important thing in life. Even if it were, many self-educated men have risen to great distinction.

Is It Wealth?

No one would say it is. It is true that many educated people are wealthy. It is equally true that men without a college education have amassed fortunes. Carnegie, with a common school education, accumulated many millions. Rockefeller, Edison, Duke, are other examples. It is an interesting fact about all of these men that they have spent the bulk of their riches on the education of others. A great English financier said recently:

When an honest and diligent but uneducated boy comes into my bank, I say, "He will make a good bookkeeper," and I put him to work at the books. When I get hold of a youth with a liberal education, I say, "He will make a real banker," and I give him every opportunity to learn all branches of the business. Almost invariably he makes good.

It is a commonplace of banking that if two boys of apparently equal capacity, one college bred, and one not college bred, are set to work in a bank, at first they will go along together, if, indeed, the college boy is not a little handicapped in the race. But after ten years the college boy has driven ahead and is still going, while his competitor has reached his limit and stays at the bookkeepers' desk.

The end of education is not, then, the massing of wealth. As a matter of fact, the college bred do occupy many positions of financial importance. Exceedingly few of them are in the rank of the needy, although very many are not wealthy.

Will anyone be bold enough to give a final answer to the question: "What is the aim of higher education?"

Is it service?

Is it pleasure and joy?

Is it leadership?

Is it distinction?

Is it wealth?

Graceland through the years has helped hundreds to attain these ends, and much more in many instances. In this opening year of the new century of the history of the church, Graceland is better equipped than ever before to administer to the ever-increasing demands of the church and the state in the preparation of her youth.

Apostasy and Restoration

A sermon by S. A. Burgess, delivered at the Stone Church, February 16, 1930; reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

In speaking of the Apostasy and the Restoration, we are naturally taking into account the wealth of information in the hands of our hearers. Most of us are already convinced of this fact of an apostasy and a restoration. This evening we may well consider each part of the subject under the three general heads, although we will not attempt strictly to follow this division of scriptural passages, the facts of history, and finally the philosophy involved.

It would not profit us merely to go back and throw stones at those who lived in the centuries of the Dark Ages, however vile they may have been. It would not profit us merely to spend our whole time in the adoration of those who have preceded us, or pat ourselves on the backs and thank God we are not as other men. The question is, What lesson remains for us today to learn? We must consider first the facts and then the philosophy or lesson involved. What lessons are there for us in this apostasy and restoration?

In viewing the history of the past it is possible for us to collect those things that look worst and paint a black picture for some one; or, we can collect such points as favor some one view and paint the picture white. We trust for divine wisdom to paint the picture as near the truth as possible.

It is well, at this time, that we as a people are prepared Sunday by Sunday, week by week, and consider that which we are about to celebrate. This is a year to celebrate in a second and greater sense, because if the chronology we have is true, that Jesus of Nazareth was born in 4 A. D.; and, if, as is doubtless true, he was baptized when thirty years of age, and then he commenced his ministerial career (A. D. 27), and his ministry lasted three years, as most Bible students agree, then it is almost certain that in the spring, at the Passover in A. D. 30, he was lifted up on the cross. One writer worked it out that he died April 6, A. D. 30. If so, then on April 6 we celebrate the nineteenth centennial of that most magnificent, that most glorious sacrifice that this world has ever seen, when God himself, in his Son, came down and manifested his love to humanity by suffering on the cross.

It may not be without significance that, when the church was restored, eighteen hundred years later, our heavenly Father selected that day of the Great Sacrifice as the day to be especially celebrated by again restoring his church to earth; that day on which the church was again organized.

Or, as other writers give April 7 as the date of the crucifixion, April 6 would be the day when the Lord broke bread in that great supper, and April 6, 1830, would be the eighteenth centennial of that event, the day appointed by the Lord when six men met and renewed that great covenant in memory of him.

Apostasy

After the death of our Savior, Peter wrote:

Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the scriptures is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.—2 Peter 1: 20, 21.

And continuing in the next chapter:

But there were false prophets among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of.

Note particularly that in the ages past, even in the early Christian church, there were false prophets and false teachers.

But there were many prophecies of an apostasy:

Acts 20: 29, 30: For I know this, that after my departing, shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them.

Matthew 11: 12: And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.

2 Thessalonians 2: Let no man deceive you by any means; for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition, who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshiped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God. Remember ye not, that, when I was yet with you, I told you these things? And now ye know what withholdeth that he might be revealed in his time. For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the way.

Acts 20: 28: Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also, of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them.

2 Timothy 4: 3: For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables.

Revelation 2: 4: Nevertheless, I have somewhat against thee, because thou hast left thy first love. Remember therefore from whence thou art fallen, and repent and do the first works; or else I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candlestick out of his place, except thou repent. But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaitanes, which I also hate.

Galatians 1: 6: I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel; which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, if any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed. For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ.

Mosheim and others note the facts of that earlier apostasy, how step by step they proceeded until the time came that we call the Dark Ages.

There are so many passages that clearly forecast an apostasy, time forbids reading all. Many of them are to be found in the Compendium and in the Instructor, and also in the tract by our latter-day apostle, John W. Wight, on the Apostasy of the Church. These passages very clearly forecast, not only that there would be a falling away of the early Christian church, but that it would commence even before the apostles had left the scene.

In the first century they had among them the practices of the Nicolaitanes, and other damnable teachings, and we can well believe they were the outgrowth of adultery, or polygamy as you may choose to call it. They departed in other ways from the faith. They departed because they looked around and, taking the way of the world, they attempted to make the church as much like the world as they could, in hope that thereby they might win the more to Christ. They copied after the Greek philosophy, the Roman philosophy; they copied practices that were evil. At least when Constantine made it the established church, it was easy to see that the church had no longer the spirit of inspiration.

The reading of the Scriptures was forbidden, because the priesthood claimed to be the representatives of God and to have the sole right to interpret Scriptures. Since they claimed this sole right, it was forbidden for anyone to read and thereby get a wrong interpretation. The people would rather listen to the priesthood and allow the priests—lower priests and higher priests—to direct, and thus learn what they must believe.

Confession—Indulgences

In John 20:23 it is written, "Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained." The confession of sin before the church is indicated in Holy Writ:

If you bring your gift to the altar and there find that thy brother has aught against thee, go first and be reconciled to thy brother, and if he will not eventually be reconciled, tell it to the church.

But this was considered to mean, "Tell it to the priest," and the priests encouraged that theory, so at length it was enlarged until they not only heard confession of sins, but undertook to forgive them, acting in the stead of God. It was a gradual development until they undertook to claim for themselves the right to say, "Thy sins are forgiven thee."

Among even Christian people there has occurred an interesting doctrine. It was connected with the transmigration of souls; that one's life here was but one of a series of lives, but that one was atoning in life for wrongdoing in past lives; that trials were to prove us and pay for some of this past evil. If borne patiently, so much was gained, but if not borne patiently, the original sin was returned also with the impatience, so there was a double burden to be paid.

Now in the Middle Ages a doctrine was developed in part akin to this, that there existed a great pile of righteous deeds, the righteousness of Jesus, the righteousness of the apostles and all of the saints, and that the priest could take from this great treasure house of righteousness, and offset it against the sins of the individual and thus cancel his sins, or blot them out, and therefore forgive the sin. But the righteousness of all the righteous people was continually added to this supply, which could be measured out like cloth, or used as a poultice to apply to wrongdoing.

Finally this degenerated to the extent where indulgences were sold, not only for past sins, but for future sin in the abstract and then in particular. That was the one remaining step. But this idea is founded in the assumption by the priesthood of the right to forgive sin, to act for the whole church and for God. Even the idea of indulgences is not alone a thing of the past, but is sometimes found in our own experience; nor is it only in the Dark Ages that it is difficult in church and state to convict wealth. Righteousness should not be a thing of time or of place.

It is clear that an apostasy took place, followed by a restoration, but it is also indicated in the Scripture that there will be again an apostasy.

1 Timothy 4:1, 2: Now the Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils.

Restoration

Unless there were an apostasy, or falling away, there would be no necessity for a restoration, but a restoration is clearly forecast.

Daniel 2:44, 45: And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever. Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it break in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter; and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof is sure.

Head of gold, arms and breast of silver, legs of iron, thighs of brass, feet of clay; but it was in the days of these kings, in the latter days, that the God of heaven would set up his kingdom.

Revelation 14:6, 7: And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of water.

We have already touched, in part at least, upon the fulfillment of how the church departed, until they no longer had the Spirit with them. It was not a sudden process, and yet it was enough to cause departure in the first century. They continued little by little to do wrong. The idea of the infallibility of the pope was not then developed, but is a doctrine developed in our own time. That doctrine is that the pope may be a vile sinner in his private capacity; be the most fallible of men in a private capacity, but as the Lord's anointed, and the head of the church, he was infallibly the voice of God; and so there abided in him the power of chrism, blessing and forgiveness of sin. God could speak only through him.

We must remember that there were also splendid men, good men, who had been bishops and archbishops of high caliber, who followed the truth as they saw it, and while we have placed emphasis upon the selling of indulgences, at the same time there were priests who made this ceremony not of indulgence, but of confession, a means of teaching valuable lessons; like the priest who, when a woman came and told him she had repeated some slander, told her to go and open a pillow and scatter the feathers about. When she came back and said she had done it, he said, "Now go back and pick them up." She said, "I can not do that; the wind has blown them everywhere." He said, "Neither can you undo the evil your tongue has committed."

There were good men who attempted to reform the church. As John Rushton said in his little tract, unless there was an apostasy it was heresy to attempt a reform. They attempted to reform the church, but at the same time there was not one, but many, who were looking for the time when the Lord would set up his new sign, call his new apostles. A hundred years ago there was a growing expectancy that the time was near at hand when God would restore the gospel. Many far-seeing men were looking for the coming of the new dispensation, which will be the same given in the days of Jesus.

So we find a boy who would not join any church, but went out to pray. Some said that he had never prayed before. That is not likely. At these meetings he was convinced of the mission of Jesus but was in doubt what church to join. So he went to his Bible to learn what he should do, and his Bible opened to the Epistle of James. James was writing to the church, to those who had been baptized in Christ Jesus. They believed in apostles, prophets, seventy, bishops, with other officers, and yet to them he said:

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think he shall receive anything from the Lord.

"If any of you lack wisdom." Ah, that presents at the start a very wonderful and glorious promise. Any of us have a right to ask of God and not simply through the priests. There is the restoration of true priesthood. This boy was young in years. He had to wait until he reached the years of accountability. Jesus did not enter his ministry until he was thirty years of age, according to the Jewish law. Joseph Smith did not receive the plates until after he had reached his twenty-first birthday, until he was a man in the eyes of the law of the land.

He says he went into the ways of youth and frivolity. Oliver Cowdery has told us that it was not anything bad he had done, but because he felt he had been frivolous-minded; had gone into things that young people did; innocent pleasures. But he had seen God and felt the force of that glorious vision.

Let us go back a moment. As he knelt and prayed, what did he first receive there that spring day in 1820? First there came to him the power of darkness so great that he could not withstand it; but he prayed to God, and his silent prayer was answered. The dark was rolled away, and a glorious vision opened before him. He saw two persons, most glorious, and one turned to the other and said, "This is my beloved Son; hear him." Here is the central fact of the whole Restoration, Jesus the beloved Son. Hear him! Despite all he had gone through, he yet remembered the purpose for which he had come, and when asked what his purpose was, he asked which of all the churches was right; which was true; which he should join. Those were the essential questions.

The answer was to join none of them; for these professors, not all professing Christianity, but these persons are wrong; and they are teaching—or the churches of the day are preaching—for God's commandments, the doctrines of men; setting up their human agency for the divine remedy.

Then when he was in his eighteenth year, as he prayed, an angel appeared to him three times in one night, and again in the morning, and finally took him to a hill and showed him there the plates, buried by the people who had lived on this continent—the plates of the Book of Mormon. He was not permitted to receive them. He quoted a passage from Malachi with other passages of scripture. Not satisfied with that, he repeated the message three times. Each year he came again, and finally on September 21, 1827, Joseph Smith reached the years of accountability and received the plates.

Our very worthy brother, Elbert A. Smith, has set forth the great religious ideas of Joseph Smith, jr. The first and greatest was of a new revelation. Men then believed that God had said all that he ever would say; and the people generally still have this idea—that God had nothing further to reveal. The heavens were as brass. In fact, when he stated he had seen a vision, they said it was of the Devil, as though the Devil had greater power to communicate than God.

First of all, then, the restoration of the idea that God is the unchangeable Father; that he is the same today as in the past, and as ready to converse with his children.

The second was the Book of Mormon. As Brother Elbert points out, the criticism that God didn't even know anything about America is answered by the Book of Mormon, which tells us that there were people here, and he came and communicated his will unto them.

The next idea was the restoration of the officers of the church. Restoration of the priesthood, for what? Kings and priests—that is what Strang would think. We have over in the office a manuscript of the minutes of one of their conferences, and it says they set men apart by the laying on of hands and the touch of the scepter. Some have claimed that a true priest is a God-ordained king, but whether he is or not, we prefer to take it the other way, that the true king or ruler is a God-ordained priest, humbly serving the Lord and the people of God. The true mission of priesthood is not to exalt you or me, but the priesthood is composed of men who are carrying out the work of God, in the service of others.

Another heresy held of old was that the priest stands between man and God. He is the mediator. The true service of the priesthood is to reconcile man to God, not to intervene between God and man, but to bring man into contact with the divine. So did Jesus, our only mediator.

Next arises the question of creed. Our creed is all truth. Our purpose is to restore the gospel as it was in the beginning. It is not a creed of faith alone, but of all truth, proving all things and choosing that which is best; when we find our belief is not true, then being willing to accept that which is true. We ought to be progressive and go on, and must if we are ever to put on the likeness which is in Christ Jesus. But it is well to remember that with all of our getting, we must get understanding. Remember, the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and the knowledge of the Holy One is understanding.

With all the learned men of the earth studying and looking for the Restoration, yet it is this ignorant boy who was chosen to do that great work—humble, that he might not take the credit to himself, but that he might begin at the foundation of wisdom, the fear of the Lord, which is the beginning of wisdom, and that understanding which is the knowledge of the Holy One. He believed that all truth must be in accord with the truth of the past, but having accepted this, we should go on to perfection.

Have you ever considered how these creeds have all been changed in the last hundred years, and how many who would not accept our faith, yet believe in the possibility of present-day revelation, believe that there is such a thing; that there must logically be such a thing as revelation today? A number of churches have taken up the idea of divine healing, with the laying on of hands for the healing of the sick. They are taking up stewardship and discussing it at length. Not all of the gifts have yet been acknowledged by others, but other churches are moving out, and we are thankful that it is so; that there is new light come into the world, which is inspiring and enlightening all.

Then comes this idea of priesthood. A man sent from God—the true man sent from God will always be the humble man. He will not look for glory for himself, but will glory in the fact that he, through his suffering, may bring good to others. His desire will be for the blessing of humanity, not for what he will get out of it, but O Father, that I may be permitted to work with thee for the blessing of humanity. I must be about my Father's business. There is nothing that can be greater than that. A priesthood humbly serving its God, and following in the footsteps of the Master; coworkers together with God and with one another.

There are two more factors evidently to the Restoration. Zion as the gathering place is one of the first; the other is the Inspired Translation. Of the Inspired Translation, P. Marion Simms in his Bible from the Beginning, published last year, says:

One of the most puzzling Bibles in print is that published in 1867 by the Reorganized Latter Day Saints, at Lamoni, Iowa. The Utah Mormons do not use it. It has many additions to the usual text, Joseph Smith having claimed a special revelation for the changes he made. Had these additions favored the doctrinal position of his church, the explanation would have been easy, but they do not seem to serve any denominational or sectarian purpose.

This much at least may be said of many of the changed readings found in the Bible of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints. Its author had the courage deliberately to alter the text, and make it say clearly what many Bible students succeeded in getting by theological legerdemain.

If these things are true, and we believe they are true, that the changes were not made to serve denominational purposes, is it not possible, even probable, that this book is what it claims to be, a revelation of many plain truths which had been taken away?

It is of further interest that he places the Inspired Version as one of the canon of the whole Scriptures along with the great manuscripts of the past.

As to the social program, the tremendous increase of interest in stewardship throughout the Christian world has given recognition to the need of a social revelation. Zion, a state or community of justice between men, has received growing acceptance to a very remarkable degree in the last one hundred years. We do not stand alone with these two concepts. But despite the devotion of a few in ages past, this plan was of less interest a century ago when land was still accessible and cheaper than today. It was not unique at that time by any means as there had already been some such attempts at a Utopian city in America prior to that time. But today the interest is certainly tremendously increased.

We stand tonight, then, at a new parting of the road. There has been apostasy after apostasy; restoration after restoration, and yet man has departed from God. If Paul, with all of his experience, was fearful lest after he had served others he himself might become a castaway, it behooves us also to walk with due care. We must realize the fact that departure from God is always possible. It is clear from the Scriptures that there will be a departure from the truth in the last days. (1 Timothy 4: 1, 2.) Though some have construed Daniel 2: 44 to mean that there can not be a falling away, we will deceive ourselves individually and collectively if we think that as individuals or a body we can not depart from God. Eternal vigilance is the price of safety. We can all agree that there has been one or more apostasies in these latter days. It behooves us, then, to be watchful, careful, with all prayerful kindness and love, holding firm to the rod of iron, which is the word of God, his Truth.

To us then is given this wonderful privilege of taking the truth of God to the world. Perhaps we could best illustrate it by an example. Consider the methods of artificial light. Men in ages past have had various forms of light, and but little progress was shown for many centuries, even millenniums. Candlelight was the best for ordinary use. Even my mother as a small girl remembers when dip candles were used. Then in a short time we all had the kerosene lamp; then the gas light; and finally came the electric light, practically all in the last fifty years. Even in twenty-five years the power and efficiency of electric lighting has increased manyfold.

Now if the Protestant churches are justified in sending missionaries to what they call the heathen (they call them heathen because the Christians have greater light than those to whom they go), then in like measure, and not in a spirit of pride, but because of the precious thing we possess, we should share with all others the greater light we have now received. Since our light is and should be greater than those to whom we go, we are justified in going to these other so-called Christian churches and offering them this greater light.

I do not say that you and I possess all of this greater light that we should have. There is much we do not yet have. But we have at least the principle, whereby we may have the full glory of divine light and intelligence.

If we will realize our responsibility, and seek learning by study and also by prayer; lacking wisdom, if we all ask of God and seek earnestly to know the truth, to make that truth a part of our lives, we may approach nearer to the divine throne, and there receive greater light for the blessing of others. Day by day and year by year we may come to a better understanding with one another as we grow nearer to the truth, and may become indeed the light of the world, and the whole world be made to rejoice that the truth of God has been again restored to the earth.

May the grace of God be with us, to help us to fulfill our responsibility. May God give us wisdom to help the honest in heart, the faithful, and the true to come unto him and learn of the Meek and Lowly. May his peace be with you.

Our Duty

An Exhortation

By Milburn H. Hull

But Jonah rose up to flee into Tarshish from the presence of the Lord and went down to Joppa; and he found a ship going to Tarshish; so he paid the fare thereof and went down into it, to go with them unto Tarshish from the presence of the Lord.—Jonah 1: 3.

God commanded Jonah to arise and go to Nineveh, that great city, and cry against it; for the wickedness of that city had come up before him. God knew Jonah's ability, and assigned him a task.

Jonah, in this instance, was tied to his duty. It was not intended that he would get away from it. God knew his limitations. Jonah's relation to his duty is very similar to the relation that you often see—of a cow picketed on pasture. As long as the cow is contented with the allotted area marked by that rope, she can eat and enjoy herself with much pleasure. But as soon as she tries to escape, she meets all sorts of trouble.

Such was the case with Jonah on this important occasion. As long as he followed God's instructions, everything worked smoothly. But as soon as he began to backslide and try to get away from that duty which God had assigned to him, all kinds of trouble beset him.

What was it that kept Jonah from performing this duty which God had assigned to him? Pride. Jonah was a Hebrew, and he had all of the characteristics of the average Hebrew character. The idea of heathen repentance to him was abhorrent. Jonah, a Hebrew, carrying the message of God to the heathen Ninevites! The idea was simply absurd. According to Jonah's line of thought, the Ninevites had no conception of what repentance meant. And if they did have, who would want the heathen people in the Hebrew society? "We are God's chosen people, we have special endowments, and we have a society of our own. We are disposed to do bigger and more polite business than this. This little, insignificant job you have given me, of teaching the heathen, does not suit me at all. I am a man with a great deal of experience, and I know how to deal with real things and real problems, and here you are sending me to preach to these little heathen Ninevites. Let some common person who does not hold a place of prominence, as I do, perform this work. I can not stand to start way down there. I am cut out for bigger things."

Jonah was just following a line of argument which is very prevalent today. God is calling some of us to perform the common tasks, and to do humble work; but we do not respond as we should. God gave Jonah great ability and many talents, and that was where Pride led him astray. We talk so much about big men and little men. We think that God thinks as men do. God knows nothing about such terms, save as he sees us using them. There are only sincere men and honest men and faithful men in the sight of God.

"Jonah, come and go to Nineveh, and hear the cry of my people." "Lord, I don't feel cut out for this sort of work. My talents are better displayed in society, and at my club, and at my lodge, and other places. You have plenty of humble people that haven't as much talent as I have, and who can do this work better. I am going to run off to the Tarshish of society, of business." And consequently you will always get into trouble, as did Jonah.

Henry Ward Beecher said, "The most of some people's troubles is forcing God to drag them along. As they won't follow voluntarily, so he is continually drafting them. And their troubles will never cease until they wake up and make an effort to walk where God wants them to go." God has to keep some people sick to make them follow him. He has to keep some poor to make them follow. He has to keep some humble and some burdened. Just as soon as some of us get rich, we forget God. God had to do a great deal to Jonah before he would come to his senses.

We would have so much less trouble in this world if we would just stop long enough to try to find what God wants us to do, and then, when he tells us, go and do that thing.

Jonah lacked a spiritual mind for his task. This is evident in his desire to get away from it. When Jonah was called by God, he was not living close enough to God. But when God calls, he always emphasizes the need of preparation. God called Moses and sent him to spend forty years in the Pharaoh's kingdom before he was ready for God's work. Jesus himself spent thirty years in preparation to work, and three years for his fellow men. Saint Paul, when he was called for the great task of evangelizing the Gentiles, spent three years in Arabia getting his heart right to answer God's call.

In this age of fast living, the air is charged with oratory, with music, with sermons, and with jazz. What do you hear? Whatever your heart is prepared to hear, whatever you have a mind to hear. You will have to cultivate a spiritual mind if you are to undertake spiritual tasks.

When Jonah was called to carry the gospel to the Ninevites, he did not have faith in God. To be able to carry the gospel of Jesus Christ requires faith. It required faith in ancient times. It requires more faith today. Some people do not believe that the gospel of Jesus Christ is the power of God unto salvation. They do not believe it is destined to save the world. They do not believe it will do what is claimed for it. And they are not responding to its call. Why? Are we doing our share now, or are we putting it off for some one else to do? Jonah may have doubted. He may have needed more faith. In that he was not so very different from many of us.

Do any of you remember Elbert Hubbard's story about President McKinley waiting to send a "Message to Garcia." General Garcia was in the wilds of Cuba fighting with a little band of Cubans against Spanish oppression. The United States had decided to join forces with Cuba, and they wanted some one to take Cuba a message to hold out until the United States soldiers landed. The President was looking everywhere for a man to deliver the message. Some one mentioned a young man by the name of Rowan in the State Department. He was sent for. When he arrived, he was given the message and told to set out for Cuba. Rowan did so without asking any question whatever. He simply saluted and set out, and in three weeks he had given Garcia the message that finally made Cuba an independent country.

This is what the church needs today! Some Latter Day Saint Rowans, who will have enough faith to take the gospel to the waiting, struggling, and dying men.

Are you going to be a Jonah, or a Rowan? Are you going to try to shirk your duty? or are you going to do it without asking questions?

The Lord had a job for me, but I had so much to do,
I said, "You get somebody else—or, wait till I get through."
I don't know how the Lord came out, but he seemed to get along—
But I felt kind o' sneakin' like—knowed I'd done God wrong.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Lincoln, Nebraska

June 14.—Pastor E. J. Lenox returned home the latter part of April after a few weeks at the Sanitarium and attending General Conference. A baby boy arrived at the Lenox home on Easter Sunday.

Elder and Sister E. F. Robertson and Brother Robertson's mother stopped in Lincoln April 27. They were on their way back to their mission in Maine after visiting Brother Robertson's mother at Franklin, Nebraska. Lincoln Saints were glad to have our former pastor here once more and to listen to two excellent sermons by him. The members brought lunch baskets packed with good things, and a luncheon was enjoyed in the church basement. His mother accompanied them as far as Omaha, where she is visiting a daughter.

Brother William Shakespeare, former missionary to Southern Nebraska District, was here May 4. He partook of the sacrament with us, favored us with his singing, and in the evening preached a fine sermon.

Sister Fike was called to rest May 9 after a period of suffering covering several months. Funeral services were held at Wilbur on Mother's Day, Elder C. H. Porter, a life-long friend officiating. Sister Fike was known to and loved by a host of friends. We will miss her but not as will her husband, who is left to mourn. He continues to live alone in the little home they made together. May God sustain him in his bereavement.

Sister Elsie Hale, who has been at Thune, Nebraska, the past nine months teaching, is spending her vacation at home. Her friend, Miss Lucy Gilmore, of Thune, accompanied her home and will attend the summer session of school at the State University.

The Department of Women presented a play, "Listen, ladies," at the church May 23. Ten were in the cast, which was directed by Sister Hale. All took part creditably, and a sum of more than twenty dollars was realized from the sale of tickets. They expect to present the play July 1, at Roca, Nebraska.

Sister Poague's Temple Builders had a chautauqua at the church May 29, earning about ten dollars. We are glad to be able to report these activities among our members. The social contact is helpful, and we believe will form a closer bond of fellowship.

Brother Jordan, of Des Moines, Iowa, is recovering in Saint Elizabeth Hospital. Seven weeks ago he suffered a fractured ankle when struck by a truck. He expects to soon be able to go home.

Among other recent visitors to Lincoln were Brother B. M. Anderson, of Omaha, who occupied the eleven o'clock preaching hour May 25; the grandparents of Sister Robidoux, Brother and Sister Luke, of Sheridan, Iowa; and Sister Lillie Reneau, of North Platte, who visited her sister, Mrs. Katie Hale, of Lincoln, as she was on her way to and from General Conference.

The evening of June 13 about fifty members gathered at the church honoring our young brother, Lawrence Brockway, who leaves us soon. A radio broadcasting program was the entertainment of the evening, given under the direction of Sister Carrie Hale, assisted by George Sutterfield. After the program the women served ice cream and cake. Lincoln will miss Brother Brockway. He has been a faithful worker, holding the office of elder and acting as assistant pastor. He deserves the highest praise for carrying on as he has in church work. Last year he received the highest honors in the university, leading a class of forty in the Phi Beta Kappa, an honorary society. He will soon obtain his master's degree and leave for his home in Wichita, Kansas, for the summer. He expects to go to Pasadena, California, next fall to attend school, working for a doctor of philosophy degree. We wish him Godspeed and hope that he will return to Lincoln whenever it is possible.

Brother Glenn Reichenbach, who completed his work at the university this year, has gone to Chicago to work for the Goodyear Tire Company.

George Sutterfield, another young brother, has won credit for himself and the church, receiving this year the one hundred dollar award for the best triumph over heavy odds in obtaining an education. He is a senior next year and is working at night for the Iowa Nebraska Light and Power Company, attending his classes and studies in the daytime. He is not only paying his own way, but is assisting a widowed mother and younger brothers and sisters, and in the church he is a deacon, our branch solicitor, and is also in charge of the recreational activities of the young people. Certainly he deserves commendation and credit for his work here.

June 15, Father's Day, was observed at the morning service, and the Children's Day program was in the evening under the direction of Sister Poague. The little children thoroughly enjoyed presenting this program, and they did well.

The work in the departments is progressing, and we hope for better things in the future.

Mallard, Iowa

June 12.—A fine meeting was had on sacrament Sunday, May 4.

The Women's Department has been busy painting and varnishing the floors and pews of the church, and as a result we have a neat, clean house in which to worship.

On Mother's Day, May 11, a good program was rendered at the eleven o'clock hour in honor of the mothers. The following Sunday Brother and Sister Edwards and family, of Pomeroy, visited our branch. Brother Edwards was the speaker at the morning service.

There was no evening service in the church due to the baccalaureate sermon at the school building, which was delivered by Elder Ray Whiting, of Council Bluffs. This was the first time a Latter Day Saint has been asked to take part in the commencement exercises at Mallard. We were much pleased when we were asked to have one of our ministers preach the baccalaureate sermon. We were prompted that Brother Whiting would be very good for the occasion and asked him to speak. He responded, and we are sure that all were well pleased, for we heard many comments favoring the sermon. The scripture reading was from Deuteronomy 30: 15-20. For a text he chose a part of Revelation 3: 8: "Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." Very forcefully he brought home the lesson of the need of choosing a life in which we may receive the blessings God has in store for us.

The graduating class numbered nineteen boys and girls.

One day I needed the Lord, needed him myself—needed him right away—

And he never answered me at all, but I could hear him say—

Down in my accusin' heart—I've got too much to do.
You get somebody else, or wait until I get through.

Now, when the Lord, he have a job for me, I never tries to shirk;

I drops what I have on hand and does the good Lord's work;

And my affairs can run along, or wait till I get through;
Nobody else can do the job that God has marked out for you.

—Dunbar.

We are proud of our young brother, Velmar Fish, who graduated with honors.

The Saints had planned on having Brother Whiting during the morning service, but because he was busy elsewhere he was unable to reach Mallard until five o'clock in the evening. We, therefore, had only a short visit with him. Brother Gerald Gunsolley brought him to our city, and they returned home soon after the service. We were much pleased with Brother Whiting's sermon, and feel that both brothers made considerable of a sacrifice to make the trip in so short a time. We pray that they may be blessed for helping us in this manner.

We are looking forward to a visit from our missionaries in the near future.

Lancaster, Ohio

1111 West Fair Avenue

May 11.—The Saints of Lancaster are proud of their new church home which has been built by much sacrifice and by the overcoming of many difficulties.

Our first meeting was a district meeting, and Saints and friends from all over the Southern Ohio District were present.

A social service began the meetings of the day, District President A. E. Anderton in charge. There was a good spirit of testimony present.

The preaching service followed with Brother Anderton as speaker on the subject "Mother," in commemoration of the day.

Dinner was then served in the basement of the new church, such a dinner as Latter Day Saints are in the habit of serving. The ice cream was donated by a nonmember.

Afternoon services began with a Sunday school business meeting in charge of Brother Gray, district Sunday school superintendent, in which the following officers were elected: superintendent, Elder W. P. Vickroy; secretary-treasurer, Sister Bessie Wasem; librarian, Brother Robert Dickson; organist, Sister Bessie Wasem. The following officers were installed by appointment: Brother Elmer Caldwell, assistant superintendent and treasurer; Brother Joseph Turner, chorister.

The preaching service which followed was of much benefit to all who attended. Brother J. E. Matthews, of Columbus, Ohio, was the speaker, and through him the Spirit gave us much encouragement and comfort. A young man, Brother Clayton Woods, was then confirmed.

The preaching service of the evening was of interest to nonmembers, Brother J. E. Matthews being speaker.

The Saints of Lancaster Branch invite all to come and worship with them.

On May 18 there was unusual interest in the Sunday school, attendance being much larger than heretofore.

At preaching service we had with us Brother Harley Vance, of Chillicothe, Ohio, and Brother Gersham Meyers, of Columbus, Ohio. Brother Vance preached, and Brother Meyers also gave some interesting points. Brother Meyers preached at the evening service. Many nonmembers are taking an interest.

Saturday evening, May 24, we met for the election of branch officers. Those elected are: Branch president, Elder S. E. Dickson; Branch clerk, Brother Earl Campbell; treasurer, Brother Elmer Caldwell; chorister, Sister S. E. Dickson; organist, Sister Bessie Wasem; solicitor, Elder W. P. Vickroy; publicity agent, Brother Elmer Caldwell. This with other business transacted starts the first year in our new home.

On May 25 there was good attendance at Sunday school and church services. Brother Gray, district superintendent, was here and preached. At the evening service Brother S. E. Dickson, pastor, preached.

Lancaster Saints are striving to serve God and his Son

Jesus Christ, and to live so that the promises given us on the first day in our new church home may be fulfilled, that the old Jerusalem gospel may be preached to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, that the Prince of Peace may come and dwell with us.

ELMER H. CALDWELL.

Thankful for Blessings of Sainthood

Freeburg, Missouri.—For the past two years we have not had regular privileges, but we have derived much comfort and strength from the church papers. We are working for a highway construction company and seldom have opportunity to meet with the Saints. During the last two years we have lived in different places in Illinois and Missouri and have had the pleasure of meeting with the Saints in Beardstown, Illinois, Hiteman, Iowa, and Jefferson City, Missouri. The services attended in those places will be remembered a long time. Although the Saints were strangers to us, we enjoyed the meeting with them and felt at home. We were also permitted to go home at Christmas time and meet with the Saints at Fairland, Oklahoma.

I am indeed thankful for these privileges. I want to live a humble and faithful life and some day find a home where we can attend services regularly, for I realize that the opportunities for development are much greater if one lives where he has opportunity to attend and participate in different church activities. I also know that I have much to do in my home in rearing my children, and my responsibility in this respect is even greater because we are isolated. I desire the prayers of the church that I may not neglect my duty.

I enjoy reading the Ensign and the Herald, especially the news from the branches where we have attended church.

The children and I are making plans for Sacrifice Week, and hope to help the church all we can.

MRS. R. L. MONTGOMERY.

Chicago, Illinois

Central Branch, Sixty-sixth and Honore Streets

Having been absent from my home branch for two months, I have not written of the activities of Central Church in Chicago. While away I was privileged to visit my brother and mother in Wheeler, Arkansas, who are isolated from church privileges. There are a few Saints at Siloam Springs, and they with my people will be happy to have the missionaries visit them. They feel that good will come of such a call.

With several other Chicago Saints, I journeyed by night bus to Saint Louis, where we were joined by other members, another bus being added to carry the crowd. We arrived in Kansas City at 5.30 p. m. and were soon in Independence with the surging Centennial Conference crowd, Saints from all over the land and other countries. We were happy to attend the conference, to renew old acquaintances, and to make many new ones. Strength, encouragement, and inspiration were received from the many activities provided. All returned from the conference enthusiastic over the church program and with new zeal to undertake the work of the coming year.

The monthly historical programs are well attended at Central. They are proving the means of our becoming more familiar with the great latter-day work.

The building fund Sunday programs have proved financially successful. More interest is being taken in plans for a new church home, and in the not far future we are visualizing a new building such as we need to carry on the work on the South Side of our city. This will mean determination and sacrifice, and we are remembering as Brother C. E. Schmid has told us that we must build saintly characters as well as the building in which to worship. Christ set the perfect example of Christian living and character. We, with God's help, can mold ourselves after that pattern.

Easter and Mother's Day were observed with special services and music. Brother Wallace Eskridge delivered the Easter sermon, Brother Norman Hield the Mother's Day discourse.

Midweek prayer services are well attended and a spiritual help to all attending. It is cheering to the soul to hear our young men and women bear their testimonies, voicing the sentiments of their hearts in regard to their work. Surely God is helping them to prepare for the tasks which are theirs.

The priesthood of the branch meet once each month and some very constructive work is being done. Before conference and since the time of its dismissal, the missionaries passing through Chicago have given us much spiritual food. Brothers Budd, Baldwin, Chandler, Williams and local men, C. E. Schmid, W. Eskridge, C. Evans, H. Kier, J. J. Oliver, F. Almond and Brothers Edstrom and McCaig have not allowed us to lack in the ministry of the priesthood.

The Father has been mindful of our sick. Brother Steve Lester, jr., who was very ill underwent an operation several weeks ago and has fully recovered. Sister J. J. Oliver has been quite ill but is improving. We are glad to see two young sisters at services once more, Ollie Evans and Lois Bell. The family of Sister Fanny Rodger has been shut in for several weeks, the little daughter having scarlet fever. They are now out of quarantine. Sister Ben McGuire, of Independence, was Sister Fanny's guest while they were shut in. Sister Fay McDonald's children have also been on the sick list, but are better now.

On May 19 Brother H. P. W. Keir preached the funeral sermon of Brother Haas who lived with his daughter. The body was taken to Michigan for interment. Two daughters mourn the loss of a kind father.

For June 8 a special service had been arranged by branch officers. While soft music was played by Sister Pearl Kerr, Brother H. P. W. Keir led five little boys down the aisle and inducted them into the kingdom of God on earth. Brother C. E. Schmid made fitting remarks while the candidates were preparing for the confirmation service. Those baptized were Russell Enoch Graff, Thomas McKay, Lee Dennis, Ray Dennis, and Phillip McDonald. Brothers Keir, Pement, Hield, Schmid, Oliver, Cochran, and Baldwin assisted in the confirmation service. It was a splendid meeting in which the Holy Spirit's presence caused the hearts of the members to rejoice. The benediction was by Brother Baldwin.

At the following service Sister Fay Keir was at the piano. The anthem, "Seek ye the Lord," was sung by the choir, Brother Ail Sherman singing the tenor solo. Brother Baldwin chose as the theme of his sermon "Consecration," and read Mark 12 and Doctrine and Covenants 64. We were glad to have Brother and Sister Baldwin stop to see us as they were on their way west to their new field of labor.

Brother Graff and family are leaving for Langley Field, Virginia. They have been in constant attendance at services, and we regret that they are leaving this branch. Our best wishes go with them and also with Miss Katherine Adams, Sister Graff's sister, who is going to Los Angeles, California.

Saints from a number of States have lately visited in the homes of various branch members, and we were happy to welcome them at services. Two of our Graceland girls are at home this summer, Hazel Bell and Grayce Thoman.

Sister Cora Keir's class of young people is giving a play Thursday evening for the benefit of the building fund. The younger children are having an operetta, "The golden slipper." Proceeds from this, too, will be applied to the building fund.

The women are holding a bake sale on Saturday afternoon, the proceeds to be used toward the purchase of new curtains which are being installed in the church. Some changes are being effected in the church which will help the appearance of the building.

A beach party was had by the young people Decoration Day at Jackson Park. Some of the adults picnicked at one of the forest preserves.

June 1 a peaceful sacramental meeting was enjoyed by all. God's Spirit was there, and each one felt it was good to be in the house of the Lord. It was the same Spirit which prevailed at the conference sacramental service.

The following Wednesday evening Brother Horahitu, of the Society Islands, with Brother H. W. Savage as interpreter, gave an inspirational lecture. He also sang a hymn. A collection was taken up and given to these brothers; then the brothers shook hands with them and thanked them for the talks and visit. Some of the West Side Saints were present upon this occasion. Brother Horahitu was the guest of Brother and Sister Frank Almond, who spent some time in the islands.

North Manchester, England

Although this branch is far away from the center of general church activities, we were unwilling that April 6, 1930, should pass unrecognized by us. Pastor Nephi Dewsnup accordingly arranged special services. In the morning a unified service was held at which Elder F. H. Smith related the story of the vision and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, and Priest H. W. Gillson spoke on the testimony of the three witnesses. The afternoon was devoted to a sacramental service to coincide as nearly as possible with the one held in the Auditorium at Independence. The evening service was devoted to church historical events and very old Latter Day Saint hymns. It was a humble effort, but the services of the day composed our small tribute of thankfulness for the wonderful gift of the gospel.

Here in Northern District the Easter week-end is devoted to the annual conference, but in this branch we felt there was something we had been missing for some years past. We wanted to sing our hymns of thanksgiving and partake of sacrament. Accordingly at nine o'clock Easter Sunday morning, as many as could conveniently manage gathered around the table of the Lord. Previous to this date, the children attached to the junior service had been desirous of offering their sacrifices to the Lord, so before the sacrament was administered, the children sang "Joyful Easter bells" from Zion's Praises. During the singing of the hymn the pastor came down to the lower platform, and the children walked up to him in single file, each giving a newly laid egg to be distributed to the sick and the poor of the branch. This was a pretty ceremony. After the service was dismissed we went to the North East Manchester Branch where the conference was held.

Sunday evening, May 4, a pleasing incident occurred in this branch. A full program was arranged. After the opening services the children of the junior service were grouped and sang together "When mothers of Salem their children brought to Jesus." The pastor then announced that we were to participate in two ordinances, the blessing of a baby and the renewing of our covenant with the Lord. In explanation of our beliefs on the blessing of children, the pastor read from the book of Moroni 8:4-29, and Priest H. W. Gillson spoke a few words quoting references from the Bible on the subject. At the close of this talk, and while Sister Nelson, musical director, played the first bars of a hymn the deacon arranged two chairs facing the lower platform, the children formed a guard of honor while singing "Suffer little children"; then the parents came with the baby and occupied the two chairs. The children resumed their places and the pastor read the charge to parents from Doc- trine and Covenants 17: 19; 28: 13, and 68: 4. The babe was blessed by the pastor and Elder F. H. Smith.

The fact that our services run smoothly is due in no small measure to the work of the musical director, Sister Maud Nelson, daughter of Elder W. H. Greenwood. It is on occasions such as the one described above that we realize our indebtedness to our faithful workers.

We regret to report the death of two sisters who were called away from us very suddenly. Sister Ann Towers and Sister Susan Wray, sisters of Elder W. H. Greenwood, have been taken to another world. A service was held in memory of them at the branch, and there was a record attendance. They were two of the most regular attendants in this branch and were only happy when they were working for the Master. We miss them sorely.

Nauvoo, Illinois

Fortunate are we that the historic value of Nauvoo is such that it claims the interest of our missionaries and when possible they make pilgrimages to this spot. It affords us a diversity of speakers that other branches are not privileged to enjoy, and is much appreciated.

On June 8 we had with us Elder Taruiarii, of the Society Islands, and Elder H. W. Savage who acted as his interpreter. They had visited a number of large cities and historic places, stopping to speak at the different branches along their route. Sunday morning Brother Taruiarii spoke to the Saints here and told us that in all his travels throughout the United States he had found no prettier spot than Nauvoo. He declared that he believed when the time came for his people to gather to Zion, they would feel happier on the banks of the Mississippi than anywhere else.

Elder A. M. Chase, who is located in Montrose, visited Nauvoo one morning to arrange for a monthly meeting of the Sunday school workers of the district. Montrose, being the most centrally located, was chosen as the meeting place. On May 13 the Saints of Nauvoo hired the launch, and twenty-five of our number crossed the river to attend the first meeting. A pleasant evening was spent talking over the different problems of the church school. The new district worker, Elder F. C. Mussell, was present and was introduced by Brother Chase. At the close of the meeting the Saints of Montrose served punch and wafers. It was voted to meet again one month from that time, which we did. A program was presented at that meeting by Sister S. A. Burgess, daughter of Brother Chase, on the life of Fanny Crosby. Many interesting facts were gleaned about this wonderful woman, and a number of her songs were sung by the congregation, one number as a quartet selection by three members of the Chase family and Brother Reed, and a duet by Sister Burgess and Sister Smith. A short discussion was then held on the problems confronting Sunday school workers.

Elder F. C. Mussell was with us May 14 and gave an encouraging talk during the Wednesday evening prayer service.

Evening services were omitted on May 18 that all might attend the baccalaureate services at the high school. The address was given by Reverend Foster, the Methodist pastor, assisted by Elder J. C. Page. This was followed a few days later by the commencement exercises of the high school graduates. Roberta Lewis who was among those graduating, was awarded the highest honors in her class and received a scholarship to Carthage College. Roberta, however, plans to attend Graceland in the fall. On the following Wednesday evening the graduation exercises of the grade school were held, Lois Heady and Dorothy Fusselman being among those graduating.

As many of our Methodist friends have attended our special services from time to time, it was suggested that we return the courtesy. Accordingly our Sunday service was closed one evening, and all attended one of the special revival services held at the Methodist church.

The fifth historical program was successfully carried out on the evening of May 25 with the play "The church in Kirtland." L. H. Lewis, who resided in Kirtland several years, gave a talk on Kirtland, using a blackboard illustration of the Temple.

Children's Day was observed with a splendid program by the children at the eleven o'clock hour, under the direction of Sister J. C. Page, assisted by Sister Leon Bauer.

Brother and Sister Arnold Ourth were made happy by the arrival of a boy on May 23. They have named him Arnold Nicholas.

Bertram Lewis returned home from Terryville, Connecticut, where he has been teaching the past two years, to spend a month with the home folks before attending summer school at Columbia University. He will teach in the high school at Mattituck, Long Island, in the fall.

Mary Lee and Mildred Sanford have returned from Graceland. Mary plans to return to Graceland in the fall, and Mildred will teach in the Elliott School. Sister Irene Layton has been engaged to teach in the high school in Independence.

The "Friends of Our Native Landscape," an organization of citizens from Chicago, Northern Illinois, and Wisconsin, interested in conserving the beauty of our native landscape, gave a picnic supper and masque entitled "The beauty of the wild," near Mount Moriah, where a large tract of land is being reserved for a state park. Many people from Nauvoo, Hamilton, Warsaw, and Carthage attended. The masque was held in a beautiful grove overlooking the Mississippi, and portrayed the Indian sorrowfully leaving the home of his forefathers; the coming of the pioneer, hewing his way with an ax; the builder following, intent on accumulating wealth; and at last came the Friend who pledged his support in preserving the landscape from complete devastation. A number of notable speakers were to take part, but at the conclusion of the masque a heavy rainstorm drove all to the shelter of their cars and homes.

On June 9 the contract for the hard road between Nauvoo and Niota was signed, and it is expected that the slab will be laid before cold weather.

Brooklyn, New York

Park Place and Schenectady Avenue

As reunion time draws near, many are making plans to attend the district reunion at Deer Park, New Hope, Pennsylvania, July 12 to 27. Brother T. J. Elliott and Brother and Sister Charles W. Harris drove to Philadelphia May 25 to meet with the reunion committee. We look forward to a fine reunion.

The choir has resumed activities, meeting every Wednesday evening after prayer service. We are glad to have Amy Glassford with us again. The orchestra has just lost a member. Roderick Binney, who is employed by the General Electric Company, has been transferred back to Schenectady. He plays the violin and was a helpful addition to the orchestra.

Dorothy Potts has resigned from the office of superintendent of the primary department, and Aleta Spencer has been elected to fill the vacancy. Brother Ed. Spencer has just given the kindergarten chairs a new coat of paint, which adds greatly to the appearance of the room. The children of both primary and junior departments are busy preparing a Children's Day program, to be given Sunday, June 15.

A miscellaneous shower was held at the Howard Mousley home the evening of June 5 in honor of Ethel Waterhouse, whose marriage to Glenn Parrish will take place this month.

On Sunday, May 11, we enjoyed a visit from Brother

Gilliard of Australia, and Brother Horahitu, of the Society Islands. Brother Horahitu was accompanied by Brother H. W. Savage, who acted as interpreter. Brother Gilliard delivered a short talk to the Sunday school, giving some interesting history of the Australian Mission. A part of the morning hour and the entire evening hour were occupied by Brother Horahitu.

Most of the preaching hour on May 11 was occupied by those of our number who attended General Conference. Each one talked for a few minutes on some phase of the conference. Sister Eliza Squire described the lei ceremony of the Hawaiian delegates, and placed a lei about the neck of our pastor as an expression of the pleasure of the branch at his reappointment to Brooklyn.

Several of our members attended the baccalaureate services of Adelphi College, Garden City, Long Island, Sunday, June 7. Dorothy Potts, daughter of Brother and Sister George Potts, is a member of the graduating class. Her graduation qualifies her as a kindergarten teacher. Mildred Chatham also graduates this month from Pratt Institute.

The pastor was visiting in Connecticut last Sunday, and the pulpit was occupied by Brother William Nichols in the morning and by Brother Paul Belleisle in the evening. An anthem by the choir with solo part by Anna Warnky, and a solo by Amy Glassford, with violin obligato by Roy Squire were features of the morning hour.

Lamoni Stake

Children's Day in Lamoni

Baptisms and Confirmations

Eight juniors were baptized on Children's Day. The service was held at eight o'clock Sunday morning. The font was banked with screens and flowers, and about it were two rows of chairs for the parents and friends. The pastor, W. E. Prall, presided, and Roy A. Cheville officiated. During the baptismal rites, hymns familiar to the children were played on the piano by Rae Lysinger.

The confirmation service was held at 9.30 as a part of the exercises of the junior department of the church school. After song and prayer those baptized marched in and took their places. They were Lorraine Weddle, Dale Moon, Harold Chapman, Nellie Lester, June Lewis, Bobbie Anderson, Earl Jones, and Paul Smith. W. E. Prall, Roy Cheville, Walter Hayer, and Roy Derry were the ministers in the confirmation.

A Service for Children

Following the announcements and offertory, the beginner and primary departments marched to the main auditorium, a department on either side. The congregation joined in singing "Let them come to me," a children's song, and W. E. Hayer, director of the junior church offered prayer.

The service was planned to present the church's hopes and program for children. Three provisions were presented. The first was the blessing of children. Sister James Thomas, who is superintending the primary church, told the story of Jesus blessing the children; then while a quartet sang "Suffer little children," W. E. Prall and Roy A. Cheville brought Leah Ne, the infant daughter of Doctor and Sister Frank Shipman to the platform to bless her. As they left, the quartet sang, "The child of Galilee."

The teaching work of the church school was presented by two exercises from the beginners and from the primaries. These were not rehearsed, and the children enacted on the platform their regular programs. The beginners gave their birthday exercise and the primaries their collection of tithing. The director of the church school explained the purpose of these exercises and solicited parental cooperation.

The third provision of the church that was explained was that of baptism and confirmation. The eight children baptized came to the platform, the quartet sang "I have heard the sweetest story," and the pastor, W. E. Prall, welcomed the children into membership. He spoke of the meaning of assuming membership in the church, asked for their support, and extended the hand of fellowship to each one. The quartet sang a verse of "My faith looks up to thee," and W. E. Hayer offered a closing prayer.

A Children's Cantata

The church was well filled for the evening service. Pink and white lattice work of crepe paper and a border of ferns and flowers covered the altar railing, and baskets of pink peonies decked the platform. At eight o'clock the children marched to their reserved sections, attired in colorful costumes of flowers, leaves, and birds.

During the opening hymn by the congregation, a junior chorus of girls came to the platform and stood behind the presiding minister, Roy Cheville. They sang a soft response following the prayer, read a scripture reading responsively, and sang a two-part chorus.

The main part of the service was a children's cantata, "The pathway of service." The reader, Lois Garver, represented the soliloquy of a little boy who wondered about God's care and what he might do. As he reflected about the familiar scenes of nature about him, each phase of nature presented itself. The beginners were a chorus of flowers. Primary boys were trees or grasses, or raindrops. Primary girls were buttercups, snow beams, etc. At the close there was an ensemble of all the children in costume, and with the congregation they sang to a familiar tune the words "Onward in his service." The service found ready response with the congregation. Vera Kline and Vesta Stevenson headed the committee of church school workers which presented the cantata.

Mother's Day at Georgetown

Grand Cayman

The Temple Builder girls of the church at Georgetown, Grand Cayman Island, gave a program the evening of Mother's Day, May 11. All the girls' friends had promised to come, and the performers were amply rewarded for the work of practice and decorating the church. The house of worship was beautifully decorated with crouten foliage and palms and white and red flowers.

Certain front seats were reserved for the choir, there not being room on the stage for their seating. However, as the crowd assembled the choir gave up their seats and sat anywhere in the congregation. The church was packed. Chairs were brought in and placed in all available spaces, and the porch was crowded with people. The audience numbered about two hundred people, and there would have been more had their been sufficient room.

The program consisted of two addresses, several songs by the choir, solos, duets, and quartet numbers. There were short recitations by the beginners, juniors, and intermediates, and a play entitled "The whole world pays homage to mother."

Among the mothers present were Mrs. G. H. Frith, the commissioner's wife, and Mrs. Moon, wife of the Presbyterian minister. The latter stayed away from service at her own church that she might be with us, and kindly assisted in giving an address and offering the closing prayer.

Our Adventist friends had services an hour earlier than usual so that they, too, might be with us.

This was the only Mother's Day program given on the island, and we thank all our friends who helped and attended the concert.

Independence

Stone Church

The words of the Savior to Nicodemus: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter the kingdom of God," were used by Elder H. W. Savage as a text for his Sunday morning sermon. In the selection of this text Brother Savage had been helped by Elder Horahitu, of the Society Islands, who sat in the congregation with Apostle Clyde F. Ellis.

Solomon's counsel to men to "seek wisdom," and Christ's commission to his disciples to teach men to "observe all things," were emphasized by the speaker. Jesus went about stirring the hearts and minds of people with parables, and he instructed his disciples to teach wisdom to mankind, showing them the necessity of being born of the water and the Spirit. Having placed ourselves in a receptive condition through faith, repentance, and birth of the water of the Spirit, we are promised the Spirit of truth which will teach us all things. Zion is to be a place inhabited by the pure in heart, and in order to carry out the purposes of the Father, latter-day revelation tells us that we have far to go in seeking wisdom and learning to do good.

The Stone Church Choir, led by Paul N. Craig, sang "Beneath the shadow of the great protection," by Dickinson, Sister Ruth Holman singing the contralto solo. "Like as the hart desireth," by Allitsen, a bass solo, was pleasingly sung by Albert Brackenbury. Miss Lorena Kueffer accompanied the anthem and solo on the piano, in addition to contributing an organ offertory number. Elder D. O. Cato was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder J. W. Peterson.

Announcement of the first Sunday evening Campus service of the season drew a large crowd to the grounds to listen to the concert given by the Auditorium Band under the direction of Earl Cox.

President Frederick M. Smith, the speaker, continued his theme of last summer, "Problems confronting the Zion home," approaching it from the angle of health, the work of the Health Department of the church, the need for clinical work and regular physical examinations as preventions of disease.

Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder A. K. Dillee, pastor at Second Church, and Elder Samuel C. Smith, pastor at Walnut Park.

Among the People in Zion

"Learn to do well," the injunction of Isaiah, is the topic upon which the young people who attended the prayer meeting last Wednesday evening in the basement of the Stone Church, have been thinking this week. Elders M. T. Williams and John F. Sheehy were in charge of the worship hour, which was highly profitable to the large number present because of the thought of the evening and the responsiveness of the congregation. At that time Brother Sheehy read from Isaiah 1 and bade the congregation think this week on the desirability of learning to do well. Reverential attention was given by the young people to the ordination of one of their number, Brother Almer Sheehy. Almer, who is the eldest son of Pastor Sheehy, was ordained a priest by Elders C. Ed. Miller and John F. Sheehy. In 1921 Brother Miller baptized this young man a member of the church at Onset, Massachusetts.

The junior worship period at the Campus Sunday morning, in charge of the superintendent, appealed greatly to all the boys and girls. A story was told by Sister S. A. Thiel, Evelyn Burgess gave a reading, and a small chorus of boys sang accompaniment for a reading by Lucille Watkins.

On Friday evening, June 20, the Wahdemna Choral Club presented its final concert of the season at the Stone Church. Most of the chorus numbers sung had been especially requested by friends of the choral club. The Wahdemna Male Quartet: Roderick May, Richard Day, Robert Crawford, and Orville Martin sang three numbers; Blaine Bender read a short play. Soloists were Lois Cool Nunamaker, soprano; Delta Nace, soprano; Gladys Good, contralto; LeRoy Smith, baritone; Lorena Kueffer and Hazel Scott, organists; Elizabeth Smith, harpist; Orrin Fry, violinist. Paul N. Craig is conductor of the chorus, and Rosamond Filson Sherman, accompanist.

Among those lately called away by death is Brother Benjamin Andes, fifty-eight years of age, who died at noon Friday, June 20. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Clara Andes, of the home in Independence; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Andes, Independence; four daughters: Mrs. Everett Lemley, Mrs. J. B. LaRue, and Mrs. F. O. Blake, Independence, and Mrs. Andy Bozarth, of Warrensburg; two sons: Robert Andes, of Independence, and G. D. Andes, Breckenridge, Texas; three brothers: Jake and John Andes, Independence, and Sam Andes, Andes, Montana; two sisters, Mrs. Fred Cool and Mrs. Katherine Wilcox. The funeral occurred Sunday afternoon at the Stone Church in charge of Elder W. S. Macrae, of Holden. Interment was in Mound Grove.

A group of patrons and friends of the Emma Hale Memorial Library responded to an invitation to meet at the Library Building yesterday evening. The principal item on the program was a review by Brother Evan A. Fry of the book Laughing Boy by Oliver LaFarge.

At the orchestral program presented the evening of June 17 by N. DeRubertis's Orchestral Training School under the auspices of the Kansas City Guild of Music at the Westport Junior High School auditorium, four Independence young people were awarded certificates on the completion of the year's work in the orchestra. Of these two are members of the church, Elizabeth Smith, harpist; and Lee Mills, trumpeter.

A special service will be held at the Stone Church next Sunday afternoon at 2.30 in which will occur the ordination of the men whose names were approved by the conference in Zion June 16. It will be the privilege of the people of Independence to witness at this time the ordination of eight men to the office of elder, five to the office of priest, and five to the office of deacon.

Liberty Street

The various decision days sponsored by the general church in the last year have called for such enthusiastic and ready response from all Liberty Street children who had reached the proper age for baptism that Children's Day this year found only one little boy ready to be received into the church. The baptism of this candidate, Robert Trumble, took place at the Stone Church early the morning of June 15. The confirmation service formed a part of the opening exercises of the church school. Patriarch F. A. Smith, Robert's grandfather, officiated at both services.

The Children's Day sermon was given by the pastor, F. A. Cool. The preparation on the part of parents to help their children live the good life does not begin after the child has entered the waters of baptism but must be in progress long before the child is ours. Whether these new members are potential church leaders or merely future lukewarm Latter Day Saints also depends in large degree on the parents. These were points in the pastor's sermon. Music was furnished by Kenneth Turner and Lyda Thomason.

The junior service was the one in which the children themselves participated. Songs, recitations, etc., formed an important part of this service. The morning talk was by Cecil R. Walker, Raymond Wrigley, junior leader, being in charge.

The Liberty Street Saints were especially happy June 8 to have Elder George G. Lewis, the new director of religious education in Zion, meet with them. He visited the church school and "looked in" on many of the classes during the study hour. Immediately following the class period, he made a short talk setting forth some of the objectives of the department he represents. On this day, John Blackmore was the morning speaker, and I. A. Smith preached in the evening.

E. T. Atwell was the speaker the morning of June 22. Kenneth Turner, grandson of Brother Philip Turner, played a piano solo which was especially enjoyed.

The junior service saw the introduction of a new worker, Clyde Smitherman, who gave the theme talk of the morning. Mary Madden Smitherman told the story, and a vocal solo was contributed by Mary Ethel Cool. Ruth Tignor furnished a piano number and the newly formed junior choir sang "Our task."

June continues to prove that it is the month for brides, but for Liberty Street late May began the season. At the pastor's home the evening of May 29, Mary Madden became the bride of Clyde H. Smitherman, F. A. Cool officiating in the double ring ceremony. Gomer Cool playing the violin and Lyda Thomason the piano furnished two musical numbers.

The country home of Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Frisbey on Lexington Road, formed the setting for a pretty lawn wedding Saturday evening, June 21, when Susie Adkins, of the local congregation, was married to Elmer R. Petre. The single ring ceremony was conducted by Elder F. A. Cool. The bride was attended by Miss Ruth Tignor, and the groom by Thomas Adkins, brother of the bride.

Both of these newly married couples are making their homes in Independence, and we welcome them as members of the Liberty Street congregation.

Walnut Park

Children's Day, June 15, was observed with a beautiful baptismal service in which nineteen candidates entered the kingdom. After the opening exercises in the main auditorium, the beginners, juniors, and baptismal class marched upstairs and gave a program. The children, led by the class of members to be baptized, then marched to the lower auditorium, being followed by relatives and friends. The platform and font were beautifully decorated with roses and asparagus ferns. Brothers S. C. Smith, K. R. Mosier, H. M. Curtis, and John Taylor officiated in the service. Then the service was taken upstairs, where confirmations were in charge of Brother S. C. Smith. The choir, orchestra, and a quartet furnished the music.

Some of our student young people who have been attending college are now at home, and others are away at summer school. Joseph Price has returned to his home from the University of Oklahoma to spend the summer vacation with his family. Vera Chapman and David Morgan are home from Graceland. Dorothy Bryant and Ada Fallon are attending the summer session at the Central Missouri State Teachers College, at Warrensburg, Missouri.

The Sunday morning service, June 22, was in charge of the Mothers' Class of the church school. The teacher of the class, Sister J. H. Logeman, sr., presided over the service, with the assistance of Sister John Schwab. The musical numbers, in addition to congregational singing, consisted of an anthem by the choir "Let not your heart be troubled," and the song "Home, sweet home," by a quartet composed of Delta Nace, Bertha Elerick, Milford Nace, and Arlon Chapman.

Sister Ida Etzenhouser was the special speaker of the morning, her subject being "Preparation for marriage." In her discussion of this subject she pointed out the causes of divorce, the principal ones of which are: (1) Hasty marriages; (2) marriages while principals are too young; (3) marriages between those physically or mentally unfit; (4) differences in religious faith; (5) national and racial differences; and (6) promiscuous petting. The period of engagement should cover at least six months but not over two years, and should be a period of mutual education. Boys should learn how to stick to a job before getting married and should give consideration to the fact that one's income must be sufficient.

Enoch Hill

Though Enoch Hill is considered one of the small congregations in Independence, it has a group of more than fifty active young people. For a number of months these young people, fifteen years of age and older, have functioned as an organization to promote the spirit of friendliness and helpful participation in church activities, and lately, under the leadership of their president, E. H. McKean, they have chosen to call themselves the Enoch Hill Erodelphians. Each Friday night they sponsor outdoor recreation on the church grounds. In this movement last Friday evening was a special occasion. More than a hundred young people were on the grounds to engage in outdoor games, volley ball, and baseball, visitors coming from Kansas City and Liberty Street and Walnut Park congregations. Refreshments were sold in the form of ice cream, candy, and pie. The Erodelphians were assisted in the entertainment by the Boy Scouts and the Girl Scouts of Enoch Hill, the latter led by Sister Don Cox. Proceeds were divided between the playground equipment fund and the Girl Scout uniform fund.

Sunday morning Elder J. F. Petre chose to read as the basis of his sermon "The hope of the Saints," 1 Corinthians 15.

Pastor O. W. Sarratt is at present confined to his home with rheumatism. The branch members hope and pray for his relief. He is much needed at our services.

On Sunday evening the congregation on Enoch Hill met with the Saints of the eight other branches in Independence at the Campus to listen to a sermon by President F. M. Smith.

Spring Branch

The eight o'clock prayer service Sunday morning was well attended, and a spiritual meeting was enjoyed.

At the eleven o'clock hour came the service of confirmation of those baptized on Children's Day. Those officiating were Brothers Tankard, Cleveland, Fish, Smith, Mabbott, Andes, Teeter, Lanpher, Bozarth, and W. F. Smith. The charge to the members confirmed was delivered by Brother Bozarth. As we sat in the congregation during this hour, we recalled the beautiful service of last Sunday when these little ones entered the waters of baptism. They were the first to be baptized in our new ever-visible font. Everything was in order for their initiation into the kingdom; and as soft music was played, parents watched with joy their children go to meet the elder who officiated.

The priesthood met at the church Sunday afternoon.

Pastor J. E. Cleveland and son Ralph have gone out of town to work for a week or ten days. During this time Assistant Pastor Mabbott is in charge.

Brother Leonard Roberts was appointed recreation leader for Spring Branch.

Gudgell Park

June 8 at the morning hour Bishop R. T. Cooper spoke on "Stewardship." In the evening Elder W. M. Self was the speaker. Attendance throughout the day was good.

Children's Day was observed at Gudgell Park June 15. Several of the women went to the church early in the morning, taking with them an abundance of flowers and ferns with which to decorate the church. The church school session was crowded to the extent that several classes met out on the lawn. At eleven o'clock all returned to the church auditorium to participate in or listen to the program of songs, readings, and a playlet given by the intermediates, juniors, primaries, and beginners.

Brother Edward Larsen preached to the congregation last Sunday morning, his theme being "Love."

Midweek prayer meetings are showing sustained attendance and interest.

We are glad to have Sister Joy Sherman home for the summer. She has been attending Graceland. This fall she will teach in Iowa.

Atherton

Brother Jeff Butler occupied at the eleven o'clock hour April 27.

May 4 Brother R. D. Weaver was here, and his theme was "The Lord's prayer." Accompanying Brother Weaver were Brother and Sister Sarratt, of Enoch Hill.

Brother Otho Clark preached the Mother's Day sermon at the eleven o'clock hour. In the afternoon Elder John Blackmore, of Independence, preached a Mother's Day sermon in our new church in behalf of the Parent-Teacher Association. Special music was rendered by various people of the community. In the evening Apostle F. H. Edwards occupied. His subject was, "Beware of Christ."

Bishop J. A. Koehler preached in the evening of May 18.

May 25 Brother Otho Clark preached.

At the eleven o'clock hour Brother Blackmore and Brother Ware occupied. Brother Blackmore stressed the command, "Feed my sheep." Brother Ware said that if we are living in close touch with God, he will direct by his Spirit.

In the morning of June 15 Brother A. E. Allen reminded us of the anniversary of Pentecost and read of the occasion as recorded in Acts.

Last week the Saints met on the lawn at the home of Brother Ira Curtis and had a good social time. Refreshments were served.

At the election of officers held in May, Brother A. E. Allen was chosen pastor with Brother George Beebe as his associate, Sister J. A. Koehler as women's leader. Aside from this, few changes were made. Elder W. S. Macrae was in charge. Brother C. V. Hopkins was present.

Sister Gladys Beebe has been secured to teach in a near-by school.

Warrensburg

On the evening of May 28 Brothers W. S. Macrae and James Duffey met with us, and the annual business meeting of the group was held. Warrensburg has been working under the church school plan in the last few months, and it has proved so satisfactory that all seemed desirous of continuing in the same course for the new year. Brother G. W. Hancock was sustained as pastor. He nominated Brother G. R. Norris as his assistant, which nomination was approved by the group. Sister Harold Weeks was sustained as group secretary. The supervisors elected were as follows: Brother Odess Athey, supervisor of religious education; Brother G. W. Hancock was chosen supervisor of the adult division; Brother Clyde Johnson, supervisor of the young people; and Brother LeRoy Morgan of the junior department. It is believed this kind of organization is superior to the old method inasmuch as the various departments can better work together as a unit, and there is greater incentive for the young people to take active part.

The summer term at the Central Missouri State Teachers College is now in session. There are nineteen Latter Day Saints enrolled. The out-of-town Saints in attendance at church whom we have noted are Sister Altha Koehler Belscamper, Sister Gladys Beebe, and Sister Mildred Ingram. These students find a cordial welcome with us. We need their assistance, and urge all Latter Day Saints, who are attending college, to meet with us at our church, located on Washington and Market Streets.

Sister Helen Meyers, who taught in the Higginsville, Missouri, schools, is home for the summer.

Two of our young people, Sister Esther Rich and Brother Charles Johnson, were among the high school graduates in Warrensburg this year.

We greatly miss from our ranks the congenial faces of Brother and Sister I. M. Smith. For many years they lived in this group, and were loved and respected by Saints and townspeople. We trust they are enjoying their new home in Independence, Missouri.

On Sunday, June 1, Lois Anne, infant daughter of Brother and Sister G. R. Norris, was blessed, Brother G. W. Hancock being the spokesman.

The Children's Day program was held in the forenoon of Sunday, June 15, after which all participated in a basket dinner at the home of Brother and Sister John Priest.

Knobnoster

Annual business meeting was held May 27. Stake President W. S. Macrae and James Duffey of the stake high council met with us. Officers were elected as follows: Pastor, J. T. Nutt; superintendent of Sunday school, Brother E. E. Petre; superintendent of Recreation and Expression, Sister Eva Moorman; superintendent of music, Sister J. T. Nutt; secretary, Sister Luetta Norman; treasurer, Brother C. A. Kramer. Other officers were elected at a meeting held June 10.

Brothers Allen Bugnee and R. E. Burgess, who have been under a doctor's care, are slowly improving.

Sister William Elkins and sons Joseph and Howard, and daughter, Sister Edith Beebe, also Brother Carl Payne, all of Lexington, attended the Children's Day exercises here Sunday morning, June 15.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The first day of summer dealt Kansas City quite a blow, as the thermometer hovered around one hundred and the humidity was intense, making it hard for people to enjoy comfort. This same condition prevailed throughout Sunday, but the attendance at the morning service was up to normal despite the extremely hot day, as previous announcement had indicated it would be "Children's Day."

That hymn dear to the heart of every Latter Day Saint, "Tis a glorious thing to be in the light," was the opening song, and the invocation was offered by the associate director of Religious Education, Brother Roy Thrutchley. Following a short session of lesson study, all departments returned to the main auditorium, and after the prelude, "Offertory" by Salome, on the organ by Sister Elizabeth Hitchcock, all joined in singing "All hail the power of Jesus' name." The infant son of Brother and Sister Ross Moore was blessed by Elder Cyril E. Wight and given the name of Howard Duane. Following the blessing of this little one, five of the primary children knocked at the door of the church for entrance through the sacred ordinance of baptism, Lillian Sandy, Doris Hitchcock, Walton Bodeen, Ralph Phillip Moore, and Robert Forties. Elder Cyril E. Wight officiated. The service was beautiful, the font having been decked with flowers and shrubbery.

While the candidates were preparing for the confirmation service, a brief song service was enjoyed by the congregation, after which the remaining period of the morning was occupied by the ordinance of confirmation. It was a simple but impressive Children's Day service.

At the evening service, the choir ably sang the "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah," the congregation standing in tribute to "Our Lord and King." Sister Kathryn Skinner contributed a lovely number on the cello.

Elder C. Ed. Miller continued his illustrated lectures on the Book of Mormon, showing interesting pictures of the ancient inhabitants of this continent, quoting from the Book of Mormon, and presenting food for thought along archaeological lines that will enable any church member to defend this book.

Members of Central Church who formerly lived in Saint Joseph are to have charge of the Sunday morning service June 29. Saint Joseph Saints are invited to attend and to join in a basket dinner.

The O. B. K's will have their third initiation service next Monday evening, June 30, one of the principal features being a social on the church lawn.

Fourth Church

"Come learn of the meek and lowly" was the song sung as a prelude to the Children's Day service June 15 in the midst of flowers and greeneries. Other songs were "Tell me the story of Jesus," "Ye must be born again," "Jesus is the children's friend," and "Be pure in heart." A varied program of music and exercises pleased those present.

At 7.45 Elder Norman Carter occupied the pulpit, his theme being "Hope."

Gladstone Church

Elders C. A. Selbe and C. G. Lewis were speakers Sunday, June 8, morning and evening. The Children's Day program, in charge of Brothers Lewis and Moran, was exceptionally good. The congregation filled the room.

The joint baptismal and confirmation service participated in by Bennington, Northeast, and Gladstone congregations, added eight more souls to the stake. They are divided among the three churches mentioned as follows: five to Bennington, one to Northeast, and two to Gladstone. Elders E. W. Lloyd baptized five, C. G. Lewis one, and Brother Egan two.

The Spirit of the Lord was present at the Book of Mormon Class. Elder E. W. Lloyd was the speaker at 7.45.

Conference Visitor Returns to England

May 26.—We are pleased to inform Herald readers that we have our district president, W. H. Chandler, back again with us looking fitter than we have seen him for some time. He is brimful of rich experiences and says he had a wonderful visit in America.

He arrived home in Warrington Friday, May 2, and a reception was held in his branch on May 10 to which the whole district was invited. An entertainment was arranged; then Brother Chandler was given time to speak. He said that his visit had been the realization of the dream of his life; always he has longed to go to Independence and take part in a conference. At the basis of every religion, he said, there is a certain amount of mystery, something you can not explain, something you want very much to discover. There is mystery associated with this latter-day work, things you love because of their church association, things you wish to learn. He showed his listeners a stone he had taken from Hill Cumorah, a few twigs from shrubbery on the hill, and a piece of bark from the tree by which Joseph knelt to pray. It was our brother's privilege to meet and talk with the Saints of Independence and other regions, and to go over some of the ground trod by the early pioneers. He said that he had a certain amount of wonderment and awe when he saw the river that Emma Smith crossed with her little children; he saw it covered with ice just as it must have been when the early Saints traveled over it to their settlements.

One of the biggest impressions made upon Brother Chandler was the realization that religion must stop looking wholly into the past; today humanity is demanding that provision be made for the present. We have learned about Moses, Jeremiah, and Isaiah. Is it now possible for us to translate the teachings of Christ in terms of human activity? Our church believes this is possible. We want people to be happy. Can we make our religion touch every phase of life? Can we be happy and make others happy in our endeavor to interpret the Christ life in terms of human living?

Our brother expressed gratitude to all who made it possible for him to have the privilege and pleasure of this visit. If he had been royalty, he said, he could not have been treated better.

OLIVE HEYWOOD.

The Descent

When Jesus took the three disciples, Peter, James, and John, up into the mountain and became transfigured before them, they besought him that they might memorialize the place, so glorious was the scene and so hallowed the spot. But Jesus, apparently, gave no heed to their request, for straightway he led them down the mountain side to paths of service, he himself healing the demoniac who was brought before him.

It seems to me that during the late General Conference we have been upon the mountain top, for we have beheld the far-extending vision of the "marvelous work and a wonder," we have learned how Christ may be glorified in human living together, and we have sensed the possibilities of the commission of personal evangelism. In our individual benefits, I feel sure new depths have been sounded in our souls that have stirred us with desire for a closer walk with God.

And now, as we make the descent from the mountain top and enter upon our paths of service and take up what we sometimes call the commonplace things of life, let us be assured that no task is ordinary where human weal is involved. And can we ever get away from the welfare of others, or would we ever want to? And if old heartaches return and trials continue, with the fresh courage we have received shall we not bear them with better grace, for, after all,

"The clouds ye so much dread
Are big with mercy, and shall break
In blessings on your head."

I pray that the broader vision of our tasks, our firm resolves of faithfulness thereto, and an abundant faith in God shall bring a fruition commensurate with all our hopes.

GRACE L. KRAHL.

A Church Paper in Every Saint's Home

By J. L. Bear

Really, every Saint's home should have at least one of the church papers. I believe there are very few Saints who would not be willing and anxious to have the Herald and any one of the other papers if they only knew the good they would get from them, in keeping up with the progress and program of the church, the missionary activities, the branch, the groups, and the letters from Saints far and near. This will help you spiritually, physically, and temporally. For good news, spiritual blessings, as well as other activities, will help encourage the reader, aid to cast aside his doubts or fears, and blues, and naturally you will be more healthy and save doctor bills. The church papers are very necessary and essential to your salvation now and hereafter; and really no one can afford to be without them.

I believe it is a duty of the priesthood, who are the salesmen for the church, to sell the church papers to its members. Salesmen must create public sentiment and create a desire in the buyer for that which they have to sell. Therefore they must convince the buyers of its value and of its necessity.

The pastors of each congregation, and the visiting officers, should teach the Saints to have one of the church periodicals in their home. It should also be the duty of the Sunday school superintendent, and other officers. This should be done methodically, consistently, and persistently.

One Sunday in each month give the publicity agent about ten or fifteen minutes to make a talk on getting subscriptions. I think it would be a good idea, in giving this talk in the group or branch, to have everyone who takes the Herald raise his hand; have everyone who takes the Ensign raise his hand, etc. Then have all those who do not take

Pastoral

I have been appointed to labor in missionary work in Manitoba, Winnipeg my objective. If there are Saints who know of members or friends of the church in this region who desire a visit from the missionary and an invitation to meet with the Saints, please write me the names and addresses of such people. The church in Winnipeg is located at 247 Kensington Street, Saint James (a suburb of Winnipeg), in the west part of the city. Services are held each Sunday morning: Sunday school at 10 o'clock, preaching at 11 and again at 7 in the evening. All Saints who have opportunity to attend will be welcome. My address is 285 Rutland Street, Winnipeg, Canada, care of G. W. Panting.—Leonard Houghton.

To Branch Presidents and Superintendents of Church Schools: The late district conference on Saturday afternoon, June 14, 1930, at Moline, adopted the new plan of religious education in harmony with the action of the Centennial Conference at Independence; and advised that the branches give due consideration to this new plan and adopt it when wisdom directs that they are ready for it, and after consultation with district and general church officers. The matter of providing for the district work of the Department of Religious Education was left in the hands of the district presidency until the regular election of officers at the fall conference. As the result of a council meeting of the district presidency, the following course was determined upon: That the three members of the presidency work in the interest of this new department, and that the district president arrange a program of meetings in the different branches, suggesting a time and place for each of the counselors to occupy; and that he secure the cooperation of the several branch presidents and superintendents of church schools, asking that the class period and 11 o'clock hour on Sunday be given over to the visiting member of the district presidency, for discussion of the subject of religious education. This need not interfere with the children's classes in the church school, but should include the adults and young people. The following schedule is suggested: Savanna, June 29, Edward Jones; Muscatine, June 29, C. A. Beil; Rock Island, July 13, Edward Jones; Waterloo, July 13, C. A. Beil; Galesburg, July 20, Edward Jones; Oelwein, July 27, C. A. Beil; Davenport, July 27, Edward Jones; Moline, August 17, C. A. Beil; Dahinda, August 17, Edward Jones; Millersburg, August 24, Edward Jones; Joy, August 31, C. A. Beil; Clinton, September 7, Edward Jones; Kewanee, September 21, C. A. Beil; Buffalo Prairie, September 14, annual, union, all-day meeting with basket lunch; September 28, rally day in all branches; Fulton, Crab Town, and other places will be provided for by the district president and missionary. This program is subject to change if found advisable on acany of the church papers, raise their hands. This will give an idea how many take the papers, and what kind.

Make an appeal for subscriptions. Keep this method up systematically, and results will follow. It will create sentiment and a desire, and I feel it would not be long, if this were kept up, until everyone would have a church paper in his home.

In 1911 she united with the church, which was but the crowning act to her Christian ministrations. She will long be remembered in many homes in the community. It was her desire to attend the Centennial Conference, and opportunity was afforded, but she suffered a stroke soon after arriving in Independence and was taken to the Sanitarium. There all was done for her that was known, but she grew worse and was taken home to Cisne, Illinois.

Two weeks after she suffered the stroke she died, her passing occurring April 19, 1930. Besides her seven children she leaves twenty-four grandchildren, five great-grandchildren; one brother, Matthew R. ## Hospital Campaign Pledges Net More Than $132,000

This is Tuesday, July 1. Last night at the Memorial Building, in Independence, a "Victory dinner" was given to the workers in the campaign for money to help build a new hospital building. And it was a victory dinner, for the reports from "majors," "captains," and "colonels" carried the sum total of subscriptions well over the goal of $125,000. As reported and summed up at the meeting the grand total was over $132,000.

At the beginning of the drive there were few men who thought it possible for success to crown the efforts to reach the goal set; in fact, there were many who were positive in their expressed conviction that it could not be done. But as the concerted movement got well under way there developed a distinct change of sentiment. A splendid response was being met, and instances were few where solicitors met with rebuff.

The workers were well organized, and a cheerful, earnest spirit pervaded the entire corps. They were bound to win! And they did.

The dinner last night was joyous, though the spirit of rejoicing was quiet in character. Of course there was singing, laughter, and noise! Why shouldn't there be? Yet the outbursts and demonstrations were not boisterous. The objective and purpose of getting the means to erect a building where the sick and afflicted shall be adequately cared for gave a tone of earnest, quiet zeal which ran throughout the whole drive, and gave refinement even to the spirit of rejoicing.

From the beginning the campaign was well organized. We have before said in these columns that it was under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce of Independence; and though directed by the American City Bureau, of Chicago, yet the details were always under the scrutiny of the alert secretary of the chamber, Mr. Mark Drehmer, who from the very first loaned to the movement a hopeful zeal that was a promise of success and a constant encouragement to the workers.

There is a probability that subscriptions yet likely to come in will carry the total to a figure which will net a sum well over the goal fixed.

Recognizing as I have for some years past the great need for more space and better equipment for the work of the Sanitarium in its function as a hospital, I find myself rejoicing much that there is put before us the probability of the early erection of a modern and commodious building for hospital purposes, and I am looking forward with the pleasure of keen anticipation to seeing the capacity of the institution so enlarged that its work may be expanded and improved in quality. The service of the Sanitarium has always been of a high quality; but always have the workers been under a handicap which we now have promise will be removed.

One of the speakers last night at the dinner was Mayor Roger T. Sermon. He was outspokenly happy over the success of the campaign; and he in no uncertain language expressed his opinion that it was one of the most momentous occasions in the history of Independence, which runs over a period of more than a century. He had reference to the splendid cooperation of the citizens of all classes which had resulted in gathering the means to supply a distinct community need. Seldom, if ever, have all the citizens of Independence worked together for the accomplishment of a single purpose as they have in this drive; and this united effort has been worth much to the city. Despite the predictions by some to the contrary, a large sum has been raised at a time when general financial conditions were unpromising, and the success of the effort has enriched the esprit de corps of the citizen. It holds promise of finer cooperation in securing those things which the community needs.

In thus raising the sum stipulated the community has put up to the Sanitarium Board (and the church) a very definite task; for it has been agreed that to this sum an equal amount will be added. This means that the building provided will be one of about one quarter million dollar value. Besides this, the new building must be equipped.

I am sure the work will be financed in due time, and it is the intention of those concerned to have construction begun soon.

The Sanitarium in the course of its twenty-one years of experience has won a host of friends, and these friends, I am sure, will match the generous spirit of Independence citizens, and come to the aid of the Sanitarium Board in meeting its obligations.

Plans for the building are about complete, and the site is determined. More anon. F. M. S.

Prayer: That we might be better citizens and thus bring about even better government; dedication of Saints to that cause.

Building New Churches

There is an encouraging trend of progress in the church toward the improvement of our church buildings, both as to the structures themselves and as to location. We have seen concrete evidence of this on our visit to Detroit and Toronto.

At Detroit the Highland Park and Central Branches united some time ago and are worshipping together at the Central Church. But the site for a new building has been purchased, and the people are hoping soon to begin the structure. The old church is inadequate to the needs and possibilities of the branch.

Here in Toronto the Central Branch disposed of its Soho Street Church a year or so ago, and has since been meeting in a hall, pending the building of a new church. The new site has been purchased, plans are being perfected, and the congregation is anxious to see the new building erected. In this project the Central and North Toronto Branches will unite.

The sites in both these cities have a great deal in common and indicate the progressive trend mentioned above. The lots are located in vicinities where property values will increase rather than decrease, as would have been the case with the former locations. The new locations are in neighborhoods of attractive residences and streets, whereas the surroundings of the former locations have gradually become less desirable.

At Detroit the new church will face one of the new boulevards in one of the newest parts of the city—and just a week ago excavation was begun for a new civic library building to cost $195,000, directly across the boulevard from the church site. In Toronto the new church will be near the intersection of two of the city's principal trafficways, and within a block of a park-playground owned and maintained by the city.

In both cities the new churches will be convenient to transportation lines, which will expedite travel to and from church for those without cars and for all in rainy or wintry weather. Easy access to main street car lines will make it possible for those coming from greater distances in the city to reach the church readily. This is especially true of the Toronto location.

Adequate space for classrooms is being included in the plans for these new churches, which will avoid the confusion so frequently inevitable in the sessions of the church school. The day is passing when our people will be content with undesirable locations and inadequate buildings for their "church homes." It is fine that as fast as they are able the congregations should free themselves for a wider service by the acquisition of better quarters and more dignified surroundings. We rejoice in the progress already shown. May the good work go on.

American Missionaries Land at Liverpool

President Floyd M. McDowell and Apostles Paul M. Hanson and F. Henry Edwards have landed at Liverpool, England, according to a cablegram dated June 30. For President McDowell this is his first sight of European territory, and for the first time his feet have touched its soil. Apostle Hanson has made a number of missionary visits to Europe, while Apostle Edwards was born in England.

Building Together

Glancing through the pages of a current religious publication of widespread circulation, my eyes rest on the first two words of a title, "Building together." The story which follows tells of the successful efforts of three tiny denominations to unite and care for the religious education of an Iowa village of three hundred people. Through experiment these people are learning to build together, a lesson Christ seeks to instill in the hearts of men.

"I will build my church," said Christ. And before parting from the eleven disciples on a mountain in Galilee, he assured them of the power which was his and gave them this commission: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." What were the disciples to teach? All the things which their Master had commanded them, and these things were designed to produce one glorious result—Christlikeness in the lives of men and women.

Love God and your fellow men. Let your light shine. Be charitable and generous and helpful. Acquaint yourselves with ways of kindness, consideration, and peace. Serve God with diligence. Exercise wisdom upon all occasions. Be hopeful and honest. These are some of the things Christ taught his followers by example and precept, and these teachings were committed to the men who were to care for the church he had builded. To aid them in their divinely appointed task, the disciples were promised the Comforter, the Spirit of Truth. Paul, a few years later, wrote to the Corinthian saints: "We are laborers together with God: ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building. According to the grace of God which is given unto me, as a wise masterbuilder, I have laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon." Building together!

There is deep significance in the thought that we are laborers (or builders) together with God, the Creator and Builder of the universe, in its application to our undertakings of the present day. The past has proved that wondrous things are to be achieved through united and consecrated building. Think of the growth of the Restoration in its first fourteen years, of the achievements of the pioneer Saints, the journeys of the early missionaries, Kirtland Temple, Nauvoo. Building together!

We are apprentices in the art of building together, and the church is the workshop. As we work we realize that to become real builders after the pattern of our Master, we must share a common goal, a high, ever-attracting, ever-impelling ideal, and a determination to mark our lives with those virtues which characterized the Christ. We must be imbued with a love which overlooks little differences and shortcomings. We must have sympathy and wisdom to guide, courage to persist in the face of difficulties, humility to seek God's help at all times, and honesty to make us true to ourselves and to God.

The Centennial Conference proved to the world that men of this day and this year can and are building together. Now the builders are scattered in many countries and States helping, teaching, applying. We hear of their comings and goings and of the work of thousands of sincere people, and we are very conscious that we of latter days have a purpose, a great end to achieve—Zion. The Great Builder has given us this commission. Are we building together?

By-products of Sacrifice Week

The week of special sacrifice, which closed June 29, has undoubtedly brought to the church as a whole another great spiritual experience, and to thousands of individual members who prayed for the church and actually sacrificed to make possible an extension of its missionary program, it has brought an uplifting personal experience.

No Latter Day Saint can engage in consistent and sincere prayer without resolving to work with God to make the prayer come true, nor can he give thought and consideration to the needs of the church without feeling the urge to supply those needs to the limit of his ability. Also when he makes a sacrificial offering of money to further its missionary work, his heart interest goes along with his offering, for where he places his treasure there will his heart be also.

In fact, those who work for the church are the church. Their prayers and deeds identify them with its purposes, and they become the living, vital forces that carry forward the work of God.

Sacrifice week has brought a clearer vision of the church's mission and ideals to thousands of Latter Day Saints who have taken the time during the past week to think through the present needs of the church. Those who made a sacrifice offering, whether it was one dollar or one hundred dollars, have directly contributed to the support of the men who go out as missionaries to preach the gospel. They have definitely invested in a church-wide endeavor to build the kingdom. They become active partners with God and thus find standing with him.

Who would choose to be counted out instead of in?

This new course of study is now ready for distribution. It has been prepared in outline form by the Department of Religious Education at the request of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric.

The course consists of eleven outlines and is adapted for use in study classes at reunions, conferences, conventions, and rally days. The purpose of the course is to direct the attention of the Saints to some of the major aspects of church development and to an analysis of some of its fundamental beliefs and projects as they are related to our general church program of individual and group development, looking forward to the ultimate goal—the establishment of Zion.

The material as presented reviews the church program and projects in a new light and from a new viewpoint. If studied carefully these outlines will suggest new lines of approach and will prove stimulating to those who are continually engaged in preaching. The entire set should be purchased in order to get the most out of this course, due to the fact that each outline is interdependently an important part of the whole course. Each outline has a bearing on and helps to interpret and amplify the others.

The eleven outlines listed below comprise the course which is known as "The Extension Course of the Centennial Institute." The price is 10 cents each, or $1 for the complete course. All members of the priesthood, but especially missionaries and officers of stakes, districts, and branches, should secure these outlines immediately. The matters discussed are of vital importance to the church, regarding which every Latter Day Saint should be fully and accurately informed.

Orders should be sent to the Presiding Bishopric, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

The Family of God; Complete the Circle

A sermon by J. F. Curtis, delivered at the Stone Church, January 7, 1930; reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money, and without price. Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness. Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David. Behold, I have given him for a witness to the people, a leader and commander to the people. Behold, thou shalt call a nation that thou knowest not, and nations that knew not thee shall run unto thee because of the Lord thy God, and for the Holy One of Israel; for he hath glorified thee.

Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near: Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon. For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater; so shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.

The Family of God

I have read eleven verses of the 55th chapter of Isaiah. As has already been announced, the general theme for the week is the completing of the family circle. There is one very important family that is being completed, and that is the great family of God. Additions are being made to this family, and if those who are added to it are faithful, and continue so, they will always remain members of this wonderful family, which is the greatest family in heaven and in earth. In fact, part of that family is already in heaven, and part of it is upon the earth; and it is our endeavor, as a church, to get new members into that family. Anyone who desires to become a member, and is willing to meet the conditions, may become a member of that great family of God, the best family that we know anything about.

When we think about the families upon the earth, some of the noted ones, at least, we think it would be very nice indeed if we could become or were parts of certain families. I remember years ago we used to read what some of the Roosevelt children had for breakfast. The reason they were mentioned was because they were the children of the President of the United States. I never saw in the paper anything about what I had for breakfast, and I, too, have had some good breakfasts.

Yes; to be a part of the family of the king of England would be a wonderful thing. The members of that family are looked upon as something very wonderful. Well, they ought to be. There are families in the church that have been known for years, and have been a credit to the church, with few exceptions. Once in a while there is a black sheep in the flock, but there are noted families in the church. In fact, every family that comes into the church is noted, to quite an extent, or ought to be. The fact that they had become members of the great family of God made them so.

We may not fully appreciate some of these people that come into the church. I have in mind now an incident that happened when I was a boy. There was a brother who used to attend the church services here in the Stone Church. He was a man who followed his daily labor in a humble way. He did not have very fine clothing. He worked on the section, if you please. But that man was at church regularly. That man was here at the services of God, and I wonder if there are very many who have received a greater reward, or are better prepared for it, than was this good old brother who worked every day for his daily bread. And if he came to church in clothing to his own liking, and was not considered up to date, there was within the body of that man a soul that God recognized and blessed.

Man's Estimate of Worthiness May Not Stand

I would not be surprised sometime if some people whom we think are not worth much as compared with some others that occupy some very fine places in the world, and possibly in the church, if in the great day of accounting, God, who knoweth the hearts of all men, and who will give to every man according to his service and the way he has lived, will give them more than he will give some of those who have been more highly respected here in this life. And these humble ones will shine out in eternity better than some who have made an outward appearance which is fine, but within may not be as good as they should have been.

I do not want to discredit any, but I do wish to say this; that there will be no pets in the great family of God; there will be no partiality. Every individual will receive according to his labor, whether it be good or evil. "As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive, but every man in his own order, Christ the first-fruits, and afterwards them that are Christ's at his coming." Or, as Paul expressed it in the Roman letter, "They are not all Israel, which are of Israel."

More than Heredity Is Necessary

You remember in the days of Jesus Christ there were some who said, We be Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. But had they been Abraham's seed spiritually they would have lived in accord with the teachings of Abraham, and would have been indeed the children of God. It is not enough for some one to say, "My father was a good Latter Day Saint"; "My mother was a good Latter Day Saint." One may come from a good Latter Day Saint family and think he is all right. I hope he is; but it wouldn't be because his father and mother were good Latter Day Saints, although their influence would have a great deal to do with their children, as it should. I would not for a moment discredit the good work of the fathers and mothers with their children, but the children must do right. You can not get through on the credit of your father or mother. You must stand yourself, and do your own work, as we all have a work that must be done, for by our works we stand or fall. Don't forget that.

Paul said they who are the children of the flesh are not the children of God. The flesh must be overcome. That which tends to evil must be held in control, and we must be led by the Spirit of God; and if we are, then we are the sons of God, or heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ. Abraham at one time hearkened to the voice of Sarah and got into trouble. Sometimes a man can hearken to the voice of his wife and get along nicely—if the counsel is all right. We have to use our judgment, of course. But in this case he hearkened to the voice of Sarah and had improper relations with Hagar. But finally Sarah saw her mistake, and cried, "My wrong be upon thee." Yes; she had made a mistake.

Your Brother's Keeper

Then we read the account concerning Abel and Cain. You remember Cain asked, Am I my brother's keeper? Of course he was not, for he had killed his brother. He should not have done that. Then he tried to get rid of the responsibility by asking, Am I my brother's keeper? Yes, he should have been, whether he was or not. And when we, as the children of the light, know the wonderful things that are contained in the gospel of Jesus Christ, we should send out the light to others. We should be our brother's keeper. We should be interested in our brother, but we should not be so limited. We should be interested in others, in other families. In fact, the great commission of Christ was, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The gospel is unto all, and in this wonderful family that God is establishing he invites all to come unto him: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart."

Cain and Abel brought offerings. Abel's sacrifice was acceptable to God, but Cain's was rejected. They were brothers in the same family. There is a reason for Abel's offering being accepted, while Cain's was rejected. Such a condition might happen in the world today. The work of one brother in a family might be accepted, while the work of another brother in the same family might be rejected. In order for our work to stand, it must be in harmony with the word of God. There is no double standard. The gospel is the same yesterday, today, and forever.

Character of God's Love

In 1 John 3: 1-3 we are told, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." That is a wonderful thing. What manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God. It is possible, therefore, for us to be the sons of God. We can, if we will, belong to this great family. Part of it is in heaven, and part of it is on earth. "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." The Spirit of God leads into all truth.

In the 15th chapter of John, speaking of his disciples, who were already clean, they having obeyed the gospel, Jesus said, "Now ye are clean through the words which I have spoken unto you. Abide in me, and I in you," and "ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." Yes; they were clean. The reason they were clean, clean spiritually, was because they had heard the gospel message and had complied therewith. Therefore their sins were pardoned, and they stood before God in an acceptable manner; a wonderful condition to be in.

In the case of the rich man and Lazarus, told in Luke 16: 19-31, we read of a righteous man, a man who feared God and who lived in accord with the principles of truth, so that when he died his spirit went to the paradise of God; then, on the other hand, the rich man, who fared sumptuously every day, who had what money could buy, who seemingly cared nothing about the religious question. Poor Lazarus was a son of God, evidently, or he never would have received the spiritual blessing, when his spirit departed from his body; but the rich man seemingly cared nothing about this family of God. He was interested in the things of the world; and here we have a presentation of two types of men, one a child of God, the other a man of the world, but by the bye the rich man passed over on the other side. No angels accompanied his travel on the other side of the grave.

But poor Lazarus received a very fine reception and was taken to the paradise of God, while the rich man lifted up his eyes in hell. I assume the climate was not very good, but the rich man looked across a gulf and saw Abraham and Lazarus in his bosom, and then he began to realize that he had made a serious mistake. Now he was willing to consider the religious question. He requested Abraham to send Lazarus to his assistance, but this was denied him. When he saw the distressed condition he was in, he remembered that he had five brothers back on the earth. Here was the family circle; and he became very much interested, not only in his own salvation, but in that of his five brothers back on the earth. He thought he could solve the problem by making a request which would result in Lazarus being sent to his five brothers, that he might warn them, so that they would not come to the place where he was occupying. But Abraham said, "They have Moses and the prophets. Let them hear them. And he said, Nay, father Abraham; but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent." Now notice the answer of Abraham. "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead."

Why did he say that? Because there is only one gospel; only one way of life and salvation; and no one can enter in any other way.

There may be a number of relatives, relatives of the different families represented in this audience; we may be interested in completing the family circle. We may be very much interested in that; but we can not accomplish it except as we present Christ to them; the gospel of Christ. We may be very much interested, but if they will not hear this great message which came from heaven, and comply with it, they will not become members of this family circle. They will not become members of the church. They will not be entitled to the reward which otherwise they would receive.

You remember Noah; his family circle was not very large, seemingly. I don't know how many may have died before the flood came, but there were only eight souls in the ark. The family circle was not very large, but the family of God that formed that circle was saved. God was on the side of right, and no matter how large the circle was of those who were wrong, they were not worthy and did not receive his protection, and so we should learn a lesson from that. If we would enjoy the protection of God, we must comply with the requirements of his law.

Another instance is related in the 19th chapter of Genesis, from the 12th to the 17th verses. This man Lot was told to warn his sons and his sons-in-law, but it seems as though it did not do them any good. They were in the family all right, in one sense, but the record says, "but he seemed as one that mocked to them."

Indifferent to the Call of Gospel

Friends, you know how it is today, when you approach some one who is not interested in the gospel question. It may be some of them are near relatives. It may be a father, a mother, a brother, or a sister, or some other near relative; yet when you endeavor to present Christ to them, they are not interested; some of them are not. They may become interested later, but some seem indifferent about this religious question. Like one woman whom I knew who used to be a good member of the church, but she has not been working at it now for several years. In conversation with her one day she said, I would be glad if death would end it all. I said, Yes, I suppose you would; but it will not.

There are a lot of folks when they are through with this life who feel like saying, Here goes nothing, and having it all over. There are a lot of folks who would not like to meet the Lord and answer for the way they have lived. No; they would like to have it all passed by; but how different with the children of God! Death is something that some people dread very much; they are not ready. How different those who have made their peace, calling, and election sure. They long for the time to come when they shall pass to the other side, where their troubles, trials, and tribulations will be things of the past, because they have made their peace, calling, and election sure.

The Riches of Eternity

This is realized in a limited way frequently when we meet together in prayer service, when we draw near to God, as we do sometimes, when the Spirit of God is in our midst, and some one starts up the tune, "Nearer, my God, to thee," or "Jesus, I my cross have taken," or when some one offers a prayer which touches our hearts, and we feel and know that the Spirit of God is present; then we can sing, "Come, thou Fount of every blessing." We look forward to the time when Jesus will come, and we would be glad if he would come, for we feel a longing in our souls to be in the presence of the children of God. No doubt this is the reason some of you folks are here tonight, notwithstanding the weather is much against the service in some ways; yet when I look into your faces I can see that you have an interest in this great latter-day work so that you would not be satisfied to stay at home. I am pleased to see that you are interested in this work. You come and you will not let anything hinder you from coming, because you love to be in the house of God. You love to mingle with the children of God, and that love grows and develops until with faith you look forward to the coming of our Lord with ten thousand of his saints. There will be Grandpa Adam, and Grandma Eve, and Uncles Noah and Abraham, and the rest of the relatives, and we will spend a thousand years on this earth—not in a general conference; something so far ahead of that that there will be no comparison; a grand reunion, where there will be peace, joy, and gladness supreme. Not that it is not very nice to attend a general conference. We enjoy meeting with the Saints, where the Spirit of God is present, and where there is unity; but the time will come when the knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the deep; and we shall spend a thousand years in the presence of Jesus Christ. My! that will be wonderful indeed. This is our faith. This is our hope. And this great family is the family of God. We are all invited, yea, urged to become members of this wonderful family. We should become sons and daughters of the kingdom of God, and this is worth while.

Responsibility for Our Families

Another thought that I wish to call attention to is found in section 90 of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, paragraph 6, and it reads as follows:

The glory of God is intelligence, or, in other words, light and truth; light and truth forsaketh that evil one. Every spirit of man was innocent in the beginning, and God having redeemed man from the fall, men became again in their infant state, innocent before God. And that wicked one cometh and taketh away light and truth, through disobedience, from the children of men, and because of the tradition of their fathers. But I have commanded you to bring up your children in light and truth, but verily I say unto you, my servant Frederick G. Williams, You have continued under this condemnation; you have not taught your children light and truth, according to the commandments, and that wicked one hath power, as yet, over you, and this is the cause of your affliction.

Suppose God was speaking to you tonight, my brother, my sister, the heads of families, would your condition be like this brother's when God spoke to him? Would it be better, or worse? Will you think it over?

And now a commandment I give unto you, if you will be delivered: you shall set in order your own house, for there are many things that are not right in your house.

You know we should have things right in our homes if we would influence our children. At least we can do our part.

Verily I say unto my servant Joseph Smith, jr., or in other words, I will call you friends, for you are my friends, and ye shall have an inheritance with me. I call you servants for the world's sake, and ye are their servants for my sake; and now verily I say unto Joseph Smith, jr., You have not kept the commandments, and must needs stand rebuked before the Lord. Your family must needs repent and forsake some things, and give more earnest heed unto your sayings, or be removed out of their place.

An Evidence of Joseph Smith's Calling

Some people think that Joseph Smith was not a true prophet, but I am convinced of the fact that if he had been a false prophet he would not have given out a revelation rebuking himself. This supports the claim that he was a true prophet. God spoke to him and rebuked him for his shortcomings. "Your family must needs repent and forsake some things." I wonder if there is a family in Independence that is so pure and good that there is not room for improvement. "What I say unto one I say unto all. Pray always, lest that wicked one have power in you, and remove you out of your place." So there is room for improvement all along the line.

I was talking once to a brother. We differed on some things of a religious nature. I had known him for a number of years. He said, "Frank, I would like to do something to help your soul." I looked at him and smiled and said, "Well, brother, I have never seen the time that my soul would not stand some improvement; but, I am not the only one." My listeners, can you say that your soul does not need some improvement? Have you, as a father, or as a mother, of the family of God, reached the perfect condition, so that there is no improvement necessary in your life? Will you think it over? Some day we will all answer to God. I have been thinking about it a good many years, and I have been convinced of the necessity of coming up higher.

Keep the Word of Wisdom

This might be a good time to speak on the Word of Wisdom. I hardly ever do, but it comes to mind now. I was invited once, with a number of Latter Day Saints, to sit down at a very fine meal in a private home. The sister said to me, "Brother Curtis, what do you drink?" I said, "I will take some cold water." She said, "All right." A sister next to me took coffee, some took tea, others coffee. I said nothing about the Word of Wisdom. But the sister sitting next to me said, "Brother Curtis, I notice you drink water," and she started talking about the Word of Wisdom. I said, "Sister, years ago, when I became a missionary, I came to the conclusion that if I made improvement along spiritual lines, I would have to commence somewhere, so I left off my cup of coffee. One habit after another was overcome. It helped me. Missionaries should be examples to the people."

It makes a difference whether you drink tea and coffee. All should observe to keep the Word of Wisdom. Once I was visiting in a home. At dinner the sister asked me what I would drink, and I said water. The man of the house said he would take coffee. Later he endeavored to excuse himself. He said, "Well, I see you drink water!" I said, "Yes, sir." "Well, I drink coffee." "Yes." (I could see that. It was very easy to see.) "I did not drink coffee," he continued, "but a couple of missionaries came along and they drank coffee, and I thought if it was good for missionaries it would be good for me. So I began drinking coffee." I said, "You follow the missionaries, do you?" He said, "Oh, yes." "Then," I said, "from now on you drink water." But the very next meal he drank coffee. Some people follow the missionaries when it suits them, and when it does not, it is different.

Let me refer again to the sister who sat beside me who had a cup of coffee. She kept on talking about the Word of Wisdom until finally—after I had made my statement that I thought if I ever made any improvement I would have to begin somewhere so began to leave off some of my habits—she said, "My cup of coffee does not look good to me," and she didn't drink it. The brother next to her said, "My cup of tea doesn't look good to me." There was not a drop of tea or coffee consumed at that meal. These people resolved among themselves that from henceforth they would drink neither tea nor coffee. They are trying to complete the family circle. Would you like to join them? Come on, now, you Latter Day Saints. You may think it no harm to drink tea or coffee, but you want men outside of the church to comply with the perfect law of liberty and become church members. Are we to make all our growth before we are baptized into the church? or is there some room for improvement when we come inside?

Go Forward; No Looking Back

Paul said, "Let us go on unto perfection, not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works." Let us go on and make improvement. And I want to say here, and I care not for the criticism, but I have seen in the last several years a growing tendency in this church to use more tea and coffee than they did years ago. You can take that for what it is worth, but it is the wrong thing, in my opinion. I am saying that in all kindness. I want you to join the family circle, and come up higher. Let us show to the world that we have something better than they have.

Saints are gathering into Independence from the different districts. I know we have good people here and a number of them are keeping the Word of Wisdom although some are not. Saints, on coming here, expect to find us living up to the highest standard. They expect that the people who live in Zion will be living worthy of the celestial glory. Don't take my criticism too harshly, but just think it over. After a hundred years of training, the church should make great advancement during the year 1930.

Remember Lot's wife? Some people come into the church and move along nicely for a time, like good old Sister Lot who started out all right. But she was told not to look back. Finally she got so careless that she turned around and looked back. Yes; and when she did, the Bible says she turned to a pillar of salt. I wonder in our travel towards the standard of purity and holiness if we do not sometimes forget to keep our faces Zionward, and our thoughts on the things that are pure and good. Sometimes in a careless moment we look back and go backward instead of forward. We forget our duty to go on unto perfection, and go back to some of the old habits that we had before we came into the church.

Some members of the church get along very nicely for ten or fifteen years, and then, if they are not careful, go back to former habits. Why go back? Let us go on. Oh, it takes courage; I grant it. I know you may be tried. Sure; we all are. The Devil's business is to try us, to tempt us, and to overcome us if possible. But let us not listen to him; let us go on and fight the good fight of faith and not turn back.

I am satisfied that we are not going to convert all the people of the world and have them members of this great family of God; and possibly some of our relatives will not be converted to the gospel. God offers to make an everlasting covenant with all, and unless we become members of that gospel covenant we can not be cleansed and purified from our sins. In the 17th chapter of Luke, we read a very interesting account. When Jesus comes, it says there will be two men in one bed, and when the angels come to select the remnant and gather them to Zion, we are told that one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill, the one shall be taken, the other left. The great family of God will gather to Zion, with songs of everlasting joy. Two men will be plowing in the field, and you may say, "Well, what is the difference between them?" There is just the same difference between them that there was between the rich man and Lazarus. One will be taken, the other left.

Who Shall Be Taken?

We have this difference, even in the church. In the 25th chapter of Matthew, we are told that when the Lord comes, his kingdom, that is, his church, will be like unto ten virgins, five wise and five foolish. If you see some acting foolishly, be careful that you do not stumble and fall because some brother or sister comes short; be among the wise virgins who go ahead. Keep close to God, so that your influence will be helpful in building up this great family circle that will last throughout eternity. There are going to be some foolish virgins. Only half of the church members will be ready according to this parable.

Who Wants to Be Excused?

Again, a great supper is prepared for the coming of our Lord. All are invited. One man—it is recorded in Luke 14: 15-21—began to make excuses and said he had bought a piece of ground and would have to go and see it. Had he been wise he would not have purchased it before seeing it. Another said, I have bought five yoke of oxen. I will have to go and try them. Had he been wise he probably would have investigated before he purchased them. The last one said, I have married a wife. Have me excused. I have heard many excuses. Some people in the church, if asked to teach a class, or act in some office, will say, "Excuse me, please." "Do not ask me to sing, or to play the piano. Have me excused," until I have concluded that all the Lord will have to say to some people at the judgment day is, "You are excused."

You know Jesus said, Ask and you shall receive. So if you don't want to be excused, do your part as best you can.

The Lord is going to have guests at this great supper of his. In the 14th chapter of Luke the Lord's servant was told to go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind. There is going to be a great feast and a great gathering, and although some may be procrastinating their religious duties, the work of the Lord will go on.

The Time to Care Is Now

In the Old Testament we read, "The fool hath said in his heart, There is no God." A righteous man wouldn't have said that. A child of God would have known better. "I will never be religious," says one. "I don't care anything about religion." Wait, brother! Wait! You don't know what you may do yet. The rich man spoken of in the 16th chapter of Luke didn't care anything about religion, either, but, after death he became interested very quickly. The word of God tells us that the time will come when every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father. So sometime, somewhere, every knee will bow, and they will confess to the glory of God that Jesus is the Christ. They may have to go through the sweating process, and may have to pass through some sad experiences. It is better to pass through our trials and tribulations now, and be prepared to meet God, than it is to wait until we are chastised until we learn obedience by the things which we suffer. We should live close to God.

Jesus said, "Whosoever doth not take up his cross and come after me can not be my disciple." (Luke 14: 27.) If we are going to be the disciples of Christ, we must take up our cross daily and follow the Master. If there are those of our relatives and friends who will not receive the message of Christ, they will not be members of that family, not until they learn obedience. Whether it be a wife, a father, or brother, that we desire to convert to Christ, let us live close to God ourselves.

Brother Gillen last night made it plain that the ministers of Christ should set the example, and should live so that they would be in touch with God, so that they might be properly qualified to represent Christ in the world. Not only should the ministry, but all members of the church, keep the laws of Christ. There is no double standard. We are all invited to come. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne." This great family is the family of God.

May God help us all that we may work with our relatives and friends, or whoever we may be associated with. May God give us the power to do that which is right. Wherever he may lead may we be soldiers in his service, valiantly representing this wonderful family of God, so that others may become interested and cast in their lot with us.

Three Things to Do

Three things a man must do if he is to be outstandingly successful. He must be willing to go beyond the course mapped by others, to go beyond the secure but ill-paid limits of common endeavor. He must be prepared for his venture by the training and experience that will give him the best chance of success. He must have faith; faith in himself and in his destiny; faith that, though previous efforts have failed, the next effort will succeed. —Youth.

The Value of Music in Missionary Work

Even if I were able, I should not feel disposed to attempt to present this subject from either a technical or historical angle, but rather to consider its value to us as a body of men whose duty it is to use every good agency at our command in order to carry our message, which is the gospel of Jesus Christ, into the hearts and minds of men.

You at once catch the thought that I believe that not only should the heart of man be touched, but his mind must also be led in proper channels if we are to accomplish a full conversion of the individual.

The importance of music and its place in missionary work is seldom understood in fullness. In fact, it is often underestimated to the extent of failing to see the need of having a real message in its content; or it may be cast out entirely as an unnecessary adjunct to successful missionary endeavor.

I am satisfied that the value of its content should have careful consideration when we realize that music is the universal language of the soul. It is read in every nation and understood in every language, though each nationality may place its own peculiar interpretation upon it.

Music arouses the emotions and inspires to noble thoughts, out of which great and noble deeds may grow; therefore, the better its class the greater its power over men for good. Inspirational tones, begotten of the spirit of true devotion, make for feelings of reverence, transporting those who catch the message to sublime heights.

The great God who created man sent the heavenly choir to serenade the shepherds as they watched their flocks by night; thus the Heavenly Evangel was relayed by holy lips and voices to the entire world of humanity and is still being perpetuated by men and women of consecrated heart and mind.

The work of the church, as we understand it, is to evangelize the world; to encircle the earth with a girdle of faith. To do this—God deemed it wise to organize his forces, calling men, and sending them out to teach, and we have every reason to believe that music is one of the things that he desired us to use as a means of converting men.

Music opens up a wonderful avenue of opportunity for all who have gifts and ability in this line. And those who do not have such ability should organize those who have and use their gifts to further the cause of truth.

As the futility of attempting to sow seed in ground unprepared is well known, so also it has been as clearly demonstrated that a bountiful harvest should not be expected from spiritual seed sown in unprepared soil.

Music stirs the emotions, preparing the heart and mind to receive the missionary message. Why attempt to teach, then, until the heart and mind have been prepared, especially when such means is at hand?

"What! Can not it be done without music?" it seems I hear some one ask. Yes; but music is one of the elements that can assist in preparing the soul, making a possible short-cut to conversion. It helps our hearers to have a ready mind, receptive to truth.

Would we reach our hearers? How necessary, then, that in both music and song we make the best effort possible to interpret our message in the light of the character of Jesus Christ, whom we would emulate. Our music, to be effective, must awaken in men the consciousness of their need of Christ.

To make music missionary in its nature, not only the content but the method of its interpretation must be of the character to lead men's minds away from the vulgar, the jazz type, to the good, the ennobling, the uplifting, and the true. It is not a missionary's duty to try to compete with the world in matters of amusement or entertainment, but rather to stimulate men to noble thoughts of religion, which is our business as ministers for Christ.

Catherine Lambert, writing in the Saints' Herald of June 26, 1929, under the caption, "The place of music in the church," says:

Music, with its power to inspire, to elevate the soul, to bring a closer relationship with God, and to evangelize the world, has its place in our church and will make its gifts and influence felt in the lives of its people.

The word that is sung is potent with power to touch the heart and has more force than that which may be either spoken or written, and should be used because of its beneficent results.

Seeing it was wisdom in God to admonish "the young men and maidens to cultivate the gift of music and of song," it must necessarily have a place of importance in the church. If it is important to the church, and so important that it should be "cultivated," it must be valuable as a missionary asset, for the church can not continue without missionary work.

We find a great need, in very many branches, of taking heed to this admonition and cultivating the gift of music. Missionaries can help supply a great need of the church if they can convert a lot of our parents to see the necessity of giving their children the opportunity which will be of such great worth to the church. Many branches are poorly equipped in this line, and if the missionary happens to be a soloist, or there be some one in the branch who can sing, there may be no one to accompany, and an added attraction is lost and the work of the missionary hindered.

Music is not argumentative, but rather an impelling force which fills the soul with holy desires and aspirations.

Carlyle says:

Music is a kind of inarticulate, unfathomable speech which leads us to the edge of the infinite and impels us for a moment to gaze into it.

Music should be of the highest possible type; usually simple for rendition, or at least that which may be easily understood by the greatest number of those whom we desire to reach. Trash must be left out. Jazz, even though it be given a religious coloring, should be avoided. Our music should have a content and be given an interpretation that stirs religious emotions and thoughts. It should be of a character to enrich the religious life.

The poet has set out very definitely the power and influence of music over wandering, sinful man; the power to bring back from paths of sin one who had wandered far, to a place of security and rest, in his song-poem, "The sinner and the song." The words it contained, "Jesus, lover of my soul," have a definite religious content with power to enlist the attention of one who has battled with life's adversities to the point of discouragement, yet is made to feel, as his soul is bathed in rich, melodious strains, that God is willing to hear the sinner's cry whenever he "comes to himself," like the prodigal son, and is willing to return. His need is found, and in the depths of despair the words, "While the billows near me roll," make him feel his own condition and create within him a desire to flee to the sympathetic arms of Jesus in its pleading, "Let me to thy bosom fly!"

No one can fully explain the influence of music, either over persons individually or in congregations. It sways one emotionally, and then draws lovingly to its creator—God. It can be made a season of refreshing for the soul, an hour of sublime worship, fitting the congregation for reception of the message of the minister.

In our congregations we should sing praises to God with unity of purpose; such songs as "Jesus is calling," "I need thee every hour," "Consecration," "The old, old path," "In the light," "I have found the glorious gospel," "God is marshaling his army," etc., which have a tendency to make men feel missionary minded, and without this missionary consciousness we shall never reach the objective set by the Christ of "saving the world."

Whether it be instrumental music, solos offered by the human voice, or choir work, each, if properly selected, has its place.

In matters of selection I see no reason for any difficulty arising. The musical director, if properly approached, is usually willing to cooperate with the missionary and seek for his advice as to the hymns to be used during his missionary effort. Selection should be made, not with a desire to entertain, but to prepare the congregation for the message to follow. Choose that which will have a tendency to drive out evil and invite men to let Christ have residence within. Help the leader to choose songs that will develop the sacred flame of passionate desire for Jesus. This will create the worshipful spirit in the congregation, for music goes far below the thoughts and interprets feelings, discovering a consciousness not otherwise reached.

Music is a gift of the gods, and happy is he who recognizes its presence and uses it to bring men beneath its enchanting spell; for the proper kind is sure to lift men to greater heights.

The church has had numbers of missionaries, much of whose success could be attributed to musical ability, making it possible for them to draw men to them as the magnet attracts the steel. In the not far distant past we have had as exponents of the power of music, missionary teams like F. A. Russell and O. H. Bailey; John F. Sheehy and H. Arthur Koehler; Charles May and Marvin Fry; E. Y. Hunker and others; not forgetting B. H. Doty with his original songs. All these are effective workmen who recognize the possibilities in music and have used it to the honor and glory of God; workmen who, without musical ability, might have accomplished good, but it would have been impossible for them to have done nearly as much, robbed of this great power of attraction.

May I be pardoned for having a vision of the future in which I see our talented singers and musicians much better organized for radio work, one of the most effective means of taking the gospel to the nations of the earth than they are at present; whose voices, with full consecration, shall be used to sing our message into the hearts of men with a power and a conviction not yet known; and when our talent shall be organized for more effective missionary work in that, accompanying a good speaker, shall go consecrated musicians (missionaries indeed) who will recognize a God-given opportunity and give unreservedly of their gifts for humanity's betterment; who will organize the local talent and direct their course until the word as preached by the minister shall have a spiritual musical foundation upon which to rest, enabling him to carry conviction to hearts that could not otherwise be touched. With them I see a consecrated band of visiting missionaries, organized, perhaps from among the local and the general membership, who shall, through methods of personal evangelism, invite, and under the power of the endowment compel men to come under the spell of divinity through their consecrated efforts. Thus will Zion become a reality and the world be warned, and the honest in heart be gathered out of Babylon to a place of security.

I am predicting that music shall take its place in the work of the future as it has never done in the past, and recognizing the power of this valuable asset we shall make haste to the accomplishment of the task intrusted to us, even that of carrying the gospel to the nations of the earth.

The Church in Scandinavia

Sermon by E. Y. Hunker preached in the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, April 15; reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

I wish to call your attention to the reading of several passages of scripture, associated together, the first of which is Acts 10: 34, 35:

Then Peter opened his mouth and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

Revelation 14: 6: And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come: and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

Acts 17: 26, 27: And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation; that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us.

Mark 16: 15, 16: And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

Matthew 28: 18-20: And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.

I can say, truly and sincerely, that I would very much have preferred to yield place to my brothers here, in their honor. It may seem a bit peculiar that I should be the speaker instead of one of these who represents Scandinavian blood and has labored there, while I am not a native of any one of those countries. But inasmuch as I, too, have done labor in each country and perhaps see conditions through the eyes of one who is not inclined to be partial, I hope to be able to bring to you something about the church and its work in the countries of Scandinavia which shall cause you to appreciate more highly the efforts, the sacrifices, and the endeavors of those who have labored there and who have laid a foundation for a work in those lands.

My subject calls for more or less historical data, and there are many who do not care much for just historical facts. There are others who do. It is also true that if we speak from a historical basis alone, without looking further than the mere facts of history, without seeing the hand of God moving among his creatures upon the earth and without realizing other things which will enlarge our vision and increase our desire to consecrate ourselves to the great work of God, then our preaching shall be in vain. If, however, in looking over the things connected with the work of God in other lands and among other people, there shall be born within us a new desire and a deeper consecration to do our part and to put our shoulders to the great task, whether it shall be at home or abroad, with full determination, then we shall have received that which shall be a benefit.

There is a text in the 119th section of Doctrine and Covenants which says: "Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad, so far and so widely as you may." That instruction, coming from the Lord, was given a number of years ago. And, together with the other texts that have been read in your hearing, it implies very effectually and very clearly that the primary work of the people and of the church of Jesus Christ is missionary work. We believe that. We believe it is true. But do not misunderstand this statement by saying that the missionary work is the most important work. The missionary work is primary, but that does not make it the most important. The gathering of material with which to build is always primary, but the gathering of the material in itself is not the end. The end is that this material which has been gathered may be formed and molded and builded into the superstructure which shall reflect the honor of God and shall cause his name to be revered and respected among mankind.

The chief end of the church of Jesus Christ, with all of its phases pointing to the one great goal, is that men might become godlike. And becoming godlike, feeling in some degree as God feels, being touched to some degree by the same emotions that touch him and that flow from our great Father of all, and from his Son, there must also come into our lives the consciousness that will make us aware of the needs of our fellow men; and realizing that they are in dire need, we must endeavor to reach out our hands to call them to the kingdom of God, that they too might grow into the likeness of him who is our example.

In the efforts of the church to promulgate the missionary work, men and servants of the church reached Scandinavia. Nothing was accomplished there by the church of the Restoration prior to 1844. After the period of 1844, when the missionary emphasis was laid with such great stress by the people of the church at that time, missionaries reached these lands and made many converts. It was some time after the Reorganization was effected that the first missionaries of our church reached the shores of these countries. Several times men were appointed to go, but because of conditions arising and existing over which they did not always have control, they were unable to reach there. Our first missionaries to set foot upon the soil of Scandinavia were Brother H. N. Hansen, who went to Denmark, and Brother Magnus Fyrando who went to Sweden. This was in 1874. They had many hardships to meet, and in the years that followed swiftly after that time the hardships did not seem to lessen.

The church kept in mind the work of the Scandinavian fields, and endeavored, now and then, to appoint men to accomplish work there, but until the time that Apostle Peter Anderson took direct charge of these fields the work was very backward, and the conditions hard to meet. Many times the men went upon their own resources, and many times their resources were not great. They found themselves put to the necessity of going out and laboring for their daily bread, and to find, as occasion might permit, opportunity to spread the work by visiting, by distributing literature, or preaching in halls or homes.

Many of these hardships we can not appreciate in America today. Many of the older missionaries can appreciate them, but the hardship of going to these countries was made more acute because of the dominating influence of the state church in each land, with its majestic cathedrals; with its age-old traditions, handed down from generation to generation; with its splendid rituals in its service and worship, and with the systematic religious training in the schools, which at that time was a part of the school curriculum. The people were so taught and imbued with the spirit of the dominant religion of these countries, it was almost impossible to break through the wall. Prejudice was strong, a prejudice made more bitter and more hateful because of the stigma that had come upon the Restoration through the work of the Utah people whose introduction and teaching of polygamy and those other abominations that had entered into their church, cast a shadow of shame and reproach upon the work of latter days. These things caused hardships, let me repeat it, which would be difficult for us to appreciate today; and these men, passing through these obstacles, certainly faced things that were none too easy to meet.

We find from the history of the men who have gone to these countries, the names of H. N. Hansen, Magnus Fyrando, Peter N. Brix, and the brethren behind me (Peter Muceus, O. W. Okerlind, and P. T. Andersen), Swen Swenson, C. O. Johnson, David Lundquist, John H. Hanson, C. A. Swenson, Nels P. Hansen, N. C. Enge, T. O. Strand, and others we might mention, who endeavored to carry the banner of the gospel to these lands. If we could remember today and relive some of these experiences, it would cause us to feel anew a faith which inspired these men to go forth in the face of great obstacles; many times living upon what just a few cents a day could buy—very meager, indeed. Sometimes they were so hungry, having gone for such a period of days in hunger, they could scarcely walk. Without provisions, no money, strangers, facing the bitter opposition where there was hardly a friendly hand or a friendly smile to greet them, and where every power of opposition was brought to bear in the endeavor to frustrate their work; that is the history that some of these men have left behind them.

Brother Muceus, who has charge of the service this morning, went to Norway about the year 1897, not as a missionary, but on a visit to see his mother, who was upon her deathbed at that time. While there he taught the gospel as he found opportunity, and one person was baptized before he returned to America.

About the year 1900 Elder N. C. Enge was appointed by the church as a missionary to Norway. He went to that land among the people where he was born and endeavored to make contacts. In his work he found here and there, after many, many days of labor and bitter opposition, a few friends. He finally began to see some interest manifested in the work, and a few accepted the message. Brother Muceus was appointed in the year 1901. He went to Scandinavia at that time, especially to Norway, to his own home town. He held his first service in the town where he was born in front of the home where his father lived. Having no other opportunity, he took a chair into the street and stood before the people to present to them in that place for the first time publicly, the message of the great Restoration.

Brother O. W. Okerlind and Brother P. T. Andersen have carried the message to their respective lands, Sweden and Denmark, and have had the same experiences, facing their people in those hostile lands, where they had scarcely any friends. Through days, even months and years of this kind of labor, they made every effort, together with these others whom we have named. We should appreciate, this morning, some of these things.

We have heard often in the past history of our church the story of the unknown grave. Recently this grave has been found. But in the history of the Scandinavian mission there is today an unknown grave. In the year 1900 or 1901, one of our missionaries, Elder Mads P. Hansen, who had been appointed to Denmark, went from there to Norway in the endeavor to help Brother Enge. A day or so after arriving there, he became seriously ill, was taken to a hospital, and died soon after. There were only two acquaintances who followed the casket to the grave. He was laid away there in a lonely spot in a graveyard, and today we do not know where his grave is. We do not know whether the grave has been reused, for in these countries, where there is a scarcity of land, the cemeteries many times are used over again; and it is a rule, generally followed there, that if a grave is left unmarked, after a period of twenty years, it reverts to the authorities, who may reuse it. Without doubt some of his people are living in America today. They do not know where his body was laid away, but there has been left in the minds of those who know the history of this man the story of his deep consecration and his humility, and of the spiritual power that he had as he moved among the people; and though his grave is unmarked and unknown today, the work that he has left behind him will stand as an eternal monument.

Despite all the hardships and labors of these men, the Scandinavian field has yielded comparatively few members to the Reorganization, and every member gained has been an evidence of much labor. The conditions to be met there today are considerably different from what they are here. When we go into a place, it almost always becomes necessary for us to rent a hall or a building. It is necessary for us to do advertising in the papers. If in a small town, where the people are divided politically, and each group is represented by a paper, it is necessary for us to advertise in each paper, thus doubling the cost of advertising.

It is impossible for us to hold a series of meetings there as we do here. We can not hold more than two or three services a week. The people simply will not, and many times can not, come. They are burdened with their daily cares and their labors. They are tired and weary. Besides they have been traditioned otherwise. They do not feel the necessity of attending services each evening, so we have a problem there. We have the problem of meeting the old traditions; of meeting these people who have been schooled in an individualistic faith, or the idea that justification by faith is the one thing necessary for salvation, and they are ready to argue and to defend themselves for hours at a time with much vim and vigor. Nevertheless among the converts gained from the Scandinavian countries, and of Scandinavian descent, there has come to this church a very fine and splendid contribution.

In the history of the United States there are a number of nations which have made specially fine, uplifting contributions to our land; whose sons and daughters have become stanch citizens and have given of the best blood and best talent we have. Among these nations are the Scandinavian nations, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark. In the history of our country there is to be found no better type of citizenship than that given by the Scandinavian people, who are a clean-cut type of people; a people of good intelligence; a people of ability; a people who have been used to the hardships of a rigorous life, and so are able to meet and to surmount many of the economic conditions of this country, thus giving to themselves and to us a worth-while contribution. As they have done in the nation, so they have done in the church. The blood of Scandinavians is intermingled in the history of our church and has brought to us such a contribution as has helped us to make progress.

I wish to name a few of these this morning, to call your special attention to these things. The mother of President Frederick M. Smith, and also of his immediate brothers and sisters, was of pure Norwegian descent. In the Quorum of Twelve we have had such a noble man as Apostle Peter Anderson, and I want to say to you people this morning that wherever I have gone where this man has labored, I have found but one testimony regarding his life. That testimony has been this: "He, being dead, yet speaketh." There is no more wonderful testimony that can be given about any man than that testimony. Because of the life he lived he left behind him an influence that was uplifting and good, and that caused people to turn their thoughts toward God.

We have at the present time Apostle Paul M. Hanson, who is of Danish extraction. We have in the various quorums of the church those who are of Scandinavian descent—Brother P. T. Andersen, Brother O. W. Okerlind, Brother Peter Muceus, of the Seventy. There are other men in the various quorums and membership of the church, also of Scandinavian extraction. They have given their contribution, which has become a part of the history and the life of this people.

The work in Scandinavia at the present time is handicapped because of the lack of man power; the lack of membership; the lack of equipment. We need men. These men named have made a contribution. They are able yet to make a contribution, but they can not today make the same contribution under existing conditions there that they could when younger. They have labored hard, and we have the utmost respect for the labors they have given.

We have today one representative of the church in Scandinavia under general church appointment—Brother V. D. Ruch—who, with his wife, is laboring there in a wonderful way in the endeavor to preserve the work. But Sister Ruch is frail in health. She often works beyond her physical powers and overtaxes her strength. As a result, not long ago we had a letter from Brother Ruch saying that she was very ill. Brother Ruch has been in Norway and Denmark, but as yet has not been able to go to Sweden. Here is a crying need. The call for men, the call for consecration, the call for equipment, the call that comes to this church, to every member of this church, to do his part and to consecrate of his means for the purpose of prosecuting this work, the missionary work in this land and abroad so far and so widely as he may.

In section 125 of Doctrine and Covenants there is specific instruction given regarding the preparing of tracts in various languages. One of the languages mentioned is the Scandinavian. The tracts should be provided, for they certainly need them. We need new tracts; more comprehensive tracts; we need tracts that will bring us before the people, and we need men to make contacts and carry on the work. Why, I am assured this morning that despite the hardships to be met, and despite those things that face us in these countries, the time will come when they will pour their treasures in human souls into the stream of the ingathering of the people of God; that they shall take a prominent place and part in the helping in the establishing of Zion and the lifting of the banner of King Immanuel

We lack adequate funds in order to reach all classes of people. Today, because of the way we have been circumscribed in these countries by lack of means and lack of funds, the gospel has reached a class of people who are a good class, but they are a class who are generally without material means for helping the work forward. Now they can not help that. Most of the people there who are unable to help, if given the opportunity that people in this country have, would go to the top, but they are circumscribed by conditions in those countries that we know not here; and because our efforts have been limited we have gathered that class of people into our work. They are making a contribution, it is true, but this gospel was not to go to one class to the exclusion of all other classes. This gospel was to go to all people, and to every kindred, tongue, and people. We must have them all if we are to carry forward our work. And most of all, there as well as here, is beginning to dawn upon the minds of the people the lack of the real demonstration of the power of the gospel of Jesus Christ in the lives of the membership. That applies to everyone, including your speaker; for, let me tell you, the world is looking for a demonstration of the work of Jesus Christ. People themselves may not know it, but they are looking and waiting for it. The world will never be satisfied in seeing the gospel working in an individual way, touching the lives of individuals and then leaving them standing alone; and we must realize that the gospel of Jesus Christ by its very principles must be applied to more than individual problems. It must be applied to group problems and social problems; and the working out of our social problems in such a way that a society shall be brought forth in which we shall find safety, peace, and security.

Upon one occasion I talked to a young man in Norway; a splendid young man, who had done a noble piece of work in providing for his loved ones under adverse conditions. His talents are covered up because of the very conditions under which he lives, and from which he can not free himself. I endeavored to interest him by talking about the principles of the gospel; faith, repentance, baptism. For those he showed no interest; but when we began to talk of social conditions, he immediately became interested, and as I tried, to some extent, to unfold for him the social program of this church, his interest deepened. Finally he said, "This sounds very wonderful; but I want to know, is this plan in operation now?"

The conditions over there are causing men to turn their minds in the direction of cooperative social movements; and when they can see the gospel of Jesus Christ, with its principles, applied in our hearts and lives in such a way that it becomes vitalized in actual living, their individual interests in the great common interest and goal of this church will be stimulated. Men's minds have been turning that way because they are coming to realize more and more that it is the only way society can exist successfully.

If you were buying a car, and listening to a salesman talking about it, you would not be so much interested in what he had to tell you about what the car could do, as in seeing whether the car would do the thing he said. That is a trait of human nature; and it is true, not only in regard to automobiles and material things, but also regarding spiritual things.

Now, we are sure that the day will come when the gospel shall spread its way in Scandinavia; when we shall be able to send men to carry this message; when we shall be able to call unto the people and say to them, "Here is a demonstration of that message which will save men not only in the hereafter, but will also save them from conditions which are unfavorable today, and give to them the best opportunity under the best of conditions for the development of those talents and powers within their souls that are crying out for expression." That is the work of the church in America; in Scandinavia; in England; in Australia; in Canada; in Germany; in Holland; in every other mission wherever we may go—the gathering of such materials as may be transformed by the gospel into workers in the building of the kingdom of God.

A number of years ago, when I accepted this latter-day message, it was not long until it was made known to me in a very definite manner that I was to take up missionary work for this church. And it was made plain, in a still more definite manner, if possible, that that missionary work was to be in foreign fields. And let me bear this testimony to you people this morning: that evidence did not come to me because of any personal desire to do work in foreign fields, for often in my prayers that was the one thing that I struggled against. I did not want to go on a foreign mission, but having received evidence that that was my call, I was desirous of knowing where I should labor. I went to Graceland College, and there I made the matter of the study of languages a subject of prayer. After almost two weeks of meditating and praying about this, there came to me in the early hours of one morning, a vision. That is why I said a few moments ago that my feeling and assurance that the work would roll forth in Scandinavia are not built upon sentiment alone, but upon a number of experiences. In that vision I was permitted to see the countries of Europe unfolded as upon a map, and as I looked I saw a finger. Somehow, by some power that I can not explain, I knew that finger was the finger of God. As I continued to gaze that finger went around Norway and Sweden three times, then pointed out five places in Russia, and after it had pointed out these places a voice that spoke as the sound of many waters said: "Herein lieth a wonderful work for my people."

We have labored. It has seemed at times that the very doors have been closed against us, but we labored still in the assurance that the time will come when the gospel will go forth, when there shall be gathered out from this people the elect of God; and not only that, but let us think for a moment this morning upon the millions upon millions of human souls in these countries, in Russia and other lands, who have never as yet heard the sound of the restored gospel. What a task before us! But this morning let us rest assured in this, that God is behind this work, and if we will do our part he will do his.

Then let us arise; let us unite ourselves in whatever task may fall to our lot, that we shall consecrate ourselves, whether it be in the ministry, in business, in agriculture, in the home—let us unite ourselves to do this one thing, to become stewards for God and to give ourselves whole-heartedly and consecratedly to the carrying on of the task that those who have gone before have so nobly started.

Religious Achievement and Penitence

Examining and comparing one another's claims, the truth will surely emerge that all the religions of the world have less to be proud of than to be penitent for. Their claims of virtue will surely be submerged in their common consciousness of misdirection, sloth, self-centeredness, love of power, satisfaction over palliative measures of relief where conditions called for daring social reconstruction, and a hundred other sins of which religions have been historically and institutionally guilty. Whatever may be the result of weighing virtue against virtue, excellence against excellence, good fruits here against other good fruits there, the paramount disclosure of such a study will be that no religion has any right, on the basis of its achievements, to thank God that it is not like other religions; rather will it smite upon its breast and say, God be merciful to me a sinner!—The Christian Century.

The Mysterious Stranger

A Story Retold by Carl F. Mayer

This story was told to me some years ago by a non-Latter Day Saint: A story of a German farmer family down in the former German South-West-Africa Colony during the Herero Rebellion there in 1904-06:

"We were located," the daughter began, "some one hundred miles southwest of Windhuk, the capital. As soon as the rebellion broke loose, all of my father's dusky help deserted the farm, leaving us, father, mother, and myself, to ourselves. We felt somewhat secure in the idea that Windhuk, with its protecting troops, was near. For some weeks we had seen no militant Herero bands near us, and we had no thought of leaving our beautiful farm.

"One night I was rudely awakened by somebody shaking me out of my slumber. I opened my eyes, and at first wanted to yell. Before me stood a man in ordinary farmer's clothing, but his face was flaming and rather serene. He soon spoke:

"Get up, quickly! The Hereros are coming to plunder and kill! Make haste!"

"The fact that I was awakened so unconventionally brought me nervously to my senses, and I hurried, as soon as I was dressed, into my parents' bedroom. They both were awake, but still half asleep, it seemed. When they heard of my experience, they confirmed the visit of the stranger who had been also in their room, and told me to select the best horses for immediate flight.

"When I went outside, my first stirring thought was to look for that mysterious stranger. He was gone.

"We had scarcely reached the foothills of the nearby mountains, when we looked back at the moonlit landscape. There we saw our home going up in flames, and we could hear, though about five miles away from the scene, the tortured cattle bellowing amidst the murderous shouts of plundering Hereros. The mountain air is very clear there.

"We then headed into the mountains as fast as we could, and some hours later we reached safely the city of Windhuk.

"To me," concluded the girl thoughtfully, "this mysterious stranger was more than a mere man. I am not familiar with churches, but our family is a God-fearing one, and I believe that God the Almighty saw it fit to save my dear father and mother and me. These little things seem so insignificant, but I really believe that miracles do happen, even

Rock Island District

Young People's Convention

The annual young people's convention of Rock Island District was held at Moline church June 13 to 15. Due to illness we were unable to secure a general church worker until Saturday morning, but District President E. R. Davis, who was in charge of the convention, ably conducted the study hour periods with an interesting discussion on the purpose of the church and the new program of religious education. On Friday evening a general entertainment was enjoyed with piano and violin solos, readings, and songs. A darty trio and short play, "Grandma helps things along," added to the fun.

Eugene E. Closson arrived early Saturday morning from Independence to conduct the class work for the remaining days. The success of this lecture course might be measured in attendance, which grew from ten to one hundred and twenty-five, but its value is more truly expressed in the broadened viewpoint and deeper concept of religious education, the inevitable reaction to his message. He clothed the ideal in such practical garments that we could easily understand and apply it to everyday situations and to every group.

Formerly the aim of religious education was to teach subject matter as an end in itself. Now we feel that everything we teach must be immediately applicable to the needs of life, and unless our Bible and Book of Mormon lessons, etc., serve the purpose of making our lives more Christlike they are valueless as a means of religious education.

Recreation and religion should not be separated; in fact, the ideals of Christ and Christian living may be expressed as definitely in the natural activities of young people as in a prayer service. The psychological approach of religion to a young person is most effectively made through the channels of personal interest, friendship, and companionship, development of his physical and social nature, expression of his abilities in recreational and religious activities, until he is prepared for that spiritual attitude which leads to true worship.

All types of activity may be good or evil according to the attitude of those who participate and the results obtained. Recreation, wisely chosen, will always serve to develop and strengthen the individual physically, mentally, spiritually, and socially. If it does not do this, and tends, instead, to tear down the body or lessen the mental and spiritual powers, then it is not a safe or wholesome recreation and should be abandoned. We should be very careful, however, that reason and not prejudice are the criteria by which we judge the recreational activities of our young people. We should also provide abundantly for the social needs of our youth, so that they may not need to look to the world for their companions and life mates.

The ideal home is one which has been planned for the full expression of wholesome activities and natural development. The child who learns self-reliance and initiative in his early games in the back yard will not forget them in real life.

At the conference session on Saturday afternoon the new program of religious education was adopted by the district, and we look with favor upon the branches adopting the new in this modern time, where young and old seem to be enveloped so much in their own affairs."

Lo! and behold! thy God liveth!

system only as fast as they are ready for it. The district presidency will act as superintendents of religious education until the general election of officers in October. They will cover as much of the district as they can in the interest of the new program, so that every branch may thoroughly understand it and see fit to adopt it.

It was also agreed that we send our supply of reunion cots and a gasoline stove and oven to the Boys' and Girls' Camp at Nauvoo. We are glad to loan this equipment where it can be of service until such time when we may again need these articles.

The district has planned a Fourth of July picnic at Kewanee, Illinois, to be followed by a two-day institute at that place. It is expected that this will be a notable social event and drawing card for the subsequent convention. We hope that as many as possible will attend this gathering, for it is the first district picnic which has been attempted, and Kewanee Saints are making adequate preparation to give proper entertainment.

Brother Charles Hield, of Chicago, was with us on Sunday and preached the closing sermon on Sunday evening. While many had already departed for their homes, the service was well attended, and everyone felt that the convention had been a decided success in every way. We anticipate the return of Brother "Gene" and all other visitors at a future time when we may continue our work together. We regretted the illness which prevented District Missionary Amos T. Higdon from being with us. We sent him a message of sympathy from the conference and trust that by this time he may be much improved.

MRS. JOHN STIEGEL.

McKenzie, Alabama

Saints of Pleasant Hill Branch are catching the spirit of the Centennial and launching out on the new program of the church. The first step toward this program was taken on Easter when the departments combined in the program "What does Easter mean to me?" representing all ages, from the tiny tot who thinks of Easter only in terms of Easter eggs, to the aged grandfather, looking forward to eternal life, taught through the death and the resurrection of our Master. The departments combined again in the observance of Mother's Day. It was on this day that Elder Glenn Davis, General Conference appointee, arrived and preached his first sermon to us.

Sunday, May 18, Apostle James A. Gillen preached the high school baccalaureate sermon. The high school auditorium was filled, and Brother Gillen's sermon had a great influence in changing the attitudes of nonmembers toward the Saints. The townspeople and the school officials extended Brother Gillen invitations to return and lecture.

Alabama district conference convened with the Lone Star Branch, at which time Brothers Gillen and Davis were present. The latter was chosen district president to succeed Brother D. E. Sellers. Elder H. H. Wiggins and D. E. Sellers were chosen as his counselors.

The Pleasant Hill Branch elected Elder Glenn Davis pastor to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Elder H. H. Wiggins. Brothers Wiggins and L. G. Sellers were chosen as associate pastors. Elder J. R. Harper was chosen pastor of Flat Rock Branch and Elder J. W. Baldwin pastor of Lone Star Branch.

Pleasant Hill Saints wish to express their appreciation to Brother Wiggins for the services he has rendered. They too wish to pledge themselves to the new pastorate in the further progress of the work.

Seventy young people meet on Tuesday and Thursday nights on Pleasant Hill Church grounds for recreational activities. Much enthusiasm has been shown, and the Pleasant Hill Church is fast becoming the community center.

Children's Day was very fruitful. The morning worship services, in charge of the pastor, were directed to children, the endeavor being to make this day their decision day; and as a result, coupled with the recent visits that had been made, twelve children were baptized. They were: Carl Wendell Drake, Lila Odom, Merle Sellers, Maxine Snowden, Marjorie Snowden, Myrtle Davis, Bertha Davis, Lourine Shelly, Margaret Vickery, Emma Jean Patrick, Cecil Harper Barnes, and Arlan Parker. Confirmation services were held in the evening, at which time six elders of the branch officiated in the sacred ordinance of the laying on of hands.

The twenty members of the ministry, with their wives, held a priesthood banquet at the home of Brother and Sister D. E. Sellers. The Temple Builders served the dinner, under the direction of Sister J. L. Harper, director of women's activities. The theme of the banquet was "Sailing Zionward," Brother Lyle D. Flynn acting as toastmaster. The following toasts were given: "Setting the sail," by Brother E. C. Sellers; "Charting the course," by Elder B. E. Barlow; "Joining all hands on deck," by Elder H. H. Wiggins; and "Sailing on," by Pastor Glenn Davis. The banquet had the tendency to more closely unify the priesthood, and helped to dedicate them for the missionary efforts scheduled for the near future.

The Saints in and around McKenzie humbly and earnestly pray for the progress of Zion and wish to pledge themselves to further its development.

LYLE D. FLYNN.

Little Visits in Zion

By J. M. Terry

We visit the Sanitarium quite frequently and try to cheer the sick, whose universal testimony is to the good and kind treatment given them by the medical staff and efficient nurses. Some of our most active missionaries are found there at times, resting or undergoing treatment for their bodies worn and impaired by hard work. The unanimous opinion of the afflicted is one very favorable to the kindness of the nurses.

Recently Sister Terry and I had a pleasant visit with Brother and Sister John Hartnell, who in times past have been pillars of the gospel work in Michigan and are still firm in the faith.

By invitation I lately spoke at Liberty Street Church. There the congregation is ruled by the spirit of love and peace, Elder F. A. Cool being the able pastor. The Saints appreciate the old gospel story taught by the Restoration.

At night we visited the Stark Acres Mission, in Kansas City, and rejoiced with them in the gospel. Elder Joseph Curtis has charge of the little band of members firm in the faith there.

The group prayer service in District 1 A was especially good and spiritual the night of May 21. The Saints were again reassured of the divinity of the latter-day work.

The good work at Englewood is moving on under the care of Elder Dewey McNamara. We visited this branch on sacrament Sunday and found the congregation alive in the good work. A number of testimonies of the Saints stirred us to our souls' depths.

By invitation we were called to Spring Branch on Children's Day. Their new baptismal font was dedicated by the prayer of the pastor and sanctified by the baptism of about sixteen precious souls, mostly children. The young people's choir did excellent work, singing a cantata telling of the birth and wonderful life of our Savior.

Such visits to the various congregations confirm my belief that the good work is moving on in Independence.

Sisters Lillian Huch and Mamie Kinghorn sojourned a few days with us on their way from a visit in their former home, Saint Louis, to their present home in Seattle, Washington. They came east to attend the General Conference. They long to live in the center place.

The Sunday afternoon prayer services at the Stone Church often leave us with a blessing. The good Spirit inspires us with words of comfort and cheer, and assures the worshippers of the advancement of the gospel.

The more we know of it and the more we see it work on the hearts of men, the more firmly and intelligently do we love the gospel, and the river of evidence flows on.

Los Angeles, California

Central Branch

While the new pastor, Elder Eli Bronson, has been with us only a short time, we hope that we have made as good an impression on him as he has on us. On Monday evening, May 12, the trustees sponsored a reception for Brother Bronson, at which time we endeavored to impress on him the privilege he has of working and living in southern California. These social evenings are ideal for getting acquainted; and as Brother Badham, acting for the trustees, had arranged a fine program and refreshments, a good time was had by all.

Due to the fact that the schools in Portland had not dismissed for the summer, Brother Bronson was denied the pleasure of the companionship of his family until last week. We are glad to welcome his family to Los Angeles, and trust that they will feel at home here and will have no regrets for their move to this city. They arrived on Saturday afternoon, June 7, and found their home ready for them, a nice dinner waiting, and a full pantry. The Women's Department was responsible for the dinner as well as the pantry shower.

May 11 a fine Mother's Day program was given under the direction of Sister Laura Freie. A pageant had been arranged combining Mother's Day and Father's Day and featuring the mothers of America and the fathers of today. The leading parts were taken by Sister Grace Bell, characterizing "America," Sister Garnet Sames as "Memory," and Jack Forsythe as "Youth of America."

Sunday evening, May 11, Brother Bronson preached his first sermon in the Los Angeles Central Church. He chose for his subject "Divine provision for human needs." This sermon gave us a taste of the spiritual food that will be ours in time to come, and we have not been disappointed.

We were indeed glad to have the opportunity of meeting Elder W. J. Haworth, missionary from Australia, and party. They enjoyably entertained us with motion pictures of their journey to conference. Sister Flora Delofski gave two readings which were entertaining. Brother Haworth talked Sunday morning, May 13.

Brother Lyle Woodstock, who has visited in Los Angeles for some time, has returned to his home in Independence. We regret to lose Lyle but are happy to have had the opportunity of knowing and working with him. We sincerely wish him happiness and success wherever he may make his home.

The young people, under the leadership of Sister L. B. Shippy, are continuing their good work. Every Friday evening is Youth's Evening at the church. The Mizpah Chapter of Temple Builders, which consists of the girls over twenty years of age, under the leadership of Sister Bernice Wagnon, meets every Monday evening. The third Monday evening of each month is devoted to social activities, while the other evenings are given to the study of the comparative religions. These girls are doing fine work. They are working at present to raise money for the Sanitarium. Mr. McKinney, manager of the Regent Theater, located at 4012 South Vermont Avenue, donated the girls several hundred tickets for the performance on Thursday night, June 12. The girls sold these tickets at the regular admission price of twenty-five cents each and raised a tidy little sum in this manner. On last Monday evening, June 16, Sister Wagnon entertained the girls at her home, serving dinner to them at a charge of twenty-five cents each. The money raised on both of these ventures will be used in their Sanitarium fund.

May 25 a large number of our young people attended the young people's rally at Long Beach. This was under the supervision of Brother Wilfred Burton, district superintendent of the Department of Recreation and Expression. There were a great many district young people present, and many sports and pleasure events arranged. Nor were the spiritual features of the rally neglected. This was an occasion for the spiritual, mental, and physical refreshment of our young.

Tuesday, May 27, the priesthood of Central Branch sponsored a banquet as a get-acquainted meeting. This banquet was a great success, and we discovered that the pastor has another great accomplishment; he is an ideal toastmaster. The Marthas, who have done wonderful work for a number of years in preparing dinners and banquets, again took charge of the preparing and serving of the food, and their delightful dinner, together with the fine program rendered, demonstrated that there are few better pleasures than a social gathering of the Saints.

The adult department, under the leadership of Sister Billie Carpender, has arranged for a series of health lectures by Doctor A. W. Teel. These are given every Sunday evening at the close of the public speaking class. The public speaking class, under the direction of Sister Margaret Wickes Jones, meets every Sunday evening at six o'clock. Much good has been accomplished at these classes, and the instructors are to be commended for their service.

Brother and Sister Frank Gregg, who for years have been associated with the work in Los Angeles, are moving this week to Long Beach. While this move will of course curtail their activities to some extent in Los Angeles Central Church, we hope that we may enjoy their presence at many of our meetings and social activities.

The publicity department of Central Church has made arrangements to keep a complete set of church publications on hand at all times. Anyone desiring to purchase these publications may now receive prompt delivery. The books are on display at the church, and we invite all the Saints to inspect them. These publications can not be recommended too highly, and a complete library of church books should be in every home.

Daisy Hill, Saskatchewan

During the last six months activities in this branch have moved on. The Saints entertained a crowd of considerable size with a Christmas program and bazaar December 13, 1929, at the Daisy Hill Schoolhouse, meeting with real success. At the advice of Sister W. L. Christy, wife of the district missionary, only such numbers as breathed of the spirit of Christmas were used. Most beautiful of all numbers on the program was a drama entitled "Christmas." The youngest participant on the program was wee Edith Bates, just six months old. She is the daughter of Brother and Sister Edward Bates, and acted her part to perfection. When the curtains were pulled aside for the manger scene, little Edith was seen fast asleep in a manger made of poplar wood, and Sister Kingwell, who took the part of Mary, looked on. A hidden choir sang:

Asleep in a manger, no crib for a bed,
The little Lord Jesus lay down his sweet head.
The stars in the sky looked down where he lay,
The little Lord Jesus asleep in the hay.

A more beautiful and touching picture could not have been presented. It thrilled the entire audience.

Through the work of the women of the branch many beautiful garments were made and auctioned at the bazaar.

A sum of more than forty dollars was as a result handed to Brother Ward L. Christy as a token of appreciation for his missionary services in Northern Saskatchewan District.

The new year found the Saints holding regular weekly services and the Recreation and Expression Department meeting every two weeks on Friday evening.

We have always been granted the privilege of using the Daisy Hill Schoolhouse for services and entertainments, and have benefited by the use of the school district piano. This piano had a small debt against it, and the Saints felt it their duty and privilege to apply their time and talent in some cause to clear the debt and to repay the school district for its kindness. On February 21 the members, with a little help from people who were nonmembers, held a concert, and the proceeds were applied to the piano fund. The concert brought much encouraging comment. Many of the audience declared it to be the best concert they had ever heard.

It was advertised that the Daisy Hill Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints would present on the evening of Easter Sunday a sacred concert featuring a pageant, "Easter dawn." This announcement brought a large gathering to the schoolhouse. Those who took part worked diligently to make the production the success it was.

The members of the branch, especially the young people, unitedly responded to the call of President Frederick M. Smith prior to the opening of the Centennial Conference, relative to the fast. As a result, the little sacramental service held at the farm home of Brother and Sister Charles Low April 6 was one recognized of God. He abundantly poured out his Spirit upon us, and we were made to rejoice that we were permitted to live in this day when we may enjoy the blessings of a restored gospel. The service encouraged the branch very greatly, and the Saints are striving to place themselves on a higher plane and to live more worthy of the blessings they are receiving.

Duluth, Minnesota

June 18.—The Centennial Conference should live on in the lives of the members who attended its meetings, and we hope that its work shall bear fruit in the days to come. Since a fine representation went to Independence from Duluth, we are expecting to feel the benefit of the conference in a keener desire to move forward in the working out of the church ideals. We wish to help to present a practical demonstration of the laws of God.

Brother Ernest Losey, who is here as salesman for a Philadelphia firm during the summer months, was the morning speaker May 18, bringing to us many rich experiences gleaned during his life as a minister of truth. Pastor A. C. Bundy was the evening speaker. Brother J. P. Fetting, of Sandusky, Michigan, chief engineer on the Jay E. Morse, a steamer which plies the great lakes, was a welcome visitor.

Elders P. G. Schnuckle and Samuel Case motored to Two Harbors May 21 in the interests of the church, and met with the group of Saints in prayer service.

Brother W. C. Stauty was the morning speaker May 25, using for a theme "What is in thine hand?" Elder P. G. Schnuckle occupied in the evening.

Brother Stauty visited a group of Baptist colored people at church in the evening and through request occupied the sacred desk. He was invited to return.

We were made sad on visiting at Two Harbors June 1 to find a number of the Saints afflicted. Sister Susie Craven was operated upon for appendicitis May 28. Her sister, Loretta, from Chicago, was attending her. This group of members is true to the program and ideals of the church, and its members are doing their bit to hold high the banner of King Immanuel.

Elder A. C. Bundy and Brother Robert Zuelsdorf motored to Two Harbors to meet with the Saints in prayer service June 4.

June 8 Pastor A. C. Bundy was the morning speaker in Duluth, and he also preached in the evening. After the evening service under the canopy of heaven in the bay waters, Elizabeth Peterson and Joseph Thompson were baptized by Pastor Bundy. They were confirmed during the evening service June 15 under the hands of Elders A. C. Bundy and Samuel Case.

Brother Robert Zuelsdorf was the speaker for the morning hour. It being Children's Day he used for the subject of his discussion the six fundamental principles of the gospel of Christ, using blackboard illustration.

We are anticipating the opportunity of meeting again with Saints at the reunion.

While our trials have been many and still exist, our thoughts are on heavenly things; our minds are stayed on God. We desire to accomplish the purpose wherein he has called us, and we pray that we may be endowed with power from on high to assist in the realization of the ideals of the church, making Zion a place of beauty and light.

Omaha, Nebraska

Central Branch, Thirty-sixth and Burt Streets

We are led to rejoice in the quiet and peace that now prevail as our Sunday school period merges into the morning worship hour. Such was the case on May 18 when two young men of the priesthood, Mindred Keairnes and Marion Cooper, were in charge of the service. Elder R. W. Scott was the speaker of the morning and chose as his text, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." As an enlargement on this theme, he advised us that if happiness is our goal we should study the doctrine of stewardships and make practical application in our lives. Pastor Blair Jensen, the speaker at the eight o'clock meeting, told us in forceful terms that procrastination and lukewarmness are two insidious forces pulling on the strength of this church. With two such sermons as these to direct and inspire us, it would seem that we must move forward.

Wednesday evening prayer meetings, while not so well attended, are of a high order, and for the balance of the year will be under the direct supervision of Elder C. T. Self.

As the lesson period of our church school was drawing to a close on May 25, Assistant Superintendent H. O. Wrenn brought a timely lesson on punctuality, loyalty, and service. Elder David Lewis was the speaker of the morning, his theme being "Loving each other." During the Recreation and Expression hour, the Temple Builders of South Side Branch gave an interesting playlet on the "One tenth." These girls are striving to raise funds so that they may attend the reunion in a body. Brother Blair Jensen was the speaker of the evening.

The first week in June marked the closing of the season for class work, which was held every Monday evening during the past winter. This period of study was sponsored by the Sunday school, and a good many availed themselves of the opportunity for study and the earning of diplomas. The sacramental meeting of June 1 was well attended, and the Saints enjoyed a goodly portion of the Spirit. The General Epistle to the Saints was read by Doctor H. A. Merchant. A pleasing musical number by the choir, under the direction of Brother Harry Greenway, and a very beautiful sermon on "Gardens" by Pastor Jensen brought to a close the Sabbath Day.

On June 4, a former pastor, J. L. Cooper, returned from Kirtland and brought with him Jane Audentia Fredrick, who is visiting at the home of her grandparents, Brother and Sister B. M. Anderson. The leading thought of Brother Cooper's sermon on the following Sunday was that this church has a distinctive message and must produce a distinctive people. Sister Grace Edwards, of Independence, Missouri, sang a lovely solo at this service. Also on this Sunday we were very happy to welcome home our Graceland students. Brother W. T. Wellman was the speaker during the evening hour.

On June 11 in Nevada occurred a wedding that was of interest to Omaha folks. Sister Lena Parlet, a former Graceland student, became the bride of Mr. Robert Swaney, and we wish for them a lifetime of happiness. The young couple will live in California. Brother and Sister Cooper and John Francis left the morning of June 12 for their new home in Kirtland, and our good wishes for success go with them.

