Haileyville Saints were very sorry to hear of the death of Eunice Cameron, March 16, at Detroit, Michigan. She was a member of this branch until she moved to Detroit about three years ago. Her body was brought here for burial, and Brother Smallwood preached the funeral sermon at the Christian Church at Hartshorne.

Sister Mary Sills seems to have improved in recent weeks.

Brother Smallwood preached March 22. He and Sister Smallwood were on their way to Oklahoma City.

This branch extends Elder J. W. Peterson, new missionary to Eastern Oklahoma District, a hearty welcome. We hope he visits us soon.

Society Islanders Gather for Conference

Papeete, Tahiti, March 30.—The Saints are gathering here from the islands for the mission conference to start April 6. Forty-one came from Tikehau on two boats. A third will bring more. Some who have come in advance from Kaukura and Niau report about sixty to come from each of those branches. Smaller delegations are expected from other branches, and many branches are already partially represented one week before the conference will start. "It looks," writes Elder R. J. Farthing, "as if all branches in this mission will be represented for the first time in many years, and that in spite of the financial depression and resulting poverty of our people in the islands.

"Yesterday (Sunday) was election day in these islands, when a representative was elected to care for the interests of the Society Islands in the French Parliament at Paris. The electoral campaign was the most strenuous in many years. In spite of our, the foreign missionaries', diligent efforts to keep the name of the church out of the controversy, rumors caused the church of the 'Sanitos' to become a pivotal point in the controversy in the latter part of the campaign, and brought a letter from the governor of the colony to the leaders of all sects informing them that electoral propaganda in churches was formally interdicted by law, and that all foreign citizens must keep out of politics. The foreign consuls were instructed to advise their nationals to observe strict neutrality."

The work in this mission is forward. Prospects were never brighter for missionary endeavor. Elder Horahitu baptized seven at Niau during the past month, and Aririma six at Tikehau, while Brother Yager baptized two at mission headquarters. There are about twenty good prospects in view at the headquarters branch.

Word has just been received of the death of Brother Tetai a Amo, president of Niau Branch, March 20.

Lowbanks, Ontario

This branch adopted the church school program of religious education in December and appointed as officers: Pastor, Edward Barrick; assistant pastor, C. Barrick; director of religious education, Clarence MacDonald, giving them efficient division supervisors and other helpers. Immediately the entire group set about adjusting itself to the change of program.

Lately the branch finished a contest on questions on the Bible. The members were divided on two sides, the Reds and the Blues. The Reds won, and are to be treated by the losers at a social in the near future.

Recently the young people, under their supervisor, presented a play which was greatly enjoyed.

Once a month during the winter Elder Clatworthy has visited Lowbanks. His talks have been most helpful.

North Platte (Nebraska) Branch

April 6.—The young people of this branch gave a good program to commemorate Easter. They have encouraged the entire branch to press on with hope.

North Platte is endeavoring to carry out the church program. Church school session opens at ten o'clock Sunday morning, and continues until 11.30, then an adult class studies church history for half an hour every Sunday except one. The first Sunday of the month the program is as follows: Church school at 10 o'clock in the morning; sacrament and prayer and testimony meeting at 11 o'clock; dinner; preaching, and sometimes a program at 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Elder McConnaughy in West Virginia

Barberton, Ohio, April 6.—Early in the year Elder J. C. McConnaughy, a veteran church worker, left his home here to arrive in Mount Hope, West Virginia, February 18, where he preached the funeral sermon of Brother Thomas Green Holt. He preached in this vicinity until April 1, delivering twenty-seven sermons, baptizing two candidates, and blessing five infants. On March 22 he gathered the Saints together at the home of Sister Holt, and shared with them the sacrament, this being the first time they had had the privilege of partaking of the Lord's Supper since he met with them six years ago.

At Beckley, West Virginia, Brother McConnaughy officiated in a wedding ceremony, when the only daughter of Mr. and Sister Packs became a bride. This young woman is highly esteemed in her home town and held a position in the newspaper office there.

Thirteen Saints live in the vicinity of Mount Hope, and they have no leader. They are, however, faithful to the covenant they made in baptism, and are hopeful that the Father will raise up for them a pastor.

Independence

Sunday afternoon the Campus was the scene of the mobilization of more than two hundred Boy Scouts of Independence and their officers. Within fifty minutes after the first call went out, ten of the seventeen troops comprising 205 boys and thirty-five officials, had responded, and shortly after presented themselves at the Campus. This mobilization call, which the troops had been anticipating for a period of almost seventy-two hours, was designed to determine how efficiently the troops were prepared for emergency. They were told to come prepared for fire, floor, explosion, or tornado. First place in preparedness went to Troop 235 of the McCune Home. The Stone Church boys, Troops 226 and 223, won honorable mention, and special recognition went to Troop 222 of Spring Branch Church, which received a belated call. First place in attendance went to Troop 230 of the Presbyterian Church, and second to Troop 227 of Enoch Hill church. After contests on first-aid projects, the troops marched in review before the spectators and judges. Moving pictures were taken of the mobilization. Hundreds of people visited the Campus on this occasion, the largest crowd yet this year.

Our school boys and girls continue to distinguish themselves in their classes. Lately several members won the honor of representing William Chrisman High School in the contest to be held in Warrensburg, Missouri, April 24 and 25. The young people are developing their talents in dramatics, music, forensics, and scholastic and social lines.

Stone Church

The musical program of the Stone Church at eleven o'clock service Sunday morning included two anthems by the choir, directed by Evan Fry, "To Thee, My God and Savior," by Irene Berge, and "Bless the Lord, O My Soul," by Mikail Ippolitoff-Ivanoff; also two numbers by an instrumental trio, Arthur Storms, violinist, Irving Jenkins, cellist, and George Miller, pianist.

The speaker, Apostle J. F. Curtis, selected for his scripture reading 2 Timothy 1: 8, and placed special emphasis on the exhortation in verse 2, "Preach the word." This was a command given not only by Paul but by Christ, and repeated by the Lord in the establishment of his church in latter days. Brother Curtis's discourse convinced the congregation beyond a doubt that a complete organization of the church, all officers functioning in their various callings, is necessary to effectually "preach the word."

Immediately following the sermon, organ notes and the solo, "I Love You Truly," by George Anway, tenor, announced the opening of a wedding ceremony, that of Miss Gladys Vernon and Mr. Lomax Odom. Pastor John F. Sheehy officiated, and the bridal couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Canaday. The bride is a worker with junior young people and a lieutenant in one of the newly organized troops of Girl Scouts in the Stone Church congregation.

Elder F. A. Cool spoke downstairs at the junior young people's worship service on the theme, "Know the Truth." Special music was furnished by young women from the senior department, and the pastor was in charge of the service.

Kansas City Central Church Choir, directed by George Anway, presented the cantata, "Olivet to Calvary," by Maunder, Sunday evening to a large congregation. This musical gift from a neighbor branch was much appreciated. Soloists were: Mrs. Alfred Hitchcock, soprano; Clayton Wolfe, tenor; LeRoy Smith, baritone. Accompanists were: Mrs. Clayton Wolfe, organist, and Mrs. Everett Bowser, pianist.

Elder C. E. Wight, Central Church pastor and president of Kansas City Stake, gave a brief introductory address on "The Message of Jesus." Elder John F. Sheehy conducted the service.

Visitors are frequently seen inspecting the Auditorium, and the guides report many interesting experiences and conversations with people from far and near interested in the huge, unfinished structure. Elder H. A. Koehler, in charge of guiding, reports an experience had just last week in these words: "At intervals during our guide work we are made very aware of the superlative worth of the Auditorium as an advertising agent of the church. April 8 I had the honor of guiding Senor Guino Ortiz Rubio, son of President Ortiz Rubio, of Mexico, through the building. He was introduced by the Consul General of Kansas City, W. E. Eaxul, and accompanying them were the wife of the consul and a coterie of Mexican officials. They expressed pleasure at what they saw, and in the courteous, gallant manner of the Spaniard paid their respects to the President of the church and the officials in general. Their interest was increased by the conversation which ensued over our standing in the religious world, and they were pleased to know that we have no quarrel with those who differ from us on matters of creed. General surprise was evidenced at the suggestion that Mormonism was divided, and that we, and not the Utah Church, hold the property of the original latter-day organization. We can imagine how they received this information, knowing the overtures that the Mormon Church has made the Mexican Government in regard to colonization in that country."

Friends were shocked and grieved to learn of the death of Sister Bruce E. Brown on April 3, as the result of an automobile accident. Brother and Sister Brown arrived in Detroit, Michigan, March 26, and the following day were riding with relatives when another car drove into them. Sister Brown was seriously injured, the other three shaken, bruised, and scratched, and the car in which they were riding was completely wrecked. For a week Sister Brown lived in great pain. The funeral occurred April 6 in Detroit. Sister Mary M. Brown was twenty-nine years old and had been a member of the church since 1908. With her husband she served the church in the East and in the West, and for the past year they had labored in Saint Louis, Missouri. Deep sympathy goes to Brother Brown in his bereavement from Saints all over the United States.

Enoch Hill

Pastor H. L. Barto conducted the Easter communion service. A large congregation gathered to worship, and in a short period of time numbers of testimonies of praise and gratitude were given.

The ladies' choir, directed by Mrs. Charles Warren, gave a cantata in the evening, after which Elder J. W. A. Bailey was requested to speak briefly on the Book of Mormon.

The Erodelphians, the young people's organization of this district, conducted their monthly program last Wednesday evening at the church, a large group participating. Following musical numbers, Elder G. G. Lewis spoke to the group and then presented the local volley ball team with the cup won in the Auditorium Volley Ball League.

This organization of young Saints is proving helpful and industrious in a very practical way. They have secured the use of two vacant lots which they are planting with a view to contributing their garden products to the Harvest Home Festival this fall. In the last week they have planted two bushels of seed potatoes and other vegetable seeds.

"Building" was named as the objective of Enoch Hill's children's division for 1931, and this we are doing. Splendid cooperation is being shown by teachers and pupils, and classes are encouraged to supply special program numbers and undertake helpful projects. Everyone is busy, and we are going forward.

Speakers last Sunday were Elder R. T. Cooper and Earl F. Hoisington.

John W. Brewer, eighty-seven years of age and a retired carpenter, died at Saint Joseph, Missouri, March 31. For eight years Brother Brewer had made his home in Independence with his son, W. J. Brewer, former pastor of this congregation. His aged wife preceded him in death one week. There survive this veteran Saint two sons, one daughter, one sister, twelve grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren. The funeral occurred April 3, and interment was in Independence.

Walnut Park

The A. W. Z. Class of Walnut Park and its teacher, Sister Ethel Schwab, spent Sunday in Atherton, Missouri. Upon arriving at the church, they were met by Elder Amos Allen, who, during the Sunday school session, explained many things concerning the church stewardship farms and plans for their development in that locality. His talk was greatly enjoyed by the young people. At the eleven o'clock hour they were benefited by the sermon of Bishop J. A. Koehler. Members of the class furnished special musical numbers for this service. Picnic lunch was eaten in an attractive spot of the lowlands bordering the river, and then a tour of the stewardship farms was made.

C. Ed. Miller and L. W. Fike were speakers Sunday at Walnut Park.

An error occurred in the wedding announcement last week. The bride was Alice Baker, formerly of Fargo, North Dakota, married to Eli Kester.

Honolulu, Hawaii

Since the first of the year, Honolulu Branch has been kept busy carrying on its various activities. The members have shown a wonderful spirit of cooperation. One of the main problems the Saints had to face was the meeting of our financial obligation to the local government. This was in the form of a tax assessment on the road improvements about our church property, and amounted to five hundred and twelve dollars due March 10. The members agreed to carry on a concentrated effort to raise this amount without borrowing and without drawing upon the branch fund. It meant sacrifice on the part of all the families of the Honolulu Main Branch and also much hard work by the various departments. We are happy because our united effort was not only successful but we went "over the top." Some of the means that were employed to raise this amount were:

(1) Free-will contribution from the members. Through this means more than one half of the necessary amount was raised.

(2) The Young People's League held a "rummage sale" at the end of January and netted about one hundred and fifteen dollars. In connection with this sale we wish to say that the president of the league, Sister Winifred Piltz, was greatly responsible for the success achieved; she is a dependable and willing worker.

(3) The Women's Department put on two laniau sales (a food sale of real Hawaiian dish, composed of pork, salmon, and taro leaves—this is steamed in an underground oven called imu); a rummage sale at the end of February; and a unique food exchange among the members of the department—they called this their "pig contest." Through these various activities the sisters helped to bring in about one hundred and fifty dollars.

(4) The girls of Sister Macrae's intermediate Sunday school class raised about fifteen dollars by putting on a candy sale.

With everybody doing his share, we were able to put this undertaking over successfully. Considering the present hard times, we believe this accomplishment speaks well for the Saints. However, we realize that the spiritual power that such united action develops among the members, is the most valuable result. We hope to carry on in this same spirit.

The Young People's League has been holding regular weekly recreational meetings with occasional discussion meetings. This Friday evening the members are to get a real treat. The Y. P. L. has taken over the care of the church yard, and with Brother Kiefer acting as the head of the yard committee, various improvements have already been made towards beautifying the grounds. By this group taking over the responsibility of the care of the grounds, it means a monthly saving of twelve dollars for the branch.

We have enjoyed our regular services without any interruption. During the morning preaching service, we have preaching in Hawaiian, followed by a sermon in English. Elders Thomas Kelii and Henry Mahi, associate pastors, Elder John Mahuka, one of the oldest members, Brother John Wright, priest, and Brother Elias Kaawakauo, teacher, have preached in Hawaiian. Besides Brother Macrae, the pastor, H. Mahi and T. Kelii, elders, and M. dela Cruz and K. Tsuji, priests, have preached in English. In the evening services the pastor has been the regular speaker.

Midweek prayer meetings have been inspirational and encouraging. We have enjoyed these devotional gatherings of the Saints and have felt the soothing influence of the Spirit of the Lord. These meetings of Saints of "kindred mind and spirit" compose one of the greatest sources of spiritual strength.

The Sunday School Department is doing well, and the regular attendance has steadily increased. Just now the children are busy practicing for their Easter program. The intermediate girls of Sister Macrae's class are also rehearsing the play, "The Challenge of the Cross." They will put on this Easter play in conjunction with the choir which will render an Easter cantata during the Sunday evening Easter services. Those having parts in the play are: Queenie Piltz, Hannah Miyamoto, Leonie Hagmann, Inez Aki, Elizabeth Wright, Rose Mahi, and Kaeha Blackwell.

Brother Waller is back with us again, and we are happy to see his face once more. His daughter, Mrs. Esther Briggs, also returned with him.

We were made sad during the last week when word was received about the passing away of the dear mother of our pastor, Brother Macrae. No expression of condolence could convey our deep sympathy to the family of our pastor, nor to those to whom this dear mother and sister Saint has meant so much. Our loyal pledge to uphold the hand of this brother who has sacrificed everything to help in the cause of Christ will be the greatest and truest expression of honor to the memory of his dear mother, and will likewise bring joy and happiness to her dear ones that have been made to mourna.

We were also made sad when young Brother Santee passed away at the Naval Hospital at Pearl Harbor. Brother Santee never had the opportunity of attending any of our services, but the pastor and members of the priesthood visited him often during his confinement, and the Saints remembered him in their prayers.

Several families of Saints have been blessed with new additions to the family. Brother and Sister Inouye welcomed a baby a few weeks ago; Brother and Sister Edward Lewis are happy to announce their first baby boy; Sister Edith Titcum was made happy with a baby girl.

Waterloo, Iowa

No services have been held in the church of late because of the making of much-needed repairs.

Sister Robert Allen, who has been in the hospital where she underwent a major operation, has returned home and is recovering.

H. M. Michels has sold his store, and, we understand, is looking for another location. We shall miss them if they leave Waterloo.

Word comes from Guy Haynes, now of Cherokee but for several years a resident of this city, that he recently suffered a slight stroke of paralysis, which affected one side of his face. We hope he will soon be fully recovered.

Among the members who have moved away and are much missed here are: Sister Grace Wolff and little "Jimmie," Brother and Sister Darl and Cora Trusty.

Recent social activities have included a farewell party held at the home of Lola Myers for Grace Wolff and a "Fuss and Feathers" April Fool party for the young people at the home of Sister Meyers.

Kirtland, Ohio

A pageant, "Easter Dawn," was presented at the Auditorium by the Kirtland Dramatic Club the evening of April 5. The program was in charge of the capable director, John Collin.

A fine sacrament meeting was held at the Temple March 1. Apostle Clyde F. Ellis preached a good sermon at the Temple the night of March 25, speaking on fear, chastisement, and love.

A dynamic sermon by E. G. Hammond, of Akron, held the attention of the Saints March 15. "Power" was his subject, and he was assisted by Elder John Cooper and Brother Earl Curry. M. E. Blaugh, a teacher in Kirtland High School, sang a solo, "My Task."

The Saints were recently saddened at news of the death of Newton F. Crawford, who came here thirty-five years ago. He was the father of Sister John F. Martin, of Wheeling, West Virginia. Brother William Flack, who for several years lived in Kirtland, passed away, and his funeral was held at the Temple, April 6.

Brother Van Vorhis was pleasantly surprised when a party of neighbors and friends met to help him enjoy his eighty-second birthday.

Sister Irene Flack presented her piano pupils in a recital at the Kirtland school auditorium March 13.

C. A. McFarland has leased the lot on the corner of Joseph Street to Brother Jack Shepherd who is operating a Standard Oil filling station. His friends wish him success in this enterprise.

Denver, Colorado

On Sunday, March 22, Elder E. B. Hull made a farewell visit to Denver, on his way to his new field of labor. He was the speaker at both morning and evening services. Monday evening the Saints surprised him with a banquet at the church. A large crowd gathered, testifying to the esteem in which Brother Hull is held by Denver Saints, and many expressions of regret at his departure were heard. Short speeches were made by the guest of honor and by Pastor Glaude Smith. Brother Hull left the next day for Omaha. Brother Smith will fill the office of district presidency as well as that of pastor of this branch.

The young people's dramatic club presented the comedy, "Mr. Bob," March 31, under the direction of Mrs. Glaude Smith and Mr. William G. Mitchell. The young people are working hard and doing well; they deserve hearty support. Burrell Shupe and Fred Kemp made stage settings for this play which added greatly to its effectiveness, and which represents many hours of labor on their part. We feel that we have reason to be proud of the splendid group of young men and women in this branch.

Easter Sunday was a warm, sunny day, and attendance at both services was very large. The young people held their regular monthly prayer service at 8 a. m. A short program was given by the children during the church school hour, and the sacrament service was held at 10 a. m. In the evening, the choir, under the direction of E. W. Fishburn, rendered the cantata, "Darkness and Dawn," by Fred W. Peace. Twenty-eight voices sang the choruses, the soloists were Glaude A. Smith, tenor; E. W. Fishburn and Fred Kemp, basses; Mrs. Myrtle Bennett and Mrs. Alice Milligan, sopranos. Sister Inez Schrunk was at the organ.

Sister Myrtle Smith, wife of the pastor, is recovering from a serious illness. On Sunday evening, March 8, she was rushed to Saint Luke's Hospital and operated upon immediately. Her appendix had been ruptured about twenty-four hours before, and gangrene had set in. For several days her condition was very critical, but her recovery has been so remarkable that doctors and nurses were astonished. Many prayers were offered in her behalf, and Brother and Sister Smith feel that they have been wonderfully blessed. The same week, in Presbyterian Hospital, Mr. Adam Kohankie, husband of Sister Laura, underwent a serious operation, and was also the subject of many prayers. He likewise has made a rapid recovery. Because of these things the Denver Saints feel they have great cause for rejoicing.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Elder Arthur Oakman, recently appointed missionary to Kansas City Stake, spoke here Sunday evening. The members were glad for this opportunity to make his acquaintance.

Those expecting to take part in the stake music contest were urged to register Sunday. The committee is planning the program of the contest, to be held the second week in May.

The choir which presented the cantata, "Olivet to Calvary," the evening of April 5 to Central congregation, and later over the radio, repeated the performance at Independence last Sunday evening.

Matters of importance will be discussed at the priesthood meeting to be conducted at three o'clock next Sunday afternoon at the church. Plans will be formulated for intensive branch work during the spring months.

Ninety young people gathered around the banquet table the evening of April 7, to pay homage to the basket ball boys and show appreciation for the fine work by the team in the season just passed. Out of nine games played, the team lost only one. S. S. Sandy, toastmaster for the occasion, was introduced by his daughter, Miss Ruth Sandy, president of the Alpha Philo. Class. Tom Dunn acted as song leader and Irene Wolfe, accompanist. After the meal and community singing, members of the team and Glen Faler, business manager, expressed the joy they had experienced in their work and association. The team boasts four all-star men, Ralph Anderson, Clelland Raber, George White, and "Doc" Nelson. Wallace Burlington, cheer leader, gave enthusiasm to the program, and Doctor E. P. Nelson, captain, made the closing talk, paying tribute to the coach, "Bill" Ely, and presented him a traveling set as a token of the team's appreciation.

Sunday was an ideal day. Sister Alice Burgess, contralto, sang a solo at the opening of the church school. Elder C. E. Wight was the speaker at the worship period, and the choir was at its best in giving the anthem, "Gloria" from "The Twelfth Mass," by Mozart.

Mrs. J. H. McPherson is at Saint Joseph's Hospital, where she underwent an operation last week. Her condition is reported satisfactory.

Conference at Taylorville

The Central Illinois district conference was held at Taylorville, Illinois, March 28 and 29. Business session opened at 2.30 p. m. Saturday. Preaching in the evening was by Brother Shepherd.

Church school began its program Sunday morning at 10, and at the same hour junior church was conducted in the basement. Apostle J. F. Garver preached at eleven o'clock, and in the afternoon at 2.30 Elder H. V. Minton gave a good sermon. R. L. Fulk was the evening speaker.

The conference music was in charge of Joe Williams, of Springfield, and special numbers were given at all services.

Good attendance marked the conference, everyone feeling well repaid for coming.

Meals were served Saturday and Sunday in the basement of the church by the Women's Department.

Anaconda, Montan

The young people's institute at Deer Lodge recently closed. A number of Anaconda Saints motored to Deer Lodge each day to attend as many services as possible. Elder A. C. Martin, of Seattle, Washington, was the main speaker. A feature which interested our members was the presentation of a religious education gold seal certificate to Brother Fred Kendall by Sister Victoria Thorburn.

At the close of the institute Elder A. C. Martin gave us ten days of real service, stirring the hearts of nonmembers and members. Because of the small size of our branch, an attendance of from ten to twenty nonmembers is encouraging, and at most of the services there were between fifteen and twenty nonmembers who show great interest. We believe that Anaconda has never before had so large a response to a series of meetings. Patriarch G. Thorburn took charge of the meetings, and both he and Brother Martin were kept busy during their stay here. On Sundays services were held all day, and picnic dinner was had at the Odd Fellows' hall, the number participating mounting as high as seventy-eight.

The church school plan, adopted here in October, is going forward under the leadership of Pastor Joe Beck. All are busy workers.

Socials are held every two weeks in the homes of the members, under the leadership of W. E. Staton. The pastor was given a surprise party February 25, Brother Fred Kendall delivering a speech of appreciation on behalf of the branch. Elder D. L. Allen presented Brother Beck a fine Bible as a gift from the group. A basket social was given by the Women's Department netting them twenty-six dollars toward the building fund.

This department is led by Sister Jessie Kendall, and is studying "Religion in the Home."

The teacher's training class, under the direction of the church school leader, Fred Kendall, has completed study of "How to Teach Religion," and received credits. We are studying another book, "Psychology of Early Adolescence."

Brothers Colman and Eliason and Elder G. Thorburn were here the first of the year.

Rehearsals have been begun on a short play to be given for the benefit of the building fund. Sister Anna Staton is in charge.

The choir furnishes special music for the Sunday evening services.

Evening services were begun with the commencement of winter with a fine sermon by Patriarch George Thorburn, and Elder D. L. Allen, of the local ministry, has continued to preach the word.

Brother P. Peterson passed away March 31, and Elder Thorburn preached the funeral sermon in the Presbyterian Church. Frank Maugher died at Saint Ann's Hospital in Anaconda March 31, and Elder A. C. Martin was asked to preach the sermon at Race Track, Montana.

Louisville, Kentucky

Easter Day, with a record of four baptisms, concluded a series of meetings conducted by Elder J. O. Dutton at Louisville. The meetings began March 19 and ended April 5, the first eleven days being spent in the basement church, the next five at Highland Park in a private home.

Easter found the members once more assembled at the church. A short program was given between Sunday school and sacrament meeting. Four young people, a fine addition to this branch, were baptized at three o'clock in the afternoon by Brother Dutton.

Six young men signed an agreement to stop the use of

In 1907 he moved his business to Independence, where he built part of the factory now occupied by the Gleaner Corporation. His plows were shipped to all parts of the United States and to other countries. He joined the church April 28, 1915. Left to mourn are his wife, Mrs. Linzy Danielsen, and ten children: V. J. DISH TOWEL DESIGNS FOR EVERY DAY IN THE WEEK

AS LONG as folks eat, there will be dishes to wash—and of course the poor wet things must be dried. To liven up the dreaded, daily task our artist has designed a series of clever tea towel patterns—one for each day of the week: A wash "lady" for Monday, a Chinaman to iron on Tuesday, a charming seamstress for Wednesday, a Scotch shopper for Thursday, a market girl for Friday, a baker for Saturday, and a prim go-to-church maid for Sunday.

Whether it is to add to the convenience of your own kitchen or as gifts to some bride of this year or ever so many years ago, you are certain to want this Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday set of transfer designs when I tell you all seven cost only 20 cents. Order them by Number 644. Complete Set stamped on excellent toweling is

- 644 Wax Transfer ..... $ .20
- 645 Stamped Set and Floss .... 1.50

SILHOUETTE TOWELS

THESE silhouette towels are so attractive that you will want a dozen of them. It is hard to imagine anything more distinguished at the price than a pair of these quaint towels. They are number 619, stitched on good quality huck, hemmed, 16 by 30 inches and we include boilproof floss. Stitches of the easy, old-fashioned kinds, satin, outline and running stitches only, with an instruction chart for making.

- 619 Pair of Stamped Towels, with Floss, Complete...50 cents

PRIM DUTCH TILES FOR OUTLINE

NUMBER 108X has 6 similar designs, all different, stamped on excellent quality towels that are suitable for either hand or tea towels, set of 6 at $1.30. Thread is included.

Or number 108 Transfer at 20 cents is the six Dutch tile designs in wax transfer form, suitable for sash curtains, runners, tea cloth, etc.

Blue six strand is used in simplest stitches to quickly complete these numbers.

- 108 Dutch Designs, Wax Transfers ..... $0.20
- 108X Stamped Set of Six Towels and Floss ..... 1.30

THE designs on these towels are altogether different; creamer, sugar bowl and cup are toted about by three funny little darkies, while the fourth, a headwaiter, offers his services from the teapot. The outline and Frenchknot hair is in black with a touch of solid red on neckties, vests and lips.

The designs are stamped on towels 17 by 28 inches and made of absorbent white cotton, hemstitched at both ends. The set of four stamped towels, including thread to embroider is only $1.00. The wax pattern alone is number 224B at 15 cents.

THE GREAT PROMISE

But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up; and a cloud received him out of their sight. And while they looked steadfastly toward heaven as he went up, behold, two men stood by them in white apparel; which also said, Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven.—Acts 1: 8-11.

The Great Promise

Our cover text this week contains the great promise which has been the hope of the Christian world. There is the promise of power, and of the Holy Ghost. There is the promise that the witness which those disciples should bear concerning the Savior should go to all the world, and finally, the most important of all, the promise that Jesus would return at some future time in a manner as glorious as his departure.

This is the hope that, through all the centuries since the day of the promise, has led countless numbers of men to embrace the Christian faith and to endure every trial to remain faithful to it.

The expected return of Jesus is not an isolated event. Upon the truth of his promise and the expectation of the reality of its fulfillment depend all the other spiritual hopes that have burned in the hearts of his followers since his time. Jesus is central to every concept and expression of our faith. Without him there is no redemption. Without his return to earth there is no resurrection of that which is immortal in the spirits of his followers.

The great promise, also many of the other utterances of Jesus, have a universal quality. They appeal to all men, and to all times. They belong to us, today, as much as they belonged to his immediate disciples. Only when Jesus was making his last departure from them did his disciples begin to see something of that resplendent glory which was in his personality, and then it was too late for them to receive the fullest benefit of association with him. In many ways we are like them: we do not appreciate the privileges we enjoy until they are about to be taken from us.

Letters of Encouragement

Eli Bronson, pastor in Los Angeles, writes:

"I want you to know that I am anxious to do what I can to carry on faithfully during the stress of the present readjustments that are being made. I heartily favor the plan of retrenchment by which the work of the church may be placed on a cash basis. What small sacrifice I can make to assist in providing for and carrying out this plan, will be done gratefully. My good wife joins me in gratitude for an opportunity to assist in some small way in carrying out such a worthy program."

B. M. Anderson, president of the Lincoln, Nebraska, Branch, writes of the action of the priesthood in his city:

"At a meeting of the priesthood of the Lincoln Branch held on yesterday afternoon, and attended by all but three members (who were unable to be present), the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That we express to President Frederick M. Smith our devoted loyalty to the church, and our sincere desire to serve it in every way possible to us; and further, that we heartily approve the present program of retrenchment in expense and definite plans for building up a financial reserve in the general treasury.

"We firmly believe that with a spirit of affirmative faith and confidence on the part of the entire membership, expressed in cheerful and willing cooperation in this program, the church will successfully pass through the present trial, and its future will be the brighter because of the clouds and disappointment now experienced."

Jay L. Fryer of Monetville, Ontario, gives the following wise suggestions:

"The policy of retrenchment which you have so wisely advocated and which also has met with the approval of the Joint Council, is a gesture which we believe will be well received by all well-informed members of the church.

"Surely something can be done to quicken the interest of the local men, to the seriousness of their responsibility, in the many places where they are at present passive. It may be just possible that such a crisis as this is needed to bring out the best that is in us.

"We wish to pledge ourselves anew, in loyalty and obedience to the call of our leaders, inasmuch as our limited talent and means allow."

Here is a true spirit of devotion exhibited by one of the released men. He is one of the fine group of young men who have been serving the church splendidly in recent years. The letter is from T. M. Carr:

"It is needless for me to write that I am sorry that this [his release] has happened, that I have been very happy in my work for the last nine years, or that I shall miss the privilege of working in harmony with the rest of the general ministry. I may say that I am willing to be released, but not glad of it. I am willing to do all in my power to assist in the work of the church and wherever I may be located hope to give my help to the efforts of the church."

William Osler, president of the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District, writes from Hammond, Indiana:

"There was a fine spirit of devotion and loyalty to the church. By unanimous vote the priesthood adopted the following resolution, which will also be taken to the branch at a special business meeting. The resolution reads: Resolved, That we, the members of the priesthood of the Hammond Branch, recommend to the branch that each wage earner according to his ability to give, should give one tenth of his income to the general church as a sacrifice during the period of April-May-June.

"This sacrifice offering is over and above the usual tithing and the contributions to the local church."

One sister writes in a private letter:

"Perhaps you will be happy to know that Apostle Williams . . . told me that you 'showed great consideration for his men.' If all members of the Twelve will go out with a message such as he gave us Sunday evening, hope and cheer and inspiration will displace sorrow and fear. He did not mince matters, but rather took us into his confidence. A more thoughtful people never left a service than on this occasion. As usual while here, he worked so steadily night and day, that his strength was at a low ebb. Such trips are profitable both spiritually and financially."

Here is a paragraph taken from a letter by Ward Hougas, president of Far West Stake:

"Fifty members of the priesthood of Far West Stake stood and solemnly pledged themselves to the aggressive support of the church program at a special meeting held in Saint Joseph last night. This group included most of the pastors of the stake, together with the more active priesthood workers."

Exchange Ideas

It has been suggested that our readers would appreciate an opportunity to exchange ideas and quotations to be used for church work, texts, talks, activities, and sermons. Our ministers and workers have encountered in their experience many fine things that would be worth passing along and that would help others.

The Herald Editors are glad to cooperate in an endeavor of this kind, and will print useful ideas and apt quotations, giving credit to those who have sent them. It will be possible to do this except where copyright conditions interfere.

Let those who have inspiring quotations, ideas for conducting the work of the church, or brief notes on talks and stories, send them in. They may be a great help to other workers in the field.

The New Saints' Hymnal

Shipments are being made at the rate of 200 books per day. All orders should be filled within the next 15 days. It is hoped that no unforeseen circumstance will interfere with this plan. Orders will be shipped according to date received, those who ordered earliest being the first served.

The Herald Publishing House has gone to great expense to make the new Hymnal a work of practical and enduring worth. In these times of depression it may be considered an achievement that the plates, supplies, and production have been paid for as the work has progressed and that no debt has been incurred. For this the Business Management is to be congratulated.

Our congregations have long awaited the new books, withholding orders and refraining from buying other works. Now all may soon be supplied, and a large sale is expected. Orders will continue to be filled as received. The management requests that checks accompany all orders.

Responsibility for Life

Highway engineers smooth out the roads and make the shoulders broad in order to increase public safety; motor car manufacturers have increased the effectiveness of brakes along with the increased power of the motors. But as fast as the safety devices are improved, a certain class of drivers become more reckless, and the perils of being on streets and highways are worse than ever. The list of accidental deaths continues to grow.

Very seldom are accidents and deaths due to imperfections of the road or to faulty construction of the cars. Almost always the cause of the trouble exists somewhere in the vacuum between the ears of the person behind the wheel. Engineers can not reach and remedy the faults of character and intelligence that exist in the individual.

To save the little children whose lives are snuffed out and the older people who are maimed and crippled, something should be done to increase the responsibility of drivers. All States should require the driver's license, to be obtained after passing strict tests. They should revoke the licenses of those who prove their unfitness to drive by causing accidents, and they should make swift and severe the punishment for drunken driving.

After all, human life is a sacred thing. It is the duty of the state to protect the great majorities of inoffensive citizens against the dangerous minority that makes the public ways unsafe. Driving can be made safe when drivers are put under control.

Jackson County Tuberculosis Association

AIDS NATIONAL FIGHT TO PREVENT THE WHITE
PLAGUE IN CHILDREN AND YOUNG PEOPLE

Announcement is made by Mr. Kenneth V. Bostian, president of the Jackson County Tuberculosis Association, that a campaign is in progress, specifically directed to the early diagnosis of tuberculosis among youths. The campaign continues throughout this month of April. It will be accompanied by posters and distributing of pamphlets and literature in schools and public meeting places. The Jackson County Association wishes to center public attention on the protection of youth from tuberculosis.

It is authoritatively stated that this disease still kills more persons 15 to 25 years of age than any other disease. Parents of boys and girls of high school age are especially requested to give thoughtful attention to the information disseminated during this campaign. A special pamphlet, "Tuberculosis and the 'Teen Age," describing just how the disease develops during adolescence, and how it can be prevented, is to be given wide distribution among all who have charge of boys and girls. The slogan of the campaign is, "Tuberculosis, the Foe of Youth," and the symbol of the campaign appearing on posters and literature contains the figures of David and Goliath. This symbol was selected, states Mr. Bostian, because it is during youth (typified by David) when danger is so often scorned, that Tuberculosis (the Giant) is most likely to strike. The place for David to strike Goliath the Giant is at the point of Intelligence, using as a weapon the stone of Knowledge.

Tell Us, Mary Magdalene

(In an early church hymn, Dic Nobis, Mary Magdalene is asked what she had seen on her way to the tomb of Jesus on Easter morning. The reply comes that Mary has seen "the glory of the Re-arisen that dies and is reborn with every year.")

"Mary, what hast thou seen upon thy way?"

"I saw a bird that sang upon a thorn;

I saw a butterfly arise new-born;

I saw a flower that smiled to greet the day;

I saw the rising sun's first gold-tipped ray

Pierce through a cloud that straightway ceased to mourn;

I saw a doubter change his look of scorn

To one of rapture as he knelt to pray.

"Yes, I who brought my loving offering

Of oil and spice and green to deck a tomb

With weeping and in sorrow for my King,

Found shroud and vestments there, but not death's gloom;

Angels bear witness to my wondrous story—

I saw the Re-arisen's shining glory."

THE REVIEWER'S PAGE

A New Kind of Governor

A governor who really believes in curbing extravagance, eliminating waste, and reducing the heavy cost of the upkeep of government, and who makes his actions conform to his words, is found in the person of Benjamin M. Miller, of Alabama.

Of course such a governor, opposed to graft and "log rolling," comes into conflict with the professional politicians, whose incomes depend on favors and jobs from the man they have helped elect to office. The cooperation which exists between such party politicians and the incumbent officers makes a strong political machine, but it is inimical to good and economical government. Governor Miller is showing himself to be independent of the political machine, and is appealing for his support directly to the people, who, he hopes, will appreciate his effort to give an honest administration. He hopes to be able to overcome that sinister control and secret "wire-pulling" by which party interests are able to defeat an executive who would prefer to remain independent.

While the type of official that Governor Miller represents is not exactly new, it is at least rare enough to attract nation-wide attention. Perhaps Governor Miller, succeeding with an honest and fearless diplomacy, may be able to provide a warning and an example to others which will again produce conditions that will replace politicians with statesmen, and make politics an honorable profession.

"How Will It Be with Kingdoms and with Kings?"

Alphonso, king of Spain, has recently gone to France for the simple reason that Spain was no longer safe for him. He says that he has not abdicated and—now that he is at a safe distance from the enemies who upset his reign—that he is still king, and that he will return to his country provided the people vote right in the next election.

In the year 1899 Edwin Markham wrote, in his famous poem, "The Man with a Hoe," the following prophetic stanza:

O masters, lords, and rulers in all lands,
How will the future reckon with this Man?
How answer his brute question in that hour
When whirlwinds of rebellion shake all shores?
How will it be with kingdoms and with kings—
With those who shaped him to the thing he is—
When this dumb Terror shall rise to judge the world,
After the silence of the centuries?

The prediction of rebellion has found one more fulfillment in the troubles through which Spain has gone in recent years, and which have culminated in the downfall of the monarchy.

Alphonso was not a bad king, as kings go. There were many things in his favor. It was said that he was a good sport, that he was a brave man, and that he was popular among the people. It is reported also that among his mistakes one was very unfortunate. He would not yield to the demand for popular and democratic changes in government, but he was unable to prevent his country from falling under the control of a dictatorship which proved to be very oppressive and offensive to a liberty-loving and restless people.

While the people did not seem to entertain any acute dislike for Alphonso personally, they did not like his being king, nor the conditions of government that went with a kingdom.

As one contemplates the perilous road that Spain has just entered upon, leading, it is hoped, to a stable republican government, one thinks of the road that Germany has had to travel. It is to be hoped that some strong man may arise in Spain, as Hindenburg arose in Germany—one who had been of the mightiest of the old monarchy, who would lend his strength and his services to the support of the young republic.

Spain will have to steer a difficult course between the rocky dangers of all sorts of extremes. There are the communists, who turn Spain into another Russia; and there are always the die-hard royalists, who could be contented with nothing but a return of the monarchy to absolute power. These extremists would ruin the country in an effort to gain their ends. Between them the moderates must try to strike a balance that will permit the development of a government which will bring order and justice out of confusion.

The world is moving toward social control. The child is free, not when he may escape school and go fishing, but when to school he must go. The man is free, not when he may accept a large wage, but when he is guaranteed by law a living wage. In the machine complex prohibitions simply serve to set free more liberty. Man is not made free by being permitted to drink himself to death and his family to starvation, but when access to liquor is forbidden him.—John Herman Randall, jr., in Federal Council Bulletin.

"Lie Not One to Another"

By Evan A. Fry

Lie not one to another, seeing that ye have put off the old man with his deeds; and have put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him.—Colossians 3: 9, 10.

Perhaps you think that lying is about the last subject in the world that needs to be brought to the attention of the modern Christian, but some rather disappointing experiences of the last few weeks or months have brought me to the conclusion that lying is one of the most common sins with which we have to deal today. I don't mean by that that all good people make a practice of telling lies out of sheer malice and with willful intent to deceive. Yet most of us might be surprised at the times when we lie in a mild form by failing to keep our promises.

How good is your promise? If you say you will do a thing, do you move heaven and earth to maintain the integrity of your word, or do you make the promise in the first place with the mental reservation that you will carry out the promise if nothing gets in your way to prevent your doing so conveniently? Here again I don't mean the solemn promises duly made and attested before a notary, with seals and signatures and all that trumpery of the legal profession. I mean the little everyday insignificant promises.

Let me illustrate by preaching to myself for a moment. I have in my desk drawer at home somewhere in the neighborhood of a dozen letters which I promised faithfully to answer weeks or months ago. How many of you have the same situation in your home? I have a positive mania for saying that I'll do something or other, but just as sure as the job is slightly distasteful to me I'll keep on putting it off and putting it off until I discover that it is too late to do as I promised, and my word again has gone for naught. I will admit that I usually keep my promises in one respect—that is, when I say I will be at a certain place at a certain time, I'm going to be there at exactly that time or before. Perhaps my radio experience has been good training in this regard. But how many people of your acquaintance can be depended upon to keep their word as to the time they will appear at a certain place? All too often, church is advertised to start at a certain time, but the promise of that advertisement is broken, and the audience sits impatiently waiting for something to happen. On the other hand, the audience often comes straggling in so late that the pastor has every excuse for starting half an hour after the advertised time. The theaters advertise that the curtain will rise at 8:15, but it seldom goes up before 8:30. Your friends come around to borrow a dollar or two until pay day and promise to pay you again on a certain date, but promptly forget all about it. Husband and wife promise to love, honor, and obey "until death do us part," and then separate inside of a very short year for trivial reasons. Time and again we "turn over a new leaf" and promise God and ourselves that we will not indulge in certain things we know to be wrong, but at the first good opportunity our promise is broken. About fourteen years ago I borrowed a book with the promise that I would return it as soon as I had read it. The book is still on my bookshelves, and I don't know where the owner is, so I can't return it to him. How many borrowed books have you in your home?

I hate to be a cynic or a pessimist, but it almost seems to me sometimes that nobody's word is any good any more. I still believe that in the long run people are honest—that they will pay their charge accounts and their notes at the bank—but in spite of this inherent honesty there seems to be a very real slump in honesty about the little and relatively unimportant things of life. There are so many people who will promise things just to keep from the disagreeable necessity of denying them to you, that the occasional person whose word is really as good as his bond in the trivial things as well as in the more important things is a jewel to be long sought after and lovingly remembered.

Perhaps you think it is a very trivial thing to forget to write a letter or buy a spool of thread for your wife, or to be late for an engagement when you promised to be on time, or to neglect to return borrowed money or a borrowed book. These things perhaps are trivial, but life is made up of little things, and the man who is capable of looking after the little things of life and remaining faithful in the discharge of trivial duties is the man who will also be faithful in larger duties. A man's response to any given situation is governed by the habits of response he has formed when confronted with such situations in the past. The man who has been careless about the sacredness of his spoken promise is paving the way for larger and more serious dishonesty when a situation of really momentous portent is presented to him. His conscience, calloused by the repeated glossing over of past minor offenses, will never feel the rub of the major offense when it comes.

Will you all resolve with me to be honest during the days and weeks and years to come? When we say we will do a thing, let us steadfastly resolve, as we promise, that our word shall not return to us empty, but that it shall return with the full and ripened fruitage of complete fulfillment.

The Philosophy of Jesus in a Modern World

PART TWO

By C. E. Wight

In a previous article we closed our message with a series of questions—questions raised by Charles Hall Perry in a recent issue of Scribner's magazine:

"Did God speak once and then become dumb? Are there no new revelations, that we must test our faith by what men thought two thousand years ago? Has God finished inspiration, told all of infinite truth?"

Almost one hundred years ago, there came to this vicinity a small group of men who would have given a clear and negative answer to the questions asked. These men believed that God was ready to speak to man if only man would listen to the divine message.

With this as the keynote of their philosophy, they came to a new land in response as they believed to the direction of God to establish a home where they might live anew the beautiful teachings which our Master had given to his disciples two thousand years ago.

On the shores of what is now Troost Lake, just a stone's throw from the church from which this broadcast is now coming, they established a school. This was the first school to be built within the territory later to be known as Kansas City.

To these men, the school was a symbol of progress. It was in harmony with their theory that as God speaks to men today, it is with the intent that they shall grow into the fullness of the stature of the Christ. Education implies self-development. The revelation of God is as the grain of wheat which wraps within its tiny body a spark of life. That spark of life can be revealed only through the interaction of the forces which are designed to cause it to break forth into a greater fullness of life.

When God reveals himself to humanity, he does so only in part. It then becomes the great adventure of man to complete the revelation through the use of the natural processes which have been intrusted to him.

As Jesus came among us to more clearly picture the divine in human form, it is to be expected that as he was a revelation of God in the flesh, he would manifest the attitude of God in the presentation of his philosophy to men. It is not surprising, then, that we find gems of truth contained within a single sentence.

Often the significance of this truth is as completely covered as is the germ of life covered by the body of the grain of wheat. But as the farmer watches the tiny green blade break the bonds of its physical habitation and grow until a rich fruitage is realized, his heart thrills with joy and pride. He is watching again the cycle of life, with each new grain containing the same possibility of an infinite continuance of the principle of growth and development. So as God watches the germ of truth often covered by the physical limitation of words, break away from this limitation and in its reaction bring about the expansion of a human soul, there must come to him the same thrill of joy and of pride.

But it is not always given to the farmer to see immediately the realization of his hopes, nor is God always permitted to find joy in the development of his children. Heaven is not reached by a single bound, nor is the way an easy one.

Apparently, men have always been afraid to face the truth. God knew this when he sent Jesus into the world as the way, the life, and the truth. He knew that Jesus would be rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. Jesus himself knew it, for he said, "But I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." He realized that his own suffering and martyrdom would form a dark background for the picture of life, against which the beauty of his teachings would stand in clearest relief.

But in spite of this knowledge, God was willing to send his only begotten Son, and the Son was willing to give his life, if only through the great sacrifice men might come to see the glory of life as it should be lived. The attempt of the divine spark of life to break through the material body of tradition, formula, ceremonial, and ecclesiasticism which the centuries have developed, has been a pitiful one.

No sooner had man accepted the sayings of the Master as being the embodiment of truth than they attempted to bind all men to a rigid interpretation of that truth in accordance with a carefully worked-out formula. By this very process was the value of the message destroyed. How quickly does a beautiful and living doctrine degenerate into a dogma!

We stand today, twenty centuries removed from a gift to the world which was in itself the greatest revelation that ever came to man. With the experiences of twenty centuries, we can weigh the philosophies of this man to see whether or not they are calculated to meet the needs of our present age.

In spite of all the errors of these twenty centuries, in the face of false interpretations, despite our forming of new traditions and losing of the message in a variety of heartless creeds, we are compelled to recognize today the virility of this ancient philosophy and to admit that its acceptance is required for the formation of a civilization that is to endure.

On last Sunday evening, we attempted to trace the vicissitudes through which the philosophy of Jesus passed from the days of his flesh down to the present time. Let us now briefly contrast the attitude of the religious world at the beginning of the nineteenth century with the challenge which came with the declaration that God had again spoken to man.

It had become a settled belief in the Christian world that the canon of Scripture was closed and that God would never again speak directly to men. In the face of this generally accepted belief came the declaration, "Now, behold, a marvelous work is about to come forth among the children of men." As the very heart of this marvelous work was to be recognized the substitution of the prophetic voice for that of the priest.

The creedal philosophy of that day declared that no longer were the simple but beautiful ceremonials approved by the Master of any importance. The new philosophy asserted that these beautiful sacraments were vital to the beginning of a new life.

Robert Ingersoll declared that God never knew of the existence of the American Indian until Columbus discovered America. Adherents of the creedal philosophy could give us no answer. The new philosophy made bold to declare that God did know of the existence of the Indian. And in evidence they presented a book which purported to be a revelation of the dealings of God with the ancestors of the Indian races.

The creedal philosophy of that day declared God's interest in the future salvation of the soul of man. The new philosophy challenged this narrow purpose of God and said that God is interested in men today. That he intends that men shall work out the problems of a harmonious relationship under the stress and burden of modern industrial life and that the increment from this labor, both in spiritual and temporal increase, shall be dedicated to the glory of God.

This new approach to religion did not rob the past of its glorious tradition, nor did it take from the future the hope of eternal life. On the other hand, it reemphasized the teachings of the Bible, particularly the teachings of the Master, and pointed out that these teachings should be more and more applied to the problems of the present day. It idealized the future by its emphasis upon the final triumph of Christ in the great millennial reign. It revealed God as saying, "This is my work and my glory, to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man."

With this new interpretation of an old philosophy, there came a reemphasis upon the personality of man. The traditional theory that man could not escape from certain predestined and foreordained consequences was placed in the discard, and for it there was substituted the divine idea that every man is to be rewarded according to his works.

Full emphasis was placed upon the wonderful work of grace on the part of our Master, but the world was warned that no work of grace could act as a substitute for the endeavor of man in his own behalf.

The attitude and belief of men that God no longer would speak to humanity, had developed a feeling that God was afar off. The reemphasis upon the present-day interest and revelation of God to his children brought with it a feeling of the nearness of God. Prayer became more filled with meaning, for one was talking to a God who would hear and answer in accordance with the needs of the supplicant. No longer was there the feeling as though one were talking to the distant planet, but rather as though one were conversing with an intimate friend.

We come to you now with this present-day interpretation of a friendly God. A God who is interested in even the trivial affairs of men. A God who is willing to listen to the cries of his children when in distress, who asks that we shall share with him the joys of our success.

It is the universal cry of the human heart that there shall come into our lives that transforming influence which changed the fishermen of Galilee into apostles with a message of power. It is this cry for the present, intimate relationship of the Master of men that prompts us to join with the poet in these words:

We would see Jesus! We would look upon
The light in that divinely human face,
Where lofty majesty and tender grace
In blended beauty shone.

We would see Jesus, and would hear again
The voice that charmed the thousands by the sea,
Spoke peace to sinners, set the captives free,
And eased the sufferer's pain.

We would see Jesus, yet not him alone—
But see ourselves as in a Maker's plan;
And in the beauty of the Son of Man
See man upon his throne.

We would see Jesus, and let him impart
The truth he came among us to reveal,
Till in the gracious message we should feel
The beating of God's heart.

My dear friends, we may see Jesus—perhaps not in the flesh as his disciples saw him, but just as surely. For the work which he was unable to complete because he was rejected in the house of his friends, he has passed on to you and to me for completion. As we enter into that task, we shall feel his presence and see the evidences of his power. We shall hear him say to us, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Christ has no hands but our hands
To do his work today;
He has no feet but our feet
To lead men in his way;
He has no tongue but our tongues
To tell men how he died;
He has no help but our help
To bring them to his side.

We are the only Bible
The careless world will read;
We are the sinner's gospel,
We are the scoffer's creed;
We are the Lord's last message
Given in deed and word—
What if the line is crooked?
What if the type is blurred?

What if our hands are busy
With other work than his?
What if our feet are walking
Where sin's allurements is?
What if our tongues are speaking
Of things his lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help him
Unless from him we learn?

Indeed, from him must we learn. And with his Spirit must we teach, that others through us may learn. Through this process alone can the message of our Master be made to meet the needs of our modern age.

(This is the second of a series of seven articles by the author. The others will follow in succeeding issues.)

The fact remains that man must have some relation to the uncharted, the mysterious tracts of life which surround him on every side. For my own part I am content to say that his method must be to a large extent the method of what Saint Paul calls faith; that is, some attitude not of the conscious intellect, but of the whole being, using all its powers of sensitiveness, all its feeblest and most inarticulate tentacles and feelers, in an effort to touch what can not be grasped by the definite senses or analyzed by the conscious intellect. What we gain thus is an insecure but a precious possession. We gain no dogma; but we gain much more. We gain something hard to define which lies at the heart of not only religion but of art and poetry, and all the higher strivings of the human heart.—Gilbert Murray, in Five Stages of Greek Religion.

The Story of My Life

By Arthur Leverton

IX.—CONCLUSION

The Lord has blessed me since I embraced the gospel, for which I thank him. I was only a poor boy, with a very limited education when I joined the Latter Day Saints Church. I was ordained an elder, then a seventy, a high priest, and a patriarch. I was ordained a patriarch in 1910 at the General Conference in Independence. I was superannuated in 1928 and received a rose of honor from the head of the church for my devotion and integrity in the work of the Lord. I appreciate the rose of honor very much, sometimes questioning my right to have such an honor bestowed upon me. I also received a gold pin from the hands of the President of the church bearing on the same subject, and to exhibit my love for the church and my brothers and sisters. I wish when the weary wheel of life shall cease to roll to wear that rose of honor on the lapel of my coat in honor to the church and the gospel of Christ whom I love.

God also according to promise blessed me with favor in the eyes of the people, so that I have been elected to fill the following public positions, viz: township auditor, two years; township councilor, three years; reeve of the township, six years; county councilor, four years, under the new act; and warden of the County of Kent in the year 1899, this being the highest position the county could give me. I also held the position of secretary-treasurer of S. S. No. 5 of the Township of Zone from 1877 to 1905. I have been blessed with five children, two girls and three boys. The Lord has also increased my property. I had only fifty acres with little improvement when I joined the church. Now we have over four hundred acres, with fairly good improvements.

Most pictures have one dark side, and so it is in my case. The wise man Solomon said, "In the day of adversity consider." This I have tried to do. In 1890 I buried my father-in-law; in 1903 my mother-in-law died; in 1904, July 7, my wife was taken from me, a good, noble-hearted woman. I have seen very little in this world to charm me since my dear wife has been taken away, but the Lord helped me to say from my heart, "Thy will be done." In 1906, March 16, my mother, who lived with us, departed from this life. My father also made his home with us, and on March 24, 1906, just eight days after my mother's death, my father died. I will here say before I conclude that at times I have had too much on my hands to attend to—church work, work in public positions, and my own business.

I sometimes think of the wonderful change that has taken place. Some of our missionaries now think it hard if they have to walk two or three miles to make their appointment, having no one to take them.

I feel that I should be very unjust and ungrateful if I did not add the following, relating to the assistance and help I received from others in the work of my life. As stated before, my wife and I joined the church in 1871 and 1872. She was just as devoted to the church as I, willing to do anything in her power. For instance, in the years 1874 and 1875, when I was on a mission for nearly three months, my wife took care of our three little children, did all the chores on the farm, feeding cattle, horses, sheep, hogs, etc., to release me so that I might fill that mission. Other times she did the same things but for a shorter time. I would say to her, "Mary, the work is too much for you." She said, "Our circumstances will not permit our hiring help, even if we could get some one; so, Art, we have to do the best we can, and if you can be the means of bringing one into the church, we will be well repaid for our labor." Above all things we loved the church and each other, but the parting of the ways came. On the 7th day of July, 1904, she was taken from me by death.

My eldest daughter, Lizzie, never entered into the bonds of matrimony. Nevertheless, she has proved herself to be a mother in Israel indeed, as the following statements will show: She nursed her Grandmother Porter through her sickness until death, which occurred in December, 1903. She then nursed her mother and took care of the home until the 7th of July, 1904, this being the date her mother passed from this stage of action. She then took care of the home and family until my eldest son's wife died, and my youngest son was married. She then went to take care of the home of her brother until his second marriage. My second son's wife died, thus giving her another position, taking care of his home and family until his second marriage, and since that time she has been keeping house and taking care of father. We are now sharing our luck together. Through her kindness and faithfulness, she has helped to liberate my hands for church work.

I was married to my second wife on the 24th of November, 1910. I baptized her in Canada in 1888. She was a woman very much devoted to church work; not physically strong, but willing to do all she could for the advancement of the work. Yet she was not able to do on account of her physical strength. According to a promise, I had made arrangements with different branches to visit them and attend to the patriarchal work necessary to be done. My wife made up her mind she would accompany me on that trip. She felt elated with the thought of the trip before us. When the time came, we proceeded on our journey and first visited the Windsor Branch. After completing our work there, we proceeded to the Detroit Branch on Monday. Tuesday morning my wife said she did not feel well. I told her to remain in bed, which she did. We called a doctor, who pronounced it pneumonia. She continued to grow worse, and the following Sunday, November 27, 1924, just five days from the time she was taken sick, she died. This brought a sudden change to the work I was engaged in. After the funeral and things were settled, I returned to Canada, after being a resident in Michigan for fourteen years.

I was blessed in my work in Michigan and made many dear friends, which gives me joy in reviewing our past associations together.

Again I humbly pray and thank God for his kindness, love, and mercy, and further pray that this little work may prove a blessing to some.

In conclusion, I wish to certify that the statements and testimonies that are given in this sketch of my life are true. I have avoided any exaggerations whatsoever, so that the plain and simple facts will appear to the reader as they occurred, to the best of my memory. I therefore dedicate this little book with its contents, and pray to God that it may bring some comfort to the Saints, strengthening and encouraging them in their service to God, and that it also may be interesting and convincing to those of the world who may be privileged to read it, as this is my only aim and desire.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Worship Suggestions for May

The following is offered as material from which suitable local worship programs may be builded. Pastors and others in charge should study the art of leading worship effectively. Do not plan too much. The service should be brief, but carefully planned and carried out reverently and earnestly. It should be a real worship experience. It should help prepare for participation in other services of the day.

The picture, "Ruth and Naomi," should be mounted and kept on display for the month. See "Use of Pictures" in another column.

Theme for May: "Love."

Picture for May: "Ruth and Naomi."

Entertain thee with all our powers,
Of adoration and love."
3. Response (sung softly):

"Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Hosts,
Heaven and earth are full of thee,
Heaven and earth are praising thee,
O Lord, most high. Amen."

The gladness of the morning, the freedom of the wind, the music of the rain, the joy of the sunshine, the deep calm of the night, the trees and flowers, and clouds and skies, are constant reminders of God's power and love. Nature offers a challenge, that we too make our lives beautiful.

"God who touchest earth with beauty,
Make me lovely, too.
With thy spirit recreate me,
Make my heart anew.
Like thy springs of living waters,
Make me crystal pure,
Like thy rocks of towering grandeur,
Make me strong and sure.

"Like thy dancing waves in sunlight,
Make me glad and free,
Like the straightness of the pine trees,
Let me upright be.

Like the arching of the heavens,
Lift my thoughts above,
Turn my dreams to nobler action,
Ministers of love."

—Selected.

12. Offering: Quiet Music.
13. Concluding Thought (by the leader):

"Oh, brotherman, if you have eyes at all,
Look at a branch, a bird, a child, a rose,

Till you can read as on Bellshazzer's wall,
The glory of eternal partnership!
14. Hymn: "Sowing," Praises, 182.

MAY 10, MOTHER'S DAY

Theme: "Motherhood Is Eternal"

1. Prelude: "Home, Sweet Home."

5. Prayer: "School standing offers a silent prayer, a tribute to motherhood, followed by a brief prayer of thanksgiving for motherhood.
6. Theme Talk: "What Every Mother Knows," from an editorial from the Rochester Times Union:

No riches, but a legacy of love was bequeathed by a mother, to her children, in a will recently filed in New York.

"Love one another," read the letter accompanying the legal document. "Hold fast to that whether you understand one another or not, and remember, nothing really matters except being kind to one another and to all the world as far as you can reach."

What every mother knows is the supremacy of love, It makes the home, and in the real home is found the seed of strength for the State and Nation. "Love one another whether you understand one another or not," is a philosophy which has behind it divine authority and reaches far beyond the borders of the family and the home.

"The Mother" (by Margaret Sangster):

"The mother stands in the foreground as the guardian angel of the home. She is the dominant figure in home life. Her personality, her pervading presence, constitute a force for good, not to be set down in cold type or weighed in earthly balances. When one mentions motherhood, one spells that which is divine, that which, beginning with sacrifice, ends with coronation."
7. Picture Talk: "Ruth and Naomi" (see note).
8. Choir: "O Blessed Day of Motherhood," New Hymnal for American Youth, 318.
9. Scripture Reading: Proverbs 31: 10-12, 27, 31.
10. Reading: "Mother," by Walt Filkin, in the Kansas City Star:

"In every land in every clime
There is a word almost sublime,
With every creed and sect and race,
This word adorns an upper place,
In every heart throughout all lands
This word supreme respect commands.
In every tongue there is no other
Which means to all as much as 'Mother.'

"It typifies unselfishness;
It signifies a home to bless;
Embodiment of all that's good;
Is known in every neighborhood,
Is loved as only good can love,
Is always highly spoken of,
And tenderly as is none other,
That heartening word all know as 'Mother.'

"No other word in any tongue
Will ever have its praises sung
As this which touches heartstrings all;
The world will always hear its call,
And lift its voice in love and praise
Throughout Time's swiftly flying days.
Through all eternity no other
Can tender thrills bestow like 'Mother.'"

Or the story, "For Mother," Stories for Special Days in the Church School, 90, by Margaret Eggleston.

11. Hymn: "Faith of Our Mothers," sung to the tune of "Faith of Our Fathers"; words may be found on page 144 of Worship for Youth, by Gussie Brown Stacy. Or, use "Love Divine," Praises, 143.
12. Sentence Prayer.
13. Hymn: "Hear Our Prayer, O Lord," New Hymnal for American Youth, 342. Solo.
14. Offering: Quiet Music, on organ or piano.
15. Hymn: "Have a Heart of Kindness," Praises, 118.
16. Prayer Poem (by the leader):

"Lord Jesus, thou hast known,
A mother's love and tender care,
And thou wilt hear while for my own mother most dear,
I make this sabbath prayer.
Protect her life, I pray.
Who gave the gift of life to me;
And may she know from day to day, the deepening glow
Of joy that comes from thee.
I can not pay my debt
For all the love that she has given;
But thou, O Lord, wilt not forget her due reward, Bless her in earth and heaven. Amen."

It is the commemoration of the first great Peace Conference, which was held on May 18, 1899. And today it is being observed around the world, in a vital and encouraging way.
Matthew 22: 37-40: "Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets."

Let us not love in word only, but in deed and in truth.

7. Hymn: "Loving Each Other," Praises, 83, verses 1 and 3.
8. Story: "Ruth and Naomi," from the Bible; or, "Ruth the Faithful," Knights of Service, 20, Bradshaw.
9. Hymn: "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," Hymnal, 52, verses 1 and 2.
10. Sentence Prayer.
11. Offering: Quiet Music, or Solo, or Choir: "In Christ There Is No East or West," New Hymnal for American Youth, 299.

MAY 24

Theme: "Our Church"

1. Prelude: "Redeemer of Israel," Hymnal, 158.
2. Call to Worship:

"When we walk softly into church,
We feel upon the air
A summons that is like a hymn,
A call that tells of prayer.

"So on this Sabbath may we come,
To worship God, in house of prayer;
What though the church be small and plain,
If He be there?"

3. Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers," or Hymnal, 126, "Come to the House of Prayer," verses 1 and 2.

5. Scripture Reading: Doctrine and Covenants 3: 12, 13, 16-18.
6. Choir: "May We Who Know the Joyful Sound," Hymnal, 116, verses 1, 2, and 4.
7. Theme Talk: The theme for the month is "Love"; the theme for today is "Our Church," or "Love to Our Church." If there is a people on the earth today who should love their church, we Latter Day Saints should be the ones. A church that has been intrusted with the restored gospel of Christ, to be preached to all nations; a church with a ministry holding divine authority from God. We have had greater opportunities to show our love for our church during the last year of stress and financial strain.

Have you proved loyal?
Have you contributed a little more liberally?
Have you lifted your share of the load?
How much do you really love our church?

8. Story: Chapter 8 of the Young People's History, "The Church Organized," or the poem, "Hill Cumorah," by Elbert A. Smith, in Father and Son, or in Hesperus.

10. Sentence Prayer.
11. Offering: Quiet Music.
12. Concluding Thought, "The Living Church" (by the leader):

"Let us have a church that dares
Imitate the heroism of Jesus;
Seek inspiration as he sought it;
Pray as he prayed;
Work as he wrought;

Live as he lived;
 With an unfaltering faith in God,
 Which, like lightning in the clouds,
 Shines brightest when elsewhere it is most dark."

13. Hymn: "Master, Use Me," Praises, 116.
 14. Prayer.

MAY 30, MEMORIAL DAY

Theme: "Remembrance"

Church School Reports

There has been a growing conviction that the work of the church school in all its activities is but an important phase of church work in each of the branches. As such, the church school, organized to care for the specific work of religious education assigned to it, becomes an integral working unit of the branch. Its work is but a part of the total work of the branch. Its records are a part of the records of the branch, and its report a part of the branch report.

It seems logical to suggest the keeping of a record of significant statistics of services, attendance, receipts, and expenditures, projects, work under way, etc., such as shall be of value in the future work of the branch and in reporting conditions to the branch business meeting, to the district conference, and the making of such other reports as may be desired.

This is a distinct change from the former plan of separate records and reports from each of the three departments to three sets of district and general officers. The change anticipated by General Conference action in April, 1930, from three separate departments to a unified single department of religious education, closely integrated with the administration of the church, both local and district, in great measure has been made effective throughout the church.

Where branches or districts are still working on the former plan, each department should report to the branch business meeting, and the branch should make its report as asked to the district presidency and the general church.

Extended experiment and research is in progress in the general offices of the church in an effort to determine the most effective method of record keeping and reporting. Record and report blanks will be prepared as soon as it seems wise, and due announcement will be made. In the meantime, church school secretaries and branch clerks will keep such records as seem necessary and assist the pastor in making regular reports to the district and general offices.

The Use of Pictures

Attention has been called repeatedly to the beautiful Bible pictures in large size and attractive colors which may be had from the Herald Publishing House. These prints are 20x30 inches in size and are made on good art paper suitable for framing, or for picture-story purposes when displayed on an easel under special light.

The pictures have a white border and appear to advantage when pasted on a heavy cardboard backing with a further two- or three-inch margin of the cardboard. Heavy cardboard for mounting may be purchased in gray or buff tones at slight expense at local printing houses. When mounted the pictures are more easily preserved and kept clean.

A three-legged or four-legged frame, or easel, may easily be made on which the mounted pictures may be placed, one at a time, for program use. If a shaded electric light can be arranged just over the picture, its illumination will greatly increase the attractiveness of the picture.

The mounted pictures, when once they have been presented and their stories told, should remain in a place of honor on the platform until a change of picture is needed. They may then be filed away for future use, or given a permanent place in other rooms of the church.

A good picture carries a depth of meaning which grows upon one with further acquaintance. The message of the artist is expressed in line and shade and color. The characters, the setting, the suggestion all combine to carry the message the artist sought to convey. A good picture is a comforting, inspiring companion. We all need to learn to appreciate and enjoy the best works of art.

Even the best of pictures should have appropriate frames and be under glass if hung on the wall. To tack pictures on the wall ruins both the picture and the wall, and is unsightly. For small pictures a bulletin board or a burlap surface may be provided.

Girl Scouting Answers Our Call

By L. B. M.

"ON MY HONOR I WILL TRY: TO DO MY DUTY TO GOD AND MY COUNTRY.
TO HELP OTHER PEOPLE AT ALL TIMES.
TO OBEY THE GIRL SCOUT LAWS."

For a number of years the Boy Scout program has helped the church fill the lives of its boys with wholesome activities and development. And wherever scout troops have been conducted by capable, conscientious leaders, they have been of inestimable worth to the church and the community.

But what of the girls? In many places they have been and are being neglected. In other places they are overloaded with activities not adapted to their needs. They call for leadership and direction. How are you answering their call?

The Girl Scout organization of America offers opportunity to every girl to grow in the experiences most helpful to the development of true and capable womanhood. Its program is designed to teach her the arts and crafts, to keep her out of doors as much as possible, to popularize her home tasks, and in fine, to make her a pleasant, worth-while citizen of her community. As a member of a properly conducted Girl Scout troop, a girl feels the pulse of growth. She becomes familiar with woods, trail, and camp lore. She participates in sports and athletics. She becomes proficient in such fields as first aid, home nursing, needlework, and others. She begins to sense her responsibility as a member of a working group, and with her sister mates, experiences the romance of being and doing.

Girl Scouts trace the origin of their movement to England to Sir Robert Baden-Powell, the founder of all scouting. His program proved far too attractive and adaptable to youth to be limited to the boys, for whom it was originally designed, and was expanded to include the Girl Guide organization. This welcomed into its membership girls from ten to eighteen years, and the movement spread rapidly. An American woman, Mrs. Juliette Low, a friend of the Baden-Powells, brought it to America and organized the first patrols in Savannah, Georgia, in 1912. In America the movement was soon rechristened Girl Scouts. Today "the Girl Scouts, incorporated, an independent national association, is nonsectarian and nonpartisan. It is represented on the World Bureau for Girl Guides and Girl Scouts, and has friendly relations with the girls and adult members of the movement all over the world."

Girl Scouting comprehends every phase of life growth for our women-to-be. The organization offers the church the machinery to carry our girls safely and happily through the most turbulent years of their lives. Realizing this and knowing the inadequacy of present provisions for girls in the church, leaders in Independence are incorporating the Girl Scout program in our church school program.

About two weeks ago nineteen girls were given the rank of Tenderfoot in a newly organized troop in Walnut Park District. At the Stone Church the girls who for two months have been on tiptoes to "do something"—and there are ninety of them—are now enrolled in four new troops. They are preparing for their Tenderfoot test, when they will take the pledge given below. They are a busy, happy lot learning their songs, tying knots, doing their good turn daily, and a dozen others things and calling them "fun."

Here are the laws which they will promise to obey before they receive their tenderfoot pins:

- I A Girl Scout's Honor Is to Be Trusted.
- II A Girl Scout Is Loyal.
- III A Girl Scout's Duty Is to Be Useful and to Help Others.
- IV A Girl Scout Is a Friend to All and a Sister to Every Other Girl Scout.
- V A Girl Scout Is Courteous.
- VI A Girl Scout Is a Friend to Animals.
- VII A Girl Scout Obeys Orders.
- VIII A Girl Scout Is Cheerful.
- IX A Girl Scout Is Thrifty.
- X A Girl Scout Is Clean in Thought, Word, and Deed.

Pastors and directors of local church schools are primarily responsible for the organization of the girls in their branches for constructive activities.

If they have not already, the girls of your community will soon be knocking at the church door, asking leadership. Shall you be ready to answer them? The Girl Scout motto is, "Be Prepared." Get in touch with your local Girl Scout executive; or, if you have none in your town, write to the national headquarters: Girl Scouts, Incorporated, 670 Lexington Avenue, New York City. Remembering part of the pledge: "I will try . . . to help other people at all times," the workers at the national office will gladly offer suggestions and directions. The goal of the organization in America is 500,000 Girl Scouts by 1935!

[This is one of several activity organizations for girls that will be reviewed in these columns. Those in charge of the girls' work in each branch should write to The Young People's Division, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, for registration blanks and further information.—E. E. C.]

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Successful Municipal Ownership and Operation of Essential Industries

The following is an extract of an article that appeared in the "Kansas City Star" for April 3, 1931. It tells how the town of Chanute, Kansas, has eliminated taxation, operates its utilities with a profit, and meanwhile retires its bonded indebtedness. This fine example offers fascinating possibilities for other towns and cities that are engaged in the common struggle with the tax rate. The article should also provoke thought among people who think that government must be extravagant in operation.

The story of public ownership of utilities in Chanute will make a chapter of Kansas history which future generations will read with pride. Approximately 11,000 people have launched an experiment in the administration of government affairs that has brought results almost beyond belief.

Three major utilities—the municipal gas plant, the municipal water plant, and the municipal electric light plant—forms the nucleus about which the public ownership experiment is woven. And now, in 1931, progressive leaders in public affairs are able to announce that Chanute is the largest community in the United States to be free from municipal taxes.

End of a Thirty-year Trial

They take pride in that distinction, for it marks the end of thirty years of public ownership of the gas and water plants and about twenty-six years of public ownership of the electric light plant.

A city free from taxation, an unusual distinction, is the least of the claims that can be made by these progressive citizens. You visit Chanute and look at its beautiful airport, and any member of the Chamber of Commerce will tell you that its one hundred and sixty acres and hangars were paid for in cash from the earnings of the municipally owned enterprises.

Drive over across the city to the Memorial Auditorium, which cost $376,000, and you will learn that the gas plant, water plant, and electric light plant have already paid more than half its cost and now are setting aside sinking funds which in a few years will pay the entire cost.

Outstanding against the memorial is a debt of $190,000 in bonds that must be paid by Chanute, but in the city treasury now sinking funds already hold $38,000 set apart from earnings of the public plants to make the bond payments, and provisions have been made on the same rate schedules to the people to carry the payment plan forward until the memorial is free of debt without a cent of taxes against the people.

Light Plant Free of Debt

In another part of the city is the electric light plant that represents $514,248 in investments. It is clear property without a cent of bonds against it.

A short distance from the city on the bank of the Neosho River is the municipal water plant, which represents an investment of $557,908. It has outstanding against it now $161,473 in bonds, which are being paid off through earnings without taxes being levied against the property owners.

Sinking funds are set aside out of earnings to pay those bonds when they fall due.

Gas at Forty-two and One Half Cents

In another part of the city is the municipal gas plant which cost $194,000, and has been freed of debt through earnings of the public enterprises.

It distributes gas to the people of the city for an average of 42½ cents a thousand cubic feet, and it buys its gas in the open market from pipeline companies.

Investment values, but not replacement costs which would be greater, now give to the people a valuation of $1,351,791 on their municipal enterprises.