June 14 the annual Sunday school picnic! The attendance of two hundred and fifty was considered very good; and although some of the fun was blighted by a shower of rain, the event was considered a success. The sports committee found the Game Book, by Eugene Closson, an invaluable aid, and highly recommend it.

Children's Day dawned bright and clear; both morning and evening services were very well attended. The baptismal service of the morning hour and the confirmation of the evening was in charge of Brother Jensen. Prior to the ordinance of baptism, Doctor H. A. Merchant gave a short discourse. Brothers C. T. Self and Marion Cooper were the members of the priesthood who were instrumental in inducting thirteen candidates into the church. We are happy to welcome these children into our ranks. A beautiful duet was sung at the evening meeting by Sister Nell Kelley and Brother Harry Greenway.

A Fatherly Counsel

By Gomer T. Griffiths

By the grace of our heavenly Father I am still in the land of the living and enjoying the rich blessing of health. I truly appreciate the great goodness of our heavenly Father in my behalf. By reason of the physical strength given me, I am able to go forth among the people of God and encourage them to go forward in the Lord's grand and glorious latter-day work.

At this juncture I wish to call the attention of the ministry to the revelation given through our beloved brother, Elbert A. Smith, in the basement of the Stone Church at Independence at the time of the General Conference in 1920. Said revelation was given to the priesthood then assembled, and I quote a part of it, which reads as follows: "When you go forth to preach the gospel to the world, you are not to preach your own speculations or idle imaginations, and you are not to preach the philosophies of men. You are to preach the gospel as given in the three books I have given the church, and you are to cry repentance to this generation, and when you stand to preach to the Saints you shall say to them as Moses of old, that they shall go forward."

I have been trying by the aid of God's Holy Spirit to preach both to the nonmembers and to the Saints, in accordance with the above instruction, and I can truthfully testify from my own experience that he who gave the revelation will abundantly bless the ministry that will heed the counsel of God as is therein given. And there is no doubt as to the success that will attend the labors of those who abide by his will in that respect.

As members of the ministry we should be very careful that we do not refuse the counsel of God that is given to us from time to time, for fear that we may be guilty as were those in the days of John the Baptist who refused the counsel of God against themselves, given to them through the prophet. We are always safe when we govern ourselves by his written word, and then as a consequence of our obedience thereto, the labors that we perform, though in weakness on our part, in the interest of humanity and his great cause, will be attended by his power, which will supplement our efforts, and the labor thus performed will not be in vain.

There never was a period in the history of this world when there was so great a demand made upon the ministry of God as he now makes of his servants. The command has been given, and reiterated time and again in these last days, that his ministry should proclaim his gospel in language that the people can comprehend, and that they declare unto this generation the doctrine of repentance and baptism for the remission of sins, for the reason that Jesus came to the earth that through the gospel the people may be saved from their sins.

It is very evident that the great majority of the people of this generation love pleasures more than God, and as a consequence wickedness is on the increase, and iniquity abounds on every hand. In view of this fact, we should put forth our efforts to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ which Paul declared was the power of God unto salvation in the power and demonstration of the Holy Ghost.

Adhere to the counsel above given, that we be not found guilty of preaching idle imagination and the philosophies of men, and our own speculations. There are thousands upon thousands of honest souls in the world who are anxiously waiting to hear the sound of the old Jerusalem gospel, and who would gladly obey its precepts if they only had the opportunity to hear it.

In my travels among our own people, I have discovered that many of the families of the Saints do not observe their prayers in the season thereof, as we have been commanded to do in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. Very many fail to observe the family altar. It has been necessary many times for me to suggest that we bow around the family altar and render thanks to our Father in heaven for his mercies and the protection afforded us through the day ere we retire for the night. I regret very much that this has happened in the homes of branch presidents and district presidents. Those who are so negligent in observing the order that God wanted his people to establish in their homes, and thus neglect to set the proper example before their children in teaching them to pray and to attend to other family duties, are under the same condemnation as were some of the leading officers in the church in the very beginning of the latter-day work. (See Doctrine and Covenants 90.) And how such brothers can be spiritual minded and successful shepherds over the flock over which they have jurisdiction in spiritual things is a mystery to the writer.

The radio and the automobile are wonderful and useful inventions when used for good purposes, and, therefore, we would not want to have them taken out of the world. However, they are being used very often to the detriment of many of our people. For instance, when they tell us that they get more good out of the radio by staying at home than they get in the church; that they get better singing, music, and preaching, where it is so convenient for them to just sit in their nice comfortable chairs and listen to it rather than to go to the trouble of going to the church.

Automobiles could also be used to the glory of God and in the interest of the church; but many use them for pleasure and Sunday visiting and joy riding. If they were put into service in conveying aged and invalid members to the church, what a wonderful good could be accomplished in this way! There are those who have done and are doing a good work in this respect in taking the ministry to places of appointment; for which they will receive an equal reward.

Our talents and means should be used to the glory of God and in helping to gather into the fold the honest in heart. The hastening time is upon us, and may grace and power be given to us all to assist in qualifying the people for the coming of our Lord. To this end may God bless Israel.

Sawyerille, Illinois

June 23.—This is the first report from Sawyerille Branch organized fourteen months ago and having at present twenty-nine resident members. The Saints are progressing in all lines of gospel work and are grateful for the many privileges they enjoy. We can truly testify of the wonderful blessings which follow our efforts.

Sunday school attendance averages fifty, while a great number is present on Wednesday evenings at the Religio sessions.

A dramatic club was organized a short time ago, Sister Nettie Farley Garret, director. Her ability was shown in the first play, a Negro minstrel at which a sum of forty-three dollars was made and used to redecorate the interior of the church.

June 15 was a day long looked forward to by the children and long to be remembered by all who attended the annual picnic. Our only regret was that Brother and Sister George Barraclough could not be present. In the late afternoon we drove to a beautiful place where Branch President A. A. Russell baptized a young woman who has been an active worker for some time, and three brothers whose ages are ten, fourteen, and seventeen. The quartet were confirmed at the evening service, the Spirit being felt by all present.

Brother Barraclough, of East Saint Louis, whose untiring efforts during the last twenty years have made this branch possible, delivered the eleven o'clock sermon Sunday, June 22. We look forward to his regular monthly visits in Sawyerille.

The Saints have been greatly blessed in carrying on the work here and are hopeful of much more to soon be accomplished. This being a coal-mining community, it is often necessary for families to seek employment elsewhere, but we seldom feel a severe loss, for other Saints move in and the branch work is kept moving.

Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District Conference

The following account of the splendid conference of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District appeared in the local paper:

Large and appreciative attendance marked the successful conference of the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints June 7 and 8. The members of the local church at Clear Lake, four miles east of Fremont, were the hosts of conference; and owing to their businesslike preparation and hospitality, the needs of all visitors were amply satisfied and smiles of satisfaction were on the faces of all. Led by Elder D. T. Williams, of the Quorum of Twelve, director of world-wide missionary work, and assisted by District President William Osler, the business of the conference progressed smoothly.

A rousing gospel song service, led by Miss Louise Evans of Grank Rapids, district chorister, was held at 7.30 p. m., and then at 8 p. m. a concert was given. This concert was of unusual merit and the various numbers of music, song, and dramatics were ably rendered by young and old. The contributions to this program by all the neighbors and friends, in and around Angola were appreciated by the large audience which packed the church building. The concert lasted about three hours, but never at any time did it drag, owing to the excellent nature of every contribution.

Sunday morning at 8.30 a devotion service of prayer, praise, and testimony was presided over by Elder D. T. Williams. The spirit of Pentecost blessed this meeting, and cheer and spiritual strength gladdened the souls of all. At 11 a. m., Elder J. Pycock, of Toronto, Ontario, Canada, delivered a sermon on "True religion." Elder D. T. Williams, in a clear, forceful way, delivered a stirring sermon at 2 p. m. Elder O. J. Hawn, of Coldwater, Michigan, at 4.30, preached an old-time sermon in his usual fervent manner. Reverend G. Brown, pastor of the Baptist Church at Ray, Indiana, here, offered an inspiring invocation. Elder S. W. L. Scott, of Coldwater, Michigan, preached at 8 p. m.

Visitors came to this conference from South Bend, Fort Wayne, Hudson, Elkhart, Buchanan, Kalamazoo, Battle Creek, Marshall, Lansing, Grand Rapids, Coldwater, Benton Harbor, and various other points. About six hundred meals were served in the dining room—twenty-five chickens were utilized in the making of a substantial dinner on Sunday. At the close of the conference the delegates by unanimous vote, thanked the members of the Clear Lake church for their hospitality and kind care.

The local church at Clear Lake, under the careful leadership of Branch President George Cassell, deserves congratulations for the success of the conference held there. The Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District will hold their annual ten-day reunion at Indian Lake near Vicksburg, Michigan, from July 25 to August 3. This camp-meeting reunion is usually well attended, and a corps of ministers and teachers and workers provide study classes and meetings and activities for young and old. This reunion provides an opportunity for a vacation of spiritual worth, and the cost of living there is moderate. All are invited to attend either part or all the time.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

The burden of work on the Saints has of late been great. They are endeavoring to complete some repairing on the church home before the branch two-day meeting, which original plans set for July 19 and 20. However, because of existing conditions Brother A. E. Anderton, district president, of Columbus, called the meeting for June 21 and 22, not giving us sufficient time to complete the work.

The long-planned-for two-day meeting opened Saturday evening when Elder Leonard Barker, of Middletown, Ohio, superintendent of Recreation and Expression, gave a splendid talk, explaining the reasons for our playing together and how we must go about it. At this time we organized a class and installed as leaders: Brother E. E. Williams, superintendent; William L. Aultman, assistant; Sister Mabel Hilt, secretary; and Sister Mesley Hilt, treasurer.

The prayer and praise Sunday morning opened at 8.30 and was attended by a goodly number. "Sweet hour of prayer" was the opening song. Elder R. M. Gray, of New Lexington, Ohio, offered prayer, and many excellent testimonies were given. The presence of the Spirit was felt by a number, and words of approval of the work of members were given through one of God's servants. Brother William L. Aultman was called to the office of deacon through District President Anderton.

At 9.30 the house was nearly filled for Sunday school, and the hour was in charge of Brother Gray, district Sunday school superintendent. He gave many new thoughts to the Saints, bringing a broader vision of the work of the Sunday school. At this service Sister Rexroad sang a beautiful hymn, accompanying on her guitar. Also young sisters of McDermott Branch sang a hymn.

At 10.45 Elder Barker preached to a large number.

At noon, lunch was spread for all by the women of the branch.

The hour of 1.45 found us again in service, Sisters Rexroad and Walter Culp presenting a splendid dialog. Brother Anderton brought a gospel message to the people that afternoon. Many members not of the faith were present. Brother Aultman was ordained a deacon at this service under the hands of Elders Ed Wiggett and Richard Shope, of McDermott.

Our aged Sister Sopha Crabtree is very low. She has suffered her third stroke. Another aged sister, Martha Bealor, is not expected to be with us long. These women have been faithful, and their friends have the assurance that their reward will be great.

Hazel Dell Branch

Weston, Iowa

The eighth grade graduation exercises were held in the Saints' church May 16. The building was prettily decorated for the occasion, and friends and relatives of the class filled it to overflowing.

June 2 a surprise party was held in honor of Brother P. T. Anderson, who left for his mission to Denmark June 7. A social time was enjoyed by all present, and a purse was presented him as a token of the esteem in which he is held by the Saints. After the program, refreshments of ice cream and cake were served by the sisters of the branch.

One Sunday we had the pleasure of listening to another Scandinavian missionary, Elder Peter Muceus, who formerly spread the glad tidings of the gospel in his native Norway.

On Mother's Day our presiding elder, Brother J. A. Hanson, gave a talk on the mothers of Lamanite times, the time of Christ, and of the latter days.

June 22 was Children's Day in Hazel Dell Branch. The morning speaker was Elder E. Y. Hunker, one of the district missionaries. Brother Hunker preached a sermon especially for the children on the words of the Savior: "Suffer little children, and forbid them not to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven." After a picnic dinner the adults enjoyed the children's afternoon program. This was presented chiefly by the beginner and primary classes. Two children were blessed and one young sister baptized. The day's activities closed with a sermon by Brother Hunker.

Pisgah, Iowa

All who were privileged to attend the General Conference were made stronger. Each one is more determined to labor diligently in the months to come. Those who were present at the conference endeavored to convey to others some of the good things we heard.

The Mother's Day program was made very beautiful by the efforts of the Sunday school leader and his corps of helpers.

We have been fortunate in having Brother Marcus Cook, of Vancouver, Washington, worship with us May 25, following several evenings with good sermons. We are thankful for his help.

Elder Joseph Lane, our faithful helper, is laboring in this region and often gives us a cheering call.

Children's Day was observed with an appropriate program. Up to the present time seven have been baptized, all children of our Sunday school.

Spokane, Washington

For the past three weeks Spokane Saints have had the privilege of having Apostle J. F. Curtis in their midst. He has been holding a series of missionary meetings, which have been instructive and enjoyable in every way. Spokane Saints always enjoy Brother Curtis. He will remain for the district reunion to be held June 20 to 29 at Liberty Lake.

The new pastor, Elder Alma Andrews, and family have arrived, and Spokane members are happy to have them. There has been a great need in this branch for a full time man, and we feel that the coming of Brother Andrews and his family means a great deal to us. Brother Andrews is proving himself able and efficient.

Two aged members recently passed away, Brother A. Shippy and Brother H. Snyder, also one young in years, an active Boy Scout fifteen years of age, Stanley Stanton, at Newport Mission.

On sacrament Sunday, June 1, two babies were blessed, the son of Sister Catherine Porter and the daughter of Sister Edith Nelson. The Spirit was present to a marked degree at this meeting.

A daughter was born to Brother and Sister Lloyd Whiting June 1 whom they will call Dolores Maxine.

Father's Day was observed with an appropriate program. Muriel Whiting sang "Daddy's lullaby." During the program all fathers were requested to stand, then a beautiful prayer of thanks was offered for our fathers.

The Saints are busy preparing for reunion, and all are anticipating a joyful and beneficial season.

Oakland, California

From The Oakland Bulletin

June 15.—Today is a happy day for our congregation. We meet for the first time in our new church home. All are proud of the building and equipment which are ours. Not a little sadness was felt last Sunday when it was realized that we were saying good-bye to the old meeting place which has sheltered us so long. Many memories of it will linger, and the frame building on Magnolia and Sixteenth will be a shrine to all who have known the blessings of the Lord in this branch in recent years.

Today is Children's Day, and it is appropriate that this happy day should be dedicated to them and they be the first to worship in the new church which will be their home and responsibility in years to come.

The entertainment committee has arranged a fine and attractive program of social and recreational activities for the summer. Sister Ethel Christensen and Brother R. T. Smith with the assistance of Sister Clara Aldredge and Aileen Presley and Glen Jacobson will be the ones to carry the program into effect. June 13 was set aside for a swimming party. July 4 there will be a picnic for all.

Brother and Sister M. Fonda were in Santa Rosa last Sunday. Brother Fonda preached at Santa Rosa and at Windsor.

Last Sunday Brother and Sister Moran were summoned to Fresno because of the serious illness of Sister Moran's brother. He passed away Sunday night. The funeral was at Fresno and interment was in Cypress Lawn, San Mateo, the pastor reading the committal service.

Elder G. P. Levitt, district president, was a visitor in the city during the week. He preaches today at Park-Presidio Church.

Yuma, Colorado

June 16.—Harvest days are almost here, and if a kind providence permits us favorable weather another four weeks, we will have a beautiful harvest.

The Sunday school still meets regularly. June 1 we were invited to meet with the Saints at Lamar, Nebraska. Twenty-four of us went to spend the day. It was an enjoyable meeting with Brother Hull, Brother Winegar, and Brother Hougas in charge. The Saints there have a nice church building and made us feel welcome. We all regret that Brother Hougas is leaving this part of the country.

June 8 Brother Tabor came from Wray and held a communion service following the Sunday school. After a basket dinner we listened to another good sermon.

Brother Hull held an all-day service June 15. There was a good crowd with several visitors present.

The Women's Department, under the able leadership of Sister Marie Klusman, is meeting regularly and at present is piecing a quilt for the local Lutheran Hospital. Two weeks ago the sisters met with Sister Henrietta Schmidt, an isolated member near Holyoke, and on June 19 we plan to meet with Sister C. J. Ford. Grandma Ford is past eighty years of age. She has been an isolated member for many years and enjoys having the women with her.

Miss Lefa Lutz, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, is able to be at home again and plans soon to return to college in Denver.

Seven members from this group enjoyed the privilege of attending General Conference this spring, and the rest listened with eagerness to their reports.

Holden Stake

Holden

Sunday morning, June 8, junior services were held. This is proving to be an interesting part of the worship for children and also for adults.

June 15 was Children's Day. An appropriate service was held at eleven o'clock, with a short sermon by Brother C. F. Scarcliff. Following this service, three were baptized by Brother George F. Baker. At night an interesting program was given by the children. The attendance was large.

Brother F. A. McWethy, who recently met with a serious accident, was with us again on Sunday, June 22. We feel that God was guarding him and rendering it possible for him to continue in his work as one of the stake presidency.

The Saints here are sorry to learn of the serious condition of Brother George Hancock, of Warrensburg, Missouri. Recently he underwent an operation and is to have another soon. We feel that he needs the prayers of the Saints, that he may continue his work in the church as he has done here and elsewhere.

Brother W. H. Eliason was the speaker Sunday morning, June 22.

A religious education class for the young people is being conducted every Tuesday night. Brother Eliason is president, with Brothers Freelin Hampton and Charles Kittinger as associates.

On Wednesday and Friday of each week for the month of July and part of August, a vacation school is held at the church for the religious instruction of children from the ages of five to thirteen. Brother Eliason is in charge, Myrtle Carr is in charge of the music, and the teachers of the various groups are Arlene Shimel, kindergarten; Gladys Carr and Arlyne Lovell, primary; and Sister Eliason, junior age. About twenty-two are enrolled.

Brother and Sister Lester Macrae, who are en route to their mission in Hawaii, spent a week with their parents, Brother and Sister W. S. Macrae. They left June 25 for Los Angeles. From there they will sail for Honolulu, July 1.

Lees Summit

The branch of Lees Summit had an enjoyable evening June 20 in honor of the men that helped re-roof the church. There were about one hundred present. People came from Grandview, Lone Jack, Greenwood, and Pleasant Hill. After the evening was spent playing games, refreshments were served.

The Department of Women had a meeting last week at the home of Sister Pearl Mingles. They had one lesson on the new plan of religious education. The next will be an all-day meeting.

Pastor G. R. Wells called a meeting June 18, and branch officers for the year were elected.

A Children's Day program was put on under the direction of Sister Louise Haas and Sister C. W. Childers. The decorations were in the form of a garden, in the midst of which was a long white ladder. On the ladder were written the six principles of the gospel.

Independence

Stone Church

A little out of the ordinary was the eleven o'clock service at the Stone Church Sunday, when our South Sea Island brother, Horahitu, delivered the discourse in his native tongue, the same being interpreted by Elder H. W. Savage, Apostle Clyde F. Ellis in charge.

Elder Horahitu began by expressing his pleasure in meeting the people of America and viewing the country since coming here to attend the General Conference last spring.

Selecting the well-known incidents found in the 10th chapter of Acts, relating to Cornelius and Peter (the vision of the latter whereby he was shown how the gospel was to go to others than the Jews), the speaker expressed his gratitude for the Lord's plan that his own people in this day and age of the world might also receive the gospel.

He then related briefly to an attentive and appreciative audience something of the history and traditions of his people in the islands. He told of their legendary belief concerning the great Father, Oatea, his Son, Tane, and of the great and powerful Spirit, Mawi, mentioning the traditions concerning the creation, also how they came to take up the practice of worshipping idols of wood and stone.

The first European to visit the island of Tahiti was Captain Cook. After his advent came the British missionaries, and later the Catholic priests. They succeeded in persuading the islanders to throw away their idols, but on the other hand taught them it was right to drink alcoholic beverages and to smoke tobacco. Because of these things their home life many times was broken up, and according to Elder Horahitu, these early missionaries brought more darkness than light to his people.

Later when our missionaries were sent to the islands, they taught them the harmfulness of these things, that they were against the law of God, and that the teachings they had received were the traditions of men. Eleven were baptized, and these were the first in all the islands to receive baptism by immersion.

The speaker firmly believes that his people are the descendants of some of those Nephites mentioned in the Book of Mormon who went out to sea on the ships built by Hagoth, and hence are of the same lineage with them.

Elder Horahitu is a forceful and brilliant speaker in his own tongue. He is held in high esteem among his people. He has been knighted by the French Government for the excellent work he did during the influenza epidemic of 1918, and is called on frequently by the Chief Judge of all the outlying islands to assist in his work in the Court of Conciliation. He is a strong temperance advocate, and as such is called upon by this official to talk to and influence his people toward right ways of living.

It was a congregation of relatives and friends which gathered Sunday afternoon at the Stone Church for the ordination service. Organ music, the singing of hymns, "Rise up, O men of God!" "I can hear my Savior calling," and "O Lord! my best desires fulfill," with a scripture reading from Exodus 3 and 4, silent prayer, meditation, a brief address by Apostle E. J. Gleazer, and the prayer of consecration created an atmosphere of true worship for the service. Behind the altar on which lay the three standard books of the church, presided Apostle E. J. Gleazer and Elders H. G. Barto and G. G. Lewis.

Two by two the members whose names had been approved for ordination by the recent conference in Zion, were called to places at either end of the altar, and received the ordinance of the laying on of hands. The following men were ordained: To the office of elder, Evan A. Fry, Vernon A. Reese, Charles Keown; priest, Gerald G. Phillips, W. Earl Page, Paul Elliott; deacon, Jay S. Weeks, Donald DeTray, and Charles Stover.

Officiating in the ordinance were Elders G. G. Lewis, T. A.

Beck, E. J. Gleazer, W. Wallace Smith, J. Livingston, J. A. Becker, A. K. Dillee, D. A. Whiting, H. L. Barto, and Dewey McNamara.

Developing his Sunday evening theme, "The relationship between the juvenile court and the homes of Jackson County," Andrew B. Steele, probation officer of Jackson County, named some of the happenings tending to show the growth of child-mindedness on the part of the public, and spoke of the juvenile court as one of the many agencies working in the interest of the child. That the court seeks to cooperate with the home by supplementing the work of the parents in caring for the child was the central thought of Mr. Steele's lecture.

The speaker was introduced by Elder M. A. Etzenhouser, head of the Social Service Bureau of the church, who also introduced Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, of the Social Service Bureau, Chief of Police D. O. Cato, and Mr. C. E. Lavell, for many years truant officer in Independence. Mr. Lavell made a two-minute talk on the work of the Anti-cigarette League in the schools of Independence.

Congregational singing was led by Pastor J. F. Sheehy, Lorena Kueffer at the piano. An organ offertory number was played by Miss Kueffer, and Lilly Belle Allen, soprano, sang "I heard the voice of Jesus say." A group of musicians from Walnut Park assisted in the musical service.

Because of threatening weather, it was thought unwise to hold the union Sunday evening service at the Campus, and the large congregation filled the Stone Church.

Among the People in Zion

Sunday school attendance at the junior Campus service was about one hundred and twenty-five. "Blest be the tie that binds" was sung, and Elder Will Bollinger offered the opening prayer. Sister Alice Burgess conducted a short song fest in order that the boys and girls might learn some new songs. The worship service opened with Brother Moore playing "Poem." The school sang "America," and the sacrifice offering was taken up while "Consecration" was softly played, and Brother Bollinger gave thanks for the sacrifices made. "America the beautiful" was sung, and the children made a pledge to the flag. The closing song was "The star-spangled banner."

"Zion—its achievement" was the theme of Bishop J. A. Koehler's address to the Y. P. R. Class Friday evening in its regular weekly meeting at the Campus. Bishop Koehler will again lecture to the class the evening of July 11, his subject being "Stewardships."

Edwin Alonzo Green, an aged friend of the church, died in Independence the morning of June 27 at the home of his son, Doctor Stanley Green. He had lived in Independence about sixteen years. Besides Doctor Stanley Green he is survived by another son, Doctor John R. Green, of Independence; a daughter, Mrs. Donald R. Black, Kansas City; a brother, F. L. Green, Kansas City; and a sister, Mrs. George Reed, Onslow, Iowa. The funeral services were held at the home at 2.30 Sunday afternoon. Interment was in the Green vault at Mound Grove Cemetery.

The White Masque Players celebrated the night of June 28 with their annual party at the farm of Wallace N. Robinson, near Pleasant Hill. A large number of costumed guests participated in the entertainment, which took on the nature of a western round-up and rodeo. The principal feature of the evening was a one-act play, "A prairie doll."

East Independence

A pretty little wedding occurred June 22 when one of our girls, Sister Gladys Schofield, was married to Brother William Rufus Wilson, of Independence. H. J. Friend officiated. The marriage was solemnized in the presence of members of the families of the contracting parties and a few close friends. Both young people are excellent young Latter Day Saints, and their friends wish them a happy life together. They are at home to their friends in the Lexington Apartments, Lexington Street.

The confirmation meeting which followed the church school that morning was a calm and peaceful meeting. Three little people who were baptized on the previous Sunday were confirmed during the hour, and short, enthusiastic talks were made by Pastor L. W. Moffet, Roy Young, and Charles Edgerton.

The midweek service of prayer was well attended, and a comfortable time was spent together.

Sunday morning, June 29, the Sunday school was a session in which many little tots marched to their places, and a number of older members were present to receive instruction in class work. The speaker, Elder J. H. Miller, chose for a text the words of Paul: "For what fellowship has righteousness with unrighteousness?" urging members to more righteous and unselfish living.

Central Church

On Wednesday evening, June 25, in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives, the marriage of Miss Hazel Corrine Scott, daughter of Brother and Sister Glenn Alvin Scott, and Mr. J. Adelbert Withee took place at 8.30 o'clock. The service was read by Elder Cyril E. Wight. Tall palms, ferns, and large baskets of daisies formed the setting for the bridal party. Preceding the ceremony Miss Amy Winning played a program of music. Miss Juanita Hofess, accompanied by Miss Winning, sang "I love thee" and "Not because your heart is mine." Miss Lilly Belle Allen sang "Pippa's song" and "Beloved, it is morn." Miss Elizabeth Smith on the harp and Mr. Frank White on the violin played the Mendelssohn "Spring song." The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her sister, Helen Louise Scott, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Dorothy Eden, Miss Florine Hands, of Kansas City, Miss Kathryn Haberman, Miss Jayne Lewis and Miss Hazel Vanderwood, of Independence, and Mrs. Chris Lee Rhodes, of Tulsa. The flower girls were Doris Louise Wallace, Gladys Cornelia Scott, and Alice Louise Scott. Donna Coates, of Saint Louis, was the ring bearer. Stanley Withee acted as best man for his brother, the bridegroom. The groomsmen were Mr. Evan A. Fry, Mr. Clark Woodford, Mr. Alma Kearns, Mr. William Harrington, Mr. Roy McNeil and Mr. Arthur Mills, jr. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Withee departed for their future home in Albuquerque, New Mexico, and it was with regret that their friends bade them farewell. Hazel has been an ardent worker in both Kansas City and Independence in musical activities, and she will be very much missed, and Adelbert, who grew to manhood in Independence, leaves many friends there.

Sunday was a cloudy and windy day but served to bring relief from the intense hot weather through which we have passed for several days. The morning service was in charge of ex-members of the church in Saint Joseph. It was surprising the number of members Saint Joseph has given to Central.

Following the prelude, a hymn from Zion's Praises was sung, after which Brother Everett Bowser gave the invocation. "The Way, the Light," by Del Riego, was sung by Helen Scott, soprano, Brother Evan Fry assisting at the piano. Sister E. L. Alter gave a lovely reading, "Saint John's fund," which was highly appreciated.

At the conclusion of the lesson study, with the reassembling in the main auditorium. Brother Evan Ellers, baritone, sang a pleasing solo. Elder R. S. Salyards was the speaker of the hour. The service concluded with a basket lunch characterized by the spirit of fellowship. Reminiscences were exchanged, and all enjoyed a happy visit.

At 7.45 preceding the preaching service, the choir sang several numbers, "Remember now thy Creator," by Adams, "Fairest Lord Jesus," and Miss Delta Nace, soprano, of Independence, sweetly sang "The Lord is my Light." The talk by Elder Horahitu which followed was interesting, Apostle Clyde F. Ellis acting as interpreter.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Moneymaker are the proud parents of a son, born Sunday, June 29.

Grandview

The Gleaners Sunday School Class motored to the farm of Brother J. H. Cookley, near Wolcott, Kansas, the evening of May 31 for an outing. A crisp breeze and beautiful moonlight made an ideal night for the picnic.

Sister Cecile Hamilton, of Salina, Kansas, is here again for a short time. Sister Hamilton teaches every summer in the school for the blind.

The marriage of Sister Mildred Swearingen to Brother Fred G. Brose took place at 8.30 o'clock June 19 at the church. Elder C. E. Wight read the service. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The church was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns, and hampers of pink gladioli. A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony. Brother and Sister Brose left for a motor trip to the Ozarks.

Bemington Heights

Sunday, June 22, the sermon in the morning was by Brother E. B. Johnston, and in the evening stereopticon views of historic Nauvoo were presented by Brother W. O. Hands, showing the finding of the graves of Joseph, Hyrum, and Emma Smith, and many other places of interest.

Pastor O. G. Helm was the speaker June 29. At the close of the sermon there occurred the installation of officers chosen for the coming year: Superintendent of Sunday school, Donald Stafford; supervisor of the primary department, Georgia Binninger; supervisor of young people, Harley Sampson; supervisor of adults, Emma Helm; chorister, Mary Helm. In the evening we were to have had for speaker Elder George Mesley, the leader of the O. B. K's in Kansas City, but he failed to come, and Brother O. G. Helm ably substituted. Several musical numbers were presented by members of the O. B. K. organization.

Thursday evening the Temple Builders, assisted by their mothers, served a delicious supper at the church, netting them a nice sum.

The ladies' aid will begin this week to can fruit and vegetables for the Harvest Home Festival. It is hoped that everyone will help in this undertaking.

Southern Wisconsin District Conference

The semiannual conference of Southern Wisconsin District was held at Soldiers Grove June 21 and 22. The weather was beautiful, and Saints came from Janesville, Beloit, Madison, Evansville, and Lancaster.

On Friday evening Bishop C. J. Hunt was the speaker, using as the basis of his sermon, "Whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." The district is glad to have Bishop Hunt appointed here.

The sun shone beautifully Saturday morning, and the members came together from the hills and valleys of Soldiers Grove, also some from Lancaster arrived in time for the 9.30 prayer service in charge of Brothers Harry Wasson and Wesley Davenport.

Thirty-three were present, and four prayers and twenty testimonies were given.

Elder Berve was in charge of the 10.45 round table service. Patriarch F. A. Smith and Bishop C. J. Hunt presided over the discussion, and some interesting questions were asked and answered, the priesthood being especially enlightened concerning their several duties. Also points in the financial law of the church were taken up.

At 2.30 the business meeting was in charge of two of the district presidency, Amos Berve and George Noble. The invocation was by Bishop Hunt. Reports came from the bishops, showing receipts to the amount of $1,293.07, from the district treasurer, district reunion budgeting committee. These were approved. The report of the budgeting committee was as follows: District president's expense, $75; supervisor of religious education, $15. This amount will be apportioned among the branches of the district. Bishop Hunt spoke in regard to nonresident members being given a chance to help.

The resignation of Brother Fred Dryer as one of the district presidency was read and accepted, and Brother Henry Woodstock was chosen to occupy this office.

A resolution was adopted that the Southern Wisconsin District approve and adopt the new plan of religious education as outlined by General Conference and that the district presidency organize as rapidly as conditions and wisdom may direct. The resolution carried unanimously that considering existing conditions reunion for Southern Wisconsin District be postponed for at least one year.

In consideration of the long and faithful service rendered by Charles C. Hoague, jr., as bishop's agent for Southern Wisconsin District and the valuable and faithful assistance of his mother, Mary Hoague, to her son and her husband, Charles C. Hoague, who served faithfully for a number of years, a resolution was adopted expressing the sincere and grateful appreciation of the district for their services. The secretary was requested to send Brother and Sister Hoague a copy of the resolution. These workers expressed their thanks for the cooperation of the district. The secretary was asked to cast a unanimous vote for Bishop C. J. Hunt as bishop of Southern Wisconsin District.

The time and place of next district conference were left to the district presidency.

At four o'clock in the afternoon Patriarch F. A. Smith spoke to the men in the lower auditorium on "Duties of the evangelical minister," and in the main auditorium Sister Leda Colbert, superintendent of women, talked on women's duties in the church and home.

That evening Bishop Hunt presented a forceful sermon on the text from Hebrews 9: 7 and 8.

Sunday morning, in spite of the downpouring rain, Brother Philip Davenport, jr., led two precious souls into the water of baptism, two little girls, Ruth and Bernice Stevenson. By 9.30 the rain had ceased and the sun was shining. The people gathered at the church for prayer service, Brothers Amos Berve and George Noble in charge. The candidates were confirmed at this service by Patriarch F. A. Smith and Bishop C. J. Hunt. This was a splendid service of prayer and worship.

Philip Davenport, sr., was in charge of the eleven o'clock service, and Brother F. A. Smith was the speaker. For a text he used: "I have given you to be the salt of the earth, the light of the world."

A picnic lunch was had in the lower auditorium at the noon hour, and certainly Soldiers Grove Saints know how to feed the physical man. A bounteous meal was served.

The 2.30 service was preceded by half an hour of song and music. Brother Berve was in charge of the hour. Sister Sylvia Dennis and Sister Walker, of Madison, rendered a beautiful duet number. Patriarch F. A. Smith read the scripture 1 Kings 9: 1-9, then the congregation sang "Hail to the brightness of Zion's glad morning." Patriarch Smith preached the sermon dedicating the Soldiers Grove Church. For his text he chose, "Thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Following the sermon Philip Davenport, jr., the branch president, gave a reminiscence of the gospel brought to Soldiers Grove. Brother Leonard Houghton was the first to tell them the gospel story. Brother Houghton could not be present, so Brother Berve introduced to the congregation his helpmate, who has stood faithfully by his side and whose prayers have many times ascended for his welfare and success. Brother Davenport presented to Bishop Hunt the keys of the church, and in response the keys were accepted and returned to the branch president with the wish for the church to be a blessing to the people of the branch who by their precept and example may be a blessing to the community.

Brother Amos Berve voiced the dedicatory prayer.

A vote of thanks was extended the Soldiers Grove Saints for their hospitality and to those who came to help make the conference a success. Everyone felt well paid for coming, for the conference was splendid.

Sherrill, New York

The Saints in Sherrill are still living over the late General Conference. It brought encouragement as nothing else has for years. If many more of our New York members could have enjoyed it with those who attended, we would have been better pleased. We now have every reason to work with hope and assurance toward the realization of our dreams of Zion. We find it not so easy to settle down once more in a very small branch, and yet if that is where we can be of most service, there is where we should occupy.

Sherrill Easter exercises were jointly held with Syracuse in Syracuse before the return of the members attending conference. A pleasant time and interesting program were reported. Brother Hettrick, of Philadelphia, the father of Sister Lucretia Clark, was with the Saints on this occasion and contributed a talk morning and evening.

The district conference came a few weeks later, May 30 and 31 and June 1, at Buffalo with Doctor Weegar in charge. Since the Saints took advantage of the holiday on Friday, May 30, the attendance to open the conference was the best ever. Classes in religious education were conducted by Elder J. E. Vanderwood and in music by Misses Catharine Lambert, and Maurine and Doris Weegar. These were well attended and good interest was shown. Not only were classes conducted Friday evening but also Saturday forenoon, ten to twelve o'clock, and afternoon from two to three.

The business session of the conference came at three o'clock with reports from branches, district officers, and other members of the priesthood. There was some legislation on plans for a reunion in the district. The conference adopted the new plan of religious education and put Brother Vanderwood in as president of the district. He chose as his assistants Doctor Weegar and Frank Mesle. A rising vote of thanks was extended to Brother Weegar for his untiring efforts in the office of district president. He spoke as we wish we might all do when he said that he had done his best. Sister Ada Davison resigned as chorister of the district, and Sister Catharine Lambert was recommended to take her place. We have some fine prospects for choristers in our young sisters now trained for music supervisors, Sister Maurine Weegar having occupied in this position the past year, and her sister, Doris, to hold a like position next year. Sister Ada's efforts have been appreciated, but she feels that she is too far from the bulk of the district.

The Saturday evening program after the song fest was made up of surprises. All was well done. Buffalo presented two plays, which were good.

The sacramental service Sunday morning at nine o'clock was well attended and showed real life. The unified service from 10.30 to 12 included a short sermon by our new district missionary, J. E. Vanderwood, special numbers of music, recitations, and a talk to adults by F. C. Mesle during their class hour. After a priesthood meeting, the afternoon session included a debate between Niagara and Buffalo. The proposition was, Resolved that more has been accomplished in the last century by the church than in any other. The young people did well. Niagara was declared the winner. Sister Florence Kennedy, of Buffalo, won by an overwhelming vote in the reading contest, which consisted of a favorite selection from the Inspired Version, Isaiah 29. Those who heard it will not soon forget the experience, for the Spirit of God surely attended it.

Elder Vanderwood left toward evening for his home in Independence with plans to see his daughter, Hazel, graduate from Graceland College and later to bring members of his family East with him.

Brother Mesle spoke at seven o'clock, new time, and at 7.45, standard time, occupied the pulpit at Niagara Falls, twenty miles away.

The eastern end of the district was not well represented.

Buffalo was accorded a vote of thanks for its hospitality, and the Saints left declaring the conference most enjoyable.

Buffalo Branch is growing to the extent that they are planning to build a good-sized addition to the church. The grounds are kept up very nicely by a brother of the branch. The radio has been used for announcement of their services. They call it "The little church with a big message." A goodly number of the priesthood are active.

An enjoyable day was had at Sherrill when Syracuse joined with them for Children's Day. Together they gave a program which occupied two hours. Then the Saints drove to a pretty spot, Stockbridge Falls, where a picnic dinner was spread. At five o'clock a goodly number returned to Willow Place in Sherrill and witnessed the baptism of Marilyn Davison, who was confirmed at the evening service. In the evening hour three of the ministry, Brothers Richardson, Rathbun, and Davison, talked on the principles of baptism and laying on of hands, Brother Mesle giving a short resume. The Saints frequently find themselves wishing they could do away with the distance between Syracuse and Sherrill in order that they might meet together more often.

Vacation time is soon to arrive, and attendance is bound to shrink. We plan to adopt the unified service. And we are also thinking of the sacrifices we can make this coming week. We look forward to the time when many more of our people will be educated to the idea of observing the financial law.

We were pleased to have a load of young people with us overnight when the Fisher boys and Sister Katherine Schafer left Dorothy Mesle, who has been attending Graceland College during the past year, at the home of her parents.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

Saskatoon Branch celebrated Mother's Day in a manner fitting the occasion. There was a cradle roll festival in connection with the Sunday school. All mothers with their little ones received special invitations, ten being seated on the rostrum. A group of children sang, "In the early spring-time," presenting each little bud of promise a rose bud which the mothers pinned on the babies. Then the children formed in a line, greeting the little ones with a welcome to our Sunday school. This was followed by a beautiful ceremony of blessing, as the children sang "Suffer little children." Two infants were blessed. Next came the cradle-rocking ceremony, when "Precious jewels" was sung. The children then marched past a flower-decked basket, singing "Hear the pennies dropping," and dropped in their mites. A birthday cake graced the center of the table, and after two wee girls offered thanks, it was cut and passed to the little ones assembled.

Brother Arthur Gendron and Sister Ethel Cruce were in charge of the junior service, which was most appropriate for the day. Lovely musical numbers were rendered by the junior choir, and a series of exercises was carried out by the classes. Brother Diggle preached a fine sermon on "Motherhood."

In the evening the choir sang several Mother's Day numbers, and Mr. Mackie sang feelingly "My mother's prayer." The Temple Builders were responsible for the lovely decorations and the carnations which were presented to all mothers in the junior service.

Brother and Sister Ward L. Christy returned from their sojourn in the South June 3, tired but well, and reported an enjoyable visit, a wonderful conference, and a desire to be at work once more.

Children's Day was fittingly arranged for by Sister Christy. The chapel was a delight to the eye, there being decorations of potted and flowering plants. A real bird warbled incessantly as the children sang the sweet songs of Zion. The little ones were assembled on the rostrum, and they joyfully participated in various exercises. Three children gave their names for baptism, Grace Travis, Frank Ward, and Bert Ward. One of the little group, Harold Reid, was in the hospital, having been seriously ill with pneumonia, but we are happy to report him now convalescent. The Children's Day spirit was carried out in junior church service, the Laurel Class and Young People's Class participating. The junior choir sang a group of songs under the capable leadership of Brother Christy. He preached the sermon, which was much appreciated.

Conference convenes July 17 and will continue until July 21. It will be held in the chapel at Saskatoon. By that time it is hoped that the water and sewer facilities in the region of the church will be completed.

Forty-six junior tithing books were distributed among the young people last Sunday. The young are awake to the needs of God's cause as never before.

A garden party will be held on the grounds at the home of Brother and Sister Diggle Friday evening, June 20, under the auspices of the Women's Department. Special music is being arranged, and all members and a large number of nonmembers are looking forward with pleasure to the unusual event. The weather man is being frequently consulted, and the Saskatoon Board of Trade has been pouring oil on the troubled waters of the sloughs to eliminate the mosquito nuisance, so it is hoped that all will go well.

The Saints are sorrowing with Brother and Sister Thompson, of Springwater, Saskatchewan, whose little son of twelve years passed away last Friday in a local hospital.

The Australasian Delegation

By W. J. Haworth

When we left Australia on February 20, there were sixteen in the Australian delegation to the Centennial Conference. Of these, Elder and Sister Barmore, Elder and Sister Velt, Colin Ferrett, Walter Johnson, and Elvie Cuthbert plan to remain in America. Brother Geoffrey Gillard is still touring in the East with Brothers Savage and Horahitu. Sister Watson and Ethel spent the better part of May with relatives at Tacoma, Washington, and will sail from Vancouver. Sister Kennedy sailed from San Francisco with Evangelist and Sister Jones May 14.

A farewell basket dinner was tendered to the remnant of the delegation at the Campus in Independence, at noon May 11, by a large number of friends specially interested in Australia and Australians. As we partook of the good things provided and united with our friends in social contact, we were deeply conscious of the "tie that binds." Again, the next morning at 7.45, when a fleet of cars carried us and friends to the Union Station in Kansas City and the inevitable farewells were said, the same spirit of wonderful fraternity was strongly in evidence.

Sisters Elliott, Delofski, Haworth, and the writer left Kansas City that morning, via Rock Island No. 11 train for Los Angeles. Sister Lewis joined us there at the week-end. We were met at the Southern Pacific Depot in Los Angeles by Elder Eli Bronson and Sister McConley. There we were most hospitably received by the Saints and have to acknowledge the kindness of Sister McConley, Sister Shippy, Doctor and Mrs. Mather, of Los Angeles, Sister Bussy and Brother and Sister Carter, of San Bernardino, and Brother and Sister Sharkey and Brother and Sister Farley, of Santa Ana. All these entertained us for one night or more. Space forbids a recital of the names of those who otherwise contributed towards our happiness, but we must not leave out a mention of Elder Eli Bronson, who daily placed himself and car at our disposal.

We spent six days in southern California, during which time we visited and talked for the branches at Long Beach, Los Angeles, South Side, San Bernardino, and Santa Ana. At most of these points our pictures of Australia or of General Conference activities were shown. We were loath to leave these good Saints, but we had to obey the call of duty and run according to schedule of our traveling plans.

We had intended sailing from Los Angeles but found the Mawi, sailing from San Francisco, May 21, the only available steamer to fit in with our plans to arrive in Hawaii before the end of May. As these arrangements had been made with Brother Waller some time previously, we did not feel like altering them, thus causing inconvenience here and at the same time shortening our stay in Honolulu. Accordingly we reluctantly passed through San Francisco, staying only one night. We got in touch with some of the Saints who could be reached by telephone. Doctor and Sister Holting generously drove to the hotel and took us for a sight-seeing tour before the sailing of the ship. It was good to see them and to enjoy their kind hospitality. We much regret that we were not able to give San Francisco a week or two of our time, as we had hoped to do, but as this would have necessitated waiting another month for a ship from Honolulu, it was ruled out. Under the circumstances we feel sure our San Francisco friends will pardon us.

We had a pleasant journey to Honolulu, on the Mawi. On arrival there May 27, we were met by Brothers G. J. Waller and I. H. Harbottle and Sisters Imila Tatum, Edith Titcombe, Mollie Antone, Katie Bertelmann, and others. Then followed eight or nine days of activity in which the Saints vied with each other in driving us from place to place about the beautiful island of Oahu. We found them a generally cultured and lovable people. The three branches on this island are tributes to the missionary zeal of Elder Waller and others who have come to the help of the church in that mission.

We attended such meetings as had been arranged, preaching twice, making a number of talks, and showing moving pictures of the General Conference, scenes around Independence and other points of interest we had visited en route. Sunday was a particularly busy day. In the morning we visited and talked to the Japanese Sunday school, the Chinese Sunday school, and a combined sacramental meeting of the three branches. Brother Waller explained that for him this was about the usual Sunday program. An illustrated lecture by the writer and the rendering of her oration, "The vision of the Restoration," by Sister Delofski, occupied the Religio hour. Then the writer preached the evening sermon, being introduced by Elder Waller. There is plenty of work in Honolulu, and we regretted that our arrangements would not permit of a longer stay in view of the fact that there are no missionaries there at the moment.

During our stay we occupied the mission house, which we found very comfortable. There we prepared our own food and got back somewhat to Australian conditions. In addition, the good Saints provided a number of dinners for us. We were entertained at the Waiole Tea Rooms by Brother Waller's daughter, Mrs. E. K. Briggs, and Maria Piikoi; Elias and Emma Kavakaow gave us a Hawaiian dinner; Sister Margaret Ching a Chinese dinner; and Imila Tatum, a Japanese dinner. We were also entertained at dinner at the home of Elder Waller, Mrs. Briggs doing the honors.

During our journeying to and from the General Conference, we have met many of God's people, all of whom have treated us most kindly. Whether in Tahiti, San Francisco, Sacramento, Independence, Lamoni, Nauvoo, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Long Beach, Santa Ana, Honolulu, or elsewhere, the Saints have treated us generously, and this has caused us to be drawn closer still to the International group which constitutes the church. On behalf of the Australian delegation I wish to express hearty appreciation of and thanks for the many kindnesses shown.

Castroville Mission

Monterey County, California

June 25.—Since the last report, June 11, six have been added to the kingdom at this place. June 22 Brother A. Ray Lawn, of Watsonville, baptized the following in the Pacific Ocean: Mr. and Mrs. Hirschel Green, Arthur Wilms, and Alice Yonemura, of Castroville; Clifford Ward, of Salinas; and Mabel Jennings, of Watsonville. Brother Green is a World War veteran, and Sister Green is a teacher of music—piano, violin, and voice. Sister Green has been the chorister at Castroville Church for the past year and has desired to join the church for several months but waited until her husband was ready. They have three children. Both Brother and Sister Green realize that many blessings have come to them and their family since Sister Green has been assisting in our church work. Arthur Wilms is a little lad nine years of age who, of his own volition, asked to be baptized. He has been a regular attendant at both our Sunday school and church services. His father, Brother Wilms, plays the violin in our orchestra. His mother is also a great help with the young people. Sister Alice Yonemura is a Japanese girl twenty-six years of age. She was a lieutenant in the Salvation Army before joining our church. Brother Clifford Ward is a boy of sixteen, being a distant relative of Brother Lawn. Sister Mabel Jennings is a fine young woman eighteen years of age. She is in the employ of Brother Lawn at his Chiropractic Sanitarium near Watsonville, California. She sings splendidly.

Castroville has a splendid group of young people, and everything is being done to hold them and to interest their friends. After the baptisms Sunday, a basket lunch was enjoyed on the sand. Large tarpaulins were spread on the ground, which kept everything nice and clean. Several of our people went in bathing in the afternoon, as the water was nice and warm and the day balmy. After a good time highly enjoyed by all, it is interesting to note that everyone was at the confirmation and speaking services on time. In fact, our attendance was somewhat larger in the evening than it had been in the forenoon.

A great degree of the Spirit was present at all of the services in the evening, at which time the writer spoke for twenty minutes on the "Laying on of hands and the gift of the Holy Spirit." Then Brother Lawn gave the charge to the candidates and spoke feelingly to the congregation on the text, "He that entereth in by the door is the Shepherd of the sheep," associating it with the last verse of the ninth chapter of John, "If ye were blind, ye should have no sin; but now you say, We see; therefore your sin remaineth." A number of nonmembers were present and no doubt were impressed with the evening service, which consumed about two hours' time. There were some special numbers rendered by the choir, and Sister Hetherington, of Salinas, sang a beautiful solo, being accompanied by Sister Green. As the writer led the six candidates forward, the congregation sang from Zion's Praises, "Jesus is calling."

The spirit of brotherly love and kindness which pervaded the meeting made everyone rejoice. This was evidenced by the fact that some old grievances, which had been standing for some time, were entirely wiped away and a cordial hand-shaking took place. One brother was heard to remark to another, "We had our troubles on the outside, but we will be brothers in the kingdom. Let's forget it." The other brother said, "Yes, we will forget it and be brothers hereafter and not listen to tales we hear."

Castroville Mission is rejoicing and steadily advancing. This makes fifty-seven baptized here to date. There are three more who have given their names, and more are investigating. The writer leaves here for Chico, California, June 27, but we hope to be able to return to these lovable people and to this, our maiden effort as a missionary in the church.

Brother Lawn needs help here, and we feel that it will not be long until some consecrated men here will be called to the various offices to help him carry on the good work.

HERBERT E. HINTON.

At Work in Wisconsin

By C. J. Hunt

The late General Conference assigned me as a mission field and region for bishopric work Wisconsin, one of the foremost dairy and agricultural States in the Union. Wisconsin has from the beginning of the Reorganization been a strong support to the church in every way, and from its membership positions of trust in nearly every quorum have been filled. Thank God for her contributions of faithful men and women, also financial support.

The centennial year of the church finds hundreds of Wisconsin Saints loyal and ever ready to help make this conference period a greater success than in former years. This can be done by a united effort.

Since coming to the State, I have held services in Beloit, Janesville, Evansville, Madison, Milwaukee, Lancaster, and Soldiers Grove. La Crosse, Black River Falls, Arkansasaw, Chetek, and other places will be visited in the future.

Before this letter is in print the Saints' chapel three miles south of Soldiers Grove will have been dedicated by Patriarch Frederick A. Smith, Elder Amos Berve in charge of the services. Elder Philip Davenport, jr., is branch president. Brother Berve has given me faithful and efficient support in every way.

If Herald readers have relatives or friends living in the State of Wisconsin who are members or friends of the church, and they do not attend services and you wish them to become more deeply interested by a friendly visit or an encouraging letter, please send their names and addresses to either Elder Amos Berve, 1907 East Washington Avenue, Madison, Wisconsin; Elder W. E. Shakespeare, Chetek; or C. J. Hunt, 315 West Liberty Street, Evansville, Wisconsin. Carefully consider this request.

I feel sure you will agree with me that this is the year for every member to reconsecrate his life's energies to the blessed cause, making the work of the Reorganization the greatest and most prosperous in its history. Let us renew the former slogan, "Every member a tithe payer," whether payments are large or small.

New Philadelphia, Ohio

June 22.—June has been a successful month in this branch. Four young people have been baptized, and Brother Leonard Cramer, who has been away from the church for some time, renewed his covenant. The young people baptized were Wayne Thomas and Grace, Margaret, and George McMillen. Elders John Carlisle and William Goudy officiated at the baptisms.

Saints of this branch were saddened by the news of the serious illness of Brother Manchester, of Akron, who suffered a paralytic stroke some time ago, but recent reports are that he is somewhat improved. Brother Manchester was

Appointment of District President

To succeed Elder Leonard Houghton as president of the Northern Wisconsin District, who has resigned, this will be notice that, subject to the action of the district conference, Elder William Shakespeare is hereby appointed president of the Northern Wisconsin District.

Yours sincerely,
THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,
By F. M. S.

Reunion Canceled

Owing to varying conditions governing at the present time, it was thought advisable by the district presidency and reunion committee of Des Moines District to cancel the reunion for this year.—E. G. Beye, secretary reunion committee.

Young People's Convention

Southern Ohio District will hold a young people's convention at First Columbus Branch, Tompkins Street and Medary Avenue, July 18, 19, and 20. If you have wanted an opportunity to excel in your church work, here is the chance to gather knowledge, which will help you in your efforts. Brother John Blackmore and his wife, Sister Nellie Blackmore, will be principal figures in the convention. While this is a young people's convention, we urge the older members to attend also and get a better insight of the new Depart-formerly president of this district and a frequent visitor, and his many friends are hoping that his health may improve and that he may be able to continue his work for the Lord. Brother James Bishop, district president, has been quite ill since his return from General Conference, but is now able to continue his work.

We are looking forward to the Kirtland reunion, and it is hoped that we will have a better representation than we did at the Centennial Conference. Our local representative, Brother and Sister Charles Hensel and Sister Charlene Hensel, reported an enjoyable time. Sister Hensel gave an interesting account of the conference at the regular meeting of the Women's Department May 15, which was enjoyed by all.

Members of the Women's Department recently completed a beautiful quilt for the reunion. The annual picnic of the department will be held July 17 at Tuscora Park. Sister Ada Stein was recently elected president, to succeed Sister Margaret McMillen, who resigned on account of poor health.

June 12 the primary and junior departments had their picnic at Tuscora Park. Fifty-eight young people enjoyed dinner and supper and spent a pleasant time at games, contests, and swimming. Sister Hazel Noble, superintendent of the primary department, Sister Bernice Watkins, and Sister Edna Howells were in charge.

We have had no visits from ministers of the district for some time, but it is hoped that soon we will enjoy the presence of at least one.

We realize that we do not have the attendance at services that we should, but we are living in hopes that our prayers will be answered and that God will bless our efforts and enable us to carry on in spite of all our enemy, Satan, may try to do.

We were sorry to hear of the appointment of Brother Charles Fry to another district but hope that he will have good success in his new territory.

Brother William Watters, our oldest member, is on the sick list, having suffered a stroke of apoplexy. Brother Watters is eighty-eight years old.

ment of Religious Education of which Brother Blackmore is a general officer. Sister Blackmore is especially to help those who are interested in junior church and the primary departmental work, and to advise as to materials and order of service for the very young. Classes will commence at 2 p. m. July 18, and until the convention closes there will not be a dull moment. We invite surrounding districts (Kirtland, Wheeling, Pittsburgh, Northwestern Ohio, and others who would like to come) to meet with us, and give Brother and Sister Blackmore a splendid welcome. We have room for all. Come!—A. E. Anderton, district president.

Reinking, at Greenwood, Missouri. She died May 24, 1930. Surviving are her husband and child, her mother, Mrs. Grace Lande; two sisters: Mrs. Crystal Gearheart and Mrs. Lucille Rummings; foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Reinking; foster brothers, Jesse and Ray Reinking. The funeral service was held in the Carson Undertaking Parlors, Independence, Missouri, May 27, the sermon being by Elder J. M. Terry. The body was taken to the family burying plot at Sni Mills, six miles south of Oak Grove, Missouri, at which place another short service was held.

DACON.—Steve Dacon was born October 7, 1914, at Flint, Michigan. He died June 7, 1930, at Cash, Michigan. Was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints February 17, 1930, at Cash, Michigan. He lived in the home of Brother and Sister John Starks for three years, where he had been taken from the orphans' home at Coldwater, Michigan. Six small boys were his pallbearers. The body was shipped to Sturgis, Michigan, for interment. The funeral was at the Cash Church, sermon by C. E. Harpe.

VAN DUSEN.—Robert Van Dusen was born July 2, 1848, in Ontario, Canada. He died May 19, 1930, at Gulliver, Michigan. Was baptized July 23, 1911, by J. J. Cornish, whom he heard preach the restored gospel many years before. The seed that was sown so many years before and was revived from time to time by B. S. Lambkin, John Goodman, and others, brought forth fruit later in life. The funeral services were conducted by Elder Matthew Brearley in the town hall, Gulliver, Michigan, and interment was in the new cemetery, Fairview, near Manistiquie, Michigan. Left to mourn are his wife, who faithfully and kindly cared for him many years during his illness, three sons: Harvey and Alva, Sault Sainte Marie, Michigan; and Charles, of Rudyard; four daughters: Mrs. Henry Hanson, Rudyard, Michigan; Florence, Port Huron, Michigan; Mrs. Jack Ely and Bertha, of Sault Sainte Marie, Michigan; and one brother, Elijah Van Dusen, of Topinabee, Michigan.

TURPEN.—Isabelle Keown, daughter of John and Mary Ann Keown, was born near Pleasanton, Decatur County, Iowa, July 30, 1865. Married February 5, 1882, William Brison Turpen, who preceded her in death April 15, 1930. Three of her seven children survive and were present at the funeral, as were two brothers, David and John R. Keown. She was a granddaughter of George Morey who shared the vicissitudes of the early Saints driven from Jackson County, Missouri, and later from Nauvoo, and was a pioneer settler of the church in the territory around Lamoni. Sister Turpen was baptized in 1883, and continued faithful till death. The funeral was in the Saints' church at Pleasanton, in charge of James A. Thomas.

News from President Elbert A. Smith, convalescing from a thyroid operation at the Battle Creek Sanitarium, continues to encourage and greatly please his friends. His doctor, his surgeon, and his nurse agree that the convalescence is progressing in an entirely satisfactory way. This news is confirmed by Sister Smith, who with their son Lynn is present at Battle Creek.

President Smith's wide circle of friends will be made glad at the prospect of his recovery from the operation and his strong chance for a much-improved condition of health.

Church Membership Statistics for June

The church now numbers more than 108,000 souls. The church records show 107,981, which lacks only 19 of being 108,000, and Elders C. A. Kress in Nebraska and R. L. Fulk in Illinois have reported 15 baptisms each for June which will be included in the July report. They were reported just too late to be included in the June totals which would have placed the church membership at 108,011.

Looking closely at the baptisms reported from the various localities, one is impressed with the general distribution of them. It is one of the most even and healthful reports of missionary success which has come to my notice. The missionaries and the church at large are to be congratulated. It would seem to indicate a steady urge and activity along the missionary line of work.

If all ministers of local churches and all missionaries will acquire the habit of scrupulous promptness in reporting, there is no doubt losses by reason of neglect to report at all will be obviated. It is also encouraging to find the report of one's home branch, district, or stake incorporated in the statistician's report for the month.

The phase of this report which is particularly gratifying is that of the general indication that the missionary and proselytizing activities of the church are receiving much more consideration than in former years. And this is right. If wisdom tempers these efforts, too much energy can not be consecrated to the bringing of the gospel to the point of decision with all the souls Saints are able to reach.

R. J. L.

Statistician's Report

The monthly summary report of The Department of Statistics for the month of June is as follows:

Total Net Enrollment of the Church June 1, 1930	107,551
Transfers	918
Blessings	227
Marriages	114
Ordinations	38
Divorces	6
New Branches	2
Changes of Names	2
Silenced	1
Resigned	1
Restored	1
June Baptisms	500
Transfers from Unknown	21
Gains by Correction	6
Total Gain	527
Deaths	82
Expulsions	8
Losses by Correction	7
Total Loss	97
Net Gain during June	430

Total Net Enrollment of the Church July 1, 1930 107,981

From the above summary it will be observed that a total of 500 baptisms was reported during June. This is the best month of June in the history of the Reorganization with the exception of June of last year and of June in 1921.

This brings the total baptisms up to date for the calendar year 1930 to 2,100. Inasmuch as the objective for the year has been set at 6,000, this means that 35 per cent of the objective has been achieved. The monthly totals of baptisms for the past ten years suggest that approximately 40 per cent or a grand total of 2,407 should have been achieved by this time of the year. However, this deficiency is relatively quite small, and the church has reason to be encouraged by the creditable showing of the first half of the year.

It will be the duty and opportunity of the missionaries and local priesthood to see that the missionary spirit is kept alive and burning brightly in order that those who are honest in heart and ready to accept the Master's call may be gathered into the fold.

Several facts and figures which have come to our attention indicate that the missionary work will continue to prosper, as it has in the past year. Particular attention should be called to the excellent showing made by the Northeastern Nebraska District, which with 41 baptisms had more converts than any other district, stake, or mission in the church. The Decatur Branch had the largest number of these, with 22 baptisms, all but 7 of which were the result of the missionary efforts of Elder C. A. Kress. Twelve baptisms were performed in Omaha, 5 at Blair, and 2 at Walthill. Fifteen more baptisms were reported by C. A. Kress for Walthill, performed on June 29, but because the reports came in after the first of July will be counted with the July baptisms.

Fifteen more baptisms performed by Elder R. L. Fulk at Tunnel Hill, Illinois, on June 22 and 29 will be counted with the July baptisms for the same reason. Many other branches have had baptisms during June which have not yet been reported, and it is urged that those performing such baptisms be diligent in seeing that the reports for the same reach this office as soon as possible.

Other districts which were outstanding in the number of baptisms for the month of June are the following: Northwestern Iowa with 24 baptisms, Northeastern Illinois with 23 baptisms, Northern Michigan with 22 baptisms, and Southern Ohio with 20 baptisms.

Northeastern Illinois deserves special recognition because of the fact that seven different branches contributed to the total for that district. This is more than in the case of any other district, and indicates that the missionary spirit is widely diffused.

Those branches or district non-resident groups, outside the stakes, which had five or more baptisms are the following:

Name	No. Baptisms	Name	No. Baptisms
Decatur, Nebraska	22	Wichita, Kansas	6
Missouri Valley, Iowa	13	Blair, Nebraska	5
Sacramento, California	11	Brentwood, Missouri	5
Boise, Idaho	10	DeKalb, Illinois	5
Cheboygan, Michigan	10	Detroit, Michigan	5
First Columbus, Ohio	9	Fanshawe, Oklahoma	5
Spokane Non-resident Group	9	London, Ontario	5
Muskegon, Michigan	8	New Castle, Pennsylvania	5
Central Omaha, Nebraska	8	New Philadelphia, Ohio	5
Wells, Michigan	8	New Westminster, British Columbia	5
Second Columbus, Ohio	7	Plano, Illinois	5
General Non-resident Group	7	Portland Non-resident Group (baptized at Bend, Oregon)	5
Oklahoma City, Oklahoma	7	West Pullman, Illinois	5
Albin, Wyoming	6	Winnipeg Non-resident Group (baptized at Lundar, Manitoba)	5
Cardin, Oklahoma	6
Des Moines, Iowa	6
Sandusky, Michigan	6
San Bernardino, California	6
Stratford, Ontario	6

There are 33 branches and non-resident groups in the above list. The wide geographical distribution of the branches reporting baptisms indicates the extent to which this missionary spirit is being manifested in the church.

In addition to the above list, 8 branches and 1 non-resident group reported 4 baptisms each, 20 branches reported three baptisms each, 17 branches and 2 non-resident groups reported 2 baptisms each, and 34 branches and 5 non-resident groups reported 1 baptism each. This means that a grand total of 108 branches and 12 district non-resident groups outside the stakes reported baptisms this past month.

Within the stakes the totals were as follows:

City of Independence	29
Kansas City Stake	18
Holden Stake	11
Total	58

A large number of the baptisms performed in the stakes have not yet been reported. This is particularly true of Independence, Lamoni, and Far West Stakes.

The total of 500 baptisms is distributed thus:

The Stakes	58
United States and Canada, outside the stakes	409
British Isles Mission	8
Australian Mission	25
Total	500

The above figures give a very creditable showing along the line of missionary activity. We trust that the month of July and succeeding months of this year and next year shall show the same favorable degree of missionary zeal.

As to Our Opportunity

As a result of recent contacts with representatives of some fifty other Protestant denominations, I have been impressed with at least two conclusions in regard to our own church.

1. We may learn much from other Christian peoples. We have too often allowed the bugaboo of "sectarianism" to hamper our development. If our motto is sincerely, "All truth," we should make use of every good means and method of accomplishing our tasks. People in other churches are facing problems and thinking and working upon tasks which are in many respects like our own. We can have a fellowship with them which may be mutually helpful.

2. The opportunity before this church is greater than ever before. That opportunity consists in the possibility of leading the way in individual and particularly in social righteousness. This church is challenged today more than ever before to give an answer not only to "What do you believe?" but to "What have you done?" In the staging of a demonstration of those social principles which we hold are superior, lies our great opportunity.

All too frequently we either underestimate the church and its possibilities and become discouraged, or we think more highly of ourselves than we ought to think. Either attitude is dangerous to our progress. We should be discontented with our attainments, to be sure; but rather than making our claims less, we should do more to substantiate those claims. Mingled with our pride in the church as a divinely-established institution should be our shame that we have not more completely fulfilled the call to establish a Zion social order.

The outlook for the church is hopeful—but hopeful only as the future shall demand and have from each of us more than we have ever given before to the common cause. If we have something, if something has been especially given to us, which other churches do not have, we must not only be able to tell them—we must show them. Nothing is quite so convincing as results.

Author of "Zion's Highway"

On page 613 of the Saints' Herald for June 4 will be found a poem, "Zion's highway." The author of this poem is Brother Arthur E. Starks, of Gaylord, Michigan, and we are glad of the opportunity of giving him credit for the production. Brother Starks says many of the Saints sing these words to the tune "Annie Laurie."

Conventions and Institutes

It is a good thing for editors to travel occasionally to make contacts with the people whose interests they are trying to serve. The associations, the exchange of views and experiences, and the formation of new friendships, all contribute to a more practical kind of education than can possibly be obtained from books.

The convention and institute recently attended at Toronto and London, Ontario, served to emphasize the importance and need of this work. The meetings were very profitable, not only to those who listened, but as well to those who spoke and directed the discussion.

We had occasion to observe the eager interest, the attention and enthusiasm with which large numbers of people attended the institute and convention work in these cities. In Toronto the young people admirably organized and managed the convention, as well as attending in large numbers. Toronto Branch is to be congratulated upon having a large number of fine young people who give promise of becoming able workers in the church. London is favored with a group of talented musicians and with another group who have done much for that branch in dramatics. At the conclusion of the institute work there a committee was organized to carry out some of the plans suggested at the institute and other plans for the young people. At both places the editor and his associates had great reason to be grateful for the appreciative interest, the kindly treatment, and the generous hospitality of the Saints. A side trip to Saint Thomas made some acquaintances that we would willingly have continued.

One feels that there is just one defect that hampers the work of a two- or three-day institute or convention: the period is too short, and it is necessary to crowd too much teaching and activity into a short period of time. Our recent experience taught us this above everything else. At both places we felt that we had to leave just as our good work had begun. It would have been much better to continue the meetings for a week, taking an easier pace, and having two Sundays at disposal.

The people are very much interested in institute and convention work. It is quite certain that this method of instruction and means of inspiration is bound to grow. The church has need of teachers and leaders who can go to the branches and meet with them to discuss problems and methods with local workers.

A fine spirit of cooperation was exhibited at these gatherings. Among the people there is a serious devotion, a spirituality, and a willingness to work.

It is a fine thing to see younger people coming to the aid of the older leaders in an effort to help supply the need for workers and to solve the problems.

The "Herald" Undertakes a New Service

Hereafter the Herald will carry in each issue some material of interest to those who are in charge of working out the regular program of activities in the local churches. Under the heading, "Church Work and Services," will appear articles and program materials for almost all of the church services.

The Herald is thus taking over many of the functions that were performed by the Department Journal. Workers who have read and used and appreciated the Journal and the services it gave may at first be inclined to regret the discontinuation of that useful magazine, but they are assured that the material which it carried is to be continued, for the most part, in these columns.

One important phase of our work is to be carried by Vision: that of the material concerning the newly organized Young People's Division, with Eugene E. Closson as supervisor. Vision will continue to be the young people's magazine, and will now become in addition the official organ of the Young People's Division. Our readers are urged that that magazine is now taking on an even greater importance in the church work.

The Department Journal has served a very useful purpose. It was the organ of a group of workers who labored with the approval of the First Presidency to develop the field of religious education in the church. So important has that work become that it is now felt that all the people of the church should have access to it. Religious education is no longer a side issue: it is the work and concern of the church at large. Therefore it becomes a matter of interest and importance for the official organ of the church, the Saints' Herald. With its task completed, the Journal gives way to permit a greater period of active endeavor.

Our material now goes to and serves the interests of a larger group of readers, such as the Herald affords. Besides, this change effects an economy both for the subscribers and for the church.

Active church workers, leaders, pastors, and teachers will now need both the Herald and the Vision. With one less periodical for which to subscribe, they should not find it too much to take these two important publications.

Our policy is not to be regarded as one of retrenchment, it is rather to be regarded as a policy of integration. The change ought to increase the efficiency of our work, the coherence of our plans, and the activity of our workers.

It is now, as before, the desire of our workers to serve all of the needs of the church and all its officers with helpful articles and program materials. It is felt that a great period of work and expansion is ahead. We wish to contribute our part.

For Unified Picnics

Here is one little example of the need for a unification of our religious education forces, such as is being provided in the plan adopted by General Conference in April.

In two of the branches which I recently visited the picnic season was on—on to such an extent that in each place two picnics had been planned for the same week! Picnics are fine, but there were some folks who thought two in one week were a little too much.

In one branch the Sunday school and the Women's Department were planning picnics; in the other the Sunday school and the Department of Recreation and Expression. In each instance many of the same people would participate in both picnics.

This is in no sense a reflection upon any of the departments mentioned or either of the branches involved. It merely illustrates a situation which no doubt exists in many other places, and indicates the desirability of "getting together." And picnicking is just one of the things that could be more effectively done under a unified system.

But if we can't get together on our picnics, what kind of a job are we likely to do at the whole, large task of moral and religious education?

Graceland Catalog for 1929-1930

The Herald has received a copy of the Graceland Record, which is a catalog of Graceland College for 1929-1930, and contains the announcements for 1930-1931. In a letter President George N. Briggs calls attention to the good list of students during the year 1929-1930. He predicts, also, an excellent attendance during 1930-1931, a fine group of new students having already been listed.

Graceland's announcements for the year 1930-1931 are attractive. The new dormitory for women has added much to the comfort and culture of college student life. The outlook for the accomplishment of the purpose of our school is the best in its history.

Anyone interested may secure a copy of the new catalog by addressing the President, Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Planning Services of Worship

By Roy A. Cheville

An adviser about planning services of worship once wrote, "Let all things be done decently and in order." At another time he advised, "Quench not the Spirit." After two millenniums these instructions still hold good as fundamentals—the essentiality of orderliness and vitality.

Any group experience requires recognized ways of procedure and leadership. Otherwise, there is disorder and ineffectiveness. But regulations and forms are secondary. A service of worship should be so well planned that its details and technique do not detract from the general spirit of worship. The planning and practice should be so thorough and habituated that the mechanics do not absorb the attention. The minister who is busy wondering if the ushers understand the time when the offering is to be received or whether the priests are certain about marching to pass the sacrament, can not give his best contribution to a service of worship.

The Place of the Sermon

It is oftentimes said that the sermon is essential to every service of worship. Some would quibble whether the sermon is a part of the worship service or another feature. With such distinctions I shall not be concerned. This much is certain: something is necessary as a part or complement to the worship which will give point and challenge, whether it be sermon, drama, or address. The worship should unify and inspire and make vitally felt the presence of God and the brotherhood of the church. This must be directed into channels of actual living. In no case, however, is the worship merely "opening exercises" or "preliminaries" to the sermon. It has its purpose, but is not complete alone.

A Few Simple Principles

The following suggestions are summaries that grow out of experience. They are to be interpreted as suggestions rather than fixed rules.

1. The worship service is not a "show." At no time may it become a pageant of ceremonies and display. If elaborate elements are employed, they must be for the majesty of worship and not for the astonishment of onlookers.

2. The service must always be permeated with the spirit of devotion. The director of worship must be more than a master of technique and a presiding officer; he must be the priest and prophet who makes felt the divine presence.

3. The elements of the service must have an air of familiarity to the participants. There is no room for "knocking them cold" with something "new and flashy." Well-known hymns strike the best response—one does not care to practice songs, but to voice thoughts of worship. If everything is strange, the participant is intent upon mastering the elements involved. This does not mean a drab repetition of time-worn materials. Well-known elements may be rearranged or new ones introduced gradually.

4. Each service of worship should have some central objective. The several parts of the service should have direct or indirect relation to this. No service should be motivated by the mere desire to "hold a meeting." The objective of the sermon should find its expression in the theme of the story, the topic of the talk, or the proposition of the sermon.

5. The well-planned service affords variety of mood and participation. Periods of intensity and depth of piety may be followed by those of brightness and active participation. For instance, the devotional climax of the prayer and response may well be followed by a spirited congregational hymn.

6. Effective services must be planned ahead, and yet be elastic enough to allow for spontaneity and adjustment to the occasion. Perhaps the hymn-prayer-hymn-sermon-hymn-prayer program is the most used order of service. One wonders whether this is because it is considered the best or because it is easiest. One extreme is rigidity; another is lack of planning.

7. The pastor or director of the service should superintend the planning of the service. He should know the purpose or objective; he should know the material at his command, in music, pageantry, building equipment, etc.; he should know the background of his congregation. Associated with him should be the leaders of music and other fields concerned. Ushers should be familiar with the order of service. Of course, in many instances, others may be better in the planning than those named. Often the chorister may be more efficient than the pastor. If the meeting is a preaching service, the preacher should be consulted so he can fit into the program.

8. It is well to plan services over a period of time. For juniors a common theme is often desirable for a month. For adults sufficient variety might be included so that there would be an appeal for all types of worshipers. Special days may be planned as points of emphasis. Various workers or groups may then be employed.

Functions of Elements of Worship

The voluntary is not designed to hush down conversing members of the congregation. It is to give tone to the meditations of those gathering and to direct their attention to the service.

The prayer of the service is often misunderstood. Perhaps it would not be out of place to confess that oftentimes the chief motive that has actuated the "opening prayer" has been that custom has made it necessary to have a prayer at this part of the service. If there is a theme or purpose, should not this be clearly understood before the prayer is offered? In junior service I have found greater response to the prayer if its real purpose be made clear.

It is pretty much the same with adults. For instance, in case the missionary needs of the church and the essence of missionary spirit is the theme, the prayer should catch up the heart of this missionary spirit. Sometimes there is confusion between the invocation, the principal prayer, the closing prayer, and the benediction. A single service does not have all of these. The invocation is a short supplication asking for guidance and help at the opening of the service. The benediction is a brief dismissal. Sometimes the principal prayer is at the close. I recall services that centered around those who were going abroad in mission work. In these cases the closing prayer of blessing was the climax of the service.

Hymn singing serves several different functions. Sometimes it is for effecting unity; sometimes for common prayer; usually, for giving expression to some common ideal. It is the greatest avenue of group expression. Most ministers prefer a well-sung familiar hymn just before the sermon.

Music by choir or soloists appears in almost every well-planned service. It is not to be considered "special music" in the level of concert attractions, but as adding definitely to the atmosphere of the service. I have heard a well-trained, spirit-moved voice singing "Come, Sweet Comforter" when the very soul of the congregation was expanded and thrilled. Scripture readings and poetry sometimes tell the story of the theme, as at Eastertide or Christmas. At times these serve as a call to worship to centralize attention about the occasion. Often the use of familiar lines of poetry breathe inspiration, comfort, or challenge.

For special services, there is a variety of possibilities that may be employed under skillful direction—taps at a memorial service; a flag salute on Armistice Day; unveiling of church colors on April 6; candle ceremonies at Christmas; tableaux of home on Mother's Day, etc.

The Family Circle

A sermon delivered at Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, January 5, 1930, by President Frederick M. Smith; reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

You have centered your attention for the week on the theme, "Complete the family circle." While my thought for this evening's discourse may stray from that theme, I expect there will be a number of points where they find common ground.

After an absence of some little time I return to this congregation with the feeling that I am coming home, and with deep emotions I realize, as I always do when I enter this pulpit, that I am before the largest congregation of the church, a congregation which should represent the acme of its development.

I sense deeply the responsibility imposed upon me. I feel just as keenly the responsibility imposed upon you, and while I am perturbed greatly about myself, as to whether I can rise to these responsibilities, and discharge these duties in a way that shall please God and further his cause, I am equally disturbed about you. But why should I be? This people as a rule have risen to the emergencies and their opportunities in such a way that we ought not doubt them when the time comes for them to show themselves in their true colors as Latter Day Saints. We know what the answer will be.

I wish to read a portion of the Scriptures for a lesson, calling attention to a few of the outstanding thoughts expressed, and then attempt to weave it around the other thoughts, which we have had in mind to present to you on practically the opening Sunday evening service of the year. The lesson I desire to read is found in the 12th chapter of Saint John. It is rather lengthy, and I shall not read it all, but only portions of the account:

Then Jesus six days before the passover came to Bethany where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raised from the dead. There they made him a supper; and Martha served; but Lazarus was one of them that sat at the table with him. Then took Mary a pound of ointment of spikenard, very costly, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair; and the house was filled with the odor of the ointment. Then saith one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, Simon's son, which should betray him, Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor? This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and had the bag, and bare what was put therein. Then said Jesus, Let her alone; against the day of my burying hath she kept this. For the poor always ye have with you; but me ye have not always. Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there; and they came not for Jesus' sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also, whom he had raised from the dead.

Passing the comments on the work of the chief priests, to the 23d verse, we read again:

And Jesus answered them, saying, The hour is come, that the Son of man should be glorified. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal. If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be; if any man serve me, him will my Father honor.

Even the great heart of Jesus was disturbed. With all his prescience and all his foresight, when he approached the hour of temptation, when he approached the hour of tense nerves and spiritual strain, he was troubled, and he said:

Now is my soul troubled; and what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour; but for this cause came I unto this hour. Father, glorify thy name. Then came there a voice from heaven, saying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again. The people therefore, that stood by and heard it, said that it thundered; others said, An angel spake to him. Jesus answered and said, This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes. Now is the judgment of this world; now shall the prince of this world be cast out. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me.

This lesson abounds in goodly lessons, and is so rich in instruction that we could well afford to spend, not one evening upon it, but many.

Coming back now to the theme of the week, "Complete the family circle," I might ask, What does the word complete mean? In what sense is it used? In what sense is the family circle used? Naturally we think of that portion of society which dwells in the home; that cluster of lives which center around about a man and wife, father and mother, and those who constitute the home circle. To attempt to complete the circle would signify one of two things: either that the family circle had become broken, by reason of circumstances wherein the members of the family were compelled to live for the time being, or else that in its process of growth it had not yet reached that state where it could be said to be complete. Yet I would raise a question with you, even those of you who have borne children to the extent of your capacity, and have endeavored to give them adequate care in a home properly equipped and well furnished. Can we say that if, considered from a physical standpoint, the home itself is perfect, can we truthfully say that the home is complete, or that the family circle is complete unless we can know of a surety that in that home, as a result of the attitude of the individuals themselves, there is that spiritual equipment that will lift the family above the ordinary conditions, and fortify them against the storms and stresses when temptations shall come? It seems to me, if I rightly understand the meaning of the theme, that we are looking to the completion of the family, not alone in a physical way, but that it is the bounden duty of this people to see to it that the spiritual equipment of the family is so intensified and fortified and improved that they will complete the family circle by giving the children and inmates of the home that which will enable them to overcome; and in the terms of the text, glorify God.

If we approach the theme, "Complete the family circle," from this standpoint, I would suggest a thesis for what we may have to say by saying that the purport, the intent, the need of the plan is that we as a people may complete the family circles in Zion by bringing into these families the highest spirituality, and impressing upon them the fact which is fundamentally religious, which is fundamental to the stability of the church, and which is socially important, that he lives best who closest follows duty, when he is conscious of the divine presence and acknowledges his responsibility to God.

To follow duty we must know what duty is. We must know what duty demands. And let me suggest this: to follow duty and do what duty demands means that we must pay the price for that which comes to us in the way of reward. When duty has been properly discharged, it does not come free of cost. There is no royal road to a completed family circle. It comes only by assiduity, and by close and tenacious adherence and loyalty to those great principles which are the underlying and definite foundations on which our religious structure is built.

Adverting to the lesson that we have read, I call attention to those two characters whose names have been remembered through all the time since they lived, and will probably continue to be carried in the minds and thoughts of people as being emblematic of two distinct types of individuals. I think there is a lesson for us in that story, that we should carry home in our attempts to complete the family circle in the spiritual sense that I have suggested.

The scripture lesson we read spoke about a supper. How many times we have been criticized for giving suppers or banquets, and yet here is a place where Jesus was invited to—shall we call it to a banquet, or we may call it, too—a supper. Yes. He was entertained in the home of his friends. He was made welcome. They recognized, of course, that even with his greatness he had need to be ministered to in a physical way. They probably knew, as you and I can not but know from past experiences, that when bread is broken among men it means that the bonds of fraternity have been strengthened. It means, as you and I know and probably also recognize, that men who hold in their hearts that which we may characterize as enmity or jealousy or suspicion will find it dissipated by the fine feeling of fraternity that comes from a recognition of the fact that we are all dependent on the great Being by whose mercy we live, and according to whose mercy we enjoy the good things of life. And so I fain would see among our people a proper recognition of the fact that fraternity is enhanced over the common table. This morning we assembled around that greatest of all tables, the table where we met the divine Spirit of the Master, and there received that which sustains our courage, strengthens us spiritually, and helps us to resist the temptations that come. Therefore I would also have us recognize the fact that when we meet around a table with a group of people with that fine fraternity that comes from a recognition of our common ideals and common aspirations, there can not but be social benefit, provided we have the appetites of the flesh under proper control so that they take their proper subordination to the higher things of life. And just as surely as we undertake these activities we must recognize the services of those who minister to physical needs. So in the story of Martha and Mary we have represented two distinct types of service: Martha, with motherly instinct to care for others, with that disposition to put self entirely in the background, and to think only with gladness of the welfare of others, and perhaps with not a little pains and labor prepare those things that sustain physical life and bring comfort by satisfying the appetites, which, after all, are God-given. Mary, not so prone, perhaps, to hang over the gas range, or plan the products of the oven, but recognizing, too, that there are some things which have to do with associations and activities outside of the kitchen. She remembered, too, that she had long since laid by this box of ointment which she had expected to present as a testimony of her fealty and love. So she poured the ointment upon his feet and used the hairs of her head to wipe away the surplus, while the odor of the ointment filled the entire room as an incense and testimony of her fine spiritual devotion. She exhibited a sense of ceremony and its application in the lives of people. It was a self-devised ceremony in which Mary's devotion found expression. Martha and Mary represent types, almost opposites, both seeking expression in activities of service.

The lesson we can not but draw from this, when we remember the rebuke that Jesus administered to Judas Iscariot, is that we can not despise anyone in the church who is giving his service in the way for which God has qualified him. We are to recognize the merits of each one who is willing to work.

There is no person so short of capacity but that there is some way in which he can manifest his love of God, and when that is expressed by his heartfelt devotion, he is as much entitled to our respect as the most talented individual in the church.

Please note that here are two opposites of service mentioned together—that of ministering to the appetites of the body, or the temporal and material needs, and that of the highest type of ceremony. They are the extremes; but within the range of these extremities rank practically all of our spiritual duties. In many places in holy writ they are spoken of in the same sentence or paragraph. The religious duty of responding to the demands for spiritual ministrations, the need for ceremony, the proper feeding and nourishing of the emotional life, is emphasized along with the importance of having the physical needs and temporal demands properly conditioned on a common religious basis: the care of the body and the care of the spirit. Martha, ministering to the wants of the people, in the kitchen, while Mary was devoting herself to the highest of spiritual ceremonies by anointing the feet of the Savior with ointment she had saved, exemplifying the range of religious duty.

We of course may stop long enough to note a fine lesson which I simply hinted at when I spoke of the criticism made by Judas Iscariot when he saw what to him was a waste of precious ointment. He saw how this ointment could have been sold for three hundred pence and the treasury enriched to that extent. Wishing to criticize, as some people even in modern days wish to do, and not having very much to criticize, he seized upon the first thing to which his attention was called, and tried to rebuke the extravagance of an act unconsciously designed to promote the spirituality of the people by attending to their ceremonial inclinations.

I wonder if the comment of John, when he speaks of Judas Iscariot in such severe terms, was in the mind of Jesus when he gave the rebuke he did to him. John, you know, calls him a thief: "This he said, not that he cared for the poor; but because he was a thief, and had the bag and bore what was put therein." Just a thought, and then I will let it go. When you are disposed to criticize some things you have seen in your branch or district or church, when you feel that perhaps you might have done better, and are looking around for something on which to hang the cloak of your criticism, be sure you are not aping the spirit of Judas Iscariot when he would rebuke Mary for anointing the feet of Jesus with the precious ointment.

Now we pass to the spiritual test that came at this time to Jesus. Without doubt there were times in the life of Jesus as we can each of us attest from our own experiences, when he—seeing the things accomplished, comparing them with the things yet to be done, comparing the ideals that he was presenting to the people with their achievements, so far as mutual endeavor is concerned—felt depressed and disheartened. He must have passed hours in agony of soul, when he could have cried, I have become discouraged in attempting to point to you the way; when I see the slothfulness with which you seek the paths of rectitude and righteousness, and move toward the goal. One can sense, in a small way, perhaps, the tensivity of his great heart, as through him throbbed the consciousness that before him lay the supreme test. He knew the time was near at hand when he would be betrayed by those who should have been his defenders; when upon the cross he would pay the supreme price that would complete his record as the Savior, the Master over death. He knew the agony that would come, and doubtless, like you and me, when we approach the test that at times lies before us, we would gladly escape. And yet Jesus said, The hour is come. The hour comes to you and me repeatedly as we journey through life. Those temptations and triumphs come to us, some of which come upon us with a suddenness that sweeps us off our feet, and we are scarcely conscious of the reserve power that we have at our command until we are put to the supreme test; and we would escape, just as Jesus desired to escape here.

But the hour had come when the Son of Man was to be glorified, as he said. I do not know whether Jesus used that word or not; but if he didn't, undoubtedly he used a word which we have had interpreted as glorified, which meant that whole scene or experience through which he would pass—the persecution, the trial, the torture, agony, pain, the lingering hour of distress as he hung on the cross, until his soul finally escaped. No doubt he would have escaped all this, but, "the hour is come that the Son of Man must be glorified." Yes, the hour is here; I would gladly escape, but if I am to discharge my responsibility I must myself attend to the completion of this duty, this task; and so should we Latter Day Saints when there come to us as there will this year, next year, and the years beyond, duties and responsibilities to the church. There will be presented to you tasks which will seem far beyond your strength, and you would gladly say, "Oh, do not ask this of me! Let me stay in the bosom of my family! Let me seek those things which bring comfort and peace and happiness, from the standpoint of the world! Do not ask me to go through the Gethsemane which means the completion of the duty; let me have comfort." At such hour let us remember the agony through which Jesus passed and the conclusion that he reached, I would gladly forego this thing, but for this cause came I into the world; and therefore, in order to complete my duty I must manfully face the trial, the agony, the punishments that come as a result of so doing. And if in those hours when you are tempted to leave this church work for other kinds of work; when in the hours of weakness you are tempted to relax in your zeal and in your devotion, if you will remember the decision of Jesus, "For this cause came I," I have no doubt what your answer will be, for you will say, "Give me strength that I may serve!"

This whole story comes to us as a lesson in spiritual sacrifice. That is what Jesus meant to teach, and he gave this beautiful illustration and made a wonderful application of it in words so carefully selected that we scarce could take out one word and leave the lesson complete; and we might add to it volumes and not tell all that was in the mind of the Savior when he uttered it. An ear of corn dies, but it brings forth fruit, and it can not bring forth fruit unless it dies in the earth, as we usually speak of death; and then he added that significant lesson which he drew from it that is so difficult to understand; and yet, if we keep before us the idea of sacrifice, supreme sacrifice, the lesson becomes as plain as though it were carved in large letters in enduring granite: He that loveth his life shall lose it. In other words, he who thinks more of his life than of responding to the call of duty, will find that he will immediately lose it; but he that disregards his life, especially when it is weighed in the balance against duty, will find it; he who hates his life in this world will keep it in the life eternal.

There is your lesson. If any man would serve, he must follow some cause. It is impossible for a man working alone, as an individual, to give the service that it is intended he should; and therefore, any man who would serve, let me repeat, must follow, and any man who serves Christ, God, the Father, will do so only according to Jesus.

There is another lesson which is perhaps a supreme one, one which we can not expect to be duplicated in its magnificence and grandeur in our own lives. I doubt not it is meant to typify that which will take place in our lives if we make the same response that Jesus did. It is referred to in the words of the story which tells of what ensued after Jesus had reached his decision, after he had passed through the anguish of submitting to the sacrifice. He had said "Father, glorify thy name," indicating very clearly that he understood that that glorification should come through him by reason of his making a complete surrender and discharging all the details of his responsibility, and after all this you will remember that the record tells us that there came a voice from heaven saying, "I have glorified it and will glorify it again." And there, too, appears the lesson I would have you always remember, that God never chooses even to glorify his own name except through the agency of man, through his workings and activities, so far as his work among mankind is concerned. And so I firmly believe, my fellow Saints, that whenever we approach the moment of the supreme test, when we are obliged to choose what we shall do, I firmly believe, let me repeat, that when we make our decision and say in words anew that, "From this day forth I and my household will serve God," and we shall occupy our own little spheres according to our own gifts, striving to follow Jesus, who, in the richness of his spiritual development and greatness of his soul, would have cried out, Father, help me to glorify thy name by doing my duty; here am I; then there will come to us, even though it may not be spoken in the thunderous words that shall reverberate through the heavens, the silver-tongued expressions that came from the angels of God, speaking to our hearts and souls in that language that we can not deny, whose influence has always been felt. This is the testimony that God gives to you that your choice is right, and that his name will be glorified through service. Therefore, let me hope, my fellow Latter Day Saints, that in every moment of choice that comes to you in the New Year on the question of duty, as you shall be confronting the tests of duty, when you shall be compelled to choose in your way as Christ did in his, the best that I can wish for you is that you shall have lived so close to the altar of God from whence comes your strength and spiritual sustenance, that you can make your choice as did Jesus, who chose to walk always with God, and place your hand confidently in his, knowing that in responding to that call of duty you are glorifying God's name and completing the family circle in Zion. Such is my prayer.

How great is the guilt of the church—that is to say, of those who have consciously and publicly confessed Christ—for the godlessness of the world! How often our Christianity has repelled men from the gospel of Jesus Christ and brought it into discredit! By our unconscious pride, by our continual drawing of lines of demarcation between ourselves and others, we have obliterated the distinctive feature of the gospel message that God loves the world—that he loves even people like Zaccheus.—Emil Brunner, The Christian Century.

The Intangible Influences of a College

By Roy A. Cheville

College campuses are interesting places to those who have lived in college halls. To others they may be mere collections of buildings. To him who has really caught the spirit of his Alma Mater, trees and walks, corridors and corners may speak meanings and messages that are not translatable. A man of the faculty may be an ordinary citizen to the average observer, but to the student he may be a stimulating "prof" or an understanding "prexy." It is these intangible aspects that give vitality and worth to a college.

Anyone who is selecting an institution of learning may well afford to look to these intangibles. They vest upon material equipment, but transcend it. Education demands a basis of scholarly competency, but this rests on the pervasive tradition that scholarship is prized, and upon the persons who sense its worth. Such elements make up the atmosphere of an institution. It is the accumulation of all these through the years that makes up the tone of campus and classroom. In our own church college we term it "the Graceland spirit."

The Place of College Traditions

Traditions are the most potent forces in the make-up of this college spirit. Some schools are crowded with them. Visitors at Yale often remark that the outstanding phrase of the campus is, "We do it this way at Yale." At any rate the "sons of Eli Yale" have responded to the spirit peculiar to their ivy-covered halls. Tradition may engender conservatism; at least they are governors. No one sits down and makes a list of acceptable traditions with which newcomers are to comply—they are just "in the air."

Most colleges advertise their traditions. In my senior year in high school, many pamphlets and circulars came from colleges, soliciting students. They usually talked about opportunities and traditions. Some wore ivy chains at commencement time. Some did not allow the "frosh" to enter certain places, and held selected spots sacred to seniors. Others staged push ball contests between newcomers and sophomores. Underneath these were more vital traditions that gave the distinctive tone.

In Graceland's third of a century a stock of traditions have been shaping rather slowly, changing with every year. Some are on the surface, such as limitation of some yells to certain occasions, and of visitation of "the spot" to those who are eligible. Deeper down are those that matter more. Democracy is a way of Graceland life—democracy that places all on a common plane, whether wealthy, or industrial worker; that gives each student his status according to his achievements and contributions. Friendliness is another. The snob has no chance. Popularity is never gained by airs of superiority and smartness.

Qualities and Representative Students

Another intangible force of college atmosphere is the student standard of living. This is not something superimposed by administrative legislation, though it can and should be directed by farsighted leadership. On a given college campus, what is the representative student? What gives prestige? Who may be elected to places of prominence and responsibility? It may be the holder of an athletic letter, the wearer of a fraternity pin, the ranking student in scholarship, the "rah rah boy" of newest clothes and latest colloquialisms, or the liveliest stepper at social functions. This feature is one of the best indexes of college atmosphere.

Students of Graceland often discuss the qualities that make up a representative Graceland. No code of requirements has ever been selected—these things are just felt. The Crescent organization has attempted to state the characteristics of the womanly woman, and on this basis the girls of the college select eight of their number as representative Graceland girls each spring. A cross section of conversations of several years reveals something like the following as the standard of the Graceland:

He must be able to do things, taking his place in student affairs. He must be constructive and wholesome—a negative student is soon "numbered." He must be democratic, friendly, and considerate, ready to mingle in group life.

The Influence of Faculty Attitude

The touch of dynamic personalities is one of the major tests of a great institution of learning. The definition of the desirable university as consisting of Mark Hopkins on one end of the log and the student on the other, has become classic. The opportunity for young people to associate with specialists in academic fields who are also students of life is required of a worth-while college. Any subject of study is transformed by the personality who instructs.

The Graceland administrative board aims to select the faculty on the basis of personal fitness as well as academic thoroughness. It is possible for a scientific specialist to be a scoundrel outside the classroom. The small church college can not permit such as these to be enrolled on their faculties, for oftentimes the most effective work of the instructor is done outside the limited classroom hours.

A Phi Beta Kappa who can not touch the lives of youth with an inspiring idealism and wholesome attitude toward life has little place on the faculty of Graceland.

The Power of Purpose in Schools

The conscious purpose of a school shapes its spirit. Any school whose only motive of enrollment is collection of tuition fees, or whose chief item of publicity is athletic inducements, can hardly be expected to be concerned very much with fineness of idealism. This may be found in all probability in those institutions that have traveled the road of sacrifice to serve a lofty purpose of developing Christian character and sending out effective religious leadership.

Graceland has grown on no flowery route of ease. The sacrificial struggle is woven into her very life. Mastery over obstacles is in the spirit of her sons. Her wealth lies not in the marble of her walls nor in the magnitude of her endowments, but in the Christian purposiveness and preparation of her leaders.

The Need of Conscious Appropriation

Many foreigners come to our shores who feel no pulsations of America's finer ideals of democracy and liberty, but find the grossness of vice and crime. In every community are those who catch little or nothing of the spirit of civic welfare that motivates the men of vision. All those enrolled in the church do not sense the force of its spiritual vigor. Nor do all who enroll at Graceland or any other college sense the intangible factors that make the school distinctive in mission and vitality.

A Necessary Question

What does the college of my choice offer me or those whom I contemplate sending, in these intangible forces? Graceland asks this question in the assurance that in her traditions, purpose, faculty, and student standard, she offers spiritualizing atmosphere.

When all is said and done, the Christian minister at the present time, as always, has a better chance than anyone else to make a ringing declaration of the message of spiritual power and redemption for needy human souls. It is his privilege to be an optimist in a day when the non-Christian voices, from Spengler to Aldous Huxley, are frankly pessimistic. If the Christian church is not an essential part of our social order, what organization takes its place? If the gospel of Christ, in its transforming and cheering New Testament expression, can not meet our needs, what gospel can—Frank Fitt.

Truth Applied Solves All Problems.—No. 1

By R. S. Salyards, Sr.

Americans and others believe that the establishment of the United States with its system of democratic government was brought about by the overruling hand of Divine Providence. They are not without abundant reasons for such belief. The history of the Nation, with its fundamental political institutions, indicates that the American Government was organized and carried forward by the supervising power of God, that liberty might be disseminated universally for the benefit of humanity.

Thomas Jefferson, in the Declaration of Independence, wrote:

We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.

But he also wrote, when he considered that the black man was held in slavery:

I tremble for my country, when I reflect that God is just.

He knew it was inconsistent to declare that all men were created free and to hold the black man in bondage. Thus in due time came about "the irrepressible conflict"; freedom-loving people and free labor in the industrial North, with slave labor in the agricultural South, ultimately developed antagonism and agitation which in due time threatened to disrupt the Government and destroy the Union.

The situation became more and more trying to the Nation. "Compromises" were resorted to, in effort to "patch up" the increasing rent of governmental texture, and a number of Presidents were elected upon platforms framed with a view to settlement of the vexing questions involved; and thus the Great Republic, the hope of humanity, as embodying and maintaining free institutions, was threatened with division, if not with failure and dissolution, so serious was the crisis, so divided its statesmen and its people. Compromise of truth could not and does not avail; for "Truth is mighty and will prevail."

In the increasing seriousness and complexity of the national situation, quoting Bancroft, the historian, "No one was wise enough after the flesh" to solve the problem; until, in due time, there was brought forth from the obscurity of the wilderness a man not nurtured in the mansions of the wealthy nor educated in the schools of the day; a man rugged, uncouth in manner, of simple and homely habits—one reared in the hard conditions of pioneer life, and endowed with homely but great practical wisdom. And, as he declared later, while en route to Washington to assume charge of the government:

I now leave, not knowing when or whether ever I may return, with a task before me greater than that which rested upon Washington. Without the assistance of that Divine being I can not succeed. With that assistance I can not fail. Trusting in him who can go with me, and remain with you, and be everywhere for good, let us confidently hope that all will yet be well. To his care commending you, as I hope in your prayers you will commend me, I bid you an affectionate farewell.

Abraham Lincoln loomed up as one brought forth and inspired to meet the great issues which threatened his Nation, and to become, as he has been designated, the savior of his country. His clear, logical mind, his great heart, his tenderness and mercy of spirit, his overmastering kindness, sympathy, and patience—this combination of rare qualities indicates much of the Christlike in the character and disposition of Abraham Lincoln. His public service in administration of the great task laid upon him has evoked universal tribute to the superior wisdom and ability manifest in his great contribution to his Nation and to the world.

How shall the wisdom and prudence of this outstanding man be accounted for—how explain the career of this obscure man, who came, like John the Baptist, out of the wilderness, untrained in the traditional precepts of the learned scribes of his time?

The explanation is simple; it lies in his faith in God, his unwavering confidence in the truth. Firmly believing that God had brought the Government of the United States into being; that the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the country were in evidence of the divine wisdom that instituted and ordained this Government for the maintenance and defense of universal liberty, Lincoln in the crisis resorted to study of the word of God, to find in the inspired word some statement of fundamental principle upon which to base a declaration of policy by which the country could be saved. He believed that the wisdom of God, and that only, could meet the great issues at stake. He did not believe that any form of mere political expediency or ingenuity could possibly meet the demand. Conviction of truth, of God as its author and maintainer, was his stronghold.

He found in that word this statement of Jesus Christ:

If a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom can not stand. And if a house be divided against itself, that house can not stand.—Mark 3: 24, 25.

His penetrating mind perceived its application to his great problem; he deduced from the statement the principle that this Government could not continue if divided; that it "could not endure half slave and half free." That it must be either the one or the other; that the antagonistic principles of freedom and slavery would forever divide and disrupt the country.

He declared that "the house must cease to be divided." Steadfastly declining all overtures to temporize, to compromise with the leaders of the Southern Confederacy, he insisted that they lay down their arms and cease to war against the Union. Against all the disheartening defeats of the Northern armies, and the outcries of those who insisted upon a change of policy, he remained immovable in his convictions; and he led the Nation to victory and constitutional unity. He stood firmly by the Constitution. He believed in the power of truth to win in the great conflict of right against wrong, and he lived to see the right vindicated, though he paid the penalty of personal assassination. Like the divine Master whose counsel he followed, he could have yielded his principles and thus saved his life; but like his Master, he suffered death rather than betray the truth.

So now, Abraham Lincoln "belongs to the ages" because of his fidelity and wisdom. His great and good work is universally acknowledged; he has become one of the world's outstanding figures, one of its noblest examples. His greatness, his sublime humanity as champion of human rights, is acknowledged "in all the world." He succeeded because he was right, because he sought and persistently followed divine wisdom and guidance. His great contribution is a striking example of what has been done, of what may be done, and what always should be done, by every man: To make search for and to follow the counsel of Jesus Christ, the light and the life of man.

Lincoln is one of the greatest of the human figures who stand out as instruments who have voiced truth and administered it in their times, according to the purposes of God, in sympathetic understanding of the common needs. Such men and their co-workers form a galaxy of personalities whom God raised up and endowed with insight to minister in the exigencies of their days and times. They form links in the chain of destiny; they were prophetic voices who spoke and wrought against the wrongs which bound heavy burdens upon humanity. Like the great lawgiver of Israel, they "proclaim liberty throughout the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof."

From the time when God appeared unto Abraham in heathen Chaldee, when the patriarch was surrounded by influences of established idolatry and its repressive, corrupting system that wrought bondage of soul and body, and on through the ages following, the eternal God, Father of all, has called and chosen men in state and in church to lead the race out of spiritual, political, and other forms of bondage. Divine intervention and overruling runs like a thread of gold through the pages of history. Like the warmth of the Gulf Stream in the oceans that wash the shores of continents and kindle otherwise stern climates into genial zones, the providences of God have touched the hearts and minds of good and great men and women, inspiring them to noble conceptions, pure purposes, right principles and aspirations for their peoples.

Accepting the call of inspiration to them, believing in the light that illuminated their minds, seeing and knowing the truth thus deeply borne in upon their consciences, they have stepped forward unhesitatingly, and in the midst of clamor, opposition, and contumely in all its forms, have pressed forward unswervingly, relying upon the God who laid such tasks upon them. Seldom were they acclaimed at the beginning of their work; indeed, it seems to be required of those who voice truth and stand by it that they shall suffer and suffer keenly the pangs and arrows of outrageous fortune in prosecuting the work laid upon them. It is by suffering, privation, isolation from the popular trend if need be, that men and women are tested and refined and strengthened for any great task. For it is only through the ordeal of proved, unreserved devotion, unflinching constancy in the work of attesting and defending truth in its principles, that anyone can fully be prepared for any important part in the sacred cause of human redemption. All truth is sacred, having its seat in the bosom of God, who is himself the harmony of the universe. Almighty God is its high originator. There is, therefore, a spirit, a life, a quickening power in the truth; it is a living force, an inspiration which burns in the breast and enlivens the soul and greatly exalts the mind of its recipient.

It appeals strongly, very strongly, to the real soul of the true man, the genuine woman. Such are they whose natures are "just and true"; who see the truth and who welcome it gladly; who are willing to suffer and if necessary to lose all they possess and to face even death rather than deny in word or deed the appeal of truth and justice. To deny it would be to deny God, to deteriorate in very soul, to kill the life of the self; to deny to the race that which is its only means of deliverance and life. The appeal to heart and mind, in all the range of human necessity and suffering, the challenge of right against wrong, of altruism against selfishness, in all things affecting the race entire—this range of duty and interest touches the whole gamut of human sense and feeling in its best and holiest aspects.

Good men and true will not remain apathetic in facing problems of truth, but will challenge and stand by it through thick and thin, in whatever may result from their right course of action, whether commended or approved.

Jesus Christ is the Supreme Example of pure love and single-minded devotion to truth and fellow beings. In him there is revealed complete, unreserved love to God and man. There is no flaw in his purity of heart and clearness of mind. His life is that of all-absorbing consecration to the eternal purposes of God. He was and is in fact "the truth." In this he is supreme in the qualities that manifest the divine; he therefore is divine. To deny his divinity is to deny what embodies, what comprises divinity. "Full of grace and truth," manifesting perfection in the face of every situation and test that would bring out what would be less than perfection, how could he be less than "divine"; "one with the Father"! Creating the universe, suffering and dying to redeem man within it, from his birth through all the succeeding ages, he has been, and is, the great power that has leavened and continues to leaven the world. He is the emancipating, uplifting force which has made for human progress everywhere. He fulfills his great promise: "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

From the day that he taught men to pray, "Our Father, which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name," he sent into the consciousness of humanity the realization that they were, not slaves to an emperor or other potentate, but children of God, created by him, therefore within the province of his love and consideration; that he should be the only being they should worship; and that they were brothers one to another. When he said to his disciples, "The very hairs of your heads are numbered," he meant them to understand that the Father was concerned in all that pertained to man's welfare and happiness.

This was indeed a revealing proclamation; it meant to men in darkness and superstition and fear that God had a heart for his created sons and daughters; that they were therefore worthy of love and sympathy and care. That conception of God's mercy and kindness has slowly been filtering into the breasts and minds of humanity from that day to this. Its progress has been slow, but its procession has been irresistible. It has grounded tyrants and institutions of selfish power under its glacier-like movements, until today liberty is more and more enlightening the world, and democracy is becoming universal in everything. Intrenched wrongs, religious, social, and political, are destined to go in the all-inclusive movement toward universal enthronement of "the merit system," in the interests of all concerned. Its avowed intention is to melt away and extinguish all that remains in opposition to truth and universal liberty, in church and in the state.

Its ultimate goal is the removal of all establishments, personalities, principles, public or private, great or small, personal or collective, that hinder or contend against the common good. It portends the doom of any purpose or institution or spirit that would assert anything less than the good of the whole; that would in any wise exercise power unwarranted by the rights of the mass; that would selfishly claim power to rule, or act in arbitrariness of spirit. This great power which moves with such increasing range and broadening scope of action is the power of justice and love. It is of God; it is the basis and urge of his "eternal purpose," hence it can not fail. It is destined, under God, "to bear rule over all the earth." It is growing now, asserting its sway, and none can stay its course.

The work of those who place themselves in harmony with this eternal purpose will be able by the mercy of God to "abide the day" when all things shall be subject to the judgment of merit, according to the mind and will of God. The institutions, the personalities who in their several spheres of life recognize and avow the principles of truth; who love mercy and kindness, and not power over their fellow beings; who actualize in life the spirit of pure devotion and sacrifice—such are recognized and commended in the word, throughout. It is the sign of spiritual, moral, and all forms of discipleship that one shall share with Christ in breadth of sympathy, in pure humility, in sacrifice of human love of power and place. It is of God that his children be free from worldliness, vanity, mere social standing among the thoughtless crowd, free from all the many idols which human nature erects upon its pedestals of pleasure and heedless following of what is passing, unworthy, and not worth while. Doctor J. G. Holland in his poem "Wanted—men," well expressed it at a time when there was much of conflict in an hour of great national perplexity:

God give us men! A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith, and ready hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office can not buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor—men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue,
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking!
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking:
For while the rabble, with their thumb-worn creeds,
Their large professions, and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife, lo! Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land, and waiting Justice sleeps.

In the face of almost universal lust of power and display, Jesus Christ lived a life of deep humility and plain simplicity. The virtues of love, truth, and sympathy for the common people were emphasized by him in simple living among them. His sharings of their lives of toil and self-denial are significant features in his life of example. He so ordered his life that his time and thought were given to the fundamental bases of life—God, fellowship with God in aspiration to bring himself and to keep himself in harmony with the love and purpose of the Father. By this he indicated the true art of living; namely, that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of that which he possesseth." He said plainly, "The life is more than meat and the body than raiment." The philosophy of Jesus does not seek to glorify or to make vogue the glory of the carnal, "the world," with its artificialities, its social and economic castes. Jesus taught that men should be "rich toward God"; but that philosophy is not the philosophy of the majority. And so "the world," with its obsession of material extravagance, and stir, and speeding up, and tension, and movement, remains in fact poverty-stricken, restless, unsatisfied, and fearful of itself and its fellow beings; starving for the necessary quiet and calm and assurance of soul-food; with the free-gift of salvation and general rest and welfare, were it obedient and in harmony with the true life, which is in God through Christ.

The story of the heroic, spiritual-minded, strong men and women named in the Hebrew letter, chapter 11, is a story of true greatness in strong devotion to eternal verities, those things which neither suffering nor death could make void and of none effect, in them. Such men and women were "persuaded" of such things. It is to their eternal glory that they stood by them.

Helpful Priesthood Conference at Richmond

One of the richest spiritual experiences of my life was had while present at the priesthood conference of the stake at Richmond church, Saturday and Sunday, June 28 and 29.

For some time I had nurtured a longing to visit this historical spot in our church life, but little did I dream of the potential spiritual possibilities couched in such a visit.

Early Saturday morning our little group consisting of O. Salisbury, Milo Burnett, R. E. Jones, E. M. Vaughn, and myself left Saint Joseph by auto for Richmond, arriving in time for the morning prayer service.

After the prayer service two discussions were held, one of special interest centering around the new church school plan. Brother H. L. Barto, of the stake presidency, capably sketched this plan for our consideration. Succeeding Brother Barto's class, R. E. Jones presented the problems of a missionary church for analysis, and much profitable discussion was had.

At two o'clock a round table on the "Program of 1930" was conducted by the stake bishopric to the edification of those present.

Immediately following this the bishop's court of the stake convened to consider charges brought against a certain member for unchristianlike conduct. At this time also the reunion executive committee and missionaries met to outline the program for the 1930 reunion, to be held at Stewartsville August 14 to 24 inclusive.

About five o'clock a trip was made to view the monument erected by the Utah Church in memory of the testimony of the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon. A beautiful piece of skilled workmanship this, boldly holding forth in indelible letters the testimony as given to the world by Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris. Of itself this monument stirs within one's bosom a thrill of pride and love; and when one pauses at the graveside of our stalwart pioneer forefathers, there comes the quickening influence of the Spirit witnessing to us the divinity of that testimony.

On the tombstone of David Whitmer we found a further testimony to the Book of Mormon. "The record of the Nephites, and the record of the Jews are one. Truth is eternal."

On our return from the cemeteries, we paused at the statue erected by the State of Missouri in memory of Colonel Doniphan, that noble man who played his part in our church history. The following inscription on this statue bears irrevocable testimony to the character of this good man:

"Colonel Alexander William Doniphan

"Colonel Doniphan was of immense stature, noble appearance, brilliant parts, fearless, of great moral courage, sanguine, faithful, just, poetic in temperament, the champion of the down-trodden, eloquent beyond description, and without doubt entitled to be classified among the greatest orators and lawyers that ever lived."

Next we passed to the site of the old jail, where Joseph Smith was at one time imprisoned. The blacksmith's shop on this site is at present run by a member of the church, Brother Jorgen Jorgensen, a deacon, and a man of excellent standing.

The sermon Saturday was by Elder O. Salisbury, and a goodly number was present to hear him.

Sunday morning a large number of the priesthood met at eight o'clock in prayer and testimony meeting. This service was of unusual spiritual merit. Every man present made his contribution; and the power of the Spirit was so manifest that a great many were moved to tears. May we continue to enjoy such fruitful meetings as we move along in our church work.

The special class for the priesthood, conducted on the lawn by Elder O. Salisbury, proved to be a beneficial hour. Immediately following, Bishop Milo Burnett preached a helpful sermon, along the line of the sacrifice call, to a crowded house.

At two o'clock a round table discussion was held on various problems, in charge of the stake president and stake bishop. This was a very helpful meeting, since opportunity was given to all to raise such questions relating to the church and its work as were felt advisable.

Patriarch W. A. McDowell was announced as the speaker for the evening hour.

At the close of the afternoon service those of us from Saint Joseph returned home rejoicing in the experience that had come through the wonderful reception accorded us by the Saints at Richmond and the neighborhood.

The Richmond of the past is held sacred by the church because of its undying testimony to the restored gospel. The Richmond of today offers to the church unlimited missionary and pastoral possibilities. The members at that place are Saints in very deed, lovable, dependable, and worthy. We trust the day may soon dawn when it will be possible for Richmond to build the church edifice they so sorely need, a place of worship suitable to their needs.

The church may well be proud of historic Richmond.

Des Moines, Iowa

717 East Twelfth Street

June 28.—Special sermons were delivered May 11 in honor of Mother's Day. Pastor C. B. Hartshorn gave the address at the eleven o'clock hour, his subject being "The best tribute." Sisters Elva Pratt and Janet Morey sang a duet. Elder J. L. Parker occupied the evening hour.

May 11 was also observed as Hospital Day. At the Religion hour Sister John Chapman gave an interesting talk on our own hospital. Sister Chapman was formerly superintendent at that place. Sister Hartshorn, a recent patient of the Sanitarium, spoke very highly of the institution.

Assistant Sunday School Superintendent Cora E. Wildey and family are spending the summer with her sister near Saint Louis. Her mother, Sister Brackenbury, has gone to Michigan for an extended visit.

The Home and Service Group held a bake sale at the city market May 24.

Children's Day, June 15, Elder N. V. Anderson, junior church pastor, and his assistant, Gladys Barr, presented the junior church members in a program. The children did exceptionally well, and Gladys favored us with an interesting story. At 3.30 in the afternoon Elder V. L. Deskin officiated at the baptism of six children. Elder C. E. McDonald spoke briefly to the children, after which they were confirmed under the hands of Brothers C. B. Hartshorn, C. E. McDonald, N. V. Anderson, C. E. Chapman, George Orr, and V. L. Deskin. The new members are Marie Bettis, Nellie Schaeffer, Audrey Deskin, Leslie Deskin, Raymond Barr, and Wayne Meek.

In the evening Elder C. E. McDonald preached. His subject was "Organizing the kingdom." This was the first of a series of four sermons which he is delivering each Sunday night on "Kingdom building."

The district reunion committee has called off the 1930 reunion and recommends that this district give its support to the Lamoni stake reunion, to be held from August 1 to 10.

Des Moines has a league of church baseball teams under the auspices of the city Y. M. C. A. Our Latter Day Saint Comrades, one of the teams which compose the league, have won every game of the season, carrying off the city championship. This is the second year they have brought home the pennant. We congratulate them.

Brother and Sister C. B. Hartshorn entertained Brother Hartshorn's Sunday school class at their new home, 324 Indiana Avenue, June 10. This party was given as a special honor to the returned Graceland students who are also members of his class. Guests of honor were Eva Cook, Verba Parker, Vivian Castings, also Brother Hartshorn's niece, Frances Hartshorn, of Brooklyn, New York.

The young people will meet Sunday morning (June 29) at 6.30 in Grandview Park for prayer service.

Sister Nellie Blackmore, of Independence, came June 18 for a two weeks' visit at the home of her parents, Brother and Sister F. T. Mussell. Brother Mussell is also enjoying a few days with his family but leaves June 28 for Burlington, Iowa, where he is doing missionary work.

The young people of the branch have recently organized and chosen as an executive committee: Gladys Barr, chairman; Herbert Germer and Lloyd Mussell; secretary treasurer, Faye Williams. The following were chosen as standing committees: Worship, Geneva Colder, Eva Cook, and Mary Louise Mussell; social, James Maitland, Virginia Parker; publicity, James Parker, Nellie Bettis, and Merle Wildey; telephone, Helen Castings, Marjorie Steelsmith, Er-cell Nelson, and Darrold Brown. This group enjoyed a picnic at the park June 13.

July 13 will be young people's day in Des Moines Branch. This organization will have charge of all services. The worship committee is sponsoring.

Brother Charles Fry, who has been appointed to succeed E. O. Clark as bishop of Des Moines District, arrived in Des Moines June 28 to take over the duties of his office. The branch welcomes him.

Madison, Wisconsin

Brother Waterman, a long time member of the church, died April 3 at the Wisconsin General Hospital.

Brother Henry Woodstock was called to East Delavan April 6 to preach the funeral sermon of Brother Lester Williams. The service was held in the Baptist Church, and Brother Woodstock was assisted by the Baptist minister.

A number of the Saints at Madison attended the May sacramental service at Beloit. During the Sunday school hour they delivered an Easter cantata.

May 15 and 16 Apostle D. T. Williams delivered two interesting illustrated lectures on "Church history."

After Brother L. Houghton returned from General Conference he preached the Sundays he was home before he left for his new mission in Canada. May 11 he preached on "Building for those who will follow after." May 25 his subject was "Behold, I make all things new." The young people's class gave Sister Houghton a birthday surprise party May 23. Sister Houghton is a good entertainer, and a happy time was had. These young people were her class in Sunday school. Before leaving, they presented her a loving cup.

Elder Berve was in town for one Sunday recently. Always we are glad to have him worship with us. In the evening his text was, "This one thing I do."

June 8 was Children's Day here. In the afternoon Charlotte Pratt, jr., was baptized by Brother Henry Woodstock.

On account of the all-day meeting at Evansville, sacramental service was postponed until June 8. Most of the members went to Evansville the first Sunday of the month.

Bishop C. J. Hunt was here to worship with us at communion service, and at seven o'clock gave a talk at the church. At eight o'clock in the evening the children gave a program in charge of Sisters Charles Clark and Nora Root. There were songs, playlets, recitations, and instrumental music. Dewayne Miller, one of the intermediate boys, gave the invocation. Before the program the baptized candidates were confirmed by Bishop Hunt and Brother Floyd Griswold.

Brother Hunt preached on Monday night, telling of blessings and experiences received in the church.

June 13 a backward party was held at the church.

Bishop Hunt was again in Madison and preached June 17. On Wednesday afternoon he with Brother and Sister Berve in their Whippet left for Lancaster. The bishop was to preach there that night. From there he went to Soldiers Grove to attend the conference held June 21 and 22. Besides those mentioned above, Sister Leda Colbert went to the conference from Madison. And on Sunday Mr. Walker went, taking with him Sister Walker, Sister Houghton, and Silvia Dennis. The Charles Clark family left on Saturday for the conference.

Word was just received of the death of Harlo Ott at a tuberculosis sanatorium. He is the husband of Sister Nell Stevens Ott.

June 29 Brother John Moss, of Watertown, will speak on "The principles of the gospel." In the evening the historical program is to be rendered.

Toronto's Young People

The young people's convention held in Toronto, June 20 to 22, drew large numbers of people, both young and old, to the temporary quarters of Toronto Branch at Queen Street and Dovercourt Road. A significant feature of this convention was that it was well managed by a committee entirely composed of young people who have been active in the local church work.

Toronto Branch has a fine body of young people just arriving at the age where they can give excellent service. With continued preparation for their tasks, they should give a fine account of themselves and make an important contribution.

Toronto Branch is making plans that will soon result in the construction of a church building adequate to its present and future needs, and completely modern.

Saint Louis, Missouri

Grand Boulevard and Carter Avenue

July 1.—On Easter Sunday Brother J. W. Rushton visited Saint Louis Branch and preached both morning and evening. Everyone was delighted to see him.

April 27 Brother and Sister Bruce E. Brown came to Saint Louis. Brother Brown is the new district president and is acting as pastor during the summer months. We had a reception in their honor.

We had a splendid Mother's Day program. The children had their usual program. Then followed a very spiritual sermon by Brother Brown. He also preached in the evening.

Children's Day there were four baptisms in the morning by Brother G. S. Trowbridge, and in the evening those baptized were confirmed by Brothers Trowbridge and Brown.

On Tuesday, June 17, the Daughters of Good Cheer gave an entertainment and playlet, and refreshments were served.

Father's Day was observed with appropriate services, and both sermons were preached by Brother Brown. The children had their program following class period.

Sister Crabtree was called to Ohio on account of the serious illness of her mother-in-law. Sister Myrtle Trowbridge was called to Texas on account of the serious illness of her son-in-law.

Ruth Crabtree and Sybilla Lloyd are home from Graceland College, and we are pleased to note the fine attitude they have developed toward the church and its program.

Sister Grace Billinsky left June 21 on a trip to Europe, to be gone until about September 1. We all wish her a pleasant tour and a safe return.

Those on the sick list at the present time are Mr. Eldon Woodrey, husband of Sister Nina Woodrey; Sister Ida Hawkins, Sister Eleanor Mottashed, Sister Luella Burch, Brother Marvin Baker, and Brother L. Wilson. These people are very much in need of the prayers of the Saints.

The general atmosphere of all the services has been very spiritual, and we have enjoyed the Wednesday evening talks by Elder Brown.

Those who attended the General Conference have brought home with them a degree of the spirit that prevailed there. As a branch we are endeavoring to cooperate with the church in attaining its objectives. A. GRIMES.

Tulsa, Oklahoma

Cheyenne and Fourteenth Streets

We would like to shout this invitation from the housetops until every Saint could hear, "Come, see our beautiful new temple, and worship with us! Let your hearts be filled with gratitude and joy as are ours, and together let us blend our voices with the melodies of the organ, and lift songs of praise unto our gracious God."

For several years it has been the desire of Tulsa Branch to obtain a more suitable house of worship, one large enough to meet the demands of the rapidly enlarging congregation. Our hopes for a new church were high. We prayed and sacrificed, and we felt the need of consecrated cooperation and labored together in every possible way to reach our goal. Now we point proudly yet humbly to the large brick edifice on the corner of Cheyenne and Fourteenth Streets, near the central part of the city, and see some of our hopes realized.

The building has been used by the Jewish people for about ten years and is in splendid condition. The property cost around $75,000 ten years ago, and was purchased by us for $28,000. The lot alone is worth more than half the purchase price of the entire property. We think we are very fortunate in securing it.

Perhaps the most outstanding feature of the building is the pipe organ in the concealed choir loft above and at the back of the congregation. The upper auditorium has a seating capacity of three hundred. The decorum observed by the members in this room is conducive to reverence and holiness. The many classrooms are well supplied with chairs and desks. The pastor has a private study, and adjoining it is the library room. The large kitchen holds a position of importance. It is splendidly equipped with steam table, dishes, glassware, and silverware. It is located in one end of the lower auditorium. We have long needed a room such as our new lower auditorium in which we may entertain with plays and dinners. All Wednesday evening prayer services convene in this room, and also all meetings for inside recreation.

Coming in possession of the temple opened up great possibilities for Tulsa Branch in the future. We are confident that working unitedly and with God we will be permitted to scale the heights ahead.

One of the most appreciated contributions Tulsa Branch has had in the purchase of the new church has come through Mr. W. C. Adams, who though a nonmember not only gave liberally in financial help but untiringly and intelligently served as a member of the purchase committee. Mr. Adams is one of Oklahoma's prominent young oil men.

Most memorable was the first service in the new church. The members quietly took their places and sat in meditation, listening to the organ. Everything in God's creation seemed attuned this morning. The sun streamed warmly through the open windows; birds voiced their worship from the tall green trees, and the Saints sang gratitude to the Creator, feeling his Spirit in their midst. The service was in charge of Pastor O. A. McDowell. The Tulsa Choir contributed a selection, Sister Alma Adams soloist. The offertory was played by Sister Belle James, accompanist of the morning, and Sister Pauline James Arnson sang a beautiful solo. The morning message was delivered by President F. M. McDowell, and we believe we voice the opinion of the entire branch when we say that this was one of the finest sermons ever spoken from Tulsa pulpits. As a fitting close to the impressive meeting, Ralph Mosher sang the solo, "Light."

At the same hour junior church was held in the lower auditorium, conducted by Claudia Cunningham. This was a new experience for the children, and they enjoyed it immensely. The junior choir sang, "Sleep, Holy Child." Frances Roberta Skinner and Ralph Mosher sang "Hold thou my hand." The sermonet was given by Marshal Martin. Anna Belle McComb played a piano number, and Cleo Skinner sang "The Child of Galilee."

The pastor is presenting a series of lectures on Sunday mornings on "Spiritualizing our finances," and on Wednesday evenings he is discussing "Twelve tests of character." These discussions will continue through twelve weeks. They are of interest and benefit to all.

The Department of Recreation and Expression presented a delightful program last Thursday night, when Miss Iona Goodwin, recently returned from Graceland, entertained all with several readings. Brother McDowell gave an illustrated lecture, which proved most fascinating. His lessons and sermons are so fine that we enjoy them deeply. We appreciate having a good, consecrated man to lead us in the branch and help us over the hard places.

Ribstone, Alberta

June 19.—There are many things for which Ribstone Saints are thankful. Especially are we grateful for the rains which have lately been given us. Prospects are that despite the severe sandstorms of this spring, we may yet have some crop.

Regular activities continue at the church. Attendance on Sundays averages good, but the midweek prayer services have not been so well attended of late on account of the rain. Twice the women have tried to meet and it rained hard each day. Last Friday a wiener roast had to be given up on account of the rain.

A week ago last Tuesday night the Saints held an ice cream social in the church yard. A large crowd was present, and a sum of more than twelve dollars was cleared. We could have made much more, but the supply of ice cream ran short.

Next Sunday there will be a baptismal service at the lake after Sunday school. One young man, Albert Hairsine, and two children have offered their names so far, and there may be more. Supper will be taken by the members to the lake shore and shared together after the service.

We are going to have Elder and Sister Peter S. Whalley with us a while longer. They were to have left July 13, but received word from church headquarters that they are not yet to be sent on their mission to England. A number of Saints were gathering at a meeting last Monday night, when the news arrived that they were going to stay with us for a time.

June 12 the Orange Lodge held its divine service at our church, and Elder Whalley explained the duties and obligations of lodge members. There was a large attendance of Orange men and women.

Four carloads of Saints went to Wainwright Buffalo Park June 9. Twenty-eight were in the party. We spent a pleasant day at the lake and the auto camp; then after we had lunched and bathed, we drove through the park to see the animals: buffalo, cattelo, yak, deer, and elk.

Reunion will be here again this summer, July 24 to 27. We expect to have a good crowd and good time. Choirmaster Lloyd Gregory is beginning to practice his choir, so that it will be ready to help with music.

In our last report we told that Brother Lloyd Gregory and family were leaving for British Columbia, but we are happy to report that they did not go and are still with us.

A good crowd of the faithful were at prayer service last night.

Independence

Stone Church

At the close of the Sunday school hour it took only a few minutes for the congregation to fill the Stone Church. Though the morning was very warm and sultry, hundreds gathered to partake of the sacrament and renew their covenants with Christ.

Pastor John F. Sheehy, who was in charge, read for a scripture lesson Luke's account of the preparations made by Christ and his disciples for the feast of the Passover, and talked concerning the significance of the ordinance of the Lord's Supper in the ancient and latter-day church.

In the stand to assist were Elders Leonard Lea, W. Wallace Smith, M. H. Siegfried, H. G. Barto, C. Ed. Miller, and Alma Thomas. Also assisting in the carrying of the emblems to the congregation were several who received ordination on last Sunday afternoon.

Bishop Albert Carmichael spoke earnestly to the priesthood and their wives at the 2.30 service Sunday afternoon. It is the usual custom for the priesthood of the congregation to meet in their various quorums on the afternoon of the first Sunday of the month for the consideration of current priesthood problems. On this occasion the members of the ministry were invited to bring their wives that together they might listen to a clear explanation of the principle of stewardships and its application.

Toward the close of the afternoon rain made Independence and surrounding vicinity more comfortable and rendered it necessary for the second Sunday evening in succession, to hold the union evening service at the Stone Church. Continuing threat of storm kept many from the service, but a good number heard the sermon of President Frederick M. Smith on "Social costs of children's diseases." A number of salient points were brought out in the treatment of the subject built upon the text: "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it."

Pastor Sheehy led the congregational singing and was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder H. E. Winegar. There was an organ offertory by Robert Miller, and Miss Elizabeth Okerlind sang a contralto solo; Mary Okerlind accompanied at the piano.

The general closing of business houses and an all-day picnic on the Campus were leading features of July 4 at Independence. Baseball games, races, contests, family picnics, band concerts, and in the evening a moving picture, "The Gaucho," featuring Douglas Fairbanks, drew large numbers to the Campus.

Attendance at the Campus junior Sunday school was about one hundred and nineteen last Sunday morning. After the opening song the children unitedly repeated the Lord's prayer. Elder Will Bollinger was in charge of the worship service, assisted in the sacramental service by Brothers E. E. Stonger, R. R. Redfield, M. A. Smith, and E. F. Hoisington. Elder R. V. Hopkins was present, and the spiritual gift through him gave much encouragement to the children. Elder S. A. Thiel was a visitor and talked to the children about "Kind deeds," the theme carried through this month's services.

Walnut Park

One of the most significant services of the past week was a union prayer meeting of the Walnut Park and Enoch Hill congregations, held last Wednesday evening in the Walnut Park church. Elder Samuel C. Smith was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder C. V. Hopkins. Elder O. W. Sar-ratt, pastor of Enoch Hill congregation, gave an effective opening talk on the subject, "Faith," pointing out by an appropriate example what faith can do. A fine spirit was manifested by those present. There was an attendance of about one hundred and seventy-five.

The monthly sacrament service in charge of the pastor, Brother Smith, was held Sunday, July 6. Preceding the serving of the sacrament the infant daughter of Roy Leslie and Ethel Francis Willoughby was blessed by Apostle C. F. Ellis and Elder C. V. Hopkins. The baby, Alice Jean Marie, was four months old.

The confirmation of two girls baptized during the church school hour also preceded the serving of the sacrament. They were Mary Isabel Willoughby, daughter of Harold and Miram Willoughby, who was just eight years of age on the day of her baptism, and Nina Frances Willoughby, daughter of Roy and Ethel Willoughby, who was a few months past her eighth birthday.

On the previous Sunday another baby was blessed, Jacqueline Lee Chapman, daughter of George and Alta Chapman, the ceremony being performed by Elders H. O. Smith and S. C. Smith. Before her marriage Sister Chapman was Alta Butler.

The speaker of the morning service, June 29, was Elder C. L. Olson, who is associate pastor of the Walnut Park congregation. His subject was "The importance of being ready always." The Walnut Park Choir, under the leadership of Sister Minnie Scott Dobson, encouraged the worship spirit of the service with an appropriate anthem.

The Sunday evening services have been discontinued during the summer, in order that Walnut Park Saints may attend the campus services in which President Smith is the speaker.

Second Church

"Anyone who came in contact with Him was never the same again," was the theme of the address of J. A. Gardner at the eleven o'clock hour June 22. Brother Gardner preached a fine sermon in which he emphasized the potent power of Jesus' influence. Consciously or unconsciously everyone is affected by the contact of a good person. "He is never the same."

Pastor A. K. Dillee addressed the congregation Sunday, June 29, his subject being "Questions." The three questions he asked and answered conclusively were: If a man die, shall he live again? What shall I do to be saved? and, Am I my brother's keeper? As always, Brother Dillee's "talk" was enjoyed and appreciated by everyone.

A single worship service lasted from 9.30 until 11.30 last Sunday morning. There was a fair attendance at Sunday school, many coming later for the sacramental service. Brother D. A. Whiting, associate pastor, was in charge. Brother Dillee and his family were out of town for the week end.

Spring Branch

Considering the very hot weather Sunday services at Spring Branch were well attended. As special numbers during the Sunday school hour the congregation enjoyed a piano solo by Mary Belle Edwards and a quartet selection by Esther Frisby, Alma and Gladys Dixon, and Gertrude Dutton.

The sacramental service was in charge of Assistant Pastor J. C. Mabbott assisted by Brothers Fish, Bozarth, Heath, and Peer.

Three of our Sunday school girls, Mildred, Hazel, and Mamie Howe, are in the Sanitarium as the result of an accident in which their car was struck by a train at a railway crossing near Independence. Their father, Chester B. Howe, and their three-year-old brother, Chester, were killed. All the girls suffered fractured arms and legs besides a multiplicity of other injuries. Due to their condition a full examination was difficult, but reports from the Sanitarium early this week gave their condition as somewhat improved. The accident occurred at 6.30 o'clock Tuesday evening, July 1, and a double funeral service was held for the father and son at Second Church in Independence, July 2. Elder T. A. Beck was in charge, and the sermon was by Elder J. M. Terry. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. The family has the sympathy of the entire community, and the prayers of the Saints are that the girls may recover.

Pastor Cleveland is still out of town. The congregation misses him and is wishing for his early return.

Central Church

As a part of the continuous church school morning worship the sacramental service at Central Church last Sunday drew a large number of worshippers into the main auditorium of the church to listen to the prelude, "Traumerei," by Schaumann, the singing of hymns, invocation by Brother S. S. Sandy, the sacrament message by Pastor C. E. Wight, oblation talk by Bishop C. A. Skinner, and "Prelude in E flat," by Edward M. Reed. It was with the spirit of reverence and consecration that the congregation partook of the emblems of Christ's sacrifice, and the social service was uplifting.

Apostle C. F. Ellis was the guest speaker in the evening, bringing to his hearers a missionary message which cheered and urged to action.

The Plus Ultra Class is cooperating with the pastors in planning the morning program for the church school next Sunday. During July and August we plan to have a series of these class-planned services.

Central tennis tournament is progressing, and Paul Clarke is outlining plans for the Missouri side stake tournament. After the players have been ranked, there will be a challenge tournament and then on Labor Day a grand stake tournament in men's and women's singles, mixed doubles, and straight doubles.

Thirteen seniors met with Sister C. E. Wight and Sister Dana Scott Thursday evening at the rectory. Plans for a glee club were discussed and rehearsals started. Mary Emma Dunn was elected president and Warren Scott secretary. When the membership committee gets busy they hope to have a membership of twenty. We will expect to have some splendid programs from this group of young singers.

Gladstone Church

The junior church in charge of Elder C. A. Selbe and Sister L. C. Connelly is progressing.

Elders A. R. Moore and Charles G. Lewis were speakers June 29.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Elder L. C. Connelly when Sister Dorothea V. Bundy and William Price were united in marriage. The double ring ceremony was used, Elder Connelly officiating. The bride and bridegroom each had two attendants and a ring bearer. Artistic decorations made a beautiful setting for the ceremony. Brother Bob Parsons sang "Love's old sweet song," Sister L. C. Connelly accompanying. Sister Connelly also played the wedding march. Thirty-two guests were present.

Brother and Sister Bimham and Brother and Sister Grunig and family have recently located in our midst.

Marshall

Saints of Marshall Branch were shocked to hear of the drowning of John D., eldest son of Brother and Sister Stanley Wright. The family belonged to this branch until they moved to Lamoni about two years ago. Our sympathy and prayers are for them. Elder and Sister House attended the funeral. The Lamoni Chronicle gives the details of the accident. John D. was a promising boy of fifteen years, a member of the Boy Scouts, and a junior in high school next year. He was winner of high honors in several branches of local and district academic contests this spring. His death occurred while he, with several friends, was swimming in the Spurrier Pond, a mile west of Lamoni.

The Children's Day program occurred in Marshall the evening of June 29. It was given by the juniors, primaries, and beginners, who did their best. Many of the little ones took part and did remarkably well singing and reciting. It was very realistic when Catherine Thayer walked amid the greenery and sang, "I walked in the garden at even." Dorothy Ridge and Catherine sang a duet number. Sister Dixie Spohrer sang "There is no love like the love of Jesus," and Sister Lillian McDonough sang "I have walked with God today." Sister Zella James led in a delightful little piece with the children, "Let the little ones come unto me." Sisters Rathbun, Frankie Thayer, and Dixie Spohrer had been faithfully training the children for two weeks or more. Sister Rathbun played the piano. Helpers made the stage beautiful with flowers and ferns. A new moon peeped down from the skylight, and a pink light glowed as twilight on the stage. Elder Harold Thayer gave the invocation and Brother T. L. McCormick the benediction.

Annual Reunion at Home of Amos Smith

On the third Sunday in June each year a reunion is held on the farm of Amos Smith, six miles west of Listowel. The Lord has said that he is well pleased with his servant Amos for his efforts in bringing the scattered Saints together to praise our heavenly Father and in trying to bring the gospel message to nonmembers who are invited to attend the two afternoon services by handbills put in each mail box.

The services are held in a large cement drive shed with cement floor. This building seats comfortably about four hundred people.

Appreciation is expressed to Brother and Sister Alvin Stimore, Brother and Sister Alex Cadwell, and a nonmember, Mrs. C. W. Cosens, for their help this year, which they willingly gave.

For prayer and testimony meeting at nine o'clock in the morning, Saints motored in from Toronto (109 miles one way), Owen Sound (85 miles one way), London (about 70 miles one way), as well as from Saint Marys, Stratford, Mitchell, Guelph, Fergus, Elora, Arthur, Hanover, Saskatoon, and many other places. A peaceful influence prevailed through the prayer service.

At eleven o'clock Elder Hewitt, of Toronto, delivered an interesting sermon. At the two o'clock service, Elder Benson Belrose, of Owen Sound, spoke with much force, and Elder John Shields, of Wiarton, gave a short talk at the 3.15 service. It is estimated that four hundred people were in attendance. May much good be realized.

EDNA SMITH.

Skiatook, Oklahoma

May 27 the Saints in this branch were made to rejoice. Apostle E. J. Gleazer and Elder Ed. Dillon ordained Brother T. P. Greenwood to the office of elder. We had been without an elder for some time. The service was most impressive, and the Spirit was strongly felt by the members.

June 8 Elder William Bath opened a series of meetings in Skiatook, and all have been greatly helped. It rained nearly all the first week, but we had very good attendance, much interest being manifested.

Brother Z. Z. Renfro, pastor of Oklahoma City Branch, came to help June 15. As a result of the meetings everyone has been inspired to greater efforts. They will be here three weeks, and the last week both will preach. The meetings are expected to close June 27, but if enough interest is shown they will be continued a greater length of time.

There are a number to be baptized Sunday.

The Department of Women has been meeting regularly and now has a class organized to study the Doctrine and Covenants. During the last three weeks Brother Bath or Brother Renfro has taught the class, which has been unusually interesting. This week is canning week in the department, and the women expect to be very busy. Always this group is well represented at the meetings.

Brother Renfro has won the hearts of the young people. He gave them a steak fry. About fifty were present, and judging from the noise made, a good time was had by everyone, old and young alike.

Columbus, Ohio

First Branch, Tompkins Street and Medary Avenue

June 26.—The last few weeks have been busy ones for members of First Branch. The Loyal Club has financed the redecorating of the church auditorium. The work was pushed ahead so that services were discontinued only one Sunday, and even then Sunday school functioned, with the exception of a few classes.

An impressive program was enjoyed on Mother's Day and was sincerely appreciated by all.

The following Sunday the morning services were conducted in the form of class work in charge of Sister Ziechang. The general theme was "The need of a Zion."

Recently two sermons have been delivered by members of Second Columbus Branch, J. E. Matthews and Walter Reeves. We heartily enjoyed having them talk to us.

The evening of June 22 was given to the ordination of six young men to the Aaronic priesthood. The candidates were Paul Vail and Stephen Lewis to the office of priest; Ray Daugherty and Don Gabriel, teacher; and Don Crosier and Audrey Lane, deacon. The service was in charge of Brother C. W. Clark, Brother Harry E. French, and Brother A. E. Anderton. Brother Anderton gave the advisory exhortation to the branch concerning its reception of these brothers in their various offices. This was followed by ministerial instruction by C. W. Clark to the candidates themselves. Brother French delivered the consecratory invocation and gave a few timely remarks of appreciation. Unusual solemnity dominated the service, and the welcome hand-claps given by the members to the new officers at the close of the service were warm and whole-hearted.

On Thursday, June 12, we listened to an unusually fine program offered by six Graceland College students, five of whom were passing through Columbus at the close of the school term to their various destinations. The sixth was our own Margaret Williams whom we are glad to welcome home again. Those participating in the program were George Melenzyer, Charleroi, Pennsylvania; Dorothy Elliott, New York City; Jimmie Moses, Scranton, Pennsylvania; Harriet Bartlett and Earl Bartlett, of Detroit, Michigan; and Margaret Williams, of Columbus.

Our talented pianist, the former Elsie Weate, embarked on the sea of matrimony with Brother James Gabriel, formerly of The Plains, and the branch unites to wish them much happiness.

The Sunday school is flourishing and continues to hold record attendance in comparison with other services.

Owing to the untiring efforts of Chorister Nathan Weate, the choir is doing more and we hope better work. Also the members are enjoying many social activities. After church, June 22, they took their baskets and had dinner at the farm home of Sister Mary Hall. Needless to add, there was an abundance of good things to delight even the most epicurean tastes.

We hope to continue busy in this work, letting our light shine in many ways, that we may grow and expand in the wide field we have before us.

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

June 30.—Sacramental service June 1 was in charge of R. E. Madden, John R. Grice, and J. E. Matthews. Many earnest testimonies were given, and the Saints were encouraged through words of prophecy.

In the evening Elder John R. Grice preached the sermon closing his series. "The great Restoration" was the theme.

June 4 Gladys Feller was baptized by J. E. Matthews.

G. P. Myers preached June 8 in the morning on "Seeking the lost." For a lesson he read Luke 15. That evening Doctor W. C. Yergan, of Buckner, Indiana, gave a lecture on "Health."

Richard F. Hunter was baptized by Robert E. Madden June 11, and confirmed by G. H. Kirkendall.

The Women's Department met June 12 for a pot luck dinner at noon. Eighteen were present. The rummage sale of the department netted seventy-five dollars. Sister J. E. Matthews taught the civic lesson. Sister Vassie Sheets told her experiences at General Conference.

The Sunday school presented a splendid Children's Day program June 15. Bishop H. E. French preached at the morning hour taking for a text Job 14: 14: "If a man die shall he live again?" In the evening Doctor W. B. Reeves preached on "The laying on of hands."

C. W. Clark, pastor of First Branch, preached the morning of June 22. At seven o'clock Mrs. K. M. Todd was baptized by J. E. Matthews and confirmed by G. T. Griffiths. Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths preached in the evening on the text, "The Lord is good, a strong hand in the time of trouble."

"Sacrifice" was the theme of R. E. Madden the final Sunday of June, and in the evening J. E. Matthews chose for a topic, "Truth."

Atchison, Kansas

Ninth and Santa Fe

The attendance at services of the branch for the past month has been most encouraging. Members have manifested a deep interest in all the branch activities. This is especially true of the midweek prayer hour revived by the pastor five weeks ago. The branch program calls for Sunday school at 9.45, sermon at eleven, class study at seven, and sermon at eight. Saints or friends passing through Atchison or living here will receive a pleasant welcome.

Brother and Sister H. B. Sprague and family, of Independence, former members of this branch, were visitors at services last Sunday.

Brother William Scarcliff was afflicted with stomach trouble, which kept him at home for three or four weeks. But his condition has greatly improved during the past week.

The sermons of the past month have been by Gilbert Hedrick, Moroni Stewart, and Frank G. Hedrick, of the local priesthood. We are looking forward to a visit by Missionary W. A. Smith. Also Apostle E. J. Gleazer has promised the pastor to visit our branch in the near future. The Saints of the near-by groups will be notified of the date of his visit.

Former Saints of Atchison from Kansas City, Independence, and Saint Joseph met with many of the present members on the north shore of the lagoon in Swope Park June 15 for the purpose of renewing old friendships. After a basket dinner at two o'clock, followed by a number of impromptu speeches and two readings by Emma Kathalee Sprague, an organization was effected by electing Frank G. Hedrick, of Atchison, president; Sister H. A. Higgins, of Kansas City, vice president; Sister H. B. Sprague, of Independence, secretary. The intent of the organization is to bring an annual gathering of Saints and former Saints of Atchison, to perpetuate the bonds of fellowship created by close association of former years in the work of this branch. Atchison Branch has supplied numbers of efficient workers in Independence, Missouri. Two of our former pastors, Fred A. Cool and Will F. Bollinger, are now pastors in Zion.

Columbus, Nebraska

Brother and Sister Lyter, of Carbondale, Kansas, visited their daughter, Mrs. Edgar Shockley, and family on a recent Sunday. They gave the small group of Saints here a happy surprise, bringing with them our faithful friend and missionary, Elder W. A. Smith. Brother Smith was missionary to Northeastern Nebraska District two years ago. His untiring efforts in the latter-day work, his cheery smile, and the ready song from his heart are some of the qualities Saints find in him which they never forget. We pray God's richest blessings may be his to enjoy, and sincerely hope that he will visit us again. He preached Sunday morning and evening.

NAOMI WOLFE.

Plano, Illinois

June 24.—Since the last news from Plano, three Saints have gone to their reward. Brother Milo Ewing died suddenly in April, and his wife followed, never recovering from the shock of his passing. Sister Betsy Reynolds, an aged member, died in May, having been faithful throughout her entire life.

The fourteen who attended conference were greatly benefited and came home with new courage.

Elder Roscoe Davey has recently held a two weeks' series of services. They were well received, five being baptized on Children's Day, one a mother, the others Sunday school pupils.

The branch was glad to welcome home its college students, Irene Johnson and Richard Wildermuth. Fred Davies stopped on his way to England and gave an inspirational talk. He made many friends in Plano by his visit here last summer in missionary work with Roscoe Davey and Arthur Oakman.

The goings and comings of branch members and the happy times spent with visitors in this local are occupying the attention of all of us. This vacation is proving most enjoyable.

Sister Clara Southwick is slowly recovering from a severe illness. Brother John Moore has also been ill for some time but is now better.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fourth and Washington

June 28.—The month of June has been a busy period in Ottumwa. The women served dinners and suppers in the basement of the church during the G. A. R. convention, making some fine contacts with people in and out of the city and clearing eighty-two dollars for the building fund. At a business meeting held in May, one of the good sisters issued a challenge to the men, saying that if they would make fifty dollars in the month of June, she would give twenty-five to augment this amount. The challenge was accepted, and through various activities, chief of which was a supper cooked and served by the men, and donations, a sum of more than fifty-two dollars accrued.

The Saints are happy to have here Bishop Charles Fry, of Kirtland, Ohio, who has located in Ottumwa, at 720 East Vine Street.

Sacramental service the first of the month was well attended, and the response was good.

A number of Ottumwa members attended the conference at Fort Madison June 7 and 8.

A special program was arranged for Children's Day, and in the afternoon the pastor baptized Brother Davies, who has been indirectly associated with the church for a number of years, thus completing another family circle. In the evening Bishop Fry was the speaker, bringing to the people a fine message.

The opening of Sacrifice Week, June 22, was marked by a special sermon from the pastor along that line. In the evening he gave an illustrated lecture on the life of Jesus, which served to emphasize the theme of the week. During the week Elder Arthur Oakman visited the pastor, and while in the city sang for "The gospel hour," a radio feature of the Congregational Church. He was also the speaker the morning of June 29 and sang at services morning and evening. His work was deeply appreciated.

The church school is progressing under the leadership of Sister Ed. Hughes. The adult division is under the supervision of the pastor, who teaches a class in "Personal evangelism." Another class in the division is taught by O. La Point. The young people's division is under the care of Sister E. E. Santee. Teachers are Sister R. E. Lewis, Brother W. Williams, Sister Ruth Harpe, Sister G. Johnson, and Sister V. La Point. The beginner division is under the supervision of Sister Hughes, who is assisted by Miss A.

Richards. The leader of the women's club is Sister Martha Richards, who is alive to her task and keeps the club busy. The musical director is Sister A. Epperly; organist, Sister G. A. Nichols.

At the conference at Fort Madison, Brother La Point was ordained to the office of priest. This will materially assist the work in Ottumwa.

Owing to the arrival of vacation season, there is a temporary depletion in the ranks of the young people. Miss V. La Point has gone east, and her brother, Myron, has gone north. We are happy to welcome into our midst Miss Ruth Harpe, who is assisting with music and recreation.

Attendance at services during the month has been good. The Sunday evening services have followed a missionary trend, and a few nonmembers have attended.

Ottumwa is a fine educational center, having a number of elementary schools and a million dollar high school. From this one of our young men, John Hughes, was graduated with honors this spring. He is preparing to attend Yale University, and we wish him every success. Myron La Point is making arrangements to attend Graceland this fall.

Visiting Saints are invited to attend local services, which convene as follows: Sunday: 9.30 a. m., church school; sermon, 10.45; evening preaching, 7.45; Wednesday devotional service, 7.45 p. m.; Friday at 7.30 in the evening the young people and adult divisions of the church school meet for study. This is followed by a period of recreation.

The church telephone is 3999, and the pastor's residence is 118 Taft Avenue. Telephone of the latter is 2903.

Birmingham, England

Children's Day services, held May 18 and 25, were quite successful. Under the leadership of Sister G. Allen, the children contributed their best. There were solos, quartet numbers, recitations, and bright, helpful talks. At the close of the services the chorister was presented a baton suitably inscribed. Sister N. Schofield, organist, received a beautiful bouquet. The children were invited to a tea social in recognition of their efforts. They enjoyed a hearty and happy time.

We were most pleased to receive Sister A. Meredith back into our circle. She experienced a wonderful and inspiring time during her visit to the United States. She talks of spiritual power and greater vision. She was treated royally throughout her stay, and the kindness of the Saints won her heart. A social is being arranged in her honor, to give her a real welcome home.

We have enjoyed beautiful sacramental services during the year, peaceful, sanctifying, and uplifting. These services build us up in faith, and we feel at peace with each other and with the world. Only the pure love of God is able to do this, and we want this love with us wherever we go, that our lives may be living testimonies.

The Saints feel indebted to Pastor A. Kendrick who for fourteen years has served the Lord and this community, feeding the flock, ministering to the needs of many. His life is in harmony with the requirements of the God of love.

Sunday, June 1, the members were exhorted to come to the table of the Lord humbly and in harmony with the Lord's teachings. We were reminded of the story which stands out in Jesus' life and work among his disciples, when he washed their feet and reminded them that he who would be a disciple must be willing to minister in the most humble tasks. We were admonished to regard the sacramental service as holy, and to come with contrite hearts, that the Spirit of God might come upon us in power, cleansing, sanctifying, beautifying our lives, that we might go forth strengthened to present to the world a living testimony in right living and charity. We pray God's blessings upon all his children. May we grow richer in testimony, nobler in thought, wider in vision, yet remain humble that we may assist in His holy work.

Our Departed Ones

SHIPPY.—Katherine Kile was born in Julien, Dubuque County, Iowa, June 15, 1863, to Wesley and Katherine Kile, and passed from this life June 28, 1930. Her early girlhood days were spent in Dubuque County. She married C. DeWitt Shippy October 17, 1892, and to them were born eight children, all of whom survive and mourn: Leo, of Anderson, Indiana; Chester, Russell, Clair, Charles, and Marie, of Oelwein, Iowa; Harold and Ira, of Newton, Iowa. Besides her husband and children, she leaves one sister, Mrs. Andrew Gallart, of Dubuque, Iowa, and one brother, James Kile, of Julien, Iowa; five grandchildren, and many other relatives and friends. Her life was devoted to the service of others. At all times she tried to help those about her, and the memory of her life will remain as a beautiful picture to those who came in contact with her. Her children were the greatest joys of her life and she left them a wonderful example to follow. She was a devoted wife and mother and member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, being baptized October 22, 1893. Her service to her Master was indeed service to mankind. She was beloved by all who knew her. The funeral was from the Summit Congregational Church at Dubuque, June 30, interment being in Center Grove Cemetery. The sermon was by E. R. Davis.

ROTH.—Floyd C. Roth was born May 7, 1907, at Reed City, Michigan. He became a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints June 15, 1919, being baptized by Elder Jasper Dutton. At the time of his death he was employed as jewel inspector in the Elgin watch factory, Elgin, Illinois. Died at the home of his parents, at Elgin, June 15, 1930. Besides his parents he is survived by his wife, two children, Shirley, three years old, and Sylvia, five months. One son preceded him in death. A large number of other relatives and a host of friends mourn his death. The funeral services were held from the Gustafson Chapel, the service in charge of J. M. Blakely and the sermon by R. E. Davey. Interment was in Bluff City Cemetery.

HARDY.—Charles Henry Hardy was born August 2, 1885. Died June 21, 1930. His death came as sleep to the weary and was deserved as well as needed. His unfinished work must now be taken up by those whom it has been his pleasure to teach. His demonstration of righteous living has had far greater effect than many words. In the home, in the community, in the branch, and in the district he will be missed because of his untiring effort for the advancement of all with whom he came in contact. He was baptized a member of the church in 1915, ordained a deacon 1917, and in 1918 he was ordained a priest. He served many years as bishop's agent and leaves a vacancy in that office. Surviving are his wife, six children: Russel Stanley, Merton Ralph, Dortha Louise, Raymond Merle, Fern Irene, and Edith Marie, of the home; his parents, of Niles, Michigan; three brothers, three sisters, and many relatives and friends. The services were held in the church in Fisher, Arkansas, and interment was in Weiner Cemetery. The funeral was in charge of Elder Emde, of Bald Knob, and the sermon was by Elder Baker, of Thayer, Missouri.

SHEPHERD.—Emma Catherine Shepherd was born November 8, 1882, near Mapleton, Iowa. Departed this life June 24, 1930, near Fairland, Oklahoma. She married C. C. Shepherd August 3, 1902. To them eight children were born, three of whom preceded her in death. There are left to mourn, her husband, five children, father, mother, brother, and sisters, besides other relatives and friends. She made her covenant with Christ about twenty-five years ago by uniting with the church, and lived faithful to that covenant. The funeral was from the church in Fairland, which was packed to overflowing. Elder L. G. Holloway, of Lamoni, Iowa, preached the sermon. She was held in high esteem by all who knew her. Interment was in Fairland Cemetery.

GREER.—Bertha Ann Allen was born in Sugar Creek, Utah, May 24, 1855. About three years later the family moved to Saint Joseph, Missouri, and after the close of the Civil War to Saint Louis, Missouri, where she was baptized May 15, 1863, by Mark H. Forscutt. She always afterward took an active interest in the church. February 1, 1874, she married A. Dill Greer, also a member of the church, and continued her profession as a milliner until owing to the illness of her husband, they removed to a farm near Pleasanton, Iowa. At Saint Louis in later years she took the prescribed course of study at the Homeopathic College. She graduated in April, 1897, and at once made Lamoni, Iowa, her professional home. She sent for many years Christmas cards to all the Sunday schools in the district, as well as to the children at the Brick Church and Methodist Church in Lamoni. As a physician she often welcomed and sometimes called for the administration of the elders, feeling hers was also a ministry of healing, needing divine help. Her services for the Saints' Homes was largely a labor of love, as she always made her bill a minimum and then usually donated all or the greater part as tithing to the church. She assisted to the full extent of her means in every venture for the church in Lamoni, including especially Graceland College. By her will, her residuary estate is left for the benefit of the sick and the old of the church in Lamoni. Since she was not blessed with children of her own, she made the children of others her especial care. She leaves to mourn her two sisters, Eveline Burgess and Sybillia Zenor, and her brother Frank X. Allen, in addition to many other relatives and very many friends. She died as the result of an auto accident on May 7, 1930, passing away at the Sanitarium in Independence on May 15. The funeral was conducted at Lamoni in charge of Apostle John F. Garver, May 18, 1930. Interment in Rose Hill Cemetery at that place.

Fitness to the Local Church

Planning a service of worship has nothing "high-faluting" about it. It is simply an attempt to work out a program for realizing some chosen purpose. It is as possible and as imperative in the small branch as in the large. The presence of a choir of fifty and of four good soloists is not required, nor does the availability of these assure good worship. Ofttimes pastors in small branches have worked out simple services for the blessing of babes, that were unpretentious and yet they enhanced the beauty and sacredness of the rite. We are needing "men of God" who will attempt intelligently and devoutly to lead their congregations Godward through well-planned services of worship.

Solution of the Agricultural Problem

From whatever bad results the present well-recognized and general industrial depression in the United States and elsewhere may develop, the Saints must of necessity suffer directly and indirectly, collectively and individually. This means that before the activities of the general church there is placed another handicap. That the Saints will, even amidst additional handicaps, rise to the emergency and do their full duty, most of us believe.

But I can not but think of what our condition would be as a people and as individuals if long ago we had put into active operation the social and industrial order towards which we have, as we believe, been inspirationally directed. The basic industry of all nations is essentially that which produces the food necessary to sustain its people; and it follows that disarrangement or depression of that industry will be felt throughout all the other industries. Today we see the agricultural industry of the United States so disorganized that despair rules in some quarters. How soon the necessary readjustments can and will be made is problematic. That they will be made is optimistically believed. In the light of history such readjustment is to be expected soon.

In the midst of it all there is a rather definite opinion developing that something should be done to recast the whole agricultural industry that it will be on a more stable basis, where prices and cost of production shall remain in normal and just relations and where the fruits of toil will guarantee just return to labor and capital invested. A steadily growing conviction in the minds of many indicate that the solution to the vexatious problems will be at least partially in developing some kind of closer cooperation among those who till the soil. In this belief we hold. But we go a bit farther, and believe that not only is closer cooperation needed among the tillers of the soil and the producers of food-stuffs, but there must be a closer working understanding between the producers in all branches of industry. That understanding will spring from a more dynamic and practical recognition of brotherhood.

Of course I believe that the great solution to the many-sided problem lies in a wider application of the doctrine of stewardship. With this in effect and practical application, there will not only be among our agriculturists the cooperation necessary to greater stabilization, but with surplus flowing from several sources toward a common center, there will be a stabilizing effect upon the whole of industry.

In speaking of the doctrine of stewardship in this connection, I do not mean the half-way idea that each man is a steward over his own property, answerable alone to God; but I would go all the way, and hold the steward accountable not only to God but to the group. Such a recognition and practical application will tie the whole of industry and industrial workers together in the golden bonds of fraternity in such a manner that those suffering from a temporary disarrangement of any one industry would be carried by the whole fraternity, and thus the burden of depression be distributed among and borne by the whole group of industries, as would be the blessings in times of general prosperity.

The doctrine of stewardship and consecration of surplus is the solution.

And so once again we meditate upon what might have been had we before now heeded the admonition to place ourselves fully upon the basis of our own social philosophy. And once more arises the question, How long, how long? F. M. S.

Arthur Leverton Is Dead

Elder Arthur Leverton, of Bothwell, Ontario, has passed in death. A letter from his son says that funeral services were held for him at Bothwell on Sunday. The Herald does not have information as to the date or direct cause of his death.

Brother Leverton was born at Nottingham, England, September 7, 1844. For many years he has been a trusted and worthy servant of the church. In 1910 he was chosen and ordained to the office of patriarch, from which he was transferred to the roll of honor of superannuated servants of the church in 1928.

Church Work and Services

The Great Importance of Small Branches

The pastors and leaders of small branches and congregations, as well as the membership, are frequently very humble and modest about their achievements. They feel that, compared with the larger congregations, they are not of very great importance.

While humility and modesty are excellent Christian virtues, it is a great mistake to suppose that the smaller congregations are not as important as the others. The small branch and congregation have many natural advantages which make them more effective as church units than the larger ones.

In the small branch it is much easier and simpler to maintain the intimate and friendly spirit of a family circle. Everyone can be the personal friend of everyone else, and if one is absent for a single Sunday he will be missed and some effort can be made to care for his interests. Church work can be more personal, and with the small and sympathetic audiences young people can work and develop into useful helpers. The larger congregation does not have these advantages. Where great numbers congregate, many must be total strangers and find it difficult to feel really at home. Audiences are large, and the young workers have a harder time finding something they can do.

It is of the utmost importance that the smaller branches should be kept going at full strength. The proper way to increase the size of a congregation is not to add another to it, but to bring in from among the friends and neighbors who have not been attending churches a sufficient number to increase the attendance to capacity size.

Some of our very finest missionary units are small branches. Much depends upon the zeal, the devotion, and the integrity of the leader of the group. But with consecrated leaders who love the work, some branches have been built from very small beginnings to thriving congregations in a few years. Examples come to mind, but we have not space sufficient to give them here. We hope to present something of their individual methods and work later.

The small branch can do a big work, even with its limited means and working force. It can be a truly intimate and helpful spiritual home for each individual of its people. It can stress the importance of individuals rather than of masses; and after all, the gospel message must reach the individual and effect a personal conversion and a personal salvation before that individual can possibly think in terms of the larger group. The conversion of the individual comes first, then the inclusion of the family circle, and finally the church-wide consciousness.

In this work the small branch plays a very important part. Pastors should feel the importance of their task and always hold out the hope of reaching their neighbors in a sympathetic, helpful way.

"For They Shall Be Filled"

A missionary in Madras, India, in a letter published in The Missionary Review, says:

It is easy to understand the Master's great compassion for the multitudes when we see these Eastern multitudes bargaining, bickering, gossiping, quarreling, jostling, hungry, weary, disease ridden, and destitute of the things which make life rich and happy. . . .

When I pass the many shrines, the mosques, and the other signs of varied devotion to the many gods of India, I am reminded of a statement of J. E. K. Aggrey. He referred to the great missionary hymn of Bishop Heber, the lines: "The nations in their blindness bow down to wood and stone." And then with great heart and true insight of one who walked near the Master, he added: "In their blindness? No; in their hunger."

Thousands and tens of thousands are bowing down to wood and stone, not only the so-called heathen, the idol worshipers, but all those who have set up in their hearts and in their lives false and unworthy gods. And they bow not so much in blindness as in their hunger for that richness and peace of life which they seek and which they have not yet found.

To such as these Christ came and comes today, and to such as these it is the task of the Christian to minister. There are many from whose eyes the blinding scales of superstition and spiritual idolatry must be removed. But more than this, their hunger must be appeased as only Christ can appease it, their thirst must be quenched with "living water," so that they might never thirst again.

"Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."

Your "Department Journal" Subscription

Saints whose subscriptions to Department Journal show credits will find those credits transferred to the subscription list of the Saints' Herald unless they instruct the Herald Publishing House that they desire them applied to another use. If they prefer applying their credit to Vision list, or if they wish some book or tract instead, it will be necessary to order this.

In transferring to the Herald list, subscribers to the Journal are getting practically all the matter they were receiving through the Journal columns and in addition all of the regular weekly news, articles, and editorials, together with official notices, and various announcements and suggestions which the Herald contains. They are getting a large weekly publication which sells at two dollars for the year instead of a monthly publication which has been selling at one dollar for the year.

The publishers are doing a like deed when the subscriber asks that his credit be transferred to the list of Vision subscribers. Vision is a much larger monthly journal which sells regularly at one dollar and seventy-five cents for the year, yet the Journal subscriber gets month for month and the publishing house absorbs the loss.

The Herald for July 23 will contain considerable matter which has heretofore been found in the columns of the Journal.

Write the Herald Publishing House if you wish your unexpired subscription to the Journal applied elsewhere than to the Herald list. Do it right now.

About Playing

Once upon a time a program was to have been planned in a certain branch. But somehow there had been a misunderstanding and nothing had been arranged. At the last minute several people consented to participate in furnishing a program of musical numbers, and the day—or rather, the evening—was saved.

Among those on the program was a sister who played a piano solo. She had not had time to prepare the selection with both hands, so she played only the one-hand part. And she played it well—and I thought, "If she plays so well with one hand, what would it have been like with both hands!"

If this good sister reads these lines, she may think I am making a lot out of nothing. Probably she didn't feel at all heroic or self-sacrificing about playing. But I just couldn't help thinking that so many of us would have refused to play unless we could have had plenty of time in which to prepare the selection completely to our own satisfaction. We should have been too proud to play with one hand; our sense of musical artistry would have prevented us from appearing on the program.

Doubtless this sister would have preferred not to appear under the circumstances, too. The other musicians hadn't had enough practice time to satisfy them either. But they were called upon, and they were willing to help all they could.

All too many of us refuse to "play" unless we can use both hands and make our own rules.

L. E. F.

Atonement

"Sin not only fills to the brim the cup of him who indulges in it, not only presses a cup of even greater bitterness to the lips of every loving and Christlike soul who longs and strives to deliver his brother from the poisoned chalice, but it brings suffering upon the heart of the infinite and loving God, who is himself able to save his children from their self-destruction only by his own suffering of their self-inflicted penalty. This is the gospel. And history proves it a far more effective message for the redemption of mankind than any message of law and penalty, however qualified and ameliorated by a message of mercy purchased only by sacrifice offered by the sinner or on his behalf to an angry God, hard to be entreated."—Lyman Abbott.

In one of Stevenson's stories there is a chapter which describes a ship battling with a storm and in danger of being cast upon the rocks. The frightened passengers are in the cabin, many of them in tears. Their mood is that of doubt and utter despair, for they are sure the ship is doomed. The captain has given orders that no one shall go on deck. One man, who is a little more daring than the rest, disobeys orders. He leaves the cabin and fights his way across the storm-swept decks in the direction of the pilot house. He can not reach it, but he gets close enough to see the pilot turning the ship safely away from the rocks. The pilot sees the passenger, and though speech is vain because of the roar of the storm, smiles into his ashen face. Then the man turns and fights his way through the storm again back to the cabin. He stands in the midst of those fearful souls with this word of hope: "I have seen the pilot. He smiled, and all is well!" And immediately doubt was changed into expectancy, and dismay and terror into a song of joy.—B. H. Bruner.

Losses

By Mary E. Gillin

You may lose your houses, or lands, or gold;
You have lost only things that are bought and sold—
"Things" that again you may work and gain,
As yet you are spared Life's keenest pain:
If loss touched not the strings of your heart
You are rich, not poor, and spared Life's smart!

Men judge of your life with but eyes and ears—
You may lose your fame and shed bitter tears,
But if you and your soul with Truth still abide,
You may walk unafraid—for Truth need not hide;
And Right only waits and bides but awhile,
Then shines o'er the earth like a mother's kind smile.

Pen Point Pickups

Endurance Tests

The late flying news advises that the Hunter brothers, of Sparta, Illinois, have succeeded in breaking the world record in their endurance air flight. This feat not only challenges the admiration of the world in an exhibition of determination to establish a new record of endurance, but their success is a splendid tribute to their wonderful courage.

Reference to this unusual undertaking is only for the purpose of emphasizing the fact that courage and stability are factors basic to the success of any worth while achievement or undertaking. These in turn bring about an expression of devotion with its corresponding sacrifice which knows no defeat. Before such, chasms are bridged and barriers are burned away.

No doubt the purpose of the great undertaking was twofold: To enlarge their material possessions and to gain some notoriety throughout the world; to become great in the eyes of the world and the minds of the people. In the language of Shakespeare: "A consummation devoutly to be wished." It is human to desire to be praised of men and most men are human.

In the feat performed by the Hunter brothers there were necessarily some difficulties to be encountered and some hazards to be taken; yet they were willing to pay the price. It is not to be understood that such undertakings are altogether wrong. It is merely for the purpose of showing that humanity on the whole is primarily engaged in attempting to do great things and taking great risks in order to secure monetary compensation and to receive favor and approbation of men.

Mankind on the whole is prone to concern itself in that which will please and satisfy for the moment. The Psalmist David, in speaking of the physical existence and needs of man, presents a worth while thought, holding out the idea that man is like a flower which lives today and tomorrow is gone. It would appear, one would think, to the rational and dispassionate mind, that greater depths should be sounded, better heights should be mounted, that a greater and clearer vision of God might be had by man, so that his behavior should be more like unto his Maker. Were this true, man would not only think of today, but of tomorrow; he would not only build for today, but for eternity. He would not only concern himself in that which pleaseth but rather with that which endureth.

This brings us to the primary purpose of this offering. Mankind is engaged in a great race, a great "endurance test"; a race which is not only for a day, a month, or a year, but for life. This race and its course were outlined by the Master mind of Christ our Redeemer. It reaches from earth to heaven; it comprehends the leaving of all that is evil and sorrowful, leading to all that is good and glorious. It means the exchanging of mortality's sordid condition for the bliss of immortality. In total, it means the return of man to the godly environment; the greatest of races or "endurance tests."

Our Lord gave mankind to understand that the task would not be without hazard or risk. There would be "cross winds," pitfalls, for the "accuser of the brethren" would ever be alert. However, the Master assured mankind that if his laws were kept, and the outline followed, keeping his heart as one of gold, a lamp would be given to shine out upon his pathway, revealing the devious and dangerous paths which seek to lead away in sin and shame. By the powers of his presence adequate protection would be assured against such.

In the running of this race, great faith is required; not only in God and Christ, but in oneself. It is an endurance test, for he that endureth to the end shall be saved.

The purpose of such a course is not for gold or for worldly notoriety. There shall be no ear for the applause and flattery of a capricious world. But to the victor shall come great joy and happiness in this life, and in the world to come, eternal life.

The Apostle Paul in his letter to the Hebrew Saints gathers the whole matter very beautifully indeed: "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race that is set before us, looking to Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set at the right hand of the throne of God."

The Prospect List

A series of four articles which discuss the purpose and use of the prospect list as an aid to missionary enterprise. By J. A. Gardner.

Number 1. Its Value and Purpose

Accepting missionary enterprise as the dominant and primary purpose of the church, leads us to discover the best plans by which to prosecute this work. The fact that we ourselves are members of the church is the obvious reason why we should wish others to join it. If not, then why should we continue our membership in the church.

Those who are managing big businesses do not determine their sales policies by the hit and miss method. Their energies are not scattered over a wide field, without aim or objective. Instead, business today goes after its customers in those areas where there is the most likelihood of making sales, and their approach is made to other business enterprises or to certain people who are in the market for their merchandise.

A business concern, whether it is selling washing machines, automobiles, typewriters, or other merchandise, sends its salesmen to those people who are prospective buyers of their products. It does not ask its salesmen to make a house to house canvass, but it does furnish them with a list of names of those who are likely to need the product of the firm. The salesmen direct their efforts to calling on these particular people. The firm adds to the list of prospects continually, and likewise the salesmen discover new people by their own initiative; and by continually increasing the list of prospects they add to the possible number of sales they may make.

I am particularly impressed by an experience in making a long distance call a few months ago from Independence to Lamoni. I had an urgent message to deliver to my son who was attending Graceland College. I placed the call at six o'clock in the evening. In ten minutes I had a report that the lines were busy and that they would call me again. A few minutes later they reported that the party was not at home, but they were trying to find him. In another ten minutes they reported that he was not at home nor at the college, but had gone down town and that they were still trying to locate him. In about an hour after I had first placed the call the operator reported they had not been able to locate him but thought he had gone to the Coliseum to a play. I reported that I could not wait to put the call through and would, therefore, cancel the call. The operator replied that if they could locate him later in the evening she would call me. Upon returning home later, at half past nine, I received a call stating that the party whom I had called at six o'clock was now at home and that she would make the connection immediately. In five minutes more the call was completed and the message delivered.

When I first placed the call the telephone company was aware that I was a prospective user of their service, and the persistence with which they followed the matter through to a final conclusion and made a sale of ninety cents is not only commendable, but teaches a lesson in service and efficiency. If missionaries or branch pastors would follow through with equal persistency every prospect for church membership whom they discover, our total membership would be multiplied several times.

A prospect list for missionary purposes is made up of the names and addresses of relatives or friends of members who do not belong to the church but are thought to be prospects for conversion. It may also contain a number of names of people whom we do not know personally but whose reputation and general attitude toward the wholesome things of life lead us to believe that they are possible converts to the church. Again, the list may contain the names of those who are known to have no regard for religion or for the church and whose reputation has outlawed them from society. Possessed of such a list, the branch pastor with his associates and in cooperation with the departments, organized classes, and clubs in his own congregation, is made aware that there is a missionary field immediately available and one that challenges the united endeavor of the congregation to convert these people to the gospel of Christ. When the district missionary comes to the branch, a list of prospects likewise offers a specific field for his endeavor, and he is thus enabled to save time and energy by having this list of prospects ready toward which he can immediately direct his attention.

The list of prospects for church membership can be placed in a card file of a convenient size and distributed to the local ministry, who with certain of the members may be formed into teams to make a special study of the habits and attitudes of these prospects so that the proper approach may be made. It is well to know the prospect's business, his interests, his likes and dislikes, the members of his family, his friends, and his institutional affiliations.

In making this survey, it is well to put yourself in his place. Try to analyze the situation from his viewpoint and determine the conversational approach that would be best adapted to secure his interest. If you were in the prospect's place how would you like to be treated, and how would you regard criticism and intolerance? A prospect has a multitude of opinions of his own and a number of attitudes that have been built up over a period of years, and in all probability he will not willingly surrender at once.

The prospect card is an invaluable help in assembling information about the prospect, which will lead to the right approach. In addition to this it helps to discover a missionary field immediately available, centers attention on specific people, and directs our efforts in a methodical way. A prospect list will prove an economy in time and will cut down the expense of conducting missionary work.

The Place of the Small College

By Gustav A. Platz

Where shall I go to college? Every student who has finished high school and desires the opportunity to further his education by spending one or more years in college, is confronted with this question. No doubt the strongest appeal to our young men and women of today comes from the larger institutions, state universities, state colleges, and state normal schools; or even those institutions of national repute. To attend Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Stanford, or some other noted American school has always been and still is an outstanding ambition of many boys and girls, even before they have finished high school. Surely this is a worthy ambition, but for various reasons their ambition in many instances is unattainable. Fortunate, then, is the boy or girl to whom there comes also the appeal of the small college.

After all, the small college offers most of the worth-while opportunities to be found today in larger institutions. Under the present system of accrediting colleges in accordance with certain general standards, the smaller schools are kept at par with larger institutions in their proportionate value of endowment and equipment, library facilities, and qualifications of faculty members. Whether the college be great or small, then, the student may study from the same textbook, read the same reference assignments, solve the same quadratic equations, demonstrate the same laws in physics, chemistry, and biology, or discuss the same problems in sociology and economics. Likewise he can receive the same inspiration and encouragement that come from contact with men and women who have achieved well in their chosen field, but who have kept that humbleness of spirit and bigness of soul which go to make great teachers.

Finally, he may dream the same dreams; and it is this opportunity, in fact, that is of most value in a college education. The small college, then, provides ways and means for study and thought on the part of the student that are as ample as those of the larger institution. Besides, in many respects, it possesses an advantage over it.

To every truly college-bred man and woman there must come at some time a broadening of vision, a deeper insight into the values of life, an earnest desire to determine toward what purpose the inherent talents are being educated. This awakening may come as the result of the successful accomplishment of the daily tasks of college work, and it often happens that the degree of awakening, the scope of vision is in proportion to the struggle that is necessary to accomplish the tasks assigned. The intrinsic value of having to carve out a wooden ladle in a small college for lack of the silver spoon of the large school, has been made manifest in the lives of many of our great men and women. A marked illustration is offered by James Weber Linn, writing in a recent issue of the Chicago Tribune:

My own belief is that the large institution has only one advantage over the small, and that is in scientific teaching in laboratories. The equipment for such teaching is expensive, and only well-endowed institutions can have plenty of it. This is probably the reason why the most famous young physicist in America, winner of the Nobel prize while still in his thirties, Professor Arthur Compton, is a graduate of Wooster (Ohio). Lacking equipment that enabled him to perform his experiments without trouble, he was forced to do his own thinking. This was hard on Compton, no doubt; but possibly it was better for the rest of us.

Another advantage the small college has over the large institution is the opportunity offered for closer contact between the teacher and the individual student. A girl, sixteen years of age, failing in her freshman chemistry last fall, came into my office one beautiful October day and heaved a sigh as I offered her a chair that we might talk over the matter. On approaching the problem, I remarked, "Now wouldn't it be much pleasanter to be lying in the hammock under a shade tree reading one of the latest novels?"

She answered, "That is just what I was thinking of." Just a normal little girl needing help to take on the responsibility of work. As she was a member of a class of twelve students who were under my guidance in both classroom and laboratory, it was an easy task to give her the necessary help. Had she been a member of a class of one hundred or more freshmen with one instructor offering the lectures and a different one, perchance a student assistant and not a teacher as is often the case in a large institution, in charge of the laboratory work, it would have been much more difficult to make the necessary adjustment. The transition between high school and college work is often quite trying to our boys and girls, and it is only as a teacher is able to meet the problems of each individual student that he is able adequately to assist in making this transition. Many freshmen of our larger institutions fail for lack of this help, whereas the small school is favored with the opportunity to give it.

There is still another role of the small college that needs mention here. Like Graceland, our own church school, many of the small colleges throughout the United States are denominational schools. Founded in the Christian cause, they have always given a specific interpretative value to education. The development in their students of such attitudes and ideals as will enable them to use their education for the welfare of humanity has been their chief goal. A student finishing the course in engineering in such a school is more than an engineer. He has had the training in the ways of the Master Builder. The student who has finished the teacher's course is more than a teacher. She has learned the methods of the Master Teacher.

The writer does not mean to imply that these ideals are not to be found in the larger schools, but judging from his own experiences in both large and small institutions as a student and as a teacher, he feels that it is safe to say that greater emphasis is placed upon this phase of education in the small college. There is also every reason to believe that the small Christian college will continue to function in the capacity mentioned above. Miron A. Morrill in the Christian Century for December 27, 1928, has the following to say on the subject:

The Christian College does seem to have a definite call to lead its students into the interpretative branches of knowledge, into literature, art, the drama, philosophy, and the social sciences. Its teachers will be primarily teachers. They will believe thoroughly in the type of institution they serve and will not teach with a weather eye open to the larger salaries obtainable at the state university.

From farmers, small business men, sacrificing clergymen, widows, and those about to enter upon their heavenly reward, the average small college has painfully, slowly built up its endowment. As they gave, these humble folk believed that their money would promote the cause of Christ. Not a college executive, not a teacher, scarcely the newest freshman plans deliberately to disappoint them. But it is safe to say that the cause of Christ during the remainder of the twentieth century will be promoted by these colleges in ways as yet dimly perceived.

To the youth of our church, then, as well as to others desiring a college education, we extend the invitation of a typical small college. Graceland offers the opportunities and advantages mentioned above. Her faculty is a group of men and women whose devotion to high ideals has been an inspiration to many young people. Her equipment is adequate for the student who desires to dream and study toward the finding and fulfillment of his life's ambition. His classes are small, so that each student may receive the assistance necessary to his individual needs. In all her science courses the instructor in charge of the classroom is also in charge of the laboratory, so that the student is ably guided in the correlation of his study with his experimental work. In her curricular and extra-curricular activities she offers her students the opportunity to develop a well-balanced college education in the several courses she offers.

Nor is this all. Throughout her activities there is interwoven that intangible something called by those of us who have experienced it, the Graceland Spirit. It is immaterial where or when you come in contact with it, whether it be in the serious moments of the classroom discussion, in the quiet hours of conference with an instructor or fellow classmate, in the sacred hour of prayer, or in the thoughtful meditation of solitude, those students who have found it during their stay at Graceland have found a portion of the Divine. It has been said that state universities are noble department stores, but the small college is a gift shop. The Graceland Spirit is Graceland's most precious gift.

Truth Applied Solves All Problems.—No. 2

By R. S. Salyards, Sr.

Life, public or private, is a trust, not a mere existence to be lived inertly, indifferently. Upon the proper sensing and keeping of that trust the welfare of all depends. When groups of peoples, in church and in state, individually and en masse, shall awaken to realize their great responsibilities, and in that awakening concentrate mind and body to know and sincerely to obey the leadership of Jesus Christ, peace, success, and general welfare will result. Such course can not fail to bring enduring satisfactions in all the ways of life. The history of the human family shows the following of many leaders; some good, many bad; but it remains for the people to follow the leader whom God himself has indicated as their true leader. Human history demonstrates and emphasizes the imperative need that people shall earnestly seek to inform themselves, both in principle and in spirit concerning the problems of life, present and eternal, if they shall be able to escape disaster and make constructive contribution to life. "Knowledge is power," is a trite saying. Jesus declared:

I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.—John 8: 12.

If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.—Verses 31, 32.

He said in this that men and women should live their lives in light, not in darkness; not in blindness nor in self-will, in ignorance of God; not in indifference nor disobedience to him. In this and in all his teaching and acts he demonstrated that he "is the manifest wisdom of God." In him we find truth, light, wisdom, power to live the truth. He therefore challenges the attention and loyal following of every man in every place. Obedient to the gospel, being "born again" into "newness of life," living in daily communion with God, men and women are granted confirmation in augmenting testimony.

There is constant consciousness of God when we walk with him in spirit, as there is cumulative loss when persons or peoples fail to search his word and "keep it." It is designed of God that the souls of children and men and women shall "feed and grow" with the growth of their bodies; "that the life also of Jesus might be manifest in our mortal flesh." Unless the souls of men are thus constantly nourished and kept alive, they live according to mere human, carnal, nature; and what such limited, imperfect, worldly nature is in evidence in the sinful life of humanity in ignorance of God. This is not stating a mere theory; it is a potent fact; a fact that is world-wide in its evidences in the great handicaps under which humanity literally is staggering in its struggles against war, poverty, vice, and the long list of heavy weights it carries.

The experiences of God's people and of others, past and present, emphasize the requirement that all who hope to become heirs of "the life that now is, and of that which is to come," must study the purposes of God and the methods he has provided that such life be known and realized. Peoples must "know the truth" and thus become and continue to be "free" from ignorance of Christ and his principles of life. Men seriously take up and become proficient in knowledge of trades, professions, business methods, and other lines of preparation for temporal welfare. This has been done, and rightly so, in order that equipment to maintain life be had. Today the world is living in "the machine age," so greatly has the machine been developed and become the multiplied servant of man; so largely has it released man from much heavy drudgery. As a result man has more leisure for culture and other enjoyment; but as a consequence of increased machine work many suffer from unemployment. There must therefore be right direction of activities, with just provision for the sustenance of all. In other words, there must be compensatory adjustment in the interest of all concerned. While new mechanical devices throw numbers out of employment, improvements also create new lines of labor; but not enough, at least at first, to meet the demands of all. There must therefore be a spirit of cooperative sympathy and effort, if the good of all concerned is conserved.

This means that, first of all there shall be a new spirit, the spirit of Jesus Christ, to permeate the hearts of all, if right conditions are to be brought about. This new spirit is strictly basic; the people of God are to develop it and to make it the life of their purposes and methods of living. This they can never do without first devoting themselves to obtaining and to keeping in that spirit:

It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.—Jesus, in John 6: 63.

It is the "calling" of God's people, not formally to profess, but to make the spiritual life a life of realization, by study of the word, by spiritual understanding and obedience. They are not called to blunder, to flounder, by basing their course of living on mere habit, sentiment, prejudice, or feeling, in anything; they are called to know, to analyze, to exercise an enlightened judgment, in everything they do.

Abraham Lincoln did that, and all of that, in his calling. He recognized his inability to do his work without the help of God; he therefore sought wisdom; he absorbed himself in seeking light; he obtained it and acted upon it. By that course he performed a sacred duty which involved the welfare of millions. God blessed him in his leadership and service of the people in civil affairs. Lincoln was distinguished also for his devotion to "the people"; he had genuine interest in them. It was a leading feature of his policy to keep on a level with and close to the people. He believed that this Nation is "a government of the people, by the people, and for the people." The masses of the people loved him for his common interest in them, for his attitude of lowliness of heart toward them. He had much to say and to do in behalf of the common mass of men everywhere. That policy worked in Lincoln's case. It is written of Jesus that "the common people heard him gladly." And Lincoln said, "God must have loved the common people, he made so many of them."

Almighty God has established and preserved two great institutions in "these latter days": one, the Government of the United States, to rule in civil affairs; the other, his church, to declare and to make manifest his truth in spiritual matters. The Government is the body or tabernacle necessary to the free manifestation and movement of the indwelling life, which it is appointed to protect in the common rights of men "to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." The one is complementary to the other, similar to the body and spirit of man; and both must be kept in material, moral, and spiritual health in order that they may function as designed. Of the civil government, the word says,

When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice; but when the wicked beareth rule, the people mourn.—Proverbs 29: 2.

In latter-day revelation the Lord gave this as instruction:

I, the Lord God, maketh you free; therefore, ye are free indeed: and the law also maketh you free; nevertheless when the wicked rule the people mourn; wherefore honest men and wise men should be sought for, diligently, and good men and wise men, ye should observe to uphold; otherwise whatsoever is less than these cometh of evil.—Doctrine and Covenants 95: 2.

Here the Lord instructs his people concerning their rights and duties in civil affairs. They are not told to join some political party and to stand by its platforms and candidates, whether or no, in a spirit of partisanship; but they are admonished to stand by the law of the land as written in its constitution, and to choose and to sustain "good men and wise men" as administrators. In doing that they must think and discriminate carefully; for men may be good and not be wise; and men may be wise or able and not be good. Thus goodness and wisdom are both necessary in such men—they must be men of good character and must advocate sound principles, in order to meet the demands of private life and public duty. Thus the people are responsible for what they choose and what they sustain. "Principles are greater than men"; hence the people must learn to know both men and the measures they propose; for the people have just as good and only as good government as they take the interest and the time to make proper choices of measures and of administrators. The liquor traffic or any other evil could not exist were the people really devoted to truth and morality as they ought to be. It is within their right and in their power to maintain civic righteousness.

The same status and rule is within the power of the people of the church. To have a church that maintains a system of spiritual government in accord with the will of God, it is necessary that its people shall be conscious of their responsibilities in maintaining the spiritual government; for concerning it also the word of God requires the deep interest and active participation of its people, lay and official, in the right maintenance of its system of government; for it is written in the divine law:

Search these commandments for they are true and faithful.—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 7.

O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind, and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day.—Doctrine and Covenants 4: 1.

And we know, also, that sanctification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, is just and true, to all those who love and serve God with all their minds, and strength; but there is a possibility that man may fall from grace and depart from the living God. Therefore let the church take heed and pray always, lest they fall into temptations; yea, and even let those who are sanctified take heed also.—Doctrine and Covenants 17: 6.

Ye shall observe the laws which ye have received, and be faithful.—Doctrine and Covenants 42: 18.

It is necessary, then, that men and women composing the church of God shall see to it that the word of God, his revealed principles, are understood and observed if success is to crown the effort to establish the kingdom of God on earth. "The restoration of the gospel" means the undeviating application of the truth as revealed, not only in obedience to "first principles," but in all that is done in effort to bring about the redemption of Zion. All men, Latter Day Saints included, are called to "believe in the truth," "the whole truth," "and nothing but the truth," in its application to life in all its aspects. By so doing and only by so doing can they assist in building up the church, which is appointed to be "the pillar and ground of the truth." The church is commanded to "obey the truth"; "to observe all things which I have commanded you." Such course of conformity to the word of God constitutes the church. It is the church only when it does that. "They have kept thy word," is the commendatory statement of Jesus in his prayer to the Father in behalf of his disciples. (John 17: 6.)

Truth applied to its problems preserved the Republic. Truth applied to the church, including the persons who comprise it, will preserve and continue the church in spiritual favor and power before God.

The church declined after the days of Christ and his apostles. The forces of evil fought its development and finally transformed it from its pure spiritual simplicity into an organization permeated and corrupted by the spirit and glamor of the world. This latter-day dispensation has been no exception in the battle between light and darkness. Saint Paul wrote:

Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God: praying always with all prayer and supplication in the spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints.—Ephesians 6: 12-18.

In the preaching of the gospel people are called to "obey the truth," and by so doing are promised "the Spirit of truth," which is to "lead and guide into all truth." This means not merely a comprehension of set principles of introductory theology, but the revelation of a new life, in which all are to become "new creatures" in Christ. Covenant with God means and must mean sincere and faithful observance of "every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God." Ability to see the truth, with the devotion and integrity and common sense to stand by it at all cost, has been the consistent course which has characterized the true children of God in every age. Such are those portrayed in Hebrews, chapter 11, who suffered and endured and who refused to barter the priceless possession of their divine calling rather than be unfaithful to God and his word. Such have been exceptional, such have been in the great minority, but their examples shine out like stars amid the darkness and worldliness and folly of the masses of the peoples of the nations.

Men and women today, even more than ever before, need hearts to love and ability to see and to know the truth. Life has become and is becoming more and more complex and artificial. This is true of political, social, and economic life. It is equally true of moral and religious life. New systems and complexities of old systems appear in a multiplicity of forms and guises; and in this wilderness of prevailing thinking and living it is necessary to be enlightened and to discriminate carefully and clearly, if one is to avoid deception, and to give his life and support to what is true and enduring. Sound principles only must be discerned and followed. With increasing right of choice in extended privileges and franchises comes greater need of preparation to exercise right choices in power to support truth against the menacings of rapidly increasing wrong. Truth and error, right and wrong, light and darkness, are in evidence as never before, at least in our own times. Life today is being broadened, intensified, made more rapid in movement, and in its many spheres of activity people are facing not only increasing opportunities, but greater responsibilities and dangers. There is not a truth that is not attacked and opposed by new devices of error; there is no light but may be clouded by false theories; no right but is contended by deceptive wrong:

We see the workings of contending powers,
The darkness and the glorious light we see.

Knowledge, understanding, clear comprehension, based upon pure devotion to God; singleness of purpose in unreserved consecration to his word; and out of such basic intent, maintained daily by constant touch with Christ in spirit, is the course marked out for his people; and unto such course are they commended and enjoined and repeatedly admonished.

The truth has struggled through the centuries; and it yet struggles to penetrate darkness and to overcome it. The fine words of Lowell express this great conflict in his "Present crisis." He might well have called it "The ever-present crisis:"

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide;
In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side;
Some great cause, God's new Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight,
Parts the goats upon the left hand and the sheep upon the right,
And the choice goes by forever 'twixt that darkness and that light.

Truth forever on the scaffold, Wrong forever on the throne,—
Yet that scaffold sways the future, and behind the dim unknown Standeth God within the shadow, keeping watch above his own.

Then to side with Truth is noble when we share her wretched crust,
Ere her cause bring fame and profit, and 'tis prosperous to be just;
Then it is the brave man chooses, while the coward stands
aside,
Doubting in his abject spirit, till his Lord is crucified.
And the multitude make virtue of the faith they had denied.

Primary Purpose of the Church

Christ did not establish the church merely to provide centers for worship and religious training, important as they are. His purpose was that from the church there should go out those influences that should establish the kingdom of God, which is nothing less than the rule of Christ in the hearts of men.

And so the church from the beginning has been a missionary church, ever seeking to proclaim the Christian message to all men—beginning "in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."—E. Graham Wilson, in The Missionary Review of the World.

Complying with the Gospel Ordinances

By George S. Lincoln

Jesus left the kingdom of heaven and came to the earth on a special mission, which was to teach men what they must do to be saved. He came understanding all about the plan of salvation. He knew all about the everlasting gospel and the principles of the doctrine. He knew exactly what God wanted him to teach, and the very words he was to speak to the people concerning salvation. That all might know this, he said:

I have not spoken of myself, but the Father, which sent me, he gave me a commandment what I should say, and what I should speak. The Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him.

So all that he said and did was in perfect harmony with the will of God. Again he said: "I came to do the will of him who sent me." So all his teachings and doings pleased God.

Realizing the useless effort of men to be saved in their own way, in churches of their own building, he said, "I will build my church," and he chose officers and established them in his church. He taught them all about the gospel, the doctrine, and church organization. He ordained them, and sent them out to preach, and this is what he said to them:

Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.—Mark 16: 15, 16.

Who said that? Jesus, the righteous. Who told him to say it? God, our heavenly Father. Those are the statements of the highest authority in the universe. No man can dodge the issue. The only way to be saved is to believe the gospel and be baptized. No one can be saved in any other way. The statement is clear, plain, and positive. There will not be one single exception made to it. It is God's law concerning his church and kingdom. No man can ever become so important that God will make an exception for him. Any man can be saved by complying with this law, or he can ignore it, if he wishes, and as the consequence, be damned.

This is strong language; but it is the language of Jesus, and the language of God. What is the use of man's questioning it, or arguing about it? God and Jesus knew the full meaning of it when they uttered it, and to make it more positive Jesus said:

He that rejecteth me and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him at the last day.

There is no other way to enter the church or kingdom than to accept the gospel and be baptized. No earnest effort man can make; no religious desire; no other enthusiastic endeavor will save him. It is only by complying with God's terms that he will be saved. Jesus lived and died to establish this fact. If it were not true, his life and teachings were a failure. He knew that only a few would believe and obey, and he said, "Straight is the gate that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it."

Let us now take another view of the matter. Jesus, talking with Nicodemus, said to him, "Ye must be born again." Then they evidently discussed the statement, and Jesus, using the strongest words he could, replied to him, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3: 5.

There is another positive statement. Who made it? Jesus. Who told him to say it? God. We do not care if all the preachers on earth unite in saying man can enter without complying with this law. We stand with God and Christ and most solemnly declare that not one single soul can ever "enter into the kingdom of God" unless he be "born of water and of the Spirit." This is a repetition of the same thing, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned."

The chief feature of the gospel of Christ is to show men how to be saved, and that they must be saved in God's way. Now listen to what Paul says:

The gospel which was preached of me is not after man, for I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

And he knowing there was no other way to be saved, said to the members of the church at Galatia:

Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.—Galatians 1: 8, 9.

He knew that believing the gospel, and being baptized, and receiving the Holy Ghost, were the leading features of salvation, and that man could be saved in no other way. And realizing this, he virtually says, Curses on the man, or even the angel, who dares preach any other gospel.

"The principles of the doctrine of Christ" as enumerated by Paul, are faith, repentance, baptisms, laying on of hands, resurrection, and eternal judgment. And Jesus says concerning it: "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me." The doctrine that Christ preached was God's doctrine; and John, knowing the great importance of that doctrine in the salvation of men, says:

If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him Godspeed; for he that biddeth him Godspeed is partaker of his evil deeds.—2 John 1: 10, 11.

John gives the warning for us to have nothing to do with any other doctrine, or anyone who preaches any other doctrine. The doctrine of Christ is the only one that will save, and woe to the man who preaches any other. His deeds are evil.

One of the grandest features of being saved is the privilege of being resurrected in the first resurrection. Only the redeemed ones will be raised at that time. All others will sleep until the end of the millennium, a period of one thousand years. Paul, speaking to the saints, says:

If the spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies, by his Spirit that dwelleth in you.—Romans 8: 11.

If that Spirit dwelleth in you? But suppose it does not? Then you will not come forth at the first resurrection. Oh, what a loss to the children of men! During the millennium the saints will mingle with the angels and all the holy ones, and even enter the presence of God and Christ. Now we ask, Who will have that Spirit dwelling in them? And how can they get it? Peter preached the gospel on the day of Pentecost, to the religious people gathered there and said to them:

Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

No one will ever receive that gift, the Holy Ghost, except those who believe the gospel and are baptized. There is no other way provided for receiving it. And even then it is not given except through the ordinance of the laying on of hands. God will not make an exception for anyone. Paul says, "It is the Spirit that giveth life," and that is received only through the ordinances of the gospel. Peter also says, baptism is "for the remission of sins." There is no other way for man to have his sins remitted.

Is it any wonder that Jesus, understanding all these things, said to the people that he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned? He never said that those who did not believe would go to hell. That is another proposition. None but the wicked will go there; but many who do not go there will not be saved in the kingdom of God.

After Jesus was resurrected, he said to his disciples:

All power is given unto me both in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you.—Matthew 28: 18-20.

All power was given unto him. Then he could have made any changes he wished in regard to baptism, but he made no changes at all. This statement still stands, and always will, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned."

I once heard one of the leading revivalists of the world make a statement before thousands of listeners, in which he said, "Some people worry over what they must do to be saved. They think they must do something. Let me tell you, there is nothing for you to do. Jesus has done it all. All you have to do is to believe, and you will be saved. We can save you. Here. Now."

Oh, what a tragedy! And how fearful may be the results of such false teaching! The Spirit of God never inspired such utterances.

Are You Getting Ready?

By Poul S. Nielsen

Whither shall I go from thy Spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in hell, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, Surely the darkness shall cover me; even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee; but the night shineth as the day; the darkness and the light are both alike to thee.—Psalms 139: 7-12.

When King David penned this poem, he without doubt wrote down one of the greatest truths found in Holy Writ. Wherever we go, wherever we take up our abode, we can not get away from the presence of our heavenly Father. If we shall travel to the loneliest island of the seven seas, go down in the deepest mine ever made, he is still there, ready to help us if we need any help whatsoever. If the sin of darkness shall cover us, if we can but pray, though it is only, "Lord, help us," he will surely help.

God Denies No One

He has never forsaken anyone who needed help. A good many of us are very much inclined to forget him in the days of our prosperity, but let hard times come in our lives and we are always ready to ask for his assistance. But, dear reader, can you really blame God for not answering our prayers if we only want our will and forget to say in mouth and heart: Thy will, not ours, be done.

It is of no use to point the finger of scorn at some brother or sister, or for that matter at anyone, be he white or black, or any other color or race or creed, for God will surely not approve of any such thing. All of us ought to be very careful, not acting, consciously or not, like the Pharisee mentioned in Luke 18: 11, and thinking just because we belong to our church we are a little better than our neighbor who has not received the light so far.

For it is written that many are called but few are chosen, and would it not be too bad if we should be the stumblingblock in the way of ourselves or perhaps our fellow man, to come unto the Lord? We are all apt to make mistakes, but we ought to have sense enough not to commit the same blunder or sin twice in succession. It is of no use to ask for forgiveness and then turn right around and repeat the same sin. We will be forgiven all right, but perhaps we might have to go through some greater trials next time, and if we can overcome one sin it is much easier to fight the next one. It goes with this like staying home from church. The first time it does bother us; the second time it is a little easier to stay at home; and by and by we do not even need an excuse to stay at home. After a while it will take a special effort to get us to go to the house of the Lord.

A Call for Every Man's Effort

A great consolation it ought to be for us to know that God is always watching over us everywhere, always ready to help if we will only do our part. Some one might say that he has not anything to do except to go to church on Sunday, sing a hymn or two, listen to the sermon, and help a little when the collection plate comes around. Forget it, brother; in the army of God there can be no such thing as a misfit. Either you are a worker or a shirker.

True enough, you might not be called to work in the service in the church; we can not all do that. But you can so live your life that it will be a credit to the church. How many times does the church have to work under a handicap or under suspicion because some member did something that cast reflection on himself and thereby hurt the church's reputation in his neighborhood!

God is everywhere, and I many times wonder if we would do many things we are now doing if he were visible to us. Whenever a question comes up in our lives we ought to put the question to ourselves: What would the Lord do if he were in my place? Sometimes we might have to go against public opinion; but remember that public opinion is not always right. Sometimes we might have to lose a friend in so doing. But if he is a true friend, he will sooner or later want to be your friend again.

The church has been very active in the last few years, but I am satisfied that it will be almost like nothing to the activity of the next few years. The world is just like a sleeping volcano; one of these days it will break loose, talks of peace will be forgotten, wars between nations on a scale never witnessed before will come, creeds and beliefs will fall, and men's hearts will fail them. Then the question will be if we are ready to sow the seed for the last great harvest of the Lord. The Lord have mercy on us if we are not.

A Time of Religious Evolution

If we will only read the signs of the times we can not help but see that many of the other religions of the world are in a changing time. They are trying to put into effect many of the teachings that our church has preached for years, and some of them are going to the other extreme and letting worldly things creep into their services. It is not too soon for all Latter Day Saints to prepare for greater service, for when the time comes the Master will need many helpers, both young and old, some in this country and some in other countries all over the world.

And then we must not forget that what the psalmist sung in days of old is still true; always was and always will be. No man has ever given too much for the work of the church, for how can we repay God for what he has done for us on the cross of Calvary, when he gave his only begotten Son for the salvation of mankind, that we might live a life more abundantly and have a hope of a life to come on the other side of the grave, there to live for evermore in a place where sorrows are unknown.

Our faith, to be serviceable, must become a high tower in the midst of the plain, salt to savor the flatness of boredom of modern life, light amid the darkness of our muddled morality—this is the task of qualitative evangelism. Its text is the plain word of Jesus from the Sermon on the Mount: "Unless your righteousness shall exceed that of the scribes and Pharisees (the current standard), ye shall by no means enter into the kingdom of heaven. . . . Ye have heard that it was said . . . but I say unto you . . . If ye love those who love you, what reward have ye? Do not the publicans the same? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others?" More than others! That's the margin, to be expressed in the unselfish service of the second mile and the charitable attitude of understanding and forgiveness, until the Christian becomes a spiritual Saul, "head and shoulders above the crowd," a marked man, above the average, by reason of his margin of goodness and way of life. —Samuel H. Miller.

REUNION NEWS

Northern Wisconsin-Minnesota Reunion

By William E. Shakespeare

The Northern Wisconsin-Minnesota reunion was held at Chetek, Wisconsin, from June 27 to July 6. The reunion this year was a very successful one, even though the group of Saints was not as large as the year previous.

We were fortunate in having with us Sister Lydia Wight, Apostle John F. Garver, Bishop G. Leslie Delapp, and Bishop C. J. Hunt of special workers, Charles J. Smith, W. E. Shakespeare, and Vernon Lundeen of the missionary force, and others of the local ministry.

Sister Lydia Wight was asked by the reunion committee to have charge of the educational activities of the reunion, and under her direction a fine program of work was carried out. The class work was the outstanding feature of the reunion.

Brother Garver gave us each day some fine lectures on the subject, "Christian ministry." Sister Wight had a fine class, her subject being "Religious education in the home." Brother Hunt gave good lessons on the question of "Stewardships," and Bishop DeLapp during his class period lectured on the subject, "The social problems of today."

There were four class periods each day and a goodly interest was taken in them. The class work was a success, reaching a climax during the closing class periods when the Spirit seemed to rest upon everyone.

Junior church work and the recreational activities were ably cared for by Vernon Lundeen and his helpers, chief of whom was Sister Jenette Johnson. She did fine work with the little tots and rendered valuable service to the reunion.

The music of the reunion was ably cared for by Sister John Watkins, of Minneapolis. Anthems and special songs were provided at the preaching services and a song service was had each evening before the preaching.

We should not fail to mention the work of Wesley Elvin, who acted as official bookkeeper and office man and with that smile that will not come off was found busy all the time. We could not get along without "Wes."

Then we had with us one of Graceland's young men who helped in various ways to make the reunion a success, Paul Utneher. Brother Utneher had charge of the stand and helped to keep the crowd cool and sweet. We needed Paul to make the reunion complete.

The evening of July Fourth, the alumni, with present and prospective students of Graceland College, gave a splendid program which well depicted the developments of personality and life at the church school. It was enjoyed by all.

W. E. Shakespeare was associated with Brother Garver in presiding over the reunion, and was kept busy looking after the needs of everyone present.

It was decided to hold another joint reunion next year and everyone is looking forward with anticipation with a new slogan, "Forward to 1931 and beyond."

The spirit of the reunion was excellent, and Brother Garver says it was the best one he ever attended at Chetek. He seemed to be especially blessed as he delivered his last sermon on Sunday afternoon to a goodly crowd that almost filled the auditorium. His theme was "The challenge of the New Century," and we were reminded of the development of the work and growth of the church and what it means to us.

Six people were baptized and four children were blessed during the reunion.

The church owns a beautiful reunion ground in the north part of Chetek on the shore of Chetek Lake, which has one hundred miles of shore line. On the grounds are a large well-seated pavilion, a dining hall, and a well-equipped kitchen where meals were served at a low cost. The reunion organization has also sleeping equipment, a number of tents, and a large missionary cottage, and is prepared to accommodate many guests. The Saints of Chetek contributed liberally to the work of preparing for comfort of the Saints.

Owen Sound Reunion

By Alvin L. Dobson

The Saints' reunion at Port Elgin was attended by many from different parts of Ontario and the United States. A local paper printed the following account:

"July 8.—The reunion of the Latter Day Saints church, which convened at Port Elgin from June 29 to July 4, was a success from every standpoint. The number in attendance at the commencement of the week was not so large as anticipated, but during the week many came in from different parts of Ontario and the United States, and by the last Sunday there was a crowd which nearly filled the church to capacity.

"There was class work in charge of Elder C. B. Woodstock and Elder John Blackmore, of Independence, Missouri. The balance of the afternoon was given to recreation, and at eight o'clock in the evening there was preaching with the exception of Wednesday evening, when there was a program under the direction of George T. Furness, of Owen Sound.

"The speakers at the reunion were: Elders John Blackmore and C. B. Woodstock, Independence, Missouri; Stanley Phillips, Sarnia; C. Mottashed, Detroit; Elmo Boos, Pontiac; Joseph Yager, missionary to Society Islands; Percy Farrow, Cleveland, Ohio; and Benton Belrose, Owen Sound.

"On the last Sunday a prayer service was held at eight o'clock in the morning for the young people, and at 9.30 there was communion service.

"A number drove several hundred miles to attend this reunion, and no doubt had to make a sacrifice to get here, but they felt well repaid for coming. This is the fourth reunion held at Port Elgin, and is considered the best yet. It will be determined at the fall conference, which will be held in Grand Valley, where the next reunion will be held."

In addition to the various branches in Owen Sound District represented at the reunion there were visitors present from Cleveland, Ohio; Detroit, Flint, Coleman, Port Huron, and Pontiac, Michigan; Listowel, Stratford, London, Seaford, Vingham, and Sarnia, Ontario.

Spokane Reunion

By Millicent Kinney

Spokane district reunion, held June 20 to 29 at Liberty Lake, was a decided success. It meant much in the way of progress to the Saints of the district.

The program of the reunion was well planned, and every hour of each day was occupied. Reveille came at 6 o'clock in the morning; morning devotion and flag salute, 6.40; breakfast, 7; prayer meeting, 8 to 9. Class in "Doctrinal fundamentals" was taught by Elder A. C. Martin from 9 to 10; class in "Missionary administration," by Elder Alma Andrews, 10 to 11; class in "Priesthood," by Apostle J. F. Curtis from 11 to 12. Dinner was served at 12; rest in camp, 1 to 2; class in "Keeping fit," by Sister Rachel Porter, 2 to 3; recreation and swimming under direction of A. C. Martin, 3 to 5. Brother Floyd Bond, of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, had charge of the Boy Scouts. Supper came at 6, and from 6.30 to 7.30 there was a class in "Art of devotion," taught by Patriarch Richard Baldwin. Song service and preaching lasted from 7.30 to 9; camp fire and program on the beach, 9 to 10. Taps at 10 o'clock.

Each morning from 9 to 12 Sister Baldwin, with the assistance of Sister Gladys Fout and Sister Alice Kinne, conducted the junior class work. Sister Baldwin is expert in this line of work, and her services were much appreciated.

All services were well attended, and a spirit of peace and harmony reigned.

The meals were well planned and were served in an efficient way. Brother and Sister Guy Crum were responsible for the success of this part of the reunion, and deserve much credit for their work. Over forty-five hundred meals were served.

A baby health conference conducted by a county health nurse and County Doctor Newman, was held Saturday morning, June 28. Twenty-eight fine babies and small children were examined.

The business session of the conference was held Saturday, June 28, at two o'clock in the afternoon. Saturday evening a beautiful play, "The most precious gift," was given by the young people of the Department of Recreation and Expression. The characters were: The minister, Lloyd Whiting; the Church, Margaret Kenny; guardian angels, Gertrude Story, Carline Everoth; wise maiden, Gladys Silver; foolish maiden, Rachel Story; three friends, Jane Story, Joyce Kinney, Elizabeth Johnston; mother, Lutie Davis; father, Guy Crum; Mrs. Davis, Ethel Johnston; Tommy Davis, Junior Crum; youth, Glen Fordham. The play was directed by Sister Elba Crum and Sister Goldie Sage.

A beautiful baptismal service was conducted Sunday afternoon, seven precious souls entering the church. Those baptized were, James Jones, Elvira Kennedy, Clay Kinne, Ardis Hart, Laurence Carter, Dorothy Walters, and Gordon Nelson.

Over three hundred persons registered for the reunion, and there were thirty-eight tents in the tent city. Brother Henry Kinney was appointed camp policeman, and his was an easy task, as all were well behaved and orderly.

Every hour was full and everyone was busy. The reunion was enjoyable and profitable, and all are looking forward to the next gathering of this kind.

Reunions in the Northland

By J. F. Garver

July 12.—It has been my privilege, with Bishop G. L. DeLapp, to attend the reunions at Logan, North Dakota, and Chetek, Wisconsin, the latter concluding July 6. These reunions, if not so largely attended as some, were without exception the best I have attended in these parts.

Depressing economic conditions, together no doubt with expense for attendance at the Centennial Conference in April, cut in on the attendance. The spirit of the people with us was of the best, however; and the desire to learn and to help in the cause was above what I have before found in these reunions.

Charles J. Smith, of the missionary force, was with us in both reunions, W. E. Shakespeare and Vernon Lundeen at Chetek. These, with local workers, particularly Sister Lydia Wight assigned to Chetek, rendered every assistance in making the reunions meaningful to Saints and friends, and profitable to the cause.

Outstanding in these gatherings were the leadings of the Spirit making for unification of thought and coordination of effort, from pulpit and in class teachings. At times we approached pentecostal moments. I do not speak here of what we know as the outward gifts, so moving sometimes for the moment only. I refer more particularly to the

Flint, Michigan

From Flint Tidings

Sunday, July 13, will be observed as rural Sunday, at the Newall Street Church. The 9.45 o'clock service in the morning will be conducted especially for members of Flint Branch who live outside the city limits, either on farms or in adjacent towns. All rural Saints are urged to make a special effort to be present.

The birthday party for all local members of the church born in the month of July will be held Monday evening, July 14, at the Newall Street Church. The program will consist of music, singing, readings, games, and refreshments.

The service of baptism which was to have been held June 8, had to be postponed until the afternoon of July 20. We are praying by that date there will be still more who will get the consent of their minds to step out for Christ.

Sunday afternoon, July 6, the union quarterly sacramental service was administered at the Newall Street Church. The Saints prepared by prayer to make the hour the most outstanding of the year thus far.

Services regularly held in Flint are as follows: Sunday: Unified morning service; evening devotional; communion first Sunday of the month 9.45 a. m.; young people's devotional, third Sunday, 9.45 a. m. Week day meetings: Prayer meeting, Wednesday evening; young people's recreation, Friday evening. Choir and orchestra rehearsals are suspended through July and August.

Two weddings were solemnized at the Newall Street Church by the pastor Saturday, June 7. Robert LeRoy Wheeler and Miss Mary Louise VunCannon, both of Flint, were married at ten o'clock in the morning, being attended by Carl VunCannon and Mrs. P. H. Benteske. And Leon M. L. Hunter and Miss Mary Brodie Miller, both of Flint, were married at three in the afternoon, being attended by Earl Cunningham and Jean C. Miller. Both couples expect to make their home in Flint after a short honeymoon. They have the best wishes of their many friends.

On our sick list are found Sister Lizzie Bordner, who is in the Hurley Hospital, having undergone an operation for cancer. Sister Janis Savage was recently operated upon at Hurley Hospital for appendicitis. Brother Henry McBride is still taking treatment at Hurley Hospital, having been there for about a month. Sister Hazel Moore, who has been at Hurley for almost three months, following an auto accident, is slowly improving, and hopes to be able to return to her home at Vassar, Michigan, sometime around the first of this month. Sister Grace Chapman is still at Hurley receiving treatment for dropsy. Sister Edith Tree is confined to her bed at the home of Brother and Sister Burns, having been ill for several months. For the past few weeks, gifts of faith and knowledge and wisdom and discernment, and to that fine illumination that enables preacher and teacher to vision and the people to respond in one harmonious advance into the higher realms of latter-day philosophy and aspiration.

Personally I am highly grateful for blessings vouchsafed in these reunions. I have been lifted up, encouraged, and renewed in zeal. And I did stand in need of such upbuilding. To the Saints so appreciatively responding, to my associate workmen so willingly sharing in the task, as well as to God be the praise.

Brother Robert Leighton, father of Elder Albert Leighton, has been in ill health.

Lester Gerald Hester, five-months-old son of Brother and Sister Elwood Hester, died June 13, of a complication of diseases. The funeral was conducted by the pastor at the home June 14. Interment was near Traverse City, Michigan.

A beautiful and impressive service was conducted the morning of June 8 in which the following babies received the blessing of the elders: Clara Merrie Williams, Mitchell Alton Williams, Lois Ann Emiry, Iris Jean Philippi, Charles James Philippi, Lawrence Ronald Emmel, David William Lawrence, Rogene Fay Fultz, Glen Richard Clark, Howard Eugene Turrell, Jacqueline Joy Palmer, Carlton Glen Bush, Dorothea Louise Leighton, Robert James Jenkins, and Vera Jean Packer. The blessings were pronounced by Elders Fred Z. Harder, W. E. Alldred, Emory D. Fultz, Allen C. Pohly, and the pastor.

Brother Louis Kuhn has been visiting home for a couple of weeks before leaving for Camden, New Jersey, where he will work for the R. C. A. Victor Radio Company. He received his B. S. degree in chemical engineering from Ames, Iowa, this summer. Fred Kuhn received his bachelor's degree from Michigan Western Teachers' College at Kalamazoo this summer.

Brother and Sister Albert Leighton have a baby girl born May 22. They have named her Dorothea Louise.

The church has been lovely every Sunday with flowers and plants furnished by the Mount Morris Flower Shop. Real credit is due Brother and Sister Blodgett for their fine taste and good work.

A play, "The three Pegs," was given at Newall and Baltimore churches the middle of June by the Temple Builders.

The joint reunion of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana and Detroit Districts promises this year to be better in every way than it has ever before been. It will last from July 25 to August 3, and there are many plans to give the Saints spiritual, mental, and physical benefit. The scene of the reunion will be laid at Indian Lake, and among general church workers who will be present are Apostle D. T. Williams, Patriarch G. T. Griffiths, Elder E. E. Closson, and Sister Closson. Special musical events have been announced by Sister Louise Evans.

A Centennial Summer Camp for young people is planned for Indian Lake, Michigan, July 18 to 25, to care chiefly for the young people living within a three-hundred-mile radius of that place. This is the first year for a camp at Indian Lake, and the program will be quite similar to that carried out at the boys' and girls' camp in Nauvoo, early in July. There will be plenty of fun, as well as periods of instruction and worship. This camp will last only seven days, but many will want to remain for the reunion which follows immediately. Some of the camp leaders will be present to supervise the young people's activities throughout the entire reunion. For further information write the Camp Director, Department of Religious Education, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Fargo, North Dakota

Bungalow Church, 1423 First Avenue, South

The North Dakota Reunion, held near Minot, closed Sunday, June 29. A number from Fargo attended, and reported a pleasant, spiritual reunion not so largely attended as of former years.

Born recently to Sister Fred Wiedling and husband a baby girl, and to Brother and Sister Ammon Stowell a baby boy. This infant survived only a few days.

The Temple Builders gave a party at Oak Grove Park July 1 in honor of Vera Stowell, it being her birthday.

The Sunday school gave an appropriate program at the Sunday school session on Mother's Day.

Saints welcome back to this district Elder C. J. Smith, missionary. He returned from General Conference full of zeal and enthusiasm in the gospel work. May 23 he gave a fine sermon on the subject "Except ye are one, ye are not mine." He stated that we must adjust ourselves and work purposefully, unitedly. If the Saints can not work together, they can not be together in glory. We must work on terms of understanding for the development of all.

Saints were also pleased to see Elder Swen Swenson back in North Dakota. He has preached several good sermons of late and his faith is strong as of old.

The rally day planned for June 15 was postponed on account of smallpox in the homes of some of the members. All have now recovered and plans are being made for the day to be observed in the near future.

Velda Mae Konietzka, daughter of Sister John Konietzka and husband, was blessed at the close of Sunday school, May 25, by Elders C. J. Smith and Thomas Leitch.

The Recreation and Expression Department gave an ice cream social at West Fargo the evening of May 29 on the lawn of Brother Lewis Spillman's home.

Saints were recently saddened by the sudden death of Brother Woodburn Freeman, a fine young man. The deceased met with an accident while diving at Lake Lizzie, Minnesota, Sunday, June 22. He was rushed to a Fargo hospital by ambulance, but passed away June 23. The funeral was held from Hanson Funeral Home June 26, Elder C. J. Smith officiating. His text was Psalms 23, and his sermon was comforting. The deceased leaves his parents, two sisters, two brothers, and a host of friends to mourn. Interment was in Springvale Cemetery.

Elder Thomas Leitch went to Blue Grass, North Dakota, June 1, to officiate at the marriage of Sister Ruth Helmenstein to Mr. Carl Trende at the home of the bride's parents.

As Saints of God let us learn to enjoy the sweet art of working together, share in heartaches, in joys, sorrows, and all experiences. Then will we have part in the redemption of Zion.

From America to Australia

By J. H. N. Jones

We began our return journey from the Centennial Conference May 5. Brothers C. F. Ellis and John Blackmore furnished cars and piloted us from Independence to Kansas City. Sister Kennedy accompanied Sister Jones and me.

We traveled by the Santa Fe route, passing through Kansas, New Mexico, Arizona, to southern California. At Los Angeles we had half a day to wait, so we sought out the church and were fortunate in finding the Women's Department in session. In the absence of the pastor Sister Burton showed us over the fine church, and later Brother Burton drove us about the city.

That evening we left for San Francisco, arriving early the next morning. There we were met by Sister Holling, who entertained us during our stay, and Brother Holling motored us to many places of interest including the Leland Stanford University grounds.

We attended on Sunday a banquet given in honor of Brother John W. Rushton at Park-Presidio Branch, and spoke a few words of our impressions of America. Also we gave one blessing. Left May 14 on the Tahiti for Australia. Sister Butts motored us to the ship, where we were joined by Sister Kennedy, who had been staying with relatives.

A few of the Saints came to say good-bye and we were soon passing through the Golden Gate and heading southwest for Tahiti. As we journeyed over leagues of blue water, our minds turned back to the voyage of the gospel boat, the Evanelia, with her faithful skipper and crew who braved the perilous journey in the small craft.

Favorable and cool weather was had to Tahiti, which we reached in ten days, arriving on Saturday morning. We were met at the pier by Brother Farthing, Brother and Sister Ballard and baby, and some of the native Saints. A fine chicken lunch was prepared by Sister "Ray" and after that "Stan" took us to the church farm about three miles out. We were timed to speak at the church at three o'clock in the afternoon and catch the ship at 4.30.

Starting the return journey, we were dismayed to find that our car could not be induced to start. In a panic we started to walk. Soon we hailed a car full of natives. They stopped, made room for us, and dropped us somewhere near the church. We finally found the building but were too late to speak. To our surprise we found that Brother Farthing and "Stan" had succeeded in starting the car and had arrived at the church before us. "Ray" was left there and the other returned to look for us.

The native Saints were gathered for the meeting which was not held, and they had brought as offerings fruit and shell necklaces. These they carried along as they accompanied us to our cabin in the ship. How full of love for the elders are these natives and how deeply we appreciated their tokens of brotherly affection! May God bless these kind-hearted people and also the elders and sisters who so nobly sacrifice their lives in the interest of the church and the islands.

On time we sailed for Raratonga, an island nearer New Zealand, which we reached on Monday morning and stopped till Tuesday. While the ship was taking on a cargo of oranges and bananas the passengers explored the resources and scenery of this beautiful Pacific isle. Some of us motored round it a distance of twenty miles for a fare of five shillings. The natives here seem a clean and strong race, and their homes if at times primitive are clean and tidy and their villages orderly and well laid out.

Prohibition is here in force and its benefits are manifest. The young men and women are apparently modest and well behaved. Their problem is what is to be done with their increasing population. There are now three thousand on the island.

Weighing anchor Tuesday morning, we soon ran into a heavy ocean swell and a day later into a gale which delayed our ship and depleted the dining tables, my two companions being among the absentees.

During the early hours of the night the vessel was stopped to snug down for the storm and some were so frightened that they took down their life belts from the racks. Fortunately, however, nothing serious occurred.

The wind and sea moderating, we arrived in Wellington, New Zealand, on Monday, after dropping Saturday out of our calendar. Here the ship tied up for two days, and the passengers shivered in the keen New Zealand cold while trying to see the sights to while away the time.

From San Francisco to New Zealand we had few passengers, but they were very sociable, and the voyage was made more pleasant by participation in deck games played with the spirit of real sportsmanship.

At Wellington we took on a large number of passengers and sailed at eleven o'clock at night for Sydney, which was the last water section of our homeward journey.

The Tasman Sea, the last stage of our sea journey, treated us kindly, being very smooth. This enabled us to reach Sydney Heads at daybreak on Sunday. Officials of the church and relatives were on the wharf to meet us, and we were soon addressing the Balmain Sunday school on our American experiences. We also spoke in the evening.

We are all well and expect to take train to Melbourne on Wednesday. We extend to our many American brothers and friends our greetings and best wishes.

We Must Obey the Perfect Law

June 30.—We are thankful to tell you that Scranton, Kansas, Saints have during the last two weeks had Missionary W. A. Smith here to revive our souls with the wonderful words of life which the Spirit gave utterance. All were ready to receive his counsel.

It is more than six years since we have advertised a meeting, so it seemed that we had quite a nap. But we now open our eyes to see the glory of God's laws revealed by our worthy brother. We need a minister for Christ here for a few weeks to open the eyes of the blind and call sinners to repentance. May God bless all of his sincere and consecrated helpers. It is a fine thing to hear the gospel preached as it was in former years with its gifts and blessings.

My heart rejoices when I think of God's loving kindness to his children. It shows that he has not changed and that his law shall not pass away. Let us, in return for his goodness to us, strive to keep his commandments. This we can do only when we are loving the Father and our fellow men. We must not forget that He has said that he who neglects to teach men one of the least of the commandments, shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven. Let us exercise care that we conduct ourselves so as to keep near him, living pure, upright lives.

The merciful Father abominates a proud look, a lying tongue, hands that shed innocent blood, hearts which devise wicked imaginations, feet which are swift to run to mischief, and a false witness who speaks lies and sows discord among the brothers. The Lord loves nothing that is evil. But love and righteousness belong to our God, and if we love him as we say we do, we will learn and keep his law.

God's law is perfect and will make of all who obey it perfect men, holy men in the sight of God. This we need, for without holiness, we are told, no man can see the Lord. Let us press on toward the mark of our high calling which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. May he bless all and righteousness prevail upon the earth.

JAMES BAILLIE.

The Graceland Religious Educational Alumni Scholarship

By Mrs. H. E. Winegar

Those who were in attendance at the last business session of the late General Conference will recall the presentation by Brother F. M. McDowell of a scholarship fund in behalf of the Graceland Religious Education Alumni.

A few years ago Graceland welcomed into her halls a number of young men and women who were especially desirous of making further preparation for better service in the church. This became known as the Department of Religious Education of Graceland College.

Just what was achieved of spiritual development and increased value in the lives of these men and women can not be estimated, either in them or those whose lives are touched by their influence. But they, with a feeling of gratitude for having had this opportunity, and a desire to retain friendships between members, decided to organize into a body for mutual helpfulness to each other, the church, and Graceland College.

During General Conference for the past five years this group has met in both a business and social way. It was at one of these meetings that the idea of a scholarship fund was developed. Appreciating deeply the benefits received from experiences at Graceland, they could think of no better way of expressing lasting gratitude than by passing these opportunities on to others.

Only those who zealously labored will know the obstacles met and overcome in the gathering of this their first scholarship fund. As is so often the case in other organizations, many lacked faith in the movement or were not interested and failed to respond, so the burden of the work fell to the few. These loyally supported the leaders, and their goal, the scholarship, was attained. It is to be a revolving fund, and will be added to from time to time, that many may be given the opportunity of preparing for greater service.

A committee has been appointed to select some worthy person to receive the use of it. The raising of another scholarship is one of the definite goals toward which this group is working at the present time.

Their slogan might well be "Graceland Forever," for the ideal of each is to carry the message and encourage every young person eligible to attend Graceland. Since many of these "Religious Ed's" are serving as pastors and missionaries for the church, their chances for personal contact with young people are greater than they otherwise might be.

The spirit of this organization is, "Someone opened the doors of opportunity to us; let us open it to others. Onward to 1932 with another scholarship!"

Denver, Colorado

The warm weather of the past two weeks in Denver has somewhat reduced attendance at the church services. The lure of the mountains and their cooling breezes is very strong at this season, and sometimes the weary city dwellers gain strength and vigor and renewed zeal by a day spent amid the glory and grandeur of hill and stream.

The summer usually brings many visitors to Colorado, and we are always glad to welcome them to our services. Brother W. J. Burton and family, from California, dropped in Wednesday, June 18, and attended prayer service. Their testimonies were much enjoyed. Brother and Sister Briggs, from Goodland, Kansas, spent a short time in Denver last week. Elder B. M. Anderson, of Omaha, Nebraska, worshipped with us Sunday, June 22.

Brother Byron Barker, his wife and three daughters of Independence, are spending the summer in Denver; they expect to return to Independence in the fall in order that the daughters may continue their school work there. We hope that by that time they will like Denver so well they will decide to stay here.

Elder J. L. Randall and Brother Glen H. Foster, with their families, from Ludington, Michigan, have come to Denver, expecting to remain if they can make satisfactory business arrangements. We sincerely hope they will be able to do this.

Sunday, June 29, was Children's Day in our branch. A very interesting program was given at the morning service. Two baby girls were blessed, Eloise Ethel Murie and Eleanor Ethel Jones. Four young people were baptized by the pastor: Steven Newton, Charleen Britt, Virginia Newsome, and Stanley Salyards.

It is always a great pleasure to witness the pride and enjoyment of the little ones and the older boys and girls as they sing their songs and speak their pieces on this day which belongs especially to them. Their happy, beaming faces are truly an inspiration, bringing to their elders courage and hope for the future as well as a deep sense of responsibility. By their purity and innocence and implicit faith we are reminded forcibly of the words of the Master who loved little children: "Except ye become as a little child, ye can not enter the kingdom of heaven."

The sermon in the evening by the pastor on the subject, "The faith of our children," was full of good thoughts. The young men's quartet, composed of Fred and Farr Kemp, Glen Holmes, and Burrell Shupe, sang "The little brown church in the vale." Glau Smith and Everett Shupe sang a duet. Both numbers were beautifully rendered. Attendance at both services was very good.

Dunlap, Iowa

June 26.—A fitting program was given on Children's Day. The children always seem eager to do their part, and they were especially so on this their day. When we stop to consider, are we not all children? Many of us are, shall I say, of a larger physical growth only, or have we grown in the grace and knowledge of the Lord and Savior as well?

The new members baptized Decision Day are doing good work and feel happy that they are privileged to enjoy the blessings that come to those who love and serve.

The women held an ice cream social last Saturday, the proceeds to be turned into the prospective building fund.

Sacrifice week was entered into by fasting and prayer, and while our small mission may not help the church financially as we would like to do, when this period of sacrifice is history, we hope to have received strength to offer to the church the best that is ours, that henceforth we may seek to be real laborers together with the divine Head.

The young people of Missouri Valley, Logan, Woodbine, and Dunlap have organized for recreational activities during the summer, and report some very enjoyable gatherings. Brother Lyle Winans, recreational leader, is much interested in his work.

Brother Joseph Lane was with us a couple of days recently. His presence is an inspiration, as he always has that to say which encourages to higher living, and although nearing the three score and twenty milestone he is able to drive his car wherever he desires, and many people are blessed by his ministrations.

Alexander, Kansas

June 28.—It has been one year since there was a news report from this branch. This is not because of a lack of interest but on account of lingering illness and affliction. Sister Vida Teeters returned home from Graceland in October after five weeks there, because of the illness and two severe operations of her mother, Sister John A. Teeters. The sickness lasted ten months, during which time Vida remained at home, doing the work and caring for her mother. She will re-enter Graceland in September. While at home Vida took up the study of the violin, and did remarkably well, so well, in fact, that she began teaching some of the boys and girls of the branch, Archie Stephens, Clarence Keatley, Lois and Hazel Teeters, and Viola Boese. All of these play the violin at church services and most of them have had only six months of study and practice. We feel that Sister Vida has been an instrument in His hands in creating the local orchestra of six, to help in church services.

Branch officers for this year are: Pastor, J. A. Teeters; secretary, Vida Teeters; organist, Sister John Teeters; treasurer, Peter Schaben; branch solicitor, Peter Boese. Sunday school officers are: Superintendent, Sister Elsie Boese; assistant, J. A. Teeters; secretary and treasurer, Lois Teeters; recreational and expressional director, Vida Teeters.

The young children, directed by Vida Teeters, gave a Mother's Day program and a program on Children's Day. On the latter occasion Maxine Stephens and Fern Boese were baptized by the pastor.

This spring we lost the shepherd of our flock, Brother A. C. Silvers, the General Conference sending him to a district in the East, and no one has been sent to take his place. We miss his help and greatly need someone with us. We hope that the general church will find it possible to send us another worker before many days are gone.

Six from this branch attended the General Conference. All enjoyed it. The international program especially appealed to our number, also the pageant and the oratorio, The Course of Time.

A few days ago Glenster Schaben was married to Mabel Bondurant.

We hope to see our branch very busy. May God help us to be doers of the word and not hearers only.

We send greetings to those who recently crossed the great deep, and wish them God's blessings and watchcare while they are away.

Eagle City, Oklahoma

June 29.—This little branch is in sorrow. Sister Clara Smoot passed away June 22. The funeral was held June 24, and the church could not hold the large congregation. Sister Smoot was a brave defender of the gospel and an active, helpful worker. She was one of the first members of the local Women's Department in 1914 and was baptized in 1917. She was the wife of William A. Smoot, who, with two sons, survives her.

June 5 the Women's Department had as guests Calumet and Canton locals. Dinner was served in the grove near the church. A short program, visiting, and quilting completed an enjoyable day. This was the last time Sister Smoot met with us.

Children's Day was one of quiet rejoicing and left encouragement to all. Sunday school came at 10 a. m., basket dinner at the reunion grounds, baptizing at 2.30 p. m., one of the junior girls entering the kingdom. In the evening there occurred a short program, confirmation, the blessing of a little boy, and a sermon by Elder Lemuel Dyke. Canton Saints met with us all day.

West Kennebec Branch

Machias, Maine

June 30.—Elder Newman Wilson, of Jonesport, has held meetings here for the past week. Good attendance has been had at all times, encouraging and helping the few members who are striving to keep the church work moving.

A Sunday school is conducted every Sunday morning, there being good interest. The school is mostly composed of nonmembers nearly all of whom are young people.

MRS. AMELIA L. HOOPER.

Woodbine, Iowa

July 3.—The people of Woodbine Branch are quite busy. Nevertheless they are keeping up with the different church activities. The Department of Recreation and Expression has been meeting once a week with the branches from Logan, Missouri Valley, and Dunlap. They meet at different places for volley ball and kitten ball, taking lunch with them, and closing with song and prayer. Those attending report splendid times.

Elder F. A. Fry and wife are the proud parents of a little son, Edmund Carlyle, who came to gladden their home June 27.

On Friday of last week Brother Fry preached the funeral sermon of John Clausen, a resident of this county for many years. On Monday he preached the funeral sermon of Don Roundy, who was killed in an auto accident a mile south of Dunlap Saturday night. He was the son of George Roundy and wife who live east of Woodbine, and a grandson of Neut Roundy, of Woodbine. Our hearts go out in deep sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends. On Tuesday Brother Fry preached the funeral sermon of Brother Orson Hyde Hildreth, of Persia, a pioneer. He died at Independence, Missouri, and was brought back to Persia for interment.

Sunday, June 8, was Children's Day. The morning was given to the children and some pictures were taken of the different classes in the primary department, also a group picture. At the eleven o'clock hour the children gave a program which was enjoyed by all.

The Blue Birds, of Woodbine Branch, met at the home of Sister Oscar Deal June 17 and then went to the park for a picnic. The girls had prepared a program of songs and readings as a surprise for their monitor, Sister Deal, and when the program was nearly ended Kenneth Townsend came on his bicycle to the park with a box which he presented the leader. It was a framed picture of the Lone Wolf, a gift from the girls. Then they enjoyed the lunch brought by Sister Deal. The afternoon was ended with the singing of "America," and repeating the Lord's prayer. The girls saved their money for Sacrifice Week by refraining from buying candy or ice cream. Although the group is small it has accomplished much.

Charles Young and Archie Deal are home from GraceLand. Archie is working for the Armour Creamery and Charles is working with his father, farming and dairying.

Gladys Chiles taught school the past year south of Woodbine. She is home for the summer expecting to teach again this winter.

Some of our members are away on vacations, and in the homes of others are visitors. We welcome all Saints to our services.

Haileyville, Oklahoma

Sunday, March 16, Elder H. R. Harder, of Wilburton, preached in Haileyville in the morning and at night and spent the afternoon visiting the members. His services were much appreciated.

The following week Elder C. G. Smallwood spent Sunday in this branch, presiding over the eleven o'clock prayer meeting and preaching on "The heavenly vision" in the evening.

Brother and Sister W. C. Fasig, of Independence, Missouri, spent several days in Haileyville on their way to General Conference from Dallas, Texas. These two were the first members baptized at Haileyville, and their visit was much enjoyed.

Five members from here attended the two weeks of Centennial Conference and reported a wonderful time. Two other members were permitted to be present at the sessions of the second week.

We were much pleased that Brother Smallwood was returned to Eastern Oklahoma District. He is indeed welcome in Haileyville.

Brother and Sister S. W. Simmons, of near Holdenville, attended the prayer and sacramental meeting at this place the first of May. Brother Simmons decided to hold a week's meetings, and the preaching was much enjoyed by Saints and neighbors. At the close of the meeting J. J. Winslow and his mother, Nancy Winslow, were baptized. They are fine people and the members are glad to welcome them into the fold.

Beginning May 25 Elders Smallwood and Simmons conducted a two-week meeting here. The former minister baptized three young people, Lorena Cox, Edith Parker, and Martha Jacobia. We welcome them. The preaching was of high order. Five children were blessed during the meeting. Sister Simmons accompanied her husband and offered much help in the singing.

The Sunday school progresses although we are handicapped by need for teachers. Sister Ora Dollins, junior teacher, is attending the Agricultural and Mechanical College at Stillwater this summer, and Martha Hubble, pianist and primary teacher, is spending the summer with her grandmother, Mrs. J. J. Reynolds, at Carthage, Missouri.

Of late some very good prayer meetings have been enjoyed.

Monetville, Ontario

July 3.—Though organized into a branch but recently, we are happy to report to the Herald that we have made considerable progress.

Since the date of the branch organization, May 28, 1930, one new member has been gained. Brother Hugh Montgomery, interested for the past year, was finally convinced and baptized June 23 and confirmed the same afternoon. He does not live in this community, but forty miles away at Warren, Ontario. A few of our brother's friends are interested and drive out to meetings when the roads are passable. We feel that the new member will be influential in bringing more truth seekers to the true gospel.

Our numbers are increased by two more members who formerly lived in Monetville and have returned from Saint Louis, Michigan, Brother and Sister George Mercer. They came into the church while in Michigan and were baptized in Coleman a year ago last spring. We pray that in their declining years God will bless them with health and happiness. It is the prayer of our aged brother and Sister and Monetville Saints that a way and means will be provided to enable their son, James Mercer, his wife, and three sons, all members, to return to their farm here. The farm has been vacant these last few years.

Saints of this local are greatly encouraged by the increased interest in the community. One family of nonmembers has sent two little boys to our Sunday school and many of those in opposition have begun to realize that perhaps they were in the wrong. There are prospects of one or more baptisms in the near future.

Let us hope and pray that we may so live that others may be converted by our lives, obey the divine command, and that each month will find us with another new member in our midst.

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma

July 5.—The branch at Oklahoma City has made what we believe to be a very satisfactory transition from the former division plan to the present triangular idea. J. W. McCarter, elected by the branch as supervisor of the system, has correlated the activities with excellent results in consecrated work and play of all the membership.

The adult division, under the direction of Sister Rex Roland and Sister Ed. Dillon, has continued the work of the Women's Department quite as before, and they have added some study classes and some recreation to their activities.

The young people's division provides for two church school classes as before, and has added new features to their recreation and expression hour each Sunday evening. The young people have organized recreational clubs, tennis and other sports being included. They have provided for social get togethers. All the group are members of the dramatic club. The organization also includes a monthly prayer meeting, beginning this week. Cleo M. Hanthorne is director of the young people's group.

The junior church is a chief activity of the children's division, under Sister Gottsfried Kueffer. The morning church hour was given to the junior church on Children's Day. The nursery during church services is another feature of this department of work.

Four have been added to the church by baptism, and two families by letter since our last writing.

We have been deprived of the services of the pastor for several weeks, Brother Renfro being called to do occasional work in missionary capacity. With him, however, we are pleased to report a continued interest, and that in spite of hot weather and vacation season. There is genuine devotion to the great cause, and a consecration to the purpose of the church, manifested in the work in Oklahoma City, and we feel that the church can count on us for service.

Idaho District Rally

A rally day was held at Hagerman, Idaho, June 22. Saints from all parts of the district were in attendance. Prayer services marked the beginning of the day's activities followed by Sunday school, preaching, and a business meeting.

The object of our meeting was to make arrangements for the coming reunion. Music, in charge of Sister David Van Trump, was outlined as much as possible and recreation, in charge of Brother Arthur Condit, was discussed. An advertising committee was put to work, in fact everything that can be of benefit to the reunion was arranged.

We will be happy to have all who can meet with us at the reunion. You will find a hearty welcome at the camp.

ELLA DELLENBAUGH.

Oshoto, Wyoming

Because the Saints have been occupied with the spring rush, company, and many other matters, a report has not gone from Oshoto to the Herald for two months. We will now endeavor to mention a few of the happenings of the months of May and June.

The first Sundays of May and June were rainy, and rivers came out of their banks. Sacramental services were accordingly postponed one week at which time good attendance and spirit were noted. Visitors were present from Uteyville and Lamar, Colorado, for the June communion hour.

A pleasant program was enjoyed Mother's Day.

June 15 was the date of the Children's Day program. The entertainment was splendid and a large crowd shared basket dinner at noon. There were far too many to be comfortably seated in the little schoolhouse where our meetings are held. This day caused all to realize the real need of our branch for a more commodious building.

Accordingly at the next branch business meeting the matter was discussed. As a result we have a church building committee appointed to look into the matter.

Our branch president and a party composed of twelve members met with Spearfish, South Dakota, Saints, some ninety miles away, June 29. They arrived in time for Sunday school and morning church service. At noon the Saints of that town took the visitors to Spearfish Park for basket dinner and a joyous social time. Plans were discussed for the holding of a two-day meeting sometime this fall either at Alva, Wyoming, or at the Devil's Tower.

Fanshawe, Oklahoma

Eastern Oklahoma District

This branch was represented at General Conference by Elder C. G. Smallwood and wife and Branch Teacher Marshal McGowen. They returned with many interesting thoughts and the good Spirit. Those things which they told concerning the conference and the peace, love, and unity that prevailed were good to hear, as were the descriptions of the programs given.

Brother Smallwood gave one week of class work which was most interesting. Then on account of appointments at Haileyville and Wilburton, he cut his time short.

Easter Sunday an egg hunt and very good time were appreciated by the children.

The Sunday school has been enjoying good attendance, a number of nonmembers attending. In this community there are four different churches, but our services continue more regularly than some, and many are watching our work. We feel that the general attitude towards us betokens good.

On Children's Day Elder Smallwood preached an impressive sermon in the morning and in the afternoon took five children into the water of baptism. The confirmation occurred that evening, being followed by one of our brother's earnest sermons. Then on Thursday he and his wife left for Arkansas and Texas. They are much missed in Fanshawe.

Branch President J. J. Jackson is working to keep the branch active, and preaches each Sunday night.

Christine Sartor was married to Joe Mangrum June 14. The young couple are making their home in Fanshawe, and Sister Christine is very active in the work. She is always ready to do her part and to help others do theirs. Brother and Sister Mangrum were surprised by a shower given them by friends. They received many nice gifts. During the absence of Brother and Sister Smallwood the young couple are living in the Smallwood home.

We would be most happy to have missionaries passing through this region stop to call on us. We especially hope to have Brothers Samuel Twombly, E. J. Gleazer, and C. G. Smallwood in this branch as they go through the district.

Calgary, Alberta

June 26.—After decorating the interior of the church, the Saints have begun painting the exterior.

The Religio young people, assisted by a few nonmembers, have been staging the play, "Safety first." It was presented at the church June 19 and 20. There was a large crowd for the small building, and the play was a grand success both evenings. The ten players were George Slocum, John Hockaday, Lloyd Mac, Emerson Mac, Angus McLeod, Jean Kenny, Rena Cobb, Hollene Knowles, Lillian Henry, and Velda Hockaday. Other talented members and nonmembers furnished entertainment between acts. The proceeds of about thirty-five dollars will be used for improving the church building.

Several members have had to leave the city on account of unemployment conditions, but we hope soon to see them back.

At the quarterly business meeting April 2, a motion was made and carried unanimously that the name of Brother John R. Hockaday be presented before the next district conference for the office of elder as requested by the district president and the apostle in charge.

We are looking forward to the arrival of our new district president and family, Elder E. E. Eliason. We are sorry that Brother P. S. Whalley is leaving. We wish him a safe and pleasant journey to his new field in England, and that he may be exceedingly blessed in his ministerial work. He has won a warm spot in the hearts of many here.

Soldiers Grove, Wisconsin

The Saints had a wonderful and spiritual uplift at our late district conference. Our local church was dedicated by Patriarch Frederick A. Smith. The conference opened the evening of June 20, Bishop C. J. Hunt, the district bishop's agent, preaching a sermon. Prayer service Saturday morning was well attended and deeply enjoyed by all present, nearly everyone taking part. The busy day was in charge of District President Amos Berve.

The Sunday prayer service, a well attended meeting, was in charge of Brothers Berve and George Nobles. There were five earnest prayers and twenty-eight encouraging testimonies. Patriarch F. A. Smith preached the eleven o'clock sermon. At 8.30 that morning Branch President Philip Davenport, assisted by Amos Berve, conducted a baptismal service. Two young people were baptized while the rain poured.

On Sunday a fine dinner was enjoyed by all present, and in the afternoon Brother Smith preached the sermon that dedicated the Soldiers Grove Church, setting it apart as a special place for worship for the coming century of church endeavor.

Five branches were represented: Madison, Janesville, Lancaster, Evansville, and Beloit.

Union Branch

Clitherall, Minnesota

June 29.—Services have been very spasmodic here this spring. A few meetings were held in May, but the attendance was poor, sometimes only a half dozen being present. However, Sunday school work was resumed under the able superintendency of Sister John Murdock, and since the beginning of June, sessions have been regularly held. The children show a faithfulness in attending that we older members might profitably follow.

Every alternate Sunday adult services are held, either preaching or prayer meeting. There was a large attendance the first Sunday in June, and all enjoyed the good prayer meeting, one family coming eighty miles and another forty.

Two of our young people graduated from high school in June, and both are planning to attend college. Malcolm Whiting, son of the pastor, Lester Whiting, is at home helping with the farm work during the summer; and Marvin Peek is making his home this summer in Independence where he is employed. We bespeak for him the friendship of the Saints there.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

307 West Pierce Street

We are pleased to report that the work in Council Bluffs has been moving along nicely under the able leadership of Pastor Ray Whiting. All departments seem very desirous of doing their share of the work.

June 4 in the evening a farewell gathering was held at the church in behalf of our beloved brother, P. T. Anderson. This was just prior to his departure for his seventh mission to his native land. A pleasant evening was spent with a short program and the presentation of a token of our love to Brother Anderson. Short speeches along missionary lines were made by Missionary E. Y. Hunker and Elder M. H. Cook, of Portland, Oregon, who was visiting relatives and friends in Omaha and Council Bluffs, and who was pastor of the branch in Council Bluffs for a year and a half some time ago. Elder Cook gave two excellent sermons the following Sunday.

June 15 was observed as Children's Day with a fine program at the regular Sunday school period. This showed some splendid work done by the children and those in charge. Five children and two adults were baptized and confirmed at the eleven o'clock hour. At the evening service, the junior choir under the leadership of Grace Epperson, rendered some appropriate music for the closing of the day.

Cupid is still at work among our young people. Sister Wilda Currie was married to Walter Schneyder at General Conference. They are making their home in Council Bluffs. Clarence Epperson and Florence Barber were united in marriage June 21. Miss Barber's home is in Glenwood, Iowa, but she has been teaching in the Council Bluffs schools for some time. They will make their home in Chicago, where Clarence has a good position as draftsman with the Pure Oil Company. On the evening of July 2 Sister Lela De Bar and Clifford Ranney had a private wedding at Central Church, followed by a reception at the home of the bride. We congratulate these young people and wish them all that goes to make life worth while.

At present much interest is being manifested in the preparation for a six-week series of tent meetings, to be held by Elder L. G. Holloway in the south part of the city, beginning next Sunday afternoon, July 6. We are confident with Brother Holloway's forceful way of presenting the gospel that much good will be accomplished, and we hope that a goodly number will be caused to see and obey the latter-day message.

We are gradually working toward the new type of branch organization, and hope to have it in full swing for the fall and winter, feeling quite sure with the greater opportunities thus afforded, that greater results will be forthcoming.

Fisher, Arkansas

Since last report, we have sustained an irretrievable loss in the death of Brother Charles H. Hardy. We feel keenly our loss and wonder how we shall be able to carry on our mission in our community. Yet the glorious thing in the death of our own is realization that the heritage God's people leave never departs. At this time our hope is strengthened because of the steadfastness and unwavering faith of our departed brother. We now realize more forcibly than we have for many years our dependence on one another, and we know that we must rekindle the flame of enthusiasm if we are to succeed. We feel the need for closer companionship and Zion.

Those who live near Zion no doubt have their troubles, but it seems that they have no more than we who are scattered and do not have the opportunity to learn so much of the finer things of life.

Elder Baker, the lone missionary in this district, was here and preached a few nights, leaving us much to think and ponder over. This is a rare treat to us, as it usually occurs about twice a year.

We are thankful for a few of the young who have the promise on faithful conditions that they can serve acceptably, and we know that they will not have to break down so many traditional barriers as those who have gone on before. We need to place more responsibility on those who are not careworn and oppressed by the things of daily life.

Brighter days seem to lie ahead, and all have opportunity to qualify for the greatest work of all times. Blessed are they who have health and willingness to prove themselves worthy the blessings of God. This is a day of earnest endeavor. "There is no excellence without labor."

Mallard, Iowa

June 30.—Saints in this region have been blessed in many ways during the past month. God has blessed all with health and strength, and in spite of a late spring, the crops have grown. We want to show our gratitude for our blessings through the lives we live.

Members have visited here this month from Ayshire, Palmer, Bert, Albert City, and Pomeroy, Iowa, and Long Beach, California. Some of these visitors are able to frequently attend services at Mallard. Brother and Sister Bolie and family, of Bert, Iowa, attended services June 1. They live forty miles and more from Mallard, and it had been some time since they partook of the sacrament. Brother and Sister Albert Nesshoefer and little daughter and Sister Mary Packard left June 10 for their home in Long Beach, California, after a two months visit with relatives and friends. Sister Carmichael, mother of Sister Nesshoefer informs us that they reached the end of their journey safely. Sister Packard came as far as Independence, Missouri, with them. She attended conference, then spent eight weeks in and around Independence, being very much pleased with Missouri. She spent a week in Mallard, joining Brother and Sister Nesshoefer for the return trip. While in Mallard she told some excellent stories to the children, and bore her testimony to the truthfulness of the gospel and her love for the work.

Members of Mallard Branch have been absent from our midst, taking vacations in places near and far. Sister Violet Hahn, a student at Graceland in 1927-28, attended commencement exercises there in June, and enjoyed deeply the associations. She was enthusiastic over the new dormitory.

The young people of the branch are planning to attend the reunion. They held a bake sale June 21 and made more than seven dollars. June 27 a social was held at the home of Brother and Sister Carmichael, and the sale of ice cream netted more than six dollars. These proceeds were added to the reunion fund of the young people.

The branch president asked the young people to prepare a program and take charge of the eleven o'clock hour June 29. The program consisted of group singing; a violin solo by Betty Hahn; a vocal duet by Kathryn Kolarich and Betty Hahn; four short talks by our young men, Velmar Fish, Norman Kolarich, Vyrion Truog, and Norman Ward. Their topics deal with youth's part in the church and were developed under the following classifications, spiritual, mental, physical, and moral. Each speaker did well. The program was enjoyed by all. We are looking forward to another such meeting in the near future. Sister Violet Hahn acted as leader and pianist. May God bless the young people and help them to see the great need for their service in the church.

Portland, Oregon

East Seventy-sixth and Irving Streets

June 30.—At the annual election held Tuesday evening, June 3, Daniel B. Sorden was elected pastor with Albert Livingston and J. C. Verhie as associates. Brother Livingston is director of religious education under the new church plan, and Brother Verhie has charge of home visiting. Harley Morris will act as secretary; Mark Yeoman, auditor; and Sister Lila Livingston, director of music. At the close of the business meeting Elder Harold I. Velt and wife showed some interesting pictures on American archaeology. The pictures related closely with the history of the Book of Mormon. Brother and Sister Velt were on their way to their mission in Seattle, and the Saints very much enjoyed their short stay in Portland.

At the close of the meeting, Brother Sorden suggested that all go to the home of our former pastor, Elder Eli Bronson, for a brief farewell. Brother Bronson had returned from Los Angeles in order to assist his family in moving. A large number of Saints availed themselves of the opportunity to spend a pleasant hour with the Bronson family.

Children's Day was observed here Sunday, June 15. The primary department gave an interesting program, touching upon Christ's mission to the little ones. In the midst of the play a little girl, while listening to the story of Christ blessing little children, interrupted, saying, "Here comes a mother with her baby. I wonder if she is looking for a blessing." Sister Phyllis Livingston walked up the aisle with little Joan. She was met at the altar by Brother Sorden and Brother Hoger, who gave the blessing sought.

At the close of the church school hour, the adults followed the children to the lower auditorium, where the junior church, under the direction of Brother and Sister Albert Livingston, held baptismal services. The decorations were beautiful. The services were impressive with softly played organ music by Perry Hunt; prayer by Brother Livingston; the charge by Brother Sorden; response by the audience; the well-selected songs, and the closing confirmation of seven little ones led into the waters of baptism by Brother Sorden. Those who have chosen to walk closer with the Master are Donald Shultz, Lowell Shultz, Mary Lewis, Catherine Lewis, Maralyn Sorden, Ruth Lasley, and Eula Young.

The evening services were as usual, the class on religious education at seven o'clock taught by Brother Sorden. Brother Sorden also spoke at the eight o'clock hour, bringing to us the thought or charge: Are we living above the average? Are we going to make it possible for these little ones who were baptized today to live above the average?

A social gathering was enjoyed by the young people the evening of June 20. They met at the home of the pastor and wife and were unanimous in their praises of the entertainment accorded by the hostess and host.

Tunnel Hill, Illinois

July 3.—Fifteen were baptized at Tunnel Hill as the result of a three-week meeting conducted by Elder R. L. Fulk assisted by our energetic branch president, Clyde Simmons. The meetings were held at the old church called Webb Town, where the latter-day work first started in this branch.

Many are made to rejoice in the gospel of the Lord by the outpouring of his Holy Spirit especially at the confirmation meetings the last two Sundays in June. The Spirit was felt to a marked degree, and many eyes were filled with tears of joy.

Brother Fulk is a plain and forceful speaker, and those who regularly attended the meetings were made to feel that he was led by a Power superior to human strength.

The meetings would have closed at the end of the second week, but Brother Hugh McMahon was expected to live only a short time, and his son, Everet, requested Brother Fulk to remain a day or two. On Monday, June 23, Brother McMahon passed away. The funeral occurred the morning of June 25, the crowd of people filling the house to overflowing. Many stood outside during the service, and there was considerable comment heard on the sermon. One man, a lawyer living in the county seat, was heard to ask, "Why is a smart man like Mr. Fulk preaching in a country church?" It was his opinion that Brother Fulk should be preaching for a big salary. He forgets Jesus promised that the poor should hear the gospel preached.

All were made glad to see so many baptized, and we pray that we may live lives of service, assured that no task is ordinary where human weal is involved.

Saint Thomas, Ontario

June 22.—Children's Day was observed June 22. The officers of the Sunday school, together with Branch President James Skelding, assisted by Sisters Freele, Cordery, and Skelding, had charge of the decorations and program for the occasion. The church was made beautiful with ferns, seasonable flowers, birds, and bunting. A beautiful white arch dotted with roses was draped in front of the font. The back and sides surrounding the font were also white, studded with beautiful roses. A row of ferns and peonies marked the edge of the font. Elder Skelding had charge of the baptismal ceremony. Those entering the new covenant were a nineteen-year-old young woman, Lillian Ashworth, and Melvin Dalton, the young son of Sister Alta Dalton. The scene was made more impressive by the presence of the Holy Spirit, which prevailed to the close of the meeting. The candidates were confirmed by Elders Shepherd and Skelding.

Those taking part in the program were Dorothy Le Courtois and Ruth Size, who contributed a duet; and Sisters Grace Duncan and Lenore Rock, who played piano solos.

The London Dramatic Club presented a play, "Follow thou me," June 6. This is a group of worthy players, and their efforts were well appreciated.

The members of the Women's Department held a picnic at the church June 19, and cleaned the church. A working woman's dinner was served at noon, and all felt the time profitably spent, and the Lord blessed their efforts.

The Sunday school is making arrangements to hold its picnic Wednesday, July 9, at Pinafore Park.

Finds Afflicted Sister Improved

July 4.—While visiting some sick friends today in the Herman Keiffer Hospital, Detroit, knowing this would be a day particularly lonesome for them, I called on Sister Nina Rae. Her many friends will be glad to know that she is much improved in health though far from well. She has been in the hospital for over four months.

We do not realize what it means to lie ill for so long a time until we ourselves are afflicted. For this reason I wish to remind the Saints of the blessings of health and to ask them to remember all who are ill and unable to enjoy the privileges which are daily ours.

At one time our sister's life was despaired of. But through the prayers of the Saints and the administration of Elder Leslie Brown, God in his kindness saw fit to open the doorway to recovery. While in the hospital on June 11 Sister Rae composed some verses which reflect her intense desire to recover that she may answer in some small way the call of Zion. We trust that the desire of her heart may be granted.

Anyone desiring to write her may address Mrs. Nina Rae, Room 321A, Herman Keiffer Hospital, Detroit.

Montrose, Iowa

July 7.—Work in Montrose Branch has been increasingly active since the arrival of Elder A. M. Chase, pastoral appointee, in Fort Madison and Montrose about May 1. Sister Chase came about June 1, bringing their daughter, Sister S. A. Burgess and family, who visited and helped in branch work for nearly three weeks. Sister Burgess's singing was especially helpful, making the services attractive and creating a proper atmosphere for Brother Chase's splendid preaching.

Brother and Sister Chase are making their home in Montrose and dividing their effort between here and Fort Madison Branch. A welcome surprise social was given the Chases by Montrose Saints. Offerings of groceries and canned foods were brought.

The Sunday school officers, teachers, and workers of Fort Madison, Nauvoo, Keckuk, and Montrose Branches are having monthly meetings in Montrose Church, under the leadership of Elder Chase. These meetings have been helpful to those who attended in solving problems connected with the Sunday school. About fifty attended the first meeting.

Many attended the district conference at Fort Madison June 7 and 8. Bishop Charles Fry preached a good sermon to Montrose people the evening of June 8.

The Sunday school gave a pleasing Children's Day program the evening of June 15.

The evening services are now being held on the church lawn recently equipped with a large electric light and reflector to be used especially for recreation purposes.

District President F. T. Mussell was here the evening of July 2, preaching a splendid sermon.

The Sunday school had an outing and picnic July 4, going to Crapo Park at Burlington. They enjoyed themselves in spite of the rain.

London, Ontario

A pretty wedding was recently solemnized when Charlie Alford, youngest son of Brother and Sister C. W. Alford, was married to Miss Monica Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Carter, of London. Miss Margaret Alford, sister of the bridegroom, sang "O promise me." The young couple left for a trip to the Thousand Islands. On their return they will live on Rodger Avenue.

The Women's Department had a successful strawberry social one evening lately on the recreation grounds in the rear of the church. A good program was carried out. The proceeds are to help defray the expense of the new seats for the basement of the church. The affair was under the direction of Sister Vasbinder, president of the department.

Brother J. Dan Armstrong is convalescing after several weeks of severe sickness. He was brought home from the hospital last week.

Grandma Gray has been in poor health the past week. However, our aged sister is again able to be at meetings.

Among the numbers of visitors lately seen in our church we found one Sunday evening Brother and Sister Perry, of Sarnia, Brother and Sister Percy Farrow, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Sister Thompson, mother of the sisters above mentioned.

The Orioles have decided to discontinue their meetings for the summer and are attending the meetings of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

The Sunday school June 15 observed the day as Children's Day. The superintendent of the primary department, Grace Perry, was in charge. The children took part in a pleasing program. Baptismal and confirmation services were the main feature, the font being beautifully decorated with flowers. "I can hear my Savior calling," was sung by the congregation as four girls and one boy entered the water.

We are pleased to welcome back Elder Noble Kelley and his wife who are to be here during the summer.

The young people's institute for London District was held at London June 27 to 29. The special speakers were Elders C. B. Woodstock and Leonard Lea. Their lectures were very instructive. We hope to be able to put into practice some of the things taught us. Elder Lea remained for Dominion Day, and on Monday evening a special meeting was called. During the early part of the evening games were played on the campus. After a lecture by Brother Lea, lunch was served. At this meeting a young people's committee was appointed to look after the needs of the young members of the branch.

July 1 the members of London Branch went to Springbank Park for their annual picnic. The games were keenly contested. Sister Bedford, Brother C. W. Alford's mother, won first prize for the oldest lady member of the picnic and Brother James McAdams as the oldest gentleman. Ice cream was served the picnickers, and the children enjoyed the "scrambled" candy. "Uncle" John Vasbinder was chairman of the picnic committee and "Aunt" Cynthia, with the other members of the Women's Department, looked after the tables. Elder Winegarden and Brother Fred Heddington submitted the program of races.

The Swastika Dramatic Club successfully presented the religious play, "Follow thou me," in the church to a large crowd. Although the members of the club are amateurs, the plays they present are well worth seeing. They accepted an invitation from Saint Thomas Saints to give the play in their church. To close the season the club had a banquet in the basement of the church. Thirty members attended and all reported a good time. During the evening their president, John Vasbinder, was presented a beautiful radio lamp.

The Temple Builders have been active during the past winter and have taken a course in handcraft and study. Recently Sister Grace Perry gave a lecture on "Preparation for marriage and parenthood." The girls are discontinuing their meetings for the summer months.

Lowbanks, Ontario

July 3.—We are trying to do our bit. Every week Sunday school is held, and of late we have had Elder Clatworthy with us the most of the time. His able discourses and constant services have helped the branch.

On Mother's Day an appropriate program was had. Elder Clatworthy gave a talk on mother's behalf. Children's Day and Father's Day also were observed. However the latter was spoiled to some extent, as our branch president, Clarence MacDonald, that morning underwent an operation for appendicitis at Memorial Hospital at Dunnville. Brother MacDonald is now at home and was able to attend services June 29.

That day Elder James Wilson and wife, Elder Sam Clarke and wife and little daughter, of Toronto, also Elder Clatworthy, wife, and daughter, of Bridgeburg, were here.

This week we have Elder B. H. Doty and Elder Ben Hewitt in Low Banks. They intend to stay until after Sunday. Beginning July 26 we expect to have the Toronto District reunion at Lowbanks on the banks of Lake Erie. We are hoping it will be successful both as an outing and as a time for the securing of spiritual blessings.

Northwestern Ohio Sunday School Convention

July 5.—A district Sunday school convention for northwestern Ohio was held at Bradner June 7 and 8, the purpose being to discuss the adoption of the new church school plan of organization.

The Saturday session was called to order by District Sunday School Superintendent Harold Rightmeyer, of Toledo. Brother E. L. Ulrich, of Bradner, conducted a chalk talk on "Personal religion." District President William Grice who is pastor of Toledo Branch, then gave a thirty-minute talk on the new church school plan. The body resolved that the Sunday school of the district should give the plan a fair trial and report the results August 1.

Saturday evening a program was rendered by the talent of the district. A pageant, "A Child leadeth," was the outstanding number. This was given by Bradner Saints.

At eight o'clock Sunday morning the priesthood assembled, followed at 9.30 by Sunday school and a sermon by Elder William Grice.

At noon a sumptuous dinner was served in the school grove. Everyone enjoyed this manifestation of the hospitality of Bradner Saints.

In the afternoon a round table was conducted, followed in the evening by a sermon by Brother Grice. On the whole the convention was a success, and we are trusting that the action taken will be for the progress of the work.

Coffeyville, Kansas

that each one will make a special effort to do his part.

Independence

Stone Church

Bishop J. A. Koehler was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service, using for his subject, "The authority of the Christian religion." If the authority of the church is waning, he said, it is either because the church does not have the truth or because the members of the church do not walk in the truth. If members of the church do not give evidence that the Christian religion has left a superior moral impress upon them, the reputation of that religion will be crucified on the cross of their infidelity. The case of the Christian religion must rest on the same basis by which science verifies its theories—performance under test. But the Christian religion, the Latter Day Saint religion, has never been put to the test! We have yet to prove the authority of our religion by producing the results individually and socially which we claim that religion will bring about, says Bishop Koehler.

The Stone Church Choir, led by Paul N. Craig, sang the anthem, "Fear not, O Israel," by Spicker. Solo and trio parts were sung by George Anway, tenor, Elizabeth Okerlind, contralto, and Lilly Belle Allen, soprano. Robert Miller was at the organ. Lilly Belle Allen sang a soprano solo, "Hymne," by Faure, with violin obbligato by Gomer Cool and piano accompaniment by Robert Miller. Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the service, and was assisted by Elder D. O. Cato.

"The Christian home and the young people" was the topic of the sermon delivered by Elder Leonard Lea at the Campus Sunday evening, the scripture lesson being taken from Ephesians 6: 1-18. Five great characteristics which contribute to the making of a Christian country were named as qualities which also go to compose the Christian or Zion home, and around these the discourse centered: First, an association of people who work together for mutual health and welfare; second, a democratic government seeking law and order; third, a society seeking companionship and happiness; fourth, a culture seeking knowledge and a way of living; and fifth worship helping the inmates of the home to seek God.

Music for the evening was furnished by the Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig. Soloists were Albert Brackenbury, Lilly Belle Allen, Elizabeth Okerlind, and George Anway. Gomer Cool assisted with his violin, and Robert Miller accompanied at the piano. Elder John F. Sheehy conducted the congregational singing and was assisted in the stand by Elder T. A. Beck.

Among the People in Zion

More than fifty members of the Government Study Club, of Kansas City, and an equal number of Independence guests were entertained at a luncheon Monday at 12.30 at the Auditorium by Sister A. L. Yingling, of Independence. President F. M. Smith delivered the address of welcome, and the varied musical program was given by local musicians. Before the meal the Kansas City guests were guided through the Auditorium building by Elders U. W. Greene, W. A. McDowell, and W. E. Peak.

Sister Yingling, a charter member, invited the club to Independence, and at the opening of the luncheon asked Doctor Adeline Goodrich Soule, president of the Government Study Club for almost seventeen years, to take charge. The invocation was offered by Pastor J. F. Sheehy. In the afternoon the guests were invited by Mr. F. F. Brightman, of Independence, to visit his home, where they were delighted at the collection of heirlooms and antiques. The guests spoke thankfully of the warm reception given them in Independence.

In giving the luncheon, Sister Yingling was assisted by Sister Elizabeth T. C. Jenkins, who was in charge of the music; the Service Star Legion, which prepared the meal; and a group of young girls who, at the direction of Sister Gladys Newton Six, served the meal.

Walnut Park

The various services of Sunday, July 13, started with an excellent prayer meeting in the morning at the eight o'clock hour. It proved to be a season of spiritual refreshment and encouragement. The value of prayer was emphasized in several of the testimonies. A prophecy was given to the Saints in which they were admonished to make themselves ready, for the time was soon at hand when Christ would usher in the millennium. We should be securing oil for our vessels in order that we may be prepared when the Master comes.

The church school convened at the usual time, from 9.30 to 10.45. Inasmuch as the regular Walnut Park Orchestra was away assisting in the services at Holden, Brother Sanford Downs, who directs the singing, gathered together a volunteer orchestra for this Sunday. Their efforts were much appreciated by the members of the church school.

The church school is under the supervision of Brother R. Barnhardt, assisted by Brother Albert Chapman. The work is progressing nicely, and attendance is holding up well during the summer in spite of the warm weather. The Galilean Class, with Brother C. L. Olson as teacher, is studying "Stewardships," and last Sunday gave special attention to the various steps involved in becoming a steward. A lively interest is being shown in this subject, which brings forth considerable discussion.

The speaker at the eleven o'clock hour was Elder John F. Sheehy, who used as a scripture reading the eleventh chapter of 1 Corinthians and as a text the eighth verse of the third chapter of Malachi: "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings." The Saints of Walnut Park are always happy to have the pastor in Zion visit them and in particular enjoyed the discourse Sunday.

On Thursday evening of the past week, the young people's class of the church school, whose teacher is Sister Ethel Schwab, gave an ice cream social on the church lawn. In view of the fact that Independence has been having such hot weather this past week, the refreshments fitted in nicely and were much enjoyed. The class had entire charge of the arrangements, the young women acting as waitresses, etc., and the project was ably handled.

The regular weekly prayer meetings were held in the various groups last Wednesday night, and a high degree of interest, participation, and attendance was reported in spite of the extremely hot weather.

Enoch Hill

Elder R. E. Whitsett, of the local priesthood, delivered the sermon during the church school session of June 29. His address proved very helpful to the congregation of his neighbors and friends. During this hour, ordination service was announced to open at 11.30, immediately following the preaching service. The children were marched up from the junior service in the basement, to witness the ordinance of laying on of hands for the bestowal of the priesthood upon two faithful, local workers. Brother Charles Warren was ordained an elder and Brother Lawrence Martin was ordained a deacon by Brothers C. E. Beal and Joseph Martin. Brother Lawrence, who is a very young man, received the authority of the Aaronic priesthood under the hands of his father, Brother Joseph Martin.

The July sacramental service was characterized by the spirit of harmony and peace. The pastor and other local priesthood were in charge.

Last Sunday morning a splendid discourse was delivered by Elder Earl F. Hoisington.

Brother John Quick, deacon, is the scoutmaster on Enoch Hill. On Saturday evening he with eighteen of his boys, members of troop 227, accompanied by two of the scout committeemen and one father, hiked to the woods for the night. Sunday morning they arose early to hold Sunday school services out in the heart of God's outdoor world, and the rest of the day was spent taking scout tests and swimming in the river.

Sister John Quick has been very ill. She was overcome by the heat the evening of July 9 while attending the young people's prayer meeting at the home of Sister Mary Burrows. Exhaustion still confines her to her bed.

The Erodelphians had as guests on last Friday evening the young people and their older friends from Gudgeall Park. Volley ball is becoming a very attractive feature of the Friday recreation events, and on this evening Gudgeall Park team defeated Enoch Hill team three games out of five. Considerable enthusiasm was manifested on both sides during the course of the series. These evenings of recreation on the church lawn, sponsored by the Erodelphian Young People's organization, are highly successful in the way of response and enjoyment of the players.

Elbert A. Smith Improving

By John F. Garver

Spending a couple of days on the banks of the beautiful Mississippi, at old Nauvoo, at the close of the 1930 camp for young people, my mind naturally goes back into some things of the past. Among the things I recall in my own life is the very fine relationship that from the first I have had with my very dear friend and close associate in church work, Elbert A. Smith, now convalescing at Battle Creek, Michigan, after an operation removing a diseased portion of the thyroid gland. I have such good news from this my friend and friend of the church, I feel to share it with our people everywhere.

It has been a matter of concern to all of us that Brother Elbert, as he is so generally known, has been for some considerable time incapacitated. So it was that when during the late General Conference he expressed the desire to go to Battle Creek Sanitarium for rest and further treatments, all hands were turned to bring him under this ministry.

It was my good fortune to accompany Brother Smith to Battle Creek, where I left him on April 24. I saw him again on May 28 and June 3. He showed much improvement, but at this time it was thought an operation might be necessary. He had what is called a hypertrophied condition, which was burning up his vitality, and unless it yielded to further treatment, the thyroid gland was to be removed sometime in July. On June 17 I received word he was to be operated on at once, so I went immediately to Battle Creek, the operation occurring June 19.

The word of his nurse, surgeon, and physician was and is that his recovery has been remarkable. Nurse and physician, Christian gentlemen, both affirm he is greatly blessed of God. These men were present with us during administration, entered into the spirit of the ceremony, and rejoice with us in the results.

Sister Smith writes me the surgeon and physician both say and continue to say Brother Elbert in due time should be quite himself again. In this the church will rejoice.

Let us continue to pray for our brother, and to believe God to be good.

NAUVOO, ILLINOIS, July 12.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The Kansas City Stake O. B. K's held their third initiation service at Central Church Monday, June 30, at which time eighty-six young people graduated from associate to active membership in the O. B. K's, and pledged themselves to support the work of their organization in each of the fifteen local groups in Kansas City.

The active membership of the O. B. K's now numbers three hundred and four, while the associate membership, those not yet initiated and either active or inactive in the local group, numbers 356, and the honorary membership numbers 22.

For the service the church was beautifully decorated with boughs, palms, and candelabra by Kathryn Skinner, Delphine Skinner, Bill Brown, and George Mesley, who served as a committee on preparation.

By eight o'clock about two hundred and fifty young people were assembled on the church lawn. When the service began the new pledges were detained in the reception room, while the active members opened the service in the auditorium. Then led by their elected councilor, each group was conducted to a place of welcome, where the significance of their pledge was outlined by the president of the stake council, George Mesley. From here the initiates were conducted to a place of prayer to study their pledge, and then, as they felt that they were willing to honor the pledge, each initiate walked down the long aisle to the altar of service where the pledge was signed, a candle lit from the lighted symbol of the church spirit, and the green and white colors of the organization were pinned on by the vice president of the council. Thus each candidate was formally made an active member of the group.

When all had signed the pledge, verses of "Just as I am" were sung alternately by new and old members, after which the stake president, C. E. Wight, offered a prayer of dedication. The singing of "I would be true" by the entire group closed the service. Evan A. Fry, stake director of music, served as organist.

Then all adjourned to the church lawn, which is lighted for such occasions by flood lights. There Herbert Merrill led the group in competitive games until the punch and wafers were ready and good nights were in order.

The O. B. K's, stake council, the personnel of which is composed of the elected councilor in each local stake church, hopes to plan several stake get-togethers during the summer months, among which will be a trip to the stewardship farms at Atherton.

Among the young people in camp at Nauvoo were Delmar Blankenship, Eleanor and Byrna Sandy, and Junior Thritchley from Central Church.

Church school session last Sunday morning attracted a large number of adults, young people, and children. Brother A. B. Phillips delivered the sermon in the service period opening at 11.05. The service was planned by the Plus Ultra Class.

In the evening Elder John Blackmore was the speaker. This was the first of our outdoor services. We are planning to arrange a series of civic talks for the first part of the summer program.

An installation service for church school officers and teachers will be held next Sunday morning. Elder Leonard Lea will deliver the address. All classes are to be seated as units in this service.

Argentine Church

Pastor H. A. Higgins of Quindaro Church recently preached here at eleven o'clock, delivering an instructive message to an appreciative audience. At 7.45 in the evening, Stake Bishop C. A. Skinner's theme was "Standards." He emphasized the need for compliance with the gospel standard, especially in the financial department.

Second Church

This little church is enthusiastic for the church school. There are just fifty enrolled, but they feel the Lord's Spirit guiding them, and for it they are very thankful. Elder Francis A. Evans is pastor. He is seventy-four years of age but still as active as most young men. The members are grateful to Brother and Sister P. J. Raw, Sister Elizabeth Flynn, and Sister Mildred Lungwitz for coming the long distance they do every Sunday to help. Sister Lungwitz gave a splendid talk on "The need of Sunday school, church school, and religious day school," at the last morning service.

Speakers of late have been Brothers Harry Paxton, F. A. Evans, P. J. Raw, E. S. Zink, H. H. Sevy, C. A. Skinner, and O. G. Helm.

Splendid Mother's Day and Children's Day programs were had in this branch, and the Saints rejoiced to have little Marjorie Evans and Frances Raw baptized on the latter date.

Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District

Following the district conference at Clear Lake, Indiana, papers carried announcement of a day's preaching service "under the auspices of the Latter Day Saints of Steuben County, in the town hall at Ashley, Indiana." This is a new point for the work. Brothers Teeters, Grace, and Panop with families live in that locality and at Kendallville.

This service marked the opening of Sacrifice Week. Quite a crowd of Saints assembled from Clear Lake, South Scott, Fremont, Salem Carter, and Coldwater. Brother George Cassell was in charge and S. W. L. Scott preached morning and evening. He had occupied the town hall at Hudson for two evenings ten days previous. The Saints spread a fine dinner in the kitchen of the hall.

Coldwater Branch has enjoyed fine experiences the past spring season. Especially would we mention Mother's Day, Easter, and Decision Day when programs were of high standard and almost faultless rendition. This, of course, gave zest to the pulpit efforts.

June 9 and 10 Apostle D. T. Williams occupied the pulpit at Coldwater. The evenings were devoted to fine lectures on the history of the church, slides being used for illustration. Some nonmembers who attended were much impressed.

Brother Scott rehearsed singers with the South Bend Orchestra for the Hibbard meeting. June 29 was a red letter day for Hibbard Branch. Everything was to be accomplished with little expense to the branch on account of the new church building, and the members were anxious to carry out the program. This meeting was on the closing day of Sacrifice Week and the weather was ideal. Attendance was swelled by members from Battle Creek, Coldwater, Elkhart, Mishawaka, South Bend, La Port, Fort Wayne, Plymouth, Culver, Knox, Walkerton, Galien, and other points. More than two hundred people were estimated to be present.

The auditorium of the new church was pleasantly arranged for the services the first of which opened at 10.30 a. m. Elders Scott and McKnight were given charge of the day's services, and after prayer by L. L. Bennett, each delivered an address touching upon the value of the latter-day Zion and the sacrifices necessary in bringing it forth and maintaining it.

The dinner served in the basement of the church was bounteous, reflecting care on the part of those who planned the menu.

At two o'clock in the afternoon the audience assembled at the northeast corner of the building. The orchestra and eight voices rendered "Hear us while we pray, Lord, we beseech thee," by Bishop. Elder McKnight offered prayer and Elder Scott gave explanation of the three books of the church. These with other deposits he passed singly to Elder McKnight who placed them in the box and set them in the cavity of the corner stone. Brother Ollie Lichtenberger used the trowel which cemented the marble tablet bearing date and inscriptions over the revelations of God. Copies of the Saints' Herald and the county paper were also included. Brother Charles Ferry, of South Bend, furnished the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants and Hibbard Branch furnished the Bible.

Returning to the auditorium in order, the congregation enjoyed the completion of the program. First, the "Century March," by the orchestra directed by Professor Mayes, a nonmember. Then ten voices supported by the orchestra sang the anthems. Not least was the singing of a solo, "Ah, sweet mystery of life," by Victor Herbert, the singer being Sister Dorothy L. Scott, of Coldwater. She was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Robert Fitzke, of Battle Creek.

An encouraging spirit was felt throughout the services of the day, and joy was derived from the various experiences. At 4.30 we met at the river and after prayer by Brother Walters, of Elkhart, Brother Scott baptized Hattie McKinney and Mary E. Crum, of Hibbard. At this hour visitors began returning home. Brother McKnight preached that evening in South Bend. Brother Scott remained at Hibbard until the following Tuesday, confirming, preaching, and administering.

Brothers Reed, Crum, and Bennett are the ones to whom the work at Hibbard looks for local support. The new church at its completion will be a blessing, impetus, and credit to the cause.

Rosedale, British Columbia

It is some time since news from this remote branch has appeared in the church papers, and we feel it will be encouraging to other small groups to know of the spiritual blessings which have been enjoyed by the Saints here who had become discouraged through conditions existing in the branch for some time past.

Elder Harold I. Velt, missionary from Australia, now in charge of the Seattle and British Columbia District, planned a visit to the branch to hold a short series of meetings. He arrived Wednesday, June 25, and arrangements were made to hold a prayer meeting that evening that the Saints might become more spiritually fit for the meetings to follow.

The service was greatly enjoyed by all who were privileged to attend. The branch had not been holding weekly prayer meetings for several years. The Saints were admonished by Elder Velt to continue in prayer for greater blessings.

Because the branch elder, I. S. McMullen, had moved away six months before, we had not been holding preaching services, and that added to the attraction of the few evenings Elder Velt was here. The line of thought delivered was connected with Sacrifice Week, which the Saints were observing.

June 29 the meetings commenced with Sunday school at ten o'clock in the morning when Elder Velt gave a spiritual talk to the group. At eleven o'clock the congregation witnessed the induction of four souls into the kingdom, Priest R. J. Muirhead administering the ordinance. The Spirit was present to a marked degree during the service.

Sunday at three o'clock in the afternoon the Saints were requested to assemble fasting and praying to partake of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Two babies were blessed and the confirmation service was in charge of Elder Velt.

The members were blessed with an encouraging degree of the Spirit during the services held at this time and felt amply repaid for the sacrifices made. Twenty-four sacrifive envelopes were returned to the branch solicitor containing as offering a total of more than fifty dollars.

At the close of the Sunday afternoon meeting Elder Velt being instructed by District President M. H. Cook, held a short business session at which time Brother R. J. Muirhead was appointed pastor of the branch. He made a fitting reply to the appointment, stating that weekly prayer meetings would be held in the future as well as preaching service at eleven o'clock in the morning each Sunday, and requested the continued support of the Saints.

The branch also voted to adopt the new plan of religious education.

We feel that much good has been accomplished here through Elder Velt's first visit, and we look forward to the time when he can remain longer in Rosedale.

LILLIAN SMITH.

God Cares for His Children

By Richard J. Lambert

When Joseph Smith and those who aligned themselves with him in the early years of the Restoration announced the fact that God did hear and answer prayer, and that in those days he would heal those who were sick if they came under his laws and exercised faith in him, they did not find many sympathizers. Now, after one hundred years have elapsed, there are many who know that these men presented the truth. There are numbers who have been made recipients of these special dispensations of Providence. There are thousands who have witnessed God's power manifested in healing.

There is before me now an account written by a woman who received a great blessing, and who through the occurrence and by her example proved to be a blessing to others.

She has written this account in order that others may have her testimony as to how God dealt with her and helped in her extremity.

For the reason that her account must be condensed in order to make it available to readers of the Saints' Herald, I am going to present the same in my own language after having read her story. I shall exert myself to write nothing in this account which is not contained in her manuscript, and shall endeavor to incorporate all the principal occurrences.

The difficulty which presented itself is for me to receive and impart to my readers the wonderful spirit of this Latter Day Saint woman who must live close to her God.

On Monday morning, May 20, 1929, Mrs. Lula B. Woslum, of Shidler, Oklahoma, entered the Saint Joseph Hospital, at Ponca City, Oklahoma, for examination. She had been a severe sufferer for seven years. She had been treated by several physicians who all assigned the same causes for her trouble.

Doctor George Neimon, of Ponca City, read the nine X-ray pictures and gave his opinion that an operation to correct gall bladder trouble was necessary, and that a tumor and the gall bladder duct should be removed. The condition of her system, especially her nerves, caused the physicians to say that the operation would be a severe one.

For twenty-four hours preceding the time set for the surgeon to operate, Mrs. Woslum partook of neither food nor drink. On the morning of May 23 her body received its final preparation for the surgeon.

At nine o'clock she was taken to the operating room, where she remained for two hours and fifteen minutes under the surgeon's knife. She returned to her room at fifteen minutes after eleven.

Sister Woslum was attended constantly by her husband and two nurses, who told her that she rested until two o'clock in the afternoon before she began to recover from the effects of the anesthetic.

Recovery for two days seemed to be slow. On Saturday morning, May 25, the surgeon came to her room for the purpose of dressing the wound. When he had completed the dressing, he pronounced it the best operation he had ever witnessed or accomplished. He then said:

"Mrs. Woslum, I want you to accept the compliments of the staff of doctors, nurses, and sisters of this hospital. The nurses and sisters have said that the spirit you brought into this institution was divine. Sister McGregory said that about four o'clock the evening before the operation, she saw an angel come from your room, in your personage, and fly through the hall of this building. The doctors' staff said there was an enlightening spirit prevailing over them; that it was beyond anything they had ever witnessed. Your calmness and peacefulness of mind caused them to be alarmed. They really feared things would not go well in the operation. We have all said we were beyond control of ourselves.

"Now last, but not least, in my own experience. I was guided by something I had never known before. A power divine prevailed over the operating staff until their very beings were fired by the Spirit. Doctor Northcutt told me that he was under a power beyond his control. We were under such a formidable power that we were made to fear. I was shown that it was being done by revelation.

"At this time I heard a voice which said, 'Be guided with care. You are now cutting on a chosen woman, and her life is resplendent. The angels are witnessing and guiding your hands.'

"I beheld standing beside me a shining white angel from the courts of glory, and the most peaceful spirit I have ever witnessed dominated us during the operation, until we were calm and reconciled.

"Doctor Cramer, our administering doctor, said, 'I have never seen anything to equal it. That is the nearest I have ever seen one led as the lamb to the slaughter. It was done so different from all of my experience I had ever had with women. I was made to fear, and halted at my part before I could go on, and the same guiding spirit prevailed over me until I had no fear.'

Doctor Neimon also said, "I want you to further know that you have the highest record for respect and esteem of anyone that has ever come to this hospital. It is written down in black and white that you are a wonderful woman and your life is great. There was a heavenly messenger guiding me. He stood by my side and showed me what to do. I never reached for a thing that it did not reach my hand without an effort. It was beyond my comprehension. It was the greatest experience I have ever had in my life. . . . It is written on my heart with an iron pen. I could not sleep that night for the greatness of it all. I repeatedly told it to my wife and the many friends I saw on the streets. I made three trips from my home to the hospital that night to see about you, and you were always calm and asleep. I had performed the biggest and most serious operation of its kind that has ever been successfully performed in this hospital.

"I even conversed with the angel who stood by my side. He told me what to do. It is a revelation, I tell you, and you brought it here. Your humbleness, meekness, and pure, clean life—it is for such that God chooses to perform his miracles. The angel told me who you were from infancy up to now, that you were chosen of God. The sister in the operating room says she saw the angel and heard it converse with me. The entire operating staff witnessed the Spirit of the Lord in that hour."

Doctor Neimon turned to Sister Woslum's daughter, Mrs. Chancey, and said, "You children should be proud of such a woman for a mother. . . ."

Doctor Neimon asked: "And do you have any knowledge of it or the presence of the angel?"

"I do; I understand it all, doctor," replied Mrs. Woslum. "Do you have any understanding of its presence during the operation?"

"I do," she said; "now comes my time. I know it was divine. I am only human. I could not have endured the trials of the operation alone. I have earnestly sought the Lord for strength and for the angels to hover near; that the angels even be present."

Nurses, sisters, and doctors visited Mrs. Woslum in her room, number 209, and the same day a number of them congregated in the corridors near while she spoke her gratitude to them and testified of the power and work of the Spirit of God.

The doctor in charge testified that an angel which attended spoke to him, telling him his (the angel's) name, and also saying that in three days Sister Woslum would be healed. The doctor gave this comforting information to Brother Woslum while his wife was lying apparently very low during the three days following the operation.

On the fourth day the sister sat up in bed. The fifth day she was placed in a wheel chair. The sixth day she walked alone and visited several rooms. On the seventh day she walked alone among the flowers on the veranda, where she spent an hour.

Following the recital of these facts she testifies:

"I now testify that the angel Moroni visited my room on Wednesday, the day before I was operated on. I was in great pain and agony of mind. I fasted the greater part of three days by request of the doctors and by my own request. I prayed continually, day and night. About four o'clock Wednesday evening, while it seemed impossible to go any further, I was sitting in a chair all alone, in my room. I prayed to God if it was possible to let the least of his angels be present and be near me in this great trial. At this moment the sweetest voice I had ever heard said, 'Peace, be still,' and it became as calm as if a great charging engine had been shut off. This still, sweet voice said, 'Fear not! Am I, Moroni, not with thee?' And I felt the touch of a human hand laid on my left shoulder. I looked around, but I saw no one, although I heard the rustling of his movements, and I was told Moroni was there.

"From this time on I felt the presence of God's divine Spirit. I became so reconciled that I went to my bed, where I lay down and went to sleep. I had no fear of anything."

It is now more than a year since the patient returned to her family. The Herald has permitted this amount of time to pass so that there might not be any to say, "You have spoken hastily."

A very recent letter from Sister Woslum gives some interesting facts. She has been a member of the church since 1905. Her husband joined the church in 1906. These Saints are parents of eight living children, and every child is a member.

During the year since her miraculous recovery at Ponca City Hospital, she has preserved, last summer, 175 quarts of jams and jellies; has done all of her housework, sent four children to school regularly; has made a nice-sized garden; on three occasions walked the distance of three miles without a great deal of fatigue; and has nursed several sick patients back to health.

She says God has kept his word to her, and she has been sound and well ever since, and no time has come when she has been compelled to lie down because of any past or present affliction.

Her letter is void of any spirit of boasting, but it is full of thanks and praise, and recognition of God's power.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fourth and Washington Streets

July 8.—The Saints were made happy by the visit of Elder Arthur Oakman, who on Sunday night, June 29, sang several songs. Also Brother Bob Zimmerman came from LaVilla with his orchestra to play a number of selections. The evening was a fine time of entertainment. The sermon was by the pastor. Several other out of town visitors were present.

July 6 the sacramental service was in charge of the pastor and Bishop Charles Fry. The prayers and testimonies were uplifting in character. In the evening Bishop Fry was the speaker, bringing a fine message. Brother Will Williams was the soloist.

With its modern building and full-time pastor, Ottumwa offers a wonderful opportunity for church privileges. This is a fine little city with good schools, parks, and other provisions for the welfare and happiness of its citizens. Visitors who pass through here should not fail to visit the church.

If there are Saints who have relatives or friends here and would like to have the pastor call on them, please write to Elder F. C. Bevan, in care of the church, or at his home address, 118 Taft Avenue.

Oakland, California

June 22.—Last Sunday was an eventful day for Oakland Church. After years of hopes and fears, much labor and sacrifice, the Saints entered the new church building on Ashby Avenue, South Berkeley, to begin a new chapter in their religious experiences. It was a joyous experience to see the large congregations morning and evening and to note the happy faces of all engaged in the services. It was Children's Day as well, and all enjoyed the contributions made by the little ones. Three little girls were baptized by Brother Bush. They were confirmed by Brothers Rushton and Bush.

The prayer service on Wednesday evening was well attended and an uplifting experience. We hope every week to make this a real "appointment" with God.

The branch welcomes to its midst Brother and Sister A. S.

The River

By Mary E. Gillin

The river lies blue as the skies overhead
 In the valley that holds it fast;
 It curves—it winds like a silver thread
 When the shades of night are cast.
 The tree-crowned bluffs guard the river well,
 Like sentinels grim they stand—
 What marvelous tales these hills could tell
 Of water, and men, and the land!

These waters once mirrored the Red Man's form,
 And carried his swift canoe;
 These hills have echoed his dread alarm
 In the war-drum's fierce tattoo;
 Now the river is old and wise with years—
 Hides many a tale in its deeps—
 Has known in its day both laughter and tears—
 But the secret of all—it keeps!

No more does the Red Man sail his canoe,
 And the trader's boat, too, is gone;
 The steamboat churns in the waters blue,
 And we hear the motor's hum;
 The smoke of the white man's home is seen
 Where the Indian wigwam stood;
 And where the wild deer before has been,
 There grows the white man's food.

But though Tomorrow may open the door
 To changes yet more odd—
 The Hills remain—the Sky bends o'er—
 The River still sings of its God!
 And He that was God of Yesterday,
 And knew the Red Man's creed,
 Still guides the Universe Today—
 He knows the White Man's need.

Mercy

The quality of mercy is not strained;
 It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
 Upon the place beneath; it is twice blest—
 It blesseth him that gives and him that takes:
 'Tis mightiest in the mightiest; it becomes
 The throned monarch better than his crown:
 His scepter shows the force of temporal power,
 The attribute to awe and majesty,
 Wherein doth sit the dread and fear of kings;
 But mercy is above this sceptered sway—
 It is enthroned in the hearts of kings,
 It is an attribute to God himself;
 And earthly power doth then show likest God's,
 When mercy seasons justice. —Shakespeare.

Reunions Canceled

Several reunions which have been announced to occur this present summer season have been canceled because of industrial conditions which would make their patronage by the general membership at least a hardship, in many cases an impossibility.

While the Herald regrets the fact that such an industrial condition does exist, yet it also is glad to see the disposition among officers to respect the burdens of the Saints and to forego even a much needed and fondly anticipated reunion when the burden of conducting and attending it would prove too heavy. Such a course will prove beneficial. Let those who are disappointed because their plans to attend have been interfered with reserve any disposition to criticize the cancellation until they are sure the criticism is made to the right parties and that it is sound. Many a criticism is the result of selfishness, though it may assume clothing which is more beautiful.

The Church Publications

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is represented by several journals of merit, and each one of these is dependent upon individual subscription for its support and development. As patronage increases the publishing house has without hesitation put its energy into the development and improvement of the publication. In fact, it has been their practice to keep ahead of the patronage, and to call for the support of the Saints while they increased the size and tried to refine and make more serviceable the content of any specific journal upon which activity was centered for the time.

By this process the Saints' Herald has grown from a small paper issued once each month, to the splendid proportions it now presents, generally thirty-two large pages of selected material mailed to its subscribers every Wednesday.

The Board of Publication has always made the attempt to keep the price of its publications as low as is possible, believing it to be the stewardship of their organization to get before all the church with the official publications. Circulation to the Board of Publication has a far deeper and broader meaning than mere financial support. For these reasons there has not been and is not any hesitancy in soliciting the patronage of the Saints.

Because of the increase in cost of manufacture the problem of the publishers has been to furnish an official paper large enough and of fine enough quality properly to represent the church interests and at the same time to keep the price low enough so that Saints of limited means would not feel it a burden to patronize their official paper. They have succeeded in getting enough patronage to keep on with the work, but there is not now a large enough income from subscriptions and advertising to keep the expense of publication paid. The Saints' Herald should have three thousand more paid-up subscribers in order to guarantee reasonable safety from deficits because of its publication.

In almost every locality there are Saints who do not receive and read the Herald, though there are a few branches of the church where it goes to every family in which it could be of service. The problem of the publishers is to reach these many thousands of Saints not getting the Herald and obtain their patronage. There are methods and methods of getting in touch with them, but the present business manager of the publishing house wishes to adopt both the most effective and the least expensive means of soliciting every Saint for his support. He believes that if every subscriber will make it his business to get the Saints of his circle of acquaintance to subscribe for the Herald for six months or one year, that more will be accomplished than in any other way. For this reason a special effort is being made to enlist the interest and action of every subscriber to obtain one or more new subscribers for the Herald. It is being kept constantly before the reader that the publishers desire and need this kind of support. Read the advertisements and lend your consecrated support to the effort.

By this means it will be possible to continue the present reasonable price of two dollars for the year, and to at least keep up the present standard of the journal. Every year it is expected the Herald shall improve, and to this end a force of men and women are using their talents and energy. If you will supplement their work by complying with this request and gaining new patronage, there is no doubt but what the present year will see marked advancement.

We wish to get it clearly before the Saints that this patronage is necessary if the present quality and service are to be maintained. R. J. L.

Advancement in Conduct of Industry

Elder Charles H. Fish writes a short letter to the editor of the Herald and with it incloses a cutting from the Indianapolis Times for July 11, 1930. This contains matter which is so important to all that it is reprinted in our columns.

Last week President Smith stated in an editorial for the Herald that the doctrine of stewardship and the consecration of surplus furnishes the solution of the agricultural problem which is now so distressing the country as to cause much unrest and contention. If he were to express himself on the industrial and manufacturing branches of the problem of adjustment and success, his pronouncement would be of the same nature.

Notice the exact language of the last paragraph of the story of the Hapgood experiment. It is word for word what we have heard from President Smith and all the leading exponents of the doctrine of stewardship for many years: "And the slogan of the organization . . . is: 'From every man according to his ability; to every man according to his need.'"

It is a matter for solemn consideration among Saints that an institution of this dimension and field should launch out fearlessly and confidently, not as the result of a sudden emotion, but as a conviction achieved after many years of consideration as to what shall bring final satisfaction and success. Confidence in the strength of the element of justice which is resident to some extent in every man has brought the Hapgoods to the point where they have staked their future upon it. Confidence in the purity, the ability, the fruits of the Spirit among the people of the church, is bringing one Saint after another to the point where he is asking the church to accept him as a steward for God in some branch of the work to be conducted by his church.

R. J. L.

The Hapgood Experiment

The president of an Indianapolis firm doing an annual business of more than $1,500,000, voluntarily placed himself today in the hands of his 150 employees, who are privileged to discharge him if they see fit.

William P. Hapgood and his coworkers in the Columbia Conserve Company, today celebrated the thirteenth anniversary of one of the most unusual experiments in American industrial history, when the 150 employees assumed 51 per cent of the company's stock and Hapgood announced he would remain at the head of the firm only so long as his coworkers wanted him.

Tomorrow seventy-six employees might vote to discharge Hapgood—and he would step out of office without complaint.

But Hapgood expects no such development, for he long has been known as the most democratic member of this first complete unity of industrial democracy. For thirteen years he and his two brothers—Hutchins and Norman (the editor)—have planned for this day when they would consummate America's first million-dollar "business without a boss."

Columbia employees have acquired their shares in the business without paying for it. Profits of the company simply have been accumulated and used to purchase the common stock, which was given outright to the workers as a group.

"My brothers and I have taken this step to satisfy our own desires for real happiness," Hapgood said. "Real happiness is not to be bought with wealth, but only by a right relationship with our fellows. We have the hope that our experiment may hint at possible new solutions for America's grave industrial problems, especially that of unemployment."

It was in 1917 that the three brothers inherited the soup plant and started their socio-industrial experiment. They made a contract with their employees as a group for purchase of the business by a retirement of the common stock from profits. Features of the transaction included:

1. Wages are based on actual need of the worker, not his efficiency or "earning power." Thus a janitor who happens to be the father of five children may be paid more than the super-salesman who is unmarried; or the stenographer who is a widowed mother may be paid more than the unmarried executive who dictates to her.

2. The wage rate is fixed for each employee by his fellow workers. There are "leaders," but no bosses.

3. A married man automatically received fifty per cent higher wages than a single man—and he gets $2 a week more for each child up to the limit of three children, a limit set in the belief that more than three children proves a menace to any worker's happiness.

4. The employees hold a weekly council, at which every detail, every important policy, is discussed and settled. The girl who pastes labels on the soup cans is at liberty to criticize the president's new sales program—and often does. If a majority agree with her, the president's program is rejected.

5. Every employee holds his job until discharged by the council of his coworkers.

6. A sinking fund for old-age pensions is provided.

7. Workers or their dependents who are ill may be voted financial relief from company funds by the workers' council.

8. All workers' stock is held by the employees as a group; no employee holds stock as an individual, nor can he hand it down to his heirs.

On these principles the company has operated for thirteen years, and last year did a $1,000,000 business, with net profits of $163,000 after dividends were paid on preferred stock. More than $18,000 was spent for health and welfare work among the employees during the last twelve months.

The workers today assumed 51 per cent of the stock and full control. Eventually the Hapgood brothers expect 100 per cent of the stock to be held by the workers.

And the slogan of the organization, Hapgood said today, is: "From every man according to his ability; to every man according to his needs."

Harvest Festival for 1930

The Harvest Festival has become an institution in the church. In a few short years it has grown from a one-day display of what one congregation of about five hundred people desired to offer for the aid of those who need, to a church-wide gathering, display, and disposal of the first fruits of the harvest.

For two or three years it has been the practice of people in many branches to plan from before planting time to produce the choicest of fruits, vegetables, and grains, in order that they might be able to bring acceptable offerings to the Harvest Festival. This practice is coming to be a habit. Many others of the church membership have not as yet achieved the joy of those who have brought of the bounties which have rewarded their season's toil. To these the Herald wishes to suggest that now, during the growing season, they select and favor certain specimens for the express purpose of later bringing them to the Harvest Festival at Independence this fall. The exact date for the 1930 festival has not been announced, but will be somewhere between the middle of September and the tenth day of October. The dates will be given in the very near future.

The lower floor of the Auditorium Building will be used again this autumn, and the room is ample to meet all the demands. There can be built a show of nature's products which will compare favorably with such an exhibition as graces the State Fairs.

For several years much has been done to make the exhibits worthy the name of works of art. Conceptions of beauty and even grandeur have been worked out in the individual booths and exhibits, and the whole has been an imposing spectacle. Of recent years it has been the habit of numbers of visitors to spend an hour or more each day in this atmosphere of beauty and plenty, and when the time has come for dismantling, it has been a time of regret.

More than a few boys and girls and many men and women have been stimulated to produce and preserve better grains, fruits, vegetables, and flowers than have been produced before in their fields, their gardens, their workshops, and their homes.

Men of more than state-wide fame have been led to exclaim at the quality found in the various exhibits, at the artistic conceptions worked out in the displays, and at the up to date methods used in the preservation of perishable fruits and vegetables. The church has profited by all of this—profited in its increased fame for industry, progress, and art; profited in its name for looking to the future for the material progress and prosperity of her people; profited by having compared notes with the leading men in agricultural pursuits of the great States of the Middle West, yet never having been compelled to blush because of the unworthiness of the work of her people.

One of the greatest direct benefits to the church and to the people participating has been in receiving by the church for the help of its eleemosynary institutions and the needy poor the offerings which the people of the church have brought and which comprise the Harvest Festival display. It is expected and understood by all that these displays become contributions to the church at the time the festival is dismantled. The bishop takes charge of them, and they have come to mean several thousand dollars' worth of provisions each year—the first fruits, the best that the Saints can produce, given for the class of people who can not always provide even standard quality goods for their consumption.

Those who make the display possible by their contributions have in the past profited because they have been able to produce better and better articles, or to preserve them and display them in increasingly better ways. In addition they have been awarded recognition for excellence achieved in the form of blue ribbons for first excellence, red ribbons for second in excellence, and white ribbons for third in excellence.

What a wonderful tribute to the cooperation of a people who are convinced that cooperation is fundamental to the gospel of Jesus Christ the Harvest Festival has been and will become! Suppose every district and large branch organization of the church should find it possible to send or bring an exhibit to the Harvest Festival! No State Fair could compete with the display of the products of the soil, and the festival would become known throughout one of the greatest agricultural sections of the earth. Is it worth trying for, and trying again and again, until finally the achievement is ours? We are getting nearer to this end every year.

Remember, every district in the church is invited to send an offering, and it will form one of the exhibits at the Harvest Festival. If your district excels in the production of grain, let your leading article of exhibit be grain, supplemented by such fruits, vegetables, and flowers as are produced in your locality. Let your contribution indicate what your country and its people can do.

All freight, express, and parcel post shipments should be made to T. A. Beck, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. Watch for dates of the festival. Write J. A. Gardner, the Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, if you want further information.

The New Program of Religious Education

To Branch Presidents throughout the Church:

Early in the year a letter was sent out by the First Presidency, with a report blank, to every branch president in Canada and the United States. This report concerned the organization of the branch, and especially its provision for religious education. The letter was sent only to branches in North America, as we were anxious for information from these branches before the convening of the last General Conference. The items from the reply have been carefully tabulated and all our records and files brought up to date.

This was the first of a series of communications and reports anticipated between branch presidents and the office of the First Presidency. All departments of the church concerned will seek to cooperate with the First Presidency to make the communications distinctly helpful in the work of the branch, and to secure information that will form the basis of further constructive development in methods, materials, and activities on the part of general departments, suited to the needs of the church.

We appreciate the general response made by branch presidents, and the information given in these reports.

The Pastor's Responsibility

As branch presidents will realize, we are much concerned with the program of religious education carried out in the several branches. This is our particular assignment and task. The so-called "New Plan" recognizes the pastor as the key man in the branch, the one held directly responsible to the church for the successful conduct of its program. This is only stating clearly a responsibility which has always been his, though not always recognized or exercised. The Department of Religious Education is very anxious to help branch presidents and local officers of the church school at every point of need.

With apparently good reason the church looks to pastors to use every means possible to increase the efficiency of the church work intrusted to their care. More than ever before do we realize that the progress of our work depends upon trained and consecrated leadership, together with the use of efficient materials and methods. We may expect to get results only as we pay the price in real service under divine blessing and through a carefully planned program.

We sympathize with pastors who can give but little time to study and church work, and who labor under many handicaps in their equipment and working forces. But, sensing the need, we shall endeavor to help supply the necessary materials, and to perfect a training program through which we shall progressively make improvement toward our goal.

A Unified Program

If a branch is still organized and operating under the old plan of three departments, there is every necessity for a common understanding, a unity of purpose, and a close harmony in the working program of the church. By frequent counsel with department superintendents, a unified, progressive, and ever more efficient program should be worked out. Early changes to the new plan of a single department should not be made without careful consideration and hearty cooperation on the part of those who must be depended upon to make it successful. A change in form of organization may open the way for efficiency and progress, but hard, earnest, consistent work must still be done.

The chief requirement is that there be worked out together a unified, through-the-week program, which uses to the fullest capacity the workers and the equipment of the branch, meeting to the best advantage possible all the needs of all of the people of the congregation. We think this can best be done on the new plan with a single department of religious education, having a superintendent, or director, who works with the pastor and with three age-group supervisors, of children, young people, and adults, in administering a complete program for the branch. Together they should devise and carry out a unified, enriched church school program of study, worship, class work, project, and play, extending throughout the week. Local limitations of building, equipment, and leaders should be considered, but every effort made to attain the highest standard possible—the church objectives can not be met otherwise.

Integration Is Necessary

The work of the church school must ever be planned to harmonize with the larger program of the church services and the work of the priesthood within the branch. The whole task of the development of the physical, intellectual, industrial, moral, social, recreational, and spiritual welfare of the membership is but one task in which the church school must play an important part, as it supplements the work of the priesthood and the home.

Important Considerations

Attention of branch presidents is called to the discussion of organization plans appearing in recent issues of the Department Journal and the Saints' Herald. Serious consideration should be given to the new quarterly materials, especially those to be available in October for the new quarterly year. Pastors should be familiar with the materials used and the organization of the class work of the church school.

The pastor will also be concerned with the introduction of improved methods of teaching, with the selection and training of teacher-leaders for classes and groups, with plans for an extended service on Sunday morning, from 9.30 to 11.45, with junior worship periods, with a training school for members of the priesthood, with more efficient pastoral and evangelistic programs for the branch, and with plans for a more thorough understanding of and participation in the financial program of the church.

We note these as some of the progressive movements demanding attention in every branch. Not all of them are the direct work or responsibility of the new Department of Religious Education, but teachers and leaders of the church school should certainly cooperate with the other officers of the branch and with the priesthood to accomplish the necessary work of education and soul growth contemplated through the gospel. In carrying out the new plan, the branch president will appreciate the close association and assistance of a local superintendent or director in carrying out the details of an efficient educational program.

Progress Imperative

The reports recently made to the First Presidency indicate in each case the progress made up to the time of reporting. We appreciate the difficulties encountered in some places, especially in small or scattered branches. Wisdom should be used in any change contemplated, yet indifferent delay may seriously handicap the progress we should be making.

By recent action of the Board of Publication the materials heretofore published in the Department Journal are now to appear in the columns of the Saints' Herald. This will make possible a wider distribution of helpful discussions of means and methods with program materials for religious education. We trust these will now be made more readily available to every teacher, leader, and parent of the church.

We are glad to place the facilities of the general department and the advice of general leaders in various fields of religious education at the disposal of pastors, directors, and others interested. Inquiries will receive prompt attention and the best help we can give. It is our task to render this service.

We shall be in frequent correspondence with local superintendents, whom we shall seek to help and encourage in the phases of religious education assigned to them.

CHARLES B. WOODSTOCK,
Associate Director The Department of Religious Education.

Centennial Institute Extension Course

In response to our first announcement of the Extension Course of the Centennial Institute, consisting of eleven special outlines on the church program, we have received a number of orders from both members and ministry. The fact that these outlines have been so well received makes us feel that the information contained in this material is in demand by the Saints. Those who neglect to secure these outlines while they are available will miss a great deal of information which every Latter Day Saint needs. A full-page advertisement concerning this course appears elsewhere in the issue of the Herald for July 2, page 724.

Your order should be sent in immediately, as the supply is limited, and there will be no reprint this year.

Sincerely yours,
THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,
By A. CARMICHAEL.

The field of qualitative evangelism within the church is almost unlimited. The sickening spectacle of petty snobs, garrulous gossipers, narrow bigots, hard-hearted misers, and unforgiving Pharisees, parading in the robe of Christ, is a call for a qualitative analysis of surgical severity. The less disgusting but just as difficult situation is manifest in that army of Christians who are as good as they ever were, but show no signs of ever being any better, amply satisfied in their smug little souls by the minimum requirement of respectability. Then there is that vast host who cling with such sentiment to the "dear old church," crying "Lord, Lord," but having no understanding of his words and no glad news of good deeds for men. And finally there looms up that church of the spiritually active, whose inner life must be maintained, character "stepped up" from glory unto glory, and experiences ceaselessly expanded and constantly applied to the problems of ordinary life.—Samuel H. Miller.

On Observing Birthdays

By Myrtle A. Weber

"Whoso delights a child, labors with God in his workshop of the world of hearts."—Norman Duncan.

We hope that the teachers of the little children have not passed too many mileposts on the road of life to really think back and remember the days that meant most to them in their childhood.

We may remember a few outstanding occasions. But think for a moment! Did you ever have a birthday party where your little friends brought gifts and you were the center of interest? Did you ever find at your place at the breakfast table on your birthday a handkerchief or a piece of money, or any kind of a surprise? Then you know the joy it brings to the children and just what it means to have their birthdays remembered with some little celebration.

As workers with little children and coworkers with Him who blessed them and said, "Let them come unto me," is it not our happy privilege to associate all the special occasions and big events of their lives with the heavenly Father's house and the Sabbath Day?

This part of your program may take place during the general assembly period, and such a happy time it is for the birthday child who for a little while is the most important person in the whole department. Think of it! The song is sung to him, the prayer is said for him, and the birthday card has his name on it and a little verse on it just for him. The other children count and wonder how old he is going to be as he drops his pennies one by one into the special birthday bank. Stop and think of the forgetfulness of self on the part of the other children as they enter into the spirit of making some one else happy. Are they not showing love and consideration for others? This means much in character building.

It would be well to have at least two birthday chairs—one for girls and one for boys. These may be gilded or painted a different color from the other chairs. Have some attractive decorations to distinguish them from an ordinary chair. Place them in the front of the department on each side of the superintendent.

It is quite worth while to take time on your busy Sunday mornings for such occasions. Make this part of your service as happy and bright as possible. There are many little attractive ways of celebrating birthdays in the church school. We are here suggesting a few ideas which we think the children will enjoy?

Plan 1. Superintendent:

"A birthday greeting, —— dear,
May you be happy all the year."

"Who knows how old (name) is?"

"Let us clap our hands for each year. One, two, three, four," etc.

"Now let us sing our birthday song to (name.)"

Children sing: (Tune: "Good morning to you.")

Happy birthday to you,

Happy birthday to you,

Happy birthday, dear (name),

Happy birthday to you.

Prayer:

God bless this (these) little birthday child (children).
May she (he) (they) spread joy and gladness through the coming year. Amen.

Plan 2. (Use an imitation cake and birthday candles. Light the number of candles that the child is years old.)

Superintendent:

"Let us see how many have birthdays this month. (Children raise their hands.) Some children are particularly happy today because their birthdays are coming this week. We are all glad for them. If each birthday child whose birthday comes this week will come up here, we will sing our birthday song to you."

Children:

Sing, "Happy birthday to you" or "Birthday wishes," Carols, page 16.

Allow him to blow out the candles, and let the other children count how many times he had to blow before he blew all the candles out.

Prayer:

Dear heavenly Father, we pray thee to bless (name) today and through this new year. Help him to more like Jesus grow, taking joy where'er he goes. Amen.

Plan 3. Superintendent:

"Who has had a birthday?

Then come and stand right here,

We shall wish you happiness

Throughout the coming year."

Children:

Sing "Birthday wishes," Carols, page 16.

Birthday Child:

Have a dish of sand, and in it let the birthday child place a small flag for each year.

(For variation, instead of using flags, small paper flowers may be planted, or a seed for each year may be planted in a flower pot.)

Prayer:

Dear God, bless this birthday child and guard him through all the coming year. Amen.

Plan 4. Superintendent:

"On people's birthdays we like to do something very special to make them happy. Today some of our friends are very happy because they have just had a birthday. We are happy, too, and we shall play our surprise record for our birthday children. First let us wish them a happy birthday."

Children:

Sing an appropriate birthday song.

Superintendent:

It would be well to have a few choice records reserved for this occasion. Select one and play it at this time; if the children are well enough acquainted with the records, the birthday child could choose the one he liked best. (A piano selection would serve the same purpose.)

Birthday Children.

Place seals on the birthday calendar on the date of their birthday. (These seals could be appropriate for the month or season of the year; i. e., a squirrel for September, an autumn leaf for October, a butterfly for April, a flower for June, etc. These seals may be procured from most any Dennison dealer.)

Prayer:

Dear heavenly Father, bless these birthday children. Make them happy and help them to grow more and more like Jesus. Amen.

Plan 5. Superintendent:

"Now the birthday child may tiptoe to the birthday chair while we close our eyes.

WHOSE BIRTHDAY

"We'll close our eyes while some one goes
To the Birthday Chair on (his) little tiptoes.

"Now open wide, brown eyes and blue, Little friend of ours, 'Happy birthday to you.'"

—Aurora Shumate.

"Whose birthday is it? (If the children do not seem to know, tell them who it is and how glad all are to have him here.) We are so happy that (name) has a birthday this month."

Children:

Sing a birthday greeting song.

Superintendent:

"Now (name) may drop as many pennies as (he) is old in the birthday bank (or some other attractive receptacle) and we will count them."

Give the birthday child a little birthday card or some novel, inexpensive token in recognition of his birthday.

For the Nursery Class

Plan 6. Superintendent:

"A birthday, a birthday,
O who has had a birthday?
Come sit right here, and we will sing
To wish you happy birthday."

—Mildred Adair.

Children:

Sing "Happy birthday to you."

Birthday Child:

He may drop his pennies into the birthday bank, one by one, as the children count.

Superintendent:

Give each birthday child an attractive birthday card or picture for his very own.

Book of Mormon

By Mildred Goodfellow

In this book we find the story
Of the people on this land;
Men and women who were found here
By Columbus and his band.

Let us read the thrilling story
How in boats they crossed the sea.
They were led by God the Father
To this land of liberty.

In this land they grew and prospered.
God sent blessings, did his part.
All went well when they remembered
To serve God with all their heart.

But at last they were so wicked,
They did not the Master's will,
And the plates of gold were hidden
By Moroni in a hill.

Centuries passed. An angel gave them
Unto him, who at command
Did translate the precious record,
Published it throughout the land.

First chorus:

Book of Mormon, Book of Mormon,
Sent to us by God above.
May we read it and be grateful
Always for our Father's love.

Second chorus:

Book of Mormon, we are thankful
That we have this record true.
Let us tell our friends and neighbors,
So they'll know its message, too.

The New "Saints' Hymnal"

By Evan A. Fry

For more than a year now preparations have been going forward for the publication of a new hymn book for the church, to be known as The Saints' Hymnal. In the hope that some advance information about this book will be interesting to the readers of the Herald, this article is written.

From the first, the new book was designed to take the place of both Zion's Praises and Saints' Hymnal and to contain under one cover all the music material needed for worship in any service for people above twelve or thirteen years of age. As the manuscript is at present constituted, the new book will consist of about 350 pages, and will include a total of 442 songs, each one with words and music printed conveniently together, and so far as possible on one page. Of these 442 songs, it is interesting to note that approximately two hundred of them, or almost half, are new to our books and new to our people.

The first task of the committee was to ascertain from branch choristers by the questionnaire method the relative frequency with which the songs in Zion's Praises and the Saints' Hymnal were being used. The tabulated results of these replies gave us one good criterion for judging the future usefulness of any given hymn, and many hymns were accepted or rejected on the basis of their showing in this tabulation. We found, however, that some good hymns were not being used for various good reasons—there was no suitable music printed with the words; the tune was too high or too low in range; the words and tune were not suited to each other; the hymn was in poor position on the page or in the general arrangement of the book, etc. Such faults in really good hymns were corrected if possible.

Of the 397 hymns in the old Hymnal, we selected about two hundred as being worthy of continued life and use. Zion's Praises suffered a higher rate of mortality for two reasons: first, the average song appearing in it was of a lighter, more popular, and less worthy type; and second, on many of the worthier songs which we desired to use from our old Sunday school book, we found that copyright privileges for a reprinting could not be secured. We felt no compunctions, however, in borrowing un-copyrighted material quite liberally from other standard hymnals of all denominations.

Numerous original contributions of both words and music for the new book were received, but only a few were found worthy of publication. Some half a dozen of real merit found a place in the new hymnal. We believe that a liberal percentage of the hymns selected will be found suitable for junior church services and work among the young people of adolescent age or older.