No City Levy This Year

City tax levies to maintain and operate the city government and keep the community a progressive and modern city, disappeared in Chanute this year when Mayor B. F. Baughman, who has been elected three times, was able to announce the city tax rate would be nothing. His announcement was made with reports that the publicly owned properties could meet the public obligations from profits, and the people would have nothing to pay for these activities.

Chanute began its downward plunge in the tax rate seven years ago, when the rate was $13.81 on each $1,000 in valuation, and when the bonds on the public property were being lifted.

At the same time the municipal properties were rolling up the profits which now are reverting back to the people, the rates for the commodities remained at low levels, and the service and expansion program was kept up to meet the improvement program of the city.

The gas rate is 50 cents a thousand cubic feet for the first 10,000 feet. For the next 10,000 cubic feet used, the rate is 45 cents, and the next 80,000 is 40 cents. All above 100,000 cubic feet is available to the consumer at 35 cents a thousand.

The Light Rate Is Low

In the electric light department, the rate for the first 50 kilowatts used is 6 cents a kilowatt; the second 50 is 5 cents, and all above 100 is 4 cents. The minimum charge is 50 cents a month. The power schedules begin at 3½ cents as the highest level and step downward to 1½ cents.

For water the people pay 25 cents a hundred cubic feet for the first 1,200 feet. The next 12,000 cubic feet are sold for 17½ cents a hundred cubic feet, and from that figure the rate steps downward for greater consumption to a low level of 8 cents a hundred cubic feet. A minimum charge of 50 cents is made in the water department.

Profits accruing to the electric light department are made outside of the free lighting furnished to the parks, public buildings, white ways and streets, which are computed to the rest of the city government without charge. That, Chanute civic leaders assert, makes the electric light rate for the city one of the most attractive in the Middle West.

Chanute and its free city tax problem was explained today by E. A. Pearce, superintendent of the municipal electric light plant and director of the distribution system. He has been with the city since Mayor Baughman took office seven years ago, and since the city plants began to return to the people who built them the profits from sound investments.

Airport without Cost

About two years ago, when Chanute decided it needed an airport, the taxpayers were not asked for any bonds or taxes. Instead, the officials looked into the profits of the other public enterprises and took out $75,000 available. They bought the airport site of one hundred and sixty acres and built a large hanger. Then they made a contract with the Chanute Aviation Corporation for it to set up a training school for pilots.

One of the first pilots trained was Mr. Pearce. The corporation keeps airplanes on the field at all times, and the people of the city have the advantage of air service to any place they want it.

The Indians of Mexico

The following is sent to us from San Antonio by a friend who does not reveal his identity. The facts will be of interest to all who follow Indian affairs.

INDIANS LEAD IN MEXICAN POPULATION

Fourteen million of Mexico's 16,500,000 inhabitants are either full-blooded Indians or part Indians, according to education department figures.

The 1930 census showed 5,500,000 full-blooded Indians and 8,500,000 persons of part Indian blood. The Indians live mostly in the country and devote their efforts to agriculture.

Has the Exact Date of the Crucifixion Been Found?

The following is an extract of a clipping from the "San Francisco Chronicle" for March 29, 1931, sent to us by courtesy of George A. Lincoln. It revives an interesting and age-old question as to the chronology of the life of Jesus.

Doubts as to the exact date of the crucifixion of Christ may have been set at rest by Professor Oswald Gerhardt, prominent Berlin theologian.

By collecting voluminous biblical, historical, and astronomical data, he has fixed April 7 of the year 30 A. D. as the day on which the Savior was executed.

Difficulty Attends Calculation of Date

Professor Gerhardt explains in a scientific journal that fixing this date was by no means a simple affair. As a matter of fact, arguments could be advanced that the crucifixion year might be 29, 30, 31, 32, or 33.

Jesus made his first appearance in public, Professor Gerhardt explains, after the advent of Saint John the Baptist, which was, according to the Gospel of Saint Luke, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar. The Emperor Augustus having died A. D. 14, the fifteenth year might have been either A. D. 28 or 29.

But Tiberius had the rank of governor and privileges equal to the emperor, while Augustus was still alive, and Roman provincial coins exist on which A. D. 12 is designated as the first year of Tiberius. That would make the baptism of Jesus by John occur in 26 or 27.

This tallies with the Gospel of Saint John, which says, 11:20, that Jesus first came to Jerusalem at the time when "forty and six years was the temple in building"; that is, in the spring of 27.

Death of Jesus Set on Friday in Passover

The Gospels agree in fixing Christ's public activities as extending over three years and nine months. Jesus died on Friday in Passover, a feast beginning on the 14th Nisan. It was the next day that the crucifixion took place. What date, then, corresponds to Friday, the 15th Nisan?

The first day of the Jewish month was the one on which the young moon's crescent first became visible. Therefore the question resolved itself into this: In which of the years 29 to 33 did, after a new moon, the first Nisan fall on such a day that the 15th should be Friday?

To answer this astronomical problem Professor Gerhardt studied tables of half a dozen scientists who had calculated the moon's periods and ascensions at Jerusalem. The result pointed to the April 7 of 1900.

Holden Stake

Holden

On March 17 Holden community was shocked and saddened by the death of Sister W. S. Macrae. Brother Macrae was called home from his work at the office, and just a few minutes after his arrival she passed away. Sister Macrae had not enjoyed good health for several years. Her death was caused by a hemorrhage of the lungs. For thirty-six years of her life she was the wife of a missionary, sharing with him the sacrifices of companionship, homelife, and carrying the burden of both mother and father in the home of a large family. Her loyalty is equaled, only, by those who give their lives in the welfare of others. Deep sympathy goes to Brother Macrae and family in their bereavement.

Sunday, March 22, W. O. Hands, of Kansas City, was here. He occupied the pulpit at the eleven o'clock service and again at the evening service. Both lectures were appreciated. His illustrated lecture in the evening, on the subject, "How We Found the Graves of Joseph and Hyrum Smith," was edifying.

The Holden stake conference met at Holden March 27, 28, and 29. Though the weather was very unfavorable, and many people were sick, attendance was good. Apostle F. Henry Edwards was present over Saturday and Sunday. His inspiring lectures did much to satisfy our needs.

Easter was observed by a fine sacrament service in the morning and an Easter cantata by the local choir in the evening. The choir is under the direction of Floy Powell.

Sunday, April 12, W. S. Macrae, pastor of Holden Branch and president of the Holden Stake, baptized five members of the Shutt family, of East Lynne, Missouri.

Knobnoster

The sacrament service of April 5 was splendid. In the evening an Easter pageant was given by the primary department. Sisters Steel and Burgess were in charge, assisted by Sister J. T. Nutt, musical director, in the preparation of the musical program.

Pastor J. T. Nutt, who has been confined to his bed with the flu, is some better. Quite a number of our group have been afflicted with this malady.

James Peery, an aged brother, recently suffered a stroke of paralysis. His condition is critical. E. E. Petre was called Monday, to Independence, to attend the funeral of his son-in-law, Ray Hands.

Atherton

A few Sundays ago the Saints at Atherton were pleasantly entertained by a group of Saints from Lexington, who gave a play which was written by a member of their congregation.

R. D. Weaver has been here twice in the last month and preached two sermons. Last Sunday A. E. Allen discussed the new budget plan of the general church, made a clear explanation of the church expenditures, and urged the Saints to be loyal to the present needs of the church.

The glee club has been to Bates City and Blue Springs to sing and the ladies' quartet visited Lexington and Buckner Branches.

Owing to the weather only a few of the Saints attended the stake conference, but those who did gave a report of the good things they were permitted to enjoy.

March 15 we celebrated a golden wedding. Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Thompson, of Atherton, were feted by relatives and church friends in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. They were married at Rushville, Illinois, and spent the greater part of their lives there. They moved to Atherton eight years ago. At noon a dinner was given at the home of their daughter, Mrs. D. R. Hughes, in Atherton. A short time later two hundred members of Atherton group presented an impressive program at the church in their honor. The church was appropriately decorated, and scenes in pantomime depicted their lives from school days to old age. These were intermingled with musical readings and old love songs by the glee club and the congregation. An original poem in their honor was written by Richard Bullard. The wedding was depicted in Tom Thumb style in old-fashioned costumes. In behalf of their friends the pastor, Amos E. Allen, presented them with an inscribed autograph album, a large wedding cake, and two gold coins. Their relatives presented them a bouquet of roses. Everyone present was served with a neat package of fruit cake tied in white paper and gold ribbon. R. D. Weaver made the address of the evening.

Marshall

The loving Spirit of the Master was with us at the sacrament meeting Easter morning.

Our blind brother, Charles B. Ridge, passed away Good Friday morning, having suffered a stroke of paralysis. He was buried Easter Sunday at Ridge Park Cemetery. Elder C. F. Scarcliff, of Holden Stake, gave the funeral sermon. The little church was full of neighbors and friends to pay respect to our brother. He leaves to mourn, a widow, two sons, and two daughters as follows: William Silas Ridge, Ralph M. Ridge, Mrs. Jessie Harlow, and Mrs. Helen Stark, who came from Springfield to the funeral. He bore a good testimony to the great latter-day work, which was a great comfort to him in his blindness.

Saints were pleased to listen to a good sermon by Harold G. Thayer Sunday night, March 29.

Lees Summit

There seem to exist here a feeling of good will and a desire to press upward to Zion. These attitudes are very necessary in the task which this gospel holds out for us to accomplish.

In spite of unfavorable weather conditions at times, a faithful group meets at the church on Wednesday night for prayer meeting. A large percentage of the attendants are young people. We have enjoyed God's Spirit on many occasions.

The Gleaners have sponsored many improvements which help to make our church home attractive. They meet at the church on Thursday to quilt for the Sanitarium and to do classwork.

Brother S. D. Condit writes encouragingly from Arizona: "The outlook of the work in Bisbee was never brighter than at present. I was permitted to baptize U. S. Ratteree, of Warren, three weeks ago. His wife was baptized by E. R. Davis some years ago. Douglas and Bisbee Branches meet May 3 for union all-day services at the home of Orrión Miller, whose family is interested in the gospel. We are hoping to see even more interest among our friends."

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

On Sunday evening Apostle F. Henry Edwards was the speaker here. This week he is visiting the churches of the stake.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer will hold a series of meetings at Central Church the week of May 10 to 17. This series will lead up to the stake conference May 17 and 18.

The ladies' club has done a commendable work during the past winter. One of its projects is the publication of a stake directory, giving names and addresses of all known members in the stake. This will shortly come from the press. Tomorrow the club will have its regular luncheon and program. Though the year's work is drawing to a close, there is still opportunity for all ladies of Central Church to join the group.

The choir visited Quindaro Church Sunday evening and presented the cantata, "Olivet to Calvary."

The sermon during the Sunday morning church school session was by Bishop C. A. Skinner.

Argentine Church

Stake President C. E. Wight was the morning speaker Sunday, and in the evening Elder Levi Gamit occupied the sacred desk. Both sermons did much to encourage the members.

At Central Church at 3 p. m. seventy-five of the local priesthood were addressed by Apostle F. Henry Edwards, who exhorted them to pray, study the books of the church, and as leaders to be more active in their work, doing their part to relieve the present condition of stress in the church. Brother Edwards and Apostle J. A. Gillen will separately occupy pulpits at seven local churches this week.

Fourth Church

"Stewardship" was the topic of H. J. Bullard at the eleven o'clock morning hour March 22. Pastor J. O. Worden talked in the evening. On the following Sunday Elder Julian Gough read Matthew 7 and used as his text Ecclesiastes 12:3. Elder E. W. Lloyd preached on "Faith" that night.

At the family service April 5 Wilma Smith sang a solo; Bernice Sneed read a paper on the life of Christ; Tyra Lueking told the beautiful story of the resurrection.

Brother Marion Sneed was the morning speaker April 12, and Pastor Worden occupied in the evening, reading John 15: 1-14 and choosing for a text Romans 8: 6.

Coldwater, Michigan

A string of pearls: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." This Coldwater Branch has elected to do, and the services have been greatly blessed with divine approval. In the language of the beloved Apostle: "health" prevails "even as thy soul prospereth."

The church school, the pulpit, and the school of expression with all other departments, led by competent workers and teacher, are intensely interesting. The response on the part of the members is good. Every festival day is used to impress a lesson not of this world but for it. So Easter, more significant than some others, gave opportunity to the leaders to impress in unforgettable terms the mission of Jesus in unlocking another and an eternal world. The city paper gave credit to this undertaking in the following paragraph:

"An Easter cantata and pageant was presented Sunday night at the Cold Water Latter Day Saints church to a capacity crowd. The cast and ensemble were of the pastor's devising, clustering around the resurrection of Jesus. Much artistry was shown by the choir and junior department in impressing the ancient scenes of the death, burial, and resurrection. Colored lights and tableau made the lesson more vivid."

Brother Scott was called to Galien, Michigan, last week, to officiate in the funeral of a citizen of that town, and later was in Bryan, Ohio, to preach the funeral sermon of Brother Ernest Myers, aged fifty-eight, who died very suddenly. During the past three months Brother Scott has conducted the funerals of three nonmembers in Coldwater.

D. T. Williams, of the Quorum of Twelve, is announced as the speaker at the church the evening of April 15.

The press by liberal management is giving our work an influence here as also are the lives of the Saints.

Brother Starr Corless, former branch president, is yet in Georgia.

The Women's Department is industriously helping the branch.

Mallard, Iowa

Elder E. Y. Hunker has been helping in this branch. He came home with Brother and Sister Benjamin and Brother William Truog, who attended the priesthood meeting at Dow City. His services continued for a week. On Sunday evening he spoke on "Repentance," and some of his discourses were concerning the signs of the times and the future. He gave us instruction and warning, and his closing sermon was in regard to our latter-day prophet. We feel that his talks and visits in our homes were very beneficial. It is our prayer that we shall heed his instruction and be more obedient children, doing the things our Master would have us do.

Good weather during the past month has permitted many visitors to be present at our services, and for their presence and help we are grateful. Among these have been the Edwards, Peterson, and Pierson families, who are with us whenever circumstances permit. Brother and Sister Roy Hartshorn and children, formerly of Cameron, Missouri, now live at Marathon, Iowa, and we are pleased to have them so near. Members have lately been present also from Cherokee.

Stockton, California

Elder G. P. Levitt was here the latter part of March and first day or two of April and delivered a series of appropriate pre-Easter discourses, the last being "Christ's Victory." On Easter Sunday a short program was given by the church school, followed by the communion hour.

All winter the branch has been active, and here we attempt to briefly chronicle a few of the outstanding events.

Elder G. P. Levitt opened a series of meetings March 4 and continued for a week. There was a priesthood meeting on Saturday and a banquet for the priesthood and their wives. Members from Modesto and Sacramento were here. Sacramento's orchestra furnished the music.

Bishop Edward Ingham was here the following morning and delivered a good sermon.

The Ever Ready Class, which set twenty-five dollars as a goal for this year's Christmas offering fund, gave a weight party on Saint Patrick's birthday eve in the lower auditorium of the church. They invited the adult division to spend the evening with them. Forty were present, and a sum of more than seven dollars was cleared. This class was organized early in the year.

Dolores Bolton was baptized by the pastor February 15.

Several from this branch attended the institute held in Modesto during the latter part of January.

Recreational activities this far in the year have included New Year's parties at the home of Sister Kaiser for the adult division, and at the home of Brother and Sister Bolton for the young people, a surprise party by the Women's Department for Sister Vallem, a benefit supper for the family of the district president, and a Valentine party for the Ever Ready Class.

One evening during the Easter vacation the Ever Ready Class was splendidly entertained with a party at the home of Lesta Darrow.

There were few changes in branch officers, and the new religious educational program was adopted early in the year and at once put into operation.

In February Elder Will Dawson spent one Sunday with us, preaching two good sermons. With the pastor he administered to Robert Stevens, who, following a serious accident, was in the hospital at Lodi. Through the prayers of all this lad was spared to be with us.

Holden Stake Conference

The forty-second Holden stake conference met at Holden, Missouri, March 27. Friday evening at 7.30 a program was given by members of the stake, in charge of W. H. Eliason. Because of the inclement weather, the attendance was light.

The Saints met for prayer service Saturday, March 28, at eight o'clock in the morning, in charge of G. R. Wells, R. F. Moorman, and E. A. Davis. G. R. Wells and W. H. Eliason conducted classes the remainder of the forenoon, Brother Wells's theme: "Functioning Religion," Brother Eliason, "Methods in Religious Education."

The conference assembled for business at 1.30 p. m. It was moved that the stake presidency preside over and make all necessary arrangements for the conference. Gladys Beebe acted as secretary and G. R. Wells assistant. F. A. Cool and G. R. Wells were chosen to fill vacancies in the stake high council. A committee composed of J. A. Koehler and Amos E. Allen was appointed to express the appreciation of the conference to the brethren who have been released. The following resolution was presented and accepted: "Whereas, the retrenchment policy, made necessary by the financial depression, has resulted in the release of Elders J. W. Davis, Ellis Rathbun, W. H. Eliason, and Edward Larsen, who have labored earnestly under their appointments in Holden Stake, therefore be it resolved, that we, the members of the Holden Stake in conference assembled, express to them our regrets that such action was necessary, and that we also express our appreciation for their services, with best wishes for a speedy adjustment of their affairs which will enable them to continue to employ their efforts for the upbuilding of the kingdom."

The following resolution was also presented by G. R. Wells, and adopted by the conference: "Whereas, the hand of death has removed from our midst our sister, Mrs. W. S. Macrae, and whereas, her life was characterized by devotion to high ideals, with loyalty to her family and the church, and whereas, she shrank not from sacrifice, but spent herself to the uttermost in behalf of the cause she loved; therefore, be it resolved, by this conference of the Holden Stake that we also have sustained a great loss, and we hereby extend to our worthy president, W. S. Macrae, and his family our heartfelt sympathy, and we pray God to pour into their sorrowing hearts the oil of consolation in this time of trial."

The conference heard short talks by Amos E. Allen, J. A. Koehler, E. A. Davis, Apostle F. H. Edwards and F. A. McWethy. After adjournment visiting and local Saints made a visit to the Holden Creamery, under the supervision of Robert Dillon, who is a butter maker. At 7.30, Apostle F. H. Edwards spoke on the subject, "Our Present Need of Repentance."

Sunday morning the young people met at the Holden Home chapel for a prayer service, W. H. Eliason and W. K. Gard in charge. A. E. Allen, and F. H. Edwards conducted classes at the church school hour. Special Easter music was furnished by the Holden Choir at 11 a. m. The sermon was by F. H. Edwards, "Our Need of Pentecost," and seemed to manifest the spirit of Pentecost, which spirit was carried over into the afternoon prayer meeting. This closes one of the most spiritual conferences in the history of the Holden Stake.

Saint Louis (Missouri) Branch

The second spring conference of the young people of Saint Louis Branch and outlying districts was held April 11 and 12 at the local church, Grand and Carter Avenues. The meeting opened Saturday evening, April 11, with a banquet in the lower auditorium of the church. Contrary to the usual custom, there was just one speaker, Floyd M. McDowell, member of the First Presidency. Russell Archibald was toastmaster and A. Carl Larsen had charge of arrangements for the affair. The dinner was prepared by a group of young women, under the direction of Sister Russell Archibald, jr., and Sister Elvin Luff.

Sunday school classwork was suspended Sunday morning, in order that all the young people might take part in a round table discussion directed by Brother McDowell. Due to interest aroused at this meeting, the discussion was continued at a special meeting at 5.30 p. m.

Grace Billinsky and Ruth Archibald had charge of the evening meetings. At 7.30 a musical program was given by Rosebud Carl, Prosper Carl, Mathel Bell Archibald, and Edward C. Bell. Ruth Crabtree and Mary Mizzell gave readings. Following the program, motion picture slides of the "Passion Play," given last summer at Oberammergau, were shown.

Since its last letter to the Herald, Saint Louis Branch has been grieved to learn of the death of Sister Mary Brown, wife of Bruce E. Brown, former pastor of the Saint Louis District. Following his release from the ministry, Brother and Sister Brown went to Detroit, Michigan, to visit relatives. Shortly after their arrival, Sister Brown was seriously injured in an automobile accident. She died April 3, and was buried Monday, April 6, in Detroit. Several members of this branch, including Pastor and Sister Edstrom, Sister Myrtle Trowbridge, Sister Marion Crabtree and her daughter, Ruth, motored to Detroit, to attend the funeral. Unfortunately, they were delayed en route and arrived too late for the services.

There have been ten baptisms this spring. The new members are: Ruth Kessler, Ralph Kessler, Amy Walker, Dorothy Wahl, Jack Parks, Ruth Davidson, June Parks, George Gordon, and Clyde Knussman.

New London, Connecticut

April 13.—Apostle Roy S. Budd preached here in the evening on Palm Sunday. The theme, "Our Present Needs," was stirringly presented.

This branch has adopted the new plan of religious education which has greatly facilitated local activities.

A play and musical was recently given by the young people's division for the benefit of the mortgage fund. Several of those who played instruments were from the children's division. Thirty-five dollars and twenty-nine cents was cleared.

Easter Sunday morning was celebrated by a program of music, recitations, and tableau of the scene at the tomb. Due to the sacramental service following, the choir rendered the anthem, "The Magdalene," during the first program. The church was effectively decorated with palms, Easter lilies, and (handmade) wisteria. Tulips were given to the children.

The adult group has been active. Social programs have been well attended by members and nonmembers. This group has also contributed to the mortgage fund.

Attendance at services is gradually increasing. Of course Easter Sunday was a banner day, with fifty-three in attendance at the first service.

Independence

Stone Church

Bishop L. F. P. Curry occupied the Stone Church pulpit at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning, choosing for his text Paul's words to Timothy: "Nevertheless, the foundations of God standeth sure." During his discourse he frankly narrated some of the things relating to the financial situation of the church, and dwelt to an extent on the course we should pursue in order to emancipate ourselves from the bondage of debt. His sermon was imbued with hope and faith. The work of God, he said, had passed through many crises, the greatest of all being faced when Christ was upon the cross. Today we are confronted by a money crisis, but in this as in all other crises we should keep in remembrance the various promises of God made to us—that the gospel shall be preached in all the world, that God's hand is set to redeem Zion, and "the foundations of God standeth sure."

The Stone Church Choir sang "Judge Me, O God," by Gounod, Paul Craig directing. Nina Smith contributed to the musical program a lovely soprano solo, "Leave It with Him," and there was an organ-piano number by the Miller Brothers.

This month the junior young people in their 10.45 morning worship service are "Adventuring with Christ in Truth," and their theme for Sunday was "The Freedom Obtained by Truth." Elder L. E. Flowers was the speaker. In the stand were the pastor and Priest Gerald Phillips. Between Barnhardt, from Walnut Park, played a violin solo, and the story was by Ruth Cool. Pianists were Willa Mae Redfield and Lora Strachan.

The service on Sunday evening at the Stone Church was in honor of the workers in the church school. Over one hundred officers and teachers are engaged in the work of education in the Stone Church Sunday school. These were given special place of honor at this service. The meeting was preceded by a song service, during which the new Saints' Hymnal was introduced to the congregation. Some old as well as new songs were sung. Elder S. A. Thiel offered the invocation. President F. M. McDowell brought to the parents and teachers the great task that is before them in the molding of Christlike characters. He stressed the fact that a great faith is necessary for the carrying out of the task intrusted to them. Mrs. Daniel Lewis played the organ and contributed to the service an organ solo.

At the regular monthly meeting of the White Masque Players April 13, Leonard Lea discussed "Ibsen and the Modern Theater," and reviewed the play "Peer Gynt." Following the review, Mrs. Leonard Lea presented a scene from "Peer Gynt," character parts being played by Helen Brackebury, Hortense Dempsey, and Mark Dievendorf.

The cast of "Buccaneers of the Nertz," a burlesque presented two nights last week by the Wahdemna Choral Club, included about sixty persons. The production was written by a member of the club, LeRoy Smith, and included in its cast two people of Happy Hollow radio repute. This entertainment which is an annual affair of the club won large response from the people of Independence. The dining hall, where the scene of the burlesque was laid, was completely filled with spectators on the first night.

Four Girl Scout troop committees were organized at a meeting the evening of April 13, to support the work of the four newly organized Girl Scout troops of the congregation. Only one troop is as yet registered with national headquarters, that captained by Mrs. Don Cox, Troop 46, and in charge of the following committee: Mrs. Clarence Savage, Mrs. William Ely, Mrs. James Cochran, and Mrs. John F. Sheehy. Other committees in charge of the troops to be registered as soon as the girls attain Tenderfoot rank are: Mrs. Fred O. Wilkinson, Mrs. Charles F. Grabske, Mrs. F. M. McDowell, and Mrs. Ralph A. Harder; Miss Leta B. Moriarty, Mrs. J. Glenn Fairbanks, Mrs. Alexander McIntosh, and Mrs. H. W. Harder; and Mrs. Ray Moler, Miss Ina Hattey, Mrs. Pearl W. Moriarty, and Miss Opal Hill. These committees have supervision of approximately ninety Girl Scouts-to-be.

Some weeks ago a siege of flu kept President Frederick M. Smith at home and cut down his vitality. Last week he spent at the Sanitarium under observation and treatment. He is now again at home in Kansas City.

A large number of Independence men and boys availed themselves of the opportunity to take training in the four-night scout school, conducted last week at Memorial Hall. Courses were offered junior leaders, commissioners, group committeemen, and scoutmasters. On Sunday one of the largest Courts of Honor held in this region was conducted at Rock Creek School, more than three hundred merit badges being awarded. Troop 223 of the Stone Church, troop 227 of Enoch Hill, and troop 222 of Spring Branch were represented at this court of honor.

Englewood

For the last month attendance in this congregation has been for the most part average, there being a slight increase for the Easter services. On this day there were in the morning a program by the primary and junior departments of the church school and in the evening a Book of Mormon play by the senior department.

Bishop B. J. Scott was the speaker for the morning service last Sunday. His text was taken from Psalms. In the evening Elder Bailey, of Tulsa, talked to the congregation after the play from Elbert A. Smith's series of church history. Brother Bailey was blessed by one of the characters portrayed in the play nearly seventy years ago.

Prayer meetings during the month have suffered a slight decrease in attendance, but a special effort will be made during the next four weeks to counteract the tendency to remain away from the service of worship and prayer.

Spring Branch

Church school attendance Sunday morning made a new record, there being two hundred and six present. The child of Brother and Sister Lane was blessed at the close of the hour. The program feature at the 6.30 hour of church school was a two-act play, "An Incident out of the Past," written by Sister Irene Roberts and presented by the young people's church school class.

Elder Robert Fish was the speaker to the adult congregation Sunday morning. Brother Leonard Roberts talked to the children in the junior eleven o'clock service, and Elder G. G. Lewis was a visitor in the interests of this meeting. In the evening the Saints listened to a sermon by Brother Joseph Farrow.

The planting season is here, and Spring Branch is taking advantage of the fine weather to plant the church garden.

Gladys Teeter has been ill in the Sanitarium. She is slowly improving. Dorothy Jennings, very low for a time with flu and pneumonia, is reported better.

Flint, Michigan

Sixteen people arose to newness of life out of the waters of baptism early Easter morning. Five of these were adults. The ceremony commenced at 7.30 and was very impressive, stirring the souls of candidates and congregation.

At 9.45 a. m. eight of the candidates were confirmed, and the regular church school service conducted.

A union communion service was held at 2.30 p. m., at which time the other eight candidates were confirmed, Theo Bush was ordained an elder, and William Joplin a deacon.

The evening sermon was delivered by Pastor Thomas L. Clarke on "Fundamental Truths Underlying the Life of Jesus."

South Bend and Mishawaka Branch

902 Reddick Street, Mishawaka, Indiana

April 9.—Fourteen candidates were baptized on the closing day of a four weeks' series of meetings here, March 22, Elder O. J. Hawn, district missionary, officiating. This was an all-day gathering, Saints coming from Gary, Berrien Springs, Niles, Buchanan, Elkhart, Hibbard, and other points. The baptismal service occurred early in the afternoon, at the Y. M. C. A., and a service of confirmation occurred at four o'clock, with preaching at seven in the evening.

This was a day long to be remembered by the members. The house was filled nearly every evening during the meetings, except three or four very stormy nights. Other fine people were interested by the sermons and are attending services regularly.

District President William Osler was here the latter part of last week. His help was much appreciated.

A fine spirit prevailed on Easter Sunday, when the sacrament was served and followed by prayer and testimony meeting. F. E. Myers was called to the office of priest and Albert Taylor, deacon. Ordinations were had Wednesday evening, Elders J. W. McKnight and V. L. Coonfare officiating.

The prayers of the church are asked in behalf of Sister Orpha Coonfare, confined to bed with tuberculosis.

The gospel work is progressing here, though hard times prevent rapid progress in the construction of our church edifice. We are hopeful of the future.

Dunn Center, North Dakota

Because of the open winter in this region Sunday school attendance has continued good. Not more than two or three services were altogether missed this winter.

A large crowd congregated the evening of December 19 to enjoy the Christmas program, tree, gifts, and treats.

Two days later the branch business meeting was held at which Brother Lester H. Anderson was reelected branch president, Brother Chet Moffett, deacon, and Brother Frank Anderson, solicitor.

The local group here received a visit from Elder Charles J. Smith March 15. An all-day meeting with picnic dinner was held at the church, and Brother Smith preached three helpful sermons on the theme of obedience to God's law. There was large attendance at every service, and Saints and friends drove as far as thirty miles to be present.

The Sunday school observed Easter with a pageant, "The Uplifted Cross." Credit is due the committee in charge. And it also remembered the birthday of Saint Valentine with a party.

Though members here are few in number and live far apart, we are endeavoring to do all we can for the cause of Christ.

Woodbine, Iowa

The first outing of the season was enjoyed by the young people of the branch March 31 under the leadership of Charles Cushing. About forty-five young members and their friends drove into the country for a wiener roast. After a feast around the bonfire, games were played in the moonlight; then the crowd gathered about the fire for a song fest, led by Frank Fry and Howard Reynolds.

A young people's society has been recently organized here for the purpose of securing better cooperation in church and recreational activities. Charles Young was elected president and has fine fellow officers to assist him.

Under the leadership of the chorister, Gladys Chiles, a choir of young people is making progress.

A series of summer gatherings—parties, wiener roasts, and volley ball meets—is planned for this young group of thirty-five members. Woodbine should be an enjoyable place for young Saints this summer. Age does not limit attendance at any of these affairs. All are welcome.

San Francisco, California

Little Brown Church, Caselli and Danvers

Easter morning came with sunshine and clear skies. The priesthood gathered at eight o'clock for a prayer meeting. The usual first Sunday of the month communion service was postponed for one week in order that this branch might listen to an Easter sermon. Pastor Herbert Hinton talked on "The Resurrection," while the children, in their own room, held service.

We are working under the new plan of the church school, which seems to be generating new zeal and spirit among the members. It gives to the young more opportunity for self-expression in music, song, etc.

"Why Seek Ye the Living?" was the pageant presented in the evening by the Idola Club. Brother Saxe gave a short talk to the large crowd gathered to see the beautiful dramatic presentation.

Our young people are becoming more and more interested in dramatics. They dramatized "The Conversion of Paul" during the study hour on Sunday night, March 22. The elderly people entertained, and the branch history was recalled. Some told about the time when the Z. R. L. S. was first organized.

Elder John W. Rushton, of Oakland, California, was here three nights last month, presenting splendid talks on "The Life of Christ." On one of these nights the young people honored him with a banquet.

The women gave a dinner March 26. They also gave one during the Red Cross drive, sharing the proceeds with the Red Cross.

We have adopted the envelope system of financing the branch. In this way we hope to reach some who do not regularly attend and perhaps to interest them once again in the gospel.

Dayton, Ohio

April 17.—Dayton has a good list of prospects to whom we are trying to tell the good news of the gospel. Elder John R. Grice, district missionary, is expected here soon, to conduct meetings. This year we have been favored with several visits from District President A. E. Anderton.

Church services are now conducted in a church building located in the west end of Dayton, corner of Woodward and Howell Avenues.

Preaching services have been of a high order, the following members of the ministry speaking: Elders Rockwell, Stephens, May, and Rieske.

The beginning of the year found the following officers installed to lead branch activities: Pastor, Floyd T. Rockwell; assistant pastor, Elder Francis May; director of recreation and church school, Elder Franklin Rieske. Others were chosen to assist in various phases of the work.

Brother W. O. Hands, of Kansas City, Missouri, stopped here on his tour of central United States and Canada, to give an illustrated lecture.

A pioneer member of this branch has passed from our midst, Charles H. Warn. He was the first member of the church to come to Dayton, and never missed an opportunity to tell the gospel to those associated with him. He was a member forty years.

Brother J. T. Scott, of Los Angeles, California, writes that the Southern California district conference, conducted April 3, 4, and 5, was a peaceful and spiritual meeting. Three adults were baptized.

An institute of Northwestern Iowa District is to be held at Dow City, Iowa, May 2 and 3. Some matters of business pertaining to ordinations are to come up, and in harmony with our resolution, notice is hereby given of the same. We are planning class work for both Saturday and Sunday, and are asking Brothers E. Y. Hunker and J. F. Garver to be with us. Especially do we ask that you will come on Sunday morning in prayer and fasting, that at the sacrament service God will be pleased to bathe us with his Holy Spirit. In harmony with the resolution on our minutes, we are asking the Saints to come self-sustaining, to the end that the faithful group at Dow City might be lifted up and strengthened by our meeting with them.—Gerald Gunsolley, district president.

V. OUR OWN MESSAGE FIRST

Some time ago one of our ministers, himself a young man but occupying an important post as pastor, reported that numbers of young people had come to him inquiring the difference between this church and other churches. They seemed, he said, to feel that there was no great difference. To correct that situation he had determined that from his pulpit there should be preached a distinctive message dealing with the history, purposes, and doctrines of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

Why should our young people anywhere be left to think there is no difference between this church and other churches? Is that a correct conclusion? If so, we should disband, because there are other churches better equipped and better financed with whom we could unite our forces. If there are fundamental and distinctive differences, if we have a distinct and unique message, it should be so continuously and forcefully presented that our young people as well as others who hear us will not be left in doubt as to our individuality.

It is complained occasionally that our young people, many of them, are ignorant concerning our church history and doctrine. Why should such a condition continue to exist? If we are really to put first things first, our own message should have right of way. I am not particularly interested now about the machinery through which this situation shall be corrected. I will not quarrel with anyone about terminology. Call it religious education or call it preaching. Go at it through the class or from the pulpit, or both, but wherever it is done and however it is done, let our own history, ideals, doctrines, and objectives be taught, not only to our own people but to the world. For example, with such an objective in view, the Y. K. T. Class, of Independence, put on a series of lectures, "Know Your Own Church."

A Unique Ministry

Particularly upon the ministry there devolves a special responsibility to present our distinctive message. For that purpose God called them and the church sent them forth, and for that purpose the people have sustained them by their tithes and offerings.

There are many inviting fields of research and thought open today. It is easy to wander afield in physics, psychology, biology, philosophy, ethics, etc., etc., etc., and from those fields gather all of our material for our sermons. From all of these fields, and others, we may gather much to illustrate our message and help "put it over"; but to go so far afield that the message itself is consistently lost sight of is a sad mistake.

There are thousands of able and polished men in the world who can present these other themes as well as we can, oftentimes better; and they are paid to do that work. There are few men indeed to present our distinctive message; and they are called, ordained, sent forth, and their families cared for and their expenses met—to do that particular work. Paul said, "Woe unto me if I preach not the gospel." There were able men to preach the very remarkable and interesting philosophies of Greece and Rome. There were but few men to preach the particular message that had been committed to Paul. Paul saw the need to do the job given to him to do. We have a unique message. We should have a unique ministry. It ought not to be necessary to listen long to one of our ministers to find out what he represents.

A Rich and Varied Message

Our message is built upon the fundamental gospel principles named in the sixth chapter of Hebrews. Necessarily it includes the story of the great "restoration of the gospel"; the story of "the angel's message." And of necessity it leads up to and includes all that is involved in the project of building Zion. Admittedly it is a broad and a delightful field; but let us not get lost in the dim, far outlying territories and forget who and what we are and that our every effort should drive toward the central and fundamental truths typical of our work as Latter Day Saint ministers. For woe unto us if we preach not the gospel.

We have a colorful history, containing not only religion but romance and adventure. There is the story of the angel's message with all its connotations. Our doctrines are both scriptural and logical. Our ideals and objectives are glorious, culminating in our Zion program and including therein the most inspiring ideals of human relations, man to man, and man to his Creator. It is a rich field.

Our pioneer ministers, men "of power and excellent wisdom" (Doctrine and Covenants 117: 5), did not read so many books as we read today; but let us admit it, they read the three books of the church which contained their distinctive message very carefully. They knew their books. They knew their message. A man might know everything else in the world to know, excepting the one thing that he ought to know in his business, and still be ignorant. They could and did learn many things from other sources; but concerning the fundamental things of life and salvation, they were prepared "to teach and not to be taught."

To Teach and Not to Be Taught

There was something back of that divine statement, "Ye are sent forth to teach and not to be taught." Certainly we do not need to borrow either doctrine or ceremony from other churches. In fact, they have swung our way on many important doctrines during the past century. I am somewhat skeptical concerning borrowing very liberally even from their methods. Their most modern and advanced methods have not saved the Protestant churches from a decline in spiritual power. Will those methods do for us what they have failed to do for others. Be that as it may, concerning the fundamentals of religion and life we were sent forth to teach, and if spiritual power and light are still ours, and they are if we will to use them, let us go forth to teach. Let our own message have right of way.

Remember the Source of Our Light and Power

The great God who founded this work and inspired our fathers when they drew near to him in humility and prayer is still the source of power, wisdom, and light. Let us not pass him by to seek the guidance of feeble rays from lesser luminaries. He has said:

"Hearken ye elders of my church whom I have appointed: ye are not sent forth to be taught, but to teach the children of men the things which I have put into your hands by the power of my Spirit; and ye are to be taught from on high."—Doctrine and Covenants 43: 4.

"Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen."—Matthew 28: 20.

The First Saints' Hymnal

The Business Manager tells us that the first order received for a copy of the new Saints' Hymnal was Mrs. E. B. Purcell, of Missouri Valley, Iowa. The first copy shipped went to her. Though there has been long delay in the production of the book, this earliest customer never complained, and it is hoped that she and many others will be pleased with the fine new books.

Announcement of the prices for single copies and for quantities may be found in the advertisement at the back of this issue. The Management says that since it has cost so much to produce the book, purchasers should send checks with the orders.

Biography

Last week's Herald carried the final installment of the biography of Elder Arthur Leverton, which contained the record of a career of which the church may be proud.

We wonder how our readers liked it. We would be glad to hear from them concerning it, or concerning the publication of other biographical material.

Brother Leverton's biography was put into shape through the efforts, as our readers will recall, of two young women who took the trouble to record the story as he told it. Alone, he would not have had the energy to give the full account. With their help this fine account was made available to Herald readers.

This example offers a suggestion to other young people who could do something for the church by helping to preserve the stories of the lives of older members of the church whose memories contain important facts and reminiscences concerning events of earlier years.

We know that it is dangerous, but we are taking this chance. We shall be glad to receive similar biographies of other people who are now in their middle or declining years of service.

The editors, of course, will have to be the judges of the material, as to whether it can be used or not. Those who write are asked to remember our request for typewritten manuscript, double spaced.

Faithfulness

In times of difficulty the fundamental human virtues become more precious because they find fewer lives in which they can shine. Integrity, dependability, and faithfulness stand out above all other human characteristics.

Faithfulness is the gold of human character. It makes a man the same good and dependable creature today that he was yesterday, and gives a guarantee that he will not change when tomorrow comes. One faithful person, though he may be poor in money and possessed of but few talents, is worth more than a multitude of people who are uncertain of their convictions, changeable in their affections, and slipping on the path of their spiritual life.

It is easy to lose hope, to become uncertain, to quit trying, or to stir up trouble. These things require no talents, no character, no stability, no particular traits of admirable personal power.

Faithfulness is sometimes easy, and many times hard. But it is always dignified, always true, and always possessed of a certain invulnerability which is imparted to a man when he gives his heart and mind to God.

Now if ever the church needs men and women of faith and strength, people who can stand fast, people who can endure. Now are we to be tested to see whether our conversion to the gospel of Christ has given us added strength and faith, or whether we are still as we were when the world claimed us.

Does spiritual regeneration make a difference in men and women? Is there something imparted to them which gives them a new and superior strength for meeting the trials and shocks of life?

We believe that our spiritual regeneration does make a difference. We believe that it does give us added power, that will bear fruit in the Christian virtues, and above all, in faithfulness. L. L.

Hints for Speakers and Writers

BE CHARITABLE

By L. L.

The clipping which is quoted below seemed to give so perfect an expression to the universal distresses of editors that we think it merits presentation to our readers and contributors through this column.

If all the critics could be brought together in a meeting to discuss the serious question, "What Is Wrong with Our Paper?" it is quite certain that there would be a terrible quarrel, so great would be the differences in opinion and the varieties of advice.

An ancient story tells of a man and a boy traveling, the man riding a donkey, and the boy leading it. They met one who criticized the man for being so brutal as to make the boy walk, so the two changed places. Soon they met another who cried out at seeing the poor old man walking while the boy rode, whereupon both of them rode the donkey. It was not long before they met a member of the S. P. C. A. who halted and threatened them for their cruelty to the donkey. To please him, both the old man and the boy dismounted and led the donkey. Then they met a merry wag who laughed and called them fools because both walked when one could have ridden. Then they decided: "It is impossible to please everybody. We shall have to do the best we can by ourselves."

But here is the clipping:

The Joy of Being the Editor

Getting out this paper is no picnic.
If we print jokes people say we are silly;
If we don't, they say we are too serious.
If we clip things from other papers
We are too lazy to write them ourselves;

Notice of Appointment

Owing to condition of health which will prevent Apostle J. F. Curtis from taking the field for some months, it has been deemed advisable to ask Apostle J. A. Gillen to assume joint responsibility with Apostle M. A. McConley over the territory formerly supervised by Brethren Curtis and McConley, namely, California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Utah, Idaho, Montana, Arizona, British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Wyoming. This new assignment will not release Apostle Gillen from general oversight of the Southern field, of which he will remain in charge until further notice.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY.

INDEPENDENCE, MISSOURI, April 20, 1931.

The fundamental issues are: Is the race a number of isolated and discordant peoples, or is it a family in which all nations are related? Is each nation a law unto itself, with no such things as international right, or is humanity a fact with the same moral obligations upon nations as upon men to be righteous? Is humanity a brotherhood, and is it true that God has made of one blood all nations of men, and has fixed their appointed periods and the definite boundaries of their dwellings? Shall we have a federation of the nations with an agreement in law for fair dealing, or shall the nations, as of old, seek their own good and hold all they can seize from the weaker? Are the principles of morality, of justice, or stewardship and self-sacrifice, obligatory upon nations?—S. Z. Batten.

The reason why evil can not win in the end is that God created all things, and all things are subject to his will. To disobey and defy God is to play a losing game.—Selected.

If we don't, we are struck on our own stuff.
If we don't print contributions,
We don't appreciate true genius;
And if we do print them, the paper is filled with junk.
If we make a change in the other fellow's material, we are too critical;
If we don't we are asleep.
Now like as not some guy will say
We swiped this from some magazine.
WE DID.

A Victorious Life

By J. E. Lancaster

From sermon in memory of J. Franklin Ebeling, February 7, 1931.

But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then is Christ not risen: and if Christ be not risen, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God, because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ: whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not. . . . In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law. But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.—1 Corinthians 15: 13-15, 52-57.

One declares that to many persons heaven and hell and Christ, and even God, seem remote. But there is one thing that is not remote, and that is death. You may run or ride away from it. You may try to forget it or hide it with flowers, or with adjectives, or with theories, but death is there, an indisputable fact in a universe of doubt, ever bringing that everlasting and inevitable question, "Is there, after all, such a thing as immortality?"

I tell you that man is immortal, and that we shall again meet those we love and have lost for a time.

This Book is filled from cover to cover with the testimonies of men who give us the assurance of immortality. We have the testimony of Hosea, Isaiah, Daniel, Ezekiel, Job, and many other prophets of the Old Testament. Hosea prophetically informs us, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death."—Hosea 13: 14. In the New Testament we find supporting statements in the books of John, Revelation, The Acts, Romans, Thessalonians, Hebrews, Corinthians, Colossians—why mention them all? Revelation 20: 12 tells us, "And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works."

If we do not believe in immortality, this is not the hour nor the place for us to receive conviction. There are here today represented many creeds, yet doubtless all of one belief, namely:

Believing that God is the Maker and Creator of all; that he sent his Son Jesus Christ into the world for mankind; that Christ took on the form of a man, left the courts of glory and came to earth, there to learn obedience in the flesh (the Spirit was always obedient) by the things that he suffered; that he established his kingdom; was taken of his friends, tried and scourged; was crucified and descended into the grave, to throw off the corruptible body (the flesh), and arose on the third day to everlasting life. Such we believe. Christ said, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead yet shall he live." This is the last great testimony of immortality, and this resurrection gives to all mankind a promise, a bright hope.

I say our creeds may be different, but our belief is the same, and the processes of God will in time—shall I use the expression—reduce us to the same common denominator—a unity of faith and a unity of belief.

Immortality! There is no doubt of it. There is nothing that God has created that shall perish, for his spirit is infinite, from everlasting to everlasting. So we leave the thought of immortality, that we might eulogize this man who has written so well in the Book of Life, and upon which record he inherits his reward.

In West Virginia, sometime prior to August, 1883, there settled a family of strong pioneer stock and firm religious convictions. The father upon the mother's side of the family was a Presbyterian minister. The husband of the mother was an elder in the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. By some decree of God which calls men home seemingly before their time—as this man has been called, for he is only forty-seven years of age, a comparatively young man—this God called his father seven months before the babe was born, the youngest of a family of fourteen children. This child was named, J. Franklin Ebeling. Though Frank knew not the counsel of a loving father, he resolved early in life that this handicap placed upon him should not defeat him in life's program.

At ten years of age he manifested indications of the strong, religious heritage left him by a minister father and a minister grandfather by uniting with the church of his father's choice, from which faith he has not departed to this hour. He loved his mother dearly, and the religion she taught him led him, even to the time of his death, to always attend church on the anniversary of her birth, and on Mother's Day. During her life he took her to church many times. It was upon one of these occasions, while sitting in church during the opening choir number, she was the subject of a heart attack and passed away, at the age of seventy-seven years.

The religion of Frank's mother was not a theoretical thing; it was something to be practiced and lived in daily life. She would much rather go to a neighbor's house to cook a meal, or tend the sick, or perform some other practical service than to hear the best sermon that could be preached by the best one of God's divine ministry.

This same practical religion was the religion of Frank Ebeling. With the discipline that came from the sturdy stock of a pioneer grandfather, and with the driving force that inspired a widowed mother to raise single-handedly a family of fourteen children; these two, coupled with honesty, sincerity, fidelity, loyalty to a trust, brotherly love and humility—the last come only with a personal knowledge of the love and power of our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ—Frank Ebeling was ready to face the world.

In the year 1900 he entered a machine shop. He had been denied the privilege of more than a common school education, for his mother needed both his counsel and assistance. This did not deter Frank from the thing he desired, an education, and that driving force which was the ultimate though indirect cause of his death enabled him in his leisure hours to receive an education through the medium of a correspondence course.

In the year 1906 he chose, as men are wont to do, a wife. He found her to be not only a wife and companion, but a partner as well. There was born to them a son, Ivan, who with his mother of the immediate family, survive the father. Of the family of Frank's mother of fourteen children, four survive: Mrs. Anna Smith, Memphis, Tennessee; Mrs. J. B. Winship, Wheeling, West Virginia; J. E. Ebeling, Colorado Springs, Colorado; and Fred Ebeling, of Kirtland, Ohio.

Frank's religion was like the religion of his mother. There was little theory but much practice, and it began at home. His family was first in all things. Each day for the twenty-five years of his married life, as he slipped away of a morning to his daily task, there was left to be found by his wife a note, on the mantel, on the table, in the middle of the room, anywhere, a note making some little request, leaving some little instruction, and ending always with an endearing term of some kind, usually, "I love you, Mopsie."

Fourteen years ago, in association with Dean Searle, who had charge of the education of Edsel Ford, Frank went into the Ford Trade School. At last, though he knew it not then, he had found his life's work. Here was his opportunity to put into operation the practical religion taught him by his mother and evidenced to him in the belief of his minister father and minister grandfather. In the fourteen years of association with Dean Searle in the Trade School, there has gone out into the markets of life wherever the industry of Ford has touched, hundreds of boys—yea, more—thousands of boys, many of them now holding high executive positions in the world-flung plants of the Ford institution.

The Trade School was his greatest work. In fourteen years he missed but two days from his task. Such loyalty was a part of him. Such fidelity could not be denied. The time came when a new superintendent of production was needed by the Ford interests, and Frank Ebeling was the man chosen to fill the place.

It was a new task, it was a big task, and it required a big man. It required fidelity; it required driving force, such as Frank had; it required a love for mankind that that driving force might be softened of its harshness and yet accomplish its work; it required vision; it required strength. All these were the possessions of Frank Ebeling, but least of all the strength.

Frank developed a slight cold, nothing serious. The cold developed into influenza, but he was proud of his two-day record, and he would not stop. When really unable to work, he continued to go by that driving force which was his, that force which accomplished things. He knew not defeat. But he reckoned not with this foe. On Friday, January 30, he was taken to the hospital, and there immediately developed a battle on the part of the doctors plus the determination of Frank to live, as against the inroads of nature that demanded his life. On Thursday morning, February 5, at 1:00 a. m., the doctors and Frank lost the contest, and Frank Ebeling stepped from this restricted life to a fuller and greater existence.

We ask the question, "Why?" We know not. Could we answer to our satisfaction, we would know the mystery of life, and that to man is not given to know—only to God. We have faith in His love, we have faith in His mercy, we know that His judgments are far and above the finite judgments of mere man. We bow to His will, and say as Victor Hugo has already said: "He has finished his day's work, but he has not finished his life. His day's work began the next morning."

The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare which we all some day must traverse. The thirst for the infinite proves infinity.

Thursday of this week the boys in the Trade School raised a sum of money to be turned over to the State of Michigan. This money is for the reforestation of forty acres of land in the State, to be known as the Ebeling Tract. Such is the esteem in which these boys hold him.

The name of Frank Ebeling will not die in this generation. The boys who have gone from this school, grown now to manhood, remember the teachings of this man. Their sons and their sons' sons shall know of the work he did for their fathers. The life of Frank Ebeling has been a pattern to these boys, and now there is woven in the fabric of the lives of each of them some of the golden threads that are but the reflection of the beautiful character of this one who gave to them their pattern through his own life.

And now, our Father, believing as we do in immortality through the testimony of our brethren, we thank thee for Jesus who hath brought life and immortality to light. We thank thee for the great and living hope that is ours through our Lord Jesus Christ. Confident of thy love, and certain of thy mercy, we know that sometime we shall see each other face to face. It is but an instant until this one who is gone shall again clasp his loved ones in his arms, for time is no longer measured to him, but only to these who are left. In Jesus' name. Amen.

The Philosophy of Jesus in a Modern World

PART THREE

By C. E. Wight

On two occasions within the recent past I have listened to business associates comment on the present-day trend of affairs. Please keep in mind that these men were not discussing the problem from a religious viewpoint, for one of them, at least, is frankly irreligious.

It was rather striking that both of these men should have made almost identically the same statement, which, in effect, was as follows: "It seems as though our present civilization is getting more like that of Rome every day."

It is of particular interest to know that both of these men broached the subject themselves. It was plain to them that from a social if not a religious point of view, there are pagan influences at work in our present-day life which if unchecked will prove deadly.

The coincidence of the same idea being presented by two men whose interests lie entirely outside of the field of religion has caused me to give the matter serious consideration. Of course, it has occurred to me many times. It has occurred to everyone interested in the problem of social and religious life.

If we were to see an individual poised on a bridge ready for a leap into the river, with the evident intent of committing suicide, any one of us would rush to his side to save him from the folly of his own act. To our horrified vision his intent would be clear.

But in the midst of the whirl of our present-day life, with our business, social, and religious life keyed up to keep pace with the hundred-mile-an-hour automobile and the hundred-and-fifty-mile-an-hour airplane, it is not so easy for us to detect an attempted social or religious suicide. I am sure that if we were to realize the dangers involved in some of our present tendencies, we would be no less anxious concerning the saving of our social life than we are interested in the saving of an individual life.

It is interesting to note that our present-day tendencies are very like the acts of a growing child. During its early years, a child is held under the restraint of parents or guardians. The child that is correctly reared is held not by a chain of authority but by a silken cord of love. Under the chain of authority, the child must submit to the decisions handed down from above. Under the cord of love, the child is urged to make his own decisions, so that in the formative period of his life he may be taught to weigh values and make wise decisions.

When the day comes that the rightly guided child goes out into the world on his own responsibility, he is able to meet the problems of life, because he has been trained to weigh the elements of a problem. On the other hand, the one held under unnatural restraints during the years of development is unprepared to meet the problems of life when these restraints are removed.

This illustration will help us in our analysis of the present tendencies in our social life as touching the matter of religion. For centuries there was built up an attitude that religion was largely a matter of external formalism. This is clearly revealed in the laws built up by the children of Israel under the leadership of Moses and others.

Ceremonial became so much a part of their worship, that the entire system of rewards and punishments was builded, not on the thoughts, attitudes, and ideals of men, but rather on their punctilious observance of the ritualistic features of their religion. So far had the people misinterpreted the outward indications of their worship that it became necessary for God to speak through his Prophet Micah and warn them of the important elements of their life, as follows:

"Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil? Shall I give my firstborn for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?"

"He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

But the prophets of old learned, as have the prophets of every succeeding generation, that the people of his own generation are deaf to his warning. It is not strange, therefore, that we find the warning cries of the major and minor prophets to have had very little effect in changing the currents of thought and action among the religionists of their time. This does not mean that their work was in vain. For the contributions they made have come down to succeeding generations to stir the thoughtful to a deeper appreciation of religious values.

When Jesus of Nazareth came into the religious picture, he found a strange background of mingled paganism and religious formalism. Jesus took up the warning of the prophets that religion is not to be measured in terms of external cleansings and body washings, but rather in terms of inward purification and soul cleansing. In rebuking the Pharisees for their religion of outward demonstration, he cried:

"Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites; for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith. . . . for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess."

A few listened to the words of the Master and believed. The majority did not. And even of the few who claimed to believe, many deserted the Master in the hour of his greatest trial.

It is impossible to change the attitudes and habits of men even in a generation, and while the teaching of Jesus had a profound effect upon the few who followed him, it did not remove from them the superstitious attitudes which the centuries had left as a heritage.

Passing rapidly over the centuries which have come and gone since the ministry of the Master, we find the superstitions and restraints of religious belief to have come down to the very recent past. Then a change occurred. Almost everywhere democracy replaced autocracy, though often by a slow and tortuous process. The Magna Charta, the Bill of Rights, and the Declaration of Independence were but outward evidences of the definite break which was taking place between the old and the new. Scientific methods brought to the world a literal treasure house of new discoveries. The world had become released from the old restraints and taboos as swiftly as is the young man thrown upon his own resources when all of his childhood life he has been made to feel the iron hand of governmental control.

No longer forced into a religious mold as to thought and action, is it any wonder that the world has gone to an opposite extreme? Particularly since it has scarcely had time to make the adjustments necessary for a thoughtful acceptance of the enduring elements necessary for the perpetuation of our highest and noblest life.

Is it possible that we can go back now to the teachings of the Master for a solution of our present ills? Do we find in his philosophy the principles which will make possible the steadying of our present social life and an enriching of our religious experiences? In other words, can the philosophy of Jesus be adapted to our modern world?

We are told that on a certain occasion there came to Jesus a ruler among the Jews who had been so thoroughly impressed by the power of the life of Jesus that he was led to exclaim, "Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him."

Then Jesus attempted to teach not only Nicodemus but his own disciples of that hidden power which made it possible for him to do so many mighty works. It is of interest to note that Jesus was not much of a crusader. At the time of preaching his sermon on the mount, the constitutional law of the New Testament, the statement is made, "his disciples came unto him." It will be noted that on this occasion, the ruler came to Jesus. That magnetic impulse which drew men to him is evidently explained in the beautiful Logos philosophy of John when he says of Jesus that "he was the Word made flesh."

Those who in this day are so strongly urging that the greatest sermon ever preached is to be found in the ennobling influence of a good man or a good woman, need only to go back to the days of his flesh to find the one great example to prove the basis of this contention. But it is not enough for us to merely say that he lived the principles of divine life. Surely there must be some way for us to discover the separate elements which constituted this life, so that these elements may be incorporated into our own lives and lead to the similar expression of divinity in human life.

When the ruler admitted to Jesus his recognition of the divine power which Jesus so evidently possessed, the Master quickly gave to him the first key which might be used to unlock the powerful impulses for righteousness. In these words did Jesus give to everyone a priceless jewel:

"Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he can not see the kingdom of God."

It is typical of humanity that Nicodemus did not understand the meaning of the answer. He attempted to place a physical interpretation where a spiritual had been intended. True enough, the later explanation of the Master recognized that physical obedience which, by the immersion of the body typifies the burial of the old life and the resurrection of the new. But the real emphasis of the Master was upon the spiritual rebirth which must be coincident with the physical baptism if a real entrance to the kingdom of God were to be obtained.

As a church we practice the rite of baptism as practiced during the entire ministry of the Master—and done away with at a later time only as a matter of convenience. But we do not believe that a water baptism alone ever saved anyone. Salvation, after all, is not a matter of receiving something ready made, but rather a condition resulting from growth according to divine laws. The only real vigor which can come to our spiritual life is that which comes through a steady and consistent spiritual growth.

Now note. We believe in physical immersion. But that is not all. We believe in spiritual immersion also. What does this mean?

Today we see a boy, listlessly and aimlessly drifting along with the tide of life, the despair of his parents and his instructors. Tomorrow we behold him, animated and enthusiastic, making a real contribution to life. What has happened? We can not say. We can only realize that in some way he has come to himself. Today he is immersed in his great task and making others happy through his contributions.

If you could by any magic place yourself in his position before and after this great phenomenon, you would discover that actually you were beholding a new world. Yet you would know that overhead there were the same stars. Beneath your feet the same grass was growing. The flowers had not changed their color, and the perfume of the roses was no more fragrant.

The change did not take place in the world. It took place in the soul of the boy. Literally he was in the same world, but because of an inner transformation "all things became new."

So when Jesus said, "Ye must be born again," he meant that the immersion should be so complete as to change the entire course of life; so thorough as to give a new vision of the meaning of life; so intensifying as to become the starting point toward the making of the kingdom of God on earth a beautiful reality.

The Living Faith

By C. L. Winniford

"Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."—Hebrews 11: 1.

"Faith without works is dead."—James 2: 17.

I think that every Latter Day Saint should ask himself this question, "How can I make my faith a living faith?" Because of the things that we do know, we believe other things which we do not know, or have not seen. But faith has to do, not only with the future life, but with this life as well. It has to do, not only with miracles, but with the everyday, humdrum events of the average person's life.

We of the great majority, not blessed with any particular distinction, are sometimes inclined to confine our faith either to the abstract, or to the "other fellow." We can believe in the wonderful things that our neighbor tells us about, but can not truly believe that any such thing would ever happen to us. In this we handicap ourselves and prove that our faith is only of the mind, and not of the heart.

James tells us that faith without works is dead, but what kind of works? Does he mean miracles, healing, prophecy, tongues, or teaching? Yes, but that is not all. It is not necessary to do any of those things in order to have a living faith. We are not all given the same gifts, and it is well that we are not, but we are all given something. It is not recorded, in the parable of the talents, that there was any servant of the king who failed to receive even one talent.

They were each given talents according to their individual ability, and much more was expected of the one who received five than of the one who received only one talent. That is, the servant who received five talents had to deliver ten talents to his Lord in order to show the same percentage of advancement that the other servant would have shown had he delivered only two. But he did not even deliver two, merely returning untouched his own talent.

How many of us have wrapped our Lord's money in a napkin and buried it in the earth? Just so often as we do that, just so often our faith becomes dead. For our "talents" are our gifts, and the development and use of that gift is the "work" that will make ours a living faith. If we are given only one gift, we should not neglect it because we were not given five. If we are a musician, we should not refuse to play just because we can not sing. If we can sing, we should not refuse to sing just because some one else can sing better. Or, if there is abso-

Study Your Catalog and Study Your Prospect

By E. B. Hull

Jesus said: "For the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light."—Luke 16: 8.

Business houses have learned by experience that if they want to do big business they must be on the lookout for new customers. The sales agents are furnished with names of prospective buyers of their products, and these agents are always looking for new prospects. Business houses demand that their sales people study salesmanship. Conferences are held, and the men are taught how to approach a prospect, how to talk their line of goods, and above all to become acquainted with the article that he expects to sell. In other words they must sell themselves before they can expect to interest others.

One of the big hardware companies gave to its lutely nothing else we can do, we can be an audience.

To be a good listener is as truly a gift as to be a good speaker.

But suppose we live too far from any branch to attend regularly? We can still apply our faith to our everyday life. We can still discover some gift which we may develop. We can make our faith practical, and not merely abstract. No cook, have she ever so much faith, can expect her cooking to succeed unless she follows the recipe and pays attention to what she is doing. So it is with any other work. Also, if we keep the law of love, if we love our neighbor as ourself, we will unavoidably discover ourselves doing some "work" for the greater glory of God. Love can not remain idle, but must express itself in some way, and such an expression, however humble, is as truly a "work" as any miracle.

If we can perform a kindly act in the name of the Lord, and not for our own glory, then is our faith a living faith. If we can face disappointment, suffering, and loss without being shaken by doubts or bitterness, then is our faith a living faith. If we can look upon all our goods as properly belonging to the Lord, intrusted to us only during our lifetime, and act accordingly, then is our faith a living faith. For faith is not only believing the word of God; it is living it. And remember that the candle in the parlor is no brighter in the sight of the Lord than the one in the kitchen.

sales people a few rules which they were asked to digest:

First—Talk your business, in shop and out of shop.

It is your duty to familiarize yourself with all phases of your business, even to understand the methods and line of your competitors. When this knowledge is mastered, talk your business everywhere.

When coming in contact with prospective customers, talk up your firm's business, and do not talk down the business of your competitor.

Here is where preachers should learn a point: it doesn't pay to run down the beliefs and methods of other organizations all the time. They may have some systems of approach in their methods of obtaining converts that we could utilize in our business.

Second—Cultivate the acquaintance of other sales people.

Why not? Why keep ourselves within ourselves? Why not get together occasionally, and talk over business and the mistakes that all have made in the past? Be friendly with all people, and especially those that are in the same line of business. Let us study the psychology of their salesmanship.

Third—Study your customers and learn their peculiarities.

Know your prospect; he has good qualities; you may like him and his viewpoints when you understand each other. Don't be discouraged if he is not interested with your first approach; he must get acquainted with you and you with him.

Much of our knowledge of people and things comes to us from actual contact. The sympathetic touch, the demonstration of love through personal association brings us into their little world, and we are enabled to see things from their viewpoint, which gives us better opportunity to teach. The poet says:

I find in those whom men call ill, 4
So much to recommend them still;
In those whom men have thought divine,
I find so much of sin and blot,
I hesitate to draw the line
Where God has not.

We should never conclude that others are stupid because they can not get our viewpoint or see things as we see them. We must bear in mind that people understand from past experiences and that to bring an idea into the scope of their mental vision, it sometimes takes a little unlearning as well as learning. You can not transfer a realization of a thought to another immediately just because it is so very clear to you, unless you express or explain it to him in language that he can understand, while looking at the subject from his angle. By so doing, you may be able to make it clear to him.

When talking to a prospect, make your points clear, and don't insult him by telling him that he is all wrong or fifty years behind the times—he may be, but don't tell him so. Don't let him throw you off the track of your argument; stick to your point and strike when the "iron is hot," but don't strike if your head becomes hot. You will be a failure if you do.

Our church must have its members united; they should be in constant touch with all that is going on at headquarters. Those that absent themselves from services lose much. The Lord said: "We should meet together," and "teach one another." Services in our churches are not for a select few—it is not a convention, where the family sends a delegate to represent that family, allowing the rest to remain at home or go somewhere else.

Good salesmen know their catalog. They know the price of everything in regard to what they have to sell, even freight rates. Are you a salesman for Christ? Do you know your church? Do you know the church catalogs? If asked the question, "Why are you a Latter Day Saint?" instead of a member of some other organization, could you give an intelligent reason for the course you have taken? Do you know the line of goods the church has to sell? Have you ever tried to hunt up prospects and educate them yourself, or turn them over to some one that can talk to them? God's catalogs are the three standard books of the church. Do you know the catalogs?

You Are the Church

The bricks and the mortar, the pews and the altar, and all that go to make the building are not the church. The church is you.

Its strength and weakness are revealed in you. What you are, the church is.

The world judges the church through you. You are the measure of the church.

The power of its devotion to God, truth, and humility is the measure of your devotion. You are the church.

The inspiration of its services is the test of your heart. Its stated hours of worship are your obligation. If you fail here, to that extent your failure is written in the church.

You are the church. Its faith is you. Its worship is expressed through you. Your place can not be taken by another. You are the church.

The Lord said to us in these last days: "It becometh every man who has been warned, to warn his neighbor."—Doctrine and Covenants 85:22.

Who are to do the warning? Everyone that has been warned. Some one warned you at some period of your life. Are you doing your duty to others? There are people that seem to be busy using their eyes in trying to locate flaws in their neighbor's lives; they may be working very hard in their endeavor, but they are in the wrong line of business.

Everyone has some faults. Why bother about people's faults? If you must be interested in this line, why not study the catalogs to try and find a recipe for the cure of the ills that you find people are afflicted with?

The home is the first line of defense. Here instruction should commence, especially when the children are small. A child trained in the way it should go is not so liable to depart from it. Or in case it does depart, it will not step so far away as the one not so trained; nor would it be so hard to bring him back, because first impressions never quite let go.

The church of tomorrow depends on what it does with its youth of today. Some churches are more concerned about obligations that give comfort and enjoyment to the adults of the membership. Would it not be well to concern ourselves a little more about the education of the material with which the future church is to be built, and some new members to take the place of the present workers when they no longer can be on the active list?

Elder J. A. Gardner gives us a few points of approach that should be considered:

"Make the acquaintance of people that you do not know.

"Try to discover mutual interests and common ground.

"Make use of points of contact.

"Discuss the beliefs and doctrines of other churches, but to do this you should attend the church with which your prospect is affiliated.

"You should make a wise selection of literature that you give the prospect.

"It is important that you be familiar with the literature that you give the prospect.

"It is better to make all your visits to the prospect in his home, or he may be invited to your home.

"Consider at what point in your work your pastor should be invited to be present.

"Try to open a way for a return call.

"Personal prayer for help and guidance in presenting the message of the church to nonmembers is essential."

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Notice to Church Officers and Workers

The "Herald" will continue to carry the worship service and program materials until July. August materials will appear in the July issue of "Vision" and will continue to appear in that magazine a month in advance. This notice is given to our leaders and workers in order that they may have ample opportunity to enter their subscriptions for "Vision." New subscribers to "Vision" may have their first year's subscription for $1.35. A coupon will be found in the back of this issue.

The reasons for the change have been explained in the "Herald" of April 15.

Worship Suggestions for Use in the Children's Division

Maytime is the gay time. All nature has turned freshly green, the birds have returned, and the flowers bloom in all their beauty. It is as the poet has so joyously exclaimed: "The whole world smiles and seems to say, 'Tis May! 'tis May! 'tis May!"

That our junior worship services may befit the spirit of spring, let us endeavor to bring back to them a freshness and a spontaneity. Think back on the services you have had this year. How can you lift them out of the muddy ruts of winter? What can you do to rejuvenate them, to put new life into them? With these questions in mind, study the program material suggested below. Select your materials and then arrange and rearrange your program until you feel that through it you will be able to stimulate a hearty response from the boys and girls and lead them through another experience of worship.

Enough material is listed for four worship services. The first Sunday of the month is omitted because it is generally observed as Sacrament Sunday, and we suggest that the juniors meet with the adults to partake of the Lord's Supper.

A Suggested Type of Service

Theme Topics for Sermon Talks:

Theme for the Month: "Love."

"Mother Love."

Text: "Honor thy mother."—Exodus 20: 12.

Help the boys and girls to get a keener appreciation of their mothers, of what their mothers mean to them, of what they mean to their mothers. It is as Washington Irving has so beautifully expressed:

"The love of a mother is never exhausted,

It never changes, it never tires.

It endures through all; in good repute, in bad repute, in the face of the world's condemnation,

A mother's love still lives on."

Or as Phillips Brooks has stated: "The happiest part of my happy life has been my mother, and with God's help she will be more to me than ever." By being able to appreciate mother love we begin to appreciate God's love, for in the first years of our lives we interpret God in terms of our mothers.

"What Love Does"

Text: 1 Corinthians 13: 1-7.

Love makes us unselfish; love makes us thoughtful; love makes us forget to quarrel. Love is much stronger than violence; love returns good for evil. There was once a sign that read: "Keep your temper, no one here wants it." Love overcomes difficulties; it covers up the faults of others; love lightens labor; it endures always. "Love so mixes us up with others that we can't quarrel because we forget which is which, and might be doing or saying the unkind thing to ourself instead of to others."

"God's Love for Us"

Text: "I have loved you with an everlasting love; therefore have I extended loving-kindness unto thee."—Jeremiah 31: 3.

God has set us on fire with love. He so loved us that he sent his Son, Jesus Christ, to live among us to show us how to express the love he put into our hearts. When we let the flame of love in us shine out it makes us forget ourselves, forget what we think is due to us, forget what we like or don't like, forget whether we get the praise we deserve, or whether others are unkind to us. God expresses his love for us by providing for us this beautiful world in which we live. The world he has given us as our home is as a big, beautiful palace which God the Builder has filled with riches and beauty, and in which he has placed man as king. God stands as an ever-ready help to aid us in making our earth home more beautiful, to assist us in building strong, beautiful characters.

"Sharing God's Love with Each Other"

"On the day when Adam was created, God said to his ministering angels, 'Come, let us descend and render loving service to the first man and his helpmate, for the world depends upon loving-kindness. More beloved and precious is loving-kindness than the sacrifices and burnt-offerings which Israel will bring unto me in the future.'—Rabbinic Wisdom. When we share God's love with each other we shall become so mixed together that we shall forget ourselves—we shall be obeying Jesus' commandment to "love our neighbor as ourself." God loves us. He put a bit of himself in us when he put love in our hearts. When we share God's love with each other we bring blessings not only to ourselves but to those with whom we share.

The Continuous Service

By C. B. W.

The following inquiry and the reply sent out by the Department of Religious Education are of sufficient significance to be helpful in many other branches of the church.

Query: We hold Sunday school at 10:00 a. m. and preaching at 11:00 a. m. What method should be used to unite the two services so we may give the most good from the two hours of service?

Reply: We have your letter asking advice as to the transition from your Sunday school to your preaching service on Sunday morning. We do not wish in any sense that our advice be taken as final. Local conditions should doubtless help very much in determining the method you follow. Our first advice is that you discuss the matter with your branch officers and with the district president. When you have opportunity, it would be well to consult with the apostle in charge of your field.

There has developed within recent months in many places a plan of continuous service which begins with the opening of the church school session and carries through with little interruption until the close of the preaching hour. It was found that the "opening exercises" of the Sunday school frequently was tardy and arranged hastily with little thought of its educational or worshipful possibilities. To supply this need, suggestive church school worship programs have been prepared and printed in the Saints' Herald. These should be helpful to those in charge in developing a program of interest that provides for general participation and which should help to induce a reverent spirit of worship as a setting for the services to follow. It is recommended that this worship period be brief, at least not over fifteen or twenty minutes. It should serve as an opening of the Sunday school, the class work immediately following. The worship service is primarily the responsibility of the pastor of the branch, though he may do well to share the responsibility with the director of the church school or other members of the priesthood. It is most essential that a clear understanding shall be had so that careful preparation may be made beforehand.

At the close of the Sunday school session, there may be an appropriate merging of the church school hour with the preaching service to follow, in which the formal closing song and benediction of the Sunday school may be omitted. During the playing of reverent music the congregation should be permitted to readjust themselves in their seating, the choir taking their place and the preacher and others in charge coming to the platform. If a transition of this kind is attempted, care should be taken that there are no unfortunate interruptions or meaningless waits in which valuable time is lost and the reverent spirit of worship is broken.

Usually time is saved by this method and in some places the morning service closes ten or fifteen minutes earlier than was formerly the custom. The fact that there has been no intermission should not prevent the customary opening song, prayer, and anthem before the sermon, unless there is some special reason for the omission. Provision should be made after the close of the preaching service for a few minutes of friendly interchange of greetings among the membership and for the welcoming and introduction of strangers.

Probably the chief purpose of the continued service is the desired continuity of the experiences we cherish. It prevents a noisy period between the services which often entirely breaks the spiritual influences we have tried to build up in the Sunday school. It is then necessary to call the audience to order and begin all over again to develop an atmosphere of reverent worship for the sermon to follow. It also offers a strong suggestion, if not an inducement for those who have attended the Sunday school to remain for the preaching service. In most places where the plan has been successful, the attendance at the preaching service has been largely increased, and numbers who formerly did not attend the Sunday school have come for the entire two hours' service.