This new book has been compiled with one idea uppermost in the minds of the editors: that a hymn book is for the use of the people of the congregation, who are not trained singers, who presumably can not perform vocal gymnastics, or master intricate harmonies, or sing above or below the range of the average voice. We can guarantee that, almost without exception, any hymn in the book may be easily sung by every singing member in any average congregation. All harmony has been simplified; all solo or duet passages have been made into four part harmony if possible; tunes whose range was too high or too low have been altered to suit the average voice, or discarded in favor of better ones; florid tunes impossible to execute have been simplified or discarded; tunes which had little or no melody which could be grasped by the musically uneducated have also gone into the limbo of forgotten things. Words which in the old books were set to tunes not suitable in mood or spirit have been set to more suitable and appropriate music.

We think that the Saints will find the arrangement of the new book a great improvement over the old. All hymns are grouped in the book according to the subject matter of their words, so that by turning to any given section, the user has available in one place all of the songs peculiarly and particularly adapted to the subject in mind. The arrangement is by main topic and sub-topic. For example, the first main topic is Worship, under which are grouped the sub-topics Adoration and Praise, Morning, Evening, Opening of Service, Close of Service, and Prayer Service. The main topics will appear at the top of every left-hand page throughout the book; the sub-topics will appear at the top of every opposite or right-hand page. Other main topics are as follows: God, the Father; Christ, the Son; The Holy Spirit; The Saintly Life; The Church and Its Ordinances; Special Subjects and Occasions.

Each page contains the following, in addition to the above subject headings: The name of the tune, the meter, the names of the author and composer, with their dates of birth and death or date of composition, a metronome marking to indicate the speed with which the music should be performed, and last, of course, the complete words and music of the hymn.

The book will contain a complete and comprehensive system of indexes, including the following: 1; an index of first lines. 2; an index of tunes. 3; an index of authors. 4; an index of composers. 5; an index of meters. 6; a topical index. These six indexes should enable the user to find anything he wants if it is in the book.

The page size of the new Hymnal will be slightly larger than that of the old. This will make possible a larger and clearer type for both words and music, and a wider margin, so that the binding will not obscure the printing close to the center of the book.

The manuscript for this book was turned over to the Herald Publishing House for the first time on February 1, but when they ascertained from the plate makers in Chicago that the music could not be put on plates in time to guarantee publication of the book before conference, the committee requested and received the privilege of withdrawing the manuscript after conference for the purpose of going over it again for a final careful check. This final revision, which made assurance doubly sure, was accomplished, and the manuscript returned to the Herald Publishing House about the middle of May.

At present the manuscript is on file in the Herald Office. The management is anxious to complete the mechanical work on this book at the earliest possible date, so that they may begin selling it and realizing a return on the investment already made, but there seems no immediate prospect of the completion of this work unless there is a decided change for the better. Briefly, the situation is this: The church publishing house does not have the necessary capital available to continue work on the book. A music book is much more expensive to produce than one set in ordinary type, and this hymnal will demand a cash outlay of approximately $5,000 for editorial work, plate making, paper, and supplies, before a single copy can be finished.

How You Can Help

We are sure that many branches are badly in need of new books, and that many of these probably have funds available or set aside for the anticipated purchase of new hymnals. For some time the Herald Publishing House has been accepting advance orders for the new hymnal, accompanied by cash, with the promise that the books would be delivered immediately after publication in the order that the remittances were received. All such advance remittances are now being put into a special fund, in the hope that in a short time there will be enough to justify resuming work on the new hymnal. Orders have been received to date for something over four hundred copies.

If you would like to have a new hymnal for your personal use, or if your branch or Sunday school organization needs new books, we suggest that you send your order to the Herald Publishing House, accompanied by the cash in advance. If orders for 2,000 copies are received, the money accumulating from these sales will be sufficient to justify a start, at least, on the mechanical work of printing this new book. For your information, we quote prices below.

Single copies, $1.50, postpaid.

10 or more copies, $1.25 each, postpaid.

100 or more copies, $1.00 each, plus transportation.

The Prospect List

A series of four articles which discuss the purpose and use of the prospect list as an aid to missionary enterprise. By J. A. Gardner.

Number 2. The List; How It Is Built

When Jesus passed by the Sea of Galilee, he saw here and there fishermen mending their nets. The Galilean fishermen as a rule were a courageous type of men, living close to nature and making their living by one of the most ancient vocations, fishing. Jesus might have taken his station near the largest group; he might have called aloud so that many could have heard him; he might have said, "All fishermen follow me." But he did nothing of the sort. He took occasion to pass near where two certain men were mending their nets and said to these two men, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men." There must have been some good reason why he spoke in this particular way to these two men; otherwise he would have addressed his remarks to others. But undoubtedly Jesus saw in these two men better material out of which to develop disciples than in all others, and he chose them. They eventually justified his choice and were numbered with the twelve.

In his ministry and teachings, Jesus talked about particular things to certain people. The discernment of his master mind is infinitely superior to ours, yet his method employed in converting people to his cause stands today as an outstanding example of the best way to approach men and women with the message of the gospel and to convert them to it.

A list of possible converts to the gospel of Christ, as preached by this church, may be gathered from innumerable sources. Every member can count among his friends a large number who do not belong to the church, and in this group there are sure to be certain ones who are religiously inclined and who may become converts to the church if properly approached with its message. In a branch of one hundred members there are probably twenty-five families, each of whom can probably count among his nonmember friends at least four who more than all others would be attracted by the message of the church. These names should be handed to the branch pastor and recorded on the prospect list.

There are families who have had cordial business relations with the corner grocer over a period of years. It may be taken for granted that he knows about the church, but possibly he has never been invited to attend the church services. Why not list your grocer as a possible convert?

Then there are your next door neighbors, or former friends in other neighborhoods, whose names should be placed on the list. There are the school-teachers who teach your children in school and with whom you have a speaking acquaintance by the contact made through the parent-teacher association. Why not give them a chance to hear the message of the church by placing them on the list of possible converts? Many acquaintances are made on street cars, riding to and from work. The names of some of these people may be placed on the prospect list. Visits to the homes of those who are sick, and friendly calls at hospitals will frequently develop prospects for conversion, whose names should be added to the list.

Many people have friends in other cities where there are branches of the church, and undoubtedly some of these people could be attracted to the gospel through a friendly approach. The names of these persons should be added to the local prospect list and should then be forwarded to the branch pastor in the city where they reside. It is frequently the case that missionaries are changed from one field to another and can name a number of individuals who are friendly to the church but have never reached a decision about joining the church. Before leaving one missionary field for another, all such prospects should be listed, so that follow-up work may be performed. Preparatory work done by one missionary may often be completed by the one who follows him.

The gospel of Jesus Christ will meet the need of every person in every situation in life if permitted to do its work. The opportunity to be converted to the gospel and to become a member of this church should not be denied to anyone. Therefore, the list of prospects for conversion should not be limited to those in modest circumstances. Neither should it be made available alone to the wealthy class; also its cordial message should be extended to that great middle class which exercises such a stabilizing influence on the common life of our Nation.

The prospect list can be built in any branch by the cooperative effort of officers and members. The discovery of one prospect will usually suggest how and where to find another. The idea has inexhaustible possibilities and will grow and develop in proportion to the amount of energy spent. It helps us to discover how immediate is the field for missionary enterprise, which lies at our very door.

The Adventures at Toronto

By L. E. Flowers

During the week of June 23 to 29 three important meetings were held at Toronto, Ontario. One of them was the quadrennial Convention of the International Council of Religious Education, which had an attendance of more than four thousand—mainly adults, leaders and teachers, religious educators. In addition to this there were two young people's meetings: The Christian Youth Council of North America, made up of 175 young people and 50 professional leaders of youth; and the Christian Youth Conference of North America, which had an attendance of fifteen or sixteen hundred. Participants in all three meetings were principally from the United States and Canada, although there were some from nations abroad.

The theme of the general convention was the commission of Christ, "Go . . . teach," and the slogan of the convention was, "Every church a school of Christian living." The program of the convention was centered around three main questions, as follows: "What are the objectives or aims of religious education?" "What needs are unmet by the present program?" and "What plans and emphases should we undertake during the next four years?" The convention was divided into conferences and study groups on the basis of the varied interests, including "Administration," "Adult workers," "Children's workers," "Leaders of youth," "Pastors," "Vacation church school," and so forth. Addresses and worship services made up the afternoon and evening programs, all bearing more or less directly upon the central theme of the convention.

For the consideration of members of the young people's conferences, the planning committee had chosen materials under the title of "Adventures in the Christian quest." These were outlined after more than a year of consultation directly and by mail with young people all over the United States and Canada, getting their opinions as to what were the major issues facing Christian young people today. These were crystallized in the form of six emphases or fields of investigation, stated as follows:

Jesus Christ: A deeper grasp of his ideals and personal power.

Christian Conduct: To find and practice the Christian solution to the problems of life.

Worship and Prayer: A fellowship of deeper experience in the values of worship and prayer.

Other Youth: An extension of Jesus' ideals, by youth, to other youth everywhere.

Christian Unity: An enlistment of youth in world efforts toward a united Christendom.

A Christian Society: An application of Jesus' teachings to social and economic life.

The young people and their leaders were divided into six commissions or conferences on the basis of these six fields of study, each to give special attention and discussion to its own topic. Forum sessions were held, in which the various commissions made reports and recommendations to the general body, while the members of the forum in turn offered criticisms and suggestions in regard to the reports made. A worship committee of young people conducted a devotional service as the first part of each day's program.

It is difficult to say just at present what any or all of these conventions accomplished. Recommendations were made and reports were tabulated, but until the Findings Committee of each body submits its written report one can hardly summarize them in any sort of organized fashion. But we may select a number of elements or characteristics of these meetings which made them seem very much worth while and which comprise, perhaps, in the last analysis, some of their most significant results.

First of all, it is eminently of value and certainly encouraging to all that representatives of nearly fifty denominations and Christian agencies can cooperate in such a program of study and discussion. The International Council of Religious Education itself is made up of forty-two Protestant denominations, and besides its members a number of other denominations were invited to participate, as well as such organizations as the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.—the latter being particularly represented in the youth meetings along with such groups as the Christian Endeavor, Epworth League, and the Baptist Young People's Union.

Each of these representatives, of course, brought with him his particular background of denominational experience, brought with him perhaps those modes of thought and practice peculiar to his own church. Yet the program of the conventions was such that these differences of faith were not emphasized; but rather each representative was allowed to contribute, along with the others, whatever in his experience might be beneficial to all.

In other words, one of the most worth-while things in this sort of convention is that it passes over those things upon which the denominations involved disagree, and on the other hand places special stress on those things upon which all can unite. This is a healthful and a profitable procedure; it works toward a helpful fellowship among Christian peoples.

The outstanding point at which Christian bodies and denominations are at one, lies in the life and teachings of Jesus Christ. He is the greatest and most inclusive of all unifying principles. And in the Toronto conventions this principle was made paramount throughout. "Christian living," meaning the life which is more and more like that which Jesus lived, was set up as the goal of all endeavors and programs.

Social movements and reforms upon which most Christian bodies are agreed came in for a great deal of attention. Discussions on prohibition and law enforcement were carried on; and recommendations were made in this regard. Ideals of international good will and world brotherhood and peace were set up, and suggestions for taking steps toward these ideals were worked out and formulated. The improvement of the quality of individual citizenship was considered as a desirable goal for attainment by professed Christians; ways and means of participating in the preservation of law and order and good government were talked over. The desire of people of all faiths to bring about reforms in such fields as these cuts across and extends above all denominational lines of cleavage. It is well that Christian peoples shall unite on the big things in which they all believe.

In the exchange of thought which naturally accompanies such gatherings, those participating can not but be more appreciative ever after of the sincerity of those of other faiths. However, they may disagree on some points, whatever they may think of the program and the doctrines of other denominations, they can not but respect more highly the members of those other churches because of the personal contact and acquaintance which comes from associating with them in an interchurch convention. In the abstract they may retain a prejudice which holds them far apart; in the specific rubbing of elbows which comes with a week of study and conversation together, they are made friends. Enmity and distrust are bred of misunderstanding; with the understanding of one another's viewpoints come mutual respect and consideration.

As one sits in the conferences and study groups of such a convention, he is quickly impressed with the fact that other churches are thinking and working on the same or similar problems that have been facing one's own denomination. In this very fact comes the opportunity for comparing notes and offering for exchange the particular experience of each, the presentation to the group of those methods of administration or organization or practice which have proved most successful under fair trial. Each person can thus select those elements of the experience of all which he can adapt to his own individual and denominational situation; those which he does not consider of use he can discard or disregard. No man or woman, let it be made clear, is present in such a body to exalt or promote or "sell" his own institution or denomination; he is the representative of such a body, it is true, but as a member of this larger interchurch meeting he comes only as a fellow Christian, to offer what he has that may be of help to others. This he presents in the form of principles and not as doctrines of any particular faith.

Just a mention of a few problems or points of discussion which were prominent in the main convention at Toronto, and which seem to be at the present time receiving much attention in the churches. One of these is the obvious need for the unification of the forces of religious education. With few exceptions churches are finding that they are dissipating their strength in trying to carry on a program of religious education. Why? Because they have so many varied and independent and uncoordinated organizations and units within the church, all of which are supposedly aiming at the same thing, yet among which there is quite often friction and overlapping, and quite naturally so. The tendency at the present time is toward a unification of these forces, toward the amalgamation of organizations and the reorganization of religious education units on the basis of ages—such as adult, young people's, and children's groups, or divisions. The principal idea is that there shall be a close relationship and coordination among all agencies which have anything to do with the big common task, that of educating boys and girls and men and women religiously. This program, it is being found, should and can be extended to include not only Sunday, but week days; not only the winter months, but the vacation period; not only the Sunday school class and the worship service, but the playground and the market and the office desk, and every field in which human conduct and character are involved. It is a big task, and the churches are coming to realize it and to better prepare and organize for it.

Perhaps the greatest need of the churches, of the church schools, of all the agencies which have to do with religious education, was discovered quite clearly in the sessions of the convention. That need is for an increasingly well-trained, sympathetic, intelligent leadership. The best of methods, the best of materials, the best of everything else becomes less effective if leadership is not also the best. Do not misunderstand me: this is not a bid for college-trained leaders especially; nor is it a condemnation of that host of fine leaders and teachers who have so nobly helped our boys and girls to grow. It is only a statement of a fact that we are coming more and more to realize—that the times and the conditions demand that our leadership be of the very best possible—and "best" means as well trained as possible and also that they shall be wise leaders, with cultivated hearts as well as cultivated minds. We must have neither the leader who is long on academic training and short on common sense, nor the leader who is short on training and long on enthusiasm; we need leaders who combine training and study with wisdom and clear vision and willingness to serve.

And young people will respond to this sort of leadership. There has been somewhat of a "fad" recently on the idea that young people would rather do things for themselves than to have leaders. I don't believe it; and I don't think experience with young people in general will bear the theory out. It is not a matter of having leadership or not having it; it is a matter of the quality of leadership. Young people accept readily, yes, they welcome leaders who see their point of view, who help them and yet do not dominate them. The teacher who can furnish this sort of leadership, though his hair be gray and his years many, may win his way to a place of high esteem in the hearts of young people. We need so much today a high quality of sympathetic and intelligent leadership. We must have it, if superior men and women for tomorrow are to be produced from the boys and girls of today.

The conventions at Toronto had some disadvantages, it may be said. The program may have been a little too ambitious, the schedule a little too strenuous—they had the weakness which is common to all such undertakings—the attempt to cover much ground in a short period of time. Any number of subjects were considered in a week, one of which would have offered opportunity for six months' study and discussion. Perhaps the leaders of the conferences expected too much. Hundreds and thousands of people can not gather from all parts of a continent and in a few short days crystallize their opinions on very many important things satisfactorily. Perhaps it was a mistake to expect any very lengthy tabulations of findings and recommendations. But the future will tell on that score.

It seems to me impossible that any person could have participated in such a gathering as we have been describing without experiencing a broadening of soul and of life. To talk and to study with people of a score of faiths different from one's own; to sit at the feet of great scholars in the field of religious education and hear their expressed convictions; to feel, as it were, the pulse-beat of thousands of North America's honest folk who are trying to follow the Teacher of Nazareth—this can not but touch the heart of one who experiences it and leave him "never again the same."

And the true worth of the Youth Conferences and the Religious Education Convention of North America shall not be found in the tabulated findings which are to be published within a few weeks or months. Its greatest value will not be found in the notes which were made as the study groups met and the conferences held their sessions. The most lasting and most significant results will appear gradually and almost invisibly as the thousands who met at Toronto go back into their various fields of effort and take up again the tasks to which their lives are dedicated. The greatest findings of all are those which shall issue in the lives of young people and men and women who from this experience take new devotion and new courage and added zeal to carry on in the noble profession of teaching and leading and walking in the footsteps of Him who gave to all their greatest commission.

The Open Door of the Second Century

He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches. And to the angel of the church in Philadelphia write: These things saith he that is holy, he that is true, he that hath the key of David, he that openeth, and no man shutteth; and shutteth, and no man openeth; I know thy works: behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it; for thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.—Revelation 3: 6-8.

These words are addressed to the saints of the Philadelphia church, but are applicable to us today, as we enter upon our task for the second century. In every century and before every people God sets an open door. He not only opens the door, but extends an invitation to all to enter, and gives the assurance that no man can shut the door or prevent others from entering. This assurance places the responsibility of establishing the kingdom of God in the hearts of men, of the building of Zion in this century upon us.

We can not, if we desired, divorce ourselves from the history of the past. We can not forget or fail to give credit to those who have given so much in the past to make possible our present opportunity to achieve what God has decreed. However, the memory of those who have gone on to their reward may hinder our progress rather than advance our interests and those of the church, not because of their failure to act wisely, and in keeping with wisdom, but because of our attitude towards what they did, and our failure to connect our work with theirs. There is danger that our heritage may stifle growth rather than act as an incentive to us to enter the door God has opened for us.

With a degree of pride we remember and relate to our friends the story of the boy fifteen years old who read in the Bible, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God." How that taking this literally he went to the woods to pray in order to put God to the test; and how God recognized him and answered his prayer, giving to him a revelation which sent him forth to establish the kingdom of God on earth. But remembering this with other incidents of the past, and relating them to our friends, will not serve as a passport for our entrance to the open door. We must read, we must believe, we must pray with such faith that God will reveal himself to us. We must have an experience ourselves which will send us forth to establish the kingdom of God in the coming century as he went forth in the century which has just closed.

As we enter the open door it will be to our advantage to keep in mind the revelations to Joseph and the church; the coming forth of the Book of Mormon and its translation by the power of God. The sacrifice of those who suffered and bled and died during the past century in their attempt to establish the kingdom of God in their time should also find place in our consciousness. However, our success in building Zion will be determined by our conviction that we have heard the same message and have been chosen to carry on, building upon the foundation already laid.

The open door of the second century stands ajar to the man who is willing to go out and serve humanity; to the woman who is anxiously waiting to lend a helping hand to society; to the boy or girl who is looking for a worth-while task. Like the door which was opened to the saints of the Philadelphia church, and to those who toiled in the first century of the present church, it means struggle and sacrifice; sometimes sorrow and disappointment may overtake us.

Those who carry the message of Christ, those who take part in the building of Zion, must expect to wear the same yoke Christ wore and bear the same burden he bore. The way of the cross is not an easy way, but it leads on. It is God's way of dealing with men.

God has always dealt with man according to his needs. When he beheld Adam's need, in the garden, he made him woman for a helpmate. After their transgression and expulsion, God beholding their need prepared for them the gospel, which opened the door for their return. Beholding the need of mankind today, God revealed to Joseph Smith his plan for the building of Zion. The church is not Zion. The church was organized for the purpose of building Zion. Coming into the church through baptism only admits you into the workshop of God.

From the parable of the ten virgins we learn there were five wise and five foolish; five who entered and five who did not. They were all equally anxious to enter. The foolish were refused entrance, not because the bridegroom did not want them or that the door was closed, but because they were not prepared. The door of the second century swings open to every man and woman, and God invites him to make ready to enter. It is the door of opportunity, the door of service, and no man can close that door; neither can any person enter unless he has on the wedding garment of righteousness.

Because of our human frailties it is quite difficult for us to distinguish an open door from a closed door. We must trust God, believing that he will always act in a manner that will be for our well-being. No doubt as the disciples witnessed Jesus hanging on the cross and saw the tomb sealed, they felt that the door was closed against them, but it was God's way of opening a door to all the world—the door of immortality. Christ's preparation for the tomb made possible his coming forth, and our preparation for the task of the second century will make possible the building of Zion. If we make the preparation we can rest assured that God will open the door, and though disappointments may come, and at times we may feel that the door is closed, Zion will be established.

During his confinement in prison, no doubt Joseph experienced times of discouragement when he questioned the source of his dreams and had misgivings regarding their fulfillment, but he did not turn away from God. When opportunity came he was ready to use his gift of interpreting, even in the prison. If he had not exercised faith in God to believe that he would take care of him and open the door, making it possible for him to accomplish what God had intended, he might never have ascended to the high position he did. The prison was an open door to the throne.

As the children of Israel were led down toward the Red Sea by Moses, they complained, for to them the Red Sea in front of them and the armies of Pharaoh behind them meant nothing short of death. The Red Sea appeared to them as a closed door, but it was an open door which led toward the promised land. It required faith to enter the path through the sea, and it will require faith for us to enter the door that God has opened for us, which leads toward the redemption of Zion.

In Enterprise, Alabama, a monument was erected to the boll weevil. It was erected to celebrate the prosperity that came when the boll weevil compelled the farmers to turn from cotton to other crops. Diversification was so successful that the pest proved to be a blessing in disguise. The people became far more prosperous than they were before. Many times what seems to be a cruel twist of fate proves to be the open door to better things.

When the cotton crop failed because of the boll weevil, there were probably very few who could see anything but disaster, but it was just the reverse. That which they thought to be a curse was a great blessing, an open door. In my own life I have stood appalled before closed doors which meant great disappointment, and have later looked back with blessings and thanksgiving on the fate that closed them, for it was God's way of opening before me the door of opportunity.

Look back over your own life and see if there are not some closed doors in it to which you might well set up a monument in memory, though when they closed you felt your finish had come. Consider the statement made regarding the children of Israel: "They went forth to go into the land of Canaan, and into the land of Canaan they came." They went forth in faith trusting God to open the door for them, and he did. If we will go forth to go into the land of Zion, into the land of Zion we will come, for God will open a door for us.

A young man said to me (he is in the mission field), "I am happy to know that we do not have to make the sacrifices our fathers made in the early church." After witnessing the pageant, he had a change of heart, contending that as he sat in the Auditorium he had an experience that caused him to understand that God would require even greater sacrifices of his people in this century than in the one just past. His experience was genuine. His conclusions were correct. When the time of sacrifice is past the time of our accomplishments will have come to an end. Zion must be established by sacrifice.

In section 64 of the Doctrine and Covenants the Lord uses this language:

Behold, now it is called today (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people.

I have never thought that God would require me to give up my life in the sense of becoming a martyr for the church; but I do think he expects me to be willing to do that if need be, and that he will require an equal sacrifice in other ways. My trials are not harder than yours, they are different; neither are your burdens heavier than mine; they are different. It was a splendid thing that our forefathers were willing to toil and sacrifice, to bleed and die for the cause we love equally with them, but their bleeding and dying will no more suffice to get us through the open door than the virgins who had oil in their lamps could suffice for those who had none.

Satan as well as God has an open door. The problem of choosing is ever before us. God gave to man his agency to choose, to determine his own course, and Satan recognizes this and works accordingly. Satan never uses force; he, like Jesus, invites and persuades. He tries to divert our attention from the course of Zion, inviting us to take up side lines, giving our attention to other things, which will cause our interest in Zion to slacken. If we shall accomplish what God intends, we must, like the poor widow, cast in all that we have, even though it be very little.

In 1920 Senator Harding conducted what he called a front porch campaign. He remained at home and let the other fellows do the campaigning. He did not go to the people he hoped to lead. He kept away from them. He was elected, but his administration was a gigantic failure. His interests were divided. Ours is not a front porch campaign. We must go out as Christ and his disciples went out, delivering the message of salvation, ministering to the people, building up the kingdom.

If I were given the task of preparing a slogan for the second century it would be, "Every member a missionary." I believe that is what God desires of us. "Let him that is warned warn his neighbor." Our goal for the next six years is forty thousand converts, which means that every member must get off his front porch and into the campaign for souls. God will open the door, but you must leave your front porch in order to enter it.

I am not given to being popular, and have often been accused of taking the part of the under dog, championing the unpopular cause. However, it is rather nice to be popular, and at times it is profitable. But we can not in this second century sacrifice principle for popularity, regardless of our ambition for it. Our church is a saving church, as well as a social church; therefore, in our sermons we must discuss more than the social events of the day, the economic conditions of the country, etc., and in our private conversations we should not forget that we are missionaries, ambassadors for God, and we should arrange our conversation accordingly.

A story is told of a young minister who preached, using popular texts, and discussed from his pulpit the topics of the day. One morning he found a note on the pulpit which read, "We would see Jesus." Understanding the meaning of this note, and being conscious of his failure, he prepared a sermon on Christian living, using proof texts from the life of Christ. He placed Jesus on the pedestal and put himself in the background. The following day he received another note which read, "Then were the disciples glad when they saw their Lord." The open door of the second century offers us an opportunity to exhibit Jesus to the world.

Jude spoke of a common salvation, but found it was necessary for him to exhort the saints to contend earnestly for the faith which was once delivered. Ours is not a common salvation; the same faith has been delivered to us, and our task is to deliver it to all the world, not only in word, but in deed. Jesus Christ must shine out through our lives. The cry of the world today is, "We would see Jesus"; and our task for the second century is to permit the gospel to be so burned into our lives that whenever we speak and wherever we go folks will hear the voice and see the face of Jesus.

It is necessary for us to develop men and women who can go out with the redeeming message of salvation and relieve the world of those three mighty terrors that have ever overshadowed mankind: sin, sorrow, and death. If we are to establish his kingdom on earth we must become master builders. No man ever became a great builder unless he was willing to use the principle of sacrifice. "The way of the cross leads on." We can not reveal Christ to the world unless we use the same principles he used, making our lives like his, denying ourselves as he denied himself. Those who enter the door must give themselves unreservedly to the task.

The door of the second century stands ajar, and as I look through, in imagination, I can see the face of Jesus and hear him say, "Come unto me." Therefore, as his witness I challenge you and plead with you to enter the door he has opened. Fill your lamps and trim them, that your light may reflect the life of Christ. Put on the robe of righteousness, that through you Jesus may be lifted and given an opportunity to draw all men unto him.

I pray that you may not only behold the open door, but that you may have courage to enter and be found worthy to receive from him who opens the door, "Go ye therefore and teach."

The Finished Product

A sermon by James W. Davis; reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

The text is recorded in the 3d chapter of 1st Corinthians, 9th verse: "For we are laborers together with God." There is something wonderful in the thought that we can be associated together with God, in carrying out his work.

It is a marvelous thing to be able to work. Some people are not able to work. They are not able physically, for reason of sickness or affliction, or other physical disabilities, and how the hours and the days drag; nothing that they can do. The man or woman who is able to work, do some useful thing, can find joy and pleasure in his endeavors. I like to work. Work makes me happy. A good deal depends upon what we are doing, of course. If we are doing some worth-while thing we may well appreciate our opportunities. If something that is not worth while, then it is too bad for us to waste our endeavors; but we realize that the work of the Lord is always important. It is always worth while. It is always good, and it is always grand and glorious and magnificent. And we can help. We can have a part in it.

When we look around and see the manifestations of God's handiwork, we are at once made to wonder, and are filled with amazement at that which he has accomplished. It is beyond our powers to appreciate fully. We are unable to realize its magnitude. All that science has done, and it is marvelous, has not revealed the glory of God's handiwork. All the discoveries that have been made through the centuries by all the great scientific people have never yet revealed the secret by which God creates and brings to pass his wonderful works—and yet we can help him. We all realize that a work so wonderful can not be understood by us, and is too great for us to accomplish in our own strength; but when we realize that we can be associated with God in that work, then, though we have limitations and are unable to carry on of ourselves, God, by reason of his greater genius, and of his greater power, is able to help us, and the work will go forth.

That which I want to speak about particularly has to do with the development of our own characters. I have thought much about God's work of creation, and I suppose that my first impressions, the same as many others, come from a view of the material side of his handiwork. I look upon the earth itself, and see the birds and the flowers and all the wonderful manifestations of vegetable life; I see the animals and the birds, all endowed with life, each one wonderful in itself, and I realize that it is a great creative genius which has been able to bring them into being. Then when I look upon man, and see all that he has done, all that he can do and is doing, it is marvelous to contemplate.

Men have wrought important things, and they will continue to do so; and yet the things God has done, and the things he is doing, and the things he proposes to do, are greater than any of these, because even in these creations the work of God is not yet complete. And narrowing it right down to mankind himself, the work of creating man in his higher order is certainly not yet complete.

We speak of the creation as having taken place in a given length of time, and so far as bringing the physical man into being is concerned, that is true, but God's work with man is not finished, and will not be finished for some time to come, because while we have been created and made the wonderful creatures we are, we have not yet reached the higher order of being that God has intended for us to attain. And the work of bringing us up to that higher level is the work in which we must participate, and I regard it as the greatest work of all. Speaking of creations, what man has done, can do, and will do, perhaps we see some things which challenge our admiration. We admire them, and stand amazed when we behold them.

I just came back from Winnipeg a short time ago. We have a magnificent piece of architectural accomplishment there. There is a capitol building which has cost a vast sum of money. It is a splendid piece of architecture. The fine materials challenge the admiration of all who go there. We have looked upon it many times and thought, If we possessed the creative genius to bring into being a structure like that, we could look upon it afterwards as a life's accomplishment, and feel that we had made a contribution to the art of the world which was worthy of any man.

Now you know of such things as that. Great buildings. Solomon's temple, we are told took forty-six years to build. We are told something of the materials that were used in it, and they were lavish in the use of costly materials. The finest of wood, the best of marble, the most valuable of everything, and gold was used extravagantly, and I am sure that the Jews were perfectly justified in being proud of that magnificent structure. It was the glory of their nation, and the men who designed it, the architects and the engineers who brought that building into being, were proud of it as long as they lived, and able to look upon it as an accomplishment worthy of a life's endeavor. On the summit of the mountain where stood the ancient city of Samaria, Herod the Great erected another magnificent temple. The marble of which it was constructed was quarried 700 miles up the Nile River; brought down on floats; hauled over the desert by teams of cattle; and put into position. It also became the pride of another nation and of another time. Needless to say, these magnificent structures have long been in ruins. Some of these pieces of marble are still protruding from the ground.

One of the most peculiar things, requiring a geological explanation, is the fact that although that city sat upon the very summit of a mountain, yet its ruins are covered with several feet of earth today. I could understand it if the earth had washed away and that marble and stone and other material was lying there a mass of weather-beaten ruins; but on the summit of a mountain they are actually covered with earth to a depth of eight or ten feet. This is not so easily understood.

These were great achievements, and yet they have been destroyed, and overthrown and come to naught. Other great buildings have been erected at various times, and still stand. Saint Peter's Cathedral in Rome is the pride of all Romans of the Roman Church. In London, Westminster Abbey and Saint Paul's Cathedral and such buildings are found, which are manifestations of man's creative genius. They are still standing, although Saint Paul's is undergoing a very costly process of reconstruction in order to preserve it. They are standing, and are still witnesses of the genius and creative power of man; but it is highly probable that there will come a time when they, too, will succumb to the ravages of time, if not to the destructive agencies of men themselves.

Enduring Character Building

But I want to talk of another kind of structure, and one that will stand the ravages of time. One that is indestructible, an achievement in which we, as individuals, may all have a part, and when it is accomplished we may look upon with pride and with appreciation because it will be something so much greater, so much more magnificent, so much more splendid than anything that we have seen thus far, that there will be no comparison at all, and the beauty of it all is that the materials are all right at hand. They do not cost us anything, and while we may be limited in our own creative genius and power, we have this always to comfort us, that God is with us, and we are associated with him in the work we have in hand.

I am talking about character building. It is an old theme, and yet nothing can be more important to us. We speak of character, and we have had it defined often enough, I am sure. What is character? How many people present can give us a definition of character. Maybe you are thinking about your reputation. Why, we all have occasion to think about that. What is reputation? I have heard it defined. We are told that reputation is what people think about us, or what people think we are; but character is what we are, and not what people think we are. These may be quite different, because people differ in their judgment, and are always more or less faulty in their conclusions. Those who love us and appreciate us very highly may overestimate us, and we will really not be as good as they think we are. There may be others who do not appreciate us as much, and they may not think we are as good as we are. It would be a rare thing if we could find anybody who could place a proper valuation upon us and discover exactly what we are, and what we are worth.

Man is not a man because he is six feet tall and measures 40 inches at the chest and 36 or 38 at the waist and weighs 190 pounds; because his eyes are blue and his hair is black. He is not a man because of his size, weight, or physical strength. If he is a man at all it is because of what he knows and what he says and what he does. That is what makes a man or a woman. You have seen men who were handsome—big, strong fellows—and yet their mental attitude was anything but creditable, and their conduct was such that you could not approve of it, and as a result you were not able to appreciate them. You had small regard for them. You have seen women, young women, middle-aged women, no matter about the age, but women who are fine physical specimens, beautiful to look upon, splendid figures, fine features, lovely eyes, beautiful hair, apparently everything to recommend them, but their mental attitude was such that their conversation and their conduct betrayed them, and consequently their place in society was not very enviable. That is the work God is interested in, in creating men and women to be all that it is possible for them to be, and God himself is God because of what he is, and what he says and what he does, and it is because of his thinking righteously and speaking righteously and working the works of righteousness, and because we know him as all that is pure, virtuous, lovely, good, and holy, that he is God. Otherwise, he would not be God at all.

What Determines Who We Are?

We speak about another personage, and we call him Satan. Why is he Satan? Because of what he thinks and what he says and what he does. And when we have compared the difference in the attitude between God and the adversary, it ought to be easy for us to see why we should love God and why we should serve him.

I want to ask some questions. What kind of a boy do you like best (turning to the women in the choir)? Some of these girls over here: What kind of a boy do you like best? Any lady in the house—what kind of a man do you like best? Now, gentlemen, what kind of a woman do you like best? Is it someone you can not believe? who will tell you a lie every time she speaks to you? Is that the kind? Someone who is really dishonest, or who can not be trusted? Someone who is mean and hateful, who uses profane and obscene language, and speaks disrespectfully and hatefully about other people? I don't think we like that kind of people very well.

Sometimes girls do develop an admiration for men who are not what they ought to be. That is because their judgment is poor. But, on the whole, we like the man who is an honorable man; the man who is a truthful man; who is a virtuous man; who is an industrious man. We like the man who is kind and generous and who manifests a genuine appreciation and love for his fellow man; not only for the immediate members of his own family, but for all around him, and whose heart is open to his fellow men, and whose hand is outstretched in kindness and generosity and mercy and helpfulness. That is the kind of a man we like. We like the woman who is a pure woman, who does not make so much fuss about her complexion; a virtuous woman. We like the woman who is honorable and noble, whose heart feels kindly toward her fellow man; the woman whose love is a purifying agency in the community where she lives; the woman whose example is such that when followed it lifts others to a higher level, and these people of such noble qualifications are the people who are developing the kind of character that is pleasing and acceptable, in the sight of God.

Building Character Requires Time

It takes a lifetime to do this. We can not build such a character overnight. We can not build a character in a week, a month, or a year. It takes us all the time we have, and the material we use in the building of it is the thoughts that come into our minds, the words that go out from our lips, and the deeds that we do, the works that we perform, the things that comprise our daily activities. That is the material we use in the building of our characters.

And so, if we are going to build a great building, a state capitol, a great cathedral, a temple, a great railway depot, or any kind of a great structure, we can not be too careful of the material we select. We want good material. We want material that, first of all, is substantial; that will carry the weight; that will resist the ravages of time and stand indefinitely; and that is not enough. We want material that, when it is brought together and put into place, will be beautiful. We want its appearance to cause us a genuine feeling of pleasure.

That kind of material is valuable; it is precious. Yet I said in the beginning of my discourse, that the material which is required in the building of character is all around us, is always available, costs us nothing, and yet it is very precious and very valuable.

Care Needed in Selection

It stands to reason that when we go to work to build our characters we must be careful of the thoughts we entertain. We sometimes think that we can not help thinking things. I don't know so much about that. I am afraid sometimes we are a little bit careless about our thoughts. Thoughts do come to us, perhaps, without our invitation. But we have the right to say, the ability to determine whether those thoughts shall abide with us. We may not prevent the stranger from coming to our door, but it remains for us to decide whether he shall have a welcome. We may entertain him or not, as we wish. That is for us to decide. And so, when a thought comes, don't shut the door, but take a look at it, size it up. If it does not look good, do not invite it in. If it does get in and does not conduct itself properly, do not make it welcome. And you know, thoughts, like ourselves, are rather sensitive. They will not stay where they are not welcome. Take one of these young Latter Day Saints, here, who has always lived in a good home, and has been associated with good people, has had good examples and good environment, and has never been contaminated with the wickedness in the world. Put him in an environment of wickedness and sinfulness and he will be most uncomfortable, and he will look for a way to get out. He will not want to stay.

The opposite is also true. Take someone from the lower walks of life, where they have lived in wickedness, sin, and abomination, and put him in an environment such as we have here among our young people, reared in good, true, Christian homes, with pure examples before them. Put that man, that person, in that environment, and he will be most unhappy. The first thing you know he will be gone. He will not stay.

The Selection of Thought

Well, if our thoughts, the thoughts we are accustomed to having in our minds, are pure and good and clean, and the wicked thought comes along and gets in among these good thoughts, it will not be happy. It will feel out of place and will not stay.

But if we bring it in and make it welcome, and then bring in some more just like it, and get a crowd of them in, they will have a little society of their own and will feel quite satisfied and contented, and will get the idea that they own the place. Then the good thoughts will be treated badly and they will not stay. They will go.

We have to decide that. Every man, every woman, every boy and girl, must decide what kind of thoughts they are going to entertain. There is an old saying: We can not prevent the birds from flying over our heads, but we can keep them from making nests in our hair. So we may not be able to prevent thoughts from coming into our minds, but we do not need to entertain them unless we want to. If we make up our minds that we want good thoughts, the kind of thoughts that will manifest themselves in a clean, pure, holy conversation; if we want the kind of thoughts that will lead us to pure, noble, and godly activities, we can have them. There are plenty of them. They are all around us. All we need do is to invite them in and make them welcome, and they will stay with us. And the first thing we know they will have complete control over our lives, and we will be building our characters with the kind of material which will stand the ravages of time. And when it is completed it will be beautiful to look upon.

Judging Our Works

We are laborers together with God. We may fail in the accomplishment of some of these great things I have mentioned that other men have done; but I want to say that I believe with all my soul that in that day when we stand before God and the books are opened, and we are judged out of the things that are written in the books, God will not ask us whether we built a great bridge; whether we constructed a railroad; or whether we built a state capitol or railway depot; or whether we developed a great industry, or anything of that kind. What he is going to be concerned about is what we have put into our lives in the way of thoughts and utterances and actions. If the thoughts, words, and deeds which have gone into our lives have been such that they have led us to the achievement of great things in the way of engineering feats, or the organization of great industries, well and good. But sometimes men are able to accomplish things such as these, and yet be anything but great men. I am thinking of men such as Stanford White, who can do things. But would they please God? If we are laboring together with God in this great work of developing character, and that day comes, we can stand before him and see ourselves in the same light that God sees us, and if we are pure and holy and clean, and have been made perfect, and are then clothed upon with life and immortality, it will be so much greater than anything that men have accomplished in the physical world that there will be no chance for comparison.

What has happened? Here is a man who has become a glorified being; who is perfect; a magnificent structure. He thinks, speaks, acts, like God. And in him is reflected all the glory of God. Ah, that is a wonderful thing, and that work is permanent. It will stand the ravages of time. Don't you think it is worth while? Why, the man who created Saint Peter's Cathedral—and I am presuming that behind that great structure there was one great genius who designed it: perhaps there were more, but there would have to be one—the man who did that work would have accomplished nothing such as I have described here. Don't forget it. You and I can accomplish such a wonderful thing as this, provided we have labored together with God.

The Laborer with God Must Know Him

How are we going to labor with God unless we keep a rather intimate acquaintance with him. I want you to think of this point. In order to labor with a man you have to be very closely associated with him; not only on speaking terms, but the acquaintance must be intimate. You must understand each other. You must have the same purpose, think the same thoughts, move towards the same objective, and there must be an understanding. The association must be agreeable. I have seen people working together who could not agree. What was the result? They did not work together very long. They dissolved partnership before they completed the work they were doing. I have seen others who have worked together, and were able to carry this work to completion. They understood each other, and their purposes were identical.

In order for us to labor with God we must know him; we must be acquainted. The acquaintanceship must be intimate. We must hold communication with each other. We must talk to him. He must talk to us, through his word, and he must speak to us through the whisper of his Spirit. There must be communication and understanding. He is the great Master Builder.

When the Auditorium was in process of construction, at the head of the operations was a man. He was the master builder. Back of him was the architect. God is not only the great Architect of the universe, but he is the Master Builder of the universe, and we are laboring with him. If so, we must recognize him as the Master Builder, for we are associated with him as helpers, and helpers only. And so, we must know God—must keep in touch with him. We must cultivate his acquaintance, find out what his ideas, his desires and wishes and purposes are, and then lend ourselves, and bend ourselves to his will and to the accomplishment of his purposes.

Communion Must Be Constant

How are we going to keep up this communion with God? First of all, by having the mind of Christ. To have the mind of Christ we must think like Christ thinks; and we can think as Christ thinks by a study of the word of God. We can come very near to finding out how Christ thinks by a study of his word. We must have the same opinions, desires, aims, purposes, and objects in life; and when we do, the rest will not be so hard. Then, through prayer, and prayer only, can we continue in contact with God.

I wonder if we neglect our prayers, or if we remember them. I wonder if we hold communion with God every day. Or if we get up in the morning and undertake our day's work without taking God into our confidence. We should put our confidence in him, and get an understanding with God right away, and get his help so that throughout the day we are helped and strengthened and are given the necessary assistance to carry out that day's work properly, because just as sure as we leave that day's work to chance we have lost that much in the process of the building of our character. And if it is not a successful day, then that which has gone into the construction of our characters for that day is unsuitable. We must think of these things.

How often I think, myself, when I am trying to do something and having difficulty with it, that I have not taken God into my reckoning as I should. This lesson has come home to me very often, and I am so serious about this that I don't believe we have any right to undertake anything at all, even the most commonplace affairs of everyday life, without first seeking the guiding hand of Almighty God, and the leadings of his Holy Spirit. If we do this we will be safe, and our work from day to day will stand the test. Finally, when that day comes when we are called to make a final accounting to God for our stewardship in this life, we will be ready and prepared to have our "work made manifest." Then we will behold in ourselves and in each other the grand result of our life's endeavors; perfect men and women, those like whom God set out in the beginning to produce, and in the creation of whom we have "labored together with him." We will then behold the "finished product."

What a glorious opportunity we have! Let us go forward, happy in the privilege of being associated with God and laboring with him in this most glorious of all creative enterprises.

REUNION NEWS

Eastern Montana Reunion

By the Press Committee: Joseph Barry, L. O. Wildermuth

This reunion was held at Andes from July 4 to 13, inclusive. The weather was good throughout the sessions except for a few extremely hot days.

Speakers were Apostle J. F. Curtis and Patriarch F. A. Smith, of Independence, Missouri; Patriarch G. W. Thorburn, of Deer Lodge, Montana; and Elders J. E. and L. O. Wildermuth, of Illinois.

The sermons and lectures of Apostle J. F. Curtis were of an instructive and inspirational nature. Some of the topics discussed in his lectures were: "Need for instruction and training for life in service to mankind and the need of revelation to instruct in regard to the things of God"; "God's love for men"; "Unchangeable gospel to changeable men"; and "If God speaks, he will not let it fail." He discussed the priesthood from Adam to Moses, referring to the high priesthood being taken away until the time of Christ because of transgressions of the people, also to the restoration of priesthood in latter days. A very interesting lecture on the Sabbath Day was also given. The sermons of Brother Curtis were of a missionary nature, being accompanied by the use of a chart. They were well received by the listeners.

Patriarch F. A. Smith in his lectures presented "The need for religious education," stating that the home is the best place for the beginning of this education. In another lecture he presented the calling of the patriarch and the need of the Saints to prepare for the blessings that can be given to God's people. Among the themes presented in his sermons were: "The life of Christ and our need to follow his example"; "The need of charity in the church and the world today"; "The need for the application of the golden rule today." These sermons and lectures seemed to go straight to the hearts of the listeners, and all were impressed that they should endeavor to lead a higher and a better life.

Patriarch G. W. Thorburn in his sermons presented the need for a study of the Bible. He emphasized the statement that the great men of the past and present were and are readers of the Bible and that prayer and faith in God are characteristics of leaders of men. Surely Latter Day Saints should continue to pray and have faith that the work of the Lord will culminate in a glorious consummation.

One of the thoughts presented by J. E. Wildermuth during a discourse was that stewardship includes not only the financial phases of life but that all our talents and powers of mind and body are part of our stewardship and should be given to God for the benefit of mankind.

The closing sermon of the reunion was delivered by L. O. Wildermuth to a large and attentive audience. The discourse was based on the theme of the need for not only a reformation but a restoration of the gospel because of apostasy and loss of divine authority.

Attendance was not so large as usual during the fore part of the reunion, but during the last few days of the gathering it increased until on the last Sunday very large audiences listened with splendid attention to the sermons. Attendance at the prayer services was excellent, and the meetings were of an uplifting nature. There was a large percentage of young people in attendance at all the services. The recreation provided and directed by Rolney Wildermuth was enjoyed by old and young.

District President Arthur Ritter, Bishop's Agent W. R. Hillman, and Elder S. M. Andes rendered able and efficient service in assisting in carrying on the reunion work.

The district conference convened in business session July 12, Saturday. Routine business matters were attended to, the election of officers for the ensuing year including the election of A. R. Ritter for district president.

The families of Brother Sam Andes, J. E. Wildermuth, and R. R. Gouldsmith entertained and cared for the visitors in the generous way characteristic of western people.

Those attending were from many parts of the district, western Montana, and western North Dakota.

Four were baptized during the reunion, and one was ordained to the priesthood.

North Dakota Reunion and Conference

By Mrs. M. D. Graham

The North Dakota district reunion was held this year at Logan, eight miles east of Minot, from June 20 to 29, on the grounds of Brother and Sister George Stredwick.

Though attendance this year was the smallest of any reunion in the district, the excellence of the class instruction was such as to amply repay those who attended regularly.

There are many factors to account for the dearth in numbers: the lateness of the spring forcing much June work upon the farmer members; money stringency; poor prices; some who are employed who could not have vacations at the time; sickness; and in some parts rain causing poor traveling conditions. It is a question if ten-day reunions can be considered paying propositions any more.

Apostle John F. Garver and Bishop G. Leslie DeLapp, of Lamoni, Iowa, were the able teachers during the two class periods of the morning, following prayer service. However, during the latter part of the week Bishop DeLapp used the two o'clock afternoon hour for his class period, and Elder Swen Swenson preached to the people at eleven o'clock in the morning.

Evening services, the best attended of the day, were occupied by Brothers Garver, DeLapp, and C. J. Smith, district missionary. Patriarch F. A. Smith made the members glad by his presence on the last Friday of the reunion, preaching two excellent sermons on Friday night and the closing Sunday night.

Of the local ministry present were noted Elders Thomas Leitch, of Fargo; William Sparling, of Minot; Warren McElwain, pastor of Minot Branch; J. W. Darling, of Thorne, with many of the Aaronic priesthood from various parts of the district.

Some very good prayer services were held, and an excellent feeling prevailed. Many expressed themselves as helped by the association of the Saints and testified to a renewal of strength coming to them to help them in their contacts with the world.

The district conference was postponed from Thursday afternoon to Saturday, the officers hoping for a larger attendance and also because of the unavoidable absence of District President C. J. Smith, called to Fargo to preach the funeral sermon of the son of Sister Elora Freeman, who lost his life in an accident.

Conference convened at 2 p. m., District President C. J. Smith in charge. The usual minutes and reports were read and approved. A resolution was offered by Elder Lester Anderson, of Dunn Center, that we adopt the new program of religious education. After some discussion, a motion was made and carried that "this resolution be laid upon the table until more is known about the matter." A resolution was presented by Brother Laurel McElwain asking that consideration be given the buying of a permanent reunion ground. Motion was made that a committee be appointed to consider favorable locations. A substitute was offered that the matter be referred to the district presidency, general church officers, and the Bishopric. The substitute prevailed. The people present seemed desirous of acting in harmony with the general church in this and of exercising due care.

The matter of ordination of Brother Harry Ratcliffe, of Fargo Branch, to the office of elder, and Brother Laurel McElwain, of Minot Branch, to the office of priest, was presented, and concurrence was given by the district. The motion was made that we have a reunion in 1931. A substitute was offered leaving the matter in the hands of the district presidency and general reunion committee. The substitute carried.

Election of officers of the district resulted in the following: District president, Charles J. Smith; secretary, J. W. Darling; Sunday school superintendent, Harry Ratcliffe; treasurer, Warren K. McElwain; superintendent Department of Recreation and Expression, Laurel McElwain; superintendent of women, Sister M. D. Graham; auditor, Lester H. Anderson; chorister, Laurel McElwain; librarian, Fern Shackow; bishop's agent, Doctor Charles Young was sustained.

The last Sunday was a busy day. Many came from distant points for the final day of the reunion. Lectures by Bishop DeLapp and Apostle Garver occupied the morning hours, there being good attendance.

The afternoon was given over to sacramental service, at which the large tent was filled to overflowing. At this service Brother Laurel McElwain was ordained a priest with fitting words spoken by Apostle John Garver. It was a ceremony deeply felt by many who had viewed the life and efforts of this young brother, and many were pleased to see him go forward in the Master's cause.

The ordination of Brother Harry Ratcliffe was left in charge of Fargo Branch, of which he is a member.

One hundred and eighty-two partook of dinner at the commissary on the last Sunday. Through the week, however, boarding had been light, owing to small attendance.

The district reserve had to be called on this year to pay expenses, and we were happy to have one to help in this emergency.

One thing of interest at the reunion was the attendance of some who had not been there for a period of from five to seven years and who expressed gladness to once more meet with the Saints in reunion. Children of these families were blessed, and parents were made to feel at home by their respective branch officers on the grounds.

Among the things not so comfortable to endure was considerable rain, which culminated in a small section of a tornado whipping over the camp on Friday night, doing much damage to large trees in the grove but very fortunately hurting no one. The trees fell all around the tents, but none of the tents or cars were touched. The people were up and valiantly holding down tent poles and ropes and dodging sudden leaks, while all the fire and artillery of the heavens were let loose for an hour and a half. There were many expressions of gratitude to the heavenly Father the next day for his protecting care.

No one was baptized at the reunion, but several names were given in to be attended to later in the various branches.

Patriarch F. A. Smith remained a few days visiting in Minot and vicinity until he was due at the Andes, Montana, reunion. Elder Swen Swenson also remained for several days. Apostle Garver, Bishop DeLapp, and Elder C. J. Smith left after the Sunday sacramental service for the joint reunion of Wisconsin and Minnesota Districts, held at Chetek, Wisconsin.

To those who were not at the reunion we can only say, you missed something, for in the sermons and class work were introduced thoughts and conclusions that were unusually helpful, broadening, and educational, being at the same time reasonable enough for everyday living—the message of consecration and Christian ministry that can qualify us for greater service.

Holdenville, Oklahoma

106 North Burgess

July 11.—Regular services continue at Holdenville each Sunday, Branch President R. L. Herring and Brother Fred Riebold doing the preaching.

We are only few in number, but there are among us the faithful who are determined to keep the gospel fires burning and to hold the light of Christ to the world.

Brother R. L. Herring was reelected pastor of the branch this year and is proving to be a true servant of Christ in many ways, putting forth every effort to do good. He and his assistants are filling appointments in the communities around Holdenville with good interest. We are sure much good will be accomplished.

Mother's Day was appropriately observed by the branch, the pastor delivering the sermon.

In the month of May Apostle E. J. Gleazer and District President F. Ed. Dillon were passing through Holdenville and stopped one night. Apostle Gleazer delivered a fine sermon on the text "Choose ye life."

The Saints gathered at the church at 6.30 in the evening, bringing with them baskets filled with good things to eat. These were spread on tables on Brother and Sister Broughton's lawn. Several visiting members were present. The association and the wonderful sermon of the evening helped us to become better members in the kingdom of God on earth.

The outlook for Holdenville Branch is bright. One has been called to the priesthood this year, and one of our brothers of the priesthood called higher. Surely there is much to be accomplished. The branch is looking forward to the tent meeting Missionary William Bath plans to hold at Wetumka and here in the near future. The meetings start at Wetumka July 20. We are hoping some may be added to our number as a result of this effort.

Services are well attended. The Spirit of God has been with us, bearing witness of what God wishes done.

The third Sunday in June was observed as Children's Day. Brother Edgar Mitchell, newly ordained a teacher in this local, delivered the morning sermon on the text, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve." In the evening the children gave a short program, which was followed by a talk by Brother Riebold on "Why we observe Children's Day."

Sacramental service July 6 was well attended, several members being present from Seminole.

Our aim is to improve our condition, to live in harmony, to work, to learn, and in all things to make ready, that we may have part in the gathering to Zion. We welcome all Saints to meet with us.

A member of the church recently mailed to headquarters a copy of the Southern Pacific Bulletin for June, 1930, having red penciled the following paragraph:

"R. F. Hewes, personal record clerk, Ogden, recently returned to the office, after having attended a centennial convention of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints at Independence, Missouri. Roy is pastor of this church in Ogden and was a delegate from Utah. One special car of delegates moved over the Southern Pacific, Oakland to Ogden, where Mr. and Mrs. Hewes joined them. We understand that nothing but favorable comment and praise was given for the service rendered this party over the S. P. Lines."

Artland, Saskatchewan

Our Mother's Day program was very short due to sickness, some of the members being quarantined with chicken pox and others with scarlet fever. But the Children's Day program was good. Each class donated numbers on the program.

The A. J. Cornish family was quarantined for over a month. The son, Vernon, and daughter, Dorothea, had scarlet fever. Dorothea was in the hospital and also had erysipelas while there. We are glad to say, however, that both are recovered, with no ill effects. Brother William Levitt's children had chicken pox, but all are well again.

A box social was held at the hall June 27, and the proceeds were used for Sacrifice Week fund.

Brother and Sister A. J. Cornish have a little daughter, Alma Jean, born March 31.

Sister J. J. Cornish has had very poor health this summer.

We had not been holding midweek prayer meetings of late, but on Sunday, June 22, a motion prevailed to start prayer meeting the next Wednesday night.

The members are eagerly looking forward to the Sunday school picnic to be held July 10 at Dilberry Lake.

San Francisco, California

Little Brown Church, Eighteenth and Danvers

On Sacrament Sunday, June 1, there were present with us Elder and Sister H. I. Velt, of Australia, who were on their way to Seattle, where their mission is located during this conference year. They came on Thursday and had expected to go to Portland, Oregon, over Sunday but could not get their tickets. With them we enjoyed a spiritual feast. The Spirit spoke through one of God's servants, cheering the hearts of the congregation and making us feel that God is indeed mindful of his people. Brother Velt was told that he had been delayed in order that he might bless us and that God might, in turn, give him a blessing; he was comforted and blessed for his work in his new mission, and Sister Velt also received a blessing.

At the Religio service in the evening Elder Velt showed pictures and gave a lecture on archaeology. At the later service he showed pictures of Australia and told of his work there. This is their first trip to the land of Zion, and San Francisco wishes them Godspeed in their work.

The church school celebrated flag day June 15. The children contributed a splendid flag drill, and since it was Children's Day, too, they furnished nearly all the program. Sister Irma Otis, superintendent, presented a beautiful, large silk flag to the school. It was saluted, and the song, "America," was sung. Always there is a beautiful spirit attending the school service, and this is retained for the preaching or sacramental service.

Elder G. P. Levitt honored this branch with a visit in June, preaching four evenings. His visits always leave the Saints on a higher spiritual and intellectual plane.

Brother Hiram Holt, of Pacific Grove, and old-time missionary, was here June 22 and spoke morning and evening. Another visitor, Brother Sherman, of San Diego, was here for a time. We hoped he could locate here, but he was unable to find work. He preached June 29.

Elder Herbert Hinton, formerly a member of this congregation but now a missionary to Northern California District, spent a week here and spoke two nights.

We are blessed in having in our midst one who has become an accomplished singer, Sister Ruth Evans. She has offered her services and is now teaching all who desire to learn to sing. We feel that this is a big step forward, and many are availing themselves of her offer.

Elder F. G. Pitt was here one Sunday, and his sermon encouraged the branch.

July 6 a peaceful sacramental hour was spent. Fifty-four were present, in spite of the fact that many had gone away over the week-end.

San Francisco was well represented at General Conference, and everyone came back determined to qualify that he might help the more ably to build Zion. The members of the branch are busy doing whatever comes to hand. We can say to the other branches of the church to be of good cheer. God will bless as we qualify and give our talents to his cause.

Hiteman, Iowa

On May 25, at the close of Sunday school, a short memorial service was held. Brother Edward Rowley, pastor, gave a short talk and planted a rosebush in memory of departed Saints.

Sister Ruth Smith is attending school at the State Teachers' College, Cedar Falls. She intends to teach at Oelwein, Iowa, in the fall. The branch will miss her.

The Women's Department continues to serve dinner at the church on each Thursday. Proceeds go to the building repair fund.

Children's Day was observed June 15. At 2.30 in the afternoon six were baptized. In the evening exercises were held, and afterward the confirmation took place. Brother Rowley officiated at both baptismal and confirmation services. Sister Leoma Burke is recovering from a serious appendix operation. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Branch members feel that the work is making advancement.

Words of Appreciation from a Departing Visitor

By G. Gillard

Now that the last au revoir has been said, the final bon voyage accorded, and I am on my homeward journey to Australia, I am commencing to think more intensely perhaps than heretofore upon my few months' sojourn in America, and upon the wealth of impressions and experiences it has brought me. Possibly these are still too recent, too close at hand, to be properly evaluated. Certainly quite a measure of time must elapse before I can estimate their full effect upon me.

But as I quit the friendly American shores, I am filled with a sense of gratitude and satisfaction that I was able to make this visit. To have attended General Conference alone would have made the journey worth while: the blessings and uplift that I in common with so many others received from that epochal gathering will I trust be of lasting significance in my life.

When there is added to this such a treasury of rich associations with the Saints, of visits to many of the branches, and the joy of meeting and talking and working with those who are striving to be Zion builders, then truly do I begin to realize the vast amount for which I have to be thankful. Then, too, I recall with joy the opportunity that was mine of visiting and familiarizing myself with those historic places hallowed and renowned in the story of our church—the Sacred Grove, Cumorah, Kirtland, Nauvoo! These indeed stand out as highlights in my experiences.

Other highlights there are in abundance. The Course of Time, splendid achievement of a fellow countryman and fellow Saint. What a happy privilege it was to hear the rendition of that inspired masterpiece! That in itself fulfilled a heartfelt and earnest desire. Indeed, I might continue indefinitely, elaborating upon the many phases of my visit to America which have supplied some special need or brought some particular blessing in their train.

Suffice it for me to reiterate, simply perhaps, but none the less fervently, that "I am glad I came," and permit me here through these pages to express my sincere gratitude and appreciation for the many kindnesses and the open-hearted hospitality of the American Saints with whom I have come in contact, they who have done so much towards making my stay in their midst a happy and a pleasant one. Truly I have felt as I associated with them the presence in strong measure of that "tie that binds our hearts in Christian love." Brothers and sisters indeed I have found them, and by the effecting of conditions such as this the power of the gospel is truly manifest. It has indeed made me feel that it is good to be a Saint in latter days. I leave America with the earnest hope that some day I shall be permitted to return and renew those friendships and associations which already have enriched me to so great an extent.

Colorado Springs, Colorado

July 9.—The condition of this branch is most encouraging. In the Sunday school Brother F. H. Engstrom is conducting a credit class in Church History. It is the first of its kind in our morning services, although the Department of Recreation and Expression has completed several classes of this kind. Brother Engstrom's class is a young people's group and is creating great interest among the young. The class has grown nearly one hundred per cent since the beginning of the course.

Elder E. P. Darnell is conducting an interesting class in Doctrine and Covenants study. As a text he is using Brother F. Henry Edwards's pamphlet. The class takes up the two hours in the evening. The first hour is given to round table work, and the last is given in lecture form, subject to question at all times. This class has increased evening attendance.

At the regular semiannual branch business meeting the new plan for the church school was accepted. F. H. Engstrom was made superintendent. We expect the new plan to assist us in making much progress. Brother Engstrom has much influence with the young people and has had considerable experience working with them.

Sister O. E. Sade, who has been in Florida for the past several months with her daughter, Sister John Wylie, is again in Colorado Springs. Sister Wylie, her husband, and baby daughter returned with Sister Sade and expect to make this their permanent home. Sister Sade is known throughout the church as the wife of Brother O. E. Sade, who gave his life as a missionary in the church.

Bremerton, Washington

Branch President F. H. Bacher went to General Conference. When he returned he gave a splendid talk on the conference, and especially on stewardships.

June 8 a splendid Children's Day program was presented by the children of the Sunday school. The play was "Zion builders we would be." Our Sunday school is composed of a great many nonmembers, and we had a splendid crowd of friends and parents of the children. They seemed to share genuine appreciation for the work done.

Two of the sisters took the children of the beginner and primary departments to the park the afternoon of June 11. The children had a pleasant time playing and thought it a real party when lemonade and cookies were served.

Then June 13 (Friday, too) the juniors and intermediates met at the church, from where they were taken to Kitsap Lake for a splash party and picnic. After all had eaten and rested for an hour, they went in for a swim. It was late afternoon when they left for home.

Former District Missionary A. C. Martin and family and the new district missionary, Elder H. I. Velt, and Brother

G. Gillard, of Australia, made Bremerton a visit June 15. Brother Velt preached in the morning. He and Brother Gillard found it necessary to rush back to Seattle, but Brother Martin and family stayed here until Monday, and he preached in the evening.

Sister McDole, of Seattle, came to Bremerton the closing Sunday of June and talked in the morning and afternoon. She gave many high lights of conference and the new plan of religious education. Having all these good things from conference has been a treat to Bremerton Saints.

We have had a splendid attendance at Sunday school until lately. Some are away on vacation trips, and some are ill. Our aged Sister Richmond has been quite ill but is better. Sister Vera Westgren is ill in the hospital, but we are praying for her recovery. Sister Alice Brown is also in the hospital.

Our young brother, Paul Dalberg, has returned from Independence, where he has been for some time. He has gone to Kent to take charge of a farm owned by his father. Sister Dalberg and the children have gone with him, leaving Brother Dalberg and Linden in Bremerton. They will probably go later.

This spring we were proud to have one of our number among the high school graduates, Linden Dalberg. Linden expects to go on into fields of higher education, and we are glad to hear of our young people going ahead.

The Saints are looking forward to the reunion. It is an inspiration to us.

South Bend and Mishawaka Branch

Reddick and Delaware Streets, Mishawaka, Indiana

Church activities continued during the months of May and June, regular services being held. Brothers Osler, McKnight, Freeman, Coonfare, and Myers occupied the pulpit.

A group of Orioles and True Blues gathered at the home of Genevieve Zehnor May 8 to surprise her on her birthday. A happy evening was spent.

Clair Galloway May 11 took his class of boys, The Upstreamers, on a hike over Mishawaka hills.

Six days later the Department of Recreation and Expression gave a box social at the home of Brother and Sister Main. It was a rainy evening, however, and attendance was slight.

Members of the orchestra and several carloads of Saints attended services at Elkhart May 18. The occasion was Brother C. B. Freeman's last Sunday there. After services they gathered at the home of Brother and Sister M. J. Willsey, where they enjoyed a basket dinner and music.

On May 19 a large crowd gathered at the home of Elder C. B. Freeman to bid the family farewell. Economic conditions made it necessary for Brother Freeman to find employment elsewhere.

Sister Jane Malloy was taken to Epworth Hospital for an operation May 20 and since has fully recovered. Brother Leonard Tappan was the victim of a motorcycle accident June 4, suffering a badly crushed foot. He still carries the injured member in a cast, but we hope for a complete recovery.

Several motored to Clear Lake, Indiana, June 8, to attend the district conference. A splendid day was enjoyed.

June 15 was observed as Children's Day. The children gave a program at the church, then the members gathered at Pottawattamie Park for basket dinner. In the afternoon we went to Merrifield Park in Mishawaka, where Virgil Myers was buried in the waters of baptism by Elder V. L. Coonfare. He was confirmed in the evening. Frequent showers caused some inconvenience during the day.

The Saints of South Bend and Mishawaka and Elkhart gathered June 29 with Hibbard members, who laid the corner stone of their new church. The local orchestra and singers assisted in the program. A happy day was experienced.

Elder S. W. L. Scott came to Mishawaka June 24 to assist in preparing for the Hibbard program. He preached Wednesday night, and his stay was much enjoyed.

Sunday School Superintendent F. E. Myers reports that the Sunday school has made a one hundred per cent gain in membership and attendance in the past year.

Oakland, California

From The Oakland Bulletin

Bishop Edward Ingham spoke to the Saints the evening of June 22, his sermon being much appreciated. On June 29 Patriarch F. G. Pitt, who was en route to Joliet, Illinois, after a visit with his son's family in Los Angeles, was the morning speaker. That evening Brother H. L. Holt, for many years missionary on the Pacific Coast, was the speaker.

A priesthood meeting was held the evening of July 3.

Miss Hope Butterfield, daughter of Brother and Sister Arthur Butterfield, was married at her home June 14. One hundred and fifty relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony, which was read by Doctor W. P. Bush.

The Saints met at Corneas Park for the Fourth of July picnic. Games were played, and lunch helped to celebrate the Fourth.

Recently the members of the Women's Department entertained the women of the East Lake Club. After a pleasing program of music and readings, tea was served. The collection taken is for the decoration of the new church.

We are glad to report the continued improvement of the sick members. Brother Wilson, who is in the Southern Pacific Hospital, is making splendid progress. Sister Wilson and her son are in San Francisco with her brother, to be near her husband. Late news informs us that Dolly Anderson continues to improve.

The district conference will convene at the church July 26 and 27. The district president asked for the statistical report and for the delegates to be selected. This was done July 6 at the close of the service.

A local publication, the Inter-city Express, for June 26, carried a half-column story of the new church erected by Berkeley Saints—the opening day, the building plan, the names of the designer and pastor, and announcement of regular services. Accompanying the story is a large picture of the edifice.

New Westminster, British Columbia

July 7.—Sunday afternoon, June 1, was a gala occasion for the New Westminster Branch. The church was filled to hear parts of the centennial oratorio, The Course of Time, by J. T. Gresty. A part orchestral effect was secured by combining organ, piano, and violin. The numbers given were the "Prologue," "Chaos," "Wake, dear remembrances," "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle?" "Arise, shine for thy light is come," the first, second, and fifth verses of "Ein Feste Burg," "How beautiful are the feet," part of "Joseph's prayer," "March Funebre," "Rest in the Lord," "The millennium," and the "Triumph of Christ." Mrs. Whitson sang the soprano solo, and the choir then sang, "Let the mountains shout for joy." The remainder of the chorus was played on the piano and organ, the part for solo voices on the organ, and "Ein Feste Burg" on the piano. Soloists were Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Whitson, Brothers Leonard and Percy Quance, of Vancouver, Brother Austin Earle, of Seattle. Pianist was Sister Lillian Pope Cross, of Independence, Missouri; organist, Sister Minnie L. Strachan, New Westminster.

Stone Church

Pastor John F. Sheehy was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service, beginning a series of morning talks with his congregation. "Did you think to pray?" was sung by the Wahdemna Choral Club male quartet, Orville Martin, Robert Crawford, Richard Day, and Roderick May. The Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, sang the anthem, "The Lord brings back his own," by Galbraith. George Anway sang the solo parts. Robert Miller accompanied at the organ. Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the service, and was assisted by Patriarch Ammon White.

The city of God can be built only by a godly people, said Brother Sheehy. Too many of us who are living here are not even thinking in terms of Zion. We must not only be converted to the theology of the church but must dedicate our very selves to and pay the price of building the city.

"Deeds of kindness" was the theme of the junior worship at the Campus Sunday, July 13. Brother W. F. Bollinger was in charge. After the offering was taken up, Thelma Betts gave a reading. Elder Leonard Lea spoke on the subject "Courage."

Last Sunday morning at the Campus the theme of the junior worship was "Deeds of love." During the service Emerald Hoisington, Ruth Harder, and Ency Jamison sang a trio number. Myron Smith played a piano solo, and Audentia Thomas and Eleanor Faunce each gave readings. Sister Alice Burgess told a story to the children, and after the singing of "I'll try," the benediction was by Brother Bollinger.

A service for the blessing of little children was conducted Sunday afternoon at the Stone Church, Elders H. G. Barto, S. A. Thiel, George G. Lewis, and N. Carmichael assisting. Parents and friends partook of the reverential atmosphere of the hour, and six little ones were blessed: Martha Jane McKinney, Mary Anne McKinney, and James McKinney, children of Brother and Sister H. V. McKinney, of Atherton; Donald A. Dennis, son of Brother and Sister Ralph Dennis; Verna Lee Phelps, daughter of Brother and Sister Lester E. Phelps; and Norman Eugene Cox, son of Brother and Sister Norman Cox.

The gospel of home keeping and child training was the content of the sermon preached at the Campus Sunday evening by Pastor J. F. Sheehy. As a text the speaker used the text of President Smith's first Campus sermon this year: "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old he will not depart from it." Emphasis was given the responsible position of the home and parents in the lives of their children and the supplementary position of agencies outside the home.

Music for the service was supplied by the Auditorium Band, directed by Earl Cox. Elder George G. Lewis was in charge and introduced the speaker. He was assisted by Elder J. E. Cleveland, pastor at Spring Branch.

Among the People in Zion

An automobile accident July 15, near Odessa, Missouri, claimed for its victim a member of the church and faithful worker in the Stone Church congregation, Brother H. B. Roberts. The accident occurred on Highway No. 40, when the Nash sedan, driven by Brother Roberts, was crowded from the highway into a ten-foot ditch. Four other members of the party, including Sister Roberts, were injured. Following the accident the six members of the party were taken to the office of a local physician in Odessa, where Brother Roberts passed away. Our brother was born July 1, 1872, in Henry County, Tennessee, and has been a member of the church since August 11, 1901, when he was baptized at Independence. He has served as a deacon since March 25, 1906. Left to mourn are his widow, Sister Anne Friend Roberts; two brothers, Jess and Sam, of Independence; two sisters, Mrs. S. E. Pickens and Mrs. James Cochran, of Independence; an adopted daughter, Mrs. G. H. Lukens; other relatives, and a wide circle of friends. The funeral was held at the Stone Church the afternoon of July 17, Pastor Sheehy giving tribute to the life's work of the deceased. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Another member gone into the great beyond is Brother Robert Caleb Warr, seventy-three years old, a retired farmer, who died July 12 of cancer of the stomach at his home in Independence. He was born in Dale County, Alabama, where he made his home until 1920, when he moved to Independence. Surviving are his widow, Sister Martha F. Warr; two daughters, Nora Warr of the home and Mrs. C. J. Dixon, Independence; a son, A. E. Warr, Independence; a brother, James Warr, Repton, Alabama; and two sisters, Mrs. Fannie Moody, Repton, Alabama, and Mrs. Mary Duberry, of Brewton, Alabama. The funeral was conducted at the Carson and Son Funeral Home in charge of T. C. Kelley. Interment was in Woodlawn Cemetery.

Almost all the workers in Independence who include one or more reunions on their list of summer activities are gone from local ranks. Many others are out of town on vacation trips. They are missed from our services. However, considering the very hot weather which has been ours and the number who are away, attendance in the services of the church school and all other meetings is holding up well.

Liberty Street

The intense heat of July usually has a negative effect on any venture requiring physical exertion, but the Good Samaritan Class proved that even the obstacle of a soaring thermometer can be overcome when, July 11, they presented their play "The old-fashioned mother," to a very interested audience in the basement of the Auditorium.

Blaine Bender very ably coached the production in addition to filling a difficult role. Gertrude Davis was the old-fashioned mother and possessed all the attributes and suffered all the disappointments that are associated with that term. Comedy was furnished by Lee Davis and Sister Osa Curnutt. Others of the cast were Brother and Sister Raymond Wrigley, Harry Blake, Sister Nina Adams, Sister Olive Crawford, Betty Crawford, Cecil Walker, Glen Maxwell, and a singing school chorus. The Wahdemna Choral Club Male Quartet formed a part of the chorus. Earl Page arranged and executed the lighting effects.

The July communion service called many to worship together and in spiritual unity partake of the Lord's Supper. This is the one eleven o'clock service of the month in which the juniors worship with their parents. Every attempt is made to make the service worshipful and to impress on the minds of the children that members of the priesthood are called to a special type of service.

The speaker sent us by the local bishopric the second Sunday of the month was Elder G. G. Lewis. Complying with the financial law in order that the missionary work might be more ably prosecuted, was the theme of his sermon.

The morning of July 20 Russell Deeder, of Kansas City, was the speaker. Mr. Deeder is the teacher of a large Bible class in one of the Christian churches in Kansas City. Through the efforts of Walter Curtis this speaker was secured. Will faith in God and his Son Jesus Christ make one more than conqueror? Bible witnesses were called upon to answer this question.

One of the high points in the experiences of members of this local in the last four weeks was the return of Elder Glenn Davis from his mission in the South. His stay at home was entirely too short, but seeing him present at the opening of the church school and making a talk to the juniors at their morning service assured us that Glenn is still ours.

Walnut Park

The speaker for the eleven o'clock service at Walnut Park Sunday, July 20, was Elder George G. Lewis, who is in charge of the Religious Education activities in Independence. Brother Lewis used as a text a portion of the third chapter of James. The theme of his talk was "Hearers and doers of the Word." He pointed out that these two groups have existed in the church during its entire history, in the time of Christ and today. He defined the Word to be the principles of Christ. Two other points which he emphasized were that the quality of our striving shows whether or not we are making progress, and that testing is a primary principle not only of science but also of religion.

The Saints of Walnut Park appreciated Brother Lewis's discourse. The worship period of the service was greatly augmented by the songs and especially the anthem furnished by the choir.

During the closing exercises of the church school hour, a couple of special numbers of considerable interest were given. Sister Vera Chapman sang a solo, accompanied at the piano by Margaret Chapman. The other interesting item was a musical saw played by Sister Ward, sister of Brother E. E. Moorman. Sister Ward gave such an enjoyable number that she was asked to play again.

Englewood

Attendance at Englewood continues to hold up in spite of hot weather. The Z. O. A. Class is leading, with an average of thirty-five. They are studying the Book of Mormon, with Elder Leonard White as teacher. At the last class election Arthur Welch was chosen president of the class. He and his associates are to be congratulated on the work they are doing. July 4 and 5 they supervised an outing at Sunshine Lake that was enjoyed by a large crowd. Mat Taylor seemed to be the chief fisherman.

Elder Perry Hiles has taken charge of the visiting, and has several members of the priesthood working with him in visiting the homes of the Saints. This is much needed and is appreciated by the branch.

Local finances are in better shape than they have been for some months. Owing to much needed repairs on our building, we fell behind for a time. The efforts of the Saints to assist is commendable. Brother G. B. Closson is Bishop's agent.

The chorister, Elder Arthur Mills, has left for the summer on work for the general church. His presence in our services is much missed. Sister Hazel McConnell is doing his work and is busy arranging special numbers.

At the last conference in Zion the ordination of Brother Almon Hougas, superintendent of the church school, was authorized. At the close of the service he was ordained by his father, Elder T. A. Hougas, assisted by Elder Perry Hiles and D. S. McNamara.

Marshall

Elder Harold Thayer had a short vacation, so he took his family and parents, Brother and Sister George A. Thayer, to the foothills of the Ozarks over the week-end from Saturday, July 12, until Monday morning, July 14. They stopped at the hospitable home of Sister and Mr. Harrison Cothern near Cross Timbers. The missionaries know where that is.

They attended Sunday school at ten o'clock, and Brother Thayer preached at eleven, an earnest appeal to bring forth the fruits of the gospel, assuring them that God expects the increase.

This Sunday school upon one of the hills of Zion's land was a marvel to one of the company. They meet in a large commodious schoolroom. The superintendent is Priest Everett Mawhiney, assisted by Pearl Nance. The adult class is taught by Alma Lockling.

There was a fervent spirit present. These Saints come from among the hills, to worship, and to study God's word, and to sing the songs of Zion; and they sing; every one of them take part. They are holding to the rod of iron, and they will reap if they faint not.

Central Church

Special services marked last Sunday's activities at Central Church. A young people's prayer meeting was held at 6.30 in the woods on Mission Hills, followed by breakfast out of doors. Back at the church again, all participated in the worship period of the church school and the lesson period. At 10.50 opened the installation services, made impressive by appropriate music and an address by Elder Leonard Lea. The new officers are: Assistant pastor, George Mesley; children's division superintendent, Sister B. B. Root; young people's division, E. P. Nelson; adult division, Sister D. H. Blair. Pastor C. E. Wight gave the charge to the officers and teachers and to the church school. "I would be true" was sung by officers and teachers.

Patriarch Ammon White was the speaker at the open-air service at 7.45 in the evening.

The Happy Hollow family will present a benefit concert in the church the evening of July 29. The program will be sponsored by the Plus Ultra Class.

Mr. Arthur Steele, chief probation officer of the juvenile court in Kansas City, will be the speaker next Sunday evening.

The senior glee club meets for rehearsal at the rectory on Thursday at eight o'clock in the evening.

Sixty attended the prayer meeting supper last Wednesday. Another supper is planned for tonight.

The Stake O. B. K's are planning a trip to the stewardship farms at Atherton next Sunday afternoon at two o'clock. All who plan to go are asked to make reservations with Bill Brown.

At the Nauvoo camp for young people, Byrna Sandy, Eleanor Sandy, and Martha Criley were three out of six girls chosen for first honors in camping. Junior Trutchley won second honor. The Sandy girls were also chosen in a special camp club of representative girls. Byrna, Eleanor, and Martha also passed second standard swimming tests. We are proud of these young people.

Under the direction of Sister Blanche Green, the stake girls will go into camp at the McElroy farm at Fairmount. The Oriole camp will start July 25, the Temple Builder camp August 1, and the Blue Bird camp August 6 and 7. Swimming will be at the Independence Natatorium. The camp dues, which cover all necessary expenses, will be sixty-five cents a day.

Gladstone Church

The local church started July with a fine sacramental meeting. In the evening a joint sermon was delivered by Elders A. R. Moore and Charles G. Lewis.

Junior church is progressing.

Last Wednesday prayer meeting, even though the weather was hot, had average attendance.

Patriarch J. T. Gresty was recently in this branch. His sermon and visit were much appreciated. He will speak here again July 27.

The O. B. K's are doing fine. Elder George Mesley was with them last Sunday.

The Book of Mormon Class has some very interesting lessons. Elder L. C. Connelly lately addressed this group.

Bennington Church

Sunday morning, July 6, the service of the Lord's Supper was held, there being large attendance and a fine spirit. The little child of Brother and Sister Mawhiney was blessed, and several sick members received administration.

In the evening Elder George Mesley, assistant pastor at Central, was the speaker.

Elder F. A. Evans was the speaker the morning of July 13, his discourse being enjoyed by all present. In the evening Elder William Bollinger occupied the sacred desk. Sister Bollinger and children and a number of other visitors attended the evening service.

The young people's choir presented the cantata, "The Child Jesus," to a good audience.

Toronto, Ontario

The Toronto congregation, which met until a few months ago in the church edifice on Soho Street, has begun the erection of a new church home.

The Globe (Toronto) for July 14, tells the story in the following language:

The Toronto congregation of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints met on their lot at Saint Clair Avenue and Bathurst Street Saturday afternoon and broke sod for their new church. A brief service was held, in charge of J. L. Prentice, chairman of the building committee. Bishop J. A. Becker, one of the Presiding Bishops, and Apostle R. S. Budd, of Independence, Missouri, the headquarters of the church, were in attendance and took part in the exercises.

A. F. McLean, chairman of the local finance committee, gave a brief statement of the Toronto congregation and its efforts in planning for the new building.

The architects, George, Moorehouse, & King, have prepared plans providing for a gymnasium, classrooms, Sunday school rooms, church parlor, and main auditorium. Gatehouse Brothers Limited are the contractors.

The building will have a frontage of sixty-five feet and be four stories high in front, including the basement. The church when completed and equipped will mean an investment of approximately $100,000.

The congregation was organized forty years ago by a small group of members who for a time held services in private homes. They then met in halls, and in 1900 built their first church edifice. In 1906 a more commodious building was constructed on Soho Street. This accommodated the growing congregation until 1929, when steps were taken to secure a new building to meet more adequately the needs of the people.

Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania

The Women's Department gave a fine program for Mother's Day, also a social for one of our members, Sister Margaret Allen, who sailed June 27 for her homeland, England, for a visit of three months. Those present enjoyed themselves, as well as our sister. Sister Allen was given a token of love from the Saints in appreciation of the years spent with us, and all wished her a pleasant visit and a safe return.

The members were made glad by the return of Sister Pealer, who brought back to the branch some of the good things she had enjoyed while attending General Conference. She reports that a beautiful spirit was present from the opening of the conference until the close. We were sorry that more of us could not attend, but desire as a branch to keep in step with the onward progress of the church and help it to accomplish its ultimate purpose, the salvation of the human family and the redemption of Zion.

A covered dish social in the basement of the church, the first Monday of each month, is sponsored by the Women's Department. It being warm we decided to continue our social times together by gathering in cooler places along some of the beautiful streams. It is good to meet together with our friends.

The Saints have been made to rejoice by the return of Brother Robley who led three precious souls into the waters of baptism. This makes a total of eight new members he has baptized, seven adults and one young boy. We feel he has done as God has commanded, and still there are more. These Saints are fine people and a credit to the church. Services have been held each Tuesday and Friday evening by our brother, also the missionary effort continues in Mifflinville twelve miles distant. The Saints are rejoicing in the good work done and feel to press forward.

On Sunday, July 6, we had for a visitor our young brother, Isaac Shaffer, son of Sister Pealer, who is in Philadelphia at present. The sacramental meeting July 6 was a real spiritual feast. Our young brother was spoken to and told to prepare for the work God has for him. He was encouraged by the beautiful promises of God made to him, and we trust he will heed the admonition.

Meetings are well attended, especially the prayer meetings held each Wednesday evening. The Sunday school is slowly growing and is a fine school under the head of Brother H. A. Cunningham. Nearly every Sunday a story is told to the children by Sister Pealer, and this is enjoyed by the older members as well as the young.

The Saints responded to the Sacrifice Week in the best manner they could considering working conditions which for some time have been very poor in Bloomsburg.

Brother Robley has left this branch for Deer Park reunion. We wish him Godspeed and hope he will return in the near future. The work is again left in charge of Pastor W. H. Lewis.

Brother Angus is again able to be at service, for which we are thankful.

Far West Stake

Cameron Branch

July 17.—The activities of the Cameron Saints for the month of June were varied and of special interest.

The first Sunday in June we were glad to have with us Stake President O. Salisbury. A splendid spirit was present during the entire sacramental service, this spirit accompanying to a marked degree the ordination of Brother R. L. Macrae to the office of elder.

Monday evening, June 2, a goodly number of the Saints and friends met at the church to bid farewell and Godspeed to Brother and Sister R. L. Macrae, who were soon to leave for their mission to Hawaii. At the close of an appropriate program they were presented with gifts as tokens of the appreciation and love of the people with whom they had so faithfully labored for the past several years. Our prayers are for their success.

We were glad to welcome Brother and Sister S. E. Miffin to Cameron to make their home here.

Sister G. T. Richards, with her son Gomer, is spending several weeks in Michigan where she was called on account of the death of her father.

June 7 and 8 the Far West Stake young people's convention was held at Cameron, giving the Saints of this territory another opportunity to receive instruction and inspiration for the work ahead of us. The attendance was small Saturday, but on Sunday the church was filled, and the day was both profitably and enjoyably spent.

Sunday morning, June 15, two little girls were baptized. In the evening the junior department presented the splendid pageant, "Zion redeemed."

The response of the Saints to the special sacrifice week was encouraging. May we all learn to sacrifice more, that this work may move forward more rapidly.

The fifth of the series of playlets written by Brother Elbert A. Smith was presented Sunday evening, June 22. The interest in these plays is good, and we believe the benefit derived by both the ones who take part and those in the congregation is well worth the effort required to prepare them.

We hope to present the entire series as they are published.

Thursday evening, June 26, a mothers' and daughters' get together was enjoyed. About sixty mothers and daughters enjoyed the program which had been arranged and the refreshments and toasts which followed.

Sister Pauline Hinderks and Brother Wesley Ballinger were married Sunday, June 29, at the home of the bride. Their many friends wish them a long and happy life.

We must not fail to mention our playground activities. Supervised play is enjoyed each Tuesday and Friday evening on the playground, which is well lighted and equipped for playing volley ball, tennis, basket ball, croquet, and horseshoe. There are swings and teeters for the smaller children. Let us play together and thus learn to work together better.

MRS. G. SCOTT DANIEL.

Lancaster, Ohio

1111 West Fair Avenue

Work has been going along nicely in Lancaster Branch. Attendance at church school and preaching services has been good. Attendance at the prayer meetings has been growing.

June 1 we had a good sacramental service. Elder W. P. Vickroy was in charge, being assisted by Priest Charles H. Foster, of Columbus, Ohio. Brother Foster stayed with us and preached at the evening service.

There was fair attendance at the church school on June 15. Elder W. P. Vickroy preached at the morning service. Elder S. E. Dickson spoke at the evening service.

Attendance at the church school was small the following Sunday. Elder W. P. Vickroy was speaker at the morning service. There was good attendance in the evening. Elder S. E. Dickson was the speaker.

On June 29 there was good attendance at all services. Elder W. P. Vickroy spoke in the morning and S. E. Dickson in the evening.

Brother Dickson has been delivering a series of lectures on the subject "The kingdom of heaven." His talks are interesting.

The work has been progressing at Lancaster, and we are looking forward to the time when our new church home will be too small to accommodate attendance.

Fresno, California

On Easter the Sunday school presented a pageant, "The Spirit of Easter," directed by Sister Lily Jennings, assisted by Sister Ona Andrews. A large crowd came to see this production, which was splendidly given.

Mother's Day the children properly honored motherhood with songs, recitations, and exercises.

Some of the Fresno churches held their Children's Day exercises on the second Sunday in June, while others had theirs on the third Sunday. Our Children's Day program was on June 15.

June 17 and 18 Brother G. P. Levitt was with us and spoke both evenings. We are always so glad to have him visit Fresno.

Sunday night, June 22, many of us learned with surprise that we have in our branch a dramatist worthy of mention in the person of Sister Althea Kraschel. She selected a passage in the Book of Mormon and placed it in such a form that it was interestingly portrayed by a cast of characters chosen by herself from among the young people of the branch. Her piece was entitled, "Korihor the Anti-Christ." Much pleasure was derived from it by those taking part, as well as those who witnessed it. Between scenes Sister Kraschel arranged numbers which kept the audience interested. It has been suggested that the cast go to Dinuba and put on the play, but no definite time has been set.

The Zeta Beta Class had a picnic in Roeding Park Tuesday night, June 24. Not a great many attended, but all who did enjoyed themselves. On that night many who did not know it before learned of the marriage of Sister Letha Roberts, daughter of L. W. Roberts, to Brother Raymond Kalton, on the third day of January of this year.

Sunday morning, July 6, the morning worship period, fifteen minutes before Sunday school, was started, in charge of Brother A. S. Votaw, assisted by Sister Lily Jennings.

Topeka, Kansas

621 Jackson Street, Floor 3

July 6.—The Recreation and Expression Department entertained the branch at the home of Brother and Sister C. J. Sheets the evening of April 27. This was the occasion of the awarding of twelve point certificates by Sister Fern Weedmark to a class in "Recreational Leadership." Those receiving certificates were Sisters F. O. Kelley, John Killen, Mary Sheets, Anna Alfrey, Helen Hays, Emma Happe, Verna Crooker, and L. M. Pitsenberger. Entertainment and refreshments were provided by the class.

The Saints enjoyed a splendid sermon on "Vision" by District Missionary W. A. Smith on May 18. He left for Willard, Kansas, in the afternoon, where he held a two weeks' meeting in the schoolhouse. Among those in attendance who gave assistance were O. E. Weedmark and L. M. Pitsenberger. Sister Mildred Goodfellow and son, Vernon, helped with the music.

"Among the tragedies of life is the purposeless life, and there are many of them," stated F. O. Kelley in his memorial sermon May 25. "The purpose of life," was his theme, and he advised the Saints to heed the admonition of Paul by continuing in the things they have learned.

The sermon in the evening was by Brother Hays, of Kansas City. His discourse was based on a statement in the thirty-seventh psalm: "Fret not thyself because of evil doers." The members were admonished to keep the commandments of the Lord, that they may be protected as we are told they will be in a reading found in Doctrine and Covenants 81:3. The speaker was a former pastor at Topeka, and his presence was much appreciated.

Brother and Sister O. E. Weedmark spent their vacation at the home of Sister Weedmark's parents at Woodward, Oklahoma. They were accompanied on the return trip by William Nibarger, brother of Sister Weedmark. The interest of the church work was not overlooked while they were among the isolated. A prayer meeting was held for the isolated Saints at the home of Brother and Sister Sybel the evening of May 28, and a talk was given by Sister Weedmark the evening of June 1 on "The church and recreation," at the United Brethren Church. This effort was much appreciated by members of this organization.

The necessity for preparation for the sacrament was the keynote of Brother Kelley's remarks at the June sacramental service. The meeting was in charge of Pastor Phillips.

District Superintendent of Recreation and Expression L. M. Pitsenberger talked at Fanning, Kansas, at eleven o'clock, June 8.

The last step in the World Friendship project was taken Tuesday, June 10, by the Young Crusaders Class when they met at the home of their instructor, Sister Weedmark, and packed the gifts for the treasure chest. Much interest has been shown by the young people in this project.

The following program was given Children's Day: Piano prelude, Sister B. F. Deller; song from Zion's Praises; invocation, L. M. Pitsenberger; blessing of the Crum twins, Bettie Jo and Verna Jean, by B. F. Deller; vocal solo, Wendell Kelley; reading, "In Christ there is no east or west," Virginia Brown; vocal duet, "The world children for Jesus," Ardis Deller and Vernon Goodfellow; presentation of Christian flag, Verna Crooker, Dorothy Deller, and Bertha Brittain; acceptance, F. O. Kelley; story, "The flag that flies highest of all," Mildred Goodfellow; song, from Saints' Hymnal; pageant, "Just like us," junior department; music, "Star-spangled banner"; song, "Onward, Christian soldiers"; salute to the United States flag by congregation; "America"; salute to Christian flag, by congregation; vocal duet, "I heard the voice of Jesus say," Opal Hansen and Dorothy Deller; benediction, Brother Kelley.

The pastor dismissed his congregation the evening of June 22, and all went to Scranton, Kansas, to hear Brother W. A. Smith preach the closing sermon of a two weeks' meeting there.

June 26 the Women's Department went in a body to the home of Sister Jennie Griffin, Silver Lake, Kansas, where they were pleasantly entertained. Refreshments were served at the lunch stand, which is owned and operated by Sister Griffin. The women look forward with much pleasure to a visit with Sister Griffin and her mother and sister, who have proved themselves ideal hostesses on more than one occasion.

An institute class in the Department of Recreation and Expression is one of the objectives of this department, and an accredited class in religious dramatization has been organized, Sister F. O. Kelley the instructor.

Cottage prayer meetings have been held at the homes of B. F. Deller, C. J. Sheets, O. E. Weedmark, and John E. Killen.

July sacramental service was in charge of B. F. Deller, assisted by F. O. Kelley and O. E. Weedmark. A portion of the Spirit's influence was present to comfort Saints as they renewed their covenant and pledged their efforts in assisting to build up the kingdom of God.

Parkersburg, West Virginia

July 10.—The Women's Department held a chicken supper at the church February 4. It was rainy, and not many attended. The women have been kept busy making money to help pay for the church. A lawn social at Brother William Cooper's met with considerable success in the past month. The women conducted a stand at a week's festival at the city park during the week of July 4.

Sister Mary Cameron died February 10, after a lingering illness. Her two girls, who are members, stayed until school was out and then left to visit relatives. We miss them in our branch.

Brother Vanderwood and Brother Minton and Sister Libbie Duncan stopped February 21 on their way to the spring conference at Clarksburg, Sunday, February 23. Brother C. W. Germon and family and Harry Smith attended from here.

After the conference Brother Vanderwood returned to the southern part of the State where he and his fellow workers had been holding services. Brother Minton stayed here to prepare for the two weeks' series of meetings to start at Parkersburg March 3.

The first week we held cottage meetings, meeting at the church the last week. On March 9 Brother Vanderwood preached on religious education, and on Zion the following Sunday. Brother Minton preached a missionary sermon each evening.

James Withee and Goldia Calhoun were baptized March 16. Both are nice young people.

A reception was given Brother Minton and family and Brother Vanderwood at the home of Mrs. Stephens March 17, and they left the next morning for Independence and General Conference.

Brother and Sister C. W. Germon, Desde Beall, and Mabel Smith left April 3 to drive to General Conference. Harry Smith went by train April 11. Brother Germon was a delegate from the West Virginia District. It was the first trip for all of us to Zion, and we appreciated being privileged to attend part of the Centennial Conference. Brother Germon and party had to leave before conference closed. All made reports of their visit when they returned home. It was a trip to be long remembered.

Brother Guy Hammond and wife, of Akron, Ohio, were visiting in Parkersburg and attended Sunday school. May 11 Brother Hammond preached at night.

Brother Minton and family returned to our city and district May 18. We were glad they were sent back to our district, also to have them to make their home here. We were sorry, however, to lose Brother Vanderwood, who was serving as district president. Brother Vanderwood was here about a year and did us much good in that time. We wish him success and happiness in his new field.

Brother A. C. Silvers and wife came May 28. He is coming to take Brother Vanderwood's place. He preached at an opening near here the night after his arrival. He presided at the sacramental service on June 1 and preached at night. They left the next week for Indian Creek.

A meeting of the officers and teachers was held at the home of the superintendent, Sister May Griffin, June 13. After the business was over, refreshments were enjoyed.

Our branch had its Children's Day program June 22 under the supervision of Sister Minton. Brother Minton baptized his eight-year-old son in the afternoon, and he was confirmed that night.

Several of the Saints met at the home of Sister May Griffin the night of June 27 and completely surprised her mother, Sister May Reese, on her birthday. An enjoyable evening was had and refreshments served.

We have had a very dry spring here since the fore part of April. Crops are poor and the prospects not bright for those who depend upon the soil for their living. This with the unemployment situation makes conditions far from favorable. Our own people are feeling the effects of it. We can see the need for all people showing more interest in God's work.

The first of June marked two years for the branch in our new church home. During that time the branch has held its own in paying tithing and looking after its district obligations. We have met our interest payments and reduced the debt eight hundred and fifty dollars. This has made us work hard. Our people have had to get away from the nickel and dime giving and have been giving from two to ten dollars each month on the church debt, besides their other branch offerings. The prospects look a little discouraging now, but we are trying to face the future with hope and faith, and not to forget to work hard, which is the only way to attain success.

Parkersburg Branch is preparing to care for the district conference on August 9 and 10. We hope to have two full days of interesting church work. There is a great need for more working at church and not just playing at church.

H. B. SMITH.

Vinalhaven, Maine

July 13.—The Saints were glad today at Sabbath school to have present Elder E. F. Robertson and to know that he in company with Elder David Dowker is planning to hold a series of meetings in the Saints' church here. Vinalhaven members are pleased to know that a series of meetings is to be held, for it has been a long time since a missionary drive was had here.

The church school in all its groups is getting along well, and the recreational part is active. The children of the town are much interested and very happy under the direction of an able corps of leaders.

We of Vinalhaven hope to see the good work continue.

The Lord is blessing us, and a good spirit prevails at all services.

Elder E. F. Robertson delivered an inspiring sermon today at the morning hour.

Elder Dowker is expected to arrive tomorrow with his family. They will occupy the Saints' church parsonage for some time.

Modesto, California

Second and G Streets

Mother's Day was celebrated with a program given by the junior and primary departments.

June 1 another of our young women was married. Sister Blanche Clark became the bride of Dowane Wolcott, the pastor officiating. Twin girls acted as flower girls. The young couple are making their home about twenty miles away but attend meetings here.

Of late there have been two baptisms, one a child, the other a young woman.

The Saints are proud of the appearance of the church, which has a new coat of paint and calcimine. It is now a neat and clean house of worship, to which we are not ashamed to invite our friends.

On Children's Day, after a program and sermon, a basket lunch was enjoyed in the lower auditorium, and the afternoon was devoted to visiting with friends.

Elder G. P. Levitt will meet with the Saints next Friday evening. A good time is anticipated.

The departments are doing well, and the work of the church seems to be going forward.

At present the pastor is not in the best of health, and we hope soon to see him much improved.

Tulare, California

The Sunday school held its annual picnic in Mooney's Grove April 19. Games were played by the entire branch. Baskets of lunch were spread at noon, and everyone enjoyed the meal. The afternoon was spent in a social time.

Brother John Wiles, of Dinuba, was the speaker on Easter Sunday. His subject was "The resurrection." A number of nonmembers were present. Four of them have since joined the church, also two boys were baptized the same day.

On May 11 Brother Votaw and wife, of Fresno, and Brother Hurley and wife, of Dinuba, met with us. A special program and sermon were had in honor of Mother's Day. Brother Votaw preached the sermon. All the members took lunches to the park and shared the noon meal.

A family of Saints, the Anthonys, meet with us nearly every Sunday. These good people live at Bakersfield, a drive of about seventy miles, and they are here for Sunday school. They attended General Conference and have reported some interesting items to Tulare Saints. May 7 a baby girl came to their home.

Children's Day was observed by the Sunday school June 15. Brother Anthony was the morning speaker.

In the afternoon the funeral services were held for Sister Mary Cunningham. Brother John Wiles spoke words of consolation and encouragement to those left to mourn.

June 14 and 15 Brothers A. J. Damron, James Damron, E. Renand, and Frank Snively attended meetings held in Stockton which were called by the district presidency. On June 19 and 20 we were pleased to have Elder G. P. Levitt here. He gave a report of some of the happenings at General Conference June 19 and the following evening spoke in behalf of Sacrifice Week.

Brother Collis Renand is erecting a font at the edge of the lawn by our church building.

The July hour of sacrament was well attended, and a good Spirit prevailed. Two babies were blessed, Eunice Anthony and Lenora Paimore.

MARY SNIVELY.

election of officers resulted in the selection of Birch Whiting to succeed himself as president; he chose Ralph Murdock and C. C. Martin as counselors; Pauline Keeble was reelected secretary-treasurer; C. C. Martin was nominated by the president and sustained by vote to be director of religious education. He presented the name of Gertrude Lewis for superintendent of the young people's department and Mrs. C. C. Martin for superintendent of the children's department. The matter of the next conference and the holding of institutes or conventions was referred to the presidency, with full power to appoint time and place and make arrangements. A resolution was adopted to the effect that hereafter a charge of fifteen cents per meal should be made for boarding conference visitors, with the understanding that this resolution should not in any wise interfere with the right of anyone to invite friends to ministry and entertain them free of charge. Saturday evening was devoted to a program consisting of an able address by President Whiting; a drama entitled "The church at Corinth," put on by the young women's class of the Fort Scott Sunday School; and a concert by the Mapleton Orchestra. Sunday the church school convened at 9.45 and was followed by a sermon by Bishop M. H. Siegfried, of Independence, Missouri. At one o'clock a priesthood meeting was addressed by Bishop Siegfried and J. A. Gardner. At 2.30 Bishop Siegfried preached again. Adjournment was had at about four o'clock, after a very interesting address by President Birch Whiting, pledging himself anew to the service of the Saints of the district and of the church and soliciting the whole-hearted cooperation of the Saints.

Worth Doing Well

One passage from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants which seems to the Saints to be of great importance is found in the last paragraph of the thirty-eighth section. It reads:

I give unto you a commandment, that every man, both elder, priest, teacher, and also member, go to with his might, with the labor of his hands, to prepare and accomplish the things which I have commanded. And let your preaching be the warning voice, every man to his neighbor, in mildness and in meekness.

It will be seen that the definite responsibility of taking the gospel to one's neighbor is located on the shoulders of each member of the church. No member is without the assignment. No officer is exempted. The responsibility of sounding the gospel warning to your neighbor is yours, and from it there is no path of escape.

In order to accomplish this definite assignment, one must himself have been warned—warned of the judgments of God which are coming on the earth at the hands of unscrupulous and wicked and designing men; warned of the final great loss which must result in case a creature of God fails to exercise his option to lay hold on the opportunities and promises offered in the gospel plan. The gospel is both a means of offense and an armor of defense. It becomes effective by its use, not because one knows of its existence and its location.

When a politician becomes aware of his responsibility for results in a given quarter, he studies his field, looks to any who are possible prospects of his propaganda, and follows each prospect until it becomes an accession or is no longer a prospect.

This is legitimate and wise procedure for the politician. It is legitimate and wise procedure for the saint, but it is often neglected. Neglect by the politician means failure, partial or complete. Neglect by the church member means the same, and it entails the judgment.

There may be prejudice in the minds of some against such a thing as a prospect list—setting down in a methodical and calculating way the names of neighbors to whom the gospel should be sounded with the warning voice. But the prejudice is not based upon any valid principle. It would be difficult for any possessing such a prejudice to crystallize into a principle the objection he senses in himself.

Contrary to this prejudice there is the whole tenor of Christian procedure. Christ said he would build (organize) his church. He has kept his word up to this hour. He will continue to organize the forces which are susceptible to his Spirit and to systematize their activities. The tenor of the three books is organization. The Book of Doctrine and Covenants emphasizes the necessity and the value of organization.

The tendency of the past several years in the councils of the church has been to emphasize the importance of the charge given of God to carry the gospel to the people of the world; the necessity of the church becoming a virile missionary organization. Each gathering of the Joint Council of the leading quorums, each gathering of the general membership and officials of the church senses the responsibility. The Centennial Conference was no exception; from it has gone an increased spirit of missionary work, and of organization to make missionary work effective.

Rally Day activities which are in preparation will culminate September 28, and the virtue of these activities will be the sounding of the warning voice in meekness and kindness and with all the affection or love which the Saints should possess for their neighbors; to organize the forces of the church that this mission may be furthered.

Decision Day will follow, just one month later—October 26. Between, there will be a period of intense and organized intelligent activity. Every elder, priest, teacher, and member should participate. In order to work to advantage, all should acquaint themselves with the hopes and the plans of the leaders in organization. Each week the Herald contains matter of this nature. "The prospect list" has been and is being treated in the columns set apart for original articles. Have you read and studied them, and are you going to do your part to make them effective?

There should be a high ambition to increase our membership. The only limit of our activity should be the wise and honorable exercise of the faculties and the strength which are our stewardship. The motive must be unimpeachable. The method should be such as will withstand the closest scrutiny. The mark is worthy of the best we can do. It should be done thoroughly and well.

Historical Program for August

For Local Branches

Subject: The Church and the First Presidency.

One of the distinctive elements of the organization and administration of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints Church is the First Presidency, or presiding quorum. Members of the church should be well acquainted with the origin, history, and practice of this quorum, not only for their own information but so that they might ably represent the church to nonmembers. We recommend the following program as an opportunity for setting forth the position of the church in regard to this leading quorum and succession therein.

Suggested Program

Song: "We thank thee, O God, for a prophet," number 353, Saints' Hymnal.

Prayer: Thanksgiving for the prophetic office, for latter-day revelation, and for the leaders of the past whose devotion has made the present-day church possible.

Reading: From Doctrine and Covenants, in regard to the First Presidency or Presidency of the High Priesthood; see section 104, paragraph 11, and section 43, paragraphs 1 and 2.

Music: Special number.

Short Talk: "Succession in the Presidency."

Reference: True Succession in Church Presidency, by Heman C. Smith.

Play: "Farewell to Nauvoo," number eight of "Conversations," by Elbert A. Smith; published in the August number of Vision.

Song: "In the light," number 182, Saints' Hymnal.

Prayer: For blessing upon those in positions of great responsibility in the church, and that the membership might loyally support them in their ministry.

Measure Your Effort by This Record

Besides preaching, baptizing, presiding, exhorting, etc., an elder reports that in the last year he has made 2,900 house to house or personal calls. Do you suppose this man of God will rust out? It would be a pity if such a man would ever wear out.

Little Men and Women

Not long ago this writer was invited to speak to a group of junior children at their eleven o'clock service. He consented reluctantly, and only under pressure, and because, as the voice at the other end of the telephone line was pleading insistently, it was so hard to get speakers who could and would talk for the little folk.

It had always been the writer's notion that it was his special mission to speak to older people, that he had no talent for speaking to children.

And yet, here he was, sitting in the empty assembly room, with his pocket full of notes that now seemed inadequate, and his heart beginning to thump with fear that he might fail. Adults could forgive a failure; would these little people understand?

Soon he was standing up, facing them. There were nearly fifty in the room. As he brought out his stories and the lesson, he was watching them. There were fifty children whose parents were sitting in other services, in other buildings in the city; fifty children whose parents were trusting them to the care of others; fifty little men and women who might have chosen to go elsewhere, but who voluntarily chose to stay to their own church services; fifty little folk, sitting quietly and respectfully while a stranger talked to them.

The speaker could not help noticing their attractive, innocent faces, and their healthy bodies. Some of them were positively beautiful, all of them good to see. One's heart swelled and rose, and seemed to go out to them. One could not help loving them.

These fifty little men and women were in a service of their own, learning in language that they could understand about Jesus, about good men and women who have followed him, about the gospel, about the church. Here were fifty little men and women getting ready for the tasks of the future. Could one help loving them?

And looking at that group the writer thought of many other children elsewhere, needing some one to teach them, needing some one to talk to them, to understand them, and to love them. How unsuited to their needs are many of the adult services to which many of them are forcibly taken! How unfortunate that so many others, like the writer, think that their special call is to speak to adults, when they should train themselves to speak to children!

Contrary to the notion of many, children are appreciative and responsive. One needs only to speak to them of things that interest them, in language that they can understand. They like stories, and the stories can carry all the lessons they need to learn. He who speaks to them must never condescend, and above all must love them, or he will fail.

Of what use is it to save the world, if we do not save our own children?

Our Reunions

The business depression that is now bothering the country seems to have affected everything. As always in times of depression, the people curtail those things which are regarded as luxuries. Our reunions have not escaped. The reports that a number of reunions have been canceled because of bad business conditions indicate a situation that leaves something to be desired.

Reunions have played an important part in the history of the Reorganization. They have provided opportunities for scattered groups and isolated members to get together for periods of inspiration and edification in prayer meetings, preaching services, and in the intimate contacts between officers and people that come from personal conversation.

Reunions require the attendance of people who can take vacations from their regular employment. The vacations are luxuries. But it should be remembered that reunions are not luxuries. Their great usefulness puts them out of the luxury class. The instruction of the sermons, the inspiration of the prayer meetings, and the information imparted in the class work are all things vitally necessary in the church work.

There is no better way to spend a vacation than to attend a reunion. To rest among friends, not passing the time in mere idleness, but turning one's energies into new and pleasant channels, is a pleasant and beneficial experience. Much depends, of course, upon a good location for the reunion, with adequate provisions for comfort, health, and sanitation.

Barriers and Bridges

Not so long ago I rode in an automobile across what is said to be the largest suspension bridge in the world. It is 1,850 feet long and is suspended some 150 feet, I believe, above the Detroit River by mighty cables which are anchored deep in giant concrete piers. Its cost was estimated at twenty million dollars.

This bridge connects the cities of Detroit, in the State of Michigan, and Windsor, in the province of Ontario. It is a mighty thoroughfare between the United States and the Dominion of Canada. It is known as the "good will" bridge and is called "The Ambassador." How well named!

"The Ambassador" spans a natural barrier which once divided the people of two states, of two nations, one from the other. It makes possible a freer intermingling of citizens of Canada and citizens of the States. Over its roadway pass daily both the tourist, bound for a visit to new country, and the man of trade, engaged in his regular pursuits, from its arch both the resident and the immigrant view with interest the expanse of a busy river.

As I looked down upon the river I thought of the barriers which often divide peoples; some natural, perhaps, like this river; others artificial, erected by misunderstanding and misinformation. I thought of barriers of tariff, barriers of "national defense," barriers of racial and national pride, barriers of jingoism and imperialism. But as I passed over and found in the homes on the Canadian side the same welcome that had been given us on the American side, I also thought of bridges—bridges of international friendliness, bridges of courtesy, bridges of economic cooperation, bridges of world unity and peace, bridges of the common brotherhood of man.

And I felt to pray, "God, give us more bridges—bridges that shall span the barriers which divide us—that we might pass over and become friends."

Book of Mormon Should Be Distributed

The coming forth of the Book of Mormon was one of the principal events of the period of the Restoration. Almost every stone was turned by the proponents of the cause to print and circulate this book which contains an account of the dealings of God with a colony and nation of people which had at different times been very close to him.

The membership of the church in its early years found that a liberal use and distribution of the Book of Mormon was not only effective in producing converts to the faith. It had the additional virtue of breaking down prejudice and disarming opposition. If the Saints were willing and anxious that their "bible" be distributed and examined, surely they had no fear as to the outcome of such an examination.

With the coming of the period of increased organization and internal development which is upon us, the work of placing the Book of Mormon before the world as one justification for our existence as a body of religionists and as another witness that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, must not be neglected. The distribution of this work should be increased; the effort to place a Book of Mormon in the hands of every person who will consent to an examination of its contents should be redoubled. Every time the accomplishment of placing a Book of Mormon is made, either by sale or gift, a step has been taken to justify the existence of the church which sponsors it.

The Reorganization forms the body of people with the rightful custody of this unique and distinctive work. Are the forces of the Reorganization seeing to it that their cause has a chance with the people?

I once went into a family and had need to refer to a Book of Mormon. I asked the mother of the house if she would let me use her copy. After a short search she said that she could not find it, but was sure the father could, for they had two copies. He was to return to the home very shortly. When he came she immediately took him to a room next the one where I was seated, reading, and asked the whereabouts of the Book of Mormon. "Oh, I let the Baptist preacher have one copy, and my buddy has the one I always use. I will order another right away."

Years have passed since this incident. The brother has become known quite widely as a fire-side preacher of the gospel. He has placed many copies of the Book of Mormon among his acquaintances and no harm has resulted. No harm can result from such a course. Much good must result. It is the promise of the Lord and the experience of the Saints that the Lord has kept this promise, along with the others he has made.

The Reorganized Church should distribute ten copies of this book where it now distributes one. It is an easily accomplished task. Will you make an effort to do your part of it? R. J. L.

The Drama of Redemption

The drama of redemption is seen daily in the lives of creative men and women. It is revealed in the attitude of Daniel Peggotty to Emily in David Copperfield, after the catastrophe which bowed both their heads in woe. The old man does not pass by on the other side of the road or withhold his affection. Without a moment of doubt or questioning love and support he was joined with his niece in bearing her shame because of the bond of love between them. There was no blurring of moral judgment upon sin. Although Daniel Peggotty's love is not diminished by what has happened, it has now taken on a penitential quality. One could say that the sin was all Emily's, and that it is impossible for another to be penitent for the sins of his ward; and yet we know that that is just what happens. Just for Emily to see her uncle entering into her suffering was enough to make her loathe sin and understand what love is. By his stripes she was healed.—George Stewart, in The Crucifixion in Our Street; George H. Doran Company.

OFFICIAL

Sacrifice Week

One of the most gratifying results of Sacrifice Week is the fact that practically all of the branches of the church in America responded. Reports have not been received from a few branches, but with the fourteen districts yet to be included in the June report, it is very probable that some of these few will yet be heard from.

The Presiding Bishopric is well aware that unemployment exists in a number of areas, and that business conditions are uncertain and that industry is below normal in production in some commodities. But the response in a large number of districts has been pleasing, although there are some localities which have not met our expectations. However, many thousands of dollars in tithes and offerings, above the average income for the month of June, have been received by the Presiding Bishopric, although it is probable that the complete report will not equal last year's offering. Those who have been counted in this sacrifice period for special offerings, or who have made an extra effort to pay their tithing will be happy to know that their tithes and offerings have increased the revenue for the month of June and have enabled the church to meet a large part of its obligations.

Our correspondence indicates that many have been blessed by exemplifying in their life the spirit of sacrifice. It has brought them closer to God, it has identified them with the church, and has fused their interest with its forward-looking program. It has also made them conscious that opportunities and responsibilities of membership go hand in hand, and that response to one stimulates a response to the other.

Sacrifice for the church need not be limited to this one special week, but opportunities of serving and helping with service and money during the entire year may be observed with increasing satisfaction to the Saints. Payments of tithes and offering during each month of the year will help to keep the income at a normal average and enable the church to plan its work with a greater degree of certainty. The church was born in sacrifice, and if the church is to achieve its ultimate goals it will require continual sacrifice and consecrated effort to reach these objectives. What the Lord said many years ago is true today, "Verily, this is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people," and this day has by no means passed.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By A. CARMICHAEL.

Pen Point Pickups

The Temple on the Hill

The traveling missionary is under the necessity of spending a great deal of time aboard the train in order to meet the demands of this fast-flying, feverish age. Great opportunity is thus afforded for reading and meditation.

Not long ago, while the writer was speeding furiously along over the rails of one of our great trunk lines, lost in the ever-changing panorama, a large and rather commodious-looking house suddenly thrust itself into the picture. The day was near to its close, therefore the outlines of the building were sharply defined because of the bright lights which shone from the many windows. My attention was at once attracted to it.

Turning to my seat companion I said: "The house on yonder hill certainly enjoys distinction above its fellows because of its elevation," its eminence being outstanding. "I imagine it would be fine to live up there." His reply was a surprise, as well as disconcerting: "Well, the fellow who lives up there is certainly welcome to his eminence. I will have none of it. As the daily climb would require altogether too much energy, I prefer the lower level."

The conversation soon closed, but I could not get away from the incident and its significance. In my mind I soliloquized: The beautiful house upon the hill; from out the many windows the light is shining far and near; standing there above its fellows in glorious majesty, it dwells high over all. It is true that to reach it one must climb, and to climb means the expenditure of energy.

The question quickly follows: Why put forth the effort to scale such heights when one can remain on the lower level? Some one has said:

The high soul climbs the highway
And the low soul gropes the low.
And in between on the misty flats
The rest drift to and fro.

To climb means to get away from the valleys of the ordinary into the hills of the extraordinary. To climb is to exchange the sullen, musty atmosphere of congested lowlands for the wholesome and buoyant air of the roomy heights. All in all, it is the constant supplanting of a lower with a higher. The climbing, the abundant life is reached and enjoyed. Every flower, every plant and growing tree reaches out to catch the warmth of the morning sun and the refreshing dew, climbing in the life environments towards perfection to give its fruit.

The Master bids us to rise to heights divine. During the sermon on the mount, Christ presented many wonderful sayings, from among which we select the following: "A city set on a hill can not be hid," because of its eminence and the light emanating therefrom, until all nations shall be touched with its rays and feel its rays. The city of Zion; the city of our God out of which the perfection and beauty of God will shine.

To reach this city one must climb, for the royal highway leads ever up and on. The way may be rugged, and the path long and tedious, but with all of these it leads to life and glory. "On to Zion" should be the slogan of the Saints. When the Master called attention to the city on a hill, was he not referring to a Zion to be? Did he not counsel his disciples to leave the low level and seek the high places and through righteous living build a city whose light and power would shine near and far, even to all peoples?

A Zion in the midst of the nation like unto Enoch's time, a people who were under the divine favor of God. Doctrine and Covenants 36:2 has this to say of the Zion of old:

And from that time forth there were wars and bloodsheds among them; but the Lord came and dwelt with his people, and they dwelt in righteousness. The fear of the Lord was upon all nations, so great was the glory of the Lord which was upon his people. And the Lord blessed the land, and they were blessed upon the mountains and upon the high places and did flourish. And the Lord called his people Zion, because they were of one heart and one mind and dwelt in righteousness; and there was no poor among them; and Enoch continued his preaching in righteousness unto the people of God.

The Saints of today should be encouraged. They should no longer sit on the banks of Babylon weeping, "When we remember Zion," but should seek to recover the "harps hanged on the willows," singing the songs of Zion, to build our city, that it indeed may become the city set on a hill whose light can not be hid.

Health in the Home

II. Hygienic Housekeeping

By Myrtle Grapes, R. N.

Here we must consider the housekeeper herself, whose health is of the greatest importance. If you have ever been in a home where mother and home maker was an invalid, you realize how important it is that she enjoy good health. There are people you know who "enjoy poor health." Why? In an effort to secure attention and sympathy and even manifestations of love, they make every little ailment or no ailment a reason for much complaining. Dear mother nurse, we hope you will not become one of those "weak sisters" who "enjoy poor health." We hope rather that your good health will be a shining example to your growing sons and daughters.

On the other hand, the family should appreciate mother. It will do her heart good to tell her the pie is the best you ever ate, or how lovely the house looks. I do not know that husbands will read this, but we would say to them that reasonable affection shown any good wife will never harm her and will make you, her, and the entire family happier, therefore healthier, for happiness makes for health.

Mother should not be made a slave for her family. Each member of the family has the responsibility of such tasks as hanging up his own clothes, cleaning the tub after a bath, picking up and folding newspapers, and a hundred and one other little things too often selfishly and thoughtlessly left for mother to do. However, mother herself is often to blame for this unjust advantage taken of her. Here again the mother becomes the teacher. Children trained to take care of these seemingly small details develop habits of unselfishness, order, and industry. The real mother nurse secures the hearty cooperation of her family in keeping the home in lovely order without scolding and nagging, which never makes for a healthful atmosphere in the home.

The furnishings of the home should be in good taste and of a quality as good as the family finances will permit. Better a few necessary pieces of good quality than every kind of gadget of poor quality. Worrying about meeting a host of installments on furniture too elaborate or extensive for the family pocketbook does not make for health. The furnishings of the home—should they not be simple? Why take mother's precious time and energy for senseless dusting of hordes of useless bric-a-brac?

One very practical detail of home hygiene and sanitation is ventilation. To secure ideal atmosphere in her home, the mother must consider the following: (1) temperature; (2) movement; (3) humidity or moisture; (4) variability; (5) purity. Every home should have a thermometer and should register 64 degrees F. at night and for day 64 to 68 degrees F. "If people could only be made to realize that the difference between 67 degrees and 72 degrees, for example, often means a difference of five per cent in death rate, they would think it worth while to take pains," says Ellsworth Huntington, Ph. D., Yale University.

The average home is always too hot in the winter. Mother nurse, is that true of your home? Are you subjecting your dear ones to this hazard? What shall you do with the "cold-blooded" member of your family? He may put on extra clothing, take cold baths with vigorous rubbings to stimulate the circulation, thereby warming him up, or see a doctor, for he may have a disease that is sapping his vitality and making him feel sluggish and cold.

Movement and variability, that is, air moving and with variations in temperature, are beneficial to health and should be secured without chilling or increasing the dryness or the temperature. It has been estimated that a proper concern for this factor of ventilation would lower the death rate three per cent. This is one reason outdoor air is better than indoor air. Do you enjoy the fresh air as it sweeps gently across your face? Does it give you an exhilaration? Do you enjoy a little drop in temperature when a cloud sweeps across the face of the sun or when a pleasant breeze blows briskly for a moment? Sleeping outdoors insures longer, healthier sleep, from which one awakes refreshed. Babies should always be out of doors to sleep, at least during the day, unless it is raining or snowing or bitterly cold. This movement and change in outdoor air explains why soldiers sleeping in open tents make such marvelous recoveries even when deprived of food, medicine, and care.

Pure air means air free from gases, dust, organic matter such as dried skin particles, etc., and bacteria. Dust in the air irritates the delicate mucous membranes of the lining of the nose, eyes, and throat, causing abrasions or small cracks, lowering their resistance, and making them liable to infections, such as colds, diphtheria, etc.

"Air is essential to life," and oxygen is the essential factor in it. It is estimated that pure air will lower the death rate three per cent. There is no better way to secure pure air than to open doors and windows, even in the coldest weather.

We need pure air on the coldest day in winter as on the hottest day in summer. Put on extra clothing and exercise when airing the house, or air one room and close off the rest of the house, and so on until the house is aired throughout. This makes for economy in fuel in spite of what anyone may tell you, for pure air heats more readily (provided it has the proper amount of moisture) than impure air.

However, this should be remembered: that cold air is not necessarily pure air, nor does the air need to be cold to be pure. Another means of keeping the air pure is for the home-keeper to see that all garbage, waste, soiled dishes and clothing, etc., be promptly disposed of. The plumbing, sinks, hoppers, toilet stools, lavatories, etc., are often sources of impurity of air and bad odors. All this plumbing should be kept in proper order, with no leakages or stoppages, and kept clean, well flushed, and disinfected. The housemother does not want her home smelling like a hospital, but there is nothing like Lysol for a disinfectant, and it should be used frequently in the bathroom of the hygienic home, in stools, etc.

Humidity, or moisture, is equally important. Very dry air makes you feel chilly, because it makes so much evaporation of perspiration from the skin which carries off the heat of your body. It makes you sensitive to draughts. This sensitiveness makes you want the window closed, which should be open; you demand more heat than is necessary, which we have just discussed, with its evils, and so the vicious circle is completed and you are living in an unhealthy atmosphere. On the other hand, when there is too much moisture in the air it is raw, cold, and clammy. When temperature and humidity are just right, there is a balmy, springlike feeling to the atmosphere. The home nurse should develop this sense. She should be able to judge the correctness of the atmosphere of a room as soon as she steps into it. Boiling a kettle of water on the stove is a simple and effective method of securing humidity; and hanging a pail of water in a register, or standing a pan of water on radiators, are other effective methods.

Heating must be considered in our ventilation problem. The open fireplace is an excellent ventilator, makes for cheer and romance in the home, but it is not economical and provides an uneven heat. Stoves heat and ventilate well, but give off unequal gases and unpleasant odors. Hot air furnaces make the air much too dry, and they also give off unpleasant gases and odors. Hot water and steam heating make the air less dry than the hot air furnace, but with all three, pans of water should be placed on the radiators. Electricity is clean and easily regulated, but is very expensive and is not a good ventilator.

Observation is the beginning of wisdom. Mother nurse, will you make an observation of the ventilation of your home? Do the members of your family have frequent colds? Are sore throats a part of your winter program? Is your family all "run down" in the spring, so you must give them the so-called "spring tonics"? Are the children peevish? Are the school children sluggish with their lessons? Are you yourself tired and worn at the end of the day? Look to your ventilation. We would not have anyone believe that ventilation is responsible always for all these ills, but it should not be lightly considered when looking for causes.

We wonder what the good Lord thinks of us when we call in the elders to administer to a loved one who lies ill in a room that has not been properly ventilated. Sunshine and fresh air are gifts of God that are ours for the taking, so let us make the most of these gracious gifts, then the blessing of health will be ours, other things being equal.

Our next lesson will cover plumbing and cleanliness.

Children and the Movies

By Howard W. Harder

How often does your child go to the movies? Who selects for him the pictures he sees?

To some these questions may not seem important; to others they will suggest the seriousness of the effect upon the child of the present "run" of moving pictures.

It is not the purpose of the present article to discuss the deep sociological significance of the "movie" so much as it is desired to call attention to the whole problem of child attendance.

In the United States, children do attend moving picture theaters frequently. In 1928 sixty thousand children under twelve years of age went to picture shows at least once a week. In Kansas, which is typically rural, half of the eight-year-old and two thirds of the fourteen-year-old children went to picture shows once a week or oftener. It is usually reckoned that one fourth of all moving picture show admissions are paid by children under twelve.

Are Movies Harmful?

Should children attend picture shows? There are some reasons why an occasional picture show may be helpful to a child, but there are many, very many reasons why the average child should not attend shows frequently.

In the first place, the average picture was not made for the average child. Nearly all pictures are intended for adult audiences. When they attend the average show, our boys and girls, sometimes mere babes, are projected into the lives of adults, since the emotions, reactions, titles of the pictures, and surroundings of the theater are all intended for grown-ups.

The great menace of the movies is that the youngsters learn to participate through the screen in things that grown-ups think interesting—love and sex; the business scramble; the perennial emphasis on luxury and material success; night life, and the never-ending succession of show girls and pony ballets; rum running, crook, and underworld stories.

Another fault to be found with the movies is that they supply so attractively only vicarious recreation. Movies, baseball, football, radio, all enter into the lives of children, and all are largely passive. Of these, movies are the greatest attraction for luring children away from outdoor life.

In his book, Social Determinants in Juvenile Delinquency, Doctor T. E. Sullinger gives the result of a study recently made in Omaha of a neighborhood "chosen because it had contributed a greater number of delinquents for its area than any other district in the city for the three previous years." The children were asked the question, "What do you do for recreation out of school?" According to the answers of these children it was found that the theater or movies led in popularity with 57 per cent.

What Children Need

The keynote of well-rounded childhood is activity and self-expression; but the youngster of the present gets much more of a "kick" from the grown-up atmosphere of the moving picture theater than from "playing lady" when dressed in mother's old clothes. Children would rather play than go to the movies, as several surveys have shown; but it is often easier to obtain the price of admission to a show than to find some place to play or some one with whom to play.

Sources of Harm

The emotional tension of many children at the movies is a matter of common observance. I have seen them wringing their hands and groaning with grief at what they saw portrayed on the screen. Children were horrified and hysterical during the showing of "While the city sleeps" and "The terror". Even if there were no harrowing scenes, the movies of themselves subject children to a great deal of emotional stress, as they live so entirely in what they see. Children vary as to what they can stand, even those of the same age. It is a question whether schoolboys and schoolgirls, especially those who are high strung, should go often until in their upper teens.

The argument is made that the movies picture life. As long as just one picture is up for discussion, this argument might hold. Anyone will admit that in life all these unsavory elements pictured actually exist; therefore that one particular picture can not be called entirely inaccurate. But when another true-to-life picture of this type is turned out, and another and still others—every one of them, singly, true to life—until they greatly outnumber pictures of normal conduct, it then becomes quite evident that the general effect of the movies is not all "true to life."

Under certain conditions almost anything may have a legitimate place on the screen as a necessary part of the art creation, and one must be prepared to recognize the conditions when they are present; but children can not do this. Probably not more than one out of a thousand salacious screen scenes can be justified on the grounds of story requirements.

The movies have in some respects set up standards which are in conflict with our educational systems and what other ethical agencies are saying to our boys and girls. For instance, children everywhere are being taught humaneness and kindness to man and beast, and they suffer when anyone is hurt or killed on the screen. This is probably most true of pictures in which dogs are stars, and it is to these animal-star pictures that the children flock. They feel very deeply when the star is hurt or gets in trouble.

Parents Often Responsible

Parents themselves among movie patrons are not always cooperative, even when the theater takes an enlightened stand. It is a well-known fact that children stay on and on at the movies. The "parking" of children is a favorite device. Instances have been known of children having to spend from four to six hours in a theater while the mother attended her club or afternoon tea. Likewise, we should question any arrangement which makes it easy for parents to bring their young children to the movies. This includes so-called "nursery rooms" which one occasionally finds in the theater.

Doctor Shaw, formerly a New York health commissioner, strongly advises against the presence of children of less than eight years of age in the movies. The seats are not designed nor is the screen focused for the comfort of young patrons; consequently eye strain, nervous excitation, and physical exhaustion are the results of frequent attendance. He believes a half dozen performances a year for such children, with well-balanced programs which parents have supervised, should be enough.

In Chicago, teachers found it impossible to secure and hold the attention of children who had attended the movies the night before. A campaign addressed to mothers has been carried on throughout the city with the slogans, "No movies on school night," and "No movies unless you know the picture," and "No movies without an adult." These slogans may well be used everywhere.

Special Films for Children

A child seldom reads a book a week. In the movies he reads one in an hour. Think of cramming an adult book down the mental throats of children in the short space of sixty minutes! I know many parents who will not allow their children to read fiction, calling it "lies"; but they exercise no care at all in the selection of the movies their children may see, and these movies are ninety-nine per cent fiction! The literature for these children's minds is selected by the motion picture producer, in loco parentis.

When children read, they almost always read books written especially for them, appropriate for juvenile tastes and comprehension. When they go to the movies, they almost invariably witness films which have been made for adult entertainment. Very infrequently have such juvenile pictures as "Peter Pan" and "Granddaddy Long Legs" been produced. It has been well said that the children's shelf in the public library is crowded with wholesome, enchanting tales for the delight of juvenile hearts, but the children's shelf in the "movie library" is strangely empty.

The Duty of Parents

Parents should exercise eternal vigilance to prevent the "movie habit," which slips so easily into the daily and weekly routine, and which, once acquired, is difficult to control and may lead to serious delinquency. We parents must accept our share of the responsibility for the effects of the motion picture on our children, and must make a very serious effort to have them derive only good from their movie experience. To do this we must in some way become familiar with the pictures that are to be shown and then exercise some form of censorship. Many magazines carry regular departments intended to acquaint subscribers with the relative merits of pictures, and their value for adults, youth, and children.

Let us safeguard the dreams and the ideals of our children. Let us help them in every possible way to establish worthy standards, and then to keep those standards unshaken. Above all, let us not pay to have forced into the fertile fields of their fresh, eager young minds and open responsive hearts the seeds of ugliness, vice, and crime, and these not in their true forms which might point a moral, but ugliness, vice, and crime disguised in the most subtle, the most beautiful, and the most seductive dress that art and artifice combined have been able to produce.

Supervision, first, last, and all the time, particularly of the list of films, is the only means by which we can hope to have our children benefit instead of suffer from their movie experience.

(These should be given by two young people—the Bible story read, the other story memorized.)

"The largest church membership among the Christian people of a certain religious communion in Porto Rica, is located at Upper Dajaos (DãHãos). In January, 1928, there were 187 members on the roll of this church. During the hurricane of Thursday, September 13, 1928, the church building, the pastor's home, and the homes of many of the members were entirely destroyed. The following Sunday, the faithful pastor, Juan Martinez, found the bell which for years had called the people to worship, away up on the hillside. The clapper was still in place, and lifting the bell, propping it up sufficiently, the pastor rang it as before, and the people came at the call to worship in the open air beneath the penetrating rays of a tropical sun. Gathering in the service of worship, the people once more united their voices and hearts in praise to God. The churches of that denomination in this country have since replaced the house of worship and have sustained the faithful pastor and his little flock in their hour of trouble."

Poem: "Be the best of whatever you are" (to be memorized).

If you can't be a pine on the top of the hill,
Be a scrub in the valley—but be
The best little scrub by the side of the rill;
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

If you can't be a bush be a bit of the grass,
And some highway the happier make;
If you can't be a muskie then just be a bass—
But the liveliest bass in the lake!

We can't all be captains, we've got to be crew,
There's something for all of us here,
There's big work to do and there's lesser to do,
And the task we must do is the near.

If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail,
If you can't be the sun be a star;
Oh, it isn't by size that you win or you fail—
Be the best of whatever you are!

—Douglas Malloch.

Prayer: (A short prayer asking aid in our efforts to be praiseworthy.)

Hymn: "Gather them into the fold," Zion's Praises, 59. (School will rise.)

Dismissal to Classes and Lesson Study.

Announcements.

Sermon.

Hymn: "Our Father who art in heaven," Saints' Hymnal, 112.

Benediction (unison): "They that are wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever. Amen."

In this transition period, when much of the old is dying and much of the new is not yet born, the Christian minister has the unique privilege of expressing in word and attitude a message and a way of life which have survived the crises of changing civilizations in the past and are not likely to be permanently defeated in the chaos of our own time. It is not an easy task, and the more sensitive the minister is to the swift currents of contemporary thought and feeling, the more difficulty he will find. But it is his task, and if he can not banish his unrest in the courageous facing of it in his present field of labor, he is scarcely likely to do so anywhere else.—Frank Fitt.

The Prospect List

A series of four articles which discuss the purpose and use of the prospect list as an aid to missionary enterprise. By J. A. Gardner.

No. 3. The List; How to Use It

The first chapter in this series discussed the value and purpose of having a prospect list composed of the names and addresses of men and women who are possible converts to the church. The second chapter suggested ways and means by which the names of prospects may be assembled and made ready for use. It is the purpose of the third chapter of this series to indicate how to use the list, and to suggest the approach that should be made to prospects for conversion.

Assuming that an organized branch has assembled the names of fifty prospects for conversion to the church, and that as much information as possible regarding the attitudes, habits, likes, and dislikes of these people has been noted on the prospect list, the first question that arises is, How shall we use this information?

First; the branch pastor with his immediate associate officers should go over the list carefully and classify the prospects according to their vocations or by such other divisions as may suggest themselves, according to the business or social interests indicated by the information given.

Second; the priesthood of the branch should be called together for consultation regarding the names on the prospect list. Such a conference will likely discover additional information that will be helpful to those who will be asked to call on these people.

Third; The branch officers should select teams of missionary workers from among the priesthood. The members of the branch, both men and women, may also be placed on these teams. They should be assigned a number of prospects to work.

Fourth; before any work is done with the prospect list, call a mass meeting of the priesthood of the branch and those members both men and women who have been placed on the teams of missionary workers. Discuss ways and means to interest new people in the message of the church. In the majority of cases it will be necessary to make the acquaintance of the prospects. This will require intelligence, understanding, and tact. Friendliness must prevail. Rush and hurry should be avoided. To accomplish the desired results may take one month or a year or ten years. Success can be assured only when the task is undertaken with sincerity of purpose and characterized by persistent yet intelligent and friendly follow-up work.

Fifth; to get the matter clearly before the workers, certain aspects of personal work with prospects should be assigned as topics for discussion to the best informed of those who are invited to this mass meeting. The following list is suggested:

- Making the acquaintance of people you do not know.
- Discovering mutual interests and common grounds.
- Making use of points of contact.
- The importance of being able to discuss the belief and doctrine of other churches. To do this, is it necessary to attend the church with which your prospect is affiliated?
- The necessity for making a wise selection of literature to give to the prospect.
- The importance of being personally familiar with the literature that is given to the prospect.
- Is it better to make all your visits to the prospect in his home, or should he be invited to your home?
- At what point in your work with the prospect should the pastor be introduced?
- Opening the way for a return call.
- The value of personal prayer for help and guidance in presenting the message of the church to nonmembers.

Sixth; the full list of prospects should be submitted to those attending the mass meeting. By mutual agreement certain teams should be assigned to certain definite prospects. The utmost care should be taken by those in charge in making these assignments. If there is a lawyer on your prospect list, it is usually advisable for this person to be approached by one of the same profession. If you have a school-teacher on the list, it is often that the best approach can be made by one in the same profession or in a similar line of work. If there is a farmer listed, give his name to another farmer. There are exceptions to this method, but experience has proved it to be an advantage in most cases.

Seventh; it is important to accumulate information about the prospect. This is possible as acquaintance is made and friendship developed. It is sometimes advisable to have the general church headquarters conduct a short, direct mail campaign with a certain prospect. This impersonal approach sometimes interests him, and the literature that may be sent will furnish information about the church. A number of successful experiments have been conducted, using the method just described.

Eighth; each prospect must have individual treatment, and there is no guarantee that a method of approach which has proved successful in one case will bring results in others. Plans to interest the prospect and to present the message of the church to the banker, the farmer, the lawyer, the teacher, or the mechanic must be thoughtfully studied and carefully worked out.

Ninth; the branch pastor and his associate officers have the responsibility of stimulating those who have received definite assignments of prospects to consistent and intelligent follow-up work. New methods of approach should be continually developed, and as these new ideas take form they should become common property, so that all who are working with the prospect list may have the benefit of them.

There will come times of discouragement, which will cause the interest to lag. The alert branch pastor will discern this at once and will use some appropriate means to overcome this indifference, for the follow-up work with the prospect list can become effective in securing converts to the church only when it is being persistently and intelligently worked year after year.

Tenth; situations may develop which will make it necessary to reassign a prospect to another team. It may sometimes be necessary to drop a prospect's name from the list due to determined and persistent refusal to become interested, active and unwarranted antagonism, or other causes. The advice of the branch officers should always be sought in extreme cases of this kind.

Other suggestions will occur to those busily engaged in the missionary task of the church, and the ones here mentioned by no means exhaust the material or the ideas that can be marshaled in support of personal evangelistic missionary endeavor. When the district missionary visits the branches, his advice and help should be sought. After fully acquainting him with the work that has been done, it is quite probable that he can suggest new ideas that are usable, and he may offer his personal services with certain prospects.

The prospect list offers a definite incentive for personal work. The nature of the undertaking emphasizes its inclusiveness. The field of opportunity is unlimited, and the degree of success obtained is only limited by the consistent and intelligent service of missionary workers. The general officers of the church, with the help of the district officers and missionaries, augmented by the local forces of branch officers and members working together, compose an irresistible force in missionary endeavor.

Working the prospect list consistently not only secures converts to the church, but it will reconvert and reestablish the workers themselves in the faith of the church. While the results are directly two-fold, yet indirectly benefits of such an endeavor can not be estimated.

Athletics in the Small College

By A. R. Gilbert

Shall I go out for athletics? This problem will confront thousands of young men at the beginning of the college year. A satisfactory solution will depend upon a number of basic factors. Given a sound body, good health, and sufficient time, it is probably profitable for most young men to pick a sport in which they have ability and to engage wholeheartedly in that sport.

The small college presents a situation which meets the athletic needs of many students in a very fine way.

The small college can not build stadia, pay salaries, and purchase equipment from the proceeds of its athletic contests. The temptation to commercialize athletics is therefore not so great. Consequently the small college is in a better position to regard and administer its athletic program as part of a general system of education, emphasizing the educational value rather than the gate receipts and the publicity resulting from a winning team.

Somebody once said, "God must love the average people, for he has made so many of them." Most of us are average in our abilities. To such the small college offers its athletic program, competing as it does with other teams made up largely of the same sort of men. This is a distinctive service, as the ordinary athlete is lost in the numbers of the larger colleges and universities. Since the athletic service of the small college is distinctly for the ordinary and just above ordinary athlete, it naturally follows that the star athlete, one whose first thought is of athletics and who intends making athletics his vocation, finds it to his advantage to attend the larger school, offering state or perhaps national prominence, and competing with other schools whose athletes are from the ranks of the superior.

Since winning teams are not so much demanded of the small college, the administration of athletics may call for a shorter season and a shorter daily practice session. This is an advantage to the student athlete. As a student he should not spend too much time in athletic activities, and the activity should not demand so much of his energy that he is unable to study after practice. It naturally follows that competing institutions are relatively close to the small college, so that trips away from school are shorter, and fewer classes are missed because of athletic contests, thus permitting athletic participation, and at the same time concentration upon scholastic preparation and mastery of one's courses.

Athletics in a college such as Graceland College possesses a further characteristic decidedly beneficial, from both a scholastic and individual point of view. An analysis of the optimum amount of time one should spend in physical activities indicates that as one approaches adulthood from infancy, the time decreases. Coupled with this situation the fact that the first two years of college are years of generalization, while the third and fourth are years of specialization, and the advantageous position of athletics in the junior college becomes obvious. Active participation in sports during the first two years of generalization is encouraged. After the first two years, the student begins the intensive period of vocational specialization, either at Graceland or at some other school. The tendency is to drop the strenuous and time-consuming varsity program of athletics, taking in its place sports of an individual recreational nature. This is as it should be, decreasing the amount of time and energy spent in physical activities as the years pass and as the necessity for mastery and attention to detail make greater demands upon the student's time.

The values accruing from sports and games are many and real. To a certain extent, however, these values are only potential. The outcome in values actually attained depends in great measure upon the personality of the coach, the personal attention which the candidate receives, the fellows he plays in association with, and the philosophy dominating and motivating the play. The athletic field offers a laboratory rich in the possibilities for presenting many of life's fundamental lessons and inculcating habits, tendencies, and attitudes harmonizing with our social and spiritual ideals. The church college and the church young people should not fail to take advantage of this opportunity.

The small college, and particularly the church college, Graceland, is unique in its position for rendering service in the field of athletics to young people who have vision and a purpose.

God and Our Relation to Him

A radio talk by N. L. Booker

O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!—Romans 11: 33.

I will not attempt to give you any definition for God, neither will I try to define God, Christ, or the Holy Ghost. However, I will say that I believe in the One God, in Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost. All religions are based on the understanding of God.

In my early ministry I laid too much stress on the definition. The Trinity had come between me and the Godhead. I unconsciously attached more importance to his being three than to his being God. But in later years I had to realize that we can not inclose the Infinite in a shape, or three shapes, resembling in any way what we call physical man.

I had to give up the habit of embodying God in any form. I had to confess that what is meant by the Three Persons in One God I did not know. Furthermore, I saw no necessity for thinking that I knew, since such knowledge must transcend all scope of the human mind. To make my position clear, let me add that, inferring from the Bible that there is a Father, a Son, and a Holy Ghost, I do not feel it imperative that I go beyond these terms. My powers are too limited to allow the Trinity to come first—but God.

Of the infinite the finite mind can catch only a finite glimpse. I see what I can see; another sees what he can see. The visions may be different, and yet each vision may be true. So, two minds contemplating God will see and understand just what each mind is prepared to receive. Water poured into different colored glasses will take on the colors of the glasses it fills, even though it be the same water in them all.

The scripture is right which says no man (with his natural eye) can see God and live. For we can not see and understand God in the sense of knowing his being, or his personality, any more than we can know the essence of the life principle. Just as we know the life principle only from what it does, so we know God only from such manifestations of himself as reach our observation. Everything else is inference. Because we see something of his goodness, we infer that he is good. We experience something of his love, and we infer that he is loving. We see something of his power, and we infer that he is almighty. It is, first of all, a matter of drawing conclusions, and then making those conclusions the food of the inner, spiritual man whose life is independent of the mortal heart and brain.

Tradition and my early instruction taught me that there is a God. But that did not help me in understanding God except in that they built me a ship in which I put out to sea. The discovery had to be my own.

There was another mysterious term I never could understand in my earlier days; the term salvation. What did that mean? What did people mean when they asked me if I was saved; or if I wanted to be saved? Later I thought more about it. What is salvation? When I came to know that it came from the latin term soteria, a safe return, I can appreciate the Scriptures more. A return to God. To know him again.

We can know God easily so long as we do not feel it necessary to define him. The more we try to define him, the farther we get from him. The more we try to adjust ourselves to the mind and will of God, the nearer we get to him, and the better we understand him. We see and know him through the majesty of his creation plus the opening of the spiritual eye and understanding; and that comes in proportion to our fitness to receive. Since we are separated from him by our sins (Isaiah 59: 1, 3), we are deprived of many blessings until we adjust ourselves to his mind and will.

"Why should I (says the pantheist) ask God to change all the laws of the universe just to give me a special favor?" But to the infinite mind I am as much the object of regard as any solar system. To such a mind nothing is small; no one thing is farther from its scope than another. God has no difficulty in blessing me when I submerge myself, my will, in his. He could do nothing else. "I am bound when you do my will," says God. When an object is immersed in the water, it gives the water no extra trouble to close round it. The object may be as small as a grain of sand or as large as a battleship. To the water it is all the same.

Yes, I believe in the church; but I used to have more of a feeling for the church than I did for God. Now I love and believe in the church, but go on to the Truth and the Life (God), which giveth the church its value.

His love, his power, his presence, must be at our disposal, like other great forces; like sunshine, wind, and rain. We can use them in proportion to our ability to receive. It is not a question of his giving, but of our capacity to receive.

I am convinced that the belief of many generations of nominal Christians in a God whose power was chiefly shown in repressions, denials, and capricious disappointments, is responsible, in a large measure, for our present world distress, and disbelief in God. It is a matter of reeducation. To find God for yourself you will have to be willing to let some of your old cherished ideas go.

According to our capacity and our individual needs we can know God; and knowing God is not as difficult as the average mind is apt to think. It stands to reason that if knowing God, in the sense in which it is possible to know him, is so essential to mankind, it could not be difficult. The making it difficult is part of the dust the Christian throws in his own eyes. No theory or speculation can make us know him. It must be his own revelation of himself or nothing. (John 6: 44.) "The Father draw him."

The knowledge of God will come to you more freely when you begin to look for that revelation not alone in solemn mysteries, or through the medium of prophets, apostles, and ancient scriptures, but in the sights and sounds and happenings of every day. Here I hope I will not be misunderstood. The solemn mysteries have their places. The medium of apostles, prophets, and ancient scriptures are of inestimable value, before and after I have done something for myself. All can work simultaneously, but it is useless for the soul to strike at the advanced, having ignored the elementary. How can I help seeing so much beauty and sweetness as the manifestations of God? Except in revelation, how could he show himself to me more smilingly? How could I say I have not seen God when I see this. True, also, that beautiful as these things appear to the physical eye, the revealments of God must be more beautiful to the spiritual eye. But even with my imperfect mortal vision they are rapturously good, a veritable glimpse of the divine. This is what I mean by the elementary—the common, primary thing, the things I look at every day and hardly ever accredit to their source.

I am not speaking pantheistically here. These things are not God, or part of God (only the life), but manifestations of God. When I speak of seeing God in them, I mean that in them, as well as in many other simple things, I see him as is possible to such comprehension as mine. As expressions of him they may be misinterpreted by the error of our physical senses, or distorted by the limitations of our spiritual perception. But even then they bring him near to us in the kind of radiance which we can catch. In general we take our good things for granted, complaining that they are not better. The things we lack are more vivid to us, as a rule, than those we have acquired. Having hung a cloud about ourselves, we disregard the uncountable ways in which God persists in shining through, in spite of our efforts to shut him out.

You can not reckon the good that comes to us through such channels as home, friendship, family, music, and many other hardly noticed pleasures of a single day. Few of us, I think, ever pause to remember that through them he is making himself known to us before doing it in any other way.

God reserves nothing which would brighten the lives of his children. He freely gives to us when we are ready to receive, and nothing is wasted. It would not be in keeping with his economy to have any entity wasted. As our Lord puts it, the sparrow can not fall without his notice. Without him the lilies are not decked; the knowledge possessed by his infinite intelligence is so minute that the very hairs of the head are numbered.

My life, my work, myself—all are as much a necessary part of his design as the thread the weaver weaves into the pattern is a necessary part of the carpet.

Helping the Church

By Poul S. Nielsen

Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: and yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?—Matthew 6: 32-34.

When the Master spoke these words on the mountain side, he doubtless was not speaking of any particular kinds of lilies, but more likely he was talking of plants or flowers in a general way. This does not matter so far as our salvation is concerned, but the last part of verse 34 concerns us much.

According to our Savior's words, we have an assurance that God will provide for all our needs, if we are not of little faith. All who have joined the church must at some time or other have had some faith or they would not have entered the waters of baptism. A few, perhaps, might have permitted their faith to vanish, for some cause or other, but the great majority have a faith more or less alive to the needs of the church. What faith we have we must use as a talent to improve ourselves, thereby increasing our faith by a like process to which some people increase material wealth, by putting it out at interest.

There may be things about this gospel work which we do not understand at the present time, but that does not determine that at some future time, when we need to understand it more fully, the light will not be given us. Almost anyone who has been engaged in the gospel work for a number of years will testify that he does look at things in a different way than he did while he was young in the work. Anyone who has the least bit of faith in God can, if he will only think it over, recall how God has at some time helped him in some trial. If we will only do our part to further his kingdom on earth, we will receive our reward, both in this life and in the life to come.

The time of the individual is past, not alone in private life, but also in relation to the church. No one can live the life of a hermit, as was a possibility some years ago. Our civilized life demands that all citizens must do something for the benefit of the society of which they are members. If nothing else, they must help pay taxes, direct or indirect, to the State in which they reside.

The church may be likened to a State. It has certain expenses that must be met whenever they are due. We have an army on the firing line, our missionaries. They must live, and so must their families, while the breadwinner is away from home doing work for the church. And who are the church? Any who have been baptized. These have a moral obligation to help the church of their choice all they can.

What would happen if all our members should stop contributing, or give only half of what they used to give? This church would collapse, and our enemies would rejoice. No society, state, or church can get along without money for very long. It is a bad thing for a State to go bankrupt, and such things have happened; but it would be far worse for this to occur with a church. We may not all be able to give much, but remember that many a small rivulet will at last form a mighty river.

No one who has given to a church has ever lost a cent by so doing. Most people will admit that it has been a help to them in their daily life, and that they have never missed whatever they gave with a willing hand and heart. If, then, we can cultivate a more living faith, and most if not all of us can improve on what we already have, there is not even a shadow of doubt that our heavenly Father will abundantly provide for our earthly needs.

If we have anything to give to the church we claim to love, be it money or time or something else, now is the time to do it. Tomorrow might be too late. When we enter the church building for the last time, we do not need any of our earthly goods, and what talents we might have had while living are of no use to us. Some one may intend to leave plenty by his will for the use of the church. All good and well; but don't you think it is far nicer to have the joy of seeing some of it do good things while you are still here?

When the still small voice tells us to do something for our church, we had better do it rather than put it off. We thereby increase our own faith and help the work along, that the day we are looking for may soon be here. Who knows but perhaps what little we do in the way of helping might help some backward or timid brother or sister to step into line and do something for the Master which may be of lasting benefit to some one in the church, or perhaps to an outsider.

If we will only stand united, and each do his very best, nothing in the world can hinder us from conquering the world for Christ, the crucified. At the same time that we are helping his cause along, we are doing something for ourselves, for we can not help him without being helped ourselves.

Our Course Is Forward

By J. E. Vanderwood

No man, having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.—Jesus.

There is a general tendency among human beings to look back and to dwell in the past. They bind themselves to the customs, traditions, and creeds of the past, without being able to give any reason for it other than that they have always done it. There is also a general tendency to look at with suspicion, and to oppose that which they do not understand. These two factors go a long way toward retarding the progress of mankind. The tasks of life must always lie ahead: they are always facing us. We should seek to train and prepare ourselves to successfully meet, accomplish, and put behind us the things that are to be mastered, subdued, or conquered. There should be no excuse for looking back on the thing completed and simply congratulating ourselves on being able to have achieved thus far. No; but to the contrary, it ought to cause us to look forward with greater assurance, greater zeal, and greater determination to lay hold upon, and master the still unfinished tasks; to reach the still unreached goal; to acquire the ability and knowledge that is yet needful.

And we find ourselves possessed of a strong tendency to give prominence to less important things, and to neglect the things that are of paramount importance. While Jesus was pursuing his universally forward course in life, a certain individual came to him and said:

Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest. . . . And he said to another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.

The original manuscript of this text clearly indicates that the young man was willing to follow Christ after his father was dead and buried, but he was unwilling to do so until his father was laid away. He wanted the Master to excuse him so long as his father was living, but after his father had been laid away he would then have nothing to come between him and the performance of the duty to which the Master had called him. The tendency to procrastinate enters here; and the desire to put secondary things first. Too frequently this is our besetting sin, we are unwilling to make the sacrifices necessary for the forward movement that is required of us if we are to properly represent the Lord among mankind. Another said:

Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell which are at home in my house. And Jesus said unto him, No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

The ceremonial farewell of those days usually required a considerable period of time, therefore this man would delay the work required of him in order to attend the thing closest to him. He was making the matter of a ceremonial farewell to his friends of greater importance than the preaching of the kingdom of God, and while he was concerning himself about these things he was making no preparation for the work to which the Lord would have him go. In each of these cases you will notice the use of the adverb first, for these men wanted to place other things in the first rank and the following of Jesus and the preaching of the kingdom of God secondary.

The manner in which our tasks in life are accomplished is to be largely determined by the way in which we are looking. If we are circumscribed by the traditions of the past so completely that we have no perspective of the future, and of greater achievements ahead, we are not going to be able to reach any advanced goals. But if we are able to look forward, and having a clear vision, march forward with firm and steady strides, we will achieve the desired ends, and the past will serve only as a means of assurance that greater heights can be won.

We have a striking figure of this in the case of the twelve spies who were sent by Moses into Caanan. Ten of them were looking backward. They were satisfied with the wilderness of sin, or had turned their vision back to the fleshpots of Egypt. They all died in the wilderness of sin. Two of these men had a clear perspective, and they said, "Let us go in and possess the land." They were the only ones of that generation who were permitted to go over into the land of promise. Those who looked back would have been of no worth in the land of promise, had they been permitted to enter. The words of Jesus hold good: "No man having put his hand to the plow and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God."

Every man of agricultural experience will grasp the import of the Master's illustration, for he will see that the man who holds the plow and who looks back will, if he plows at all, make a very crooked and uneven furrow. There is no way to escape the conclusion that he who is constantly looking at other things is less able to represent God than the man who looks back constantly is able to plow. Jesus knew where to place the matter when he said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

We have every reason to be proud of the achievements of the past, for many of those men and women did nobly, wrought well, and have given us a fine exhibition of accomplishment. But this does not warrant us in being willing to stop at their goal, or in being satisfied with their achievements. Our course is forward. We must mount up the heights of wisdom. We must achieve social and economic goals that our sires were unable to reach. We must press constantly forward until the end for which Jesus gave his life is fully realized in the lives and experiences of men.

This achievement can be realized only by our having the right perspectives. He who looks back is going to fail. The one only who has the moral courage to push out into new fields and to spend himself in the forward movement of the work of the kingdom of God can fully qualify for a place therein. We have a very striking example of this in the figure of Lot's wife. The Lord admonished them to get out of Sodom, and he said to them, "Look not behind thee," but in spite of the warning, Lot's wife looked back and was turned into a pillar of salt.

Yes, faith, repentance, baptism, and the laying on of hands are all stepping-stones to our ultimate success; but no one who looks back to the date of his baptism and says, "I have done this, therefore I am safe," is fit for the kingdom of God. We are to follow Jesus, and in doing so we are required to pursue the course he marked out for us in his example. There can be no question about his faith in God; there can be no question about his growing in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man. That he was baptized no one can deny. That these things were a means for the opening of the heavens to him is very apparent. The seal of his Sonship was evidenced in the fact that the Spirit descended upon him after his baptism, but Jesus did not stop there and say, "I have arrived." No; far from it. He went constantly forward, ever more revealing the life, the love, and the wonderful character of God. This is precisely what he would have us do if we would fill the measure of our creation, and the purpose of our mission upon the earth.

All the great goals of the church lie ahead of us, They are of such proportions as to challenge the best there is in us. As we think of stewardships and Zion we ought to be fired with courage to press forward; we ought to be renewed in courage and in diligence to move on in the forward course until we shall have reached them as we have already reached some of the lesser goals. There is no time for us to stop and congratulate ourselves on past achievements; the very nature of the task before us requires us to make the best of our time and means; to forge ahead with our eye constantly fixed on the one life, and the one accomplishment, viz: the acquiring of the nature and understanding of the Master so that we may be able to reveal him in our walk and conversation among men.

There is no alternative in this matter, for he who would put other things first is really not fit for the kingdom of God. The kingdom of God lies before us. Jesus has led the way, and as we learn to be faithful followers of him, we shall become able leaders of mankind.

The Silver Lining

By W. H. Deam

Most everybody has heard the saying, Every cloud has a silver lining; or, No matter how dark the cloud, it has a silver lining. The sun shining from above makes a glistening sheen of great beauty. Some people accentuate the gloom, while others bring out the silver lining when under the darkest cloud. One day I ran across the following very pretty little verse. I do not know who is its author.

The inside of every cloud
Is bright and shining;
I'll therefore turn my clouds about
And always wear them inside out
To show the lining.

Some people carry that out; no matter what great trouble confronts them, they dispel the gloom and lighten up the ominous clouds by showing the lining. Smiles and kind words make rifts in the clouds through which the sun sends its cheering rays to benefit the disconsolate.

Clouds are necessary. If there were no clouds we would not appreciate the sunshine. There is a young woman whom I have known since she was a small child, and I have never known her otherwise than smiling and pleasant. One naturally thinks how beautiful this world would be if everybody could be as she is. But not so. There must be differences for comparison. We could not fully appreciate the graces of such people if there were no opposites. We must have a tempest and a sunshine.

Of necessity there are opposites in everything, not only in the animal kingdom, but in the vegetable

OF GENERAL INTEREST

A Father's Confession

Contributed by a friendly reader, with the suggestion that many parents may become better ones by heeding the lesson it teaches. We regret that the authorship is unknown.

Listen, son: I am saying this to you as you lie asleep, one little paw crumpled under your cheek and the blond curls stickily wet on your damp forehead. I have stolen into your room alone. Just a few minutes ago, as I sat reading my paper in the library, a hot, stifling wave of remorse swept over me. I could not resist it. Guiltily I came to your bedside.

These are the things I was thinking, son: I had been cross to you. I scolded you as you were dressing for school because you gave your face merely a dab with a towel. I took you to task for not cleaning your shoes. I called out angrily when I found you had thrown some of your things on the floor.

At breakfast I found fault, too. You spilled things. You gulped down your food. You put your elbows on the table. You spread butter too thick on your bread. And as you started off to play and I made for my train, you turned and waved a little and mineral kingdoms; the male and the female, the negative and the positive. Otherwise there would be a monotonous existence, if existence were at all possible.

The Apostle Paul, as recorded in 1 Corinthians 11:19, said: "For there must be heresies among you, that they which are approved may be made manifest among you." That harmonizes with the idea that the graces could not be made manifest without comparison. If all were in possession of the same characteristics, there would be no exception by which to make a comparison.

I don't know how it will be beyond the veil, whether everybody will be a "sunshine" and there be no "tempests." Paul said: "That which is seen is temporal, but that which is unseen is eternal." All we behold passes away. Some things exist for only a few hours, others for a few days or months, and some things for generations. Nothing seen can be made so strong that it will last eternally. The eternal things are of a spiritual nature.

In our daily walk we should show the silver lining and shed the radiant rays of cheer, that the weary ones may be comforted, and they, too, look and see the sheen of beauty beckoning them.

hand and called, "Good-bye, daddy!" and I frowned, and said in reply, "Hold your shoulders back!"

Then it began all over again in the late afternoon. As I came up the hill I spied you, down on your knees playing marbles. There were holes in your stockings. I humiliated you before your boy friends by making you march ahead of me back to the house. Stockings were expensive, and if you had to buy them you would be more careful! Imagine that, son, from a father! It was such stupid, silly logic!

Do you remember, later, when I was reading in the library, how you came in, softly, timidly, with a sort of hurt, hunted look in your eyes? When I glanced up over my paper, impatient at the interruption, you hesitated at the door. "What is it that you want?" I snapped.

You said nothing, but ran across, in one tempestuous plunge, and threw your arms around my neck and kissed me, again and again, and your small arms tightened with affection that God had set blooming in your heart, and which even neglect could not wither. And then you were gone, pattering up the stairs.

Well, son, it was shortly afterwards that my paper slipped from my hands and a terrible, sickening fear came over me. Suddenly I saw myself as I really was, in all my horrible selfishness, and I felt sick at heart.

What had habit been doing to me? The habit of complaining, of finding fault, of reprimanding—all of these were my rewards to you for being a boy. It was not that I did not love you; it was that I expected so much of youth. I was measuring you by the yardstick of my own years.

And there was so much that was good, and fine, and true in your character. You did not deserve my treatment of you, son. The little heart of you was as big as the dawn itself over the wide hills. All this was shown by your spontaneous impulse to rush in and kiss me good night. Nothing else matters tonight, son. I have come to your bedside in the darkness, and I have knelt there, choking with emotion, and so ashamed.

It is a feeble atonement. I know you would not understand these things if I told them to you during your waking hours, yet I must say what I am saying. I must burn sacrificial fires alone, here in your bedroom, and make free confession.

And I have prayed God to strengthen me in my new resolve. Tomorrow I will be a real daddy! I will chum with you, and suffer when you suffer, and laugh when you laugh. I will bite my tongue when impatient words come. I will keep saying, as if it

The Boys' and Girls' Camp at Nauvoo

By Mrs. A. L. Sanford

Nauvoo was the scene of much activity during the Boys' and Girls' Camp the early part of July. Brother and Sister Eugene Closson and Craig Siegfried were on the grounds with the "C" Scouts the week before the camp opened and, with the help of J. W. Layton, erected four bunk houses. These houses are located in a slightly spot east of the Nauvoo House, facing the river, and as each accommodates twelve, the needs of the boys were well cared for. The Nauvoo House was used for the girls' sleeping quarters.

Brother Roy Cheville, who was in charge of the assemblies, camp fires, and music, developed some splendid choruses and composed a camp song. Ann Morgan was house mother; "Judy" Closson director of girls' athletics; Sister Woodstock, handcraft and campcraft; Nellie Cheville, hygiene and first aid; Sister McDowell, picture appreciation, while Myrtle Weber and Elizabeth Smith had charge of the younger girls in nature study and swimming activities. Craig Siegfried was athletic director of the older boys, and Almer Sheehy of the juniors.

The seating capacity of the Nauvoo House was taxed to the utmost during mealtime to accommodate the ninety-four campers, and Lois Garver and Vesta Stevenson worked like Trojans feeding the hungry multitude.

The first Sunday evening the camp met with the Nauvoo Saints at the chapel and witnessed the sixth of the historical programs which have been given regularly on the last Sunday of the month. Bertram Lewis took the part of Joseph Smith; Arnold Ourth, Bishop Partridge; John Williams, the trapper; J. C. Page, the Indian Chief; and David Lee, Sidney Rigdon. Mary Lee gave the talk on "Early revelations and instructions to the people in Zion," and L. H. Lewis the sermon on "Looking forward."

The second Sunday the camp again met at the chapel for the sacramental service. J. C. Page and Roy Cheville were in charge, the latter making the opening talk, telling of his impressions of Nauvoo, it being his first visit. Four representatives were chosen to speak, two from Nauvoo and two from the camp. Arnold Ourth and Irene Layton spoke of the work in Nauvoo, their love for Nauvoo, and their hopes for this, the corner stone of Zion. Almer Sheehy and Ann Morgan spoke for the camp, expressing their appreciation of being here, their impressions, etc. A good spirit was present.

At five o'clock a vesper service was held on the lawn of the Old Homestead, and at eight o'clock a preaching service to which the Nauvoo Saints were invited. The young people rendered several splendid musical numbers, and Brother Cheville was the speaker, his topic being "Follow the Gleam."

On the closing day, at flag retreat, awards were given those whose records were outstanding, and red ribbons, blue, and white were awarded. Two campships were awarded to those who had entered into all athletic activities and had displayed the true camp spirit. These were won by Mary DeLany, of Saint Louis, and Cedric Siegfried, of Independence.

All gathered about the camp fire for the last time while songs were sung, farewell speeches given, and the camp log read by Tom Beil, of Clinton, Iowa. Then two cans of marshmallows, a gift from Brother and Sister Blair, of Lamoni, were toasted and enjoyed by all present.

As the camp song was sung for the last time, voices faltered on the words:

"We're coming back to you,
Dear Old Nauvoo;
To camp once more
On bending shore,
'Neath skies of blue.

"For to your happy days
And friendly ways,
There came a call,
That drew us all
To Old Nauvoo.

"Oh, Mississippi,
Your waters enchant me.
By you I'll sit and dream
While mellow moonbeams beam.
In waters rippling,
We'll all go dipping,
Or float along
With boating song
At Old Nauvoo."

Central Texas Reunion

By Leslie Kohlman

The Central Texas reunion was held at Hearne, Texas, from July 11 to July 20. The reunion was a very successful one, though the attendance was not as large as last year.

We were blessed in having with us Apostle J. A. Gillen, from whom we received fatherly advice. Elder J. W. A. Bailey, the conference appointee to this district as missionary, delivered some fine sermons, which were immensely enjoyed. Elder George Wixom, the Southwestern Texas district missionary, was with us, and gave fine instruction. We were also fortunate in having with us, Brother and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, who by their timely advice and instructions have brought to us much food for thought. Their thoughts were on the social and economic problems of Zion.

It was on the moonlight night of July 11, and the hour of eight had arrived. The curtain went up, and the Saints who had gathered for the convening of the Central Texas reunion were entertained by a play, presented by the young people of the Texas Central Branch. Each player played his part well and made the play a success. The evening was enjoyed.

On the following morning, a general prayer service was held with Elder C. W. Tischer in charge. At ten o'clock in the morning the regular conference business meeting convened. We shall make mention of a few outstanding actions were a ritual: "He is nothing but a boy—a little boy!"

I am afraid I have visualized you as a man. Yet as I see you now, son, crumpled and weary in your cot, I see that you are still a baby. Yesterday you were in your mother's arms, your head on her shoulder. I have asked too much, too much!

Dear boy! Dear little son! A penitent kneels at your infant shrine, here in the moonlight. I kiss the little fingers and the damp forehead, and the yellow curls; and if it were not for waking you, I would snatch you up and crush you to my breast.

Tears came, and heartache and remorse, and—I think—a greater, deeper love, when you ran through the library door and wanted to kiss me!—

of the conference. Elder C. W. Tischer was elected president of the district. New Baden was voted as our place of meeting for the district's winter conference. A motion was passed stating that each member of the district was to pay one dollar or more to the district treasurer by Christmas, this money to be used for reunion expense next year.

Our camp is equipped with a dining hall, sufficient to feed twenty-four people at one serving; a permanent tabernacle with a seating capacity of three hundred and fifty; a Delco Light System which furnishes enough light to illuminate the entire camp, including each tent, tabernacle, and dining hall; an Electric Water System that furnishes water for the dining hall and shower baths. A refreshment stand, located on the camp grounds was operated by Brother G. D. Dotson. A good profit was made and the money was turned over to the district fund and used for reunion expenses.

The afternoons were opened to recreation; and volley ball, baseball, and horseshoe were played.

We had visiting friends and members from Oklahoma, Louisiana, Missouri, and southwestern Texas. Thus, through our association and by valuable information furnished us, we feel that much good will be derived from the ten days of reunion service.

We wish to announce that Sister Eva Suggs is going to take charge of the dining hall at our next reunion, which will convene sometime in 1931.

Northern Saskatchewan Conference

By Lottie Clarke Diggle

Those attending the annual conference of Northern Saskatchewan District, July 17 to 20, voted it the best for many years, both from an educational and a spiritual standpoint. Approximately one hundred and seventy-five were in attendance.

Each morning an hour of prayer and testimony was enjoyed, the Friday morning and Sunday sacramental services especially being spiritual feasts. Brother Frank Piedt was called to the office of teacher, and Brother G. F. Van Eaton, of Shellbrook, was ordained an elder. The Saints rejoiced to meet Sister Hyrum Van Eaton and daughter, Clare, who motored from Tacoma, Washington. "Father" Van Eaton, who passed to his reward this spring, was missed by all. Surely no Saints were ever more beloved than these two for their Christlike spirit and ready sacrifices.

Class work was conducted each forenoon, Brother Ward L. Christy, Sister Christy, and Sister Diggle stressing the following subjects, "Preparedness for church leadership," "Religious education in the home," "Leading toward God," "Organization of the church school," "Keeping the home God-conscious," "Methods and materials for religious education," "Ideas and ideals," and "Worship in the home."

The business session was held Saturday afternoon, J. F. Curtis presiding, associated with W. J. Cornish, district president, and Brother Christy. It was decided to continue the radio work for the winter months. Brother E. L. Bowerman was elected district president for the ensuing year; James Cornish, supervisor of religious education; Sister Grace Beckman, secretary; and Sister Iva Steves, chorister.

On Thursday evening a garden party was held on the lawn at the home of Brother and Sister Diggle. The grounds were gay with flags and colored lights, and ice cream, lemonade, watermelon, and cake were dispensed throughout the evening. The city hospital generously loaned its hand organ, and musical numbers were greatly enjoyed. Mr. Mackie favored the assembly with two cornet solos and a vocal solo, and Brothers Reid, Smith, Andrew Peterson, and E. A. Ward with violin and guitar numbers. The male chorus sang two delightful numbers, as also did the girls' quartet. Apostle J. F. Curtis spoke about thirty minutes on the gospel of Jesus Christ. A large number of nonmembers was present.

The following are some of the religious education features of the conference: Frank Piedt, "Recreation as a means of developing character"; Sister N. Few, "Activities of the Oriole girls"; James Cornish, "Advancement of the Sunday school"; A. M. Crawford, "Learning and obeying God's laws"; Apostle Curtis, "Priesthood and authority"; Brother Bowerman, "Stewardships"; Brother Christy, "Cooperation"; Brother Curtis, "Religious education and the church school."

On Friday evening Brother Curtis preached an inspiring sermon on "The establishment of God's kingdom in the last days," following which the congregation went to a beautiful spot on the banks of the Saskatchewan for a Galilean service. In the twilight hour the spirit of worship descended upon the waiting people seated on the rocks. Here, surrounded by God's handiwork, no sound but the lapping of the water and the faint twittering of birds, the spirit of peace rested on each. Some one began to sing "The old, old path," and all joined in. From the woods above, residents came in groups, perhaps to discern what manner of people were these. As the congregation ceased singing, the notes of the cornet were heard far up among the trees, and clearly came the words of the beautiful song, "O Galilee, dear Galilee." Nearer and nearer came the quartet of singers, causing one to feel that he was indeed on the shore of the Sea of Galilee and that time had rolled back nineteen hundred years. Apostle Curtis then led in prayer. The male quartet sang "Remember me, O mighty One," and Brother Christy delivered a stirring sermon on "Christ's message, as he expounded it on the shores of Galilee." Before dispersing the congregation sang "Nearer, my God, to thee," and as we prepared for rest, the words of that grand old hymn rang in our ears.

A day nursery was conducted by Sister Few, the Oriole girls and a number of others helping to care for the restless little ones. Thus many mothers who would otherwise have been obliged to miss much of the conference, were enabled to enjoy the services.

On Saturday afternoon the young people entertained the parents, first taking them for a motor drive to the Forestry Farm, the university, and other points of interest. Owing to the rain, some of the plans miscarried, but all congregated in the basement, where a bevy of young people served delicious refreshments. Following this, the people gathered in the auditorium for a continuance of the program. Freeman Snider spoke feelingly on "Our parents." The junior choir then sang "Faith of our parents." Henry Piedt gave a brief address on "Our missionaries." Frank Piedt's subject was "The influence of the adult on youth," and Clifford Moran stressed the need of greater understanding between parents and the teen-age boy or girl. Alex Mackie and Vivian Nelson gave a realistic representation of father and mother grown old lovely and loving. In conclusion the congregation sang with fervor the well-loved song, "Consecration." Parents deeply appreciated the thought and sacrifice of the young people who contributed to their happiness. Freeman Snider voiced the appreciation of the young people to Sister Christy, who had worked hard to help them carry out their plans.

Sunday was a full day. Sacramental service was held at 8.30 o'clock followed by church school at 9.45. The primary department remained in the basement until noon. At eleven o'clock Brother Christy chose for his subject "The work is true." Lunch was served in the basement under the patronage of Sister Moran. At two o'clock Brother Curtis delivered a splendid message on "Let us go on to perfection." A priesthood meeting was held in the basement at 3.30 while the main audience gathered in the upper auditorium for a discussion on religious education in charge of Sister Christy.

Owing to the indisposition of Brother E. L. Bowerman Brother Christy again occupied the pulpit in the evening, continuing his subject of the preceding Sabbath, "A personal God." Two short playlets, "A cross for a crown" and "Darkness and light," were contributed by the teen-age girls. Sister Christy had charge of the dramatization work of the conference.

The following were some musical numbers enjoyed during the conference: A duet by Brother and Sister Christy; the male chorus, Messrs. Reid, Lehman, Schmidt, Christy, Harper, and Mackie, sang "Speed away"; duet, "The bird with the broken pinion," Brothers Christy and Gregory; duet, "Have thine own way," Sister Hyrum Van Eaton and Brother Christy; male chorus, "The wayside cross"; duet, "Jesus gave it all," Sister Clare Van Eaton and Brother Christy; solo, "Nearer, my God, to thee," Mrs. Taylor.

Gloom was cast over the conference by the accident which befell Brother Arthur Gendron, one of our consecrated young workers. While playing baseball, his knee was fractured, one of the bones of the leg being broken, and the ligaments badly torn. Many prayers were uttered for his recovery and comfort.

Ministerial Conference at Onset

By S. L. Fisher, for Press Committee

July 24.—The annual ministerial conference of the church in this district was held on the beautiful grounds owned by this body at Onset, Massachusetts, July 5 and 6.

The first meeting was on Saturday evening, and after the usual business Elder David E. Dowker, of Boston, spoke on "Our message."

On Sunday morning several hundred members from different parts of southern New England met to partake of the sacrament and also to witness an ordination service. Brothers Herbert Floyd and Sanford Fisher, of Providence and Boston, respectively, were set apart to the office of elder; and Alfred Toombs was ordained to the office of teacher. At the preaching hour Doctor W. A. Sinclair, of Boston, spoke, his subject being "Our ministry."

In the afternoon the various quorums of the priesthood met and received instruction as to the duties and responsibilities of their offices. Then Bishops M. C. Fisher and E. L. Traver, of Boston, spoke on "Our immediate tasks," and "Our succeeding tasks."

At the evening service, Brother William Patterson, district president, held his audience while speaking on "Our responsibility."

All during the conference there was a fine spirit, and this was a fitting opening for the summer activities at Onset. The attendance was one of the largest we have ever had in the district, and speaks well of such gatherings at the tabernacle. It also bespeaks the attitude of the district, and we are striving as a group to prepare for greater activity.

Graceland College Ed's Notice

We would like all members of the Alumni to take notice of the fact that our goal of raising a scholarship to be presented at the 1930 conference, has been attained! Another has been pledged, and we expect to meet it with even greater zeal. We hope for the cooperation of every Religious Ed. At the last meeting, April 15, 1930, the president, H. E. Winegar, was succeeded by James A. Thomas, Lamoni, Iowa; and secretary-treasurer, O. L. Thompson, by Mrs. H. E. Winegar, La Junta, Colorado. Please get in touch with these officers as soon as possible, that our goals may be speedily reached. The group decided that the small amount of twenty-five cents per year membership dues be contributed by each member. Mail dues to secretary.—Mrs. H. E. Winegar, secretary-treasurer.

NEWS AND LETTERS

Sacramento, California

July 16.—Elder G. P. Levitt, missionary and district president, has returned to his field here. The Saints enjoyed his sermons June 29 and were glad to have him again worship with them last Wednesday evening. Sister Levitt and son, Cleland, arrived this week, motoring through from Michigan in eight days. We are happy to have this family return to us. Their new address is 2800 H Street.

A spiritual service was enjoyed sacrament Sunday. Elder and Sister Hiram Holt, formerly of Gilroy, were present. Brother Holt is visiting in the branches where he served as a missionary years ago. His sermon on "The coming of our Savior" Sunday evening was splendid.

The afternoon of June 1 Pastor W. H. Dawson baptized Mr. Ardie Wright and his wife, Rose, and Albert Bing. Little Harold Jack Wright was blessed.

The Children's Day program was in charge of the Sunday school superintendent, Sister C. H. S. Bidwell. Numbers by the primaries and juniors were followed by a baptismal service, in which four of the primary girls took part. June Moore and Dolores Thompson were baptized by Priest Joseph L. Bussell, and Elva Ensley and Dorothy Blohm by Pastor Dawson. After a basket dinner at a local park, another baptismal service was held at the church. Lela Harness, Orta Crawford, and Louis and Teen Harness, of Auburn, were baptized by the pastor.

The Orphic Octet, a local male chorus led by Doctor G. S. Rodda, gave a minstrel show in June, donating the proceeds to our building fund. Homemade ice cream and cake were served to all attending by the Department of Recreation and Expression, Sister Marian Burton superintendent. This department gave a patriotic program early in the month after a chicken dinner sponsored by the Idola Club, Sister Ella Dawson chairman of the business committee. A sum of twenty-nine dollars was realized from the dinner. The chickens used were purchased as baby chicks by the club and raised by Sister Agnes Ensley on their place in north Sacramento. Sister Burton arranged a swimming party and wiener bake for the young people of the branch at the American River Resort last Friday evening.

Brother Fred Taylor, teacher of the intermediate boys, last week took three of the boys, Earl Dawson, Sidney Elam, and Warren Taylor, in his car for a three-day camping trip in the Sierra Nevada forest near Whitehall on the Lake Tahoe Highway. They camped out, making their beds on pine boughs. They caught dozens of delicious brook trout in the Silver Fork and American Rivers. Two of the party saw a big buck deer as he stood at a salt lick.

Sister C. W. Earle, of Rocklin, has been in the Sutter Hospital here for several weeks, undergoing a serious operation. She is convalescing and soon will return home.

Brother and Sister Ralph Sabin have a little daughter, born in June.

Three of our young people did creditable work on the program of the annual recital given in the Tuesday Clubhouse in June by Maude Redmon Torry, a teacher of voice. The young people of this branch who took part were Betty Bidwell, Edna Burdick, and Ives Honeychurch.

Mayor and Sister C. H. S. Bidwell held an at home Sunday, June 8, from three to nine o'clock in the evening. It was their twenty-third wedding anniversary. Bouquets and baskets of beautiful spring flowers, presented by friends, filled the reception rooms of their home and decorated the refreshment table. A host of friends called to pay their compliments during the afternoon. Vocal selections were given by the young daughter, Miss Betty, Mr. Ives Honeychurch, and Sisters Birdie Clark and Hazel Blohm from our church, and by a number of prominent local vocalists. Sister Bidwell is Sunday school superintendent. Mr. Bidwell is a local attorney.

Nauvoo, Illinois

Nauvoo Saints were happy to have here during the Boys' and Girls' Camp, June 29 to July 13, a large group of young people from a number of States and Canada as well as their leaders. They added much to some of the local services, and we look ahead to their return next year.

June 27 being the anniversary of the death of the Martyrs, special services were held at the graves, which were decorated with flowers by Sister L. H. Lewis. Elder J. C. Page was in charge of the services, and after a few introductory remarks "Consecration" was sung, and prayer offered by J. W. Layton. Brother Page then read from Doctrine and Covenants 113; Sister Sophia Lee sang "I came to the spot where the two martyrs lay"; and Brother Layton gave a talk on the finding of the graves. Brother Page then read the passage from the fifth chapter of Ether that Hyrum read the day he made ready to go to Carthage and turned down the leaf upon it. As a closing song "Prayer of youth" was sung, and prayer offered by J. W. Layton. All then went to the tourist camp, where a picnic supper was held with the "C" Scouts as guests. These scouts, wearing their white sailor suits, marched to the chapel the Sunday previous and provided the program for the Religio.

At the district conference held at Fort Madison, Elder F. T. Mussell was elected district president, and he chose as his assistants A. M. Chase and A. L. Sanford. Sister Sophia Lee was chosen district chorister.

The regular monthly problem meeting of Sunday school workers of the district was held in Montrose on the second Tuesday in July. As it was very warm, the service was held on the lawn. Brother Chase related stories of how the hymns chosen for the evening were written, and Sister A. L. Sanford gave a talk on the value of story-telling in religious education. She and her daughters, Florence and Mildred, gave a demonstration of the different types of stories.

A pretty wedding ceremony took place at the chapel on Wednesday evening, July 16, when Sister Goldie Mae Coon became the bride of Mr. James Thompson, of Chicago. The chapel was beautifully decorated with flowers and greenery, with an arch of asparagus fern and Shasta daisies at the altar. Mrs. Robert Blum, sister of the bridegroom, sang "O promise me," and the wedding march was played by Irene Layton. The bride was attended by her cousin, Myrtle Kachle, maid of honor; Roberta Lewis and Imogene Hudson, bridesmaids; and six little flower girls. The bridegroom was attended by his nephews, Harold and Ralph Smith, of Chicago, and little Bobby Booze was ring bearer. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. William Kachle. The double ring ceremony was performed by Elder J. C. Page. A reception was held at the home of Mr. Robert Blum, after which the couple left for a motor trip to The Dells of Wisconsin. They will begin housekeeping at Wheaton, Illinois, where the bridegroom is employed.

The old frame building on the bank of the river, west of the church property, which was built in the forties and used as a livery stable and in later years as a slaughterhouse, burned to the ground one Sunday afternoon.

The laying of the slab for the hard road began Monday morning, July 14. Before the first load of concrete was poured, a bottle of grape juice, made by L. H. Lewis, was buried in the street as an unofficial gesture by J. M. Fisher, in front of whose home the work commenced. The work is progressing rapidly, the eleven blocks of slab on Mulholland Street being laid by Friday.

The Saints are looking forward to the reunion, which will be held here from the first to the tenth of August.

Phoenix, Arizona

July 10.—Saints of Phoenix have enjoyed several good sermons the past few weeks, Apostle M. A. McConley being here for a few days. We enjoyed his sermons, also the talks about the General Conference which inspired our hearts and caused us to have a greater desire to assist in the establishing of Zion. We are few in number and have a church debt, and we feel at this time that we are not able to help very much. We are encouraged, however, at the amount that has been placed in our treasury the past year, and hope within the next four years (the time the mortgage is due) that we shall be able to pay the entire amount.

The Temple Builders, only seven in number, deserve great commendation. They set their goal at $100 for the year and have placed that amount to their credit.

The Recreation and Expression Department has enjoyed good times in such events as suppers, picnics, and special programs at the church. Good programs are planned for the future including volley ball and other games.

Sunday school numbers are increasing.

Elder S. S. Smith, Arizona missionary, has been here the past two weeks. His sermons have profited the hearers and made him doubly welcome in this branch.

The Saints are pleased to hear that Brother F. C. Coberly is returned as our presiding elder. June 21 about thirty-five Saints went to his home to surprise him with a pleasant evening of games and refreshments. We are uniting with Brother Coberly in making this year a greater success than previous years and in building up the work at this place.

ELSIE TAIT DIXON.

Fanning, Kansas

On June 1 Elder W. E. Peak, of Independence, was present and assisted in the sacramental meeting, which was a time of refreshment from the Lord.

The following Sunday Brother Leonard Pitzenger, of the Recreation Department of the district, was here and occupied the eleven o'clock hour. He stressed the thought that we must be about our Father's business, and outlined the new plan to merge the departments now existing in the branch in one Department of Religious Education.

June 15 was Children's Day, and the program given at night was pleasing and instructive. It was led by some of our faithful young people.

The Department of Women gave an ice cream social on the church lawn the latter part of June and netted sixteen dollars. Saint Joseph young people played volley ball that night with the young people of this branch on the church lawn.

Brother Samuel Twombly occupied the pulpit June 29. It being the close of Sacrifice Week, he spoke on the great sacrifices many are making and the blessings that come as a result. This branch observed the week, sending in a sum of about one hundred and eight dollars at its close.

The Recreation Department holds regular meetings on Sunday evening at 7.45. A social is being planned for the near future.

Last Sunday sacramental service was presided over by Brother Timm, of Saint Joseph, Brother Will Marsh, and Pastor William Twombly. Visitors were present from Independence and Saint Joseph, Missouri.

District conference will be held at Fanning July 19 and 20. Brother E. J. Gleazer plans to be with us then. We hope to have good attendance. There will be a basket dinner on Sunday.

Sister Maggie Davis, of Helena, Montana, who came to the Centennial Conference, has been visiting cousins at Fanning and Troy, Kansas, also others in Saint Joseph, Missouri. She spent two months in Dayton, Ohio, with a daughter and her family. July 14 she leaves for Montana, much impressed by her visit to the center place and surrounding regions.

Sister Vera Twombly Ratcliffe, late of Washington, District of Columbia, is spending the summer with her parents and other relatives here. She sang a pleasing solo last Sunday at church.

San Antonio, Texas

3522 South Flores Street

July 15.—After an absence of about six months, the writer has had the pleasure of returning to San Antonio, and my heart is gladdened as I meet once more with the Saints with whom I have associated for many years. I find the same faithful few striving to hold up the banner of King Immanuel.

We were made sad to find one missing from the ranks, Sister Fannie Kuykenday, whose spirit recently left the tabernacle of clay, to take up its abode in immortal regions. Sister Fannie had suffered for several years and was patient through it all.

The branch was recently favored with a visit from Apostle J. A. Gillen, who held a series of meetings beginning July 6 and closing July 10. He is indeed a welcome visitor to San Antonio. His pleasant, genial disposition has won for himself and the cause he represents many friends. He left for Hearne, Texas, where he will attend the reunion.

Surely Southwestern Texas District is very fortunate this year in having Elder George Wixom, of California, as missionary. Brother Wixom held a meeting prior to the coming of Apostle Gillen. Those who have heard Brother Wixom preach know how happy we are in having this splendid representative in our district. Surely if the Saints cooperate with him, a wonderful work can be accomplished.

Doctor Carl Sherrill, of Medina City, who lately underwent an operation here, is improving. He was permitted to return to his home a few days ago.

Sister E. W. Jackson is in a hospital, where she underwent an operation yesterday. We ask the prayers of the Saints in behalf of the afflicted members.

RUTH HARP.

Tunnel Hill, Illinois

June 8 Elder R. L. Fulk, missionary and president of Southeastern Illinois District, came to Tunnel Hill, and began a three-weeks meeting which resulted in the baptism of fifteen persons, all over fifteen years of age. More grown people were baptized here at this time than in many years. It was touching to see men as advanced in years as three score and ten go down into the waters of baptism. Surely they have impressed the people of the community with the truthfulness of the gospel message, and will be instrumental in causing the youth of this region to look upon the ordinance of baptism as an essential step in complying with God's law. We are grateful to the Lord for the help of such an able man as Brother Fulk, whose wonderful sermons made it possible for the people to see their way clear to become members of the church.

Here we will mention the oldest ones of the candidates: Brother W. C. McMahon was past seventy years; J. C. Webb and W. G. Moore were past fifty years, fathers of large families, and have been associated with church people from childhood. They stated very simply that they had been convinced of the truthfulness of the gospel, and they submitted themselves for baptism. Two others, Raymond Covitt and Mrs. Lou Covitt, heads of families, were baptized. There are others whom we feel are near the kingdom. Brother W. C. McMahon left immediately for his home in Texas, rejoicing in the faith. Several of the candidates were high school students. Altogether we feel that the church in this place has received an addition of splendid workers.

Brother Fulk made many friends while he was here. Numbers at these meetings, people who have lived in the community all their lives, had never heard our people, and some of them, men of high esteem, stated that the message was the plainest they had ever listened to. Surely this missionary effort will continue to bear fruit in the years to come.

Brother G. H. McMahon departed this life June 23. His funeral sermon was preached at the church June 25 by Brother Fulk. This was the largest funeral ever held at the church, being attended by men from all walks of life who had come to pay a last tribute of respect to the deceased.

The missionary meetings were well attended from the beginning, and the Good Spirit prevailed throughout. Confirmation services were wonderful. We were blessed in many ways.

Brother Fulk had the hearty cooperation of Clyde H. Simmons, president of the branch, E. W. Sutton, and P. G. McMahon.

We have two organized Sunday schools in this branch.

Lancaster, Wisconsin

The Saints are actively engaged in Sunday school work, Sister Gertrude Roddick as superintendent. We have a school at Flora and one at Ellenboro.

Three babies have come to our branch of late, a son to the George Noble home, a daughter to Paul Jamison and wife, and a daughter to the Vern Edwards home, Barbara Jean, who was blessed Sunday, July 6, under the hands of Elders J. O. Dutton and George Noble.

Brother James Edgington was a patient at the Madison State Hospital for three weeks in May. He is much better now and able to again take up his work. We take this opportunity to thank Madison Saints for their kindness to him.

Some of our ambitious Saints got together and with donations and subscriptions raised money to paint the church at Flora. The work was donated, some of the women helping. We wish to thank Brother Amos Berve for assisting in this work.

Sister Ada Burns is among the mothers who went to France to visit the graves of their sons.

June 19 the Women's Department met with Sister Gertrude Roddick all day and quilted. There were twenty-nine present to partake of the bountiful dinner provided by the hostess. After dinner a short program was well rendered. The opening prayer was by Bishop C. J. Hunt. There were songs, readings, and an interesting talk by Brother Amos Berve. Then Brother Berve, wife, and Brother Hunt went to Soldiers Grove to prepare for the district conference.

July 4 the Women's Department met at the home of Sister Minnie Edwards and had a picnic dinner. Brother J. O. Dutton and wife were present. Brother Dutton delivered a short sermon.

July 6 there was an all-day service at Flora. Brother Dutton was the speaker at eleven o'clock. Sacramental service began at two o'clock, and church was held in the evening at the home of Brother Dennis Oates, Brother Dutton the speaker.

July 9 an ice cream social and candy sale were sponsored by the Department of Women on the lawn at Dennis Oates's home in Lancaster. Proceeds were used to raise the quota for expenses of the branch, net profits amounting to eleven dollars.

July 13 Elder George Noble spoke to the Saints at Flora in the morning.

ELIZA EDGINGTON.

Dayton, Ohio

West Third and Olive Streets

Dayton Saints have been fairly active during the first six months of this year. Pastor Floyd Rockwell has broken the bread of life in wonderful pastoral themes; our assistant, G. W. Stevens, has been faithful and patient; the church school leader, George Hunter, has led the Sunday school to higher grounds; and the social leader, John Stultz, has successfully upheld the banner of Recreation and Expression.

Since General Conference we have had nine baptisms, Brother and Sister Lockwood; Brother and Sister Greer and two of their children; Sister Watson, mother of Priest W. E. Watson; Brother Solomon Lamb; and a grandchild of Elder G. W. Stevens. Credit for these accessions goes chiefly to Priest W. E. Watson, Elder G. W. Stevens, and Teacher Bert Colvin, together with the Sunday-school teachers. All nine are members of the Sunday school. It is a rare thing for a member of our Sunday school to remain outside the church.

Sacramental service in April presided over by Elder Francis May, assisted by Priests W. E. and Lucien Watson, father and son, was marked by fair attendance and considerable activity of testimony. Numbers were absent, attending General Conference.

The day of "remembrance" in May was in charge of G. W. Stevens, assisted by Francis May. At the service Brother May counseled the Saints to be active in testimony. Twenty-five testimonies, two prayers, and one prophecy were given in a period of a few minutes. The spirit of peace and good will was appreciated.

Branch social activities reached their peak in June. The "trip to Independence" contest ended with the women as victors. Consequently the men provided a banquet. A. E. Anderton, district president, was here and served as toastmaster. The banquet was a huge success.

The June birthday social was enjoyed at the home of Sister Osburn on Valley Pike. The weather was fine, and outdoor games were played. Among those having June birthdays were Sister Osburn, Sister Hill, Sister May, Sister Martin, Sister Davidson, Floyd Rockwell, W. E. Watson, Hershell Stevens, and John Williams. We heartily recommend birthday socials.

Patriarch G. T. Griffiths was present the last Sunday in March, giving the branch timely counsel. Brother Griffiths is a favorite in Dayton, and appreciation for his coming is always evidenced by increased attendance and renewed hope.

Elder Rockwell recently gave a resumé of and argument for the group idea in religious education. Indications are that Dayton Branch will soon qualify for this advance in church policy.

Persia, Iowa

The Saints of this branch continue to make the church in Persia the center of activities on Sundays and on certain week days. There we endeavor to discharge the command of the Lord to meet together and to carry out the work required in the law of Zion. Experience has taught us that it is not always the best speaker who does the most good, but the man who earnestly complies with the request of the pastor or of the one in charge to supply the need of the congregation. When harmony and cooperation are had among the officers, they are reflected by the congregation. In this we are reminded of the thought suggested in an article in the Herald a short time ago: We should always be found working together.

Elder George Hansen is and has been our main speaker. Last Sunday, July 13, the morning speaker was Elder Rosenberg, of Woodbine. In the evening the congregation heard George Hansen.

Sacramental service July 6 was presided over by local officers, and the season of worship and meditation was profitable to all. In the evening Brother Hansen delivered a good sermon.

The branch and Sunday school have arranged to conduct their services as one. The school opens the hour, and continuous service is had until noon, when all are dismissed. This coordination plan is a new thing in Persia Branch, and much interest is shown in working it out.

Albin, Wyoming

July 12.—A visit and meeting were ours to enjoy a few weeks ago when Apostle Myron A. McConley passed through and called upon us on his way west. His visit was a real spiritual uplift, giving us new zeal to move forward. Saints who had not been to services for years and a few interested friends helped swell attendance at the all-day Sunday gathering. A generous basket lunch was served at noon.

Brother Thomas E. Fitzwater, who with his wife and daughters has returned to Albin and expects to call it home for some time, is holding special Sunday evening services, which are well attended.

Edwin P. Anderson and Brother Fitzwater have recently baptized eight persons. Mrs. Leva Carriker, mother of several sons who already belong to the church, two of whom have been a great help to this branch since their baptism a few years ago, brought with her a daughter, Ada Violet, a son, Cloise Kenneth, and a granddaughter, Hazel Pauline Franklin. Earl Jenson, of Harrisburg, and our president's son, Marvin, were also baptized at Horse Creek June 15. The program from the Department Journal was followed with only minor changes in the order of services.

July 4 Albin Saints met for a picnic with members from Kimball at a grove near their town. In the afternoon Mrs. Okla Sandridge had two of her children baptized by Edwin P. Anderson, little Harold Orlan and Laveta Ione. She also had her baby, Dale Herbert, blessed by Brother Fitzwater. The confirmation took place under the trees.

As a result of continued clear weather and no rain, the country round about is very dry. We are hoping the threatening clouds which are appearing will prove to be more than tantalizers.

Albin Branch is now holding regular midweek prayer meetings, which ought surely to bind the Saints together.

The election of branch and Sunday school officers took place after our last sacramental meeting. We are anticipating changing the program of branch activities to include the church school of religious education. Officers of the Sunday school were elected for six months: Superintendent, Pringle Carriker; secretary, Flora Fitzwater; assistant secretary, Buster Anderson; teachers: adult class, Thomas Fitzwater; intermediate, Russell Carriker; junior, Blanch Anderson; primary, Emily F. McCormick; organist, Marie Anderson; chorister, Cordelia M. Anderson; librarian, Russell Carriker. Branch officers elected were: President, Edwin P. Anderson; Thomas E. Fitzwater, Miles Brittell, and Otto Anderson counselors; secretary, Cordelia M. Anderson; organist, Blanch Anderson; chorister, Cordelia M. Anderson; librarian, Russell Carriker; publicity agent, Albin Anderson; correspondent, Cordelia M. Anderson.

Blanch Anderson has returned from Los Angeles, where she was called by the death of her sister. Mrs. Katie Anderson is convalescing in the Wheatland Hospital after an operation.

Several members are taking vacation trips, and others are formulating plans for visits.

We have our rain at last and are thankful.

Arkansas District Has Lost a Good Worker

Just a few minutes before four o'clock on the afternoon of May 16, 1930, the immortal spirit of Elvah Lamar Baker White was released from its mortal body. Sister White had been numbered among the Saints ever since her baptism, by Heman C. Smith, in 1896, at Bald Knob, Arkansas. She was one of the charter members of the Bald Knob Branch, and she had been a consistent and saintly influence for all these years.

In addition to this splendid record, she was valued very highly to the church because of her helpfulness to one of its ministers, her husband since December 24, 1903, Foster Officer White, a judge of White County, Arkansas, for several years, and at the time of her death. And she was also the mother of six children who survive. Her short life of forty-four years has been crowded with activity which leaves her a good name, and the cessation of her earthly activity has made the Saints of Arkansas District mourn for a fellow worker of the first rank.

Elder S. S. Smith, in writing of her death, used these words as a part of his letter: "She constantly maintained a strong and resolute faith, in God, in his work, and in her fellow man. She was never so contented as when she was performing the practical works of helpfulness to the cause. . . . She loved her home, kept an open door to many, . . . yet she found time and occasion to administer to the needs of many others. She took delight in looking after the needs of the poor, and was reputed for helping the needy with food, raiment, and shelter. . . . Her strongest testimony was in good works and by her kindly ministrations. . . . Yet she loved to pray and to supplement the work of her companion in his public life in the State and as a minister. She maintained family prayer around a family altar."

There is nothing strange about the grief of the body of people with whom such a Saint was numbered and among whom she did her work. Such grief tends toward purification and to the advancement of her mourners. The Herald feels to recognize the loss of the church and of Arkansas District in the death of Sister White.

San Jose, California

Spencer Avenue and Grant Street

Elder and Sister C. W. Hawkins left this branch April 22 to visit their two daughters, one at Sacramento, the other at Roseville. They took their vacation at this time because their daughter, Sister W. H. Dawson, had invited them to keep house for her family while she attended the Centennial Conference. This worthy pair had hoped for several years to be able to attend the world conference of the church and had saved money to that end, but when the church called for a sacrifice offering a year ago, they turned their savings to the bishop as sacrifice. Because they are getting along in years and could see no especial good that they could accomplish by going, they determined to sacrifice their savings, hoping that it might help to supply the wants of some missionary's family while the father is carrying the gospel to the people of the world. "But after all," Brother Hawkins says, "we feel that we did not miss the good of the conference. We subscribed for the Daily Conference Herald and had conference news day by day from beginning to end. They arrived home from their vacation trip the evening of May 13 in plenty of time for the celebration held in San Jose on Brother Hawkins's birthday, May 17, the rose carnival which is an annual event.

On May 14 occurred the funeral of our beloved sister, Almeda Christopher, who passed from earthly life May 12. She had served as the faithful and efficient secretary of San Jose Branch for a number of years. She was the last of the immediate line of the Darrow family, an old-time Latter Day Saint family, of Stockton, California. Interment was at Stockton.

Elder Hiram Holt was the speaker at the church at the eleven o'clock service June 15. We understood that he was making a tour of the Northern California District and Oregon. His sermon received favorable comment.

Elder G. P. Levitt was here the evenings of June 25 and 26, giving a splendid report of the Centennial Conference and a good uplifting sermon. He brought with him the spirit of the conference. May it continue with the church until Zion is redeemed.

The sacrifice offering from San Jose Branch included the Castroville and Watsonville Mission offering and amounted to two hundred and ten dollars.

Tawas City, Michigan

Having been busy with the various activities surrounding graduation, we have neglected to write of the activities of Tawas City Branch. However, that does not mean that this branch like a lost ship has drifted into the sluggish waters of a stream to stay there until by chance some wisp of a breeze or by some unknown hand it is again started on its way. Tawas City is steadily forging ahead.

Mother's Day an appropriate program was given in honor of the mothers of our branch.

On Children's Day we decided that something different from the usual Sunday school program would not only amuse but also be of interest to the children. The Saints met at the church Sunday morning and were taken to the Silver Creek Ranger Station in the heart of the national forest boundary. Here in the midst of the beauty and quiet of the forest, with only the ripple of the stream and the swaying of the pines, with God's presence felt in the hearts of all present, we held the morning worship service. A short program was given by the members of the school; then Brother Sommerfield selected as his theme for the sermon, "The Red Man." The significance of this brief talk was sensed by all who listened. It was here in the forest by the babbling streams that our red brother roamed. In the midst of our worship there came a heavy downpour of rain. However, in a very short time the clouds had disappeared and the sun was shining. At noon a delicious basket lunch was served.

Sister Olive Davison, superintendent of Sunday school and holder of various other offices in the branch, is an active worker. We now have a large enrollment, and two more boys' classes are added to the school. Boys are plentiful in this branch. Most of our young people range in age from fourteen to eighteen years. We have only one boys' class which ranges from eighteen to twenty-five years.

The Temple Builders hold their weekly meetings at the home of their leader, Sister Mabel Ulman. Sister Mabel is a favorite with the young people, especially the girls of her group. She also has a class of intermediate girls at Sunday school. The Temple Builders are planning a camping trip at Sand Lake sometime soon.

We did not have service the evening of June 8 because of the high school baccalaureate address. Myrna Lou Sommerfield, daughter of the pastor, M. A. Sommerfield, was a member of the graduating class. Sister Myrna has charge of the primary group at church and is also the organist and chorister in the Sunday school. She is planning to enter the Delmar School of Beauty Culture at Detroit.

Saints were pleased to have Apostle D. T. Williams here a few days the latter part of June. While here he delivered a lecture on the history of the church, illustrating his talk with stereopticon slides.

The branch business meeting has been held and the following officers elected: President, Elder M. A. Sommerfield; secretary, B. C. Bowen; treasurer, Sister Mabel Ulman; assistant secretary, Sister Olive Davison; organist and chorister, Sister Florence Ulman; recreational and religious leader, Sister Olive Davison. With this group of enthusiastic officers we expect a fine program for the ensuing months.

And now, as reunion time draws near, many are making plans to attend the district reunion at Beaverton, August 2 to 11. Brother Peterson was here July 8 to give various instructions to the Saints about obtaining money to help defray reunion expenses.

We are looking forward to the visit of Sister Peterson. Brother and Sister Peterson are planning to live in Tawas City for a few months.

Oakland, California

From the Oakland Bulletin

July 13.—We mention among visitors Brothers F. G. Pitt and H. L. Holt, also Sister Holt. These brothers occupied the pulpit of the church June 29 delivering welcome messages. Sister Rushton also spent a few days visiting here, and enjoyed the picnic on the Fourth.

The Fourth of July picnic was well attended and much enjoyed. Elder Horahitu, of Tahiti, was present and made an interesting speech, which was interpreted by Brother H. W. Savage. July 9 Brother Horahitu returned to his native land after a stay of nearly five months in the United States. Before leaving he delivered on the first Sunday of the month a fine review of the history of religion among the Polynesians, especially emphasizing the influence of the Catholic and Protestant missionaries and contrasting their work with the work of the Saints' missionaries beginning in 1845.

Last Tuesday at the workers' conference a good crowd heard a fine presentation of the meaning and methods of religious education by Mr. Clifford Simpson of the Plymouth Congregational Church. He was invited to return and continue the discussion.

At the conclusion of the devotional service last Wednesday, a special business meeting was held to receive the report of the building committee and to provide for some committees to care for the needs of the new church building. It was shown that the entire cost of the building is $24,753. By motion and vote a committee of five was elected to serve as the New Church Finance Board, Brothers Ingham, C. Hawley, W. Werner, A. Foley, and Sister Gorsky. Provision was made for the appointment by the president of an advisory committee on furnishings. The maintenance of the building and the care of the lawn, etc., is placed under the supervision of Brothers Hawley, Gorsky, Sanford, and Beebe.

At this meeting a statistical report was presented showing a gain and placing our membership at four hundred and fifty-one.

The district conference will convene Saturday and Sunday, July 26 and 27. District President Levitt tells us that the business session will be Saturday morning at ten o'clock. It is expected that President Frederick M. Smith will be present at this time, and the opening of the new church will be celebrated. Brother Levitt requests that this branch provide the Saturday evening entertainment. The musical director has been asked to make arrangement for a program.

Brother Levitt has informed us that the plans are to conduct a young people's camp at Irvington August 6 to 10. The program will commence Thursday morning, August 7. There will be class work in the mornings and in the afternoons recreational activities under the supervision of leaders. Sunday will be district rally day, and special services will be conducted for youth and adult.

The Department of Women, by action of the special business meeting Wednesday, was made a committee of entertainment for the conference visitors, and is also to provide meals during the convention for which a charge will be made and the proceeds devoted to the church building fund.

The matter of furnishing the lower auditorium with chairs was discussed, and pledges were taken from the congregation toward the purchase of a number of chairs. By request of the Department of Recreation and Expression, the amount of $91.93 standing to its credit for a gymnasium fund was transferred to the furnishing of the stage in the lower auditorium.

Holden Home Loses Aged Sister Furness

From a copy of the Holden Progress dated July 17, 1930, we glean most of this short account.

Esther Holliday was born in London, England, March 28, 1841. She remained there until she had lived the ordinary span of a human life, seventy years, or until 1911. Her first move brought her to America, where she settled in Ontario, Canada, making her home there until 1915. She went to California, United States of America, in 1915, where she lived for three years. Since leaving California she has been a constant resident in the Holden Home for aged Latter Day Saints.

Six of her children still live, three being of the fruit of her first marriage, and three the fruit of her second marriage.

Sister Furness was in her ninetieth year of earth life, and it has been stated that she was persistently industrious and remarkably active for one of her years, always being able to find something she could accomplish as a member of the Holden Home family.

It is contended that Sister Furness was the first woman to join the Reorganized Church in England. Prior to her joining the Reorganization, she had been a member of the original church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, but when Brigham Young began teaching polygamy and other false doctrines she knew that the faith had been corrupted and she hastened to ally herself with the church which held to the original faith, and from the time of her baptism until death called her she was a faithful member of the Reorganization.

She was privileged to live an extra long and useful life. The last year of her life found her remarkably active, physically. Her mind was kept up to the time of her departure, and being a woman of wide reading she wrote letters to her children and friends which were far above ordinary in sentiment, and the handwriting of which was clear and legible. She was a woman of such spirituality that she became an inspiration to those about her. She lived the golden rule every day, to the best of her understanding.

Brother Fred Furness and family, of Kansas City, Missouri, were the only near relatives who were able to attend the funeral services, out of six living children and twenty-seven grandchildren. Two great-grandchildren also live. Elizabeth Tubb, another mourner because of long continued friendship, also resides at Holden Home.

So Holden Home, along with Sister Furness's own blood, mourns the loss of an aged and consecrated Latter Day Saint.

Two of her grandchildren, natives of England, served in the World War. They still live.

A staunch member of the faith and a resident of Lamoni, Iowa, for many years is lost to the church on earth in the passing of Sister Lena M. Prall the evening of July 27 at her home in Lamoni after many months of suffering. Sister Prall, the daughter of Brother and Sister Charles F. Church, was born in Lamoni, February 8, 1884, and was baptized into the church in her home town July 3, 1892, by Asa S. Cochran. She became the wife of Wilber E. Prall November 29, 1905. Besides her family she leaves a wide circle of friends to mourn her death, neighbors in whose memories linger her life deeds and kindnesses.

Independence

Stone Church

At the eleven o'clock hour Pastor John F. Sheehy continued his series of morning talks adapted especially to the needs of the local congregation. His theme was "The brotherhood that followed Pentecost." He stressed the need for a close relationship with God, and the responsibility of God's people in ministering to human need.

The Mothers' Quartet, consisting of Sisters Nina Smith, Blanche Gault, Madge Siegfried, and Madge Scott, sang "Come, sweet Comforter," by Frederick M. and Helen Silsbee Smith. Accompaniment was played by Sister Lorena Kueffer, pianist. The Stone Church Choir, led by Paul N. Craig, sang the anthem, "How lovely is thy dwelling place," by Brahms, Robert Miller playing organ accompaniment. Brother Miller also played "An old refrain" as the offertory.

Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the service and was assisted by Elder Vernon Reese.

"Jesus, lover of my soul" and "I love to tell the story" were two of the numbers contributed by the ladies' chorus of Independence at the Campus service Sunday evening. This chorus is composed of a number of ladies' quartets in the various congregations. Instrumental music was supplied by members of the Auditorium and the Walnut Park Bands. Elder J. F. Sheehy was in charge of congregational singing.

"Belief which should characterize the Zion home" was the theme of the speaker, Elder Leonard Lea, who thinks that belief and faith are essential in the Christian home to bring about the highest type of development of the inmates. Belief was discussed in the light of the teachings of the Bible and from the viewpoint of practical experience.

A large crowd of people sat quietly under the stars listening to the discourse, giving especial attention when the speaker discussed the things in which we can believe.

Elder T. A. Beck was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder William I. Fligg.

The juniors at the Campus had a song fest Sunday morning under the direction of Sister Alice Burgess. The theme of the worship service was "Deeds of kindness." Brother Moore played the "Pilgrim's chorus" for the opening of the service and the scripture reading was by Sister Hazel Moler. The children sang "My gift to Jesus," and Brother R. R. Redfield offered prayer. Following the taking of the offering and a song, three young boys, Gibbs Knight, Billie McPherson, and Alexander Jones, played a piano trio.

Second Church

With union services on the Campus on Sunday evenings, the meetings at Second Church consist only of early morning prayer service and the regular Sunday morning sessions, sometimes one continual devotional period and other weeks two distinct services. The church school idea has not been worked out completely at Second Church, but we hope in time to reach a satisfactory solution.

Attendance, considering the weather, has been good, a little better than July, 1929. A good number of junior and intermediate boys and girls remain for the junior meeting in the basement of the church. Pastor A. K. Dillee reports several weeks of unusually good Wednesday evening prayer meetings in all the groups.

The speakers at eleven o'clock for the past three weeks have been: July 13, Brother D. A. Whiting, who talked on the redemption and establishment of Zion and stewardship; July 20, Bishop A. B. Phillips, his theme being "Our philosophy as a church and its influence upon theological thought"; July 27, Brother A. K. Dillee, his text: "Herein is my father glorified, that ye bear much fruit." Brother Dillee's talk included a short summary of general branch conditions and a comparison between monthly attendance for the past six months and the first half of last year.

Eighty-six members and friends in group 15 enjoyed a group social Thursday, July 24, at the Campus. Activities were sponsored by Sister Alice McBride. Following a brief talk by Brother Dillee, ice cream, cake, and lemonade were served by the women of the group.

Enoch Hill

The young people's midweek prayer meetings are holding up remarkably well in attendance and interest during the warm season. Brother C. E. Beal, the leader, chooses local workers to help him make effective the theme of each week, and the first half of the hour is devoted to short talks, instrumental numbers, and vocal selections. During the second half of the program the young people respond with brief expressions of their interest in the gospel and their desire to help carry it to their fellows. No time is wasted in these services, and the members of the young people's division find encouragement in them. July 16 an open-air prayer service was enjoyed by the young people at the county park, west of Independence. This was an hour of real inspiration and constructive meditation for the young worshippers. Brother O. H. Bagley, of the local priesthood, spoke to them.

Saints were much pleased Sunday morning to have as the speaker at the church school session Elder George G. Lewis, appointed by the late General Conference religious education director of Independence.

East Independence

Sacramental service for July was characterized by a spirit of peace and reverence. The prayers and testimonies offered were earnest and responsive.

The evening of July 11 the Saints gathered on the lawn of the home of Brother and Sister G. R. Collins prepared to enjoy a social hour and to give a miscellaneous shower in honor of Brother and Sister W. R. Wilson, who were lately married. The happy pair were recipients of many pretty and useful presents. Ice cream and cake composed the evening's refreshments. The young people played games.

Sunday morning, July 13, special music was given by Sister J. A. Robinson and Sister Jennie Butler. The speaker, J. A. Robinson, talked on a favorite topic, "Zion and her redemption."

Pastor L. W. Moffett was the preacher the following Sunday morning, finding his subject in the question, "How do we see Jesus?" That is, said he, what do we think of Jesus' life and example? Do we realize that our mission as Saints is to see him as he is?

Elder Hubert Case spoke the morning of July 27 on two texts: "Teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you," and "Blessed are they that do his commandments." His theme was "Stewardships," but the keynote of his discussion was love.

Gudgell Park

In spite of extremely hot weather, church activity in this congregation continues good. Attendance at church school sessions is fine.

July communion service was well attended. A good spirit prevailed during the hour, and local priesthood were in charge.

Elder T. A. Beck spoke to the congregation at the morning hour July 13.

A week later the junior choir sang, and Elder Carroll L. Olson spoke on "Fighting the good fight of faith."

The Saints were happy to have present the morning of July 27 Elder William Inman, who gave a splendid sermon on the theme "What lack I yet?"

Last Tuesday evening the young people from Enoch Hill and some of their friends played Gudgell Park a game of volley ball, winning the game. A happy evening was had, and we hope they will come again. Refreshments were sold on the ground, the proceeds going to the Department of Recreation and Expression.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

A service of interest and attraction followed the class period of the church school Sunday morning, two of the young men being speakers, Cleland Raber and Bill Brown. The program was planned by the Young Men's Bible Class. Music was contributed by the choir and Irene Wolfe, organist. The invocation was by Brother F. B. Blair. Brother C. C. Babb spoke briefly during the worship period of the church school.

Early in the afternoon the O. B. K.'s met for the stake Atherton trip. A number of carloads drove to Atherton northeast of Independence, to note the organization and progress of the stewardship movement among the church agriculturists located there. Information gathered was most helpful to the visitors.

"The child in juvenile court" was the subject of Andrew B. Steele Sunday evening. Mr. Steele is the chief probation officer of Jackson County and has at his command a rich store of practical experience from which he draws his conclusions. This was an outdoor service.

Attendance at the Wednesday family suppers and prayer meetings at the church has been good. Bring your family for an enjoyable evening on the lawn. O. B. K.'s attending the second forum series are invited to join the family group on Wednesday.

Doctor Meyers, of Linwood Boulevard Christian Church, will be the O. B. K. forum speaker this evening at eight o'clock. His subject will be "International and race problems."

At Friday's recreation on the church lawn there will be a practice volley ball game with Quindaro. The following Friday we play the Erodelphians from Enoch Hill. Refreshments are sold on Friday. All members are invited to watch the tennis tournament charts.

Bennington Heights Church

The morning service July 20 was conducted by Elder F. A. Evans, of Second Kansas City Branch. In the evening the junior choir gave a beautiful cantata. Sister Mary Helm was the leader.

Last Sunday morning the sermon was by Elder J. M. Terry, of Independence. In the evening a beautifully illustrated sermon was given by Stake President C. E. Wight. Though the heat was intense, there was good attendance.

The local chorister was absent and Sister C. E. Wight kindly accepted invitation to conduct the evening's music.

Fourth Church

"Physical and spiritual blindness" was the subject of Patriarch John T. Gresty, the morning of June 22. He related his experiences in going to the tops of certain mountains, connected with church history, to pray, telling how God answered his prayers while there. He also gave an interesting talk about Australia, his homeland, its Saints, the several branches of the church, the topography of the country, etc. He described how he worked on his famous oratorio.

Brother George G. Lewis, from Australia, occupied the pulpit at eight o'clock in the evening. His sermon was laden with the wonderful teachings of Christ.

At the business meeting of the local church at eleven o'clock June 29, the ratification of departmental heads and teachers took place.

Elder J. O. Worden was the speaker at the eight o'clock hour. He read the "General Epistle to the Church." His theme was "Christian exchange."

There was quite a number at sacramental service July 6, and a good spirit was present.

Brother J. T. Gresty was in the pulpit at the evening hour, his subject being, "The patriarchal office and the Melchisedec priesthood."

"The high way and the low way," was the theme of Pastor Worden at the eleven o'clock hour July 13.

Stake President Cyril Wight, gave a round table talk to the young folks at 6.30 o'clock in the evening, and many interesting points were brought out by Brother Wight to the understanding of the young folk.

A clever and instructive little play was rendered by some little children under the direction of Sister Ethel Burnette at eight o'clock in the evening. The play portrayed people from many different countries seeking for the flag that represented the highest ideals cherished by any country. Many different flags were brought to the front, but finally the gospel flag was chosen as the flag that led them all in the highest ideals in life.

Tuesday night, July 15, an ice cream social was had on the church lawn. A sum of about fifteen dollars was cleared. This is to go to help purchase a new piano for the church.

"The second coming of Christ," was the subject of Brother A. H. Christensen, at the eleven o'clock hour July 20. His sermon was built upon the words of the Savior as recorded in Matthew 24 and also in Doctrine and Covenants 36. In the evening Pastor J. O. Worden preached on the Word of Wisdom.

Los Angeles, California

East Los Angeles Branch, 1153 South Gage Street

July 21.—Summer and vacation season find East Los Angeles still pressing onward with a slightly lowered attendance but not enough to retard progress and interest. The Saints were disappointed in not having the pleasure and benefit of a reunion again this year, but all agree that the health authorities knew best when they asked that the reunion be canceled on account of the infantile paralysis epidemic. Although the infantile paralysis situation has been quite serious in some parts of southern California and Los Angeles, our little flock has been passed by as yet, and we hope each one will continue to have the blessing of health so priceless to all.

Practically the first move toward merging the departments here was a branch picnic at Montebello Park July 4. The group gathered before lunch and enjoyed a basket lunch at noon, after which games were played, and an afternoon visit was enjoyed by everyone. In the afternoon ice cream was served. At the quarterly business meeting July 2, the new plan of religious education was discussed and explained in detail. The branch voted to defer action on the new plan for a month, so a special meeting will be held August 7, to decide whether or not to adopt the new plan for immediate use.

We are glad to have back with us Sister Freeman and her son Robert, who have been living in Santa Barbara for some time. Brother Freeman has been in poor health, but we are glad to see him rapidly improving.

The Clayton family and Sister Sweetman left July 19, for a month's trip to their former home in Missouri. We shall miss their presence and assistance during their absence. The Saints met at the home of Sister Millie Johnson on the evening before their departure, to wish them a pleasant trip and to enjoy a social get-together.

The branch was saddened June 29, when at the close of Sunday school the body of one of its members and a teacher in the Sunday school, Brother H. A. Schrank, was found at the rear of the church where he had passed to the great beyond early in the morning. He was a great lover of flowers and always brought some to decorate the church, and that morning a huge bouquet of lovely flowers was also found outside the church. It is supposed that he came early with the flowers and before entering the church was stricken with a heart attack. Brother Schrank was fifty-eight years of age and has a father and two sisters somewhere in the East, none of whom could be located, and very little could be learned concerning him. Funeral services were held July 2, and interment was in the Inglewood Cemetery. Brother Stuart preached the funeral sermon.

We were glad to have with us as speaker Sunday morning, Brother Teagarden. Sister Teagarden and Beatrice accompanied him. We also enjoyed an old-fashioned gospel sermon by Brother Condit, of Douglas, Arizona, in the evening. Brother McConley has also been one of our recent visitors and speakers.

Brother and Sister Wallace Farley were made happy recently by the arrival of a baby boy.

The Women's Department and the choir are having a vacation at present, but the other activities are carrying on and endeavoring to accomplish something toward the establishment of the gospel in the lives, homes, and community in which we live.

Homes and Gardens in Zion

By Elizabeth Cutler Jenkins

It is very nice to get up in the morning and go out at five o'clock to breathe the fresh, pure air and look at the grass, flowers, and all growing things covered with dew, which this June morning resembled hoar frost, sparkling and melting into dewdrops as the brilliant morning sun shone upon it. Sun is life.

It is very nice to pick fresh strawberries for breakfast; roses and pansies for the table. Also to prepare for later meals after breakfast by gathering one's own parsley, spinach, and peas, which have a flavor not kept by vegetables and fruits gathered hours before.

To those who have lived in lands where irrigation is absolutely necessary to plant life, and where lawns must be sprinkled every day or they die, it is wonderful to live in Zion, where the Lord says the land is to be favored by the divine blessing of being watered by the "rains and dews of heaven."

It is pleasing to see wax beans, tomatoes, cabbages, Brussels sprouts, red flowering beans, raspberry bushes, peas, new potatoes, strawberry plants, cornflowers, and cosmos all using the same earth to grow it, yet in each one coming into vegetation with an individuality and personality which reminds one of God's garden of souls. We are all born in the same way, have care and education, food and religion, yet we none of us look alike, think alike, live alike, love alike, or do alike. We are individualities and personalities, giving forth perfume in good works, if we like, but in different ways.

By crossness, contrariness, impatience we do untold harm. By following Jesus' example, love and peace abound. In gardens, if we cultivate much and keep out the weeds, beauty is our reward. Also in characters. Most gardens want to be beautiful. Most people want to, and can be.

Word comes from Brother F. Moore, of Portland, Oregon, that at the last general business meeting the Portland Saints unanimously voted to accept and follow as nearly as possible the new plan of religious education as outlined by the leaders of the church.

It has been decided to dispense with a reunion in Portland District this year. This event will be much missed, for the Saints look forward each year to ten days of reunion. Instead there will be a three-day conference August 1 to 3. Brothers M. A. McConley and Richard Baldwin are expected to be present.

MISCELLANEOUS

Pastoral

To Branch Presidents and the Saints of Rock Island District; Greetings: After almost twenty years of active ministerial work, seven of those years being very strenuous ones in this field, I find my physical powers demanding a change. The church doctors have advised that I take a complete rest, and the general church leaders have kindly granted me leave of absence for five weeks, from July 25 to September 1. During this time I expect to take a complete rest from church work, and will be absent from the field. Any matters that need the attention of the district presidency should be referred to my counselors, Edward Jones, 926 North Vine Street, Kewanee, Illinois, and C. A. Beil, 420 North Third Street, Clinton, Iowa.

Information is being sent out regarding the Harvest Festival which is to be held at Independence again this fall. It is requested that our district be represented at this festival. We have never yet been represented there as a district, but a few of the branches have made contributions. These contributions have been put in with other offerings from the State of Illinois; but it is urged that we try to have a district booth at this coming event. We are sending out this information early that all the branches may have plenty of time to prepare. Please do not put this matter off, but appoint a committee at your earliest convenience to take this matter in charge for your branch. Then have your committee get in touch with the bishop's agent, L. A. White, so that arrangements can be made early for district space at the festival. All contributions should be at the Auditorium before the opening day of the festival, which will be announced later through the Saints' Herald.

Two important events are ahead of us for the fall. Rally Day on September 28, and Decision Day on October 26. Let me urge that preparations for these events be not delayed, but that you begin now to organize and make plans for these two occasions. Prepare for a real branch homecoming on Rally Day. Also make a careful survey of your branch relative to prospective converts, and then organize for the instruction of these prospects, and work to the end that they may be brought to the point of decision by October 26. On that day we should have a number of baptisms, if each will do his part.

Generally speaking, the Saints of this district have been fortunate in that but few have been out of work during the general unemployment situation throughout the country. In this we should feel thankful, and show our appreciation by a ready response to the temporal law, that the church may not be hindered in carrying forward its work, and meeting its obligations.

May the Lord bless all in their efforts, and when I return from my rest vacation about September 1, I trust that we shall be "all set to go," and that the fall and winter may be a time of really constructive work. To this end may we all work.

E. R. DAVIS, District President.

Address

Richard Baldwin, Care D. S. McDole, 2108 North Forty-fourth Street, Seattle, Washington.

Reunion Canceled

The reunion of Southeastern Illinois District, to have been held at Brush Creek, has been canceled on account of economic conditions of the district. The dry weather has resulted in a shortage of water in that vicinity. The intellectual contest will be held at a date to be named later.—E. L. Fulk, Ernest Roberson, Charles Wesner, O. C. Henson, committee.

All-day Meeting

There will be an all-day meeting at Nelsonville, Ohio, Sunday, August 10, to which we invite everyone. This branch would appreciate your attendance. There will be preaching Saturday evening, August 9, at 7.30.—A. E. Anderson, district president.

A Correction

In the Portland, Oregon, news letter Saints' Herald for July 16, 1930, page 799, is listed among those recently baptized the name of Ruth Lasley. This name is incorrect; it should read June Lasley.

Conference Minutes

NORTHWESTERN IOWA.—District semiannual conference was held at Moorhead, June 28 and 29, 1930. The program of the conference was carried out as follows: Saturday: 9.45 a. m., prayer service; 11 a. m., opening discussion of the Atherton Community Stewardship, Bishop W. R. Adams; 2.30 p. m., business session; 7.30 p. m., new missionary program, in charge of district missionaries. Sunday: 8.30 a. m., prayer service; 9.45 a. m., class work, "Atherton community stewardship," continued, Bishop W. R. Adams; "The new plan for religious education," Elder Gerald Gunsolley; "Children," in charge of local officers. 11 a. m., devotional services, conducted by Elders E. Y. Hunker and Marvin K. Fry; 2.30 p. m., preaching, Gerald Gunsolley; 7.30 p. m., preaching, Marvin K. Fry. At the session on Saturday afternoon there were a few items of business transacted. Among resolutions adopted were the two following: "Resolved that this conference go on record favoring the closing of all local branches in the vicinity of a branch holding a district meeting, leaving the closing of the more distant branches to the discretion of the branch president, with the understanding that they send one or more representatives." In the past some of the locals have been denied the privilege of the conference because of demand on their time in caring for the visiting members. It has also been quite a task for the larger locals. After some discussion the following motion was passed: "that at our district gatherings those attending the Sunday services bring their basket dinners." The visiting Saints were royally entertained by Moorhead Saints. They served a fine dinner in the Aid Building. The conference was not as largely attended as they have been, the weather being very warm and dry. Nevertheless a fine conference was had. E. Y. Hunker and M. K. Fry of the missionary force were with us.

SPOKANE.—The business session of the Spokane district conference, held in connection with the district reunion, opened at 2.30 p. m., Saturday, June 28, at Liberty Lake, Washington, District President R. H. Porter presiding. After the opening exercises, a motion was made and seconded that the district presidency preside over the conference. A substitute was offered to the effect that Apostle J. F. Curtis, assisted by the district presidency, preside over the conference. The substitute carried. In the absence of the district secretary at the opening of the meeting, the assistant secretary of the reunion, Mrs. Millicent Kinney, was chosen to record the actions of the conference. Minutes of previous conference were read and approved. Reports were then read and adopted as follows: District Presidency (together with reports of the district priesthood); Department of Sunday School; Department of Recreation and Expression; Department of Women; bishop's agent; letter of greeting from Brother and Sister G. G. Lewis; statistical reports of the following branches: Spokane, Sagle, Coeur d'Alene, Vay, Lewiston-Clarkston, Yakima, and Spokane District non-resident group. Brother R. E. Chapman moved and Sister Gladys Fout seconded that the conference approve the recommendation of the district president that a budget of $1,488 be adopted to cover the financial requirements of the district for the year 1930-31 to be distributed as follows: General district fund (including expenses of district bulletin), $250; Department of Women, $30; Department of Recreation and Expression, $54; Department of Sunday School, $129; Department of Music, $25; district reunion, $1,000; total, $1,488. The motion carried. The recommendation of the district presidency that they be authorized to investigate the situation at Ione, Washington, to determine the needs of the group and recommend for ordination those whom the Spirit may direct was approved by motion. The present reunion committee was extended a vote of thanks for the efficient manner in which the kitchen was conducted during the reunion. Brother Richard Baldwin in making the motion stated that he was especially pleased with the menus for the meals, which were so closely in harmony with the Word of Wisdom. The next item of business was the election of district officers. R. H. Porter was unanimously sustained by motion to preside over the district for the coming year. He chose as his counselors V. L. Gunter and A. V. Nelson, who were also ratified by unanimous motion. Muriel Whiting was reelected to the office of district secretary. Departmental officers were elected as follows: Department of Sunday School, E. E. Hart, who chose as assistants Margaret Kenny and Gladys Fout; Department of Recreation and Expression, Goldie Sage; Department of Women, Elba Crum; Department of Music, Claire VanEaton. A recommendation presented by the district president that L. E. Holmes be sustained as district bishop's agent and that he also act as district treasurer with power to select his assistants, was adopted by motion. A motion prevailed that the district president and district treasurer be standing members of the reunion committee and three more members be elected, one for a term of three years, one for two years, and one for one year. Those selected are: Guy

Crum, 3 years; H. E. Kinney, 2 years; and Stanley Fout, 1 year. This committee was authorized by motion to select the time and place for the next reunion, buying of groceries, etc. A motion was made and seconded that the time and place of the next district conference be left to the call of the district presidency. A substitute was offered that we eliminate winter district conference and have conference only once a year. Seconded. When the vote was taken, the substitute was lost and the original motion carried. A recommendation submitted by Alma Andrews, president of Spokane Branch, that D. V. Coleman be ordained to the office of elder, was adopted by motion, and authority was given the district presidency to provide for his ordination. A. J. Weeks was elected to serve on the auditing committee for a period of three years. Orpha Coleman and W. W. Wood are the other two members. Report of Sister Baldwin covering her work during reunion with the children's division, was read and adopted. The chair declared the conference adjourned. On Sunday, June 29, a recommendation was presented by the district president that Stanley Fout and Floyd Bond, both of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, be ordained to the office of elder and priest respectively. Motion to adopt prevailed. A supplemental report of the Department of Sunday school was then read, and the conference adjourned to meet at the call of the district presidency.

SOUTHERN SASKATCHEWAN.—The twelfth annual conference of the Southern Saskatchewan District convened at the Saints' church July 11 to 13. John H. Miller of the district presidency was in the chair, assisted by Missionary Joseph L. Sandidge. A motion prevailed that Apostle J. F. Curtis and the district presidency preside over the conference. C. B. Bergersen was elected secretary; Annie Dickson was elected chorister; and Myrtle Neill was elected organist; George Dickson, William M. Neill, and J. L. Sandidge, a recreation committee; Fred Dickson was chosen librarian. In the afternoon, the Women's Department held a session. Speakers of the conference were Joseph L. Sandidge and J. F. Curtis. Reports from various parts of the district indicated a depressed financial situation, hindering the progress of the church work. George Jordan, of Regina, was called to the office of elder and was ordained. William M. Neill was called to the office of priest, and ordained. One was baptized by Joseph L. Sandidge. Bishop's Agent A. R. Toovey reported receipts of $1,364.81 for the year; District Treasurer A. R. Toovey reported receipts of $179.27; expenditures, $161.85. Branches of Glen, Elden, and Zion Hill were declared disorganized. Officers for 1930-31 were elected as follows: John R. Neill, Weyburn, district president; John H. Miller, of Webb, and A. R. Toovey of Torquay, first and second counselors; C. B. Bergersen, secretary; A. R. Toovey, bishop's agent, also sustained as district treasurer; George Jordan, of Regina, district Sunday school superintendent; Annie Dickson, Women's Department superintendent; Weyburn; Eva Neill, musical director. The next place for district conference was left with district officers. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Weyburn Saints for their hospitality. On Saturday evening the Saints of Weyburn presented a play, "Choosing the Cross." Sunday morning at eight o'clock sacrament was administered, and the spirit of prophecy was manifested.

Her first marriage was to Elihu Alley, and they made their home at Stratton, Nebraska, for a time, later returning to Shenandoah. To them were born two sons: John, who died in early childhood, and Roy L., who lives in Omaha. The second marriage united her to Eli McConoughey, a resident of Shenandoah and school-teacher. For some years they lived in Omaha; then Mr. McConoughey's health failed and she was again left a widow. She lived a useful and active life and made many friends wherever she was. She united with the church early in life and was a regular attendant whenever circumstances permitted. Her death occurred at her home in Shenandoah July 9, 1930. Left to mourn are her son, Roy L. In 1910 he married Mrs. Alfred Thomas, Minden City, Michigan, who died in 1924. By his energy, industry, and thrift he accumulated considerable property. During his life he was often trusted with office in the government under which he lived, and was an honored and respected citizen, officer, of the church and state, and a friend of many people. He has been a minister of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints since 1871, and was well known as a missionary in several parts of Ontario and also in Michigan. He was a clear thinker, a forceful speaker, a man of lofty purposes and fine conceptions. Brother Leverton died at his home, Bothwell, Ontario, the morning of June 27, 1930. Funeral services were conducted in Bothwell church by J. C. Dent and D. J. Williams on June 29. Kent County Council attended the funeral in a body and were the floral bearers.

Jackson, and Mrs. Vernon Holder; a son, Ray L.; three grandchildren, all of Norwich; one sister, Mrs. Evan A. Davis, of Independence, Missouri; and a host of friends. ## "Traveling with God"

A sister who has evidently experienced the setbacks which come from plans upset, recently sent me some verses from which she derived comfort amidst the discouragements which come to all who do more than merely drift.

Her letter:

"I am sending a poem to you that has no author's name attached. It came to me in such a comforting way that I could not help knowing that God's hand was instrumental in it. I felt you might glean comfort from it, and perhaps it might find its way to the columns of the Herald to cheer some one in need on the rugged way."

The poem:

Traveling with God

My plans were made, I thought my path all bright and clear,
My heart with song o'erflowed, the world seemed full of cheer.

My Lord I wished to serve, to take Him for my guide,
And so I traveled on.

But suddenly, in skies so clear and full of light,
The clouds fell thick and fast, the days seemed changed to night;

Instead of paths so clear and full of things so sweet,
Rough things and thorns and stones seemed all about my feet,

I scarce could travel on.

I bowed my head and wondered why this change should come,

And murmured, "Lord, is this because of aught I've done?
Why should my path again be changed to dark from fair?"
But still I traveled on.

I listened—quiet and still, there came a voice—
"This path is mine, not thine. I made the choice,
Dear child, this service will be best for thee and me.
If thou wilt simply trust, and leave the end to me!"
And so I traveled on.

My thanks to you, my sister.

It is a comforting thought, when things are not so smoothly running as we had hoped they would be, and when discouragements come because of the weight of the load or the roughness of the road, to feel that after all God is pointing the way and setting the task. Our Master never intended we should "be borne to paradise on flowery beds of ease," or to find happiness in a goalless life. We must work out our own salvation. Paul fought his fight and ran his race. So must we all.

Of no persons is this more true than Latter Day Saints. Our goal has been set, the road pointed out. Onward we must go! But we can rejoice, as the sister suggests, for God has set the course. And this thought lightens the burden of heavy tasks and softens the pangs of discouragements.

The One God

I am the Lord, and there is none else, there is no God besides me: . . . I have made the earth, and created man upon it: I, even my hands, have stretched out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded.—Isaiah 45: 5, 12.

The Bible is very conservative in the use of language. No prophet or author of its pages can be charged with profligacy in the use of words. Isaiah has crowded much into what is enumerated as his forty-fifth chapter—so much that if one concentrates his mind while he reads, there comes a sense of fatigue when the chapter is completed.

But men do not hesitate to cull a few words even from this chapter, as I have done at the head of this comment, and because I have done so there is presented a comprehensive statement of God's work in a minimum number of words. Beyond or behind this statement men have tried to go from time far back of the history of modern literature. There still remain numbers who would go back of it, but they are no longer the aristocracy, unless they be regarded as the aristocracy for the same reason that those who do not have access to an automobile claim they are the aristocracy of Missouri—that is, they are the select few.

In Doctrine and Covenants 101:2 the Lord is represented as using very similar language on one part of the subject. It reads:

I, the Lord, stretched out the heavens, and builded the earth as a very handy work; and all things therein are mine.

This language was inscribed in 1834 and accepted by the church as the declaration of the Lord. He had not chosen language which differed from that which he caused his prophet to use seven hundred years before Christ, yet twenty-five hundred years had intervened.

On August 3 the Kansas City Times uses the first quotation in this article on its editorial page, without comment. This great metropolitan daily, a conservative of its class, thus indorses the declaration of the Lord as recorded by Isaiah.

No man who believes in the one God should fail, at least once in a while, to say so in unmistakable terms and in pure, simple, unostentatious language. The pronouncement of truth in this manner strengthens its influence and breeds faith.

Literature in the Family

The family of Brother George H. Booth, of Detroit, Michigan, has followed such a splendid plan with regard to subscribing to the church publications that we must pass on the idea to others. Brother Booth, in addition to being associate pastor at the Central Branch in Detroit, is city publicity agent and sponsors the annual city-wide publicity contest which has identified Detroit as one of the outstanding branches in the church in support of our own publishing house. The slogan of the 1930 contest was: Complete the family circle by having each member of the family subscribe to at least one of the church publications.

This idea the Booths have worked out in their own home. We quote from a letter:

We have had come into our home regularly, year after year, the Herald, Vision, the Ensign, and Department Journal; one publication comes to each member of our family. My wife subscribes to the Department Journal, and often refers to it as "my paper." Our oldest daughter subscribes to Vision and claims it first upon its appearance in the home. Another daughter subscribes for the Ensign and prides herself on having a publication of her own. And I am the sole owner of the Herald, but share its interesting news and articles with the rest of the family.

Our home surely would not be as complete without all the church publications, for doing without one of them would mean the absence of one of our family.

The Booths also have a nice library, made up of books which belong to the various members of the family, and some of which each child will be expected to take with him as the nucleus of another family library when he establishes a home of his own. "We feel that no better foundation, spiritually or morally, could be laid than to give our children access to all the good literature we can; and that we have purposed to do," is the conclusion of these parents.

We commend the example of these folks to the Saints generally, with the anticipation that whenever it is followed the same pleasure and satisfaction will ensue. Complete the family circle of church publications in your home!

A Branch of Missionary Work

It happened that a letter from one of the apostles in attendance at the Deer Park reunion was left where one of the editors of the Herald could read it. It was a business letter and contained a check of goodly value to cover an account of subscriptions taken for the church papers, and of books sold.

This apostle had enlisted the help of another missionary, and they had carefully canvassed the camp for new subscriptions and renewals to the journals of the church. They had sold books and had taken book subscriptions. All this they regarded as a part of their legitimate missionary activity. And they were right in so regarding it. Missionary work would be neglected in some of its more permanent aspects if the taking of these subscriptions had not been accomplished.

It is doubtful if there is a more permanently productive branch of missionary work and effective proselytizing than the proper distribution of carefully prepared and selected literature. Try it and be convinced. Sell or give a Book of Mormon and some accompanying tract to some with whom you are able to come in touch. Send the Ensign or the Herald to some one interested or some member who has become so lukewarm as to fail to subscribe.

History holds many stories of splendid results from such work as these men accomplished at Deer Park, and the stories are continued.

A Lesson on War

When Remarque's All Quiet on the Western Front appeared as a book, the critics gave it unanimous acclaim as the best novel on the World War. Nothing has appeared since to oust it from the leadership of its field. It will remain a great piece of literature and a true picture of war, stripped of the camouflage of glory that enveloped it. It is a book that mothers and fathers should read, before teaching their sons the spirit of militarism. It should be read by young men before they enlist, and by young women who are inclined to flag waving. Every high school student should have a chance to read it.

Now the story appears in the "talkies." It is treated with all possible fidelity to the book, with all possible fidelity to life. Those who know vouch for the essential accuracy of the work. Moreover, it is a great piece of art.

From one who never cared much for the usual type of movie, who has left them more often disgusted than pleased, who found the beginnings of sound pictures more intolerable than the silent ones, this may seem like extravagant praise. But it is not extravagance. This work deserves the warmest and most sincere praise. The naturalness of the voices, the fine characterization, the all but faultless management of the most difficult kind of scenery, give it a high place. At last the sound films are competing with the legitimate stage on an equal basis.

Everybody should see and hear this remarkable sound work. Everybody who sees it once will want to see it again. It is something you will not want to miss. It is something you ought not to miss. You will never be able to see war—grim and horrible carnage—more truly and wonderfully represented.

The Church Numbers 108,079

A report from the Department of Statistics, signed by Carroll L. Olson, Statistician, places the church membership safely above the mark of 108,000. There are some who would criticize the department for its very conservative method of figuring church membership. I am not one of those, but I feel that this guarded method does not make a good basis for comparison of numbers with some Christian organizations. As a rule churches are not so conservative.

It will be noted that a loss of 356 names is reported as assumed to have occurred on the list of disorganized branches. If this had been distributed over three months, it would have permitted us to think of the church as a little more numerous organization of individuals, but no more would be members now or in the end. Our numbers are not affected by this method of calculating and cutting in a branch. It is merely the record of our numbers which is affected.

Herald readers will watch for the August report. Surely 1930 is going to show some record months since April 1. August has a good chance to excel.

The Statistician's Report

The regular monthly report of the Department of Statistics for the month of July is as follows:

Net enrollment of the Church July 1 .....	107,981
Transfers	400	Deaths on main file
Blessings	232	Deaths on disorg. file assumed because of age
Marriages	77	Expulsions
Ordinations	33	Loss by correction
Divorces	5
Silenced	1
New Branch	1	Total loss .....
Branch disorganized	1	443
July baptisms	525
Transfers from unknown	8
Gains by correction	8
Total Gain .....	541
Net gain during July .....	98
Net enrollment of the Church August 1 .....	108,079

The most outstanding item in the above summary is the excellent showing which the church has made in the past month in the matter of baptisms. The total of 525 is greater than June and for the month of July has been exceeded by only two other years in the history of the Reorganization, the year 1929, which holds the record for July, and the year 1921 which occupies second place.

The average number of baptisms for the month of July for the past ten years has been 463, so it will be seen that the month just past stands well in comparison with the average.

This brings the total number of baptisms for the year 1930 thus far to a total of 2,625, which is about 44 per cent of the year's objective. While this is about 8 per cent below the objective for the end of July, it shows, nevertheless, that the missionary work is continuing to move forward, and if the same degree of activity is manifested throughout the remaining five months of the year, the final total number of baptisms for the year 1930 should be fairly close to the objective.

Another item in the above summary which requires a little explanation is that which relates to the deaths on the disorganized file assumed because of age. These are for persons who were formerly members of branches that were disorganized twenty or thirty years ago and for whom addresses have not been obtained since the disorganization. The extreme age of some of these indicates that the probability of their now being alive is very small. Therefore, they have been treated as deaths assumed because of age.

A third item of interest in this report is the small number of marriages reported during the month, a total of only 77. During the month of June there were only 114, or a total of 191 for the two big wedding months of the year. During 1929, however, there were 173 marriages for June, and 122 during July, a total of 295 for the two months. In other words, the rather difficult economic conditions through which we have been passing in the past few months have caused a drop of about 35 per cent in the marriage rate within the church. Figures furnished by the United States Census Bureau indicate that the same situation exists throughout the country.

Analysis of the baptismal reports by districts and stakes shows that the Northern Saskatchewan District and the city of Independence lead in the number of baptisms for July. Both are credited with 32 baptisms, but in view of the fact that the Northern Saskatchewan District has a membership of only one tenth that of Independence, its achievement must be considered the greater of the two. Sixteen of the baptisms were performed at Shellbrook, Saskatchewan, by E. L. Bowerman, 10 at Senlac, by W. J. Cornish, and 6 at Saskatoon, by W. L. Christy.

The Southern Ohio District comes next, with 23 baptisms. Of these, 13 were performed at Ironton by J. G. Halb and 5 at Vales Mills by John R. Grice. The balance of the baptisms were divided among four other branches in the district.

The Alabama District and the Eastern Michigan District had 21 baptisms each. The Alabama baptisms were all performed at McKenzie, 12 on June 15 by Elder Glenn Davis, and 9 on July 27 by G. T. Richards. The Eastern Michigan District baptisms were divided among five different branches, with W. H. Sheffer, William M. Grice, H. C. Swoffer, and C. E. Harpe officiating therein.

The Northeastern Nebraska District, which was the leader last month, still remains in the honorable mention column, with a July total of 18. This means that for the seven-month period this district has obtained 66 baptisms towards its year's objective of 100.

The branches or missions outside of the stakes having five or more baptisms are the following:

McKenzie, Alabama	21	Denver, Colorado	6
Hawaiian Mission	18	East Fremont, Michigan	6
Shellbrook, Saskatchewan	16	Eldorado Springs, Missouri	6
Tunnel Hill, Illinois	15	Los Angeles, California	6

Special Days

The Publicity Department calls attention to the dates for special days and the activities designated for them.

Five specific days are to be made the occasion for special emphasis on certain aspects of church work for the remainder of this year. The church wishes to direct attention to the themes designated for these occasions, in order that the people may give thought and study to the needs of our institutions and to the support of the special activities which are included in the church program.

Graceland College Day, September 14

For many years the church has designated one Sunday in the fall of each year as Graceland College Day, at which time the educational programs and activities of the church shall be discussed, and in particular the needs and aims of Graceland College shall be given special attention.

Graceland College is the center of the church's academic interests. The educational program of the college as a whole does not need recommendation.

Ironton, Ohio	13	San Jose, California	6
Bantry, North Dakota	12	Saskatoon, Saskatchewan	6
Onaway, Michigan	12	Clarksburg, West Virginia	5
Artland, Saskatchewan	10	Detroit, Michigan	5
Owendale, Michigan	10	East Saint Louis, Illinois	5
Decatur, Nebraska	8	Muskegon, Michigan	5
Walthill, Nebraska	8	Oskaloosa, Iowa	5
Chatham, Ontario	7	Sioux City, Iowa	5
Pisgah, Iowa	7	Spearfish, South Dakota	5
Spokane, Washington	7	Thayer, Missouri	5
Tulsa, Oklahoma	7	Vales Mills, Ohio	5
Alafloa, Alabama	6	Windsor, Ontario	5

There are 32 branches or missions in the above list, reporting a total of 263 baptisms. In addition to the above, 6 branches and 2 non-resident groups reported four baptisms each, 16 branches and 2 non-resident groups reported three baptisms each, 36 branches and 2 non-resident groups reported two baptisms each, and 29 branches and 10 non-resident groups reported one baptism each.

This means that 119 different branches and 16 non-resident groups, outside the stakes and in widely scattered parts of the country, reported baptisms this past month. This is an even better showing than was indicated for June, and emphasizes the fact that the missionary spirit is widely diffused throughout the church.

A total of 59 baptisms for the stakes were divided as follows:

Independence	32	Kansas City Stake	9
Lamoni Stake	13	Holden Stake	3
Far West Stake	2

The grand total of 525 baptisms is distributed thus:

The stakes	59	Hawaiian Mission	18
United States and Canada outside the stakes	444	Holland Mission	4
		Total	525

It needs no longer to fight for recognition. As an institution, Graceland College has a legitimate part in the church's program. Nevertheless it is a matter of intense interest to the people, and information concerning its specific activities should be given the members at this time.

Each congregation of the church should plan its College Day with a view to emphasizing the importance of religious education and the present needs of Graceland College. Special programs and sermons to cover these features should be arranged for. This is also the occasion of an offering for the continuance and support of the Graceland College Scholarship Fund, through which scholarship loans are made to deserving young people in order that they may continue their education.

Rally Day September 28

Rally Day is the official beginning of the fall and winter church work in every congregation. It should be a time when every member should be present. Special attention should be given to searching out individual members and perhaps whole families who have been irregular in attendance and who have not been seen at church for a long time. It is a time for the whole church to take inventory of its member resources. It should be a time of re-gathering after the vacation period of the summer months in order that all forces may be reorganized for church work.

Members should be asked to bring their friends to the Rally Day meetings. Special thought should be given to the services on Rally Day, and the spirit of rallying to a great cause should be diffused among the members; a high spiritual tone should prevail. But to make the effects of Rally Day lasting, follow-up work in which every member can personally participate should be planned well in advance of Rally Day so that announcements can be made of the program for the rest of the year. An enthusiastic Rally Day program isolated from the general run of church work and put on without sufficient background and not in any way related to a continuous program of activities will not result in permanent good.

To make Rally Day effective and to make it count as the beginning of a new period in local church work, it should be preceded by a visitation campaign of at least two weeks, and possibly more. In fact, the month of September may well be devoted to visiting all members, securing their promises to join forces with the branch officers. Rally Day should be a culmination of this visitation campaign; but in a large sense it is to be considered as the commencement day for a vigorous program for the local congregation for the fall and winter. It will take careful planning and well-organized effort to do this, but it is entirely within the ability of every congregation of the church to make Rally Day effective in revitalizing the local forces for an intensive local missionary campaign.

Decision Day, October 26

The visitation campaign, which should precede Rally Day, and the special program for Rally Day itself, should be followed by intensive work leading up to Decision Day, which is October 26. During the month of October particular attention should be given to follow-up work with those who are likely to become converts to the church. There are many family circles that can be completed on Decision Day. There are many people who have attended our church for a long time, but whose attendance has been taken as a matter of course, and no one has actually asked them to make the decision to join the church.

Decision Day should result in a great ingathering of new members. There are many who are convinced that they should eventually join the church but who have never been able to reach a definite decision. The proper approach should be made to these people; they should be visited by the members of the local congregation who are best qualified to tell them the message of this church; they should be invited to attend the church school, the prayer meeting, the preaching services, and the cottage prayer meetings. They should also be made welcome in the homes of the local church members. Friendliness should be the keynote of the visitation campaign for new members. This will require prayerful, tactful, and intelligent work and should be intrusted to responsible members.

The program for Decision Day should receive more than casual attention. If there is to be a baptismal service it should be conducted with simplicity and dignity. The baptismal covenant should be made impressive. The candidate for baptism is making an important decision and is making a life-long covenant with God; he has eliminated all reservations in the strength of his newly born convictions; he is taking an important step. The baptismal service and the confirmation should emphasize the importance of the baptismal covenant. The candidate has been reborn through faith, repentance, and baptism; therefore, it should be an occasion for great rejoicing on the part of all concerned. A sacred, happy, joyous spirit should accompany the baptismal service and should characterize the Decision Day program.

Thanksgiving Day, November 27

Local congregations usually plan special Thanksgiving services for this day. It is well that the Saints gather at their churches and offer thanks for the blessings of God that have attended them through the year. This day is universally observed in the United States and has its background in the experiences of the early pioneers of America; it offers a time for a review of the many good things that have come to us through the mercies of God. Why not express them in an appropriate service in our houses of worship? The Saints in other lands may use some other day of national significance and use it for the same purpose.

Christmas Offering Day, December 28

For many years the last Sunday in December has been the time for gathering the Christmas offering. Since the first Christmas offering was given, nearly a million dollars has come to the church through this fund. It has been the means of spreading the gospel by supporting the missionaries who year after year have preached the message of the church. The Christmas offering should receive continuous emphasis throughout the year. Last year over $40,000 was turned into the church treasury from this fund. The largest returns from any one year's offering was $101,000. To bring a willing offering to the church as our Christmas gift to the Lord is a splendid thing. In many cases it is given at a sacrifice, and in such instances means immeasurably more to those who have thus given their offering than does a gift from the one whom it does not hurt to give. A large percentage of this offering comes from the children of the church schools throughout the entire church. The most should be made of this fact and appropriate Christmas exercises should be planned, in which the receiving of the Christmas offering should be a dominant feature.

This prospective review of plans and programs for the five special days which will occur during the remainder of this year is offered for the information of district and branch officers and missionaries, so that full advantage may be taken of these occasions and plans made well in advance. Other suggestions will be offered through the columns of the Saints' Herald at later periods, but in advance of the special dates. Stake and district officers and missionaries should pass on to the branch pastors additional suggestions that have proved effective in their ministry. If this is done the whole church will be benefited by the outstanding experiences of its representative men and women, who for years have eagerly sought out the best ways to present the message of the church.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Quarterlies for the New Year

For the August Workers' Conference

By C. B. Woodstock

As we enter the new century of church endeavor we are deeply impressed with the possibilities it holds for development, growth, and achievement. The challenge of the second century is a challenge to intelligent consecration of mind and heart and hand under divine direction, to accomplish in our day the tasks that are immediately before the church. There are many means through which God evidently plans to accomplish his purpose in our generation, chief of which, we are justified in believing, is the Restoration Movement. It is our purpose to understand that movement, to appreciate the message of Christ recommitted to earth in the angel message, and to so order our lives and to apply our energies that the infinite purposes of God may have beautiful and powerful expression in our lives and in the work we may accomplish through the means of our united church effort.

Study as a Means

In religious education we are primarily concerned with the growth of individuals in godliness and in their intelligent and faithful participation in the onward moving program of the church as a means to the salvation of the human race. That individuals may think and feel and purpose with the mind of God and in harmony with his will, it must needs be that they come into close personal contact with God, that they become conversant with the revelations of his truth, and that they enter actively into his service. To this end are all our study courses prepared, and with these objectives in mind must all our program activities be planned. It is thus seen that a course of lessons, or even study itself, is not the end of our effort. The lessons, their study, discussion, and working out in life, are but means unto the production of individuals and groups through whom the righteous purposes of God may be made manifest.

What Shall We Study?

This is a pertinent question. Of necessity our study must be directed into the most fruitful channels, giving the information and leading to the cultivation of desires and loyalties which shall find expression in noble, worthy lives. It is the work of the Quarterly editorial staff to determine the nature of the quarterly lessons prepared for each of the various age groups. This is done, so far as we have been able, on the basis of the interests, needs, and capacities of the particular age for which the lesson is prepared. The detail of Quarterly preparation with all the necessary considerations makes an interesting story, but it must be reserved for later treatment.

Once the lessons are prepared and in print we must depend upon the understanding, sympathy, resourcefulness, and tact of the teacher to use the lesson material as a means, readily prepared and in the hand of each pupil, with which to nourish, strengthen, enrich, and beautify the lives of the class. There is usually no particular reason for the choosing of the lessons as they happen to occur within the quarter. Judgment should be used in selecting the lessons with regard to their functioning value in the lives concerned, supplemented, emphasized, illustrated, applied to actual life projects to give the greatest functioning value. Within the range of our possible choice, let us choose wisely, that our study may be effective.

The "Quarterly" Year Begins in October

On the Northern Hemisphere summer vacations close with the opening of the public schools in September. The days become cooler, and most of us settle down to the more serious problems of living. This seems an opportune time to reorganize our church school program and to get ready for serious educational work. Grading and promotion should be given careful consideration in September. It should be a rally month, perhaps culminating in the promotion exercises near the close of the month so that the new classes are ready for the new Quarterlies and for new assignments the first Sunday in October.

It should be noted that all our quarterlies are one year units, and that the unit begins with the first of October. It is essential to successful work that we get a good start, that we progress without interruption throughout the year, and that we complete the whole year's assignments. Annual subscriptions should be sent in to begin with the October-December quarter.

Annual elections should be held in August or September, to permit those to be in charge for the coming year to make studious preparation for an auspicious opening of the new year when they go into office the first of October.

The significance of promotion and plans to make effective use of the occasion will be given in these columns before the first of September.

The Quarterly Series

We give below the entire range of our study series available for orders to be filled for October use. A more detailed discussion of the nature and scope of each will appear in a future issue of the Saints' Herald. Current issues freshly printed each quarter are indicated in bold type. Topics for Discussion

Discuss the challenge of the New Century in the light of our church program. How keenly is this felt in your local branch? How are you preparing to answer the challenge?

What is the primary concern of religious education? How is this objective to be met? How far has it been met with your workers?

Compare the work of Quarterly editors with the task before the teacher. What choices are left for the teacher to make? Upon what factors does effective teaching depend?

Discuss plans for opening the church school year the first Sunday in October. What advantages does this date have? What more can you do to make your church school sessions really educational? How can you develop a real school, with qualified teachers and studious class members? What hope have we for success otherwise?

Check through the range of study materials. Note areas covered in each of the subjects listed. How important does it seem that each be studied in its turn? What loss if some are entirely omitted? Check the list of classes in your own school. How do you rank?

What changes or selections could you recommend for use beginning in October?

Only a limited number of classes may be held on Sunday morning. Can you accomplish all that should be done in an hour of work? At what other time or times may additional classes be provided for? What of Sunday evening? Thursday afternoon? Friday evening?

We have discussed here only study classes. What other group activities are also a necessary part of a complete church school program? On other occasions we shall discuss the function of worship, recreation, and projects in religious education.

Church School Worship Services

By Edith Harkness

(Preceding programs for this month were given in earlier issues of the Herald.)

FOURTH SUNDAY: "Thinking nobly."

Hymn Prelude: "O Jesus, I have promised," 138 Hymnal for American Youth. (May be used as a solo.)

Call to worship: (School will rise.)

Leader:

"For I say, through the grace that was given me, to every man that is among you, not to think more highly of himself than he ought to think, but so to think as to think soberly, according as God hath dealt to every man a measure of faith."

Unison prayer:

"Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer. Amen."

Hymn: "Just for today," 124 Zion's Praises.

God speaks to us through his word: (School seated.)

"Before reading these beautiful words again to you, we would remind you of the Worship Services which have been based upon this passage of scripture during the past two months. It is to be hoped that you have seen the beautiful fruits of Christian citizenship. To 'lift the ideals'; 'deepen the conviction'; 'arouse sympathy for the work of the church'; 'and guide the activities of every member and friend of this church school,' are tasks worthy of the best that we can give. We hope that your life has been enriched through the partaking of these worship services. All of us need to practice and keep in mind these worthy traits of a Christian character. Christian citizenship is costly." (Read Philippians 4:8.)

Special instrumental number. (May be either piano or violin.)

A choice poem: "Perfect life."

"To rule myself—

To hold the silver gateway of my lips
Against the slightest word unworthy of me,
To keep that perfect purity of mind
That thinks no evil—hoping all things good,
To love all souls, unlovely though they seem,
To give to each as it may show me need,
To be all that I have dreamed—and more."

—Selected.

Prayer:

(Leader summing up the thoughts of the past services in a few well-chosen sentences that will remain with his school.)

Hymn: "I would be true," 170 Hymnal for American Youth.

Dismissal to classes and lesson study.

Announcements.

Sermon: (This is a fine opportunity for a wide-awake pastor.)

Hymn: "Lord, may our hearts be tuned to sing," 69 Saints' Hymnal.

Closing thought: Unison.

"As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Benediction.

FIFTH SUNDAY IN AUGUST:

It is suggested that this be observed as a Missionary Sunday. Hymns, scripture, special music, sermon, etc., should be missionary in content. If possible, have the missionary of your district with you and have him take a prominent place in the service. This service may be given to one or two classes of young people to work out under the direction of teachers, or superintendent and pastor.

Junior Church

By Nellie Blackmore

SECOND SUNDAY:

Musical prelude.

Call to worship.

Leader: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and with all thy soul, and with all thy might. This is the first and great commandment."—Matthew 22:37, 38.

Response: "I will love thee, O Jehovah, my strength."—Psalms 13:1.

Morning song: "Love divine all love excelling," Zion's Praises 143.

Prayer.

Song: "God is love," Zion's Praises, 142.

Scripture reading: Matthew 5:38-50.

Sermon: Theme, "What love can do."

Explain the difference in the old way of teaching and Jesus' way. They had been taught an eye for an eye, etc. Jesus said, "Love your neighbor"; "Do good to those who despitefully use you."

A Quaker village heard that a near-by tribe of Indians were coming to raid their homes. They would probably kill all the white people. Many of the Quakers fled from their homes to hide in the hills. One family did not go. The mother was frightened to stay, but the father said, "We have not harmed them; why should they harm us?"

When the Indians came the father opened the door and the Indians came into the house. The mother prepared a nice meal for them. Then they went away. The mother was sure that they would return to kill them. They did come back, but this time they placed a white feather on the doorstep.

Were the Indians' plans changed by love and kindness? Number 83 in Zion's Praises played softly on the piano.

Offering service.

Leader: "From whom do all our gifts come?"

Response: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father."

Together: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these, my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me."

Music.

Prayer.

Story: "Where love is, there God is," from Knights of Service, by Bradshaw.

Closing song: First and third stanzas of number 83 in Zion's Praises.

Benediction.

THIRD SUNDAY:

Musical prelude.

Call to worship.

Leader:

"A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; even as I have loved you, that ye also love one another."—John 13:34.

Response:

"Let us love one another, for love is of God."—1 John 4: 7.

Morning song: "God is love," Zion's Praises, 142.

Prayer.

Response: "Holy, holy, holy," Zion's Praises, 131.

Scripture reading: Matthew 22: 35-40.

Sermon: "Showing love at home."

Think through with the juniors some of the difficult home problems. This is the hardest place to live consistently, as Jesus wants us to live. Sometimes boys and girls thank God for home and mother in their prayers, but do they really live that way? Do they run errands? Do they help with the dishes? Do they quarrel with smaller brothers? Or do they really thank God for the best mother in the world?

Reading:

Read one at a time the four verses below. These children are not showing love at home. Select from the group those who could suggest or dramatize a better way of doing the same thing.

"I peeped in a little house over the hill,
And what did I hear them say?
Three children quarreling at the sink,
'It isn't my turn today.'

"I peeped in a little house over the hill,
And what do you s'pose I'd hear?
A brother teasing a little girl
Till she wept with many a tear.

"I peeped in a little house over the hill,
And what do you s'pose I'd see?
They were snatching toys from each other's hands
As cross as they could be.

"I peeped in a little house over the hill,
And what did I hear them say?
A boy wouldn't play a single game
Unless they played his way."

Read: Psalm 133: 1; Exodus 20: 12.

Offering service.

Music.

Prayer.

Story: "Small business," by Harding W. Gaylord, from Building a Christian Character, by Carrier and Clowes.

"The hunt for the beautiful," from Why the Chimes Rang, by Alden.

Closing song.

Benediction.

FOURTH SUNDAY:

Musical prelude.

Call to worship.

Leader: "I will love thee, O Lord, my strength."

Response:

"The Lord is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom I will trust."

Unison:

"I will call upon the Lord, for he is worthy to be praised."
—Psalm 18: 1-3.

Morning song:

"Tell me the old, old story," Zion's Praises, 109.

Scripture reading: 1 Corinthians 13: 1-10.

Prayer.

There were boys living there, but they did not have nice clothing like he did. They did not enjoy the things he did. One day they taught him a new game. It pleased him. John wanted to express his pleasure to them. He went to his mother and said, "Mother, the boys have been kind to me; I want to share something with them. What can it be?"

The mother agreed that he should, and suggested that since tomorrow was Sunday he might invite the boys to his home. What do you think John would share with his friends? Yes; it was his Sunday school lesson and stories. His mother was a beautiful story-teller, so John was able to share his mother's stories with his new friends.

The Heart of Joy

Doctor Crane said a very true thing: "Somewhere in the heart of joy is the truth." Lasting joy can be built up only on the basis of truth. There is a feverish excitement and gayety that sometimes passes for joy, but it is not true happiness. That it has a false basis is frequently proved by the results. There will be no false thing in the eternal city. The joy of heaven will be built up on the basis of true things, and for this reason it will be lasting joy. Every young person, who will begin in his youth to sow the seeds of truth and who will continue through life to do so, will surely reap a harvest of joy in this world and in the life to come. He may have some sorrow, for our lives are so bound to the lives of others that we are affected by their joys and sorrows, and often we must share in carrying the burdens that come from the mistakes of others; but, if we make it the rule of our lives to find what is true and to live according to it, we shall have much more of joy than of sorrow.

The Industrial Department at Graceland

By N. Ray Carmichael

The story comes to us of two individuals who had signed applications for assignments in the Industrial Department at Graceland and who had their trunks packed and were making preparations to leave to begin their college work. Because of the great demand for opportunities to help earn one's education, there were not jobs enough to take care of everyone, and these two individuals received word that there were no vacancies available and consequently they had to give up the possibility of attending Graceland. All can imagine their disappointment and the tragedy of having to give up the anticipated plans, the association of friends, and the postponement of college work for another year. We wish we knew the sequel to their disappointment.

We do know, however, that one individual has not responded to correspondence in the past year. The other has said, "If I can not go to Graceland this year, I will next year." With this resolve he set to it and has been working, and through industry and frugality will overcome the disappointment.

For the past year a number of students have been sending in monthly payments which have been deposited with the treasurer and set up to each individual's account. In some instances they will have accumulated enough so that it will not be necessary for them to work during the coming year. These individuals have been working and saving that their aim may be attained, and it is usually agreed that a dollar at Graceland is equivalent to two or three elsewhere.

The approximate cost for tuition, fees, books, board, and room for a school year at Graceland is $465. Of this amount it is possible to earn the equivalent of board, which is $180. Years of experience have shown that students should not endeavor to work more than two or three hours per day when carrying a full college course.

The question is sometimes asked, How much more than $465 does a year at Graceland take? No definite answer can be given; however, we have found that the amount of money that an individual spends is directly in proportion to the amount that he or she has been in the habit of spending previously. We have known boys and girls during the past three years who have not spent more than ten dollars a year. That, of course, is unusual; but no one needs money in order to have a good time. Money is not a factor in one's social rating. There is no difference between students who have plenty and those who are working and have to get along with very little.

Graceland is a cosmopolitan school, having students from twenty-seven States and several foreign countries. A student's standing is not rated by an artificial scale, but rather by the character and worthwhileness of the individual. Graceland is always ready to help those who will help themselves. And even more, Graceland is ready to help many learn how to help themselves.

The Prospect List

A series of four articles which discuss the purpose and use of the prospect list as an aid to missionary enterprise. By J. A. Gardner.

No. 4. The List; How It Can Be Maintained at Its Highest Efficiency

The prospect list to be effective must be worked constantly. It should prove to be an investment to build a list and to direct the energy of the members in planning for missionary work. But to let it drop and to do nothing more resolves the whole proposition into a matter of expense.

New names should be added to the list. New teams should be formed to work these new prospects. Frequent mass meetings should be held. The exchange of experiences will stimulate and encourage the workers. It is not necessary to have these meetings at the church. Very profitable conferences may be held at the homes of the members. Some campaigns of this sort have called the members of their teams, generals, captains, lieutenants, etc. The army form of organization has an appeal in some localities, and has considerable incentive toward discipline, thoroughness, and loyalty.

Interest can be aroused by making frequent reports to the local congregation on the progress of the work being done on the prospect list. Frequent calls should be made on the members for additional names. As soon as converts are made they should be enlisted immediately in the campaign and asked to secure their share of prospects. Nothing will tie them up to the church and deepen their interest like enlisting them in the campaign to secure new members. It will cause them to read and study so that they may be informed about the doctrine and belief of the church, which is highly essential in making new converts.

Every avenue of approach should be exhausted before a name is dropped from the prospect list, but in this connection we advise in favor of careful and intelligent work, and counsel against undue haste, for in these days when people are thinking for themselves there is little or no possibility of a prospect for church membership being "rushed" into the church; and even if it were possible we would not want it to be done.

With unremitting persistency branch officers should seek to maintain a continuous interest in missionary work, and if work with the prospect list is maintained at its highest efficiency, results in baptisms are assured. To do this requires consecration and devotion to the church through its greatest opportunity of all—missionary enterprise. Who can ask for a more worth-while undertaking, or a more glorious Christian adventure than enlisting in active personal service to carry the message of the church to the people of the world.

The Promises of God Are Sure

A sermon preached by J. H. N. Jones, February 16, 1930, at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri. Reported by Ruth Lewis Holman.

An Australian needs at least two texts in order to preach a sermon. I notice some of our American brothers can preach a sermon without a text.

Let me draw your attention to a very well known passage of scripture: "Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come." I want to associate with that the text that I find in the last chapter of Hebrews: "For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come." The last occasion that I had the pleasure of speaking to you, I dwelt particularly with what we might term the spiritual aspect and import of our particular message. I tried to tell you what it was as it reached us in Australia, or particularly as it reached me. I failed to teach another aspect of this great work, because I did not like to bind two ideas together in one talk.

You will remember I took for a text the words of David, the Psalmist, "Send out thy light and thy truth." I did not expatiate upon the second portion of the text, "Let them bring me to thy holy hill." I have no doubt in my mind that David had in mind the holy hill of Zion, Jerusalem. But in a spiritual sense we may apply that particular psalm to our own peculiar movement and work.

After delivering that talk I thought some of my brothers might get the idea that I did not appreciate the efforts that are being made to establish what we term literal Zion. But no; that is not a correct viewpoint to take from my talk, because I appreciate very highly the spiritual import of our message. I believe that to be first. We can not build Zion with unregenerate material. We must build Zion with regenerated material; men and women who have been born again. I attended a service preached by one of our good bishops, and he laid emphasis upon that portion of our text which I failed to emphasize. He spoke of the establishment of Zion as the chief thing in our message. I could agree with him, from his viewpoint, and I am quite sure that he could agree with my viewpoint. But anyone casually listening might have thought we held divergent views of Christ or the church. Sometimes men are looking in one direction while others look in the opposite direction. The bishops generally look at the financial end of things, at the material side. Necessarily so, too. We have these men to care for that side, while the missionaries look toward the evangelical side of the question. In reality we hold a dual view. We should be enabled to comprehend, if possible, not only the material things of Zion, but also the import of the wonderful spiritual message.

I can not personally feel for one moment that we have not something to distinguish us from other bodies of Christians in the world, besides what we might term the Zionite Movement. I believe there is something in the spiritual aspect which is not held by other bodies. If that is not so, then why the opening of heaven? Why the coming of an angel with such a testimony and such a message? Why the ordinance of the priesthood? Why the separate church, or movement? I believe this church is a distinctive movement for a distinctive time in the world's history.

In relation to that view I want to draw attention to statements of one or two famous men of our own time, with just as widely divergent ideas as we take upon the spiritual and temporal aspects. You have all heard the name of Dean Inge, the great English teacher. I read in one issue of the Forum (January, 1930) this from his pen:

There are some well-meaning people who try to make out that Christ was an advanced social reformer. They are mistaken. The gospel is a message of spiritual redemption, not of social reform. Christ was indifferent to all forms of government. He despised all the paraphernalia of civilization beyond the simplest necessities and comforts.

This we might term the view of one who belongs to an imperialistic church and who could not visualize and advocate Christ as a social reformer.

Let us now turn to one of the opposite view. Emil Lovelace, the eminent Belgian economist, said:

If Christianity were taught and understood conformably with the spirit of its founder, the existing social organizations could not last a day.

Also James Russell Lowell who said:

There is dynamite enough in the New Testament, if illegitimately used, to blow our existing institutions to atoms.—Essay on Progress of the World.

Then Rauschenbusch says:

Protestantism has abandoned the monastic life and settled down to the life of the world. If that implies that it accepts the present condition as good and final, it means a silencing of the Christian protest and its surrender to the world. There is another alternative—ascetic Christianity called the world evil and left it. Humanity is waiting for a revolutionary Christianity which will call the world evil and change it.—Christianity and the Social Crisis.

I wonder are we that body? Certainly we hold the right views, but are we revolutionizing Christianity? Are we the people who are destined to change the social conditions which have been and are around us in Christianity today? I hope we are.

Let us look at the great world and see those two principles in operation and see what they have done for the world. Look at the great nation, Russia. When she entered the war she was ruled by a Christian monarchy. Under an imperialistic reign with all its paraphernalia, Russia groaned as under a load. Its poor people were ground down to the earth, and those who opposed in any way their oppression were sent over to the regions of Siberia, but still there were waiting souls. The great war came, likewise the opportunity to overthrow the government and possess themselves of the leading strings of the nation. They slew all those who were contrary to their ideas, and they are marching toward a new regime, not looking up to their God, but leaving him out of their program entirely, saying, "We are going to make this a paradise without a God; we have had enough of the Christian religion."

So that particular viewpoint is spreading over the world today; particularly in Europe. The socialistic movement aims not toward God, but toward ameliorating the lot of man, which is a very laudable objective. But is that sufficient?

Just at this point I will compare some of our own ideals with the ideals held by both sides in the world. We hold the spiritual, and also temporal or natural, and we desire to make the world a better world as a result of the application of our Zionistic ideals in a social sense. No doubt the churches of Christendom in the past have been culpable in relation to the social aspect in the question. No doubt the kings of the earth have been wrong when they have gone out, and planted their flag in a certain land. They have sent their missionaries to point the natives to God, while they have taken from the natives their land. That applies to civilization all over the world. They have taken from the natives the material things which they had given them of God, and sought to evangelize them. They look down while they invite others to look up.

We, as a people, have two schools of thought, even among ourselves. We have those who are looking more to the temporal side and those who are looking to the spiritual. We might say the missionary arm looks to the spiritual; while the other arm, including the bishopric, looks to the temporal. But the Lord has told us he has not given us a law that is not spiritual. So I understand the bishops view of the law of temporalities is that it is a spiritual law applied to temporalities. But, how many of us are able to see that aspect—that there is a spiritual aspect even to the paying of our tithing, or in the filing of our inventories with the bishop?

There is a spiritual aspect to material Zion. I see a danger here, a great danger; that we might lay too much stress upon the temporalities and forget the spiritual, without which we can not be accepted of God. Or we may stress too much the spiritual and fail to establish Zion. So we must include in our viewpoints these two needs which are expressed not only in the texts that have been selected, but other places. You remember the Lord was asked by a lawyer, "Which is the greatest of the commandments?" and Jesus said, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart; and the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

God is above you, and your neighbor is around about you. I have heard it said, and I believe that it is true, that a man can not continue to love his neighbor very long unless he loves God. And so I think socialism that looks to do good to its neighbor without loving God is making a mistake. Loving God must be first before love for neighbor can be continued in our lives.

I want to work toward Zion; material Zion. As a people we have been negligent toward that particular message to establish Zion, and our ideas may be very vague. I mean to say the rank and file of our people. We may regard the houses that are built, the city we are making, to be the main thing, when in reality it is subsidiary to the greater need. If Zion is to be built upon a harmonious basis, she must be built by living stones elysian, built forever to abide. Peter also said, "Lively stones, a spiritual house, a holy priesthood." (1 Peter 2:5.) We must have the spiritual in our midst. I do not mean to say we should have all sorts of miraculous gifts. I do not mean that. I will give you an illustration which I gave in the prayer meeting on Wednesday night. My experience has been this, that when you go away from all branches of the church you meet with more spiritual gifts than you do in the branches. I find in the course of my work that when we try to establish or are establishing the work, there is more of spiritual manifestations than after the branch has been organized; and so I came to the conclusion that this great church is something like a great tree.

You know a tree is composed of roots, trunk, branches, leaves, etc. And usually when anything goes wrong with the tree it starts right down at the roots. You see the branches start to die, the leaves begin to wither, and you know there is something wrong with the roots. You see the branches flourish and the green leaves and the tree brings forth precious fruit; then you know the root is all right and that the sap is being safely brought up through the branches. You don't look for gifts in the great trunk of the tree. You never see that anywhere. In the trunk of the tree there is life that conducts the sap up to the little branches, but it does not manifest life. So it is in the church. I often found in Australia when anything went wrong with this church (or right with the church, if you will) here in Independence, church headquarters, we feel it there right away. That is a peculiar thing, but it emphasizes our oneness as a people. And when you do anything here we look forward to the same thing to travel as far as the church extends. If ever this work dies or fails, it will fail right here. As long as the roots can be kept alive, the work flourishes; the little green branches of the tree will return their life.

So I look to Zion, not so much for miraculous spiritual gifts, but I look for expression of that which is deepest and greatest in the Christian system; loving God and loving each other, as we read. I look for the fruits of the Holy Spirit, which are love, peace, etc.

And to my mind, after you have done all that, there is something else to the Christian system. After you have built what we might call material Zion, there is something else to be looked forward to. If that "something else" does not come to crown the efforts we put forth as a people, then we are like all others, laboring in vain.

I refer now to the coming of the kingdom of Christ from above. We are told here in the revelations that the kingdom of God shall come. It is expressed here like this:

That the inhabitants of the earth may receive it and be prepared for the days to come, in which the Son of Man shall come down, clothed in the brightness of his glory, to meet the kingdom of God which is upon the earth.—Doctrine and Covenants 65.

Are we fully prepared for God's kingdom to come? This is not to be the end of it. We are only awaiting the manifestation of the sons of God. We are not allowed to continue here. Remember my second text. We are not allowed to continue by reason of death. I know people down there in Australia who are dying, fully believing in Zion. I go to your cemetery and I find men and women there who have died believing in Zion. "Here we have no continued city, but we seek one that is to come." (Hebrews 13: 14.) And we are to prepare a people for the coming King.

We believe that God has spoken in this day and called this movement into existence, and we are told in the revelations that the keys of the kingdom are given to men in this dispensation for the last time. If there is anything at all in this work, if we believe in Doctrine and Covenants at all, then the second coming is near at hand, because we are living in the last dispensation and the keys of the kingdom have been given for the last time. And in the Book of Mormon we are told to "Prune the vineyard for the last time."

If we look upon the movements of the world, with all the perplexities of the nations, we see we are moving toward a cataclysm, and we see that the world is endeavoring to evolve from the natural to the spiritual. If the world evolves from the natural to the spiritual, it will be contrary to the experience of the past; it will be contrary to all human experience, except in the case of Zion of old. We have had no repetition of it since. But there is a goal, an apocalyptic ending. It was spoken of by the thief to our Lord, when he said, "Remember me when thou comest in thy kingdom."

When He comes! Remember what He said, "If I go, I will come again and receive you unto myself." He said he would send the Holy Spirit as a comforter to comfort them between the time of the ascension and the time of coming again. And he says:

The Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God and the dead in Christ shall rise first.—1 Thessalonians 4: 16.

If Jesus Christ did not arise from the dead, did not conquer death, then there is no other who claims to have done so. We can look to no other. If he is not coming again in his kingdom, then everything will just go right on. Death will keep claiming its victims, men and women. But if there is any truth in both the revelations given to this church now and those given formerly, then there is coming a time when death shall cease to be.

I remember traveling on the way going into Sydney, Australia, talking with a gentleman, and the thought struck me as we passed the cemetery leading into that city, "There is a blot upon our great city and of every great city of the country. We have all got to go there. Did you ever see a city without a cemetery?" No! Well, John the Revelator saw a city without a cemetery. In the 21st chapter of that book he said, "There will be no more death, no more crying, no more pain." That is what we as a people look for as the crowning stone, the culminating movement that will save us from death, hell, and the grave. So we can pray, and understandingly pray, "Thy kingdom come," and we can endeavor to do his will here upon the earth. Go with your eyes fixed, my brethren, upon the coming kingdom, while at the same time you do your duty to this kingdom here upon the earth. And I do hope, I sincerely pray that this church in the coming day may be able to remove that stigma from Christianity, that stigma that was caused by pointing people to the skies while you did not care for their conditions here on the earth. I remember there was a man who attended street meetings in New Zealand, who had the habit of saying, "Oh, yes; you have a message that points us to the time when we shall get pie in the sky when we die, but we want some of it here now."

I do sincerely trust that this church will be able to arise to the occasion. I don't think we hope to be perfect in a day, but I do think all should pay strict and close adherence to the law given to us, to the laws relating to temporalities as well as spiritual things, that we shall arise above the rest of the world, that Christianity may mean more to us than "pie in the sky when we die." But if we are actually looking for the coming of the Lord and his angels in his kingdom, then we shall live for it, for the Son of God shall come. Did you ever read carefully the 11th chapter of Hebrews? Do so.

A week or so ago, a brother who was once very strong in your faith but who now ridicules this church because of the failures we made in Nauvoo, Far West, and other parts of this land—I refer to a former apostle. I read a piece in the Messenger asking the Saints to give up their foolish ideas in relation to Zion because of the failures that had been made. Now if we were to do that, every effort making toward good would have been abandoned. What about the failures the Jews made to establish Zion? There have been failures all along the line, but what does the Doctrine and Convenants say: "It is not the things of God that fail, it is the things of man." The time will come when the prophecies of God shall not fail, but the kingdom of God will come. I believe the time is set for that work and that all intelligent people of the world shall look for that city, the city whose "builder and maker is God."

Thousands are dying in the faith, not having received the promise; they die, however, "in the faith." So will you and I. According to my blessing, I am going to die in the faith and come again with the Lord when he comes. That is my hope, a Christian's hope. So when he comes he will have his Saints, and when he appears again he will bring the Saints with him, the dead in Christ, and those who are alive shall be caught up to meet him. The living shall change in the twinkling of an eye, from mortality to immortality.

It doesn't make much difference to me whether I dwell on earth or in heaven. There is no difference. Therefore we must seek to be brothers; we must try to really be, and to be clean, pure, and faithful in our lives; to be worthy the coming of the Master, and longing for the time.

Time is nothing to God; a thousand years is as a day to him. And when Christ comes he will bring all the people who love him everywhere, and they will finally come forth with him in the great resurrection and dwell with him in that glorious and wonderful city wherein there shall be no more death, sorrow, or tears. All sins shall have vanished, and we shall see him face to face, being heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ, our Lord.

This is a wonderful promise; keep that in your hearts and rejoice and trust in God for the rest. May he help us to go on!

THE EXTENSION COURSE OF THE CENTENNIAL INSTITUTE

This new course of study is now ready for distribution. It has been prepared in outline form by the Department of Religious Education at the request of the First Presidency, Quorum of Twelve, and Presiding Bishopric.

The course consists of eleven outlines and is adapted for use in study classes at reunions, conferences, conventions, and rally days. The purpose of the course is to direct the attention of the Saints to some of the major aspects of church development and to an analysis of some of its fundamental beliefs and projects as they are related to our general church program of individual and group development, looking forward to the ultimate goal—the establishment of Zion.

The material as presented reviews the church program and projects in a new light and from a new viewpoint. If studied carefully these outlines will suggest new lines of approach and will prove stimulating to those who are continually engaged in preaching. The entire set should be purchased in order to get the most out of this course, due to the fact that each outline is interdependently an important part of the whole course. Each outline has a bearing on and helps to interpret and amplify the others.

The eleven outlines listed below comprise the course which is known as "The Extension Course of the Centennial Institute." The price is 10 cents each, or $1 for the complete course. All members of the priesthood, but especially missionaries and officers of stakes, districts, and branches, should secure these outlines immediately. The matters discussed are of vital importance to the church, regarding which every Latter Day Saint should be fully and accurately informed.

Orders should be sent to the Presiding Bishopric, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Nauvoo Reunion Opens

By F. C. Bevan

Nauvoo district reunion opened today, August 1, at Nauvoo the Beautiful. This is truly a beautiful place in which to hold a reunion. We are expecting good attendance.

Some excellent speakers and workers have been appointed to work with us in this gathering, Apostle J. A. Gillen, Patriarch F. A. Smith, Bishop Charles Fry, Elder and Sister George G. Lewis, Elder and Sister S. A. Burgess, Elder and Sister A. M. Chase, and Elder F. T. Mussell. The writer is also assisting. Those who have been to Nauvoo will come again, and those who have not been should visit this spot.

The reunion continues until August 10. Make plans to be with us if only for a day or two.

Deer Park Reunion

By Henry L. Livingston

The annual reunion of New York and Philadelphia District was held at Deer Park, Pennsylvania, July 12 to 27. The weather was excellent, and the people seemed to enjoy themselves, even though the crowd was not as large as last year. This was no doubt due to the hard times that have affected the country.

Brother C. B. Woodstock was first on the grounds, and he gave some very interesting lectures on "The new program of religious education." A project was tried at camp during the two weeks in which the new plan was put into effect, and it was interesting to note how successfully the plan worked. Brother George W. Robley was put in charge of the adult division, Sister Livingston the young people, and Sister Fligg the children. Brother Woodstock called the group leaders together occasionally to discuss their problems and to make suggestions. The project was very educational to the group leaders; it has concretely given them some idea of how the new plan should be carried out in actual practice.

Bishop Carmichael was here from the start of the reunion and as usual gave some fine lectures and sermons. After listening to Brother Carmichael, one is convinced that the hope of better social and spiritual conditions in the world lies in stewardships. He told us that the foundation of stewardships was a God-minded people. One can not think straight unless he is God-minded, he said. We must let the mind be in us that was in Christ Jesus. We are sure that the people who attended Bishop Carmichael's classes have a better and clearer conception of stewardships and our responsibility in that line.

Apostle R. S. Budd arrived at camp on Monday and remained until Friday the 25th. He, too, gave us some things to think about. Our attention was called to the fact that this church in the beginning was a distinctive church with a distinctive message and that it must of necessity continue to be or there may be a danger of its losing its identity. How often do we use the Book of Mormon? How often do we use the Doctrine and Covenants today? These were some of the questions that each had to answer in his own mind. We hope that our people will heed the counsel of Brother Budd and give more time to the study of the three standard books of the church, for it is vital.

Brother Arthur Mills was in camp for the last week, representing the Department of Music, and those who attended his classes were impressed with his lectures on the place and importance of music in the church. He stressed the importance of congregational singing as a definite contribution to the success of the service, and pointed out that serious consideration should be given to that feature of the service.

The second and third Sundays were marked by baptismal services in the afternoon. Elaine Dyer and Clara Young decided to join ranks with us in service of the Lord, and we wish them every success in their Christian endeavor. Our support and prayers are with them.

At the close of the two busy weeks all were tired but happy in the fact that they were able to attend and enjoy the blessings that issue from such a gathering. That they were pleased with the meetings was evidenced in a decided vote for another reunion next year, July 11 to 26.

Alberta District Reunion and Conference

By Hazel Dallyn

The Alberta district reunion and conference opened Thursday morning, July 24, with a prayer service. Then the members were divided into four classes.

Elder Peter Whalley taught a class in "Priesthood"; Brother Joe Bates taught a class in "Sunday school work"; Brother Herbert Burton taught the young people recreation and expression; Sister Hazel Dallyn women's work. These classes continued Friday and Saturday mornings.

Apostle J. F. Curtis arrived Thursday noon with his jovial smile.

Thursday and Friday afternoons were spent in recreation—volley ball, baseball, and swimming.

The crowd grew daily, and a number of nonmembers came each night from the town.

Each evening Apostle Curtis preached a good gospel sermon. And in the morning at eleven o'clock he conducted a class in "Authority and priesthood." There were some lively discussions during these periods.

The district business meeting was held Saturday afternoon, and nearly all the officers were sustained in their present offices.

A pleasant sacramental service was the high point of Sunday morning. There was a good crowd, and the Holy Spirit was present to bless. Then Apostle Curtis preached a sermon on service and the opportunities we get to serve and how some people say "Excuse me, please" or "I decline." He gave many interesting examples of those who had served and of how the Lord blessed them.

In the afternoon an ordination service was held, when six of the brothers were ordained. Albert White and George Millar were ordained priests; Herb Burton and Fred Dallyn, teachers; Cliff Dallyn and Ross Dallyn were ordained deacons.

At three o'clock Elder Joe Bates explained the new system of religious education. Alberta District has decided to try to work out this plan, and Brother Bates has been put in charge of the work.

Sunday evening closed the reunion. The church was filled with people who had come to hear Brother Curtis preach.

On Monday morning Apostle Curtis baptized three, and in the afternoon we gathered at the station to bid him good-by. His next stop was to be with Edmonton Saints, then on to Calgary.

The Saints enjoyed the reunion and were most happy together. The weather man was not very kind to us. It rained every day, and Saturday was an especially bad day. It rained very hard, and considerable damage was done to crops by hail.

Stone Church

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the eleven o'clock hour. Pastor John F. Sheehy was assisted by Elders W. Wallace Smith, R. T. Cooper, S. A. Thiel, Howard Harder, Harry Barto, and T. A. Beck. The theme of "Faith" was carried out in the scripture reading by Brother Thiel, in a short talk by Brother Sheehy, and in the musical numbers.

Sister Opal Goode Doty played organ music as a prelude to the service, and was followed by Brother Robert Miller who played during the service.

"God's faith in man" was the topic of Pastor John F. Sheehy's sermon at the Campus Sunday evening. This he closely correlated with the theme of the day "Faith" and with the sermon of last Sunday night. Scripture readings from Matthew, Mark, Luke, and Psalm 8 were used to make the thought of the evening more apparent: that in man God sees potentialities to become through obedience his sons, and to aid mankind in achieving this end he sent his Son Christ to the earth. The purpose of Jesus' earthly life was to teach men the nature of God and to show the interest and faith God has in man.

Elder H. G. Barto presided over the service, being assisted by Elder P. A. Sherman, pastor of Gudgell Park congregation.

A half hour concert of music was presented to the large Campus congregation by the Stone Church Choir under the direction of Paul N. Craig and George Anway. Some favorite anthems of the congregation and the choir were sung, "The radiant morn hath passed away," by Woodward; "But the Lord is mindful of his own," from Mendelssohn's "Saint Paul"; "The Lord brings back his own," Galbraith, and "The God of Abraham praise," Shelley. Soloists were Lilly Belle Allen and George Anway. Two excellent numbers were contributed by the Wahdemna Choral Club Male Quartet. And there were orchestral numbers by the Rock Creek School Orchestra.

At ten o'clock the Stone Church Choir, assembled in the auditorium of the Stone Church and under the direction of

Preparing for Western Montana Reunion

Saints of Western Montana enjoyed an all-day meeting July 20 at the reunion grounds at Race Track. People came from Great Falls, Anaconda, Deer Lodge, and Race Track for Sunday school at eleven o'clock. After Sunday school Brother Thorburn gave an interesting sermon.

At noon a picnic lunch was spread for all. At 2.30 in the afternoon a special reunion committee meeting was called to order by Brother N. P. Coleman, district president. The main purpose of this meeting was to transact business for the reunion, to be held on the old reunion grounds August 8 to 17 inclusive. It was agreed to reduce meals to minimum prices: For adults; breakfast, 15 cents, dinner 25 cents; supper, 25 cents; children up to twelve years of age: breakfast, 10 cents; dinner, 15 cents; supper, 15 cents. The tent committee will try to get reduced prices on tents. Those desiring to rent tents should make their wants known to John Eliason, Race Track, Montana, or Warren Peterson, Race Track.

The speakers will be J. F. Curtis, A. C. Martin, W. H. Eliason, and other visiting elders and local ministry. Everyone is welcome to come and help make this reunion a success.

Paul N. Craig, Robert Miller at the organ, repeated its evening's program as a radio offering to K M B C. The choir will not reassemble for work until September. One of the closing announcements informed the singers that in the fall work will again be begun on "The Messiah," to be presented to the people of Independence during the Christmas holidays.

Among the People in Zion

There has been no such thing as a "summer slump" in the attendance at the Wednesday evening young people's prayer service at the Stone Church. In fact, the gain in numbers has been rather steady from week to week, beginning early in June when the services were resumed following General Conference. The average attendance since that time has been more than eighty-five. At the first service in June fifty-four were present; at the service Wednesday evening, July 30, one hundred fourteen were present.

This prayer service has received excellent support from members of the young people's department of the church school, which meets each Sunday morning at the Auditorium. Brother M. T. Williams, who teaches a class in this department, is also in charge of the midweek services. He has been assisted by various men, young and older, who have given short talks at the opening of the service to suggest ideas and ideals around which those present might center their thoughts and their own expressions.

Word reached Independence relatives and friends last week of the marriage of Brother Donny Pierson, son of Sister Maude Pierson Franks, of Independence, to Miss Esther Holloway, of Lamoni, Iowa. The marriage ceremony occurred at Lamoni. The bride is a daughter of Missionary and Sister L. G. Holloway.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

An organ prelude, "Cloister scene," played by Sister Irene Wolfe, opened the service of the Lord's Supper Sunday morning in Central Church. Pastor C. E. Wight was in charge, assisted in the stand by Elders George Mesley, H. H. Sevy, and others of the priesthood.

The evening service, conducted on the church lawn, was of special interest to all. Mr. Dorr H. Carroll, editor and business manager of The Church World, spoke on "Churches in cooperation." The Saints brought their families and friends. Music was by a quartet composed of Elizabeth Hitchcock, Estelle Moore, Clayton Wolfe, and Alfred Hitchcock, and there was a trumpet solo by Edith Burgoon.

The girls were requested to meet for volley ball practice at 7.30 yesterday evening. Quindaro girls have challenged for a match, and on August 22 there will be a stake tournament at the O. B. K. social.

Brother Walter Ingoldsby has brought much pleasure to the children at Central. He has loaned the church one of his well-built swing and teeter-totters. In the future he plans to manufacture this equipment on a large scale.

Friday evening the O. B. K.'s will sponsor an ice cream social on the lawn. There will be recreation for everyone, and a match volley ball game with the young people from Enoch Hill.

The wedding of Kathryn Skinner, daughter of Bishop C. A. Skinner, to J. T. Westwood, jr., of Independence, will be solemnized at Central Church tonight at 8.30. There will be no prayer meeting or supper on the lawn.

Parents are requested to leave their children for the primary and junior church services. These programs are planned to benefit and interest the children.

Services for next Sunday morning will be planned by members of the Excelsior Class.

Argentine Church

Elder George Mesley of the stake presidency was the speaker at 7.45 in the evening on a recent Sunday. He used for a theme a borrowed phrase, "Your name on your street is you." What are the qualities you have built into your name? he asked, and cited several instances where the names of our ministry and laymembers have been known for honesty, integrity, industry, civic pride, etc. That our name on our street becomes the name of our church to our neighbors is the belief of Elder Mesley.

Gladstone Church

Recently an ice cream social was held on the lawn of Elder L. C. Connelly's home, netting $14.50. This will be applied to the local expense fund.

Patriarch J. T. Gresty was the speaker Sunday morning, July 27, making clear to many the duties of his office. Elder C. G. Lewis was the evening speaker.

The O. B. K.'s made the trip to the Atherton, Missouri, stewardship farm last Sunday afternoon.

Good interest is noted in the midweek prayer meetings and spiritual uplift felt.

Advance work in tracting for a missionary effort to commence after August 15 will be begun soon. A demand for a greater knowledge of the gospel seems to warrant this character of work.

Brother E. B. Johnston soon will leave for the West for an indefinite stay.

Chicago, Illinois

Sixty-sixth and Honore Streets

Sunday, June 1, a beautiful day dawned for the service of sacrament at Central Church. Brother Rowley gave the opening remarks, reminding the members of their covenant. God's Spirit was there to cheer and comfort. The epistle from the First Presidency was read, and we were made to feel that if the fruits of the Spirit are prevalent in our midst, Zion will be redeemed.

Brother Clem Evans baptized his nephew, Llewellyn Krebs, at the Sunday school service.

In spite of the intense heat of the past few weeks, midweek prayer services have been well attended and of a splendid spiritual type. We have been encouraged and strengthened to go forward and cling to the rod of iron shown in Lehi's dream.

The bake sale June 21 was a success, and as a result thirty-five dollars was turned to the building fund.

June 22 was Building Fund Sunday. Brother C. E. Schmid spoke on "Sacrifice."

In the evening the historical program was given. Brother Ray Hurst read from Doctrine and Covenants, and Brother Clem Evans talked on "The ideals of a Zion." The fifth episode in the history was given by the following cast: H. P. W. Keir, Joseph Smith; J. J. Oliver, Methodist minister; William Cochran, Christian minister; Brother Thoman, Doctor Bond; Sister Thoman, Mrs. Johnson.

Brother Howard Carpenter, who has been attending school at Champaign, Illinois, is home for the summer vacation. Summer vacations are on, and the Saints are coming and going. Visitors are seen in the congregation, and they come from many different places. One of our members is abroad.

Miss Ruth Lowe and Earl Blakeman were joined in the bonds of matrimony by Brother H. P. W. Keir June 4. We wish God's choicest blessings on the young couple.

A genuine good time was had by all who attended the Fourth of July picnic held at Eighty-seventh and Western Avenue. Autos were provided for those who had none.

Brother William Cochran recently underwent a serious operation but is doing nicely and will soon be at home. We are indeed thankful for the many blessings which come to us from our heavenly Father.

Elder Arthur Oakman recently spent a short time in Chicago and favored the congregation with a beautiful musical selection.

Brother Don Keir and Sister Jean MacDonald have been placed on the honor roll of their classes. We are proud of these young people. Brother Art Sherman has been chosen Sunday school superintendent. Sister Bell resigned to be able to do district work. Brother Ted Spuehler is chorister for the Sunday school. Last Sunday morning Brothers Art and Ted sang a duet.

The infant daughter of Brother William and Sister Marie Keir was blessed by H. P. W. Keir and J. J. Oliver and given the name Grace Margerite, July 27.

Sunday school services are well attended, and the young are taking up their part of the work in the worship programs.

Sister Cora Keir's class of young people gave a play, "Parlor matches." Those taking part were Charles Gunlock, Ruth Dempsey, Irene Lowe, Don Keir, Lawrence Dennis, Jean MacDonald, Stella Thoman, Hope Wainwright, Wilber Compton. The stage settings were good, and each one did his part well. Brother William Keir directed. The class made over fifty dollars, which they turned to the building fund in the Building Fund Service. Brother Charles Gunlock made the presentation speech. Little Marian Frances Hurst also presented a sum of twenty-two dollars raised at the operetta "Golden slipper" given by the children of the Sunday school. The children were trained by Sister Hattie K. Bell.

Sister Jean C. Keir and sons, Bob and Dick, were present at Sunday school after an absence of several weeks from illness. Among those who are ill are Sister Wainwright and Sister Tonks.

Dunn Center, North Dakota

This branch has been holding services regularly since early spring and has made some progress. No services were conducted June 29, as most of the members went to the reunion held at Logan, North Dakota. They reported a profitable and helpful time.

July 12 Elder C. J. Smith came to spend a week here. The next day Sunday school convened at 10.30. At 11.30 Brother Smith preached an inspiring sermon to a fair-sized congregation. They then drove to Brother and Sister Peter Rasmussen's home for a picnic dinner. In the afternoon Elder Smith again preached. Following a short social time, those having chores to do went home to prepare for the evening services at the church. That evening Brother Willie Adams and wife had their baby blessed.

It was decided to have meetings every evening during the week at 8.45, and although this was a very busy time for the farmers, there was good attendance, and interest was excellent.

July 20 an all-day meeting was held at the church, Sunday school at 10.30, and at 11.30 Elder C. J. Smith preached to a large congregation an inspiring and helpful sermon. Then the members spread a fine picnic dinner which everyone enjoyed. At 2.30 all went to Spring Creek for baptismal service. Lowel Moffett and little Irene Adams made their covenant with God for a life in his service. The confirmation followed shortly after at the church. There was preaching again at 8.30, Elder Smith delivering another sermon that was most helpful.

During Brother Smith's week here there occurred an ingathering of the Saints of the branch. On the last Sunday Brother and Sister Guy Adams and two young daughters came sixty miles and others came nearly thirty miles to be present. As a result of the association and the worship together, all are greatly encouraged to press onward. Much instruction has been gained, many friendships have been renewed. We hope and pray that God will help us each to take part in the accomplishments of the future and that much may be done for his cause in this community.

Detroit, Michigan

From Detroit's Beacon Light

Pastor J. E. Lancaster and Sister Lancaster have been busy since returning from the Centennial Conference. June 18 the last business meeting of the groups of the Detroit Branch was held in Wyandotte. The general branch business meeting was the first and in it the following city officers were elected: Branch President, J. E. Lancaster; secretary and recorder, Alma Grant; superintendent of religious education, Vere Blair; superintendent of junior church, Mabel Brewster; publicity department, George Booth; supervisor of music, Joe Williams; Graphic Arts Department, Wallace Janrow; Department of Women, Nellie Harkness. The Board of Stewards was sustained as to affairs of finance and property. The following groups held their business meeting to choose their officers for the year: First Church congregation, East Side congregation, and Roseville congregation. We ask the support of all true Saints for these officers. The work they do is important, and the task is great. Support them not only with your means and your prayers, but give them your help when you are called upon.

June 13 Apostle Paul M. Hanson took the Department of Recreation and Expression on a tour of Mexico, Central and South America, furnishing plenty of photographic proof that the descendants of Laman and Nephi were of a religious character. The slides which our brother showed were made from snapshots which he took while journeying through those countries. This lecture was very worth while. Brother Hanson was passing through Detroit on his way to Europe.

The flowers which adorned the pulpit June 1 traveled a long distance to serve their purpose. Deacon Charles Church, who has charge of the Brick Church at Lamoni, mailed these lovely vari-colored peonies of his own raising to Brother and Sister Hubert Case.

Plans for a new church building in Detroit are under way. Negotiations are proceeding satisfactorily for final approval of the First Presidency and Presiding Bishopric of the architect's drawings for this building. Much thought is being put into the preparation of the plans, so that after approval of general church officials the proposed building will be one worthy the support of all Detroit Saints in their achievement of the best.

The joint reunion of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana and Detroit Districts is now under way. It opened at Indian Lake, near Vickburg, Michigan, July 25. Many Saints are on the grounds endeavoring to make this the best reunion they have yet experienced. Helping them are Elder and Sister E. E. Closson, Apostle D. T. Williams, and Evangelist G. T. Griffiths of the general church force. Sister Louise Evans is in charge of the music.

The dramas given the last Sunday night of each month telling the history of the church, "Know your church," have created much interest. Slight mention of them brings a crowd. The people who have taken part in them have done well. They have taught us some valuable lessons. June 29 Elder Hubert Case, city missionary in charge, was the speaker. Sister Henrietta Forbes has managed the production of these plays so far and has done well. Brother Tom Forbes has prepared the stage, which has been no small task. These little dramas were written by President Elbert A. Smith, who is not only a great writer, but whose whole life has been one of love for God and the Saints. The drama presented June 8 depicted the events surrounding the building of Kirtland Temple.

Apostles J. F. Garver, D. T. Williams, and Paul M. Hanson visited Detroit and preached some inspiring sermons during the month of June.

Five were baptized Children's Day, and a fine program was rendered by the children.

The mission at Roseville seems to be growing, although attendance has fallen off considerably with the coming of summer.

Many interested people are keeping in touch with the work, and baptisms will continue because of the personal evangelism program practiced by Brother Case and his assistants.

The new chorister at First Church states that the choir will not discontinue its work during the summer months. Priesthood meetings continue to convene every two weeks on Thursday night during the warm weather.

Many members are at present taking vacation trips, and there are in our midst numbers of Saints from States far and near.

On June 20, 21, and 22 there was held in Detroit an international institute under the auspices of Detroit and Chatham Districts. John Blackmore, of the Department of Religious Education, and Leslie E. Flowers, editor of Vision, with Apostle D. T. Williams took charge of the class work and round table talks. They also gave some fine lectures. The program was arranged with the needs of the young people in mind, and opportunity was given Sunday school and Religio workers to make credits on their religious education certificates.

During the latter part of the month of May, the choir had a farewell party for Sister Townsend, who for so long was leader of that organization. They presented her with an electric clock as a token of their good wishes to go with her to her new home in Evansville, Indiana. Sister Townsend will be missed from her accustomed place in the choir.

Several names have lately been added to our cradle roll.

Oakland, California

From The Oakland Bulletin

July 30.—The congregations that have assembled in our new church for services have been encouraging in size. It is suggested that each member make of himself a missionary and invite his friends to come with him to worship in the new church home.

Friday, July 18, was family night at the Religio. We hear that the recent moonlight hike proved a happy time for this department. July 25 there will be a joint meeting of the two classes of young people of the Religio, and all others who will come.

The young people's summer camp will be held at Irvington August 6 to 10 inclusive. It is open to boys and girls from ten to twenty-one years of age, and the fee will be three dollars a person. Campers are asked to bring their own blankets; beds and shelter will be provided.

The congregation has recently made an achievement. An opportunity occurred to secure some good oak seats at a reasonable figure. Acting on a suggestion of one of the brothers, the members were invited to buy their own seats. The results were most encouraging. Two hundred and eighty seats have been purchased for four hundred and twenty dollars.

The Northern California District met with Oakland Saints July 27 in semiannual conference, and all services and meetings were under the auspices of district officers. A hearty welcome was extended all guests, and the Saints were pleased to have opportunity to greet the President of the church, Brother Frederick M. Smith, who made the journey to the coast especially to enrich the occasion and join in the celebration of the official opening of our new church.

We feel obligation to express hearty appreciation to the many who have helped to equip, furnish, and arrange the various features in connection with the auditoriums, classrooms, etc. The linoleum covering the foyers and stairways is the gift of our sisters and friends of the East Lake Club, and the Religio draped the stage and the club-room. The Department of Women supplied new crockery and paid a number of small accounts. Besides this many individuals have brought and donated numbers of items. The two artistic ferns and stands are gifts of Sisters G. Hawley and G. Carmichael. We have noticed the devotion of others who have worked to clean and beautify the church. Among them we especially mention Brother and Sister Gorsky, Brother Charles Day, Brother and Sister Witski, Sisters Jarvis, Werner, and E. Christensen, and Brother Frank Severy. To all these and many others we are grateful.

We are glad to welcome Mr. Melberg with his family after his illness and operation. Improvement is noted in the condition of Brother Wilson and Grandma Holling.

Denver, Colorado

Sunday, July 20, we were happy to have with us an unusually large number of visitors, among whom were old and dear friends as well as some new faces.

Brother and Sister W. L. Cowan and Sisters Nelle and Blanche Sampson, of Independence, gave us a surprise visit. This estimable family formerly lived in Denver, where they rendered valuable and faithful service. Sister O. E. Sade, of Colorado Springs, is visiting in Denver. Sister Florence Lechney, also of Colorado Springs, spent a few days in Denver. Wallace Keck, who has been in California for a year, has returned and is with his parents, Brother and Sister A. J. Keck. We are also enjoying the presence of Elder R. S. Salyards, who is visiting his son and daughter here. He was the speaker at the evening service Sunday. Other visitors were Doctor H. A. Merchant, of Omaha, Nebraska; and Brother and Sister L. W. Hayes, of Grandview Branch, Kansas City, Kansas.

Brother and Sister Leo Shupe, of Salina, Kansas, and Brother Homer Shupe and daughter Veda, of Trinidad, Colorado, worshipped with us Sunday, July 13. All formerly lived in Denver.

At the church school hour, Elder Clarence L. Bruno was presented with a gold seal certificate for his work in religious education and leadership. Sister Ruth Robertson made the presentation.

The theme for the day's worship, "Dealing justly," was impressively carried out in all the services. Many helpful thoughts were brought out by the pastor in his morning sermon.

The new Department of Religious Education in Denver Branch seems to have gained immediate approval from all. Even before the General Conference placed its sanction upon the plan, the proposed new form of organization was discussed quite thoroughly in the branch. This preconference discussion had so well prepared the way that when Brother Glaude Smith arrived in Denver he found it easy to make the change from the old departmental order to the new.

Two meetings were held after Brother Smith's arrival in Denver, in which the new plan was discussed. At the first meeting, on Sunday, May 25, all of the local branch officers from all departments were present; and those officers, after considering the new plan as outlined by the pastor, voted unanimously that a recommendation be made to the branch that the plan be adopted. The next meeting, Sunday, June 1, was a branch priesthood meeting, and after due consideration had been given, the priesthood also voted to recommend to the branch the adoption of the plan.

At the semiannual business meeting of the branch, Monday, June 2, the plan was adopted, and the following officers for the new Department of Religious Education were elected: Director of Religious Education, R. S. Salyards, jr., with Leslie A. Vosmer as his assistant; adult supervisor, Clarence L. Bruno, with Sister Ethel Radcliffe as assistant; young people's supervisor, Glen Holmes, with Ammon Wildermuth as assistant; children's supervisor, Sister Louisa Fishburn, with Sister Ella Parker as assistant; secretary, Burrell Shupe. Brother A. E. Norris was appointed to act as librarian.

In the short time since the adoption of the new plan for the Department of Religious Education in Denver, we have been able to see many advantages over the old departmental order. The work of the branch under the new plan is more unified. Everything that is done bears more definitely the marks of a whole branch endeavor. We feel more like one big working group, all working for the achievement of a common purpose. As we move forward, we hope to get more constructive work accomplished than was ever possible under the old order of things.

At the same business meeting the branch voted to try the "continuous morning service" plan in Denver, and on Sunday, June 15, this plan was tried in Denver for the first time. Even on the first day, the good to be found in a continuous morning service was very apparent. There was better order. The worship spirit that is so necessary to a worth-while service was more easily maintained throughout the morning. And then, too, the service closed at 11.45 a. m., giving those who desired it an opportunity to get home a little earlier than was possible with the divided services. The continuous service is a great time-saver. It keeps things in order throughout the morning, where much time was formerly spent in trying to regain order and a spirit of worship after the intermission between the Sunday school and the preaching service. Considering the advantages already noted since the continuous morning service was adopted, we feel that it is a change which makes for progress in the branch.

Oshoto, Wyoming

Sunday, July 6, branch officers had charge of the funeral of Sister F. E. Cohrt, at Spearfish, South Dakota, and our sacramental service was postponed for one week.

The following Sabbath we had a good crowd out to Sunday school. One person was baptized. Then the Saints assembled in sacramental meeting, at which time those who were baptized in June were confirmed, along with the one just baptized. The candidates baptized were Rogene Cousins, Donald Stubbart, Jean Marie Hartshorn, Vern Dillon, Franklyn McKim, and Clara Redding. The prayer and sacramental meeting was wonderfully blessed with the Spirit, and the Saints rejoiced.

This branch is making plans to meet with the Spearfish and Belle Fourche, South Dakota, members at Alva, Wyoming, in a two-day meeting, August 9 and 10. We are expecting Elder J. Charles May and perhaps others of the ministry to be present.

A number of the branch spent July 4 at a picnic in Brother Redding's grove, enjoying a very good time.

The Women's Department is making an effort to fill its office and calling. The women meet as often as possible and have good interest. They conducted a bazaar in which they made over thirty dollars. Under the sponsorship of this department a carnival and good time for the young people are being planned for the first part of August.

Oshoto Branch is working toward the new church school plan and hopes to accomplish all that it should in the next year.

We are holding services at New Haven, Wyoming, the third Sunday in each month and hope for much good to come of the effort.

Brother F. V. Cole and wife have a new son, born July 16. He has been named Elbert A.

Brother Lester Adair and Sister Elizabeth Nitcy were married the latter part of May. Priest Horace Hartshorn officiated at the ceremony. The pair have the best wishes of the branch.

Visitors from Independence, Missouri, and other places have been noted in this region during the past weeks.

Saint Louis, Missouri

Grand Boulevard and Carter Avenue

Elder C. A. Edstrom, who has been assigned to Saint Louis Branch as pastor, accompanied by Sister Edstrom, visited here the week-end of July 4. They were present at the sacramental service, and Brother Edstrom made an impressive talk on the importance of the service. The branch was favorably impressed by them and is looking forward to his ministry.

Since the first of July, Sunday evening services have been discontinued. They will be resumed after Labor Day.

Interest and attendance at the midweek prayer service are increasing. We are concentrating on this service and are trying to make it the most popular of all meetings. Last Wednesday was the banner night in attendance.

In spite of extremely hot weather, attendance during the Sunday morning service has been good.

Elder Brown has been preaching inspiring and helpful sermons, enjoying excellent liberty in their delivery. We have combined the morning service, and now enter upon the preaching without intermission after the class period. This change has proved popular with the majority of the members.

Several who have lately been listed among the sick are improving in health. Others, however, greatly need the prayers of the Saints. Brother Marvin Baker has been doing quite well this hot weather but is in need of a special blessing from the Father. He is a young man twenty years of age and has been bedridden for several years. He would be delighted to receive a word of cheer from some of the Saints. His address is 1418 Hampton Avenue, Saint Louis, Missouri. Among others who ask prayers are Sister Ida Hawkins and Sisters Mottashed and Eberle.

Some of our most faithful members are away on extended visits. We hear from them from time to time and look ahead to the day when they will again be among us.

Brother Brown has been kept busy on Sunday evenings preaching in near-by branches.

Alice Grimes.

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Street

July 28.—A young brother, Gerald Swanson, was baptized July 2 by R. E. Madden and confirmed by Brother Madden assisted by G. H. Kirkendall.

The Sunday school gave a picnic July 4 at Hempey's Grove. There was a good crowd, and everyone had a good time. Ice cream and lemonade were served to all.

Sacramental service July 6 was in charge of R. E. Madden and J. E. Matthews. There was present a good spirit, and all felt edified.

Lewis Junior, little son of Brother and Sister Lewis Madden, was blessed by J. E. Matthews, assisted by R. E. Madden.

Brother A. H. Nieman and Sister Florence Graham were present at sacrament. At the evening hour J. E. Matthews preached on "Faith."

July 10 the grim reaper entered this group and took our young sister, Helena Wemlinger. The funeral was held at the church July 14. A. E. Anderton preached the funeral sermon. Hazel Gribben sang "My beautiful home on high," and Robert Willison sang "In the garden." Sister Helena will be missed by all, especially by the young people.

July 13 at the morning hour District President A. E. Anderton preached.

At the evening hour G. H. Kirkendall preached on the theme "The kingdom of God."

The Women's Department held its annual picnic at Hempey's Grove July 10. About forty-two were present, and everyone had a good time.

The doors of Second Branch were closed July 20 in order that the Saints might meet with First Branch in the young people's convention.

We were privileged to hear Brother and Sister John Blackmore give their splendid lectures pertaining to religious education.

July 24 Paul Kalb was baptized by J. E. Matthews and confirmed by H. E. French.

On that day Bishop H. E. French preached on the theme, "Our social problems."

At the evening hour C. W. Clark, pastor of First Branch, preached, taking for a subject "The mind of a child."

Waterloo, Iowa

Although silent for some time, the Waterloo Branch is very much alive.

Edwin and Roberta Allen had charge of the Children's Day program and won much praise for their work.

Several of the young people are occupying as teachers in Sunday school, and others hold offices.

The Religio has been functioning solely as a means for recreation and expression, especially the former, and many good times are reported. The young folks are as enthusiastic about attending services as about the social gatherings.

Brother C. A. Biel and wife, of Clinton, were here a few Sundays ago. Brother Biel's spiritual and practical sermons were much appreciated by all.

Brother Otho Clark, of Independence, Missouri, favored us with a couple of helpful sermons on stewardship some time ago. He is operating church property under the stewardship system and spoke from actual experience, which has a stronger appeal than theorizing.

We are glad to report A. J. Fisher's health is much improved. We are also glad to note that Guy Haynes is steadily improving in health after an operation and sojourn in the hospital.

The Religio recently held an ice cream social with fair attendance.

Among the recent social activities was a birthday party for Grace Wolff, held at the home of W. H. Hinds. A fine crowd and good time are reported. A surprise party helped W. H. Wood and wife celebrate their nineteenth wedding anniversary. This was held July 26 at their home. Guests each brought nineteen pennies to recall the years of happy wedlock. Refreshments were served by the Wood children, and a good-sized crowd enjoyed the evening with the estimable couple.

L. O. Wildermuth, of Plano, Illinois, stopped over between trains to spend the day with relatives, Ivy Fisher and Freda McCormick and families. He was on his way home from his mission field in Montana.

Minot (North Dakota) Branch

Twelve children from the sparsely settled country surrounding Bantry, North Dakota, were blessed July 20 by Elders Swenson, Darling, and Warren McElwain. This is the largest number to be blessed in this community at any one time in the memory of the officers.

Bantry and vicinity at one time had a flourishing branch which was the result of the work of Brother James Wagener who has passed to his reward. The parents of the children recently blessed were members under Brother Wagener's ministry, and though they have been disorganized and scattered and neglected, they have not forgotten God and his work.

Brother Swenson continues there this week, and next Sunday (July 27) will do some baptizing. Some have already given their names. Many of the Saints scattered over the prairies will be there.