There are some dangers, however, to be guarded against if the plan is attempted. In our desire to increase the attendance of the eleven o'clock service it has been made to seem imperative that those who had been at the Sunday school session, children and all, must remain for the preaching service. Naturally, this is desired, but it should not be forced; rather should we make the two services so harmoniously builded together that to miss either, one suffers distinct loss. The inspiration and satisfaction of the morning services should be cumulative and reach the high point in the eleven o'clock service. By providing a continuous service there is more encouragement for all to remain and less suggestion that the Sunday school is over, the closing songs have been sung, the benediction offered, and it is a time to go home. The further caution should be offered, too, that if in this provision the children do remain for this preaching service they must be considered as a part of the congregation, and at least some portion of the service be especially designed to interest them and to provide for their participation. Our usual custom, we think, is at fault in that too frequently the eleven o'clock service is entirely adult and the children fail to find helpful experiences which tie them up to the service. If possible, we wish them to feel that they share with the adults in the services of the church.

On some Sundays it may be possible to provide at eleven o'clock for a junior worship service in another auditorium. If so, this service must be an hour of most helpful experiences for the boys and girls, quite comparable to the adult service. We are not in sympathy with some forms of junior worship in which there is little semblance of the orderly procedure and reverent participation which should characterize church worship.

I trust the above suggestions may be helpful to you. I recall your beautiful little church and feel that you have much in which you should take satisfaction. I trust that the Spirit of the Master may ever grace your services, enabling the beauties of the gospel and of harmonious personal development to beautify the exercises within the church as your shrubbery and flowers beautify the exterior.

Detroit, Michigan

Spring weather, with its sunshine and flowers, brings with it the consciousness that the time left for intense work previous to the summer vacations is limited. Each department feels the urge to make the most of its time.

The past month has seen more or less unrest in Detroit Branch, and deep regrets on the part of the membership, because of the financial situation of the church in general, and Detroit in particular, which necessitated the transferring of Brother J. Emmet Lancaster and Brother Hubert Case, who have ably carried on the branch and missionary work of the city of Detroit for a period of more than two years. Brother Lancaster served as branch president, and Brother Case as city missionary. Both men have for the greater part of their stay in Detroit been ably assisted by Sister Lancaster and Sister Case.

Brother Case left for his new mission, Central Michigan, April 8, after having made a brief visit in Independence, where the greater part of his family resides. He returned here for Easter, when he brought his work to a close by baptizing several on the afternoon of Easter Sunday.

Brother and Sister Lancaster left on April 11, expecting to motor to Tulsa, Oklahoma, where they had made a short visit recently, and where Brother Lancaster has been transferred. Their many friends in Detroit wish them the greatest success and happiness in their new endeavors. Their untiring efforts to assist and direct will always be remembered.

Easter Sunday was fittingly observed at First Church. The church school, senior and junior divisions, opened in respective quarters, later uniting in a single service when the juniors marched to the upper auditorium to take their places in the choir loft. They rendered songs under the direction of Verlyn Janrow, followed by a short play, "The Quest for the Perfect Flower." The play was directed by Bernice Bryant and Vera Beaudette. At the close of the play the juniors took their places in the audience, members of the priesthood filed in, and Brother Lancaster, assisted by Elders Booth and Green, prepared the emblems for the sacrament. Richard Gault sang a tenor solo, accompanied by Sister Gault at the piano. Brother Case, having returned for the day, baptized a number previously arranged for, during the afternoon.

The church was prettily decorated for the day with palms and potted Easter lilies.

A fitting close for the day's activities was the rendition of the sacred cantata, "Jesus Lives," arranged by Gabriel. The choir, under the direction of Fred Anderson, deserves much credit for the manner in which this cantata was presented. Soloists were Henrietta Davis, soprano, Verlyn Janrow, contralto, James Green, tenor, and Lloyd Heaviland, baritone. Frederick Miller accompanied the choir at the organ.

Sunday, April 12, a meeting was held at 3 o'clock, when the priesthood of the entire city assembled in a mass session. Apostle D. T. Williams and District President Elder DuRose were present to counsel and assist. Brother Williams will assume duties of the presidency of the branch for the unexpired term.

Prayer services on Wednesday evenings are found interesting and instructive to those making the effort to attend. A little special work by each individual member attending would materially increase the attendance. In this way a greater number might receive benefit from this hour of prayer and service so essential to spirituality.

April 1 a daughter was born to Brother and Sister Lewis Wills, at the Highland Park General Hospital.

Brother and Sister Al Boos made a brief visit to the city before leaving for a new position in Kansas City. Brother Boos preached a farewell sermon the Sunday evening they were here. We are always glad to welcome our former members.

On Monday, April 6, at First Church, funeral rites were held for Sister Mary Brown, wife of Elder Bruce Brown, and sister of Ethel Rosebury, of the East Side. Sister Brown was well known in Detroit, and had spent twelve years of her married life in the missionary field, accompanying her husband and assisting in missionary work in fourteen States of the Union. Beautiful flowers with a background of palms and Easter lilies, made a fitting setting for the service, sealing the work of one so loved and respected. Elder William Grice preached the funeral sermon, assisted in the stand by Elder Lancaster and Elder Kenneth Green. A quartet consisting of Henrietta Davis, soprano; Verlyn Janrow, alto; James Green, tenor; and Fred Anderson, bass, sang, "I May Not Know the Reason Why"; also, "Lead, Kindly Light." Sister Davis sang as a solo, "There'll Be No Night There." The singing was accompanied by Frederick Miller at the organ. Songs were chosen by Brother Brown, and the funeral was conducted by Robert Coats.

The musical April 3 at the home of Sister Claus was the last of the series sponsored by Group Four, Sister Claus and Sister McCarthy entertaining.

Elder Arthur DuRose, of Flint, occupied at First Church Sunday evening, April 12, using as his text, "Deal justly, love mercy, and walk humbly before God."

Omaha, Nebraska

Spring, with its bursting buds and countless signs of stirring activity, can not but inspire hope, and seems to beckon us on to the many pleasurable and busy days of summer. Nature is adjusting herself, and so we, too, find ourselves passing through a period of adjustment.

At the close of a well-attended sacrament service on March 1, we were saddened by the unexpected announcement that our pastor, Elder Blair Jensen, had been appointed president of Lamoni Stake. Brother Jensen's sermon that Sunday evening on the subject of "Limiting God," while not intended to be, happened to be his last in Omaha. The children of old, by turning their backs on God, limited him, and thus were brought down into the wilderness and desolation. The challenge to us is that we profit by their mistakes.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer was here March 15 to help us make the necessary adjustments relative to the installation of the new pastor, R. Melvin Russell. Brother Gleazer's sermons of the day were encouraging and helpful: He reminded us that the retrenchment program of the church is a summons to duty and in no sense a retardment. At the close of the evening service, a farewell reception was held for Brother Jensen and his family, and a reception of welcome for Brother Russell. While the one hand was clasped in farewell, the other was extended in hearty welcome, and pledges of support and cooperation were made.

Brother Russell's sermon at the evening pulpit service March 22 was on "Building the Homes of Today," and in this connection he brought in the story of the prodigal son. The parents of today, he said, fail to share the "inner life" with their children. The anthem, "I am Alpha and Omega," was sung by the choir, directed by Harry Greenway.

Almost every week finds something "special" on at the church. A dinner on March 27, sponsored by the women of the adult group, added a few more dollars to the building fund. A pageant, "Easter Dawn," was presented on the evening of March 31 by the young people. A young people's reception for Brother and Sister Russell was held on April 10, and on April 17 and 18 the young people of the South Side group put on a play, "Think It Over."

Easter Sunday was a day to make every heart rejoice. The subject for the family worship period was, "The Triumphant Messiah." The instrumental prelude, vocal selections, scriptural readings, and the dramatization of, "The Walk to Emmaus," combined to form a fitting setting for the sacrament service that followed. At this service the infant daughter of Brother and Sister Merle Grover was blessed. In the evening, the choir, supported by a six-piece orchestra, presented "The Crucifixion," by Stainer. This was very well rendered, and was attended by an appreciative audience.

Sunday, April 12, the speakers were Brother Merle Grover and Pastor Melvin Russell. Brother Grover's subject was, "Learn to Know," and he used as a text the words of Jesus: "If I tell you, you will not believe." The speaker supplemented that we must learn to know by study and application. "The Will to Do" was the basis of Brother Russell's remarks. Attendance was very good at both services, and we hope that this report can still be made as the season advances.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

April 9.—Two weeks of meetings were conducted by the local priesthood the latter part of February and early days of March. McDermott priesthood also assisted, and the efforts of all were rewarded by good attendance and fine interest.

This branch is now operating under the church school organization, Elder Emery E. Williams, president of the branch; Priest Mark S. Crabtree, first counselor; and William L. Altman, deacon, second counselor. The officers are working with enthusiasm and purposefulness. All departments are active.

April 5 was for us a great day. From the first service, that of the church school, the Spirit ruled in every meeting. Classes, sermons, prayers, testimonies, songs were much enjoyed.

Jason E. Crabtree, of McDermott, who fell from a building in December, breaking his right wrist and right leg above the knee, fell recently and broke his leg a second time.

Elder A. E. Anderton, of Columbus, district president, was here the second Sunday in February and organized our tent meetings into a mission. This is called the Portsmouth West Side Mission. Work goes on there. Though attendance has been low, it is now on the increase.

Oakland, California

From The Oakland Bulletin

Those who attended the pre-Easter services felt the uplift of the worship and enjoyed the opportunity for meditation and private devotion.

Easter Sunday was a joyous experience. In the morning the Sunday school had the usual worship period, Brother Dale Aldredge in charge of the program. Besides appropriate music, Miss Cozette Hall had prepared an impressive dramatization of the empty tomb. Frank Severy, one of the assistant superintendents, read the scripture and gave a short address. There were also solo and trio numbers.

The sacrament service, which followed, was marked by a quiet spirit of peace. During this service the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Weldon was blessed by Brothers Carmichael and Ralston. Afterward the Easter service was conducted by C. Hawley and Pastor Rushton. Miss Freda Browning won praise for organ music; Mrs. Marion Vrang sang "The Holy City"; Mr. Gatchett sang "Open the Gates of the Temple."

In the evening the choir, under the leadership of Mrs. Kaeha Meyer, delighted the congregation with a splendid program of Easter music.

The church decorations, frequently commented on by many, are the handiwork of Miss Gladys Carmichael and her mother. Theirs is indeed a ministry of beauty each Sunday.

The funeral of Brother Andrew Jacobson was held at Niehaus funeral parlors April 8.

Brother Burdick writes that the district choirs are rehearsing the cantata, "The Thorn-crowned King," to be given at Sacramento May 31. All singers and musicians were requested to register for this work.

The activities of various organizations in the branch show that the members are alert. The O. S. basket ball team defeated San Francisco early this month in its second game of the season.

A number of members are ill, and they are being remembered by the prayers of the Saints.

Boy Preacher Visits Alva, Oklahoma

April 20.—A short time ago Howard C. Harpham, of Seiling, Oklahoma, attended the fine arts contest at Northwestern State Teachers College, and preached three splendid sermons to the Saints at Alva.

To his visit the Alva Record gave the following notice:

"Howard C. Harpham, of Seiling, attended the fine arts contest at Northwestern State Teachers' College Friday.

"Harpham is called the boy preacher of the Latter Day Saints. He was ordained a minister at the age of fourteen years.

"While here he will preach for the Latter Day Saints in their church, First and Church Streets, Saturday evening and Sunday morning."

Brother Harpham was presented to the Centennial Conference of the church last April as the representative of the very young preachers of the gospel.

Hammond, Indiana

6243 Monroe Street

Easter Sunday was a beautiful day in Hammond. During the Sunday school time a fine program was given by the children. After the program, the children were given Easter baskets made and filled by the Oriole Girls. The church was decorated in yellow and white, an appropriate setting for the occasion. Immediately following the program, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper and prayer service were had. Such quiet, impressive meetings inspire us to go on in spite of discouragements. Then as a climax to the day's experiences came Brother Pement's sermon on "Spiritual Things." Brother Pement is from the Central Chicago Branch, and is a frequent and welcome visitor in Hammond.

District President William Osler has been here the past few weeks. His attitude toward the church in its present crisis is so hopeful and encouraging that one can not help catching some of his spirit of optimism.

We have had quite a number of visitors in our branch lately. Sister Bertha Constance Woodward was here and visited the Sunday school and talked to us. Brother Walter Woodward spoke Sunday night on "Choosing Values." Brother Ray Hurst, from the Central Chicago Branch, came over one Sunday evening and gave an interesting discourse. Sister Louise Evans, from Grand Rapids, Michigan, stopped over a few days recently. She helped with our music.

Sister Violet VanAlstine has been very ill for several months, but she is improving now. She was greatly blessed through administration.

Graceland Chats

Days at Graceland are getting busier. As Commencement nears the weekly program becomes more and more crowded and time is at a premium. Students are writing term papers and giving class reports. Committees on commencement activities are busy. Athletes turn toward tennis and track. The girls are rehearsing for their annual gym show. Student elections for the coming year are being held.

The College Department of the Church School

Noble Kelly is now the superintendent of the college department of the church school, replacing M. E. Mortimore, whose other duties made it imperative that he resign. The last unit of meetings is from Easter recess to the close of school. Three groups have been formed, all following the same themes. Mrs. Warren, Miss Condit, and Miss Morgan, of the faculty, are the leaders of the discussion. Such topics as these are used: "What Is a Christian Gentleman?" "What Is a Good Latter Day Saint?"

Apostle Edwards Speaks

On the first three days of last week Apostle F. Henry Edwards addressed the students concerning the formulation of life philosophy. His discussions set out the thesis that sound bases of belief rest not only upon rationalized, tangibly verified data, but also upon the experiential phases of life, such as faith and feelings. One outstanding statement was that we do not "think through" and then act, but that we combine the two and "act intelligently."

"What Every Woman Knows"

Work has started on the last college play to be given commencement week. The play is a subtle, delightful one called "What Every Woman Knows," by James M. Barrie. Mr. Barrie is a modern play-writer who has gained a fine name for himself with his plays. This play does him full credit. It is amusing and interesting, and one can not help but fall in love with the characters.

The characters of the new play are: Maggie Wylie, Anna Lynn Vanskike; David Wylie, a brother, Glenn Hands; Alec Wylie, the father, Dave Morgan; James Wylie, another brother, Wallace Sinclair; John Shand, Colin Ferrett; the Comtesse, Beulah Frase; Lady Sybil, Irene Johnson; Charles Venables, Roy Cheville.

WALLACE SINCLAIR.

Declamatory Contest

The preliminaries of the annual declamatory contest were held in the chapel Tuesday, April 19. There were fifteen entries distributed among the three divisions—humorous, dramatic, and oratorical. The readings given covered a multitude of subjects. All of the persons who were selected to appear in the final contest May 9, are diligently practicing their readings, and this contest will probably be one of the outstanding ones of its type held at Graceland.

Those who placed in the dramatic section are Lila Emerson, Myron LaPointe, Mildred Topham, and Madeline Weegar. In the humorous section Dorothy Elliott, Emily McCormick, Lynn Smith, and Vida Teeters placed. Gerald Jones and James Moses are the finalists in the oratorical division of the contest. The contest between the various literary societies is very close, as the contestants are almost equally divided among the four groups. The Victorians and Kapforeans have three entries each, while the Niketes and Pleiades each have two. The Vics have an entry in each division of the contest.

JAMES B. MOSES.

The A Cappella Tours

On April 16 and 17 the A Cappella Chorus made two trips. On the former date, the chorus journeyed to Des Moines, where it took part in the Iowa Artist Program given at the Savoy Hotel. The program was rendered for the convention of the Iowa Music Supervision, which was meeting in Des Moines. The chorus was complimented upon the rendition of its program as to quality and interpretation. En route to Des Moines, the chorus presented a program at the high school at Leon.

The latter date found the chorus traveling to points northwest of Lamoni. Leaving shortly before noon, the chorus went to Tingley, where it gave an early program to the high school group. Thence, the chorus continued its journey to Diagonal. Our program was repeated here to the high school group. Then there was the needed spice of life, which was taken care of by a picnic en route to Bedford, where the chorus was singing that evening. The first concert program of the chorus was given that night at the county High School Music Festival in Bedford. The program consisted of sacred and secular numbers. Accompanying the group of singers were Mr. Gilbert, who gave talks in the interest of Graceland at the various high schools mentioned, and Miss Dorothy Elliott, who is the reader for the chorus this year.

LESLIE KOHLMAN.

Vestæ Filice

On Saturday night, April 18, the Vestæ Filicæ assembled for their regular meeting. The evening opened with a formal initiation ceremony in which Miss Viola Firth became the first associate member of this Home Economics professional club. Following a short business session, the regular program was held, the theme of the program being, "A Better Outlook on Life," which was carried out in the talk on "Mental Hygiene," by Miss Sodersten. Misses Lulu Romig and Wana Black also took part in furnishing some musical numbers.

The Vestæ Filicæ have one more meeting this year, and the girls hope this meeting will complete a very successful year.

ALETA JENSEN.

Independence

Stone Church

"Our Ministry" was the theme of the opening exercises of the church school in the main auditorium of the Stone Church on Sunday morning. The intermediate department had been asked to take charge of this twenty-minute worship period, and the pastor, Priest W. Earl Page, spoke of our ministry of loyalty, reverence, and cooperation. Music was supplied by a chorus of intermediate girls directed by Mrs. Harold C. Burgess, and by Opal Goode Doty at the organ.

"The hope of Zion lies in those whose faith prompts them to make full compliance with the law of God," said Bishop J. A. Becker, speaker at the eleven o'clock adult service Sunday morning. What drew him to this people more than anything else, he said, was the particular task given to it—the task of establishing a society based on divine principles—and the assurance that God's power would assist in the accomplishment of that task.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Evan A. Fry, sang two anthems: "O Love Divine," by Thayer; and "Twenty-fourth Psalm," by Forman, with Lilly Belle Allen singing the soprano solo. George Miller, pianist, played as a solo number, "Elegy," by Nollet. Robert Miller played Kreisler's "An Old Refrain" as the organ offertory. Mrs. S. A. Burgess, contralto, sang "Like as the Hart Desireth the Water Brook."

Pastor J. F. Sheehy was in charge, assisted by Elder M. A. Smith.

"Always tell the truth and you will keep your self-respect and the respect of your fellows," Apostle J. F. Curtis admonished the intermediate congregation in its eleven o'clock worship hour; you will make it possible for your character to grow straight and lovely as a carefully pruned and tended tree." "The Truth in Everyday Life" was the day's theme, and in the stand the pastor was assisted by Priests Gerald Phillips and Roy McNeil.

Average attendance in the young people's department of the Stone Church school, which meets in sixteen classes at the Auditorium, ranges about the two hundred mark.

One class of young men and young women, the To-Ko-Lons, is now carrying out a one-hundred-and-twenty-five dollar project. It plans to place on the Stone Church grounds two electrically lighted signs bearing the church name, schedule of services, and special announcements.

The response given by the Stone Church congregation to the 2.30 prayer meeting Sunday afternoon in the lower auditorium, is good. Hundreds of members think it well worth their time to spend a quiet hour of meditation, prayer, testimony, and song with their brothers and sisters. The officers in charge of this service invite everyone to attend.

The new intermediate council got into action Sunday afternoon, organizing itself, under the leadership of its pastor, into three standing committees. The officers of this representative group are, president, Kathlyn Cato; secretary, Eleanor Fairbanks; and treasurer, Betty Good.

Music at the Sunday evening service was supplied by the Radio Vesper Choir, directed by Orval Thompson, accompanied at the organ by Mrs. Daniel Lewis. Congregational singing was led by L. E. Flowers and given organ accompaniment by Opal Goode Doty.

Evangelist U. W. Greene was the speaker. Elder H. G. Barto presided.

Enoch Hill

Elder Joe Martin was in charge of the church school Sunday morning. After the class period, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Cross played a piano-violin duet. Brother Martin conducted a blackboard discussion of questions concerning the church.

Elder W. Wallace Smith was the morning speaker, his theme being "The Foundation of God Standeth Sure." His talk was especially good, and for a scripture reading he used Matthew 28. Brother C. E. Beal spoke to the junior church.

The young people's prayer meeting at the home of Gladys Cox last Wednesday evening was well attended, and Pastor H. L. Barto met with this group for the first time. Tonight the young people will meet with the adults in union prayer meeting at the church. The monthly Wednesday night program, sponsored by the Erodolphians, will be presented at the church May 6, when there will be special music and a short talk by a young worker from another congregation. Enoch Hill young people are urged to be present.

Sunday evening Elder H. O. Smith talked on the great desirability of real happiness in our lives.

Englewood

Englewood Choir has taken on new life in the last few weeks. Because of the condition of her health, Mrs. Alta Hougas thought herself unable to do justice to the choir leadership. Mrs. Pauline Arnson promised to take the choir for only a few weeks, to relieve Mrs. Hougas, but the pastors hope that she can be influenced to stay.

The last of President Elbert A. Smith's church history plays was given Sunday night, Fred Koehler playing the part of Joseph Smith. The presentation of these plays every Sunday evening with a short sermon afterwards has proved very satisfactory so far as attendance is concerned. There were about one hundred and seventy present for the closing event of the series. Apostle J. F. Curtis was the speaker.

The superintendents of the primary department are planning a program for Mother's Day. One of the main numbers will be music by a chorus of mothers.

Regular family night prayer meeting will be conducted May 6. This program has been tried for only a few months, but so far has proved helpful. Every family is invited to bring its evening meal to the church, where the entire congregation sits down to a "family" dinner at 6.30. Prayer meeting and special features follow the meal.

Interest in the church orchestra is increasing. Brother Fred Mollison of Walnut Park has charge of the orchestra.

Gudgell Park

Of late this congregation has listened to sermons by Elders J. M. Terry, C. K. Green, P. A. Sherman, I. W. Smith, F. A. Smith, S. C. Smith, Carroll Olson, and others. Each minister brought a message of instruction and encouragement.

The Harvest Home Festival committee has been making plans for the fall event, and is preparing ground for planting vegetables.

A basket supper was eaten by about seventy-five people at the church April 10, and the evening was spent in singing and listening to readings and music.

Wednesday night prayer meetings are now being conducted at the church.

Elder and Sister P. A. Sherman were made happy to have their daughter, Joy, home for the week-end. Joy is teaching in Iowa this year.

Attendance last Sunday was good, and Brother John Inman was the morning speaker. Brother Will Inman, of Second Church, spoke in the evening.

Spring Branch

Sunday morning Elder Samuel Smith, pastor at Walnut Park, was the speaker here, using as a text Matthew 6: 21 and 19: 21. Elder A. M. Chase illustrated his evening theme, "Comparative Religions," with slide pictures.

During the church school hour Miss Margaret Chapman contributed a piano solo, and at the eleven o'clock service the junior choir, directed by Mrs. Leonard Roberts, sang an anthem. In the evening there were vocal solos by Mrs. S. A. Burgess and Margaret Thomas.

Scout Troop 222 furnished the program for the 6.30 church school service.

A sacrifice service followed the prayer meeting last Wednesday evening, the Saints bringing from their own supply seeds to plant the church garden.

In last week's Herald there appeared in the news from Spring Branch an error in a name. It was Gladys Peer who has been ill at the Sanitarium instead of Gladys Teeter.

The senior young people's class, taught by Joseph Farrow, was entertained at a hobo party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. D. McClean last Thursday evening. Twenty-six were present.

East Independence

On Sacrament and Easter Sunday the resurrection of the world from winter's cold and rest was portrayed in the services. Elder J. M. Terry gave cheer in his remarks in the morning, and in the evening service a short Easter program and a sermonet by Elder W. B. Paul brought to a close a happy day.

On Arbor Day in Missouri, April 10, some twenty-five Saints met early at the church home. Work on landscaping the grounds was begun. We expect before many weeks to have a church and grounds attractive to all who love the beautiful. We have natural surroundings and plenty of room for garden, picnic, and recreation grounds. Shrubby and plants were donated.

The sermon April 12 by A. H. Christensen, appointed to speak for us by the Bishop in Zion, was most helpful. His theme was "The Emancipation of the Poor," which he emphasized as the pivotal point in the redemption of Zion.

Elder John F. Sheehy, pastor in Zion, recently brought to the minds of the members the sacrifices and trials of former missionaries, asking what we are willing to do and how far we are willing to go for the church.

Brother Sheehy presented the name of Alva H. Christensen as pastor to finish this year's work. He was accepted by the unanimous vote of the congregation. Brother Frank Minton was sustained to continue as assistant pastor.

The following branch young people graduated from Spring Branch School this year: Gertrude Dutton, Mildred Wagner, Lavern Butler, Ivon Wagner, and Norma Minton.

Far West Stake

Stake Movements

A combined educational institute of the Stewartville and Maple Grove Branches was held March 21 and 22 at Stewartville. This followed a weekly institute of ten class periods held at the Maple Grove Church. Stake President Ward A. Hougas served as instructor at all sessions, the universal theme being centered around the problems of the youth of today. These classes were accredited under the requirements of the Department of Religious Education, and several took advantage of this opportunity. In all, seventeen credited sessions were held, the climax to the whole project being marked by a special recreational program of entertainment on the Saturday night. A big attendance stimulated President Hougas in this endeavor to bring about a new and keener appreciation of youth's place in the world and church today.

An institute of a similar nature was held at Richmond on Saturday and Sunday, April 11 and 12, with the same educational privileges offered. In this institute work, Elder Hougas was assisted by the services of Leonard G. Ehlers, of Stewartville. On Sunday a large crowd was present, and at noon a social time was enjoyed in the sharing of a basket dinner.

The joint council of the stake met in session at Saint Joseph Tuesday afternoon, April 14. All members of the council were present.

Bishop Milo Burnett and President Ward A. Hougas have been very active among the various branches of the stake the past several weeks in an effort to revive the membership to a more active participation in the privileges of church fellowship.

Many funerals have been in evidence in different parts of the stake during recent days.

Trenton Branch is preparing for a baptismal service for about six or eight people, some adults, to be held soon. This should be of especial interest to our former missionary, Walter S. Woodward, and his good companion, until recently workers among the Saints in Trenton and immediate vicinity.

The officials of the stake are looking forward with keen anticipation to two forthcoming events of exceptional interest: A series of priesthood conferences, one scheduled for Cameron on May 29; Guilford, May 30; and Saint Joseph, May 31. Apostle F. Henry Edwards is expected to be the instructor on this occasion. The annual young people's convention is listed to be held at Cameron, June 20 and 21, with President F. M. McDowell as the speaker, supplemented by other workers.

Saint Joseph Branch

A pastor's banquet was held at Second Church on the evening of March 13. All pastors of the city were invited. A fine program was enjoyed by a full house. Elder J. L. Bear served as toastmaster.

The last city-wide young people's devotional service was held at Second Church on April 2. This meeting was marked by a fine musical prelude, and a sermon by the city pastor, Elder Ward A. Hougas, to say nothing of the encouraging testimonies contributed by several young people.

Of especial interest at First Church has been the series of illustrated lectures surrounding the story, "Ben Hur," presented each Sunday evening by the pastor, Ward A. Hougas. This feature service seems to meet with the approval of both members and friends, to judge by the large attendance had at each lecture.

Missionary G. T. Richards is on the job in Saint Joseph now. He is giving his time mostly to city needs at present, and the stake president feels free to turn his attention to the branches outside the city.

Stewartville

Our young Brother Gordon Hidy, pastor of this branch, has recovered from a recent operation, which has kept him inactive for the past two or three months. He is now able to attend to his duties in the branch. Mrs. C. C. Hinderks, who has been bedfast for about two months, is also slowly recovering her health and strength.

A number of interesting and helpful things have happened during the last few months. Among them, and one of the most important, has been the young people's institute, conducted by Ward A. Hougas, president of Far West Stake. He held a number of these classes at the Maple Grove Branch, north of town, and wound up the activities with a two-day meeting at Stewartville Branch. The work of Brother Hougas is an inspiration to us, and we hope that we as a branch and as a stake may be able to encourage him with efforts during the remainder of the year.

Brother John Bear, of Saint Joseph, was the speaker at both the morning and evening hour, Sunday, March 29. His efforts were encouraging.

Santa Barbara, California

The Oriole Girls have been especially active. They have worked for some time to earn money to buy some new song-books. During February they gave an entertainment, and the proceeds with money in their treasury enabled them to order thirty books.

At the last business meeting of the branch it was decided that we would adopt the new envelope system for collecting weekly offering. Immediately after the business meeting, a shower was given in honor of Sister Louise Winniford, whose marriage to W. Bernice Attebery took place April 3.

A number of the Saints attended conference in Los Angeles on Easter Sunday, and because of this our sacrament was postponed until the second Sunday in April.

Services of late have been better attended than at the first of the year.

This branch has gained by five transfers. In our services two babies have been blessed.

New Philadelphia, Ohio

The months of March and April have been busy ones in this branch, and the Saints are thankful that our efforts have not been in vain. Pastor John D. Carlisle conducted preaching service each Sunday evening during March at the G. A. R. Hall in Uhrichsville, Ohio, and one new member is the result of his endeavor. On April 3 special services had been arranged in observance of Good Friday. Shortly before the service Charles W. Vance, of Uhrichsville, was baptized by Elder Carlisle, and at the following service was confirmed by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis and Elder Carlisle. Brother Vance is sixty-two years old and for many years was a member of another church.

A sunrise service ushered in Easter Sunday. At the church school assembly the primary department presented a short program; then sacrament was served to a large number. In the evening the cantata, "Bright Easter Morn," was splendidly given by the senior choir, directed by S. B. Mansell. Special solos were sung by Mrs. Paul Noble, Miss Madge Thomas, and Richard Watkins. Miss Grace Robson and Mrs. Quay Briggs sang the duet.

Apostle Clyde F. Ellis spent three days here the first week of April, preaching each evening to small but appreciative congregations.

District President James E. Bishop was also here from April 1 to 12 and conducted special services each evening. He was invited to speak at the junior high school during chapel hour April 17.

Bishop J. A. Becker, of Independence, who has been visiting his aged mother suffering from ill health, occupied the pulpit morning and evening April 12.

New Philadelphia members are pleased to hear that Brother Mansell has been selected as district chorister. He is an enthusiastic music lover and is preparing to spend as much of his time as possible in district musical activities.

Central Church

On Sunday evening Elder C. Ed. Miller had a treat in store for those who heard his illustrated lecture on "Christ in pre-Columbian America." Brother Miller has some new slides, and all who are studying the Book of Mormon in the church school and others interested in the history of the book found the lecture inspirational.

Central Women's Club is holding a reception for the pastor, C. E. Wight, and his associates, Friday evening, May 1. Invitations have been mailed to every family in the congregation.

Elder George Mesley has returned home from his stay in the Sanitarium, somewhat improved in health but not yet ready to take active part in the branch work.

Sister Florence Hinman, recently baptized, has returned from the hospital and sends a special request for the Saints to pray for her. She hopes for a blessing which will forestall another trip to the hospital.

Central members are holding in mind the special meetings by Apostle Gleazer in May.

Pastor Wight spoke at the service period of the church school Sunday morning. "Fear not, O Israel," by Spicker, was the anthem sung by the choir, conducted by George Anway. Irene Wolfe was the organist.

Quindaro Church

Apostle F. Henry Edwards spoke to Quindaro and Heathwood groups at our church the evening of April 22, using for a text the latter part of Matthew 22: 32: "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living."

Saints of this branch were grieved to learn of the death of Sister Bruce Brown. Brother and Sister Brown had endeared themselves to this group, and sympathy is extended Brother Brown.

"Olivet to Calvary," a cantata, was presented here by Central Church Choir on a recent Sunday evening.

Easter morning at 10.30 four candidates were baptized, two adults and two children, and confirmed at the communion service by Elders H. A. Higgins, Elias Dawe, and E. N. Palmer.

Pre-Easter services, conducted by Pastor H. A. Higgins, were decidedly successful. Sermons of gospel nature were helpful, and each evening a number of nonmembers was present. Average attendance was about one hundred and fifty. On Friday night a social time was enjoyed by those who attended the services. Music was furnished by the Heathwood orchestra.

Friday afternoon cottage missionary meetings are conducted by Stake Missionary Arthur Oakman.

Sister Marie Meier, who underwent a serious operation, is convalescing in Bethany Hospital.

Missionary Meetings at Stratford, Ontario

A splendid concert opened a series of missionary talks by Elder W. I. Fligg, at Stratford, Ontario, on April 17. There were vocal and instrumental solos and duets, and excellent anthem contributions were made by the Stratford Choir.

Very good attendance marked the Sunday meeting.

Colpoy's Bay, Ontario

This branch is endeavoring to carry out the plan of religious education and rejoices in the addition of new members.

Brother Harry Dayton came here February 24 and held classes, explaining so clearly the church school organization, that we voted unanimously to adopt it. These classes created such an interest among nonmembers that the time seemed opportune for missionary work, and Brother Dayton decided to stay for a time. He has a very clear and convincing way of presenting the gospel message.

Five people were baptized by Brother Dayton who used the font in Warton Church. A beautiful spirit brooded over the service and was continued in the prayer service when the candidates were confirmed, and Brother Vickers was ordained a teacher.

Two of the converts are a married couple who will be a great help to the branch, one is a young woman, one a young man of sixteen, and the fifth is a young girl. We were happy to welcome these new members.

Others are interested in our message, but owing to weather conditions were not able to attend regularly.

Priesthood and Saints are aroused to their duties. We are enjoying the Spirit in goodly degree.

Midweek prayer services are well attended as the Saints meet in the homes of the members.

While we are sad at thought of conditions prevailing in the world which retard the work of the church to some extent, we remember:

"Stars may burn out, nor mountain walls endure,
But God is true, his promises are sure
To those who seek."

Colorado Springs, Colorado

Most of the preaching in this branch has been done of late by the local ministry. At Easter, however, Elder L. G. Holloway was here to spend a few days with his daughter. He delivered two sermons, which encouraged the members, and for the first time in his missionary career administered the sacrament to one of his own household.

The Saints regret that conditions made it necessary for Elder E. B. Hull to be sent to Nebraska. Good wishes go with him, and members are grateful for his work in this district. A farewell reception was given him March 17 at the home of E. J. Ebeling.

The Department of Religious Education, under the direction of Floyd Engstrom, is working splendidly. It is gratifying to see the number awarded certificates of credit for work in the classes in the department.

Our pre-Easter service is a ceremony conducted in the lower auditorium of the church on Thursday night before Easter, when Saints partake of the sacrament. This service is impressive and causes the worshipers to reflect on the last supper eaten by our Savior with his disciples.

Easter opened with a sunrise service in the Garden of the Gods. Then the Saints met at nine o'clock for prayer service, to prepare themselves for the hour of sacrament. The good Spirit reigned throughout the morning. The little tots gave a short program during the Sunday school. A pageant, "The Tree of Life," was presented by the young people in the evening, Sister Harrison directing.

Considerable sickness has been experienced by the members. Sister Sade, who underwent a serious operation, is able to be out again. Brother Lalonde is still quite ill.

The branch was saddened to learn of the accident that caused the death of Sister Mary Brown, who formerly lived here. Sympathy goes to Brother Brown.

Rock Island District

The missionary spirit is alive and active in our district. Our slogan is "Baptisms every month during the year 1931." Up to the present time we have lived up to our slogan. Seven were baptized at Rock Island in January, two at Cedar Rapids in February, six at Galesburg in March, and so far there have been twelve additions to Clinton Branch, ten on Easter Sunday, and two on the 19th of the month.

Clinton Branch has been wonderfully blessed with the spirit of revival. C. A. Beil, the pastor, has specialized in preaching missionary sermons each Sunday night beginning with the first Sunday in January. This has resulted in the best interest the Clinton Branch has known for many years, and the bringing in of a number of excellent people, some others being about ready to unite with us there.

Since the first of the year institutes have been held at Savanna and Davenport, and two training classes organized, one at Savanna and one at Kewanee. With the classes at Oelwein and Rock Island, we now have four teacher training classes, and prospects of more in the near future.

Special meetings have been held at Cedar Rapids, Waterloo, Kewanee, and Galesburg, and at this writing the new missionary, F. C. Bevan, has started a series of meetings at Rock Island with a fine response to his first effort Sunday, April 19.

Requests for special meetings have also come to District President E. R. Davis from Oelwein, Waterloo, Kewanee, Galesburg, Dahinda, Millersburg, Cedar Rapids, and Muscatine. He hopes to have requests from other branches before the year ends.

San Francisco, California

Park-Presidio Branch, 405 Arguello Boulevard at Clement Street

This branch is pleased to announce that it continues to have good attendance at all meetings, and that the Sunday school attendance is exceptionally large in comparison to its membership.

Elder John W. Rushton has been making new contacts, with the result that we are able to count new faces at all services.

The Park-Presidio Kiwanis Club elected Brother Rushton minister for the club, and he has been called upon on two occasions to speak to them. Not long ago he was requested to deliver an address at the wonderful Masonic Home at Decota, California, and at the conclusion was given hearty invitation to arrange another full service.

The publicity agent made a report for the quarter ending March 31, informing the branch that eighteen hundred and twenty-six lines of free publicity had been secured, with fifty-six insertions in three of our district papers. He is endeavoring to let the uninitiated know what the Reorganized Church stands for in preference to keeping the church papers posted regarding local activities.

The committee has not yet made full arrangements for the fourth annual dinner of this branch, but if such a thing is possible the coming event will surpass previous get togethers of this nature.

Brother J. B. Carmichael, of Oakland, has on various occasions spoken from our pulpit, and the Saints are grateful for his fine lectures.

The Ruth's Club continues its activities.

The greatest satisfaction to all of us is that those who are not members of the church make it a habit to worship regularly with us. We hope that some day the spirit will move them to obey the commands of God and be reborn into the church.

HERE is a gift suggestion that any small child will love. A play rug, a nursery table cloth or crib quilt where one's friends, Chicken Little, Henny Penny, and their friends are running up to Foxy Loxey, bids fair for long and cherished life where Ducky Lucky waddles on for ever and the sky never does fall down. The farm yard folks are appliques of linen or gingham. Wax transfers of them for embroidery or applique parts are given in pattern number 580.

PENTECOST

And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. . . . And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance. . . . But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and said unto them . . . this is that which was spoken by the Prophet Joel: And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams.—The Acts of the Apostles.

Pentecost

Nothing impresses itself upon the observer of the modern churches more than the need of a new Pentecost. Beginning with scientific skepticism, the decay of faith has brought about a spiritual impoverishment that has left humanity without light, without ideals, without religion, and without hope.

Jesus could not, and would not, retrace the long path of change and development which had led the children of Israel from the spiritual leadership of Moses, through the period of the prophets, to the dry formality of Judaism. He had to break with the past, in order to reestablish divine authority upon earth, independent of all existing organization. The culmination of his life and teachings came in the fulfillment of his promises in that burst of spiritual power and light which we call the pentecost.

Since that time men have looked back to the pentecost as their great inspiration, a mighty demonstration of the wonders of power that are held in store for the faithful. They have hoped, rather vainly, for some future resurgence of that power which would restore to the churches their early prestige and strength.

The leaders of the Restoration movement, like Jesus, found it impossible to retrace the old paths. The established organizations with their set ways and traditions could not serve the purposes of another pentecostal shower of spiritual authority and strength.

Religion as a whole today is in bad shape. If everybody in this country should decide to go to church on the same Sunday, all the church buildings together could hold only a small part of the crowds. The greater masses would have to stand outside, filling the walks and streets. Yet a visitor to most churches will find many vacant seats, and sometimes only a handful of worshipers within.

The churches are empty, while the golf courses are full. Movie theaters gather wealth while churches close their doors for the lack of needed funds and attendance. Almost anything can draw a crowd but a church.

Organizations for capturing the hearts of men and for converting sinners grow in number and complexity, but the percentages of those who escape any contact with religious life and inspiration mount higher and higher. The technique and objectives of social regeneration have been subjected to long and scholarly discussion, but social regeneration seems to be as far from the masses of humanity as ever.

There is indeed a great need for a new pentecost. Men have "wandered long in darkness"—and they have wandered long enough. It is time for a return of the spirit of reverence, the love of truth, and the hope of salvation which may lead to a manifestation of divine love and power.

The world at large is too self-satisfied, too self-sufficient. The satisfaction of fleshly appetites occupies too much of its attention. The accumulation of treasure inspires too much of its ambition. It is blind to the hungers which should burn in the heart and soul for those qualities of character and spiritual force which do not and can not perish in the unjust changes of fortune that constantly occur in life.

Sacrifice Week

Elsewhere in this issue of the Herald will be found an official notice designating the period of June 21 to 28 inclusive as "Sacrifice Week." During that period it will be the privilege of officers, members, and friends of the church to make a special sacrifice offering in her behalf.

We say privilege, for sacrifice in a great cause is always a privilege. To deny any individual the opportunity of giving something very much desired in the interests of higher and more worthy ends would be to close for him the source of his greatest happiness and development.

"Sacrifice Week" is not a new thing for our people. The early announcement of such a period for this year should provide ample time for each member to prayerfully consider the needs of the church and his own responsibility thereto. The gift of each is sorely needed by the church, but the consecrated devotion of all to the work of God is imperative. "The gift without the giver is bare."

"Sacrifice Week" will be but a part of an intensive effort that is being made to inform the membership concerning the program and needs of the church and to make possible for each that spiritual development which can come through sharing in the work of God. We suggest that our readers watch these pages closely from week to week for further information in regard to "Sacrifice Week" and the program which leads up to it.

President F. M. Smith Recovering

President Frederick M. Smith is still at home resting up from the effects of the flu. There are no particular organic disturbances, but he does not seem to gather strength as quickly as could be wished. The recent months in church work have been rather strenuous ones, and since he has had no real vacation for some time, the doctor has suggested that he take the summer for complete rest.

Brother Leon Crowley has offered him the hospitality of Hall's Island, and it is probable that Brother Smith will take advantage of this offer, and spend the summer on the Maine coast.

We sincerely hope that Brother Smith will return in the fall completely recovered and able to take up active duties again.

What Gospel Do We Preach?

One of the lessons we learn from reading the Gospels of the New Testament is that Christ did the things he taught. He expected no more of others than he demanded of himself.

Paul was a true follower of Christ, and toward the end of his active life he wrote a significant bit of advice to his young friend, Timothy: "Watch thou in all things."

Like all the teachings of Jesus, this injunction has meaning in the lives of us today. It offers us an amazing latitude for active watchfulness; so wide a range, in fact, that many of us lose ourselves in observing things afar, and never come home to look through the doors of our own souls.

There are a thousand things and more about which we should exercise watchfulness, and a good way to cultivate the habit of watchfulness is to begin with ourselves. It is a brave man who dares to turn the searchlight of judgment within and to take himself before the examining board of his mind.

Some good questions for this examination of self are: Am I kind? Am I developing my talents, and do I give of them cheerfully and willingly to help others? Do I say "No," when something is suggested which does not come up to my standard of life? Do I know and apply the principles of honesty, truth, reverence? Am I loyal? Are my interests worthy and helpful ones? Am I studious? Am I putting first things first? Do I have charity? Does my life measure up to the Christ pattern as it ought considering the advantages and time I have had?

Frequent and truthful answers to these questions will teach us what it means to "watch thou in all things." Watchfulness of self is one of the first steps to growth. Christ took it far ahead of us. We are his followers.

"And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, . . ."

Are we preaching the gospel of the kingdom in our lives?

Boys Teach a Lesson

The boys of Kansas City and regions for miles around came very much into the public eye last Friday and Saturday nights at Convention Hall when seven thousand strong and more, led by their officers, they participated in the annual Boy Scout Roundup.

More than one hundred troops took part in the huge ceremonials. The grand entry march stirred the heart of every friend of boys in the vast audience. At one time thirteen hundred boys were on the floor receiving the Tenderfoot rank. At another, more than nine hundred were given second class badges. Saturday night fifty-eight boys were given their Eagle Scout pins. And honor awards went to numbers of troops.

Every boy took part, knew what he was to do and when he was to do it. Everyone was on his tiptoes. The big drum and bugle corps was on parade. Contests thrilled the spectators. Clowning made the crowd laugh. There were Indians, cowboys, cave-men. Boys performed on bicycles, scaled walls, and exhibited prowess in many other lines.

But the big lesson of the evening was the splendid teamwork in the troops and between the troops. Everyone knew his part and did it. Whistle signals cleared the floor for the next performance, and so attentive were the boy performers that the clearing usually required only a few seconds. As a result the program moved like clockwork, a credit to those in charge and those participating. The entertainment provided resembled a mammoth circus, and sent fathers and mothers to their homes in various parts of Missouri and Kansas, determined that their boys, too, should have the opportunity to learn to do teamwork—a lesson essential to the happiness of every person.

The Saints' Hymnal

Our present output of the new Saints' Hymnal is limited only by the capacity of our bindery department. Strenuous efforts are now being made to catch up with orders that have been on hand, awaiting the production of the books.

Where the new books are in use, they have already won a high place in the estimation of the workers and congregations. The fine selection of splendid hymns, the easy accessibility through classified indexes, and the general arrangement of the book make it most usable for all occasions and purposes where sacred music is needed. Branches should now make plans to finance the purchase of a sufficient supply for church needs. If they can not

Children's Day, June 14

In harmony with the custom among all Christian churches, and in keeping with our own desire to give special recognition to childhood, the administrative quorums of the church have designated Sunday, June 14, as Children's Day throughout the church.

It is much desired that the occasion be observed with appropriate exercises and services, in which the full value of the day may be recognized. It should be a day of delight to the children, when they share generously in the exercises, and when they are ministered to in tenderest love and consideration.

Children's Day should be an occasion when the children are drawn very close to the Master. It is the springtime of the year (in the Northern Hemisphere), when birds and flowers and children's voices mingle in joyous praise to God. The decorations, the program, the sermon, the whole setting of the day should help to make more impressive the nearness of God to childhood. The occasion should serve to bring to all a realization of the sacred potentiality of childhood and help us to sense our responsibility for the child in our midst.

Children's Day is also a day of decision for children, a day when provision is made in all the churches for the baptism of those who have passed their eighth birthday and who have been instructed in the fundamentals of the gospel, in the meaning of baptism, and the responsibility of membership in the church. The baptismal service and confirmation should be planned with much care and occupy a prominent place in the day's program. The sacredness of the ordinance may be made very impressive if the entire ceremony is conducted with dignity and beauty, inviting the presence and power of the Spirit of God.

Special preparatory classes are advised to be held as may be arranged, from May 10 to June 14. These may be held each Sabbath, in connection with the church school, or at a separate hour when the class of candidates may be met by the pastor. An extended list of helpful materials for these preparatory classes appeared in the Saints' Herald of February 25, 1931. Further Children's Day program helps manage a large order, they should begin with a supply sufficient for the use of leaders, as the program materials for church work and services will refer to the new books rather than the old ones.

and suggestions will appear in the Church Work and Service column.

Pastors and church school workers will cooperate in planning for the observance of the day and the preparatory classes leading up to it.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY.

Sacrifice Week—June 21-28

We hereby designate the period of June 21 to June 28 inclusive as a week of special sacrifice in the interests of the church.

All conference appointees, stake, district, and branch presidents and other church officials are requested to plan their programs accordingly, making use of every opportunity to bring this matter to the attention of the Saints.

We suggest that prior to and during this period special services be held at which the needs of the church be so presented as to encourage the paying of back tithes and special free-will offerings by each member. The Herald will furnish from time to time further information and also suggested programs for special services.

The Graphic Arts Bureau

The impression has gone out that this department has been discontinued. The fact is its facilities had to be enlarged to take care of the growing demands made upon it. Locally it is doing portrait work and amateur kodak finishing. It is located on the second floor of what was formerly the Library Building, 916 West Lexington Street, Independence.

C. ED. MILLER, Director.

When man is immersed in a mass of humanity with but a minimum opportunity of expressing himself in relation to it, he loses his capacity for self-realization. The distractions of a hectic life, both in work and play, make the kind of meditations which cultivate the religious feeling difficult. Religious meditation ends in God, but it begins with the discovery of self. The great mystics have all borne testimony to the fact that the way to discovery of God is through sounding the depths of selfhood. When through quiet and meditation the multifarious impulses of conscious life are brought under the control of the self's central purpose and organizing center, it follows inevitably that the world itself is finally understood and explained in terms of a unifying purpose.—*Reinhold Niebuhr, Christian Faith in the Modern World, Ventures in Belief, ed. # The Abundant Life

By A. B. Phillips

The world in which we live is a great universe of mystery. The things which we know are few, but we can not even number the things which are unknown. We are constantly learning more and more about them, only to find that they lead up deeper into the forest of mystery. For what we learn causes us to realize more keenly how little we really know. One of the most wonderful aspects of life is its unfoldment of knowledge as we glide along the uncertain years of which we may claim possession.

Without knowledge, and its right application, which we call wisdom, life would have but little meaning to us. It was this important truth that Jesus sought to impress upon human hearts when he declared the purpose of his great mission in the following words: "I am come that they may have life, and may have it more abundantly."—John 10: 10, Douay Version.

That there is a richer life, a life of greater, deeper meaning and importance, which is possible for all of us, scarcely needs our affirmation. Past experience teaches us that life is made up of our own adventures. And while some things appear to intrude without our invitation or willingness, they are but few when contrasted with the many things we deliberately or at least consciously choose. It is our priceless privilege to choose from the many pathways the course we prefer to pursue. It is true that we shall probably find some experiences which we had not anticipated, and one facetious writer declares that "Experience is what you get when you are looking for something else." Unforeseen results must naturally mingle with those we had intended, if we permit desire to overrule judgment and prudence. And if our choice is unworthy, we shall doubtless reap unworthy consequences.

The Greatness of Life

The chemist has never been able to give us a satisfactory explanation of life, nor has the biologist adequately explained its processes. The physiologist may designate some of its functions, and may name the timbers of the building in which it operates, but life itself must be lived in order that its meaning may be sensed. Even then it can not be fully comprehended, because it is never fully lived, and never attains its completeness in this world of change. To attain that completeness must be marvelous, and beyond our present power to conceive.

But the greatness of life is not expressed in hugeness of bulk, for then the ages of the past, rather than the future, would veil the summit of human desire. Physical life holds nothing for us today that for size can compare with that which existed long ago. No fairy tale has ever been written which equals the marvels of natural history. And the farther we journey with the naturalist into the wonderland of antiquity, the more bewildered we become with amazement at what we behold there.

In the Jurassic and Cretaceous periods, representing unnumbered ages ago, there roamed upon the earth gigantic animals unlike anything we have ever seen. No one knows just what they were in appearance, but their remains have been found sufficiently preserved to reveal the fact that the largest of them were not less than eighty-four feet in length, and some of them may have been even larger. For want of more common names, they are known as the diplodocus, specimens of which have been found in Colorado and Wyoming, and the brontosaurus and atlantosaurus. In one of these ancient periods, there also lived in both North and South America a gigantic flying animal known as the pteranodon. Its enormous wings sometimes measured twenty feet or more across them. These are but a few of the marvels of the ancient past. Some of them could raise their heads into the tops of the trees as easily as we could look over a garden fence.

These animals perhaps were the greatest representatives of physical life ever known upon the earth. But who can say that they possessed life in a more desirable degree than do those of our day? Their brains are believed to have been smaller than in some animals of today. It is not just physical life itself that we want, but we want to live more abundantly. With all the tremendous power these ancient animals evidently possessed, by which great trees might be torn up by the roots as we would uproot a weed, they have now become extinct. They could not cope with the forces of nature sufficiently to perpetuate their species. The power to live is not limited by size, nor by physical strength alone. Intelligence possesses far greater powers of life, by which the forces of nature become useful servants.

Attempts to Define Life

One of the simplest ways of demonstrating the marvelous meaning of life is to compare its realities with the various attempts which have been made to define it. Many of the most learned and experienced men of the past have tried to give such definitions in the form of aphorisms, apothegms, or mottoes. But they are all more or less futile and unsatisfying, for they do not express what life itself expresses in our own experience.

From the scientist has come the statement that life is activity peculiar to protoplasm. Another declares that it is continuous adjustment of external to internal relations. Still others have called it response to environment. All of these definitions describe but certain aspects of life, and not life itself. The celebrated agnostic, Ingersoll, dismally observed that life is a narrow vale "between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities." But the many evidences of living beings in past ages are hardly to be described as barren. Nor does the living present presage barrenness for the eternity that is to dawn. It is at best a fanciful bit of pessimism which finds no response in the realms of reality.

The most significant explanation that ever was made to man concerning this great subject came from the lips of Jesus. He declared: "I am the way, the truth, and the life." John the apostle also declared: "In him was life; and the life was the light of men." With this statement accords the saying that he who lives best lives most. Jesus lived in the fullness that expressed life's highest realities and manifested them to the understanding of men. Therefore, his life was the "light of men." By him light has come to mankind, which is the way of life in its highest expression and, therefore, in its fullest measure.

The Abundant Life Is Practical

Let us not suppose that what Jesus demonstrated in his own life was outside of the needs and practical uses of men. One who carefully examines the details of that life will find that Jesus was intensely practical in his applications to concrete instances which arose. We have no instance of a failure arising from an application of his advice, though we have many that failed to conform to his advice and erroneously charged that failure to his precepts.

Wherever individuals have followed the precepts and example of the Master Teacher, life has opened up in greater fullness as a result. Living consists in doing, and the true believer is one whose life expands through his faith. A dangerous error was made by the individual who once said to a friend: "I have salvation. I am sanctified by my religion. I don't have to do anything more. Jesus does it all." In reply his friend said to him: "You have made a great mistake. The state you have described is not salvation, but stagnation. Your religion has not sanctified you; it has petrified you."

The abundant life is the life of action, of purposeful living, of right thinking and of devotion to lofty but practical ideals. Those who have lived the more abundant life realize its priceless value, both to themselves and the world. Without examples of that life the great blessings of today could never have been obtained. The sordid things of the world have never brought happiness or comfort even to those who engage in them, but that life which opens up sublimer concepts of truth and human relationship can hardly fail to lift mankind to higher planes of peace and service. Such results are beyond question practical in the broadest and best sense of the word.

The Abundant Life Brings Achievement

The life of Jesus of Nazareth has more profoundly affected men for good than has that of any other living being. Therefore the practicability of that life has been demonstrated as no other thing was ever demonstrated. Its inspiration has brought new and permanent hope to many millions of people. And this hope has led them on to a realization beyond their fondest dreams. And with all the amazing progress that has followed the more abundant life, there remains still more to be attained, still greater victories to be won.

The abundant life is free and open to all mankind. It leads us out into the glittering sunlight of joy. It transports us to lofty heights upon the hills of God where reality is spread before us in glorious inspiration and variety. It beckons us along the smiling valley of peace where the benediction of heaven constantly renews our spirits and purifies our thoughts. And it yields the assurance that has no end.

Part Four

By C. E. Wight

This I beheld, or dreamed it in a dream:
There spread a cloud of dust along a plain;
And underneath the clouds, or in it, raged
A furious battle, and men yelled, and swords
Shocked upon swords and shields. A Prince's banner
Wavered, then staggered backward, hemmed by foes.
A craven hung along the battle's edge,
And thought, "Had I a sword of keener steel—
That blue blade that the king's son bears—but this Blunt thing—!" he snapped and flung it from his hand,
And lowering crept away and left the field.
Then came the king's son, wounded, sore bestead,
And weaponless, and saw the broken sword,
Hilt buried in the dry and trodden sand,
And ran and snatched it, and with battle shout
Lifted afresh he hewed his enemy down,
And saved a great cause that heroic day.

There is perhaps not one of us but has stood in the stead of the coward depicted by Edward Roland Sill in this poem entitled "Opportunity."

If only I had a chance, we say; and while we fret, our opportunity, unseen, passes by.

The romanticist looks back and with a sigh, says,

"If only I had lived in the time when knighthood was in flower."

The poet looks back and mourns that he had not the opportunity of meeting Shakespeare or Wordsworth or Tennyson.

The religionist looks back and grieves because he had not the opportunity of associating with Paul, with the apostles, or best of all, with the Master himself. What wonderful things would we have been able to do, if only we had been given the privilege of intimate association with those who have left the impress of their genius upon the history of the past.

What reason have we to believe that we should have been more wise than were those who were permitted to hear the message of the Master? Have we not the added privilege of studying that life and message in the light of two thousand years of experiment?

They showed no great wisdom or keenness of insight who were permitted the intimacy of association with Jesus. For it was of them that the statement is made, "And when he was come near he beheld the city, and wept over it, saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! But now they are hid from thine eyes."

The improvident soldier threw away his poor sword and fled, because he felt that the power of the king's son was in the special blade of blue steel. But the king's son picked up the cast-off sword and led on to victory, because he knew that the power was not in the steel but in his own unconquerable spirit.

A mediocre musician picks up a Stradivarius violin, assured that from this wonderful instrument he can bring forth strains of divine music. A real musician picks up a corn stalk fiddle, and puts to shame the lesser musician with the wonderful instrument, for he knows that the music is not come from the violin but from the soul of the musician.

Our minds are turned to the contemplation of an event which well illustrates this point. This event is the Pentecost. It is of significance that the most impelling event in the lives of the disciples did not come at the time of their close association with the Master but after he had left them.

The events leading up to this time of great spiritual quickening are recorded in the closing part of the gospel narrative according to Saint Luke. Following the resurrection and just preceding the ascension, we are told that

"Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures,

"And said unto them, thus it is written, and thus is behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day:

"And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem

"And ye are witnesses of these things.

"And behold I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high."

This is the preface to one of the most remarkable events in recorded history. For Luke resumes the narrative in the Acts of the Apostles with these words:

"And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place.

"And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a mighty rushing wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting.

"And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them."

In another article we told of the experience of Nicodemus in coming to the Master for help. Jesus told the ruler he must be born again. Our interpretation of this statement was in terms of immersion, not limited to a physical immersion, but the immersion which literally fills every crevice of our spiritual fiber with the ambition to carry forward the work which seems of greatest importance in our lives.

Now we come to another illustration of the same thing. We are told that there appeared cloven tongues as of fire, and it sat upon each of them.

There is a reminder in this story of another from the distant pages of biblical history. It is the story of a man who turned aside because of a strange sight. He saw a bush which was apparently on fire, yet it was not consumed. This same fire which could touch the bush without consuming it, entered into the soul of this man Moses and caused him to become the leader of a great nation.

So likewise did the cloven tongues as of fire cause a great transformation in the lives of the apostles. Before the time of this experience, they were weak and vacillating. Apparently recognizing the presence of a great personality and a profound wisdom, they somehow lacked the interpretation of this wisdom in their own lives.

It took the fire of Pentecost to burn that message into their understanding, so that now they were able to go forth with all of the persuasive power which Jesus had promised to them when he said:

"But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and in the uttermost parts of the earth."

Returning now to the story, let us see what happened. It was an event that would be amazing in this present day of practical events, in this day of smug satisfaction on account of the physical accomplishments of men. In listening to one of the eminent religious leaders of our present age this morning, I was surprised to hear him say that we do not look to see a recurrence of this event today. Yet simultaneously there came from this divine a plea for the burning fires of Pentecost to reawaken men to a deeper appreciation of the real meaning of the message of the Christ.

Why, the events of Pentecost were accounted a strange thing even among the people of the age in which it occurred. We are told that "when this was noised abroad, the multitude came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

"And they were amazed and marveled, saying one to another, Behold, are not all these which speak Galileans? And how hear we every man in our own tongue, wherein we were born?"

Each in his own tongue, did these people from all parts of the known world hear proclaimed the wonderful works of God. Some there were who heard the story with joy. Others scoffed. They could think only in terms of their own lives, so they said, "These men are full of new wine."

Then it was that Peter preached that memorable sermon which gives ample evidence of the transformation that had come into his life. Surely we must recognize divine power in an event that would change weak men into those stalwart crusaders who gave every ounce of their devotion to an unpopular cause.

No longer did they care what men thought of them. They had been fired with a zeal that would brook no turning aside from the accomplishment of their purpose. Their former belief had been transformed into a burning conviction. The doubts which had formerly caused them to hesitate were now consumed in the flame of devotion which accompanied the transformation.

We are told that on that day men were pricked in their hearts when they heard Peter declare:

"Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ."

Thus, proclaimed Peter, had their designs been frustrated. They had crucified the physical Jesus, but the power of his personality was beyond the touch of their murderous hands. And now as Lord and Christ he was giving to Peter an inspiration which completely changed the current of his life.

The story goes on to say that there were added to the church on that day about three thousand souls. That is a remarkable circumstance. But somehow it does not appear to have nearly the meaning that is to be found in the transformation which occurred in the lives of the apostles themselves. For the conviction carried to the souls of such a large group of people is after all a real measure of the new power which had come into the life of Peter.

If this power had been of a temporary nature, we should not be so interested in a recurrence of it today. But it appears from the record that its effect was permanent. No longer do the apostles appear as weak and vacillating men, but as stalwart defenders of the faith, willing to endure everything if through their effort men might be led to see the light divine.

It is my profound belief, and that of the church I represent, that Pentecost was not intended as an isolated experience. When the multitude cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" and when Peter answered, "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost," surely this formula was not to be interpreted as applying to this one group!

Are we to assume that this group needed the baptism of power and that we do not? With all of our vaunted intellectual development, there is today lacking a spiritual discernment which is absolutely essential to the saving of our civilization.

Every leader of our Nation during the past two decades has warned us of the need for this spiritual sense. Without it we are as an engine without a governor, a ship without a rudder. We are out of control.

The world needs Pentecost today. The church needs Pentecost today. Every man of us needs Pentecost today. We need that baptism of fire which will cause us to feel the quickening influence of spiritual forces and transform our world from one of the physical to one of the spiritual.

The promise that came with the message of Pentecost was not a limited one. Peter, under the spirit of power which touched the souls of his listeners, proclaimed:

"For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."

Now comes the call to you, in this your day, to learn of the things which belong to your peace. Men and brethren, what will ye do?

The Right Use of Time

By Willis W. Witherbe, 297 East Seventy-fifth Street,
Portland, Oregon

Time and labor are the two great oars by which man propels his lifeboat toward the distant shores of achievement and fruition. It is astonishing, when we stop to think what amounts of time are thrown away, wasted, each year. How much could be learned by those who felt disposed to use these spare moments in furthering the object of their ambition. Purpose and persistency make a man sharp to discern opportunities and turn them to usefulness. To the feeble, sluggish, and indolent, the greatest opportunities avail nothing, but with perseverance the very odds and ends of time may be worked up into results of the greatest value. An hour each day withdrawn from the frivolous pursuits and profitably employed would enable a person of an ordinary capacity to go far in mastering a complete science.

There is nothing truer in a world of facts than this: Time left to itself inevitably runs to waste, and when once gone the soul has no bugle call by which to summon back the months and years that have flown like birds away. Hence the control of time is a prize, because it incloses such a vast possibility of achievement. A day, a month, or even a year seems an ordinary thing when viewed superficially, but who can estimate the results which may flow therefrom.

All that makes life profitable and pleasant, all that confers distinction and renown; wealth, fame, and happiness, love and inward peace and also its moral welfare is somehow dependent upon the wise use of time that must be retrieved from the normal losses and waste. The ever onward rolling stream of time must be served the same as we would serve any other stream we wish to utilize for human welfare: it must be turned out of its natural wild and oftentimes useless channels and made to flow in another, where it will turn wheels and propel machinery; and when time power and water power are turned out of their natural course into a useful one, they are redeemed.

Time is like the elements: fire and water, for example, it is a good and indispensable servant but a bad master. If time controls us, it will surely force us downward to endless misery; but if we control time, we can yoke it as a winged steed to the car of resolute thought and holy efforts and compel it to carry us honorably and safely through life, to set us down triumphant at the feet of Jesus.

Do Your Girls Need the Girl Reserve Movement?

By L. B. M.

Are you acquainted with the Girl Reserves? If the girls in your town are allied with this movement, they are growing in the large field of life experiences. Here are the Girl Reserve promise and code:

"As a Girl Reserve, I will try to face life squarely and to find and give the best—

"I will be:

"Gracious in manner
Impartial in judgment
Ready for service
Loyal to friends

"Reaching toward the best Earnest in purpose
Seeing the beautiful
Eager for knowledge
Reverent to God
Victorious over self Ever dependable
Sincere at all times."

When asked, Who are the Girl Reserves? the girls and their leaders account for themselves in the following language: "The Girl Reserve Movement is the movement of the Young Women's Christian Association for girls between twelve and eighteen. The name Girl Reserve is not a military term. A Girl Reserve is a girl who is constantly storing up, putting in reserve, more and more of those qualities which will help her to take her place as a Christian citizen in her home, her school, her church, and her community."

The object of the movement is that of the Y. W. C. A., "to make a contribution to those elements in the life of a girl which set free the ideals and convictions that help a girl to live as a Christian of her age should live and to aid her to put into practice in her community her standards of Christian living. It endeavors to help her grow through normal, natural activities into those habits, insights, and ideals which will make her a responsible, eager woman capable and ready to develop and share in those group expressions which are making effective the purpose of God in the world."

In many cities and communities the movement is strongly established—there are 1,250 in Kansas City alone—organized for the convenience of the girls into clubs within the churches and schools. In the latter there may be grade school clubs, junior high school clubs, and senior high school clubs. At the weekly meetings, business is transacted, handcraft done, songs learned, service projects worked out, and other activities are taken up as need arises. In the summer time the girls have the privilege of going to one of several camps throughout the country where, more than anywhere else, they learn to think in terms of sharing with others.

As in any other boy or girl movement, much of the success of the group depends on the leader or sponsor. Here again is opportunity for the person who has a sympathetic understanding of youth, who is informed, who has personality and energy, and who is blessed with the true spirit of helpfulness, to give a glorious service.

"Since the Girl Reserve movement is the means by which the Young Women's Christian Association shares its fellowship with younger girls," a folder put out by the organization informs us, "any church desirous of making use of the movement must establish an advisory relation with the Girl Reserve Department of the local Y. W. C. A." If there is no Y. W. C. A. in your town, write to the National Board, Y. W. C. A., 600 Lexington Avenue, New York City.

[This is one of several activity organizations for girls that will be reviewed in these columns. Those in charge of the girls' work in each branch should write to The Young People's Division, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, for further information.—E. E. C.]

Ruth and Naomi

An Interpretation

By Nellie Sampson

The following story is told for us by one who understands and appreciates the message contained in line and color. The picture, a beautiful reproduction of a modern masterpiece, is one of six prints 20 by 30 inches in size, available from the Herald Publishing House, "Ruth and Naomi." It may be used in worship services during the month of May, especially for Mother's Day. The story given here can be used with good effect for telling in connection with the picture.—C. B. W.

Once a woman named Naomi started on a long journey. She had been living in the land of Moab with her two sons and their wives, Ruth and Orpah. The sons had become sick and died. Their mother, Naomi, wanted to go back to her own home in Bethlehem. She said good-bye to Ruth and Orpah and started forth. The two daughters loved Naomi dearly, and they went on the way with her unto the land of Judah. The journey was long and tiresome, and Naomi knew she would have no home for them at the journey's end, so she said: "Go, return each to her mother's house. The Lord deal kindly with you." Then she kissed them. They wept. Orpah turned back, but Ruth replied: "Entreat me not to leave thee or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go, and where thou lodgest I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God."

What is the artist's message? Is it not a story of great love and devotion of mother and daughter? Emotion so absorbing as to stand out as the one dynamic thing in the world about them? Our gaze is attracted, perhaps, first to the young girl. We are fascinated by her earnest appeal. We sense the strength and fervor of an ardent devotion to give her young life to face unknown perils and hardships so as to continue her service of love to her husband's bereft mother. Her white robe, emblem of purity, and her red dress and cap, symbolic of love, life, and strength, are important elements in the pictured message.

The older woman is no less interesting. She has known the depth of love and sorrow. She has known the wealth of happiness in home and loved ones, and the suffering caused by death, loneliness, and poverty. She knows the tiresome, lonely journey ahead, and that there will be no home awaiting them in Judah. Yet in her hour of need, Naomi unselfishly declines the offered companionship of Ruth, even urges her to return to her people where, apparently, a bright future awaits her. The older woman's dress is significant when we consider the symbolic meaning of color: white, purity; blue, loyalty, constancy, hope, self-control; purple, royalty, dignity, sadness.

The artist has clearly subordinated everything to this great love story of mother and daughter. The two large dramatic figures are clearly revealed because of strong dark-light values and color tones. The principle of repetition is noticeable in the position of the two alert figures, the rhythmic folds of their costumes, the repeated colors on each, as well as similar hues in the sky and landscape. Could this same message have been as well portrayed had the artist painted it all in cool colors, mostly blues and greens?

Opposition is a marked element in the composition. The tall, erect figures are opposed to the horizontal landscape. This helps us sense their all-absorbing devotion as opposed to the lonely, unfriendly world about them.

Transition, or softening effects appear in their interlaced position, the folds of clothing, and the intervening hues of color.

The artist has successfully given a great message in an intelligent, clear manner. It prompts even children to pray.

Prayer

Dear Father, we are glad that we have friends to share our pleasures and our sorrows. May we be faithful to others in time of need, that they may know the value of a friend.

The Children's Charter

In November, 1930, President Hoover called a Nation-wide conference on Child Health and Protection. Twenty-five hundred invitations were sent out from the White House to representative child welfare workers in all parts of the country. In response there was gathered at Constitution Hall one of the most important assemblies of the present decade.

It is strikingly significant that the Chief Executive pauses in pressing matters of state to call and direct a most searching investigation of the conditions which attend the Nation's children. Will Rogers puts it tersely: "If one of my cows or pigs gets some disease, or the fertilizer is not agreeing with my land, the Government will send a specialist, but if the baby is sick we have to find out what is the matter ourselves. Lots of parents mean well, but they don't know much." Fortunately the Government is concerned with the Nation's greatest asset. We owe child welfare agencies our hearty support and cooperation.

The action of the conference has been given publicity in various forms. We clip the following from the Church World, Kansas City. The items of this charter claim but the normal rights of every normal child. Their appeal tugs at the heartstrings of every normal citizen. Here is crystallized in a great national movement the ideals of the Master himself, as he loved and ministered among the children, made concrete and vital in the living issues of childhood in 1931.

THE CHILDREN'S CHARTER

President Hoover's White House Conference on Child Health and Protection, Recognizing the Rights of the Child as the First Rights of Citizenship, Pledges Itself to Those Aims for the Children of America.

1. For every child spiritual and moral training to help him to stand firm under the pressure of life.
2. For every child understanding and the guarding of his personality as his most precious right.
3. For every child a home and that love and security which a home provides; and for that child who must receive foster care, the nearest substitute for his own home.
4. For every child full preparation for his birth, his mother receiving prenatal, natal, and postnatal care; and the establishment of such protective measures as will make child-bearing safer.
5. For every child health protection from birth through adolescence, including periodical health examinations and, where needed, care of specialists and hospital treatment; regular dental examination and care of the teeth; protective and preventive measures against communicable diseases; the insuring of pure food, pure milk, and pure water.
6. For every child from birth through adolescence, promotion of health, including health instruction and a health program, wholesome physical and mental recreation, with teachers and leaders adequately trained.
7. For every child a dwelling place safe, sanitary, and wholesome, with reasonable provisions for privacy, free from conditions which tend to thwart his development; and a home environment harmonious and enriching.
8. For every child a school which is safe from hazards, sanitary, properly equipped, lighted, and ventilated. For younger children nursery schools and kindergartens to supplement home care.
9. For every child a community which recognizes and plans for his needs, protects him against physical dangers, moral hazards, and disease; provides him with safe and wholesome places for play and recreation; and makes provision for his cultural and social needs.
10. For every child an education which, through the discovery and development of his individual abilities, prepares him for life; and through training and vocational guidance prepares him for a living which will yield him the maximum of satisfaction.
11. For every child such teaching and training as will prepare him for successful parenthood, home making, and the rights of citizenship; and, for parents, supplementary training to fit them to deal wisely with the problems of parenthood.
12. For every child education for safety and protection against accidents to which modern conditions subject him—those to which he is directly exposed and those which, through loss or maiming of his parents, affect him indirectly.
13. For every child who is blind, deaf, crippled, or otherwise physically handicapped, and for the child who is mentally handicapped, such measures as will early discover and diagnose his handicap, provide care and treatment, and so train him that he may become an asset to society rather than a liability. Expenses of these services should be borne publicly where they can not be privately met.

14. For every child who is in conflict with society the right to be dealt with intelligently as society's charge, not society's outcast; with the home, the school, the church, the court, and the institution when needed, shaped to return him whenever possible to the normal stream of life.

15. For every child the right to grow up in a family with an adequate standard of living and the security of a stable income as the surest safeguard against social handicaps.

16. For every child protection against labor that stunts growth, either physical or mental, that limits education, that deprives children of the right of comradeship, of play, and of joy.

17. For every rural child as satisfactory schooling and health services as for the city child, and an extension to rural families of social, recreational, and cultural facilities.

18. To supplement the home and the school in the training of youth, and to return to them those interests of which modern life tends to cheat children, every stimulation and encouragement should be given to the extension and development of the voluntary youth organizations.

19. To make everywhere available the minimum protections of the health and welfare of children, there should be a district, county, or community organization for health, education, and welfare, with full-time officials, coordinating with a state-wide program which will be responsive to a nationwide service of general information, statistics, and scientific research. This should include:

(a) Trained, full-time public health officials, with public health nurses, sanitary inspection, and laboratory workers.

(b) Available hospital beds.

(c) Full-time public welfare service for the relief, aid, and guidance of children in special need due to poverty, misfortune, or behavior difficulties, and for the protection of children from abuse, neglect, exploitation, or moral hazard.

Learning and Teaching

No preacher, teacher, or anyone who seeks to lead youth in the way of life has any right to be unlearned or ignorant. Paul's word to his young friend Timothy, "Study," or as the Revised Version has it, "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed," needs to be heeded.

Never was there so much splendid material available for those who would be the guide and the inspiration of youth, and never had capable men and women so much leisure time in which to prepare themselves to be workmen of God. Yet, Sunday after Sunday poorly prepared teachers appear before groups of young people and talk twaddle and then wonder why young people stop coming to their classes. Jesus came to help people live an abundant and a joyous life. He went about doing good and helping troubled people to live the good life. To his followers today he says as he did to his followers of long ago, "Learn of me. I will make you fishers of men."—The Epworth Herald.

No man can measure his duty as though he stood alone; he must take into account the fact that he is a member of a community, and the effect of his acts on the community.—Doctor Abbott.

"I like a man who can say something good in a few words. But let him stick to his subject, and harm no other man."—The Sage of Green Island.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HERALD

Editor Herald, Dear Brother:

I suppose I am an acknowledged bore by this time, but you invite new ideas.

Now take John the Baptist. Did he go about to ice-cream parties, dramatic clubs, and social outings? Perhaps he did, but as far as I can read into the Bible, such affairs, in the lives of great saints seem hardly worth while mentioning. What is written is generally a brave and a noble stand against the prevailing sin of the age. . . . Now surely there is a noble soul or two like John in the church now. I don't think he said much about the mode of baptism but drove home the need. Though John did lose his head on one occasion, he was a real man. The Herald would be more interesting to me if accounts of doings of present-day Johns were in it.

Your brother,

PETER LAURIE.

A CHEERFUL WORKER WHO PROMISES TO HELP

"This one thing I [am going to] do." This is the last time I am going to allow you to ask for contributions from me and not reply. I have put it off as long as my conscience will permit.

Yes, I am busy, but I love to be busy. Our branch is growing nicely. I never saw a bunch any more determined to succeed than these people are. I love my job; and I love the people with whom I labor. Saints are coming to church who have not been inside of the church for years. We have over one hundred per cent gain in attendance over last year. Well, I just can't think of a single thing I want to "beef" about.

N. L. BOOKER.

THANK YOU FOR THE CORRECTION

The reprint in the Herald from the Kansas City Star regarding the municipal-owned enterprises at Chanute, Kansas, might leave the impression that there are no city taxes in Chanute. This is not true. They do have school taxes. This is the big item in almost every local tax bill. Sincerely,

JAMES F. KEIR.

DEFENDS OUR NEWS COLUMNS

I have been a reader of the Saints' Herald for nearly forty years. When my grandparents died and their home was being renovated, there was a sled load of old Heralds taken from a closet.

After reading the Herald all these many years, I still love its pages, from the first page to the end, and find it all good food for our spiritual development; and when we can see how others are carrying on it makes us ask ourselves this question: What am I doing for the advancement of the church we represent?

I imagine I am a sample of the average reader. I love to read of the activities of the Saints, in Honolulu, Hawaii; Birmingham, England; London, Ontario, and the other places from which we hear. It cheers our hearts to read that others are laboring to carry on, all in their own departments and places. I feel that the Reorganized Church is one great family, wherever the people are or whatever their labor may be, for we are all laborers together for the one great cause that is intrusted to all.

All are called according to the gifts of God to them. Much good is being done through the church papers. My earnest prayer is that God will direct and inspire those who have the task of making our church literature.

DIORA LYDICK.

Do We Help the Missionaries?

The writer of the following article prefers not to have his name given, but he hopes that the experience of which he has written will stir church members to a greater consideration for the foreign missionaries, whose lives at best are fraught with many difficulties. Do we do our duty by them?

It is not so very long since a missionary stood on the deck of a ship that was to bear him to his mission. Several thousand miles of water lay between him and his destination. There were church members in the city, and yet the missionary reported his experience in the following words: "I stood alone on the deck watching the confusion incident to the departure of an ocean-going steamer until the gang-planks were lifted and the cornet began to play 'Till We Meet Again,' and 'Smile a While.' I found it hard to smile with no one to smile at and no one to whom to say good-bye." When he went to his cabin, he found a letter and a telegram, both from his wife. Another person who has had considerable missionary experience comments, "Fifty years ago that wouldn't have happened. Every Saint in the place who could have been there would have done so."

Was it nothing that a man left his family and country to go to a strange land to preach the gospel? Did his sacrifice not merit a better demonstration of human kindness than that which he received? The commercial traveler, going for a short time and in search of profits, would have had his little knot of friends on the pier. The adventurer, seeking only sport, would have had some one to bid him good-bye. But a missionary, leaving everything behind, and giving his life to his task, had not one soul to see him off, or to make little provisions for the comfort and happiness of his voyage.

Perhaps it was an inconvenient time of day. Perhaps men were at work, children at school, and women busy with their household duties. There may have been excuses and reasons. But in the face of the fact, all explanations seem inadequate.

Fargo, North Dakota

Bungalow Church, 1423 First Avenue, South

"Don't be burdened and grieved by world conditions, but shoulder your share of the responsibility and march on together," was the counsel offered by Missionary C. J. Smith, who gave some fine sermons here the first week in March. "With our strength unified," he stated, "we shall go forward and win battles. Low spirituality and lack of training cause people to waver when they need stability to stand the tests."

Other speakers of late have been Elder Leonard Houghton, of Madison, Wisconsin; Elder George Day, of Bemidji, Minnesota; and Pastor Harry Ratcliff.

Former Pastor Thomas Leitch is now living on his farm near Clifford. The branch gave him a farewell party April 9.

The church school presented its Easter gift of programs, featuring a play, "In the Hearts of Men." A good cast touchingly portrayed the Easter story woven into this play.

Brother N. C. Anderson, of Clifford, North Dakota, passed away recently after a long illness. He was nearly ninety years of age and a faithful member. Interment was in Clifford Cemetery.

A council meeting was held April 14 and plans discussed for the improvement of the church school. A playground is being planned to occupy the lot back of the church.

The Ladies' Aid met April 15 with Mrs. Frank Stowell in social gathering. The women enjoy the study of "Religion in the Home."

Cleveland, Ohio

April 23.—In this part of Ohio, Easter Sunday dawned warm and sunny. A splendid number of Saints met to worship at the hour of sacrament. The church, beautifully decorated with palms and flowers, made an appropriate setting for the communion service. Reverence prevailed, and many testified to the truthfulness of the gospel and of their faith in our Leader. All were reminded of the words of the Master: "My work must go on."

In the evening a vesper service of vocal numbers preceded the rendition of the Easter pageant, "I Am the Resurrection," directed by Sister Clara Farrow.

Lately Apostle Clyde F. Ellis visited Cleveland and spoke uplifting thoughts to the congregation.

The members are happy to welcome Patriarch and Sister J. A. Gunsolley to Cleveland. Already we feel that Brother Gunsolley will be a real father in our midst and that he will help all to grow spiritually. On the evening of April 22, following the prayer hour, a number of Saints assembled in the church basement for a reception and grocery shower to welcome Brother and Sister Gunsolley. Conversation and refreshments helped to make the evening a happy one.

The Saints are glad to learn that Elder Percy Farrow will remain here.

Puyallup, Washington

April 23.—Puyallup is again enjoying a series of services. Elder and Sister Harold I. Velt are here and for the past week have been giving lantern lectures on "Evidences of a Lost Civilization of America." Though this is a very busy season in this part of the country, the house has been filled each evening. He is now entering upon a series of chart lectures. Local officers are looking forward to baptizing some before the services are closed.

Elder and Sister Richard Baldwin were here for a period of six weeks earlier in the year, and all through their services the house was filled, and the best of attention was given. Five candidates, four of them adults, were baptized.

During the period intervening between Elder Baldwin's and Elder Velt's lectures, Elder P. P. Reed gave a series of chart lectures on the Reformation and the Restoration.

As a branch Puyallup has been much blessed during this period of world-wide depression. Tithes and offerings each month this year have far exceeded those of the same period last year. None of the Saints have been in actual need.

The church school is steadily growing. We use the program material outlined in the Herald, and at present are trying to arrange for a room in which our juniors may meet for separate services.

The six-month-old daughter of Brother and Sister P. P. Reed passed through a serious operation for mastoid. She is improving. The doctors say that she is the youngest person they have successfully operated on for such an ailment.

A number here are using junior stewardship record books. We trust that several will qualify to receive certificates.

Oshoto, Wyoming

"After an absence of over three months, visiting in Lamoni, Independence, Kansas, and Denver," writes Mrs. Clara McElroy, correspondent for Oshoto Branch, "we find the same spirit in our little branch that is enjoyed in other places. Each member seems to feel the need for a consecrated life each day."

The church school, led by Sister George Redding and Brother Vaughn McElroy, has made fine progress during this winter. The leaders are using the programs outlined in the Herald. The young people take charge one Sunday each month, and on Easter Sunday gave a good program.

Speakers for the month have been Brothers Cousins, Hartshorn, and Cole, each giving many good thoughts.

The Women's Department has been active during the cold weather.

The branch welcomes back the family of Brother Evan Gray, which moved here from Casper.

Sister Gladys McKim is home and helping with the young people's work.

Brother and Sister Lester Adair are happy over the arrival of a baby girl.

Wichita, Kansas

Water and Osie Streets

Sunday, April 10, Apostle and Sister E. J. Gleazer, of Independence, Missouri, were in Wichita. Brother Gleazer preached morning and evening to large congregations. His sermons were full of instruction and help.

The general church school program of religious education has been adopted here, and at the first of the year Brother C. T. Pooler was elected superintendent of religious education. To assist him are Sister Mae Barraclough, supervisor of adults, Sister Francis Balman, supervisor of young people, and Sister Margarette Williams, in charge of the children. Evening classes are a Doctrine and Covenants class taught by Brother Stoff; physiology, by Sister Balman; and young people's class by Sister Margarette Williams.

Easter services this year were impressive. The church was attractive with palms and flowers. A musical program was given by the choir at the eleven o'clock hour, anthems being directed by Mrs. Paul E. Nelson, a nonmember who contributes generously of her musical talent to our services. After a scripture reading by Brother Stoff, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was served.

In the evening, instead of the regular preaching service, a play, "Pilgrims by the Way," was given by the dramatic club, Mrs. Balman directing.

With Elder Wixom in Texas

San Antonio, Texas, April 16.—The Saints were happy to have Apostle J. A. Gillen here once more. He arrived March 28 and began a series of preaching services the following evening, continuing until Easter Sunday. These meetings were much appreciated by a fine audience.

The Easter program was arranged by Sister Flossie Waite, district superintendent of the Department of Religious Education, and was appreciated by all. The special program feature was a cantata, "He Is Risen," directed by Brother Yerington. This was repeated upon request at the evening service for the benefit of those who were unable to attend in the morning.

On April 6 Elder George H. Wixom, missionary, began the first series of services to be held in the new church, at Bandera, Texas, built by a pioneer Saint, Sister Virginia Hay, assisted by her two daughters, Sister Mary Langford and Sister Lee Risinger. When this building was near completion, Sister Hay was reminded that they had a church building but no minister to occupy. Her reply was one founded in faith: "God will supply a minister."

Attendance at these services was exceptionally good. Of the spirit manifested, Brother Wixom writes: "I was pleased to see and feel the friendly spirit of those who attended from other churches. The members of the Christian Church loaned us their piano, also their communion set, and informed us that if there was anything else they could do to help, to let them know."

Sister Hay expressed a desire to dedicate the church to the Lord and his work, and Brother Wixom arranged a service for this purpose for Sunday afternoon, April 12, and invited the district presidency to take charge. Elders E. L. Henson, T. J. Jett, jr., and John A. Robinson compose the presidency.

Saints from San Antonio, Medina, and Pipe Creek were present and filled the church to overflowing.

A former Texas missionary, Elder T. J. Shepherd, was one of the speakers at this service, reviewing the work at Bandera and telling of his baptism at this place many years ago by Elder I. N. Roberts, then in charge of the field.

The services of the day opened with a Sunday school session, after which sacrament was served. Some wept for joy at being permitted to attend this service after long isolation.

Quite a number remained for the evening preaching service, which closed Brother Wixom's series. Arrangements were made by the district presidency to conduct regular services in Bandera from this time forward.

Some of the most able men of the church have spoken at Bandera. Several reunions have been held there. Brother Wixom was glad to take part in a service where our message revived fine interest.

On leaving Bandera, Brother Wixom called at Medina, where Elder Carl F. Wheeler is in charge, and preached a sermon, his first at this place. He was urged to return at a later date to hold a series of meetings. Another former missionary in Texas, D. S. Palmer, lives at this place.

"The debate between the Reverend Arceneaux of the Church of Christ and Elder A. M. Baker, postponed last October, is to be held at Sedan, New Mexico, beginning April 27," writes Brother Wixom. "As I have been requested to act as moderator for Brother Baker, I am arranging to go to that place in the next few days. While in that part of the field, I hope to visit some of the isolated Saints.

"The outlook for the work is encouraging, and it seems that the field is white for the harvest, and the opportunities opening to the missionaries demand that we thrust in our sickles with all our might and reap."

Sensing the world's present need, J. G. Holland said:

"God give us men! A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith, and ready hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office can not buy;
Men who possess opinions and a will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie;
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And damn his treacherous flatteries without winking!
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty, and in private thinking;
For while the rabble, with their thumb-worn creeds,
Their large professions and their little deeds,
Mingle in selfish strife, Lo! Freedom weeps,
Wrong rules the land and waiting Justice sleeps."

Beaverton, Michigan

The months of March and April have been ones Beaverton Saints have enjoyed. Elder and Sister J. W. Peterson were here March 1 and 2, and Brother Peterson officiated at the sacrament service.

Elder Arthur Oakman came to the branch March 3, and opened a series of meetings. A good crowd attended every evening. At the conclusion of the services March 20, a surprise party was given in his honor. We feel indebted to Brother Oakman for the talks and songs he gave us.

Apostle D. T. Williams talked to us on March 24 on conditions of the church today.

On Easter Sunday the arrangement of services was unique—a fine sacrament meeting in the morning, followed by a program by the children. In the evening a pageant, "Easter Dawn," was given by a group of young people.

About forty young people of the I. X. L. Club motored to Houghton Lake April 7, enjoying a fine evening with Saints and friends there and at West Branch.

Brother Homer Doty gave illustrated lectures on Jerusalem April 8 and 9.

Completing the month of April fine helps have been given by Brothers Schrock, McDonald, Pendleton, and G. W. Burt.

Elder Dutton in Southern Indiana

After closing meetings at Louisville, Kentucky, April 5, Elder J. O. Dutton went to New Albany, Indiana, where is found a group of members, and commenced a series. New Albany has a comfortable meeting hall on Main Street, well equipped with heating and lighting systems. Priests E. A. Jaegers and W. O. Robertson are the only ordained men working in the group, but W. H. Burwell, pastor of main branch at Louisville, helps as he has opportunity. Some young men in this group, James Robinson, Chester Metcalf, and George Maymon, are beginning to prepare for service. The first named is acting as Sunday school superintendent; the last is president of the young people's group, which meets on Friday evening for study and recreation.

Good interest was shown throughout the meetings, which closed April 19. Friends of the Saints were interested.

Mrs. E. A. Jaegers is very ill but is still spared.

April 20 Brother Dutton had arranged to begin meetings at Byrneville. Saturday he learned of the death of Brother O. J. D. Byrne, long a member of the church at Byrneville. He died of heart failure. Patriarch F. A. Smith was called from Independence for the funeral. The church was filled to overflowing, and many friends were present. Another soldier of Christ has laid down his armor.

Brother Smith remained and preached to a good congregation in the evening, and arrangements were made for him to speak at New Albany the night of April 21 and then on Wednesday night at Louisville, Kentucky, leaving there for his home in Independence.

"This country," writes Brother Dutton, "is blessed with an abundance of rain, and while this may hinder meetings here this week and over Sunday, all are happy to see the rain which last year was denied.

"Today two young couples arrived here about noon from school district number eight, near Corydon, where I am to begin meetings after Byrneville. By the smiles on their faces we could see there was a good reason for their coming. Forthwith one young man produced papers, making it possible for me to officiate in the marriage ceremony of Wilma Arnold and Carl McKim. The bride's brother, Robert Arnold, and Miss Loretta Scheler, were witnesses. The ceremony occurred at the home of Brother and Sister J. R. Byrn at high noon. Both these young people are workers in the church."

Easter Conference in British Isles

Northern District of the British Isles Mission has just held its annual Easter conference. Of it Brother W. H. Greenwood writes:

"I am in the happy position of being able to report a most successful time, peaceful, and edifying to each one present. We again reposed our confidence in the president of the district, High Priest W. H. Chandler. High Priest G. W. Leggott and Elder G. W. Green were again his choice of counselors. May the blessing of the Master be with them. All officers, local and general, were duly sustained."

Bishop A. T. Trapp and Missionary Fred Davis were visitors. Bishop Trapp gave a fine talk along the lines of his calling on Sunday morning, and the afternoon fellowship session was in charge of Elder Abel Hall and Elder W. H. Greenwood.

In the evening Saints of Wigan Branch presented to a splendid gathering the Easter pageant, "Easter Dawn." The entire cast of characters excelled, and at the request of Brother G. W. Leggott another performance was given.

"I wish to report progress in several ways," Brother Greenwood continues. "First, I want to thank the Saints for their prayers in behalf of my daughter, Maud Nelson, who is now in an apparently normal condition of health. This particular blessing released me so that I was able to fill my appointments, and I have enjoyed the blessings of the Spirit in ministering the word to the Saints. I have labored in Bradford, Leeds, Ardsley, Clay Cross, Sutton-in-Ashfield, Stockport, Farnworth, and Manchester. I have endeavored to encourage the Saints. Most of these labors were performed amid winter's storms and cold.

West Haven, Connecticut

April 26.—Recently Apostle Roy S. Budd was here for four days, during which time he greatly encouraged the members.

"We are now organized into the West Haven Mission," rejoices Sister Alice Crowell. "Brother Harold Garfield is leader, and the other members of the priesthood are his assistants, J. W. Roberts, Calvin Sears, and Donald Crowell. Muriel Garfield is secretary; Calvin Sears, bishop's agent; Alice Crowell, publicity agent; Leslie Garfield, Sunday school superintendent."

Worship services prove attractive to the members, and several socials have been held. Church history is the subject of study in the Sunday evening study hour. Regular services continue with good attendance and an uplifting spirit.

Brother Calvin Sears attended the conference in Providence, Rhode Island, April 11 and 12, and told the home mission of occurrences there.

The mission welcomed to its midst Brother and Sister Harry Maltas, from Port Huron, Michigan, who are living in Waterbury.

The Saints have been greatly blessed in their efforts in West Haven. They were told their numbers would be increased beyond their comprehension, and that their efforts would not be in vain. They pray for vision, and hope to fulfill obligations.

Ottumwa, Iowa

Fourth and Washington Streets

Church work in this branch moves forward. Attendance is increasing. The women's club is busy, the committee for the month of March raising over ninety dollars from the Thursday noon dinners.

The branch sold its interest in some property here in March and raised enough to pay off $1,600 on the church building debt, which has considerably reduced the interest.

Elder G. T. Richards, of Kansas City, was the speaker at a special series of meetings which opened March 22 and closed April 5. He was assisted by the pastor. The meetings were fairly well attended. We expect to see some baptisms in the near future, when the new font is installed.

The members were saddened by the death of Brother James Santee, who passed away at the Pearl Harbor Hospital, Honolulu. He was in the United States navy. His body arrived in Ottumwa for burial, and the funeral was held at the church April 3. Elder Richards preached the sermon, and the pastor was in charge. Four hundred people attended the service.

The Saints regret to lose Pastor F. C. Bevan, who has been transferred to Rock Island District. He departed April 18 for his new field, after having been here over a year. He was well acquainted in this city, and the work was beginning to show results under his leadership. In recognition of his work, the women's club gave Brother Bevan a present. Elder R. S. Salyards, of Independence, Missouri, sent to this branch as pastor, has been given welcome in the form a reception.

Brother and Sister Boos are here looking for employment. Brother Boos was formerly missionary in Michigan. The Saints hope circumstances will permit their remaining here.

Institute for Northeast Manchester Branch, England

April 10.—The institute of Northeast Manchester Branch is a real attainment for Northern District and is due to the far-sighted vision of G. W. Leggott of the district presidency, and High Priest Nephi Dewsnup, director of Religious Education. The sessions of the institute are now in full operation.

Elder Dewsnup was given appointment as the general church appointee, when President F. M. McDowell returned to the United States last autumn. It is the testimony of all to whom he has ministered in this office, that he is doing a splendid work, and that there was no mistake in his calling. He is now at work in the institute, and outstanding thus far is his lecture on "The Church and Society."

A session of the institute is held every Thursday evening promptly at eight o'clock and lasting one hour. Attendance is splendid. Local brothers are invited to be present. "This seems to us the one way to ministerial success, and we heartily recommend it. We could not have a better opportunity for enlightenment," says Brother W. H. Greenwood. "It is the path of progress."

Graceland Chats

Miss Sodersten Leaves

Miss Bessie Sodersten, instructor of psychology and sociology at Graceland, left Thursday night for Chicago, where she has accepted a position with the Child's Home and Aid Society. She was entertained at a luncheon given by the faculty women Sunday evening, and at a faculty party given at Roy Mortimore's home Monday evening. The C. M. C.'s, the club of which she was a member and faculty sponsor, held a luncheon for her Wednesday noon in the private dining room at Walker Hall. Wednesday evening she attended prayer meeting at the chapel, where she left her expression of faith and received the friendly good-bye of the students. Thursday evening a group of friends were at the station to see her off, and to wish her the best of luck in her new endeavor. She was the recipient of a number of useful presents, the gifts of classes and friends. She will be missed in Lamoni and on the hill, but her friends rejoice with her over her success in obtaining this position, and all are assured of her success in this, her chosen field. DOROTHY MESLE.

F. M. McDowell in Lamoni

Friends in Lamoni and on the hill were delighted to welcome Brother McDowell to Lamoni the week-end of April 25. On Sunday evening he gave an illustrated lecture on the Passion Play, which he saw while he was in Oberammergau last summer. He had taken many of the pictures himself, and they were exceptionally good. They had been colored by the Graphic Arts Bureau of Independence, Missouri. We were much interested in the lecture and appreciated his bringing to us the message, "I Have Seen Jesus." DORIS M. OAKMAN.

Student Officers Are Elected

Nomination for next year's student officers was held in the chapel Friday morning, April 24. The following Monday morning between 7.30 and 1 p. m. the election took place.

The returns from the election are as follows: President of Athenian Federation, Paul Utnehmer; editor of Acacia, Mitchel Carter; business manager of Acacia, Edgar Salts; editor of Tower, Arthur Wellman; and business manager of Tower, Clifford Long.

Paul Utnehmer, president of Athenian Federation, has been an outstanding character in Graceland activities during the past three years. Graceland is proud to have such a student president as Paul.

The offices of editor of the Acacia and business manager of the Acacia were filled by unanimous election of the student body. Both Mitchel and Edgar have had a great deal of experience in their line of work, which will enable them to continue the good work done in the past by the Acacia.

Arthur Wellman has shown his ability as a journalist this year on the Tower staff. The position of editor calls for work and responsibility, and we know Arthur will make good.

The right position fell to Clifford Long, whose interest falls along this line of work. The job calls for a go-getter, and we believe Clifford is the man for the work.

An unusually successful year is being looked forward to by the student body under the leadership of these student officers. MARIE BARNETT.

Campus Project Is Under Way

For the past few months a couple of students have been busy surveying the college campus. Many have thought the work was only another student project. But it was more than that. It was a survey of the campus to aid a landscape architect in beautifying the grounds. For many years Graceland has looked forward to the time when she could be beautified. That time is now at hand. Her major buildings are completed, and the nursery of ornamental shrubs and trees is now ready to be transplanted.

The Graceland alumni with their friends are responding heartily to hire the architect. In time, Graceland will be made one of the beauty spots of Iowa. GLENN HANDS.

[Glenn Hands and Rod May were the surveyors.]

Varsity Tennis at Graceland

Spring has come at last, and with it tennis; and that, at Graceland, means real tennis. Nine tournaments have been scheduled for the season. The first was called off because of rain; the second and third were played under a handicap, for the team had not been able to play on the courts more than one afternoon before their participation in active competition with other schools. Considering the handicaps of having no varsity men back from previous years and rainy weather, the team has shown its ability, and the prospects of a good season are evident. They took the match with Albia last Tuesday, but later lost to Saint Joseph Junior College. LYNN E. SMITH.

The Oratorical Contest

The oratorical contest, one of the outstanding forensic activities of the year, was held April 17. Olive Curtis, of Independence, Missouri, who won first place, is to receive the Franklyn D. Jones Award for her outstanding work. Miss Curtis spoke on "The Restoration of the Indian." James Moses, of Scranton, Pennsylvania, speaking on "Religion in the Public Schools," was the winner of second place. Third place was won by Vida Teeters, of Alexander, Kansas, whose subject was "A Chance for the Red Man"; and Lois Hatch, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, who spoke on "The Invisible Government," won fourth. Each of the contestants showed knowledge of his subject, thorough preparation, as well as forceful delivery.

The banner awarded to the literary society whose representatives win for it the most points, this year went to the Victorians. The Pleiades Society was second. The oratorical contest each year gives students a chance for personal development and practice in public speaking.

Brooklyn, New York

Park Place and Schenectady Avenue

April 28.—The conference of New York and Philadelphia District was held in Brooklyn, February 21 and 22, and a large number attended. Saturday evening the drama club presented a colorful pageant depicting scenes of our country's history. The women of the club and others worked hard, hanging a beautiful maroon-colored curtain across the entire building. Howard Mousley was responsible for the mechanical method of operating the curtains. An immense amount of work was required to present this pageant, under the direction of Sisters William Nichols, Anna Potts, and others, including Sister Martha Mousley, Sister George Potts, Sister Dean, and Sister Ella Squire. The cast included all the young people of the branch.

At the afternoon prayer service on Sunday, an admonition of the Spirit was given through one of the ministry, the Saints being instructed to seek God in prayer and fasting and to come close to him.

Brother John Zimmermann preached at the morning session on "Wealth and Stewardship." Pastor T. J. Elliott had charge of the class in religious education at the church school hour.

Brother Edwin and Sister Eleta Spencer, two faithful church school workers, have gone to live in Des Moines, Iowa. Sister Eleta's work in the primary department will long be remembered here. A farewell reception was held at the church March 3.

Easter Sunday morning, the intermediate, junior, and primary departments, directed by Sisters Ada Schenk, Ethel Squire, and Amy Glassford, presented an Easter song service. The Easter sacrament service was beautifully carried out, Pastor T. J. Elliott in charge.

The Birthday Club, the Drama Club, and Literary or Kappa Sigma Club have been busy. The Birthday and Drama Club report the following activities: April 7, a supper and play, "Uncle Tom's Cabin"; April 14, moving picture show (presenting the anthracite coal industry), proceeds to go to the church; April 24, a birthday party and two pantomime sketches. The Literary Club meets every Friday and Sunday evening to study history.

The prayer meetings continue every Wednesday evening, and while only a few attend, they feel repaid for the effort.

Brother William Hartley has been here on Sunday mornings teaching a class in psychology.

Dow City, Iowa

One of the recent outstanding achievements of this branch in a material way is the new basement under the church. In this the ambitions of faithful workers have at last been realized. Much credit is due the men, members and non-members, who gave generously of their time. Had it not been for them the task could not have been accomplished.

The children's division, which consists of three classes, assembles in the basement each Sunday morning. The women use the room Wednesday afternoons for quilting.

A pageant, "The Triumph of Easter," was rendered by the children's division, about thirty taking part. Mrs. Ola Boham, Mrs. Mary Riddle, and Mrs. Bessie Pearsall were in charge.

The Sunday school classes taught by Miss Zeta Clothier and Mrs. June Griffin, enjoyed a Saint Patrick's party.

Dow City was well represented at the young people's convention held at Missouri Valley, February 14 and 15. Nine young people were there from this city for the Saturday night banquet, also several leaders.

During February George Pearsall's truck was the means of transportation for groups going over to Gallands Grove to attend services in charge of Brothers E. Y. Hunker and E. Rathbun. The members received a hearty welcome and gained in a spiritual way.

Southern New England Conference

Under most ideal physical conditions the annual conference of Southern New England District convened at Providence, Rhode Island, April 11 and 12.

At 3 p. m. Saturday a number of those interested in religious education in the district met with the district director, Lucie H. Sears, and discussed principles and methods of worship. Brother Preston Hinderks and Elder S. L. Fisher assisted in this program.

At the same hour a large representative body of the priesthood of the district assembled in priesthood council and were presided over by Apostle R. S. Budd and the district president. The former gave a timely address on the "Responsibilities of Priesthood," and challenged his auditors to an exemplary ministerial conduct before, and a Christian leadership of the people. A round table discussion followed the address.

The annual business session resulted in the election of the following officers of the district: President, William Patterson; counselors, D. F. Joy and W. A. Sinclair; secretary, F. S. Dobbins; treasurer, Bishop M. C. Fisher; religious educational director, Lucie H. Sears; and musical director, Miss Helen Coombs.

The Sunday morning devotional service was well attended, and the Spirit of the Master was present in assurance. Pledges of faith in God and the ultimate triumph of the program of the church by the pastors of the branches brought reassurance to the people. Under wise, efficient, and prophetic leadership, the people of Southern New England District are ready to move Zionward.

Apostle R. S. Budd was the speaker in the morning, and in a masterly way discussed "Our Present Need." The need of the church, according to the speaker, is a living, vital faith in God and the church, a spirit of mutual self-sacrifice for the church and its objective, the maintaining of high standards of Christian living, and directional Christian leadership. This sermon quieted our fears, imbued us with a desire for greater sacrifice for Christ and his church, reassured us of the future of Zion's redemption, and challenged the best in us for the present and future need.

The combined choirs of Boston and Attleboro under the direction of Helen Coombs, rendered the cantata, "The Seven Last Words of Christ," before a large congregation in the afternoon. Soloists were Lewis Phillips, Preston Hinderks, and Helen Coombs. Mrs. H. Elleffson was at the piano.

Pastor D. E. Dowker was the speaker in the closing service, his subject being "The Strength of the Law."

The gathering, according to many, was the largest seen in the Providence Branch, and one of the finest spirited assemblies held in the district. Thanks to those in charge of the ushering, and the cooperation of the people, the decorum was greatly improved. The catering, under the direction of the women of Providence, satisfied our taste for organization and food.

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho

The Saints of Coeur d'Alene Branch rejoice in the progress of the work in the past year, especially since last October, when the new plan of religious education was adopted at this place and put into effect. There has been a noticeable increase in membership in the church school, most of this being in the children's division. In Sister Bond's class of junior girls, the enrollment was six a year ago; now it is fourteen. The boys' intermediate class has also made a noticeable increase in numbers. Both of these classes have midweek meetings. The girls meet each Monday evening at the home of their teacher, and are kept busy at different lines of art work. The boys meet the same evening at the home of Brother Fout and engage in lines of manual training.

Nor is the young people's division to be overlooked. Under the direction of Sister Margaret Gibson the young people have organized a dramatic class and are preparing a three-act comedy to be given the latter part of May.

Recently the supervisor of the children's division has announced her intention of supervising a mother and daughter banquet to be given for the mothers of the junior girls. A program to be given by the girls for the mothers will be the main feature of the evening.

At a recent council meeting, the church school director suggested that the intermediate boys, in their manual training class, make benches for the primary and beginner classes. This plan was heartily accepted, and plans are under way to accomplish the work.

Over sixty per cent of the young people and children attending the church school are from the homes of nonmembers. Almost all of these young folks have been brought into the church school through the "all week" activities which have been brought about by the new plan of Religious Education.

Our cry now is, "Give us more room that we may grow." The women's club has heard the cry and is doing all it can to create a building fund which it hopes will grow until it is sufficiently large to build a church suitable for our needs. We have organized a teacher-training class and have as the instructor, Sister Margaret Gibson, who is well qualified to teach.

We were sorry to lose our pastor, Elder Sage, and family, who have moved to Spokane. They are worthy Saints and will be welcomed back to Spokane where they formerly lived. Elder Stanley Fout was elected to fill the vacancy. He has the support of the branch and is getting along nicely. William J. Ahern, recently ordained to the office of teacher, preached his first sermon last Sunday morning, April 26. His message was well received by the audience.

We are boosters for the envelope system of receiving contributions in the church school. Our tithes and offerings through this system have averaged for the past year $7.96 per week; the lowest week's total was $2.76; the highest week's total, $16.09. The enrollment of our school is about sixty. We are of the working class of people, there being no wealthy among us. Our experience has been that tithes are paid and offerings are made through the envelope system with very little prompting on the part of the branch solicitors after the system has been well established.

Logan, Iowa

Since the last report from this branch, the pulpit has been filled by local priesthood and those from neighboring branches, also Brothers J. F. Garver, L. G. Holloway, and E. Y. Hunker of the traveling ministry. Last Sunday Brother Marvin Fry, recently returned to Missouri Valley from his work in Lamoni Stake, preached morning and evening.

On Easter Sunday the resurrection theme was carried throughout the services of the day, ending in a program by the young people at night.

W. L. Yeaman, who has been in an Omaha hospital, is improving. Encouraging reports come also from Bernard Hansen, who stopped for a brief visit with relatives, en route from Milwaukee to a Colorado sanitarium. Sister Hansen and little daughters are here with her parents, Brother and Sister Carl Crabb.

April 12, the officers elected by the young people of the district at their February convention in Missouri Valley, visited the branch and outlined some of the things they hoped to do in the way of activities during the coming year. Following a violin solo by Mrs. Harry Emmerson, Frank Fry told briefly of what was anticipated in musical lines. Della Quick spoke on dramatics, Lyle Winans on recreation, and Harry Emmerson was, as he styled it, the "and so forth." Each local in the district will endeavor to work up to the best possible place in these lines and compete with the others in contests, musical, dramatic, and recreational. Last year this was limited to the recreational departments of a few branches. This year both the scope of activities and the number of branches will be increased.

Accordingly, the local young people met recently to organize for the summer's recreation. No doubt the other departments of the work will receive attention in due time.

Beloit, Wisconsin

236 Saint Lawrence Avenue

The Saints listened to a sermon by Apostle D. T. Williams the afternoon of April 19. Beloit Branch is behind the general church in the changes it has made, and will do its part to better conditions.

A week later we received encouragement from two sermons by Elder Lyman W. Fike, formerly missionary in Wisconsin. It is hoped that he will be able to remain in this part of the State, as we need help in missionary work.

Bishop C. J. Hunt spoke to the branch March 8. Sister Hunt has our sympathy and prayers for the accident she suffered at Independence.

Elder Amos Berve, district president of Madison, was here and spoke March 29.

Seventeen voices of the Madison Choir gave their Easter cantata here April 12 under the direction of Sister Sylvia Dennis. About sixty-five members and friends heard them, and Saints were here from Rockford, Illinois, Jamesville, and Madison.

We appreciate the help Saints of other branches have given. Brother Harry A. Wasson, of Jamesville, has been giving service as assistant pastor and pastor for the last year and a half. Brother C. C. Simpson, of Rockford, Illinois, has worked a similar length of time, giving the branch instruction on every Thursday night on economics, as well as helping in other lines. Brother Simpson is also pastor of Rockford and Belvidere Branches. We feel that if men like these were located throughout the church, the entire organization would move forward regardless of present missionary handicaps.

The major activities are carried on mostly by the young people of the branch.

We hope Saints in other localities will remember Amos Berve, of Madison, who is very ill in the hospital. Only God can raise him up, and he is greatly needed here.

Independence

During the last ten days Independence has given much attention to her men of tomorrow. Boys' Week opened April 25 and closed May 2, and one of the chief events was a day of city administration by the boys. Plans were made to conform with the formula of Mayor Roger T. Sermon, that the boys of the community should be taught four things: Loyalty, interest in community progress, respect for law, willingness to accept responsibility in service.

Among the boys chosen to be the city's officers from 6 a. m. Tuesday, April 28, to 6 a. m. Wednesday, were the following church boys and the offices they held: Albert Nigh, city counselor; Frank Barwise, city engineer; Benson Brown, chief of police; councilmen: Edmund Gleazer, Donald Harder, and Everett Kelley.

On the last two days of Boys' Week came an event looked to the year 'round by the Boy Scouts—the annual Boy Scout Roundup conducted at Convention Hall in Kansas City. More than seven thousand boys, five hundred of whom were from Independence, and their officers took part in the spectacular events Friday and Saturday nights.

The roundup resembled a mammoth circus, some of the attractions being the huge-scale Scout ceremonies, wall scaling, rope spinning, bicycle feats, the large drum and bugle corps, troop projects, and clown tricks.

Boys from Independence received awards of ranks as follows: 154 tenderfoot badges; 39 second class badges; 78 first class badges; four Eagle badges. Besides these awards six troops from Independence, 139, 223 (Stone Church), 226 (Stone Church), 228, 231, and 235 received the Commissioner G. P. Truitt award for making their quotas.

Stone Church

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday morning with President F. M. McDowell in charge. "Jesus is depending on the members of his church today just as he trusted in his immediate disciples," said President McDowell. "He knows our weakness and our strength, as we do, but nothing can separate us from the love of God." The Lord's Supper is the sacrament by which we pledge anew our devotion to the cause of Christ; this we do in remembrance of him."

Assisting in the stand were: Elders H. G. Barto, J. A. Becker, F. Henry Edwards, G. W. Eastwood, U. W. Greene, George G. Lewis, and C. Ed. Miller. Lorena Kueffer was at the organ.

"The Temperance Christ Taught" was the theme of the junior young people's communion hour downstairs, and Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge. This month the young people are "Adventuring with Christ in Temperance," and on the first Sunday scripture readings, songs, and meditation combined to impress upon their minds the lesson that by obeying Christ's laws we become his wise and temperate helpers and friends. Assisting Brother Sheehy in the stand were Elder R. V. Hopkins and the intermediate pastor.

This was the closing sacrament hour of another season of intermediate services. On May 31 a memorial service will conclude the separate service programs for the intermediate department until schooltime in September. Brother Sheehy was with the young people at their opening service of sacrament in September, 1930, and the boys and girls and their officers are grateful to him for his staunch support the winter through.

"The object of law is liberty, and the only way the world will find liberty and peace is through obedience to the law of Christ," asserted Apostle R. S. Budd in his Sunday night sermon. That a knowledge of the doctrine of the church is necessary in the maintenance of the life equilibrium of the members is the belief of Brother Budd, who built for his hearers a scriptural foundation for our beliefs and principles of faith.

In accordance with its usual program of the month, the Stone Church Choir sang. Directed by Evan Fry, it contributed to the music of the evening two anthems, "The Heavens Are Telling" and "Far from My Heavenly Home," by Rathbun; solo parts were taken by Nina G. Smith, soprano; J. Glenn Fairbanks, tenor; Albert Brackenbury, bass. Robert and George Miller played the organ and piano. A much appreciated solo was sung by Brother Harry Greenway, of Omaha.

Elder G. G. Lewis was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder J. M. Terry.

Friends of Brothers Vernon A. Reese and Clarence O. Mann were happy last week to learn that they received their certificates Thursday to practice law in the State of Missouri. They took the bar examination at Jefferson City in February. Both are members of the graduating class of the Kansas City School of Law.

William Chrisman High School emerged from the spring contests sponsored by the Central Missouri State Teachers College, April 24 and 25, with five first and three second places in the academic competition and with a third place in the track meet. In the first day's competition a first place was won by Chrisman in the mixed chorus and a first in the clothing contest. Saturday's competition brought three more firsts, Marvin Turnbull taking top place in violin, the orchestra winning a first, and the Latin team composed of Marion Barnard, William Prewitt, and Albert Nigh taking first place in the contest for fourth year Latin. In the second year Latin contests Richard Riddell of Chrisman took second place and Catherine Crockett won second place in competition for third year. Marion Barnard won second place in the stenography contest.

Walnut Park

At this time when frank criticism of news letters is being given, one especially wishes for an able pen, to make others cognizant of the good that is being done, that they may share these things with us. We can only trust that a reasonable number will find familiar names among our notes and be glad to know that they, with others, are valiantly "carrying on."

It is good to be with the Walnut Park Saints in the Sunday morning prayer meetings. At times the gifts of prophecy and tongues are given in instruction and comfort or warning, and recently a song in an unknown tongue with interpretation, through one gifted with a beautiful voice, was granted. Always there are strengthening testimonies which help to keep us in the faith despite difficulties and disappointments.

On sacrament Sunday, May 4, Bishop A. Carmichael spent the hour with us and in a short talk conveyed to us a consciousness of the Savior's willing sacrifice for us and of the solemnity of our pledge to him at each communion service. Walter Chapman's talk likewise was a stirring one, as he showed the need for youth and older ones to establish communication with God to keep them in line of duty. About four hundred were present. R. Barnhardt, S. C. Smith, and Carroll Olson presided, with prayer by B. J. Scott; Delta Nace, organist.

J. F. Sheehy maintains interest in his six o'clock church history class. His teaching can not fail to create a willingness to sacrifice for a work handed down to us at such heavy cost to others who loved it.

In the evening J. E. Cleveland, pastor at Spring Branch church, was the speaker, talking on the necessity for and value of prayer. The anthem, "How Beautiful upon the Mountain," was conducted by Minnie Scott Dobson, Marian Campbell and Harry Suddath soloists. Drexel Mollison has been chosen pianist since the resignation of Sister John Reynolds, who had given years of appreciated service.

Among recent speakers are some of the younger men, John A. Taylor, Roland Kapnick, and Harry Barto, whose sermons indicate how they are applying their minds to the things needful to be accomplished and the obstacles to be overcome. Ammon White was the speaker the evening of April 26, he also stressing conditions to be eradicated that are hindering our city from being truly Zion. Either these sermons must bear fruit in our lives or we merit condemnation.

Saints' changing location has necessitated the appointing of some new Sunday school officers. In the junior room Welton Wood and Lois Butterworth are in charge, and Mrs. J. H. Logeman is again in the primary department. Miss Myrtle Weber was a welcome guest and story-teller at junior service April 19, and on the 26th Elder C. B. Woodstock was speaker at the intermediate service, which once each month displaces junior meeting. Two intermediates, Harold Dillee and Robert Masters, presided, under C. G. Closson, supervisor.

Sister M. A. Dillee has been ill for several weeks, and many friends share the anxiety of relatives.

Spring Branch

Sacrament service Sunday morning was well attended. Elders J. E. Cleveland, Robert Fish, and J. A. Bozarth were in charge. Following the communion hour, the Saints gathered at the church garden where a short consecration service was held.

Elder John F. Sheehy, pastor in Zion, was the evening speaker, bringing to the congregation a message of hope.

A good fellowship banquet on Friday honored the basket ball team of this district. Appropriate entertainment was given by a group of members. Much of the success of the event was due Brother and Sister Leonard Roberts.

The Women's Department met a week ago at the home of Sister Jake Andes, bringing cheer to one of our shut-ins, the aged mother of Brother Andes.

The sick in this congregation are improving.

The news notice of the death of Agnes Byrne, of Byrneville, Indiana, by some unaccountable circumstance became attached to the news letter of Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania, and so appeared in the Herald for April 1, page 308. It should have had the separate heading, "Byrneville, Indiana." The notice was sent to the Herald by Elder J. O. Dutton. The editors regret this error.

Axiom

No frantic hope, no tender woe
Can stop a man who wants to go.
No subtle wile will make him stay
Who wants to be upon his way.
And yet will woman not accept
This ancient law. She's more adept
In playing the reverse is true,
At least that's what I always do.

Victories for Good Government

The two clippings following, taken from the editorial pages of the "Kansas City Times" and the "Kansas City Star," represent the attitude of best press influences of the country upon some recent victories for decency in government.

No man ever made a lower estimate of the intelligence and morality of the rank and file of a population anywhere than did "Big Bill" Thompson; not even Dean Swift's indictment of humanity in his story of the "Yahoos" is worse; and his story leaves the reader sick with revulsion and disgust. The difference is this: Swift used his savage and bitter satire to lash men into showing some evidences of civilization, to purge human nature of sheer brutality and lust. Thompson used his estimate for his own profit, to obtain office in order that he might have his own way with the political and financial affairs of the city of Chicago. The trend of events during his occupation of his office have proved the character of the man.

The terrible truth is that during all of these years his theory has seemed to be right. The citizens of Chicago have listened to his bluster and guff, swallowed his hokum, fallen for his transparently silly arguments, believed his pitifully thin defenses, and have been deceived by his infantile tricks. All these years his theory has been the worst possible, and it has worked.

Well, at last Chicago is awake. At last the old hokum failed. At last this political trickster has been thrown out. But while Chicago was waking up, the city has become bankrupt; it has been the battle ground of bandits; it has been bullet ridden and overrun with vice and rackets.

However, be it ever so late, Chicago is now awake. Let's see how soon they go back to sleep.—EDITORS.

THE REPUDIATION OF "BIG BILL"

Chicago finally had enough of "Big Bill" Thompson; enough of its blatant, sensational, and commonplace mayor; enough of its reputation as a crime center in which there has been an intimate and formidable relation between predatory gangs and administration politics.

It took Chicago a long time to experience a revulsion that the whole country felt on its behalf through the three terms of Mayor Thompson. But history repeats again in the overthrow of the Thompson system. Machine control, continued long enough and emboldened by success, accomplishes its own defeat in the end.

It was a great thing that Chicago did yesterday, for the city not only repudiated Thompson and his machine, but it defeated them in exemplary fashion—by the largest plurality ever recorded for a mayor in that city.

The majority of approximately 200,000 given to Anton J. Cermak is the more remarkable because this opposition leader is not a man of outstanding accomplishments and proved leadership; he is not a citizen whose election carries with it a guarantee of an extraordinary administration. But he proved to be a leader to whom the city could turn with relative assurance as against the man who had forfeited public confidence.

To a remarkable degree, the Chicago issues were personal. Thompson was so linked up with the things that have given Chicago unfavorable notoriety that the movement against him enlisted the support of a great number of Republicans, including many of the most forceful leaders of the city. National issues were not involved. Even state issues were only remotely incidental.

That Chicago, when it comes to pass dispassionate judgment on Thompson, may accord him some credit as a "builder," the characterization he assiduously sought and boastfully assumed, is not improbable. He has been aggressively active in promoting certain constructive movements, both state and municipal. But whatever his accomplishments may have been, they are largely obscured in the closeup view, by the disreputable alliances he has made, the methods he has employed, the freedom of gangs and racketeers, and the extent to which crime has preyed on the city in his administration.

A SETBACK FOR VINDICATION

The decisive defeat of Jack Walton as a candidate for mayor of Oklahoma City lends strength to the hope that some day purely demagogic appeals to American voters may be futile. In that respect, the defeat of the former governor of Oklahoma, who was impeached in office and now is under federal indictment on a mail fraud charge, recalls the rejection of Fergusonism in Texas, Heflin in Alabama, Blease in South Carolina, and the latest repudiation, that of Thompsonism in Chicago. A reflection upon these gains for decency, common sense, and responsibility in public office is heartening.

In his campaign for mayor, Walton had resorted to the old trick of parading as a friend of "the common people." The city hall was to be "restored to the people"; the rights of the plain man were to be preserved; the former governor himself, suffering "persecution" because of the charge against him, was to be "vindicated" at the polls "when the people spoke." It is said that the opposition to Walton feared to mention the mail fraud charge, lest the

Appointment of Bishop's Agent

Due to the fact that business takes Brother H. H. Harms into another territory the greater part of the time, he has presented his resignation as bishop's agent for the North-western Ohio District. We hereby appoint as his successor, Brother W. R. Wirebaugh, Bradner, Ohio, subject to the ratification of the next district conference.

The faithful and efficient service of Brother Harms while acting as our agent has been greatly appreciated.

Brother Wirebaugh comes to us well recommended, and we are confident will receive the earnest cooperation of the membership in giving their support to the church work.

Our Departed Ones

ANDERSON.—Arthur Anderson was born March 12, 1849, at Louisville, Ontario, Canada; and passed from this life April 11, 1931, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. K. Dillee, Independence, Missouri. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints July 25, 1897, and remained a faithful member until death. His wife preceded him to the other side on December 5, 1928. He leaves to mourn his departure: three daughters and four sons, one brother, two sisters, and many friends. The funeral was in charge of T. A. Beck, the sermon by F. A. Smith. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

ATKINS.—Joseph Atkins was born January 11, 1880, at Greenwood, New York. He was united in marriage to Miss Cloie May Brundage February 15, 1900. To this union one son, Milford, was born. He united with the church April 12, 1931, at Greenwood, New York, his companion in life being baptized at the same time. On April 19, he passed peacefully to rest. The funeral was held from the Saints' church in Greenwood April 22, J. E. Vanderwood preaching the sermon. Interment was in Greenwood cemetery. Mr. Atkins leaves to mourn, his aged parents, Mr. and Mrs. Merrit Atkins, his wife and son, and many other relatives and friends. He was a man of high standing in his community, and was respected as a man of high character and noble life.

STEWART.—James Campbell Stewart was born November 20, 1871, at Salem, Missouri. Died April 15, 1931, at Wewoka, Oklahoma. He married Miss Dona Fishett November 21, 1892, and to them four children were born. One died in infancy. Left to mourn are two daughters, one son, five brothers, five sisters, fifteen grandchildren, and a host of friends. For twenty-three years he was a member of the church, strong in the faith. Was baptized May 28, 1903, by Elder W. M. Aylor. The funeral sermon was by Elder William Bath. Interment was in Holdenville Cemetery. Brother Stewart was enrolled with the Lightning Ridge Oklahoma Branch, which is now disorganized.

issue of persecution and vindication be pressed with telling effect. But the people have spoken, and the result is not quite what Walton expected. It will be a wholesome situation when there is no ground in American politics for such an expectation.

COLLINS.—Sarah Lenore Kinnaman was born in Mercer County, Illinois, October 27, 1863. Early in her life she went with her parents to a new home near Stewartsville, Missouri. In 1875 she united with the church, being baptized by Apostle T. W. Smith. January 1, 1890, she married Newton Collins, with whom she lived until March 1, 1925, when death claimed her husband. Since that time she has made her home with her brother, D. C. Kinnaman, of Saint Joseph, Missouri. In her last illness she was taken to the Sanitarium at Independence, where she passed away April 22, 1931. Surviving are one sister, Mrs. D. E. Powell; two brothers, D. C. Kinnaman, of Saint Joseph, and Milton K. Kinnaman, of Omaha, Nebraska, and many friends. Her body was taken to Saint Joseph, where the funeral occurred April 25 in the Saints' church. The sermon was by Elder J. M. Terry, Elder V. M. Goodrich assisting.

MYERS.—Ernest Myers was born January 7, 1873, at Kendallville, Noble County, Indiana, near the Oak Grove church, and spent his youth on the homestead farm in that locality. He married Miss Nettie J. Smith, at Sherwood, Ohio, when he was twenty-nine years old. To them was born one daughter, Marie. They resided in Melbern, Ohio, two years and moved to Bryan, where they were living when he died April 2, 1931, as the result of a heart attack. He was baptized a member of the church March 10, 1907, and was a faithful communicant. He was a man loved by those who knew him for his goodness and for his attitude toward life, although he bore the heavy burden of near blindness. The funeral was conducted by Elder S. W. L. Scott, of Coldwater, Michigan, and interment was in Fountain Grove Cemetery. Left to mourn are his wife, one daughter, four grandchildren, one sister, four half sisters, three step-sisters, and a large circle of other relatives and friends.

McELWAIN.—Maude A. Kennicutt was born August 1, 1879, at Arlington, Nebraska. She died March 7, 1931, at Lansford, North Dakota. Married Warren McElwain at Minot, North Dakota, December 7, 1902, and is survived by her husband and four children: Warren K., Ferd W., Laurel V., and Pearl V.; three brothers and two sisters: A. B. Kennicutt, Elsie, Nebraska; E. W. and O. C. Kennicutt, of Independence, Missouri; Mrs. W. F. Stroup, Appleton City, Missouri; Mrs. L. C. Braden, Nevada, Missouri; besides other relatives. Was baptized into the church when a girl, and will be greatly missed in church circles and the community. The funeral was held from the Methodist Episcopal parsonage at Lansford, the sermon by C. J. Smith, assisted by the Reverend Charles Keplar of the Methodist Church.

ANDERSON.—The funeral of Mrs. Martine Anderson, pioneer resident of Norman community, who passed away March 29, 1931, was held from the home April 1, Elder O. L. D'Arcy, of Nebraska City, Nebraska, conducting the service. Interment was in Osco Cemetery. Mrs. Anderson was born in Thisted, Denmark, November 11, 1853, and moved to Plano, Illinois, at the age of twenty-one. There on December 4, 1878, she was married to Peter B. Anderson. In 1880 they moved to Nebraska, where they experienced all the hardships of early settlers, and worked faithfully to help make the community one of which they could be proud. She and her husband joined the church previous to leaving Illinois. She kept the faith, and it was her greatest desire to talk of things which lead to eternal life. Left to mourn are one son, Andrew P. Anderson, and one daughter, Hanna K. Anderson, who feel greatly the loss of a mother who loved to do for others and was kind and thoughtful of her family. There also survive a sister, Louise Hansen, of Saint Paul, Minnesota; three brothers: William P. Kaldal, of Minden; Otto P. Kaldal, of Alliance, Nebraska; Karl Kaldal, Scottsbluff, Nebraska; with many other relatives and friends. Mr. Anderson died twenty-eight years ago.

THE AWAKENING

And Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest, and desired of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues, that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound unto Jerusalem. And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven: and he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? And he said Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest.—The Acts 9: 1-5.

First Things First

V.—THE GREATEST OF THESE IS CHARITY

Now abideth faith, hope, and charity, these three, but the greatest of these is charity.—1 Corinthians 13:13.

All the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.—Galatians 5:14, 15.

It may be asked, "Are you not going to mention stewardships as among the things first in importance?" Certainly I am. The doctrine of stewardships is the very flower of the gospel of Christ. The practical application of the theory of stewardships will be the finest fruit of the doctrine of Christ. But to my mind there are certain things necessary to put the foundation stones under any successful program of stewardships. Those things I am endeavoring to stress as among the first things.

The A, B, C of Religion

The teacher who taught me my A, B, C's is still living. Those were simple lessons. Yet they opened to me all the beauties and mysteries of the most profound literature; and I have never reached a stage where I could dispense with them in my studies. The A, B, C's of the religion of Christ seem very simple—personal regeneration, faith, hope, charity, humility, forbearance, self-sacrifice. Yet they open to us the beauties and mysteries of Zion.

The same simple Christian attributes and attitudes that enable men and women to work together in peace in the smallest and most obscure branch of the church will enable them to work together under the system of stewardships in a redeemed Zion. While men and women who can not work together in peace in the ordinary matters that arise between neighbors, or in the routine matters of a small church organization, or as fellow workers in the priesthood, can not hope to succeed in the exacting relations of stewards in groups. It is idle for them even to talk about and preach about stewardships. It is even worse than idle, for if men known habitually to prefer themselves and their own interests above that of their neighbors were to preach stewardships, it would turn their hearers against the whole program.

How important, then, first of all, to learn the simple and childlike first lessons of the gospel. Except a man is born again, he can not see the kingdom of God. "Except ye become as little children, ye can not enter into the kingdom." The admonition of the Apostle John, who came closest to the heart of Christ during his ministry, was this: "Little children, love one another." Have we learned the A, B, C's of Christian love? Not until we master them can we hope to move successfully forward into the high and holy relationships of a redeemed Zion. Impatience, intolerance, contempt of the brethren, love of self, selfish ambitions, worldly desires, contentions, these menace every forward movement in the practical application of the beautiful doctrines of consecration and stewardships. These are devils that must be cast out by the spirit of Christ—and they do not come out easily.

The High Cost of Quarrels

Quarrels cost the church too much. Paul said, "If ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another." Joseph warned us repeatedly that we need not fear another apostasy—that our future danger would be from internal bickerings and divisions, particularly among the priesthood. That danger is ever present in the church and in branches, districts, and stakes. I am a great believer in the friendly spirit and friendly methods in church work. The "well, let's fight it out" spirit seldom gets us anywhere excepting into trouble—often serious trouble.

Quarrels are one thing that the church can not afford. And yet to protect their "rights," their "authority," their "dignity," men too often jeopardize the peace and integrity of the church. The time, energy, and thought spent in such struggles against one another if expended in an effort to work together would advance the cause of Zion incalculably.

Real friends can pull together without contention through almost any disagreement on matters of policy. They have a basis of mutual understanding and respect, an affection that enables them to win through and reach an agreement. It is so much easier however—or so it appears—to flare up, sever relations, and "fight it out." In the end, however, that is the hard, the bitter, the costly method. I am confirmed anew in the original, deep-seated conviction of my early ministry, that the "ministry of reconciliation" is primary; it is first. The ways of peace within the church are the ways of safety and of blessing.

"I Will Call You Friends"

A proclamation of peace was made in the first message heralding the advent of Christ: "Peace on earth, good will toward men." Certainly, if anywhere, we should expect to find that message exemplified in and through the church. Every member, and especially every ordained man, should be a man of peace and should have in his heart good will toward men. Peace will not be found in the small branches, or in the districts and stakes, nor yet even in the general church until we learn the ministry of reconciliation. To work with men—that was the way of Christ: “I will call you friends.” To win men was his method: “I will draw all men unto me.” He was “not willing that even one should be lost.”

Personal testimony has a legitimate place in our preaching and exhortations, and this is my testimony: When I received my first ordination, to the office of priest, under the hands of Alexander H. Smith, he said to me, “Cease to fear and be troubled. You are called of God. The spirit of your father’s calling, which was known as one of kindness and mercy, shall be with you.” When under that spirit of peace and mercy I have worked with and for my associates, endeavoring to promote the bonds of good fellowship, in all things forgiving, I have had joy and blessing. Whenever I have yielded to a hard or censorious spirit, or been drawn into the spirit of contention and controversy, I have had sorrow and heartache.

I am persuaded that there is nothing more essential for us now than to learn the ways of equity and peace. It is worth while even to turn the other cheek and receive the second blow; it is worth while to take insult and injury without retaliation rather than disrupt the peace of the church. How much more is it worth while to overlook the ninety per cent of insults and injuries and affronts that are purely imaginary, that were never intended as such.

There is a great need, a primary need in the church, and especially among the ministry, for wise, able, and kind men: men who keep the peace themselves and promote peace among the brethren; men too big and yet too humble to indulge in petty bickerings. “Blessed are the peacemakers.”

ELBERT A. SMITH.

The Awakening

The text on the cover this week reveals the state of the soul of a man who was perfectly sincere, but who was badly mistaken. His awakening to the fact of his terrible error was a very painful experience, but it was an operation necessary to save his spiritual life. Paul had accepted the teachings of his fathers. He conceived the sum of all human benefit to be found in obedience to those teachings, and he believed it to be an act of supreme virtue to defend the faith. He was right in everything but his first premise that the gospel that he had been taught was the ultimate truth. But being wrong in taking his first direction, every well-meant step that he took thereafter carried him the wrong way. He could come to the truth only by a violent experience, and a consequent complete reversal of the trend of his living and thinking.

Believing in his faith very earnestly, he thought the gospel of Jesus to be an attack upon the truth. His duty was clear. It was to attack the gospel of Jesus and all of its followers.

It was in the midst of one of the most intense of his campaigns against the Christians that he had the vision and was struck with blindness. How significant was that period of blindness! He could see nothing. He ate nothing. He drank nothing. He took nothing from the earth or its people. It was a chance for the spirit of God to work. For that time he was left to purge his heart and soul of the old dross and to submit himself to Jesus.

How many of us, even though we have our names enrolled on the records of the church, are in one way and another persecuting the Master? How many of us need the arresting touch of a vision such as Saul had, to make us apply the corrective of self-examination to our minds and hearts.

“She Hath Done What She Could”

The true spirit of sacrifice will not be prescribed by the arbitrary limitations of time. It grows impatient if asked to express itself only on specified occasions. It will not wait. For those who possess this spirit, the work of God comes first, and the time to sacrifice for that cause is now.

Such a splendid example of this is at hand that we pass it on for the inspiration of our readers. A short time ago a small box containing a number of coins of small denomination, an opal ring, a personal note to President Smith, and a message to the Saints was received at the office of the First Presidency. The letter reads:

“Dear Brother: “Here is the widow’s mite to help on the church debt. Oh, how I wish the coppers were gold pieces. Perhaps the older coins can be sold and will make a few cents more. I have an opal ring that belongs to my mother I would like to give if you can use it.

“Ever hoping for the redemption of Zion. I pray God to bless you and give you courage and strength. I hope the way will open up so I can give more soon.”

And this was the message of the sister to the Saints:

“Dear Saints of this division of the great Angel Message: We are truly living in a day when it is ‘Lo, here’ and ‘Lo, there,’ but I say stick to the old ship Zion. She will carry you through, though she is in a terrible, raging storm now, and a wave of financial spray is shaking her rigging. The same Israel’s God is at the wheel and will steer her safe to anchor.

“Dear sisters of this our beloved church, there never was a time since the days when the Kirtland Temple was built that the church was in more need of our help.

"Then the women gave their jewels and precious dishes to help and even sold their lovely long tresses. Of course, we, that is many of us, can not give our tresses, but we can make other sacrifices that they did not have, such as our costly paintings, our diamonds, our costly clothing, drapes, over stuffs, parlor lamps, and all such unnecessary luxuries, for you know our God has said, 'Seek to build up the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things will be added.' May he help us so to do is my prayer."

Here is unquestioned conviction as to the divinity of the work and the final triumph of the cause of Zion. Here is evidenced loyalty, devotion, and joy of sacrifice. No room is found for doubt or depression. Here is contained no note of harsh criticism or censure, simply this, "Such as I have, I gladly give. My one regret is that I can not give more." Who shall deny to this sister the tribute of the Master, "She hath done what she could."

Sacrifice Week, June 21-28

Many faithful members of the church make their sacrifices out of the barely adequate resources which supply their needs. In times like these, when many are out of employment and the raising of money among all people for benevolent purposes is very difficult, it is inevitable that gifts to the church should cost more in deprivations and real personal sacrifices.

There are many, however, to whom even these hard times have been generous. Their business has prospered, their investments have given good return. Industry and good judgment have brought their rewards. In this good fortune it may be estimated that the influence of the gospel and the Christian training of the church has had an important contribution to make. These fortunate ones should experience a deep gratitude for the benefits that they have received. Such people do not need to sacrifice the necessities of life; they can give by making a temporary curtailment of their luxuries.

Perhaps the most difficult thing in the world for a person to do is to identify the luxuries, to see how they differ from the necessities. Most older people can remember when ice cream was a great luxury, something which was permitted only at intervals for an indulgence. Now, under the persistent teasing of little Johnny and Mary, the daily ice cream cone becomes a practical necessity. The automobile was once an unthought-of luxury for the average family. As one pays his taxes and his gas bills, he ruefully realizes that it is still a great luxury. But he hangs on to the old car as if it were more necessary than his shirt. He would probably give up the shirt first.

The whole point is that most of us can give out of our luxury funds, if we will only honestly determine what the luxuries are and try to make some sacrifices from the things we do not need.

Miraculous Healing in a Hospital

The Herald of July 16, 1930, carried an account of what was reported to be a case of miraculous healing in a hospital. The account attracted the attention and interest of many of our people. This interest led a number of them, even in recent weeks, to communicate with the doctors and with the authorities of the hospital named in the article.

Our readers are urgently requested to write to the Editors of the Herald before addressing any inquiries either to the doctors named or to the hospital authorities.

No Camp at Nauvoo in 1931

Because of the present financial shortage in the homes of many of our people, it has been thought best not to hold the annual camp at Nauvoo this year. A number of young people have been saving their money in order to attend this camp; we are suggesting that they deposit these funds in the bank until the 1932 camping season opens.

Early next spring we will announce definite plans for the Nauvoo Camp. Until that time let us not forget our camp motto of the last three years: Learn to Live by Living!

EUGENE CLOSSON, Camp Director.

The teachings of Jesus, which have lightened the pathway of countless millions since our Savior walked upon the earth, doubtless never would have come down to us, were it not for the fact that Jesus had the wisdom and the foresight to surround himself with a group of men whom he formed into an organization that should carry on his work after he had gone.—Robert Cashman, Church Management.

“A Play Worth While”

By Ward A. Hougas

(A sermon delivered at First Saint Joseph Church.)

There is a statement to be found in the First Corinthian letter which says, “The fashion of this world passeth away.” This reminds us of some of the mannerisms to be found on the modern stage during the production of any ordinary drama.

After all, life is indeed a drama. Its conditions and mutations are merely stage settings that are forever shifting. It is among these shifting scenes that we must attempt to find ourselves and to determine, if we can, just what part we are to play in the great drama.

We have always been interested in the history of the players of the great Passion Play, which has been produced at more or less irregular intervals in that quaint little Bavarian village with a hardly pronounceable name. Here we find that the qualifications necessary to become a part of the cast are not limited to dramatic ability or other such qualifications but depend to a great extent upon the ability of the player to actually live the part in life. A life out of harmony with the purpose of the great play automatically disqualifies the player from participation.

The general theme of this evening's drama, if it might be called such, is “The necessity of being an actor in a play worth while.” The various scenes to which your attention shall be called tend to emphasize the necessity of playing the great drama of life in earnest.

In common with some portmanteau theaters which have traveled throughout the land, we find ourselves facing the necessity of announcing the picture or scene which we expect you to see and to give you an idea of what we are trying to portray. This is generally brought about in these peculiar itinerant theaters by the use of a crier. His announcements mark the changes of the various acts and give us the keynote of the story.

The first act has five very short scenes. Imagine if you will that the crier is now stepping to the forefront of the stage. In a solemn tone of voice he asks the question, “Is life worth a serious effort?” The great curtains immediately begin to part, and we find ourselves confronted with the first scene.

A beautiful garden lies before us. Its loveliness, challenges our ability to describe it. While we marvel at its grandeur, we are suddenly aware of the presence of a man and a woman, and we realize at once that we are catching a glimpse of our first parents in their home in Eden. We are surprised, however, to note that instead of being especially happy they seem to be sorrowful and sad. As they pass by, we suddenly become aware that they are being followed by an angel. As they make their way through the east gate of the garden, the Lord places the cherubim at the gate to prevent their return.

Outside the gate they pause. Suddenly the angel raises his hand and with a loud voice proclaims, “By the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat bread.” Viewing the rather barren landscape that lies before them, a light of new hope flashes into the faces of both Adam and Eve as they realize, for the first time perhaps, that life really demands a serious consideration and is worth a serious effort.

The curtains fall on the first scene, but it is only for a moment and they part again. The scene has changed. We see an old man propped up on his couch. Gathered about him is a group of men and women, apparently his immediate family. Jacob, for so it seems to be, is approaching the sunset of his life. Human-like, yet fired with the inspiration of Almighty God, Jacob's attention is turned in his final hours to the welfare of his loved ones. As we watch him, we hear him begin to prophesy. “I will tell you that which shall befall you in the last days,” he proclaims. Then follows a recounting of the promises of God to his people and the effort of this venerable prophet and father to impress upon the minds of his somewhat wayward family the necessity of seriously considering life.

As Jacob finishes speaking, the curtains fall slowly upon the second scene. Again it is only for but a moment until they are again drawn aside. Before us stands a great mountain. A multitude of people kneel at its base. A heavy cloud covers the mountain peak, while from that obscured portion of the mountain comes the voice of thunder, lightning, and a quivering of the earth itself.

While we attempt to pierce the cloud, there suddenly is to be seen the form of a man coming slowly down the mountain side. It is but a few minutes until Moses, the white-haired leader of Israel, is delivering to them the message from God. When his speaking is finished, Israel rises to her feet and turns her face toward her tents—a chastened people, sensing as never before that life is truly worth a serious effort. As they make their way slowly toward their camp, the curtains fall and they are lost from view.

With the parting of the curtains for the fourth time, we face a very different scene. In the foreground is an ordinary well. A woman seems to be giving a Nazarene a drink of much-appreciated water. As he finishes quenching his thirst, he turns to the woman, and in a low, clear voice says, "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again, but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst," and we sense at once that we are in the presence of the Christ.

Awed and somewhat dismayed, the woman hurries back toward the little village. But it is not the same woman who had come to the well a short time before. Life looks different to her from what it did. Energy and virtue, formerly spent in debauchery, will now be put to a different purpose. Life in the future for her will be worth a serious effort.

As we lose sight of the woman in the dusk, the curtain falls, only to part again. We are in a tent. Again we find a family gathered about an aged father, who is passing from this stage of life. But just when it seems that his strength must submit to the inevitable, Lehi, the prophet of the "land shadowing with wings," warns his rebellious sons of the stern reality of life and recounts the promises of God to establish the faith that life is worth a serious effort. As his great spirit passes on into the world beyond, the curtains close on the final scene of the first act.

The second act opens with the crier again on the stage. His message is somewhat different as he gives this advice, "Discriminate between what is essential and what is merely stage setting and artificial scenery." The curtains part and we find ourselves facing a very modern scene—one which can be found in most cities any day or night.

In contrast to the former scenes, we are now looking upon a highly colored scene featured by gaudy decorations, hilarious men, scantily-dressed women, wild and weird music, and gaudy scenery.

As we gaze at the waving palm trees and the beautiful tropical plants that seem to be so attractive to many who are taking part in the festivities, we suddenly become conscious that palm trees do not grow in a city this far north and especially during the month of January. Most certainly tropical plants could not flourish in such a latitude. This gives rise to an even greater question: "Just how much of the scene is real and how much of it depends on ordinary stage properties?"

If life is a drama, might not the same questions also be asked concerning the stage settings of each of our lives? Just how much is real and how much of it is merely stage properties? We are suddenly conscious that in most lives there are altogether too many "stage props." We suddenly remember that stewardship is attempting to get by the camouflage and the paper scenery and to establish life on the real essentials for happiness.

The scene becomes more hilarious, more ridiculous, more suggestive, more repulsive, until finally amid the shrieking and the wailing of the jazz orchestra and the waving of the paper palm trees the curtains fall.

With the appearance of the crier, we know that the third act is ready to proceed. "Build a perfect scene—then play the part," he commands. The curtains part and the final act is in motion. Chaos exists. Men and women rush frantically from one side of the great stage to the other. Each seems to be consciously or unconsciously tearing down all that the others may have accomplished. Apparently the group is attempting to set the stage for the presentation of a great drama. Each one attempts to do it alone and as he feels that it should be done.

We are aware that on one obscure corner of the stage are a few who are working together and are beginning to make some headway. Occasionally another joins this little group which seems to be getting a portion of the stage cleaned off ready for the setting of the scenery. As you watch their efforts, you are somewhat surprised to see yourself march onto the stage. After participating in the chaos for a while, you finally join the little group in the corner and go to work.

The group is working feverishly now and, although small, the progress is such that the scene changes rapidly. It is only with an extreme effort that we find ourselves able to keep our activities in keeping with the scene. We find that we must enlarge our mental conception of some things before we can help with some of the work. We find that we must be willing to spend more energy in other phases of the work if we are to help. Even though we have been on the stage but a few moments, we realize that we must quicken our pace if we are to keep a place among the builders.

Then the scene takes on a more familiar appearance, and we realize that the group is none other than the congregation of people of our own branch. Looking closely we can see the pastor, the assistant pastor, various members of the priesthood, although I'm sorry to say they all aren't there, church school officers and teachers, women's department leaders, janitors, social workers, fathers, mothers, factory girls, stenographers, school-teachers, musicians, boys, girls—all. And they are working. Not reluctantly but willingly and gladly, yes, enthusiastically and lovingly—for God. The crier steps forward and again we hear his voice:

I will start afresh another year with a higher, fairer creed;
 I will cease to stand complaining of my ruthless neighbor's greed;
 I will cease to sit repining while my duty's call is clear;
 I will waste no moment whining, and my heart shall know no fear.

I will look sometimes about me for the things that merit praise;
 I will search for hidden beauties that elude the grumbler's gaze.
 I will try to find contentment in the paths that I must tread;
 I will cease to have resentment when another gets ahead.

I will not be swayed by envy when my rival's strength is shown;
 I will not deny his merit, but I'll try to prove my own;
 I will try to see the beauty spread before me, rain or shine;
 I will cease to preach your duty and be more concerned with mine.

As the curtains come together for the last time, there comes the consciousness that while happy and busy we realize after all that life is a serious thing and is worth a serious effort.

Report of the Department of Statistics

By Carroll L. Olson

The monthly report of the Department of Statistics for the month of April, 1931, is as follows:

Total enrollment of the church April 1, 1931, 108,627.

April baptisms .....	234
Gains from the unknown .....	20
Gains by correction .....	9
Total gain .....	263
Deaths .....	96
Expulsions .....	30
Loss by correction .....	1
Total loss .....	127

Net gain during the month of April, 136.

Total enrollment of the church May 1, 1931, 108,763

The following miscellaneous changes were also reported:

Transfers .....	510
Blessings .....	146
Marriages .....	86
Ordinations .....	17
Divorces .....	4
Branches Disorganized .....	3
Silences .....	2

The total of 234 baptisms for April is very encouraging, especially in view of the fact that so many missionaries have been released from full-time service. It indicates that the local priesthood are assuming the responsibility which now rests upon them to a greater degree than before, and that those remaining under appointment are increasing their efforts. This month's total is twenty more than the eleven-year average for April and has been exceeded only twice, in 1921 and in 1930.