Brother McElwain will preach July 27 at Washburn, North Dakota. On July 13 he was in Norwich, at the home of Brother James O'Brien, where services were held. A large crowd was present, and a fine dinner was served. The group gatherings in Minot Branch, scattered over a territory of two hundred miles square, have the usual three characteristics—large crowds, fine spirit, and a good dinner.

Lost Motion and Frozen Assets

Scientists are constantly at work on ways and means of overcoming lost motion by improved skill and machinery. Our ministers should carefully study and prepare sermon topics, then preach the right ones. If two hundred people are required to listen to a wrongly selected sermon, it means lost motion, or time, of one hour each, equal to two hundred hours of precious time, besides a wealth of thought that should have been theirs which is always produced by a sermon suited to the occasion. Untimely sermons and unprofitable conversations are lost motion, hence should be avoided, the same as talking against the church. The Lord said, "Be of good cheer." The author of a sermon or conversation tempered with strong doubts and fears as to the future prosperity of this church, has chosen frozen assets. He is losing his first gospel love and light. A man who loves and supports his wife will not speak evil of her; neither will a conscientious person purposely talk against the church he helps to maintain or from which he receives favors. Does this church have members akin to frozen assets?

The Reorganization is alive and bigger than any one person in it. No man has outgrown or ever will outgrow the church in usefulness to his fellows.

The Use and Abuse of Narcotics

Popular Science Monthly, June, 1930, quotes Doctor W. I. Serovich, member of Congress and a physician, as saying, "In the United States, one out of every sixty persons is a drug addict"; or in other words, there are in America more than two million victims of that soul- and body-destroying habit of using narcotics. "In the public mind, narcotics are generally associated with crime and criminals. But though lawbreakers, especially holdup men and murderers, often are dope fiends, they are by no means the only users of the drugs. There are addicts among the rich, the poor, and those of the middle class; among the socially respectable and members of the underworld; among the educated and the ignorant." "The total output of the world's fifty-four factories is more than a thousand tons a year." "The drugs continue to claim new victims, undermining their health, dulling their minds, destroying their moral fiber." "All narcotics demand larger and larger doses as times goes on." "They dull the mind and weaken the body of the user so he is unable to earn an honest living and at the same time make him desperate for more money. A large share of robberies, holdups, and murders committed in America can be traced directly to drugs." Liquor claims a very large percentage. Addicts to one or both become excessive cigaret smokers. "Curing an addict is a difficult procedure and seldom entirely successful."

Conference Minutes

NORTHEASTERN ILLINOIS.—Conference of Northeastern Illinois District was held at Mission, Illinois, June 27, 28, and 29, in charge of the district presidency and Bishop M. H. Siegfried. It was voted to approve and adopt the new plan of religious education in the district. Sister Hattie K. Bell was elected director of religious education in the district. Fred Shepherd was ordained an elder, and the ordination of Rolney Wildermuth to the office of priest was approved. Owing to conditions in regard to the camp grounds, it was decided that no reunion should be held this summer. Motion carried that the district presidency be instructed to canvass the requirements of the organization of a regional reunion and to render a report to this body at the earliest possible date. There were four baptisms. A very interesting program was given Friday night, Roy Healy in charge. Mission Branch is known for its hospitality, and this conference was no exception to the rule. Everyone was made welcome and happy by the association. A hearty crime that you children are poisoning your young bodies by smoking cigarets. Why—why do you do it? I am speaking to you girls as a woman, a mother."

The Nation Living More in Flats—Divorce Evils

Apartments are the favorite form of domicile in 257 American cities, in which over fifty per cent of the families live in apartments. In New York City eighty-three per cent, in Chicago seventy-nine per cent live in apartments.

After signing sixty-four divorce decrees in one day, Justice H. E. Lewis, of Brooklyn, New York, blamed childless marriages for so many broken homes. He said, "There is only one child to every two homes in Brooklyn, and the duration of each marriage averages less than three years." "By shirking their responsibilities of motherhood, the wives are to blame when they land in the courts. It takes children to hold a home together, but Brooklyn homes are hardly more than mailing addresses. No children to attract husbands to their homes and keep wives from gossiping with neighbors and attending bridge parties."

Reverend Doctor E. J. Kulp in a recent lecture assures us that the increase of crime in recent years in the United States has made society sick. "Criminal statistics show that there are 350,000 persons in America engaged in crime. In the last five years Congress and various State legislatures have passed 67,000 new laws, a great many against crime. Crime is increasing in spite of these new laws."

Prohibition Commissioner Doran said that in March 1,947 stills had been seized by prohibition agents, and a total of 5,380 arrests made.

vote of thanks was given local Saints for their hospitality. Time and place of next district conference were left to the district presidency.

Our Departed Ones

GREEN.—Frank Lester Green was born in Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania, April 6, 1881. Died in Brookville, Pennsylvania, of heart failure July 20, 1930. He was married to Twila Viola Clinton, of DuBois, Pennsylvania, October 21, 1901. To them were born seven children: James Henry, Detroit, Michigan; Mrs. Merle Chase, Northfield, Ohio; Mrs. J. C. Robinson, Bradford, Pennsylvania; Mrs. J. W. Bowser, Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania; Frank, Hazel, and Effie. Besides his wife and children, there survive five grandchildren, his parents of Spokane, Washington, one brother, and four sisters. Brother Green had been in the service of the Buffalo, Rochester, and Pittsburgh Railway since January 27, 1903, and at the time of his death was an engineer. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in February, 1916, and was ordained a priest in 1917. The funeral services were conducted by T. M. Carr, and interment was in the Carey Cemetery near Punxsutawney, Pennsylvania.

WOOD.—James Thomas Wood, son of James and Mary Wood, was born August 31, 1855, at Saint Louis, Missouri. The following year he with his parents moved to Salt Lake City, Utah. When he was thirteen years of age, they returned to Stewartsville, Missouri, where he resided until the day of his death June 16, 1930. He married Miss Hester Lois Kinneman October 28, 1877, and to them were born eight children. His wife preceded him in death August 31, 1923. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints May 16, 1868, near Salt Lake City. Was ordained a deacon at the DeKalb church near Stewartsville, Missouri, in the early days of his Christian life and has always lived nobly and uprightly. Two sons and six daughters survive him: Charles E., of Kingston, Missouri; Arthur J., Mrs. Mabel L. Hamann, Mrs. Mary E. Hinderks, Mrs. Cora H. Lewis, Mrs. Clara E. Hinderks, Mrs. Ruby E. Ivie; and Miss Stella Wood, all of Stewartsville, Missouri. Also surviving are two sisters, Mrs. Emma Worden, Stewartsville, and Mrs. Fannie Gillmore, of Seattle, Washington; seventeen grandchildren, and a host of other relatives and friends. His faith in the gospel through Jesus Christ was firm. Funeral services were held in the Saints' church in charge of Bishop Milo Burnett, of Saint Joseph. The sermon was by Elder Samuel Twombly, of Fanning, Kansas.

VINSON.—Arlois Irene Magee, daughter of George O. and Etta Magee, was born in Kansas, April 19, 1888. Died at the Aurora, Illinois, Hospital, July 17, 1930. She became the wife of Albert LeRoy Vinson August 8, 1906, at Hamilton, Missouri. To them was born one son, Brighton Magee Vinson. She united with the church June 2, 1908, at Atchison, Kansas, and remained a faithful member. About twelve years ago the Vinson family moved from Aurora, Illinois, to Plano, where they made their home until about seven months ago. They were at Berwyn at the time of her death. She was an honest, Christian woman, a kind sympathetic friend, and many will miss her. Her death followed a serious operation. Left to mourn are her husband and son; parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Magee; a brother, William, of New Berlin, Illinois; and other relatives. The funeral was held from the Saints' church in Plano, Illinois, Elder J. M. Blakely preaching the sermon and being assisted in the service by Elder Lester Wildermuth. Interment was in Plano Cemetery.

BELL.—William Burton Bell was born August 8, 1896, at Terilton, Pawnee County, Oklahoma. Died July 24, 1930, at 7.30 a. m. in the Saint Johns Hospital, Tulsa, Oklahoma, from cancer of the stomach. He was at the hospital only a few days; the cancer did its work quickly. He was attending summer school at Edmond, Oklahoma. He was finishing for a teachers' life certificate, which came the day of the funeral. He was an outstanding person of the Terilton community in educational activities, having taught school in the community for several years. Mr. Bell united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints July 8, 1906. He was thought well of by all who knew him. February 22, 1919, he married Miss Nellie Wheatley. They made their home in Terilton, as he was the post master of the city. He leaves to mourn his wife, three children: Theodosia Pauline, William Junior, and Alta Nadine; three sisters: Mrs. Annie Wilkerson, Cushing, Oklahoma, Mrs. Emma Long, Terilton, Oklahoma, and Mrs. Ethel Ammermon, Terilton, Oklahoma; two brothers, Harrison Bell, Sand Spring, Oklahoma, George Bell, Bristow, Oklahoma, several other relatives, and a host of friends. The funeral sermon was by O. A. McDowell, of Tulsa, Oklahoma. The service was held in the school auditorium. This was one of the largest funerals held in the town. Interment was in Terilton Cemetery.

A Call to Service

A Message to the Young People of the Church from President Frederick M. Smith

(Extracts from an address)

The young have a tremendous responsibility of preparation for carrying on of the burdens or taking of them up where we lay them down, and I have faith and confidence in the average youth of the church to believe that when they become cognizant of that they will be aroused by the exigencies demanding preparation for those burdens when the time comes to assume them. But in order for us to make them realize that, there must be begun and carried on a process of education, in its broadest sense. Yes, in the nearly twenty years of my church work I have continuously plead for preparation by education for greater usefulness. I have plead that the members use every energy possible to educate themselves against the coming of a day when there would be thrown upon their shoulders a burden that they can not carry unless that education or preparation has been had. And if there ever has been a man in this church who has had his position vindicated, I have had mine within the last few months. What has been the answer to that appeal, made by your leader, as he believes under the impulses of inspiration, calling upon you for earnest preparation against the coming of that day when the burdens that shall be thrown upon you will be greater than you can carry in your own strength only as you shall have qualified under the inspiration of Almighty God, and the development through your own energies of abilities that God endowed you with.

We have for many years been calling your attention to the repeated instructions given of the Lord, that every individual, especially the young, should make preparation for the coming of greater responsibility. One of two things is going to happen to us as far as the church is concerned. You individuals that sooner or later must have to carry responsibilities that the men of the church must sooner or later lay down, either you are going to make preparation for that tremendous activity that will drive you to the very limit of your possibilities, or you will fail, to a large extent, in accomplishing this work. It seems to me that the time has been reached today, when every young person ought to feel the importance of that and realize that it is absolutely necessary, by reason of the impress of the principle of inspiration upon us and the voice of God through the leaders of the church today, and by reason of the very array of facts in everyday affairs, that there is a need for haste and a greater speeding up than has ever been indulged in the past.

There never was a time in the history of our church when a demand for our consecrated service was greater or keener than now. Every individual, and that applies particularly to the young, should be sought out by the officers of the church, and auxiliaries of the church, and that individual fired with this ambition to give service to the cause in which his name is written or enrolled, and to give that service to the very maximum of his ability. . . .

The demands of the hour are, Consecrate; and in your consecration bring preparation for still greater service, for it will be demanded of you eventually as sure as God is, and is directing activities in this church.

Nurses' Training and the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital

In another column will be found a presentation of Graceland College setting out the merits and advantages of the curricula. To one in particular I call attention, viz, the Pre-nursing Course.

Since the beginning of the Independence Sanitarium, now called The Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, the institution has trained nurses, and the school has always maintained its credits. Looking ahead to the probable demands to be made upon training schools for nurses, and considering the determination to keep the school in the front so far as excellence of training is concerned, the Board of Trustees recently decided upon a move which we hope will strongly appeal to all who are expecting to take up the nursing profession, viz, having Graceland College give one year in a pre-nursing course, which will be so coordinated and correlated with the instruction given at the Sanitarium and Hospital that on completion of the course there the nurse graduates will receive from the college the degree of Associate in Science. President Briggs, of the college, and Superintendent Gertrude Copeland, of the Sanitarium and Hospital, have worked out the details of this joint curriculum to the satisfaction of both institutions, and it is to be hoped that there will be a goodly number of young women who will register at Graceland College this fall for the course. It is a good time to do so, for it is likely that the new hospital building on which work has already begun will be ready for occupancy next summer; it may be a bit sooner. And it would be well for the first class in the new building to be comprised largely of those who will have had the advantages of the course to be offered by Graceland in this connection.

The Editors of the Herald are all pleased to see the prospects for an enlarged institution where the health activities of the community and the church will center, and the Editor in Chief is particularly pleased with the move towards a higher standard of preparation for nursing, as he has been looking forward to a time when a school of medicine, healing, and prophylaxis can and will be established and maintained at this health center; and to expand the course for nursing and put it on a better scholastic basis is a step towards the goal above mentioned.

I sincerely and earnestly hope that many of our young people will enter this pre-nursing course at Graceland and thus lay the foundation for a fine preparation in a worthy profession, that of caring for the sick and helping the well to keep healthy.

Doyle and Spiritualism

The death of Conan Doyle has filled English papers with various attempts to evaluate his life and work. He seems to be remembered most of all as a novelist, as creator of Sherlock Holmes. He was perhaps almost equally renowned for his leadership in the Spiritualist movement.

Of all the comments which I have read regarding the life and work of this great man, none has touched me more than the following tribute, paid to him by one of his sons:

He was a great man and a splendid father. He was loved—and was happy because he knew it—by all of us. . . .

My father and mother were lovers after forty years, as they were on the day they married. Their devotion to each other at all times was one of the most wonderful things I have ever known. She nursed him right through his illness to the end—just as she, like all of us, had been about the world with him.

His last words were to her, and they show just how much he thought of her. He simply smiled up at her and said, "You are wonderful."

Readers who still believe, in spite of much modern literature, that successful marriage and home life may safely be based on love, will find encouragement here.

The passing of Mr. Doyle has caused a revival of interest in Spiritualism. Many columns of the British press have been devoted to a discussion of these beliefs. One of the sanest of these discussions that has come to my attention is the following from the Daily Express:

It is inevitable that recent events should have roused a new public interest in Spiritualism. Yet, in spite of the obvious sincerity of so many of its followers, the results of Spiritualist inquiry only seem to emphasize the truth that we live by faith.

Mankind instinctively believes in an existence after death. Through the centuries men and women have lived and died in that belief, saying, "I do not ask to see the distant scene."

Spiritualists claim to have penetrated to that distant scene, but what has their research given us? "Tell my sister I am happy." "George is here, and is happy, but tired." These are phrases which may carry comfort, but surely not conviction.

And when the great ones of this world who have died speak through a medium, we find men and women who were lords of language and gods of thought using the same trite phrases as though self-expression had reached a robot level for all.

Is it not possible that the peasant kneeling before a wayside cross feels a truth that is far beyond the reach of science? Is there not more comfort to the bereaved and sorrowing in the sacred words, "In my Father's house are many mansions," than in the tambourine proofs of a seance?

Man's mind is finite and his soul infinite—and the language of the soul is faith.

K M B C in New Home

Radio station K M B C is now broadcasting from its new quarters on the eleventh floor of the new five-million-dollar Pickwick Hotel and Bus Terminal Building in Kansas City. Here the Midland Broadcasting Company, owners of K M B C, have some twenty rooms, including three broadcasting studios, executive and staff offices, and lounges for artists and guests. K M B C is now one of the most modern and completely equipped broadcasting stations in the Middle West.

With three studios instead of one, the station is now equipped to switch immediately from one program to another without the difficulty formerly encountered in hurrying one group of artists out of the studio and another in. Also, rehearsals can be carried on in two of the sound-proof studios while broadcasting is going on in the other. The largest studio is equipped with a twin-console pipe organ; this will make possible organ programs at any time, when formerly such music had to be secured by remote control from theaters in the city at the convenience of those places rather than at the desire or need of the station.

K M B C is now broadcasting from eight to nine hours daily from the Columbia chain programs, and gives the public the service of special national and international features which this network offers. Local programs fill up the remainder of a schedule which begins at 6 a. m. and continues until after midnight, daily.

The station's intensive area of coverage lies within a radius of one hundred and fifty miles from Kansas City, and includes 4,086,414 people who own 349,305 receiving sets. In the area within a radius of three hundred miles from Kansas City, which can be reached effectively, by the station's programs, are 8,873,705 people who own 989,850 receiving sets. Beyond this immediate area, of course, the station's programs have been at times picked up in most of the States of the Union and in Canada; reports from as many as forty States have been received on one special broadcast.

At present K M B C has a staff of twenty-eight persons, which, of course, does not include the many artists who daily furnish programs over the station. It does include full-time announcers, program directors, production staff, publicity and entertainment bureaus, and secretarial force. Executive direction is given by F. B. Blair, president, and A. B. Church, vice president and manager, of the Midland Broadcast Central.

Unemployment and the "Dole"

The unemployment situation is giving the British Government grave concern. At present more than two million are unemployed. To meet such circumstances, there has been provided what is technically known as the Unemployment Insurance Fund, but popularly known as the "Dole."

The sight of hundreds of men and women lined up outside the government offices once a week to receive this dole arouses not only pity, but some rather serious questions. It seems that in many cases the families are content to exist upon this meager dole, without endeavoring to secure employment, not seeming to appreciate either that others must pay for their indolence, or the damaging effect of such a program of life upon their own characters.

Getting something for nothing will never be the method of building a successful life, individual, social, or national.

When forty per cent of these laborers are taking the dole, one wonders what the outcome will be, especially in the light of the following statement made by the editor of the Daily Mirror: "Apparently many of the people who have the 'dole' are past the thought of work."

My Friend's Individualism

Being Somewhat of a Parable

(With apologies for style to that noble writer of modern parables, Safed the Sage.)

There once dwelt in a certain city a friend of mine who was a merchant. And he invited me to come and spend a week with him. Being a preacher and in need of relaxation, I accepted, and packed up and betook myself to my friend's house to partake of his hospitality.

Being also a rude preacher, it soon came to pass that I broached the subject of religion and inquired of my friend why he had not united with the church, for he was not a churchgoing man. And he replied, "I am an individualist." He had no need of the church; he could be a good man without joining the church. There was a multitude of things about the church that were not to his liking, and he preferred his individual religion. Being also a not overly-rude preacher, I changed the subject.

But that evening my friend said unto me, Tonight is the regular meeting of the Business Men's Association, and I must go, for I am the secretary.

And the next day he said unto me, "This is my afternoon off, and we shall play golf at my golf club, which is one of the best golf clubs in the city and whose members are verily among the top-notchers.

And the next evening he said unto me, Tonight we shall go to a meeting of the Aggressive Party of our ward, for next week there shall be an election in the city, and we must elect a new mayor.

And on the evening following he said unto me, Tonight is the regular meeting of the Improvement Club of our community, and I must go, for I am chairman of the committee on street paving.

So the week of my sojourn passed, and as I took my leave I was moved to say unto my friend, the merchant, Verily, I like your brand of individualism. And I would that the individualism of your religion were like unto that of your business, and your golf, and your politics, and your community improvement.

My friend, the merchant, is still my friend, in spite of my rudeness; and it pleases me to know that he is numbered among those known tritely among us preachers as the "pillars" of the church.

The words which naturally cluster around the Spirit are such as fire, light, truth, died, teach, advocate. When all the spectacular and temporary features of Pentecost are weighed, illumination seems to be the distinctive and lasting work of the Holy Spirit.—John L. Cole.

Book Review

Problems of a Little Child, by A Mother. Order from the Herald Publishing House. Price $1.25.

Reviewed by Helen Hawley Booker

This mother clearly understands the fears, puzzles, and disturbing ideas that come to the child in its early life. She has given concrete examples and helpful hints to young misunderstanding mothers and teachers, and all who deal with the young child.

The train of thoughts has been divided into six chapters, dealing with fear of darkness and homesickness, strangers, and death; also the puzzles of Santa Claus, understanding God, and the coming of life.

The chapter "Fears about death," is a helpful one. It prepares the child for his first experience of death. The distinction of the spirit and the body; the comparison of our bodies as houses in which we live that are always wearing out and needing to be repaired. When one dies it is the house being put away carefully, because it has worn beyond repair. George Macdonald has said, "Don't teach your child that he is a body and has a soul, but that he is a soul and has a body."

There is an abundance of new thoughts that deal with vital, everyday problems, giving helpful experiences. We sincerely recommend the book to parents and teachers of small children.

A CROSS SECTION OF GRACELAND LIFE

By Roy A. Cheville

The author is an alumnus of Graceland, and for several years has been a member of the faculty, and now is head of the Department of Religious Education. The article is really a "cross section," touching as it does upon most of the important interests and activities of a student at Graceland.

The Work of the College—An Explanation

I. The Day's Routine

A few minutes before eight o'clock in the morning a stream of students comes up the college hill from down town, and another comes from the dormitories on the campus. Most of them go toward Briggs Hall, the classroom building of Graceland, and this year the home of the library. Some enter the Ad Building. Located on the upper floor is the school of music. In the basement are chemistry laboratories. Others hurry to Zimmermann Hall—the gymnasium. At Graceland physical education is recognized as a standard field of instruction—not a "tacked-on" necessity.

Twenty instructors, representing a wide range of training, meet the student body in the course of the day. Two trained librarians respond to their needs and interests. Deans and supervisors are available for conferences. A registrar records their accomplishments and compares the groups in attainments. Laboratories are at their disposal for experimental purposes.

Five and a half days each week for nine months this schedule goes on. Sophomores and Juniors have most of their classes scheduled in the mornings and freshmen in the afternoons. This arrangement allows industrial students to work in half-day study schedules and be employed the other half day.

Each class meets for fifty minutes. Electric bells ring at the close of the period. Students file into halls, and for a few minutes there is a hum of conversation, a hurrying to and fro, and maybe a hurried glance at some assignment. Another bell rings and a new period begins. It sounds like a busy life, and it is. But it is the real business of an educational institution—the business of learning.

II. The Liberal Arts College

The basic department is the College of Liberal Arts. This school is what the term liberal suggests—a department for obtaining a broad preparation for life. Its first two years lays the basis for entrances to professional colleges. Generally speaking, this broad foundation is recommended for first years in college.

Graceland endeavors to introduce her students in Liberal Arts to the principal phases of learning by offering "survey courses." Freshmen often want to take subjects of their own limited interests, which would result in a narrow, one-sided education. English, speech, some natural science, a social science, and a foreign language, unless there has been sufficient previous training in this field, are scheduled for the first year. In the second year some survey course in Bible is selected. Physical education and literary work enlarge the breadth of training.

Last spring over half of the fifty-six graduates of Graceland were from the college of Liberal Arts.

III. Courses of Study

In an academic way, Graceland follows the policy of offering courses within her facilities and of presenting them well. No courses are scheduled for which there are not adequate laboratory and library facilities and efficient faculty training. This is one of the tests of a first-class small college. As in most schools, all courses are not offered in a given year, but are arranged over a period of years, so the regular student can get a well-balanced course.

The courses of study may be classified in three groups—the Language group, the Social Science group, and the Science group. In its three years of offerings, a good range of courses is included. In science, there are Biology, Chemistry, Geology, Home Economics, Mathematics, Physics, and Botany. The natural science group is particularly strong for a college of Graceland's size, and the faculty is exceptionally well prepared.

The Social Science group includes Economics, Education, History, Political Science, Psychology, Religion, and Sociology. Some of these departments are shaping up into organizations that promise to become distinct units in the future. With the Social Science group may be listed the courses in Accounting and Business.

In the Language group are English, French, German, and Speech.

IV. Specialized and Professional Courses

Practically every standard university requires two years of pre-professional study in a Liberal Arts college. Graceland offers this elementary work in pre-law, pre-dental, and pre-medical work—beginning courses with electives chosen from the field of interest. This fall another preparatory course is being offered. One year of pre-nursing may be taken at Graceland, and upon completing this first year's course the student may enter the Independence Sanitarium for additional theory and for practical experience.

Other courses are really specialized in themselves. The Teachers' Course of two years leads to the third grade state certificate in the State of Iowa. This may be transferred to most of the States of the Union. Most students enroll in the Liberal Arts course and then take the required subjects in Education in order to meet the requirements for teacher's certificate. The two-year Engineering course has proved sound and thorough and has attracted many students. Home Economics is maintained as a department and offers a two-year course. Last year Business Administration was inaugurated and found a good response. The Public School Music course continues three years in order to meet state requirements. It is one of the most thorough offerings of the college. Another department is shaping up into specialized and professional nature—the department of Religion. Its curriculum is steadily expanding.

The Religious Side of College Life

At Graceland anything that passes by the term religious must have vital relation to student life or it will not endure. Prayer meeting themes, study groups, sermons, and other activities usually found in a church's program are linked about interest of college life. Observers have noted the vitality and the spirit of hope and enthusiasm in the college prayer meetings. Religion on the campus centers about current problems and visions, and tasks.

Freedom and Inquiry

Any young person who goes to college finds himself in a new world. His world is expanded in literature, peoples, physical surroundings, animal life, art, and philosophy. A flood of new thoughts and things comes to him. He finds himself in the midst of other youths who are situated likewise. Together they discuss the meanings and purposes of life. In this period it is highly essential that the youth shall live in a college environment that will stimulate wholesome religious thinking and living.

Many times I have met friends who have been perplexed at the turn of mind of the youth of their acquaintance. These have grown analytical and have wondered about certain old accepted ideas. In many instances the college did not originate all this; it rather brought to the surface that which was already at work. Ofttimes the youth has been trying to "grow up" in his religious outlook. In such situations, understanding instructors and stimulating friends are required for two or three years. Herein lies the function of Graceland's faculty.

The College Prayer Meeting

Somehow this meeting is the hub of Graceland life. It is the most distinguishing feature of the school. No one is a real Graceland who has never been touched by this phase of the school's life. It is the meeting of the college family in which they may talk over their life together. As elsewhere, there are the regular attendants, the spasmodic ones, and the occasional ones.

At seven-thirty on Wednesday evening there is scheduled no other college activity. It is expected that students attend the prayer service or remain in their rooms. College prayer meetings have central themes. Students respond better and carry away a more unified effect. An opening would hardly secure a response if it consisted of such a phrase as this—"The meeting is now yours to pray or testify as you see fit."

A few meetings have been outstanding in recent years. The one at the opening of the school year breathes a joy of renewed fellowship and hopes for coming months. Home-coming prayer meeting on the Sunday morning of the annual fall reunion game brings in the expression of alumni and parents. On the Wednesday night before Christmas vacation comes the Vesper service of dignity and exalted Christmas expression. Then in the springtime are those never-to-be-forgotten gatherings around a camp fire in South Woods and the closing one on the campus. This year this last one was held in the beautiful reception room of Walker Hall.

The Brick Church

The Brick Church seeks to minister to both the local congregation and the college group. It recognizes that for nine months Lamoni should be the church home of Latter Day Saint youth from all parts of the church. The pastors want them to blend into the congregation.

The church school has the college group organized as a separate department. It continues for nine months. Superintending it at present is a member of the faculty, M. E. Mortimore, the professor of geology. This year the curriculum of study will include many short courses in several fields. Students will enroll in these this fall on their first Sunday in Lamoni.

The Oratorio Society is a drawing feature to a large number. Last year the rehearsals for The Course of Time for General Conference were more than mere musical practices. They developed loyal ties and expanded visions of Latter Day Saintism. They introduced students to the general program of the church.

Problems of College Religion

To some people youths' religion is a distressing affair. Certainly it is full of problems. But problematical does not mean distressing and pessimistic. From another angle, the problematical aspect is challenging, for it is so full of potentialities. Graceland needs to meet these conditions more adequately. That she is trying to do. She prefers to take those whose eyes are directed in the desired direction and assist them to grow in that way. She wants to keep the prayer meeting the hub of religious life, but have it touch more lives and do it more effectively. She would have her faculty be comrades and advisors to students in the art of Christian living. She would offer academic courses providing for systematic discussion of the nature of religion and later on something in the genius and program of Latter Day Saintism. She would blend the student into the local congregation so they would feel the fellowship and responsibility of a church home. The religious leaders of Graceland will do this with the intelligent and sympathetic support of her patrons.

The Social Atmosphere

Graceland is a democratic place. Democracy is one of the cherished traditions of the school. A student is accepted for what he is and what he can do. The fellow who is short of money and is working his way through school stands with and often ahead of the well-to-do student in the social life of the campus. It is the fellow who can hold up over a long period of time who wins social recognition. Genial disposition, democratic nature, contribution to college activities, wholesome influence, constructive conversation, vivacity and initiative, ability to "get into things"—these are the qualities that give social standing in Graceland life.

Dormitory Life

I really believe that a student who has never lived in a dormitory has missed something. Professor T. V. Smith, in one of his books on democracy, says that his insight into the spirit of democracy began while living in a dormitory at the University of Texas. Though the dormitory does not provide a normal type of living that one would care to follow the rest of his life, it teaches one a certain "give-and-take" and a communal aspect that is a good formative influence for character. The recognition of established routine for the welfare of all adds something valuable to social experience. The intimacy of contacts gives an expanding circle of friendships such as can not be found under other conditions.

Year by year the dormitory facilities are improving. Walker Hall, the new girls' dormitory, is beautiful in appearance and modern in plan. Graceland holds a high standard in accommodations for girls. And the men who return this year will find extensive improvements in Herald Hall.

I am numbered among the "promoted" from the ranks of dormitory life. Six years were spent in Herald Hall. Like others, there were many times when I became restless over it and wished for more privacy and better accommodations. But in retrospect those six years were invaluable. The personal contacts, the insight into human nature, and the free expression of boyish spirit could never have been obtained elsewhere. And if the making of witty quips on "dorm eats" is indulged in throughout colleges, I think most Americans need a little subjection of appetite to group interest and purse capacity.

Priority of the Large Group

"Graceland comes first." The general school activities take the precedence over small group affairs. Students form small groups according to community of interests. Intimate friendships are not formed en masse. Occasionally small cliques arise that place their little banner at the foreground. Quietly social forces are at work that bring the main college spirit and interest into the fore. Sometimes a few students get into a self-centered group, but usually these never catch the spirit of the school nor profit most from its advantages.

Social Clubs

Students fall into social groups of their own accord. The college administration recognizes that young people like to meet in social affairs in groupings that have already developed a common bond. So social clubs have come to be. Fifteen years ago there was only one social club on the campus. Today there are eleven.

Graceland has no fraternities. Her judgment thus far has been against them. She wants nothing that would jeopardize the unity of her family circle and fidelity to her highest traditions of democracy. Occasionally problems arise with the social clubs—but any growing social institution has problems.

Many students belong to one social club. There is no social distinction for or against membership in a club. It happens that several years ago I was invited to join one of Graceland's clubs. Whenever the time comes that I feel that this detracts from the general social life and mars my best growth, there is only one course open to me—that is to leave the club. The college seeks to breathe a spirit of wholesomeness into these units of social good times.

Pastimes and Recreations

Graceland students display ingenuity and initiative in their amusements. When students lack in finance and where the college town does not provide commercial recreation, students provide their own. It is enjoyable to see this freedom from "dished-out" and "spoon-fed" recreation. Boys stage dinners and parties that rival the productions of specialists.

The college program of athletics, music, and for-ensics and the activities of the Brick Church furnish a central core of social life. The two major social functions of the college year are the football banquet in the late fall and the commencement banquet in the spring.

Friday night is "social night." In college circles it is often mentioned as "date night." On that evening, hours are extended to eleven for the campus and eleven-thirty for down town students, except in case of social functions approved by the dean of women, for which an additional hour is granted. It is a delightful change to see students in their "bibs and tuckers" after the plainness of classroom dress. On the first of these Friday nights occurs the reception to the freshmen given by Lamoni young people and on the second Friday night comes the annual faculty reception. A by-stander would see a multiplicity of introductions and hear a variety of bits of conversation.

For nine months one finds students mingling in all phases of life. There can be no dual characters. Everything is in the open. This a clue to Graceland's unity of atmosphere.

One may lose health and wealth; beauty fades, and friends pass away. It is the proper task of youth to furnish that storehouse, the mind, so that neither time nor circumstance can rob age of the happiness that comes from noble thoughts and fine memories.

Graceland Credits

If one receives paper money in the course of business these days, he very rarely takes the trouble to examine it to see by what authority it is issued. It is possible to have any one of seven kinds of paper money. Whether the note is a United States Note (Greenback), National Bank Note, Gold Certificate, or any other of the seven varieties is not important to the holder so far as the value of the paper money is concerned. That has not always been true. There was a time when Greenbacks fluctuated greatly in value, but for the past sixty years, due to the high credit of the United States Government, paper money of all varieties has been worth its full face value wherever received.

Due to Graceland's high standing, likewise, her credits are full legal tender in the educational world wherever presented. This was not always true, but for the past ten years, because of Graceland's being listed among the fully accredited colleges by the North Central Association, her credits are fully accepted everywhere, not only in North Central territory under the immediate jurisdiction of that accrediting association, but in the territory of the three other associations in the United States, the Middle States Association, the Southern Association, and the North West Association.

In the June issue each year of the North Central Association Quarterly, the Standards for Accredited Institutions as adopted at the annual meeting in March are printed, together with the complete list of accredited colleges as accepted by the North Central Association and by the other three associations. The June, 1930, issue of the North Central Association Quarterly lists Graceland College on page 84 among the accredited institutions. All other fully accredited colleges and universities of the United States are listed in the same publication.

In connection with this matter of accrediting, it must be fully understood that all subjects taken are not fully accredited towards all courses. One may, for example, take two years of Home Economics, or two years of an Agriculture course, and at the end of that time decide to change to some other course. All subjects taken would not be fully accredited for the Liberal Arts course for example, or for Law, or Medicine. If one changes his department in the middle of his course, he must expect to lose some credit, not only by transfer from Graceland, but from any other college as well. The same rule applies to all alike.

The only vanity is the notion that we are sufficient for all necessity, without further preparation.

The Faculty

By Roy H. Mortimore

A number of careful investigations have shown that in small colleges the instructors of elementary courses are better prepared than are those who teach corresponding courses in larger institutions, the principal reasons being that in larger schools stress is placed upon advanced courses and that advanced students are often placed in charge of elementary courses.

Aside from sharing this advantage with small colleges, the Graceland faculty possesses other traits which especially adapt it to the needs of the college. Paramount among these is its vital interest in the well-being of the students. This interest has been developed in a number of ways; some of our faculty members are alumni of the college, some are interested in other phases of church work, others have been acquainted with some of the students or their parents.

Many of the readers of the Herald are not personally acquainted with all of the faculty members or their work. May we take this opportunity to increase our acquaintances?

President Briggs needs no introduction. His academic training, his service record in the government schools in the Philippines and in Washington, District of Columbia, and his interest in school work in general have earned for him the comment of a prominent educator who placed him among the outstanding college presidents in the State of Iowa. His long period of successful work here has brought him to the attention of everyone interested in the college.

Coach Gilbert, in addition to mastering the almost insurmountable difficulties of maintaining an enviable standing in athletics among larger four-year institutions, has proved his worth in the teaching of Psychology and as Dean of Personnel.

The study of English is made vital and fascinating by the efforts of Miss Condit, who brings to us the spirit of the West, and by Miss Morgan, a native of Iowa, who is also a friend of the girls of Walker Hall.

Mr. Bergman's thoroughness of detail and alertness to the development of new methods of teaching have rendered his services indispensable in the department of Modern Languages. He is also Registrar.

Mr. Platz brings to us the unusual combination of a broad training in the various fields of science, a highly specialized training in Biology, a varied teaching experience, and an unlimited capacity for work.

Miss Sodersten's broad experience in the field of social service and her adequate academic training vitalize her course work in Social Science and Psychology.

The outstanding work of Miss Thompson in Speech and Dramatics could receive no commendation greater than a recounting of the successes of her public production of last year.

Mr. Mortimore's years of experience in applied Geology, his vital interest in the subject matter and in young people make his classes attractive.

Mr. Cheville is one of the most widely known of the faculty members because of his work in the general church program. His thorough acquaintance with young people and their problems have made his experiences with many of them a vital factor in their development.

The work of Miss Carlile in the department of Music is well known. Under her inspiration and skillful guidance many capable leaders in that field have been produced.

Mr. Anthony, who can be depended upon to produce music for all occasions, has made many friends in his work as leader of the band and orchestras of high school and college.

Mr. May, who came to us last year to establish a department of Business Administration, has effectively demonstrated the value of such a course at Graceland.

Miss Lysinger, one of our recent graduates, has returned to us as instructor in the department of Music.

Aside from thoroughly and accurately caring for the library, Miss Elefson has functioned in a complete gamut of duties from ringing the class bells to acting as first assistant to the president. She will be happy next year in her new library and with an increased staff of assistants.

Mrs. Gilbert, as director of Physical Education for women, has each year demonstrated her ability in that field by the success of the women's Gym Show.

Mr. Carmichael's untiring efforts and careful attention to details have contributed much to the beauty and value of our physical plant.

The writer of this article, Roy H. Mortimore, is instructor in Physics and Mathematics and is interested in the Engineering Course.

Mr. Evans, of Pittsburg, Kansas, will come to us next year as head of the department of Education.

The vacancy in the Home Economics department, made by the resignation of Miss Williams, will be filled before the opening of the school year.

The faculty is adequately trained scholastically. Among our members three have earned the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, nine the Master's Degree, and others have specific training in their field comparable with the Master's Degree.

Organization of Extra-curricular Activities at Graceland

By Gustav A. Platz

Every college and university has on its campus certain organizations that function in various extra-curricular activities. Such organizations are well represented at Graceland and offer the students an opportunity for self-expression along several lines of worth-while human endeavors.

The Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society

The oldest of these organizations and probably the one most widely known is the Lamoni-Graceland Oratorio Society. It is an outgrowth of the Graceland College Glee Club and the Lamoni Brick Church Choir which, under the leadership of Miss Mable Carlile, were combined several years ago into the one organization. At present its membership numbers above one hundred fifty. The society renders the choir music at the Brick Church and participates in all the special activities of both the college and the town. Each year it presents the Elijah or the Messiah, and during the past year it formed one of the nuclei in preparation for the rendition of The Course of Time at the Centennial Conference.

It is a rare opportunity, indeed, for our boys and girls, who have talent in music, to have the chance to learn to appreciate and to participate in the singing of some of the best choral music that has been composed.

The Lamoni-Graceland Orchestral Society

Another opportunity for our young people who are talented in music is offered by the Lamoni-Graceland Orchestral Society. This organization has a membership of about thirty to forty each year, composed of local citizens and Graceland College students. Under the able leadership of Mr. J. H. Anthony, it renders valuable service to the community. In orchestral capacity it plays at the Sunday sessions of the church school and at many of the college functions of the year. The band is always on hand in full support of our athletic games and similar occasions.

The director of orchestral and band music, Mr. Anthony, though unassuming and nonpretentious in the service he renders, is master of his task as a leader as well as a teacher of the several instruments used in orchestral and band music, and his students are making good in their chosen field of work.

A Cappella Chorus

Rather unique as an organization in a small college is the A Cappella Chorus, which, under the competent leadership of Miss Carlile, has developed within the past few years into one of the best choruses of the Middle West. To those who are fortunate enough to possess the musical ability and those other qualities necessary for eligibility to membership in the chorus, is given a rare opportunity to cultivate the art of unaccompanied singing, together with that finer art of the interpretation of the compositions of the masters of music.

The College Players

Another outstanding organization on the campus is The College Players, composed of students who show ability in or aptitude toward training in dramatics. The training in appearing before the public that is offered by participation in clean, wholesome dramatics in a worth-while extra-curricular activity for our young people who attend Graceland. Miss Florence Thompson is director of the organization and has been instrumental in placing the dramatic work of the college on a very high plane of achievement.

The College Players present four major productions during the school year, as well as several minor plays. They have earned the respect and favor of local audiences and of those of Independence, Saint Joseph, and Kansas City, where they have gone with several of their productions.

Lambda Delta Sigma Society

The Alpha Chapter of the Lambda Delta Sigma Society resides at Graceland. Its membership is chosen from the student body on the basis of scholarship and ability or aptitude to achieve outstanding work in some particular field of human endeavor. To be selected as one who is dependable, one who has achieved noteworthy, one who is a leader, carries with it a responsibility as well as an honor. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in her poetic lines, has divided the earth's masses into lifters and leaners. It is the aim of the Alpha Chapter of Lambda Delta Sigma to choose each year from Graceland's student body the outstanding lifters. Of the membership of this society it may be well said, "Many are called but few are chosen."

The society carries on various lines of research work and discusses at its monthly meetings topics that are of especial educative value. The topics for the past year were: Analysis of the Oratorio, The Course of Time; Value of Literary Societies in Junior Colleges; The London Conference on Disarmament; The Organization of a Graceland College Alumni Association.

The Crescent Club

Several years ago a girls' club was organized at Graceland which functions each year in a rather nonpretentious manner, though its work is often irksome and its accomplishments quite noteworthy. Each spring the girls of the college choose by ballot eight of their members whom they think to be the best representatives of womanliness. These eight girls, with the Dean of Women as their sponsor, constitute the Crescent Club for the ensuing year. The one receiving the highest number of votes is selected as the president of the club, and the girl receiving the next highest becomes the vice president.

The work of the club is largely that of sponsoring the ideals of womanhood by word and by deed among their fellow girl-students, advising, directing, sympathizing, and cheering. The ideals of womanhood to which they ascribe and toward which they aspire are as follows:

"A womanly woman is reverent to God and his creations.

She is loyal at all times to what she knows is right.

She is sympathetic without personal motive.

She is courteous to all without regard for age or station.

She is understanding in all situations, and the human element gives her wisdom.

She is appreciative of the beautiful wherever it lies and avoids at all times the superficial.

She is cheerful at all times.

She is patient with the patience of understanding and untiring in her efforts.

'And the greatest of these is charity.' "

The Engineers' Club, the Business Club, and the Press Club

The students taking the course in Engineering, together with such others as may be interested in the field of engineering, have organized the Engineers' Club. Their club meets twice a month and discusses such topics as are particularly related to engineering. It has undertaken several projects, such as making a contour map of the campus and stands ever ready to aid in the making of a "greater Graceland."

Likewise the students taking the course in Business Administration, together with such others as are especially interested in the problems of modern business, have formed the Business Club. They have organized upon the principles of a corporation and have divided their membership into preferred stockholders and common stockholders. Among the preferred stockholders are some of the prominent business men of the town who enter into the discussion at the meetings of the club and give the student members the benefit of their practical experience.

The staff members of the college paper, The Record, and those of the college annual, The Acacia, together with such other students as are interested in the field of journalism, have organized the Press Club. The librarian, Miss Lyda Elefson, is sponsor of the club and renders inestimable help with her resourcefulness and literary training. It is through the untiring efforts of the Press Club that the Record and the Acacia give training to several young people along journalistic lines.

The Athenian Federation of Literary Societies

In addition to the above organizations, there is at Graceland a federation of four literary societies. These four societies, Kapforean, Niketes, Pleiades, and Victorian, have weekly literary programs and compete with each other in debating, extemporaneous speaking, declamation, short-story writing, oratory, and vocal and instrumental music. They also form the basis for competition in intra-mural athletic activities.

New College Courses

By M. E. Mortimore

Pre-nursing.

The one year course in Pre-nursing is given to prepare young women to enter nurse's training. It includes a study of chemistry, zoology, psychology, physical training, English, and one elective. It is followed by three years of training at the Independence Sanitarium, upon completion of which the student is given a degree of Associate in Science.

Business Administration.

The course in business administration was offered for the first time last year. Second year subjects will be given during the coming year. The course includes such subjects as economics; accounting; commercial geography; business organization; marketing, advertising and salesmanship; business law; money and banking.

The number of students who enrolled in this course last year gives us reason to believe that it will fill a very important place in the educational program of the church.

Religion.

The department of religion offers standard college courses in church history, religious thought, religious education, and church administration. These may be chosen as electives in regular liberal arts courses, or may be selected as the major sequence of study. In the latter aspect the department aims to train for ministerial leadership and educational work of the church. The courses are designed to give first a broad view of the nature of religion and materials from the fund of religious literature and experience. The department is enlarging its field of instruction as current interest and facilities warrant.

Some of Graceland's Graduates

As the "proof of the pudding is in the eating," so the test of a college is in the success of its alumni, success not only in industrial or professional life, but, paramount to either, in the sterner task of everyday living.

Graceland's worthy sons and daughters are legion. She cherishes the memory of each one and takes pride in the part she may have had in the shaping of their ideals or the directing of their energies.

To mention the activities of all who have brought honor to their Alma Mater would be impossible. It shall be our purpose here to list only a few of those who have been enrolled in recent years and whose work has come to our attention.

The fascinating field of science has attracted a number of our young men. Robert McCormac '28 is one of the leading research chemists of the Sherwin-Williams Company of Chicago.

Jesse E. Roth '18 holds a responsible position in the engineering department of the Western Union Telegraphic Company. He is located in New York City.

Roy Goode '28 continued his science course in the University of Kansas and is now employed by the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet soap company in Kansas City as an analysis chemist.

Jack Gardner '27 is employed as an engineer on the project of opening the Missouri River for navigation between Omaha and Saint Louis.

Medicine and dentistry have a share. Doctor Frank L. Shipman '19 has worked up a fine practice in Lamoni. He finished dental training in the State University of Iowa with the class of 1924.

Doctor Fred A. Smith '19 has built up an excellent practice in Akron, Ohio.

John F. Stageman, a graduate at the top of the class from the College of Medicine of the University of Iowa, has been appointed to one of the most important internships within the gift of the university.

Doctor Charles F. Grabske '11 completed medical training in the University of Kansas in 1927. His high scholastic standing won for him an internship in the Bell Memorial Hospital, Kansas City. He is now one of the busiest doctors in Independence and is also acting as Assistant Church Physician.

In the business world we find Burton Hynden '23 cashier of the State Savings Bank, Lamoni, and Ronald D. Carmichael '19 vice-president of the Jackson County Bank, Independence.

Kelley Anderson '26 continued his study of commerce at the State University of Iowa and at Harvard University. He is now located in Boston in the employment of the Investment and Trust Division of the Webster and Stone financial organization.

Graceland graduates are teaching in the schools and colleges of almost every State in the Union. Lewis Jones '22 recently accepted the position of teacher of agriculture in the high school in Harlan, Iowa. He just closed a successful two-year term in the same work in Letcher, South Dakota.

Miss Ethel Brooner '22 holds a good position in the public school of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Miss Olive Elefson '24 has for the past two years been primary supervisor in the State Normal, Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

Charles Sandage '23 is at present instructor of economics in Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. He is spending his summer in the State University of Iowa, working toward his doctorate.

Miss Viola Nelson '22 is primary supervisor at the Humboldt State Teachers College, Arcata, California. During the summer she teaches at the State Normal School, Athens, Ohio.

Ronald Smith '22 received the degree of Doctor of Science from the California Institute of Technology. He is now professor of mathematics in Kansas University, Lawrence, Kansas.

Miss Verna Elefson '22 teaches in the Department of History, State Normal School, Wayne, Nebraska. She is spending a portion of the summer in Topeka, Kansas, doing research for her doctorate.

Walter E. Daykin '23 is an instructor in the Department of Sociology, State University of Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa.

Among those who have continued in the field of music is Miss Gladys Silsbee '20, who as at present head of the music department in the Junior College of Grand Rapids, Michigan. For several summers she has taught in the Iowa State Teachers College extension schools.

Franklin Weddle '29 has, after a successful year as instructor of music in the public schools of Letcher, South Dakota, accepted the same position in the public schools of Flint, Michigan.

Charles Church '24 has for several years been instructor in band and orchestra in the State Normal School, Bowling Green, Ohio.

James Houghton '22 is spending the summer in Germany, studying under Professor Rockheisen. While in Berlin he will sing at the American Church. He and Mrs. Fernell Briggs Houghton '22 will visit a number of the European countries and will witness the Passion Play.

Of the twenty-two members of the Graceland College faculty, fifteen are Graceland alumni.

Each year sees an increasing number of Graceland students in the work of the general church. In the Department of Religious Education are John Blackmore, Nellie Mussell Blackmore, E. E. Closson, G. G. Lewis, and Bertha Constance Woodward. In the editorial work of the church are Leslie Flowers and Leonard J. Lea.

Forty-three of those who received missionary appointments at the last General Conference are Graceland alumni. Lack of space prevents mentioning the names of each of these valiant workers, also of the many who are active in their local branches.

We are happy to claim five of the present ten members of the Quorum of Twelve: Brothers Hanson, McConley, Garver, Williams, and Edwards. And two of the First Presidency: Frederick M. Smith and F. M. McDowell.

College Day, September 14

We consider the new arts and those that have been lost and speculate on their relation to the development of mankind. There is one art—a quality of human nature—that is not a lost art because it has been found by so few.

We can picture Christ approaching a village—probably the road was conspicuously located; as he drew near, ten men, sick men, sick in body and mind, called to him. He did not raise his voice to answer, but in words of assurance characterized by his birth, he blessed them. Ten men liberated from hell—ten men free. Can we imagine their bewilderment and antics of joy? Undoubtedly they started running to the village, and in their excitement only one thought of Him who had healed them. This man returned to thank Jesus. The appreciation in this man's heart was sincere, the other nine being so delighted with the gift that they thought only of the joy acquired by themselves.

As the annual College Day draws near, there are many no doubt who are interested in knowing how the College Day collections are used and whether the young people appreciate the thing that is being done for them by the church membership. The measure of appreciation that we all hope for is in the lives of these young men and women as they go out into life's work endeavoring to carry into effect the things for which the church stands.

We who live near these young people believe that nine out of every ten sincerely appreciate what has and is being done for them by those who reach forth on College Day to bless. The measure of this appreciation comes back in many ways, but best we believe in the lives of these young people.

The following quotations from a few of the letters received only recently we know are worthy of our consideration and interest:

"No one can tell me about Graceland, because I have too many fond memories of that place. I would take pleasure in telling others of Graceland, and that I intend to do. Some day in the future I hope to send my children to Graceland. But by that time it will be so much better and bigger that I will hardly know it, I suppose.

"Just yesterday my husband and I found a family of Saints here in our city. There are young people in this family, and I wish very much that you would send them the catalog.

"As for church work in our city, we need a missionary and need one badly. There seem to be a few Saints here, but we have met only the one family. I am hoping and praying that I may be able to do my part and that before long we can have a man down here. Our city certainly is a fertile field, and there is no reason why there could not be a large branch here. The Utah people have a branch, and the people are working hard. Why not our church?

"How often I have wished we could slip quietly to prayer meeting at the Brick Church or to Sunday morning service. We are very happy in the sunny Southland but need a missionary. I would like to make the new student body of Graceland see the necessity of more prepared workers. Certainly the Father will take care of our needs if we do our part."

The following letter came with the final payment on a scholarship loan:

"Inclosed please find money order for five dollars, which completes payment of my scholarship loan account. Words can not express how much I have appreciated the opportunity I have had, and I really try to be worthy of it. If there is anything I can do for Graceland, I certainly will be glad to do it."

Here is a letter from a young man and his wife who have sent their College Day contribution ahead of time:

"Included you will find a check amounting to ten dollars for the College Day offering. This small amount is no measure for expressing our interests in the future development of Graceland College and to express our appreciation for what it has already done for both of us. Our hope and desire is that what we receive from Graceland we may pass on to those with whom we work by living up to the principles instilled within us while in school." The young people whose education depends on assistance from the scholarship loan fund with few exceptions appreciate what is being done for them and are paying back. As the funds are paid back, they are reallocated to cover requests for scholarship loans and shorter time loans for which notes are given. The membership of the church are doing a great service, and if the contributions were double, just twice as many young people could be helped.

Music about the Campus

Music runs throughout life at Graceland. Through the day one hears students running the scales in the piano practice rooms or going over vocal exercises. In the evening from dormitory and campus float strains from ukuleles, victrolas, pianos, and group singing. At chapel time one may hear the Alma Mater hymn. At pep meetings, sing fests, and student gatherings, lusty voices sing right cheerily the ditties of college days. Perhaps these sing fests are the truest expression of student music.

The Oratorio Society

Four o'clock each Sunday afternoon finds one hundred and fifty singers in the choir loft of the Brick Church, during the college year. The majority of these are Graceland students. Each fall in the week after the opening of school there are "try-outs" for membership in the chorus. Vocal quality, musical ear, and reading ability are considered. Balance of parts in the chorus is also another factor.

On Sunday mornings the chorus appears as the choir of the Brick Church. On the first Sunday the evening service replaces the morning service which is sacramental. During the year one of the great oratorios and a secular concert are given.

Last year was an exacting one. The centennial oratorio, The Course of Time, was begun late and proved unusually difficult. Extra practices were crowded in whenever possible. Students supported most loyally and spent many a noon hour trying to master difficult passages of the chorus numbers.

Everywhere students were humming snatches of some catchy air of the oratorio. At commencement time Hiawatha's Wedding Feast was the chief musical feature.

Singing in a large chorus under such a competent director as Miss Carlile is a privilege of Gracelanders. It is one that every college does not offer. Here one becomes acquainted with the best of choral compositions, learns the art of chorus singing, and gets in touch with the music movements of the church. Many students value most highly the opportunity of singing in the centennial oratorio. It is an inspiring sight to see one hundred fifty singers with eyes turned toward the director, strike a full chord as one.

The Orchestra and Band

Graceland's orchestra is made up of town and college players. The enrollment varies with the instruments available. Probably thirty or thirty-five strikes the average. J. H. Anthony, who is director of band and orchestral work on the general music board of the church, directs these organizations at the college. At the General Conference and at the commencement concert the orchestra was received very enthusiastically. The march, "Greater Graceland," written by Mr. Anthony, received an ovation. Those who visit the annual home-coming game see the band in action.

The A Cappella Chorus

This chorus hardly needs any description. Its conference appearances and concerts have brought honor to the college. Back of these public appearances are many weeks of rehearsals—two each week—blending voices, learning shadings, interpretations, and the many complex features of unaccompanied singing. This body also adds to student appreciation and the college standard of music.

The Department of Music

This department is one of the best organized of the college courses. Work is offered in voice, piano, theoretical subjects, band and orchestra, and chorus. Four instructors work together in building up this efficient school. A standard three-year course in public school music is offered. During the past five years this has trained many well-trained leaders into school and church activities. In future years Graceland should be sending out many directors of music into all parts of the church.

People have two births: physical and spiritual. Many who were born and lived long in other places celebrate Graceland as the place of their spiritual nativity.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Working Out Our Plans

Our church workers who formerly turned to the pages of their own publication, the Department Journal, for helps and program materials, are now becoming accustomed to looking for those materials in the columns of the Saints' Herald. Through the fine cooperation of the Managing Editor, the adjustment to new conditions and requirements has been made easier for those responsible for the religious education materials.

Getting the monthly material into separate installments for publication once each week has presented some problems and difficulties. The question of what to do with the program material is not yet satisfactorily solved. The absence of workers and contributors for vacations and reunion work, where they found no opportunity to write, has added to the difficulty.

We are trying to work out our plans. We want to present the material in the form most convenient and usable for all concerned. At this time it seems better, from the responses we have had, to present program material for the month in a single issue of the Herald as nearly as possible, and to distribute other materials throughout the month.

Our workers are returning. We plan for more and better material. We hope to increase the range of our helps and services. We need new writers, workers in local branches, who are willing to give us the benefit of their experiences. Our readers should read Vision carefully each month for materials and articles of interest to the young people, their leaders, and workers.

The Baptismal Font

By John Blackmore

The custom of placing the baptismal font in some corner of the basement of the church where it is hidden beneath the floor has, in the writer's opinion, resulted in an irreparable loss to the church. Often the font has been placed under the floor of the rostrum, where it can not be seen except when opened for special occasions. Of course the reasons for building the font in these places and in this manner has been to conserve space. The local congregations have often erected their church homes at great sacrifice, which seemed to necessitate a strict policy of economy. Yet it appears to be a false economy which would place the font in which the sacred ordinance of baptism is performed in some hidden spot where its religious value is undoubtedly greatly minimized. In other cases it seems that the font has been hidden because of the prevailing custom and the failure of the local congregation to think through the values associated with the font; values which can not be measured in terms of money or mere space. Why hide the font beneath the floor, a mere hole in the ground, when it is associated with such tremendous religious values?

The Always Visible Font

There is a distinct relationship between the interior appearances of the church and the mood of the congregation. We feel safe in asserting that in many instances the mood of the congregation is a reflection of the condition of the church. If the furnishings of the church lack those elements which stimulate the imagination religiously, then the mood of the congregation will undoubtedly accurately reflect the situation and the lack of such stimulus. On the other hand, the mood of the congregation is influenced and to a certain extent determined by the religious atmosphere created in the church interior because of the symbols of religion visible in the furnishings. The always visible font is of great value as an element in the religious atmosphere of the church home. Let us consider some of the values associated with the visible font.

Its Teaching Power

Children attend the church school and occasionally study a lesson about baptism. They are also taught in the home about the ordinance, though we are afraid that in some homes this teaching is neglected. Then several times during the year we have "decision days," when emphasis is placed upon the ordinance of baptism and church membership. These activities are all worth while, but we have neglected to use the tremendous teaching power of the visible font. In its religious setting the always visible font is a constant and silent teacher, impressing upon the child mind each Sunday of the year the fact of baptism. The child watches a baptism in the font, and ever afterwards the always visible font is a constant reminder to the child of the ordinance of baptism. As he attends the church school each Sunday, the font reminds him of baptism until the idea of the ordinance is a part of his religious thinking.

The Visible Font Stimulates the Imagination

The child's imagination is stirred as he views the font, even though the act of baptism is not being performed. Not only is this true of the child, but it is true also of the adult. The writer has discovered that his imagination has been stirred to ponder on religion when he has entered churches of other denominations and viewed the font surrounded with the symbols of religion.

As the imagination is being stirred, the mood of the individual reflects those stirrings. In other words, the always visible font stands as a silent but potent witness, constantly and impressively witnessing unto the individual that baptism is an ordinance of the gospel, and a fact in the religious beliefs of the church.

The Visible Font a Silent Witness

A stranger entering the doors of many of our churches will not see anything that makes us distinctive, unless it may be the disorder that marks many of our church homes. Our churches are deficient in those elements which in subtle manner indicate the distinctiveness of our religion. On the other hand, the always visible font will silently yet effectively witness to the visitor that as a church we believe in baptism by immersion. On that particular occasion the sermon may have been on some other topic, but the stranger leaves the service with the message indelibly stamped upon his memory that this church practices baptism by immersion. Not one word has been said on that occasion about baptism, but the always visible font silently and effectively testified to the visitor the message and belief of this church concerning baptism, and if perchance the sermon was about baptism, the visible font would make that sermon more impressive. It is apparent that we have lost much by hiding our baptismal fonts beneath the floor.

A Spot of Sacred Association

The visible font also stands as a silent witness and reminder of his covenant to the individual Saint. To the writer the spot where he was baptized will always be associated with sacred memories. When that spot is in the precincts of our church home, then why should it be merely a hole under the floor? We believe it should be a place of beauty and dignity.

There is a place in the church for the always visible font. A spot of beauty and of sacred associations. We believe it will enrich the religious life of our local congregations if the fonts are elected in the sanctuary of the church, instead of in the basement. The ordinance of baptism is too sacred and solemn to be performed in a manner that detracts from its meaning. Fonts may be so built that the ceremony of baptism will be beautiful and full of sacred meanings.

Earning and Saving for the Christmas Offering

By Bertha Constance Woodward

The vacation weeks offer an excellent opportunity for children to earn their own Christmas offering. Unless children earn their own offerings they gain a distorted lesson in giving. Parents and teachers should lead them to appreciate the part they can contribute toward furthering missionary work by giving their offering. This appreciation should cause the child to undertake his earning work with prayer.

The following are suggested ways by which children may earn:

1. Have a neighborhood bean bag sale.
2. Sell hot pan lifters, dainty dish towels, and other articles which are easily made.
3. Collect and sell old papers and magazines.
4. Make lawn cushions to sell to elderly people.
5. Collect waste and worn-out materials and sell to dealers of salvage.
6. Do chores for some one who needs to hire help.
7. Collect rags, old iron, rubber, tin foil, and sell them.
8. Have a candy or flower sale. Decorate the candy boxes and flower pots.
9. Make homemade picture books for small children, and sell them.
10. Find ways of helping to save and to be thrifty in the home.
11. Collect old lumber and boxes to sell for kindling.
12. Give up some of the things enjoyed, such as ice cream, chewing gum, and shows. Let the money you save help some one to hear the gospel.

See that the children get the right idea of profit. They should not expect too much for the things they sell. Parents have an opportunity here to teach children to give good quality and quantity when they sell.

Banks and Other Devices Which Encourage Saving

It is sometimes a great incentive for children to save money if they have a bank into which the money may be put. There are numerous kinds of homemade banks which serve this purpose, and the price of the purchased bank might be put into the Christmas offering. A bank made from a cardboard spool, or from a pasteboard box with the lid pasted down with seals, is easily made and yet enjoyed by children.

A home thermometer made of tape pulled through a hole in the lower end of a hanging cardboard and thumbtacked at the number in the scale which corresponds to the amount of Christmas offering saved, is often an incentive to the child to work harder in earning.

REUNION NEWS

Kentucky and Tennessee Reunion

By Thomas Newton

August 5.—The Kentucky and Tennessee reunion was held at Foundry Mill, near Puryear, Tennessee, from July 19 to 27. Surely the Saints enjoyed a splendid time.

The prayer meetings were very spiritual, the gift of prophecy being manifested on several occasions, the Lord speaking words of instruction and comfort. The Saints met for prayer at 9.30 in the morning during the week and at nine o'clock on Sunday. There was preaching at eleven in the morning; and at two o'clock in the afternoon, class work was conducted. Elder H. V. Minton taught a class on "The doctrine of stewardships"; Sister Minton taught "Personal evangelism"; and Sister P. R. Burton took charge of the children.

The reunion members were entertained as well as instructed during the eight o'clock evening services by Brother Minton, who built his model church. We were sorry that his time was so limited that he could not give a more elaborate description. Shortness of time compelled him to leave out many of the details of his building.

From three o'clock on each afternoon the camp gave attention to recreation. In this Brother Minton took the lead, and the older people as well as the young had a good time at volley ball and other games. After the eight o'clock preaching service, cars were moved back, and an hour was spent in various kinds of entertainment, Brother Minton being the leading spirit of each undertaking. He made many friends among the young people of this neighborhood.

Elder A. M. Baker also was here and preached some splendid sermons. The preaching was by Brothers Minton, Baker, T. U. Thomas, and the writer. Each night a large crowd came to the tabernacle, and every seat was taken. The people parked their cars as close to the building as they could and sat in them to listen.

The reunion at Puryear is a great institution. Members and nonmembers look forward to it with keen anticipation, and all experience an enjoyable time. From five to six hundred people came out every night, and there was not a jar or unpleasant word to mar our peace.

Three entered the waters of baptism, and we are hoping more will follow in the near future.

On Saturday the semiannual district conference was held. At this time the election of officers for the coming year occurred. The writer was reelected president of the district; secretary and treasurer, Sister Valie Seaton; chorister, T. U. Thomas; pianist, Sister Flossie Gallimore. When we adjourned, it was to meet at Paris the second Saturday in February.

We think ourselves fortunate in having purchased a Delco System for lighting the reunion grounds in the future. We have also secured a piano. This was much needed, the organ being worn out.

Tuesday after the reunion closed, a debate took place between Elder A. M. Baker of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and the Reverend Davis of the Primitive Baptist Church. The first proposition discussed was, "Is the doctrine of faith, repentance, baptism, and the laying on of hands with obedience to all the Christian graces essential to salvation?" Brother Baker affirmed, the Reverend Davis denied. This question occupied two days of four hours each. The second question was "An alien dead sinner can be saved without a condition on his part." The Reverend Davis affirmed and Brother Baker denied. In this discussion we had opportunity to present the gospel to this people. I am estimating that there were nearly a thousand people out to hear, and everyone was good-natured. We were gratified at the friendly spirit manifested by the people.

Brother Minton remained with his family for the debate, and he acted as moderator for Brother Baker.

It is surprising how a few days of living and worshipping together will endear the Saints to one another. Always when the time arrives for the closing services and the packing of belongings, hearts are saddened. But as we part all of us feel richer in possessing the friendship of our brothers and sisters.

Northeastern Nebraska Reunion

By Velma Fowler

The Northeastern Nebraska reunion was held at Decatur July 25 to August 3 on grounds generously provided by a nonmember. The gathering was successful from every standpoint, especially in attendance. There were more tents on the grounds this year than ever before.

We were privileged to have present Elders M. K. Fry and E. Y. Hunker, of Western Iowa District, as well as our own district missionary, Elder C. A. Kress, also Elder Blair Jensen, pastor at Omaha. Sisters Fry and Hunker accompanied their husbands and helped to make the reunion successful.

July 25 was welcome night, and the following program was given to a large and attentive audience: Selections, Decatur Band; "America," the congregation; prayer, Reverend Janssen of Federated Churches of Decatur; talk, "Purpose of reunion," Blair Jensen, Omaha; talk by E. Dudley Beck, Decatur; piano duet, Mesdames Sears and Brease; talk, Reverend G. Janssen; trumpet solo, Derrel Butts; music by the band; benediction, C. A. Kress.

The regular reunion program began Saturday morning with prayer service at 6.30. Other services in the program were a class on "Religious education" taught by Blair Jensen each morning from eight to nine o'clock; general prayer meeting 9.15 to 10.30; class hour on "The gathering," taught by Elder Jensen, 10.45 to 11.45. At this hour junior church was held in charge of Sister Fry. From one to two o'clock each day the choir rehearsed under the direction of Sister Eunice Butts, of Lamoni. At 2.15 Sister Theihoff, of Omaha, conducted a class for women on "Religious education in the home." At the same hour were held three classes in girls' handcraft in charge of Sisters Hill, Larsen, Marian Merchant, and Anne Self.

Each evening at eight o'clock one of the missionaries preached to a large audience, stressing the need for a more consecrated application of the principles of the restored gospel in our lives.

July 31 was designated as Omaha night, and the following program was presented by that group: Piano solo, Anne Self; violin solo, William Hill, jr.; vocal solo, Marie Samardick; talk, "The course of time," R. W. Scott; violin solo, Helen Williams; reading, Kate Scott; piano solo, Anne Self; vocal solo, Marie Samardick; violin solo, Helen Williams.

Saturday, August 2, was Graceland night, and a group of former and prospective Graceland students gave the following program: The Alma Mater hymn was sung by a mixed quartet; piano solo, Lois Burton; talk, "Graceland and spiritual influence," E. Y. Hunker; vocal solo, Velma Hansen; violin solo, William Hill, jr.; duet with guitar accompaniment; talk, "Graceland and education," Joseph France; Graceland hymn lore; "Graceland forever"; benediction, Walter Badham. Elder Ray Whiting, of Council Bluffs, added much to the zest of the program.

Sunday services were well attended. Preaching took the place of morning and afternoon classes. Special prayer and preaching services were held each Sunday morning for the young people and were well attended and greatly enjoyed.

The kitchen was in charge of Sister Lowe, of Omaha, and was a financial success. All enjoyed Sister Lowe's good home cooking.

This reunion was a source of inspiration to many, and while all regretted breaking the ties of friendship we had formed, we parted hoping to live better in the future and having a greater incentive to do our part in the establishment of Zion.

Midland (England) District Reunion

By Q. Swann

The week-end of July 19 and 20 Midland district reunion was held in spite of wet and stormy weather. The services were held at the Priestly Road Chapel, Sparkbrook. A goodly number of Saints visited Birmingham, and a splendid time was had.

President Floyd M. McDowell was the speaker morning and evening, and in the afternoon he conducted a discussion class. Various questions of interest to all were raised on financial law and church school problems.

Apostles F. H. Edwards and P. M. Hanson, from the United States, were also present.

Taking for a text "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?" (Hebrews 2:3), President McDowell spoke with much power. We should remind ourselves, he said, that we are building a high quality of manhood and womanhood, a society having such a high standard of living, loving, and working together, that the world shall be made to pause and wonder. We can not conceive the power that will come to our aid when we shall have reached that higher plane of living, declared the speaker, and are too big to longer be engaged in petty quarrels. Then we shall be working whole-heartedly, humbly doing our best, educating and enriching our minds, living as Christ would have us live the full and abundant life. Life enriched by the Spirit of God grows fruitful, and characters result, the power of which no man can resist.

The young people of the reunion were moved to tears by Brother McDowell's words. At the close of the meeting, "Youth's prayer" was sung, with deep and reverential feeling, also the song "Just as I am thine own to be."

How wonderful, inspiring, uplifting are experiences at such times as these. We thank God for the rich love and for the lives of men who are truly great and noble. We are going forward to Zion.

The Star of Hope

By Mary E. Gillin

When the rain of today is falling,
We dream of tomorrow's sun;
With faith in the better time coming,
We walk in the pathway begun.

For pain would soon drive us to madness,
Sorrow would blind with its tears,
Crushed with the weight of our sadness,
If Hope did not still our fears:

But ever when comes the nightfall,
Both the slave and king go to rest
With faith in the New Day's dawning
Hugged close to each weary breast!

O Wisdom, and Love, how Infinite!
Thou hast set the stars in the sky,
That lifting our faces upward,
We might find new strength from on High.

Forgetting the time of our bondage—
Forgetting our heart-break and tears—
Hope opens our eyes to see Caanan—
Faith leads till its glory appears!

Graceland Chats

From the Graceland Record

Graceland Prepares for Thirty-fifth Year

The administrative offices in the Ad Building are busy these days. Mr. Carmichael and his assistants are checking room reservations and making assignments for industrial work. The registrar's office is filing transcripts of high school credits of prospective freshmen. Evan Walden and his corps of men are giving touches to the campus and buildings to get them ready by September 5. The faculty are brushing up their academic minds, enriching present courses, and preparing new ones. Mr. Briggs keeps a supervisory eye on all sides, to be sure that everything is in tiptop shape by freshmen days.

This is the beginning of Graceland's thirty-fifth year. In September, 1895, educational work began in a building down town. That fall the corner stone of the Ad Building was laid. With true pioneer spirit she persisted until she can open her doors this fall, offering full accrediting, standard courses, progressive methods, and a well-trained faculty.

For thirty-five years the academy has functioned, enrolling in the early days of the college many times more students than the college department. For several years a large commercial school was maintained, and now it has evolved into a standard college course in business administration. Typing and shorthand are still offered and may be elected by students in the business course. There will be no academy this fall, and aside from a few pre-college courses all effort and attention will be devoted to collegiate work.

In 1913 there were only ten enrolled in the college department. The following table shows the increase in enrollment in this department: 1915, 19; 1920, 67; 1925, 175; 1930, 239.

Anyone who makes an estimate of Graceland's enrollment should consider this factor. It is not the entire enrollment, but of the college department that gives the true status. Short courses in pre-college departments have declined. To the onlooker who is not discriminating, it sometimes seems that the institution is at a standstill. Meanwhile the real college goes on.

Library Ready to Move to Briggs Hall

The most extensive improvement being made on the campus this summer is the moving of the library from the Administration Building to Briggs Hall. This move is made necessary by the demand for expansion in both the reading room and the stack room, the capacity of each of which will be increased more than one third.

In Briggs Hall the library will occupy the three rooms on the east side of the upper floor. The partition between the north rooms has been entirely removed, making one room approximately thirty by sixty feet. This will be the reading room. The south room will contain the book stacks and the librarian's office. The delivery desk will be placed in a twelve-foot opening between the rooms.

The walls are to be refinished, new lighting fixtures installed, and a noiseless covering laid on the floor. This in addition to new furniture, consisting of tables, chairs, delivery desk, magazine racks, and shelving, will increase both the efficiency and the attractiveness of the library.

The move to larger quarters is but one of the improvements made in recent years. Under the administration of Miss Lyda Elefson, the first trained librarian, the entire book stock has been reorganized and reclassified. A new catalog is in process of making. The book and periodical funds have been enlarged. These things have made possible a better quality of service and greatly increased the use of the library.

This year sees, also, the addition of the first trained assistant to the staff, Miss Margaret Harrington. Miss Harrington, an alumna of Graceland, completed the course in library science in Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, in June. She has been on the campus since July 1.

The Graceland library is the center of study eleven hours each day. It is the unifying element among the college departments, for in it every student spends considerable time.

Graceland's Faculty

Study, research, church work, vacation trips, and other fields of endeavor are this summer engaging the attention and interest of the members of Graceland's faculty.

Three new members will be added to the faculty this fall. James W. Evans, of Pittsburg, Kansas, comes to take charge of the department of education. He will also assist in speech and forensics. Mr. Evans received a bachelor's and master's degree in education at the Kansas state teachers college, and did graduate work in the University of Chicago.

Margaret Harrington, Graceland '25, returns this fall to work as assistant librarian. She completed the course in library work at Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, this spring, receiving a bachelor of science degree.

Beatrice Deaver comes from Kansas state teachers college to assist in commerce, filling the vacancy left by Hillard Cox, who is taking work at the University of Iowa.

Oren Hartchen is leaving the faculty this year. Doctor Platz takes the work in chemistry. Agriculture will not be offered.

College Hill in Summer

Fourteen students remain on College Hill this summer and find life not at all dreary. These fourteen compose the active office force, the librarians, workers in the kitchen and dormitories, and on the campus. All of them are busy.

Summer time on the college hill is pleasant. There is a freedom about the place. The campus is at its best. The tennis courts are not crowded as in the school year. The college family works hard and plays together.

Word has come to this group, as well as to other friends, that a large percentage of those completing the teacher training course at Graceland last spring have now secured teaching positions.

Other bits of news come to Graceland, news of marriages of her students, travels, moves, and plans. It is reported that nine of the eleven members of the staff of leaders at the Nauvoo Camp, early in July, were alumni of or students at Graceland.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fourth and Washington Streets

July has not been as busy for Ottumwa as most months. A number of the members are spending their vacations in other places, and the extreme heat here has caused a slight decrease in attendance.

In the past four weeks, the outside of the church has been painted, the work being done by Brother Tess Lee. Brother Lee has not been here long, but is always on hand when there is work to be done.

We find with unified services Sunday morning that a good average attendance is maintained. The services open at 9.30 and conclude at 11.30, and the women are pleased to be able to reach home and have lunch on time.

Some of the Saints attended the Nauvoo reunion.

The pastor has been delivering a series of themes for the morning services on Sunday, the topics being especially fitted to the theme of the church school.

It has been reported that some young people of the church expect to teach at different schools near Ottumwa. It will be much appreciated if they write Pastor F. C. Bevan, 118 Taft Avenue, Ottumwa. He wishes to keep in touch with them, and to arrange to have them attend services over the week-end in Ottumwa.

Sister V. LaPoint will be teaching school this fall at Avery, Iowa. She is a worker in the church, and we are very glad to hear that she is to be near us. We need workers to help us in our gospel undertakings in this city.

Society Islands

By R. J. Farthing

July 21.—Elder Taruiarii (Horahitu) arrived here Saturday, July 19, in good health and spirits. He gave us an account of his experiences in America at a special service held in the Taronia Church on Saturday evening, and spent Sunday with Saints and relatives at Outumaaro, a mission of the Taronia Branch. He leaves today on a tour of the Tuamotu Islands, traveling via Niau, Kaukura, Apataki, and Takapoto to his home and family at Manihi, the most northerly island branch in this mission. He will return via Rairoa, Tikehau, and Makatea to Tahiti on his way to Tubuai.

Brother Horahitu has asked us to convey his sincere appreciation to the many friends, Saints, and branches who treated him so hospitably during his sojourning in the Land of Joseph.

Missionary and Wife in New Field

By Mrs. A. C. Silvers

July 31.—We had a pleasant trip from Independence and reached West Virginia, the field assigned Brother Silvers, May 28.

Coming through southeastern Ohio, we found real hills. The roads are hard surfaced, but the driving was quite different from what we were accustomed to. Roads are cut on the hillsides a hundred feet or more down on one side and as much up on the other. This reminded us that we were in mountainous country.

After winding to the top of a hill, we stopped to view the surrounding country. As far as eye could see were hills with scarcely any valley between. Homes were built on tops of hills so steep that there was really no yard. We often saw old graveyards on tops of hills where there was room for but a few graves. The headstones indicated that they were very old. We wished to visit some of them but were late getting to the field and felt that we must hurry on; besides we could see no way to climb to them.

We went to Marietta, followed down the beautiful Ohio, and crossed into Parkersburg, West Virginia. Stayed there over Sunday, attending the services of the Saints.

Many places were wanting meetings. Brothers Silvers and Minton decided first to conduct services at Indian Creek, a country branch. There we found an earnest band with a goodly number of young people, members and nonmembers.

After a two weeks' meeting there, we went to Clarksburg and arranged for a meeting about six miles east at the home of Brother Nutter. There we worked eleven days, during which six were baptized, two being sisters past seventy years of age.

We then came to Indian Creek for Children's Day July 13, and there Brother Minton baptized two young men.

Brother Silvers and Brother Minton and family next went to Mount Hope for a few weeks' meeting.

This is well named the Mountain State. It seems strange to us after being in northwestern Kansas where fields are spoken of as sections or parts of sections. Here eight acres is called a large field. They say this country is usually very productive, but this year is the driest ever known to old settlers. There has been only an occasional local shower since April. Crops are poor. Timber on the hills has the colors of late fall. Fruit is almost a total failure. Many men are out of employment, but the people seem hopeful.

After September 1, we will be located at Harrisville for the winter.

Tent Meeting and District Conference at Thayer, Missouri

By J. A. Gunsolley, at request of W. E. Haden, District President

Having spent Sunday, June 15, with the Saints at Springfield, Missouri, where we were entertained in the home of Elder Henry Sparling and his wife, we proceeded on Monday by way of the "Sunnyland Express" of the Frisco lines to Thayer, Missouri, to assist in the tent services scheduled to begin on Sunday, the 15th.

After a pleasant and scenic trip through the Missouri Ozarks, we reached Thayer, and found the services under way in charge of Brother Haden and George A. Davis, assisted by Virgil Sheppard and Daniel Dortch. Brother Davis is a prosperous groceryman of the town and the backbone of the church work in that place. Brother Sheppard was just out of Graceland College. Daniel Dortch was from Hayti, Missouri, and had charge of the tent and property. He was to be Brother Haden's companion in tent work for the summer, or at least for a part of the summer. Wife and I were soon comfortably located in the Davis home, where Sister Davis and her two daughters, Fern and Faye, and son Frederick, nicknamed "Toughy," made us welcome and cared for our wants in an admirable manner.

Meetings continued each night with myself and Brother Sheppard alternately occupying the pulpit. Brother Haden believed in using the visitors while he had opportunity, for neither Brother Sheppard nor myself expected to continue with him after the close of this series. Sister Gunsolley was active in talking to the women, directing the music, and playing the piano. Fern occupied at the piano part of the time, and Faye assisted with her violin in an acceptable manner. In fact, everyone seemed anxious to do as much for the success of the services as he could. The tent was pitched in the city park in a natural grove at the top of the hill in the west part of town, or near the top of the hill, for it is a real hill.

Attendance was not large, but the attention and interest seemed good from the start, and gradually increased. This series was an effort to get the gospel before the community in an effectual way with the hope that some might be brought into the church. The few Saints living in Thayer had been holding on for years and heroically battling against odds, to keep the work moving. Especially has this been true of the Davis family in whose house both Sunday school and preaching had been held for about twenty years. They were not disappointed in their hope for new members, for five excellent people of Thayer were baptized, and three from Mountain View. It is believed that others were brought very near the point of deciding favorably.

District conference was called for June 28 and 29 and opened with a prayer service on Saturday morning which was well attended and highly enjoyed by those present. Business meeting followed, consisting of reports of various committees, branches, and ministers. Brother Haden presided, assisted by the writer. The afternoon session was devoted mostly to election of officers, there being some other matters of lesser importance. The election resulted in the following being chosen: District president, W. E. Haden, with power to choose assistants, or counselors; secretary, Daniel Dortch; treasurer, G. A. Davis; Sunday school superintendent, Heman Hawkins; Women's Department superintendent, Sister Mary Eck; director of music, a young man living at Kennett, Missouri, whose name I do not just now recall.

On Sunday afternoon, after a sumptuous community dinner, all went to the river and five souls were baptized by Brothers Sheppard and Davis. Those baptized were Brother and Sister Hamar and Brother Eck, of Mountain View; and Brother and Sister McGuire, of Thayer.

The following week Brother McClain and his son were baptized by Brother Sheppard, and on the closing Sunday he also baptized the eight-year-old daughter of Sister and Harry Miller, all these three being of Thayer.

All in all the meetings and conference were pronounced a decided success and will give a stimulus to the work in Thayer and that part of the district. Eight Saints received their patriarchal blessings, and a number of sick were administered to with encouraging results. The tent was taken to Alton, where a series had been announced. At this place Brother J. C. Cunningham lives, who has been an active worker in the district for many years.

Birmingham, England

"Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above."

During the last fortnight the Saints of Birmingham have been enjoying a feast of good things. We feel that we have been mightily blessed, but this is only the beginning.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards was our first visitor, returning after an interval of nine years to his home and people. A reception was held in his honor July 9 when all rejoiced together. Brother Edwards spoke a few words expressing his joy in being permitted to visit his home and parents and family and to again be with his people. He spoke of God's loving care and protection which had been round about him since he left this country. He would have much enjoyed bringing his loved ones with him, that all might become acquainted. We trust that that day may yet come. Brother Edwards was almost overcome by the expressions of love and good cheer of the Saints.

July 13 he preached to his people on the theme "Why I am a Latter Day Saint." Because Latter Day Saintism stands for the highest principles in life is one of the reasons Brother Edwards is a Latter Day Saint. Yet, he believes, the highest qualifications in education, organization, sanitation, etc., are as nothing without that something which we call the power of God. Empires have grown in beauty, power, and importance, but leaving divinity out of their ruling powers, they have diminished and died. Jesus said to his disciples in those days when the followers of Christ were looked upon with scorn and treated with derision, "Fear not, little flock; it is your father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

On Monday, July 14, a reception was held in honor of the visit of President F. M. McDowell and Apostle Paul M. Hanson. The Saints were delighted to meet these estimable and beloved brothers. Because they occupy high and responsible positions in the church, one is deeply impressed by their humility and consecration. So do we always find truly great men.

A happy evening was spent, the church rooms being crowded to capacity. The banquet was spread and at intervals was interspersed with speeches, songs, and readings. Everyone was happy, and "Big Brother Mac" quickly won all hearts. We shall long remember the occasion of this visit.

Thursday and Friday lectures were given by Brother McDowell on the new system of church school and steward-ships. In adopting these new methods, we feel that although some difficulties may present themselves, we are a step nearer Zion conditions. As Brother McDowell states, if we, a body of one hundred and fifty-three Saints, can not work together harmoniously, how will thousands work unitedly in Zion?

We have accepted the recommendation of the Joint Council to receive Elder Peter S. Whalley, who is traveling from the States to this country, as our pastor and minister. We are hoping for great things from this decision.

Over the week-end of July 19 and 20, Midland district reunion was conducted at Birmingham, President F. M. McDowell being chief speaker. Many visitors were present for the services, and the spirit of progress and peace was felt by all.

Omaha, Nebraska

Central Branch, Thirty-sixth and Burt Street

Summer with all its wealth of golden days was ushered in June 22, and with its advent we have experienced some intense heat. Notwithstanding this fact, attendance at the church services has been very good. Bishop Mark H. Siegfried was a guest on this Sunday. In his sermon of the morning, the speaker asked us if we were proud of our own achievements or just the achievements of our forbears of the first century? Achievement can not be attained unless we sacrifice, said Brother Siegfried, and yet there is no sacrifice, because we always gain something in a greater degree than that sacrificed. Sister Lois Francis's solo of the morning and Sister Marie Samardick's at the evening service furnished a pleasing background for Brother Siegfried's sermons.

The prayer meeting of June 25 was characterized by an unusual degree of activity in testifying, and all spoke of the fact that when we attempt to sacrifice it becomes a joy. Over one third of this congregation was young people. On the last Sunday of the month, Brother Jensen's message to the people was "Let my people go—Zionward." Very fittingly the sacrifice period was brought to a close, when the district bishop's agent, Elder B. M. Anderson, was the speaker at the evening hour June 29. He reminded us of our duties in a financial way, and of the importance of doing our duty now.

At the conclusion of the study period July 6, Sister Mae Wellman awarded certificates to those who had taken the Book of Mormon normal work during the past winter. The eleven students all received "A's," and special mention was made of the work of Sister Verda Bryant and Sister Addie C. Hicks. Needless to say we are proud of our group of students. The sacramental meeting that followed was well attended, and was in charge of Pastor Blair Jensen. Two children, Rosemary Grace and Thelma Darlene Thompson, were blessed at this service. The sermon of the evening was delivered by Elder C. T. Self.

We were happy to have Apostle E. J. Gleazer visit Omaha over the week-end of July 12. Brother Gleazer brought to our attention that our objective, in Omaha, was by no means accomplished, and made of it an individual matter by having each one ask himself the question—What is my responsibility? In the evening Brother Gleazer answered his closing question of the morning sermon—What do we need? We need a present incentive. Incentives of years gone by can not suffice for us now; present stimulus is more potent than that which is past, and must be had daily.

During the week of July 13, Elders E. Y. Hunker and M. K. Fry, of the missionary force, held special meetings at the South Side Church, and many at Central Branch availed themselves of the opportunity of hearing these young ministers.

"The Lord requires a heart and a willing mind," was the text chosen by Brother Jensen for his sermon July 20.

Brother Hunker spoke in the evening to an attentive audience on his missionary experiences in Scandinavia. Brother Jensen and Brother Hunker were at Graceland together and so renewed their friendship and reminisced on college days.

An ice cream social, held on the church lawn July 22, was very well attended and proved to be a remunerative endeavor.

Two priests, Brother W. T. Wellman and Brother C. M. Hollenbeck, occupied the pulpit July 27 and August 3. The evening services of these two Sundays were dispensed with, as the district reunion was being held at Decatur, Nebraska. We were pleased to see our district come to the limelight during the month of June, as having had the greatest number of baptisms. May the good work go on.

On July 5 Brother Jensen officiated at the marriage of Sister Lois Hollenbeck to Loyal E. Waltz, of Lima, Ohio. The young couple spent their honeymoon in Colorado, and will make their home in Lima. We are sorry to lose Lois, but our best wishes for a lifetime of happiness go with her.

In our last writing we neglected to report an important news item. At the high school graduation exercises that occurred in June, Miss Anne Self, daughter of Brother and Sister C. T. Self, received one of the scholarships awarded by one of the local newspapers. This is not the first time Anne has brought honor to herself, and we are proud to claim her as ours.

The local press under date of June 21 carried an excellent sermon, written by our pastor. This is a wonderful way of gaining recognition and getting some of our beliefs before the people.

Since the middle of June our vacationists have been many, and their wanderings have been far and near. Jean Grisinger and Alene Thiehoff represented Omaha at the Nauvoo encampment. Sister Nell Kelley is touring Europe this summer, and from all reports is having a wonderful experience. The heads of Sunday school have both had nice trips, Brother Marion Cooper having gone to visit his folks in Kirtland, Ohio, and H. O. Wrenn attending a credit man's convention in Toronto, Canada. Brother Harry Greenway, chorister, has been traveling in the East, and the Bryant family has just returned from the Minnesota lakes. Sister B. M. Anderson and Rogene recently drove to Joliet, Illinois. District President Doctor H. A. Merchant hurried home from Colorado in order that he might be in attendance at the reunion. We stay-at-homes are glad to welcome home our wanderers, but rejoice that they have had the opportunities to get away for rest and recreation.

New London, Connecticut

In June a beautiful baptismal service took place at the Thames River when Mrs. Martin united with the church. The weather had been dubious all day. When Elder Alma Whipple led the candidate out through the water, the sun shone out from the clouds, making a path of silver reflections for them. The scene was impressive to those who stood on the bank of the stream.

District Missionary William Patterson was a recent visitor in New London.

The first wedding ceremony to be performed in the church in New London was solemnized July 5. Sister Doris May Whipple became the bride of Mr. Phillip I. Cone, Pastor Alma F. Whipple, uncle of the bride, officiating. Miss Hazel Whipple, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Miss Blanche Crandall was bridesmaid, and Norman Lamb best man. Bernice Whipple and Doris Manning were flower girls, Burton Whipple the ring bearer. Preceding the ceremony there was violin music by Lois Crandall and Wendel Whipple, and "O promise me" was sung by Sister Florence W. Simmons. Attractive decorations of white and blue were worked out with Shasta daisies, delphinium, and crepe paper. Palms were effectively arranged. A shower was given the newly wedded pair only a short time ago. About sixty friends and relatives were present.

A few from this branch have been attending the Onset reunion.

Poplar Creek Branch, Illinois

Orchardsville, Illinois.—Poplar Creek Branch held its annual Children's Day June 15 with good interest. Pastor R. H. Henson preached the young people's sermon at eleven o'clock, the younger members occupying the front seats. Good instructions were given the boys and girls, and they seemed to sense the importance of it. A few words of advice were added for the parents.

At the close of the sermon the Saints went to the creek, about one mile west of the church, and three were baptized by the pastor. The candidates were Stanley Greathouse, Wanda Greathouse, and Otis Reuben Henson. This makes a total of twenty-four for the year.

At two o'clock in the afternoon a good program was presented by the children to an overflowing house. The program consisted of songs, drills, readings, etc.

It is interesting to note that seven of the twenty-four baptized during the past year are of the fourth generation to hold membership in the church. They are the great-grandchildren of J. F. Henson, who planted the gospel truth here in this region almost fifty-five years ago. This is encouraging and causes us to feel that some one has not toiled in vain, but that from one generation to another the gospel is being obeyed. We trust that the new generation will continue the faith of years and prove steadfast in the work of the Lord.

Northeastern Kansas Conference

The conference was held at Fanning, Kansas, July 19 and 20, and though conditions were not as favorable as we would like to have had them, we are glad to report fair attendance and interesting sessions.

The initial service of prayer Saturday morning was in charge of Frank G. Hedrick and G. G. Phillips. Apostle E. J. Gleazer was associated with the presidency. General Church Publicity Agent John A. Gardner, of Independence, Missouri, was present. He not only represented his department but presented an earnest plea for help and mutual encouragement at the beginning of the business session, and during the conference the Saints were strengthened through listening to his addresses on "The unfinished business of the church," and "Some aspects of our church." Representing the high priesthood of the church, he delivered the charge to Gilbert F. Hedrick preceding his ordination to the office of elder at the Sunday afternoon service.

Apostle Gleazer, accompanied by his wife, was busy from the time he arrived until he left. His interest in the business session and the needs and problems there presented brought forth suggestions along various lines which are timely, and the laity and priesthood were admonished that if we would progress, we must take the church more seriously. He stressed the need for organization of the local priesthood and that they should be busy; Fanning as an agricultural point should be developed; Topeka needs a new church building; and many other needs were considered as he visioned the district and its work. The themes of his two addresses were "Ways and means of meeting district problems" and "God's way of turning men aside." Conferences are worth while only as the Saints carry into effect measures and enactments in their legislations, and Brother Gleazer urged us to go forward.

The basket dinner in Brother Wiley's grove near the church was one feature in which each vied with the other in contributing to the physical needs of all.

Thirteen attended the priesthood meeting at the close of the business session Saturday afternoon.

The local secretaries are to be commended for their efforts in getting the records up to date.

The following towns were represented in the conference delegations: Atchison, Saint Joseph, Irving, Topeka, Troy, Burlingame, and Bendena.

Hammond, Indiana

Hammond Saints are going forward and are pleased to announce that several have united with the church since General Conference. We look forward to the time when others will accept the gospel and note that several not of the faith are attending church school. Through the medium of the school, we are not only trying to convert others but to educate ourselves to a higher standard of living.

Brother Clair Ellis has been ordained to the office of deacon. He is a young man and well liked by all, and he takes great interest in his work, always looking after the interest of his brothers and sisters.

A play recently given in Hammond represented the church in the early days. The presentation was good and attracted a large gathering, including many not of the fold. We must not forget to give credit to Sister Eleanor Meyers in the production of the play. All who participated are to be commended.

Several from Hammond attended the reunion at Indian Lake, Michigan.

Very few of the Saints in this city have been out of work on account of the depression in business.

The weather has been warm here in the past weeks, and there has been little rain. The crops are as a result suffering.

Saint Thomas, Ontario

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized Wednesday evening, July 30, at the home of Elder Frank Gray, Maitland Street, London, when Lillian Mae, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ashworth, of London, became the bride of Charles Edward Skelding, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. James Skelding, of Saint Thomas. The bride was attended by Miss Vera Treffry. The young couple will live in London.

The Sunday school held a successful picnic at Pinafore Park the afternoon of July 9.

Saints were pleased to meet our young missionary, Elder Kelley, of Lamoni.

We were also happy to renew acquaintance with one of our former Saint Thomas boys, Elder Leo Willsie, of Detroit, Michigan. We feel that he is an instrument in God's hands.

At the Sabbath school July 27, Elder Albert Cordery blessed his young granddaughter, Virginia May, daughter of Sister Henry Dyson.

James Richard MacQueen was born in August, 1862, in Southwold Township near Saint Thomas, Ontario, where he farmed for a number of years. He united with the church in 1890. Moved to Niagara Falls Branch. Died in the Saint Catherine Hospital after a long illness July 11, 1930. Besides his widow, formerly Mrs. Elizabeth Toogood, he leaves two stepdaughters, Mrs. George Fry and Mrs. Gordon Else, and one stepson, A. V. Toogood, of Saint Thomas. The funeral was held from C. A. Towers and Sons chapel in charge of Elder James Skelding. The sermon was by Elder James Winegarden, London.

Brother G. L. Sweet, Harmon, Oklahoma, hopes that Elder S. W. Simmons will find it possible to soon hold meetings in Harmon. Harmon is fourteen miles west of Vici on the highway.

Independence

Stone Church

At the morning service Elder John F. Sheehy continued his series of pastoral talks with the Stone Church congregation, taking his scripture lesson from that part of 1 Corinthians 12, which includes the verse, "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular." The best evidence, he said, that this church has the seal of Christ upon it is whether or not it functions as the body of Christ, as he intended it should function in the lives of men. We must function, not in our way, but in Christ's way. It is for each one to determine his relationship to the body of Christ, and to decide whether or not he is doing his individual part as a member thereof. If we really love Christ, we shall fulfill our obligations to him and to his church.

The Women's Chorus sang an unaccompanied number, "Just for today," and also "The lost chord," with organ accompaniment by Evan A. Fry. Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the service and was assisted by Elder R. V. Hopkins.

At the Campus

President Frederick M. Smith was the speaker at the union service on the Campus Sunday evening. He took as the basis for his sermon the fifteenth psalm, the subtitle of which in the King James Version is, "David describeth a citizen of Zion," in the Inspired Version, "The righteousness of Zion's children."

"Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill." These questions and the answers given by the Psalmist were applied by President Smith to the people of the church today to determine if they are doing those things which make them worthy to abide in the Lord's tabernacle, or whether they are indulging in those things mentioned in the psalm which a citizen of Zion does not do.

We must contend constantly for the right, and yet not weaken ourselves by internal conflict. We must take care that our standards are not lower than those of our forbears, and make them even higher if possible. We must set for ourselves those restraints that enhance our ability for righteous uplift. Thus shall we prepare ourselves to dwell in the holy hill of the Lord.

Sister Ina Hattey, soprano, sang the solo, "O divine Redeemer," by Gounod, Sister Paul N. Craig playing the piano accompaniment. Brother Clark, of Hoisington, Kansas, sang a bass solo. Brother H. A. Koehler sang as a solo the verse parts of "Let the lower lights be burning," the congregation under the direction of John F. Sheehy singing the chorus. Orchestral numbers were furnished by the Walnut Park Ensemble, directed by Brother Erwin Moorman. Elder W. Wallace Smith presided over the service, and was assisted by Elder Earl Hoisington.

Sacramental service at the Campus was well attended by the Juniors of the Stone Church District. Sister Ina Hattey was in charge of the music in the absence of Sister Burgess, who has been attending the Nauvoo reunion. R. V. Hopkins talked to the children, who always love to hear him.

Sunday, August 10, the junior worship service was in charge of Sister Hazel Moler. The songs and prayers were much enjoyed, and Brother Bolinger gave an interesting talk to the children.

Walnut Park

On the last Sunday in July the speaker at the eleven o'clock service at Walnut Park was Elder C. V. Hopkins. As a scripture reading he used several verses from Matthew 7, Inspired Version, which gives some of the words that Jesus taught his disciples to say to the people. Brother Hopkins pointed out some of the experiences that he has had while carrying out this instruction of the Master, experiences similar to the illustrations of the reading. The Saints appreciate having Brother Hopkins as a member of this congregation, and hope he and Sister Hopkins will soon feel at home with them. This worthy pair come from Grandview, Missouri, where they lived fifteen years or more.

The Walnut Park Choir assisted in the worship period of the service with the beautiful anthem, "O love divine."

During the class period of the church school, the Galilean Class was privileged to have Bishop G. L. DeLapp of Lamoni Stake, to lead in the discussion. Brother DeLapp pointed out some of the ways in which the stewardship program, and especially that relating to the storehouse, will be developed in the future. The members of the class greatly appreciated having Bishop DeLapp with them, and he, in turn, complimented them on the excellent response and interest shown.

After the class period, a clarinet quartet selection was played by four members of the Walnut Park Orchestra.

On Wednesday evening the Saints of the groups of Walnut Park congregation met at the church for the monthly union prayer service. The meeting was of a high order, and the members felt blessed.

The eight o'clock Sunday morning prayer meetings have also recently been of excellent character and well attended. Sunday morning, August 3 a total of seventy-one was present. A message of exhortation was given through the Spirit, the Saints being told that God has many blessings in store for his people which he will gladly bestow upon them if they will do their part.

The monthly sacramental service occurred at eleven o'clock, and a large number was present, though the heat of the day was intense. The entire auditorium of the church, with the exception of the balcony, was filled, giving a total attendance of about four hundred and fifty. The service was in charge of Elder R. Barnhardt, assisted by Elders S. C. Smith, C. L. Olson, George Jenkins, Fred Lanpher, C. V. Hopkins, and Benjamin Bean. Pastor S. C. Smith, in his closing exhortation, reemphasized the main points delivered in the divine message of the early morning prayer meeting, stating that there is a wave of indifference or "don't-care-ness" spreading over the church which the Saints should seek to overcome. While Brother Smith does not wish to be considered a pessimist, he felt it his duty to call attention to these dangers and also to request the Saints to pray for those who are suffering and distressed. He asked the Saints to pray for rain, that the crops and vegetation may be saved from the harmful effects of drought and extreme heat.

Lancaster, Ohio

1111 West Fair Avenue

The work of Lancaster Branch is progressing. Attendance has been growing, and much interest is being shown by nonmembers.

The sacramental service was well attended. Elder S. E. Dickson, pastor, was in charge. There was a good attendance at the evening service at which Brother Dickson was the speaker.

The following Sunday, July 13, Brother Dickson was speaker at the morning service and also the evening service.

July 20 Priest Elmer H. Caldwell occupied for the first time, having been ordained on July 6 at The Plains, Ohio. At the evening service, Elder W. P. Vickroy spoke upon "The organization of the church."

July 27 Brother Vickroy spoke at the morning service, at which there was good attendance. At the evening service Brother Dickson spoke from a chart on the parable of the laborers in the vineyard. We had several numbers of special music. There was unusually good attendance, Patriarch J. E. Matthews of Columbus, Ohio, was here at this meeting.

A family has been added to our branch membership, having recently been baptized at Columbus, Ohio. The work is progressing in some degree at Lancaster, and we hope that the time will soon come when our new church home will be too small to accommodate the attendance.

Holden Stake

Holden

The choir, under the leadership of Sister Floy McWethy, gave an evening's program of music, Sunday, August 3. There was a liberal response to the efforts of the chorister, and the program was a credit to those taking part. Notwithstanding the extreme heat, a large audience was present. The vocal numbers were supplemented with instrumental selections. Brother Robert Hall, of Des Moines, Iowa, grandson of Doctor and Mrs. Emory Thompson, of Holden, gave an excellent violin number. Brother and Sister R. F. Moorman and son Jack, of Sedalia, were present. Brother Moorman delighted the audience with two excellent violin numbers.

The Holden congregation has a number of musicians, and they are responsive to the call for help. A forward-looking program is being planned for the fall and winter. Through the months of July and August, the Sunday evening services are held on the church lawn.

The Auditorium Orchestra, under the direction of Brothers Orlando Nace and Erwin Moorman, an aggregation of about thirty-five musicians visited Knobnoster, Missouri, and gave a program at the church Sunday, July 13, at the eleven o'clock hour. Two of the city churches are within a block of our church. The music was easily heard in these churches and so distracted the attention of the audience from their own services that they dismissed and attended our church in a body. The musicians were with the Holden Church Sunday night and were greeted by an audience of over three hundred. Many compliments came from townspeople, and a number of requests for their return. July 20 the K M B C Mothers' Quartet, composed of Sisters James Gault, M. H. Siegfried, I. A. Smith, and B. J. Scott, gave an hour's program which delighted an audience of about four hundred. Sunday night, July 27, Bible scenes in moving pictures were shown on the lawn by Brother Clow. The attendance at these services justifies our outdoor Sunday night meetings.

The supervised play on the church playgrounds Tuesday evening of each week brings together a large number of Saints and with them a number of nonmembers. We see in this distinct missionary possibilities and are using it. Brothers Eliason and Hampton are in charge.

The Square Deal Dining Hall at the Missouri State Fair, Sedalia, Missouri, will be operated again this year by Holden Stake. The proceeds of the dining hall go into the stake church building fund. We furnish meals, lodging, and a pass into the Fair Grounds to a limited number of helpers in the dining hall. For further information write W. S. Macrae, Holden, Missouri. Saints and friends visiting the Fair are invited to patronize the Square Deal and also to visit the church publicity booth in the Educational Building. There you will meet Brother U. W. Greene and H. A. Koehler, and wife.

Atherton

The third Sunday in June, Atherton held its annual Children's Day services, in which the children responded willingly. In these services the children always learn many helpful lessons.

In the afternoon a baptismal service was held in the Little Blue, when three children were made members of the kingdom of God. They were confirmed at the evening service. The infant son of Brother and Sister Elmer Pearson was blessed. Brother and Sister Earl T. Higdon, of Independence, attended the evening service and participated in a quartet with Brother and Sister O. C. David Hughes.

The following Sunday evening Elder Glenn Davis of Independence occupied. He was accompanied by a number of young people from Liberty Street Branch who furnished two musical numbers at this service. Brother Davis was given his first mission at the last General Conference, and the Saints of Atherton wish him goodspeed. His sermon was full of counsel to the young people, admonishing them not to sell their services in the church for the pleasures of the world.

Brother Allen, the pastor, recently gave the Saints a talk setting forth the value of the church school and the good it is hoped will result therefrom. Last Sunday L. W. Koehler preached his initial sermon. His subject was, "He that keepeth the law, happy is he." Brother J. A. Koehler sang a fitting song at the close of the meeting.

In the evening Brother J. A. Koehler preached. His subject was "Church membership."

Blue Springs

James W. Davis, missionary in charge, and Ellis Rathbun, appointee to Holden Stake, have just closed a successful three weeks' series of meetings at Blue Springs. Only one member has been added by baptism as a direct result, but a number declared their interest and attended every night of the series.

Harold Hattey, of Enoch Hill, is pastor at Blue Springs. Miss Opal Moody, of Kingsville, Missouri, left her home to help with the music, and worked faithfully. The missionaries are not all ordained. The pastor and others arranged for special numbers, among which were selections by the Independence Band.

Attendance was large and interest good. Brother Oglevie furnished the space for the tent, and his home was a place of rest between meetings. The baptism occurred in Lake Tapawingo, to which, of course, there was an interested audience. The sermons were of unusual excellence. Brother Rathbun, a promising young missionary, used a temple to illustrate his themes. The foundation was first laid and the construction of this house of God proceeded step by step until fully complete. Brother Rathbun is from the oil fields of Oklahoma. Brother Davis needs no introduction. The tent will next go to Bates City and then to Buckner.

Detroit, Michigan

July 30.—Detroit has already begun to show signs of fall activity. Sunday morning, July 20, the city pastor presented to the congregation of First Church the outline of the activities for the year. This program was then published in The Beacon Light in order that it might go to all members of the five city congregations.

The program calls for twenty-six weekly classes; first, taking up the "Extension course of the Centennial Institute" and then following with other courses that might be beneficial. The group priesthood meetings are to be held at least once a month in charge of the pastors of the congregations in which the groups are located, and a city-wide priesthood meeting to be held at least once each quarter. All officers of the city, both congregational and general, are to meet together regularly to present and solve their problems of administration. The new religious education program is to be adopted as quickly as possible, beginning preferably in the Sunday school and the Department of Recreation and Expression. The city groups are to retain the boundaries previously given them but are to be governed by members of the priesthood who have proved their qualifications through study classes and priesthood prayer meetings. Those men of the priesthood who desire to preach, and who feel that they are not given sufficient opportunity to develop this talent, are to be provided with a place to speak. Street preaching will develop a man quicker than any other method. Our missionary staff is to be supplied with the verified addresses of members and their family nonmembers and other prospects who might be brought to us through the medium of these people. True Latter Day Saints are concerned about the salvation of their fellow men, and prospects brought in the church should assist in developing the personal evangelism spirit that characterized our early-day church. Finally, it is hoped to make our Sunday evening service attractive by presenting the same speaker for four consecutive evenings. A theme can thus be chosen and developed by a series of complete-in-themselves sermons. The number absent from the city makes it necessary for us to wait until cooler weather before beginning this work, but we are anxious to put this program in operation, for we believe much good instruction will come from it.

First Church

George H. Booth, publicity agent and assistant pastor of First Church, held the annual publicity banquet in his home the night of July 11. Eighteen members of the department were there, and a report of the work done during the year was given. Four hundred and seventy orders have been taken for books and church papers amounting to $616.15. The publicity banner was won by the River Rouge congregation which has now had it two years. The award is made on the ratio of subscriptions per membership. Plans were discussed for the coming year, and all members were enthusiastic over the prospects for this department.

Sister Mina Townsend, director of the choir for several years, has recently moved with her family to Evansville, Indiana. Her leadership and splendid personality are missed by the choir and the congregation. The new leader, Fred E. Anderson, and the choir spent the Fourth of July at the cottage of Sister Townsend, Long Lake, Michigan. They were joined there by North I. Townsend and the family, who came from Evansville, Indiana, for the holiday.

Midweek prayer services are beginning to improve both in spirituality and attendance. The pastor has been presenting a series of topics under the one general theme, "Man's Highway to God." Already there have been presented: "Does God recognize me?" "What is my standing with God?" "Would God choose me?" and "Whither goest thou?" These subjects are given with the intention of bringing in the form of a question the personal factor into our relationship with God, rather a self-examination.

In the leaving of Brother and Sister Joseph Countryman, who are to make their home in Independence, we are losing two of our faithful workers. Brother Countryman has presided over the Department of Recreation and Expression for two years. We commend them to Independence Saints as earnest, willing workers.

The sixth dramatization of the church history incidents was presented the forepart of July. These dramatizations have been given under the splendid direction of Brother and Sister Thomas Forbes. An increased attendance at these services shows an appreciation of the knowledge gained of church history through the dramatizations.

First Church, at 5858 Fourth Avenue, has been completely redecorated, the woodwork varnished, the floors refinished, and new runners put in the aisles. We are beginning the fall season with a bright clean church and with a splendid educational program. We believe God is favoring us and that he will be with us in our endeavors to carry on his work.

Wyandotte

Brother Dimmy Howe, Sister Dorothy M. Burns, and Sister Eltho O. Burns have been added to the membership of the Wyandotte congregation by Pastor Amos Surbrook. Brother Surbrook has made a number of additions to this group and is following up the work started by the missionary workers.

The Department of Women is very energetic in missionary work and leaves nothing undone that would spread the gospel story. The members are much interested in a meeting place in order that they may give up the lodge hall in which they are now meeting. An ice cream social July 8 was one of several events they have planned to assist them in their efforts toward a new church building.

In spite of the hot weather, interest still continues in the missionary efforts put forth on Sunday evening by Elder Kenneth Green. Brother Blakeslee Smith baptized about seventy people in Wyandotte last year, and his preaching is still bearing fruit.

River Rouge

Sister Wilbur Wood is still in Ann Harbor Hospital. The Saints are remembering her in their prayers and are hoping to soon have her back with them.

Brother Richard E. Ulman received the unanimous support of River Rouge Saints for pastor the coming year. The spirit of confidence thus expressed is encouraging to anyone upon whom is placed the responsibility of caring for God's work.

River Rouge is the proud possessor of the publicity banner for 1930. This is the second year in which the publicity department of the River Rouge congregation has won this banner by virtue of securing the greatest number of subscriptions to church publications.

Willard Shotwell is meeting with the priesthood in class work.

East Side

The Department of Recreation and Expression has not discontinued its summer sessions in spite of the hot weather. New officers were elected for the year, and the program committee has several outings planned for the next two months.

The Sunday school is not lagging in maintaining the interest of its members and recently held its annual picnic at Belle Isle. Belle Isle is close to the East Side Church, and the Sunday school attended the picnic almost in a body. Games were played on the public playgrounds all afternoon, and ice cream was served to everyone. The Sunday school has adopted the program of church school, and all like the new method, as it gives each one an opportunity to serve.

The priesthood held their monthly sacramental service in the upper auditorium July 17, while the Department of Women held their meeting downstairs. Quite a number of the priesthood were present, and all gave their testimony. The pastor, Wilbert Richards, was in charge of the meeting. The city pastor, J. E. Lancaster, presented the theme "Come and see," an appeal along missionary endeavor lines. The priesthood are meeting every other Thursday evening. The first Thursday is given to class work, and the second Thursday devoted to sacrament, prayer, and testimony. There is no doubt but what these meetings are bearing fruit in the lives of our priesthood. The spirit of all the membership on the east side of the city is that of cooperation, brotherly love, and willingness to serve.

Roseville

Roseville prayer services on Wednesday evening are well attended. Recently there has been an abundance of God's Spirit, more so than usual, and the meetings are truly enjoyed. Following the prayer meeting of July 12, Brother Case met with the priesthood. Much good was received from his suggestions and inspiring talk. The pastor, Leo Willsie, has moved from Detroit to a place near the church, that he might better serve as a pastor to this group.

Topeka, Kansas

621 Jackson Street, Floor 3

August 5.—Those who attended district conference at Fanning July 19 and 20 were Brother and Sister O. E. Weedmark, Sister B. F. Deller and daughters, Ardis and Dorothy, Sister C. J. Sheets, Sister H. C. Pitsenberger, and L. M. Pitsenberger and father.

The theme of Brother F. O. Kelley Sunday morning, July 27, was "The right use of material things." Jesus did not possess them but pointed out their relationship to life here.

Brother James Welch passed to his reward at Christ's Hospital Sunday morning, July 27. He had suffered for about four years. Was baptized into the church by C. E.

Harpe at the Y. M. C. A. three years ago. He left a beautiful testimony to his loved ones and friends. Interment was in the Burlingame Cemetery. Elder James Baillie preached the sermon from the Scranton Church. The Oakland Methodist pastor, R. O. Gilpin, assisted. The Saints extend their sympathy to the bereaved family.

The Women's Department enjoyed the regular monthly social at the home of Sister Anna Alfrey in the country. A nice program with refreshments had been prepared by the hostess, and a surprise for one of the members, Sister Vida Bootman Zirkle.

The sacramental service for August was in charge of B. F. Deller, assisted by O. E. Weedmark. Brother Deller read from 1 Corinthians 11:23 for the theme of his remarks, stating that the sacrament is one of the times that we may have rest and peace of mind if we come and partake of the emblems in the right attitude.

Cottage prayer meetings have been held at the home of Sister Conard, Sister Alfrey, O. E. Weedmark, and B. F. Deller.

Rock Island, Illinois

The Rock Island church was the scene of a pretty baptismal service Sunday, July 13, when three children were immersed in the basement font. A lattice work of flowers above and floating bouquets below made the rite pleasing and impressive. Elder L. W. Stiegel, of Moline, led Robert Spengler, and Alice and Warren Skaggs into their new covenant while friends and relatives joined in singing those sacred hymns which help to make the service a dedication. Robert is the son of Sister Ethel Spengler of this city, but Alice and Warren are the first offerings of their family. The Department of Religious Education, under the supervision of Brother L. A. White, has been effective in bringing the gospel to these young people, and their parents look kindly upon their choice, although they themselves have not yet accepted the gospel.

The Children's Day program in June was well attended, and the numbers were interesting and varied. The primary and beginner departments gave juvenile selections and songs of unusual merit, and the Oriole Girls gave a short play.

On July 4 a Sunday school picnic was held at the Black Hawk State Park. In spite of unfavorable weather in the morning, the event was a decided success. In the evening the crowd gathered at the home of Brother A. J. Gray and watched the display of city fireworks from his lawn.

The Men's Club held an all-week social on the lawn of the church and sold refreshments to the visitors of the Night Baseball games nearby. A neat sum was realized, and the spirit of good fellowship was enjoyed in their cooperative effort.

Several of our young people attended the Camp at Nauvoo last month and report an interesting and enjoyable time. As many as can make arrangements are planning to attend the Nauvoo reunion. We feel as though we belong to that district when reunion time comes, for we have dispensed with ours for the past two years.

The Board of Stewards is considering plans to make the church lawn attractive. A considerable sum has been appropriated for shrubbery, and we anticipate results which will enhance the beauty of the church premises.

Ten Orioles are meeting regularly during the summer months and doing a variety of interesting things. They hope to be able to spend a few days camping before the end of the season.

District President E. R. Davis is spending a few weeks in rest and recuperation in the Ozarks in one of the church cabins. We trust that he and his family are enjoying a pleasant vacation and will return in good health. Brother Amos T. Higdon, district missionary, who has been confined to his home in Independence by serious illness, writes that he is feeling better, and we are pleased with the hope that he may not be much longer away from us.

We hope to accomplish much more in the future to make our branch an effective unit in developing the Zionite ideals of Christian living.

Kansas City Stake

Central

On Wednesday evening, August 6, at 8.30, the marriage of Miss Kathryn Skinner, daughter of Bishop C. A. Skinner of the Kansas City Stake, and Mr. Joseph H. Westwood, jr., was solemnized at the church before a host of friends and relatives, Elder Cyril E. Wight officiating. Preceding the ceremony, Mr. Evan Fry played a program of organ music. Mrs. Frances Norris sang "Beloved." Miss Delphine Skinner, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Miss Helen Anthony and Miss Louise Lewis were the bridesmaids. Mr. LeRoy Smith was best man to Mr. Westwood, and Mr. Dean Redfield and Mr. Windsor Parker were the groomsmen. Mr. Craig Siegfried, Mr. Mike Klig, and Mr. Paul Gould acted as ushers. Following a honeymoon in Colorado, Mr. and Mrs. Westwood will make their home in Independence.

Sunday brought relief from the intense heat through which this vicinity has been passing for the past few weeks. There was only a fair attendance at the worship period. The services for the morning had been arranged by the Excelsior Class. The morning prelude, "Excelsior" Medley, was played by Florence Short, hymn No. 110 Zion's Praises being sung. Everett Bowser offered the invocation, after which Mrs. Everett Bowser and Miss Helen Anthony rendered a very pleasing piano duet.

At the conclusion of the lesson study, at the service period, Marguerite Johnson Blaine and Luella Wight sang a very beautiful duet. Elder Leonard Lea was the speaker of the hour, giving a very fine discourse.

The evening service was preceded by community singing, which was entered into very energetically. Bishop M. H. Siegfried was the speaker of the hour.

The stake O. B. K.'s are sponsoring a picnic at Swope Park Labor Day. The stake tennis tournament will be played, and there will be plenty of croquet and games for old and young and a good time is assured.

Brother and Sister Herbert Bleil, of Memphis, Tennessee, were welcomed visitors at the services Sunday.

Davidson, Oklahoma

August 2.—Because of much illness and other misfortunes, regular meetings have not been so well attended during the last two months. Some of the members have been forced to work a few Sundays in order to save their crops from sand storms which have swept the country. There has been no rain since June 14, and the mercury has been around the one hundred and one hundred and ten mark part of the time.

Since the month of March, there has been considerable illness among the people. Brother Troy Parker, who was stricken with rheumatism the last of March, is now improved but is still under the care of the doctor. Zella Dean, the two-year-old daughter of Brother and Sister Roy Skinner, has been critically ill for two months with pneumonia. Her condition is still dangerous. Everything has been done for her, it seems, that human hands can do, and we have placed her in the hands of the heavenly Father. B. T., little son of Brother and Sister Ben Simmons, is passing through an uncomfortable state of Saint Vitus's Dance, having no control of any part of his body. It is becoming difficult for him to talk.

From June 28 until July 13, we were privileged to have with us Patriarch Ammon White, whose inspirational sermons and lectures were valuable and instructive to the members. They brought cheer and comfort to the branch.

A number of visitors have called on Saints in Davidson, and among them is Sister Z. Z. Renfroe, of Oklahoma City, who is here while Brother Renfroe conducts a series of meetings in Wetumka, Oklahoma. He is assisted in music by his cousin, Miss Edythe Skinner of Davidson, and Miss Jessie Norris, of Chickasha, Oklahoma.

The new church school plan has recently been adopted, and we are eager for everyone to get well again in order that each officer can fill his place.

At times things look rather discouraging, but we are thankful that all is as well as it is. We have no desire to give up but want to let adversity make us feel the need for more consecrated effort.

Gladstone, Michigan

The Saints of Gladstone are progressing in the great work of the Lord.

May 13 Missionary J. J. Ledsworth came to this branch and started a series of missionary services. He was given a hearty welcome. One of the first things he did was to organize the young people and get them working together. He preached some excellent sermons, every discourse seeming to be just what we needed. The services continued for four weeks, and during that time Brother Ledsworth baptized nine young people into the church.

Meetings were then closed in Gladstone and Brother Ledsworth opened services at Rapid River, eight miles from here. That was a new opening, and some of our number went up each evening to help. Services continued there with good interest for two weeks.

Then on June 21 and 22 we had a two-day gathering at Gladstone. District President Elmer Parkes was here, and some wonderful meetings were enjoyed. The Saints and many nonmembers are hoping that the time is not distant when our missionary will again be here.

Stockton, California

Clay and Sutter Streets

The first activity since our last letter was the Easter play presented in the Central Methodist Church April 29 under the auspices of the Department of Recreation and Expression and directed by Doctor W. C. Wood, instructor of religious dramatics at the college of the Pacific. This play was a means of favorably advertising our church and congregation among the denominations of the city.

May 2 a basket social was held in the lower auditorium of the church, clearing more than fifteen dollars.

A class in voice culture was organized May 12 in charge of Miss Felt and is progressing. Professor A. J. Elmer of the Peffer Music Company having taken the class during Miss Felt's vacation, is also training an orchestra to function in the future at church services.

The Department of Women had a bake sale May 15 which brought in a sum of almost thirty-five dollars.

Brother J. L. Bussell, of Sacramento ably occupied the pulpit May 18, speaking words of counsel and encouragement. Another of the visiting priesthood who favored Stockton Branch with a sermon was Elder O. E. Ensley, of Walnut Grove, who also brought his violin and gave us a musical treat.

May 23 the Saints gathered for an old-time get together party, and each family gave a present to the kitchen. Many useful articles were thus collected.

A fine baby boy was born in the home of Brother Clovis Mallory April 29.

May 26 faithful Sister Sarah Evans passed to the great beyond. After a funeral service conducted at the Wallace Funeral Parlors, the body was shipped to Norfolk, Nebraska, where interment was beside her husband, who preceded her many years.

May 31 Betty Vallem was united in marriage to Horace Smith in Oakland, where the couple will make their home.

The Department of Women gave a food sale June 7, which placed in the treasury more than sixty dollars. This was supplemented by a liberal offering from a brother, and the cost of the improvements on the church was paid off.

The priesthood conference held in Stockton June 7 and 8 was well attended and proved a spiritual uplift to the members. During this service the following babies were blessed under the hands of District President G. P. Levitt and Bishop J. B. Carmichael: Leland Harold Mallory, Virginia Gay Delarm, and Ellabeth Arvene Petz.

Our offering for Sacrifice Week amounted to $163.70.

The annual Sunday school picnic was held in Oak Park July 17. The attendance was forty-five and would have been much larger had it not been that many of the members were unable to leave their posts of duty on that day.

Sister Julia Kinney, who has been in poor health for several months, passed from earthly life July 19 and was buried July 23. District President G. P. Levitt conducted the services.

Quite a representation of our branch attended the district conference in Berkeley, and even greater preparations are being made for the young people's camp at Irvington August 6 to 10.

The Department of Women has been busy every week quilting and making aprons. They are preparing for their annual bazaar.

Since the beginning of the year the Recreation and Expression Department has taken on a new lease of life under the able leadership of Sister Mayme Holden. New classes have been organized, and the work during the study period is going along well. A variety of programs has been furnished. The old and young have taken a great interest in dramatics, and several plays have been successfully presented. One of these was "Ruth and Naomi," and was by request presented at Sacramento during the district conference March 1. The Easter play, "Peter's vision," was given by a cast of twenty players ranging in age from four to sixty years. It was most impressive and brought a wonderful lesson. The play was written and directed by Doctor Wood, of the College of the Pacific. We are thankful to him for his patient efforts with us. By request this play was also given at Modesto Branch the following Sunday, and Tuesday at the Central Methodist Church at Stockton.

Good times and outings for the young members of this department have this summer included wiener bakes and swimming parties.

On Children's Day, June 8, the junior class of the Department of Recreation and expression presented the play "Moses in the bulrushes."

Our superintendent now has Brother Closson's Game Book, and already we have noted improvement on our playground.

Tells Gospel Story with Gladness

By W. A. Smith

Vermillion, Kansas, August 8.—I am still telling the beautiful gospel story to the children of men and also to the Saints.

Sunday, August 3, I closed a series of meetings at Blue Rapids, Kansas, where I had been nearly two weeks. There the Lord was present, and we felt his power. A week ago last Sunday I led a fine young man into the waters of baptism, inducting him into the kingdom of God. He is now rejoicing in the beautiful gospel of Christ.

The Saints of Blue Rapids are feeling encouraged in the work of the Lord. We began meetings at the above place in a private home, asking the audience to assemble on the ## Appointment of Bishop's Agent

On account of the appointment of Ward A. Hougas as missionary to the Far West Stake, he has resigned as bishop's agent of the Eastern Colorado District, the same to be effective July 31. The Presiding Bishopric therefore appoints Ralph Vincent, Otis, Colorado, as bishop's agent to the Eastern Colorado District, to become effective August 1, 1930.

The solicitors of this district are requested to forward their reports for the month of July to Brother Hougas, as heretofore. Thereafter they will report to Brother Vincent at the above address.

We feel Brother Vincent is well equipped to handle the duties thus placed upon him and will command the confidence of the membership in this district.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By M. H. Siegfried.

Approved by the First Presidency,
By Frederick M. Smith, August 9, 1930.

Two-day Meeting

Two-day meetings to be held in the Southern Wisconsin District during the months of August and September, 1930: Milwaukee Branch, August 30, 31. Beloit, September 6, 7. Lancaster, September 13, 14. Delavan, September 21. Programs definitely outlining the work at each place will be sent to each branch president in the district. Apostle D. T. Williams will be with us at Milwaukee, and we hope at Beloit. Presiding Patriarch F. A. Smith will be at Lancaster. We also expect our missionary, C. A. Whitehead, to be with us at these meetings. Bishop C. J. Hunt will be in conspicuous evidence at all these services. Brother Carl Wirth will make arrangements for special music, cooperating with the local workers.—Amos Berve, District President.

Pastoral

Sunday School Workers and Saints of Southern Missouri District: While I was attending the district conference at Thayer, Missouri, it fell to my lot to be elected your district Sunday school superintendent. As a lover of Sunday school work, I desire to manifest a keen interest in the whole district. I feel my weakness in endeavoring to shoulder such responsibility and am tempted to wish that some one else had been preferred. However, since this is not the case, I shall endeavor to do my best to help carry on the work.

I hope that each Sunday in the work will mean a step forward. I hope that the district as a whole will take new courage and will look into every angle for improvement in this department of the work. We want our school to grow. I am at the service of all and ask the hearty cooperation of the members, especially the leaders. I wish that I might meet the entire district in person, and hope I shall in the near future.

Will the superintendent of each school in the district please lawn. Fair attendance, good liberty, and marked attention characterized the meetings.

Yesterday we had an inspiring experience in leading a white-haired brother into the water. He is nearly ninety-one years of age. "God is indeed marshaling his army for the rescue of his truth; he is calling now to battle both the aged and the youth."

Saints, let us be valiant soldiers in the army of the Lord, just as this our aged brother was a valiant soldier for his country. Let us be faithful and diligent.

write me, in order that I may get each group located and know where to come when I am ready to pay you a visit? We have a good school at Kennett, but there is much room for improvement. My prayers are for the church at large.

Conference Minutes

NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.—The semiannual conference of Northeastern Kansas District convened at Fanning, Kansas, July 19 and 20. Dave Little, district president, with whom was associated Apostle E. J. Gleazer, presided. The minutes of the previous meeting were read. The report of District Missionary W. A. Smith was read. A summarized report of the district president was read, after which Brother Gleazer briefly called attention to some of the needs at various points, suggesting a possible solution for the respective problems. Statistical reports from Atchison and Fanning were read. Atchison showed a net gain of six by transfer, while Fanning's report showed monthly gain and loss for five months, their present enrollment showing 184. Departmental reports were read from superintendents of Sunday school, Recreation and Expression, and Women's Departments. Following the reading of the bishop's agent's report, Brother Weedmark was instructed to post a copy of it in all the locals. Bills allowed are: District secretary, $1.12; district president, $15. The recommendation for ordination of Gilbert F. Hedrick to the office of elder was submitted to the conference by Apostle Gleazer, and approved. District officers were elected as follows: District President, Dave Little; counselors, William Twombly and E. L. Bullard were approved; secretary, Sister H. C. Pitsenberger; Sunday school superintendent, Gilbert F. Hedrick; superintendent of Recreation and Expression, L. M. Pitsenberger; Department of Women, Sister W. H. Dittmore; chorister, Sister B. F. Deller; Sunday school secretary, Sister Eva Hedrick; secretary Recreation and Expression, Sister H. C. Pitsenberger; Brother Tilden was elected to succeed himself on the auditing committee. Bishop's Agent O. E. Weedmark was sustained by vote. His report showed total general church funds received and sent to the Bishop $664.21; total receipts of district $82.01; total disbursements 36.89; balance on hand $45.12. Conference adjourned in harmony with previous legislation, time and place being left to district president.

Married

FISHER-HILL.—Ruth Viola Fisher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund H. Fisher of 18 Lee Street, Winter Hill, Massachusetts, was married Monday evening, August 4, at 8 o'clock, to Frederick Warren Hill, son of Thomas F. Hill, of Malden. The ceremony took place at Onset, David E. Dowker of Somerville officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father. The maid of honor was Miss Esther L. Fisher, sister of the bride. The bridesmaids were the Misses Elizabeth Fisher, and Ruth Studley of Boston. Little Miss Marjorie Carter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace R. Carter, of Somerville, was the flower girl. The best man was Roy Kingsley, of East Braintree. The ushers were Mortimer E. Fisher, Harry Duncan of Weymouth, Harold M. Gunsolley of Somerville, and Sanford L. Fisher. Following the ceremony a reception was held in the pine grove outside the church, which was attended by more than five hundred guests. Here the principals received. During the ceremony, and for a half hour before it, the organ was played by Mrs. Harold M. Gunsolley. Mrs. Edmund A. Fox, of Providence, Rhode Island, rendered "Because." The couple chose the White Mountains and Quebec for their honeymoon trip, and upon their return will reside at the Concord-Lexington apartments, in Winter Hill. The bride is a graduate of Somerville High School, the Leland Powers School of the Spoken Word, and the Phidelah Rice School, of Oak Bluffs. She has also attended Boston and Columbia Universities, and was head of the dramatic department of Graceland College, Iowa, for three years. The groom is in the business of florist at 321 Broadway, Somerville. The church was prettily decorated with small cedar trees, palms, laurel, and baskets of gladioli and liatris in pastel shades.

On July 19, 1887, she was united in marriage to Sherdan E. Livingston, to which union there were born nine children, seven sons and two daughters. Eight remain to mourn the loss of a mother; one son preceded her in death. She leaves, then, her husband, six sons, Lee, of Ella, Wisconsin; Mrs. Mary Mair, of Chetek, Wisconsin; Frank, of Porcupine; Ralph, of Minneapolis, Minnesota; William, of Long Beach, California; Emmet, of New York City; Sherdan, jr., and Miss Belle of the home. Shakespeare, and the interment was in the little cemetery near the Saints chapel in the Porcupine Valley. She was faithful to her covenant, a loyal wife, a loving mother, and a faithful friend.

Book of Doctrine and Covenants

The man who knows his Bible is wise, for it contains the gospel of the Son of God, the gospel of salvation.

If he has the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and searches its pages, he sees the consistency of the three, and the words of the old prophet of Israel come to have a new meaning to him: "A threefold cord is not quickly broken."

Get your Doctrine and Covenants and search its pages. It has helped others; it has help for you. Have an extra copy for loaning to inquirers. Let the word of the Lord become familiar and precious to you. 803C, Cloth, 80c; 803L, stiff leather, $1.25; 803F, flexible morocco, $3.25.

Health and Religion

Last week I had an article on nurse-training at the Independence Sanitarium and Hospital, and in it I mentioned the hope that that institution might rapidly enlarge as the health center of the church. The care of our sick has always been a task to which this church has with zeal addressed itself. We as a people believe firmly in prayer, administration, and the exercise of faith as a factor in healing.

The art of healing has long been a noble profession, one of the oldest. To be sure, its opportunities and practices have at times been greatly abused, and the profession of healing has thus at times been stigmatized. But I have always believed that the science of medicine and healing is closely allied to true religion, and that God wants his people to make all consistent endeavor to perfect themselves in the science of healing in the broadest sense. In fact, the studies of our youths in the field of medicine should not be confined to sickness and the remedies for healing, but should take in the broader field of health and how to maintain it and prevent disease.

I have always believed that in the Word of Wisdom as given to us there is the foundation for a school of medicine which is broad enough to challenge the best that our young people who enter the great field of medicine have.

I am always glad to see some of our people studying medicine, but regret to see so many limiting themselves to small fields of it. The whole field of medicine, the art of healing, and the art of keeping well should be in the view of our students of medicine. Our school of medicine should be superimposed upon the best of the science so far as developed. We should lead!

And all this should be based on religion, the idea that we are serving God in following such a course and practice.

Zion should be beckoning our medical students as well as all others. It is a wonderful appeal for us to do our best, and live so close to God and the principles of our religion that our own powers are augmented by divine support and grace. Thus we can excel all others. In this, too, we need faith.

Historical Program for September

For Local Branches

Subject: "Review of the Early Church."

With the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith in June, 1844, the period known in the church as "the dark and cloudy day" began. With the loss of its prophet-president, the church was soon in the throes of disunion and schism over its leadership.

At this point it may be well to look back over the history of the early church and review its events and accomplishments. Fourteen years—remarkable years—portentous years—glorious years! Years of sacrifice and hardship, yet years of joy and blessing in the Work: this was the history of the early church.

Suggested Program

Song: "Sweet the time, exceeding sweet," number 369, Saints' Hymnal.

Prayer: Thanks for the reputation and religious freedom which the church now enjoys, and for those of the early church whose devotion made this possible for us.

Music: Special number.

Short Talk: Review of significant events in the early church, "From Palmyra to Nauvoo."

Song: "You may sing of the beauty of mountain and dale," number 168, Saints' Hymnal.

Short Talk: Review of the accomplishments of the early church "From 1830 to 1844."

Song: "Let us shake off the coals from our garments," number 377, Saints' Hymnal.

Play: "The tragedy of Carthage," number nine of "Conversations," by Elbert A. Smith; published in the September number of Vision.

*Challenge: That the spirit of the martyrs might also move us.

Benediction:

*This should be a very short but a well-prepared charge, to emphasize our responsibility to carry on today the work for which the martyrs gave their lives, and to do so with the same devotion and zeal which prompted the early pioneers of the church.

Necessities and Luxuries

In the midst of a general business depression, with a serious unemployment situation, and added to these difficulties the privation of a rather bad drought, the ordinary contributions to charitable, benevolent, and religious institutions suffer a restriction. Though prosperity has continued to flourish in some newspaper offices and in the Chambers of Commerce, it does not seem to have got beyond the doors of those magic places to the people. There is no practical value in deceiving ourselves as to the actual situation. Hard times must be faced if they exist, and we can not, ostrich-like, shut our eyes to them.

It is true that we must first provide for the necessities of life. Fathers can not give money for foreign missions while their own children need food and clothing. The churches and charitable institutions do not wish to support themselves by depriving people of their needed support. It is their business to help equalize the benefits of society and industry, and they do not serve one portion of the population to the detriment of another.

But when we compare the situation in this country with the state of other countries, we doubt that our people know anything about want. Some, it is true, suffer badly. But many others will suffer the enormous privation of having to reduce the number of movies per week, or their cars will have to remain in the garages more than usual, or perhaps some of the ladies will have to do with last year's fur coat. Perhaps some will have to curtail their vacation plans. Thus do many people of this country grievously suffer.

The work of the church has an importance which should not be ignored. Like one's health, it may be neglected for a time, but not with impunity. The price of neglect must be paid in either case, sooner or later. If the church does not carry on its work, the people of the church suffer.

We need to distinguish between actual necessities and imagined necessities. When the actual needs are satisfied, it is time to do something for the church, the charitable and the benevolent institutions. Our luxuries can come afterward.

The missionaries ought to be kept in the field; their families must receive money for the actual needs. To continue the great work to which it is called, the church needs all the support that the people can give. In times of stress like these, when it is easy to refrain from sending tithes and offerings, the membership should remember the needs of the church, the great work, and the program to be accomplished.

Zionics

It is impossible for us to produce the real fruits of Zion while we neglect or disregard the basic principles upon which Zion is to be built. The Master gathers up the significance of the Zion law in his answer to a certain lawyer: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself." The further command was to "Do this and thou shalt live."

Man will serve the thing, the being, or the cause he loves; the depth of that love is measured in proportion to the service rendered. Love and service, therefore, are inseparable, and are fundamental to the establishment of Zion: "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" In other words, it is paradoxical to say, "I love the Lord," while a demonstration of that love through service is wanting. "I came not to be ministered unto, but to minister," is the best evidence of Christ's love for humanity. The best evidence of our love for our fellow men is through an expression of service, representative of Jesus Christ.

The admonition is often heard: "Get religion." According to the Master, religion is not something that can be borrowed or purchased. It is something that must be expressed or given, for the Master gives us to understand definitely that religion is measured by the fruit borne both as to quantity and quality: "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." Our very acts proclaim our religion good, bad, or indifferent. It is not enough to say, "I am a Christian," for by issuing such a statement, we are merely telling the people what we want them to believe we are. Our acts, beyond a doubt, tell the people what we really are.

The religion of Jesus Christ, therefore, should be a religion which would reflect the Christ life in our every act.

"I want to do right," is a statement heard so often that it practically amounts to a platitude. A person usually does the thing he wants to do, provided the desire is sufficiently deep-seated. The difficulty seems to be that this self-administered tonic stimulates for the moment only. However, it is said that "as a man thinketh, so is he," and it is possible that constantly encouraging the thought,

"I want to do right," will in time strengthen the resolution or good intentions until worth-while acts will finally result. The suggestion is offered: "Keep on wanting to do right."

If Zion is to be a reality, new spiritual depths must be sounded; new forces must be mobilized, and the vision of the Christ must become the vision of the people, so that the real significance of the Lord's prayer will come to the people to the extent that a prayer may be offered under the intelligence which comes with light: "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." To this Edenic condition we can invite our Christ to come, and from which, according to his words, he can not absent himself. May our God speed that day.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Promotion Service for the Kindergarten and Primary Departments

By Myrtle A. Weber

Promotion Day should be a happy day for the children. During the past few weeks, particularly, the superintendent should have been preparing the children for promotion day—helping them to build right attitudes toward promotion. Those eligible for promotion should occasionally have been referred to as "our bigger boys and girls who will soon go to the Primary (or Junior) Department."

It will be difficult for anyone else but the superintendent of the Kindergarten and Primary Departments to plan in detail for the promotion service of her group. Therefore, the suggestions given here are only suggestions and must needs be adapted and used as the superintendent thinks best.

A promotion service will be of far greater value to the children if held within their own department room than one general program conducted by the entire school. If it is at all possible, plan to have the service, or a part of it, in your own department room. At the close of the program those being promoted may go to the general assembly room to receive their certificates of promotion from the church school director.

If your room is large enough, send invitations to the parents of all the children to attend the morning session. If your room is small, send invitations only to the parents of those being promoted. Remember, the service is not intended as an entertainment for adults nor as an opportunity for the children to "show off." the promotion exercises should not give opportunity for individual children to show what they have learned, but that as a group the children may express through song and verse and prayer and story some of the truths which emphasize the heavenly Father's love and care for the things he has created, and express their gratitude to him. As far as possible preserve the usual informality and variety.

Let the children have a share in planning the program and in making the room attractive. They may choose their favorite songs, stories, pictures, etc., with the teacher's guidance in the final selection. Decorate with ribbon or tissue paper the chairs of those being promoted. Showers of acorns, autumn leaves, straw flowers, or the like, may be suspended from the decorations. Have the chairs grouped together on one side of the circle. Your room decorations should reflect the work done throughout the year. The offering basket today may be a large acorn made by using as the foundation a hollow bell (a Christmas bell will do). Cover the small end with green paper and pad the large end with brown crepe paper. Remove the clapper and invert the bell to receive the pennies. Autumn leaves, flowers, and flags or other decorations may be used which will give the room a festive look. The children must feel that this day is different from all the others.

If you plan to use the service suggested below you should have the following pictures on hand:

"The announcement," by Plockhorst, number 811.

"Holy night," by Muller, number 3284.

"Arrival of the shepherds," by Lerolle, number 620.

"Worship of the Wise Men," by Hofmann, number 797D.

"Childhood of Christ," by Hofmann, number 797F.

"Christ blessing little children," by Plockhorst, number 807.

All these pictures may be secured from the Perry Pictures Company, Malden, Massachusetts, size 10x12 inches, price 10 cents each. As the stories are told the pictures should be placed on an easel, blackboard, or wire, by the superintendent.

Promotion Service

Theme: Jesus, the Children's Friend

Superintendent: The heavenly Father is very good to us. He has given us everything we have. Tell me some of the things he has given you, which make you happy this morning. (Let the children enumerate.) "God is love." Let us sing our song that says God is love.

Song: "Nature's praises," from Zion's Praises, number 23.

"God is love," the little birdies,
In the tree-tops over head,
Seem to say with their sweet voices,
Praising him by whom they're fed.

Chorus:

God is love, God is love,
All things tell us, "God is love."

Superintendent: Today our big boys and girls are going to leave us and go into the Primary or Junior Department. There they will have a new teacher and a new class. I have some pictures here and I want these big boys and girls to tell us stories about them. After each story is told we will all sing a song about the picture or listen to music that tells us about it.

Picture: "The Announcement."

Story: Briefly told by a child.

(You will find it necessary to assist at times. When a child hesitates, tell a little bit of the story for him and then let him proceed.)

Music: "Christmas," from the Saints' Hymnal, number 22.

(Have this played very softly on the piano. The superintendent and her helpers may sing the song, if desired.)

Pictures: "Holy night" and "Arrival of the shepherds."

Story: By a child.

Song: "Luther's Cradle Hymn," to be sung by the whole department:

Away in a manger, no crib for his bed,
The little Lord Jesus laid down his sweet head.
The stars in the sky looked down where he lay,
The little Lord Jesus asleep on the hay.

The cattle are lowing, the baby awakes,
But the little Lord Jesus no crying He makes.
I love thee, Lord Jesus, look down from the sky
And stay by my cradle till morning is nigh.

Picture: "Worship of the Wise Men."

Story: By a child.

Music: "We three kings of Orient are," to be sung to the children; first verse and chorus, only.

Picture: "Childhood of Christ."

Song: "Like Jesus," from Child-Land, Book 2, page 21. To be sung by the whole department. (This song may be sung to the tune, "The Child of Galilee," number 36 in Zion's Praises, using the music of the verse only.)

I like to think that Jesus,
Was once a little child,
And everybody loved him,
He was so kind and mild.

Chorus:

I want to be like Jesus,
So good and loving too,
I want to do for Jesus,
What he would have me do.

He loved the birds and flowers,
And all things weak and small,
He knew that God, his Father,
Had made and loved them all.

Picture: "Christ blessing little children."

Story: By a child.

Superintendent: In our Bible we read that when the little children were brought to Jesus he said: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God."—Mark 10: 14. (Read this quotation to the children from the Bible.) We have a song that says that Jesus loves us because the Bible tells us so. Have "Jesus loves me" played on the piano.

Song: "Jesus loves me." To be sung by the whole department. The children may clap hands in rhythm to the music while they sing.

Jesus loves me, this I know,
For the Bible tells me so.
Little ones to Him belong,
They are weak, but He is strong.

Chorus:

Yes, Jesus loves me,
Yes, Jesus loves me,
Yes, Jesus loves me,
The Bible tells me so.

Prayer for those being promoted.

Those who are promoted adjourn to the church auditorium where they receive their certificates of promotion. As they march out have the other children sing, "Good morning to you," substituting "Good-bye" for "Good morning."

Nothing can overstate the value of our children. They are not alone the hope of the future: they are the joy and the purpose of the present. A home is little more than a well-appointed hotel suite until there are children. Children are the payment this generation makes for its debt to society, contracted for its being brought into the world and started in life.

The Supervisor of the Church School

Planning the Year's Work

This is the time of year for the making of plans for the future. Whatever may be the beginning of the legal year, September and October are the months that begin the year for the church school. Whatever is accomplished during the following twelve months will be largely determined by what is planned in those two.

There will be the promoted students in the higher classes, and new tiny tots among the kindergartners and beginner-primaries. There will be teachers to replace, new ones to secure, and old ones to encourage. The supervisor should see them all individually for a good talk concerning the year's work with their particular groups, and the relation of their work to the rest of the school. Then he should get all teachers together for a good meeting. And it wouldn't hurt to remember that teachers, too, are human, and that it might help to have a social time in a home after the business of the evening is finished.

Plan the program ahead. Nothing is more important than this, for the church school should be operated according to plan. One should not wait until late in November to ask, "Shall we have a Christmas play?" It should be decided now. General plans can be laid out. Specific plans should be made ahead of time for each month.

The teachers should meet once a month. The material for the teachers' and officers' meetings, furnished once each month by C. B. Woodstock, should be used for general work; and the specific problems of the local group should be used for discussion. Much good can be accomplished in these meetings, in exchange of ideas and in stimulating workers to better efforts.

LEONARD LEA.

Price of "Quarterlies" Increased

All Quarterlies will hereafter cost fifty cents for a year's subscription, and fifteen cents for a single copy. The cost of production has been increased by the greatly increased number of Quarterlies and the smaller circulation of each kind. Presidents and secretaries of branches should take notice of this fact in arranging the year's budget and in making remittances to the Herald Publishing House.

Everything that could possibly be done has been done to increase the worth and utility of the Quarterlies. If they are compared with the quarterlies produced by other denominations, as to quality and utility of material, as to the readability of the type, and as to the kind of paper used, they will be found to be superior.

An Examination for Parents

The following paragraphs were written in answer to an examination question in a correspondence course offered through our Department of Religious Education. Parents of small children might well take an examination of their own homes by using these suggestions as a measuring rod. How would your home rate?

"If I were to visit the homes of a number of three-year-old children who were to enter into my beginner or kindergarten department in the church school, I would hope first to find the children all properly nourished and clothed, so as to give them the proper health and physical background. On this depends their mental and spiritual development. A child who is hungry can not be interested in learning how to do anything or about anything; neither is he interested if he is dressed insufficiently or overdressed. He should be dressed in a manner that will not require him to think of his clothing. Then his mind will be free for me to do with as I will.

"Then I should hope to find some mental or intellectual preparation or background for a foundation on which to build. I should expect a well-formed group of habits, as willingness to cooperate with leaders (supposing of course the leaders were qualified to gain his attention), obedience, cheerfulness, consideration for others' rights and feelings, helpfulness, freedom of speech and action in so far as is becoming to a child. These I should not expect to find in a developed state, but a start should have been made toward development. I would hope to find parents who had enough interest in his welfare to investigate my methods, aims, etc. I would hope to find his instincts, such as manipulation, curiosity, affection, and social reactions, having full expression; and those such as fear and self-preservation being guided along channels that would make his character as a rosebud all ready to burst out in blossom. I would want to see the father and mother united in one purpose to be the best of stewards over the most precious stewardship—a little life. They themselves must be prepared with strong physical bodies, alert, active minds, and spiritual experiences rich enough to be able to interpret to the child the beauties of life, that, as he develops he may be able to grasp them. They must take time to help him interpret the things around him and to call his attention to things in order to train his powers of observation. They must love him and shield him as he makes his adjustment to his new environment—this world. They must be patient and understanding at all times. They must provide him with equipment whereby he may develop himself; not necessarily expensive equipment, but of the type the child will enjoy handling and learning about. For instance, two sticks nailed together by father make a better airplane oftentimes than one purchased in a store; and mother might make a little rag doll that would be a much better bed mate than the hard, cold, fuzzy-haired one from 'Santa Claus.' They must be alert and finding the opportunities to sow the little seed which bring forth such rich harvest in the character development of the child."

Do You Get Discouraged, Too?

A good sister who has been known to give abundantly of her time and effort for a number of years to keep a struggling branch together, wrote recently of more hopeful conditions. Her keen analysis reveals a situation which may be typical of other places.

She writes:

We are having Sunday school again. We came near losing both our branch and our school, but some of the folks woke up and repented and made new promises. I've pulled on this load so many years and with such negligible results that I am not very sanguine yet of the results. Comparing ourselves to a multiple hitch of horses, I would say that if there could be a different "hook up" in some instances, there might be better results. But after numerous trials, I know that when "Dolly" gets peeved she will kick and bite everyone she is near. Poor old "Bill" would do well if he had a better chance, but with such a teammate it isn't any use to expect much from him.

Some of the others will pull for a while, until they see a tempting bit of pasture, and then they will take another vacation. And all the colts are strayed to far pastures. Just a few decrepit plugs will be the main support, and while they have a splendid spirit, their capabilities for work are about used up. Isn't that an inspiring prospect?

We are not sure that it is all in the "hook-up," though certainly teamwork is the thing we need. Workers who are inclined to pull back in the harness, or even to lie down cross wise of the furrow, may have to be unhitched and left behind. The work to which we are called is vastly too important to admit of further delays.

We are concerned, too, for the colts in far pastures. However, we have much faith in the young people of our church, where the gospel has been lived consistently by fathers and mothers and where as children they have grown up in the knowledge and appreciation of the church and its services. It is inevitable that our ambitious youth seek distant pasture in this day of education and specialization. Impelled by true and worthy motive, they will yet do their share in promoting the Lord's work.

We are less hopeful for those who have disdained wise counsel and have sought pasture in prodigal ways, which enervate, dissipate, and wreck the choicest of God-given gifts. Our faith and prayer goes out in their behalf, for they also are heirs of the heavenly promise, and are precious in the sight of Him who gave himself that man might be freed from sin.

Perhaps we are especially concerned for the future leadership of the church. In a few years the whole problem must be left with the folks who now are in their teens. May we who must bear the burden today live so nobly and serve so faithfully that, under divine guidance and benediction, our part in the Master's work shall not suffer. So may we do real teamwork, and even the colts, better equipped and better trained than we, shall join us happily in the yet greater work of tomorrow.

Church School Worship Services

By Edith Harkness

September! How many things crowd our minds as we look forward to this month of the year. Vacation time will be over. Children and youth return to school. Renewed activity in all avenues of life. It is customary to take an inventory of our material assets and liabilities at the beginning of a new year, but now is a good time to take an inventory of our spiritual condition, anticipate our needs, and plan with insight and determination for the months ahead. This month has two special days which we should stress, Graceland College Day and Rally Day. The worship service will make a beautiful setting for any program or special numbers that may be given. Those in charge should plan carefully that nothing may interrupt the meditations of those who worship.

"The way to freedom" has been selected as a theme for the month, giving emphasis to the "place of law" and "obedience to law" in our everyday life. Jesus said, "I am the way"—the way to freedom, and at another time, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

If, besides the piano and organ, other instruments are available, the voluntary on the succeeding Sundays may feature one of these instruments. If printed services are not used, special prayers and poetical selections may be written on the blackboard where all can read, or they may be memorized and given by individuals or classes.

FIRST SUNDAY: "I would be free."

Voluntary.

Opening Thought: (This may be written on the blackboard where all can read and meditate as quiet music is played, after which the Leader may read it quietly, but with emphasis.)

"Is true Freedom but to break
Fetters for our own dear sake,
And with leathern hearts, forget
That we owe mankind a debt?
No! true freedom is to share
All the chains our brothers wear,
And with heart and mind to be Earnest to make men free."

Special Number: "Watchman, tell us of the night," 316 Saints' Hymnal.

Note: This may be sung in an adjoining room, a voice singing the first two lines and a heavier voice answering, or the question may be sung from the back of the church, and the "Watchman" answering from the platform. Omit chorus.

Scriptural selections: Read by leader. (School will rise.)
John 14: 5, 6; John 8: 31b, 32.

Hymn: "Soldiers of Christ, arise," 60 Saints' Hymnal.

Prayer: (This may be printed, written on blackboard and read in unison, or prepared by a class of young people.)

"That we might be free from selfishness and greed,
That we might be free from deceit and a desire for show,
That we might be free from false conceptions of right,
That we might be free from all the urges of our lesser selves,
That we might find the Way to Freedom and be 'free indeed,'
We come to Thee, our Father in heaven, and ask thee to accept of us and be with us as we worship thee,
In the name of Thy Son, Jesus. Amen."

Three-minute Talk: "The meaning of personal liberty."

Three-minute Talk: "Can we do as we please?"

(The above talks should preferably be given by young men, but the last may be assigned to a young lady.)

Hymn: "God send us men whose aim 'twill be," 220 Hymnal for American Youth. Tune, 114 Saints' Hymnal.

Dismissal to classes and lesson study.

Announcements: These should be given as the classes re-assemble. Soft music will aid in keeping quiet. Teachers should caution pupils not to chat or visit preceding the sacramental service.

A Summing-Up: This talk should be by the pastor or a member of the priesthood qualified to sum up the "talks" of the preceding service with the theme of the morning and merge them into the sacramental service.

Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

God send us men whose aim 'twill be,
Not to defend some ancient creed,
But to live out the laws of Right
In every thought and word and deed.

God send us men alert and quick
His lofty precepts to translate,
Until the laws of Right become
The laws and habits of the state.

God send us men of steadfast will,
Patient, courageous, strong, and true;
With vision clear and mind equipped
His will to learn, his work to do.

God send us men with hearts ablaze
All truth to love, all wrong to hate;
These are the patriots nations need,
These are the bulwarks of the state.

—F. J. Gillman.

SECOND SUNDAY: "I will obey the law."

Voluntary.

Opening Thought: (Use same as previous Sunday. Music 218 Hymnal for American Youth.)

Rise up, O men of God!
Have done with lesser things;
Give heart and soul and mind and strength
To serve the King of kings.
Rise up, O men of God!
The church for you doth wait,
Her strength unequal to her task:
Rise up and make her great.

—W. P. Merrill.

Call to Worship: (School will rise.)

Leader: "The mighty God, even the Lord, hath spoken, and called the earth from the rising of the sun unto the going down thereof."

School: "Gather my saints together unto me; they that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice."

Leader: "Give ear, O my people, to my law: incline your ears to the words of my mouth."

School: "That they might set their hope in God, and not forget the works of God, but keep his commandments."

The Lord's Prayer: In unison.

Hymn: "God who is just and kind," 81 Saints' Hymnal.

Scriptural selections: "The ten commandments," Exodus 20: 1-17. "The price of a lie," Acts 5: 1-6. "A traitor to the law of friendship," Matthew 26: 47-50. "Parents of Jesus obey the law," Luke 2: 1-4.

Problems: (These should be read by a good reader; read slowly and with emphasis. No comments or discussion needed. A pause after each story will be effectual.)

"A few years ago, the name of Johnnie Titzel was known to every high school boy in Pennsylvania. By his strong character and great reverence for the laws of his country and of his school, he made it unpopular to crib, tell obscene stories, or gamble in the Alexander High School in Pittsburgh. He observed the law; he helped others to do so also."—Selected.

"Marion King got a good term mark in her senior geometry. Her problems were all completed and accurately done. But—she did not do them herself. She was popular with the boys and they did them for her. Was she honest or dishonest in her daily assignments?"—Selected.

"Richard says he knows some of the fellows in high school are breaking the rules of the student council. He has seen them do it, but he is not going to say anything about it. He says it is not his business; it is 'up to' the officers of the council and the teachers in the school. 'That's their job,' he says. Do you agree with Richard or not?"—Selected.

Note: Other problems may be found in Jesus' Teachings by Weston. Copyright, The Pilgrim Press.

Hymn: "Just for today," 124 Zion's Praises. (School will rise.)

Dismissal to classes and lesson study.

Announcements: (Plans for Rally Day should be well under way by this time and definite announcements may be made.)

Morning Sermon:

Closing Hymn: "Heavenly Father, grant thy blessing," 219 Saints' Hymnal.

Benediction:

THIRD SUNDAY: "I will help others to obey the law."

Voluntary.

Opening Thought: (Use as in preceding services.) Music 204 Hymnal for American Youth.)

Love thyself last. Look near, behold thy duty
To those who walk beside thee down life's road;
Make glad their days by little acts of beauty,
And help them bear the burden of earth's load.

Love thyself last. Look far, and find the stranger
Who staggers 'neath his sin and his despair;
Go lend a hand and lead him out of danger,
To heights where he may see the world is fair.

—Anonymous.

Call to Worship: (School will rise.)

Leader: "Blessed are the undefiled in the way, who walk in the law of the Lord. . . . Blessed are they that keep his testimonies, and seek him with the whole heart."

School: "Teach me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes; and I shall keep it unto the end. . . . Give me understanding, and I shall keep thy law; yea, I shall observe it with my whole heart."

Prayer: By the pastor.

Hymn: "Go ye through the gates," 104 Zion's Praises.

Scripture Lesson: Matthew 22: 37-40; John 13: 34-36.

Two- or three-minute talks on the following subjects: "Is it ever right to tell a lie or steal?"

"Can one break the laws of our land and be a Latter Day Saint?"

"What can young people do to aid law enforcement?"

Hymn: "Don't step there," 167 Zion's Praises.

Dismissal to classes and lesson study.

Announcements:

Benediction.

FOURTH SUNDAY: "I will achieve command of self."

Voluntary.

Opening Thought:

"Father in heaven, who loveth all,
O help thy children when they call,
That they may build from age to age
An undefiled heritage.

Teach us to rule ourselves always,
Controlled and cleanly night and day,
That we may bring, if need arise,
No maimed or worthless sacrifice.

Father in heaven, who lovest all,
O help thy children when they call. Amen."

—Rudyard Kipling.

Hymn: 168 Hymnal for American Youth.

Call to Worship: (School will rise.)

Leader: "O fear the Lord, ye his saints; for there is no want to them that fear him."

School: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. . . My help cometh from the Lord, who made heaven and earth."

Prayer (unison): (Taken from Hymnal for American Youth, page 28.)

"Our Father who art in heaven, give us clean hands, clean words, and clean thoughts; help us to stand for the hard right against the easy wrong; save us from habits that harm; teach us to work as hard and play as fair in thy sight alone as if the whole world saw; forgive us when we are unkind one to the other; keep us ready to help others at some cost to ourselves; send us chances to do a little good every day, and to grow more like Christ. We ask these blessings in the name of thy Son, Jesus. Amen."

Hymn: "I would be true," 170 Hymnal for American Youth.

Scripture Lessons: "The story of Daniel," Daniel 6. "The story of Stephen," Acts 7: 54-60. "Paul's self-command," Acts 27: 21-25. "Jesus' self-command," John 18: 1-13.

Poem: "Where is the real non-resistant?" Vachel Lindsay.

Who can surrender to Christ, dividing his best with the stranger,
Giving to each what he asks, braving the uttermost danger
All for the enemy, Man? Who can surrender till death
His words and his works, his house and his lands,
His eyes and his heart and his breath?

Who can surrender to Christ? Many have yearned toward it daily.
Yet they surrender to passion, wildly or grimly or gayly;
Yet they surrender to pride, counting her precious and queenly;
Yet they surrender to knowledge, preening their feathers serenely.

Who can surrender to Christ? Where is the man so transcendent,
So heated with the love of his kind, so filled with the spirit resplendent

That all of the hours of his day his song is thrilling and tender,
And all of his thoughts to our white cause of peace surrender, surrender, surrender?

Some Apt Quotations:

"He that is master of himself will soon be master of others."

"He who loses his temper is in the wrong."

"The reason so few people become great leaders is due to the inability of self-leadership."

Hymn: "None of self, and all of Thee," 40 Zion's Praises.

Dismissal to classes and lesson study.

Note: The Rally Day Service may follow the hymn and the lesson study be omitted, or it may take the place of the closing service.

Correction

In the Saints' Herald of August 6, under Church Work and Services, page 879, in a list of quarterlies and books available for study use, the following correction should be made:

History of Christianity for Youth, by Mrs. Anna Salyards, is listed as available for the second year of the senior age. We learn that the first two quarters of the year's series has been entirely sold out and will not be reprinted until next year.

Gospel Lesson Studies, by Mrs. Anna Salyards ready for use January 1, 1931, should be priced 75 cents each, bound copy. This excellent lesson series is now to be bound, a year's lessons under a single cover, and available for adults or young people's classes. It is especially recommended as a credit course.

Principles of Industrial Zion, by J. A. Koehler, has been entirely sold out and will not be reprinted until further notice. C. B. WOODSTOCK.

Poor Noah

Was rained in for forty days and nights, and he had to wait an even longer time for the water to drain out of his front yard. But he didn't have any copies of the Herald to read to occupy the time.

Are your friends like Noah? Do they sit around at home in the evening without reading the Herald?

Better get them to subscribe immediately.
They need the church publications.

Opportunity Is before Us

A sermon by Elder Eli Bronson, delivered during the Centennial General Conference, Independence, Missouri, April 7, 1930.

Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the voice of him who dwells on high, and whose eyes are upon all men; yea, verily I say, Hearken ye people from afar, and ye that are upon the islands of the sea, listen together; for verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape, and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated; and the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow, for their iniquities shall be spoken upon the housetops, and their secret acts shall be revealed; and the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days, and they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them.—Doctrine and Covenants 1:1.

This most wonderful revelation came to this people one hundred years ago, and it seems to me that it comes to us today with all the spiritual significance and power that it carried in the day when it was uttered. And we who claim to have been and learned of Jesus and have testified of that heavenly light should be filled with a passion and zeal and urge to go out to others and help them to find the way of life.

There are three great human interests to which people give more or less attention. They are work, worship, and sociability. A well-balanced life gives due and proper attention to each of these. There are some who live most unbalanced, and because of an unbalanced way of living fail to enjoy the more abundant life. We find those in life who seem to give all of their attention to work or industry; and while that is truly one of the essentials of life, if we are led away in this field of endeavor to the extent that worship and sociability are neglected we are not living the life that Jesus Christ intended us to live.

Then there are those who seem to be carried away in the spirit of worship to the extent they fail to give due and complete attention to the other interests of life, such as work, industry, and sociability. I wish to say this morning, advisedly, I hope, that people who are indeed led away to the extreme in worship, and in so doing fail to balance their lives, strike an unbalanced way of living which is well referred to as fanaticism. Kind friends, that we can not afford—to permit ourselves to become unbalanced in one field or yet in the other.

There are some who go to the extreme in sociability, and in so doing neglect other interests of life. You and I have been intrusted with a most sacred mission of leading men and women to live a well-balanced life, giving due and proper consideration to work and worship and sociability.

As I read to you this morning, we find that Almighty God, our heavenly Father, has seen fit in the last days in the age in which we live, to call us out from among the peoples of the world and to intrust us with the sacred mission of showing people the way of life. And it seems to me that today, the Centennial, a new century rises up to challenge us and ask what is the use we are making of that wonderful blessing.

Again, the God of heaven has spoken to us. He has blessed us with the authority to administer and officiate in the sacred ordinances of God. He has made it possible so to organize our homes that the Spirit of Christ may reign supreme there. I am wondering this morning if there is indeed that spirit of life going forth from every home and every soul, every community, that those who have not yet learned of this great restored gospel are touched and moved by the influences that come to us as the children of God?

Friends, our heavenly Father is willing to intrust us with power to the utmost, inasmuch as we are willing to use that power to make life more abundant for us and for others. But I believe that men are seldom if ever blessed for their sakes alone. Blessings come to us for the good we may be able to do with those blessings. If you and I have been so fortunate as to come in contact with this great latter-day work, it is not merely because God has seen fit to bless the individual in any special manner, but rather that God has chosen us as instruments in his great plan, not only to tell others the theory of life and living, but actually to demonstrate to them the life that Jesus Christ would have his people live. Let us rejoice in the blessings of God, for they are marvelous. The rich blessings of heaven and earth await the children of our heavenly Father. And those who are willing to live a well-balanced life are this day receiving the rich blessings of heaven and earth. But let us remember that these blessings come to us for the sake of the good we may do.

We are living in an age of rather unusual opportunity. Stanley Jones in his book, Christ of Every Road, made this very significant statement:

The scientific attitude, with its demand for fact, is a soil upon which our gospel can come to its own, for it is founded upon fact and appeals to and produces fact.

One thing of which I have always been very proud is the creed of this church; for in this church is the broad creed of all truth. How wonderful. Whenever any group of people build a fence around themselves, as it were, of creed or what not, they fence out more than they fence in. God saw fit to give this people a creed of all truth, which remains open for the reception of truth in this age in which we are living. In this age of fact and of truth there is an opportunity for you and for me to take to the hungry souls of men and women the truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ. My friends, there is no truth in the universe that you and I may hesitate to receive into our religion, for ours is a faith and creed of "All Truth."

The trend toward experience in this particular age leads us straight towards the very heart of the religion of Christ, for the genesis and genius of the gospel of Christ is experience. I am happy to see that in the age in which we live people are demanding to experience religion. It would be a sad mistake if we should be satisfied with mere theory; but the people of today, especially the youth of today, are demanding the way of life, that they may experience the Christ life, that they may live his philosophy.

This offers an opportunity for service today that previous generations have not had. Truth must be demonstrated in fact and experience, which leads us to the opportunity to prove to the world that this gospel is indeed practical. We have no need to wait until we go to heaven to experience our religion. This religion, my friends, may be experienced here.

Some one has said, "He who goes to heaven will take heaven with him." I believe it is true. I think he who goes to Zion, and finds Zion, will take Zion with him. Zion will become a reality to us in proportion as we have learned to appreciate that which is good and to utilize and spend that which is right and proper in the service of humanity. We read in Acts 2: 1 that when the day of Pentecost was fully come they were all of one accord and in one place. How significant! I think that when the day of Pentecost for latter-day Israel is fully come we shall be of one accord, we shall have learned to demonstrate the philosophy that Christ's revelation can teach; we shall have learned to show people the way to go.

After all, the religion of Jesus Christ, it seems, does in effect transcend the simple function of command; it not only tells people what to do, but it gives them strength and courage to do it.

It has been said that every other way of life is breaking down, except Christ's way. And it is true. We have only to glance around us in the world and study the lives of men and investigate in some small way the theories that are being advanced as directing the affairs of society, and we find that the ways of life are breaking down, except those ways which are in harmony with the philosophy taught by Christ. That way of life is not breaking down, but is giving courage to the hearts and lives of men which enables them to go forward in this wonderful age.

I just wonder what we are going to do in a missionary way about Zion. I do not mean to say, What is the Bishop going to do about it? Or the First Presidency? But I mean to say, What are you going to do in a missionary way with reference to the building of Zion? I wonder if our souls have been thrilled with the missionary spirit! I wonder if we have been too much concerned with the saving of "us four and no more"! I wonder if the spiritual strength which has been ours has been spent in an effort and endeavor to help other souls to understand the beauty and the grandeur of the philosophy of Jesus in a practical Zion!

What is your answer? What are you willing to contribute in a missionary way toward the redemption of Zion? My friends, there live, if I am not mistaken, within your reach, those who may be influenced by the philosophy of Christ, whose souls may be saved. Not just for the sake of building houses of worship; not just for the sake of having all of the seats filled in the services of the church; but for the sake of the men and women and the boys and girls who are today hungering and thirsting after righteousness, are you willing to contribute?

There is a burning need in every community for the philosophy of Jesus, which is fundamental and basic in the lives of the people. You and I, if we will, may be instrumental in the hands of God in establishing the gospel of Christ in the hearts of men and in the homes of men in the solution of the problems of youth and age, helping them to live more and more like Jesus Christ.

It has been said that the essential business of life, the object of Zion and the purpose of religion, is to make life better. I know, friends, we are living in an age of agnosticism, materialism, and humanism; but after all, underneath the agnosticism and the materialism of our day there runs a note of wistfulness, longing, if you please, for a harbor of safety into which to anchor the little barques of faith that are too frequently tossed to and fro upon a sea of religious unrest and uncertainty.

Just a few weeks ago a young lady came to me who had been attending one of the colleges of the West. She is not a member of our church. She said, "Mr. Bronson, there must come to me from somewhere an assurance of faith or I shall go mad." I inquired and found that the childish faith she had once possessed had been shaken. She no longer had the simple faith of childhood. She knew not where to go, and yet there seemed to be in religion as we teach it a bit of hope. If my bosom ever burned with a desire to point out to a hungry soul one ray of hope, it was then.

There are thousands of people, young and old, who today are seeking a manifestation of the philosophy of Jesus Christ. We must live our religion, we must show the way, we must give that demonstration of life which goes deeper than command, and actually leads people into the ways of Christ-like living.

Jesus said, "I make all things new." And how true it is! Can you look back into your experience and remember the day when you entered into the waters of baptism? Do you remember the new hope, the new ideals, the new resolutions you made as you came forth a newly born babe in Christ Jesus? Can you remember how all your activities of life were changed; how your plans in life were altered? Why? Why all this change? My friends, the gospel of Jesus Christ had come into your life, and Jesus makes all things new. Your life was changed that you might live a better life; not just for your own sake alone, but for the good you could do with the life that had come to you.

When we have a request for baptism and inquire, "Why do you wish to enter the church?" there are some who seem to think that they should accept the gospel of Jesus Christ merely to save their own souls. Of course, it means that, provided the religion is followed carefully. But that should be the result and not the incentive. If it were the incentive it would be selfish. If we can only be big enough and broad enough to understand that the reason we wish to be numbered with this people is to be better equipped with the power to serve humanity; if we can only see and feel that, then the inevitable result of our conversion will, in the end, be salvation, but in the meantime we shall be filled with the missionary spirit, that urge to reach out and help our fellow men. Not only the ministry, but every member must sense the purpose and the need of this great work so keenly that his soul will be fired with missionary passion in order for us to perform our mission as given to us in the Doctrine and Covenants by way of latter-day revelation.

Jesus said he would come and make all things new; he would bring new light and purpose of life, new emotions in the experiences of life, new goals in the supreme business of life, and new fruitage in the results of life. And this new fruitage must comprehend that altruistic spirit which lives for the sake of good and not for the sake of self.

There are those who feel that the opportunity for service is not theirs; that they are surrounded with circumstances which prevent them from reaching out and blessing others as they would love to do. I wonder if that is true. It seems to me that every soul that has been blessed with the light of the gospel of Jesus Christ has been given that light for a purpose, and the reason is that they may bless others. I can not appreciate a situation where God would give to a soul the light and peace and happiness of the religion of Jesus and then surround that soul with circumstances which would not permit that light to shine. Possibly there is something wrong with the condition of the reflector.

I am wondering, too, as this new century opens, if we will carry with us the splendid spirit of missionary work which seems to have gone throughout the church this past missionary year. There is always the danger after such a year as this of having a sort of slump. If we permit this to happen we shall find ourselves robbed of much of the spiritual power which will enable us to serve our fellow men. And so, in all humility, in all sincerity, and in all love I want to plead that there will not come to us that slumping down in the fields of labor.

The poet has said in regard to one who thought he had no chance:

With doubt and dismay you are smitten,
You think there's no chance for you, son?
Why, the best books have never been written
And the best race has never been run.
The best score has never been made yet,
And the best song has never been sung;
The best "tune" has never been played yet—
Rise up, son; the world is still young.

The best verse has never been rhymed yet,
The best house has never been planned.
The highest peaks haven't been climbed yet,
Some rivers have never been dammed.
Don't worry and fret, faint-hearted,
The chances have just begun,
For the best jobs have never been started,
And the best work has never been done.

Kind friends, opportunity is ours! The time is here. Our good Bishop said, just the other day, "The gathering is on." The time is at hand, the opportunity is yours and mine to radiate the Spirit of Jesus Christ in a missionary way, leading souls to that life which will enable them to live indeed, and help them in turn to lead others toward the gospel of Jesus Christ.

May the missionary passion thrill us, fill us, and enable us to go out and do the Master's will, to his honor and glory!

The Word of Wisdom

By W. H. Deam.

The Word of Wisdom is prophetic in that it foretells conditions to ensue in the future. Many years after it was received wise men recognized the wisdom in it portrayed as regards the laws of health.

How prophetic: "In consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom," etc.

The warning had to do with men putting on the market spurious and adulterated foodstuffs. Had it not been for the General Government and the various States enacting pure food laws, little of manufactured foods would be fit to eat. One firm of "conspiring men" put out an article composed of beef jelly, a few fruit seeds, acids, flavoring, and colored with a poisonous aniline made from coal tar, and sold it for various fruit jams, such as strawberry, raspberry, and blackberry. This was done in a Missouri city, and is only one of hundreds and thousands of impositions on the public. The situation became alarming, and consequently the passage of laws above referred to.

The warning was opportune, and shows the prophetic nature of the Word of Wisdom, but since Government laws and Government inspection, the warning lacks some of its former essentiality, because the warning is not needed so much. There is an occasional case of ptomaine poisoning that is more from accident than from design.

While the main object of the Word of Wisdom seems to be that God's people might be warned against the evils and designs of conspiring men, there is good advice given throughout along the lines of temperance and right living. But some single out certain features and ignore the rest, as is instanced by the following:

Many years ago Brother E. C. Briggs told me that when he was on a mission with another elder in Nebraska, one afternoon the elder referred to was taken with a violent headache, and he said that a cup of tea would help him. Brother Briggs told him that he would see if the hostess had any in the house. She had some, for just such an emergency.

When the tea was brought to the elder the host fell to criticising him for breaking the Word of Wisdom, whereupon Brother Briggs, in defense of the elder said: "Look here! You are the fellow who is breaking the Word of Wisdom. Tea and coffee are not mentioned in it, but it says meat should be eaten sparingly and should be eaten only in winter, or cold, or famine."

It was a hot day in July, and the host had a piece of fat pork on his plate as big as his hand. He had stressed that which is only inferential and had ignored that which is plain and positive, with no ambiguity. Whether the brother was a slave to the habit of tea drinking or not, it was medicine to him on that occasion, and it was a blessing that the sister had some in the house.

Section 42, paragraph 12 of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants says that they who have not faith to be healed should be nourished with herbs and mild food. When I was a small boy I knew about all the herbs that productive Wisconsin produced, and just before frost in the late summer or early autumn I would gather a variety of herbs and roots and mother could cure them in the shade, just as the very best hay is cured. Thus they were gathered and cured in their season, or when they were matured, and in prime condition.

These herbs were used principally in winter. Often we children would come home from school with wet feet from plodding through slush and snow, resulting in bad colds and sore throats. Mother would select the right herbs from the supply laid by in the season for herbs, and would make herb tea for us and have us soak our feet in hot water, causing us to perspire freely. We would go right to bed, and the next morning there was no evidence of influenza or la grippe. We had no doctor and no fever thermometer. The herbs must be gathered in their season, to be used when necessary, for section 86 says: "Every herb in the season thereof, and every fruit in the season thereof," whatever that means, and what it means for herbs it also means for fruits. According to the wording it can not be otherwise, for they are in one unbroken sentence, joined together by the conjunction and.

Don't be startled by my saying that conditions have so changed as to affect the potentiality of some parts of the Word of Wisdom. Bear in mind that the reason given for its being delivered was because of prevailing conditions. There are laws, both human and divine, which apply to certain kinds and conditions. After a law has fulfilled its purpose it requires no official act to abrogate it. Don't understand me to say that the Word of Wisdom has had its day. I mean this, that the warning today is not so potent, because laws have changed conditions which caused the warning. It may be that some day conditions will have so changed for the worse that that warning will be more potent than it ever has been.

There is a reason for everything, and I firmly believe that one of the main reasons for prohibiting the use of meat in summer was because there were no means of keeping fresh meats in warm weather from becoming tainted, and it is dangerous to eat tainted meat. If there was any refrigeration at the time section 86 was given it was very limited and meager. The great packing houses of today can keep meats indefinitely, and all meat markets have improved refrigerators in which meats may be frozen solid. Almost every family has some kind of an ice box. We have very little meat in our home, winter or summer. First, we care very little for it; second, it is very expensive; third, we do not think much meat is good for us. We will often go weeks without tasting it. We certainly use it sparingly.

Another way conditions have changed very materially, which has brought health, vigor, and longevity. When the Word of Wisdom was given, and for many years thereafter, people would emerge from the winter months with systems all clogged, and blood thickened from living on an unbalanced diet of heavy food. In the spring they would drink sassafras tea to thin the blood and take bitters for their "stomach's sake." Every newspaper, from the crossroads weekly to the big city daily, carried advertisements of stomach bitters, and often people would make their own bitters with poplar, cherry, and wahoo barks in whisky.

That is a thing of the past, since we have fresh fruit the year round, which gives us a balanced food. We have the luscious and health-giving orange, and the grapefruit, with many others throughout the year, especially in the winter when they are needed the most to regulate the bowels and counteract the effects of the heavier foods. Before this change the average life of man was thirty-three years, while now it is over fifty years. While sanitation and other things have helped in the change, fruits have been one of the main factors in bringing it about. Vegetables, too, have had a part in effecting the change. Right in the middle of the winter one can get the succulent lettuce, spinach, and radish, all of which are said to be scavengers to our systems.

I believe men like Luther Burbank have been divinely influenced in effecting wonderful changes in fruits, vegetables, and flowers. By their work and patience they have produced ever-bearing fruits, such as strawberries and raspberries. Instead of having strawberries in this latitude a few days the latter part of May, the season has been prolonged to November, and I have heard of the unique and pretty scene of big red berries standing up amid a white coat of snow in November.

Whatever anyone may think "in the season thereof" means as regards time of the year, no doubt all will agree that it has reference to maturity of the fruit or herb. Thousands upon thousands of unripe apples are put on the markets in the spring, far from maturity, and not nearly as wholesome as cold storage apples kept over from the previous season's crop. I have never heard of a case of bowel trouble from eating apples in winter. On the other hand, I have known many children, myself among them, who have had serious bowel trouble from eating green apples in the summer. Fruit fully matured and free from decay is seasonable.

The Word of Wisdom is all right. It came when it was badly needed to tide God's people over till the time should come when wise men would enact laws to stop evil and conspiring men from making and selling stuff which was hurtful and deleterious to health and life. I believe it is a divine document. I believe the preliminary or introductory part is divine. It is advice from God, but not a command. I made that statement once when I was presiding at a prayer meeting at the Stone Church in Independence. At the close an old brother came to me, somewhat agitated, and told me that I had made a grievous blunder. I told him that I had the book for it. "Oh," he said, "those are the words of man." I said that if what he said was true the church had been making a grievous blunder ever since it was first printed, and that he was making a further blunder, if he knew he was right, by not bringing it before the General Conference for correction. I believe the introduction was written by Joseph Smith, or at his dictation, when under the same influence that he was when the text was written, and there is nothing in the text to indicate a command that must be obeyed.

A few words about "hot drinks." I stated that it is inferred that hot drinks mean tea and coffee. Some one has said that some one else has said that Hyrum Smith said that it meant tea and coffee. If Hyrum Smith did say so, unless he was inspired, it would be only his opinion. But, living at the time section 86 was given, and being closely associated with his brother Joseph, his opinion would be worth more than any opinion given today.

However, I have what are good reasons to me, to say that hot drinks mean tea and coffee, and more than tea and coffee. Hot toddy, made of hot water, sugar, and whisky or brandy, was used to a great extent at the time the Word of Wisdom was given, and for many years thereafter. It was quite universal for people to keep a bottle of liquor in the house for that purpose. I can remember that when people got a bad cold they thought they had to have a hot toddy. So I infer that "hot drinks" mean coffee, tea, hot toddy, and possibly other things. It might have meant also Postum, cocoa, etc., if they had been used when section 86 was given.

As Others See Us

By C. W. Butterworth

The Sons of Men Gaze upon the Things of God

When the lordly sun, tired with his task of searching out hill and valley, has gone to his western rest, gentle night draws a soft veil o'er the face of the land and spreads before man the treasures which the arrogance of her lord has hidden, and man, unsatisfied with his earthly accomplishments and beguiled by the thousand eyes of night twinkling down upon him, must needs be drawn to explore them by means of his magic glass.

With the speed of a departing spirit he is carried immeasurably nearer the wondrous scene, and while his physical form, insensible to pain or cold, is held by its earthly ties, his spirit wades out through the shallows, past the old moon, into the ocean of glory. Passing Venus, Mars, and the neighboring planets, he plunges on with long strokes and is soon mingling with the inhabitants of the Milky Way. From this vantage ground he makes acquaintance with many of the greater and lesser ones as he is carried onward by the bewildering throng of worlds as they proceed on their ordered ways. He roams to the uttermost limit of his powers, but always there lies a greater beyond. Here he sees the Creator "moving in his majesty and glory."

Coming back to earth again, he is nevermore the same, for his spirit has been baptized in the ethereal waters of God's infinite expanses and his whole life has been transformed.

The Sons of God Gaze upon the Things of Men

There is no day that goes, there is no night that comes, wherein humble followers of the Master, in lands both near and far do not turn their gaze toward the land of Zion. They need not the aid of any mechanical appliance to reveal its beauty. They see it with the eye of faith. They know that the degree of heaven they shall enjoy hereafter is determined by the kind of heaven they help to create here, and when fighting their lone battles against discouragements, adverse environments, and social inequalities, their hearts turn toward Zion with an intense longing that the native born can not comprehend, and the vision revealed strengthens them beyond measure.

The Modern Spies

In bidding farewell to two modern spies, who have been sent to view the land, we thus addressed them: Caleb, Joshua, your worth and integrity we have tested while you have lived with us "on the other side of the Jordan." Go forth now to this land of our dreams. Test its reality. Feel its strength. Probe its depth. Gauge its possibilities. Bring back its fruits in your hands, and the incense of its righteousness upon your clothing. Be not afraid of giants in the land. Magnify not the weakness or the folly of the people. Diminish not their virtue or their strength. Take a broad, statesman-like view of the whole situation, past, present, and future, and bring us back a true report.

The Rosy Report

So Caleb and Joshua departed, and in due time arrived at the land of promise, and we by the eye of faith walked with them. We met the great and notable, rubbed shoulders with the faithful and humble, and made many new acquaintances.

We saw their pleasant homes and happy children. We viewed their prosperous farms, products of faithful industry divinely blessed.

We met brothers and sisters in the streets, in the stores, in the workshops, and in the homes. We noticed an almost complete absence of those evil features of the present social system.

We observed their places of worship and their schools of learning.

We were cognizant of the elimination of wasteful duplication of human efforts, indicating the systematic endeavors of a people working unceasingly toward a common goal; but above all we could sense the leaven of God's divine love working in the hearts, the words, and the works of men, and everywhere limitless possibilities in fields as yet untrod-den.

So when the daily demands of life cut short this sweet communion, we came back to them with the song, "Zion, Zion, lovely Zion," ringing in our hearts. Our hands were no longer tired, our feet no longer weary, for our whole body had been rejuvenated by our mental excursion.

Does the Rose Have Thorns?

There are hundreds of honest souls to whom it would be rank heresy to picture the present-day Zion in any other light, and even those of us who may be more sophisticated really hope that we are suffering from some form of mental astigmatism. But what a responsibility this places upon the inhabitants of Zion! True, but what an opportunity!

All the long years that our fathers served in the church since its reorganization, they waited in vain for the call to build up the city which they yearned to inhabit. But the set time to favor Zion had not arrived. In our blessed day the time has arrived. To you and to me the call has come. How are we responding to that call?

Zion being both a place and a condition, we in the far-off lands are therefore striving earnestly to create the necessary conditions, but the command to gather being now in force, we can not fully enjoy the condition without the place. On the other hand, neither can you enjoy the place without the conditions of life. Each man being his brother's keeper, we therefore ask, Where are you keeping us, brothers?

The key of the situation is in your hands. With it you may unlock the doors to those who, through international bars, gaze with feelings akin to envy upon your goodly heritage, your golden opportunities.

Excelsior

Young men and maidens in whom the fires of faith yet brightly burn, translate your highest thoughts into deeds that will make a heaven on earth in your day.

And you, ye older men and women, whose faith and trust in man may have been blighted, expect not that faith in God alone shall bring you full salvation, for of a necessity it must be true that he who has not faith in man whom he has seen, can not have faith in God whom he has not seen; or in other words, man can live with God only to the degree that he has learned to live with man.

Through the building up of Zion may this saving grace be obtained, this transformation be accomplished.

Children of Zion, a task we set for you. Be what we think you are!

REUNION NEWS

The Reunion at Nauvoo

By F. C. Bevan

Nauvoo District's reunion was held at Nauvoo the Beautiful, August 1 to 10. There was a large decrease in the attendance this year, owing to the very hot weather and the fact that a number who had attended the Centennial Conference could not get away to attend the reunion. But while the attendance was smaller, the quality of those in attendance was of the very best.

There was a very fine spirit of cooperation, fellowship, and friendliness, and this added much to the success of the reunion. The young people lived up to the rules of the camp, doing all they could to make a good reunion.

Apostle J. A. Gillen and the district presidency, which consisted of F. T. Mussell, A. M. Chase, and A. L. Sanford, were in charge of the reunion. Under their direction the program was carried out.

The rising bell was rung at 6 a. m.; breakfast was served at 6.30 to 7.30. Eight o'clock to 9 o'clock was the family worship hour and prayer service, which found all the camp in attendance. These services were uplifting. The prayers and testimonies were inspiring. A thought expressed by all was the desire to do more for the church and to live such lives as would commend the church to others. The theme of the reunion was, "Ye are the light of the world."

The class work was of mornings, from 9 o'clock until 10.40. Those in charge of the classes were Bishop Charles Fry, S. A. Burgess, and G. G. Lewis and wife. Brother Fry had a class in stewardships. He prepared outlines for the use of all members. This class was well attended, and many interesting thoughts were brought out. The chief thought expressed was, When shall we have this condition of Zion and stewardships? for we want to say to the world, There it is, in action. A number of the Saints seem anxious to go on the stewardship plan.

Brother Burgess's class was very interesting. It was on church history. The teacher was so well informed along this line that he was able to bring out many points of interest.

Brother Lewis and wife had charge of the young people's class and junior church work, and they were ably assisted by Sister Burgess. The Book of Mormon was their theme of study.

The morning hour was given over to preaching. Several of these sermons were delivered by Patriarch J. T. Gresty, who was a visitor at the reunion. His sermons were of the witnessing type—of what God had done for him—and they were appreciated. Patriarch F. A. Smith gave some very fine fatherly advice in a clear-cut way. Apostle J. A. Gillen brought some really uplifting messages at the morning hour. Brother Burgess, in his interesting manner, occupied one morning, and his sermon was of the type to cause the Saints to do more for the church. The writer was the speaker twice and enjoyed good liberty.

Special information was given to the Saints in the service of Friday morning, August 8, when under the direction of the Spirit the assurance was given that Zion would be—there are many who doubt this, but it will be a reality.

Elder H. V. Minton was a visitor to our reunion. He came on Thursday and was the speaker on Saturday morning, August 9, and brought timely advice which was well received.

The afternoons, from 2 to 3 o'clock, provided a class under the direction of A. M. Chase, in music, which he made very interesting to those who are working in that line of activity. Brother Chase is well versed in music. Brother Gresty spoke one of the afternoons and told the class how he composed The Course of Time. His story was very interesting.

Monday was Nauvoo Day. The business men and their wives came and had lunch with the camp at the cafeteria, after which a special meeting was held, when the mayor gave the Saints an official welcome to Nauvoo. Brother F. A. Smith made the reply to this. He also gave a brief talk as to his boyhood days, which were spent in and around Nauvoo.

From three o'clock until the supper hour the afternoons were given over to recreation, which was in charge of Brother Lewis, who was assisted by Brother L. Stiegel. The recreation was volley ball, horseshoes, boating, and swimming. Boating and swimming were very much appreciated because of hot weather. Various games were indulged also at the close of the evening services. One night a song fest was held, followed by a watermelon feed at which two hundred were present.

Choir practice was held at 7 o'clock each evening, under the direction of A. M. Chase, assisted by Sister Burgess. On two evenings, from 7 to 8 o'clock, Bishop Fry showed pictures taken on the stewardship farms and at Kirtland, which proved to be interesting. A number of the town people were present.

Thursday night was given over to Graceland College. A special was put on. A number of Graceland students and those who had taught in Graceland were on the platform. The main address was given by S. A. Burgess, one of the former presidents of the college. The program was in charge of G. G. Lewis, and at one time he asked all the parents who now or ever had had children in attendance at Graceland to rise to their feet. A large number arose. He also asked that the student present who expected to attend in 1948 be held up for inspection, and the son of A. Ourth was presented.

The other evenings were given over to preaching services, preceded by a song service and a talk by Sister Alice Burgess on the subject of the composition of some of the hymns, and these talks helped the congregation to appreciate what they were singing. Sister Burgess added much to the programs by the singing of several solos, which were rendered in such a way as to lift one's soul in appreciation of the wonderful gift of voice.

The evening sermons were of a missionary character. The speakers were J. A. Gillen, F. A. Smith, and Charles Fry. Brother Gillen, in his very convincing, positive manner, and with the spirit of earnestness in his presentation, caused the Saints to want to do more for the church. F. A. Smith brought to the attention of those present their possibilities, and caused them to launch out and try to do what Saints should do. The bishop brought to his hearers the need of paying their tithing and their offerings.

The Sunday service found a larger attendance, a number driving in for the day. Church school was held both Sundays. The second Sunday a young people's prayer service was held, with L. Stiegel and George Lewis in charge. This service was well attended.

There were two baptized Sunday, August 10, by F. C. Bevan.

The Herald Publishing House stand and bookstore was in charge of the writer, and in spite of the small attendance over one hundred dollars were received for books and subscriptions to the church papers.

The confectionery stand was in charge of the Nauvoo Women's Club, which found business good, owing to the hot weather.

The Saints at Nauvoo helped to make things pleasant for the visitors. Brother Page, who has charge of the Nauvoo House, and his good wife, did their best to make things pleasant.

The Saints were happy to have Elder James McKiernan with them. Although in his eighty-first year, he is very active, and gave them some fine instruction on the opening day.

The reunion committee did all they could to make it a real reunion. Brother Lee had charge of the tents; Brother W. Wood the cots, and he was a busy man; Brother E. Sherman was an important man, having charge of the eating. This brother, with his good staff, put up very good meals at a low cost.

Saints outside the district added much to the success of the meeting. Among these were Elder L. Stiegel and his brother Fritz, the latter causing much laughter around the camp with his humor. G. R. Huntley was always on hand to help whenever he could. To these and other visitors from other districts we owe much for the success of our reunion.

Wednesday the camp bugler, Jack Sanford, who is employed on the ferryboat from Nauvoo to Montrose, met with an accident while on the boat. He was caught between the boat and the landing place, and it was thought necessary to take him to the hospital at Keokuk, Iowa, where we hear he is doing as well as can be expected.

The closing sermon was delivered by S. A. Burgess.

Erie Beach Reunion

By Edna M. Cock

Erie Beach Reunion! What hosts of recollections these three words bring! Here we are at Erie Beach once more; each day bearing new events to add to the treasury of intangible possessions—memory.

Friday found Elders R. T. Brown, D. J. Williams, J. C. Dent, and Albert Bennett busily engaged in the erection of tents which developed into a camp of sixty tents. Sundown saw these well on their way to completing their work, and after prayer those present retired for a well-earned night's repose. Saturday afternoon Bishop J. A. Koehler arrived in camp and delivered the evening sermon, using as his theme, "The economic condition of the world."

About two hundred and fifty persons enjoyed a spiritual season, partaking of the Lord's Supper at 9 o'clock Sunday morning. In the afternoon J. R. Grice, Saint Clair, Michigan, chose as the subject of his discourse, "Entering the kingdom," or "The cost of citizenship." The speaker made the sermon applicable to both members and nonmembers, stating that baptism, repentance, and the laying on of hands are not sufficient within themselves, but that the kingdom must become a fact in our lives. Taking the initial steps into the kingdom of God are of little value unless we translate the facts into everyday life. After the song service Sunday evening, Bishop J. A. Koehler spoke again, using "The authority of the Christian religion" as his theme.

Monday the camp settled down to routine work, with prayer service and three one-hour classes in the morning and one in the afternoon. These classes were in charge of the following general church appointees; Apostle C. F. Ellis, Bishop J. A. Koehler, Elder and Sister John Blackmore, whose respective subjects were "Christian evangelism," "Community stewardship," "Religious education," and "Junior worship." The preaching services in the evenings were also well attended.

Thursday evening an entertaining program of music and readings was presented by local talent, under the efficient supervision of Edith A. Moore, Windsor, Ontario. Several splendid selections were rendered by the Latter Day Saint orchestra of Chatham, under their capable leader, W. J. Clark.

The recreational features of the reunion were under the enthusiastic leadership of R. K. Wood, who on Friday afternoon conducted an interesting field day, in which all members of the camp participated.

A program in recognition of Graceland College and Independence Sanitarium was given Saturday afternoon; Brother and Sister Blackmore and Sister Bruce Brown representing Graceland, with Mabel Andrew representing the Sanitarium. Sister Andrew also edited Camp Flashes, creating both interest and amusement at the close of each day. On Saturday evening a group of sisters from the Second Detroit Branch presented a very charming and enjoyable play entitled "A Southern Cinderella." Sister Roseberry was in charge and a large number was present.

Early on Sunday morning a procession was led to the water's edge of Lake Erie, where several entered the kingdom by baptism. At 9 o'clock the Saints assembled for prayer and testimony. This service was followed at 10.30 by the church school, with J. Blackmore and J. W. A. Kettlewell in charge, assisted by William Andrew, Sister Blackmore, and Brother and Sister Charles Mifflin. This meeting, as well as the afternoon service, was supported by a large gathering of both Saints and nonmembers.

D. J. Williams, president of Chatham District, J. C. Dent, and R. T. Brown were in charge. Other members of the ministry present were B. H. Doty and Ben. Hewitt, of Toronto; J. C. Mottashed of Detroit; and James Winegarden of London.

Regretfully we take our departure from this reunion, which all agree has been one of the finest the district has had, both from the standpoint of religious education and from the point of congenial associations. May the inspiration of this reunion remain with us and encourage us to achieve greater things, to see new fields of development, and to strive to go on to perfection.

Southern Saskatchewan Conference

The Southern Saskatchewan conference convened at Weyburn July 11 to 13 with Brother James Sandidge, the new missionary, in charge. The district president was unable to be present on account of a disabled Ford and a heavy rain Friday morning which continued to fall at intervals throughout the day.

However, the services progressed. During the afternoon Apostle J. F. Curtis arrived and immediately got busy.

A meeting for the women was held in the afternoon, but attendance was small at that hour and in the evening on account of weather conditions.

Saturday dawned clear, but roads were muddy. Services began with an early prayer meeting which was enjoyed by a full house. Two ordinations were arranged for, George Jordan, of Regina, to the office of elder, and William Neill, of Weyburn, to the office of priest. They were ordained Sunday morning.

Preaching came at eleven o'clock, and the district business meeting was at two in the afternoon. At night a program was given under the auspices of the Women's Department. "The challenge of the cross" was given along with several other entertaining numbers. The building was crowded with spectators.

Sunday morning a fine prayer meeting was held, there being several spiritual manifestations which made the members feel that it is truly good to be Saints of latter days. The meeting overlapped with the hour which was to have been devoted to the local Sunday school, but there seemed no place to stop.

Preaching commenced at eleven o'clock, Apostle Curtis being the speaker. Brother Sandidge was the speaker at two in the afternoon. A baptismal service followed the preaching hour, the candidate being the young son of Brother and Sister C. B. Bergerson. Brother Curtis preached again at night.

Some of the visitors who had come a distance to be present at the conference, left during the afternoon.

Attendance was small but officers hope that those who were present were well repaid for coming and can carry a measure of the good spirit home with them.

Florida Reunion at Brewton, Alabama

Florida District has just closed its annual reunion, held at Alaflora Branch, near Brewton, Alabama. I think many will join me in saying that this has been among the best of our reunions.

Among the special workers we mention the names of Brother Richards, from Kansas City, Missouri; Brother and Sister G. E. Burt, from Mobile; and Brothers Glenn and E. A. Davis. Brother Glenn Davis is from Alabama, and Brother E. A. Davis is our district president.

Our attendance was especially large on Sundays and at night, though smaller at the forenoon and afternoon services. Many seemed glad to attend the prayer services that they might get spiritual food, which comes to us in the prayer meetings.

The class work was of a high order. Many questions of vital importance were discussed, thus enlarging our vision of the work lying before us and encouraging us to greater activity.

Brother Glenn Davis seemed specially adapted to work with the young people, and Sister Burt did noble work with the girls and children in their junior services.

We are encouraged and sense more fully the need of everyone paying his tithing, that such noble workers as we have had with us may continue in the field and thus carry the gospel to others.

Many nonmembers were in attendance at our services and contributed liberally in a financial way, for which we are grateful.

Brother Glenn Davis was in charge of recreation, and our games of volley ball, baseball, pitching rings, etc., seemed to be enjoyed by all.

We are grateful to our district president, E. A. Davis, for his untiring efforts in trying to make the reunion a success. Brother Richards and Brother Burt did excellent class work, and together with others presented the gospel in a very forceful way.

It was voted to have a reunion in 1931, the time suggested for holding it to be about July 20. Sisters Lizzie Enfinger, Stella Hawsey, and Bessie McCall were chosen as reunion committee.

A unanimous vote of thanks was given to the retiring reunion committee for their faithful and untiring efforts.

Reunion at Silver Lake

By Harold I. Velt

We are enjoying a wonderful reunion at Silver Lake. It is just fine to renew acquaintance with the good people after having met with them in their branches.

At our first meeting the Spirit of God was in evidence, and has been ever since. That first meeting was a prayer meeting with an attendance of forty, a large percentage being young people. The same evening there were sixty at preaching; eighty-five next morning at prayer meeting; two hundred and eighty-five in the evening for preaching.

Sunday's service began with sacrament at eight a. m., with three hundred and thirty-two present. Three hundred and forty-two then attended church school, followed by preaching at eleven a. m., with three hundred and forty-seven in attendance.

The first meeting for young people between the ages of thirteen and twenty-two saw one hundred present; and ages one to thirteen, sixty-seven present.

Missionaries present are Elders Cook, A. C. Martin, Richard Baldwin, and myself. Apostle McConley arrived today, and Elders H. W. Savage and Dan Sorden arrive tonight. Elder Carl Crum and wife are also with us.

Perfect love and unity prevail, and prospects for the future are very bright. There have been two baptisms, and there will be a number more this week.

I have never enjoyed a more progressive, spiritual, and social reunion than this has been thus far.

EVERETT, WASHINGTON, August 4.

Onset, Massachusetts

Southern New England District convened its annual reunion Saturday evening, July 26, on their delightfully situated and well-equipped grounds at Onset, Massachusetts.

Apostle R. S. Budd was made president of the reunion, with the district presidency, William Patterson and D. F. Joy, and Bishops Carmichael, Fisher, and Traver associated. Other workers were: Arthur H. Mills, of Independence, Missouri, representing the Music Department; Sisters Livingstone and Sears in charge of the junior church; Sister Florence Gordon conducted the kindergarten; Sisters B. Law and F. Witcher directed the reunion school, and William Patterson and Sister Helen Coombs had charge of the music of the reunion.

The district was very fortunate in having the efficient and inspired ministry of Presiding Bishop A. Carmichael and Apostle R. S. Budd, who excelled themselves in the presentation of the Word of God as it has to do with the twofold task of preaching the everlasting gospel, and teaching and establishing the law of stewardships as necessary movements in the building up and redeeming of Zion in this its "hastening time."

It was a mutual satisfaction and joy that came to preacher and auditor, instructor and pupil, as these men performed the dual task of minister and pedagogue. Never has this people been taught with greater clarity the law of stewardships; never have they been appealed to with greater fervor to establish the kingdom of God; never with greater force have they been challenged to a demonstration of their love of God in warning their neighbor and serving the church, and never has there been such a response to the church appeal.

Though the reunion, due to economic depression, was not as largely attended as in former years, the attendance of non-members was larger, and it is the consensus of opinion that it was one of the outstanding gatherings held in the district. The attendance included members and friends from fifteen States and the District of Columbia; amongst whom were Elder Henry Castings and family, of Des Moines, Iowa; Patriarch George Robley; and Pastor H. Livingstone, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. These brothers contributed to the success of the reunion by timely sermons.

Sunday, August 3, a large number of Saints partook of the Lord's Supper, and indulged the spirit of fervent prayer and soul-felt testimony. During the day eight people were baptized by William Patterson, H. A. Chelline, and Elder Brown of Providence. During the reunion several revelations were delivered which brought hope and comfort that the Lord was hastening his work and bringing to pass his purposes and promises.

Monday, August 4, the large tabernacle became the scene of a very pretty and impressive wedding ceremony, which united in matrimony the lives of Sister Ruth Viola Fisher, daughter of Elder and Mrs. E. H. Fisher, of Somerville, and Mr. Frederick Warren Hill, son of Mr. Thomas F. Hill, of Malden, Massachusetts. Pastor D. E. Dowker, of Somerville Branch, officiated. The bride was attended by her sister, Esther L. Fisher, as maid of honor; the bridesmaids were Misses Elizabeth Fisher and Ruth Studley, of Boston; Marjorie Carter, of Somerville, was flower girl, and the best man was Mr. Ray Kingsley, of Braintree, Massachusetts. In addition to near relatives and friends, the invited list of guests included those attending the reunion—which totaled about five hundred people who witnessed the ceremony and later attended the reception held in the grove which was gayly illuminated with electric Japanese lanterns. The interior of the tabernacle was richly bedecked with nature's foliage; and on the large platform a veritable amphitheater of cedars, palms, and multi-colored gladioli, arranged by skillful hands and mellowed by a colored flood light, lent enchantment to romance and made memorable this rich ceremony.

The closing day, August 10, was replete with inspired and inspiring services. At the morning prayer and testimony service an impressive ordination ceremony set aside Bishop E. L. Traver by Bishop M. C. Fisher, and Elder S. L. Fisher by Bishop Carmichael as counselors to the district bishop, M. C. Fisher.

At 11 a. m. Bishop Carmichael preached a very powerful sermon on the purpose of the priesthood and the church, and Apostle R. S. Budd, at 2.30 p. m. delivered a charge and a challenge to every ordained man, and member of the district to return to their respective branches to unite the sheep in harmony with the statement of Christ: "Behold I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves."

About fifty members of the priesthood assembled at four o'clock with Brother Carmichael and listened to a final appeal for individual stewardships. Several bespoke their desire to move forward with the church in this direction, and Bishop M. C. Fisher and District President William Patterson expressed their desire to become individual stewards. The Southern New England District is with the church in its program.

We feel not to close this account without mentioning the fine conduct and cooperation of the youth of the camp. We are assured by their general conduct and expressions at the services that the Lord is preparing a fine group of young people in this district for the work of the church.

Reunion adjourned to meet for ten days in 1931, the time to be determined by the reunion committee: William Patterson, D. F. Joy, D. E. Dowker, S. L. Fisher, and H. A. Chelline.

The Alabama Reunion

The Saints of the Alabama District gathered to the Pleasant Hill church park at McKenzie for their annual reunion under the leadership of Elder Glenn Davis, district president. The gathering of the Saints to this place always brings with it a spirit of reverence and communion, a desire for intellectual and spiritual growth and for missionary expansion.

The reunion workers endeavored to harmonize their activities with these desires. Elder Evan A. Davis conducted the adult prayer services, during which time he and his assistants brought the Saints into a responsive mood, thus making the services uplifting and beneficial to all. He also did most of the morning preaching, which was directed to unify the Saints.

Elder G. E. Burt conducted two classes each day for the adults on "Beliefs and activities of the church, and missionary expansion." Sister Burt conducted a class for the church school workers on the "Principles of religious education and junior worship."

Elder G. T. Richards did all the evening preaching on the doctrines of the church. He preached an affirmative message with power, to the extent that ten accepted the gospel. The young people's activities centered around the camps. The girls' camp was in charge of Mary Lou Patrick and Odessa Harper Flynn, who led the girls in worship, recreation, flag services, social services, and assisted Sister Burt in her class of basketry and weaving for girls and women.

The Boy Scout Camp was in charge of Elder Glenn Davis and Lyle D. Flynn, activities being worship, recreation, social services, and scouting.

Musical activities were in charge of D. E. Sellers, T. W. Parker, and Vida Booker.

The junior services were in charge of Sister G. E. Burt,

Observations on Ontario and the East

By C. B. Woodstock

The week-end of June 20-23 found four representatives of the general Department of Religious Education en route to Toronto, Canada, where we were to join other members of our church, and hundreds of other workers in religious education, at the quadrennial convention of the International Council. Either in response to Scotch frugality or to an earnest desire to render the fullest possible service to the church in Canada while in Ontario, four institutes had been arranged over the two week-ends, to use our teaching forces to full capacity.

Institutes at Detroit and Toronto

Brethren John Blackmore and Leslie Flowers stopped over in Detroit for an institute of the Chatham and Detroit Districts, while Leonard Lea and the writer went to Toronto. Reports from Detroit evidence a most satisfactory gathering, and we feel sure the interests of religious education will greatly benefit. Our experiences in Toronto were very gratifying. Apostle R. S. Budd was with us and preached the Sunday morning sermon. The institute had been planned and advertised as a young people's convention, with an actual committee of young people in charge and doing the work. Without an exception the plans were well made and carried out with the vim and vigor characteristic of youth. The young committeemen had excellent backing in the branch and district authorities. Evidently there was a splendid bond of mutual confidence and loyalty which promises much for the future of our church work in Toronto. We greatly appreciated the kindly reception accorded us and the generous good-will with which entertainment was provided for us and for other visiting Saints during our stay in the city.

The Quadrennial Convention

The International Convention was interesting and profitable from first to last. We were accorded every courtesy of the convention, although our church as a denomination is not a member of the council. Our fifteen adult members of the convention were distributed among the various sections, according to our particular lines of interest and responsibility in church work. Groups of us met frequently through the day and exchanged notes and comments. Many splendid ideas were expressed in the addresses and brought out in the discussions which are definitely applicable to our own church program.

As to the human side of our program of religious education, it was gratifying to find the principles and plans of our own church quite in harmony with the foremost thinkers and leaders of the Christian world. If we can be assured that they are equally in harmony with the mind and will of God, we have every reason to move forward with confidence into the second century of our church endeavor.

As a further mark of courtesy and good will, our church was invited to send two young delegates to the Young People's Christian Council of North America. The two appointed by the First Presidency were Doris Weegar, of Buffalo, and Almer Sheehy, of Independence. Elder Leslie Flowers, editor of Vision, was assigned a place for the week she being assisted by the other reunion workers.

As a whole the reunion was unusually well attended, and greater interest was shown in the activities than in previous years. The Saints feel the reunion was helpful to them, the class work developing them intellectually, the recreation physically and socially, while the preaching and prayer meeting developed spiritually.

with some fifty other professional advisers of youth. The council met in several sessions daily throughout the week under able leadership and covered much preliminary ground looking toward a great forward Christian movement among the young people of all denominations. While the call of our own church is distinctive, we think it very important that we share at least in the perspective of other churches, and that we join with them intelligently in every good movement of Christian citizenship which promises to bless the world with the spirit and service of the Christ. Our representatives at this council are preparing a report of their findings for the First Presidency, which report will doubtless appear in Vision.

Two events occurred during the week which were of unusual significance. One Wednesday evening each of the Toronto churches was host to its visiting membership from out of the city. We were fortunate in enjoying a garden party arranged by our people at the beautiful home of Brother and Sister Bavington. Seven local leaders of religious education from the Toronto Branch were in attendance at the convention. They are getting organized for a definite task, as they contemplate the opening of their new church plant. Such energy, zeal, and consecration, expended intelligently in the spirit of love and humility in the latter-day work, will not fail of results.

On another evening all of us who had been in attendance at the convention met in the home of Brother and Sister Needham, each one reporting to the group the things of most helpful significance which had been heard or experienced at the convention. These were then discussed in the light of our own church objectives and program. This meeting was led by our genial but earnest Apostle R. S. Budd, and was undoubtedly the finest experience of the week.

London and Port Elgin

At the week-end we separated, Brother Flowers going to Niagara Falls for Sunday services, Brother Blackmore to Port Elgin to open the reunion of the Owen Sound District, while Brother Lea and I went to London for a district convention and institute.

Limited space prevents an extended account of the kindly hospitality and the good fellowship experienced among the Canadian Saints. The institute sessions were well attended and encouraging, the young people from near-by branches being much in evidence. London has provided an excellent playground on an inclosed lot at the rear of the church. Sunday evening Brother Lea was taken to Saint Thomas for the evening sermon, and remained in London for a special young people's meeting on Monday evening, and to attend an annual branch picnic on Tuesday.

Brother Lea and Brother Flowers were new to field work, but both entered heartily into their assignments, carried messages of faith and courage, won the esteem of all among whom they ministered, and gained immeasurably, themselves, in a vision of the task to which the young people of the church are called.

June 30 I joined Brother Blackmore at the reunion at Port Elgin. The Saints were gathered in goodly numbers from all parts of the district, several driving in from outlying territory. The Saints were hungry for the information, and for the spiritual food provided in the program of the church, and entered heartily into class work and the other daily services. The agricultural building and grounds, near by, loaned without charge to the reunion, made ample provision for playground, camping, and dining hall purposes. A beautiful bathing beach on Lake Huron affords excellent swimming to those who venture its cold waters. The reunion was well cared for, throughout.

The people are hard-working, earnest folks, made hardy by the demands of a rigorous climate, and in a large degree are apparently free from some of the enervating "sophistication" of our metropolitan centers. At least they are free from the sweltering heat, the maddening whirl and rush of industry, and the hectic social life characteristic of the great industrial centers of the States. We enjoyed our stay in Ontario.

In New England

Heading toward the reunion at Deer Park, I had five days in which to make the transfer. A stop of several hours was made at Guelph, Ontario, where the Saints have a very neat and convenient chapel, ready for dedication the following week. The church building and well-kept grounds reflect the energy, unity, skill, and fruitful devotion of a small band of Saints who were moved by a common love for the Angel Message. We learned that the construction of the entire building was the work of their own hands in volunteer service, from the gathering of the materials and the making of the cement blocks, to the final finishing of the woodwork and the planting of the shrubbery of the well-planned lawn.

An evening was spent with the Saints in Boston and a day with Sanford Fisher in a trip to the reunion grounds at Onset. Our objective was a conference with Sister Lucie Sears, who is writing the third year of her Junior Quarterly. The Onset grounds offer unusual opportunities for community life projects in terms of the church program. We should be anxious to see the splendid equipment used to fuller advantage by the church. Both here and at Deer Park we encouraged the development of young people's camps similar to our Nauvoo camp, as an adventure in education and recreation under able, sympathetic leadership.

The trip from Boston to Philadelphia and Deer Park was pleasantly made as the guest of Brother and Sister W. J. Burton and son Billy, of Long Beach, California, in their auto. Many historic and scenic places were visited en route, one day being spent in New York City.

Deer Park Reunion

Deer Park was found to be a beautiful tract of some seventy-five acres of heavily wooded hill land, not far from the Delaware River, and near the scene of General Washington's famous crossing. Near the entrance to the park is a beautiful spring and lake. A winding hard surface road leads from the paved highway to the tabernacle and camp at the hilltop. Here is the most complete and well-arranged camp grounds it has been my experience to visit. Deer Park holds wonderful possibilities of development for usefulness to the church if those responsible may move with faith and wisdom, and the Saints will respond in a spirit of willing service, together seeking to build the Master's kingdom. The church membership come mainly from the great industrial centers of the Middle East. Deer Park may be made a haven of rest and joyous companionship of Saints, a place of spiritual nurture and communion, the reunion an occasion for soul expansion, for broadened vision and heightened righteous desire. But it must be so planned and so participated in by the great body of Saints of the New York-Philadelphia District.

The attendance at the reunion was not so large as one would expect, but those on the ground who came for the benefits of the reunion were earnest and faithful in their efforts to make the reunion a success. Bishop Zimmermann with his family are among those who may be depended upon, and to whom much is due for the beautiful grounds and their accommodations. Though enfeebled with advancing years, Brother Zimmermann seldom failed to be present at every service, with his characteristic reserve, yet with the encouragement of his presence and his good word of cheer.

Regular services of prayer, worship, class work, preaching, choir and congregational singing, and camp fire all made the days pass pleasantly. Apostle R. S. Budd and Bishop Carmichael joined us in class work, and Elder Arthur Mills was added the second week. An interesting feature of the reunion was the organization of the religious education of the camp on the new plan being advocated for branches. The presidency of the reunion were recognized in their presiding or pastoral functions, while others were chosen as director and as supervisors of adults, young people, and children. The plan worked excellently, as it distributed responsibility and yet centered it where it belongs—with those presiding. Frequent councils were held when there was occasion to check up on the activities and to make new ventures. We earnestly commend the plan for other reunions.

An invitation was accepted from Brother Albert N. Hoxie to attend a rehearsal of his famous Harmonica Band. This was a most pleasant experience, and a revelation of what may be accomplished with ordinary boys and inexpensive equipment under able direction and leadership. Brother Hoxie has merited generous recognition throughout the East as the founder of the movement which now numbers two hundred and fifty bands. We were deeply impressed as forty boys reproduced in beautifully blended harmony the great orchestral compositions of the music world. We trust the day is near when the youth of the church may respond to such musical leadership.

In West Virginia

On the return west a stop of three days was made at Clarksburg, West Virginia, where, on three occasions we met with the local Saints at their neat church, and discussed the fundamentals of religious education and organization under the new plan. I enjoyed the kindness and hospitality of the people; interest and attendance were good. On the closing night the new plan was adopted by a unanimous vote of the business meeting and they proceeded at once to perfect the new organization.

Passing on to Wheeling, the week-end was spent in an institute of the Wheeling District. Attendance here was not large, but ministry is pleasant among a people who are earnestly trying to do the best they can. We long for the day when the gathering of the Saints shall be perfected in many favored places, especially in Zion. Our sympathy goes out to the scattered, isolated ones, and those in fragments of branches, living under trying industrial and social conditions, where but little progress is made toward Zion conditions.

We trust the Spirit of the Master may lead, and that the Saints shall be willing and able to heed the latter-day admonition. We can not expect to drift in worldly ways and build Zion. Nor may we expect to build Zion successfully anywhere without our moving in harmony with the Spirit of the Christ and the direction of latter-day revelation.

We return to the routine of the office with renewed zeal and a clearer vision. The work is onward.

Eastern Michigan District

August 6.—The month of July has been busy in Eastern Michigan District. We have had three all-day services. One was held July 13 at Sandusky, Michigan, where a goodly number of our people assembled. A spiritually profitable day was experienced.

The second all-day service was at Bay Port, Michigan, where we again met with our brothers and sisters. The Saints seemed to be ruled by the spirit of unity and peace. At the eleven o'clock hour Elder W. H. Sheffer preached a spiritual sermon on the theme, "Jesus the Christ, our perfect example." Two girls were baptized in beautiful Saginaw Bay by Elder Sheffer. At the beginning of the afternoon session, Elder M. A. Carr gave a short talk, "The work of the Lord more important than our own work." Then followed the confirmation meeting. At 2.30 Elder C. E. Harpe preached an able sermon on "Let us live more humbly before the Lord." The evening service was inspiring, the sermon by Elder M. A. Carr, "The kingdom of God and its requirements."

On July 27 the Saints met with Applegate Branch. At the early morning prayer service a goodly number from all over the district met to worship God. The Spirit of the Lord was present, and a good prayer meeting was had. Services throughout the day were of high spiritual order.

Following the all-day service at Applegate, Elder C. E. Harpe held a series of meetings there. Elder W. H. Sheffer held a series of services in Owendale Branch, and eleven more were added to our number.

The work of Eastern Michigan District is on the advance spiritually and numerically.

Fargo, North Dakota

Bungalow Church, 1423 First Avenue, South

July 28.—A Rally Day was held here Sunday, July 27; a lovely summer day after a refreshing rain the evening before which brought relief from the hot and dry weather.

Our missionary, C. J. Smith, was present, making the day one of wholesome instruction and encouragement. He stated that this rally should be a tonic for the general church-wide rally September 28.

At 9.45 a. m., class work was divided into two groups, C. J. Smith conducting the group of adults and young people, and Elder Ratcliffe the children. The subject discussed was "Budgeting," taken from the Extension Course of the Centennial Conference Institute.

A program was presented at eleven o'clock by the Sunday school, opening with the solo, "Open the door for the children."

The infant daughter of Sister Fred Wiedling was then blessed by C. J. Smith and H. Ratcliffe. There were several recitations, an exercise and a song by the beginners, followed by a pageant of fifteen characters. The setting for the pageant, "In childhood's realm," was very artistically arranged. The background was a mass of shrubbery and flowers, in baskets and vases. The entrance to the garden was surrounded by a pretty trellis work covered with grapevines and artificial apple blossoms. On the platform were several grass rugs which added much to the setting, and at center front of stage was a large basket of pretty flowers. The actors in the pageant were dressed in costumes of different colors and wore paper hats to represent flowers.

Several nonmembers assisted in the pageant. The part given by each one was a sermonet of its own, and unconsciously through the beautiful art of drama truths of the gospel were impressed on the minds of the actors and the audience.

Truth entered first, saying, "What a beautiful place is the Realm of Childhood. Truth shows only the way of goodness and right to children," etc. The hidden quartet then sang, "In childhood day."

Wisdom entered, telling all who were interested in children to be careful what seeds of truth and wisdom we sow in these fertile little minds to make them the finest possible.

Next came a group of happy children, admiring the beautiful place and anxious to learn, saying they had been taught to speak the truth.

Courage then appeared, saying that a child needs courage to say and do only the things which are kind and good. She was followed by Loyalty, teaching we must learn to be loyal to ourselves, our fellow man, and to God who commands us to "Love thy neighbor as thyself." The quartet sang softly, "Loyal hearts."

Service appeared in rich purple and told of the verse in the Bible which is the keynote of true service. It is, "Whatever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." Again the quartet sang "Service" to the tune of "America the Beautiful." Wisdom next introduced Happiness to the beautiful Realm of Childhood, who said she could always be found in the realm because young hearts are so innocent and beautiful. She bade them to be glad and sing as they worked or played. Smiles and songs make a better world than frowns and tears.

Opportunity came with the message that the Realm of Childhood is filled with golden opportunities; and it is for those who guide the steps of children to point out these blessings to them. She was followed by Love, who bade them to love your friends, your families, and the great world of people whom you do not know. Speak, give, and act lovingly, remembering that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son."

All who had gathered in the garden together sang joyfully "The wonderful garden of love." The Spirit of Children's Day appeared in white with blossoms on her gown, wearing a pink hat. The children gave her a hearty welcome. She told them that today children are coming into their rightful heritage, that which our Savior had in mind when he called a little child to him and told his followers that such a child should be greatest in his kingdom, and that to enter the kingdom we must all become as little children. The happy scene ended with the quartet singing, "Hail, Children's Day."

C. J. Smith then gave a very spiritual sermonet on the new plan of religious education, weaving in the thought that the program given was in harmony with the new plan, and that it could be considered a real missionary effort because of working in nonmembers. He commended the young people on their efforts. "Onward to Zion" was sung by the quartet, after which a picnic dinner was served at Elder Leitch's home on the church grounds.

At 2.30 class work was held, Elder Smith giving a very fine lecture, which should awaken all to action. Preaching at eight o'clock by Elder Smith, showing the divinity of God, and stating that Jesus never did anything in his realm that we can not do in ours. Jesus is not an idol; he is our brother.

The Department of Recreation and Expression enjoyed a social time at Oak Grove Park the evening of July 11. Ice cream and wafers were served as refreshments.

On July 10 Harry Ratcliffe, who is employed at the North Dakota Agricultural College, formerly from Washington, District of Columbia, was ordained to the office of elder by C. J. Smith and Thomas Leitch. Saints surely welcome Elder Ratcliffe to our branch and feel he will be a great help in his earnest way.

On Sunday evening, July 13, an installation service was given Elder Ratcliffe, after which he responded with a fine talk and an expression of appreciation of loyalty shown him.

Thomas Leitch baptized Richard Eugene Stowell, of Valley City, Sunday, July 6, and on July 20 Elder Leitch went to Sheldon, holding services and baptizing Mazel Thelma Rife.

Sunday, July 13, Elder Leitch preached at the home of Brother and Sister Ed Yockum at Mapleton.

Several cars of Saints went along and had a picnic dinner at Sister Yockum's home.

Saints were pleasantly surprised by a visit from Patriarch F. A. Smith July 15. He preached two fine sermons. His text July 15 was Matthew 16: 29: "Forsake the world and save your soul." He said there must be an awakening of our people. We are living in perilous times. Jesus will appear to those who are looking for him. We are face to face with the thought—we have to look for him. If angels are to be judged, what manner of men ought we to be? July 16 his text was Matthew 16: 25-29. We should learn to take up our cross daily. What if we do taste of the bread of humility, and tears, if we can finally sit down in the kingdom of God? Patriarch Smith also gave two blessings while here.

Sunday, July 6, Harry Ratcliffe used for his subject "A foundation to build upon." He stated we must work hard in the gospel work to hold our position.

The Department of Women will hold an ice cream social on Worth Couey's lawn Thursday, July 31.

C. J. Smith, who held a series of meetings at Dunn Center recently, reported a fine interest and good attendance. Many nonmembers attended every night.

The only real joy in life is in service to God.

Ontario, California

August 12.—We have experienced a great deal of sickness lately, which lessened our attendance at church services considerably. At present most of them have recovered or are convalescing.

We are feeling the business depression very keenly, and deciduous fruit growers have not fared very well up to the present this year. We trust our Creator to carry us through.

The young people have organized a class to study stewardships, and meet every Thursday night with much interest. Even though the young people started the class, all are invited to attend.

Brother Draper, of Fontana, was with us Sunday, August 10, in the forenoon, and gave us a very good sermon. If we will give heed to it, we can all profit by the same.

At five in the afternoon two more people were baptized, heads of the family. They were the result of missionary work done by our pastor, Elder F. J. Lacey, at Riverside, California.

We are expecting our new missionary, R. D. Weaver, to be with us the first of next month, and we know we shall enjoy his presence with us, as well as be profited by the same.

Our beloved brother, Doctor Teel, will be with us Sunday, August 24. We are always glad to see him.

Now that most of our sick have recovered and are with us again, we will resume the presentation of the historical programs put out by headquarters.

We are looking forward to our Sunday school picnic, which we expect to attend in the near future, and we intend to make it a joyful social get-together for old and young.

Though trials, misunderstandings, and troubles assail us, and all hell our way oppose, brethren, with our eyes fixed on our present objective, "Zion," let us join hearts and hands and strive on.

The Australian Delegation to Centennial Conference

By W. J. Haworth

All the members of the above delegation who intend returning to Australia have now landed or are about to land in Australia. The Balmain Branch accorded us a wonderful home-coming reception on Sunday, July 14. There was a record attendance at the school—the old record was excelled by 53—to give us a home-coming reception. Speeches of welcome were delivered, and members of the delegation taught classes on Zion and talked about their experiences during the service period.

In the afternoon the writer talked to a full church on the "New plan in religious education." His remarks were illustrated by the graphs adopted by General Conference and others, reproduced upon large cards. Many questions were asked and answered, and everyone seemed to take the new plan to heart. There is to be further consideration by the priesthood and departmental officers one evening this week. Auckland, Kerepeehi, and Richmond Branches have adopted it.

We are endeavoring to get going on a program of meetings in the various branches of the mission with a view to stimulating the work by a recital of the good news of the General Conference and our observations in America—having particular reference to the work being done towards the establishment of Zion. We have been cheered by our experiences, and new qualities have come into our message as a result of our association with the Saints of America. We shall share these glorious experiences with the Saints of this mission, to the best of our ability.

At Honolulu, through the kindness of Brother Waller and our Hawaiian friends, we spent nine days packed with precious experiences. We found the Hawaiians a lovable people, more highly educated than we had expected to find them, and certainly refined and cultured. We learned a greater respect for Uncle Sam when we noted these qualities among the Hawaiian people, for in contrasting their advancement with that of other races we have visited, we felt it was due to American ideals of education and culture being taught and practiced among them. We enjoyed the services in three churches of Honolulu and particularly our association with the dear Saints there.

Our visit to America has done this for us: To us, the church is bigger than ever; its message is greater than ever; its people are dearer than ever; we understand the policies of the church better than ever; and we shall endeavor to bring the church in Australia nearer to the ideals of the church in America.

Mallard, Iowa

The work in Mallard has been moving along nicely. Each department is trying to do its share. It is the desire of each member to do his part, and we know the work will move forward according to the effort we put forth.

Miss Dorothy Smith, of Louisville, Kentucky, visited our branch July 6. Other out-of-town visitors during the month were Brother and Sister Bolie and family, of Bert, Iowa, and the Peterson and Pierson families of Albert City.

July 27 we were much pleased to have ten from the Coleville Branch visit us. Brother Sam Jordison was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour. He gave a very interesting talk in regard to the goodness of this great work. We were favored with two songs from three of the group.

We are always pleased to have visitors and are sorry that we are not closer to other branches so we could visit each other more often.

On July 16 the Women's Department took their lunch and spent the day with Sister Lettie McDonald, near Ayrshire. Although the weather was hot, all enjoyed the day.

As our district reunion is drawing near, our minds are centered on it. We hope many will be able to attend and receive much good from it. We see by the little paper we received there is a very good outline of class work contemplated, and we feel that all who attend will be pleased with the instructors that have been selected. We pray for God's blessing on the reunion, and hope that all who attend will put forth every effort to make it the best reunion we have ever had.

Bemidji, Minnesota

Although few in number we are holding regular services in the "little white church in the pines." A good spirit prevails, and because we are few our determination to do our share of the latter-day work is the stronger.

Besides trying to keep branch work alive and growing, Brother Day has had several calls from Saints in the regions surrounding this city.

June 22 Brother McBride, of Emo, Ontario, met with Brother Day at Little Fork. Services were held in which the Saints were encouraged. July 12 Brother Day met with Little Fork Saints to organize a Sunday school. Again on July 28 Brother Day was called to Little Fork to administer to Sister Ruth Hayes. Sister Ruth was helped and is rejoicing in the gospel. If it be the Lord's will, we pray that our afflicted sister may have a speedy recovery.

Brother Day held three services at the home of Brother and Sister Galbraith, of Thief River Falls, June 29. A number of nonmembers were present and showed good interest. We hope this work may be followed up, for we feel that good can be accomplished. Brother Galbraith has been faithfully laboring to get the gospel before his friends and neighbors.

Brother Knight, of Minneapolis, who was with us for a time, was called home to attend to some business affairs.

The Cass Lake Saints are faithful attendants at our services. Brother and Sister Bosshardt are letting their light shine. At a recent visit to their home, Brother Day found two fine sisters ready for baptism.

Brother and Sister Wheeler, who have been absent from the branch for about a year, are again with us.

The August sacramental service was one in which the spirit of harmony and unity prevailed. We regret that more could not have enjoyed this service. We feel the wisdom of the call for Saints to gather into communities and to Zion.

We were glad to welcome the Shippy sisters, of Genoa, Colorado, to our service July 20. These sisters attended teachers' summer college at Bemidji.

Brother Simms, of Bagley, and Brother Matthewson, of Clearbrook, worshiped with us July 6. We hope sickness and other causes will soon be removed, that the Bagley and Clearbrook Saints may worship with us regularly.

We are looking forward to a rally day, when we expect to have Apostle J. F. Garver and Missionary C. A. Smith with us. We hope all Saints in this part of the State will try to be present.

Southern District British Isles

By John A. Judd

I am pleased to say that the work here (in the South) is improving, and that future prospects are great.

The work in Exeter is in fair condition. I was pleased in a recent visit to that branch to find over thirty in attendance. I am taking up the matter of sending some help to them with Brother Hanson when he comes this way. Brothers McDowell, Hanson, and Edwards will be staying with us for a time.

I think some missionary effort would bring success. I wish that my business would permit me to spend some time with them, as I am sure many new members would be the result of concentrated effort. Generally prospects with them are good.

My visit to Gloucester last Easter was profitable—quite a large gathering of people for this small place. Here again we need a meeting place and a good man that could give his time to the work to make it a success.

We have many scattered Saints in this district, and we are trying to turn this into account by getting others interested through them.

The new church at Enfield, where most of my time is spent, has proved a great asset to the work. Much interest is still being shown, and I have had the pleasure of admitting four into the fold since it was opened last December. Others are interested in the work and no doubt will come in as time goes by.

The "decision day" movement is a wonderful thing. It sets before the minds of the people a goal, a time to decide. It has helped us here. We are having one each three months.

It would give us the greatest pleasure for you [President Smith] to see the new church building. It is spoken of by all who see it as the greatest thing in the British Isles. We have tried to do our best to build a house of God that will be a blessing to all who take part.

We are looking forward with joy to the visit of Brothers McDowell, P. M. Hanson, and F. H. Edwards, and we feel sure that we will have a great time. They arrive on the 21st for a stay of about a week.

One great help to the work here in Enfield is the kindly attitude of the people generally, the kindly thoughts expressed for our success by many who look over the building, also some who attend. This continued interest gives us courage and hope for future success.

Cleveland, Ohio

Cleveland Branch had five Saints who attended the Centennial. Our pastor, Elder Percy Farrow, and wife enjoyed a motor trip to the conference in the car of Sister J. Redden, who proved an able chauffeur. In the party were Sister Jones and Sister Elders. Elder and Sister F. Haines also were motorists from Lakewood to the conference.

Pastor Percy Farrow, enthused by the new church program talked and explained to the Saints at the conference, talked it over with the Saints of our branch, and at our last quarterly business meeting the subject of the new plan was discussed. The body adopted the new plan. At the suggestion of our pastor, Elder J. A. McNeil was elected as assistant to the pastor. A change in the officers of the other departments was left to the pastor, the changes to be made when he thought advisable.

Virginia Webbe and Florence McNeil have returned from Graceland. We hear they are not returning this fall, and we will be glad to have them with us to help in building this part of God's kingdom, and in being able to bring to our youth some of the fine things that are had at Graceland. Eva Wallace also returned, but she is going back to Graceland this fall.

From July 18 to 22 we were privileged to have with us Apostle Clyde F. Ellis. Friday, the 18th, at our Department of Recreation and Expression meeting, Brother Ellis gave us a very interesting talk on his labors among the natives. Since last he visited us he has been trying to translate the songs of our Zion's Praises into the native tongue of the islanders. He enjoyed a great degree of the Spirit of the Master while so doing, particularly in the translation of the hymn number twenty in the Praises; so much so that Brother Ellis said it must have been similar to the inspiration enjoyed by the composer. We were made happy at hearing Brother Ellis sing this song for us in the foreign tongue.

On Sunday morning, the 20th, Brother Ellis gave us a fine discourse on cooperation. In the evening he again spoke to us on "God, man, sin, and man's redemption"; also the evolution of man and his development.

We were benefited by Brother Ellis's sojourn with us.

Sault Sainte Marie, Ontario

The Soo Branch has been favored with a visit from Apostle R. S. Budd.

The all-day special meeting June 1 was one of the best days in the history of the Soo Branch.

Apostle Budd and Elder H. A. Dayton were the speakers for the day. The following program was carried out: At 9 a. m. young people's prayer meeting; 10 a. m., general prayer meeting and sacrament service; at 11.15 Apostle Budd preached to a full house. His subject was, "As a man thinketh"; at 2.30 p. m. Elder Dayton preached, using as a subject, "Obedience to the law is liberty"; at 4 p. m. Apostle Budd gave a lecture to young people which lasted one hour and a half. His subject was "Temptations." This was one of the most inspiring talks that the people of this branch have been privileged to hear. At 7.30 that evening Apostle Budd preached again to a very good crowd. The following night (Monday) Elder Dayton had the pulpit, and Tuesday night Brother Budd spoke, and on Wednesday again took his turn, and after the preaching service we had a baptismal service for three children. Brother Dayton performed the ordinance at the children's request. They are all children of Latter Day Saints. All, and especially the parents, rejoiced to see these young ones responding to the Master's call. They were Harry Thomas, Gladys Edwards, and Sister McPhee's little girl Hazel.

On Thursday and Friday nights Apostle Budd preached, and the message he delivered will be one of the sweetest of memories to all who heard him.

In his last sermon here, which was on the theme "Planting the garden," he spoke impressively concerning the responsibility of members of the church, and as to how we are using that which is intrusted to our care. Much depends on how well and efficiently we discharge that responsibility.

Brothers Budd and Dayton have visited all the homes of the Saints and given them encouragement and spiritual help. These visits have been greatly appreciated by our members, for we do not often have such a privilege. We are looking forward to another visit from Brother Dayton, our missionary, soon. Also hope that Brother Budd may find his way into this field again.

Nauvoo Summer Camp

By Craig Siegfried

Nauvoo Summer Camp, in its third and most successful year, has accomplished much. Gene Closson and Craig Siegfried took an advance party of boys from Independence to Nauvoo for the purpose of building bunk houses to be used by boy campers. These young men supervised the work, but the entire project was under the splendid direction of Brother J. W. Layton. Not many men eighty years old are able and willing to direct an effort of the sort or to work with a bunch of boys.

Twelve men may be housed in each bunk house. There are three decks of bunks on two walls of the cabins, each wall supporting six bunks. All bunks are six feet long and two and a half feet wide.

The boys received no pay for their services while constructing the houses. They were furnished their board during this advance week, but they paid their transportation both to and from camp as well as their camp fee.

The boys in this party were "Duke" Arber, L. M. McFadden, "Sam" Siegfried, "Mickie" Siegfried, David Smith, Howard Sneed, "Don" Smith, Vaughn Short, Wayne Miller, and Paul Moffet.

The day's program of camp activities started at six o'clock a. m., and carried the campers through fifteen very active hours, finally depositing them in their respective bunks at nine o'clock, tired and sleepy.

The mornings were devoted to class work. For the boys there were lessons in boat construction, making sea bags, drill, calisthenics, swimming, and diving. Two days were spent on each of these subjects.

The girls found their time well taken with classes in handcraft, homecraft, and health lectures.

Immediately before class periods came the morning assembly periods. These assemblies, under the direction of Roy Cheville, were carried out on a different plan than had hitherto been tried. Certain campers were designated for each program, and assigned subjects to develop in their own individual way. Such themes as "Pals," and "My Hero," were developed very nicely by such young people.

The afternoons of the camp were full of activity. Following the rest period after lunch, games were in order; baseball, soccer, and volley ball. An hour or more of this strenuous exercise, and everyone was ready for a good swim in the "Father of Waters."

Evenings were well taken up with our camp-fire program. Mr. Wallace Blair, of Lamoni, Iowa, presented the camp with a very fine assortment of fireworks for our program the night of July 4. He also made his usual present of three big boxes of marshmallows, which were promptly toasted and as promptly eaten.

These camp-fire programs were assigned to different groups to develop. The one program long to be remembered was when the representatives of various States entertained. It was here that "Corn-fed Bertha," daughter of Apostle Garver, made her debut as elocutionist extraordinary.

When camp fire was over there was always a race for the bunk houses and rooms. Happenings of the day were talked over and plans for the morrow were made, and finally—blessed sleep.

High points of this year's camp, consisting of outstanding events, were: first, the lecture on historic Nauvoo and a tour of the city. Bishop Siegfried conducted the tour and gave the lecture. The trip took in all the old residences and points of historic interest. It served to give Old Nauvoo and the camp a meaning to the young folks that would have been impossible in any other manner.

Another outstanding event that will long be remembered was when eight boys swam across the Mississippi, a distance of about two miles. The boys were accompanied by Gene Closson, Almer Sheehy, and Craig Siegfried. Two boats with life-saving crews rowed alongside. None of the boys had any trouble; in fact, six of them swam back, making a total of a little over four miles.

The camp prayer meeting, held the Wednesday before the close of camp, will not soon be forgotten. Practically every member of the camp took part in the meeting, expressing appreciation of the privileges afforded by the camp, of meeting and becoming acquainted with members of the church their own age. The meeting was an inspiration to the leaders, and will long be remembered by all attending as an expression of the beautiful spirit of the youth of the church.

Perhaps the greatest thrill of all was "Honors Retreat." It is at the final flag lowering that the honors won by all members of the camp are awarded. It is here that the young folks receive recognition for their participation and activities during the brief stay at Old Nauvoo.

Taken as a whole, the camp at Nauvoo has been a huge success, if the sentiment expressed by the campers is any basis for such an assertion.

Ludington, Michigan

106 South Rath Avenue

Sunday afternoon of May 11 a beautiful baptismal service was held at Crystal Lake, when three young people stepped forth in obedience to the gospel. We were glad to welcome Sisters Martha Shaw, Iva Chadwick, and Eloise Randall into the church.

June 8 Ludington Saints gathered for the one-day meeting with very good attendance, especially in the afternoon. Sister Kate Reek, district Sunday school superintendent, gave a talk on Sunday school work which was very interesting and instructive. Elder A. Whitehead, of Muskegon, gave interesting discourses both in the afternoon and evening.

The Children's Day exercises were given on the evening of June 29.

Several of the Saints were permitted to attend district conference at Freesoil, June 20, 21. Elder Alvin Ellis, of South Boardman, is again our district president. He is a very faithful worker and devoted to the gospel work.

July 14 Elder and Sister J. L. Randall and family and Brother and Sister G. H. Foster and daughter returned from Denver, Colorado. Elder Randall had gone there for his health. He is much improved and is feeling better than he ever did. The Western Michigan District held a fast in his behalf, and the same day he was administered to in Denver. Immediately after his nervousness left, and a decided improvement was felt. There is much to be thankful for. It truly seems, as Elder R. D. Davis said in his sermon Sunday, "The Lord works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform."

Several from this branch attended the district recreational meeting at Fife Lake. Sister Lucy Ellis had charge of the exercises of the day. A good time was had by all. In the evening we all motored to South Boardman where Sister Frances Hunter and Miss Ethelle Partridge furnished a very profitable and enjoyable evening, with vocal selections and humorous and serious readings.

The one-day meeting on Sunday, August 3, following the recreational meeting, was well attended. The Spirit of God was present in the services. We gleaned much good from the sermons of Missionary E. N. Burt and Elder R. D. Davis. Their experiences in the gospel were surely wonderful.

In the evening many of the Saints motored to Traverse City to hear the lecture and see the wonderful pictures taken by Elder H. A. Doty while he was in Jerusalem. We were more than repaid for driving up there. One is more able to understand the Scriptures after seeing the pictures. We hope that we may be permitted to see the remainder of the pictures.

Two Cousins Attend Baptismal Service

Some time ago two cousins, one a Latter Day Saint, the other a Protestant, stood at the water's edge and witnessed a Protestant minister immerse several candidates. While standing in the water, the officiating clergyman would call each by name, then say, "I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen." As the third person was taking a position in the water, the Latter Day Saint said to his cousin, "Please observe carefully the sacred ritual used by your preacher. He says only, 'I baptize,' etc., while a Latter Day Saint minister would say, calling them by name: 'Having authority given me of Jesus Christ, I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.' Then he would immerse them in the water." During conversations on all the important questions of legal rights to administer the sacred ordinance, it was suggested that if the Protestant minister could not conscientiously say, "Having authority given me of Jesus Christ, I baptize you," that in fairness to the penitent candidates and information of the friends assembled, he should say, "Having no authority given me of Jesus Christ, I baptize you," for it must be admitted that acknowledged membership in the Lord's church depends on heirship; heirship depends on relationship; relationship depends on legal adoption; and legal adoption depends on the Lord's duly commissioned officer, authorized to use the sacred formula, "Having authority given me of Jesus Christ," or "Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ." We are divinely instructed that "he whom God has sent will speak the words of God." Saint Paul advised, "that ye all speak the same thing" (1 Corinthians 1: 10), hence the necessity of the great Restoration movement and organization of the Latter Day Saints Church directed by the Lord a century ago, and the authorized ministrations and ordinations by John the Baptist, and Peter, James, and John the Revelator. How true and greatly to be appreciated are the poet's words:

"And now commissioned from on high,
God's servants faith, repentance cry,
Baptizing as in days of old,
Into one Shepherd and one fold."

Experiences of Roger Williams

Funk & Wagnalls Company (copyright 1912) published ten small volumes of Great Epochs in American History. In volume 2, pages 133, 134, Historian Francis W. Halsey said of Roger Williams: "That he (Williams) was out of the way himself, and had misled them, for he did not find that there was any upon earth that could administer baptism, and therefore their last baptism (immersion) was a nullity, as well as their first (sprinkling); and therefore they must lay down all, and wait for the coming of new apostles," etc.

John Wesley, a student of Bible prophecies, wrote of the long-looked-for restoration of the gospel, saying, "The times that we have reason to believe are at hand, if they are not already begun, are what many pious men have termed the latter-day glory." Charles Wesley observed that God would "set up the attracting sign," and summon new apostles to do a special work as in New Testament times. But the proud, self-appointed religious leader, Alexander Campbell, said, "If we have the right to preach, we have the right to baptize," and he with his followers reposed their hopes of heirship, eternal salvation, in that greatest of all words of uncertainty, if. Hence we can justly conclude that if Mr. Campbell is not with Saint Peter in the glory land, he is with—well—he is somewhere else with other "eloquent men," those who needed to learn "the way of God more perfectly," and the insufficiency of the doubtful word if when trying to represent the Lord's holy plan of salvation, in preaching, baptizing, etc.

"The Manner of Their Language"

In the first section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants we read the following instruction to the church, "Behold, I am God, and have spoken it; these commandments are of me, and were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language that they might come to understanding." (Given November 1, 1831.) Nine months before the above revelation was given, the Lord gave sections 42 and 43, containing special commandments and laws to the church in plainness, "after the manner of their language that they might come to understanding." One of the commandments read, "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else." (Section 42: 3.) In section 43: 1, 2, the Lord emphasizes to the whole church and more especially to "ye elders" that a prophet had been appointed and that he (Joseph Smith, jr.) had "come in at the gate," and was ordained to his position in and for the church, to receive revelations for a law, and that "none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him he shall not have power, except to appoint another in his stead."

Now, dear reader, there should be a timely lesson in the foregoing language, especially in the two emphatic words used in both sections, namely none else, positively stating that there should be one living wife at a time, and none else; also, one living prophet at a time to be spokesman for the Lord to his church as law giver, and to none else.

It was truly said that the Utah Church did by Brigham Young (in 1852) interpret the words none else when referring to the marriage covenant to mean one to nineteen or more wives all at the same time. However, Brigham Young's church maintains that none else when referring to the prophet and president of his organization means one at a time and only that one is authorized to receive instruction for its guidance as law, which means that none else must not be pluralized except when Brigham and some of his brothers wanted more wives than one.

There is a statement in the Utah Doctrine and Covenants 132: 54 where Brigham uses the words none else when commanding a woman to cleave unto her husband, but Brigham knowingly violates those words when directing men of his church, and took to himself many wives. (See the Saints' Herald, September 30, 1914.)

One Hundred and Ten Thousand Members

The thousands of Saints have hundreds of ways of earning large and small sums of money, but the Presiding Bishopric has only a few channels in which to receive funds for the church with which to meet past and present budget requirements. Have you, dear Saint, contributed as fully and freely of your tithes, offerings, etc., as you should? Make a deeper resolve to be a contributor and worker, together with others, for the advancement of the Lord's blessed cause.

Independence

Stone Church

"Good literature in the family" was the subject of Pastor John F. Sheehy's sermon at the Sunday morning service. He suggested that interest in the church was manifested by reading the church publications. In speaking of the admonition to the Saints to "Read all good books," he reminded the congregation that the church was furnishing an excellent opportunity along this line through the Emma Hale Memorial Library.

Albert Brackenbury sang a baritone solo, and Evan Fry played a special organ number. Elder Vernon A. Reese presided and was assisted by Elder James Strachan. Paul N. Craig directed the congregational singing.

At the Campus

The attendance at the junior worship service at the Campus Sunday morning was about 105. Sister Ina Hattey was in charge of the service and directed the music.

"Oh, gentle Savior" was the opening song. Brother Bolinger offered the opening prayer. There was a short song service and the children chose to sing, "Swing Song," "Bring them in," and "Savior like a shepherd." These songs are in the Rainbow Song Book.

After the offering was taken up Brother Bolinger read an article, and Helen Mader, one of the children, played a piano solo. Brother Leonard Hoisington, who was one of our missionaries to Germany, told about the customs and manners and many other interesting things about the children in foreign countries. After the closing song Brother Bolinger pronounced the benediction.

"The family as the unit of society," was the theme of President Frederick M. Smith's sermon at the union service on the Campus Sunday evening. He spoke of the danger in allowing functions rightly belonging to the family to be taken over by schools and other institutions. Some causes for the increasing divorce rate were given as: delayed marriages, lower moral standards, and disloyalty. The remedy was given as being founded in religion and in recognition of divine laws of life.

In touching on the problem of married women in industry, President Smith laid down the rule that the Zionism woman will engage in no task which interferes with home duties, which lessens her power to make her proper contribution to the maintenance of her home. Activities outside the home which do not interfere were recommended.

It is the prime duty and social obligation of the family to reproduce itself; children must be given such care as will produce the highest type of citizenship at adulthood; loyalty is essential to the permanency of the family; the Zionism home must be of the very best quality possible.

A double quartet, in charge of and accompanied at the piano by Evan Fry, sang two numbers: "O for a thousand tongues," and "To thee my Lord and Savior." Albert Brackenbury, baritone, sang the solo, "Fear not, O Israel." Elder Dewey McNamara presided over the service, and was assisted by Elder T. A. Beck. Elder John F. Sheehy led the congregational singing.

South Side

An average attendance was present at the sacramental meeting the first Sunday in the month, August 3, and a good meeting was enjoyed.

Elder Hubert Case was the speaker August 10.

Brother Almer Sheehy, newly ordained youthful minister, addressed the Second Church congregation August 17. The young man's evident sincerity and consecration to his work won the heart of every Saint who heard him speak for the first time at the South Side Church. His subject, "Why we need faith," was handled very well for one of Almer's short experience, and everyone wishes for him God's help in the development of his potential powers.

Ours is indeed a church apart from others when it produces youth eager to undertake the task of carrying on the gospel. May we have more of them.

Liberty Street

Decision days at Liberty Street have not always seemed to coincide with those designated by the general church, but we are glad at any time to welcome into fellowship, children or adults who have been won to the Christ way of life.

Four church school converts, Mildred Booker, Earl Roberts, Virgil Dobson, and Robert Blake, were, on Sunday, July 27, inducted into the kingdom by their leader, Priest Harry Blake.

Confirmation service formed a part of the devotional service of the church school.

A group of eager, expectant juniors waited for the junior church hour Sunday, August 10. The name of their speaker had been mysteriously withheld, so they knew a lovely surprise was in store for them. Through the efforts of the associate junior leader, Cecil Walker, Sister Estella Wight had been secured to talk to the juniors on that morning. What group of church school children would not be glad to have the editor of their own Sunday school paper appear before them personally? That the talk she made was received was clearly evidenced by the ready response from the children.

The literary arm of the church has been well represented at Liberty Street recently. Sunday morning, August 17, Elder Leslie Flowers pointed out the differences between the type of enemies from which the church is suffering today and those against which the church contended in the 1830's. While those today do not affect the safety of our homes and our lives, they are quite as formidable. The warped ideas of authority, the wrong conceptions of what constitutes a Latter Day Saint, the tendency to more closely observe and criticize the faults of others while our own go unheeded are some of the outstanding present-day enemies of the church.

Elder Leonard Lea assisted the pastor, F. A. Cool, in conducting this service, and the choir, under the direction of Fred Friend, and accompanied by Lyda Thomason, rendered the anthem, "Remember now thy Creator."

Enoch Hill

Beginning with the early Sunday morning prayer service, the theme for this week has been "Loyalty." It was carried through the church school program, and was the subject of the morning sermon by Elder Joe Martin of the local priesthood. The remaining services of the week will continue the theme.

Elder C. E. Beal, who is in charge of the young people's work, is recovering from an operation which he passed through at the Sanitarium Monday of last week. Brother Beal is very highly thought of on the Hill, and the young people will be glad to welcome him back again soon.

Brother Robert Rawlins, eighty-eight years of age, passed away Saturday at the home of his son, George Rawlins. The funeral service was held Monday afternoon in charge of Elder William J. Brewer.

Walnut Park

The speaker of the morning service at Walnut Park on Sunday, the 10th, was Bishop J. A. Becker, who used as a basis for his discourse the first chapter of Genesis, Inspired Version. His text was taken from the 30th verse, "Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it; and have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." This reading and text show that the principle of man's stewardship over the things which God has created was recognized from the beginning.

Midweek prayer services were held in each of the five groups of Walnut Park on Wednesday evening. Some very fine meetings were reported. The 8 o'clock prayer meetings on Sunday mornings have also been well attended and marked with a large degree of the Spirit.

Bishop G. L. DeLapp, of Lamoni Stake, was the speaker at the preaching service on the 17th. He gave a very able and enlightening discussion of the subject of "Zion," using as a text a statement from Doctrine and Covenants 36:2: "And the Lord called his people Zion, because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness: And there was no poor among them." Brother DeLapp pointed out that in the building of Zion we must examine the institutions and economic practices which have been accepted in order to determine whether or not they are scientific and in harmony with our ideal of a Zion society.

Announcement was made of a Family Supper, a social get-together for Walnut Park, to be held at the church on Thursday evening.

Englewood

At the eleven o'clock service last Sunday, Elder L. W. Fike was the speaker. The members of the congregation attended the combined services of all the churches in Zion for the evening.

The senior class of the Sunday school, under the direction of Perry Hiles, the teacher, has been in the habit of giving the plays in short sketches which are taken from Vision and are portrayals of the church history. The class is planning on giving another play from Vision this Sunday.

August 29 the church is to have a steak fry at Wildwood Lake, south of Raytown. All of the members of the church are expected to attend.

For the last few weeks the congregation has been meeting every Friday night at the Hill Memorial Park in South Englewood for an evening of games and recreation of all kinds. Last Friday night each family took watermelon for refreshments.

Attendance at Sunday school has been above the average for this time of year. Attendance at the other meetings has shown an increase. Especially has it been good at the Wednesday evening prayer meetings every week.

North Platte, Nebraska

By Emily C. Hillman

We have just closed our reunion, conducted by Brothers H. E. Winegar and J. Charles May. We had a time of rejoicing in the Spirit, and the gospel was set forth as it is found in the Scriptures.

Six were baptized, and the Saints were encouraged.

The weather was ideal. Sometimes we did not have a large crowd, for it was harvest time.

I am thankful I was able to be there, as I was deprived of attending meetings with the Saints so long on account of sickness. I have been a cripple for six years, as some of the Ensign readers will remember. I have been giving my Ensigns and Heralds to nonmembers and have tried to talk to some. I ask an interest in the prayers of brothers and sisters.

Decision Day

Decision Day opened in Enfield with beautiful sunshine. This, together with the gentle breeze and singing of the birds, gave a lovely setting for the services of the day.

The church was resplendent with flowers, mostly lilies, which with their sweet perfume, together with the spirit of worship one felt upon entering the sacred building, gave a peaceful setting to all who took part.

The baptismal font was decked with the beautiful Devonshire ferns. To the strains of the new church orchestra there entered the largest Sunday morning gathering yet recorded.

The order of service was continued with the singing of "Redeemer of Israel," the song which makes every Latter Day Saint's heart rejoice.

The opening fervent prayer was delivered by F. Harmworth. A ten-minute address was given by J. A. Judd upon the sacredness of the covenant now being entered into by the three who were about to be baptized.

The whole building seemed filled with the Spirit of the Master when the pastor, J. A. Judd, stepped from the rostrum, and clear and distinct was the pledge given by Amy, Maisie, and Ellen, who pledged themselves to serve God through good and evil report. Each was led down into the water, while the orchestra softly played one verse of "Nearer, my God, to thee." At the conclusion of this, the congregation sang, "Father, we have heard thy pleadings." This was followed by an inspiring twenty-minute talk by D. Alma Judd, after which was the closing hymn, "Praise him, praise him, Jesus our blessed Redeemer."

Afternoon Session

The afternoon session was occupied by the church school. With a full attendance, above the average of fifty, a good program was given. Numbers were presented by the orchestra, choir, and soloist.

A reading was given by the superintendent, the whole of the proceedings concluding with the Lord's prayer.

The Evening Service

The evening service, which took place at 6.30, was one long to be remembered. The orchestra commenced with a number which brought all to a feeling of worship. A solo was rendered by the pastor, J. A. Judd—"Abide with me." This was followed by the choir, which rendered three numbers with good feeling.

Hymns were sung, followed by prayer, which in turn was followed by the Lord's prayer.

A short address was given by the pastor. This was followed by an orchestral number, and closed with prayer and the singing of the vesper hymn.

Confirmation and sacramental service concluded the day's worship. This was most inspiring, the Spirit of the Master being present in power.

The confirmations were attended to by Elders John A. Judd, J. W. Worth, and D. A. Judd. The sacrament was administered in silence. Several sick administrations were called for, and the spirit of an old hymn was present:

At even, ere the sun was set,
The sick, O Lord, around thee lay.
Oh, in what divers pains they were;
Oh, in what joy they went away.

The blessing of all seemed full by the manifestation of the Spirit in which the Master said he was pleased with the gathering. The spirit of worship was manifest throughout the day.

The memory of the spirit of the meetings will not soon be forgotten. Also the closing eventide, when many lingered in the sacred building. Truly this is none other than the house of God; this is the gate to heaven.

Des Moines, Iowa

717 East Twelfth Street

Although attendance has been lessened on account of the extreme heat and many being away on their vacations, yet the branch has been quite active.

Young People's Day, July 6, was enjoyed by all. The church school worship service, conducted by Eva Cook, was very impressive. Theme: "Reverence." A peaceful spirit prevailed at the sacramental service, with Brother G. G. Lewis, of Independence, in charge. Theme: "Courageous living."

At 6.30 p. m. the following program was given: Prelude, Vivian Castings; song, "The story of his love," by Helen Castings; prayer; song, "He leadeth me"; dramatic reading, Lorene Zimbrow; violin solo, Verne L. Deskin; talk, "Youth at the Centennial," C. B. Hartshorn; vocal solo, Verba Parker. Classes. Interlude, Vivian Castings; Cornet solo, Lowell Carlson.

At the evening hour Elder G. G. Lewis gave us a very fine sermon on "Youth's place in the church."

District meeting, July 13, was begun with a young people's prayer service at the park at 7.30 a. m. Apostle J. F. Garver was speaker at the morning hour. Lloyd Mussell sang, "Leave it with Him."

At noon a basket dinner was enjoyed at Union Park. At 2.45 p. m. Henry Curtis directed an installation and ordination service. Brother Crownover was ordained to the office of elder under the hands of Brother Garver and Brother Loving. Brother Crownover will reside in Boone.

Brother E. O. Clark was honored on this occasion for his service as bishop of the district for the past seventeen years. G. F. Hull spoke very highly of the loyal and efficient service Brother Clark has given to the church during those years. In presenting the books of his office to Charles Fry, his successor, Brother Clark stated that although his work as bishop was ended, he would continue to work in the interest of the church. Stephen Robinson made the presentation speech and presented Brother Clark with a substantial sum of money as a token of esteem from the Saints. Brother Garver related some of his experiences as a co-laborer with Brother Fry, and assured us that Brother Fry will be of valuable service to the district if we will cooperate with him.

Elder McDonald spoke of the loyalty of the Saints throughout the district, and how they have always stood back of the church program, and pledged to Brother Fry that they will work with him. Brother Fry then made a very good talk, and in his remarks said he hoped to win the confidence and esteem of the Saints as his predecessor had done.

Bishop Charles Fry occupied the pulpit at the eight o'clock hour. A duet, "Hold Thou my hand," was rendered by Gladys Barr and Eva Cook.

The I. X. L. Class, taught by Pastor Hartshorn, enjoyed a lawn party at the home of Brother and Sister J. W. Johnson Tuesday evening, July 22.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest Olmstead are the proud parents of a son, born July 23. Sister Olmstead was formerly Miss Ardith Kirkwood.

Several ice cream socials have been given by the different classes, thus helping to diminish the church debt.

On July 24 Sister Gladys Barr and Mr. Clayton Lloyd were united in marriage at the home of Doctor and Mrs. G. F. Hull, Brother Hull officiating.

On Wednesday evening, August 6, three of our young people, George and Violet Hughes and John Helms were baptized by Pastor C. B. Hartshorn.

Brother Hartshorn went to Independence August 1 for a two-day visit with relatives.

Orman Salisbury, former pastor of our branch, worshiped with us at the prayer service August 6.

We are glad to report an increase in attendance at the Wednesday evening prayer service. All enjoy the spirit of love and fellowship.

The Bond of Sympathy

By Mrs. Edwin H. Davies

The poet has said: "Among those who attempt to exist without human sympathy, the pure and tender-hearted perish through the intensity and passion of their search after its communities when the vacancy of their spirit suddenly makes itself felt. Those who love not their fellow beings live unfruitful lives, and prepare for their old age a miserable grave."

True sympathy, apparently, is a rare and precious attribute. We see many lives withering for need of it. Sympathy is closely related to love, or shall we say a product of it, for sympathy is really the expression of love. The depth of our love can be justly measured by the sympathy we extend to those with whom we mingle.

The tendency today leans heavily towards intolerance, and self looms up boldly on the horizon of daily life, while the best that is in ourselves and others fades into insignificance because of false hope and our failure to grasp the real meaning of life.

In order to be greatly good, we must imagine intensively and comprehensively, and accept the trials and pleasures of others as our own. The kindly feeling in the heart ought to find some way to express itself, a way in keeping, too, with the delicacy and beauty of the sentiment. "We know that we have power over ourselves to do and suffer—what, we know not till we try, but something nobler than to live and die."

Sympathy is meek and gentle, but also powerful and mighty, for it lends new hope to the hopeless and strength to the weak. It adds color to what otherwise appears a gray outlook on life; it wipes tears from eyes and brings a song to the lips. Life once more becomes sweet and the world a good place in which to live.

The sympathy of a loving heart, even a child's, is sweet indeed; but how much sweeter and how comforting is the sympathy of those who have come up through years of experience. The apparently impossible becomes possible, and with what heartiness and sincerity do we sing, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love"! How elevating it is to live in a realm of beauty, and to be in a condition to enjoy the higher and nobler experiences of thought and action! How gratifying and pleasurable to be able to express one's ideas and anticipation to others and be perfectly understood!

As members of the great family of God we should give this sweet bond greater consideration. We claim that we are members of the one and only true church of God, and we claim all the blessings and benefits belonging thereto. We aim for better conditions in this life, and celestial glory in the presence of our Lord, to the end that God be glorified and our souls saved. Therefore our sympathy should be deep and true for one another, the strong helping the weak.

When we overcome the petty disturbances of this earth life that others inflict on us, and that we consciously or unconsciously inflict on others, then we shall have Zion, for in Zion we shall be "Formed, as notes of music are,

For one another, though dissimilar;
Such difference without discord as can make
Those sweetest sounds from which all spirits shake
As trembling leaves in a continuous air."

"The glory of God is intelligence," and "out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God hath shined."

May we unite our efforts in the bond of sympathy, and press forward with stout hearts and open countenances to prepare ourselves for that sublime condition when we shall see as we are seen and know as we are known.

San Jose, California

Sunday, July 13, was Graceland College Day in the San Jose Branch. Elder B. R. Gilbert was in charge of the Sunday School. The pastor, R. E. Cowden, taught the adult class.

Pastor R. E. Cowden was in charge of the eleven o'clock services. Brother Roy Weldon and his sister Ruby, former students of Graceland, were chosen by the district president as a delegation to represent the college, and they proved to be good "boosters," giving us interesting and instructive information as to the very splendid moral and social environment surrounding the school.

Brother and Sister H. G. Hook and daughters Blanch and Mary were visitors from Roseville, California.

There were no services held on Sunday, July 27, as the district conference was being held in Oakland Branch, and the meeting was canceled in order to give members of this branch a chance to attend the conference. The delegates attending from here reported a good conference, well attended.

On Sunday, August 3, the Saints enjoyed a good sacramental service, a goodly degree of the Spirit being present. The meeting was in charge of the pastor, assisted by Elders C. W. Hawkins and B. R. Gilbert. The visitors from other branches were Sister Neal, from Fresno; Sister Wells, from Nappa; Brother and Sister Mark Fonda, from Oakland; Sister Gordon and husband, from Stockton; and Brother and Sister Therin Walker, from Watsonville.

Sunday, August 10, services were again suspended here, to give the Saints an opportunity of attending Rally Day services as the closing event of the young people's camp at the Irvington Camp Ground. A number of the Saints took this opportunity of enjoying an outing for the day, and meeting with Saints from different parts of the district. They reported the meetings of the day as being very spiritual and uplifting. A very appetizing "dinner" was served on the grounds.

Australian Delegation Returned Home

By J. H. N. Jones

I have not received any Heralds or Ensigns since my return to Australia more than one month ago, and I am wondering whether they have been mailed or if mailed have gone astray. A missionary feels keenly the lack when the church papers do not come to hand; in fact, one does not know what is their true value until they are missing from the desk.

I have been very busy since my return, telling the church people of Australia of our wonderful visit to your and God's most favored land, and of the Centennial celebrations. The people are eager to hear what we have to say, and there is no lack of material to go on with.

Sister Jones is fairly well since we arrived, and my health is wonderfully improved to what it was before coming to your land, a blessing which I attribute to the knowledge and skill of your doctors and dentists and the wonderful blessings bestowed upon me by the laying on of hands of the apostles and patriarchs before leaving.

We trust that the good work will go forward in every land and Zion will be redeemed.

Pastoral

To the Saints of the British Isles; Greeting: At the late reunion, held in Manchester August 2-4, the order of the Centennial Conference held in Independence, Missouri, April 6-20, received its consummation, when the writer was set apart to occupy in the Evangelical Order of priesthood. I was a little disappointed in not having the opportunity of addressing you on this vital subject. I therefore take this means of approach, through the official organ of the church.

There are two divisions or heads to this particular office. I am anxious to begin my task of reaching the Saints as early as possible, especially in respect to the evangelistic work. It is my desire that the branches should make their applications as early as possible, that I may be able to arrange my program so that my labors may be equally distributed throughout the mission.

I shall not treat on the duties of my calling in this appeal, but I shall deal with them in particular as I meet with you from time to time. You will find that Doctrine and Covenants 125: 3-6 makes very plain the duty of the office.

I shall make it my business to get in touch with every member of the church. I shall visit you, talk with you, pray with you, and in many ways have pure Christian fellowship with every member in particular; teaching, warning, instructing, comforting, exhorting, in a way and manner which the Spirit of the Master may lead at the time of divine direction.

The main object of this letter is to get in touch with you. Please note my address: W. H. Greenwood, 23 Cicero Street, Moston, Manchester. Let me hear from you as early as possible.

I may devote much of my time to writing in the near future. In this may I may be helpful in giving some of my experiences, together with subject matter which I may find of interest to the Saints.

May the peace and blessing of the Master be with us all.

In kindest love and remembrance,

W. H. GREENWOOD, Evangelist.

Our Departed Ones

IMLAY.—Faith Imlay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Foster T. Imlay, was born February 19, 1925, near Troy, Kansas. Died at Troy, July 17, 1930. Left to mourn are her parents, three brothers, Glenn, Charles, and Forrest, one sister, Bonnie Marie, and many other relatives and friends. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder William Twombly, assisted by Elder William Marsh. Interment was in Troy Cemetery.

LOW.—Charles Low, of the Glenellen Branch, died August 1, 1930. Brother Low, wife, and seven children, have lived near Glenellen, Saskatchewan, since they came to Canada some seventeen years ago. He with his family are earnest and persistent workers in the church and their branch. Brother Low attended our last district conference at Saskatoon, July 17 to 21, returned home Friday, the 25th, and after a week of intense suffering passed away on August 1. He was a member of the Aaronic priesthood, a man of sterling integrity, and fearless in his defense and enunciation of this work. The branch and the church in general sustain a severe and outstanding loss in the death and passing of Brother Low. Funeral from the Grain Grower's Hall, Glenellen, August 3, conducted by Ward L. Christy. A vast throng, including the major part of the community, far and near, was in attendance at the funeral.

ETZENHOUSER.—Lucina Brownell Etzenhouser was born in Farmington, Utah, in 1855. She passed away at her home in Independence, Missouri, on August 6. Pneumonia was the cause of her death. Sister Etzenhouser met and married Elias Etzenhouser in California. Her husband preceded her in death several years. To them were born five sons, two of whom died in infancy. The sons who survive are Russell D. and Merrill A., of Independence; Virgil B., of Honolulu, Territory of Hawaii. She is also survived by nine grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, three brothers, and two sisters who reside in California. Sister Etzenhouser was baptized in Independence in 1886 by Rudolph Etzenhouser. From the day of her baptism until her health failed, she was an ardent and active worker in the Sunday school. She was librarian for the General Sunday School Association for a number of years and was a member of the Administrative Board of the Daughters of Zion. Funeral services were in charge of John F. Sheehy; sermon by Bishop J. A. Becker. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

LA BRUE.—Florence Belle States was born September 7, 1893, at Arkansas City, Kansas. At the age of eighteen years she was married to Edwin La Brue at Cherokee, Oklahoma. She and her husband were baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in the year 1912. She remained a faithful member until the time of her death, August 12, 1930. To this marriage were born five girls and two boys, Verda, Verna, Leroy, Leola, Lovest, Rolland, and Lila Jean. She leaves her husband, her mother, Mrs. Ella States; six sisters and two brothers, Leland States, Leonard States, Mrs. Mabel Martin, Mrs. Pearl La Brue, Mrs. Edna Archer, Mrs. Clementine Nelson, Lila States, and Othel States. She has been a patient sufferer for the past year and realized that no human hand could give her relief. Through her illness she appreciated every kind act that was bestowed upon her by her loved ones and friends, never failing to express her appreciation to them. She was a devoted companion and mother and led her family in the right ways of living by beautiful example and kind persuasion. She was resigned to God's will, saying that the Lord's will was her own. She was conscious up to the last, carrying on a beautiful conversation with her family. She passed away in the same gentle manner in which she lived, leaving her family to feel that she had stepped over into another land where God awaits.

Cost of Hospital Care

In the daily press there recently appeared an article giving figures on the average cost of hospital care in the United States, and the facts set forth are of value to all who are interested in the general problems of hospitalization. Like all other costs in general to which the family is subjected, hospital costs have risen in recent years, and like other costs these have risen because of the higher standards demanded and maintained. These demands are now such that hospital buildings or buildings designed specifically for hospital purposes are among the most expensive to build.

Here are some of the figures given in the article: According to a survey by the United Press the average cost to persons who seek hospitalization is $5.81 per day, the survey having covered representative cities of the United States. This cost is exclusive of cost of operation or special nursing fees, and does not include cost of medicines or the fees of surgeons or physicians.

The average cost per day to patients given by the survey of the United Press is fifty-four cents per day higher than the average given by the American Hospital Association after a survey of thirty hospitals in Chicago. In this connection it is interesting to note that a survey by the American Hospital Association of 2,716 hospitals throughout the United States revealed that the average income of patients was $59.26 per week.

It takes only a moment's reflection to show that being ill enough to seek hospitalization means for the average person to go in debt or draw upon reserves if he has any. The experiences of our own hospital corroborate this view, and one of the difficulties experienced in collecting accounts is thus explained. Of course it is recognized that fortunately the average family is not often called upon to bear the expenses contingent upon one of its members needing hospitalization. But the figures and the situation described suggest the advisability and wisdom of every family, before sickness comes, providing ways and means for hospitalization when the need for it arrives. Of this we shall probably have more to say to our readers at a later date.

It is generally recognized that despite the very great growth of hospitals in numbers and size, and the greatly enlarged numbers of persons seeking the services of hospitals, there are still many persons in each community needing hospitalization to whom these services are denied because of the costs. One of the community problems confronting us, therefore, is just that: to provide hospitalization facilities for all who need them.

To us as a people this problem comes to the fore just now while we are in process of enlarging the hospital equipment and space of our own institution wherein the sick are cared for. It is quite likely that the average cost of patients is lower in our institution than in many others; but with the additional equipment of laboratory, operating rooms, X-ray outfit, beds, and many things designed for the greater comfort and better and more scientific care of the patients, the cost is more than likely to rise even in our own institution, and we must face the problem presented.

The proper care of the sick is a task before us which we must look upon as God-given; and to its faithful discharge we must give the best we have.

F. M. S.

Security in Stewardships

We are reminded very forcibly, in times of economic distress such as prevail at the present time, of our almost utter dependence upon the conditions of the world about us. In a highly organized industrial society such as ours is, the processes of trade and manufacture are so immediately responsive to any change in conditions that the delicately adjusted machinery of business is easily thrown out of balance. Even so slight a thing as a falling off in confidence will serve to tie up money, throw men out of employment, restrict sales, and disturb business in general. The world would like to be free from such things, but as yet it has not found the way to banish them, and to make good times secure.

Security is one of the great objects of endeavor among all people. The trouble has been that we have sought our security individually. It might appear strange, to the resident of some other planet, that the people of our world have learned to seek their political security in great national groups, and are on their way to establish it with world-wide unity; and that we have learned to seek our spiritual security in large groups; but that we still retain the predatory habits of our early ancestors in seeking our economic security.

We seek security, in common with other people; but we have a different theory about how we are to get it. We see that all of the efforts of the world to promote economic welfare and security have produced only a greater complexity and greater insecurity. Our welfare can often be jeopardized by a rumor, by a fluctuation of the markets, or by the personal whim of some great money power.

Our security will depend upon either a partial or a complete independence in handling our own financial and economic affairs. The principle of stewardship offers us a plan for obtaining that independence and security. It offers us a plan for an economic order governed by the best good of the group and of individuals, rather than by the selfish desire for profits, or the personal whim of some modern Cræsus.

We recall the words of a communication given to the people in 1834:

"Were it not for the transgressions of my people . . . they might have been redeemed even now."

If we shiver and starve outside the protecting walls of the Zion that we should build, who is to blame?

A Modern Parable

On the street along which I pass lives a man in a house. Each day as I passed, it seemed to me that the house was very tall and very stern, and that the man who lived in the house was very grim and very lonely.

They told me that years ago there had been a woman in the house. That for years she had been lame and helpless and bedridden. Then she had gone, and had left the man alone in the tall, stern house. No wonder he is grim, I thought as I passed by; no wonder he is lonely.

Spring came, and the man began to work in the garden plot back of the house. Soon the plants were growing, and as I passed by in the morning the man would be hoeing in the garden plot. Perhaps now he will not be so lonely, I thought; for his garden will keep him company. He did not seem so grim or so lonely when he was hoeing in the garden back of the tall, stern house.

But as I passed by in the afternoon the man would be sitting on the porch of his tall, stern house. The porch seemed very square and very straight. The man seemed very grim and very lonely.

July and August came, and with them long days of blazing sunshine and hot winds, and nights that were sultry and oppressive. The garden that had been so green, so carefully hoed, turned brown and curled up, and died. Now the man will be more grim and lonely than ever, I thought; for even his garden has deserted him. And whether it was morning or afternoon, as I passed by, the man would be sitting on the square, straight porch of his tall, stern house.

Then one day I passed by—and behold, the scene was changed! The grim, lonely man sat on the square, straight porch of his tall, stern house—but in the curve of the man's great arm sat a tiny lad of perhaps seven summers, and he was looking up into the man's face and was smiling the smile of a lad of perhaps seven summers. And the man was smiling back.

Somehow the house does not seem so tall or so stern now. The porch does not seem so square or so straight. The man does not seem so grim or so lonely. For I can still see the smile of a lad of perhaps seven summers sitting in the curve of the man's great arm.

And I know that the man of the porch and the house is not left alone: for Love dwells with him.

My Church and I

¶My Church is the place where the Word of God is preached, the power of God is felt, the Spirit of God is manifested, the Love of God is revealed, and the Unity of God is perceived.

¶It is the home of my soul, the altar of my devotion, the hearth of my faith, the center of my affections, and the foretaste of Heaven.

¶I have united with it in solemn covenant, pledging myself to attend its services, to pray for its members, to give to its support, and to obey its laws.

¶It claims the first place in my heart, the highest place in my mind, the principal place in my activities: and its unity, peace, and progress, concern my life in this world and that which is to come.

¶I owe it my zeal, my benevolence, and my prayers. When I neglect its services I injure its good name, I lessen its power, I discourage its members and chill my own soul.

¶I should solemnly promise, in the sight of God and man, to advance its interests by my faithful attendance, by reading the Scriptures, by contributing to its support, and by meeting with my fellow members and joining with them in prayer and service.

¶I should go to church.

Indian Education

A report from the Department of the Interior states that the Secretary of the Interior, Doctor Ray Lyman Wilbur, announced the appointment of Doctor W. Carson Ryan, jr., as Director of Education in the Indian Service, on the recommendation of Charles J. Rhoads, Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Doctor Ryan had passed highest in the open competition examination recently held by the United States Civil Service Commission.

Those who are interested in the affairs of the Indian will be pleased that a man of fine record and ability has been appointed to this post.

Our Native Foreigners

The Vatican State now acts, according to World's Work for September, to declare its priests citizens of Vatican City. The Catholic Church becomes an independent country, with citizens all over the world, and with political interests in all countries. Its citizens are the spiritual leaders of millions of Americans, who are led to a greater loyalty for the church than for the state.

With this new grab for temporal power, Catholics can no longer deny, as they have frequently done, that the church is a political organization, meddling in political affairs.

Why not have some Protestant states—Presbyteria, Baptistia, Congregationalonia, Methodistania, and others? The Protestant churches have as good a right as any to try to subvert the citizens of other countries.

The Passion Play

For the first time, practically, dissenting votes are heard from Oberammergau in Upper Bavaria, where the great spectacle of the Passion Play is being given the production that comes once in ten years. Berlin dailies call it a travesty, although they say that the story of Christ is too great to be spoiled, even by a travesty.

Not that the simple Bavarian peasants are at fault; something has happened which they can not help. It was their great devotion that produced a work of art which drew the world to their doors. But when the world came it brought money, and the spirit of commercialism reigns where once the spirit of Jesus held sway.

It is reported that Americans are protesting the change. And it is said, even by Americans as well as others, that it is Americans who have caused the change.

A great religious experience requires a religious atmosphere. You can not take the hubbub of New York, the manners of Chicago, and the strident insistence of all the States into a little village without changing it. Things are bound to get out of the control of the people.

The Passion Play, given in this country by various groups, has been a great religious experience. Yet the beau ideal of that marvelous story has always been the play at Oberammergau. This is an illusion which we sincerely hate to have shattered.

India and the Occident

The people of India know one thing: government, manufactured goods, bad movies, and Christianity, all come from one place. The white man makes these things for his own play and then gives them to India.

The bulk of the Indian people may not be educated; but neither are they stupid. They observe that the white man teaches Christianity, but that he refuses to practice it. They observe that he wants democratic government for himself, but that he will not let others have it. He tries to teach good citizenship and personal morality, and he sells films that debauch the young.

Is it any wonder that India is in a state of revolt?

"Yellow Kid" Weil is wanted again. He has swindled a manufacturer out of $16,000. A manufacturer who has $16,000 to lose in these hard days should be too smart to lose that much money to a swindler. But apparently this man forgot, temporarily, the wisdom with which he built his business. So does the world catch the unwary. When we last issued a warning on this subject, some people thought we were "kicking a man when he was down." In a few months this notorious swindler has forgotten his vow to "go straight." We predicted some time ago that some one who doesn't or can't read the newspapers would probably be swindled by him. It happened. Now he is loose again, the police do not know where. He has $16,000, more or less. When it is gone, he will look for another victim. Hide your money.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

September Activities of the Church School

FOR THE WORKERS' CONFERENCE

By C. B. Woodstock

September should be a rally month. The coming of cooler weather in the northern hemisphere permits of more serious and regular attention being given to the services of the church. In Australia the rally may come in March or April. People have returned from vacations, public school is opening, and families are adjusting themselves to the regular routine of a busy life. It is most important that the study and worship of a religious life should have part in the daily and weekly schedule of every home. This will readily be true of those who have learned to value highly the comforting influences, the stimulating companionships, the enlightening and encouraging experiences which we share in a congregation of earnest, happy worshippers. While we are concerned that these shall continue and increase their joy in service, we shall be exceedingly anxious to extend the helpfulness of the services of the church to the careless or indifferent ones and to all in our community to whom our religion may be made attractive.

A Missionary Month

September is distinctly a missionary month, in preparation for the fall Decision Day which is set for October 26.

The Joint Council of the leading quorums of the church have designated Sunday, September 28, as Rally Day. It thus becomes a day of heightened interest and participation in all that the church stands for. And that this may be true in the fullest sense we shall not be content to rally for one day only, but we propose so to order our activities throughout the month that there shall be a continual awakening and quickening of our forces, reaching a high point of interest and demonstration on Rally Day, but ready to carry over through the promotion exercises into the new organization of class work and an intensive program of church activities, with the beginning of the new church school year in October. We shall not forget that we are a missionary church, that the primary purpose of the gospel, and of Christ, and of the Restoration is that the world may be saved.

So far as the Sunday school is concerned we shall wish to round out the year's work, to complete the courses, to recognize worthy attainment, to check closely our grading, to look up delinquent members, to secure new attendants, to provide for impressive promotion ceremonies, and to perfect the organization of the church school for the new year beginning the first Sunday in October. But this is only saying we wish to make the Sunday morning session of the church school function to its fullest capacity as a factor in the spiritual, social, and intellectual life of our membership and of the community.

The Extent of Our Task

We may note three fairly definite classes of people with whom we must deal in perfecting our plans. First, the recognized leaders of the congregation, the officers chosen to serve in places of responsibility, and upon whom the burden of initiative and continuous endeavor must rest. Theirs is the vision, and theirs the task of leadership, under God, and representing Christ, to make the vision come true.

Second, we recognize the body of willing workers who respond to leadership, and through whose united efforts the great tasks are accomplished. These are they who may be depended upon to do their part loyally, who have learned the sweet recompense of response to duty until they find their chief joy in unselfish service in the cause of the Master.

Beyond these lie the wide range of those whose lives have not yet been vitally touched by the influences of the gospel of Christ. These may be within our own families, among our friends and neighbors, or the stranger within our gates. Here lies our great missionary task. We are to organize and administer our church school program, throughout the year, in order that we not only feed the lambs and the sheep within the fold, but that we continually seek out, invite, and make welcome in our midst those who may have become careless and indifferent, or who have never found security within the belief and life of the church. Our missionary effort must consciously include all with whom we have contact in our homes, on the playground, in our business, among our friends and neighbors. And our missionary endeavors must be so organized as to make opportunity for each one, young and old, to feel the missionary urge, and to participate in the missionary program of the church.

September is peculiarly the missionary month. We suggest that the entire working force of the branch be solicited to take on new life and vigor. This should begin with the branch officers and the men of the priesthood, but it should include all other agencies and activities connected with the life and growth of the branch.

Church School Rally Day

The Sunday school will rally its forces and engage in two definite efforts, to increase the efficiency of its teaching and worship service, and to increase the regular attendance of both old and new members. This, as we have said above, should begin early in the month and, increasing in effort, reach a high point on Rally Day.

We have little confidence in spasmodic efforts to stimulate attendance on a particular day, or in membership contests where the chief objective is people to be counted. The contest motive is usually immediate, and the results are not permanent. Indeed, if extreme care be not taken to fulfill all the conditions of the contest, and to thoroughly interest the new attendants in the study and class activities of the school, once they are with us, there is grave danger that a serious slump in attendance will occur when the stimulation of the contest is passed.

Our plans for Rally Day, then, should be carefully thought out by those in charge of the school, and become a part of a general plan for the branch. Specific plans for adults and for children are being presented in other columns of the Herald.

Promotion Plans

It is logical that promotion in the church school should come near the last of September, perhaps on September 28. This should not conflict with Rally Day plans. Indeed, it makes an additional occasion for a rallying of class memberships during the month and a fitting occasion for the recognition of attainment in promotion from one department to another. The ceremony connected with promotion should be meaningful, dignified, and impressive. The details of the exercise must of necessity be worked out to suit conditions. Within the children's division, and perhaps with intermediates, it will be well to take recognition of promotions, having those being promoted from one department to another seated with their teachers in reserved seats near the front, or, if space will permit, upon the platform.

Promotion certificates are not expensive, often are cherished by the children, and the awarding of them impressively marks the progress of the children through the church school. A neat certificate may be purchased from the Herald Publishing House at 6 cents each, 60 cents a dozen.

In large schools some children's divisions or departments may wish to hold their promotion exercises in their own rooms. In general it will be well to hold an impressive service for all in the main church auditorium. This may be at the regular Sunday school hour, or in the place of the adult worship service. In some places accustomed to the continuous service there may be a short, impressive meeting in departments, followed by the general promotion exercises, followed in turn by a short sermon appropriate to the occasion.

Promotion Day Program

We suggest the following for the general promotion ceremony:

Processional: Organ or other music, during which all who are to participate march to their places.

Opening with song and prayer.

Address: "The meaning of promotion in the church school." A ten-minute talk.

Presentation of classes for promotion, by their teachers and superintendents, with a brief statement of commendation.

Awarding of certificates.

Acceptance of new classes, by their new superintendents, in a brief word of welcome.

A charge to the school for the new year, by the director of religious education, or by the pastor.

Special music should vary and enrich the program. Such words as "Onward to Zion" are especially appropriate.

If this exercise is to be followed by a sermon, the theme should probably follow the idea of education, training, building for Zion and the kingdom of God.

Organization for the New Year

In order that officers for the new year may take their places the first Sunday in October, we suggest that the annual election take place as early as convenient in September. A whole month would not be too long to complete the organization and to perfect plans for a favorable opening on October 5. Retiring officers and teachers should hold over through the month of September. This would permit a formal installation of the new workers, either on Sunday evening, September 28, or on Sunday, October 5. New officers should enter upon their service, not only as well qualified as possible, but under a special spirit of consecration for their work, in which they are joined by the entire membership.

Election of Officers

Election should take place in the manner customary in the branch for the election of branch officers. If the branch is working under the new plan, it seems reasonable that the pastor should be accorded the privilege of placing at least one name in nomination as his choice for a director of the church school. There should be freedom for other nominations from the floor of the business meeting. Likewise the privilege of nomination should be extended to the director, after he has prayerfully canvassed the field, with the pastor, in the selection of age group supervisors.

In all cases the major officers and leaders of the church school should be chosen by the voice and vote of the people. Or the membership may, by their vote, delegate to the pastor, or director, the power to choose certain lesser officers. But in any case the choices should be submitted in a regular way for the approval of the branch.

Plan New Courses Early

Care should be taken in every department to determine the quarterlies desired for class use. Consult the Herald of August 6 for the official list of current quarterlies. If there is but one class in a department, where there are three one-year series available, this is the year for the study of the first year of the series.

Note the options which may be had in the young people and adult grades. Consult the needs and wishes of the membership, and try to supply as fully as possible. If there are to be two or more adult classes, try to determine weeks beforehand what subject matter will meet the demand and select the best possible teachers available. Get their consent to begin at once to prepare for a real teaching task.

Then try to get your adults to select their class because of their interest in, or need of, the subject matter informations. Too long we have sat in a particular corner, or listened to a certain teacher, or adhered to a social group. There should be much better reason for our class membership.

Secure quarterlies for all, and develop a class attitude and a class method which will insure the study of the quarterly as a text before coming to the class. Then we may have a real recitation.

Given a studious, qualified teacher and a class having a background of information and appreciation through their own fresh study, and we shall soon have a real school of religious education.

Topics for Discussion

1. In what various ways may we make September a rally month?
2. What missionary opportunities are offered in a month of rally activities?
3. What is the missionary task of the Sunday school? How may all, old and young, participate?
4. Discuss the values of attendance drives. How may they be made effective?

5. Work out and discuss effective rally day plans for your local branch.

6. Discuss an ideal promotion day program. Perfect and discuss local plans.

7. What advantages in a September election of officers for the church school? Is it practicable in your branch?

8. Discuss ways and means of developing a real school of religious education in your branch. How else shall we make Zion possible?

Rally Day Suggestions

By John Blackmore

Rally day for the whole church has been scheduled for Sunday the twenty-eighth of September. Pastors and church officers should soon have their plans made and the day's arrangements well in hand. It would be well if the church functions and social activities of the whole month of September were impregnated with the idea of a rally month. Plans could be developed which would meet the local situation and would develop in the Saints the spirit and enthusiasm which should accompany rally day.

Purpose of Rally Day

The obvious purpose of rally day is to arouse the apathetic religious spirit of the Saints into activity. It is designed to stimulate church attendance and to increase the activity of the membership. In particular this year it is scheduled so as to stimulate the interest of the whole congregation of the local church in its program for the winter. There is a song often sung on the reunion grounds which says "The more we get together the happier we'll be," and this factor of social life is also recognized by the rally day program. The purpose of rally day includes all of those values which bring the Saints into active harmony with the functions and activities of the local church, and through the local church into fellowship with the church at large.

Rally Day and the Church School

This year rally day is associated with promotion day in the church school. The children of the church school will be anticipating their promotion into a higher grade. Some of the members of the Young People's Division will undoubtedly be moving into the activities of the Adult Division. The spirit of the day will be that of progression and of marching forward into new experiences.

In the Adult Division there will be the anticipation associated with the commencement of a new year of study. New courses covering the various interests and needs of the membership of the whole congregation should be planned and teachers provided for these classes. It undoubtedly would be well if the supervisor of the Adult Division during the month of September should make a survey of the study needs and interests of the adults of the congregation and make provision for the inauguration of new classes in the church school on rally day. This plan should also be followed by the supervisor of the Young People's Division, who will arrange for the study courses of the young people.

Every Home Visited by Priesthood

A plan worked out by a pastor several years ago which brought excellent results was that of having every member's home visited by the priesthood during the two weeks previous to the rally day Sunday. The priesthood were organized into teams, the territory covering the residences of the Saints was mapped and teams appointed to each area. Each team was given the address of every Saint's home in its territory and was expected to make a brief official call. The Saints were notified of the plan and requested to cooperate with the teams. Enthusiasm among the priesthood was developed, and in an amazing fashion it soon spread to the congregation. Enthuse the members of the priesthood, and the congregation will soon catch the fire of enthusiasm as it is radiated from the men of the ministry.

As a priesthood activity during the month of September leading up to rally day, may we suggest that every Saint's home receive an official visit by the visiting members of the priesthood. In whatever congregation this priesthood project is carried forward, we can promise valuable compensating results.

Neighborly Visiting Stimulated

Another activity for the month of September leading up to rally day and the commencement of the winter's program is that of neighborly visiting, in which the Saints are encouraged and stimulated to visit in a social way other members of the congregation. Unfortunately, too, many Saints know their fellow church members in a "churchly way," and not in the friendly way of social life. This project may be associated with the activities of the church school, or it may be arranged for by the pastor.

A plan which has been tried and found very successful divided the congregation into approximately two equal divisions, which may be done by grouping the Saints according to the first letter of their name; for instance, names commencing with the letters A, B, C, D, E, F, G, H, I, J, and K will form Group Number One, and the rest of the congregation will form Group Number Two. On an appointed night, all of Group Number One are to make social calls on the folk of Number Two group. Care must be taken by the supervising officers to see that some of the less popular Saints of Group Number Two receive calls from some of the best people of Group One. Each social call should not be longer than fifteen to twenty minutes. The plan is for each family to make as many calls as possible during the evening. We suggest that this plan may be worked to arouse enthusiasm and the friendship which grows out of our pleasant social contacts with each other.

A Social Dinner

As rally day activities are to a large extent social in their nature, it might be of advantage in some communities to arrange a basket dinner. Pleasant contacts and friendly visiting among the Saints are of great value in stimulating religious interests. It seems that in our modern rush and hurry we often fail to appreciate the values of these pleasant friendship functions. The arrangements for this dinner may be planned and organized by the women of the Adult Division of the church school. If the local has not yet organized according to the plan outlined by the recent General Conference, then the local women may conduct it under their present type of organization.

Advertising the Day

The day and its purpose should be well advertised. Announcements from the pulpit are insufficient and inadequate. A concerted and organized effort should be made by priesthood and by all other church officers to boost the program of the month and the rally day functions.

Every pastor and church school officer should keep the idea of rally day before the people as often as possible during the month of September. Commence now if you have not done so. An early and consistent effort will repay a hundredfold.

We must still maintain that any person's value depends more upon his sincerity than upon any other one factor of human value. By sincerity we do not mean that vapid sentimentality which is satisfied with talk and fine gestures.

It is necessary to be converted in order to be sincere. And sincerity dies unless it expresses itself in work.

Sincerity puts ideals into practice, and turns ability to work. Sincerity gives motive and purpose to life. Sincerity banishes selfishness. Sincerity, in connection with a knowledge of the gospel, will bring one to the only kind of salvation that is worth while: a salvation that seeks to help and save all men.

Gospel Lesson Studies

JESUS AND HIS MESSAGE; BY ANNA SALYARDS

By C. B. W.

For the first time in the history of religious education in the church, a full year's course of quarterly lessons is to be published in book form for use as a permanent text. Such a plan has long been under consideration. It is fitting, indeed, that the first lessons selected for this destination, and recognized as worthy of being put in this permanent form, are the product of our veteran editor, Mrs. Anna Salyards, beloved of all the church for her years of able and faithful service in the production of Sunday school lessons.

Sister Salyards became early identified with the Sunday school movement. When the first General Sunday School Association was organized in 1891, she, as Miss Anna Stedman, with J. A. Gunsolley, was a committee to provide Lesson Leaves. The first issue of "Lesson Helps" was ready for use in September, 1892. From that time, continuously, for nearly forty years, Sister Salyards has studiously prepared lesson materials, much of the time as editor in chief of the Gospel Series Quarterlies.

The present series contemplates a three-year study of the books of the church as the source of our faith and the inspiration for the program of the church. Sister Salyards' years of study and research, her experience of a lifetime given in the service of the church in close association with those who have borne the responsibility of leadership, gives her a readiness of thought and a confidence of expression rarely found among our writers. Gifted with the soul of an artist and possessed of rare discernment, her lessons are characterized both by beauty of expression and evidences of inspiration as the gospel truths are unfolded.

The present year's lessons are entitled, Jesus and His Message. In general they cover the life and teachings of Christ as they have meaning in 1930. The following year will treat of the life of Saint Paul and the Epistles, and the third year, The Gospel from the Beginning, covering the entire period from the Creation down to our day. These lessons have previously appeared as the regular young people's quarterly.

This will be a most excellent study for both young people and adults, especially for those who desire a clear analysis of the fundamental beliefs of our church. These lessons should be carefully studied at some time by every member of the church. They are especially recommended to classes made up of new members or those not yet united with the church. Members of the priesthood who wish to gain a comprehensive understanding of the gospel will do well to choose this study.

Jesus and His Message will make a most excellent study for those seeking to earn credits toward certification. If taken weekly in class work for credit, arranged for in advance, it will carry 96 points when completed. Or it may be studied for credit by individuals through correspondence. Arrange for credit with the general Department of Religious Education.

Jesus and His Message, fifty-two lessons, neatly bound in one volume, paper covers, 75 cents; board covers, $1 postpaid; ready for delivery from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, after December 15. Those who wish to begin the study October 5 should order now for use until January.

For those who wish to organize their courses in October for the year, the Herald Publishing House will supply back numbers of this quarterly, thirteen lessons, for 7½ cents. These will be lessons to reappear in revised form during the three-year course, so really no time will be lost. The quarterlies on hand from which orders will be filled are numbers 2 and 3 of "Paul and the Times of the Apostles," and numbers 2 and 3 of "The Gospel from the Beginning."

Those who are not acquainted with these splendid lessons will appreciate an opportunity to sample the class work before purchasing the complete text. Orders for the above numbers of young people's quarterly may be filled now. Orders for the year's text should be sent in by December 1.

Theme. "World Helpers"

Sermon. (Illustrations for the sermon.)

Luke 10: 30-37, we read a story of a Good Samaritan. There have been many good Samaritans who have passed through history, and they, too, have helped the wounded and afflicted.

Humphrey David, hearing of so many explosions in the coal mine, invented a wonderful safety lamp. Many lives have been saved as a result of this invention.

Doctor Edward Jenner saw the awful suffering and ravages of smallpox. He spent much time and energy until he found a preventative for the disease.

Louis Pasteur, the great scientist and lover of humanity, discovered the cure for hydrophobia. Until that time persons bitten by mad dogs died in great agony.

Valentin Hany gave a coin to a blind beggar. "Sir, you have given me silver, and not copper," said the blind man. "How did you know?" asked Valentin. "By feeling the figures stamped upon the coin," replied the blind man. Valentin Hany opened a school in which blind people were taught to read by use of their fingers. Later Braille invented his system, in which the blind read by using the tips of their fingers.

Florence Nightingale nursed the men in the Crimean War. She ennobled the profession of nursing.

Christ was the greatest helper of all. He came to bind up the wounds of all, to relieve the sick and suffering, to help all mankind.

The sermon might be closed with a short prayer by the speaker, thanking God for the lives of such noble men and women.

Hymn: Third stanza, "America the Beautiful."

(Some other suitable hymn may be substituted.)

"O beautiful for heroes proved
In liberating strife
Who more than self their country loved,
And mercy more than life!
America! America!
May God thy gold refine,
Till all success be nobleness,
And ev'ry gain divine!

Offering.

Music.

Prayer.

Story: "Jesus among his friends," from Knights of Service, by Bradshaw.

Closing Song: "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

Benediction.

Who looks to Heaven alone to save his soul,
May find the path but will not reach the goal.
But he who walks in love may wander far
And God will bring him where the blessed are.

Twice-born Men

A sermon by R. E. Davey, delivered at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, during the Centennial Conference. Reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.

I will associate two passages of scripture in my endeavor to discover the fundamental truths I wish to bring for your consideration.

There was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews; the same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do the miracles that thou doest except God be with him. Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again he can not see the kingdom of God.

I am using this text, which is used frequently when presenting the gospel as it has been restored, to those who do not believe that baptism, being born of the water, is an essential part of the plan of salvation. But I do not intend to preach a sermon on baptism.

The Vital Truth

Some, in their zeal to establish the principle, have overlooked the vital truth that Jesus attempted to present to Nicodemus, of which baptism is only a part. Some have been prone to feel that once an individual has entered the waters of baptism, his new birth, his being born again, is assured. Some one has passed away, and you hear the remark, "How fine it is that he was baptized!" Or, "Wasn't it too bad he was not baptized before it was too late." The truth that Jesus emphasized was that we must be born again. Baptism in water and of the Spirit through the laying on of hands was the divinely appointed channel through which the new birth could and would come.

I wish to associate with this first text, one coming to us from the Apostle Paul, found in the nineteenth chapter of Acts, the first few verses:

And it came to pass, that, while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts came to Ephesus, and finding certain disciples, he said unto them, Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost. And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism. Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus. When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy Ghost came on them, and they spake with tongues and prophesied.

In these two scriptural readings we have brought before us very clearly the channel through which the new birth can come to us, or take place within us. Jesus emphasized that except a man be born again, and be given a complete change of attitudes and motives, acting differently in all human associations, he can not enter, can not see, the kingdom of God.

Baptism Alone Not Enough

We have all been made to realize that the mere act of baptism is not enough, even though a divinely called and ordained minister administers the ordinance. The obedience of the individual to the principle of baptism, and his having hands laid upon his head for the gift of the Holy Ghost, in and of themselves, are meaningless.

Don't become alarmed. I am not going to preach that these things are not necessary and essential. They are, and vitally so. I trust I shall establish the difference between using the principles Christ has given us in his gospel to make possible in us the new birth, and merely yielding obedience to these principles. There is a vast and vital difference.

God told this church nearly a hundred years ago that Zion could have been redeemed even then, "were those who call themselves after my name willing to hearken unto my voice." The people composing the church then, and from then until now, were individuals who had been baptized by immersion; they had had hands laid on them for the gift of the Holy Ghost; but still the redemption of Zion went unfulfilled. There is a missing link somewhere. There has not been a carrying across of the things God intended in our great religious endeavor. Evidently use has not been made of the powers Christ has given in his gospel in the actual transforming of human life and character into the kind of material God must have to make Zion possible. In other words, we have been yielding only nominal obedience to the principles of the gospel and have not been actually using them to make out of ourselves kingdom of God building material.

As we look through the church and see the foundation which has been laid by the efforts and sacrifices of those who have gone before, by those who have seen the vision of a better world, and the means of its realization, and responding to that vision have been willing to toil and sacrifice, we are given courage. And then, seeing the awakening that is spreading throughout the church in a renewed appreciation, and a reevaluation of the truths God has discovered to us in the great Restoration, we can move into the future with assurance. But let us look carefully to ourselves.

The Victorious Church

Thomas Nixon Carver, head of the Department of Economics at Harvard, in his book, A Religion Worth Having, makes this observation:

That religion will claim this world which acts as the greatest spur to energy, to sacrifice, to endeavor, that stimulates the spiritual powers of man, and then directs those energies, those sacrifices, and those spiritual powers most purposefully toward the realization of the most worth-while ends or ideals.

This places before us very concretely our whole Zionian ideal. The power of the gospel works in the lives of men and women, developing within them those spiritual forces that are the dynamic of all progress, and then directs those forces to the accomplishment of that which would bring to a sin-sick world the hope of its salvation.

The growing need of the world today is that there shall come into existence a group of individuals who take their religion so seriously and so vitally that they will be able to make a demonstration of Christian living together.

Is the Christian Different?

I was privileged to attend a convention held at the Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, last fall, in which religion as a motive to right conduct was discussed. One of our leading educators made the statement that there is too little difference between the man in the church and the man outside of the church. Too little difference in attitudes, in conduct, in practices, between the man who claims the efficacy of the new birth, and the man who makes no such claim. It was also said that before the religion of Jesus could stand vindicated there must be a change in the quality of life in those who profess Christian discipleship; that this being born again should produce a new type of life in those who profess its power.

Yes, there is too little difference between the man in the church and the man outside. There is too little difference between the men who have passed through the ordinances of the gospel that vouchsafe to them the new birth, and those who have not. Of what value is it that I shall be baptized? Of what value is it that I shall have hands laid upon my head for the gift of the Holy Ghost, if, as a result of these things in my life, I am not able to associate with my fellows upon a more godly plane? If I am not, as a result of these principles, able to give evidence of a higher standard of Christian living? Yes, Christ meant decidedly more than that we should go down into the water, when he said, "Ye must be born again."

Christ gave to us in the gospel the principles of baptism and the laying on of hands, the channel through which the new birth is made possible. I have crossed some of the deserts of the West, and there they have what are called sand washes—a deep gash cut in the desert by the flood waters of cloud bursts. At the time of a cloud burst these washes are great rushing torrents, but nine tenths of the time they are dry. The channel is there, but there is nothing in it; it is empty, dry.

The principles of the gospel form the channel through which can come to us the power of God, making realizable the new birth. But I do not believe we can successfully gainsay that to too great an extent the channel has been dry. And why? Because there has not been the fruitage of the new birth in evidence. The same old ways of doing and acting continue as before. There is no change, no transformation of life and character.

To Be Born Again

"Ye must be born again." To argue about creeds, doctrine, philosophy, is not sufficient. These things must be translated into life, utilized in the transformation of life, in the building of character.

What a tragedy we often present: telling the world about our wonderful gospel message, restored in these last days by an angel from heaven, and then display to the world lives not one whit better than are found in those who never heard of that gospel message; people who cry aloud the virtues of the gospel principles, yet themselves are not changed in the least by them. Well may the world say, Show us your faith by your works.

How difficult it is to do missionary work in places where there are those who belong to the church, but who utterly belie their profession, who live in filth, whose minds are filled with evil, who are dishonest, do not pay their debts, and engage in questionable activities. Frequently these are the loudest in proclaiming the wonders of the church of which they are members.

Taking Religion Seriously

We must bear in mind in all our religious endeavors that people see the church and the gospel through us, and they measure the church by what they find in us individually. Talk does not mean much, but lives do. When we take our religion sufficiently seriously to utilize the principles of the gospel we have been talking so much about in changing and transforming ourselves into the sons and daughters of God, then we will be in a position to invite the world to give ear when we shall speak. And then we will find the world willing and anxious to listen.

Paul, in writing to the saints at Thessalonica, said:

Remembering without ceasing your work of faith and labor of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ.

... So that ye were ensamples to all that believed in Macedonia and Achaia. For from you sounds out the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread abroad; so that we need not speak anything.

Was that not a wonderful condition under which to do missionary work? Here are found the results of twice-born men.

If this church shall accomplish its mission, it will be necessary for you and me, who constitute the church, to take our religion seriously enough to utilize our baptism, the laying on of hands upon our heads for the gift of the Holy Ghost, in actually transforming ourselves into new creatures, in becoming in very deed twice-born men and women.

Self-examination

Often we ask, What is the matter with the church? Why does it do this and why does it do that? and why does it not do so and so?

Who is the church? You and I are the church. And what we are determines what the church shall be; what we do determines what the church shall do. We should say, Why do we do this or that? or, Why do we not do this or that? Use it for a basis of self-examination, and you will find the church doing what you would have it do. Christ struck at the vital spot when he said, "Ye must be born again."

Moral Regeneration

At this juncture I wish to read a statement from John Spargo, who for many years was a leading advocate of Socialism. In recent enlightenments he has found it insufficient and hopeless, and so he presents in an article in Nation's Business, March, 1929, his reasons for no longer being a Socialist:

It is all too evident and certain that the attainment of a perfect social state depends not upon economic readjustment alone [that is part of it, but not the main part.—R. E. D.], but upon the deeper and profounder processes of moral regeneration. The minds and wills of the citizens as individuals must be socialized and brought into harmony with the moral law before there can be a perfect social life.

How true this is! That is just what Christ told us nineteen hundred years ago, "Ye must be born again." We must be brought, with all our lives and powers, in all our associations in business, in industry, in social contact, in our pleasures, into harmony with the divine law of the eternal God—born again.

Twice-born men are the need of the hour. Education can not solve our problems, for it affords no guarantee that the education, once secured, will be rightly used. Legislation can not help much, for you can not legislate righteousness, or right attitudes and motives. Economic and social readjustment alone is helpless, because man is still selfish, greedy, and evil. Only in one way are we assured of achieving our goal, and that is, to be born again.

What Is This Rebirth?

Just what is this being born again? It is well for us to know, for if there is one thing above another that demands we shall be born again it is the building of the kingdom, the redeeming of Zion. This new birth, what is it and how is it to be made a reality? What will it produce? In the first place, it is impossible to define even what physical life is. All that we can judge by is the manifestations of life we see, the results of life. So it is with the new birth. Through the ordinances of the gospel the new life is planted. All we can judge by after that is the results, the fruitage that makes its appearance.

I am prone to believe that if the new birth is to be effective, it must take place in people well prepared. To a large extent we have overlooked this important factor. The new birth can not take place among any kind of people; they must be made ready. May that not be the reason why God, both in former- and latter-day revelation, has emphasized that before one is baptized and confirmed he must bring forth the first fruits of repentance; he must have faith. Too often this has been ignored, and an injury has been wrought both to the individual who has been baptized without due preparation, and to the church.

Large numbers of people of Judea and Jerusalem came out to John to be baptized in Jordan. Would we not rejoice if all Independence and Kansas City and the regions round about came flocking to the elders of Latter Day Israel, asking to be baptized? What was John's reaction? Remember? Did he praise God from whom all blessings flow? No; he did not! He turned to those people and said, "Ye generation of vipers." A strange way to address people asking for baptism. "Ye generation of vipers; who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?" Go back, said he, and bring forth fruits meet for repentance. Make yourselves ready in mind, body, and spirit, so that when you go into the waters of baptism there can come into your lives the grace of God.

No farmer expects a crop of grain who does not first make the ground ready. First he has faith in his endeavor, then he plows, then harrows, and the better the condition of his ground the better will be the results. We are going to realize some of the tremendous regenerating power of the gospel when we put forth the necessary efforts of preparation. Christ knew well what he was doing when he emphasized the fundamentals of his gospel. Have faith in God. The new birth will be impossible without it. No life is going to be regenerated which does not have a deep consciousness of God and Christ and a vital faith in their promises. Do not be disappointed if there fails to come into your life the rich spiritual experiences you have expected and desired as a result of your baptism and confirmation when there is not within your soul a faith, vital and living, in God and in his Son Jesus Christ; the kind of faith that sends you forth to do the things God has commanded. We believe the gospel tremendously, and yet we fear to apply it.

The Fearful Member

I preached a sermon upon one occasion on the subject of Zion and stewardships. At the close of the service, a brother expressed his approval of the doctrine of stewardship, the greatest thing he had ever heard, but—but suppose it fails! How much is that brother going to do towards the redemption of Zion? He is going to sit on the fence and wait to see what comes out of it. Have you ever heard good Latter Day Saints talk like that? It is a poor sample of Christian sportsmanship, to say the least. If you have the right to just sit by and watch developments, so do I; so does everyone else. Suppose all decided to wait until all risk was past, until everything was secure before they ventured, how long would it be before Zion would be redeemed?

Causes of Failure

What was the reason Zion was not redeemed years ago, when God said it was possible? Doctrine and Covenants, sections 98 and 102, says there were jarrings, contentions, quarrelings, lustful and covetous desires among the Saints. They were selfish, refusing to consecrate of their material possessions to help the poor and build the kingdom. In other words, they were still like the people of the world; they had not been reborn. Have we passed far beyond that stage today? Are we free from jarrings, contentions, fault-findings, lustful and covetous desires, selfishness and greed? By these things they polluted their inheritance and were cast out. By these things we will pollute our inheritance if we continue in them. "Ye must be born again."

How often, in our local branches, when things do not go just the way we want them to, do we get peeved and stay at home? "Let them do things that way and see if I care." Born again? Some church officials do not just what I think they should, so I won't pay my tithing. I am going to sit in Moses' seat and judge my fellows and the church, and when they do not do just as I in my high and mighty judgment think they should, I will lie down on the job; the work of God can go hang. Reborn? Some one says something that makes me angry, so the next time I meet him I'll snub him. When I pass him I'll look the other way. If he attempts to approach me I'll freeze him good and cold. Born again? Redeem Zion with people like that? These are the things people do who make no pretense of religion, of the new birth, of the Restoration. What is our standing before God if, obeying the ordinances of the new birth, we continue doing the same things? We can not assist in building the kingdom so long as we do.

Too Much Individualism

Have you ever met individuals who are afflicted with an overdose of individualism? People who think only in terms of themselves? I was in a line-up day before yesterday to get tickets for the Graceland College play. I was surprised to see the number of this kind of people who were in attendance at conference. I hope they receive something out of conference that will help them. They would squeeze into the line close to the front, ahead of those who had been waiting for a long while. Let some one else wait, just so I don't have to. I'm going to get mine, the others go hang. Oh, how these little things betray character, the kind of people we are. Such things are small, but they affect character and prevent growth. It is the same attitude and spirit that is responsible for the difficulties confronting the disarmament conference in London; the same spirit that is at the bottom of our economic distress and maladjustments. Somebody wants to squeeze in ahead, thinking only in terms of self.

Saints, we must grow above these things. The small seed of the new birth is planted within us in our obedience to the gospel, but we must give it a chance to grow. When a baby is born it is surrounded by the things conducive to its growth; it is fed and nourished. Fail in this and the child dies. Do this and the growth of the child can not be stopped.

Some of us seem to think that we can be born again as a result of baptism and the laying on of hands, and then just go along in passive forgetfulness. When it fails we wonder what is the matter with the church, the gospel, or our brothers. But the power of the new birth is not realized that way. The new life is planted in us, but it is our responsibility to see that it is nourished and surrounded by those things that are conducive to its growth.

How the Scriptures emphasize growth! Everything is a process of growth. We grow up into Him in all things. First the blade, then the ear, then the full corn in the ear. We must desire the sincere milk of the word that we might grow thereby. And growth comes as the result of effort. The grace of God is manifested in the implanting of the new birth; it is ours to determine what we will do with it.

We must put off the old man—quarreling, jangling, fault-finding, gossiping, tale-bearing, those qualities that make us hard to get along with, and that disrupt. Individualism, thinking only in terms of self, must go. Then we must put on the new man. We must formulate new attitudes toward our talents, our property, our income, everything we have and are, that all these may be used for the building of the kingdom of God—Zion.

“Ye must be born again.” Until the day comes that you and I shall take seriously the gospel which we profess, when we shall utilize purposefully the principles of the gospel in developing that new life which has been planted in us by the grace of God, the cause of Zion shall languish, our purpose go unachieved. But when there shall stir within our souls the consciousness of our responsibilities to God and to our fellows that shall cause us to utilize the powers of God resident in the gospel for the building of the Christ-life, that new life that comes as a result of our being twice born, then we shall march forth as the conquering armies of Israel, and Zion shall be.

What Is Salvation?

By George S. Lincoln

There are many ideas as to what it means to be saved. Some believe that if they escape going to hell, they are saved. That is one condition of salvation, but it is almost the smallest from the gospel point of view.

No good person will be condemned to hell. One does not have to accept the gospel, or belong to a church, or believe that Jesus is the Christ in order to avoid going to hell. But that does not mean that he will be saved.

The Bible teaches that in the world to come “every man will be rewarded according to his works.” And Paul tells us there is to be one glory of the sun, and one glory of the moon, and one glory of the stars, and as one star differeth from another star in glory, so also is the resurrection of the dead. (2 Corinthians 15: 41, 42.)

There is a place and condition for everyone. After the resurrection some will enter into a glory represented by the brightest star, and some into one shown by the very dimmest star, in which there seems to be very little light. Others will enjoy a glory represented by the moon, which when it is at its full is very glorious and bright. The sanctified ones will enter the glory of the sun, the brightest of all, the kingdom of heaven, where God, Christ, and all the angels and holy ones dwell.

Jesus told his disciples to “Go preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved”; saved in the very highest salvation, in the celestial kingdom and glory. They will become sons of God and joint heirs with Christ, and enjoy all gifts and blessings that God has to bestow upon his children. All things will be theirs, throughout the countless ages of eternity, provided they learn to live as becometh Saints after their baptism. Through obeying the ordinance of baptism they become members of the church of Jesus Christ, the kingdom of God, and are saved. They are the only ones who will receive full salvation in the world to come; the only ones who will enjoy the glory of the sun.

Jesus also told his disciples to tell the people that “he that believeth not shall be damned.” All who fail to believe and obey the ordinance of baptism will be damned in different degrees, according to their works. Everyone who is shut out of the celestial kingdom is more or less damned. Anyone who reaches the glory of the moon and can go no farther, will realize that to a certain extent he is damned—not sent to hell, but stopped in his advancement, because he has not obeyed the law which would permit him to enter the glory of the sun.

If a house is on fire, and a woman is seen in the upper story window, surrounded by flames, and the brave fireman climbs a ladder and rescues her, she is saved. But what about her soul? There is no change there. She is simply saved from death by fire.

There is a body of religionists who march the streets and sing on the street corners. They are engaged in raising up the fallen and depraved. They rescue the drunkard and reform him and restore him to his manhood and bring him back to his loved ones, and then they tell him he is saved. But to what extent is he saved? He is saved from a drunkard's grave! But what about his soul? It is still unsaved! His honorable course in life will give him a better resurrection, but he will still be outside the kingdom of God.

Our Christian friends in their different churches teach men and women to lead better lives. They teach them to read and meditate on the word of God. They teach Christ as they understand him. They try to teach people to believe, but they fail to teach them to obey the commandments of God! They make men more devout. They save them from an inferior glory in the life to come, but they do not save them in the kingdom of God. With all their efforts they do not teach them what they must do to be saved. Jesus says, “Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God,” and as they do not comply with that law, they are outside the kingdom—not saved, but are more or less damned. That does not mean that they are all wicked. If they are honest, and doing the best they can to serve God according to their understanding, he will bless them with his Spirit! He will hear their prayers. He will comfort them in time of trouble and sorrow. They may even be God's sheep, but not yet gathered into his fold. They are those who will receive the glory of the brightest star, and even of the moon. Modern revelation speaks of them as "honorable men of the earth, who are blinded by the craftiness of men. These are they who receive of his glory but not of his fullness." They are the ones who have been deceived by false teachers who would have obeyed God's word had they understood it. But as considering the highest salvation, they are not saved.

There is only one true church or fold of God. As the Scriptures teach, "There is one fold and one shepherd," and all who are outside the one fold are unsaved. Anyone who tries to do good and is trying to do the best he can, needs have no fears of the future. He will be rewarded for all the good he does, but that will not save him in celestial glory. No one will ever enter therein until he is "born of water and of the Spirit," or baptized "for the remission of sins." The life and words of Jesus demonstrate that fact.

As a church, we are doing all we can to teach the world these truths, praying that the honest in heart may be led to obey and be saved with the fullest salvation. There is no need for arguing the matter. The words of Jesus will stand in spite of all opposition, and he says, "My word will judge you at the last day."

Jesus put the proposition of salvation fairly and squarely before the people. Speaking of the gospel, he said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned."

Why not believe? and obey?

Nostalgia

By William Nisbett

Oh, take me away from this man-made town,
 With its clatter of trucks and trams;
 With its sordid sin, and eternal din,
 And its poverty, pride, and shams.
 Take me back to the places that God has made
 To the fields, and the flowers and trees,
 Where the sweet perfume of wold roses' bloom
 Is diffused by the gentle breeze.
 There is much that is good in the city life,
 There is much that is bad elsewhere;
 But the prairie free is the place for me,
 With its sunshine, and sweet, pure air.

Bible Lessons on Diet

By Doctor A. W. Teel

The first record we have in the Bible of what man should eat is found in the first chapter of Genesis, twenty-ninth verse, as follows:

And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it should be given for meat.

It is well to bear in mind that it was not flesh.

If we study the Scriptures as diligently as we should, we will find that God gives us the very best information obtainable as to what to eat, how to care for the "temple of the Holy Spirit," and how to take care of what is not our "own." In the sixth chapter and nineteenth verse he tells us the consequences of our disobedience. Is it any wonder, then, that in the very beginning of mankind upon the earth, he gave dietetics early and serious consideration?

But, says some one, do we not read in Leviticus 11: 9 that he designated the things the people could eat? This is all very true, but Bible students who are familiar with the manners and customs of the people in those times conclude this was permitted them as a disciplinary lesson, for which they suffered as a consequence of their hard headedness.

We read in the Old Testament Scriptures that God often permitted the people to have their way, knowing their irresistible desires, knowing full well that their "love of self" would bring on disaster. Because of public opinion, Moses yielded, and through the pleadings of Moses God permitted the Israelites to eat the flesh of doves after he had so generously fed them manna or bread, and we are informed after they made this radical change to a flesh diet, they were immediately stricken with a "very great plague."

Upon one occasion, when Moses was addressing the Israelites, he admonished them when making a siege against a city not to cut down any trees that would be of use for meat during the siege. They were instructed to destroy only the trees which they knew were not trees for meat.

Moses was a great prophet and lawyer. He was subject to the command of his foster mother, the princess, and was educated by the priests and the wisest men of the Egyptian kingdom. Therefore, he was given not only great spiritual knowledge in which God directed him, but also the wisdom of people who far antedated the Jews. When the Israelites cried aloud for flesh instead of manna, he at first refused to give it to them. But they entreated him all the more loudly, and finally, after telling them that "the tree of the field is man's life," he yielded to their request, with its resultant disastrous effects.

During the time of Elijah there was a famine in the land, and God again set the example of a fleshless diet by feeding Elijah, the widow, and her whole household with a barrel of meal and a cruse of oil. We find that was sufficient to nourish them.

A little later we read in 2 Kings of the good example of a fleshless diet set by feeding the people loaves of barley and corn.