The outstanding district this past month was the Southern Ohio District, which reported a total of 27 baptisms. Sixteen of these were performed at Jackson, Ohio, by Missionary John R. Grice, 1 being credited to the Jackson Branch and the others to the Limerick Branch. Seven baptisms were performed at Hillsboro, Ohio, by Elder Mark S. Crabtree, 2 at La Grange by Elder U. B. Chambers, and 2 near Racine, Ohio, by Missionary Jacob G. Halb.

The Detroit District reported 19 baptisms, all of which were performed on Easter Sunday. Sixteen were performed at Flint by Pastor Thomas L. Clarke, and 3 at Detroit by Missionary Hubert Case.

Eighteen baptisms were reported by the Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana District, 14 being performed at South Bend, Indiana, by Missionary O. J. Hawn on March 22, and the other 4 by Missionary James Pycock at Belding, Michigan, on April 17.

In the Seattle and British Columbia District, 14 baptisms were performed, being credited to four different branches. Six were performed at New Westminster, British Columbia, three at Puyallup, Washington, three at Vancouver, British Columbia, and 2 at Seattle, Washington. The first 9 were performed by Patriarch Richard Baldwin and the rest by Elders Leonard Quance and Monte E. Lasater.

The stakes lined up as follows:

City of Independence .....	12 baptisms
Kansas City Stake .....	6 baptisms
Far West Stake .....	3 baptisms
Holden Stake .....	1 baptism

The branches and district nonresident groups outside the stakes which reported 3 or more baptisms each were the following:

Flint, Michigan .....	16
Limerick, Ohio .....	15
South Bend, Indiana .....	14
Clinton, Iowa .....	12
Saint Louis, Missouri .....	9
Highland, Ohio .....	7

Council Bluffs, Iowa .....	5
Spokane, Washington .....	5
Tulsa, Oklahoma .....	5
Belding, Michigan .....	4
Deloit, Iowa .....	4
Louisville, Kentucky .....	4
Mikado, Michigan .....	4
Mission, Illinois .....	4
Providence, Rhode Island .....	4
Sarnia, Ontario .....	4
Barberton, Ohio .....	3
Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania .....	3
Colpoys Bay, Ontario .....	3

Detroit, Michigan .....	3
London, Ontario .....	3
Los Angeles, California .....	3
Pasco, Washington .....	3
Port Huron, Michigan .....	3
Vancouver, British Columbia .....	3
West Virginia, N. R. ....	3

In addition to the above, 11 branches and 2 non-resident groups reported two baptisms each, and 14 branches and 3 nonresident groups reported one baptism each. This makes a total of 59 branches and district nonresident groups in the United States and Canada outside the stakes which reported baptisms during April.

The grand total of 234 baptisms was distributed as follows:

U. S. and Canada outside the stakes .....	207
Independence and the stakes .....	22

This Is a Day of Sacrifice

By Ray Whiting

A portion of the fifth paragraph of the sixty-fourth section of the Doctrine and Covenants says, "Behold, now it is called today (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, . . ." This statement is not only a warning to the Saints, but it is prophetic of the time in which we live. Some of the greatest and most far-reaching sacrifices that have ever been made by man have been made since this statement was uttered. This has also been a period of great achievement, but nothing great, whether material or spiritual, was ever accomplished without sacrifice. Sacrifice is the price of success in any line, and somebody must pay the price if the goal is ever reached. I believe it is Ellwood who has said, "If we succeed without suffering, it is because some one has suffered before us; and if we suffer without succeeding, it is because some one will succeed after us."

And so, in every line of endeavor that has been crowned with success, self-denial has been exercised. Science has her martyrs just as truly as does religion, for scores of men have walked knowingly yet fearlessly into the very jaws of death, hoping only that their sacrifice would result in blessings to those who follow. The trail of those who would lead into new fields and to great heights, whether in medicine, in science, in business, or in religion, is marked with human sacrifice. Yes, especially since 1830, this has been and still is a day of sacrifice.

Much of the sacrifice of the past one hundred years has been voluntary, but within the last decade, or even more recently, the economic and social demands have become such that the masses of men are forced to sacrifice. Almost everywhere, and especially in the cities, we find men who, because of the demands made upon them by the organizations for which they work, are required to sacrifice home, and wife, and children, and be gone often for weeks in order to supply the necessities of life. Men who spend their nights at home are often required to leave so early in the morning and return so late at night that days pass without their seeing their children awake. He that would hold his position in the busy world of today must sacrifice almost everything else that is dear to him and lose himself in his business.

The monthly payment plan has brought most of us to a condition of sacrifice, for out of the monthly check we are sacrificing five dollars for a cleaner, and a radio, and at least twenty-five a month on the family car. Whether such a condition is desirable or not, whether these things are needful or not, we find most of us wanting these things, and in order to obtain them we must and do sacrifice.

"Verily, this is a day of sacrifice"; therefore, it is not a question whether or not we will sacrifice, but for what will we sacrifice. It is beginning to appear to many that much of our sacrifice and self-denial is of little or no value. A recent writer in the Christian Century Pulpit says that although we are making great sacrifices, "there seems to be creeping over us a haunting suspicion that it is all for no use and to no purpose." He says, "It is not that we are losing the capacity for sacrifice; it is something far more subtle and distressing. It is that we are losing, or lack, that moral discrimination that reveals the things worthy of sacrifice." Then he concludes by saying, "God knows humanity has paid the price time and time again in blood and tears, but our Calvaries are not redemptive, because they are not constructive. We are on the wrong track. 'Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which satisfieth not?'"

Without doubt the sacrifices which have been made by the Saints in time and money and suffering have been sufficient to complete the Auditorium, to double the missionary force, and to buy thousands of acres of stewardship lands, but their sacrifices have not been "redemptive." They have not been for Zion. They have been for other things. We are on the wrong track and have been spending our money for that which is not bread, and our labor for that which satisfieth not.

We have been sacrificing from five to fifty dollars or more a month for cars, radios, fine furniture, electric refrigerators, etc., and just now we find ourselves in dire need of a Zion which we do not have. We have been sacrificing for years, but for what have we sacrificed? Of course God wants us to have all of these fine things for which we have sacrificed, but he wants us to have Zion, too. God has said that if we would "seek first the kingdom," all these things would be added; but instead we have sought first for these things and have made Zion secondary. Suppose five thousand of us would sacrifice five dollars a month for the cause of Zion; the annual income would be increased by $300,000. Many of us have been sacrificing more than five dollars a month for nice things we could have done without. "Verily, this is a day of sacrifice"; but are our sacrifices redemptive?

The world has been seeking first the material things, and God tells us that the world's way is sinful. In God's way our sacrifices need not be any greater, but they will be for different things. In God's way our sacrifices will be first for tithing, surplus, and offering, then for luxuries, pleasures, and fine things. With the material things first, the possibility of Zion is forever excluded, but with Zion first, "all these things shall be added."

Yes, this is a day of sacrifice, and most of us are making sacrifices, but may God hasten the day when our sacrifices will be so directed that instead of destroying they will build up; instead of delaying, they will hasten the kingdom of God on earth.

An Answer to Mrs. Gates on the Question of Polygamy

[There recently appeared in the Kansas City Star the account of an interview with Susa Young Gates, of Utah, written by A. B. MacDonald, in which Mrs. Gates repeated the statement so often made by members of the Utah church that Joseph Smith lived in polygamy. To that statement, of course, we must take emphatic exception. It is our firm belief and conviction that the Restoration movement was inaugurated and conducted by men who strictly taught and practiced monogamy, as do members of other Christian faiths; that Joseph Smith was innocent of the charge of polygamy; and that this doctrine and practice, offensive to all but one of the many faiths professing the name of Christ, was introduced by and at the instigation of Brigham Young, who without authority assumed leadership of a small part of the original membership, and led them into the spiritual desert of false doctrine as well as into the real desert of the then unsettled West.

Mr. MacDonald (who has lately been honored with the Pulitzer prize for meritorious service) performed well his work as a reporter. We are grateful for his repeated fairness to us in recognizing our separate identity. He has aided in making it impossible for the public to confuse our church with the Utah church. We take no exception to his part in the performance.

But to the effort to fasten responsibility on Joseph Smith we must object. We likewise feel the absurdity of the attempt to prettify the institution of polygamy, which was too evidently made in the statements of Mrs. Gates.

The following letter, written by W. H. Deam to Mr. Mac-

Donald, is given as but a part of the total answer that might be made to the statements of Mrs. Gates. The reader's attention is called to the note below from the office of the historian.]

Letter by W. H. Deam to President Smith

Dear Brother: Herewith find inclosed copy of a letter I wrote to Mr. A. B. MacDonald, Kansas City Star reporter. In it you may find something of interest to you.

One thing I intended to say, but overlooked, is that some of the women who testified that they were Joseph Smith's wives were but little children when he was killed, and others were not born, but they could do so as truthfully as any of them, for in each case it was an assumption.

Very truly yours,

W. H. DEAM.

Letter by W. H. Deam to Mr. MacDonald

Dear Mr. MacDonald: For a long time I have been reading your stories in the Sunday Star, reading them aloud to my invalid wife, including exposures of goat gland quack, Drake millions fraud, etc. When I read your Easter sermon, I said the Baptist Church (in which I believe you are a member) ought to ordain you to preach the gospel.

And now comes your interview with Mrs. Gates, one of Brigham Young's daughters, on which I wish to make some comments. In answer to your question, "Do you believe yet in polygamy, in a man having several wives?" she is quoted as saying, "I do for two reasons. First, God himself appeared to the prophet, Joseph Smith, in Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1831, and commanded him to institute plural marriage."

Mrs. Gates has her dates badly mixed. It has always been claimed by the Utah church that that polygamous revelation was given in 1843. Here is what was received in March, 1831, and published in both the Utah church's and the Reorganized church's Doctrine and Covenants. Note the following:

"Marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation."

That is in harmony with what Jesus said and also the statement in Genesis 2: 24. I did not quote her second reason, as I do not care either to deny or defend her assertion.

The next thing I wish to note is what Mr. Gates said, as follows: "I was a missionary in the Hawaiian Islands when Joseph Smith, president of our church, was living underground." To people unacquainted with affairs of the Mormon Church, this would appear to refer to the Joseph Smith who was the founder of the church and who was martyred at Carthage, Illinois. It should have been Joseph F. Smith, who was a son of Hyrum Smith. Joseph Smith the martyr did not have to live "underground." Mr. Gates was not born till after Joseph Smith was killed.

Again I note: "'But,' she said emphatically, 'remember that while polygamy is God-given and right, it is no longer practiced by our people. It was abolished in 1900 by a revelation from God, and the Mormons are obeying that command. In my opinion polygamy will never be restored on earth.'"

I did not know that document was claimed to be a revelation, but simply an act of conference. Well, God again changed his mind. It reminds me of an experience that I had while coming home from Chicago fifteen or twenty years ago. There was a man about fifty-five or sixty years old with four young fellows. From a remark made to the conductor, I sized them up as Utah elders on their way home to Utah, so I asked the older man if they were, and he said, "Yes." In the course of our conversation, we got onto church topics, and I remarked: "You know, Brother Stephenson, when the elders declared the restoration of the gospel, they claimed that God was unchangeable, consequently the gospel must be the same as anciently."

"Yes," he said, "that is correct."

"But," said I, "you make God to be the most changeable Being one could think of."

"How is that?" he said.

"Well," said I, "you claim that God indorsed polygamy in the lives of Abraham, Jacob, David, and Solomon, and then along down the course of time he must have changed very radically, for in the second chapter of the book of Jacob in the Book of Mormon he calls polygamy a "grosser crime" and abomination in his sight. Then, according to your idea, God must have changed back when his Son was on earth, and allowed the Son to have two wives in the persons of Martha and Mary. Then, in 1831, God must have changed back and declared that it was lawful that a man should have one wife. Then, in 1843 God flops over again and celestialized polygamy. What kind of a changeable Being is your God?"

"Well," he said, "he changes according to times and conditions."

I had not heard of the 1900 declaration from God against polygamy. If I had I could have added another radical change.

Now, briefly, in Mrs. Gates' answer to your saying that Joseph Smith told you that his father had no other wife besides Emma, she said, "If Joseph said that to you, then he knew better before he died, for he came out here to Salt Lake City and we showed him the proof that his father, the prophet, did institute polygamy in Nauvoo," etc.

I have been of the opinion that Joseph Smith never visited Salt Lake City. [See note below.] He certainly did not in the later years of his life. His two brothers, Alexander H. and David H., did missionary work there. It may be that Mrs. Gates got them mixed as she did the date of the polygamous revelation. I had a talk with Joseph Smith not very long before he died, and his position as regards his father being in polygamy was the same as it formerly had been. If he ever visited Salt Lake City, it must have been in 1876, at the same time that Joseph F. Smith and Orson Pratt visited Plano, Illinois, at that time the headquarters of the Reorganized Church. Local church authorities called a meeting, and these two men spoke in the Plano stone church, the first church built by the Reorganization, a commodious and substantial building.

Now, Mr. MacDonald, perhaps you would be interested in my giving a reason why so many women could make affidavit before a justice of the peace that they were Joseph Smith's wives, and I do not suppose that half of those who could make the same affidavit did so.

It was the "sealing" in the endowment. That was started soon after Joseph Smith was killed. My mother went through the endowment and was sealed to my father for eternity. That does not sound bad on the surface. But eternity or eternal things belong not to mortality, but to God and Christ. It was attempting to regulate things in the eternal world.

Now, all of the many women who made affidavit that they had been wives of Joseph Smith were sealed to him for eternity after Joseph Smith's death. He had nothing to say in the matter. They were given to understand that they were sealed to him to be his wives in eternity, and that they were virtually married to him on the date of their sealing, so it was easy for them to make the affidavit. Now add to this the fact that Joseph Smith was a powerful and exceptionally vigorous man, and that his wife Emma had four stalwart sons—Joseph, Frederick, Alexander, and David, and out of all the host of affidavits given by women who at the time they claim they were married to Joseph Smith were young and vigorous, not one had any progeny of Joseph Smith to show as evidence—not a chick or child to be found.

fore his death, and he said, "Will, you have it correct."

Very respectfully,

W. H. DEAM.

Note from Historian's Office

Joseph Smith was in Utah several times, and once at least made quite an extended visit there. In the Church History, volume 4, we read of his preaching at various places in Utah in 1876, 1885, and in 1888.

The Christmas Offering in 1931

By C. B. W.

For years the Christmas offering has been a church-wide means of expressing our love for the Master and to God, who made the first Christmas offering for us. Through his gift all men, everywhere, in all time, may have abundant life here and eternal life in the world to come. All through the year we look forward to the annual celebration of the birth of the Christ, at Christmas time.

A beautiful custom has grown up in the church which keeps the mission and gift of the Christ ever clearly before us. Each week, on the Sabbath, we bring our offering, that it may be gathered all through the year and finally be presented to the Lord, a magnificent sum, as our Christmas gift.

Last year the total Christmas offering was $35,591.66. In recent years it has been about $40,000 each year. Back in 1920 it passed the $100,000 mark. In all, over a period of some forty years, the Christmas offering has been over one million dollars! What a splendid gift to be brought with our love to the Master!

The Christmas offering has been assigned to the church school by the Presiding Bishopric as a special means through which boys and girls and the older membership of the church may have the joyous experience of sharing and may learn the beautiful art of giving in a spirit of love and sacrifice. It is not so necessary that our gift each Sunday or for the year, be large, but it is necessary that we should learn to share our means and to give in proportion as God has blessed us, even to the point of some self-denial and sacrifice. Nor should our gift to this special offering relieve us of the responsibility of our regular payment of the tithe, according to the law.

What shall the total Christmas offering be in 1931? No goal has been set. But in a very definite way it shall be a measure of our appreciation, our gratitude, our desire to assist in the Lord's work through some small self-denial every week, or at regular intervals during the year.

Church school directors and Sunday school superintendents will organize the Christmas offering plan as may seem best to meet local conditions, in cooperation with branch solicitors and pastors. Frequent suggestions and helpful discussions will appear in these columns.

Our combined gift in a spirit of love and under divine blessing will help hasten the Master's work in our day.

What art thou, Death, that in the thoughts of men
One word thy history writes, and that word Fear?
By what black power of logic or of ken
Dost thou all Christly truth make disappear?

Not unto me wilt thou bring final grief
When closed mine eyes to all of earth will be;
Nor canst thou make the hours of love more brief
E'en though, O Death! I travel e'er to thee!

'Tis but the weak and blind of thee have dread
And shrink with craven heart before thy might.
To thee, sweet Death, when mortal life hath sped,
I welcome give. I am Masonic Light!

Our Church

By Francis May

What kind of a church would our church be
If every church member were just like me?
Aye, just like me in working and playing,
And, like me, too, in tithing and praying;
Aye, just like me in Love's offering,
Just like me in every thing.

Father in heaven, where would our church be
If every church member were just like me?

Say, what kind of service would ours be
If the number in service depended on me?
Aye, any to listen or any to pray,
If my brother or sister, like me, should stay
With the Sunday newspaper on next Lord's Day?
Father in heaven, what would Sunday be
If my brother and sister should follow me?

What kind of prayer meeting would ours be
If every church member attended like me?
Would there be any song, testimony, or prayer,
Any burdens to ease, any sorrows to share,
If this service depended on my being there?
Father in heaven, can it really be
That the church of choice is depending on me?

Father in heaven, let my blind eyes see
The church of thy planting deep planted in me,
Its presence, thy presence, its burdens my own,
Its honor, thy honor, its glory my throne.
Its hopes and its halos, its glory free,
Presented, displayed, and preempted in me.
Proclaim to all men, with consistency,
What God's church and yours and mine should be.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

The Camp Fire Girls

By Fae Emmerson Gardner

The Camp Fire Girls is a national organization for girls between the ages of eleven and twenty years. Some twenty-five years ago, a group of educators, realizing the need of an organization for girls, worked out the plan of the Camp Fire Circle. After a careful study of girls, they have presented this very attractive program, which, if its ideals are lived up to, goes to make the finest kind of young womanhood.

A Camp Fire girl's life is full of interesting, enthusiastic work and play. She is taught, first of all, to see the beauty in every task that she performs, as well as in the personalities around her, and the beautiful things on God's earth. She is encouraged to study the out-of-doors and to live in it as much as possible. Her program is built around the folklore and magic of the life of the American Indian, and she finds expression for her ideals and dreams through the ritual and ceremony of the Indian dress and Ceremonial Fire. Her work becomes a joy to her, for the honor system plays a large part in making her work play. To earn an honor for a task well done is the aim of every Camp Fire Girl. She learns the intimate comradeship of girls who are a part of her circle; she learns to live with them harmoniously, and to work and play with them in group meetings and camp life.

To form a Camp Fire Circle, it is necessary to have six girls within the required age limit and a leader or guardian who is more than eighteen years of age. The guardian may write to the Camp Fire Headquarters, 197 Greene Street, New York City, for a registration blank. When she receives this, each girl will pay one dollar, which is her dues for one year. She will have earned this herself if at all possible. When the dues are paid and the blank sent in to headquarters, the circle will become a registered circle in the great National Camp Fire Organization, and will receive a charter. Then the girls will be ready to start work on the Camp Fire program. Information and supplies can be secured from the national headquarters.

The Camp Fire Organization, like other organizations for girls, has for its aim the making of girls into fine young women. Any girl who participates in such an activity can not fail to make her life more useful and beautiful by working out the high ideals of such an organization.

[This is one of several activity organizations for girls that will be reviewed in these columns. Those in charge of the girls' work in each branch should write to The Young People's Division, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, for further information.—E. E. C.]

Guiding the Nursery Child

STUDY HELPS FOR PARENTS AND WORKERS IN THE NURSERY DEPARTMENT OF THE CHURCH SCHOOL

By Mrs. Bertha Stevens, 806 North Seventh Street, Phoenix, Arizona

These lesson assignments are appearing early each month in the "Herald" columns. They are designed to be directive and helpful in the study of all parents of small children and nursery workers. They should be especially helpful for the use of monthly group meetings or classes under the direction of the church school. The text, "Guiding the Nursery Child," is an outstanding work in this field, and thoroughly reliable. It is a most worthy production of our own church people. Order from the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri, price, $1.25.

LESSON FIVE

Education of the Preschool Child through Play

Part One

Many theories have been advanced as to the origin and nature of the play urge. Perhaps the idea most acceptable is that set forth by Miss Appleton (A Comparative Study of the Play Activities of Adult Savages and Civilized Children, pp. 78, 79), that when any physical function or structure requires much activity for normal growth and development, nature provides an inner incentive or urge to secure that activity.

It is probably true that this need is not confined to the physical alone, for mental and social growth normally develop side by side with the physical. Play is thus seen to have certain definite, physical, mental, and social values.

In short, "play is nature's way of growing a character." Unless this need for play is met in suitable and adequate ways, it never can be wholly compensated for in any later period of life.

Nature's wisdom is shown by the fact that play interests change as the growing organism changes, accounting for the play characteristics of different ages of childhood, youth, and adulthood. In other words, the play of different ages seems to be just the type of activity most useful to the growing, developing powers of the individual.

It will be interesting to discuss the appended list in connection with the young child and decide how many of these values are discernible in his play. It will help if we are specific and set down opposite each listed "value" the "activity" in which it was observed.

You may be interested to know that this list was developed by a group of mothers and day nursery workers in conference on the needs of the preschool child.

Unfortunately, our space is limited so we must forego further comment on the list at this time. However, we shall be glad to hear from you personally if further help is needed.

Any good text containing discussion of theory and value of play will be found useful.

Education through Play

Analysis of any worth-while and satisfying play activity reveals one or more of the following values to be derived therefrom: physical, mental, social. No hard and fast vertical lines can be drawn between these groups, since the values tend to overlap more and more with age and type of play. Neither is the list complete, for we have not yet discovered all the values of play.

5. Skills and appreciations for worth-while use of leisure time.

The Importance of Belief

May I say at the outset that it requires only a little discernment to see that the greater concerns of life move along on a basis of belief. We do not know much in the sense of scientifically demonstrable knowledge. The strictest knowledge rests down at last upon something, or some things, we take for granted. . . . Since all thinking moves on assumption, and since the only question about assumptions is as to the number and kind we are making, the fruitful procedure in questions that have to do with human living is not one of doubting everything and of accepting only what can be strictly proved. If we began by doubting everything, we would never get started; at least at not more than a snail's pace. Three-score years and ten would not be enough to land us at any goal worth reaching. The more excellent way manifestly is to assume that things around us are telling the truth till reasons for doubt appear in our dealings with particular things. If all things alike lied to us, all questions would alike become futile.—Francis J. McConnell.

Boston, Massachusetts

Boston's long silence must not be considered as a barometer reading of her activity. The branch is busy and with "eyes front" is moving onward.

The church school plan of organization is in effect, under the supervision of Sanford L. Fisher and a quorum of well-selected officers.

Palm Sunday was commemorated with a sermon by the pastor on the theme, "The Triumphant One," in which the power of the triumphant Christ was held out to us. In the evening the cantata, "The Last Seven Words of Christ," was given by the combined choirs of Attleboro and Boston, under the direction of Helen Coombs, assisted by soloists: Lewis Phillips, tenor; Preston Hendricks, baritone; pianist, Winnifred Elefson. Sister Coombs sang the soprano part. The entire cantata was well rendered, bringing vividly to our minds the scenes surrounding the death of the Christ, convincing us more fully of our indebtedness to his love.

"Easter" was the theme for the worship period of the church school April 5, Sister Elva Sturges's class in charge. At the close of the study period Nanette Lee Kelly, daughter of Brother and Sister Charles Kelly, was led into the waters of baptism, Brother W. A. Sinclair officiating. She was confirmed by Brothers E. H. Fisher and A. H. Nichols.

At 11.15 a. m. the Saints met at the Lord's table to renew covenants made at the water's edge, to love and serve him as long as life lasts. A peaceful spirit prevailed, bringing encouragement to the one hundred and twenty-three souls in attendance.

The evening service was a fitting conclusion to the Easter worship. "Eternal Hope" was the theme.

Apostle R. S. Budd was here April 8 and encouraged the branch with a sermon in which he admonished us to forget the past and move forward. His discourse replaced the regular prayer meeting. Later in the evening a large number of friends gathered in the basement of the church to honor Brother and Sister Stockbridge, of Everett, who had that week reached their seventy-sixth birthdays. Brother Dowker presented our veteran brother and sister a gold piece as a token of esteem from their many friends. Seated side by side they received the well wishes for many happy years to come, not only as individuals but as companions. They have traveled the road of life together fifty-seven years.

Alexander, Kansas

Spring with all its beauty of grasses, fruit, blossoms, and wild daisies, is here, and causes us to think that we, too, must put on our beautiful robes of righteousness and make the church shine more brightly before men during the remaining months of 1931.

Elder and Sister O. L. D'Arcy have been here conducting a series. Brother D'Arcy preached more than a dozen sermons, and the meetings were good. Not many nonmembers attended, but the members had their minds stirred up to a remembrance of the things of God. Our brother and sister left to hold meetings at Selden, Kansas.

At present the pastor of this group is giving sermons on prophecies fulfilled and unfulfilled. As a result we are strengthened and encouraged in our work.

About a week ago little nine-year-old Maxine Stephens was badly burned on the limb by boiling water. The burn measured about twelve by five inches. The doctor administered first aid. Brother Teeters was called and administered to her in the afternoon of the same day. Her people testify that that night much of the burn had gone, and now it is entirely healed. New skin covers the place. This confirms our belief that God remembers his children in latter days, and we strive to live more worthy of his blessings.

Sick members are much better and able to attend church. Grandma Robbins, eighty-one years old, who fell last fall and for a time was so low, is sitting in her wheel chair and rejoicing in God's goodness. Brother Ebert, eighty-two years old, and his wife, are in poor health.

Now that spring is come, it is hoped that all members will find it possible to attend services and work together. We are scattered over considerable territory. Everyone is especially urged to attend the prayer meetings held in the homes of those who request them.

A Mother's Day program will be presented May 10.

In this community the wheat looks good. Let us hope that Kansas Saints will remember their debt to God, one tenth. Payment of this will help the church forward.

Bradford, Manchester Branch, England

The following clipping of news from the Gospel Hall group of Saints, James Street, Bradford, comes from the Ashton Reporter:

"The members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Gospel Hall, James Street, Bradford, held a communion service on Good Friday morning. Pastor G. W. Leggott conducted the service. In the afternoon, although the weather was inclement, two fully loaded motor coaches journeyed to Rudyard Lake, and the incessant rain and cold failed to dampen the ardor of those who ventured. Much merriment was created by individual members of the party, which helped to make the picnic a success. All were delighted on arriving home that a pleasant and enjoyable time had been spent."

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

The Sunday school gave an Easter program the first Sunday in April before a setting of flowers and palms. The company and performances of the little folks were enjoyed. Each child was given an Easter basket.

Preceding the sacrament Sister Hazel Gribben sang "He Is Risen," and Sister Vera Hunter played on the organ an Easter prelude. A beautiful spirit was present as the Saints entered this meeting, and a message of encouragement made them grateful. All felt that God was near.

"Eternal Life," a cantata by Fred T. Holten, was sung by the junior choir that evening.

Four days later the Women's Department met to listen to a sketch of the life of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow by Sister Wemlinger, and the reading of several of his poems. This department has gained a new member. "What Is a Home?" was a theme which evoked good discussion. The conclusion was that a home is a place to live where strife is shut out and love shut in. It is a father's kingdom and a mother's paradise, a place where we grumble the most but are treated the best.

Sermons this month have carried us to a higher spiritual plane of life and a closer observance of the law of God. J. E. Matthews, H. E. French, W. B. Reeves, A. E. Anderton, Edgar R. Kimball, and John R. Grice have been speakers.

The Temple Builders, Orioles, and Blue Birds are meeting regularly. They have good times as well as doing those things which will make of them useful young citizens.

Dallas, Texas

The Easter program was given the morning and evening of Easter Sunday. In the morning the children presented the numbers, in the evening the young people. All were pleasantly surprised to hear the lovely songs by the Triangle Society.

At present the children's department meets every Saturday to practice parts of its Children's Day play.

Nearly every week has brought some social activity—doughnut baking, tacky parties, pound showers.

The Triangles are planning the Mother's Day program, also a church school picnic, to which everyone is looking forward.

Apostle J. A. Gillen strengthens the faith of the Saints by his splendid discourses. We wish he could have remained longer with us.

On a recent Sunday the speaker was Brother Hancock, from Alabama.

The church school is growing, and is much too large for our small building. Attendance is regular, and it is seldom that an officer or teacher is absent. About one third of the church school children are nonmembers, and we feel that we could interest many more if only we had the room. The Saints are planning for and working towards a new building.

Pastor W. R. Standifer is encouraged at the attempts of the members to come up to a higher plane of living. Always he is to be heard admonishing us to demonstrate our love for the church and one another; he would have every member zealous with the old-time missionary spirit which causes us to be constant in teaching and warning our neighbors.

Conference in British Isles

"The annual conference of the Northern District of the British Isles Mission was held on Saturday and Sunday at the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Gospel Hall, Bradford." This is the introductory paragraph to a lengthy account of the conference by the Ashton Reporter, sent to the Herald by Brother Harold Barrington:

"The business session of the conference," the paper continues, "was held on Saturday evening under the chairmanship of Mr. W. H. Chandler, district president, assisted by J. W. Green, Blackpool, and G. W. Leggott, Clayton, associated with the presidency, Mr. A. T. Trapp, Gloucester, bishop of the British Isles Mission.

"Representatives and delegates from Wigan, Farnworth, and Bradford (Yorkshire), Stockport, Warrington, and other branches of the district were in attendance. District President W. H. Chandler gave a ministerial report of activities during the past year and of the outlook for the coming year. Reports were read of the conditions prevailing at branches from Leeds, Sheffield, Stockport, Bradford (Yorkshire), Wigan, Farnworth, Warrington, Beresford Road, North Manchester, Northeast Manchester, and James Street, Bradford. Also of the work of the director of religious education, Mr. Nephi Dewsnup, throughout the various branches. The district financial report of Mr. Harold Dewsnup was approved as satisfactory. It was proposed to change the reunion of the British Isles Mission, which is usually held in August, to Whitsuntide, at the Cooperative Hall, Beswick, with the procession around the immediate neighborhood.

"The election of officers for the year was as follows: Mr.

W. H. Chandler, district president; Mr. G. W. Leggott, counselor; Mr. J. W. Green, counselor; district secretary, Mr. Harold Barrington; assistant secretary, Mr. James Barrington (junior); financial secretary, Mr. Harold Dewsnup; auditors, Mr. James Schofield and Mr. Fred Tapping; musical director, Mr. James Schofield."

Sunday's services were planned and executed to make for the English Saints a fine Easter-day commencement in the service of the Lord. In the morning Bishop A. T. Trapp delivered a fine sermon dealing with the theme of using and developing our talents and opportunities to the service of others and establishing righteousness on earth. In the afternoon a fellowship meeting gave all who desired opportunity to express their aspirations in the service of God and the church.

The evening's feature was an Easter pageant, presented by members of Wigan Branch, directed by the pastor, Arthur Smith. "Easter Dawn" was the drama selected by the branch, and soloists and the cast did excellently. Of their work the Reporter says: "All who took part in the different characters represented, and the solo singing, gave a stimulus and inspiration long to be remembered, and reflected great credit for the time and perseverance required to get the pageant to such perfection."

New Westminster, British Columbia

Tenth and London Streets

Elder and Sister Richard Baldwin arrived here March 20 on their first visit to British Columbia since coming to this district. The Saints rejoice to have such consecrated workers come among us and hope to catch their spirit of the work. Sister Baldwin spoke each evening on the plan of the church school, and as a result the branch adopted the plan. Brother Pope is pastor and Sister Gerow director. Brother Coburn is leader of the adult division, Brother C. Wood, leader of the young people, and Sister Myrtle Green, supervisor of the children's division.

The new year found this branch looking eagerly forward to the initial visit of the district president and missionary, Elder H. I. Velt, and his helpmate. A vigorous campaign three weeks in length was held. The origin of the Book of Mormon was clearly depicted by lectures and lantern slides. Much interest was aroused, and we believe good seed was sown in the Master's vineyard. The campaign closed with a social evening in which Vancouver Saints joined.

Services on Easter Sunday were most impressive. Following the sacrament service, four sisters received administration, at the close of which we were given comfort and hope through the gift of prophecy. This message was directed to the branch, to the young people, and to Brother and Sister Pope.

Sister Pope is again able to meet with the Saints and is a living testimony of the loving-kindness of our heavenly Father to the faithful. Her daughter, Sister Lillian Cross, has returned to her home in Independence, while her daughter, Sister Irene Rannie, of Chicago, is still here. Brother Pope celebrated his sixty-ninth birthday recently and carries with him the best wishes of the membership. We hope that he will be able to spend many more years in the active service of the Lord.

The young people arranged a surprise social evening for Sisters Pope and Coburn, the occasion being their birthdays. The sisters were presented gifts of similar pins. On this evening Brother and Sister Baldwin arrived after the meeting conducted in Vancouver. Brother Baldwin presented the gifts.

The church was filled the evening of Good Friday when Brother Baldwin baptized the Turner family, father, mother, two daughters, and two sons. The ceremony was witnessed by many nonmembers.

Surely we in this part of God's vineyard have been richly blessed. We are happy to be engaged in his service, and we pray that we, with all the church, may be faithful to our stewardship.

Brentwood (Missouri) Branch

Marshall and Berry Avenues

May 6.—Elder Virgil E. Sheppard opened an eleven-day series of meetings in our church March 15. Attendance gradually increased until the last night, when a reception was held in the lower auditorium. Two adults, Mr. and Mrs. Sharpe, and a boy were baptized.

The Spirit of the Lord attends us in our prayer and testimony meetings. Though attendance is small, those who come are benefited.

The cantata, "The Gate Ajar," was presented to a large audience Easter Sunday evening.

The evening of April 30 a chicken supper was given. Proceeds of more than fifty dollars were paid to the basement fund. When a movement of this kind is committed to the hands of Sisters Florence Nelson and Belle Peat, success is assured. Plans are to hold a chicken supper, bazaar, and picnic in the near future on a large estate near the church. The big dining hall, cooking utensils, and other equipment will be loaned to us for the occasion.

Because of the pastor's absence, no Sunday evening services have been held of late. Brother Clarence, pastor, was away on business.

Sunday school has an average attendance of eighty-five.

Duluth, Minnesota

May 5.—It has been some time since the Herald has heard from the Saints up here where "rail and water meet," but the hope of this people is onward. Though at times we seem to make small progress, Zion is ever in our vision as something to be realized.

Duluth Saints believe that the action of the Joint Council of the church in initiating a retrenchment program will work for good in time, as frugality is something each one must put into practice more and more if we hope to build a material Zion. We regret to see able representatives of the church out of the field for a time, and pray that soon they will be again able to help us.

"I for one," writes Brother W. C. Stauty, "want to put forth a greater effort to pay tithing that this work may be accomplished."

Elder C. J. Smith, missionary to North Dakota and Minnesota, was here and spoke at both services April 12 and 19. He also spoke on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings. Thursday evening he talked to the Saints at Two Harbors. The Women's Department met that afternoon with Two Harbor Saints.

Elder George W. Day, pastor of Bemidji Branch, was a welcome speaker the morning of April 26, and Brother E. J. Walters was the speaker the morning of May 3, sacrament service having been postponed.

The women meet at the homes of the members every other Thursday to study "Religion in the Home," by Lydia Wight. Sister Eva Tourville, supervisor of the adult division, is the teacher.

A fine program was given by members of the church school the evening of Easter.

A bunco party was had at the home of Brother and Sister R. C. Tourville May 1.

The Saints were saddened by news of the death of the three-year-old son of Doctor and Sister Nolan, of Minneapolis. Sympathy goes to the parents.

Sister C. A. Silverthorn, for months confined to her bed, is better.

Samuel Case and W. C. Stauty motored to Barnum, Minnesota, May 3, to visit Sister A. H. Dathe and Brother and Sister Joseph Johnson. Though living in isolation, they are happy in their faith.

The prayer of Duluth members is that we may move forward with greater strides than heretofore, looking to Jesus, the author of our faith, and trusting in the guidance of those called in the last days to lead God's people onward.

Kirtland, Ohio

On Easter a good sacrament meeting was held at the Temple. Prayers were requested by Sister Daisy Lewis, Sister Buehler, and Sister Lemuel Curry. On May 3 prayers were asked for Sister Romig, of Barberton. It is hoped that these ill ones are convalescing and have experienced the healing blessing of the Master.

Brother Lemuel Curry, jr., of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, was the speaker in this pulpit April 26. He and his wife were visiting his parents, Brother and Sister Lemuel Curry, sr.

Patriarch G. T. Griffiths and wife were in Kirtland a few days lately. Since they moved to Lima, Ohio, about a year ago, Kirtland people do not see them frequently. His sermons in the Temple are missed.

Members were also pleased to have a visit from Brother and Sister Guy Hammond, of Akron. We appreciate Brother Hammond's helpful sermons.

Elder E. A. Webbe was the morning speaker April 12. He and his family have moved back to Kirtland from their home in Cleveland Heights.

The following Sunday Elder J. B. Biggs preached a good sermon in the morning, and Sister Lucretia Schneithorst sang "Remember Now Thy Creator," by Adams.

The Boy Scouts have been active under their leaders, Arthur Sheppard and Paul Booher.

The Kirtland Dramatic Club is contributing to the church and the community. Two short plays will be presented May 14.

Sunday afternoon finds the roll of visitors at the Temple growing.

Society Islands Mission Conference

Papeete, Tahiti.—The mission conference of 1931 convened April 6 and adjourned April 12. It was splendidly attended, delegates being present from seventeen out of the nineteen branches in the mission, and that in spite of the hard times in this part of the world due to the fall in prices of copra, vanilla, pearl shell, and pearls.

Three boatloads of Saints, over fifty people, came from Tikehau, and three boatloads, over seventy, from Kaukura, with lesser representations from other branches and districts.

The evening sessions were largely attended by the people of Papeete and Tahiti generally, averaging three to four thousand, with 4,662 as the record count for one evening. The people who failed to secure seats stood around for three hours at a time, enjoying the very entertaining and instructive programs rendered by the Saints from the various branches, and especially the music from the orchestras of Kaukura and Tikehau Branches.

The conference programs in the large open pavilion at Taronia, church headquarters, at each April conference have become quite an attraction for the people of this city, and they look forward to it now as they look forward to the July 14 national celebration. The mission conference will be held again at Taronia in April, 1932.

Independence

Stone Church

Apostle F. Henry Edwards spoke to the adult congregation at the eleven o'clock hour, on the Mother's Day theme. We may best honor our mothers by reducing the costs of motherhood, he said; for suffering and sacrifice are heroic only when necessary. More mothers should have prenatal and postnatal care. Better care should be given to the education and health conservation of the children in our communities. The fight against war and sin, both of which cause mothers more suffering and sorrow than anyone else, should be continually carried forward.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Evan A. Fry, sang two anthems: "The Heavens Are Telling," from Haydn's "The Creation," with the trio taken by Mrs. Nina Smith, soprano, J. Glenn Fairbanks, tenor, and Paul N. Craig, bass; and "But the Lord Is Mindful of His Own," from Mendelssohn's "Saint Paul." Mrs. Nina Smith sang the solo, "Mother, O My Mother"; and a male quartet consisting of Duane Swalley, Paul Carpender, Robert Crawford, and Edward Cronenbold, sang "That Wonderful Mother of Mine." Robert Miller, organist, and George Miller, pianist, played an offertory duet, "Pastorale."

Elder J. Stanley Kelley was in charge and was assisted by Patriarch Frederick A. Smith.

About one hundred mothers were guests of the junior young people's department at a special Mother's Day hour conducted in the lower auditorium of the church at 10.45.

President F. M. McDowell, the speaker, told the story of the mother dying of the White Plague who relieved her little son of his vigil at her bedside with these words: "Let me hold the cup." He showed how in the life of every one of us a mother has sometime uttered that brave plea. In tribute to his own and to mothers everywhere, Brother McDowell pinned a white carnation on his mother, Sister W. A. McDowell.

Music for the morning followed the theme of the day. The girls' chorus of the department sang "Faith of Our Mothers," and "Softly Now the Light of Day." Mrs. H. C. Burgess and Mrs. S. A. Burgess sang two lovely duet numbers, "Mother Machree" and "That Wonderful Mother of Mine." "Somebody's Mother" was read by Miss Ina McCord. Lora Strachan was the pianist.

The scripture story told by the pastor, was based on one of Jesus' last acts, the committal of his mother to the care of his beloved disciple with these words: "Behold, thy mother!"

Assisting Brother McDowell in the service were the junior young people's pastor, W. Earl Page, and the assistant pastor, Howard Cook. Also seated on the platform were mothers of the men in charge: Mrs. W. A. McDowell, Mrs. W. A. Page, Mrs. G. D. Cook; the superintendent of the department, Leta B. Moriarty, and her mother, Mrs. Pearl W. Moriarty.

The junior department at the Campus is happy to report its superintendent, Mrs. A. R. Moler, who has been in the Sanitarium for some days, as convalescing. She expects soon to be back with her helpers.

Most of the boys and girls enjoyed framing a copy of the painting, "The Madonna of the Street," as a present for their mothers. The Mother's Day program was beautifully rendered by the junior choir of girls under the direction of Mrs. J. R. Lentell, assisted by Ross Moore, pianist.

A final tribute to mother was rendered in the evening Stone Church service when Pastor John F. Sheehy talked concerning some stereopticon pictures on "Mothers of the World." A one-act play, "When Mothers Meet," was given by Mrs. F. M. McDowell and Mrs. Lyda Robertson. Congregational singing was led by Elder G. G. Lewis, who was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder O. A. McDowell. A flower in tribute to all mothers was pinned on Mrs. W. A.

McDowell. Mrs. Pearl Crick, soprano, sang a solo, accompanied by Miss Kathryn Haberlein.

The A Cappella Chorus of Graceland College concluded another tour of programs with a visit to Independence and Kansas City. On last Wednesday evening at the Stone Church it sang its way to increased popularity in a two-part program. From the processional hymn, "O Worship the King," at the beginning of the sacred music, to the college song, "Graceland Forever," at the close of the popular numbers, the chorus, under the direction of Miss Mabel Carlile, showed its mastery of its selections and its perfect ease under the strain of public performance. The chorus was assisted by the following artists: Lina Timmerman Hunt, soprano; Colin Ferrett, basso; Rae Lysinger, pianist; and Dorothy Elliott, reader.

While on this tour the A Cappella Chorus sang before the Rotary clubs in Saint Joseph and in Kansas City and also over K M B C.

The Campus

May is the month when the Campus opens its summer season of activities. All winter the grounds have been at the disposal of William Chrisman and Junior High Schools for track and ball practice, and for a period of some weeks such practice has been intensive. Tennis courts were available to students entering the school tennis tournament until April 29, when they were closed to all save members of this year's tennis club.

The Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences is drawing its term to a close. The baccalaureate sermon for the graduating high school class will be preached at the Stone Church next Sunday morning and will also be the baccalaureate sermon for the Independence Sanitarium class of graduates. School closes at the campus the evening of May 21.

A free baseball game Saturday afternoon opened the season's schedule, for which the Campus Club is strongly organized as a member of one of the divisions of the Independent League for Greater Kansas City. The campus team is under the management of "Red" Smith. It is in the eight-club league known as the Saturday division of the association, a division which plays no Sunday baseball, but runs all its games off Saturday afternoon.

Campus movie fans will be glad to learn that the summer program includes two movies a week, one on Saturday evening; the other will probably follow a recreational program of twilight baseball and social games on Tuesday evening. The first show of the season will be held May 23. Early in the summer a benefit show will be given.

On Saturday and Sunday, May 30 and 31, the Campus will be turned over to the Boy Scouts of the Covered Wagon Area for a camporee. Plans for this week-end are many, and the enthusiasm of the boys knows no bounds. On Saturday they will pitch camp on the grounds and turn attention to sports and contests. Sunday will be filled with memorial and other ceremonies.

Liberty Street

Liberty Street's new pastor, Elder J. R. Lentell, is very busy in the Master's service. Not only does he work, but his enthusiasm inspires others to exert themselves in the good cause: the response he calls from his congregation is wholehearted. All are happy to work with him.

With the rest of our Nation Saints of this district paid tribute to the work and memory of Mother in Sunday's services. Members of the First Girls Senior Class, taught by Miss Mable Tignor, presented the program of instrumental, vocal, and reading numbers at the church school hour. And at eleven o'clock a program was arranged and presented under the direction of mothers of the congregation: Hymn, "He Leadeth Me," by the women; talk, "Christian Motherhood," Mrs. East; vocal solo, Mrs. Robinson; talk, "Origin of Mother's Day," Mrs. Horn; reading, Mrs. Elliott; violin solo, "Mother Machree," Elouise Higgins; talk, "Way of Remembrance," Mrs. Beck; reading, "A Tribute to Mother," Mrs. Turner; song, "Mothers I Love," the ladies' quartet; reading, "Mother's Day," Mrs. Elbert Mock; song, "Consecration," the congregation.

In the afternoon two young matrons, Agnes Mock and Naomi White, were baptized by Elder Leonard White in the Stone Church basement font. This congregation rejoices in the opportunity to extend to them the hand of fellowship in the faith.

The Mother's Day theme was continued in the musical program presented at 7.45 in the evening by the Campus Junior Girls' Chorus, directed by Mrs. J. R. Lentell. A story told by Mrs. Lentell brought the day's theme to a happy close.

Various groups in this district are actively engaged in doing their part to make the work of the Master a vital factor in the lives of many. The women meet in their groups on Thursday afternoon, and in the evening the choir rehearses. The Pathfinder's Study class is conducted on Tuesday evening, and midweek prayer meetings encourage and strengthen the Saints.

Walnut Park

While Sunday, May 10, was a dismal day, the usual numbers gathered for the various services. Musical programs appropriate to the day were given as part of the Sunday school and eleven o'clock service, those participating being Myrtle Carr, Arlon Chapman, Forest Miles, Thelma Moorman, Alfred Waters, Milford and Delta Nace, Frances Bullard, Leon Snow. Orlando Nace directed the congregational singing, and Elder Leonard Lea preached the sermon. Besides these excellent tributes to our mothers, it was a pleasure to hear the elderly men and women in the morning prayer meeting respectfully recalling the sacrificing love of their respective mothers in the days when their little ones were a constant care through many consecutive years.

In the afternoon the pastor baptized William Henry Pixley, aged eight, in the church font.

Elder W. A. McDowell was the evening speaker, on "The Great Commission"; his text: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

While instances of healing in times past are often related among us, one aged couple in our midst are rejoicing at present as they testify that God is the same today. Elder Lurett Whiting, who cares for the home largely, because of his wife's ill health, recently began suffering with an affliction of his eyes. They became bloodshot, and the pain was intense. The fear haunted him that he would soon lose his sight. At his age, eighty-two, it seemed useless to call a doctor, and prayer had as yet been unavailing. After several days of worry and pain, he lay awake one night in great distress of body and mind, when he resolved once more to plead with God to spare his vision because of the great need of himself and companion. Then as he did so, the answer came: "Be not worried. You will not lose your sight." And as he raised his eyes in gratitude, he realized the pain was gone. Rest and peace followed through the night, and the next day the appearance of his eyes improved rapidly and no pain has returned.

Enoch Hill

"One of the best programs ever given on the hill!" was the comment from many concerning the Sunday morning eleven o'clock Mother's Day feature, the cantata, "Mothers of Men," presented by the women's choir, directed by Mrs. Charles Warren, and assisted by a quartet of male voices. Pastor H. L. Barto spoke briefly on the theme of the day.

At the church school hour five intermediate girls, directed by Miss Nellie Kramer, gave a Mother's Day playlet which was happily received by the congregation.

And in the evening special musical numbers also commemorated mother love and sacrifice. The sermon by Pastor H. L. Barto was instructive and helpful.

The ice cream social sponsored by the Erodolphians on last Friday night, for the purpose of raising funds to re-wire the recreation grounds about the church, was made a damp and cool event by unfavorable weather. The crowd gathered in the church basement to partake of Arctic refreshments amid an Arctic atmosphere. Officers upon discovering food left, packed it away and called another social for last night. Persistence brings its own reward, and on the second night all food was sold and money raised to prepare the grounds for the summer's recreation program.

On Wednesday night the Erodolphian Society of Enoch Hill's young people held its regular monthly business and program tryst. Officers elected for the season were: President, E. H. McKean; secretary-treasurer, Miss Ruth Johnson; chairman of the social committee, Mrs. Verla Waters; chairman of the recreation committee, Lawrence Martin. Musical numbers were supplied by Louise McDonald, Gladys Cox, Mary Burrows, Ruby Johnson, and a quartet of intermediate girls; "Trees" was read by Max Constance, and the speaker of the evening was Miss Leta B. Moriarty, of the Stone Church, whose theme was "The Treasure of Friendship."

On the first Sunday of the month, the church school program had for a theme "The Love of Nature," and the concluding song by the girls' quartet was "The Old, Old Path."

Pastor H. L. Barto and the local ministry were in charge of the communion hour. In the evening the sermon was by Elder J. W. Davis.

Sugar Creek

For a number of weeks the mission in Sugar Creek, a few miles northwest of Independence, has been growing. The work of the Master is progressing there, and the Saints rejoice at recent additions to the church through baptism. Willingness to do their part to spread the angel's message is characteristic of the members of this group.

Last Sunday the church school opened at 9.45, M. J. Turner in charge. Attendance mounted to seventy-one. At eleven o'clock the young people presented a splendid Mother's Day program. Elder J. W. Davis delivered an impressive sermon on the theme of the love of parents for their children and the mutual responsibilities of parenthood and sonship.

The evening service was splendidly attended. At the close of the 6.30 class study, Brother Scott's class presented the program. Each class furnishes an evening's program, and this gives all opportunity for expression in qualifying for the Master's service.

Brother Francis Smith was the evening's speaker, his subject being "Faith in God." The Saints appreciate the opportunity which has been theirs in listening to the gospel sermons which he and others preach for their upbuilding.

Buchanan, Michigan

May 8.—"I must tell Herald readers how happy we were to have our district president, Brother William Osler, with us for a week," writes Ida Burgoyne, publicity agent. "He preached some very spiritual sermons, which encouraged everyone to come up to a higher plane of living."

The small band of Saints in Buchanan Branch are striving against many difficulties to set up the latter-day work in that vicinity. They have no quorum of officers. Nevertheless they are gaining in number, and hope the time will soon come when they shall be blessed with more helpers.

Brother J. W. McKnight, branch president, lives at Galien and in recent weeks has had poor health. The members at Buchanan very much wish that he lived in their midst and could be with them at all times.

The young people's class, Brother Osler, and a few older members, spent the evening of May 2 at Clear Lake, where a fine time was enjoyed playing volley ball and other games, besides roasting weiners.

It is the hope of the branch that Brother Osler will soon be here again, and the Saints invite other members of the ministry to visit them.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

About one hundred and twenty-five members were present at the recent reception in honor of the presiding officers of Central Church: Pastor Cyril E. Wight, his associate, Elder George Mesley, and Bishop C. A. Skinner. President F. M. McDowell was the guest speaker of the evening, after which all enjoyed a general get-together and light refreshments. This reception feature is a yearly event to permit the officers to come into closer contact with the members of the congregation.

The sacrament service on the first of the month was very well attended, and a number of short, inspiring testimonies were given.

The evening service was occupied by the graduating class, assisted by the lower grades, of the Malvern Hill Day School in the rendition of a cantata under the direction of Mrs. Luella Wight. This was a lovely service, and at its conclusion diplomas were distributed by Florine Hands. Roses were given to each of the teachers present as a token of the high regard the church holds for them in the invaluable service they are rendering in this school.

Though the day was rainy and dreary, good attendance was recorded at Sunday's meetings. Tribute was paid to Mother, it being the day set apart throughout the entire United States when respect and adoration should be showered upon her. "Mother o' Mine," by Tours, was beautifully sung by Clayton Wolfe, tenor. At the eleven o'clock hour, "Glorious Forever," by Rachmaninoff, under the direction of George Anway, was fervently rendered by the choir. Mrs. Linna Hunt, vocal instructor of Graceland College, was the guest soloist.

At 7.45 a short song service preceded a musical program by the choir. "Holy Art Thou," by Handel, and "Like as a Father," by Hosmer, were the two anthems rendered, and Arthur Oakman, baritone, sang "The Lord Is My Shepherd."

This service marked the beginning of a series of sermons to last throughout the coming week by Apostle E. J. Gleazer. His opening theme was "Religion and the Present Crisis," and he delivered a discourse which pointed out that no government has solved the present conditions; that in order to meet them, the people of this church as well as others must know God better and learn to live up to the religion that we teach. He will continue these meetings until Friday night, when a part of the music contest will be held in the form of a group of choruses and vocal solos. On Sunday afternoon, May 17, the piano, violin, and quartet numbers will be heard. There are a number of interesting entries, and the program on both of these dates promises to be interesting.

Stake conference will convene on May 17 and 18. Conference dinner will be served by the ladies of the Central Women's Club at a cost of forty cents. Business session will follow on Monday evening.

Argentine Church

Stake Missionary Arthur Oakman was the morning speaker Sunday, using for the basis of his sermon the scriptural declaration: "Ye are not your own, but are bought with a price." The size of the congregation was larger than usual.

In the evening Patriarch Ammon White discoursed on the "perilous times" described in 2 Timothy 3.

No children were born to this union, but Mr. and Mrs. Palmer were the foster parents of several children. Besides his wife, others who mourn are his foster children, two brothers, Jess. of Lincoln, Nebraska, and Elmer, of Miltonville, Kansas, other relatives and friends. He became a member of the church September 2, 1900, and remained faithful to the end. The funeral was held from the Saints' church at Kewanee, and interment was in Weathersfield Cemetery. Sermon by E. R. Davis, assisted by Edward Jones.

BYRNE.—Osro J. D. Byrne was born March 12, 1858, at Byrneville, Indiana, and lived there with the exception of a short time all his life. He died there April 18, 1931. He united with the church about fifty years ago and was a faithful member and highly respected citizen. The funeral was held in the Saints' church at Nauvoo, Illinois, March 8, 1931. Donald R. Snively, eldest son, preached the funeral sermon. Because of snow blockade, interment was not made until Tuesday afternoon, March 10, 1931. The body was taken to Montrose, Iowa, for interment by the side of his mother and father according to his request.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

Successful Marriage

The mating or sex impulse is one of the most powerful and pervasive of the inborn impulses. It permeates life from its most crudely physical to its highest æsthetic and spiritual aspects. Like other impulses it is neither good nor bad in itself. It is but one of the normal endowments of life, for good or for ill, according to the cultivation and expression that is given it. On the one hand, the sex nature of man has inherent capacity for enlarging and enriching life beyond measure. On the other hand, it has power to disintegrate the personality and cause the utmost human misery. The outcome will depend mainly upon the way we give direction to these inner forces, how we utilize these raw materials of life, in the education and training of the young.

The individual has two fundamental adjustments to make with reference to the mating instinct. First, a personal adjustment within himself. He must harmonize the impulses and desires which are an expression of the mating instinct with the sum total of his impulses and desires, so as to achieve a soundly integrated personality, unhampered by adverse inner conflicts and inhibitions. . . .

The second fundamental adjustment of the mating instinct which the individual has to make is adjustment in the social group. The expression of the mating impulses must be brought into harmony with the welfare, if not with the demands, of society. . . .

Stated from the individual point of view, the essential aim of social hygiene is so to direct the sex nature of man that it may contribute most richly to his self-development and happiness. Stated from the social point of view, the primary aim of social hygiene is the preservation of the family and the enrichment and improvement of family life. Obviously the individual and social objectives are interrelated and complementary.

Marriage and the family rest fundamentally upon the mating instinct, hence the sound adjustment of the sex factor is of primary importance for successful and happy marriage and family life. Successful marriage is a difficult achievement; perhaps the most difficult human achievement. It requires nothing less than the harmonious adjustment of all the elements of two different personalities—the most complex creations in the universe—an adjustment that makes possible a growing companionship in which each may find life's highest fulfillment. Successful marriage involves adjustments of temperaments, tastes, interests, ideals, habits, and sex relations. These adjustments are fundamental, and each in itself formidable. Experience increasingly shows that, with a mutually satisfying sex relationship, there is good prospect of making the other adjustments successfully, and that without a satisfactory sex adjustment, there is little likelihood that the mates will succeed with the other adjustments. These facts emphasize the importance of education for marriage and parenthood. . . .

Successful, happy marriage can not be assured by information imparted at marriageable age. Success or failure is likely to be determined much more by the ideas, attitudes, ideals, and experiences acquired from childhood up. We are learning more and more how profoundly the child's education and experience in matters of sex influence for good or ill the outcome of marriage. Education for marriage, parenthood, and family life must begin in the very early years of childhood and continue to adult life, as must all education designed to further the development of personality, character, and sound adjustment in life.—Max J. Exner, M. D., Federal Council Bulletin, March, 1931.

Famine Conditions in China

The following, sent out by the Board of China Famine Relief U. S. A., will be of interest to all those who wish to promote the teaching of Christianity in foreign missions. If we think conditions are bad at home, what will we think of the conditions that exist in foreign lands? Christian teachings place upon the churches a responsibility for the lives as well as the souls of those we would save.

Is the Christian minister warranted in submitting China's frightful plight to his congregation in the face of want and depression at home?

Reverend G. Findlay Andrew, classed by the North China Daily Press as the greatest living authority on the frontier of Tibet and the Province of Kansu, has just arrived in the United States. In 1930 he was director of Relief Operations in Kansu, the scene of much death from starvation.

Reporting to Doctor David A. Brown, chairman of the Board of China Famine Relief U. S. A., at 205 East Forty-second Street, New York City, he said, "I am surprised to find the belief common that overpopulation is the chief cause of famine in North China. In Shensi and Kansu, where the famine remains acute the population is not dense at all. Kansu has 47 people to the square mile, while Kiangsu, with 875 per square mile, is outside of the famine area.

"Another bit of misinformation which I encounter is that the Chinese are indifferent to the suffering occasioned by famine. Leading militarists and business men are among the famine workers, and for every dollar sent in from foreign countries, the Chinese have contributed at least five dollars.

"Bandits are numerous in China, but they are mostly all men who have taken to the road to avoid death from starvation. I took $500,000 Mex. into Kansu in 1930, never lost a cent, but on the other hand was enabled through premiums on exchange, to appreciate that sum by $17,000. This more than paid all of the expense of administration. I transported actual silver money in several directions and sustained no loss whatever."

Doctor Robert E. Speer, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, makes this statement: "The need of further relief in China in meeting famine conditions or the conditions of want and destitution consequent upon famine is still real and urgent. Careful plans have been prepared for such further relief and employment of famine labor and the restoration of famine areas, and these plans have the approval of the Chinese Government, the responsible relief committees in China, and the missionaries on the field. There should be no hesitation to give from fear that gifts can not be directly applied and wisely administered. Neither should there be any hesitation because of the report that the Chinese themselves have not given. Those responsible for the work declare that funds given from America have been exceeded by the funds contributed in China. However great our need in America may be, we have enough and to spare for others, and we fail in our Christian duty if we do not do our utmost to meet human need and to allay human suffering."

Doctor Sidney L. Gulick, secretary of the Committee on International Justice and Goodwill, and Reverend Henry Smith Leiper, secretary of the American Section of the Universal Christian Council for Life and Work of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, answer the question with which this article opens, thus, "In the early days of the church, Saul and Barnabas, who had made fine progress in establishing a Christian following among the Gentiles at Antioch, who themselves were facing hard times, were nevertheless commissioned by their brethren to take famine relief to Jerusalem. A new vision and a new life attitude came to those Christian people.

"There has been no starvation in the United States. In China millions have died from a total lack of food. Over a score of mission workers died from typhus during the present famine in that country. The Christian forces of this country have not failed their fellow human beings in China. And despite the recession of our flood-tide of prosperity, many churches, Sunday schools, and young people's groups are placing before their members China's plight. Numbers are responding."

The Spirit of Progress

By J. E. Vanderwood

So long as the mind is open and receptive, that long there is a chance for man to make progress; but once the mind is closed to the reception of truth, the possibility of progress is ended. Here we are brought face to face with one of the greatest factors in the life and experience of mankind, and I am inclined to the belief that even the best of people have not considered the matter as carefully as they might have done. It is therefore fitting that we come to the place in our experiences where we are willing to give everything its proper place and learn to distinguish rightly between truth and error, between right and wrong. Therefore we wish to define briefly what we mean by the terms used in our statement. "Truth," we are told, "is knowledge of things as they are, as they were, and as they are to come." With this definition of truth we are simply saying that when the minds of men are open to the reception of knowledge of things as they are, as they were, and as they will be, they are bound to make strides in the unfolding of the principles of life; but if we are not willing to know this, there is little hope for us.

Perhaps the principal reason why we have not made a larger growth and attained to a higher standard of perfection is the fact that we have been unwilling to pay the price. It often requires years and a large expenditure of means to enable us to learn this one brief sentence, "You can't get something for nothing." It is, therefore, quite evident that he who would go forward must be willing to pay the price. There is much here to be considered, and there is much to reckon with as we undertake the problems of life that will lead us onward. Do we have the moral courage, the determination, the stick-to-it-iveness to insure progress? Somewhere I read a narrative of the work of Mr. Thomas A. Edison that ran something like this: A friend was in conversation with the great inventor, and Mr. Edison had told him of some of his experiments, and their failure one by one of reaching the ends he sought. As I remember it, he had made something like five hundred experiments in an endeavor to work out one invention, and they had all failed. The friend said to him, "I should think you would become discouraged by so many failures," but the untiring inventor replied, "No, I am very glad that it is so, for I now know five hundred ways that won't work." Here we are able to see that the secret of the success of Mr. Edison is revealed in the fact that he was constantly converting his apparent failures into successes. The trial and failure had meant much for him, for he had learned a number of ways that would not produce the result he was so desirous of achieving, and so he went on untiringly pursuing his course with the firm conviction that there was a way of achieving his ends, and of discovering the way that would work. May we not learn from this a lesson that will be of untold value to us in our endeavor to work out the program that is committed to us in the gospel of Christ, and continue to profit by our failures and make them become assets to us in our forward march? The man of wisdom will not repeat his mistakes; that is, he will not make the same blunder twice. My good father used to tell me when I was a boy that even a mule would not kick against the same stone twice. May we not, therefore, take heart and press our way forward until we achieve the purposes for which we have been called into the gospel of divine peace?

The knowledge Mr. Edison gained with his multiplied experiments which proved to be inadequate for his purpose was fraught with much labor and research. A less stable man, I am inclined to believe, would have grown discouraged and said, "There is no use," but this great man said, "I will find a way or make one." Jesus could say to his undeveloped apostles, "The cup that my heavenly Father hath given unto me, shall I not drink it?" He was perfectly calm amid the fury of the mob, for he knew the truth, and he was quite conscious that both death and the grave were subject to him. He was not disturbed by the threat of Pilate, when he said: "Know ye not that I have power to release thee or to crucify thee?" The Master simply answered, "You would have no power unless it was given thee of God." The Master could not be disturbed by the threats of men, and so it is with every one who has come to know the truth. Joseph Smith could write these touching and eternal words before he was taken to the prison where he was required to give his life for the truth that he had received: "I am led as a lamb to the slaughter, but I am calm as a summer's morning. I have a conscience void of offense toward God and all men. I shall die innocent, and it shall yet be said of me, 'He was murdered in cold blood.'" His soul was calm and self-possessed in spite of the furious mob that threatened. A few of these examples enable us to understand what we mean when we say that few are willing to pay the price of ultimate truth.

The measure of our progress, the rapidity of our advancement, is to be determined by the willingness with which we pay the price for it. There are no bargain counters and no cut rate shops where truth is to be bartered, nor is success to be won, nor prosperity achieved, by the person or people who are unwilling to pay the price of the best. How soon Zion shall become a reality, and how soon we shall enjoy her beauty and blessings, must, and will, be determined by the willingness with which we meet the issue and the cheerfulness with which we pay the price. It is certain that if we are not willing to pay the price we can not win the prize. Had Thomas A. Edison refused to pay the price for his knowledge of truth, we would have been deprived of many of the modern conveniences and pleasures of everyday life. Let us, therefore, learn that every victory, every forward movement, every demonstration of progress must be fraught with the spirit of sacrifice and of determination. It is, therefore, an unmistakable evidence of progress on the part of any person or people when we see them willing and ready to sacrifice for the ushering in of truth. Can we in the face of all the opposition that may be brought to bear say with Christopher Columbus, "Sail on, sail on!" We have but one course, and that is forward.

THE HONEYMOON COTTAGE

PATCHWORK has nothing to do with cross-patches, but as Mrs. Wiggs used to say, it is "keepin' the peace and doin' away with scraps." You'll love to do something pieced for the treasure chest, maybe several quilts that will be cherished for a generation or maybe just a precious "patchedy" pillow to start with.

The Honeymoon Cottage has a quaint old-fashioned charm that will appeal to all lovers of a squat, broad-eaved, little home with wide, hospitable doorway and fireplace. It is delightfully made in two color combinations using a harmonizing print for the lawn. The materials used are white muslin, the colored materials are a fine grade of fade proof gingham. The print is of very good quality also. A block is simple to piece and when finished, measures about 12 by 15 inches. Twenty of the blocks set together with four-inch strips and six-inch border, make a quilt about 84 by 90 inches.

One block makes a clever pillow or stool top. A stool can be made at home by smoothly padding a board or shallow box and using wooden door stops, brass hooks, or large knobs, for legs. The edge finish for such a stool is a headed ruffle of green or any other color used in the pieced top.

BEAUTIFUL PANSY APPLIQUE AND QUILTED QUILT

NUMBER 660 is an applique pattern using that gentle flower favorite, the pansy, conventionalized somewhat to form a center border which is really just twelve blocks, each 12 inches square. This is surely reducing the number of blocks in a quilt to a minimum, yet their close position on the quilt gives the effect of generous, even prodigal profusion. A cutting pattern with instructions and dimensions may be ordered as number 660.

This quilt is developed in the triad scheme—two tones of orchid, two of orange, and a soft green which also makes the center square, an outer band and binding with the remainder of white. The size of the finished quilt is 72 by 84 inches. Material assortment used in the original was 4½ yards of white, 2½ yards of green, and 1-3 yard each of the four other colors. We can supply this as number 660A in a fine weave, fast-color percale, or the colors and white of the original in the softest of sheer satine as number 660B.

The quilting patterns used in making up this beautiful quilt come separately. The center feather circle is 18 inches across and is in wax transfer form. This is number 252. The other quilting patterns are all perforated on durable paper and may be used over and over again.

Independence Sets the Pace

If each reader of the Herald were asked, "What do you consider to be the outstanding need of the church today?" we feel certain that a majority would reply, "A spiritual revival."

If each were asked how this spiritual revival was to be accomplished, the answer would undoubtedly be, "Through the ministry of a divinely appointed priesthood in the homes of the Saints."

If each branch president were asked to name the one thing that he had definitely promised himself to do during this year, again the majority would reply, "Organize the local priesthood and send them out enthused and inspired to visit every family in the branch."

Elsewhere in this issue Elder John F. Sheehy, pastor in Zion, has outlined a plan of family visiting which is now in operation in Independence.

The slogan of this visiting campaign is "Every family visited before June 21." The purpose of this effort has been stated as follows:

1. Every home visited by the priesthood.
2. Every member informed regarding the program and needs of the church and urged to share in its work.
3. The spiritual and financial resources of the membership ascertained and reported.
4. All back tithes paid.
5. The church needs depicted clearly and frankly to all to encourage a free will offering on the part of each.
6. The wisdom and need of a special sacrifice period explained to all.

In order to make this program effectual, the general church authorities have cooperated in providing some carefully prepared material for the use of the priesthood in their visiting. This material includes a pamphlet outlining the purposes and methods of family visiting; another leaflet sets out in question and answer form the present financial situation of the church; and a third leaflet outlines some pointed suggestions as to the methods which have been found to be successful in visiting. In addition to these leaflets, a visiting card has been arranged which will make it possible for the visiting officer to record easily and accurately the results of his visit with each family.

Members of the Twelve, district and branch presidents, hearing of the work which has been outlined for Independence, have already written for a supply of these materials to be used in their respective territories. This means that this family visiting effort bids fair to become church wide. After all, why shouldn't it?

Arrangements have been made with the Herald Publishing House to hold the type on the material above referred to, and the Presidency's Office will be glad to furnish to any responsible officer of the church such as he shall need for the carrying on of this effort in his own field. Please specify the number of priesthood you expect to use in this effort and the number of families you expect to visit.

Information Plus Responsibility

A very definite part of the financial policy adopted February 12 was the expressed intention on the part of the leading quorums of the church to keep the membership informed as to the actual financial situation.

In accordance with this policy, there is presented in this issue of the Herald under the title, "Our Mutual Burdens," an article prepared by Brother L. F. P. Curry, of the Presiding Bishopric. We commend this article to our readers. It deserves a most careful study. It is characterized by sincerity and frankness. It presents clearly the actual financial needs of the church for the next three months and states why the amount specified is required.

Sharing information involves the sharing of responsibility. One who knows the needs of the church must be expected to share in meeting those needs to the maximum of his ability and in harmony with God's law. Such a person can no longer hide behind the excuse, "I did not know."

There can be no doubt as to the intention of the Presiding Bishopric. They will see to it that the rest of us share with them both information and responsibility. After all, are we not "laborers together with God"? and as such shall we expect to share his blessings if we fail to share in his work?

God does not demand the impossible of anyone. He does ask us to comply with his law, which law is just and fair to all. Anything less than this is to evidence an insincerity in our professed claim to be a divinely appointed church. Can it be that this is indeed the sifting time?

Children's Day, June 14

Attention was officially called in a recent issue of the Herald to the setting apart of Sunday, June 14, as Children's Day in all the congregations of the Saints. Pastors and leaders in the church school will welcome this opportunity to show our appreciation of the children and to arrange special service for the inspiration of childhood and youth.

Let the occasion be one in which the children participate joyously, in which the church and its service takes on new meaning for them. Much more is desired than the old custom of "speaking pieces," where the children were drilled to show off. Rather, let it be a model children's service after the pattern provided in junior worship. The service may well occupy the main auditorium at the regular sermon hour, with special decorations, a meaningful worship program, and a special children's sermon. Adults will greatly enjoy and profit by the service.

Children's Day is also Decision Day, especially for the children. In many branches classes will be held for some weeks previously, preparing candidates for the responsibility of church membership. Baptismal services may be made very impressive and beautiful if care is taken in the planning.

For Those Who Sincerely Believe

From an official statement of the "belief and practice" of the church which has been widely circulated, I quote the following:

We believe

"That God is by nature our father and men are by nature brothers; that God exercises his fatherly disposition to teach his children the way of life.

"That the gift of God in and through his Son Jesus Christ was the supreme expression of the love of God for mankind; that under the regenerating influences of the gospel men are born again; that those who are born of God are disposed, as he is, to the service and uplift of their fellow men; and that it is the duty of man to learn to love God with all the power of his being, and his neighbor as himself.

"That the church of Jesus Christ with its laws and institutions which include its sacraments and ordinances is of divine appointment.

"That the church was restored in latter days through prophetic leadership; that the supreme task of the church is the evangelism of the world, and the subsequent and consequent embodiment of the ideals of the Christian religion in laws, institutions, and customs of its own building, which is Zion.

"That men are saved only by the voluntary regulating of the affairs of their lives and the grounding of their conduct in the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

"That every man must account to God for the uses to which he puts his powers of body and mind and the opportunities that life affords; and that men should be made accountable to organized society for the uses and dispositions of properties that come into their possession and management.

"That today is the day of our opportunity—today is the day of our salvation; and that God requires us to labor with him while the day lasts."

Do We Believe?

Out of the travail of the present hour in both the church and the world there emerges one question of paramount importance, one question which every Saint must ask and answer for himself. This question is, "Do I sincerely believe in the program of God and his church as expressed in the restoration movement?"

Upon the basis of their answer to this question, all persons find themselves sooner or later classified in one of two groups, namely: those who so believe, and those who do not believe. I say sooner or later, for the choice is one that can not be avoided. Here, as always, he who fails to choose has chosen.

This message is directed to "Those who sincerely believe." It is our thesis that these, having answered the above question in the affirmative, must find themselves immediately confronted with the implications of their choice in terms of the situation which confronts the church today. For that man or woman who sincerely believes that this is the church of God, the present day is literally filled with challenges to that quality of individual conduct and social living consistent with that expressed belief.

If one sincerely believes, for example, that he has in a measure at least been intrusted with God's plan for the elimination of the sufferings of mankind, then every instance of hunger, poverty, crime, and misery brings to him a personal challenge.

If he sincerely believes that his church is God's medium for bringing about the salvation of the world, then the present desperate need of that church demands that he spare no effort or sacrifice that it shall triumph.

If one sincerely believes that he is accountable to God for all that he has and is, then the rich heritage which he shares in common with all mankind, together with that which is peculiarly his own because of the restoration movement, asks of him an intelligent and courageous living to the end that that heritage may be enriched and shared with all humanity.

If he sincerely believes that in the gospel is found the way of life, then his search of that gospel will reveal the fact that it is replete with what have been called "divine imperatives," i. e., "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." These set the price of following the way.

If he sincerely believes these things, then he will find courage and strength in the assurance that the great promises of God shall be realized in him. What a challenge is found in the promise of God to Moses, "Certainly, I will be with thee."

Those who sincerely believe, find themselves face to face with both rewards and responsibilities. Because God is the kind of God he is, the one can not be had without the other. Of each we shall speak at greater length in coming issues of the Herald.

The present is a testing time for the church and each individual member. From the ordeal of this testing no one shall escape. As the process continues, there shall be revealed those who are actually converted to the gospel of Jesus Christ and all that it implies. How many of our 108,000 members will be found within the ranks?

Our Mutual Burdens

As the law places upon the Presiding Bishopric the burden of financial leadership, it also places upon the membership the burden of providing by designated means for the financial obligations of the church. A great deal has been spoken and written concerning our debts. We know that we have them and must pay them. To indulge in recrimination because of them is entirely useless. To proceed in harmony with the financial policy adopted February 12, is helpful. Since there are mutual burdens, we come to you with a statement of the present needs of the church and our suggestion as to meeting them. And since your love for the church and faith in her God-appointed destiny are doubtless as great as ours, we fully expect that you will do your part, as you expect us to do ours.

Our needs are given in the following tabulation, for the months of May, June, and July:

financial policy under which we are now operating, and which we have abundant reason to believe meets the unqualified approval of the church, will compel us to cut our budget further if we can not meet it. The response of the church must determine our action. And if in accordance with the policy referred to, activities are reduced materially below the present level, the responsibility rests upon the church, not us. We see no way to get out of debt other than to pay what we owe, and no way to avoid further debt than to live within our income. Is this sound, or not?

The most serious items in the above tabulation are the allowances, serious because of the deprivation and suffering their nonpayment causes. The presence of these in our liabilities prevents the adoption of a systematic plan of debt reduction, because appeals for payment are constant, some of them revealing pitiful situations, and cash balances are so depleted thereby that it is almost impossible to accumulate sums with which to meet items such as interest and non-deferable principal obligations. The payment of these allowances will produce a

Items	May	June	July	Totals
Principal	$8,616.00	$2,618.66	$ 1,866.72	$ 13,101.38

Principal covers debt maturities which may not be postponed. The bulk of interest falls due between July 1 and 15, and must be provided for during May and June. The budget items are in accordance with the appropriations of February. The balance due released men practically all covers allowances. The 1930 allowances unpaid compare with $58,000 as of December 31, 1930. Practically nothing has been paid on 1931 allowances. The contingent reserve is simply to provide against unforeseen demands, or to provide a backlog, however small, against the needs of ensuing months. The income for the first quarter of 1931 was $86,631.62; expenses for the same period, $98,400, a shortage of $11,800. The new budget provides for average monthly expenditures of $32,800, and although it could not begin to be made effective before March, income would still have been insufficient. It will be realized that the good effect which will be felt throughout the church. But do not forget that as we pledge ourselves to pay every dollar above the stipulated needs to the allowances, and to report to you what has been done, the church goes right on doing her work, month by month, and requires your continued support.

The total required is $200,000. If these three months were to yield a minimum monthly income of $25,000, or a total of $75,000, we shall be asking for only $125,000 additional for the period. Spiritual and financial officers will cooperate during the months of May, June, and July to bring to you this problem, and ask your help as they leave with you a message of hope and cheer. Please observe that this is not a "drive." Those who owe tithing are being asked to pay it in full as far as they are able, and if fully paid, to make such offering as their means permit. This procedure the Lord provides in his law to us. For all, aside from the opportunity to share the burden by the methods indicated, the Sacrifice Week, June 21-28, affords a time to deny ourselves in some manner for the work's sake, that out of that self-denial there may come a gift to be laid upon the altar of God.

Many have asked how they might help. Others have made specific suggestions. This willingness is deeply appreciated and encouraging, and the above plan is put before you confidently as something in which we may all unite. The church is in your hands.

L. F. P. CURRY.

The Priesthood of Independence in Action

By John Sheehy

A special call was issued for all members of the priesthood to be present at the regular meeting of the priesthood with the purpose of discussing the inauguration of an intensive visiting campaign. We were fortunate in having with us President McDowell, Bishop Carmichael, and Apostle F. Henry Edwards.

At this meeting the present financial situation of the church was discussed, together with the general depression which has now lasted so long that every phase of our economic life has suffered. The church naturally suffers its full share of difficulty, and it has been found necessary to undertake a program of retrenchment that will bring it safely through the period of financial stress.

Realizing that every member of the church must be called upon to render aid to the church at this time, the priesthood of Independence is now undertaking a house to house visit that we might ascertain the needs of every individual member of the church and, by learning their needs, make some effort to minister to them accordingly. A very fine feeling prevailed at this meeting of the priesthood, and a special priesthood meeting was called for Sunday afternoon on May 10. At this second meeting Bishop DeLapp was present. He very definitely suggested some methods to meet the present emergencies.

The city of Independence is organized into thirteen districts. Each district has a supervisor. The districts are divided into groups so that we have in the 13 districts 47 groups. There is also a mission that Independence looks after. Each group is organized like unto a branch—elders, priests, teachers, and deacons. For this special visiting campaign, the same organization is being used. The district supervisor is being held responsible for the work done in the district; the group elders are being held responsible for the work done in their group.

The purpose of this effort is to have every home visited by the priesthood. Every member must be informed regarding the program and the needs of the church and urged to share in its work. The spiritual and financial resources of the membership are to be ascertained and reported. All back tithes should be paid. The church needs must be depicted clearly and frankly, and the wisdom and need of special sacrifice period explained to all. In order to accomplish this, the priesthood were carefully instructed as to the urgent needs of the church, which necessitated the need of this special ministry to every family in Independence.

This visit is not to be just a visit, with no object in view, but the purpose is to minister to the needs of the family, to have a heart to heart talk to ascertain the attitude of the people toward their church, to encourage them where encouragement is needed. Further, there is today a criticism that the church has been spending too much money. The priesthood were informed that the recent session of the Joint Council concluded to keep within the limits of the income; that is, not to spend more than their income. The visiting campaign includes within its purpose what the income of the church really is, or at least approximately its income. Each individual during this visiting campaign will be asked very definitely what his response to the financial needs of the church will be during the remainder of 1931. By this means we will be able to determine approximately the income of the church. No one will be asked to pledge any amount of money, or even promise to pay any definite amount, but each one will be asked how much might be expected from him from now until December, 1931. In Independence 13 district supervisors, 47 elders, and that many priests, teachers, and deacons, along with some others who have been called in to do some special work, are making a house to house visit of the entire membership of the city of Zion. These men are the standing ministry unto the church, and their calling is a call to be the family teacher of religion.

We are expecting a great deal of good as a result of this visiting campaign. We know that it will bring blessings to the church, to the family, and to every member of the priesthood as he visits. This visiting will probably cover a period of six weeks, and will be accomplished by men who are busy at their daily occupations, and yet they find time to labor according to the calling of God unto them. Knowing these men, I feel that Independence is truly blessed with a group of consecrated workers.

The Prophecies and Promises of God

Part One

By J. A. Koehler

Belief in Prophecy

For a man to say that he believes the Christian Bible, and at the same time to say that he does not believe in prophecy, is to deny his own belief. How could a man be a believer in the Holy Scriptures and at the same time be an unbeliever in prophecy, when the divine calling of the Christian prophets is one of the most universally accepted doctrines of Bible peoples? Belief in prophecy is as old as the Christian religion. And hence the story of the Bible is, for the most part, a record of the prophecies and promises of God to his peoples. Every believer of the Bible must be a believer in prophecy.

Faith in the Prophecies

The men of prophetic experience have been men of great faith in God. They banked on the promises of God. Neither fire nor famine, neither prison nor pain, neither stripes nor stocks, could shake their faith in the prophecies and promises of God.

A number of factors combine to deepen the foundations of faith in prophecy:

(1) THE TIME ELEMENT. If we must judge by our own parts and powers, we know that it is not in man to fix the time when definitely stated social events shall occur, four or five or six or ten generations in advance; and at the same time designate the principal actors in that distant drama, and describe the world conditions that will give the setting for that future event.

(2) THE ELEMENT OF PROBABILITY—OR OF IMPROBABILITY; depending upon the angle from which the matter is viewed. The most unbelievable things—unbelievable, of course, at the time the prophecy was given—which seemed contrary to the course of nature, have come to pass in fulfillment of prophecy.

(3) THE LIMITATIONS OF HUMAN UNDERSTANDING. What could Nahum, seven hundred years before Christ, have known about the advancements in the arts and sciences that have been made in the last two hundred years? And yet, though he gave other names to our modern inventions, he forecasted some of the greatest scientific discoveries of modern times. And he fixed the time when these discoveries should be made. We have here, to inspire faith in prophecy, not only the limitations of human understanding in the field of physical forces and mechanical appliances, but also a time element amounting to more than two thousand years.

But the ability to forecast in the field of physical phenomenon is not so limited as the ability to foretell what human nature will do. We can not believe that the history of the race, in Daniel's time, could have enabled him to forecast, as he did, in detail, the world's great political changes reaching down almost to our own time.

(4) THE UNIFORMITY OF PROPHETIC FULFILLMENT. I speak now of predictions of the generally accepted prophets of the Christian movement. We marvel at the certain manner in which the prophecies of the Scriptures have been fulfilled. Nothing short of divine inspiration could account for the record of prophecy.

There still is another factor in faith in prophecy, and that is

(5) "THE WITNESS OF THE SPIRIT," which bears chiefly upon prophecy yet to be fulfilled. You have heard members of the church say they knew this or that promise was true because they had received the witness of the Spirit.

There are several things to say about this factor. In the first place it is of uncertain value, sometimes, even to those who receive this witness. The emotional content of the soul is the hardest thing about ourselves to judge with certainty; and we have been forced to admit that very good men have been mistaken at times in their judgment of their own spiritual experiences.

If good men, and highly intellectual, misjudge some of their emotional experiences, what must we say of the person who does not know the difference, even, between patriotism and his anxiety for his own private welfare? I do not say that there are not times when men are made certain of certain things through the witness of the Spirit. I only say that on the whole these experiences are of uncertain value. Their value depends upon two things: (a) the manner in which that witness comes; and (b) the ability of the individual to interpret the meaning of his spiritual experiences.

(a) There are many spirits; and they need to be "tried." And we are not yet inclined to give much credence in important situations to the testimony of people to whom enthusiasm and ambition and all the rest is but a confused mass of conflicting emotions.

(b) "The witness of the spirit" is a purely personal possession. It is the exclusive property of the individual who receives it. It can not be transferred to others. And it can not be examined by others as can the Record of Prophecy. It can not be tested in the light of what has come to pass. And yet, the witness of the Spirit has strengthened the faith of many in prophecy.

Our Interest in Prophecy

Latter Day Saints have a special interest in prophecy for a number of special reasons:

(1) Latter Day Saints believe that the forthcoming of their church was foretold in the prophecies of the Bible.

(2) Latter Day Saints believe that the forthcoming of the Book of Mormon—which is a concurrent and collateral event, by which men are enabled to identify the Restored Church—was foretold in prophecy.

(3) Latter Day Saints believe that their church organization is the outcome of the call of God to prophets in the latter days.

(4) Latter Day Saints believe that their doctrines and practices are inspired through this prophetic leadership.

(5) Latter Day Saints believe that there is succession in the prophetic office of the church today which makes possible the guidance of its affairs and the development of its institutions in keeping with the designs of God.

(6) Latter Day Saints believe that members of the church, other than those who fill the prophetic office, are exercised by the gift of prophecy.

(7) Latter Day Saints believe that God has made certain important promises to their church and has forecasted its future through the prophets of the Restoration Movement.

Purposes of Prophecy

"The testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy," says Saint John. And to this all the prophets agree. I believe that every true prophet of God can certify from first hand experience that God is. The character of the prophetic function is such that those who have been the instruments of its performance have a certain conviction that Jehovah is, and that he is God.

The certain and uniform manner in which prophecy is fulfilled teaches men to respect the word of God and to obey his commandments. Prophecy is a guide to the seeker after truth. We think that if the Jews had known the prophecies and promises of God to them, they would have known that Jesus was the Son of God. We think that men should be able to identify the church of the living God today by the light of prophecy. And, in like manner, though the prophecies given for our special benefit do not seem to serve us much better than the prophecies given for the sake of the Jews served them, we believe that our prophecies tell us how to manage the affairs of the church in these latter days.

Prophecy affords a protection against ignorant and designing men. Who, that knows the prophecies and promises of God, could have been persuaded of his own belief to wrap the sheet off his own bed around his naked body, and wait on a hilltop in the State of Maine to meet Christ at his second coming at 10 a. m., Wednesday, March the first, in 1888?

Yes, what modern Nehemiah—what man who knows the prophecies and promises of God to this church—can be persuaded of his own belief to leave off building the walls of "Zion" because modern Sanballets send their prophets to warn them of the evils that will follow in the wake of such an adventure?

Prophecy inspires faith in a course of action the paths of which are so winding that we can not see beyond the next bend in the road. Prophecy is "a light that shineth in a dark place."

Prophecy is an anchor of hope in a time of storm. When the fog of confusion and failure and disappointment settles down upon the sea of our church life, because of our unbelief and infidelity; and when, because we have not been taught, nor had experience, nor known more perfectly concerning our duty, we find ourselves unable to hold our gospel boat to a steady course; each successive buoy that we make in keeping with the promises of God gives increased hope that in due time our gospel ship will yet enter the port of Zion, and we shall yet anchor safe in the harbor of God.

This last is not the least of the purposes which prophecy serves to the peoples of our church. Peter, James, and John were not the last apostles to face conditions that cause men of the Christian church to say, "I go fishing." Sometimes church circumstances have compelled men, against their wills, to "go fishing." And in such times prophecy inspires men to "rest in the Lord and wait patiently for him."

The Nature of Prophecy

I make no ipse dixit concerning prophecy in its philosophical aspects. I say what I think today. No man can say what he will believe tomorrow. Only on certain general principles can we know the certainty of our ground. And yet it is good to say what we think today, for that very act itself will help us to think better tomorrow. "Thoughts untangle, passing over the lips."

I do not like to hear supercilious pedants who, while they say those who perform the prophetic function do not know the nature of that experience, nevertheless, boast about their own ability to judge a kind of experience which they say no man can have. It is good, sometimes, to neither believe nor disbelieve things that we do not understand. Certainly we should not fix the limits of other men's experiences at the boundaries of our own little worlds.

There is a great confusion of ideas about the nature of prophecy. To some it is nothing more than a guess about the future based upon the happenings of the present and the experiences of the past. It is like a weather forecast; taking into account the movements of air currents, atmospheric pressures, and what not, after which a prediction is made that tomorrow skies will be bright and temperatures high. A mere guess—I have heard even men of the church say—to give prestige to which, some presume to add a "Thus saith the Lord."

On the other hand it is the belief of some that the message of the prophet is an out and out, word for word, divinely controlled, infallible statement of positive fact or absolute truth in which the judgment of the individual can have no part whatever. It is a case of making a phonographic record and of using it to reproduce sound for others to hear. Between these two extremes there are all shades and grades of opinions.

Against the suppositions of those who do not know what they are talking about in this relation because (as they seem proud to say) they have had no prophetic experience, we place the testimony (as we find it in the history of prophecy) of such intellectual giants and spiritual stars as Daniel and Paul and Peter and Moses, which is after this sort:

"There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known . . . what shall be in the latter days."

"Prophecy cometh not in old time by the will of men, but holy men of old spoke as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost."

That the truths of the gospel are known "by the revelation of Jesus Christ." That God calls men up to "Mount Sinai" to receive instructions from his own lips for a law to the people. That "He through the Holy Ghost had given commandments to the apostles whom he had chosen." And so on. The prophets have given much testimony in relation to the nature of prophecy.

But a few isolated statements of this character do not give us an adequate understanding of the nature of prophecy. We need to study the history of prophecy and to contemplate it in its entirety, attempting to make due allowance for historical inaccuracies, and ignoring every fact which has no essential relation to the question. And even then we may not find material enough to enable us to come to an understanding of the phenomenon. In fact, we ourselves may need to experience the prophetic function if we would be able to speak authoritatively on the question.

It is my opinion, too, that we err when we attach so much importance as some people do to the dots on the "i's" and the crosses on the "t's" in our attempts to evaluate prophecy. If when we read "the word of the Lord" or "the voice of the Spirit," we can think of nothing but explicit declamations and auditory sounds, we shall probably never come within miles of guessing the nature of prophecy.

Judging by my twenty-eight years of ministerial experience, I should say that the prophetic phenomenon is a conviction of fact or of truth under the influence of the Holy Ghost, or the Spirit of God, in which and by which the intellect is quickened and the understanding enlightened on questions to which it brings the attention.

It is difficult for many men to believe in the plenary inspiration of all the messages of the prophets. In fact, it seems evident that many of the things which God has revealed to the prophets have been discolored, and sometimes even distorted, by the interests, attachments, prejudices, apperceptions, aspirations, limitations, or what not, of the men through whom the prophecies were given. Now, this is important. For if there are times when the messages which God gives to men are discolored under such influences, then it is both proper and necessary to evaluate the messages of the prophets to judge, if possible, in what manner or to what extent the human element has become mixed with the divine.

But do not become disturbed if the study of the nature of prophecy is outside your line of thinking. Any of us can, and most of us do, eat fruit and know it nourishes our bodies without knowing the mysteries of its ripening or the development of its seed. We may not even know the art of preserving the fruit after it has ripened for us.

There is much about prophecy for us to learn. But if you know that you sit at a spiritual table from which you are taking spiritual food which nourishes your soul, you may not even care to concern yourself about the nature of prophecy. Then leave it to others, and wish them well.

There are men who are continually asking questions about the mysteries of godliness. But there are others who do not enjoy a journey through the land of doubt. They feel unsafe when they attempt to discriminate between "Peter" saying: "Repent that your sins may be blotted out," and "Peter" saying: "I know him [Jesus] not." They prefer either that no thinking be done on the question, or if it is done, that it shall be done by others whose thoughts they take and use—sometimes with merciless bungling—as if they were products of their own brain.

Discrediting Prophecy

Besides the prophetic office as an organ of government in the Christian church, Latter Day Saints believe also in a sort of diffused prophecy—a "gift of prophecy," that may be exercised or expressed through any member of the church. There are many references to this form of prophecy in the Bible. Philip, the evangelist, "had four daughters, virgins, which did prophesy." "And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, . . . they spoke with tongues, and prophesied," are instances of this prophetic gift.

Now any church that believes in prophecy after this manner, invites a world of grief from several classes of people of which I shall speak. In discussing this question publicly, I may tread on dangerous ground. It is difficult to discuss it without wounding feelings. But in an article like this, one must take some risks. And I think the risks are fully warranted by the harm these people do and the probability of correcting these conditions by discussing them openly and frankly.

First, there are the obsessed. Just as one person thinks he is Jesus Christ, another that he is The One Mighty and Strong, another that he is one of the Three Nephites, another that he is a sort of recording angel, or what not, so there are people who are morbidly dominated by the idea that it is their business to prophesy. It devolves upon them, so they think, to "give the mind of the Lord" from time to time, concerning the desires and difficulties of the members of the church.

Second, there are the emotionally unstable, those who lack emotional control, so that their behavior gets beyond the management of their intellect. In a social service of the church, or a prayer meeting, when a wave of sentiment sweeps over the congregation, or as an outgrowth of wishes or concern for others, these people are swept off their intellectual feet, and they are "moved" to speak in the "gift of prophecy."

Third, there are the ignorant, people who have no idea of their limitations, and a very exaggerated notion of their powers. "The fool rageth and is confident." Knowing off-hand the answer to most perplexing questions, they must give the answer, and that in prophecy. These people, too, "feel constrained" to exercise the gift.

And fourth, there are the insincere, the aspiring, the evil designing. There are not many of these. It does not take many to do a world of harm.

Now, why do we speak of these? For this reason: When counterfeit coin is being circulated, genuine coin is regarded with suspicion. Not many people are able to discriminate the genuine from the counterfeit, and so, in such times, they become distrustful of all coin. False prophecy causes people to lose faith in true prophecy.

There has been a growing skepticism of late years in the prophetic function. And this skepticism has grown out of the causes I have named. Observing the behavior of the obsessed, the emotionally unstable, the ignorant, and the aspiring, and having had no prophetic experience of their own to which to anchor their belief, those who discern the false character of these manifestations come to doubt all phenomena which are said to be gifts of prophecy.

These effects become causes of secondary effects. Disbelief in prophecy tends to obstruct the function of the prophetic office in the church. Who wishes to be classed with the obsessed? and the emotionally unstable? the ignorant? and the aspiring? And besides, of what use is prophetic instruction to a people who have lost faith in prophecy?

And then, the very fact that one holds the prophetic office without performing needed prophetic functions—whether he be a recreant prophet or not—is taken, too, to mean that people are changing their beliefs about the prophetic office—"it isn't what people once believed it was." It is expected of an organ that it shall perform its functions. That is its purpose. And the failure to perform the function is taken as a sign that the organ does not possess such powers. And faith in prophecy is destroyed.

Now this has an important bearing upon church government. The theocratic element in church government tends to disappear, and the so-called "democratic" element to take its place. And the government of the church becomes perverted. Instead of "the body," of which Christ is the "head," it tends to become an ordinary association of men organized for religious purposes, attempting to find their way through the problems of church management.

If there were no other consideration than this, a critical study of the question of prophecy by the church would be highly profitable, if it is not altogether necessary.

The Soul Indestructible

By Thomas Heywood

To be perfectly orthodox, I guess I should have a Biblical text whereon to base my opinions of this subject. I will refer you to Genesis, 1st chapter, verse 27: "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them."

First of all, it would be advisable to discuss the question, "What is a soul?" There are, they say, no two persons exactly alike; they differ in some way, however small, from each other. That being so, when God created man in his own image, he must have created something like himself, which brings before us the question of "What is God like?" for answer I will revert again to the good old Book which says "God is a Spirit." The soul, therefore, is the man.

My next quotation will simplify considerably the facts I am endeavoring to establish, "For God breathed into man the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (Genesis 2: 7), which implies to me that man was not until he received breath and became a soul. We may destroy or kill the material frame, which is merely the earthly dwelling place for the real man, but we can not, and never will destroy the soul, for it must of necessity return to its creator, God.

I can not conceive of a merciful God creating a creature for a brief span of three score years and ten and then, if it survives that period, or perhaps a little longer, considering its existence finished, nevermore to be remembered. No; immediately the frame dies, the man merely changes his dwelling place, from material to return to its Creator, there to be judged according to the deeds done in the flesh, and afterwards to enter either into the joy of the Lord or to work out its own salvation with fear and trembling in the spiritual realms. I certainly do not believe that a merciful God puts any of his creatures to everlasting tortures.

I believe it is possible to converse with the dead or departed, through the medium of Spiritualism, wrought by concentration of mind and mental and physical exercises, though I am not prepared to state my opinions of whether it is right or wrong to do so, but it certainly proves the fact of the living dead, and settles the question, "Where are the dead?"

Let me emphasize this, for one brief moment, by reference to the world's greatest disaster of 1914 to 1919, and ask whether our boys, in all reverence to them, some of whom were blown to the four quarters of the globe, are dead, and do not know us, and see us who are left on the earth plane. What a ghastly thought! No, I firmly believe that they live, and we ourselves shall again meet them to find them supremely happy.

The Master of men before his crucifixion said, "I shall rise again in three days," for he knew perfectly well that he was only about to change his abode. He knew also that whatever they did with his material body, they could not destroy his soul, and he had the power to return to his earthly tabernacle and so raise it from its useless state, an act which all souls could perform if God permitted them to return; but it is inevitable that they live, for remember that Christ said to his companions in death, "This day shalt thou be with me in paradise." Not in the same realm of glory, but in a lower sphere, working out, and developing their salvation and advancement to the higher realms of glory. I am here reminded of that beautiful hymn which suitably fits my thoughts:

"Eternal Light, Eternal Light
How pure the soul must be
When placed within thy searching sight
It shrinks not, but with calm delight
Can live, and look on thee.

"Oh, how can I whose native sphere
Is dark, whose mind is dim
Before the Ineffable appear
And on my naked spirit bear
The uncreated beam.

"There is a way for man to rise
To that sublime abode,
An offering and a sacrifice,
A Holy Spirit's influence,
An advocate with thee."

What will a man give in exchange for his soul? Man's free agency ceases as soon as he leaves this mundane plane, for without option he must return to God and undergo the judgment of the deeds done in the flesh. If he receives his reward in entering in, it is well, and if not he is of necessity forced to begin to work out his salvation in the great hereafter, which I venture to say is a great deal harder, but I absolutely do not uphold the idea of hell as generally taught. A place of everlasting tortures, with no recovery—one eternity of fire and brimstone—does it stand to reasonable, logical argument, that God who is love, could send one of his creatures bearing his own image to eternal punishment of that description? No.

"God who is just and kind
Will those who err instruct,
And in the paths of righteousness,
Their wandering steps conduct."

Now what apparent difference is there between a corpse and a living human being? The body is intact, and every organ in its proper place; the flesh still solid, the blood has not yet left the veins, and the warmth still lingers, yet the whole piece of most wonderful mechanism is stopped and rendered useless for the lack of something that we could not see when it left the body. The whole body refuses to move in spite of any human endeavor. The brain is quite intact, and yet it does not work, owing to the soul having fled. The soul, then, is the breath of life, or of God, and so a part of God; for when God created man he gave to him a thinking apparatus and said unto Adam, "Eat of every tree in the garden except one, the tree of good and evil, for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Now I do not intend to blame poor Adam for all the sins of humanity; nevertheless, had he been obedient to the command of God, he would surely have lived on. Now look at the question of hell with this imagination in mind, and I think you will agree with me that no such place existed. On the other hand, had he not fallen, I venture to say we ourselves might not have been here; therefore, all humanity commits Adam's sin, while hell to Adam and his wife Eve was the realization of the fact they were cast from the presence of the Lord.

The material frame, then, is merely what you see, flesh, blood, bone, etc. When you see it, you do not see the man. You see only his earthly dwelling place. But the soul controls absolutely all the actions performed by the flesh, and therefore I wish to say further that the flesh is not accountable to God for anything, being discarded at the time called death and returning to the earth, to be no more; but not so the man. He arrives in the after life, and according to the deeds done while in the flesh, so he takes up his position in the heavenly realms.

To me, personally, there are no dead, but all live in Christ Jesus. Remember the words of the poet:

"And when on earth I breathe no more,
I'll sing upon a happier shore,
'Thy will be done. Thy will be done.'"

The conception of the destiny of the soul is portrayed by the Russian writer, Jean Guzik, when she wrote these few lines for Spiritualism, but which equally suit my purpose:

"How far are heaven and hell apart?
No farther than from heart to heart;
Some souls taste both ere death.

"How far is spirit life away?
The thickness of a veil of clay;
The journey of a breath."

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

The Call of the Disciples

By H. A. Koehler

The following picture interpretation is planned to accompany the use of the beautiful colored print, "The Call of the Disciples," as a part of the church school worship program for June 7.

Jesus entered upon his active ministry when he was about thirty years of age. The artist here pictures him a man of commanding presence. Recently he had come to John and had been baptized of him in Jordan, receiving special recognition from heaven as the Son of God. He then had departed into the wilderness where he was in fasting and prayer, the record tells us, for forty days, and made ready for his ministry.

Though he was the Messiah, he was tempted repeatedly by the temptations which come to men. Resolutely he resisted the evil, and angels came and strengthened him.

Early in the ministry of the Master he called his twelve disciples, that they might be associated with him and gain the training and experience necessary to carry on his work when he should depart.

In the picture we see him walking by the Sea of Galilee, evidently in the early hours of the morning. The sun is rising over the eastern hills, casting its golden rays in splendor over earth and sea, dispelling darkness and melting away the mists. The story of the picture is told in Matthew 4:18-22 and Mark 1:16-20: "And Jesus, walking by the sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers. And he saith unto them, Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men. And they straightway left their nets, and followed him. And going on from thence, he saw other two brethren, James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets; and he called them. And they immediately left the ship and their father, and followed him."

As Jesus walked by the sea, he first called Peter, and Andrew, his brother, who were fishermen. Already Jesus had been preaching in the synagogue. Doubtless they had heard his wonderful message, and when he called them they left their nets and followed him. Here they stand behind Jesus, eagerly listening to his words and learning more of the new way of life which Jesus came to demonstrate.

In the boat we see the youthful John, his older brother James, their father Zebedee, and the servants farther back in the boat. Note the calm poise, the confidence, the commanding gesture of the Master as he says, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men."

Eagerly John is ready to respond. Already he loves this quiet, dignified man whose message of love and good will to all mankind thrills his soul. Of course, he will go! James is more hesitant. He is probably counting the cost. In the attitude of the father, Zebedee, there is joyous response. Surely his boys can go. What more could a father wish than for his sons to join the cause of one so noble, yet so tender and so true!

The whole scene is typical of early morning on the sea of Galilee. Missionaries of today tell us the same purple haze hangs over the water as the fishermen, out at break of day, prepare their nets for the fishing grounds.

The trade of fishermen in the Holy Land is remunerative. Peter and Andrew and the sons of Zebedee are fairly well to do, middle-class men of their day. Their life had been lived apart from the populous centers of vice and crime. They loved the broad expanse of the sea and sky, the cliffs and hills that purple in the distance. With reverence they looked upon the majestic forces of nature as they trimmed their sails to drive their frail craft before the wind. Gladly they followed the Master of earth and sea and sky, as he called them to be fishers of men. It was to men such as these to whom Jesus committed the work of his ministry.

Worship Suggestions for June

The following is offered as material from which church school worship programs may be builded. Select such parts as seem best to meet your needs, and be on the lookout for good material of your own. Let the service be brief, but carefully planned and carried out reverently and earnestly. Strive for general participation.

The picture, "The Call of the Disciples," should be mounted and kept on display for the month. Let its story be told as part of one of the programs. See appreciative interpretation in Herald columns. This picture is one of six beautifully colored prints, 20x30 inches, which may be obtained through the Herald Publishing House at 50 cents each; all six subjects for $2.50.

"You who are young in the world today,
Have you heard that ringing call?
Are you ready to heed? Will you walk the way
Of the Lord who needs us all?
It is sounding down from the heights above;
It is Christ's word, 'Follow Me,'
Ah, straightway answer the mighty love,
His servants and soldiers be."

8. Hymn: "Jesus Calls Us o'er the Tumult," new Saints' Hymnal, verse 1; or, "Give Me Thy Heart," Praises, 29, verses 1 and 2.
9. Story: "The Monk's Consecration," by Margaret Slatery:

Once upon a time a monk sat by a window of his rude hut on the mountain side, looking down on the little village below. The years seemed long since, a busy, happy boy, he had played in its streets and climbed the hillsides to care for the cattle, yet he was still young. It was five years now since he had forsaken the great city to return to his village home wearing the cross and the long robe fastened with a cord about his waist. He had hoped for release from the burdens of sin and sorrow, of suffering and shame, that oppressed his soul at every turn in the city streets, but he had been disappointed. Poverty and sin lived in the valley, and evil lurked where his boyish eyes had never dreamed. The village had seemed accursed, and so he had left it, climbed to the plateau, built his hut, planted his garden, enjoyed his sunrise and sunset, grown strong and content—until the day he fell asleep and dreamed.

He had been reading in the glory of the sunset the story of Calvary—the terrible cross, the dark tomb, and then the glorious morning, the risen Lord, the life indeed. When he had completed the wonderful story, which, though familiar, thrilled his soul, he prayed long, and, still kneeling, fell asleep. As he slept he dreamed that he walked upon the road from earth to heaven. Dark it was at first and hard to travel; then it grew lighter; then beautiful with flowers. At a turn in the road he met the Master.

"Oh, Master," he cried, kneeling at his feet, "why did'st thou leave us? We need thee so badly. Could'st thou not have stayed?"

The Master answered softly, "I finished the work I had to do."

"Oh, Master," said the monk, made bold by his eagerness. "But the burden, the burden of poverty and sin! It is with us still; it deadens the soul. Who can bear the burden of man's need?"

The Master smiled, "I share with those who love me the burden of man's need," he said. "I have left a part of the burden for them."

"But, Master," cried the monk in sorrow and in fear, as the Master looked into his very soul, "what if they fail thee?"

"But I am counting on them," said the Master, and his voice thrilled the monk to the depths of his being. "I am counting on those who love me."

When the monk awoke—so real had been the dream and so clear the vision—he gazed for some moments about the tiny room and then out into the moonlight, but all was still. He rose and stood at the door looking down over the rocks to the village, asleep in its poverty and sin. Then in the silence of his retreat he sat down to think. It had been so quiet, so comfortable, there had been time for worship, prayer, and thought. His needs were simple, and they had all been met; he had been well content. But the dream disturbed him. It was early morning when for a moment he fell again upon his knees; then he rose, took off his robe, and folding it neatly with the cross and beads laid it away. It was with mingled feeling of hope and fear that he dressed in the clothes he had worn when, as a young student, he had left his father's home.

"Now," he said softly, "I am one of them." Carefully he set his room in order and closed and fastened the door of his hut. A moment he paused for another look at the world below him, lying still in the morning mist; then he grasped his mountain stick firmly and started down the trail. As he walked, the look of fear and dread upon his face was changed to one of joy.

"I'm going back," he said half aloud, "back down into the midst of it all. He has finished His part; now He works with me. He is counting on me. I will not fail."
—From "He Took It upon Himself."

10. Quartet: "Take My Life and Let It Be," new Saints' Hymnal, 307; or, "Take Up Thy Cross," Praises, 95.

11. Sentence Prayer.
12. Offering Solo: "O Jesus, I Have Promised," new Saints' Hymnal, 298, verses 1 and 2.
13. Concluding Thought, by the leader:
"I heard Him call.
'Come follow,' that was all.
My gold grew dim,
I rose and followed, that was all.
Who would not follow
If he heard Him call?"
14. Hymn: "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go," Praises, 28; or, "Master, Use Me," new Saints' Hymnal, 214.
15. Prayer.

JUNE 21

Theme: "Loyal to Our Convictions."

1. Prelude: "I Would Be True."
2. Call to Worship: "O Come Let Us Worship," new Saints' Hymnal, 294, either as a solo or choir number.
3. Prayer. That we may ever be loyal to our church and the cause of Christ. That in times of stress and in prosperity, we may stand firm and true.
4. Hymn: "With a Steadfast Faith," verses 1, 2, and 3, Praises, 21; or, "A Charge to Keep I Have," new Saints' Hymnal, 201.
5. Scripture Reading: Acts 7: 48, 49, 52-60.
6. Theme Talk: The theme for the month is Christ's invitation, "Come unto Me." It may easily be linked with our theme for today, "Loyal to Our Convictions." The word loyal sounds a challenge. When we answer the call, shall we prove loyal to our convictions? Our Scripture reading tells us of a man who stood loyal to his convictions, to death; a man who died with a prayer on his lips, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge," a prayer very similar to the prayer Christ uttered on the cross. If we shall prove loyal to our convictions, to our church, we shall of necessity prepare, we shall build a Christian fortitude, as did Stephen, a deep-rooted faith, a spiritual reserve sufficient to meet the tests that come in everyday life.
Being loyal to our convictions develops strength of character. Inspired by the spirit of loyalty we shall walk, not in the darkness of indecision and weakness, but in the light, as loyal followers of Him, who is the Light of the World.
7. Story: "The Boy Who Was Not Afraid," Knights of Service, 117.
8. Hymn: "I Would Be True," new Saints' Hymnal, 294; or, "O for a Faith," Hymnal, 104; new Hymnal, 240.
9. Sentence Prayer.
10. Solo: "Stand Fast for Christ Thy Savior," New Hymnal for American Youth, 180.
11. Offering. Quiet music.
12. Hymn: "Loyalty unto Christ," Praises, 200; or, "O Jesus, I Have Promised," new Saints' Hymnal, 298.
13. Prayer.

JUNE 28

Theme: "Workers Together with God."

1. Prelude: Medley of hymns.
2. Call to Worship: "Know ye not that ye are the temples of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the children of God."
3. Solo: Hymn Prayer: "With Joy We Lift Our Eyes," new Saints' Hymnal, 78; or, prayer of thanks for the privilege of working with God.
4. Hymn: "O to Be More Like Jesus," Praises, 128; or, "Savior, Teach Me Day by Day," new Saints' Hymnal, 338.

5. Scripture Reading: Colossians 1: 2-13.
6. Theme Talk: We are assuming today that we have accepted the invitation of Christ, "Come unto Me," which is our theme for the month, and that it is our privilege to be workers together with God, which is our theme for today. "Come unto Me and we shall be workers together with God," is the invitation. We should look upon every task that is ours to do as an opportunity for service, and learn to love it as a privilege.

Our church gives us a wonderful opportunity to enter into a partnership, that of working together and with God. Let us prepare to assume the responsibilities at hand and to labor diligently, humbly, and prayerfully.

"Every task, however simple, sets the soul that does it free;

Every deed of love and mercy done to man is done to me.

Nevermore thou needest seek me; I am with thee everywhere;

Raise the stone and thou shalt find me; cleave the wood and I am there."

—Henry Van Dyke.

7. Solo or Choir: "We Thank Thee, Lord, Thy Path of Service," New Hymnal for American Youth, 249; or, "Blessed Are They That Do," Praises, 224; or, new Saints' Hymnal, 87.
8. Story: "The Four Fishermen of Galilee," Knights of Service, 46; or the reading, "The Joy of Labor."

The Joy of Labor

The bread that bringeth strength, I want to give,
The water pure that bids the thirsty live;
I want to help the fainting day by day;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this.

I want to give the oil of joy for tears,
The faith to conquer crowding doubts and fears.
Beauty for ashes, may I give away;
I am sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give good measure, running o'er,
And into angry hearts I want to pour
The answer soft that turneth wrath away;
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give to others hope and faith,
I want to do all that the Master saith;
I want to live aright from day to day,
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

Plan for Studying a Text

1. Are there parallel passages? In what do they differ from this?
2. By whom were the words spoken?
3. Can I look up any subject in the Bible dictionary?
4. Does the original throw any light on the text?
5. Examine textual index to see if I have any expositions on the text.
6. Find references to any theological words in the text.
7. Give the place connected with the text.
8. How were the words of the text said?
9. In what present circumstances are the words applicable?
10. Just what am I to teach from the text?
11. Know the circumstances of the incident.
12. Look at the words from the writer's standpoint, then from your own.
13. Make your points.

The above plan is the result of a series of experiments carried out by two college chums during their experiences in the pastorate of their churches, and may be of some help to other ministers in their sermon preparation, having stood the test of experience.—The Reverend J. E. Williamson, Egremont, England, in the Homiletic Review, August, 1930.

Vision

The July issue of Vision will carry program materials for church work and services for the month of August, and will continue thereafter to carry such materials a month in advance.

We are repeating this announcement in order that all church workers and leaders may be notified and take action to secure their subscriptions to Vision.

This change has been made at the urgent request of leaders all over the church, who have found it less convenient to use and preserve these materials for reference as they appear in the Herald columns.

New subscribers to Vision will find a coupon in this issue which will give them a generous reduction in rate.

Christianity does not consist in a proud priesthood, a costly church, an imposing ritual, a fashionable throng, a pealing organ, loud responses and reiterated expressions of reverence for the name of Christ; but in the spirit of filial trust in God, and ardent, impartial, overflowing love to man.—T. J. Mumford.

Reunion of New Zealand Mission

The annual reunion of New Zealand Mission occurred during the Easter season, April 3 to 6, at Auckland, in reality a reunion between Auckland and Kerepeehi Branches, for no Saints were present from the South Island.

It was fitting that the first service be one of prayer. It opened at ten o'clock Friday morning, Elder M. Murdock in charge, assisted by Priest W. Herkt. A peaceful and inspiring time was spent.

The following hour the service was a memorial to the work and death of our Lord Jesus. Elder C. A. Loving was the speaker, and his text was: "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." The sermon was an encouragement to higher life.

The reunion was organized at the first afternoon service at 2.30. The organization was builded as follows: Presidency, Elders H. Peisker and C. A. Loving; secretary, Elder A. LeBherz; chorister-organist, Sister Andrews; usher, J. Smith; press correspondent, H. Peisker. Acting on the instructions of the body, the elders present, directed by C. A. Loving, were made the administration committee. The program for the reunion was indorsed. It was decided that three collections should be taken during the gathering and that the entire proceeds should be turned over to the bishop's agent for use by that department. The collections amounted to £1:11:0. It was also decided that another reunion be held at the Easter season in 1932

Adults Entertain with Educational Program

The adult division presented an educational program at three o'clock, numbers consisting of a piano solo by Sister Andrews; recitation by Brother M. Blaikie; address, "The Need for Qualified Leaders, Teachers, and Officers," C. A. Loving; violin solo, J. LeBherz; paper, "How Parents May Assist the Teachers," Sister Blaikie; duet, "The Old Rugged Cross," by Sisters Andrews and Peisker; address, "Profitable Hobbies for Religious Workers," by Brother Andrews; cornet solo, C. A. Loving; paper, "Loyalty to the Church School," Sister C. A. Loving; duet, "Some Day the Silver Cord Will Break," Brothers Andrews and Peisker; address, "Recreation and Program Work, a Vital Part of Religious Education"; quartet, "The City Four-square." This much-enjoyed program concluded with an address on "Religion Demands That We Develop and Use Our Talents," by Brother Murdock.

"The Holy Spirit" was the theme of Brother Murdock's evening sermon.

On Saturday the priesthood met at two o'clock in the afternoon, the presidency in charge. An address on the relation which should exist between the pastor and the congregation, need of economy and frugality at the present time, tithing, and budgeting was presented by Elder H. Peisker.

Young People Contribute to the Conference

Then a splendid program was presented by the young people. The children's chorus sang "Let the Words of My Mouth," "Is There Work for Me?" "Send out the Sunlight," and "Day Is Dying." There were piano solos by Bertha Blaikie and Edna LeBherz, and a violin solo by Alvin Peisker. The twenty-third psalm was read by Olai Anderson, and there were recitations by Edna LeBherz, Rita Peisker, and Philip Herkt. Lorna Peisker sang, "Always Cheerful," and Jack Copas, "Little Feet Be Careful." Papers: "Valuing Our Time and Using It Profitably," by Patricia Andrews; "Value of Music in the Life of Young People," by Bertha Blaikie, and "The Importance of Honest Study and Good Reading in the Life of Young People," by Jack LeBherz. The short addresses were, "Pure Temples for the Holy Spirit," by Brother Blaikie; "The Place of Prayer in Religious Education," by Brother Herkt; "Youth, the Most Important Age, and Our Hope for the Future," H. Peisker.

A miscellaneous entertainment occupied the evening—solos, sketches, vocal and instrumental numbers—by Auckland and visiting members and their friends. In this, everyone felt that the recreational need of the people had been generously cared for without hurt to the intellectual and spiritual needs.

Easter Sunday Memorializes Restoration of the Gospel

The nine o'clock Sunday prayer meeting was presided over by C. A. Loving and A. E. Andrews. An hour later there followed a session of junior church on the theme, "The Message of Easter." "The Meaning of Easter" was the topic of Brother Peisker's short address. Brother Andrews told "The Story of Spring" in its relation to Easter. Patricia Andrews read "The Trailing Arbutus"; Oloi Anderson read "The Forty Famous Wrestlers"; Poppy Blaikie, "Easter Joy." Brother Loving contributed a cornet solo, and the children's chorus sang.

Since the day marked the one hundred and first anniversary of the organization of the church, Brother LeBherz chose as the theme for the morning sermon, "The Restoration."

After a period of fasting the Saints met for communion and fellowship service at 2.30 in the afternoon. The Spirit of the Master was enjoyed by all. Unity marked every expression and action and bodes well for the progress of the work in this mission.

The closing session was a memorial to the work done by Joseph Smith, the latter-day Prophet. Elder H. Peisker was the speaker.

Appropriate Easter musical numbers added to the preaching services of the conference and were appreciated.

La Junta, Colorado

"Elder H. E. Winegar, missionary of Eastern Colorado District, has been acting as pastor of La Junta Branch in connection with his other labors. His services are in demand elsewhere much of the time, but he plans to be with us frequently," writes Elizabeth Sadie Bair, correspondent.

"We are working under the new plan of religious education, and have been for the past two years. We adopted it in our branch under Brother O. A. McDowell even before it was adopted by the general church last conference."

Mrs. H. E. Winegar, director of religious education for the district, has been here since last July, and has been supervisor of the church school. Mrs. W. H. Berry is supervisor of the adult division and is in charge of the women's class which meets every Wednesday afternoon, when they do various kinds of work, such as handcraft, quilt piecing, and class work.

On Wednesday evening a teacher-training class has been meeting at the home of Brother and Sister Winegar, where they have been studying The Seven Laws of Teaching, by Gregory, and You Can Learn to Teach, by Slattery. This work is under the direction of Sister Winegar. This class precedes prayer service, which is usually well attended, and splendid interest is manifested.

Elliston Stevens is the supervisor of the young people's division. This group organized itself into a class which meets on Sunday evening at 6.30. Miss Elizabeth Sadie Bair was elected president of the class and has charge of the programs which are given at each meeting. This program consists of local talent, and the reading of the book, The Call at Evening. Once a month a paper which contains original stories, poems, and jokes is read. The name selected by the young people for the class was the "Y. M. C.," meaning "Young Missionary Club," for one of their ambitions is to work for new members, not only for their own organization, but for the church. This hour is well attended by members and nonmembers, and the group has planned and carried out a number of social activities for the entire membership of the branch. The young people here enjoy activities most where both the old and young participate.

On Sunday, April 19, all-day services were held at the church. Brother Winegar had charge. He preached twice, and led the afternoon prayer service. Two carloads motored down from Pueblo, Brother Morgan and Brother Day and families.

The Saints of La Junta Branch were shocked to hear of the accident which resulted in the death of Sister Mary Brown, wife of Brother Bruce Brown, he having been missionary to Eastern Colorado District a short time ago. Sister Brown was loved by La Junta people, who extend to Brother Brown their deepest sympathy.

Sacramento, California

Twenty-fourth and Kay Streets

District Missionary G. P. Levitt gave a series of pre-Easter sermons on the life of Christ. Attendance was good. Several young people commented on the sermons, saying they had been helped to more clearly understand the events in the life of the Savior.

Easter morning the church was beautifully decorated by Sister Agnes Ensley, wife of the deacon. She grows an abundance of flowers and keeps the church lovely with their beauty from spring until winter. The flowers seemed especially beautiful this morning, each basket and vase in just the right place. On the wall back of the pulpit hung an illuminated cross, reminding the people anew of the sacrifice Jesus made for all. The cross was the presentation of Ives Honeychurch. Following the church school program, Bishop Edward Ingham gave an inspiring talk.

Mrs. Alida Loranah Lytell and Mrs. Elsie Lewis were baptized by Pastor W. H. Dawson Sunday afternoon, March 22, and welcomed into the fellowship of the Saints.

The "Brightville Chautauqua" was staged by Sister Cora Taylor, chairman of the Idola Club, the evening of April 17, in the lower auditorium of the church. A program for every night except Saturday and Sunday was given in one. Monday night the crowd was entertained by the chautauqua concert company. Several celebrated artists made this night one to be enjoyed by music lovers. Mayor Bidwell, of the city of Sacramento, was master of ceremonies. Tuesday night there were "living pictures," Wednesday night the "musical entertainers," Thursday night was "Farmers' Night," and Friday night the "Coonville Jubilee Singers." After the program refreshments were served. A "country store" furnished amusement, and was the means of raising some needed funds.

Friday evening, April 23, Sister Gertrude Bidwell gave a musical concert in the auditorium. She was able to secure several of the city's talented musicians, who contributed to the program because of the friendship they have for her. After the program everyone was given an opportunity to express appreciation to the guests and to shake hands with Mrs. James Rolph, jr., wife of the governor of the State. We are glad that we have a lovely church where we can be with our friends.

There is some sickness among the members.

Elder Joseph Bussell, who has charge of the mission in Auburn, reports good attendance and an interested people hungering for the gospel. Brother Bussell is ably assisted by Elder Roy Barmore and Priest Jabez Elam.

Brother and Sister John B. Dawson are the parents of a baby son, born March 25. He has been named John Robert Dawson.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

Recently adjustments have probably had to be made by everyone. Philadelphia has not been passed by unscathed. We feel as if we could sing with true meaning, "Through the furnace, through the heat." The refining process has left its scar—one of victory, we believe. The unrest of the industrial world has climaxed in an acceptance of new ideas and ideals. Our city, chiefly, an industrial one, has been forced to make the adjustment to less inflation of values, and Latter Day Saints have been among the numbers affected. The new era has past its birth and is gradually settling to an established routine.

This Sunday we celebrate Mother's Day, one of the sweetest but saddest services of the year. Some of the daughters will portray in dramatic style what their mothers have meant to them. This play is being coached by Clara S. Thumm. At the evening service a choir of single girls will sing for their mothers "Mother and Home," by C. Harold Lowden, and "Memories," by Gertrude Martin Rohrer.

On Wednesday evening, May 6, a mothers and daughters banquet was held in the basement of the church. The daughters were the hostesses and furnished the entertainment. For closing, a beautiful candle service was used, directed by Katherine Schaefer with her Sunday school class as helpers. Her experience at Graceland with the same service was quite helpful.

Some of our congregation were missing on April 26, and we learned that they had journeyed to Bloomsburg to help celebrate the golden wedding anniversary of Brother and Sister A. D. Angus, sr. A complete immediate family of thirty-five from Philadelphia, Bloomsburg, and Mount Holly was there to celebrate the occasion. The guests were too many for the home, so the basement of the church was used. Brother and Sister John Zimmermann, sr., were among the guests from our city. Brother George Robley, as toastmaster, we were told, carried off that assignment extremely well.

School will soon be closed for the summer vacations, and we are looking forward to seeing and hearing about Graceland from those of our number who are attending there.

Sister Ruth Atkinson has been suffering considerably, and we would ask that her friends remember her and her family in their prayers.

Shenadoah, Iowa

A social time was had by a goodly number of members the latter part of February. The entertainment was on the order of a radio program. J. R. Epperson, pastor, was a typical announcer. Following the program, oyster soup was served. Everyone enjoyed the evening of frolic and fun.

Elders J. F. Garver and Ray Whiting were here March 20. Brother Garver talked in regard to some of the problems that we as a church are confronting. All present, we are sure, went home feeling a deeper responsibility and a stronger determination to help "carry on."

Easter Sunday was a beautiful day. Sacrament service was in charge of J. O. Rennie in the absence of Brother Epperson. A good spirit was present to bless and encourage this little group. A good Easter program was presented in the evening.

April 12 Ray Whiting, district president, was with us and occupied at the eleven o'clock hour. His sermon was inspiring. Plans are being made for special missionary efforts in the near future.

Kansas City Stake

O. B. K. Music Contest

In keeping with its policy to initiate and sponsor interesting church centered activities for young people, the Kansas City Stake O. B. K. Council held its first music contest on Friday and Sunday, May 15 and 17. Over eighty young people participated in the various numbers, and many more were musically stimulated by the event.

Mount Washington O. B. K.'s won first place with 44 points, Malvern Hill second with 19 points, and Quindaro third with 12 points.

In planning for the contest the council asked a well-trained committee to arrange all the details. This committee—Lullia Wight, Mildred Connelly, Otis Swart, George Anway, and Jessie Belle Taylor—and Herbert Merrill, vice president of the council, worked assiduously to prepare for and conduct the contest. They have the appreciation of those who participated and the many who enjoyed the contest.

In each event the contestants had to memorize and perform two numbers, one required and another selected from a well-chosen list of numbers. Each of the numbers except the mixed choruses was rated on a five, three, and one basis. The mixed chorus numbers were rated ten, five, and three. These points were credited to the group whose representatives won them, and the groups with the highest score received the O. B. K. trophy.

This large silver loving cup was held by the Mount Washington Group, winners of the drama contest, and now they will continue to hold it until the conclusion of the volley ball tournament, when the winner of that event will hold it until the next contest.

The events and the winners are listed in their order:

Friday

Soprano solo. Required number, "To the Sun," by Curren. Josephine Van Crinklaw, of Malvern Hill, and Dorthea Mathis, of Mount Washington.

Sunday, May 17

Piano, junior. Required number, Bach's Two-part Invention No. 13, in A minor. Billy Babb, Central.

Piano, senior. Required number, Chopin waltz in C minor. Ruth Ringer, Malvern Hill; Lois Gibson, Mount Washington; Lucille Sandy, Central.

Violin, class B. Required number "Traumeri," Schumann. Ray Gerber, Mount Washington; Robert Butler, Quindaro.

Boys' quartet. Required number, "To a Wild Rose," MacDowell. Mount Washington, Malvern Hill.

Mixed quartet. Required number, "To a Wild Rose," MacDowell. Mount Washington.

The decisions of Mrs. Howard W. Harder, of Independence, and two musicians from Kansas City, who judged the contest, were highly satisfactory. Herbert Merrill, vice president of the O. B. K. Council, presided, and George Anway acted as master of ceremonies.

The object of the contest was expressed thus, "Not to win a prize, nor defeat an opponent, but to place each other on the road to excellence." The spirit of the contest was friendly and helpful.

Note. A few complete copies of the contest rules are available for those who could use them. Write Editors of "Vision."

Denver, Colorado

The past month has been a very busy one for the membership in Denver. The religious education department is working zealously in its various activities, and all members are enjoying a strong spirit of unity and cooperation. The pastor and his counselors have arranged a campaign of visiting among the membership; it is hoped that every member of the branch will be visited during May and June, and the work has started in a very encouraging manner. In order that there may be no confusion, teams of the priesthood and of the women have been assigned certain sections of the city and certain families to visit.

The Young People's Drama Club is working on a play to be given at the State Inter-Church Tournament of Religious Drama, sponsored by the Colorado Council of Religious Education. The play selected is "Granny." William G. Mitchell is directing, and we have great hope that the cast will make a creditable showing.

The morning service for Sunday, May 10, was a Mother's Day program, beginning with the organ interlude, "Mother Machree," by Inez Shrunk. Other numbers were: a reading, "A Tribute to Mother," by E. J. Williams; anthem, "God Bless You, Mother Dear," by the choir; story, "Jerry's Best Gift," by Audrey Bennet; vocal solo, "Mother O' Mine," by Glaude Smith; poem, "Mother," Glen Bruno; duet, "Mother Knows," Ruth Robertson and Ethel Radcliffe; solo, "You're the Best Little Mother," Fred Kemp. These were followed by an address by the pastor.

The Young People's Choral Club, under the direction of Sister Alice Milligan, gave an excellent musical program Sunday evening at the church as its contribution to Denver's annual Music Week. The following numbers were given: organ prelude, Inez Shrunk; processional, "Day Is Dying in the West," followed by prayer. Virginia Jones gave a reading. A mixed quartet, Farr Kemp, Mrs. Johnson, Thelma Gardner, and Fred Kemp, sang "Fire on the Hearth." Audrey Bennet and Clodagh Jones sang "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations." The pastor spoke on "The Ministry of Music." Alice Milligan sang a soprano solo, "Ave Maria." The chorus then sang "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming." A duet, "Mother Dear," by Alice Milligan and Lefa Lutz followed. The mixed quartet sang "Love's Language." The prayer, and organ postlude by Inez Shrunk concluded the program.

The young people held their regular monthly prayer meeting at 8.30 a. m. May 3. They discussed and arranged plans for the summer's work.

An enjoyable party was given by the young people of the branch Saturday evening, May 9, at the home of Burrell and Doris Shupe.

Mildred Fishburn and Howard Sheehy were married April 18 in Kansas City, Kansas, by Elder John F. Sheehy. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Fishburn of this city, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Sheehy, of Independence. Both young people have been students at Graceland College the past year. They will come to Denver at the close of the college year.

Elder Glaude Smith, who has been placed in charge of the Eastern Colorado District, left on May 11 for a visit to some of the branches. He is accompanied by Elder H. E. Winegar.

We are glad to be able to say that Sister Myrtle Smith, who has been so seriously ill, is well on the road to recovery.

Independence

Recently John F. Sheehy, along with his other work in Independence, was asked to take over the church services broadcast over KMBC. Herald readers will be interested to know the following program and time have been arranged. Sunday at 8 a. m., Bible study, U. W. Greene. 11 to 11.30 Stone Church Choir. 4.30 to 5 vesper service, U. W. Greene, speaker. Orval Thompson in charge of the musical program. The first Sunday in every month from 10 to 11 p. m. the Stone Church Choir, under the direction of Paul Craig, furnishes the music, Bishop A. B. Phillips, the speaker. The second Sunday of every month the Kansas City Central Choir, under the direction of George Anway, furnishes the music, and a special speaker is appointed. The third Sunday night of every month the Ladies' Chorus of Independence consisting of Ina Hattey, Mrs. E. J. Gleazer, Mrs. Opal Hansen, Mrs. Ola Davidson, Mrs. E. Y. Hunker, Mrs. J. D. Gault, Mrs. Paul N. Craig, Mrs. May Helm, Mrs. Madge Siegfried, Mrs. Hazel Moler, Mrs. Frank Goode, Elizabeth Okerlind, Mrs. Lula Tyrell, Mrs. Madge Scott, Mrs. Ruth Holman, and Mary Okerlind, accompanist, under the direction of Jeanette Craig, furnishes the music, Bishop A. B. Phillips, speaker. The fourth Sunday of every month the Wahdemna Choral Club, composed of fifty young people of Independence, under the direction of Paul Craig, furnishes the music, Bishop A. B. Phillips, the speaker. Every month when we have a fifth Sunday, A. B. Phillips will be the speaker, and a special program will be provided. This arrangement permits our radio audience to become acquainted on the regular nights with the personnel of the various organizations.

Brother Sheehy would appreciate any constructive criticism that would help to improve our radio program. He would also appreciate a line occasionally from the Herald readers who listen in on these programs, that he may pass them on to those in charge of the programs. The time is the Central Standard time.

The Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences, a fully-accredited, thirty-six week night high school, emerges from a school term much affected by the economic depression, to present this month a class of ten graduates: Dean Adams, Thomas Bell, Lewis Burgess, Beryl Crawford, J. W. Frazier, Mark Gerber, Homer Kelley, Mrs. Rose Montgomery, Thelma Pinson, and Vernon Sackman.

As a gift to the school, the class has presented a complete set of beautifully illustrated physiology charts. One member of the class also painted a portrait of the principal, M. A. Etzenhouser, who has given a number of years of faithful and efficient service to the institute, and this gift is now to be seen on the wall in the office.

The 1931 Institute class, with the graduating class of the Independence Sanitarium, heard its baccalaureate address Sunday morning at the Stone Church, and tonight will have its commencement exercises at the Institute building, Elder Leonard J. Lea, the speaker.

The Independence Sanitarium board of directors and the class of 1931 of the Sanitarium School of Nursing announce the annual commencement exercises for eight o'clock Tuesday evening, May 26, at the Stone Church. A reception at the nurses' home will follow the commencement program. The roll of the graduating class is: Alma J. Rowden, Mabel Andrew, Essie Clements Pinchback, Josephine Ellen Faulk, Lila B. Anderson, Alberta M. Johnson, Winifred Ellen Jones, Vida C. Juergens, Margaret Eloise Elliott, Mildred Virginia Buchanan, Pearl Katheryne Bixby, and Helen Neil Winship.

The first year student nurses at the Sanitarium School of Nursing have had a thorough and interesting course in dietetics this year. The course has been under the direct supervision of Miss Margaret Chiles, a member of the William Chrisman High School faculty. Classes were held at the high school twice each week for a period of twelve weeks. The girls were taught simple cookery and diet in disease. At the end of the course the girls gave a three-course luncheon, to which several guests were invited. A color scheme of yellow and black was carried out.

Stone Church

"In the present social and economic organization of the world, it is not easy for a group of people, no matter how qualified or how consecrated, to demonstrate Christ's commission: 'So send I you'—to serve!" asserted Apostle E. J. Gleazer as the thought underlying his baccalaureate address for the graduating classes of the high school department of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences and the Independence Sanitarium. "So Send I You" was the theme, and also the text of the discourse.

"If ever there was a time that we can make an effective demonstration of our ministry of service," he continued, "it is today. More and more we must think of our work, whatever it be, as a ministry." And for our ministry we must be prepared not only in intellect and ambition but in spirit; we must aspire to give in spite of all hindrances. For service not rendered is twice cursed: it curses him who failed to render it, and it curses him to whom it might have been rendered.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Paul N. Craig, sang "The Heavens Are Declaring," and "God Is My Refuge," and Mrs. John Isaacks, soprano, sang "Ave Maria." George Miller played a piano solo, and Miss Lorena Kueffer was the morning organist.

Elder G. G. Lewis presided over the service, assisted by Elder J. E. Kelsey. In a reserve section in the central part of the auditorium were seated the graduating classes, officers of the Independence Sanitarium, and the faculty of the Independence Institute of Arts and Sciences.

"World Temperance" was the theme of the junior young people in their eleven o'clock service downstairs, and Elder J. A. Gardner spoke to them. Emphasis was given the thought of the last line of the poem-prayer read by the pastor: "God make me worthy of my friends," and the first part of Psalm 1, which was used as a responsive reading: "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly," relating the two to the great need for clean, cooperative Christian lives. Piano numbers were played by Kathlyn Cato, Emma Jeanne Etzenhouser, and Willa Mae Redfield. Priest Oral Andes assisted the pastor in the stand.

Next Sunday will be Scout Sunday. In charge of the pastor, Boy Scout and Girl Scout ceremonials will play "Taps" to the season's program of eleven o'clock young people's meetings. These services will be resumed in September.

The juniors at the Campus in their Sunday morning eleven o'clock service enjoyed a program of music, scripture reading, and prayer presented by the boys of Mrs. A. B. Phillips's class. Then Pastor Will Bolinger gave a sermon on the officers of the church and their work. Elder R. V. Hopkins will be the Campus speaker next Sunday.

Elder A. B. Phillips was the evening speaker at the Stone Church Sunday. Music consisted of congregational singing, and an organ solo by Mrs. Dan Lewis. Elder G. G. Lewis, in the stand, was assisted by Brother Leon Snow.

There are now in this district four nationally registered and numbered Girl Scout troops: Troop 14, captained by Miss Hazel Clow; Troop 46, by Mrs. Don Cox; Troop 33, by Miss May Snead; Troop 37, by Mrs. Jack Gardner. A Scout investiture ceremony at the church at 4 p. m. Tuesday, in charge of Kansas City officers, made thirty-five candidates, members of three troops, Tenderfoot Scouts. Other investitures will be made at troop meetings this week and next, as fast as the girls qualify.

The Auditorium young people, officially known in the church school as the senior young people, enjoyed a party in the dining hall last Tuesday night, under the leadership of their superintendent, Mrs. Jack Gardner. About seventy pupils and teachers played, talked, and had a fine time together.

"The Modern English Theater" was the study of the White Masque Players at its monthly meeting May 11, and Elder F. Henry Edwards was the principal speaker. Mrs. Leonard J. Lea read "The Sun," a one-act play by Galsworthy, and Mrs. M. H. Siegfried reviewed two more of Galsworthy's plays, "The Mob" and "A Bit of Love."

Walnut Park

The speaker Sunday morning, Bishop A. Carmichael, taught the seriousness of our using wrongfully that which God has put into our hands. He has asked that a certain portion be returned to Him and has said that these things "must needs be done in Mine own way." The Bishop urged again for a full and intelligent compliance with the law.

In the evening Elder T. A. Beck spoke in a similar vein, stressing the offerings from field and garden. He has charge of arrangements for the Harvest Home Festival for 1931. Knowing personally of distressed conditions relieved in many homes by these gifts to the festival, he encouraged another concerted effort, quoting the Savior, who said: "Inasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye do it unto me."

One thought from Elder T. C. Kelley's talk on the Lord's prayer at the opening of the morning prayer meeting is this: We can not consistently pray, "Suffer us not to be led into temptation," unless we keep ourselves as far from temptation as possible. "One can not handle coals and not be burned." Added warning was strikingly given by another speaker, giving personal experience. With the abundance of valuable teaching given in our church services along many lines, it seems impossible for those who attend church to go astray ignorantly.

At the morning meeting prayers were asked for David Harris, aged fifteen, who is in great need of divine help, and who received administration at that time.

The little daughter of Brother and Sister Floyd Smith was presented for blessing on May 10. S. C. Smith and W. T. Gard officiated, and the babe was given the name Marjorie Nadine.

Modesto, California

Second and G Streets

May 8.—The Saints in Modesto are generally in good health, and in this stress of times most of them have work.

A good Easter play was presented on Easter, "Pilgrims of the Way." The cast performed at its best, and the stage represented a pretty garden. Irma Butterfield directed the play, and a hidden chorus sang.

G. P. Levitt, district president, has just conducted a week of services in Modesto. He spoke to good-sized congregations, encouraging the Saints and instructing the nonmembers present. On Thursday evening during the services the women gave a meat pie dinner, which was much enjoyed.

The women are working on linens for the Sanitarium and taking up some study. One reads, and then there is discussion which proves highly instructive. The group is working on housekeeping and home-making projects—making of soups, vegetable cooking, canning, dress and hat making. The project leader goes to the Farm Home Department, gets the work, and brings it to the group.

There are a number of classes in the evening worship hour, 6.45, Sunday, varying in age from children to adult. Some of the subjects studied are teacher training, stewardship, and public speaking.

The prayer meetings and preaching services are well attended, and a good degree of the Spirit's influence is felt by the worshippers. The Saints are trying to do their part in the work of latter days.

Graceland Chats

Lambda Delta Sigma Elects Officers

Last Thursday evening the L. D. S. Society held its last regular session. Miss Florence Thompson and Mr. Noble Kelly presented an analysis of literary societies at Graceland. The following officers were elected: President, B. A. May; vice-president, James W. Evans; secretary, Vivian Castings; marshal, Roy A. Chevillie; librarian-historian, Lyda Elefson.

Vestæ Filiae Visit Iowa State College

The members of the Vestæ Filiae Club left Thursday morning, May 7, for Ames, where they attended the annual Veishea of the Iowa State College. This being the first year of the Vestæ Filiae as a professional club of Graceland, the girls planned this trip to Ames with the hope that in the future it might be an annual event in the club's program.

Thursday afternoon was spent in visiting some of the buildings and in going over the campus in general, while Friday's main attraction was, of course, the home economics open house. Here the girls were especially interested in the art and food exhibits, household equipment departments, and style show, while the rat experimental laboratory and textiles and clothing departments had their places in the day's program. Saturday was spent in visiting the home management house, the model home, and nursery and kindergarten.

Among other activities in which the girls were interested were the Veishea take-off, the May fete and honors program, the industrial arts exhibit, military circus, veterinary and engineers's open house, and a trip through the dairy building and Mary B. Welch Dormitory.

The home economics girls very much enjoyed this trip to Ames and hope that the future Vestæ Filiae members will have as successful and enjoyable a visit as those who made the trip this year.

ALETA JENSEN.

Missionaries Back in Old Field

Elder A. M. Chase, assigned to work as missionary and local minister in Utah District by the appointive authorities of the general church, has arrived in Salt Lake City, and writes back to headquarters this cheering note:

"We are busy here, back in the old field. Have been hunting up old friends and acquaintances in the church. Our experiences so far have been very pleasant. We had an excellent Sunday, May 10, with good attendance, including strangers and nonmembers, and a fine spirit characterized all our services."

Brother and Sister Chase's new address is 336 South Fourth East, Salt Lake City. They will be glad to hear from their friends.

Dunlap, Iowa

Each Sunday morning at ten o'clock finds the Saints of this mission gathered for church school session, which is begun by a worship period lasting fifteen minutes. Class work then occupies the attention of all ages, and at eleven o'clock preaching service, also junior church for the children. Sunday evening a class studies the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and is followed by the evening sermon.

On Thursday evening of each week there occur in their order recreational activities, class period, and prayer meeting. In the last service all ages unite, and it is encouraging to listen to the testimonies and frequently the prayers of the children.

A number of cases of illness have been noted in our group during the past months, but the heavenly Father has wonderfully blessed his suffering children. This has been especially true when the Saints fasted and united in prayer. We pray that at all times we will bear in mind the source of our blessings, and strive to render service of appreciation.

A promising young man of this group, C. Cecil Talcott, was ordained a priest at the recent institute at Dow City.

Since our last report to the Herald, several of the Woodbine priesthood have occupied this pulpit, to the edification of all. Also the district missionaries, E. Y. Hunker and Ellis Rathbun, have given the Saints much encouragement.

Saints living on Prince Edward Island, especially members of the priesthood, are asked to get in touch with Mrs. Smith McFarland, of DeSable. She is alone and is eager to find there members of the faith.

Conference Minutes

EASTERN OKLAHOMA.—District conference convened at Haileyville, Oklahoma, February 21 at 10.30 a. m., the opening song being "Redeemer of Israel," prayer by C. G. Smallwood. C. G. Smallwood was chosen to preside over the conference. In the absence of the district clerk, J. J. Jackson, Ora Dollins was chosen secretary pro tem. Minutes of the previous conference, held at Fanshawe, February, 1930, were read and approved. Reports were read and approved from the following branches: Winthrop, Arkansas; Fanshawe, Wilburton, and Haileyville, Oklahoma. Report of J. J. Jackson, pastor of Fanshawe, was read. The financial report of the district secretary-treasurer showed a balance of $2.87. Brother Smallwood, as district president and bishop's agent, reported the amount of tithing and offerings for 1930 as $860.73. Elder H. R. Harder reported orally concerning his work and the condition of Wilburton Branch; W. P. Hubble, presiding priest in Haileyville Branch, reported. Election of officers for the district, to preside during the coming year, was as follows: District President, C. G. Smallwood; clerk, Brother Jewel Jackson. The district president was elected district supervisor of Sunday school and director of music. The meeting then adjourned until 2 p. m. In the afternoon motion carried that the next conference be held at Wilburton, the time to be set by the district president. A talk about means of arousing interest in the district conferences was made by Sister C. G. Smallwood, and talks were given by Brothers Harder and Smallwood in regard to the work of local priesthood and the new and improved methods of the church program. Action was taken joining this district with the reunions of the other two districts of the State, in case one is to be held. The Saints adjourned the business meeting subject to the call of the president. The Saturday evening sermon was by Elder Smallwood, and at the close of the sermon Brother Smallwood was presented a shower of gifts as a birthday surprise in appreciation of his services in the branch and district. The Sunday school opened on Sunday at 10 o'clock, in charge of local officers. Brother Smallwood preached at 11, assisted by Brother Harder. After two days of rain, the sun came out at noon, making it possible for the members to enjoy a basket dinner and social gathering on the lawn. In the afternoon a spiritual prayer meeting was in charge of Brothers Harder and Smallwood. Sister John Davis, of Poteau, was administered to. Following a song service in the evening Brother Smallwood again preached. The evening's theme was "Correct Thinking as Related to Right Living." This service concluded a profitable conference and week's meetings conducted by Brother Smallwood. On account of financial depression in this region attendance was small.

Our Departed Ones

REESE.—William D. Reese, son of David and Sara Morgan Reese, was born April 12, 1854, at Blackwood, Monmouthshire, England, of Welsh parentage. He became a member of the church when twelve years of age and was a faithful Saint. Died at his home in Clinton, Indiana, March 2, 1931, leaving to mourn his wife, two sons, and six daughters.

REED.—Sydney Sebastin Reed, son of John Reed and Eliza J. P. Reed, was born July 7, 1869, near Lake Maxinkuckee, Marshall County, Indiana. Later the family moved to Stark County, where they resided for some time and from thence to Pulaski County, where he grew to manhood. On May 20, 1893, he was united in marriage to Miss Myrtle Swaisgood, of Burr Oak, Indiana. To this union were born eight children, three sons and five daughters, all of whom are living except one son, Rex, who died in infancy. Mr. Reed was engaged in the mercantile business for the past thirty-nine years, also acting as a traveling salesman for a Chicago grocery firm for a term of thirty years. In addition to this, he served as postmaster at Burr Oak and Hibbard, Indiana, for nearly the same length of time. In 1929 his health failed, and he was unable to continue his activities in business. He departed this life May 6, 1931. When a young man he united with the church and was ordained a priest January 23, 1917. He faithfully adhered to the restored gospel message during the remaining years of his life and endeavored to serve his Master by serving his fellow men. He was a charter member of the Culver Masonic Lodge, also a charter member of the Burr Oak Modern Woodmen Lodge. He was a kind husband and father and a generous neighbor. He leaves to mourn, his widow, two sons, Glenn and Robert; five daughters: Mrs. Hazel Thornberg, Mrs. Erma Kepler, Mrs. Mildred Burns, Sarah and Evelyn Reed; seven grandchildren; one sister, Alice M. Wise, of Phenix, Arizona, also a host of friends and neighbors. The funeral service was held on the afternoon of Friday, May 8, at the church at Hibbard, Indiana, Elder O. J. Hawn being in charge, assisted by Elder William Osler.

WILEY.—Franklin Wiley was born in Saint Louis, Missouri, November 21, 1857. He was the eldest of the four children, all sons, of Margaret Divine and George Wiley. His father died while he was still a young boy. He was baptized June 6, 1871, by John Clark; ordained a teacher July 3, 1881, by William Anderson, and a priest March 2, 1913, by George Peglar. On May 21, 1893, he married Frances Novis, and to them were born six children, all of whom he brought up in the church, namely, Joseph, Margaret, George, John, Frances, and Florence. He was steadfast and active in his church service in Saint Louis for over fifty years. He was prompt and regular in attendance at all meetings of the church. In 1924 he removed to Independence, Missouri. He died May 6, 1931, leaving his widow, six children, three grandchildren, two brothers, and two nieces to mourn.