Let us now bear in mind what I have said about the baneful effects of eating flesh, as these effects were felt by the Israelites and the total abstinence of a fleshless diet for Daniel and his friends. For three years they had been fed and nourished by the king's meat and wine. This was compulsory. But Daniel knew that he must have physical and spiritual health, else he would not have the physical and spiritual endurance for the test (faith) that was to be required of him. He had only to look about him, and as we of today can see, he saw the drunkard, the glutton, and the poverty stricken in this land of plenty, a land where God has provided "the fruit of the tree, herbs, and mild food."

Daniel, in order to prove his stand, begged of his captors that he and friends be fed only pulse and water for ten days, at the end of which time their physical condition was to be compared with that of those who ate the meat. This plan was agreed upon. "And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat a portion of the king's meat." Thereafter Daniel was permitted his diet of pulse and water, and the Bible says, "As for these four children, God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom." And in all matters of wisdom and understanding, the king found them ten times better than all magicians and astrologers that were in his realm.

While during Old Testament times we read that flesh was accepted on the altar of sacrifice to God, we find that sympathizing Jesus chose to symbolize his own great sacrifice for mankind with bread and fruit of the vine. What greater tribute could be paid to this friend of humanity.

Abdul Baha, one of the greatest of oriental and latter-day philosophers, who, while confined in a Turkish prison for forty years on account of his religious views, did more to liberate his native Persia from shackles of medieval spiritual darkness and despotism than any other man living or dead, says: "The food of the future will be fruit and grains. The time will come when meat is no longer eaten. Medical science is yet only in its infancy, but it has shown our natural diet is that which grows out of the ground. The people will gradually develop to the condition of taking only this natural food."

More than twenty years ago, from his prison in Acca Synia, Abdul Baha sent the following message to a physician in Europe: "Regarding the eating of animal flesh and the abstinence thereof, know thou of a certainty that in the beginning of creation, God has determined the food of every animal flesh and the abstinence thereof! Know thou of a certainty that in the beginning of creation God has determined the food of every animal being and to act contrary to that determination is not approved."

The instruction given by this wise man is undoubtedly true, and those who have tested this subject thoroughly have proved its truthfulness, but those who do not wish to accept latter-day revelation or the Bible in this regard have only to turn to nature for instruction concerning the meat question. For instance, the wild beasts of prey are endowed with ferocious, tearing instruments, such as hooked teeth, talons, claws. Of these the lion is a good example.

The crooked beak and sharp claws of the falcon prevent him from picking up grains from the ground, and, therefore, he resorts to meat. Man is not endowed with hooked teeth like iron sickles, nor sharp claws, but he has sharp teeth to divide the fruits, and grinders to grind the grains. The wolf is also an example. From their teeth it is plainly evident that the food of such beasts is meat. They could neither grind the grain nor cut the grass with their teeth, for they have no molars. Quadrupeds have teeth to mow the grass as a sickle. We, therefore, must conclude that these animals do not and can not eat flesh, for they have not a crooked beak and sharp talons like the falcon to tear the meat.

The teeth of man bear evidence that he is not obliged to eat meat but that his foods are cereals and fruits. It has been and is now being proved that those who exist without meat have the utmost vigor and energy. The Brahmans and people of India do not eat meat, but they are not inferior to other nations in power or vigor or external sense and intellectual virtues.

As Christians we must have pity and compassion for all living things, and this compassion is not shown in the killing of animals. When we think of the problem seriously and realize the uncleanness of the practice of meat eating, we must conclude that it is far better and more pleasant for health's sake to refrain from eating meat.

REUNION NEWS

Western Montana District Reunion

By E. E. Eliason

The annual reunion of the Western Montana District was held at Race Track, Montana, August 8 to 17, and has passed into history as one of the best ever held in the district. The crowd at its beginning was not quite as large as usual, but before the reunion was over it was the largest that has ever attended. At a program and social service held the last Friday night, there were over two hundred in attendance, and the crowd Sunday was approximately one hundred and fifty. Due to the hard times that have affected the country, many felt they could not afford to attend full time this year, and this accounts for the smaller number at the beginning of the reunion.

Early in the season it was a question with some as to whether it would be advisable to have a reunion this year because of the extreme financial depression, but our experience has proved beyond any question that it would not pay to call off a reunion. We went ahead with faith, hoping that all would go well, and we closed the reunion with sufficient money to pay all expenses and with approximately one hundred and fifty dollars left over to start our reunion next year.

Our spiritual endowment, also, was greater, proving that God was pleased with our offering. There was a spirit of brotherhood and good fellowship such as we had not before experienced, although our reunions in the past have been very successful.

The donations of vegetables, milk, eggs, fruit, etc., made by Saints living in the community, greatly helped to defray expense in the commissary department.

The weather was very favorable, for the most part, although we suffered a little with the heat the first few days. However, a much-needed rain came to our assistance, and the weather for the remainder of the time was good.

We had with us as speakers and teachers, Apostle J. F. Curtis, Patriarch George W. Thorburn, Elders A. C. Martin, L. O. Wildermuth, and W. H. Eliason, along with local men who helped in various ways.

The missionary tone of the sermons was such that eight were converted to the truthfulness of our message and joined our ranks. For this we greatly rejoice.

The class work was successfully conducted, but the attendance did not quite meet our expectations. We feel that this is a department of our work that merits greater interest than has thus far been shown. Class work was conducted on the following subjects: "The new plan of religious education," "Authority through priesthood," and "Doctrinal fundamentals." Sister Thorburn is a valiant worker among our young people and is doing a great work there.

A well-planned program of recreation was conducted each afternoon, and the Saints learned to play together as well as work together. We should never get too old to occasionally engage in a good game.

Prayer service was held each morning at 8.30, and a spiritual atmosphere was created which we feel went far toward the success of the other activities of the day. If the increased interest shown there can be taken as an index to a keener interest in the work, we feel that Western Montana is growing spiritually.

Meals were served cafeteria style, and much credit is due Sister Frank Meagher and Sister Walter Beck for the efficient manner in which this work was handled and the wonderful meals produced. As Brother Curtis says, "A man would have a hard time reducing on such cooking."

District conference was held Saturday afternoon, with Apostle J. F. Curtis and District President N. P. Coleman in charge. One of the most important items of business was the adoption of the new plan of religious education.

The election of district officers resulted in N. P. Coleman being reelected as president. He nominated as his assistants E. E. Eliason and Doctor F. L. Casey, whose names were ratified by the assembly. Sister George W. Thorburn was elected head of the Department of Religious Education, and Brother D. L. Allen was elected district secretary.

Three ordinations were provided for, two to the office of elder and one to the office of priest. Two of the candidates were present and expressed their willingness to accept the call, and their ordinations took place at a special confirmation and ordination meeting Sunday evening. Brother Harvey Eliason was ordained an elder and Brother Warren Peterson a priest. Brother William Moore, of Bozeman, was not present, so his ordination to the office of elder will be attended to later.

The last Sunday was a busy day. Beginning in the morning at eight o'clock was a prayer and sacramental service, followed at ten o'clock by church school with district officers in charge. At eleven there was a preaching service, at four a baptismal service, seven o'clock confirmation and ordination meeting, and at eight a farewell preaching service.

Nightfall found people somewhat weary, but rejoicing in the golden opportunity of participating in a grand religious experience.

Many left for their homes Sunday night, and the remainder broke camp the following day. It was decided by unanimous vote to have a reunion again next year.

Kirtland Reunion

By James E. Bishop

For the fifteenth consecutive year at Kirtland, Ohio, the annual reunion of the Kirtland associated districts commenced its ten-day period on Thursday evening, August 14. The program committee, a part of the reunion committee, were associated with Apostle Clyde F. Ellis and Bishop J. A. Becker to form the presidency of the reunion. A schedule for each day, some simple rules, and the provisions made for program, were adopted, and the reunion was set off in good shape for a successful season.

The general depression and a lack of water caused the committee some concern. We were able to secure water from the city of Willoughby at a nominal charge. With that assurance we went forward with our plans.

The attendance of those who stayed the whole time was not as large as at the last reunion, but the attendance over Sunday was nearly as large as other years. On Sunday morning one could see the Saints arriving from distant points in order to be in time for the good prayer meetings which were held in the historic Kirtland Temple.

The young folks responded to the leadership of Brother Jaques. He has been assisted by Sister Amy Glassford and Mrs. John Stiegel, of Moline, Illinois.

Beginners met daily in a tent under the direction of Sister Auverne Proper, and the juniors were led by Elder Tom Carr and Elder Percy Farrow and wife.

The music was under the direction of Sister F. T. Haynes. Much good work of a musical character has been accomplished. The Junior Choir of the Akron Branch, led by Josephine Ebeling, sang "Come, sweet Comforter" with good feeling. Brother George Neville, Sister Farrow, Sister McNeil, and others have rendered some effectual solos.

Sister Haynes desired to bring to the reunion some of the good things of the oratorio, The Course of Time, which was rendered at the Centennial General Conference. It was found impossible to render any of the choruses, but Amy Glassford, who sang the soprano solos in the premier performance at Independence, Missouri, consented to sing

"Arise, for thy light has come." It was executed finely and highly appreciated.

There will be a class by Brother Ellis on "Christian evangelism," a class by Brother Becker on "Budgeting as applied to stewardship," and the third on "Music for general church purposes," by Amy Glassford.

The sermons already delivered have been of a high order and encouraging to the Saints. The stereopticon lecture on "Zion in preparation," by Bishop Becker was greatly enjoyed. The young people have held some prayer meetings out of doors.

All things have indicated a good reunion. God is true to his promises, and if his people will do his will, he will give all blessings necessary to overcome all obstacles.

Centennial Reunion British Isles

By W. H. Greenwood

The Centennial reunion of the British Isles Mission was held in Manchester August 2, 3, and 4. Its record is in perfect harmony with the spirit of the times, for it broke all previous records. It was the biggest thing that ever took place in England.

We all seemed to be carried away from worldly affairs, and it appeared to be a strange thing to come to earth again after this wonderful experience of brotherhood. I am looking forward to the fulfillment of the scripture recorded in the second chapter of Acts: "And they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, in the breaking of bread and in prayers."

Never in the history of the Reorganized Church has the spirit of brotherhood been seen and felt to such a degree. We got together in earnest. We sang together, we prayed together, we played together, and we rejoiced together. If ever there was union of faith and purpose it was in this reunion.

As President McDowell said: "We could not hear what the people said, for what they were doing." I have borrowed this expression, but my big brother will not mind, I know. It is not the only one which I may have to borrow, but credit will always be given to the author.

It was said of the Master, "Oh, how he loved!" We have noted this quality in our brethren, and it is real, too. How they love each other! What sympathy they have for each other! How they rejoice in the success of each other! Can there be any wonder as to why they succeed? What teaching! What teachers! What richness of thought! How we realize our poverty, in thought, in speech, in love! I am indeed thankful for the riches of divine communion, together with the fellowship of these, my brethren.

President McDowell, "our big brother," I have known by repute and precept, but now in very deed.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards I have known many years. He really comes to his own, and we receive him gladly and rejoice to see how the Lord has blessed him, and how he is continuing to bless him.

Apostle Paul M. Hanson, our minister in charge, is well known to us, and all the recommendations of the brethren are true concerning him. He is a gentleman.

We truly love these brethren, and we have a desire to make their burden as light as possible, because their message is one of love and divinity.

The theme of the reunion was "The open door of our second century." I believe we enter in through the door of faith and love with a stronger determination to accomplish our great purpose—to assist in the building of Zion.

The teaching we have received has been really sublime. We are building all the time. It may be the mind or the spirit or the body, but we are building. Much depends upon how we are building and what we are building.

In our study classes the teacher has taught us the purpose of the church, outlining it thus in our Sunday morning study class:

The Purpose of the Church

What is the church doing? ..... Making men.
Why is the church here? ..... Men need it.
The purposes of God.....Are centered in men

That men should know him.

That the divine character should be developed in men.

God's program is revealed unto man.

Man must know God, his purpose and will.

They must discover God. The church reveals God.

Revelment or revelation is progressive.

Man must be capable to receive divinity.

The world awaits this accomplishment of the church.

The church exists—to reveal, to warn, to lead, to teach, to build.

Man must share in this task. Man must be reborn.

Man must reveal all this truth in and through his character.

Only man himself can shut the door. The door is still open.

This is just the outline of our morning lesson. We were then ready for lunch, or dinner, as we English folk call it.

At one-thirty we arranged ourselves in order for the procession. Our silken banner, upon which the name of the church was displayed, was unfurled and carried by our young men. Headed by a brass band, our three representative brethren led the way, followed by the local brethren. Then came the little children, the girl guides, the young people's division, Women's Department, priesthood, and brethren. Over three hundred people took part in the procession, and we caused some degree of attraction in the neighborhood, though it is not an unusual experience, for the local Saints annually walk around the same district. The weather favored us for this display. We were very pleased because of the little children. Two of the oldest ministers in our mission, Priest William Maddock (age 84), and Elder John Austin (aged 83), were also leaders in our procession.

On our return to the hall we took part in the sacramental meeting, the congregation numbering about five hundred. The ordination service followed. President McDowell delivered the charge to the brethren and to the assembly, after which the ordinations took place in the following order:

Bishop A. T. Trapp, by President F. M. McDowell; Counsellors, Elders Joseph Holmes and George Aldridge, by Apostles P. M. Hanson and F. H. Edwards; evangelical minister, W. H. Greenwood, by Apostle P. M. Hanson; high priest, Nephi Dewsnap, by Apostle F. H. Edwards.

The service was most impressively carried out.

After a few minutes' interval, Apostle Paul M. Hanson gave a discourse, "The Master Builder," which was well received, and the attention and interest were good, considering the prolonged session.

Later we reassembled to hear President F. M. McDowell speak upon the subject "A regenerate church." The hall was filled, and we were treated to a most powerful discourse, which left its impress upon every mind. The attention of the audience was very marked, and the faith of the Saints greatly strengthened.

Thus ended a very busy and crowded day. We were very happy in mind, though many, especially the little children, were tired in body. But the comfort and peace of mind seemed to exceed all previous experiences. It was truly a Centennial reunion—a perfect day.

The third and last day of the reunion opened with a young people's prayer meeting. Everybody appeared to be there, so we take it for granted that everybody felt young. There did not seem to be any qualification of the term, so all took it for granted that they were entitled to participate, which they did. Owing to sickness, I was unable to get to this meeting until near its close, but I was able to realize the wonderful Spirit present. Then we went into study classes.

President McDowell's subject was "The ministry of teaching," that of Apostle F. Henry Edwards, "The ministry of evangelism." These lessons were given in clear and expressive terms, such as those given above. The brothers were mightily assisted in all of their instructions by the Good Spirit. There has never been anything in the nature of this expert study offered to the church in this land, neither have we met before such wonderful teachers. Their efforts which were presented in love can not be forgotten.

There was to have been "outdoor recreation" in the afternoon, but the weather proved to be unfavorable, and I think there were many who were glad, for our getting together, playing together, singing together, was really a very enjoyable and happy experience. We were, in truth, one big family rejoicing together.

We then had tea (what you would call supper) together, after which came the last session. A concert was given, which was very enjoyable indeed. A little business was transacted, such as reports, etc., being presented and received by the body. The whole effort was very successful, a nice little balance being in hand after all expenses had been met.

My little account of this reunion would not be complete if I did not say a word or two about the special music which was rendered by the "sweet singers of Israel." We are proud of all of them. Also these workers should be mentioned: Our secretary, Nephi Dewsnup; publicity agent and location, Harold Barrington; information department, etc., Harold Dewsnup; caterer, James Schofield; together with all the brothers and sisters who prepared for and waited upon us throughout the reunion.

We do not hope to experience a more educational reunion until we shall meet in Zion—redeemed.

Alva (Wyoming) Reunion

By Thelma Dillon

The Oshoto and Alva, Wyoming, Saints met with the Spearfish and Belle Fourche, South Dakota, members for a reunion August 9 and 10. These meetings were in charge of Brother Cousins. Brother J. Charles May and Brother Fred Shepherd were also present.

The reunion opened Saturday morning with a prayer service. At eleven o'clock there was preaching service, in charge of Brother Hartshorn, assisted by Brother Shepherd, the sermon being delivered by Brother May.

The business meeting was held at two o'clock Saturday afternoon. It was decided to hold a reunion again next year, arrangements for it to be in charge of Brother Cousins and such assistants as he should choose.

We hope to have some institute work at our reunion next year.

The remainder of the afternoon was devoted to recreation. At night there was a stunt program, featuring many clever songs, plays, etc. There was also a preaching service, and a wiener and marshmallow roast.

On Sunday morning the young people met among the pine trees on a high hill above the church for a prayer and testimony service. This meeting was in charge of Brothers Shepherd, May, and Hartshorn. More than thirty were present, and a surprising number of these bore their testimonies. All seemed to appreciate their wonderful opportunity to get together and learn more of the work of the Master and the word of God.

This meeting was followed by Sunday school, in charge of Brother Roy Truman. Sixty-six were in attendance. Immediately after was a sacrament and prayer service in which the Holy Spirit was present to bless.

In the afternoon there was a very interesting program, consisting of short talks, songs by Brother May, Sister Cohrt, Sister Truman, and the Temple Builders. The latter were also represented in a speech by Sister Gladys McKim; and the Women's Department, of the Oshoto Branch, was represented by Sister McElroy.

The meetings closed with preaching service Sunday night.

The weather throughout this two-day reunion was clear and sunny, and everyone there had a most enjoyable time. All of the meals were served cafeteria style at the Alva Community Hall. We were all very happy to have Brother May and Brother Shepherd with us and hope they will come again. The older folks deserve much praise in their efforts to entertain the younger people. This reunion was a wonderful opportunity for all, and especially for the young people, for it is they who must soon assume the responsibility of carrying on the work of the Master.

North Platte Reunion

The North Platte reunion commenced Saturday, July 26, and continued until over Sunday, August 3. It was a very busy season of the year for the farmers, and the attendance was not as large at first as was desired, but those present showed good interest in the various activities.

Elders H. E. Winegar and J. Charles May had charge of the morning prayer services and conducted the class work. Brother Winegar taught the adult class, and Brother May conducted the junior services. The afternoon recreational activities were in charge of these two brethren, who also alternated in the preaching services at the tent in the evenings.

The last Sunday of the reunion was a very busy day. Sunday school, sacrament service, and preaching by Elder J. Charles May occupied the morning hours, followed by a basket dinner in the city park, and after that a baptismal service at which time Elder Winegar baptized six. These were confirmed at 2.30, and Elder Winegar preached the afternoon sermon. At seven o'clock in the evening two more desired baptism, and the ordinance was performed by Elder May. Two children were also blessed. Brother May preached the closing sermon at eight o'clock. Both attendance and interest were splendid this last day of the reunion.

A very short business meeting was held Sunday afternoon at which time it was decided to hold another reunion next year, and within ten minutes something like two hundred and sixty dollars were pledged toward the purchasing of a new tent for reunion services and for other meetings when needed. The spirit of enthusiasm that was manifest the closing day of the reunion was very encouraging to those in charge.

Business as a Sacrament

The sacramental view of life will transfigure our whole industrial and economic order. When business becomes a holy enterprise and not a greedy game, it will bring with it the wealth of right relations, the gracious restraints, the sacrificial expressions, needed not only to harmonize but to spiritualize business. This does not mean long-faced piety. It means the consciousness of serving the highest through plowing a field or building a wall or a motor car, in finance, in professional activity, in statesmanship and diplomacy.

Independence

Stone Church

Pastor John F. Sheehy continued his series of Sunday morning sermons to the Stone Church congregation on "The Zion home," stressing the fact that home life is built upon trust, love, and consideration for others, not upon physical surroundings.

A large congregation for vacation season gave the speaker respectful attention and enjoyed the fine soprano solo, "Consider the lilies," by John Pringle Scott, sung by Sister I. A. Smith. Organ music for the morning was by Robert Miller.

Numerous members of the general church staff of workers at the Auditorium whose faces are frequently seen during the winter in the Stone Church congregation, are away attending and helping at reunions, or carrying on the business of the church in the various local branches. During the warm months, however, attendance at all church services in Independence has continued good, and now there is in the air much anticipation of the winter and its work. Others of our members have this month been called to immortal life. Among these was Sister Lucina B. Etzenhouser, who was seventy-five years old and a Saint for many years. Her passing occurred August 6, and the funeral was held from Stahl's Funeral Home August 11. The service was in charge of Bishop J. A. Becker. Pallbearers were John F. Sheehy, T. A. Beck, Amos Allen, Harry Smith, Mark Siegfried, and Howard Harder. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. Sister Etzenhouser was born in Farmington, Utah, and was baptized into the church September 12, 1886, by R. Etzenhouser.

At the Campus

We are daily called upon to accept a mighty challenge—to see Christ and to start living as he lived, declared Pastor John F. Sheehy in his evening sermon Sunday to the large Campus congregation. His earnest discourse was based on the question of the publicans and soldiers to John the Baptist and passed from tongue to tongue through the ages: "What shall we do?" To answer this we must ask in our hearts: What would Jesus do? and from an intimate acquaintanceship with his life and the law he came to teach, God's standard of righteousness, will come the answer.

The task is ours, the speaker stated, as it belongs to no other people, to know the law of God and live it, and in the living build the city of God.

Thinking of Jesus whom the merciful Father sent to earth to save all men, let us remember that "he was tempted and tried in all things," and when we are perplexed, regardless of our problem, let us ask of ourselves: What would Jesus do? and do it.

A pleasing musical program precluded the sermon, contributions being offered by a quartet composed of Sisters Vera Redfield and Gladys Inman and Brothers Frank Redfield and Orval Thompson; Sister Frank Redfield accompanied. The E. E. Morman Ensemble accompanied the hymn singing of the congregation, led by George Anway, and offered instrumental selections.

Elder T. A. Beck was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder A. K. Dillee, pastor of Second Church.

Walnut Park

The big event of the past week at Walnut Park was the family supper held in the basement of the church on Thursday evening. A large number of the Saints gathered for this occasion. Prior to the serving of the supper the Walnut

Park Orchestra entertained the crowd with a series of numbers in the upper auditorium of the church. After this everybody adjourned to the basement. A large long table was provided for each group, with the group elder presiding. One table was reserved for the orchestra and speakers. During the program that followed the meal, talks were given by Sister Pennell, Sister Fallon, Brothers Orlando Nace and Fred Horne, and Elders C. L. Olson, Fred Lanpher, T. A. Beck, and Samuel C. Smith. A cornet-clarinet duet was rendered by Carlos and Myrle Smith, and a mixed quartet composed of Ruth Bryant, Ada Fallon, Milford Nace, and Orlon Chapman sang a delightful number. The musical numbers were highly appreciated. The talks centered around the plans of the various departments and church workers for the fall. T. A. Beck, counselor to the Bishop in Zion, and Fred Horne, Bishop's agent for Walnut Park, presented a revised budget for this congregation for the balance of the year, and explained the ways and means by which this could be raised. The Saints are desirous of clearing up the deficit which is charged to the local expense account and coming out at the end of the year on the right side of the ledger. Everyone agreed that the gathering was a success, and other social get-togethers of this kind have been promised.

The speaker Sunday morning was Elder C. Ed. Miller, who gave an instructive sermon, using as his text the twenty-ninth and thirtieth verses of Jeremiah 31, as follows: "In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape and the children's teeth are set on edge. But every one shall die for his own iniquity: every man that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge." Brother Miller pointed out that this prophecy foretold the fact that with the coming of the gospel, the influence of heredity which had resulted in the sins of the fathers being visited upon the children, could be overcome through the saving and healing power of Christ's message.

In the afternoon the priesthood met at the church for a two and one half hour session, in which they discussed the financial problems of Walnut Park and how they might work together to raise the budget.

Cameron

Cameron Branch is in the onward march of progress, and with a membership of more than two hundred it has been able to accomplish much good in breaking down the barriers of prejudice. A number of the men of the priesthood are engaged in various business pursuits, such as bring them in touch with the entire group of citizens, who respect them as honorable and capable business men.

Our services during the hot and dry month of July have been well attended, and the spirit which characterized the meetings has been that which emanates from God.

Recently Brother and Sister Nogle and family, of Salt Lake City, moved into our midst. We welcome these splendid people and still believe the spirit of the gathering is slowly but surely moving the hearts of the Saints who wish to assist in the redemption of Zion. We suggest that any of the Saints who contemplate moving, consider the region of Cameron, which we believe to be an exceptional agricultural district. Cameron is a splendid trading center, with markets for all kinds of products. Recently the city voted to grant to the General Utilities Company of Kansas City a franchise to furnish natural gas to the city, which will be of value to the town. With highways crossing here, coming from the north, south, east, and west, and with our splendid schools and church privileges, those who contemplate moving Zionward will make no mistake in writing the pastor or any member of the committee which has been appointed by the branch to assist Saints in locating. The committee is composed of S. J. Sloan, D. W. Gamet, Thomas Fiddick, and F. L. Hinderks.

Warrensburg

In spite of the extreme drouth and some other discouragements, the Warrensburg group is going forward.

Since our last writing our pastor, Brother G. W. Hancock, has undergone a very critical operation, but we are happy to report he is now well on the road to recovery. For a while it seemed his life hung in the balance, but through the help of our heavenly Father he is being restored to normal health. Prayers were offered for him in various groups, and Brother Hancock feels God heard the prayers of these earnest Saints. Even the doctors marveled at his rapid recovery.

Two baby girls have lately arrived in our midst: Mavalene, daughter of Brother and Sister R. M. Hursh, and Flo Elaine, daughter of Brother and Sister Walter Johnson.

On the evening of July 25 a group of young people came from Lexington, Missouri, and gave a play at the church. A large and well-pleased audience attended this entertainment. This was extraordinary inasmuch as the whole evening's program was of home talent composition. It proved to us conclusively the possibilities in this direction, for those who will apply themselves. Surely dramatics has its place in our church activity.

We regret very much to lose some of our most active members: Sisters C. J. and Florence Blowers, Brother and Sister Orley Imes, and Brother Odess. They are soon to leave us to go to their respective places to teach school. They have been attending Central Missouri State Teachers College here. There is only one happy thought for us in losing them: Some one else shall receive some splendid workers. A farewell party was given in their honor at the home of Brother and Sister G. R. Norris, on the evening of August 7. About eighty were present. A program was given, after which games were played and refreshments were served. A good time was had. It seems such gatherings strengthen the bonds of friendship among the Saints.

Central Church

The Sunday morning services for the month of August have been arranged by the various classes of the church school. These classes have contributed a splendid service to the church and have been well repaid for their efforts in that the attendance has been about normal, even though August is a month for vacations.

August 17 the services were arranged by the seniors of the church school, a group of young people in their early teens. Following the morning prelude, under the direction of Sister Luella Wight, the young people's chorus sang a "Chorus from Maritana" and "The green cathedral." Doris Faler gave an interesting reading of "The substitute," which was very much appreciated by a listening audience, after which the chorus sang an inspiring number, "The Lord is mindful of his own," by Mendelssohn.

Following the class period, with the reassembling in the main auditorium, a prelude was played on the organ by Sister Elizabeth Hitchcock, "The bridal train." Brother Gomer Cool played a violin solo; then the congregation joined in singing from the Hymnal. "The challenge of the Cross" was presented in dramatization form by six young girls of the senior department, and contained a lesson that reached the heart of everyone present. It impressed us that we should be willing to bear the cross that is meted out to us; we should not want to select the kind of cross we are to bear, but go on unflinchingly doing the bid of our Master and bearing if need be the same cross that he was called upon to bear. It was a wonderful sermon given in the form of dramatization.

The service of the evening was held on the lawn, and Mr. George W. Crowder delivered a fine discourse, using for his theme "Prohibition and the people." At this service, Mrs. Myrtle Wamsley and Mr. Carl Smithey sang "Hold thou my hand," by Briggs.

August 24 was a beautiful day, mild and with a touch of autumn in the air. The services of the day were arranged by the I. X. L. Class of the church school. Special music of the morning was a vocal solo by Sister Myrtle Wamsley, a member of the class. Sister D. H. Blair, the teacher, told the morning story.

At the service period, a quartet consisting of Eugene Christy, Clayton Wolfe, A. D. Hitchcock, and Jerrold Hitchcock sang "Gloria" and "Some blessed day." The speaker for the hour was Mr. W. H. Launder, who discussed at length the subject "Should women work for luxury?"

The service at 7.45 was held on the lawn, it probably being the last of the season. The Honorable James R. Page, prosecuting attorney of Jackson County, was the speaker, his subject being, "The criminal and his allies." He gave some information that was appalling, showing the rapid increase of crime and stating that in the year 1929 alone, fifteen thousand murders were committed in the United States. Some suggestions for the aid of the State of Missouri in its aim to abolish crime as given by Mr. Page are: To divorce all law enforcement from politics; to give the State the same right in a criminal case that the accused has; to instill in the minds of all the principles that a criminal case should be tried with one object in view—the administration of justice in that case; to give the State the right to use testimony in a re-trial the same as the accused; to abolish the Parole Board. His discourse was received by about one hundred and fifty people, a goodly portion of the people attending being nonmembers.

Preparations are well under way for the stake picnic at Swope Park on Labor Day, where games and recreations of many kinds will be provided for a splendid outing.

Fourth Church

"The eulogy to Jesus Christ," by Brother Joseph Luff, in Autumn Leaves, was read by Elder E. W. Lloyd, at the family service on July 27. Elder J. O. Worden sang, "Keep my hand in thine."

In the evening Brother A. H. Christensen spoke on the subject, "The kingdom of God."

On August 3 the 8 a. m. prayer service was eliminated on account of the heat. The sacramental service was held at nine o'clock, and a good Spirit was present.

At the opening of Sunday school some of the teachers related several stories to the little folk, which were also interesting to the older people.

Brother Terry preached in the evening on the theme "Eternal things." It was a beautiful discourse, so plain and clear that all could easily understand, and pointing forward to that time when the call shall be made, "The Bridegroom cometh; go ye to meet him."

"Things eternal" was the subject of Brother Norman Carter's sermon on the morning of August 17. He emphasized loyalty to God, to our fellow men, and to ourselves.

Many of the Saints, old and young, went to Lawrence, Kansas, after the service and had lunch in the park on the college grounds, after which a visit to the several museums was very interesting, where a glimpse of the remote past was had as the great skeletons of mastodon and dinosaur were beheld. The trip was not only interesting, but educational as well. There were eight cars, all of which were loaded.

Leaving Lawrence about 5.15 p. m., we got back in time for the evening service at eight o'clock, at which time we listened to a sermon by our stake missionary, H. H. Sevy. This sermon, from the texts Isaiah 11: 12 and Genesis 49: 9, was a strengthening one to the Saints.

During the past few weeks some swimming outings have been had by the Saints, and also the "O. B. K.'s" at the Electric Park.

Many of the Sunday school students were awarded their beautiful "perfect attendance pins."

Seattle and British Columbia

By Grace Emslie

The Seattle and British Columbia district reunion was held on our reunion grounds at Silver Lake, Washington, August 1 to 10. With beautiful surroundings and favored with ideal weather conditions, we were also permitted to enjoy a goodly degree of God's Holy Spirit.

Intensive class and institute work was conducted for adults each morning between the hours of nine and twelve with an average attendance of eighty students. The subjects taught, and names of instructors were:

"New plan of religious education and administration," Mrs. Emma McDole and O. P. Oppelt; "Personal evangelism," D. B. Sorden; "Continuation of centennial work," M. A. McConley.

The needs of the young folks and children were by no means neglected. Brothers Lester Bronson and H. Savage directed the activities of the boys. Sister Richard Baldwin, Sister Clara Smith, and Sister D. B. Sorden were in charge of the girls and young women's activities.

In addition to the foregoing teachers and leaders, we had with us Brother and Sister H. I. Velt, recently from Australia, Patriarch Baldwin, and Brother and Sister A. C. Martin, who rendered us inestimable service in helping to bring us one step nearer Zion.

Brother H. I. Velt was elected district president, and the new plan of religious education was adopted for this district.

We are indeed glad to report that during the course of the reunion twelve souls were inducted into the kingdom of God, and we wish for them every success in their Christian endeavors.

All services were very well attended, and especially the evening and Sunday services, when the tent was filled to capacity.

An atmosphere of peace and contentment constantly prevailed on the grounds, and at the closing of this reunion we feel that it has been more than a success, since we have learned to more efficiently work together, play together, live together, and worship together.

Aurora, Illinois

It has been several months since news from the Aurora Branch has appeared in the church paper. The Saints here still hold regular meetings in spite of the fact that many are away for the summer. Brother and Sister J. E. Wildermuth and family are visiting relatives in Montana this summer. Brother J. F. Wildermuth moved his family to Mansfield, Ohio, for the summer. Brother Jerry has been employed at Mansfield for the past year.

We have a few new members in our branch. Brother and Sister Roy Hamilton have moved here from Shellbrook, Saskatchewan, Canada. Also, our district missionary, Brother Roscoe Davey, and family have moved from Sandwich to this place. Brother Moore, from Chicago, has become a member of our branch.

Brother and Sister Ernest Hill had their infant daughter, Lois Anne, blessed last Sunday. Sister Roth, from Elgin, also had her infant daughter, Sylvia, blessed.

Brother Irvin Luke and Sister (Annie) Lois Allen were the only Saints from Aurora who attended the Centennial Conference. They were married while there, Brother J. A. Gunsolley performing the ceremony.

Our annual Sunday school picnic was held at Phillips Park, Brother Shepherd, a missionary from Chicago, and his family being welcome visitors.

An ice cream social was held at the home of Brother and Sister Charles Atkins.

Brother and Sister Malcor and daughter Elizabeth attended the Nauvoo reunion last week, while Brother and Sister Roscoe Davey and daughter Edith attended the reunion at Lamoni, Iowa.

Sister Fred Settles, who has suffered a long illness, is slowly recovering.

Successful Services in Northeastern Wyoming

By J. Charles May

For some time the Saints of northeast Wyoming had been planning for a two-day meeting of the Oshoto (Wyoming) Saints and the Spearfish (South Dakota) Saints and friends. Arrangements were made for me to be with them after the North Platte reunion, which closed August 3.

Upon arriving at Moorcroft, Wyoming, I was met at the train by the Cousins, and was motored to their home some twenty miles north. Elder Fred Cousins and the band of Saints who hold meetings at the Oshoto schoolhouse every Sunday had planned for some meetings. A carnival was held Tuesday evening, at which time a very enjoyable social and entertainment was given, which netted them somewhere between thirty and thirty-five dollars. This was followed by preaching services the following two nights.

Two-day services had been planned for Alva, Wyoming, a midway point for the northeast Wyoming Saints and those of southwest Dakota to join together in these meetings. From early Saturday morning until the closing service Sunday night, a wonderful time was enjoyed by all. These meetings had been well planned by Elder Cousins and his helpers. A very fine spirit prevailed throughout the two days. Much enthusiasm and the missionary spirit were shown by the Saints of Oshoto and vicinity. Brother Horace Hartshorn and his truck load of young people seemed to enjoy their early morning thirty-mile drive down through the beautiful canyons to Alva.

The two-day meeting took on the nature of a reunion in many respects. We were happy to have the assistance of Elder Fred Shepherd and wife of the missionary force. The early Sunday morning prayer service of thirty-five young people was held on the hillside overlooking the beautiful Jones Creek Canon and the little village of Alva below, and we were pleased with the way they responded with their prayers, songs, and testimonies.

At all the services Sunday the Union Church was taxed to its capacity and standing room occupied. Saints were present from various points in Wyoming, and from Spearfish, Belle Fourche, and Rapid City, South Dakota. The good Spirit was felt to a very marked degree at the sacramental service. A basket dinner, with plenty to eat for all, was enjoyed. The afternoon session was given over to departmental work and short addresses. This was another service well planned.

This was one of the very best two-day meetings that the writer has ever had the privilege of attending. These isolated Saints deserve great credit for their faithfulness and determination. It will be of interest to those of Lamoni and other points to know that under the direction of Brethren Cousins and Hartshorn there are several families formerly of Lamoni, who are working together to build them a nice little church in the vicinity of Oshoto. We were glad to meet the McElroys, Grays, McKims, Coles, Stubbarts, Dilons, Newcomers, Hartshorns, and Cousins, formerly of Lamoni, and their children who are now growing up and also working with them in an endeavor to let their light shine.

Many of these good people drive fifteen to twenty miles to the regular church services.

It was also a great pleasure to meet Brother Leroy Truman and wife and her mother, Sister Hill, formerly of Lamoni, but now of Belle Fourche, South Dakota; also to meet the Cohrts, Willards, Fetches, and Newtons, of Spearfish, South Dakota. The kindness and hospitality of these Saints will long be remembered. I occupied one night at the Spearfish church. Such a good time was enjoyed by all at the Alva two-day meetings that they are now looking forward to and planning for a full week of such services for the coming year.

Calumet Branch

The Saints of the Calumet Branch, Oklahoma, have been fairly active during the past six months, and are planning a two weeks' meeting beginning August 31. We expect to have Patriarch Ammon White, our district missionary, with us at that time.

This has been an unusually dry, hot summer, which has had a tendency to retard activity in the branch.

The Department of Recreation and Expression, under the supervision of Brother Harold Crownover, is still active and doing a good work, but we miss the valuable help and association of Brother and Sister Ernest Crownover, who are now located at Boone, Iowa. We feel our loss is another's gain.

Another valuable helper, Sister Gretta Owens, is soon to leave us for New York to instruct and study music in the School for the Blind. Sister Gretta will be greatly missed by all.

The Department of Women, under the direction of Sister Lillie Elwell, has not met the past few weeks, owing to the extreme heat. But they are too energetic to be idle long. Their one big aim is service.

Our community was saddened by the death of Henry E. Walbaum, known in the community as Grandpa Walbaum, which occurred the 9th. He was not a member of the church but lived a good life and was a friend to man. His wife and one daughter and three sons united with the church several years ago. Funeral services were in charge of Elder M. Crownover. Sermon by Elder Elmer Richards. Interment was in Geary Cemetery.

Fairview, Montana

On Sunday, August 3, 1930, Saints from Arnegard and Williston, North Dakota, also from Andes, Montana, visited with the Fairview Branch. Sunday school was followed by a sermon at the eleven o'clock hour by Brother J. E. Wildermuth on the text, "Am I my brother's keeper?" The high points of this discourse were: equal distribution of property, equal distribution of labor, and equal distribution of leisure.

We commend with all our heart the individual or the organization that is wholly or in part separated from the lusts that would rise to the ruin of our fellows. In making continued application of the principles of the "Golden Rule" we shall be well on the road to a Zion condition.

The entire congregation, about eighty in number, all motored to Hay Creek, where three young ladies were baptized. During the afternoon one child was blessed, the three young ladies were confirmed, an elderly brother was administered to, after which there was a sacrament service, presided over by Brothers A. R. Ritter and L. O. Wildermuth.

The entire day was well spent. It was evident that the Spirit of the Lord was present and visited the greater portion of those in attendance. It was equal to any day of our district reunion.

Youth and the Tasks of Citizenship

Some time ago Judge Darius Brown, of the Jackson County, Missouri, Circuit Court, speaking from his experience in the criminal court room, and addressing an audience of Kansas City youth, expressed his opinion that citizenship would not reach its highest development until to every citizen there comes the opportunity to earn a living for himself and those dependent upon him.

He might have added that there should be two other factors in the equation with about the same evaluation, viz, a dominant sense of responsibility to work, and a conscious endeavor through previous preparation and present application to make the most of the opportunity to work. These three coordinates of successful citizenship I have constantly tried to hold before the youth of the church. Our own Zionie ideals demand that they shall not only be recognized, but also acted upon.

But to point these necessities out to our youth is a task quite different from that of inducing them to act in consonance with the principles involved. There must at bottom be a desire to become a citizen of a high type. And it is quite likely that a desire will be aroused and maintained largely if not entirely by appeal to the emotions. This brings us to another of the ideas I have long tried to keep to the fore, viz, that the motivations towards better social conditions and citizenship will spring from religion which is closely bound up with conscious divine relationship to other men.

Judge Brown's appeal to the youth of his district is timely and wise. In trying to impress upon them the necessity of solemnly facing the tasks of solving many of the problems confronting society today, a task which is clearly theirs, he impresses his appeal for rectitude and assiduous application to wholesome and righteous tasks by setting out some of the figures telling of youthful failures. "It might interest you to know," said he, "that seventy-five per cent of all arraignments in our criminal courts are youths less than twenty-one years old. Less than eighty per cent of all our boys and girls get a grade school education. About ten per cent get a high school education, and only three per cent go through college."

The figures are startling and should impress upon our youth the necessity for preparation. Education plays in this a very large part. I do not, of course, think that education is in itself a cure for crime; but it looms large as a factor in it. A youth who has secured a good education is one whose time has been well occupied; and as a rule he has been in good company. And here are two factors functioning largely in the development of good citizenship: keeping busy at some things worth while, and choosing the companionship of those whose motives and conduct are high in ideals. Every judge on the benches of either criminal or juvenile courts will confirm from his own experiences the statement that lack of regular occupation and the company of those of lower ideals are at the beginning of most criminal careers.

Of course there has been something said to us about the idler having no place in the ideal social order towards which we are striving.

I wish I could once more appeal to the youth of the church to keep before them the great dual objective of becoming faithful and devout church workers, and citizens of the highest ideals. I fain would see them arising from the posture of devotion to take up the daily tasks of being good and useful citizens.

Avoid the very appearance of evil and keep busy at the tasks of preparation for greater endeavor.

The Harvest Festival

The Harvest Festival, one of the great events of the year in Independence, is announced for October 7 to 12, 1930. In anticipation of the exhibition, many branches already have committees appointed and working to send in contributions representing the produce, manufactures, arts, and industries of their localities.

A letter comes from Brother G. J. Waller, of Honolulu, Hawaii, stating that a shipment of goods is on the way already, and that several large firms have made contributions which will be used.

Those who have visited the Harvest Festival know what a fine thing it is. People are advised to see that plans are going forward in their own localities to make this year's Harvest Festival a success.

District presidents and bishop's agents are requested to cooperate in securing exhibits from their respective States and districts, and to see that the shipment is made to reach Independence well in advance of October 7. Direct consignments to T. A. Beck, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri. Fruits, grains, home and manufactured products, canned goods, and local specialties go to make up the fine exhibits representing various places in the world.

Young People and Prayer Meeting

I wish it were my privilege to invite every reader of the Herald to with me attend a young people's midweek prayer meeting conducted in a certain large congregation of the church. You would be impressed not by the place in which they meet, for it is not beautiful, and not by the number in the congregation though it is encouragingly large, but by the spirit of the worshipers—a deep, moving feeling and assurance which puts hope in the eyes, courage in the heart, and a song on the lips of everyone there.

Through worshiping together, these young members are tasting the wonders of brotherhood with Christ and with each other. Their prayers are short and often halting, their testimonies are brief and very earnest, and the expressions of their ambitions are best summed up in a song which they sing:

"Just as I am, thine own to be,
Friend of the young, who lovest me,
To consecrate myself to thee,
O Jesus Christ, I come, I come.

"In the glad morning of my day,
My life to give, my vows to pay,
With no reserve and no delay,
With all my heart I come, I come."

What can be more moving than these words sung by many youthful voices?

"I would live ever in the light,
I would work ever for the right,
I would serve Thee with all my might;
Therefore to Thee I come, I come.

"Just as I am, young, strong, and free,
To be the best that I can be
For truth, and righteousness, and Thee,
Lord of my life, I come, I come."

As I look over their glowing faces and in their speech follow the wide sweep of their thought, I am happy in my belief that they are typical of the young members all over the church—eager, earnest, hopeful, dependable.

In another, a smaller branch, where I was lately privileged to visit I found the Saints assembled for prayer, the young and the old together. In few places have I heard expressed greater harmony of ideals. They are looking to Zion—Zion of heart as well as a city of Zion on earth. Their consideration for each other and the respect they shared for their leaders were marked. Together they came to spend an hour in true worship. And the visitor went from their midst refreshed.

The belief that the young people are not interested in prayer and worship is a fallacy. They are. They feel strongly a need for strength and encouragement which can come only from communion with God and their fellow men. Their expressions of appreciation of the prayer meeting are frequently heard, for such a service supplies an actual need. What better place is there for them to learn of the power and the mercy of God, of the love of Christ as it was manifested in his life among men? What more appropriate place is there for our boys and girls to learn of the problems of life and to acquire charity and sympathy for others than at the prayer meeting?

Are we doing all within our power to give our young people that which will help them in their gropings toward divinity? Are we quick to encourage and slow to criticize adversely? Are we joining hands with them? Are we helping rather than hindering? Can we sing with them from our hearts: "Lord of my life, I come, I come"?

The Quest of Knowledge

This week and this month many thousands of children, young people, and adults are returning to the schools and colleges of the country in search of knowledge. In this questing after information, our own people have an important part.

In Lamoni, Graceland is once more opening her doors to welcome old and new students to another year of study, association, and character development. Representative young people of the church, preparing for service in life and future leadership in the church, will be there to grow and learn together.

Independence will offer educational opportunities to "those who must work, but are willing to study," through the Institute of Arts and Sciences, under the guidance of Brother M. A. Etzenhouser and with the assistance of a corps of instructors who consecrate their services to the work.

This church is returning, as one speaker said, to an appreciation and a fulfillment of some of the educational ideals of our early pioneers. There is much to be done before we fully realize what was the vision and hope.

For Christian Criticism

The "Foolish Fat Forties"

It is the pastime of a number of the older generation to blame the young people for most of the social evils of the time. One minister, the Reverend Sam Stegg of Manila, according to the Literary Digest, blames the "foolish fat forties" for the alleged godlessness of at least one city, Chicago. Probably the conditions there are not greatly different from those in other large cities.

There is no question that the "wild younger generation" have learned many of their worst tricks from unregenerate members of the older groups. But fixing the blame does not help us much. Bad parents raise bad children, and bad children become bad parents. We have to work on both groups to improve either.

Besides, it is the function of Christianity to help rather than to blame. Christianity must show men the better way.

Too Rich to Be Loved!

Owen Young, prominent international banker, and the financial genius of the German reparations plan, is reported to have said recently:

"America is too rich to be loved."

Could he not have said, with equal truth, that America, because of her riches, and the corresponding changes in character that they have caused, is becoming less worthy of being loved?

A country could be rich, and still be loved for great national character and goodness. We sometimes wonder if we are not assuming the "shylock" character that foreign cartoonists attribute to us.

Our Traditional Lawlessness

Roscoe Pound, Dean of the Harvard Law School, advises, in his new book, Criminal Justice in America, that we should shake off our pioneer inheritance, according to R. L. Duffus, in the New York Times. Our legal system and traditions were developed for a community under pioneer conditions, and they do not fit the complexity and greatness of our modern society.

Certainly our system leaves much to be desired. We suffer from tardy and uncertain justice, veniality, cluttered courts, graft, and antiquated jurisprudence. We cry about the disappearing respect for law. We never had any respect for law, starting from the Revolution, and carrying through all sorts of rebellions, persecutions of minor groups, the Kansas troubles, the Civil War, our perennial strikes, our frequent lynchings, and our present-day trouble with prohibition.

Lawlessness is one of the traditions we ought to drop.

Is Evangelism a Failure?

Mr. Charles Stelzle, after inquiring of one hundred leading evangelists, states that the predominant opinion is that evangelism has failed in this country. While they admit this, they conclude that their failure is due to something wrong with the people. It does not occur to the evangelists, apparently, to suspect that something may be wrong with themselves, their methods, or their interpretation of the Christian message.

It is possible, even probable, that evangelism, presenting the real gospel of Christ, instead of the hokum so frequently delivered, would again draw men in impressive numbers to the church.

Ten Years of Woman Suffrage

Ten years ago the women of the United States received the right to vote. They had made a great struggle to get it. They had imagined that it would help them somehow to make all things better and easier.

Things have not improved much in the ten years, at least not directly attributable to woman suffrage. The right to vote was only a beginning. The knowledge of what to do with it is much harder to attain, and many women give it up.

Some of our more precious types of fools argue that because the women have accomplished nothing with the vote, they should be deprived of it. The men have done very little in about one hundred and fifty years. Perhaps they ought to be deprived first.

Some women do not vote wisely (it is a hard thing to do), and some of them do not vote at all. That's their business. The vote belongs to them as much as it ever belonged to men. Let them have it. When the men show some signs of surpassing wisdom in politics, it will be time to criticize the women.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

A Reunion Baptism

By John Blackmore

Another reunion season has passed, and we may review some of the experiences incidental to the reunion activities which are related to and affect our whole religious life. During the years, the writer has attended reunions which were well planned and others which seemed to be run in a haphazard manner. In some, every detail of the kitchen work appeared to be well planned and organized, yet the sacred and solemn services were lacking in organization and detailed planning.

Perhaps one of the services which most often seems to be sandwiched in between other services is the baptismal ceremony. Too often the reunion baptisms are hastily arranged affairs with very little effort to maintain an atmosphere of sacredness and solemnity. An announcement that there will be a baptism is made, and in a haphazard, unorganized fashion the candidates are conducted to the water and baptized with little ceremony.

An Unfortunate Experience

The writer has many memories of rudely arranged baptisms crudely conducted, which have been sandwiched in between larger, yet less important meetings. One such baptism which stands out in memory was the baptism of a boy of twelve years of age. The boy was an excellent swimmer, so that the mere "dipping" was a minor experience in his life, an experience which probably would easily fade into unrecalled events and perhaps be entirely forgotten unless it was associated with other and more intense incidents and influences. Evidently the officers in charge did not think of the above factor in the situation, or they would surely have endeavored to make the experience of baptism a more outstanding and sublime occasion to this youthful boy. The ceremony "took place" in between two major meetings. The boy, with two other candidates, was conducted to the river and with little ceremony baptized. No effort was made to develop the elements of sacredness and to emphasize the tremendous importance of the ordinance in its relationship to life. The processes of memory and imagination were in no way stimulated by the tone and atmosphere of the service.

Standing on the bank of the river that day, the writer wondered how often that boy would recall his baptism in the strenuous affairs of life, when he had grown to be a man. If he does, perhaps it will be with a sense of outraged dignity. At least there will not be present in memory associated with his baptism those elements of sacred solemnity and hushed reverence which should accompany the covenant made and sealed by the ordinance of baptism. It was a sad injustice that those elders committed that day to the boy of twelve years of age. He was robbed by their negligence, or by their failure to appreciate the rich experience of a well and properly conducted baptismal ceremony in which all of the elements of beauty, of worship, of the sacredness of the covenant of religion and of solemn expectancy which should be present. We are thankful that this is not typical of all reunion baptisms, but there is a grave danger that the rule of immediate expediency is in force at reunion time, rather than the well-thought-out and carefully planned event.

Dignity, Reverence, Beauty

It would seem that the baptismal ceremony in the church is as important a function in the life of an individual as the marriage ceremony. Yet, we would not think of conducting our marriage ceremonies in the haphazard and often hasty fashion which occasionally marks our reunion baptisms. This article is a protest against such informal, hasty, unplanned baptismal ceremonies, especially where children are involved.

On the other hand, some of the reunion officers sense the vital importance of a beautiful, well-conducted service which is a part of the planned program of the reunion schedule. In other words, a proper time is set, and a service arranged for those who are candidates for baptism and church membership. It is well for both the acting officer and the candidate to recognize that the whole church is involved in every baptism. Therefore it does not seem unreasonable that the candidates should be requested to present themselves for baptism at the properly scheduled service. The rule of haste and apparent expediency often cheapens the service both to the candidate and to the people attending.

The following service associated with the ceremony was conducted at a recent reunion. The spirit of worship and of expectancy marked the service, and the Spirit of God was undoubtedly felt by all who attended. A proper time was set for the service, and arrangements were well planned, with the elements of beauty, solemnity, and sacred covenant-making emphasized.

The Service

The service commenced at eight o'clock Sunday morning. The Saints assembled in the large tent, while sacred music was being softly played. A hushed reverence was evident as the presiding officer arose and read an excerpt from the first Psalm. The congregation then arose and sang "How firm a foundation." A brief talk relative to the sacredness of baptism was followed by a two-minute period of meditation, while "O Jesus the giver of all we enjoy" was softly played on the piano. The scripture was then read, John 3: 4, 5, and Galatians 3: 27. Prayer was offered, and as the Amen was spoken the Saints responded by singing softly:

How well we remember the dawn of that day
When, led by the Spirit, the truth to obey,
The light dawned upon us and filled us with love,
The Spirit's sure witness sent down from above.

The candidates were then called by name to stand before the altar. The parents of each child candidate were then called to stand behind their children. In the case of a man candidate, his wife was called to stand with him. A reverential quietness pervaded the congregation as oral vows were made by each candidate as he stood before the altar upon which were the three books of the church. The parents were then charged by an attending officer regarding their divinely imposed responsibility to these candidates. The wife of the man candidate was also presented with a charge. The congregation was then requested to stand and receive a charge relative to their responsibility and interest in the solemn and sacred covenants about to be sealed by the baptisms. As the congregation stood in silence, a prayer of thanks was offered to God. The march to the lake was orderly. The acting officers headed the march, then the candidates who were followed by their families. The Saints in quietness then took their places four abreast in the column. The service at the water's edge was brief, but in every heart and soul was a quiet, emotional feeling as each person was made conscious of the sacred significance of the moment and the ceremony in the lives of these candidates and in the life of the church. Those candidates will not be likely to forget the experience of their baptism that morning.

In His Presence

You can not come too often or too near,
The Son of God is infinite in grace;
His presence satisfies the longing soul,
And those who walk with him from day to day
Can never have a "solitary way."

Ordering and Using Quarterlies

By C. B. Woodstock

There are three important phases to the Quarterly problem. The quarterly lessons must first be prepared with great care, published in attractive form, and made available for general use. This is the work of the editors and publishers. Quarterlies must be secured by schools in carefully selected grades and subjects to provide in logical order for the educational needs of each group or class. They must be supplied in quantities sufficient to furnish one to each student for regular use, and to give to each visitor. This is the responsibility of the officers in charge of the school.

The third phase of the problem is the adequate use of the quarterly lesson in the hands of teacher and pupil. The vast, rich sources of the quarterly arranged in logical, studied sequence should be a constant inspiration and revelation to the pupil and a most valuable tool and asset for the use of the teacher. The teacher-leader further enriches and makes vital the informations of the lesson and leads to the discovery and expression of gospel truth in human life and relationship.

This is the work of the teachers and leaders who work under the direction and supervision of department and division officers. No process in education is automatic. No lesson teaches itself. No lesson is an end in itself. All depends upon the way the lesson is used. This is a problem of method, of supervision and administration.

The quarterly consideration is of especial importance at this time of year because our schools will be reorganized for the winter early in October. Selection of subjects must be made in September and quarterlies ordered for the year. Prompt and careful attention must be given this matter. The church is using approximately 45,000 quarterlies, at a cost of $20,000. That those in charge may be more fully informed, we call attention to the following which will appear soon in a catalog from the Herald Publishing House.

Church School Quarterlies

Responding in recent months to a universal demand for a general improvement in our quarterlies, the entire series is being revised or rewritten to develop better continuity, to give freshness of appeal, improvement in method, and richness of subject matter. A more expensive paper is being used, and gradually a new supply of cuts is being secured to illustrate the text. In some fields wholly new subject matter is being developed for class study.

Every member of our schools should be supplied with a quarterly for study. No school can run successfully without texts and without personal effort in study. The gospel quarterlies are being prepared to meet the need of the church.

A Graded Series

Our quarterly series may be termed "departmentally graded," there being three years' work of equal difficulty within each department, except the Kindergarten which has but two years, and the Adult Division which has a wide range of yearly electives. One year's quarterly is printed in each department, each year. This year (October, 1930, to October, 1931,) we shall be printing the first year of each series. Next year it will be the second year, the following year the third, and then back again to the first year in October, 1932.

How to Order

Small schools, with but one class in a department, should order the current quarterly, the one being printed for this year. However, sufficient copies are being printed each year and kept on hand so that larger schools may have two or more classes in each department, and supply each with appropriate subject matter. Those who order should try to indicate clearly by grade, year, title, and author, the quarterly wished, also quarter or quarters for which you are paying. Unless otherwise specified orders will be filled with current issues in each case.

While not graded within each department, there is a definite sequence of subject matter so planned that in regular progress from year to year and from department to department each growing person shall be privileged to gain the whole range of informations and experiences basic in the faith, belief, and program of the church.

There are four quarters to the year. The first quarter is the October, November, December issue, to permit new classes to be formed for the year immediately after the promotion in September. The second quarter is January, February, March; the third, April, May, June; and the fourth, July, August, September.

The quarterly is prepared as a textbook in religion and should be the basis for study in every Sunday school of the church. Copies should be supplied by the school to individual members and for home use. They are printed with great care and should be used continuously throughout the quarter as a fund of information and as source material for recitation and discussion. They should be preserved for future use.

The Gospel Quarterlies are prepared by the Department of Religious Education of the church. They are designed for use in Latter Day Saint church schools on all study occasions, especially at the Sunday morning session. Order early that your teachers may have ample time for preparation of the new quarter's lessons. Order by the year and save your branch money and the publishing house much inconvenience. To get the yearly reduced rate, the full year's subscription must be paid in advance. All quarterlies are priced 15 cents per quarter, 50 cents per year. Subscriptions are promptly discontinued on expiration.

All orders must be accompanied by cash. Write for an order blank and price list for yearly quarterlies and adult electives.

- QSK Kindergarten Grade, 4 and 5 years of age.
- QSP Primary Grade, public school grades 2, 3, and 4.

A Lesson Textbook

For the first time in our church a year's series of gospel lessons is to be prepared in book form for the library and as a textbook for class use; for young people and for adults, priesthood, women's groups, etc. Gospel Lesson Studies, by Anna Salyards, will be ready for use January 1, 1931. This is a revision by Mrs. Salyards of her former senior and young people's quarterly lessons, bound in a book, the first year of a three-year series. The present fifty-two lessons will be entitled Jesus and His Message.

Gospel Lesson Studies, postpaid, paper, $0.75; boards, $1.00.

A New Study for Young People

RELIGION AND LIFE; BY LEONARD J. LEA

By C. B. Woodstock

There is now ready for mailing from the Herald Publishing House an entirely new study for young people's classes, for use beginning October 5. It is assumed that our young people, having come up through the lower departments, in twelve or fourteen years of Sunday school training, have gained the fundamental informations upon which religious belief and activity is based, and are beginning to face the serious problems of self-adjustment necessary in successful adult life.

We feel especially fortunate in securing Elder Leonard Lea to prepare these lessons in which he endeavors in an entirely sympathetic way to share his experiences and the result of his reasoning with the young people of his generation. Our college age students will appreciate his genuine sincerity, his open frankness, his keen analysis, his wholesome logic, and his staunch Christian philosophy of life, wholly compatible with the faith, belief, and program of the church. Leonard Lea is a young man who has come clean and courageous through an ordinarily hard struggle to secure an education and a place of worthy service in life. He has the confidence and esteem of all who know him.

The subjects treated in the four quarters of the year's study, Religion in Life, are as follows:

The Values of Life.

The Work of Life.

The Goals of Life.

The Compensations of Life.

We quote from the Introduction to the lessons:

"With unusually happy anticipation do we send out these new lessons for young people's study. Only in a small measure are we older folk able to understand or appreciate the real situations which the young people of today must face. In our better moments we cherish the ideals which have served to help us in charting our course in life. We are inclined to impress these upon the coming generation. Some of them we feel sure are eternal, for they have been tested out in the furnace of human experience and are no longer to be regarded as mere tradition.

"But the coming generation, the young people already at our backs, must face life as they find it. Already they are seriously making up their lives, or it is being made up for them. We wish them to choose wisely, for we must soon give place to them in the great arena of life. So, from parent to child, from teacher to student, the heritage of the best of our past experience is passed on, not by commandment, perhaps, but by sympathetic guidance, companionship, and adventures in discovery.

"The author is a young man who has had to face the problems of life, much of the time by himself. He found in the church his first opportunities for education and for expression; and the start which he obtained at Graceland opened other opportunities for him elsewhere. During his work at the University of Chicago and at Harvard, he kept up his contacts with the church, developing a great interest in the problems of young people. Grateful for the help he received, he wishes to help others, and is now devoting his time to church work as an editor and as an interested friend and helper of young people.

"A combination of circumstances and a love for the young people have given him many contacts with them. This quarterly is the outgrowth of his lectures and work with them. He has tried to write the lessons from the viewpoint of the young friends he has made, with their interests and problems, and the interests and problems of all young people, in mind. We hope that these lessons will be a nearer step toward meeting their needs."

Religion in Life, for Young People; 15 cents per quarter, 50 cents per year, cash in advance. Order now for your young people's class.

Rally Day and Your Neighbor

By John Blackmore

Who is thy neighbor? Every person you meet on the highway of life who needs your help is your neighbor. Such is the message of the wonderful and classic story, "On the road to Jericho," told by the Master of men to the questioning Jewish lawyer. It matters not whether the person you meet needs spiritual or temporal assistance, if you are able to assist him, he is your neighbor. Perhaps the person may be a stranger whom you have recently met, or one of old acquaintance; he is your neighbor if he needs you.

Your neighbor may be in need of spiritual help. Perhaps his spiritual appreciations have been severely wounded by the harsh treatment of a cold and unsympathetic world. A warm invitation into the fellowship of your rally day services may be a spiritual service which you can well render to him, and may also win him to Christ.

Your neighbor may be an old acquaintance who is lost in the maze of creeds, theories, and philosophies of the present-day religious and scientific thought. Yet, a friendly hand of saintly fellowship and an invitation to your rally day services may give to him a new perspective of religious truths, friendships, and life.

Again, your neighbor may be a little child in need of the teaching and association of the Sabbath day church school. Seek such a one out and kindly extend the hand of friendship. Invite the child to the rally day Sabbath school, and you will undoubtedly give to the child great joy and to yourself blessings untold.

Pastors and church school officers should be prepared to greet all strangers and to welcome them into the various services and classes. It would surely be an unpardonable sin if the stranger in your midst were not made to feel at home on rally day and every other day. Seek your neighbor as he comes to your service for help, and give to him the hand of friendship. The Master said, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

How Do We Lead?

An Allegory

A charge had been given me—to lead a little child to the heavenly Father. All the hours of the day were mine to tell the child about the Father. At the end of the garden, at eventide, the Father, himself, was to meet us. With stories of His great power to create and to destroy, I filled the child's mind. I told him how the Father watched our every act, and how we often had to suffer because we did not do the Father's will. As we walked along, I filled the child's ears with the awfulness of the Father. The child's grasp tightened on my hand. I was sure he understood; on his face was a look of consternation.

At eventide the Father came into the garden. Feeling that my task was well done, I ushered the child into His presence. Surely the Father would smile, for I had fulfilled my charge—I had taught the little child to fear the heavenly Father. Once, the child glanced up at the Father, then shudderingly hid behind my skirts. I looked at the heavenly Father, but I found no smile of approval. I stood between the child and the Father.

Again, on the morrow, I took the child by the hand and into the garden we went. Another day was mine in which to lead the child to the Father. Rapidly we walked along. With a rattling tongue, I burdened the child with the multiplicity of the things I would teach him about the heavenly Father. From flower to bush, from bush to tree, from tree to living creatures about the garden we walked with quickened steps. Thought after thought I poured into the child's little mind. At last we came to the end of the garden. At the foot of a tree we sat to await the Father's appearance. Exhausted, the child dropped to the ground and slept.

At eventide, the Father came into the garden. I aroused the child and ushered him into God's presence, and hesitated not a bit. Surely, now, my charge had been filled. The child looked up at the Father, but, weary and bewildered, he hid his face in my skirts. I looked at the heavenly Father, but, I saw not His approving smile. There, between the child and the Father, I stood as on the eve of yesterday.

Another day was given me. I took the child by the hand and led him into the garden, happy that the privilege still was mine—to lead a child to the Father. Slowly, now, and reverently, we walked through the garden and talked of the things the child noticed. Stories of the heavenly Father I told him, of his love and his watchcare over us. Together we talked of God's goodness, his blessings and gifts to us all. We talked about the beautiful flowers, the trees, and the birds, and the bees. We thought of God as a father who was happy when we were good, but was sorry and very unhappy when we did not as we should. How we loved the beautiful garden that God had caused to grow! The child smiled when I told him the stories, and he asked for them over again. We rested, we played and were happy, and at eventide came to the tree where we awaited the Father's coming. I talked, and the child talked to me. As we waited, the Father came into the garden. With a bound the child ran to the Father whom I had taught him to know, and lovingly, trustingly, eagerly into his face the child looked. I looked at the heavenly Father, and he smiled his approving smile. I no longer shadowed the vision of the dear little child that I led.

Hints for the Supervisor of the Children's Division

By Bertha Constance Woodward

1. The supervisor is not an administrative officer, but a helping teacher who has super-vision.
2. She can supervise better if she knows the teacher, or parent, and her background.
3. Can supervise properly only when she has had training in analyzing a teaching situation.
4. Must study the pupil, the teacher, and the teaching. Should have outline for guidance in making these studies.
5. Should have some simple plan for gathering data about the complete observation. Keep these on file for use in conferences with parent and teacher.
6. After the observation, the supervisor should assist parent or teacher to improve by discussing her handicaps in a personal conference.
7. Must first be sure the teacher or parent has a proper attitude toward supervision. Many think it is fault-finding and out of place.
8. By means of the personal conference the teacher or parent should be led to analyze her own teaching as much as possible. Lead her to see her own needs.
9. Suggestions made by supervisor should be discriminative, not too general, constructive and professional, not personal.
10. Supervisor should have experience and training which will qualify her to advise her teachers and parents.
11. Supervisor should carefully plan her visits to both the home and the class.
12. The number of visits depends upon conditions. The inexperienced teacher and parent need help when they first begin their work.
13. Should supervise some one particular phase of

Teaching the Essentials of Stewardship

By Mark H. Siegfried

The following article, briefly presenting the essential ideas of stewardship, is recommended for use as study material for class work. Teachers will find in this a good outline for a talk for one Sunday lesson, or pastors may use it as the basis for a sermon. Coming from a member of the Presiding Bishopric, it is an expression of the attitude of the church on this important topic.

The basic element in stewardship is men, not money. The factor of primary importance is the relationship of man to man, and of man to God, and property is involved only incidentally. So far as his stewardship is concerned, it makes little difference how much or how little property one controls: if greed, selfishness, indifference, or a disposition to trifle with one's own talents are factors in a man's attitude toward his property, he will not be a successful steward. The Lord is not interested in any business organization as such, and he is interested in money only as it affects men. No organization can be a successful demonstration of stewardship unless the individuals who compose it can and will be successful individual stewards.

A corporate organization of itself has no soul to be saved; hence, one need not become a part of a business organization before entering into the primary and fundamental relationship of stewardship. First and last, stewardship is a relationship existing between an individual and his God. In this relationship there are at least five basic, fundamental requirements.

These requirements are based upon the principle that all property belongs to God. Man has only work at a time. Too much to expect reform in all ways at once.

14. Effective conferences follow a well-thought-out plan for improvement. There must be a definite purpose for the conference. Some conferences may be on specific technique, others on specific lessons.

15. It is often valuable to have a pre-conference before the visit. This will give the parent or teacher an opportunity to explain where she needs help before the child enters. Pre-conferences are also valuable for lesson planning. This clarifies the thinking of beginner teachers.

16. Visits may be either announced or unannounced. Better announced.

17. Supervisor should be able to help when needed in discipline problems.

temporary possession of it, and is an agent morally responsible for the use he makes of it, even though he may legally have control of it. The requirements follow:

FIRST: The owner (God) requires that the steward shall have no talent unused and undeveloped, absolutely none.

SECOND: The owner (God) requires the first fruits, not that which is left after the steward has everything he wants for himself. The first fruits belong to God.

THIRD: The owner (God) requires that the nine tenths remaining in the control of the steward, to whom is given large discretionary powers and rights, shall be devoted with as much consecration to the holy purpose of production, in the interests of all the people concerned by its use, as is the one tenth which has been given to the church for sacred use.

FOURTH: The owner (God) requires an accounting, both in time and in eternity. To refuse to make the accounting in time does not relieve the steward from the responsibility, any more than to refuse to be baptized when one has been convinced he ought to be, relieves him from the responsibility of membership in the church.

FIVE: The owner (God) gives to every steward the power to do right or wrong. The steward can either bless or harm by his conduct those who are affected by the life he lives, and the use he makes of the things put in his hands and to which he has been intrusted. He will, however, be held accountable at a judgment day, from which no man shall escape, even though he shall refuse, fail, or neglect to make a satisfactory accounting in time.

These principles should be thoroughly understood, not alone by those who plan to become stewards, but by all the members of the church.

The Guideposts

To be glad of life, because it gives you the chance to love and work and play, and to look up at the stars; to be satisfied with your possessions, but not contented with yourself until you have made the best of them; to despise nothing in the world except falsehood and meanness, and to fear nothing except cowardice; to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts, to covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners; to think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and every day of Christ; and to spend as much time as you can with body and with spirit, in God's out-of-doors—these are little guideposts on the footpath of peace.—Henry Van Dyke.

Speaking of Zion

I have chosen to read a portion of the 102d psalm, which, to my mind, has a very significant application to the time in which we live:

But thou, O Lord, shalt endure for ever, and thy remembrance unto all generations. Thou shalt arise, and have mercy on Zion: for the time to favor her, yea, the set time, is come. For thy servants take pleasure in her stones, and favor the dust thereof. So the heathen shall fear the name of the Lord, and all the kings of the earth thy glory. When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory. He will regard the prayer of the destitute, and not despise their prayer. This shall be written for the generation to come: and the people which shall be created shall praise the Lord. For he hath looked down from the height of his sanctuary; from heaven did the Lord behold the earth; to hear the groaning of the prisoner; to loose those that are appointed to death; to declare the name of the Lord in Zion, and his praise in Jerusalem; when the people are gathered together, and the kingdoms, to serve the Lord.

A significant event took place on the Hudson River about the time of the restoration of the gospel that, to my mind, is analogous. For the first time in the history of the river there was seen a steamer churning its waters. A new era in transportation was begun.

A youth saw this new contraption come to the landing and hastened to tell his parent that he saw a boat at the landing which was not being propelled by oar or sail. "Oh, no, my son," said the grandfather. "That's impossible." "Well," said the son, "it is going to leave about two o'clock, and I want you to come and see it."

They both went down to see the boat, but the old man was very skeptical about it. At the time of departure, the boat didn't move. Something was wrong in the engine room, and departure was delayed. The older gentleman pulled his timepiece from his pocket, and said, "I told you it wouldn't go." Later, the machine trouble was adjusted, and the steamer made her way down the river. As the distance between the boat and the old man increased, he looked at the young man and said, "They'll never stop it!"

The attitude of the old man toward the first steamship is characteristic of the attitude of the people toward the restoration of the gospel.

When the church was organized in the year 1830, there were many people who said, This new religious contraption won't go—and you'll see it come to naught. But now, in this year of our Lord, 1930, they know it can not be stopped. Like the mentioned steamship, it was destined to go, and to usher in a new era and dispensation—an era of social and economic enlightenment and progress, a new dispensation of spiritual light and power. It was established that its influence might make this earth a better place in which to live, and make ready a people prepared for the Lord of Glory.

We are living in a very significant age, and I thank God I am living in it. It is true we have suffered growing pains, and the mechanism in the old ship needed adjustment, but we have left the landing on our journey Zionward, and "they'll never stop it." Everywhere we see evidences of the divine springtime that bespeak summer's fruitage. The parabolic fig tree has already burst its sprouts, and we await the not far distant harvest.

I pointed out Monday evening, and reemphasized it last evening, that this church was brought into existence that faith in God and in his Son Jesus Christ might be increased; and if ever there was a time for a faith-inspiring agency it is now. Now, when there are so many agencies of infidelity which rob men of Christian faith, it is necessary that God again speak to men, and from that experience a living and vital faith be demonstrated. For "the days have come, according to men's faith it shall be done unto them." (Doctrine and Covenants 52: 5.)

We are living in a time when only those whose faith is strong and centered in God and Christ, and the church and its message, shall be able to weather the storms which shall burst upon the affairs of men and nations, and lash them into fury "like the sea and the waves roaring." And then shall "men's hearts fail them for fear, and they shall be looking for those things coming upon the earth." Those times are very near, if they have not already begun. This message of the second century must be a message of faith in God, in Christ, in the church, in men, and in the Zionite movement. "Lord, give us such a faith as this."

A Warning Voice

The message of the second century must be a message of warning. The Lord has said:

And the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days, and they shall go forth, and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them.—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 1.

This warning is to be universal in its nature and application; it is to be applied to all wrongs among all people. In this same revelation the Lord said:

This is the only true and living church upon the whole earth, with which I the Lord am well pleased, speaking unto the church collectively and not individually; for I the Lord can not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance.

In this we see the standard of the Lord. No allowance can be made for sin. Only in repentance can we find favor with God. The men of the second century must be uncompromising with sin in all its forms, and speak unhesitatingly of the consequences therefrom.

License of Self-expression

Today we are suffering the consequences of that subtle philosophy of life which justifies wrong on the basis of "self-expression." Self-expression is justifiable in the sight of God and man only when the individual conforms to the law of God and man. Our safety is in that expression that functions in accordance with constituted law. We are seeing the results of this pernicious teaching in our children today. They grow up without respect for constituted law and authority in the home, the state, and the nation, and become a menace to themselves and to society. We must encourage respect for the laws of God and of man; and of parental, state, and divine authority. Latter Day Saints should be outstanding in their respect for law and authority. It is a part of our belief.

Disrespect for law and authority is a sin of the age, and those in authority are largely responsible for it. While driving in Boston recently, I was astonished to see a man speedily pass me on a cross street. It was a violation of the law of the State. Down the street he stopped, and to my astonishment it was a policeman. This man was taking an advantage of his position. He was lowering the standard of his office. I am wondering whether some of us ministers of the church are similarly lowering the standard, and giving justification to those who are compromising the law of Christ. As a minister of this church I am bound to uphold the laws of this church, whether they be in the form of the revelations of God or the enactments of the people. He that violates the laws of the people can not justly appeal for loyalty in his own behalf.

We shall proclaim against selfishness and graft in high and low places. You men and women know that from the high places of public responsibility and trust of this Nation this spirit of graft and exploitation is manifested, until men in public service are held in suspicion, and the morale of the people is breaking.

An Undivided Allegiance

There is another thing that I have discerned and to which I desire to refer. It is a kind of disloyalty—a divided allegiance. What do I mean by this? I mean that there are people in the world and among organizations who are splitting their allegiance. There is a certain nation, one of the southern European nations, which has remarkably developed in recent years, and which is causing uneasiness in international councils. At the head of this people is a man who is seeking to unite them in every clime and among all nations to which they have migrated, for national glory and development. An investigation was recently made as to the activities and influence of this movement, and it is learned that these nationals are organized into groups throughout the United States, and notwithstanding they have in many instances sworn their allegiance to this Nation, and are naturalized citizens, they are organized to support that nation from which they came. This divided allegiance is a sign of the times in which we live. The Prophet Daniel said, "They will mingle themselves with the seed of men, but they will not cleave one to another." We shall speak and lend our influence against this form of allegiance, whether it be in the nation or in the church.

I believe that Zion will be redeemed only when the Latter Day Saints give their undivided allegiance to Christ and his church. This divided allegiance is and will divert and rob the church of financial, moral, and spiritual strength. Remember that the Lord has said that Zion is to be independent of everything under the sun. I long for the time when there shall be a group of men and women in the church who shall be able to give their uncompromising loyalty to the cause of the church and of Zion. Then shall Zion be speedily established. The minister of this church who divides his allegiance with other institutions can not inspire a living and vital faith in the cause of this church and of Zion.

Prepare a Place of Refuge

While we are warning the people of the coming events of the world, we should be trebling our efforts in preparation of a place of refuge, for our message is a message of preparation of a people for the coming of the Lord. In the very earliest days of the establishment of the church the Lord told the people to "seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion." And in the 83d section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants we read:

A revelation of Jesus Christ unto his servant Joseph Smith, jr., and six elders, as they united their hearts and lifted their voices on high; yea, the word of the Lord concerning his church, established in the last days for the restoration of his people, as he has spoken by the mouth of his prophets, and for the gathering of his saints to stand upon Mount Zion, which shall be the city New Jerusalem.

The message of the church is preparation, and, after all, that is the most significant thing about the church. That, together with the authority of the priesthood, will always make the Church of Latter Day Saints distinctive. In 1833 the Lord told the people that notwithstanding the Saints should be scattered, the designated place would be eventually used for the designated purpose—the gathering of the people and the building up of Zion.

Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children be scattered, they that remain and are pure in heart shall return and come to their inheritances; they and their children, with songs of everlasting joy; to build up the waste places of Zion.

And the members of this church are gathering to, and the headquarters of the church have been established in, Independence, because we know the place and its purpose.

The Purpose of Zion Must Not Be Perverted

There is a significant statement regarding a sad event which John felt obliged to record. It is to be found in the 2d verse of the 18th chapter of John: "And Judas also, which betrayed him, knew the place: for Jesus oftentimes resorted thither with his disciples." I want to draw your attention to the statement, "And Judas also . . . knew the place." John is referring to Gethsemane. Gethsemane at this particular time was a beautiful garden; a place of seclusion which Jesus frequented with his disciples, to counsel with them, to fraternize with them, to pray with and for them, and to commune with his Father in heaven. But through avarice and selfishness one of his outstanding ministers converted this communal retreat into a place of betrayal, and Gethsemane today, in the eyes of all Christian people, is a synonym for deception and betrayal. It is with sadness we think that an outstanding minister of the Lord should be instrumental in his deliverance to be crucified. I am wondering whether there are those who know the place called Zion, and who have gathered to it out of pure motives, but who since have been actuated by avarice and selfishness, so that they would betray the cause of Zion for a piece of real estate, personal ambition, or gratification, until Independence stands as a synonym of betrayal and deception instead of Zion, the pure in heart. Let me plead with you people who reside in Zion that you do not by your lives and deeds betray the cause of Zion, nor weaken the faith of the Saints in the gathering.

The Time to Favor Zion

Let me briefly analyze the 102d psalm. I want you to notice that David said, "When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory." There are those who believe that Zion shall not be built up until Christ comes to earth again, but the inspired writers of the Bible maintain that it shall be established before Christ's second coming. I don't think there are any people who can understand this psalm like the Latter Day Saints. It is so difficult of understanding that modern scholars have altered its meaning. In the 13th, 14th, and 15th verses David is speaking in the present tense, but in the 16th and 18th verses the whole is qualified to refer to a future time. The statement in verse 18, "This shall be written for the generation to come," refers to a particular generation in which Zion shall be established, and I believe that we are living in that generation now. In Doctrine and Covenants 107:1 (given in 1841) the Lord uses the same statement which is to be found in the psalm: "I am about to call upon them (the people of the earth) to give heed to the light and glory of Zion, for the set time has come to favor her."

Signs of the Times

I am wondering whether the Latter Day Saints realize the significant time in which they live. To me we are not only beginning a second century of church work, but are entering upon a new era in church development, and I am emboldened to say, we are entering upon that generation spoken of by the Psalmist David, and reiterated to us in revelation, "the set time to favor her (Zion) has come." There is no mistake that the Lord was referring to this generation when he spoke of the things preceding his glorious coming. I am quoting from Luke 21, Inspired Version, verses 24 to 32:

Now these things he spake unto them, concerning the destruction of Jerusalem. And then his disciples asked him, saying, Master, tell us concerning thy coming? And he answered them, and said, In the generation in which the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled, there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nation with perplexity, like the sea and the waves roaring. The earth also shall be troubled, and the waters of the great deep; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth. . . . And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads for your redemption draweth nigh. . . . So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. Verily I say unto you, This generation, the generation when the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled, shall not pass away till all be fulfilled.

From this very plain and explanatory statement of Jesus we learn that the closing generation will be marked with heavenly and earthly disturbances (there will be national and international perplexity and distress, and individuals will be at a loss to know what to do); and it will be opened by the release of Jerusalem from the dominance of the Gentile power. Said he, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."

The Time Is Here for Zion to Come

The Psalmist says "this [concerning the establishment of Zion and the coming of our Lord, etc.] shall be written for the generation to come"; the Lord said to the church in 1841 that he was about to tell the nations "the set time to favor Zion is come"; and the Lord inspired Joseph Smith to say (Inspired Version) that in the generation when the times of the Gentiles is fulfilled all will be fulfilled. I was very much impressed by the following statement made by the president of the Quorum of Twelve, at the banquet held in the lower auditorium April 5, "the chronological time has come for Zion to put on her beautiful garments." This is a very meaningful and significant statement. Permit me now to read from the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, section 45. This revelation clinches the whole thing:

Ye say that ye know that the end of the world cometh; ye say, also, that ye know that the heavens and the earth shall pass away; and in this ye say truly, for so it is; but these things which I have told you shall not pass away until all shall be fulfilled. And this I have told you regarding Jerusalem, and when that day shall come, shall a remnant be scattered among all nations, but they shall be gathered again; but they shall remain until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled . . . and when the times of the Gentiles is come in, a light shall break forth among them that sit in darkness, and it shall be the fullness of my gospel; but they receive it not, for they perceive not the light, and they turn their hearts from me because of the precepts of men; and in that generation shall the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.

The Gentile Power

In the year 1830 the light broke forth among them that sat in darkness. It was the fullness of the gospel. It was always my understanding that a generation scripturally was one hundred years, hence the period of 1830 to 1930 marks the "coming in" and "fulfilling" of the Gentile power. In this period was fulfilled the prophecy of Jesus; for the Turk was driven from Palestine after centuries of control, and in 1918 Great Britain was given a mandate over Palestine, from out of which an instrument was formed which made possible a Jewish homeland in their long-forsaken country. Some few months ago I was given quite a soul thrill when I heard over Radio Station W N A C, of Boston, Rabbi Miller, of Chelsea, Massachusetts, say that Lord Balfour, the British Foreign Minister, was like unto King Cyrus of Persia, in that he was instrumental in the establishment of the Jews in this day as Cyrus was in the past. The time of the Gentiles is fulfilled, and we now begin the significant generation spoken of in Holy Writ—the generation of fulfillment. We must, therefore, speed up our activities and establish the Zion of God preparatory to the great crisis. We are living in the hastening period—a period of development spiritually and temporally; a period of judgment and construction; a period of segregation of the righteous from the unrighteous.

Initial Movements

It gives me courage and hope when I know that there is a group of men in Atherton who are moving toward the establishment of Zion. And I pray that their faith shall fail them not in their attempt to convince the church and the world that the teachings of Jesus are universal and practicable. Thank God we have a group of men started in the most adventurous undertaking ever dreamed. The eyes of the church people are turned to the little group in Atherton, because they realize that the time has come for the beginning of such a task, and I hope that those men and women will not disappoint us. They can not afford to fail us. They have the chance as few men have of inspiring faith in Zion. We can not afford to fail them. This is a day and a task that needs faith. May faith increase. May we arise from the lethargy that has held us bound, and in this the second century go forth with a message of an established and redeemed Zion.

Protein Poisoning

By A. W. Teel, M. D.

Pasteur supposed bacteria was necessary for normal digestion and essential to both animal and plant life. Roux, his pupil, found by his experiments that Pasteur was wrong in his conclusions, for plants would grow in sterile soil. Guinea pigs were kept alive, Thierfelter and Nuttal, in sterile medium. Levin at Spitzbergen examined a total of 480 animals, such as bear, seals, reindeer, fifty-three species in all, and found beyond a doubt that the intestines of mammals in the Arctic regions were sterile. Levin, Metchinkoff, and many other competent investigators have proved beyond a doubt that a high protein diet increases intestinal putrefaction in man; also that the bacterial invasion of the intestinal canal produces toxins that exert an immense influence upon the functions and tissues of the body. The poisons, by being absorbed in the portal circulation, are partly oxidized and rendered harmless. They are excreted primarily through the kidneys, but some of it finds its way out through the lungs and skin. From these and other extensive investigations that have been made we must conclude there is a close relation between excessive protein diet and intestinal putrefaction.

Professor Rubnier, one of the former students of hygiene, made a statement before the International Congress on Hygiene and Dermography which has substantiated the findings of other scientists. Protein is a very complex substance, for it can be split up into eighteen different amino-acids. Any protein that does not have sufficient of these acids can not be relied upon to promote growth or maintain the body tissues. Two of them are the most important. Tryptoplitan is necessary to sustain life, and lysin is

A Reunion Worker Reports

The Etzenhousers are again at their office in the Auditorium in Independence after several weeks' absence at reunions in neighboring States. Brother Etzenhouser is keeping the telephone busy, Sister Etzenhouser gives her attention to a desk full of business, and there are errands galore. But Sister Etzenhouser has paused long enough to give some of her impressions of the reunions they attended.

Elder and Sister M. A. Etzenhouser, of the Social Service Bureau, were counted among the workers in two reunions. From Independence they went early in July southwest to Hearne, Texas. There from July 11 to 20 Saints from all over the great State of Texas assembled, but the number was smaller than in former years. Nevertheless the members were well acquainted, friendly, and seemingly of one heart. In the morning all found place in classes; in the afternoon all took part in the recreation provided. Meals were provided by a colored cook whose ability in culinary lines was excellent. So close was the association, so hospitable these southern Saints, and so splendid was the spirit of the gathering that Hearne reunion, to our social service workers, seemed a little Zion all its own. They came away refreshed and encouraged.

The latter part of the month found them crossing the States of Oklahoma and Kansas to Iowa, where they participated in a large reunion at Woodbine. This the reunion of Western Iowa District convened from August 15 to 24 and drew a large number of members to its sessions. It was characterized from start to finish by enthusiasm and alertness.

As at Hearne, Brother and Sister Etzenhouser conducted classes in the field of religious education. They met for services, according to our informer, in the largest tent she has ever seen outside a circus, and those who claimed seats during class periods numbered into hundreds. Especially was the response of the young people noticed. Sister Etzenhouser, in addition to her regular class, conducted a problem necessary for growth. Zein, a protein found in Indian corn, for instance, is an unstable protein for maintenance. Therefore, should we have to depend upon Zein for sustenance we must supplement this deficient protein with that of milk and eggs. Thus a fairly proportional mixed diet will make up the deficiency of amino-acids in others. However, this is not always the case of pork, fats, molasses, or degerminated corn meal, which is wholly inadequate.

During the World War it was decided by the Inter-Allied Council of Physiologists that meat was not physiologically necessary, since it could be replaced by vegetable proteins and those of milk, cheese, and eggs. All flesh foods, including those of fish and fowls, are hazardous when used to excess by overloading our diet with protein and putrefaction materials known as purins which in turn produce uric acid. Especially is this true of sweetbreads, liver, and kidney. This, with the deficiency of lime in the flesh foods, must be made up by other foods containing this essential element.

meeting each day in the church building. Questions were asked and answered. In this way, she thinks much actual help was given by the group to those who were perplexed and uncertain.

Brother and Sister Etzenhouser were called from the reunion at Colorado Springs, Colorado, to Independence by the sudden passing of Brother Etzenhouser's mother, Sister Lucina B. Etzenhouser. Her death occurred August 6.

Altogether Sister Etzenhouser is much encouraged at the trend of the reunions this year, and with new zeal she begins her fall work for the church.

Lowbanks Reunion

By J. L. Prentice

The Lowbanks reunion of Toronto District was held at Lowbanks, Ontario, from July 26 to August 11, a very successful meeting with good attendance, especially of the young people.

The camp was called together the evening of July 26 for an organization meeting. Apostle Clyde F. Ellis and the district presidency were in charge.

The regular reunion program commenced Sunday morning with prayer service at nine o'clock, followed by preaching at eleven o'clock and again in the afternoon and evening.

The Saints were privileged to have present Bishop J. A. Koehler and Elder John Blackmore, of Independence, as well as Elder J. E. Vanderwood, district president and missionary in New York State, also Elder E. H. Doty and Patriarch John F. Martin, of our own district, and the Latter Day Saint veteran, Patriarch John Shields. Sisters Koehler, Blackmore, and Vanderwood accompanied their husbands and helped to make the reunion successful.

Week days were divided into the following activities: 8.15 to 9 o'clock, class by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, "Meaning and importance of Christian evangelism"; 9.15 to 10, prayer service; 10.15 to 11, class by Bishop Koehler, "Stewardships," special reference being given to the Atherton farm community; 11.15 to 12, class on "Religious education" by Elder John Blackmore. During the second week Elder J. E. Vanderwood had a class on "The Doctrine and Covenants." Each morning junior worship was conducted by Sister Blackmore and others.

The afternoon periods were given to sports such as baseball, horseshoe pitching, swimming, etc.

Each evening at eight o'clock, one of the missionaries preached, stressing the need for a more consecrated application in our lives of the principles of the restored gospel.

In all, there were six baptisms, and more are expected in the near future.

The gift of prophecy was manifested on several occasions, special instruction and comfort being given. The prayer meetings, generally speaking, were of good spiritual order.

The Saturday evening program of music and readings presented by local talent was entertaining. The Toronto Orchestra of young women under the leadership of Don Hutton rendered splendid selections. Eldon Oliver specialized as editor of the camp paper, The Evening Chatter.

District President J. A. Wilson, who was for a long time indisposed, spent much of his time on the grounds together with other members of the reunion committee. Sister Faulds faithfully managed the refreshment booth, while Sister Wilson had charge of the kitchen. J. V. Clark ably allotted the tents and equipment and deserves credit for the way in which this was handled. Sister Landes, of Niagara Falls, New York, had charge of the girls' activities.

We feel that mention should be made of the class of over thirty young men from Toronto. This group camped in one large tent, under the leadership of Bert Gozzard. We are expecting much in future years from these young men.

The reunion of this district means much to numbers of Saints and friends. It stimulates the desire to live better and gives a greater incentive to do our part in the church and in the establishment of Zion.

Joint Reunion of Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana and Detroit Districts

By Arthur H. DuRose

What was probably the best joint reunion of these two districts was brought to a close Sunday, August 3, at Indian Lake. Attendance was larger than at any previous reunion, there being about five hundred present part of the time; and the quality of the services and classes left nothing to be desired.

All ages were provided for in the class work. Sister Hazel Smith did some fine work with the juniors, and at the afternoon service of the closing day presented a pleasing playlet, "Zion redeemed." The young folks were directed by Brother and Sister E. E. Closson, who were indefatigable in their efforts to see that the time was profitably used and enjoyed.

Part of the Indian Lake reunion "family."

Senior classes were conducted by Apostle D. T. Williams, Elder James Pycock, and Elder Thomas L. Clarke, on such timely subjects as, "Economics as applied to the home, to the local church, and to the general church," by Elder Pycock; "Branch administration" was ably presented by Elder Clarke, of Flint. A question box by Elder Williams brought out some things which proved to be of vital interest.

Stirring sermons were delivered by the general officers and the missionaries who were present, among whom was Elder O. J. Hawn. Patriarchs F. G. Pitt and G. T. Griffiths contributed much to the reunion in stories of their experiences of an early day and their fatherly counsel.

We must not forget to mention that the physical man was well provided for under the able direction of Brother Claud Garnett, who supervised all the dining arrangements.

Elder William Osler, who was in general charge of the arrangements of the reunion, unobtrusively contributed much to its success, doing the needed thing at the needed time.

Mention must also be made of a three-act play which was presented Saturday night, August 2, by a group of girls from Flint, under the direction of Laura McNamara. This play, together with a program of musical numbers under the direction of Louise Evans, provided over three hours' entertainment of the highest caliber and was enthusiastically received.

It was unanimously agreed that another reunion be held next year, and a committee was appointed to look into the proposal to move the reunion to a more convenient location, accessible to a greater number of people, and where we may have full control of the properties.

It is safe to say that everyone went home with a feeling of gladness for both the temporal and the spiritual blessings which were so abundantly ours to enjoy.

Far West Stake Reunion

By Walter H. Cryer

Contrary to general expectations, our reunion from August 14 to 24 this year was quite largely attended. The unusual depression throughout the financial and business world prevented many families from camping the full time of the reunion, but as a rule a large attendance was had at the services.

Apostle J. A. Gillen arrived on the grounds early Friday evening, and rendered a valuable contribution to the success of the reunion. His missionary sermons each evening, though centered mostly on the nonmember attendance, went a long way toward creating a revival of the gospel spirit among all.

Patriarch W. A. McDowell preached several excellent sermons during the reunion, and in addition bestowed twelve blessings to members requesting them. The valiant testimony of this grand old witness for Christ touched deeply the hearts of those of lesser experience. May God continue to fortify him for continuous service among us.

Three classes were held this year and most ably conducted: "Children and the better social order," by Bertha Constance Woodward; "Missionary responsibilities," by Elder S. E. Miffin; and "The gospel of thrift," by Elder R. E. Jones. These classes were consistently attended and credits provided for in harmony with the requirements of the Department of Religious Education.

Sisters Pearl Leise and Vesta Stevenson had charge of the children's activities and rendered a valuable service in this connection. This is a phase of reunion work that will be more and more appreciated as time passes.

The stake exhibit booth this year was handicapped on account of the extensive drought that preceded the reunion. However, the donations on display were of fine merit and brought a remunerative return to the reunion.

The Herald tent was supervised by Elder W. S. Woodward and his wife; and due to their organized efforts the purpose and function of our church publishing house was adequately proselytized and many books sold.

The second Thursday of the reunion was set aside as Children's Day; though the weather was very cloudy and threatening, the children had a most enjoyable time. As a climax to this day a Graceland College program was held after the evening missionary sermon.

The preaching services at the reunion were of a high order. The discourse of Bishop M. H. Siegfried the first Sunday morning was a masterpiece and carried with it much force and convincing power. The message he delivered along the lines of tithing and stewardships stirred many to think anew of their responsibilities in this regard.

On two occasions Elder O. Salisbury preached to the reunion congregation and left with them a message that was appreciated.

The music of the reunion, under the supervision of Brother E. J. Ehlers, was very highly appreciated. Special numbers rendered on different occasions were fitting and edifying.

A special called conference of the stake was held Saturday afternoon, August 23, at two o'clock, to consider a recommendation from the Joint Council of the church touching a change in the presidency of the stake. Apostle J. A. Gillen, representing the First Presidency, took charge of this conference and presented the resignation of Elder O. Salisbury to be effective immediately. This was accepted by vote and a resolution of thanks tendered Brother Salisbury and his counselors for services rendered. Then the recommendation from the Joint Council of the church was presented: That Elder Ward A. Hougas be elected to succeed O. Salisbury as president of Far West Stake. This was approved by unanimous vote.

Sunday afternoon, August 24, a special ordination and installation service was held. At two o'clock in conjunction with a fitting program, Elder Ward A. Hougas was ordained to the office of high priest and at the same time set apart as president of Far West Stake under the hands of Apostle J. A. Gillen and Patriarch W. A. McDowell.

President Ward A. Hougas occupied the pulpit at the eight o'clock hour and preached the closing sermon of the reunion. On account of many of the campers having departed for their homes, the attendance at this service was not so large, but the thoughts presented by Brother Hougas, and the manner in which he delivered them, favorably impressed those present. May the Lord direct him during his ministry among us as our leader.

Central Michigan Reunion

By J. W. Peterson

The reunion of Central Michigan District was a success in every way. Attendance was about as in former years, fifty per cent being below twenty-four years of age. Financially the accounts almost balance, a remarkable fact considering the stress of the times. The custom of furnishing free meals was carried out as in former years. The branches collect money and produce throughout the year for reunion expenses. In some of the rural branches, children take interest in planting and tending gardens to feed their fellows at reunion time. Wide interest in the reunion is thus developed throughout the year, and financial success guaranteed in some measure long before the reunion convenes. This year, however, we were extremely late in preparation, there being practically nothing done six weeks before the reunion commenced. We were delayed in the matter of organization, owing to the fact that some of the workers were late in arriving, which necessitated the doubling of some class work late in the week, causing the interest to lessen. Notwithstanding their lateness, all were treated equal in their financial expenses. Next year we hope they will be on time. After arrival, many of them expressed their surprise to find such a large gathering, especially of young people, at this reunion. The first Sunday's attendance was about five hundred, and the attendance on the second much larger.

We had a good attendance at all the classes, and the number at the young people's services was remarkable. A good spirit prevailed, and the sociability was proverbial. Musical organizations in the district are practically nil. Elder Arthur Oakman worked for ten nights with a group of Beaverton Saints hoping to effect a good choir organization. But owing to lack of time, the results were not all that could be expected. However, the choir made a definite contribution, which it is hoped will be considerably enhanced at the next reunion by a consistent effort throughout the coming year on the part of the musicians in the district. There were many remarks of praise with regard to the personal contribution of Brother Oakman.

The class of Bishop J. A. Koehler was well attended, and many expressed a strong wish for more of the kind of instruction which he gave. "Family evangelism," the class conducted by Apostle D. T. Williams, should result in much good. E. E. Closson was the first of the workers on the ground, and his class was very interesting. He, together with Arthur Oakman, had charge of the young people's meetings. The recreation was not so strenuous as in former years, but we got along very well.

Three sessions of the reunion were conducted by men not of our faith. A lecture by Mr. Andrew Long, probate judge of Gladwin County, another by Mr. Laurin J. Budge, state senator-to-be, now representing Gladwin County. The closing scene of the reunion witnessed a dramatic debate inaugurated by the Anti-Saloon League on the subject, "Law enforcement." Churches from the surrounding towns dismissed their meetings to attend this debate. The large stone church, which formed the principal meeting place for the reunion, was literally "packed" for this occasion, and most of the other meetings witnessed a large attendance. Altogether, we think we had the largest reunion east of the Mississippi River.

These reunions are much appreciated by the Saints and ought to be continued. Much instruction is needed, and the class work affords splendid opportunity for diffusion of knowledge. The preaching evidenced high idealism and sound doctrinal content. A missionary experience meeting was enjoyed, and another by the missionaries was more appreciated than any other service.

A special feature of the reunion was the Graceland program, organized and conducted by Arthur Oakman. Speeches by Samuel Asche, LeRoy Dick, "Gene" Closson, and Arthur Oakman, all former students of the institution, pictured the corporate life of the college. The speeches were interspersed with musical numbers, Graceland yells, and slogans. A large amount of literature was sought by members of the audience of college age immediately at the close of the program. A play was also enjoyed prior to the program. This was put on by the Saints of Midland and was entitled "Converting Bruce."

In trying to evaluate what was accomplished, we think first of the encouragement derived from meeting together and listening to the instruction from leading churchmen. Brother Koehler's message was new to many but very greatly appreciated. Then we think of the benefit derived from our corporate life by sharing the individual experiences which have come to us. Altogether we think the district is several steps ahead as a result of the 1930 reunion.

Herald editors very much regret the misplacement in the Herald for August 27, of the Seattle and British Columbia reunion write-up. On page 982 there appears an account of this reunion of the far Northwest, written by Sister Grace Emslie. This report should have been given space in the regular "Reunion News," department of the Herald. Friends particularly interested in the Seattle and British Columbia District and former members of the region are invited to turn to page 982, Saints' Herald, August 27, to read of a very successful reunion.

Stone Church

In keeping with the chief interest of the season, "Study" was the theme of the Sunday morning sermon, one of the series Pastor John F. Sheehy is delivering to the Stone Church congregation. For a text he chose Paul's words to Timothy: "Study to show thyself approved unto God . . ."

We should acquire all the information and knowledge possible about whatever we enter or undertake in life, thinks Brother Sheehy, and so apply our learning that we may obtain divine approval. Briefly he gave the attitude of the latter-day church toward education, telling of the revelation which brought about the establishment of the school of the prophets, the study of the ministry, the early elementary schools in the church, and concluded by showing that the present attitude of the church is one supporting education and learning and finding expression in such institutions as Graceland College and the Institute of Arts and Sciences in Independence.

Musical numbers were supplied by the Wahdemna Choral Club Male Quartet and by Robert Miller at the organ. Paul N. Craig led the congregational singing. Elder W. Wallace Smith was in charge of the hour, assisted by Patriarch W. A. McDowell.

A fine response is being given by the young people of the senior department of the church school and their friends to the Wednesday evening young people's prayer services in the lower auditorium of the Stone Church. Under the leadership of Elder Mansel Williams, attendance has grown in the past few weeks to considerably more than one hundred, and the spirit which dominates the expression of all is one of peace, cooperation, and brotherhood.

Among those who have this week slipped away to immortal life are Brother Otis White, of Lamoni, Iowa, who for many days has been ill at the Sanitarium, and little Ethel Lorraine Edwards, daughter of Brother and Sister Harold C. Edwards, of Independence, who died after a brief illness.

Some of the things that you may do for and with the young people of your community named by Elder Leonard Lea at the Campus Sunday night are: Help to improve all church services, that they may more effectively serve your children; give support to the cleaning up and making attractive of homes, parks, streets in your community; see to the establishment of playgrounds with year-round programs conducted under supervised leadership; institute a campaign inducing everyone to plant and care for a garden; support good schools; seek the preservation of historical sites.

Reading words of the Prophet Hosea to Israel, Brother Lea effectively applied his discourse, "The community and the Christian home," to Independence and its community needs, setting forth the desirability of a community which will produce the highest type of citizenship of church and state.

A splendid musical program by the Auditorium Band, under the direction of Earl Cox, was thoroughly enjoyed by the congregation. Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder J. Livingston.

Those who plan to do evening high school work at the Institute of Arts and Sciences are registering at the Institute Building on the Campus. Registration commenced yesterday evening and will continue through tomorrow evening, September 4. Class work opens September 8 at seven o'clock. Courses in the high school department are being offered in English II, English IV, typewriting, shorthand, world history, zoology-botany, algebra, economics, bookkeeping, citizenship, psychology. In college subjects there are offered economics I, sociology I, psychology I, and America in civilization. Elder M. A. Etzenhouser is principal of the Institute.

Enoch Hill

The theme of the church school session Sunday morning, August 24, was "Think nobly," the text being "As a man thinketh, so is he." An excellent talk was delivered by Elder Charles Warren. Musical numbers were furnished by a quartet and by Brothers Donald Bullard and Lloyd Brewer, cornetists.

A number of the young people accompanied the local volleyball team to Kansas City Central Church, Friday evening, August 22, where they witnessed the Kansas City Stake volleyball tournament. Our team won both its assignments.

The Girl Scouts, under the leadership of Sister Don Cox, held an ice cream social on the church lawn last Friday evening. Though the district response in this event was not so great as was expected, a good time was had by those present. Games, conversation, and ice cream were the attractions of the evening.

The Saints gathered at the church the evening of August 27 for the monthly union prayer services of the groups. Brothers Joseph Martin and Charles Warren were in charge, and again the people were invited to consider the theme, "Think nobly." Word was sent to this prayer service by Pastor O. W. Sarratt that his attack of rheumatism is lessening. We hope soon to have him once more at church services.

Gudgell Park

Attendance at the sacramental service for August was average, and a good meeting was enjoyed. The local priesthood were in charge.

August 10 the Saints were happy to have as speaker Elder J. A. Robinson.

Members of this congregation and their friends met for a basket supper the evening of August 7 on the lawn of Pastor P. A. Sherman's home. After the meal the Saints went to the church, where music was furnished by members of the Walnut Park Orchestra.

It is encouraging to see the progress being made by the junior choir under the leadership of Sister Esther Hook. It is hoped that some day we, too, will have a band or orchestra. Several young people are now taking lessons on instruments.

Attendance at the Wednesday evening prayer service has been good, some of the young people being especially faithful.

Sunday morning attendance was considerably lessened, due to several families taking holiday trips. Brother Clarence Martin and his class of young people went to Blue Springs to visit the Sunday school there. A fine trip was reported and an enjoyable visit with Blue Springs Saints.

Missionary Meetings in Wetumka, Oklahoma

By Z. Z. Renfroe

The series of meetings conducted at Wetumka, Oklahoma, by Elders William Bath and Z. Z. Renfroe, closed with fair success. Only two people were brought into the kingdom, but this is the first time our message has been presented in this little oil city.

Crowds and interest were good in spite of the extreme heat. The tent, which held approximately three hundred, was filled several evenings, and cars were parked where the occupants could hear.

We were met by some opposition. An attack was made by a minister of a local congregation and was nicely answered by Brother Bath.

The ministers were happy to have the support of visiting Saints from Weleeka and Holdenville, also of Brother and Sister S. W. Simmons.

The song service was in charge of Elder C. G. Smallwood, missionary from Eastern Oklahoma District, and Miss Edyth Skinner, of Oklaunion, Texas, who furnished splendid music, helping in great measure to make our series a success.

It is the opinion of the writer that if this effort is followed next year, a great harvest will be reaped.

Brooklyn, New York

Park Place and Schenectady Avenue

August 22.—The Women's Department held its annual strawberry festival and food sale in the church basement the evening of June 17. A good crowd was in attendance, and a splendid program was offered. The program was opened with an original song composed for the occasion by Sister Harriet Swanton and sung by the Women's Department. The remainder of the program was given in the manner of a radio program, with George Potts, jr., as announcer. It consisted of a vocal solo by Dorothy Potts, humorous reading by Dorothy Elliott; saxophone solo by George Potts, jr.; a dialog, "Mr. and Mrs.," given by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Squire, and a duet by George and Dorothy Potts.

Friday, June 20, at eight o'clock in the evening, occurred the wedding of Ethel Waterhouse and Glenn Parrish. The wedding took place at the church, with Pastor Elliott officiating. The march was played by Sister Ephraim Squire, and a solo, "Because," was sung by Amy Glassford, Sister Gladys Harris, accompanist. Ada Schenk and Maynard Beardsley acted as bridesmaid and best man. The young couple spent a three weeks' honeymoon trip through the Middle West, visiting in Lamoni and Independence.

Preceding his departure for England, Apostle Paul M. Hanson gave an interesting illustrated lecture on his travels among the ruins of Central America and Mexico.

Brother Peter Anderson stopped in Brooklyn en route to his mission in the Scandinavian countries. He was accompanied by Brother Fred Davies, who was returning to his home in England after two years at Graceland.

Brother Charles R. Hield sailed to Europe July 2, on board the S. S. America. Brother Hield has been an instructor in the New York University for the past three years, and his trip abroad is made in connection with his work there. He expects to visit all the principal cities of western Europe, and will be away until about September 20. On the Sunday preceding his departure, he was given a parting gift by the Brooklyn Sunday School, of which he is superintendent.

The church in Brooklyn was closed during the district reunion, July 12 to 27, inclusive. Several people from our branch spent the week-ends at the reunion, and a few stayed the entire time. Although the reunion was not as largely attended as it has been in the past few years, those who were there with full purpose of heart were gratified by the results.

Saturday, August 9, the Temple Builders gave a supper and beach party. Supper was served at the home of Pastor T. J. Elliott, with bathing at a near-by beach. There were thirty-five people present, and expressions like this were heard: "We should have more of these socials."

Sunday, August 10, Brother Ammon White visited Brooklyn and gave an inspiring sermon at the morning service. The following Sunday Brother Arthur Mills came our way. He occupied during the morning hour with the interesting subject, "Music and song."

Living in the great metropolis, we meet many of the church representatives. For this we are grateful, though we think many times their stay is all too short.

The pastor is busy planning the fall work in keeping with the general church program. We shall be glad when vacations have ended and all our members return home.

H. M. MOUSLEY.

Detroit, Michigan

From Detroit's Beacon Light

Two or three days of the past month have reminded the Saints in Detroit of fall weather, and the thoughts of fall bring to mind the planning of the activities of the fall season when everyone has returned from vacations ready to renew church work. No man seeks to build a house except first he plans that house. He then puts his plan on paper in the form of a blue print, and he knows before a move is made the size of the house, the amount of material required, the cost of that material, how it is to be used, the time required in the building, and how the house will look when completed. So we seek to build for the autumn and winter months, and through the instrumentality and special activity of the priesthood, especially the group pastors and city officers, and the program of religious education, we are going to give our best in kingdom of God building here on earth.

Reports from the various groups and divisions in the city tell us that the Saints at Wyandotte, at River Rouge, at East Side, and at Roseville are happy in their work.

Emphasis was given the midweek prayer service a number of weeks ago. Summer months are apt to be discouraging months for pastors. The warm weather of summer draws many from the city to cooler spots over the week-end, and for this reason all were urged to attend and participate in the midweek service. The pastor presented at First Church several topics under the main subject, "Man's highway to God." The first four of these topics were: "Does God recognize me?" "What is my standing with God?" "Would God choose me?" and "Whither goest thou?" Attendance at these services increased over three hundred per cent.

The high points of social events at First Church during the past few weeks have been: The publicity banquet at the home of Elder George N. Booth, publicity agent, July 11. Eighteen members of the publicity department were present, only four being unable to attend.

The choir spent July 4 at the cottage of its former director, Sister Mina Townsend, at Case's Island, Long Lake, Michigan.

Following the commencement exercises at the University of Michigan June 23, Sister Margaret Miller gave a lawn party at her home in the evening, in honor of her son, Edwin G. Miller, who that day graduated from the Law Department at Ann Arbor. In a class of over three hundred graduates, Edwin ranked among the sixteen highest.

Margaret Ayers, daughter of Brother and Sister P. L. Ayers, won first place in the Michigan State declamatory contest last spring. Three hundred high schools participated in the contest. Margaret is a sophomore in high school, where she participated in many extra-curricular activities in addition to her regular studies. She has won other honors in her school and is active in the branch. Her photograph and a brief write-up of her work appeared in July Vision.

A pretty wedding occurred June 23 at First Church when Miss Vera Stocks and Mr. Jack Beaudett were united in marriage by Elder George H. Booth. The bride was attended by Miss Maxine Talberg and Miss Ella Thiel; Mr. Roy Martin acted as best man, and Mr. Grant Davis as groomsman. The bride was given in marriage by her brother. A pleasing program of music preceded the ceremony, and after the service about fifty members of the immediate families were given a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

James Emmett Lancaster, jr., is the name given by Pastor J. Emmett Lancaster and his wife, Helen, to their firstborn who arrived July 8. A son, Robert James, jr., came to the home of Brother and Sister James Green June 25.

Much enlightenment was shed on the subject of the newly created Department of Religious Education by Elders John Blackmore, head of the adult division for the general church, and Leslie E. Flowers, associate editor of Vision, at the religious education institute held for the Chatham and Detroit Districts, June 20, 21, and 22. The institute was well attended, and all noted the spirit and enthusiasm of these two young brothers in promulgating the newer ideas of the church toward development.

Elder and Sister Hubert Case left for a short vacation trip to their home in Independence, Missouri, July 21.

Kansas City Stake

Argentine Church

The morning speaker August 24 was Patriarch Ammon White. His discourse was full of wisdom and admonition and was delivered with power.

That evening Brother E. P. Sanders spoke instructively concerning the perpetuity of life.

The following Sunday morning Elder Ralph Goold, pastor of Armourdale Church, spoke on loyalty to all the Lord's appointments.

In the evening, Stake President Cyril E. Wight based a splendid preaching effort on Matthew 20: 22, the answer to the mother of the sons of Zebedee.

Armourdale Church

Recent speakers have been J. M. Terry, F. G. Christy, C. E. Wight, J. O. Worden, and George Mesley.

The Boy Scout organization meeting was held the evening of August 24. Brother Frank Tuttle was in charge. There were two installations.

August 31 H. W. Goold was the speaker in the morning and Patriarch Ammon White at night.

A water melon social was held the evening of August 28. Proceeds amounted to more than thirteen dollars. This sum will be applied to the expense of the Recreation Department.

Wells, Michigan

Sunday, August 24, the pastor had the privilege of administering baptism to another young person. This makes seven children who have complied with the gospel soon after they reached the age of eight years. This candidate was the last of a family to join. The service of baptism took place just preceding the Sunday evening meeting. To look out over the bay with its pine-trimmed shores was an inspiration. A small company of Saints gathered, the faces of the members alight with joy, as they watched Brother Boomer baptize his young daughter.

After retiring to the church, a short missionary program was presented by the members. The educational content of the program was a good reflection of what the new plan of religious education is accomplishing in this local.

Confirmation was provided for in the program. A short talk was first given by Pastor Boomer, who discussed the responsibility of parents, superintendents, teachers, and members in the training of the young.

Pastor Boomer had looked forward to attending the district reunion at the Park of the Pines. Business delayed him, however, and he expected to be present toward the close of the gathering. But one of our number, Sister James King, superintendent of the Women's Department, suddenly fell ill. The doctor pronounced her case serious, and said that an operation was necessary to save her life, and that then there was only one chance in a thousand. Our sister sought administration, having much faith in the mercy and healing of God. The pastor was at her bedside whenever needed, and the results of the prayers of faith in the branch have been encouraging. She is on her way to recovery. Surely this experience has made all of the members realize God's goodness more than ever before. We are led to appreciate more fully our good health and to give of our services in the cause of Christ.

Southern Indiana District Conference

The conference of Southern Indiana District was held in Derby Branch August 16 and 17.

One of the important items of business was the election of district officers for the ensuing year: President, District Missionary J. O. Dutton, Galva, Illinois; Brother Dutton selected as counselors Elders H. W. Burwell, Louisville, Kentucky, and Arthur W. Gage, Indianapolis, Indiana; secretary, Nita Rae Ferguson, Louisville; treasurer, Bishop's Agent W. O. Robertson, Louisville; Sunday school superintendent, Sister E. Huston Glenn, Gerald, Indiana; her assistant to be Sister Grace Bennett, Centerton, Indiana; head of the department of Recreation and Expression, Morgan Stacy, Louisville; head of the Women's Department, Louise Welch, Louisville; chorister, J. O. Dutton, Galva; organist, Edna S. Gage, Indianapolis; treasurer of departments, Margaret Stacy, Louisville. It was unanimously voted to sustain Bishop's Agent W. O. Robertson.

On account of business conditions and the long dry season in this region, attendance was not what we would like to have seen. Nevertheless, the conference was dominated by the best of spirit and the programs progressed smoothly. Surely there were many things done to help and encourage those attending.

The conference voiced itself in perfect harmony with the program of the church, and this year we are resolved, even though we are few in number, to try in every way to advance this program.

San Francisco, California

Little Brown Church, Caselli and Danvers

Sacramental service, August 3, was a quiet, peaceful, spiritual feast to all. Despite the fact that it was vacation season, a goodly number was present, and each testimony seemed to be a blessing to all. Northern California District greatly feels the absence of the reunion joys this year, but nearly all feel that it is for the best.

The young people's camp at Irvington, August 6 to 10, was largely attended by our San Francisco young people, and the help and encouragement they received can not be measured in words. Their motto, "Laborers together with God," means a great deal to them, and we feel that the young have made a long step upward.

The Happy Hour Club was more than pleased to be able to donate the services of their moving picture machine, and there were pictures every night at the camp. They were also made happy by the fact that they carried home the cup from Oakland Branch after the track meet on Saturday afternoon.

Brother G. P. Levitt was with us and preached both morning and evening on the 17th of August. In the morning of that date a beautiful confirmation service took place in our branch, which ushered into the kingdom our friend and brother who in the past year has become endeared to the Saints here, Brother Loren Schaffer. The baptism took place on Saturday evening, August 16, the ordinance being performed by Brother Levitt. We feel sure this brother will be a great help.

A tiny babe was brought to earth on August 5, and left in the home of Brother and Sister Ernest Boynton. She has been named Elizabeth Ann.

Our pastor, Brother J. A. Saxe, and family, have been spending their vacation at Donner Lake.

San Francisco wishes all branches joy and gladness in this beautiful gospel which we are privileged to enjoy.

Holden Stake

Atherton

Recently a large delegation of Saints from Kansas City Stake visited the stewardship farms, and in the evening Brother George Mesley preached, using as his subject, "Your number on your street is you." Special music was rendered by some Kansas City young people.

For three consecutive Sunday evenings the Enoch Hill ministry occupied in Atherton and furnished the music. Brothers J. E. Martin, Charles Warren, and O. W. Sarratt occupied. The sermons were appreciated by all. Brother Sarratt told us some of the foods which are adulterated and how, showing the necessity of closely making a study of our foods and observing the Word of Wisdom.

August 24 Brother J. A. Bozarth occupied. He said that our task is to build Zion and to seek to bring forth the kingdom and its righteousness.

In the evening Brother A. H. Christensen preached, choosing as a text Lamentations 3:26: "It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the Lord." His elaboration on this text was very helpful.

Brother and Sister Myron Holman and family, from Maine, have just located in Atherton.

August 14 added another page to our history. On that day the whole branch celebrated its ninth annual picnic at Swope Park. The children always look forward to this day, which seems to be a fixed part of our activities in recreation.

Marshall

The local priesthood faithfully respond when asked by the pastor to occupy the pulpit. Brother Will S. Ridge spoke Sunday morning, August 24, and Brother Ralph M. Ridge at night.

Sister Dixie Spohrer now superintends the junior church, and Pastor T. L. McCormick often gives them a talk, which greatly pleases them.

The Department of Recreation and Expression gave an ice cream social on the church lawn in August. The primaries, juniors, and beginners recently enjoyed a picnic dinner on the Missouri Valley College Campus.

Brother and Sister E. L. McCormick are living at Holden now, where E. L. has a position with the Economy Department Store and Sister El Marie is secretary in the Holden Stake Office.

Brother Ellis Rathbun was home a few days from his meetings at Blue Springs and Bates City. He has gone to Buckner to present a series of meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. McCormick, Walter McCormick, and Zella James assisted in the Square Deal Dining Hall at the State Fair.

Good Word from England

By John W. Worth

London, England, August 13.—The British Isles reunion was held August 2, 3, and 4, and no doubt will be properly reported. I would like to say that from all points it was by far the most successful we have experienced. A beautiful spiritual influence was present throughout all sessions, and the young people's devotional service on Monday morning was a fine experience of the power of God.

We felt privileged to have President F. M. McDowell and Apostles Paul M. Hanson and F. Henry Edwards with us, and their fine teaching was much appreciated. President McDowell's personal association with both the old and young has been greatly uplifting.

I feel it a privilege to be connected with the church and its wonderful work. Surely it is "a marvelous work and a wonder." My greatest desire is that wisdom, courage, and determination may be with each Saint, that God's purposes may be fulfilled.

The general condition of things may not be what we desire; yet God is at the helm and will direct and work out his own will, if we will rise (though it be by sacrifice) to do our part. I have been a member of the church for over thirty years, and I can say that my love for the work is greater than ever. I trust that nothing shall ever cause me to lose my love for God and his work. Words fail me to state the blessings I have received.

The church in Enfield is making steady progress. Our pastor, J. A. Judd, is a very energetic worker and sacrifices much for the work.

My humble prayer shall be for all those who are seeking to bring about the purposes of God in these latter days.

London, Ontario

Brother and Sister Ray Clatworthy, of Bridgeburg, Ontario, was in attendance at our prayer service last Sunday morning. They were the guests of Brother and Sister Art Ridley.

Brother Charles G. Timbrell has been suffering from blood poisoning in his face. The affliction is reduced, and we expect Brother Tom to be at the services again soon.

Brother Robert Heddington, one of our Sunday school boys, had the misfortune to break his arm last week. His recovery was hastened through administration.

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized recently at the home of Brother and Sister Thomas Armstrong, when their youngest daughter, Jessie, became the bride of Brother A. Renecker. Pastor J. E. MacGregor officiated.

Our branch is again taking care of the dining hall at the western fair under the direction of the finance committee. Brothers T. G. Timbrell and J. Vashbinder have the matter in charge. The revenue from this source is a great help to our branch.

Quite a number of the Saints have returned from their vacations, and our church services are showing a larger attendance. Several of our young people were in attendance at the Erie Beach reunion. All report good, educational meetings.

Our pulpit of late has been occupied by Elders J. E. MacGregor (pastor), F. Gray, J. F. Winegarden, and Bishop J. C. Dent. Last Sunday evening Elder F. Gray gave a forceful discourse on the law of tithing.

Lamar, Nebraska

Chase County, Nebraska, Branch

Regular Sunday morning and evening services have been carried on since March 1, at which time was the opening of our new church home.

May 18 Brother H. E. Winegar began a series of meetings which continued till June 1. The splendid sermons were enjoyed very much by the Saints, and many nonmembers were reluctant to see them closed.

Our branch was invited to spend June 29 with the Saints at Wray, Colorado. About thirty-five of our number responded to the invitation. Brother Ward A. Hougas was the speaker at both morning and afternoon services, and gave two very fine sermons.

Sunday school and communion service occupied the forenoon of July 6. After a basket dinner, the congregation drove to the creek where three young boys were baptized. On returning to the church a junior service was held, after which Brother Hougas confirmed the boys members of the church.

August 3 marked another great day in our branch, yet it was a sad one for the reason that Brother Hougas resigned as branch president and pastor. We regret very much to

We wish to express our appreciation for the faithful service rendered by Brother Van Trump while acting as bishop's agent.

Brother Condit's appointment has already received the unanimous approval of the Idaho district conference, and we feel confident the Saints of the district will continue to give him their loyal support, that their united efforts shall bring satisfaction to them and benefit to the church.

LINDBERG-GATES.—Elsie Irene Lindberg, daughter of A. T. Lindberg, of Leeds, Massachusetts, and Joseph Israel Gates, son of Mrs. Minnie Davison Gates, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, were married August 2 at 4 o'clock at the First Congregational Church by the Reverend Basil Douglas Hall. The double-ring service was used. The wedding marches were played by George C. Vieh, organist of the church, and solos were sung by Mrs. Kathleen La Fleur. The maid of honor was Miss Stella Anderson; the matron of honor, Mrs. Stanley Astell, of Mount Vernon, New York, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaids Miss Helen Sanders, of Hartford, Connecticut, cousin of the bride; Mrs. Harry Turner, of Providence, Rhode Island; Miss Lillian Reardon, of South Manchester, Connecticut, cousin of the bride; and Mrs. Arthur Knofta, of South Manchester. The best man was Albert M. Gates, of Philadelphia; and the ushers, Charles G. Denny, of Springfield, and George S. Pepperell, Richard L. Gibbs, and Stanley P. Astell, of New York. The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of the bride, attended by one hundred and fifty guests, including friends and relatives from New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Connecticut. The house

The first session of the day was Sunday school. This was followed by installation services, at which time B. J. Peters was installed as branch president and pastor. We are very thankful to have such a capable man as Brother Peters to take charge of the work here.

The regular communion service followed. Visitors from a distance included R. E. Vincent and family, of Otis, Colorado. Brother Vincent is bishop's agent for this district.

The afternoon session was in charge of Brother Vincent, Brother Hougas delivering the sermon.

Brother H. E. Winegar stopped on his way home from the North Platte reunion, and gave a fine sermon in the evening, which was enjoyed by all attending.

She was married August 1, 1854. To this union were born fourteen children; eight of these and the husband and father preceded her to the other side. She leaves to mourn her departure three sons and three daughters, forty-one grandchildren, forty-seven great-grandchildren, and six great-great-grandchildren besides other relatives and many friends. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints October 30, 1909, and was faithful to death. The life interests of the deceased centered about her home. Her church membership was her only outside interest. She lived a simple, unselfish life, giving of herself to her family and the needs of others. The funeral was in charge of Elder F. A. Smith, assisted by Leonard Steigel, from the Saints' church. Burial was in Mannon Cemetery.

INDEPENDENCE BRANCH SCHOOL

Is Now Starting Its Third Successful Year's Work.

This school, though not an institution of the church, has been prompt to recognize the church's attitude and high standard in education, and has affiliated its Independence interests with our educational plans. It uses for its work our own "Campus" building and the profits accruing go to the benefit of that building's work. Saints therefore should feel the importance of sustaining its interests rather than those outside.

All branches of music and expression taught by experienced, trained instructors.

Particular attention is called to our CLASS LESSON PLAN FOR BEGINNERS. Classes are in charge of highly competent instructors, specially trained for this work. Progress is always gratifying. This plan is recommended for those wanting the best in instruction but who can not afford the higher fees of eminent teachers, or for those who may wish to determine the talent and aptitude of a child.

Amy Earnestworker was at a picnic in Downer's Grove, overlooking the lake. She held a chicken sandwich in one hand and a glass of lemonade in the other. Amy was taking a twenty-four-hour leave of absence from the Battle with the Calories. Between bites she was talking to her neighbor, Mrs. Waye T. While.

"Did you read that fine article in last week's Herald by Brother X——?" asked Amy.

"No," said her companion; "my subscription ran out last month, and it stopped coming."

"Dear me!" said Amy, finishing the sandwich in one bite and hauling out a receipt book, "that will never do. I never prophesy, but I think you're going to part with two dollars for a year's subscription right now."

Sister Waye T. While smiled and parted with the two dollars.

We wish there were more women like Amy.

Thoughts on the Passing of Otis White

As one who has passed by several years the span of the average life, I am, of course, experiencing in common with others of my years the sorrow contingent upon the rapid passing of friends and loved ones. Persons are not dying today at a more rapid rate than fifty years ago; in fact, the rate may be lower. But the pangs of grief consequent on the decease of an acquaintance, relative, or associate are sharpened when the passing is one which breaks the ties which have been strengthened by years of companionship, official relationship, or close friendship. And the rupture of such ties seems to come with greater frequency when the years of average life have been reached. Of course it is the working of the laws of average.

It is to be expected, therefore, that as one "travels down the other side" towards the sunset years of life he will find the ranks of his friends and associates of his own years growing thinner, while the ties which bind him to the "realms of shade" grow apace as the number of "friends gone on before" steadily increases.

I can more easily understand because of experiences passed through in recent years, and even months, the deep-running emotion expressed by my father a few years before his decease, when he quietly but feelingly said, "You know, son, that the call to the other shore grows stronger; for now there are more of us over there than are here." It was from out the depths of these emotions that he drew the verses which he wrote several years ago, "The lights on the other shore."

New friends are appreciated, and how good it is to experience the joy of new friendships formed to take their place beside the old ones; but equality of age seems to be a strong factor in forming the ties that bind hearts of kindred souls, so that with advancing age newly formed friendships and companionships grow less in numbers and in strength of ties.

So while the beauties of senescence are compensatory, it seems to be the fate of man to travel the road of "old age" with a growing degree of loneliness. And who can say this is not good and well within the providences of Deity? He who would approach his grave "like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams" must feel, among other emotions, the pull of "the lights on the other shore." F. M. S.

Remember College Day!

On Friday, September 5, Graceland College opened its doors for the thirty-sixth year of its service to the young people of the church and their friends. Following close upon this opening comes College Day—Sunday, September 14.

Back in 1917 General Conference passed a resolution looking with favor upon the adoption of a scholarship loan plan for Graceland. As a result of this action one Sunday each year has been set aside as College Day and observed throughout the general church. Special offerings taken at this time are added to the Scholarship Fund, to be loaned to worthy young men and women who wish to continue their education.

College Day this year comes a little earlier than usual, and will have the advantage of being observed while the business of starting in to school again is generally "in the air." Now is the logical and the psychological time to give thought and attention to the work of own college.

As the former students and other friends of the college participate in the programs of College Day, they should set forth clearly just how the Graceland Scholarship Loan Fund works; this has not always been done. It is a revolving, a perpetual fund; the principal is not used up or given away, but is loaned to students who are in need of such help and who have been certified as worthy and dependable. Each student who receives a loan to defray his tuition expenses, after leaving school and taking up employment, repays his loan with interest, and the Fund is thus reimbursed and ready to help another student. Wherever it is possible program directors for College Day should ask students who have borrowed from the Scholarship Fund to explain just how it functions.

Graceland College faces the most important year of its history; as President Briggs would say (and probably has said already!), this promises to be the best year in the history of the institution! And why not? For each new year is the most important, because it lies still ahead, and surely every endeavor should be put forward to make it the best. In this all friends of the college may have a part.

The college library has been moved from the old Administration Building to Briggs Hall, a fireproof structure. Standard, up-to-date library equipment has been installed, and one glimpse of the reading room impresses one with the fact that the college offers this year a remarkable improvement in library facilities. Walker Hall, for the women, and Herald Hall, for the men, welcome the students to dormitory homes either new or thoroughly redecorated. (Even "Old Marietta" has undergone some startling renovations!)

"Freshman Days" began with the opening of college last Friday, and by Saturday afternoon about one hundred new students had passed through the registration lines. Receptions and other "ice-breaking" affairs were in session, and the new freshmen seemed to be having a good time getting acquainted with one another and with the community in which they are to spend the next nine months of their lives. Sunday found many of the upper classmen returning; and by now things are undoubtedly settling into regular schedule. The college is beginning another year of work.

The people of the church have always been zealous in support of the college and the young people whom the college serves. They have never failed when the call for help came. Sunday, September 14, is the day for this year's pledge of loyalty to the church college. Those who can not attend branch programs on College Day should send their offerings to the treasurer of the college, at Lamoni, Iowa.

To the alumni, to the people of the church, to the friends of Graceland everywhere: Remember College Day!

Young People's Institute in Northeastern Kansas

The young people of this district are making plans for a two-day institute during September. There will be four class periods conducted by Brother E. E. Closson for which Certification Credit will be given. Recreational and social activities will be stressed, and a worship service is being planned for Sunday morning. The young people of this district invite others to participate with them in this experience. Watch next week's Herald for further details.

Wanting to Work

Sometimes a good story will teach a lesson more effectively than a sermon will. Not long ago we heard such a story from a friend, and we are passing it on to our readers. It applies to church people as well as to business people.

A thrifty brother of our town, wishing to do something to help relieve the unemployment situation of which he had heard so much, went around to see some of those who were crying the loudest for work.

"I hear you want some work," he said to one of the indigent complainers. The man's eyes brightened, and his face assumed a look of pathetic pleading.

"Yes, I sure do," he said fervently.

"What kind of work will you do?" pursued the good brother.

"Anything. Anything," responded the other earnestly.

Now the jobless man knew that it would be much nicer to draw wages for sitting in a chair at the brother's filling station than to draw nothing for sitting in a chair at home.

"Come down to the house in the morning. I have a big garden in the back yard that needs hoeing."

The man's face fell.

"Why," said he, "I thought you meant a job at the filling station!"

"No, I just want the garden hoed. But it will give you two days' work. I'd like to have it done right away. Can you be down in the morning?"

The man twisted in his seat. He was quite evidently annoyed at prospect of leaving it for a job that required work.

"Well, I suppose I can, but I'm pretty busy these days!" He never went near the garden.

The good brother, still wishing to help, went to four other unemployed men. Their reactions were all monotonously alike. None of them wanted to hoe the garden. The brother was not too lazy to hoe his own garden. He had only wished to help. But finally he was forced to get out and hoe it himself in order to save it.

The five men are still looking for "work."

Every church has some people like this. They want to be put to work. But they won't pay tithing, they can't preach, they refuse to teach, and they are too busy to work on the committees.

It is a good thing that this kind of person is not numerous, but there are far too many of them.

Graceland Makes Men of the Future

By Roy A. Cheville

No one has a fool-proof method of developing men and women. In fact, few are certain just what sort of folk they want developed. But this thing we do know—men are rounded out by the sum total of social contacts. Therefore we try to provide wholesome and stimulating environment that will bring about the type of persons desired. We call this education.

The Aims of Education

A college should be engaged in making men. Its academic learning, its social life, and its athletic competition should be directed toward "the real business of living." In the complete program of college life there should be provision for all phases of a balanced life.

There is something attractive and intensely vital about the following division of the phases of education. In imaginary conversation a master asks of his pupils, "What would you learn of me?" And they reply:

- "How shall we care for our bodies?
- How shall we rear our children?
- How shall we work together?
- How shall we live with our fellow men?
- How shall we play?
- For what ends shall we live?"

As I have pondered over the work of our college institution in its task of making men of the future, I have considered the foregoing phases of life, essential parts of our complete program. Graceland must train men and women for health, family life, economic life, civic life, recreational life, and religious life.

The Church's Challenge

Quite often presiding leaders of the church from pulpit or press state their reliance upon Graceland for future leadership. They imply reference to both capability and disposition. Sometimes I used to think there was a tinge of oratorical effect in all this. But a little better insight into the spirit and purpose of the church and a few years of close contact with the college itself have convinced me that there is more than poetic talk in it. It implies a keener responsiveness to this responsibility on the part of the corps of college leaders and the large body of supporters.

The church supports an institution of learning that it may train its on-coming leaders in well-rounded living. It asks that youth be healthy, vocationally efficient, social minded in civic life, interested in promotion of happy family life, and habitually enriched by wholesome recreational life. To do this, the church asks of Graceland that it be dominated by and inspired by the spirit of religion in all its departments.

No Short-cut Possible

Every year students come to Graceland who want a one-year route to life training. Often they are persons whose coming has been marked by struggle and sacrifice. Their hearts yearn to give of their energies to the church. At the college we respect them. But the situation has to be seen in large perspective. The church is wanting youth who are balanced on all sides and specialized in some field for efficiency's sake. It also wants these youth to be fired by a religious purpose. All this does not come in a year.

We are finding that the most effective way of developing social-minded and religion-inspired folk is through letting this atmosphere permeate all fields of training. In the recognition of this fact, Graceland has her right to exist. She will offer introductory training for the essential fields of our social program and characterize all with a tone that we call "Zionic." To do this, patron, instructor, and student must combine.

The Men to Be Made

Immediate years should return to the church teachers who bring to their schoolrooms intellectual capability and radiation of social sympathy and insight. They should send out wives and husbands who sense the sanctity of home hearth and who know how to manage a household. There should go out young men and women of business who can manage the industrial projects of our day and return their energies in social channels. Professional men of research and altruistic spirit should be sent forth. We should train and inspire artists who can portray for us and to us the beauties of our universe. We are needing scores of young men and women trained in religious thought and method and warmed by the Restoration message.

These youth will not spring up out of ethereal pipe dreams. They will come from environments that stimulate and train toward these vocations and patterns of living. Every year such as these are taking their places. The years of the future ask Graceland to shape such as these and to increase their numbers and their offerings.

Consolation and Hope

For the funeral service of Alonzo Whiting two of his friends and associates in church work were requested to speak, and Elder H. O. Smith offered prayer. The remarks of Patriarchs T. C. Kelley and F. A. Smith are here given. Reported by Gladys Gould. Services August 20, 1930.

LIFE VICTORIOUS OVER DEATH

By Patriarch T. C. Kelley

When a good man dies, it most always makes me think of Paul's statement to the Philippians, where he says: "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain."

If this be true, then why should we weep or mourn over the departure of one who, like our brother, is in a condition also to receive gain, and not loss, by passing through death? We are too apt to look upon our own loss and forget the gain of those who leave us and go on to better things.

There is something in the doctrine of immortality that we do not want to lose sight of, for the doctrine of immortality is the basis of all religious hope. Byron puts it in this form: "I feel my immortality o'ersweep all pains, all tears, all time, all fears; and, like the eternal thunders of the deep, peal to my ears this truth—thou livest for ever!"

On one occasion when a little girl had passed away, the Savior came to those who were saddened and in deep sorrow over it, as we today are in sadness and sorrow over the departure of Brother Whiting, and he said, "The maid is not dead, but sleepeth." We might not be able to make plain to anybody just our thought as to what the Savior here meant to convey, but he did certainly mean that there was some sense in which the maid was not dead. She had passed through what our brother has passed through and what millions have passed through and yet in some sense was not dead, but living still. The Savior expressed the idea when he was talking to Martha, "He that liveth and believeth in me shall never die." If that were made to apply to the body and our physical life, it would be hard to believe, wouldn't it? But if there is something that lives for ever about us, though the body, the outer man perishes and dies, yet still something within, an immortal spirit that lives for ever, then I think the Savior's remark is easy to understand. He made the same statement regarding Lazarus, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth." They didn't seem to understand him, and finally he said plainly, "Lazarus is dead."

Our brother is dead today, and yet he lived and believed in Christ and has the promise of Christ himself that he shall never die. If I understand the meaning of this statement of the Savior, those who accept it as true have strong grounds upon which to base a belief in immortality, and a hope of salvation as the gospel holds it out to us. Why should we mourn? Why should we weep around the tomb? Why should we—when a good man passes out, and his passing is his eternal gain—why should we be too much affected by our own loss to rejoice in this his gain?

Cicero is said to have made use of these words: "There is, I know not why, in the minds of men a certain presage as it were of a future existence, and this takes the deepest root and is most discoverable in the greatest geniuses and most exalted souls." Now that is a wonderful statement. I believe it is true. "A certain presage of a future existence takes deepest root and is most discoverable in the greatest geniuses, the most exalted souls." And if that be true, and I think it is, our hope of continuation of life for our brother who is now dead as to the body, is confirmed, and we should not be so affected, I repeat, by our own loss as to overlook the gain that is coming and has come to him.

Dana says: "A voice within us speaks that startling word, 'Man, thou shalt never die!' Celestial voices hymn it to our souls; according harps, by angel fingers touched, do sound forth still the song of great immortality."

Do we realize it? Do we sense it? Do we sense how great is the gain that must certainly come to the man who spends his life in the cause of humanity, in the cause of truth, in the cause of the church, the body of Christ? A man who spends his life thus never dies, and "though he were dead yet shall he live" again. These words the Savior gives us in his effort to comfort Martha and Mary when their brother died.

It must be sad indeed for those who have no hope of continued life after death, or even in death, or no hope of future existence—it must, I say, be sad when loved ones are taken from them. To them it means the end of all. To us it is quite different. To us it is the entrance into greater life.

Jesus says: "I am come that they might have life, and have it more abundantly." And while there may be a sense in which this more abundant life may be enjoyed here and now, yet in a still higher and better sense, in a still better condition, in a still better realization on the other side, the more abundant life may be had and enjoyed by those who have died and yet live again, by those whose spirits never die, but they have been faithful and true and have place near the throne and have the more abundant, unending life. We believe our brother's record is just that which entitles us to believe that he is one of these. Why not?

My first acquaintance with him was an experience of abiding in his home for a time during a series of meetings, and from that time to this I have not found a weakening in his faith nor a desire to depart and be with the world again. I was not with him during his sickness, but almost as if I had been and had heard it with my ears, I can hear him say that he had a desire to depart and be with Christ but not to depart and be with the world again.

Frank M. Duffy, in Original Thoughts, gives us some beautiful reflections:

"If we are destined for oblivion at the end of this life, why does the soul so anxiously strive to penetrate the veil that hides the sacred things of eternity?" Because we can not see as clearly as we would like to see, because we can not demonstrate the truth of the home beyond to reach which we are striving; because we can not do this, some scout the idea of its existence and say that death ends all, but if it does, "If this frail existence constitutes all of life, why educate and train the soul with lessons of meekness and piety? If faith unites the faithful but to part, why is their memory sacred to the heart? Why is it we love and remember bright and beautiful objects that so soon pass away; why is it the lights and shadows of life affect the nature and engrave their image on the character of the soul? Why is it the rainbow and cloud come over us with a beauty not of earth and then pass away and leave us to gaze on their fading loveliness? Why is it the stars which hold their nightly festivals round the midnight throne are placed above the reach of our limited faculties, for ever mocking us with their unapproachable glory? And why is it that bright forms of human beauty are presented to our view, and then taken from us, leaving the thousand streams of affection to flow in alpine torrents upon our hearts?"

It would seem almost cruel if that were true, would it not? Beautiful human forms given to us for a little while, taken from us never to meet again, never to experience life again, never to experience being again. It would be cruel. Why should we have such strong desire to meet again if it is never to be realized?

Mr. Duffy continues: "We are born of a higher destiny than that of earth. There is a realm where the rainbow never fades, where the stars are ever bright, and the sun shines eternally for their light. There is a truth in the resurrection. The promise of eternal life is a reality. There is a home for the faithful where the pure in heart shall ever rest with God."

Our brother is taken from our midst now. We must part with him, but this does not mean his oblivion, nor when we pass through the vale will it mean oblivion for us. But there is truth in the resurrection, in the life beyond, and so we are permitted to remain that we might use our best endeavor to prepare for death while we are here, while the sun shines for us and the stars are beautiful overhead, and while the rain falls betimes to gladden the earth and give us food and things essential to our life and happiness and pleasure. It is for us to dedicate ourselves anew to the gospel life and continue to the end. We may not be permitted to go four score years and a little over as our brother did, but whether it comes soon or whether it comes later, it will come, and we should be prepared.

To the relatives let me say, Be of good courage and of valiant spirit. The victory will come by and by, and happy reunion and renewal of pleasant association will be given you. May heavenly peace come to your troubled souls to aid and assist you in carrying your burden of sorrow is my prayer.

PASSING TO THE ETERNAL HOME

By Patriarch Frederick A. Smith

My association with this brother began in 1902, twenty-eight years ago. I have learned to love him, to respect him, to have confidence in him, because of his integrity and his faithfulness in the great service of the Master that we have served together.

There are one or two verses of scripture that come to my mind that seem to apply nicely today: "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, for they shall rest from their labors, and their works shall follow them."

The other one is found in the Doctrine and Covenants, "Blessed are the dead that die in me, for their death shall be sweet."

Our brother's life has been one devoted not only to the Master's cause but to the good of others around him and with him. He has been respected, loved, and honored by those who have known him. He has known the strenuous hardships and trials of a pioneer life, the disappointments that came because of misleading conditions, but through it all and through every trial his faith in God has triumphed, and he has never lost sight of his Master and the service that he should render to him. So I can feel that it is blessed for him to die in the Master. I can have confidence that he looked forward, as our brother has said, to the thought that death does not end all, but that he should live again, that he should meet his loved ones, that he should rejoice with them. And as the years have passed and the conditions have changed with him, it seems to me that I can sense to some extent the spirit of peace and assurance that came to him, for he died without fear. He died in hope, he died in confidence, he died in faith; and the promises of God are sure, just as sure as that we are here today. And he will realize and sense that which he has longed for, hoped for, trusted God for. He will feel and know what it means to rejoice, as he shall enter into the paradise of God.

When we contemplate the future as the years go by, and we approach the end, it seems to me it must be with considerable satisfaction that we can look forward with confidence and hope.

Only just a few weeks ago I visited one of our old missionaries. He was afflicted on his bed of pain and suffering, and as I talked with him and as the time came that I had to go I said, "Frank, you are not afraid?"

"Oh, my, no," he said. "No, Fred, I am just as firm in the faith, and I look forward with confidence. I have no fears of the future. I feel satisfied, am confident in the promises of God. They are true. There is nothing to fear. We shall live again."

He has since passed on to his reward. It is these things that bring us comfort. It is these assurances that those who approach the gate that leads to the life beyond thus express with such confidence, such satisfaction, such assurance, and such hope that come to us as a strengthening portion and encourage us to press on, to be faithful, diligent in our service. It is the hope that God has instituted, and there is no greater promise made than that of eternal life. There is no greater prize to win than that of eternal life. And in our consciousness of life here, with all its distress and losses that come to us, its disappointments that we may meet, we look forward to the idea of eternal life in which there shall come to us the promised joys that the Master has referred to; there shall come to us freedom from pain, distress, misery, woe, separation. There shall come to us not only these but the realization that God actually is, and that we can see him and know him and rejoice with him; that we may fully appreciate all that we now hope for and pray for. God has promised it, and he has said, those who are faithful to the end shall enter in, and blessed are they that die in the Lord.

So in the midst of our sorrows, for they are only for a season, we can lift up our eyes to God, and our hearts are melted, feeling the touch of divinity, and we rejoice in spite of our sorrows because our loved ones have gained the victory; they have overcome the world, they have been faithful to the end, they are assured of a realization of the promises, and have entered into a brighter, happier, and better condition than this life has ever known.

It is this that the gospel holds out to us. It is this that makes it sweet, that gives to us strength and courage, and makes us realize that God is indeed a God of love, a God of mercy. There is no promise made in the gospel, there is no part of that gospel that has been so thoroughly demonstrated, so effectually made manifest to us, as the fact that Christ has the power of the resurrection and that he can do what he says. He demonstrated to the world in his life here that he held that power. Not only did he do it through the manifestation of others and through the raising from the dead of those around him, but, my friends, he went into the depths of the tomb himself and came forth conqueror, victor over death, hell, and the grave, and gave to mankind the assurance as nothing else possible could have done that they could depend on him; they could look forward with the realization that he would do what he said he would, and made their hope sure, an anchor to their souls of salvation through him.

It is a rock that never fails to which we may cling. We hope and trust that as each year passes by and we approach the time when we, too, must enter in and meet these conditions of life it may be with the firm hope, the firm confidence and faith and the assurance with which our brother has laid down his labors here and has passed to the other side; and it may be with that promise of God ringing in our ears, "Blessed are the dead that die in me, for death shall be sweet unto them," a release from the conditions here, from the mortal sufferings and woes, an opening of the gates that lead to paradise, where sorrows never come, and death and woe are not known.

So in our work, in our sorrows that come because of separation (they are heavy it is true, and we are lonely), yet, my friends, when we consider it, think carefully, would we wish him back? Think seriously over the situation. Would we? I never knew until I was put to the test. I never realized until I was made to see by an experience that came to me, made me know the beauty, the happiness, the peace and joy of the other side, and from that day to this I have said, and said it over and over again, I never would wish them back, never. It has sometimes seemed to me while I have seen my friends slipping away, those who have been near and dear to us, departing to the other side, that it was a lonely, hard thing, and yet when I contemplate the beauty of that place, the glories that are there, the happiness and joy that come to them, I would not wish them back. I can meet the loneliness and wait and bide my time and meet them there. I look forward with confidence and hope, and my association with this brother has helped me believe that he has looked forward in confidence, that he has realized his hope, and he can rejoice in the great paradise of God today.

I can't help thinking of the statement of the Master, that we should sorrow and weep for those who are gone, but we should not sorrow as those who have no hope. We should not let our sorrow find what the world has found, disappointment and dissatisfaction. We will not sorrow as they do, for we look upon things differently, and we recognize that it is only a little separation, just for a season, and then there will come joy, peace, happiness beyond our powers of appreciation today, and all the sorrow, the loneliness that we have passed through will be forgotten, and we can praise our Lord and rejoice in his goodness and the provision he has made that shall break the dark cloud that death brings and give to us the light of hope that may comfort and cheer us even in the hours of our loneliness.

Now I pray that God in his loving mercy may bless these who are left, the loved ones who will miss him, those to whom he has been near and dear. May God in his loving mercy bless you. May there come to you that joy and comfort of the Holy Spirit that bring peace to the children of God, that your hearts may be strengthened and comforted, your souls made to realize what God has done for us, until you can say, and say it with truth, "Thank God for the blessings he has given, and thank God for the hope that comes to us."

Now, O God, bless them, we pray. May thy peace and thy blessing abide with them, that we may rejoice in the day when we shall meet with our brother, that we may find comfort and solace in the promises thou hast made. And while our brother will be separated from us, we can feel with a surety, he is not dead, but his spirit is alive and resteth with thee in the place thou hast prepared. To this end we pray thy Spirit may speak comfort and cheer to our hearts, and finally may we be saved in thy kingdom, in Christ's name. Amen.

Life at its best is a fight. At its noblest it is a struggle. Not at its poorest and meanest. One may drift, or idle, or sing one's care-free way along any of the innumerable avenues that lead to failure and the ultimate disappointment. But if we are going anywhere which is worth the going, we have need to take a new grip on ourselves day by day, to hold ourselves steadily in the patience of effort and self-restraint.—Henry Kingman.

Life Insurance

Not long ago I overheard a conversation in which a statement was made to the effect that just now the most important thing in the world is the advantage of insurance. From the trend of the conversation I inferred that the topic under consideration was life insurance. As to the correctness of the statement I am not qualified to say. I do know, however, that a great many people are taking advantage of the protection offered through life insurance. There is no doubt as to its advantages. At this moment I am not disposed to discuss the merits or demerits of the case. In thinking over the proposition I am persuaded that mankind as a rule is primarily concerned not only with protection physically and financially but also with the bringing of comfort and pleasure as well.

This has ever been the case, and beyond a doubt this will continue through earth's pilgrimage, for man is fundamentally the same, regardless of the age or country in which he lives.

The question arises at once: Inasmuch as it is appointed unto man to die, is it either logical or consistent to be ever thinking of our present physical protection and ease to the neglect of the spiritual and eternal benefits made possible through obedience to the law of life? It appears that at least in this day and generation every thought and every act shall be to the end that pleasure's desire shall be fully satisfied; to seek pleasure rather than happiness. Pleasure is but the gratification of physical desires which cease with the passing of the body, while happiness is the enjoyment of the godly aspirations which bless in this life and endure throughout all eternity.

It may be wise indeed to avail ourselves of an insurance policy which will serve to protect our interests in this life; but better yet would be our lot if in obedience to certain requirements we could be assured that the policy possessed would not only protect us in this life but bring everlasting happiness in the world to come.

Jesus in the Sermon on the Mount gave his disciples to understand that our heavenly Father was not unmindful of their physical needs. In his great work of creation, provision was made whereby man's just wants and needs, physically, would be amply supplied, as evidenced in the producing fields throughout all the earth. With this fact assured, our Master said: "Seek ye first to establish the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Can one less than God offer greater protection than this?

If we are to believe the sayings of our Lord; if we have faith in the prophecies of the centuries; if there is any significance in the revelations which have been given to the Saints in our own day and time; if the signs of the times can be relied upon; then indeed there are conditions coming to the earth against which there is no assurance of protection as far as human policies are concerned, the protection needed under these devastating influences must come from a higher power. Protection is assured to those who love the Lord and do his commandments. Our heavenly Father knowing that these things will come upon the earth, has made provision whereby his children, those who are his disciples in very deed, shall be amply protected and cared for. Let us hear the word of the Lord:

Wherefore, I the Lord have said, Gather ye out from the eastern lands, assemble ye yourselves together ye elders of my church; go ye forth unto the western countries, call upon the inhabitants to repent, and inasmuch as they do repent, build up churches unto me; and with one heart and one mind, gather up your riches, that ye may purchase an inheritance which shall hereafter be appointed unto you, and it shall be called the New Jerusalem, a land of peace, a city of refuge, a place of safety for the Saints of the most high God; and the glory of the Lord shall be there, and the terror of the Lord shall be there, insomuch that the wicked will not come unto it; and it shall be called Zion. And it shall come to pass, among the wicked, that every man that will not take up his sword against his neighbor, must needs flee unto Zion for safety. And there shall be gathered unto it out of every nation under heaven; and it shall be the only people that shall not be at war one with another. And it shall be said among the wicked, let us not go up to battle against Zion, for the inhabitants of Zion are terrible, wherefore we can not stand. And it shall come to pass that the righteous shall be gathered out from among all nations, and shall come to Zion singing, with songs of everlasting joy.—Doctrine and Covenants 45: 12-14.

What a guarantee! What safety! What protection is offered to those who have faith to comply with the requirements whereby this wonderful life insurance can be assured. PEN POINTS.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

The Young People's Division of the Church School

By E. E. Closson

Leaders of young people of the church throughout the world now have a definite organization through which a program of activity may be effectively carried out. The action of the Centennial Conference opened the way for this new type of organization in the field of religious education. It remains for general, district, and local workers to initiate activities that will stimulate interest and participation on the part of our young people in order that the complete program of our church may be more fully carried out.

Under the new plan provision is made for a Young People's Division of the church school in every local as well as a general organization throughout the church through which the bonds of friendship and brotherhood will be cemented. To develop the local organization is the immediate task of the pastor and church school directors in each branch.

How to Get Started

The pastor, director of the local church school, and the supervisor of young people meet and discuss plans for putting the new program into practice. Here is decided in general the type of activities that are to be sponsored over a three-month period, and each officer, from pastor to class teacher or leader, pledges his support and active participation in promoting this program in all of its details.

The next step is to call a meeting of all young people of the branch (perhaps a social function would be a good way to get started) and at this meeting explain briefly the contemplated program of religious education for the Young People's Division. A temporary president and secretary may be elected from the young people themselves. Later these offices and any others that are needed should be made permanent.

Meetings of the division on Sunday for class study and for worship, and occasional meetings throughout the week for social, recreational, and expressional activities are provided for in accord with previously arranged plans. The young people themselves should be given the chance to express their choice of activities to a large extent, these choices being stimulated by suggestions from the divisional supervisor. Leaders will find most of our young people anxious to follow the suggestions of those who have a vital interest in them and who provide activities of fun and fellowship as well as the more serious business of study and worship.

In the smaller branches the divisional supervisor will probably be the teacher-leader of the group as well, and it is necessary that this teacher-leader furnish interesting, instructive, and practical study material for Sunday morning as well as a varied program of lively recreation to be carried on throughout the week.

Use the church buildings and grounds in promoting all phases of the new plan. Young people like to do things and we must give them leadership in the doing or none can foretell the results. The lives of people are sacred, and the material objects of wood and stone are but tools to use in the developing of Christlike characters.

Pastors and leaders of young people, you have a tremendous task and a wonderful opportunity. If you love youth, the task will be easy and the opportunity will ripen into lasting results. To teach youth, to lead youth, to live with youth, we who are called to responsible positions of leadership must be in constant contact with another One, who is our example and friend.

Whatever it costs in time, in money, or in the giving of one's innermost self to this cause—it is worth the price! With faith in our young men and women, we move out hopefully, happily, yet humbly in this great field of religious education, and if God be with us, who can be against us? With confidence in you as leaders and teachers of young people, the church is asking you to move forward in this new program.

The Christmas Offering in 1930

By C. B. Woodstock

Less than four months now remain to complete the Christmas offering for 1930. If the offering is to represent the faith and the appreciation of our membership and correspond to the need for funds to accomplish the tasks of the church, it must exceed the gift of former years. It is the request of the Presiding Bishopric that in every congregation a determined effort shall be made, in the closing months of the year, to raise the Christmas offering of the branch to an amount equal at least to one tenth of their annual quota of the general church budget. In this way a splendid total of over $50,000 will be realized, and this is our goal for 1930.

While the church has need of money, and in recent years the Christmas offering has been nearly as much as one tenth of the total church receipts, all should realize that beneath and beyond the gift of money there is the gift of the self, represented in personal effort, in self-denial, and in sacrifice which makes the gift possible. It is our expression of love for God, and Christ, and for his truth. It expresses our desire for the salvation of our fellow men through the medium of the church for which the plan of the Lord provides in the system of offerings instituted in the law of his kingdom. The primary purpose of an offering, after all, is that through the giving we shall obtain soul culture and soul growth.

Let us turn for a moment to the offering itself.

Origin of the Christmas Offering

The Christmas offering idea had its origin in the fertile mind and loving heart of Marietta Walker. We do not know how long it had been gathering force, but in 1888, as editor of the Autumn Leaves and of the Zion's Hope, she secured the consent of Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, then Presiding Bishop, to solicit a church-wide offering at Christmas time. She urged that inasmuch as gifts of material things could not be bestowed upon Christ, personally, to commemorate his birthday, such gifts could be received by the church which represents him and his mission in the world, to be devoted to the missionary efforts of the church, that others might know of his mission and receive of the spirit of the Christ.

On April 12, 1930, Marietta Walker passed to the beyond at the advanced age of ninety-six years. It is fitting that in this year of her departure from earth life, we pause to commend the monumental work accomplished by the movement she instituted and for many years sponsored. It has been a noble work through which the spirit of the Christ is still expressed.

A Million Dollar Gift!

That first year, in 1888, the offering was $154, a neat sum in that early day, when we consider that the church was widely scattered and that but few Sunday schools were yet in existence. In ten years the annual offering had grown to more than $1,000, and in another ten years to $5,000 annually. In the next five years it increased to over $10,000 each year. In 1917 it amounted to over $38,000 and in 1920 over $100,000, or about one dollar per member of the church. For each of the past four years the annual Christmas offering has been over $40,000. The estimated total receipt by the church in the forty-two years from the Christmas offering alone, has been close to one million dollars!

What a splendid sum to have gone into the work of the Lord in all these years! How happy we are to have had some small part in those offerings. Who can estimate the blessing carried into the world in a million dollars of missionary effort? It was because of such sacrifice that the gospel was brought to you and me. It will be because of such sacrifice that we help carry the blessings of the gospel to others.

And who can estimate the splendid results in soul growth, in thoughtfulness of others, in self-denial, in willing service and consecrated effort represented in the nickels, dimes, and dollars making up the million! No small factor, is this, in the development of a people who are to demonstrate the will of God in our day.

Christmas Offering in 1930

This year we begin the offering of a new century. Its total will be made up largely of nickels, dimes, and quarters earned by boys and girls in all the church and placed in the offering each week as their gift to the Christ, to be used by his church. Others are able to give larger sums. Over a period of many weeks and months the offering accumulates until we rejoice in the grand total after the special gifts at Christmas time are in.

Be the sum large or small which each is able to contribute, it is given in love for the sake of the Christ. It is given in the spirit of the Christ, who first gave himself for us, and for all the world, because he loved us.

It is given to send out our missionaries, to provide for their families, to care for the poor and needy, and to help to establish Zion. It is given that we may help the church complete the Master's mission in the world.

And we hear today the words of Christ: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, . . . ye did it unto me." So may we give, and share the best we have with our Master!