Young America

J. H. Yeager, now engaged in missionary work in Tahiti, writes from his headquarters at Papeete, that he was looking over some old copies of the "Literary Digest," and found an article from which he took the following extract. Although it was written some time ago—June 15, 1929—it is still good.

Up-and-Coming Young America. Nine years ago the average young American was "irredeemably ugly, slack in body, fleshy, prematurely middle-aged, and most unsightly, but today the casual observer may see in the street any number of "trim-looking men, rather handsome, square in form, and obviously physically fit." Thus said St. John Ervine, the distinguished British critic in The Observer (London). Mr. Ervine was recently guest dramatic critic on the New York World, and thus had opportunity to make the comparison with what he observed on the earlier visit to this country. Here is a suggestive appraisal:

"An obvious conclusion to draw from this increase in the number of handsome and fit young American men is that the European legends of excessive drinking by the youth of America must either be lies or gross exaggerations. I can speak with some impartiality on this subject, because I have not touched a drop of drink in the United States, nor shall I touch any until I am beyond the three-mile limit on my journey home. I feel that it is my business, as an alien in America, to obey the law, even if I disagree with it. At all events, I am very certain, when I look at the well-set-up young men and good-looking girls that I see everywhere about me in this city, that there must be thousands of people who either do not take drink, or take it very rarely. Clear eyes and steady hands are not acquired in speak-easies, which are dismal holes at the best. I have been in two or three. . . . There was, I do not doubt, an outbreak of heavy drinking among the young in America, and perhaps in certain quarters it still continues, as a piece of bravado, but I am certain that the 'soakers' are dwindling in numbers, and that the rising young take no more interest in fermented liquors than the average healthy-minded boy and girl in England do. In any event, whatever the truth on that subject may be, the fact remains that I see everywhere in New York a handsomer and fitter type of young man than I saw nine years ago."—Literary Digest, June 15, 1929, p. 27.

Letters to the Editor

"I like a man who can say something good in a few words. But let him stick to his subject, and harm no other man."—The Sage of Green Island.

Here are a few samples of the letters of appreciation received by the editors about the appearance of the serial, "The Story of My Life," by Arthur Leverton. We are happy to hear these requests from our readers. Now all we need is a supply of good, well-written biographical material.—THE EDITORS.

Dear Herald Editors:

Realizing that the most effective method editors have of learning what their readers desire is to hear direct from them, I decided to write.

I wish to say that I have been a reader of the Saints' Herald many years and enjoy all that it contains; but whenever there is a biography running it is always the first thing I read. I have enjoyed that of Brother Leverton and hope that you may find others to follow soon. Another feature I am enjoying just now is "First Things First."

Yours for more such reading,

A. E. ZIEGENHORN.

FISHER, ARKANSAS.

Having been members of the church but a few years, our closest branch being fifty miles away, and small at that, we seldom get to visit with old-time members or elders. So, please, give us more biographies. We need them.

Sincerely yours,

MR. AND MRS. HARRY DAVIS.

EADS, COLORADO.

Dear Editors:

For some time I have felt like writing and expressing my appreciation and the pleasure I get from reading the church papers, the Herald and Ensign; and as you have asked your readers how they liked Brother Arthur Leverton's biography I will say that I have never enjoyed any article in the Herald more. I also passed them on to a non-member neighbor of mine, who enjoyed them very much. I enjoyed his many spiritual experiences. . . . I think we gain faith and strength by exchanging experiences.

THE HONEYMOON COTTAGE

PATCHWORK has nothing to do with cross-patches, but as Mrs. Wiggs used to say, it is "keepin' the peace and doin' away with scraps." You'll love to do something pieced for the treasure chest, maybe several quilts that will be cherished for a generation or maybe just a precious "patchedy" pillow to start with.

The Honeymoon Cottage has a quaint old-fashioned charm that will appeal to all lovers of a squat, broad-eaved, little home with wide, hospitable doorway and fireplace. It is delightfully made in two color combinations using a harmonizing print for the lawn. The materials used are white muslin, the colored materials are a fine grade of fade proof gingham. The print is of very good quality also. A block is simple to piece and when finished, measures about 12 by 15 inches. Twenty of the blocks set together with four-inch strips and six-inch border, make a quilt about 84 by 90 inches.

One block makes a clever pillow or stool top. A stool can be made at home by smoothly padding a board or shallow box and using wooden door stops, brass hooks, or large knobs, for legs. The edge finish for such a stool is a headed ruffle of green or any other color used in the pieced top.

BEAUTIFUL PANSY APPLIQUE AND QUILTED QUILT

NUMBER 660 is an applique pattern using that gentle flower favorite, the pansy, conventionalized somewhat to form a center border which is really just twelve blocks, each 12 inches square. This is surely reducing the number of blocks in a quilt to a minimum, yet their close position on the quilt gives the effect of generous, even prodigal profusion. A cutting pattern with instructions and dimensions may be ordered as number 660.

This quilt is developed in the triad scheme—two tones of orchid, two of orange, and a soft green which also makes the center square, an outer band and binding with the remainder of white. The size of the finished quilt is 72 by 84 inches. Material assortment used in the original was 4½ yards of white, 2½ yards of green, and 1-3 yard each of the four other colors. We can supply this as number 660A in a fine weave, fast-color percale, or the colors and white of the original in the softest of sheer satine as number 660B.

The quilting patterns used in making up this beautiful quilt come separately. The center feather circle is 18 inches across and is in wax transfer form. This is number 252. The other quilting patterns are all perforated on durable paper and may be used over and over again.

GIVING

He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work.—2 Corinthians 9: 6-8.

For Those Who Sincerely Believe

NUMBER TWO.—THE OBLIGATION OF OUR HERITAGE

In the pages of the Herald for May 20 expression was given to a searching question and what appears to us to be a fundamental conclusion. That question, emerging from the need of the present hour in the church and the world, is one that every Saint must ask himself. It is, "Do I sincerely believe in the program of God and his church as expressed in the Restoration movement?"

The fundamental conclusion was stated in the following words: "For that man or woman who sincerely believes that this is the church of God, the present day is literally filled with challenges to a quality of individual conduct and social living that is consistent with that expressed belief."

The Nature of Our Heritage

Consider our physical heritage: a heritage which we share in common with all mankind. Science has transformed the material world into what would have been regarded by the ancients as a fairyland of magic and necromancy. It has placed in our hands, almost for the asking, practically every conceivable kind of mechanical device to add to our comfort, convenience, and pleasure, to enhance our control of the forces of nature, to satisfy our whim or make possible the realization of almost any objective we may have, whether worthy or not. This is our heritage, and yet, replete as it is with opportunities, the vastly increased power it gives to man brings him face to face with a grave danger—the danger of a moral breakdown.

Consider our social heritage: a heritage of personal and group privileges purchased at a tremendous cost; a heritage of customs, traditions, institutions; a heritage which includes political and religious liberty, publicly controlled education, cities whose population is counted in millions, industrial enterprises in which to speak of millions of dollars is commonplace. This is our heritage, and yet it brings us face to face with the responsibility for meeting and conquering the oldest of human weaknesses and frailties, selfishness and individualism, which modern circumstances have given new power and added danger.

Added to this inherited wealth and opportunity of the material world, there is the spiritual wealth of a religious heritage, which provides a check and balance for the other forces of life. Our religion is instituted and continued with the purpose of insuring that man's exaltation of soul shall equal and keep under control his development of intellect and physical power. "In the beginning God," is the first phrase of a story that records God's work with men and man's endeavor to cooperate with God to the end that the aims of creation may be consummated. The story includes the supreme revelation of God's nature and purposes in the person of Christ, a revelation which discloses to man the possibilities and the methods of his partaking of the divine nature.

The Challenge of Our Heritage

"Those who sincerely believe" find in our rich heritage today both opportunities and responsibilities, both unlimited wealth and grave danger, gigantic tasks and the tools with which to work at those tasks. Such a heritage challenges not only our intelligence but our vision, faith, and devotion to the cause of Christ as well. And because of what our own church claims to believe, we find ourselves under the necessity of responding to this challenge as no other body of people do in the world today.

We rejoice in material progress; but we do not wish to see materialism rule in the lives of men, but rather subdued to the social teachings of the Master of men. We rejoice in individual achievement; but we do not wish to see individualism and consequent blind selfishness conquer all of the nobler and more generous impulses that are capable of making human life happy and beautiful. We rejoice in the opportunities of the religious life, and it is a part of our faith to hope and believe that the day may come when all the world may be brought to an enlightened and tolerant but a thoroughly consecrated devotion to the ways and means of life which the gospel of Christ teaches.

The Obligation of Our Heritage

Every good gift of life carries with it an obligation. A good home carries the obligation of maintenance. A good education carries with it the obligation of use and service. A good body carries with it the obligation of preserving health. And all our vast resources of material wealth carry with them the obligation of so managing them that they may produce in equitable measure for all humanity the privilege of access to welfare, comfort, and happiness.

Our religious heritage likewise carries its obligations. An awakened consciousness of moral responsibility impels us to try to teach others the way of life that has brought happiness to us. The deep and abiding comfort of the spiritual life urges us to bring others to a realization of what it means. The restored gospel can not be hoarded. It must be shared. If not shared with humanity, its significant element is lost, and we have deceived ourselves into thinking we possess something that we have not.

Our heritage as a church is a part of our total heritage, received with the rest of humanity. We have much in common with others, but something else besides. The heritage of the gospel has something to say about the rest of our heritage; and that something may be summed up in one word—Stewardship. It involves a changed attitude toward life; a regeneration of the purposes and motivations of human conduct. It is the great answer of the gospel of Christ to the world's present dilemma.

Blue Pencil Notes

If only the biggest and wisest and best
Sat down in our councils or ate with the blest,
I ask you, consider this problem a bit:
Dear brother of mine, where would you and I sit?

Some people borrow so much trouble that the only way to pay it back is to make some.

Saint Peter: "Name, please?"

New Arrival at the Gate: "Ah—er—Jones, but you will find my religion in my wife's name."

Several people have said to me, "What has become of Deacon Goodentart? Why not give us some more of his funny sayings?" Well—as a matter of fact, these are sober days. I had not felt particularly inclined to encourage Deacon Goodentart's nonsense. Still, I am reminded that some months ago when I lay in the hospital very ill, following a major operation, I had a vivid dream in which I saw a blue pencil lying on my desk at home surrounded by a circle of the brightest sunshine imaginable; and a voice said, "The blue pencil is waiting for you." Perhaps it is the province of the Blue Pencil to be steeped in sunshine—and possibly even Deacon Goodentart may help.

"What I can never understand," complained Deacon Goodentart, "what I can never understand is how the Lord made man in his own image, and then immediately made woman so much better looking."

DID YOU KEEP YOUR HEAD?

When the late President Joseph Smith was suffering his last illness, even up until the day of his death he retained a keen interest in world events. During those days occurred the destruction by fire of the Edison plant and laboratories. President Smith listened attentively to the reading of the newspaper account and the doleful comments of those about his bed, but presently he interrupted them with the question, "Did Edison keep his head?" When assured that Edison's head had been salvaged, he smiled and said, "It is all right, then. If Edison kept his head, he can get another plant."

It was not the material things that Edison had accumulated as an evidence of his genius that counted. It was the man himself. As a church we may learn a little lesson from that story. Under trying conditions, do you keep your head? No matter what troubles may come to the church or what losses in a monetary or material way, if the men and women of the church keep their heads and keep them level, and keep their hearts right, we shall always be able to rebuild and recover. These are times in the world and in the church when it seems eminently necessary that the men and women of the church shall keep their heads. It is a time to think a great deal and not talk too much. It is a time when wild rumors should not be received and repeated until they have been verified. Ordinarily, wild rumors are never verified. (It is a fact that rumor usually has some foundation in truth; but after it has passed through two or three mouths it becomes so distorted that it is almost as bad as an out and out falsehood.) These are times when extreme and exaggerated statements should not be made privately or from the pulpit. They are times when extreme positions should not be taken. These are times rather for careful thought and earnest prayer and repentance of past mistakes, coupled with a resolute determination to profit by those mistakes and go forward. No matter what tribulations sweep over us, if we keep our heads we shall emerge safely and, like Edison, go forward to build better and more wisely. The church today needs level-headed men who keep their heads.

Preparing for Sacrifice Week

The church has not escaped the very great difficulties which these trying times have imposed upon all Christian churches and institutions that depend upon benevolence and the offerings of the people. It has suffered, particularly in a financial way. This in turn has brought acute suffering upon those who have had to depend upon the financial resources of the church: the missionaries, their wives and families, and the officers. Not one who has been dependent upon the church but has felt the severity of the situation. Unwillingly, the church has been forced to release numbers of its workers, some of them with records of many years of faithful service. There was no other way to be chosen: funds were simply not in the treasury to take care of them.

We approach the coming sacrifice week more deeply serious and more keenly conscious of the critical state of affairs than ever before. We approach it solemnly, realizing that we are facing a test, whether the people of the church will rally to its support at this trying time. We approach it prayerfully, in hope that He who rules the universe will be concerned in the welfare of the church. But we approach it with faith, knowing that in all past crises we have been led safely through to better times, and we have faith that we shall be led through to safety this time.

Preparation

Everything possible should be done in the branches to insure that the need of the church will be brought to the attention of the people. Suggestions as to activities will appear in the church papers. A special oration to be memorized and delivered by some young person will appear in the June issue of Vision. Next week's Herald will contain an outline of suggestions prepared by Bishop A. B. Phillips for speakers who would like some help as to what to say on this occasion. Other helps and suggestions will appear in succeeding issues of the Herald, and church officers are requested to watch its columns.

The success of the effort during sacrifice week will depend upon the active leadership of the priesthood, and the loyalty of the membership. All must work together for the good of the church. This time will test us, as to whether our faith is the kind that leads to works or not.

L. L.

New Service in "Vision"

The attention of our readers, church workers and officers especially, is again called to the fact that Vision will carry the program material for church work and services.

Our readers are reminded, too, that the special offer for new subscribers is open only until July 1. This offer permits new subscribers to receive their first year's subscription for $1.35, a distinct saving on the usual price of $1.75. You are urged to get your subscription in before the time expires.

Many of our readers have objected to the use of Herald space for these program materials, which are of interest only to the workers' groups; and the workers themselves have found it less convenient to use and preserve the material. The monthly publication has been found, after the recent experiment, to be best in all respects for church program materials.

This change gives to Vision an enlarged field of usefulness, and should make it invaluable to larger numbers of readers.

A Special Reading for Sacrifice Week

IN JUNE ISSUE OF "VISION"

A special oration, or reading, entitled "It Shall Not Fail," by Inez S. Davis, appears in the June number of Vision. It is appropriate to be memorized, probably by some able young person in the branch, and delivered at the first of the special services of Sacrifice Week. Church officials strongly recommend that it be used in each branch of the church. In this week occurs the eighty-seventh anniversary of the martyrdom of the founders of the church, and the subject of the oration is related to this event and its meaning to the church today.

The Kingdom of Heaven Is at Hand

By Evan A. Fry

Repent ye, repent ye, for the kingdom of God is at hand. O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance, And think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham for our father; for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees; therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire.—From Matthew, chapter 3.

Human Conservatism

It is an age-old axiom that human nature never changes and that it is the same the world over. Man has always been slow to accept any radical changes, and has always been more than hasty in condemning and annihilating any man rash enough to point out errors and to cry long and loud for reform. Christ himself was killed not by a crowd of villains who crucified him out of sheer malice and love of evil, but by a group of the most religious men of the day—the high priests of the Jewish people. To these devout and really sincere, though mistaken men, Jesus was a dangerous impostor; he had come to upset all the established schemes of religion and of the social order—all the established customs and age-old venerated beliefs were in danger of being swept away before the teachings of this strange new man who claimed to be the Son of God. They killed him as you and I would kill any animal caught preying on the hen roost or the stock pen of a farm, and regarded his passing as good riddance of some bad and very troublesome rubbish.

Are We Really Christian?

If Jesus had lived today, I wonder whether all of us so-called Christians might not have treated him in about the same way that our Jewish cousins treated him two thousand years ago. Two thousand years after the completion of that life which was to affect the world so profoundly, the story of that life, and the name of him who lived it are known far and wide in the world, and millions number themselves as the followers of the lowly Nazarene. Yet where in the world today can you go to point out a people who are really making even a fifty per cent effort to put the teachings of Jesus to a practical demonstration which will convince a supposedly believing but inherently skeptical world that Jesus knew what he was talking about? Any people who should dare to make such an attempt would soon bring a storm of persecution about their ears such as has always attended the efforts of people in the past to live in perfect accord with the example and precepts of Christ. Such a people would be so different from the people about them that the populace would rise up in sheer self-defense, as did the priests of old against Jesus, and they could scarcely halt with safety anywhere this side of utter extinction.

Preaching and Practice

Let us surmise a few illustrations: Christ taught that if a man smite you on one cheek, you should turn the other—the doctrine of nonresistance to evil. Preach that to some of the militarists who clamor long and loud for oversize armies and navies, and see how quickly you are branded as a pacifist, and subjected to scorn or ridicule; or, if it be war time, to imprisonment, and public contempt and ostracism. Christ preached to the rich young man that he should sell all of his worldly goods, give the proceeds to the poor, and follow him. Mark you that this young man was perfectly good and moral; he had kept all the commandments from his youth up, but he lacked one thing—the consecration of his wealth to higher and more unselfish purposes, and the lack of that thing kept him out of the kingdom of God. Preach that with pointed personal application to some of the millionaires who ostensibly are following the Christ today, and see how quickly the preacher is fired from his pulpit which is supported by those same rich men. Christ taught that we should take no anxious thought for the morrow, yet every Christian in the country in some degree or other is trying to heap unto himself a little pile of riches for a rainy day. I'm doing it myself and, probably, so are you. Christ preached against di-voice, except for one just cause; but we modern Christians can get a divorce if our partner trumps an ace in a game of bridge, and no public idol is completely enthroned until he or she has at least three or four unsuccessful marriages to his credit. Christ taught the golden rule, but no one pays much attention to it any more except to print it on calendars; and if you believe that anyone is really in sympathy with it, just try preaching it pointedly and personally rather than with a comfortably scattered and general application, and see how quickly you are mobbed as a radical or a red or a communist, or something equally vague and odious.

Who Are the Children of God?

In spite of centuries of teaching and preaching, and in spite of the almost universal spread of the name of Jesus, the world is almost as far from a practical application of his teachings as it was when he hung on the cross of Calvary. If he could return to earth today, he could with perfect propriety and appropriateness repeat his lamentation over Jerusalem, and enlarge it to include the whole world—"How oft would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not." Don't be too sure that just because you belong to some church you are already safely gathered under his wings. The Pharisees of Christ's day could have sworn they were perfectly all right; they belonged to the church and kept all the commandments; and besides, they belonged to the chosen seed of Abraham. But John warned them that every tree that brought not forth good fruit was to be hewn down and cast into the fire. It didn't matter whether that tree was growing inside the fence or outside—it was judged solely by its fruits.

Two thousand years ago, John told his congregations that the kingdom of God was at hand. The kingdom of God is still at hand—that is, just within the reach of every one of us if we will only stretch forth that hand with a little exertion, and grasp the kingdom which is within such easy reach. But how many of us are content to let lethargy or some more serious sin of commission stand between us and the sure and satisfying personal possession of that kingdom! How many of us still fail to heed the Christ as he calls us to leave the world completely behind us and enter into that more perfect kingdom! His kingdom might have come on earth many years ago if he had been able to find enough people to establish and maintain that kingdom. God grant that soon we shall be willing and able to say with our hearts and with our deeds, as well as with our lips, "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

A Mother's Day Sermon

By F. Henry Edwards

I am glad that Jesus had an earthly mother, for this fact gives him a background of human affection and interest, of understanding and suffering. More than anything else it makes him one with us.

Jesus was not an orphan; nor was he an only child. Joseph, his foster father, was evidently dear to him, and we get intimate pictures of family life with his brothers and sisters in the parables of the later years. But dearest of all was his mother, who treasured in her heart her hopes and fears of his coming greatness and who at the end did what all noble mothers do—stood by while he suffered and suffered with him.

John says: "His mother stood by the cross of Jesus." The apostle might have added, "and it became her cross." I think that any glimpse which she might have had of the infinite possibilities of that tragic hour was swallowed up in the agony of her son's suffering. He was suffering because he loved us; and Mary, his mother, has helped us to understand the meaning of his suffering, for she suffered because she loved him.

Love and Identification

In his book called The Wicket Gate, the late G. A. Studdert Kennedy writes as follows: "I remember being called upon to visit a man who was in prison for forgery and embezzlement. He was the queerest, crookedest, hardest-hearted specimen, and I could not move him an inch nearer to repentance. The only sign of softening that he showed at all was when he asked me to go and see his mother. I went. She came down, looking worn and sleepless, and that I expected. But there was something about her which I, being young, could not understand. She was bitterly ashamed, and in my pity for her I wondered, What has she to be ashamed of? And then there came the light, and I murmured to myself: Surely she hath borne his griefs and carried his sorrows; the chastisement of his peace is upon her, and with her stripes he will be healed if there be any power that can heal him. He has gone astray and turned into his own way, and love has laid on her the iniquity of the son. The mother heart which knew but little sin, love has made to feel exceedingly sinful for his sake. I understood, and, in a measure, the eternal mystery cleared. That love which a woman can pour out upon her son, and which makes her so entirely one with him, that his sin is her sin, his disgrace is her disgrace, his shame is her shame, is the nearest we can get on earth to the love of God; to what God is."

Love always does mean suffering. It does to God himself. It will to us. To quote another fine phrase, this time from E. Stanley Jones, "Where love and sin meet, a cross is always set up." The one who loves is crucified by the sin of the one who is loved. Mother love means joy in the accomplishment of her children, pride in their success, happiness in their happiness; but it also means pain in their suffering and in their waywardness. Love extends the area of our vulnerability so that we can be wounded in more places.

Today all of us are remembering our mothers. We remember them for their kindnesses and their gentility and their understanding and their quiet courage; we think frequently of their faith and of their piety. But most of all we love our mothers for the inclusive reason that they first loved us. This is precisely the reason why we love God; and the fact that this love means infinite capacity for suffering only makes it more precious to us.

Yet suffering and sacrifice are heroic only when they are also necessary. The very fact that sacrifices cost so much means that we should use them sparingly; otherwise they are worse than foolish. Our very affection for our mothers calls us now to save them from the necessity of some of the sacrifices which are no longer imperative. This is not that their love may be denied a chance of expression, but that our love and gratitude may be proved. This morning, therefore, I want to talk with you regarding some of the things which we can and ought to do in order to decrease the cost of motherhood to mothers, and at the same time to give practical evidence of our affection and gratitude. My own mother used to say to me when I offered to help with some little domestic duty, "One ounce of help is worth a pound of pity." The mothers of the world need our help.

Reducing the Human Cost of Motherhood

Mother's Day is usually "a carnival of carnations, candy, greeting cards, and telegrams—sporadic expressions of a sentiment that ought to be constant." To celebrate Mother's Day in this way is easy and fairly satisfying, for nothing is easier than to lull our sense of duty to sleep to the crooning of sentimental ditties. We have excused ourselves for failing to do what we know we ought to have done by indulging ourselves in an orgy of affectionate platitudes. This has been going on for years, but a recent issue of the Parents' Magazine tells us that in each of those years sixty thousand mothers have died in childbirth in this country. There are in this country at the present time more than 144,000 children who never knew their mothers. These are not mere figures. They are sound facts of the most dire significance. If you are tempted to pass them by as mere statistics, clothe them with the flesh and blood of your own experience. Think what this would mean in terms of your own children and the children of your friends, for some of these motherless youngsters are integral parts of our own community.

Two thirds of these maternal deaths could have been prevented. A recent expert study made in New York proved that mothers who get proper care before and just after the birth of their babies have three times as good a chance to survive as those who do not have that care. In Holland 29 out of every 10,000 mothers die in childbirth. In Denmark the figure is 31 for every 10,000. In England and Wales it is 41. In Canada it is 57. In the United States it is 66. There are other things than dollars and industrial standards and inventions in which America needs to forge to the front.

In the nature of things, mothers have to pay a heavy price for their part in the work of creation, but that price ought to be no heavier than is imperative. The church physician and his associates and the Sanitarium workers should receive our every support in their efforts at parental education and prenatal and postnatal care.

The Care of the Children

We honor the mothers of our Nation and of the world, because they are always on the job conserving the physical and spiritual well-being of their children. It is for their sake, as well as for the children's sake, that we must resolve that in these trying times nothing of our own anxiety and suffering shall be visited upon the children of the Nation so as to impair their sound health, their education, or welfare work among them. There is no future except such a future as our children will make and live, and we dare no longer mortgage the fine possibilities of that future by our indifference or criminal negligence in matters of child health and development.

Discerning historians of the future will probably mark 1930 as the year of the White House Conference on child health and protection. In order to obtain facts as well as theory relating to child needs, President Hoover called to that conference more than 1,200 men and women, experts in many lines of work touching on the lives of children. Out of that conference comes a deep realization on the part of the mothers and fathers of this and other nations that the bringing up of their children is not an isolated affair in which they alone are concerned, but one in which the life of the Nation depends. The work of the conference was summed up in nineteen minimum recommendations. Here are some of the more outstanding ones. I want you to think them through in terms of your own children and of others for whom we accept community and church responsibility:

Every child is entitled to be understood.

Every child should receive periodical health examinations.

Every child should be protected from communicable diseases.

Schools should be so organized as to discover and develop the special abilities of each child.

Every child should have some form of religious and moral training.

Every child should be protected against labor that stunts growth.

Every waif and orphan in need must be supported.

Every child is entitled to the feeling that he has a home.

Some of these points need more emphasis in our own homes than we have been wont to realize. Most of them, however, have already been taken care of so far as our own homes are concerned, but we still have a major responsibility towards those who do not attain to these standards but who can be helped by the church. Part of our tribute to mothers should be to loosen the hands of the Bishopric so that they can do more to protect children who are in need.

Eliminating the Cost of War

The mothers of the world dread war. It is a specter that will not down. It threatens all that we hold most dear, and before its strong advance individual mothers are practically powerless. Our mothers spend their lives preparing their children for moral victories, for cleanness, and honesty, and honor and decency. Yet when the madness of war is upon us, we deify an international crime which lives on lies, breaks down moral standards, exalts murder, and lays waste the brightest hopes of the future.

Our mothers know this, in spite of the frenzy which sometimes seizes them even as it seizes us. We tell them that war calls forth heroism and noble purpose, but they know in their hearts that peace calls for even greater heroism. Because they win so many quiet victories themselves, they are above despising the quiet victories of peace. Albert Schweitzer as a young man promised to become one of the outstanding organists of the world. Before he was thirty he wrote several outstanding books in the realm of theology. Here, too, outstanding success and world renown were assured to him. Yet he felt the call of God to go into darkest Africa, and there to carry light and healing and the message of Jesus to the natives of that benighted country. He went to school again. Four years later he graduated with honors in the field of medicine and immediately left for his chosen field in Africa, where since that time he has been giving himself utterly to the physical and spiritual upbuilding of the natives, taking only brief rests, during which time he has used his genius in other fields to accumulate money to send him back with better equipment for his African work. Our mothers know that the world is full of Albert Schweitzers; and that their courage and patience and faith are demanded in fighting against disease and crime and ignorance and sin. No mother likes to think that she is rearing her son for the war of 1950, yet only moral and spiritual heroism exerted now can prevent the coming of that war. To prevent it will be a real tribute to the mothers of the world.

War costs tremendously. A recent issue of the Homiletic Review gives these figures: Ten years after Germany surrendered, $70 out of every $100 of our vast governmental expenditures went to pay for war and to maintain our armies. Sixty-four years after Lee surrendered we paid over $125,000,000 to Civil War pensioners in one year. This year the Government has determined to pay what may be $750,000,000 to World War Veterans.

Yet these tangible realities are representative of even more significant but intangible realities which lie behind them, realities in which the mothers of the world are intensely interested. These millions of dollars are symbols of the brain, the muscle, the toil and fret, which we and our children and our children's children must expend in paying installments on the cost of war. The World War cost $186,000,000,000. Our share of this might have been used to build schools, to endow hospitals, to care for expectant mothers, and to do a thousand and one other things which we now feel that we can not afford to do. The mothers of this country and of other countries are interested in these constructive things, and in direct proportion they hate war which denies these things.

Nor is this the only cost of war. War costs us fathers and mothers, and leaders and followers, and ideals and artists, and thinkers and ministers. The last war took Albert Schweitzer from Lambrene, in Africa, and interned him as a prisoner of war in the Pyrenees, while it sent the recruiting sergeant into the place where he had been teaching about the healing power of Jesus in order to marshal the French Africans for service on the European front.

War is now illegal. The Kellogg Peace Pact made future wars illegal under any and every circumstance. Yet much remains to be done, for no one expects the pact to stand up in face of the war psychology of another great crisis. War now seems so distant that our imagination needs to be stimulated by an immediate visualization of what it means. Let us remember the cost of war to the mothers of the world, and then by their suffering shall we be healed. Then will their stripes reinforce the commands of God to this church, that we shall lift up an ensign of peace.

During this month 10,000 ministers of other denominations have affirmed that they will under no circumstances participate in future wars.

Our Mothers and the Problem of Sin

Back of all things which cost mothers so dearly is the fact of sin. Mothers know from their own experience that it is the very nature of goodness to love and to suffer for the sin of the one who is loved. They know that love is justified if it seeks out the sinner, and satisfied if it saves him. They know that the satisfaction of love is like that of the shepherd who at whatever cost to himself has found that sheep that was lost. Every mother knows that womanly righteousness is rewarded when the son who was dead to her is restored to her hearth and home. Every mother knows the meaning of vicarious suffering, and its power to save.

The outstanding way, then, and the inclusive way, in which we can pay effective tribute to the mothers of the church and the Nation is to join with them in the never-ending crusade against sin and wickedness and against the pain which these bring in their train. The call to pay tribute to our mothers is only superficially a call for carnations and candy and congratulatory telegrams. Fundamentally it is a much deeper thing than that. The challenge which comes to all of us is one of understanding. We are challenged to recognize in our lives that love means suffering and that the cost of our own loving will be the suffering which our affection makes possible. Yet because of the daring examples which our mothers have set for us, we must go into the great conflict of overcoming evil with love, and we must do this with utter abandon, with willingness to suffer for others because we love them. So shall we be worthy to be called the sons of God, who has bestowed his great love upon us and in doing so has shared with us the pain of our imperfections.

The Prophecies and Promises of God

PART TWO

By J. A. Koehler

Forms of Prophecy

The history of prophecy shows that prophetic communications have come in four principal forms: (1) In dreams. (2) In visions. (3) By inspiration, or mental illumination, or ecstasy, and (4) by dictation. A study of these forms of prophecy, of the language of the prophets, and of the themes of the prophets, should help us to improve our understanding of the nature of prophecy.

A number of questions will arise, such as these: Is there any relation between the personality of the prophet and the form in which the message is given? Is there any relation between the subject matter of the prophecy and the form in which it is given? Do the prophecies of different prophets have certain peculiar or distinguishing characteristics? Does the age in which the prophecy is given or the conditions of the times have anything to do with the subject matter of prophecies? And such like.

If we can find the answers to such questions, they may tell us what we are warranted in expecting of the prophets; they may relieve us of certain fears; they may deepen the foundations of our faith in the prophetic function. And it may be that another "Army of Israel" will grow up that is willing to be led by "a Moses" to a Promised Land, and a Moses may be raised up whose prophetic vision will enable him to lead it. For, if the record of the achievements in political science—the science of government—means one thing more than another, it is that no people are likely to achieve a government of God without a Moses; and certainly no Moses will lead without a people who are willing to come out of "Babylon" and pay the price of a journey to "Canaan." Nothing is more fundamental to the redemption of Zion than prophetic leadership.

I doubt if the intellectual powers of a prophet have much to do with the form in which messages are given him. Daniel was a man of great intellectual powers—a man who "in the matters of wisdom and understanding" was "ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers" in the Babylonian kingdom—and yet the record says over and over again that the secret was revealed to him "in a vision." Daniel, even if he was a high mental type, was a seer of visions. Messages were given to him in the form of symbols.

The prophecies of Saint John, the Divine, are, for the most part, combined in two forms: (1) Vision, and (2) Dictation. "I looked, and, behold, a door was opened in heaven: and the first voice which I heard . . . said, Come up hither, and I will show you things which must be hereafter." And this is characteristic of the whole book of Revelation. I saw, I heard. I saw and heard.

Joseph, the son of Jacob, was a dreamer of dreams; whereas Joseph the Martyr was a vessel of inspiration or of mental illumination. I do not recall one prophecy of Joseph the Martyr that was not in the form of dictation. Even his prophecy on the Rebellion was in the pure declarative form. And while his prophecies concerning Zion employ metaphors in parts, he gives us no intimation of having received them in the form of vision or dream. His prophecies are markedly free from symbols.

Now it seems quite certain that the first three forms of prophecy require that the prophet shall state in his own words his own understanding of the messages conveyed to him in these forms. And, as stated before, whatever may be true of the fourth form, prophecies in the form of visions and dreams and ecstasy are of the nature of processes for quickening the intellect and enlightening the understanding. They are cases of God talking to man on his own level, and of man interpreting the meaning of his experiences with God. And if that be true, then we err when we contend that the messages of the prophets are infallible word for word statements of divinely dictated fact in which the personality of the prophet can have no part.

Whether prophecy in the declarative form is less liable to be discolored by the personality of the prophet is not so evident. It may depend upon the form in which the dictation comes, whether through the eye, the ear, or the understanding. But even if declarative messages are less liable to discoloration than prophecy in the form of visions or dreams, it does not follow that prophecy in the form of dictation brings with it a richer understanding of the mind of God. For in any case the richness of meaning depends upon the power of the mind to comprehend.

The Language of Prophecy

The size of a book is not separable from its shape except by abstraction. In actual experience with a book, both are together. So the form of prophecy and the language of prophecy are not separable in the prophetic experience. But we may think about them somewhat separately.

The following is a rough classification (though there is some overlapping) of the language of prophecy.

(1) Imagerial Language. Language which employs figures and symbols to convey ideas. "And there appeared another wonder in heaven; . . . a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns," is typical imagerial language. There are many such prophecies in the Bible.

(2) Declarative Language, which is a formal or positive or explicit statement or affirmation of fact or principle. "Thy wife Elizabeth [who was barren and well stricken in years] shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John." "In the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." "This gospel shall be preached in all the world for a witness, and then shall the end come." These are instances of declarative language in prophecy.

(3) Metaphorical Language, in which one object is likened unto another by asserting it to be the other. "For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock." This is metaphorical. But it is also an explicit statement of fact; so that the two forms are combined in one prophecy. That is frequently the case.

(4) Some prophetic language is symbolical; some is pictorial; and some is (what is in effect) visual language. But for the sake of convenience and the purposes of this article, the language of prophecy may be classified roughly as (1) Abstract and (2) Concrete.

Under the head of Concrete Language let us place all those prophecies in which images and figures and symbols occur. Metaphorical language falls readily under both heads. Concrete language is a sort of picture language; and it is a large part of the language of prophecy.

Now it is my opinion that if we can find the reasons for the use of this picture language in prophecy, they will tell us what we are warranted in expecting in any of the messages of the prophets. These reasons will tell us whether the human is likely to be mixed with the divine.

There are a number of scriptures which, I think, give us the key to the problem. For example, "I have many things to say unto you, but you can not bear them now." "He [the Holy Ghost] shall guide you into all truth." "That light [or understanding] groweth brighter and brighter, until the perfect day." All these, along with much more, have reference to the revealments of God to man. And what they say is that men of God do not sometimes understand perfectly or fully the things which are spoken to them by the inspiration of God. Well, if they did, their understanding of these things would be as perfect as the understanding of God. And that is quite a claim for men to make.

One of the difficulties in judging the experiences of the present is that we can not see them in perspective until they become things of the past. As things have gone, it will be for coming generations to see the people of the Latter Day Saint Church today in their historical setting. When that time comes, it will be apparent that, in us, history has repeated itself again. Just now we flatter ourselves as other peoples have done, whose folly it is sometimes hard to understand.

Take one outstanding incident in the early Christian Church. Note this simple declarative statement of both truth and fact: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," etc. Who is so intellectually deficient that he can not apprehend the meaning of that simple language? Here is a prophecy, if they could have understood it, that Christianity was to spread to the remotest corners of the earth. Here is a truth of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, if they could have apprehended it. But they did not. The intellectual and spiritually elite of the early Christian church—the eleven best ministers for God the church had produced—did not comprehend the import of that language. I doubt if all comprehend it today.

Read, now, the tenth chapter of Acts. That story tells us that it took concrete language—picture language; symbols; something that can be contemplated with the aid of the eye—to get that simple message across to those apostles. Not until Peter "saw" that great sheet let down to earth; not until he "saw" that spiritual phenomenon in the house of Cornelius, did the truth of that commission dawn upon his understanding. Not until then did he "perceive that God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him."

This is an instance of the inadequacy of mere declarative language, which tells us at once why it is necessary to talk to men in the language of pictures.

Up to the time of Peter's visit to the house of Cornelius, that prophecy had a different content to those prophets. And prophets they were, the best the church had. That first conception of that message of divine truth was discolored, it was mercifully bungled, by nationalism, prejudices, traditions, racial pride, and the aspirations of the Jews. That story tells us that the messages of the prophets are likely to have written into them the personality of the prophets. And then, when we interpret the messages of the prophets we discolor them with our own personalities.

The point I have just argued is of great importance in relation to the prophecies concerning the Restoration movement—both the ancient prophecies and the modern. Unless I am horribly mistaken, prophecies which have to do with the Zion of latter days were and are misunderstood to refer to Judah and Jerusalem. And the most momentous events of all time are construed to be mere local happenings of only national significance. Check up on these and see if it is not so.

Much as we wish it were not so, we are forced to admit that some of the greatest prophets the world has ever known have woven their nationalism, their traditions, their prejudices, their aspirations, their personalities, into the messages God gave them to deliver to men. With such liabilities of having divine communications discolored or distorted, it is not difficult to see how much better it is, at times, to have the prophet describe the panorama which was spread out before his eyes, and to let each man who looks at that word picture read the story for himself.

Picture language, as employed in visions and dreams, contains a wealth of meaning in a small compass that whole volumes of words, sometimes, are inadequate to convey. We see the different phrases, clauses, and sentences of a word composition out of relation to each other. We see it piecemeal. But when we look at a picture, we see each part in relation to the other; we see it in the ensemble. But the liability of misunderstanding is not so great as it sometimes is in the use of pure, declarative language. Metaphorical language, too, is rich in meaning.

Again, pictures make deeper impressions upon the mind than do mere words. They keep the imagination alive; therefore, they prolong contemplation, which tends to broaden the understanding, to make it clearer, and to deepen it with the passing of time. Pictures, when contemplated, usually mean something to all; while mere words, at times, mean almost nothing to the best.

Figures and symbols and images and visions and dreams have special values as means of prophetic communication:

(1) When prophecies have to do with a class of objects with which the prophet has had no experience; (2) when, because of the limitations of human understanding, the truth requires to be unfolded with the passing of time; and, (3) when the truth expressed has one application in one age and another application in another; or when it may have two or more applications at the same time. Picture language, to me, is "the" language of prophecy.

The Language of the Prophets

Another fact which has disturbed the mind and caused the faith of some in the prophecies to this church to wane, is the difference in the style of language of our prophets, and the different cultural levels upon which a given prophet has spoken. There are times when Joseph the Martyr used language that seemed below his level of culture. At other times his language rose to the mountain tops of spiritual ecstasy. Faulty sentence construction is to some a sign that the inspiration for the thought was not divine.

Men speak according to the states of their minds. Misapprehension, or limited understanding, as well as different moods and states of health, should be expected to yield different qualities of composition. Inspiration is not always on the highest level. And men do not express themselves with the same facility at all times. Even prophets may be calm today and troubled tomorrow.

Sometimes the difficulty lies with the obtuseness of the mind of him who hears or reads the messages of the prophets. Sometimes our misunderstanders work better than our understanders. The Spirit of God is said to enlighten every man. But church members claim a special advantage in this relation. And yet these very church members blunder, both in their judgments and in their expressions. I think it not quite consistent for such people as that to claim divine inspiration for themselves and then say that the prophet whose language is faulty surely could not have been a vessel of divine inspiration.

Every man's spiritual tide is subject to ebbs and flows. The man who hopes today may despair tomorrow. I do not mean that faithful prophets lose faith in their messages. When a man speaks mountain high above his norm, I think he must have been lifted up. It is a sign of prophetic inspiration; and that, notwithstanding his failure at other times to attain to these heights. If we discredit modern prophets on that count, then we must discredit some of the best prophets who have ever spoken, for they too are chargeable with the same shortcomings.

Whether it is spoken from the mountain top or from the hilltop, I suspect that in both cases the language of the prophecy is the language of the prophet. For this reason: All meanings are conveyed to the mind in terms of the individual's understanding. No man can comprehend God except in terms of his own experience. And when he gives a verbal statement of his comprehension of God, it seems to me that it must be in terms of his own experience. "For the Lord God giveth light unto the understanding: for he speaketh unto men according to their language. . . ." Even the a priori knowledge of transcendentalism is accounted for in the mental development or thought experience of the individual. "These commands were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding." Don't expect too much of the prophets. And don't be too sure of your evaluation of prophecy or your interpretations of the prophecies.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Notice to Church Officers and Workers

The "Herald" will continue to carry the worship service and program materials until July. August materials will appear in the July issue of "Vision" and will continue to appear in that magazine a month in advance in succeeding issues. This notice is given to our leaders and workers in order that they may have ample opportunity to enter their subscriptions for "Vision." New subscribers to "Vision" may have their first year's subscription for $1.35. This offer is good until July 1. A coupon will be found in the back of this issue. The reasons for the change have been explained in the "Herald" of April 15.

Worship Suggestions for Use in the Children's Division

The theme for June is "Helpfulness." In this month there are two days that deserve special recognition—Children's Day and Flag Day. It so happens that this year both occasions come on the second Sunday of this month. However, as per suggestion in last week's Herald, the service for this particular Sunday should be a general service primarily planned for the children, in which much pupil participation is provided for. It would be well to have the boys and girls assist the leader in planning the service for this Sunday and in executing the program.

A junior may read the Call to Worship, another lead the singing, another read the scripture reading, another offer the prayers. Let the juniors conduct the offertory service. The boys and girls will enjoy the story more if it is told by an adult. Select the very best story-teller in your branch for this Sunday.

At the juncture in the program where the flag salutes are suggested, other special numbers characteristic of Children's Day may also be included. Suggestions for same are listed under "Suggestive Materials."

The sermon for this Sunday should have as its central thought ways in which we can help others. It may be necessary to entirely discard the suggestive sermon material given for the second Sunday, in order to make it fit in with the service. This sermon should be most interesting to the juniors, and the element of brevity very marked.

SPECIAL NUMBERS FOR CHILDREN'S DAY

"The World Children for Jesus," Carols, 28.

(Exercise for four girls.)

Each girl may carry a doll dressed to represent the baby of the nation about which she sings. Have each girl sing the verse of the song that describes the baby she holds. After each girl has sung, the group may then sing the fifth verse of the song and the chorus.

The Creator of All

Softly and sweetly glad nature is calling,
Calling to me and to you.
Moments are golden and life is enthralling,
Beauties are radiant and new.
Thank God above
Who scatters these joys o'er the way.
By him are given these blessings from heaven.
Praise him this glad Children's Day.

Out in the meadows the scent of sweet clover
Fragrantly perfumes the air.
Diligent honeybees over and over
Visit the bright blossoms fair.
The birds on high
Have caught the glad song of the bees.
"God's in his Heaven," the robins are trilling;
List to their sweet melodies.

Dainty forget-me-nots down by the river,
Pansies in garden-beds gay,
Dewy wild roses that grow by the roadside Whisper through each golden day,
"Oh, trust in God
Who careth for each blossom small.
He'll safely keep you, for he is your Maker, Wondrous Creator of all."

—Carolyn R. Freeman.

Just Two Words

Just two words that Jesus spoke,
By the quiet sea,
Just two words, but oh, how sweet,
Words that all the years repeat,
Hear them: "Follow Me!"

Just two words that mean so much,
Kinder could not be!
Calling us to joy so bright,
Calling us to life and light,
Hear them: "Follow Me!"

Just two words that Jesus said,
O so lovingly!
Yet they open wide the door,
Giving life forever more,
Hear them: "Follow Me!"

THEME TOPICS FOR SERMONS

Theme for the Month: "Helpfulness."

(The illustrations and materials given for the three sermons are merely suggestive. These are but ideas which may be woven into the sermons. No attempt has been made to organize the material or to put it in complete form. It will be necessary for the speaker to enlarge upon the theme and to develop it so that it will be within the understanding and appreciation of the Juniors.)

First Sunday.

Theme: "Helpfulness."

On the first Sunday in the month, it is usually desirable for all, both old and young, to partake of the sacrament together and to join in the social service following. There is distinct advantage in mutually sharing this experience. However, on some occasions, and where it may be done conveniently, there is also much to be gained in a junior sacrament service. When this is done, the service should be conducted by men of the priesthood who can really adapt themselves to this ministry among juniors. It can not be just an "old folks'" meeting held for children. While the nature of the service is set in the administration of the emblems, the songs, talks, prayers, and testimonies should be such as the boys and girls will appreciate and in which they will join heartily. The junior service should make easy and natural junior participation.

Second Sunday.

Theme: "Helpful Living."

Text: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, . . . shun profane and vain babblings: for they will increase unto more ungodliness."—2 Timothy 2: 15, 16.

"And a man shall be as a hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place; as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land."—Isaiah 32: 2.

Imagine you are standing on the top of a high mountain looking off into the future, into the day when you will be grown men and women. What, more than anything else, would you want to see there for yourself? Help the boys and girls to see that all their ideals and ambitions can be expressed in one word—success. It is the ambition of every one of us to be successful. But what does success mean to you? Why do you want success? What will you do with it when you get it? Who is it you want to call you a success? Make a comparison of two college men who go into business in the same city: One man becomes very prominent in the political affairs of the city; the other is much less conspicuous. With his money he helps to strengthen the lives of others and to make them more enjoyable. He is not often in the public eye; but when folk need a friend, it is to him they turn, because they know that he will never fail to offer his comfort and assistance. Both of these business men are successful. But which do you think is the greater success? Do you want to be a success like the first man or the second? Define the word success or greatness for the boys and girls in the words of Jesus to the mother of James and John: "He who would be greatest among you, let him be the servant of all."

Were you to ask, "How should I live?" I would answer by telling you how I want to live. I want to live so that I will think of myself as a success, so that my friends will think of me as a success, and so that God will think of me as a success. I want to live so that I will be known as a friend to all, both the foe and the friendless, both the rich and the poor. I want to live so that I can help to make the lives of others happier and better. I want to be an inspiration and a help to others, and not a hindrance. I want to live a life of service and helpfulness every day, without boasting. I want to grow closer to my ideal of the kind of life I should live. I want to grow every day toward Jesus' ideal of success.

The following quotations may be used to advantage:

"The world is eager to employ
Not just one, but every boy
Who with a purpose stanch and true,
Will greet the work he finds to do.
Honest, faithful, earnest, kind—
To good, awake; to evil, blind—
A heart of gold without alloy
Wanted—the world wants such a boy."

—Marian Waterman.

"There are just two kinds of men, those who think only of themselves and forget the others, and those that find in their own struggles and trials determination to help the weak."—

From Insurance Salesman.

Third Sunday.

Theme: "The Joy of Doing for Others."

Text: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these . . . ye have done it unto me."—Matthew 25: 40.

It has been said that true happiness is found only in service. When Jesus lived here on earth, he tried to get the people of his day to realize that if they would put others first, if they would do for others and forget self, they would find greater joy, they would understand something of what the kingdom of God is like. Jesus set the example when he said: "I am in the midst of you as he that serveth"; and he expected his disciples to follow his plan of service, for he said unto them: "He that is greater among you, let him become as the younger, and he that is chief, as he that doth serve." Jesus tried to help the people to understand that all honest work was honorable, and he tried to help them to appreciate the opportunities for service that each day brings.

"O Son of Man, thou madest known,
Through quiet work in shop and home,
The sacredness of common things,
The chance of life that each day brings."

—Milton S. Littlefield.

As Jesus expected his disciples, then, to carry on his plan of service, so he expects us to follow it. It is as easy for us to follow Jesus as it was for his disciples, for, as Jesus said: "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these . . . ye did it unto me."

"Years ago when yellow fever broke out in Philadelphia, the populace was seized with panic and fled. The hospital was in a shocking condition. For sixty days Stephen Girard, with another, made daily visits to the hospital and performed the repulsive tasks needed. He also went unaided into the infested districts and carried the stricken victims to his carriage and to the hospital. Twice afterward when the scourge broke out he took the lead, hesitating at nothing. When the government credit was at its lowest, in 1812, he extended the helping hand to his country. When the government appeal for a loan of five million procured only twenty thousand, he boldly stepped in and subscribed for the entire amount. At the age of eighty, he bequeathed his fortune of six million to the founding of Girard College.—Character Studies.

Fourth Sunday.

Theme: "Heroes of Helpfulness."

Text: "By their fruits ye shall know them."—Matthew 7: 20.

Recall today's scripture reading about the Good Samaritan. (In planning your programs for the month, be sure that this reading, Luke 10: 30-37, is reserved for this Sunday.) Briefly sketch the story for the boys and girls, or have some junior tell it for you. Lead the group to think for a while of some of the good Samaritans of history who by their noble work have healed the heartaches and wounds of humanity and made the world a better place in which to live. Mention such folk as Humphry Davy, who invented his wonderful safety lamp; Doctor Edward Jenner, who discovered a preventative for smallpox; Doctor Lister, who discovered an antiseptic treatment for wounds by which millions of lives have been saved; Sir James Simpson, whose experiments resulted in the discovery of the use of chloroform when performing operations; Louis Pasteur, the great scientist and lover of humanity, who discovered that by means of inoculations many diseases can be prevented; Valentin Haüy, who opened a school for the blind and taught them to read by the use of their fingers—later Braille invented his system; Florence Nightingale, the woman who ennobled the profession of nursing and ministered to the sick and afflicted, relieving much of the pain and misery of the English soldiers during the Crimean War—her work still lives on under the banner of the Red Cross. Look up the accounts of these folk in an encyclopedia so that you can briefly and interestingly tell their story. Help the boys and girls to appreciate the untold suffering that has been saved and the joy that has resulted because of these heroes of helpfulness.

Many, many other names could be added to this list of heroes of service, but the name that heads the list is that of our Master and Savior, Jesus, who said that he came into the world not to be ministered unto but to minister. Can we not strive to follow in his footsteps and lend a helping hand wherever we see it is needed—in our homes and among our friends?

The Purpose, Plan, and Spirit of the Church School

By C. B. W.

The following is taken from a chapter in the new "Church School Hand Book." This new treatise contains in condensed form the most helpful suggestions and directions from the General Department for all who have to do with religious education in the church. It clearly defines the organization, plans, materials, and methods advised for the conduct of our own program of religious education within a branch. Every pastor, teacher, and leader should have a copy. Sixty-four pages; price per copy, 25 cents. Order from Herald Publishing House.

The purpose of the church school is to assist in accomplishing the total educational task of the church within a local branch or congregation. This task we conceive as the building of men and women for the kingdom of God, and equipping them in an organized way to carry on the work of that kingdom among men.

The specific work of the church school consists in providing occasions under guidance for study, instruction, worship, work, and play through which may come the growth and service contemplated in the gospel of Jesus Christ. This effort should center in providing the most efficient activities possible at the customary Sunday school hour; and it should also occupy other hours on Sunday and through the week to provide a continuous urge and stimulus for the systematic building of Christian character and control of conduct. Through instruction and guided experience, closely associated with other efforts of the church, the church school contributes definitely to the constructive work of the pastoral, missionary, social, industrial, and financial features of the total church program.

The Plan of the Church School

The church school is organized under the pastor, with a director and a group of teachers and leaders, for study, instruction, class work, and group activities best adapted to local needs and opportunities in helping to accomplish the teaching work of the church. The details of the organization and the methods and materials advised are carefully set out in the pages of the Church School Hand Book.

The local church school serves to organize on a unified plan all the religious educational functions formerly carried by the Sunday school, the Department of Women, and the Department of Recreation and Expression.

The Spirit of the Church School

In spirit the church school represents the educational forces of the church, organized to promote a knowledge of the gospel of Christ, to foster the growth of religious ideals and purposes, and to secure the development of appreciations, and individual and group loyalties which shall make possible the work of the kingdom of God upon earth.

Thus the spirit of the church school is missionary in that it must continuously teach the gospel of Christ in terms of growing children, of developing young people, and of practical-minded adults. It must continually lead the way to God and to personal and group righteousness.

But its spirit is also pastoral, for it must assist the priesthood in ministering to the intellectual, social, and spiritual needs of the membership.

The spirit of the church school is also financial in that it must teach in thoroughly practical ways the principles of industry, frugality, and responsibility as anticipated in the stewardship plan. It must make provision for an appreciative study of the financial law of the tithe, the offering, and the surplus, encouraging immediate participation in compliance with the financial law.

In other words, the work of the church school may be expressed as spiritual horticulture, in which, with persistent care and studious insight, human souls are nurtured, guided, encouraged, and inspired to efficient service. Or it may be termed spiritual engineering, in which spiritual values are discovered in the physical, mental, and material resources of the individual, and these are developed, capitalized, and consecrated in the creative work of the church.

Why This Work Is Important to the Church

The work of the church school is an important part of the total task of the church because:

1. Its effort centers in persons, in the building of men in the image of God. It begins with earliest childhood and is adapted to serve most helpfully each age group from infancy to old age.

2. Its success will be measured by the kind of Christian manhood and womanhood it produces.

3. Its program is built upon the firm conviction that we may grow men in the likeness of Christ. Every individual is a potential candidate for sturdy Christian character and for citizenship in the kingdom of God.

4. Its object is to make desired changes in the lives of people. Religious education seeks to build righteous lives through guidance and practice in religious living. Leaders are chosen, courses of study are built up, methods are utilized, and organizations are set in operation which are best adapted to stimulate growth in dynamic Christian life.

5. Processes of growth, of enrichment, and of self-control are essential to the undergirding of character and the building of Christian citizenship. As men and women are made ready to live and are inspired to serve in a God-willed society, God will demonstrate the power of his truth in a Zion of latter days, and eventually in a redeemed world.

6. The church is recognized as a divinely appointed means through which dynamic, radiant Christian life is nurtured and brought progressively to fruition. It is the human means under divine power through which the kingdom of God is to be established and his will is to be wrought out among men. The task of the church school is to help the church perform its teaching function in the world.

"He's Not Our Kind"

One day I ate lunch with Henry Ford, and there was present a Pittsburgh steel man who all during the meal was trying to tell a dirty story. He would start off by saying: "You fellows will want to hear this one I picked up in Paris," or "I heard a hot one the other day in Pittsburgh." But Mr. Ford would deftly turn the story aside by changing the conversation. When the lunch was over and we were walking from the little lunch room back to Mr. Ford's office, he walked with me and said: "Doctor Stidger, did you notice that fellow from Pittsburgh trying to tell a dirty story?"

I replied: "Yes, I did, Mr. Ford, and I also noticed how cleverly you switched him off each time that he did."

Then this fine man said, rather simply and sincerely: "He's not our kind."—William L. Stidger, in Men of the Great Redemption; Cokesbury Press.

A Busy Day in the Lord's Work

Thinking Herald readers will enjoy reviewing the variety of demands on a missionary's time, Elder Hubert Case, now at work in Central Michigan District, writes of a typical day's activities:

"In the missionary and district work of Central Michigan, 8.30 a. m. found E. S. White, of Bay City, and the writer in his car leaving the home of Brother and Sister George Burt, in Beaverton. For three days we had been as busy there as time permitted, and at the end of this campaign, we were taking home Allen Yeager who had been assisting us. He lives twenty miles southwest of Beaverton.

"When we arrived at Brother Yeager's home, he adjusted the car brakes for Brother White and sent us on our way to visit scattered members in branches and groups. Our journey took us past some old landmarks, pine stumps of other days, remains of a mighty forest which stood there fifty years ago. Michigan was then a great forest of soft pine, and her lumber made many men rich as did the gold of California.

"Three miles north we stopped at the home of Brother and Sister Burns, who seem to be the guardian angels of Loomis Branch. A brief visit with them told us that all had not been smooth sailing for them in the gospel boat. Storms they have encountered. But they are ready to fully cooperate in our canvass of the branches to learn the attitude and willingness of the Saints in regard to the latter-day work.

"A six-mile drive northwest to Clare brought us to a band of faithful sisters. First we called at the home of Sister Newsom, an earnest worker whose companion has had charge of the work for years. He was called to the other side only a month ago. This sister carries on with a cheerful heart. In Claire we also found Sister Calahan, superintendent of the Sunday school. These two women are leaders of the group. There are no men who belong to the church at that place. Brother George Burt preaches to them occasionally. Indeed Brother Burt, who nears the eightieth milestone of his life, is very helpful here, and has many friends in this region. Though he has been placed on the honor roll of the church, he continues to actively serve.

"We next drove the Essex to Farwell, five miles farther west, where we called upon Brother and Sister McGuire, stanch for many years in teaching the angel message. And after a few words of earnest prayer with them, we were on our way to see their son, the president of the branch, who lives three miles south. He asked us to go three miles on south to visit some aged people and pray for an afflicted sister. Thus it was that with a prayer of blessing lingering on our lips we made our way to our dinner engagement thirty miles away with the pastor of the flock in Beaverton. We found Sister Schrock to be a very popular hostess; three of the high school teachers board with them.

"Our day was well begun. We had planned a trip to Gladwin Branch to call at the home of Brother George White, about fifteen miles north of Beaverton. There we learned that he was at the Butman church, where a group of the men were putting a foundation under the building. So we continued our journey six miles farther north, visited with the men, and learned of their willingness to cooperate with us to the extent of their ability for the success of the work. Then we turned south for our meeting in Beaverton. On the way there we made two calls, administering to Sister Wert and stopping in Gladwin to visit members. We dined with the good people with whom we ate lunch.

"The day's work was not over, however, for we had to put the finishing touches to the task of the three busy days' work and then go to the church for the last sermon of the three. This is the best church building we have in Central Michigan, a stone structure 60 by 46 feet, a credit to the men and women who planted the latter-day work in this little town.

"At the service an offering was taken to assist the ministers on their way, and following the service a half hour of visiting gave the day a fitting climax. Then we drove forty-six miles to the "White House" in Bay City, the resting place for the missionaries as well as other visiting Saints. Arriving there at 11.10 p. m., we found that Sister White had just arrived home from her week's visit with her daughter in Battle Creek.

"Brother E. S. White has done much in the district and is well acquainted with the Saints. He was never under general appointment, but has for forty-five years worked for the Michigan Central Railroad, during which time he has performed missionary work and the work of bishop's agent at his own expense. Now he is taking the new district president and missionary over the district.

"The above is a single day's work. Do you think the day was well spent? We do."

Warrington Dedicates New Organ

Warrington Branch, England, recently held a dedication service for its new organ. Sister Olive Heywood, stenographer of Northern England District, was a visitor at the services and writes the following account:

"On Sunday, March 28, I paid a visit to Warrington Branch. I left Manchester early with the intention of attending the afternoon school, but the railway company had other ideas, and I was very disappointed to arrive in time for the closing services. Nevertheless I did see what a splendid number of boys and girls attend. I imagine the superintendent and teachers must work very hard to keep those eager minds interested.

"I had previously received word that this day was the celebration of the result of months of preparation, the dedication of the new organ. Led by the organist and assisted in every way by the pastor, a fund had been started and augmented by efforts until enough had been procured. A blind friend, Mr. J. C. Currey, had kindly loaned assistance in the purchase of the instrument, and during the service played several interludes, including Handel's 'Largo.' Solos and duets were rendered, and congregational hymns were sung, all on the theme, 'Music in Worship.'

"The dedicatory prayer was offered by Elder J. A. Fleming, who asked God to give us a sense of appreciation of the many blessings bestowed upon us. Elder Harold Barrington, of the North East Manchester Branch, was introduced as the speaker, and outlined the possibilities of instrumental and vocal music in worship. He portrayed how a service could be made more beautiful by each individual singing in harmony and realizing the meaning of the words sung.

"One special feature of the service was the singing, by the composers, of a hymn, the words composed by the pastor of the branch, High Priest William H. Chandler, and the music composed by Mr. Currey.

"A vote of thanks and appreciation for the help rendered was given to Mr. Currey, who stated in his reply that he had derived much pleasure from the service he had given. He hopes the occasion will arise in the near future when he may render a like service in the installing of a pipe organ.

"A valiant band of true-hearted Saints is found at Warrington. May God bless all their efforts to further his work."

Independence

School is out in Independence. Friday was the last day and followed a week of concluding tests and exercises. Vacation plans are now in order. Already numbers are leaving Independence for part of the summer months, but, to keep the balance even, young people are returning home from college and training schools.

William Chrisman High School on Thursday of last week held commencement exercises for its graduating class of one hundred and seventy-eight members. Of this number the following of our church young people face vacation time before they settle down in permanent working positions or go away to school. Next September many of these will enter neighboring universities, junior colleges, and a good number will go to Graceland College. They are: Marion Barnard, Ruth Bean, Margaret Blake, Mae Brolin, Hazel Campbell, Eileen Cook, Gwendolyn Coon, Marianna Cooper, Pauline Crawford, Esther Dell, Inez Fereday, Verlyn Fligg, Mignon Franklin, Madge Gault, Eva May Gould, Clara Hartley, Lois Hartshorn, Delpha Hawley, Eloise Higgins, Emma Fern Kelsey, Mary Landfried, Anita May, Frances Mills, Lena Mortimore, Naoma Noble, Alberta Resch, Corlyn Sarratt, Margaret Simpson, Gertrude Sisk, Dorothy Taylor, Margaret Thomas, Lois Totty, Lois Turner, Faye Van Trump, Frances Williamson, Maurice Bailey, Herbert Barrett, Frank Barwise, Kenneth Barwise, Harley Bogue, Howard Bogue, Walter Bullard, Fred Burrows, Maxwell Constance, Arthur Daniel, Henry Eggen, Richard Erickson, Albert Handy, Reginald Loosemore, William Lundquist, Blair McClain, Lloyd Montgomery, G. W. Nesbitt, Albert Nigh, Kenneth Nunn, Earl Peterson, Ernest Rauh, Clifton Resch, Calvin Rimmer, Cecil Schrepfer, Kenneth Smith, Charles Stowell, and J. W. Thompson.

Stone Church

Bishop Mark H. Siegfried was the speaker at the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning. He stressed the need for a practical, everyday demonstration of the principles of Christ, and used the story of the Good Samaritan as an illustration of the spirit that must be displayed both by the ministry and the laity of the church. His appeal was for brotherhood, fellowship, and confidence among those who profess to be followers of Christ.

The Stone Church Choir, directed by Evan A. Fry, sang two anthems, "O Come to My Heart, Lord Jesus," by Ambrose, and "How Beautiful upon the Mountains," by Wolcott; Albert Brackenbury, bass, and Lilly Belle Allen, soprano, were soloists. Mrs. S. A. Burgess, contralto, sang the solo, "All Alone with Thee," by Bailey. Robert Miller, organist, and George Miller, pianist, were accompanists.

Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge, and was assisted by President F. M. McDowell.

"Staying by the Stuff" was the theme of the junior young people's program downstairs on their closing day. It was Scout Sunday for them, and about one hundred girls and boys were marshaled by their officers into the auditorium. A salute to the flag and the song "America" opened a program closely related to the many phases of scouting. The four girls' troops and two boys' troops were introduced by the junior young people's pastor, and the Girl Scouts sang three of their favorite camp-fire songs—two Negro spirituals, "I'm Goin' to Lay Down My Sword and Shield," and "You Can Talk about Me," and "Peace." A story, "When a Boy and a Dog Stayed by the Stuff," told by Leta B. Moriarty, preceded the short address by the pastor, "Carry on as You Stay by the Stuff during Vacation." Then came the hymn, "We're Marching to Zion," a reading, "The Prayer of a Navajo Indian," the Scout benediction, and the buglar blew "Taps."

Elder C. Ed. Miller spoke to the Stone Church congregation Sunday evening, giving expression to many helpful thoughts. The soloist for the evening was Pauline James Arnson, who was accompanied by Robert Miller.

In the afternoon a large crowd of sorrowing friends gathered at the church to pay last respects to a young woman who for a number of years has lived in Independence, Mrs. Dana Becker Snider, wife of Dan Snider. Her death occurred at the Sanitarium May 20, following a brief illness. The funeral sermon was preached by Elder John F. Sheehy, assisted by Elder C. Ed. Miller and Elder A. K. Dillee. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery. Dana, the second daughter of Bishop and Sister J. A. Becker, was born April 14, 1904, at Rendsburg, Germany. She was baptized by her father at Kirtland, Ohio, May 20, 1915. For several years she worked in the general church offices, where her helpful, friendly disposition won her many friends. The community extends sympathy to her family.

Doctor and Sister Joseph Luff, of Independence, celebrated on Sunday their fifty-eighth wedding anniversary. There was no formal reception, but relatives and friends called throughout the day. The couple were married May 24, 1873, in Toronto, Canada, and came to Independence in 1879. For many years Brother Luff was a missionary in the church and was noted for his writings and sermons. Both Doctor and Sister Luff are enjoying excellent health.

On May 19 the Laurel Club celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of its organization at the home of Mrs. Thomas Crick, in conjunction with the observance of the birthday of Mrs. George Green, mother of Mrs. Crick.

Forty were present to enjoy the program of original readings and music and the huge birthday which held seventy-four candles. Three charter members of the club were present, and were called on for talks. Mrs. T. J. Watkins, president of the club, was in charge.

Word was received in Independence Sunday of the death of Mrs. Samuel Pope, at her home in New Westminster, British Columbia.

A message from Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, announces the marriage of Sister Ruth Mikel Cool, of Independence, to Adolph Schoch, of Altoona, Pennsylvania, on the evening of May 24. Mrs. Schoch has been a proof reader in the Herald Publishing House the past two years.

Miss Edith Mae Tousley, of Lamoni, Iowa, who has spent the past two years in Independence, became the bride of Mr. Gerald G. Phillips at Lamoni, May 17, Elder Roy A. Cheville officiating. The young couple are making their home on a farm between Independence and Blue Springs, where the latch-string always hangs out for their many friends. Both young people are members of the Y. P. R. Class of the Stone Church.

Walnut Park

May 24 was a day of special patriotism at the church. Flags were displayed in the building and yard. Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts entered the church at eleven o'clock in orderly troops for the Memorial service. The orchestra played a medley of appropriate numbers, the choir sang an anthem, and there was a number by the men's chorus—E. E. Moorman, Leon Snow, R. G. Blackburn, Carlos Smith, C. G. Closson, Milford Nace, Orlando Nace, and Albert Chapman. The sermon was by Apostle J. F. Curtis.

Again at 3 o'clock, the Girl Scouts of Troop 10 were at the church, when they were presented with a large American Flag by the Ladies of the G. A. R. of Kansas City. Brother C. G. Closson, past department commander in the Sons of Union Veterans, presided, he having previously been associated with these lady officials of the G. A. R. and the two Civil War veterans present, Mr. Wheeler, aged ninety-two years and seven months, and Mr. Hollingsworth. All of these addressed the Girl Scouts and their friends briefly, and two Scouts, Barbara Closson and Inez Moore, responded in acceptance of the Flag. Together the group gave the pledge of allegiance to the Flag and sang, "America the Beautiful." Their captain is Mrs. Anna Julia Roberts and their lieutenant Mrs. Eva Burke.

At the church May 23 occurred the funeral of Sister Margaret Horne, wife of Melvin Horne, formerly of Independence. She died at Columbus, Ohio, May 19, and after a short funeral service in charge of Elder J. E. Matthews the body was brought here to the home of her husband's parents, Brother and Sister William P. Horne. The funeral sermon at Walnut Park was by Elder U. W. Greene. Interment was in Mount Moriah Cemetery, south of Kansas City. She leaves her father, Mike Costello, of Springfield, Missouri, two brothers, and two sisters.

Englewood

Elder D. S. McNamara, pastor of Englewood Branch, said that never before had he seen the church as beautiful as it was all day Sunday for Mother's Day. The platform of the church was covered with flowers which had been brought by the congregation. Besides the flowers for morning and evening services, a novel idea of having the pictures of all the mothers on display was pronounced effective. Canaries in their cages added touches of beauty and song to the church.

In the morning on this day at the regular preaching service hour, eleven o'clock, the kindergarten, primary, and junior departments gave their programs. Then a play taught the lesson that it is not the gift but the sentiment behind the gift which blesses Mother's Day. In the evening a tableau showing mothers of biblical and church history times was given. Apostle J. F. Curtis spoke for the morning service on the theme "Mothers." Apostle F. Henry Edwards spoke following the play.

The expression class held its second meeting Tuesday evening at the church under the direction of Mrs. Lyda Robertson, of Independence. This class is offered for the purpose of instructing the members of the branch in the art of dramatics. The enrollment is now fairly large, but class sponsors hope to see more students join. The voice class, directed by Paul N. Craig, has only one or two more lessons to complete the series. Although at times the attendance of this class was small, it was usually more than the required twelve.

Mrs. Bea McNamara is at home again after her two months' visit in Michigan.

The Saints listened to two good sermons Sunday, Elder B. White in the morning and Elder Perry Hiles in the evening.

Recreation has been recommenced at Hill Park each Friday night.

On Monday night, June 1, the parent-teacher meeting will be held.

East Independence

Many good things have lately been enjoyed by the Saints of this congregation. Those who have recently occupied the pulpit are D. A. Whiting, F. Minton, D. R. Snively, H. Friend, and J. W. Davis. Each brought a message of admonition to the Saints to be prepared for conditions coming on the world, that the church may be clothed in righteousness and power.

May 3 the community around East Independence, including the two churches, the East Independence Saints' Church and the Fairmount Methodist Church, had a May Day service and May pole exercise. Several hundred people witnessed the program and May pole service held in the open air. The beautiful day called together these congregations in the spirit of fellowship and neighborliness. The program was in charge of Mrs. Iva Edgerton, of our church, assisted by Mrs. C. A. Gathorn, of the Methodist Church.

J. W. Davis and Harry Friend blessed two infants, Ellen Amryilliss Friend and Wallace Henry Butler, the children of two young married couples, on May 17.

At the evening service the young people of the church school of Spring Branch gave a play, "An Instant out of the Past," written by one of their number. This helped the Saints to re-live the beginning of the Restoration.

Recently the Rainbow Class of young people gave an evening's entertainment, directed by Florence Minton and followed by a pie social. This was designed to furnish means for making and keeping up a volley ball court and recreational grounds for summer activities. A nice sum was earned, and the evening was greatly enjoyed.

Church school interest is high. Good attendance marks each session. Preparations are now under way for Children's Day.

The adult department recently had a successful gathering. They called it Family Night. This will be conducted once each month.

Tulsa, Oklahoma

Fourteenth and Cheyenne

Easter in this branch was marked by an excellent service of sacrament commemorating the Last Supper our Lord shared with his disciples. And in the afternoon five persons were baptized in the presence of many of God's children.

The evening service opened with an organ prelude by Mary Gouldsmith, and "Yes, the Redeemer Rose," was sung by the congregation. Pastor Oliver A. McDowell offered the invocation. A choral response was given by the choir; then Brother McDowell delivered a short, impressive sermon depicting the life of our Master. The Tulsa Choir, under the direction of Mrs. Alma Adams, sang the cantata, "Dawn of Easter," by R. B. Wilson. Soloists were Mrs. Adams and Frances Roberta Skinner, sopranos; Mrs. Hazel D. Atkins and Mattie Martin, contraltos; and Evan Davis, bass. The benediction was by Pastor McDowell.

The next day, April 6, brought to mind the founding of our church one hundred and one years ago, the anniversary of the restoration of the gospel.

Along with the other fifty-six branches to lose their pastors through the retrenchment program recently adopted by the church, Tulsa learned of the loss she was to sustain. Although we know such action was necessary, we regretted to lose Pastor McDowell and Sister McDowell. During the one year of their work here, they had proved an inspiration and help to the branch, and Tulsa Branch is a better place as a result of their living here. Brother McDowell has taught of Christ and lived his teachings. He aroused the Saints to new zeal and effort. Baptisms have averaged two a month since Brother McDowell came here, and although the universal depression has been heavily felt in Tulsa, our branch has never before seen such lucrative times. We have over twice as much money in the treasury as at any previous time in our history. Brother McDowell started the envelope system of branch expense payment here, which has proved very successful.

The McDowells were royally entertained for more than a month. At the farewell party at the church they were presented with a purse which contained a substantial sum of money, a token of gratitude and love.

In his farewell sermon Brother McDowell used a text found in Luke 9: "He that putteth his hand to the plow and looketh back, is not fit for the kingdom of God." Plowing is one of the first steps toward civilization. Christ knew the strength and determination it would take to plow through without looking back. Brother McDowell likened our branch to a man who plows straight through with the ultimate goal in mind. His attention centered on the completed task, he has no time to make excuses for not doing his work; no time to look back.

The Saints at Sperry, a town about ten miles north of Tulsa, insisted that Brother McDowell spend at least two weeks with them, preaching and teaching. At the end of two weeks they were loath to let him go, and several days more found him ministering to the people there.

The Saints were relieved to learn that our former pastor, James Emmett Lancaster, was to fill the vacancy made by the departure of Brother McDowell. Several weeks ago the Lancaster family, Brother and Sister Lancaster and baby, from Detroit, came to Tulsa to visit friends and relatives. Brother Lancaster preached several times.

March 8 was Former Pastor Day in Tulsa. Brother Lancaster spoke in the morning and Elder F. H. Cunningham at night. At the morning service James Emmett, jr., infant son of Brother and Sister Lancaster, was blessed by his two grandfathers, Elders J. L. Lancaster and Earl D. Bailey.

Under the direction of Brother Lancaster, Tulsa Branch intends to continue to develop into a place known to people as one where true Christianity is practiced. Though he has comparatively few years' experience in pastoral work to his credit, Brother Lancaster is one of the ablest men in the church. We are glad to work with him.

The Temple Builders are at work on the play, "The Restoration," which they intend to present the latter part of May. Management of the play is under the direction of Alma Adams, president, and Nellie Curtis, treasurer. An excellent cast has been selected.

Birmingham, Alabama

The little Sunday school here is still holding its own, despite the fact the Saints are few in number and are not visited very often by any of the missionaries.

It has been some time since the Herald has heard from us, but as we read the letters and reports of other branches, it causes us to want to let the world know that we are here in Birmingham and holding Sunday school regularly. Since last report the Sunday school has been reorganized under the new plan adopted by the church, and we find ourselves making better progress than heretofore. Elder V. R. Chandler is group president and has charge of all services, including sacrament each month.

This group consists of eleven regular members, and because the number is so small we are unable to have a public place in which to meet. Meetings are held in the home of Brother Chandler, who unselfishly and willingly does all he can to keep the little band together.

Brother Chandler is to be commended for the good work he has been doing. Every wage earner is kept in close touch with the financial conditions of the church, and through him all have become regular tithe payers and are trying to live the gospel law.

The Saints get much cheer and comfort out of the magazines and papers of the church. They keep us in close touch with the church and its programs, and tell us of the good work that is being done throughout the world.

If Saints should be passing through or visiting in Birmingham, we would be very glad to have them visit our meetings.

Bisbee, Arizona

Bisbee Saints had the pleasure of having Apostle Myron A. McConley here Saturday, May 2, when he preached to a good audience.

The morning of Sunday, May 3, Douglas and Bisbee members went in cars to the home of "Onion" Miller, a ranch in the valley, where Brother S. D. Condit has been holding services once a month for the benefit of the community. Considerable interest is manifested in the gospel. Mr. Miller is known far and near as "Onion" Miller, because of the many onions he grows on his ranch.

The following program was carried out: Sunday school at 9.45, followed by preaching by S. S. Smith, state missionary. At noon a bounteous basket dinner was served cafeteria style; there was ice cream for dessert. At two o'clock in the afternoon an experience meeting gave the members opportunity to strengthen each other with testimonies concerning the gospel. This was followed by an encouraging talk by Brother McConley.

The morning services were held in the open air under the trees, but as the day grew very warm the afternoon meeting was conducted indoors.

At least one hundred Saints and friends were present, and it was voted to make the occasion an annual event.

After thanking Mr. Miller and his wife for their hospitality, the people left early. The Saints are hoping that many of their friends here will soon be led to obey the gospel call.

Chicago, Illinois

Central Church, Sixty-sixth and Honore

In recent weeks Central Branch has been visited by Elder Roscoe E. Davey, who gave a forceful sermon, and Brother Warren, of Independence, Missouri, who spoke on "Seek Ye the Lord." Apostle J. A. Gillen was here April 26 and preached a wonderful discourse on "God's Way Is the Best Way."

The pastor has of late preached a number of times. Some of his subjects have been, "As It Was in the Days of Noah," "The Beatitudes," "The Man Who Robbed God," and a Mother's Day sermon.

City Missionary C. E. Schmid has been giving illustrated lectures on Sunday nights. He also preached on what Easter should mean to Latter Day Saints.

Many other good sermons have also come from local men. Brother Ray Hurst spoke recently on "The Prodigal Son," and Brother Eskridge used for a text "We are laborers together with God."

During the early part of February, the Saints were edified by a series of sermons conducted by R. E. Davey and C. E. Schmid. The few strangers who attended were much interested in the delineation of the gospel and its coming forth. One good lady said that she heard more Bible in the few meetings she attended than she had in twenty years. The music department helped with special numbers.

Two weddings among Central young people occurred in the early spring. Miss Beatrice Hagle was married to Russell Kimball March 14. And Miss Grace Thoman became the bride of Robert McCormack April 12. Their friends wish them happy, prosperous, and helpful lives.

The Easter sacrament service was well attended and was a time very opportune for the Saints to renew their covenant.

Bishop L. F. P. Curry was here at the May sacrament hour and spoke concerning the condition of the church. His hopeful, affirmative attitude gave everyone courage.

Bertha Constance Woodward lately gave a lecture on the work of the children's division to the church school leaders at the home of George Kerr.

The priesthood have organized a study class to meet twice a month for consideration of phases of faith and doctrine. Many show a sincere desire to better equip themselves to accomplish the work God has called them to do.

A number who have been ill are improving. Sister Cora Keir, who is confined to her home for several weeks for special treatment, needs the prayers of the church.

The mid-week prayer services, while not so large as we might wish, meet a high spiritual standard and are beneficial to all.

The Saints have witnessed the beautiful ordinance of the blessing of the babies of the following members: Sister Violet Lewis, Brother and Sister Ralph Swanson, and Sister Alice Vogwell.

The Easter evening service was a pantomime and dialog, "He Is Risen," by Hattie K. Bell. Ray Hurst gave a talk, and there was special music.

Music for our services has been good. Sister Lela Eskridge, the music director, works hard to furnish appropriate music. Among those who contributed solos are Nina Campbell, Arthur Sherman, Wayne Hall, May Keir, and Sister Eskridge.

The evening of April 26 a playlet, "The Prodigal Son," was given by William Keir and Arthur Sherman, and there was special music.

On April 12 the First Chicago Branch Choir gave the cantata, "Eastertide," at Central Branch, Ruby Newman directing. It was beautiful, and a vote of appreciation and thanks was extended the singers.

Kansas City Stake

Stake Conference

The business session of the forty-ninth conference of Kansas City Stake was held Monday evening, May 18, at Central Church. Members of the stake presidency, C. E. Wight and George Mesley, were in charge and F. S. Anderson of the stake bishopric.

The message of President C. E. Wight emphasized conditions existing in the world during the past year and set forth the necessity of putting into practice the teachings which we as a church have so long advocated. The high priests reported eleven baptisms, the elders, eight. Reports were also received from priests, teachers, and deacons, and reports from the stake missionary and Stake Patriarch J. T. Gresty were read. Sister Maude Gunsolley, recorder, reported gains by baptism 26 and transfer 129, losses by death 12 and transfer 76, or net gain of 67. The present stake membership is 2,960.

Anderson; the stake council; Department of Religious Education, G. C. Mesley; leader of boys' department, W. O. Hands; stake music director, Evan A. Fry; secretary and recorder, Maude Gunsolley; historian and reporter, W. S. Brown.

Central Church

The officers of Kansas City Stake, ever mindful of the need of their people for strength and encouragement at a time so stressing as the present, when nations are baffled as to their social and economic problems and every form of life is undergoing a severe test, arranged a series of meetings prior to the stake conference, held May 17 and 18.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer was selected as the speaker and music was furnished by the various groups: Central, Quindaro, Mount Washington, and others. Arthur Oakman, George Anway, and Evan Fry conducted the song service.

Brother Gleazer used for his general theme, "Religion and the Present Crisis." He reminded us that the nations of the earth are in the midst of a great shaking; no department of human life or activity is exempt. Government after government has undergone remarkable changes since the World War. What is true of government, is true of industry. That too, is experiencing a severe test. Every economic system is being shaken, and he pointed out the absolute necessity for our holding fast to that which is good if we are to survive. Our reason for not solving the baffling problems of the day is because we have attempted to solve them without God and Christ. Never until we become God conscious, will we respect our neighbor or his rights or property. When we are God conscious, then we need have no fear concerning our conduct toward our fellow man. Men and women must be made aware of the fact that God is today, for without that knowledge we can not hope to save the nations of the earth. What do we know about God? To what extent is God influencing our lives? and to what extent is our conduct the expression of our love and respect for him? He pointed to us that if we as a people were living up to the full law as given to the church, what a contribution we would have to offer the nations of this earth in their social and economic problems. He stirred enthusiasm within the hearts of the people to become one, to become more God conscious and to hold fast to that which is good.

Armourdale Church

May 3 was rally day for this branch. At the Sunday school period Sister Hawkins gave a talk. She told of her experiences in Sunday school work in England and America.

Sacrament at eleven o'clock was in charge of C. A. Skinner, H. W. Goold, and R. L. Goold; members of the local priesthood were seated on the platform. One hundred were present.

Brother Arthur Oakman delivered a splendid talk to the young people at 2 p. m., winning their confidence and admiration.

At three o'clock Brother C. A. Skinner delivered a chalk talk which was very much appreciated by the Saints. "Principles of Leadership" was the theme of Stake President C. E. Wight at four o'clock in the afternoon.

Following five o'clock luncheon period, Brother C. A. Skinner held a round table discussion of the financial condition of the church.

The day came to an end with the evening service when the Armourdale Choir gave an excellent musical program. Sister Marie Rushfelt conducted the 7.30 song service.

Grandview Church

The Gleaner Sunday School Class has this spring sponsored a number of money-raising events, proposing to purchase new songbooks for the church. Two suppers have been given with programs following; bird houses and porch boxes have been made and sold; and the Jackson Jubilee Singers (colored) were engaged for a concert. The goal of one hundred dollars is nearly reached, and the congregation is looking forward to the use of the new books.

Easter Sunday was appropriately celebrated with sacrament and a cantata by the choir in the evening. Central Church Choir sang its Easter cantata to this congregation April 26.

James Hawkins and Miss Irma Cooper were united in marriage May 7 by Elder Dan Tucker, uncle of the bridegroom. The marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents in Kansas City, Kansas, in the presence of the immediate families and close friends. The bride is a graduate nurse of Bethany Methodist Hospital. They will make their home in Kansas City, Kansas.

Second Kansas City Church

The Saints are happy to have had Sister Bernice Griffith here for the last few months on Sunday evening. Through her musical services she has been a wonderful help and has aided in securing the assistance of such good speakers as Patriarch U. W. Greene, Elders H. A. Koehler, J. E. Vanderwood, and Francis Smith.

Elder C. Ed. Miller was here Easter Sunday with his beautiful screen pictures of the life and resurrection of the Savior. On the following Sunday he lectured on views of the Hawaiian Islands.

Other speakers of late have been Brother E. W. Lloyd, Pastor F. A. Evans, and Patriarch Ammon White.

A good program honored Mother's Day, and Brother E. S. Zink talked, using as his text Proverbs 22: 6.

Santa Ana, California

Doctor A. W. Teel was welcomed as the speaker in Santa Ana, May 17.

In the past two months the young people have been active. The Oriole Girls, under the direction of their leader, Sister Rebecca Mills, Nimmo, gave a variety show and candy sale in the basement of the church. These young girls have both dramatic and musical talent of a high order, and the audience greatly enjoyed their performance. The silver offering taken added twelve dollars to their fund for uniforms.

Brothers Warren Best and David Carmichael took the boys of the branch on a week-end hike into the San Bernardino Mountains. They returned safely and report a jolly trip.

Sister Hawthorne Hunter, granddaughter of Elder John Inman, was married April 29 to Mr. Woodrow Barnett. It was a quiet home wedding, with only the immediate family present. The ceremony was performed by Bishop David B. Carmichael.

The Ladies' Aid Society began the first of a series of monthly social affairs, meeting in May at the home of Brother and Sister Charles Calkins. After the refreshments, all present paid twenty-five cents each, the money to be donated to the branch as a help in meeting its share of the district budget.

Mother's Day was observed with a short program, which was preceded by an address by Pastor Starkey.

The Patroness Society, directed by Sister Warren Best, plans to continue its monthly meetings through the summer.

North Manchester Branch, England

Prior to the annual (district) conference, held at the North-east Manchester Branch, James Street, Bradford, Manchester, the members of this branch assembled at the church to partake of sacrament. They met at 9.30 a. m. and enjoyed a wonderful service. The children showed their thankfulness to their heavenly Father for his wonderful gift to the world, by bringing newly laid eggs for the sick and old people of the branch, and these were received by the pastor during the singing of a hymn. The Saints then adjourned to James Street for the conference.

The Saturday evening following the conference, April 11, the children's division gave a concert entitled "The Golden Ladder." The staves of the ladder were gilded, and each child in turn brought a gilded step and placed it in position. The steps were "faith," "prayer," "forgiveness," "knowledge," "truth," "purity," and "love." One junior repeated the whole of the thirteenth chapter of 1 Corinthians, substituting the word love for the word charity in the Bible.

The second half of the program was announced as a historical pageant of the church, and commenced with the leader of the junior division appearing dressed in a long white robe and a crown of twelve silver stars on her head. She sang one verse of "I Love Thy Church, O God." She carried in her hand a rod with a disc painted in representation of the church crest, and from this were streamers. The juniors then filed in to tunes most suited to the countries they represented. It had been impossible to procure costumes suitable for the various countries, and so each junior wore a riband with the name of the country printed on it and the year in which the missionaries went to that country. The countries were welcomed into the church and given a streamer. After all nations attached to the church had filed in, a little junior dressed in white with a blue riband with gold letters, "PEACE," and a golden star of David on her head, walked in to the tune of "Peace, Perfect Peace." She sat down between the figures of a lamb and lion and put her little hands one on each. A junior representing "Other Nations," 1931, not attached to the church filed in while the leader (the church) sang "Gather Them In." Then the church told the "other nations" that she was commanded to go out into all the world to preach the gospel and bid them welcome into the fold and kingdom. All sang "Raise the Ensign."

Patriarch William H. Greenwood was then called upon to speak a few words. He commended the concert and spoke words of welcome to the friends present.

The members are having a struggle to keep the gospel ensign raised here, but if at all possible, we will carry on and trust God to help us.

San Diego, California

4328 Alabama Street

May 20.—Though the Saints in San Diego are few in number, their faith in the restored gospel is strong, and the work of Christ moves on. They have a thriving Sunday school, which increases in number and interest in the search for knowledge of righteousness.

The two preaching services each Sunday have good attendance, nonmember friends being occasionally present.

One hundred per cent participation marks the activities of the Department of Recreation and Expression.

The midweek prayer meetings are proving the best meetings of the week to those who attend. A good degree of the Spirit is felt, and the Saints go home with renewed strength and determination.

The branch anticipates the arrival and help of Elder S. S. Smith July 12, and hopes to make Brother Smith's stay here enjoyable to him as well as profitable to the community. Though Brother Smith will arrive at a season when many

A DUTCH APRON AND CAP

THE apron and cap set illustrated here is made from an excellent quality of cream-colored muslin and bound all around with pretty, fast color blue. The only work necessary to complete the set is to embroider the mill on the cap with blue, and embroider and applique the quaint Dutch lovers. The lassie's blue skirt forms a pocket, while the lad—for admiration only—wears bright red trousers and cap. Designs for placing applique and embroidery are stamped on apron; embroidery on cap.

The cap is of generous size and is made without elastic or draw strings. It irons perfectly flat. It is to be adjusted to the most becoming proportions for the wearer by a band which continues from the front. This may be fastened at the back of the neck in the manner one likes best.

The apron is 36 inches wide, or medium size. This width permits it to come well over the hips. It is fashioned with a wide bodice-like top which gives a trim look and again accentuates the Dutch influence.

DAINTY AS A DRESS—FREE AS KNICKERS—ALWAYS ATTRACTIVE

THE Pantyrock is smartly feminine when "at ease" but a garment with cleverly divided skirt that allows complete freedom of motion yet assures a most becoming protection no matter how you stand or what your pose. It is ideal for sports, for gardening or for the house, and yet none of the feminine allure is sacrificed as in knickers or other aping of men's clothes.

This is a new idea and by using deep, fashionable pleats, cleverly concealed panties are made right into the frock, yet all in one garment. The skirt hangs naturally but "in action" divides at the front and follows the motion of the legs. There is an extra panel at the back making it shadow proof so as to require no undergarment.

Number 222 is a school model smartly cut as shown of colorfast suiting, with pearl buttons down the front, pleated skirt, stitched belt. These dresses are ideal for school wear and come in white, rose or cadet blue. Sizes are small or small medium, 32 to 34. These dresses are completely made and ready to wear.

Number 223 is a dainty dress model with its Pantyrock skirt shirred onto the bodice. It is made of an excellent quality cambric that is fast color, and comes in tiny check of either green or rose. It is trimmed with ruffled and hemstitched white organdie pockets, collar and cuffs, which make this a charming style. It has a smart tie at the collar and pearl buttons down the back as sketched. Sizes are small, medium and large. Please indicate a second color choice so that we may substitute if necessary.

THE DAY OF FASTING AND PRAYER

And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day. . . . Thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments, unto the Most High. . . . And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart, that thy fasting may be perfect; or in other words, that thy joy may be full. Verily this is fasting and prayer; or, in other words, rejoicing and prayer. — Doctrine and Covenants 59: 2, 3.

President Smith to Recuperate

So many anxious inquiries have come to this office and to the general offices of the church concerning the health of President Frederick M. Smith that it has been impossible to give individual replies. Then, too, there have been so many rumors afloat, some of them partly inaccurate and some of them entirely absurd, that it occurred to this editor to talk to President Smith's physician, Doctor Charles F. Grabske, who is also Assistant Church Physician, and present a brief statement of the facts to the people of the church through the columns of the Herald. Doctor Grabske gave the following written report:

"This spring, President F. M. Smith suffered a severe attack of influenza which has materially undermined his general health. Whereas already he has regained much, he still lacks considerable of his normal reserve of strength and energy. I have advised that he absent himself absolutely from customary duties for a period of some two months and devote himself solely to regaining his health.—Charles F. Grabske, M. D."

President Smith's absence from the duties of his office is in no way to be considered an ordinary vacation, with rest and pleasure as the chief objective. It is a physician's prescription as the only means of regaining health that was lost through a long period of overwork and strain. Disobedience to the order might mean irreparable injury to health.

The policies that will guide the church during the coming months have been established by the officers and councils of the church. In a large sense he has already completed the greater tasks devolving upon his office for the direction of the affairs of the church, and it was because of the strain of this work, principally, that his vitality was so reduced that he became susceptible to influenza. It is true, of course, that there remains the heavy task of caring for the routine work and correspondence. These are being cared for by President McDowell, who will spend most of the summer, according to present plans, in Independence.

The Saints are requested to pray for the officers of the church at this present time, that they may be strengthened, supported, and guided; and are asked, in a true Christian spirit, to be careful of giving credence to rumors and idle tales. The church must go forward, and it can do so only with the firm faith and the united support of the people. L. L.

When you have a fight with your conscience and get licked, you win.—The Prism.

Coming—Studies for the Ministry

We take this means of advertising to the ministry of the church the fact that President Elbert A. Smith has written a series of articles for the Herald entitled "Dignity and Beauty in Ministry."

We hope that these excellent articles will be used for more than general reading. They are too valuable to be allowed to pass with only casual attention. Members of the priesthood and others who are interested in the church work could very profitably organize study classes to meet on Sunday for the purpose of studying these articles. With some preparation and possible elaboration by a good teacher the articles will make a good basis for a three month period of study. L. L.

If We All Had the Same Spirit, or a Spirit That Will Not Down

The experiences of the last several months have been such as to test the faith of our membership. Especially has this been true of those who are dependent upon the church for support. Month after month has passed with no allowance issued, and yet almost universally our missionary families have evidenced a most commendable loyalty and devotion to the church.

Letters such as the following are frequently received at the office of the Presiding Bishopric. In fact, scores of cases could be cited where the spirit manifest in this letter has been as fervently expressed.

The sister writing this letter is the wife of one of our missionaries, now deceased. This brother was in the missionary field for many years. As in the case of all other families receiving allowance from the church, this sister was asked to accept a reduction in her allowance this year, due to the retrenchment program. The following is a part of her reply to the Presiding Bishopric. What kind of a church would this church be if every member had the same spirit?

"I have thought for some time that I could do with a little less allowance; but have hesitated to suggest it, because my health has been a little uncertain and I did not know how long I would be able to work and feared that it would be difficult for me to manage if I were unable to work any longer.

"For over thirty years I did dressmaking to help keep my husband in the missionary field, but have had to give up sewing on account of my back; but for the last few months I have been helping in a factory, where, by working a few hours in the morning, I am able to earn enough to help out with expenses.

"As long as I am able to do this work I will be willing and glad to accept a twenty-five per cent cut, and be happy that I can assist in this way.

"I will also keep up my church expenses and pay my little tithing and help all I can.

"I feel that God's hand is still over his faithful Saints, and he has often opened the way before us marvelously and even miraculously, so I feel that we can still trust him."

Our Readers Like Biography

The numerous letters received at the editorial office from readers who are interested in biography, and like to read accounts of the lives of people who have been active in the church work, have convinced us that here is a field of interest that it would be well to follow. We are glad to print good biography whenever we can get it.

There is only one difficulty in the way of our printing more of them than we have in the past, and that is the lack of good printable biographies. There are dozens of people in the church, now living, and some of them recently passed away, whose lives have been full of interest and activity, and whose experiences have been such that they have been able to keep groups of people for hours listening to their stories. It is one of the minor tragedies that accounts of their lives are not preserved in writing.

The great and good people who pass on are remembered by posterity only through the agency of those who can write. And some of those whose lives afford the richest material for the biographer are unremembered, because they had no faithful "Boswell" to commit their lives to ink and paper.

The writing of good biography is one of the great arts. At its best there is no literature more valuable or interesting. But those who have only average talents as writers may, through conscientious effort, perform valuable service in writing of the lives of important and interesting personalities.

In some cases people can write well about their own experiences. But modesty often prevents them from telling the full story. On the whole, some one else can write best about you.

Sometimes briefly scribbled sketches, frequently written with pencil on a few sheets, come to the desk of the editor. These are not of much use. Notes can be taken from them, but they do no justice to the person whose life they describe. It is very difficult, too, for the editors to use typewritten manuscripts which are "single spaced," for there is no room to make the necessary corrections, which are likely to be numerous. Re-typing is both troublesome and expensive.

A good biography can not be produced in an evening or over a week-end. It is the result of research, endless questioning of the subject and his relatives, writing, organizing, and rewriting. But the result of such conscientious work is certainly a reward for the trouble taken.

A Weekly Health Column by the Church Physician

The first group of a series of weekly health articles by Doctor A. W. Teel, the Church Physician, has arrived, and will soon appear regularly in the Herald. Other writings by Doctor Teel have been very popular and well received by our readers. Some have organized classes for the study of these articles in past months.

It is especially recommended that classes of mothers—and the fathers or even the younger adults could be included—should use the material of these articles as a basis for study. A class meeting on some night of the week could do much for the improvement of knowledge about health by studying the articles.

OFFICIAL

A Call to Fasting and Prayer Sunday, June 21

A day of fasting and prayer has been set for Sunday, June 21, the first day of the period of the Special Sacrifice Week. All members of the church are requested to make this a day of actual fasting for the morning meal and a day of united prayer for the welfare of the church.

On this day special prayer services should be held, which all should be urged to attend, and the priesthood should lead the people in prayers and pledges for the welfare of the church. Likewise sacrifice and prayer should be made the theme of the sermon at the morning preaching service.

It is further recommended that all who may be in a position to do so should continue fasting for one meal a day throughout Sacrifice Week; and we call to the attention of the Saints the commendable action of some who are giving the money thus saved to the church.

To this service of prayer and sacrifice, initiating the activities of sacrifice week, we call the members of the church, asking them to participate in faith and humility, giving their devotion for the good of the Master's cause.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY.

For Those Who Sincerely Believe

NUMBER THREE—THE OBLIGATION OF WORLD NEED

Those who sincerely believe that the Restoration Movement is the program of God for the salvation of men, hold such great and significant religious convictions about God and humanity that they can not by any logic avoid the obligations which these convictions place upon them.

Our Great Convictions

Consider for example what it means to affirm with conviction that God is at work in his world today, that he not only has spoken to man in the past, but he speaks to men today, and finally that he has spoken to this church through its prophets and has committed to this church the carrying out of his program for the salvation of humanity.

Consider what it means to affirm with conviction that the gospel of Jesus Christ in its entirety has been restored in the latter days, that not only the ordinances, doctrines, and ceremonies of the original church are to be found in the restoration movement, but that the spirit, purposes, methods, and program of Jesus for the bringing of all men to God are to be found in this church.

Consider what it means to affirm with conviction that men are the children of God, that they have within them the power to become godlike, that no matter what their race or color they are all brothers, children of a common father, and that it is God's purpose that they shall finally be united in a world-wide brotherhood, based upon the principles of love, justice, and righteousness.

Consider what it means not only to hold these convictions in the abstract, but to openly avow as well that such can and must be actually demonstrated in our human relationships today, i. e., the kingdom of God's good will shall be established among men, and Zion shall yet shine as a concrete embodiment of these ideals.

The Obligation of World Need

Set over against these great convictions of our people is the need of the world today. It is estimated that there are in the world twenty million of unemployed. Economists of repute tell us that the records of our oldest relief organizations have never shown such misery as was experienced during the winter that is past. These writers speak of the "inhumanities, injustices, and inequalities of industrialism." They say that "the product of the profit motive is millionaires and breadlines, both in ever-mounting numbers," that we are evidencing today "the tragedy of plenty," and that "our present industrial order has failed to meet the elementary test of supplying adequate sustenance and keeping its own energies going."

Keen-minded students are not averse to pointing out these days that the Christian church, because of her claims, must assume grave responsibilities in connection with this situation. Speaking to the Christian church in a general sense, one of the foremost of American students has said that the only way the church can exonerate itself and justify its pretensions is by producing a group of men and women who, by the very quality of their lives, evidence that they have been reborn; by becoming itself an institution which can be differentiated from any other institutions of our social order by the very nature and continuity of its effort; by devoting itself everlastingly to its task until all the unregenerated sections of our social order have been made regenerate.

Another noted writer, speaking of the conditions above described, says: "It requires that people should be moved now by orderly processes to take the economic kingdom away from the spirit of money-making and give it to the spirit of social creativity—the religion that does not attempt now to accomplish these things will not even remain to read the rest of the doom that history will finally utter upon unrepentant, acquisitive society. It will decline along with the money-making way of life it did not try to change. Its kingdom will be taken from it and given to others."

If such a challenge can be justly hurled against the Christian church in general, by what logic may our church hope to escape its responsibility? Ours is a prophetic church, so we claim. It will not be sufficient to limit the prophetic spirit to the foretelling of events. Such a spirit must not be satisfied with recording history. It must make history. It must see in passing events their real meaning. It must not be content with pointing out the folly of godlessness; it must lead the way in the creation of a godly society. It must not only profess a belief in God and his program; it must actually put into operation that program. The members of such a church must believe so sincerely in God's way of life that they will willingly and gladly pay the price which the building of such a world shall entail.

Because we believe sincerely the gospel of Christ as embodied in the Restoration Movement, the needs of the world today place upon our shoulders obligations and responsibilities which we dare not shirk. If we do shirk, we belie our claims. Have we claimed too much, or are we afraid to meet the obligations which our professed beliefs imply?

Religion and the Present Crisis

By E. J. Gleazer

The second of a series of sermons, delivered at Central Church, Kansas City, Missouri, May 11, 1931. Reported by Nena N. Young.

We wish to assure you we feel more at home tonight. Last night I felt very much concerned, possibly overly concerned, and I trust tonight the spirit of freedom we now feel will continue with us throughout this entire series. We are gratified to see so many present tonight, and I trust that God's Spirit will bless us, for I am sure your hope is in harmony with my hope—that is, that through our mutual effort God's kingdom may be built up and strengthened.

I want to repeat this evening the two texts that we used last night and then associate a third text. You will recall that from the Hebrew epistle we read the following words:

See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spake on earth, much more shall not we escape, if we turn away from him that speaketh from heaven: whose voice then shook the earth: but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more I shake not the earth only, but also heaven. And this word, Yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which can not be shaken may remain.—Hebrews 12: 25-27.

And you will also recall the following text from Haggai:

According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my spirit remaineth among you: fear ye not. For thus saith the Lord of hosts; Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land; and I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come: and I will fill this house with glory, saith the Lord of hosts.—Haggai 2: 5-7.

The third text is the theme that I have selected for our series: "Hold fast to that which is good."

You will notice how similar these texts are. It is indicated there had been trouble, and evidently it was a time of trial, a period when the members of the church were very much concerned, for both these writers, one speaking under the inspiration of the Lord in prophecy, attempted to encourage the people with the assurance that despite the test or the trial that would be theirs, the Spirit of God would be with them as He had promised when they came out of Egypt; and the writer of the Hebrew Epistle also attempted to prepare them that they might stand fast, that they might be able to endure, for he called their attention to the fact that they should not be faint-hearted but should stand firm. He attempted by a reference to the past to remind them of how God had made himself manifest to their fathers, and while he warned them of the fate that might be theirs if they refused to hear him, nevertheless he tried to establish them so they would be able to endure that time of testing or the great shaking which he predicted.

The Universal Trouble

We suggested last night that we are in the midst of a universal shaking. All nations and peoples are experiencing that shaking. No phase of human life or activity is exempt. Government after government has undergone some remarkable change since the World War. Kingdoms rise and wane, and they are still passing through this time of change. There was a period when we took government more or less for granted. If we happened to be living under an absolute monarchy, we were traditioned in the fact the ruling head was God appointed, and it was for us to obey and not question the ruling of an aristocracy; if we were in a limited monarchy, we were habituated to certain constitutional rights; if we were in a republic such as the United States, we took it for granted that we had the last word in our form of government. But in this day, regardless of what form of government we live under, every government is being called in question, and where is the nation tonight that takes its government for granted? And where do we find a people tonight that is satisfied with government as they find it? And regardless of the form of government, we are discovering that wherever man is permitted to exercise rule over his fellows, if that man, or if those men, as the case might be, are not converted to Jesus Christ, if they are not conscious of their relationship to God and their relationship to their fellows, regardless of the particular form of government, they will find ways or means to abuse the people. Nations, wherever you look, whether in China, India, or America in this twentieth century, must realize that it is courting disaster for officials to permit the exploitation of the people. Government is on test, and I can assure you that before this great shaking is finally over, the only government that will remain intact on earth will be that government that harmonizes itself according to the divine pattern or government of God. In other words, it will be the survival of the fittest, and you will see the fulfillment of the second chapter of Daniel.

Through the experiences of men and nations the government of our God and his Christ will survive the test, for only truth will survive. And what is true of government is true of industry. That also is passing through this test. After all, it is not so much government or industry, but it is men and women that are passing through this crisis. We may see them in government or industrial work or socially, but wherever you come in contact with them, you will discover them in the field of experimentation, attempting to discover what is the best rule of life or what particular form of industry or government or social form would make it possible for them to express themselves more completely. And what we have said of government is equally true of the manner in which we here are living. Every economic system is on test today.

Some of you possibly listened to the address delivered from Washington this morning by a very prominent Italian lady. I could not help marveling at the tribute she paid to Mussolini. It may occur to us that possibly in our own land we have not as yet been able to raise that ensign of right economic relations so that we have the right to say to Italy, to Russia, or to China, "Look on us that you might live," and I believe we are also passing through an economic evolution in the United States of America.

I was talking to Brother Hands before the meeting, and he stated that while he was in the great city of Detroit he witnessed a line of men five abreast extending for three blocks waiting for bread—in America! That is only one example of thousands that we could bring to you tonight. So, our own Nation is experimenting today in economic forms as well as governmental forms. We have lived to see the fulfillment of the text in the 29th chapter of Isaiah, which reads:

The wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid.—Isaiah 29: 14.

And in this age when knowledge covers the earth, we are being baffled with the problems of government and economics. Why? Because we have attempted to solve these problems without God and without Christ. This great shaking will determine the only system of economics that will make possible human life and human development. During any great test, there is going to be a period of uncertainty, and surely we are experiencing that today. You possibly have read of the questions that have been propounded to some of the leading men of our Nation in an attempt to discover when we shall return to what they term normal conditions again, and the wise men of the nations have attempted to evade an answer. If they would be frank with us, they would tell us they don't know, for they do not know. A few of them have been that frank.

We are experiencing certain conditions in the world today that we have not seen before. Regardless of the fact we have had other panics, we have conditions today that we have not had before. There are factors entering the equation that did not previously enter. I think the frank answer that anyone could give as to what is responsible for our position is a lack of faith, lack of confidence, a spirit of distrust, a spirit of uncertainty. That is what is confronting business today and has caused it to slow up.

Why the Church Has Not Escaped

We mentioned the fact that in such a time as this the church of Jesus Christ is not exempt, for we are in the world and are coming in contact with the problems of the world. Furthermore, the church has not made sufficient preparations to save its members from a crisis such as confronts the world today and, therefore, we must experience what the world is experiencing. I have noticed a spirit of uncertainty in the church; I have noticed disappointment made manifest, and while many have been aroused to greater diligence, there is the danger of some losing the faith. There is a possibility of becoming dissatisfied with your own church and feeling that the church has failed, although actually the church has not failed. We as a people may have failed to take advantage of what the church could provide. Probably there are in our midst those who can not endure this period of trial, nor abide this great shaking. I wish to offer this admonition from the Apostle Paul in his letter to the Thessalonian saints: "Hold fast to that which is good."

At a time when everything is on trial, that advice is in season. Everything is on trial tonight and on the morrow, including the church of Jesus Christ; and because that is the case, we should as never before hold fast to that which is good. There have been a great many people in our church like those in every other institution, that have not been very much concerned about the church, about the world, or about themselves. There are people like those we mentioned last evening, that do not take their religion seriously. It is quite possible to have lip worship and mouth service in the church of Jesus Christ. However, we might have them elsewhere, and I am afraid, my fellow Latter Day Saints, that some of us, at least, have been taking our religion for granted. It may have been handed down to us from our fathers or mothers; or, having come in contact with this church, the contrast between what this people preaches and what some other church preaches may have been so great that we were willing to identify ourselves with this church. It may have been that some of us were convinced that it was necessary to be baptized to complete a burial or immersion, and that very fact alone has satisfied our conscience; and inasmuch as we have been baptized by one having authority, we have folded our hands and ceased to be concerned about our welfare or our fellow man. I wonder how many of us have been concerned about the purpose of the church of Jesus Christ. It seems to your speaker that had more of us been concerned over the purpose of the church of Jesus Christ, more of the kingdom of God and the righteousness of that kingdom would be revealed today. And so our own church must meet the test—it must be shaken and is being shaken. But if you do not enjoy that shaking, let me offer these words of consolation, that there is no where else you can go to avoid this shaking. A number of years ago a certain number of individuals in a certain locality were having a great many doubts. In those days it was shameful to doubt. Brother Elbert Smith listened to a certain brother, and finally he admonished him it was better to stay in and doubt than to go out and continue to doubt. If you think you are going out to escape the shaking, you add another doubt. If you don't enjoy the shaking, you are not going to enjoy it by stepping out. My admonition is to determine what is truth, determine what God would have you do, and do it. In that connection I want to emphasize the first two words of my text, "Hold fast." That has been the trouble in recent years, not only in our church but elsewhere. We have not been holding fast; we are luke warm. Think it over, and I think you will agree with me. Have we really been taking our religion seriously? Think it over. It is possible for folks to be regular attendants at church, yet not be very serious concerning its accomplishments or its purpose.

I remember being alone in Boston one of those times when I had a touch of the blues. My family was in Cape Cod, and I felt somewhat rebellious at having to leave the big reunion there. I spent this evening in Boston alone, and I walked around the Boston Common, and as I was looking upon the crowd, milling here and there, suddenly there came over me the Spirit, and I was able to see the possibility of the church of Jesus Christ; I was able to see what was coming over this world of ours, and I was made conscious of what the church of Jesus Christ would do for this world; I was made to realize that the contribution of the men who had spoken on Boston Common would be insignificant compared with the contribution this church would make to this world. Under the inspiration of that Spirit, I was given to know that I probably would have part in that work. I forgot my lonesomeness, and I thanked God that I had a little part in a work that was going to mean so much as that to this world. I have had a few glimpses into that future since; but before this church can accomplish that mission, this church must be more concerned with world problems and make more of a contribution to the world in the actual field of living. In other words, this church must transform the word of God into flesh, putting the doctrine of the church, its beliefs and ideals, into action and bringing to pass that human relationship that will bring to our doors men of all nations, that they might pattern after our ways.

So I am glad the church is being shaken, for I am conscious tonight that that shaking is necessary in order that you and I might determine whether or not we are for Christ or against him, that we might determine our consecration, that we might determine love and truth and the price that we are willing to pay that that truth might prevail.

Things That Hinder the Kingdom

Sometimes I grow impatient when I witness branch after branch spending its time and energy, to say nothing of the time of the general church officers, in attempting to adjust difficulties between members in the church of Jesus Christ. I was going to say (it had been my privilege but I won't) it has been my fate to sit in open court and listen to these petty squabbles that should make us ashamed of ourselves. While the kingdom of God waits, we attempt to see who was right and who was wrong over some little petty grievance of men and women who have made a covenant with Jesus Christ to help to establish his kingdom, and who refuse to function until some church court will vindicate them. My brothers and sisters, I am convinced that the church of Jesus Christ can never accomplish its mission as long as you and I are unduly concerned over ourselves and our own desires. I believe out of this great shaking there is going to come a band of men and women that will put Jesus Christ first and foremost, and that will demonstrate they are willing to carry on regardless of difficulties in order that the kingdom of God and the righteousness of that kingdom will not be delayed. I want to read the second portion of one of the texts I read last night: "I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come."

That suggests to your speaker that without this shaking the desire of all nations would not come.

In other words, the nations must be made conscious of their needs for Christ and his kingdom before they will accept him. Too many of us have been content with our religious forms and devotions. We have not been concerned with the product of the forms and devotions. Why should we be? Was not the church organized in 1830 by the command of Jesus Christ? Was not the holy priesthood placed upon the head of Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery by John the Baptist? And haven't we identified ourselves with an institution that came forth as the prophets predicted? We have satisfied ourselves with all these questions, and because of that fact we have taken too much comfort in that designed by God as a means to an end and have overlooked the establishing of righteousness. Now I thank God we are being shaken. We are not taking it for granted; we are not taking it for granted that our church came forth as God predicted; we are not going to be satisfied simply because we have a doctrine today similar to the New Testament. Oh, no, we have been too content with these matters. All that I have said tonight is true, and I thank God it is true, for without a doctrine similar to the New Testament, without the church constituted as it is, the purposes of God concerning the salvation of man could not be realized. All that I have described was merely intended by Almighty God as a means to the end. He had in mind the means of establishing his kingdom and his righteousness on the earth, and I am glad tonight we are awakening to the fact that all God has done will not suffice; there is something for us to do.

Our Disappointments

Those of us who profess His name, those who have arisen from the waters of baptism, must not be content until they have taken advantage of every privilege and opportunity that the church has to offer as a means of establishing the kingdom of God upon earth. Perhaps you do not at first see the full implications of this statement; let me further explain. To those of you who have paid tithing and are now in the midst of financial reverses, let me say the Lord never promised you that you would have no financial reverses. Listen carefully! No, I know how you feel, and those of you who are business men in our church, I don't want you to feel that God has forsaken you because you are face to face with the same difficulty that other business men are facing, and they are not members of this church. I was led to tell one group of business men in one State that unless they turned to God and conducted their business as sons of God that the time would come that they would not only lose their business, but their souls. I have lived to see part of that come to pass. Will these few illustrations help you to see what I have in mind? I hope so. I simply say that because you and I have been baptized does not guarantee to us freedom from depression. Because we have paid some or all of our tithing does not guarantee that we will have no financial reverses.

Promises of the Lord

Listen! There have come to us certain promises; there have come to the church of Jesus Christ certain promises. God has promised us economic independence, freedom from corruption in government, freedom socially; God has promised us protection—not by joining his church, but that in and through the church of Jesus Christ and all that the church makes possible, as sons of God, we might build anew on this earth human relations that would bring to us security in government, security in business, security socially. And had this people, members of the church of Jesus Christ, hearkened to the commands of Almighty God and put into practice the full counsel of God, we would be free tonight from this present depression. If this great shaking does nothing more than cause this people to become discontented with their present standing and arouse within us a more active participation so far as the commandments of God are concerned, the shaking will have been a blessing, to say the least, and I think I can see the fruits of that shaking already.

I am glad you have found the church of Jesus Christ. I am happy tonight that God Almighty has caused his church to be organized in the latter days. There is no other organization I know of that can do what God wants this church to do; but, my friends, it is one thing to have the means; it is another thing to exercise the means, and unless I misjudge this shaking, it will compel us to exercise the means that God has placed at our disposal to protect ourselves from the conditions on the earth and those yet to come. The contribution a hundred thousand Latter Day Saints could make to this world would be small to say the least, if we had one hundred thousand Latter Day Saints.

As I listen to the words of the statesman falling from the radio, I am made conscious of the fact God has other agencies outside of the church of Jesus Christ. "I have many forces at work that ye know not of." I think I can discern some of these forces at work among the nations of the earth. These nations will eventually reach the place where they will cry out for the desire of the nations to come. They will want God's government; they will want God's system of doing things; they will want to live as God wants his children to live. They are living in the fields today of experimentation, and they might have learned by revelation. Do not judge them harshly, for I am frank to admit, you and I have benefited very little from what we have had revealed. We have had the revelation, but we have put very little of it into practice or into operation. There are many excuses, but after all they are merely excuses, and it makes no difference what this man or a group of men does, inasmuch as we have each made a covenant with Jesus Christ, the responsibility rests with us. Many of us are waiting for Brother So and So or Sister So and So or some other group to do something, and while we wait another waits for us. All these things, we say, are contending powers; and, thank God, when we are face to face with this, we are going to think for ourselves. I have long since reached the conclusion that Zion would never come until the sons of God are forced to bring it into existence. The forty-fifth section of the Doctrine and Covenants says so very plainly. If you will go back into the past you will discover that necessity was what brought the people forth, whether it was the Israelites coming out of Egypt or crossing the Red Sea. You will discover that every upward move was one that force compelled. It is too bad that we must learn obedience by the things we suffer, but this method seems to be indispensable for the progress of the human family; and because I know that to be true, I am reconciled to the suffering that this old world must endure. The nations of this earth are going to be sifted, governments are going to be sifted, economics are going to be sifted. The church of Jesus Christ will not be exempt, but out of this great shaking there may emerge a state that will be known as the kingdom of God. It will be said of God's people as it was said of Christ, that the Word has become flesh and dwells among men full of grace and truth.

Knowing what you have in the way of truth, as a servant for Christ my prayer is to hold fast to that which is good.

Far-sighted leaders in the churches fully realize that, although governments can build the political structure of peace, this structure must be undergirded with a spiritual purpose and a dynamic will-to-peace. The will-to-peace is not the product of law-making. It is the product of religious education. It involves the development in children and youth of deep convictions concerning the fatherhood of God, the spirit and teaching of Jesus Christ, the unity of the human family, and the principles of justice. It involves also the cultivation of attitudes of respect and appreciation for other peoples.—Editorial in Federal Council Bulletin, March, 1931.

5. The Times for Sacrifice.
When the need exists and good will result.
When the objective requires cooperation.
When encouragement of its purpose is an obligation.
6. The Benefits of Sacrifice.
It promotes the work of God.

It assists worthy aims and ideals.
 Confidence and support is encouraged.
 It develops brotherhood and friendship.

Many early saints sacrificed all: Restoration Movement, 161-166.

This outline is intended to stimulate consideration of the subject, but not to restrict or limit either in scope or order of arrangement. The spirit of sacrifice is a priceless possession and brings the abundant blessing of God. The individual must decide which of these outline suggestions are needed in his life, and which may best be used in his teaching work. The material is too voluminous for a single sermon, which suggests the process of selection according to individual requirements and features to be stressed.

The Prophecies and Promises of God

Part Three

By J. A. Koehler

Themes of the Prophets

Some of the prophets have a theme which is woven into the whole warp and woof of all their prophetic writings. The theme of Daniel's prophecies is the rise and fall of nations, of peoples, and of governments. Daniel has very little to say about the theme that seemed always to have stirred the heart of Isaiah, which was economic justice—or injustice, depending upon the angle from which it is viewed—the downfall of economic confusion called "Babylon," and the realization of his hope—a triumphant Zion. Almost inevitably, in such a discussion, predictions are made about the fate of peoples and the triumph of the kingdom; but Isaiah does not do this without revealing the burden of his heart: "How hath the oppressor ceased."

The theme of the prophecies of Saint John, the Divine, for the most part, is the church and the destiny of her peoples.

Familiar to all Latter Day Saints is the case of Joseph the Martyr, the theme of whose prophecies is "Zion," her tribulations, and her redemption. In this relation, Joseph was not so much concerned with incidental happenings as he was about the theory of right human relationships. And his messages evidence a grasp of the subject that bears the marks of divine inspiration.

The themes of the prophets seem to have been determined by the special prophetic office work of the time—the general facts of the lives and times of the prophets. Isaiah was a subject and lived under the reign of Judean kings. Daniel was a subject of Babylonian kings.

Isaiah's people, for the most part, shaped their own national life; they governed themselves. Daniel's people were a subject people. Having freedom to achieve the glory of a nation, it was natural for Isaiah, a prophet of God, to talk to his people about their sins, which were calculated to lead to their downfall. On the other hand, Daniel's people were a captive people, and naturally his heart yearned for Jerusalem. His thoughts were about political imperialism and national freedom.

In the case of Jesus, who came to save his people from their sins, to preach the gospel in terms of fatherly love and brotherly care, and to build the church as an instrument to be used for these ends, it was quite natural that these questions should be the theme of his prophecies. And so he prophesied concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, the preaching of the gospel in all the world for a witness, and the fate of the church, together, of course, with such incidental matters as the coming of Elijah.

Joseph the Martyr lived in the time of the culmination of Christian idealism—the age in which the ideals of the Christian religion are to be crystallized in social institutions of the church's own building—Zion. In that case it is not difficult to understand why Zion was the theme of his prophecies—her tribulations, and her triumph. More than a hundred times he speaks of Zion in his prophetic messages. And this, I think, is one of the signs of his prophetic calling; for this is the dispensation of the fullness of times, according to the ancient prophets, in which the kingdom that will fill the whole earth is to be builded. And this is the prophecy of tomorrow.

The Prophecy of Tomorrow

In Wells The Outline of History, page 1090, is found this reference drawn from his study of the history of the race:

"If we suppose a sufficient righteousness and intelligence in man to produce presently, from the tremendous lessons of history, an effective will for a world peace—that is to say, an effective will for a world law under a world government—for in no other fashion is a secure world peace conceivable—in what manner may we expect things to move toward this end?"

And then he goes on to forecast the development of "a world order." Wells appears here in the role of a prophet; and I think a true prophet, whether called of God to that office or not.

Since the day when Joseph gave his prophecies concerning Zion—which, in one of its aspects, is a government of God designed to make economic life as a whole orderly, efficient, and just—more and more of the good men of the world have come forward to testify of the need of such a social order, if we are to save the gains we have made in civilization, or even to save it from a complete collapse. It seems that the light that enlightened the prophets of ancient times on the achievements to be made by the Christian movement in modern times, is the same light which enlighteneth the understanding of men of modern times whose souls are athirst for God, and who see in the social philosophy of the Christian movement the salvation of the world. That Zion is the prophecy of tomorrow, and that Zion is the goal of church endeavor.

Prophecies of Zion

"Before the great and terrible day of the Lord shall come . . . Zion shall flourish upon the hills, and rejoice upon the mountains, and shall be assembled together at the places which I have appointed."

"Zion shall be redeemed, although she be chastened for a little season."

"After your tribulations . . . your redemption, no more to be thrown down."

"In time you shall possess the goodly land."

"The rising generations, that shall grow up on the land of Zion, to possess it from generation to generation."

"The willing and the obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days."

"It shall come to pass among the wicked, that every man that will not take up his sword against his neighbor, must needs flee to Zion for safety."

"And it [Zion] shall be the only people that shall not be at war one with another."

And "The kingdoms of this world shall be constrained to acknowledge that the kingdom of Zion is in very deed the kingdom of our God and his Christ."

Such are the promises of Zion.

The Hope of the Prophets

In a sense every man of the church may be a prophet. In this sense: that he envisages the task of the church and conceives it in relation to human redemption. And all such men are expected to be animated with the hope of the prophets.

There is a hope of faith, and there is a hope of fanaticism. The hope of faith is grounded in experience with God, and in the conviction that his word is truth. The Christian religion, being adapted to the needs of the race, must triumph. In the end, the struggles of the race will bring it to see in that religion the conditions of human well-being and happiness. The prophets whose lives have been enriched in prophetic experience are firmly grounded in the conviction that one day the kingdoms of this world must become the kingdom of our God and his Christ. There is no other way out.

The prophets of God have been men of hope, in the storm as well as in the calm. Look at Paul and Silas with their feet in stocks, shut up in the inner prison after having been beaten with many stripes. And yet, in the midst of all these difficulties, they sang praises to God. They were sure that one day these prison doors would swing open and they would go forth free men, to carry on in the work of Christ.

Such was the hope of Joseph, the son of Jacob; of Joseph of Arimathæa; and of Joseph the Martyr. And these were not crazy people; they were supermen. Yes; Paul, the brightest intellect of the early Christian church; when other men "besought him not to go up to Jerusalem" because of the troubles they knew awaited him there, he would not be persuaded, but he answered them after the manner of the prophets: "What mean you? to break my heart? I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die." Such was his faith in the triumph of right.

There are not a few such examples. Daniel—an intellectual giant, who towered ten times above the intellectual elite of the whole kingdom of Babylon—was a prophet of hope. Let not bungling reciters of other men's thoughts ascribe the hope of such men to disordered brains. The world has acknowledged their greatness. And they shall never be forgotten.

In the face of the decree of King Darius—that any man who would make a petition to any God other than himself, should be cast into a den of lions—Daniel opened his window that all might hear; and, with his face toward Jerusalem, he prayed to God three times each day. He risked his life on the promises of God. What a contrast between Daniel and men of today who do not have enough faith in the promises of God to risk a few "dollars" in the cause of Zion.

False Prophets

What an opportunity is the day of tribulation for false prophets—the prophets of despair, to whom each new setting sun is a certain sign that we shall not see the dawn of another tomorrow. Against them the church has had due warning: "Take heed that no man deceive you" for, in the last days, "there shall arise false prophets," and "they shall deceive many."

Yesterday I walked down the streets of Independence. I met Brother X. The substance of his remarks to me were these: "Stewardships is all the bunk." "Stewardships might have worked in 1830, but it has no place in the life of today." "Zion is a practical impossibility," a "Utopian imagination that can have no existence in fact." "Even if we could have built Zion in the early days, we do not need it now." "Society at large is finding other remedies for its problems."

"They shall deceive many." Everywhere I go I find "respectable" and "dignified" and "devout" Latter Day Saints who predict diaster to those who are "foolish" enough to undertake to advance the cause of Zion. And through their personal influence or official prestige, or both, they cause many to lose faith in the redemption of Zion. The prophets of hope they regard with an air of supercilious contempt.

These false prophets, these prophets of despair, seek to turn the thoughts of people "backward" to the leeks and onions of Egypt. One hundred years ago the peoples of this church began to look with longing eyes toward the Promised Land. At the command of God they turned their backs on Babylon and their faces to Zion. No sooner had they begun that journey, than they found themselves being pursued by enemies in the rear. Outspread before them was a sea of political and economic problems upon which they were not equipped to embark. On the one hand were mountains of financial opposition; on the other hand the peaks of personal disqualifications. And the camp of Israel was thrown into confusion.

After having spent more than our forty years milling about in the wilderness of economic confusion—I suspect as a measure of personal preparation and of corporate discipline—the time for crossing "the Jordan" presses upon us. And we begin to cast about to discover by what route we may enter our Canaan."

And what a day for the prophets of despair! Having spied out the land, they tell us that there are commercial and financial giants in the land; and "We are not able to go up against them." "We are as grasshoppers" in our own sight. And, as was prophesied nearly 2,000 years ago, many are deceived; and they call for leaders who will take them back to the good old land of economic slavery from which the people of the church so recently sought to escape.

They do not understand that the rock of truth is to be flung at other than the targets of gold with which the commercial giants of Babylon one time will endeavor in vain to protect their vitals. They do not know how terrible are the weapons of economic righteousness. Much less do they understand how to use them.

The prophets of hope would launch the "Good Ship Zion" upon the deep waters of the rivers of truth. The prophets of despair would see it listing on its keel in the shallow pools of Babylon. It remains to be seen how soon enough men of faith will arise to man that boat and set it gliding over the waters of social righteousness to the land of peace and prosperity and happiness.

They Shall Be Fulfilled

"Search these commandments, for they are true, and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled." This is the record of prophecy.

One day the shackles which hold the work of the church at a standstill shall be broken; and men of the church shall be freed to carry on for the redemption of Zion, as the prophets said they would. One day the doors which hold us within the prison walls of Babylon will swing open; and this people will go forth to redeem the land of Zion with righteousness.

While we are in a strange land, let us sing the songs of Zion. If, against our will, we have been obliged to "go fishing," let us fish in the hope of the prophets, spending our talents and the fruit of our labor as best we can to keep intact the church of the living God. Who shall say that, one day, we shall not be recalled from our nets and put again to the tasks which we have had it in our hearts to perform?

There are times when we must "stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord." In such times, may we not throw the camp of Israel into confusion.

Against the counsel of those who say that the mission of the Restored Church—which is to build the kingdom of Zion—can not be fulfilled, we put the record of prophecy and the promises of God to this generation. Each person must make the choice of the counsel by which he shall be led. And the decision each makes will determine whether or not he shall be numbered among the men of prophetic vision and faith, who set their hands to the task of building the kingdom of God, which, in our day, is The Kingdom of Zion.

How Can We Make Our Work a Success?

By Marion Moroni Blakely

We wonder oftentimes why discords and a lack of harmony should interfere with our work—a work of God. We wonder why our brother doesn't see as we do. We think we have the "vision," but do we? We think we have the understanding, but do we? I wonder. If it is true that we have, by what means did we obtain it? What is the formula by which I can stand out and say what is right?

What deductions have I made that have given the needed results? Were these deductions made carefully, and with the most necessary requisite—prayerfully? Certainly God would be no respecter of persons. Certainly he would not willfully help persons devise different formulas. So in these different formulas, man has entered himself and left God out of the equation.

Perhaps it is those that can never be satisfied with church, those who can never see things right, that are the ones who have entered self and left out God.

Have we not the promises of God to help us find that equation, that formula?

If some can find that formula, all can, provided they prepare the way before them to find it. Certainly, however, we can not pose as a professor of Christianity, and still, unconscious as we may be of it, serve Satan, whose great gift to man is a mantle so light man may wear it without consciousness that it rests upon his shoulders, whilst in the folds are sheltered all the evils that labor for man's eternal damnation.

You who sit so lightly on the seats of spirituality, ready to dip the pen of dissatisfaction into the ink-pots of turmoil, jealousy, and hatred strewn on all sides of you, draw your sanctimonious cloaks of pride and self-centered unchristianity about yourselves and climb to a more suitable level—where from the altar of prayer you may beseech your Master for light and forgiveness; for the power and the understanding to help you be your brother's keeper. Pray not for God to help you—but rather for God to help you help yourself by helping others. Pray that your administrations among your brothers are not of self, but of love for your brother, that he may receive the benefit and glorify God.

Learn that he who would have, gives, and receives at the hand of God because he is a cheerful giver.

Learn that responsibility does not end by going the designated distance, but rather by going beyond—the same distance again if need be.

Learn that this temple we inhabit is a loan from the bank of God, to be returned with interest, the interest being the goodness, spirituality, harmony, love of brother, instead of self being worked out in that temple, glorified as it should be.

Learn to live so that people looking at you will at once connect you with that church that has the "Latter Day Light."

God's Fiddler

They called him a genius—
The Fiddler;
But he said, "I am only
The strings
Of God's instrument: He Playing on it.
Not I, but the fiddle
That sings."

Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands. Serve the Lord with gladness. Come before his presence with singing. Know ye that the Lord he is God: it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture. Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and unto his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name. For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations.—Psalm 100.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

A Correction

In last week's Herald, page 494, an error occurred in the preface to the article, "Purpose, Plan, and Spirit of the Church School." Concerning the New Church School Handbook the statement appears, "Sixty-four pages, price 25 cents." This is an error as the book will have about ninety-six pages and is priced 35 cents.

STUDY HELPS FOR PARENTS AND WORKERS IN THE NURSERY DEPARTMENT OF THE CHURCH SCHOOL

LESSON SIX

Play Materials for the Nursery Child

Last month we discussed a multitude of educational values to be found in play activities. In fact, we found that play means growth to the child—physical, mental, and social. It is necessary for his normal, happy development.

But mother-teacher asks, How can we help the child derive these values from play?

Our lesson this month will consider some of the means by which this problem may be solved. As writing implements are the "tools" of writing; carpentry tools the implements of building construction, so may we consider certain materials the "tools" of play. And as a workman uses certain tools for certain results, so certain toys are more appealing to the child in serving various "urges" of his being.

Let us consider our problem in two sections.

I. What types of toys do children need?

Sensory Development, the gateway to building up a "mental content," is an important phase of the preschool period. Sensations are being colored, modified, changed by the experiences of "seeing," "hearing," "tasting," "handling," and so on. Thus "sensation" becomes "perception" as the experience around any given item widens. The urge of the child, and indeed, of adults as well, to "see," to "hear," to "handle," to "explore," to "experiment" is in part, at least, due to this innate desire for sensory experience. Certain types of toys and play materials meet this very definite need.

During this age the urge for much physical activity is also predominant. As mental experience broadens and imagination develops, dramatic play assumes a larger place. As a degree of muscular coordination is achieved the urge to "create," to "build," to "construct" develops also.

Note: "Play Materials for the Family," an extensive chart carefully arranged and mimeographed in five large sheets and showing the types of toys children need and their purpose in play life, has been prepared by Mrs. Stevens for use in the Union High School, Phoenix, Arizona. Copies of the chart may be had by individuals or classes at 10 cents each to pay for paper and postage. Address Mrs. B. E. Stevens, 806 North Seventh Street, Phoenix, Arizona.

II. What qualities should be looked for in selection of toys?

1. Adaptability. The toy with which the child can "do" many things; one that stimulates the child to activity, encourages creative participation rather than passive observation. Example: Building blocks vs. mechanical "dancing darky."

2. Suitability for age or maturity. Example: A wagon or cars to push or pull vs. a bicycle for the three-year-old.

3. Artistic quality. Avoid grotesque ugly shapes, harsh colors, jangling discordant noises. Example: "Humpty Dumpty" animals vs. the grotesque type, "Felix the Cat," etc.

4. Durability. Flimsy toys encourage carelessness and destruction. Note: Some "take apart" toys should be provided to meet the need for experimentation.

5. Hygienic Features. Easily cleaned. Well-painted vs. unwashable toys.

6. Simplicity. The over-realistic, too elaborate toy offers little stimulation to the imagination. Example: Essentials for electric train vs. all accessories, station house, etc., which the child should construct.

7. Should encourage good habits and attitudes. Is a pacifier a good toy for a child? A gun? Military toys, cannon, soldiers, etc.

8. Safety. Smooth vs. sharp edges, etc.

9. Some toys to encourage play alone; others which stimulate cooperation. Finally, not too many at one time; a box or place in which to keep them, and time in which to use them.

Pisgah, Iowa

Local leaders are very active in their offices. All special day programs feature attractive numbers and create greater interest for all, the arrangements being worked out by talented sisters. Each Sunday finds the Saints gathered to worship.

The branch is proud of its orchestra of juniors, led by Sister Loving Hutchinson.

The new plan of the church school in its working out here provides more periods for quiet and reverent meditation.

Elder J. W. Lane recently visited and preached here.

This branch claims two of the district officers, Harry Emmerson, treasurer of the young people's organization, who has visited and instructed the Saints in several branches in the district; and Sister Bertha Van Eaton, superintendent of the church school, who has visited a number of locals in the interest of her office.

Elder Ray Whiting responded to the invitation to deliver the commencement address here Sunday, May 24. He also addressed the graduating class in the evening, each sermon bringing many stimulating thoughts.

The Women's Department is active.

There is nothing about which we should be discouraged, but there are many things to impel us forward.

Rock Island, Illinois

Rock Island Branch has concluded a most interesting series of meetings conducted by Elder F. C. Bevan, new district missionary. A three-week schedule was planned, but at the close of that time a packed house voted to continue another week. In fact, the average attendance rose from seventy-six the first week to one hundred and twenty-three the last. A "red and blue" contest helped to stimulate interest in bringing visitors, and the varied program featured each evening made the services attractive. The message which Brother Bevan brought each evening was of such a nature that those who came were deeply touched, and their souls were stirred with a longing to hear more and more of the philosophy of Christ and his restored gospel. Ten new members were added to the church, and we rejoice with them in their opportunity to begin life anew. To those of us who have long since taken the initial step has come a reevaluation of the gospel and our responsibility as adopted sons and daughters of God.

The morning preaching service of April 26 was a wonderful experience for the Saints. Brother Bevan spoke under the direct influence of the Spirit with power and conviction, exhorting the congregation to be more diligent in the Lord's vineyard; not only in gathering those who hunger for the gospel but in reclaiming those precious souls who have wandered away from the fold. We were duly reprimanded for the negligence which has robbed us of the peace and joy which He has promised, while we continue to give our time, talents, and money to worldly enterprises and pleasures. We suffer now, as the world must suffer, because we refuse to follow the voice of God.

After a week's intermission, Brother Bevan will begin a series of meetings at Moline.

Rock Island was sorry to lose the family of Brother E. R. Davis, district president, who has recently moved to Lamoni so that Joy may attend Graceland in the fall.

The Women's Department, under the direction of Sister Della Sackfield, has been meeting regularly and quilting. A few weeks ago they prepared a delicious chicken supper, from which they realized over thirty dollars. So large a number attended that many were turned away because of lack of accommodations. They have recently installed a splendid new set of cupboards, which will greatly facilitate the serving at conferences, etc. Sister Helen Lindley, in charge of the Oriole Girls, has been working out some interesting projects with them, and keeping up a fine spirit of enthusiasm and loyalty. The junior and intermediate girls have also formed a junior choir to sing each Sunday morning. The Sunday school has been growing splendidly under the supervision of Brother L. A. White, recently ordained an elder, and at Easter and Mother's Day the children presented impressive programs. The junior church presented a lovely Easter lily to the school.

Pastor L. W. Stiegel, has begun a project in the beautifying of the church lawn, which has already increased its attractiveness greatly. The presidency, board of stewards, and men's club are all actively engaged in constructive work.

We recently learned of the marriage of Sister Jennie Gunklock, of Rock Island, and Brother Kenneth Cady, of Millersburg, on February 28, at the Mansion house at Nauvoo. Sister Jennie, one of the faithful workers in the Rock Island Branch since girlhood, graduated from the Independence Sanitarium nearly two years ago and is now superintendent of the Milledgeville Hospital. Brother Kenneth will teach at Hazel Dell, Iowa, next year, where the couple will make their home. Our best wishes are with them.

We anticipate a good conference and Convention at Moline, June 12 to 14, with both Brothers John F. Garver and Eugene E. Closson present.

Haverhill, Massachusetts

May 19.—Since the first of the year Haverhill Branch has been functioning under the program adopted by the general church. The results are gratifying to priesthood and laity. The church school superintendent has endeavored to conduct the school along lines presented in the Herald.

Much interest has been shown in the six o'clock Sunday evening study class. The text used is Foundations of Geology, by Morris E. Mortimore.

At times attendance at midweek prayer meeting has been disappointing, but the hours demanded by daily labor are answerable in part for this.

At Easter the young people, who are few in number, presented a creditable concert which called forth the praise of Bishop E. L. Traver, who with his companion was present. Afterwards the bishop gave a resume of his trip to Independence at the call of the President to sit in on the sessions of the Order of Bishops. The financial condition of the general church was clearly explained by Brother Traver, and realization of the enormity of responsibility thrust upon the shoulders of these faithful men, was brought home to the Saints. The talk presented another opportunity for self-analysis.

The pastor and family were able to be present at the district conference at Providence. Distance made it impracticable for many from here to attend. Those who were present, however, returned with encouraging reports.

Through the interest and arrangement of Bishop and Sister E. L. Traver, who have often proved themselves friends of Haverhill Branch, the Saints heard a sermon by Apostle R. S. Budd while he was in this district. It added much to the enjoyment of the Saints that Elder William Patterson was included in the party.

Another welcome speaker was Elder David Dowker, who with his wife and daughters brought pleasant fellowship to Saints longing for association of those of like faith.

Sister Ruth Noyes, one of the younger group, has returned to Jonesport. Already reports have been received of her activities there.

Mother's Day was an outstanding occasion. Bishop M. C. Fisher and wife, and Elder George W. York and wife, of Boston, were present at the morning service. Bishop Fisher was the speaker. Following this service several cars went to Dover, New Hampshire, to assist the Saints in the observance of the day. The children gave a splendid program, after which Bishop Fisher addressed the assembled members. Lunch was enjoyed in Elder William Frost's restaurant.

Saints of Haverhill Branch have much sympathy for the early Macedonian saints. Their arms are outstretched to the Pauls of the missionary force, and their cry is: "Come over and help us." Nor do they feel that theirs is an isolated case.

Western Maine Conference

The conference of Western Maine met with Stonington Saints May 9 and 10. At the business meeting which opened at 2.30 p. m., ministerial reports and statistical reports from five branches were read. Reports were from Stonington, Mountainville, Sargentville, Vinal Haven, and the nonresident group.

Apostle J. A. Gillen was present and did most of the preaching for the conference. Elder Newman Wilson, of Jonesport, was also present and gave a splendid Mother's Day sermon.

Officers were chosen for the year as follows: District president, E. F. Robertson; associates, H. R. Eaton and A. Begg; clerk, Louise J. Eaton; treasurer, Brother Pearl Billings; chorister, Nettie Cook; organist, Jennie Carter.

The next conference will be held in the fall at Mountainville at the call of the district president.

Good attendance marked this conference though the weather was unfavorable.

Deselm Branch

(Near Manteno, Illinois)

This branch holds services each Sunday in charge of Brother Leslie Rogers. Though attendance is not large, the meetings are proving the means of building spiritual structures.

The church school gave a program of readings and songs followed by a sermon by Elder Earl D. Rogers on Mother's Day.

April 26 Brother Victor Eklof and family, of Waukegan, were present, and Brother Eklof gave the morning sermon, "Loving God and Our Neighbor as Ourselves."

A committee is now at work preparing a program for Children's Day. It is expected that on this day several children will be baptized.

The family of Brother and Sister Arthur Pement has been under quarantine for two months. Four of the children suffered from scarlet fever. Little Howard suffered other complications, and special prayers were offered for him. He is recovering slowly. Sister Pearl is the leader of women, and the children are much missed at Sunday school.

The minister of the Deselm Methodist Church sent an announcement and invitation to the Saints to attend a stereopticon lecture on the Malay Peninsula that he was giving at his church on last Sunday evening. Those who went appreciated the lecture.

A lecture on the Prohibition question was given Friday evening, May 22. He gave a description of the old-fashioned saloon and its attendant evils, and asked all those in the audience who had not seen such a place to rise. About three fourths of the people stood, and it was evident that while social conditions today are far from perfect, our children are removed from the evil influences of the saloon. We pray that this institution may never be allowed to return.

The Saints are looking forward to attending the district conference to be held at Mission in June.

Lansing, Michigan

Logan and Saint Joseph Streets

The Saints of Lansing have been kept busy during the past few weeks by various activities. Interesting services were held by Missionary O. J. Hawn from April 5 to 26. Some of these services were in the form of round table discussions, which brought out many interesting points. Although only two were baptized at the close of the services, we feel that the good derived can not be measured by the number baptized.

An event in March was the wedding of Brother LeRoy Andrews to Sister Ila Hambley. We wish this young couple much success and happiness in life.

District President William Osler was here April 23 and 24. Brother Osler's visits are appreciated, for he always brings cheer and encouragement to the Saints, as well as making them feel a greater responsibility in their work.

Four people have recently been baptized into the church in Lansing. Lavina and Hazel Viancour were baptized April 5 by Elder Alva Dexter, and Walter Carleton and Wallace Wellman were baptized by Elder O. J. Hawn at the close of his services here.

Mother's Day was remembered by a program at the church school hour, followed by a sermon by Elder William Osler.

The young people have recently organized into a club called "The Gleaners." They are planning on many activities during the summer.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

The priesthood are very active, visiting the home of each member, and conducting the church services. Elder E. E. Williams, branch president, keeps in close touch with the needs of the people.

The church school service at 9.30 on Sunday is well attended and followed by a praise service.

Attendance is gaining in the midweek prayer meeting and many helpful testimonies are given.

The Women's Department is doing well, Sister Elizabeth Hill the leader.

The members are anticipating an all-day meeting and joint sacrament service June 7. In this Saints of Pleasant Valley, McDermott, and West Portsmouth Mission will worship together. Elder A. E. Anderton, district president, and Bishop H. E. French, of Columbus, are planning to be here.

Elder Jacob G. Halb, of Middletown, just finished a two-week series at the home of Roy Cheffins which resulted in the conducting of five precious souls into the kingdom. One was Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cheffins' daughter, Margaret; two more were sisters of Mr. Cheffins. Many people were interested, and a number of other families are asking for services to be held in their homes. We feel that much good can be done at Portsmouth.

Irene Rose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rose, is improving after a five weeks' siege of typhoid.

Independence

Saints of Independence will open this month with a devotional service for the entire city Sunday morning, June 7, from 7.45 to 8.45, at the Stone Church. The members are asked to remember each other in prayer, the approach of sacrifice week, the needs of the church, and the opening of the summer Sunday evening series of services that evening at the Campus. President F. M. McDowell is to be the speaker of this series.

Numbers of Independence people and friends and relatives from out of town attended the commencement exercises of the Independence Sanitarium School of Nursing, conducted at the Stone Church May 26. On this evening twelve nurses received diplomas for completing the training course offered by the school.

Seated on the platform were Mayor Roger T. Sermon, Judge E. I. Purcell, and a large representation of physicians who are on the medical staff at the Sanitarium. The mayor and the eastern judge are, by reason of their positions, members of the board of directors of the Sanitarium. The city councilmen were in the audience.

The program was as follows: March, played by Robert Miller, organist; invocation, Elder John F. Sheehy; solo, "Friend of Mine," Sanderson, George Anway; piano selections, Mrs. John R. Green; solo, Mrs. S. A. Burgess; address, "More to Be Desired Than Gold, Yea, More Than Fine Gold," William Southern, jr., editor of the Independence Examiner; presentation of diplomas, President F. M. McDowell; presentation of pins, Miss Gertrude E. Copeland, superintendent of the Sanitarium; benediction, Bishop A. Carmichael; march, played by Robert Miller.

The scholarship prize offered by Miss Copeland was awarded to Miss Mabel Andrew, of Canada, who made an average grade of ninety-six during the three years of training.

A reception was held on the lawn of the Nurses' Home in Independence. The June rose bushes, in full bloom, made an attractive setting for the occasion. The Walnut Park Orchestra furnished music. Refreshments were served to two hundred and fifty friends and relatives of the graduates.

A program of supervised play for children between five and fifteen years of age was launched yesterday morning at the Campus, to continue during June and July. Two mornings a week, Tuesday and Friday, recreation and handwork will be in charge of the following workers: Primary group, Miss May Snead and Girl Scout assistants; junior group, Mrs. Jalmer Nelson, Mrs. Vivian Barto, Mr. Almer Sheehy, Mr. Gilbert Gordon, and Miss E. Brockway; intermediate group, Mrs. J. R. Lentell, Miss Venita Coonce, Mr. Almer Sheehy, and Miss Gladys Teeters; director of drills, Miss Ada Fallon. There will be an exhibition of handwork at the close of school.

Branches of the church in Independence have formed a volley ball league. George Lewis, director of religious education for the church, will be in charge of the league. Games will be played on Tuesday evenings at various branches, and a prize will be awarded the season's winning team.

Because of unfavorable weather, the Boy Scout camporee, which was to have been staged at the Campus Saturday and Sunday, was postponed until next week-end, June 6 and 7. More than two hundred Boy Scouts of the Covered Wagon Area had signified their desire to attend the camporee, and great was their disappointment when rain and muddy grounds made the event impossible last week-end. The camporee is attracting considerable attention.

"A new church was born into the world one hundred and one years ago with a new philosophy and ideals," stated Bishop C. A. Skinner, of Kansas City Stake, to the Stone Church congregation Sunday morning in his sermon, which was a plea for us to live as we have had the plan revealed to us. If there had been nothing new about this church, there would have been no need for its establishment. It was to perform a mission, the teaching and applying of the Zionian plan of living; it was to live the Sermon on the Mount.

Today we are well convinced of the need for a Zionian order as we look about us and note the spirit of unrest, revolution, and communism, asserted the speaker who chose for the basis of his talk Doctrine and Covenants 81. The world recognizes the need for a different social order, and love is the basis upon which this social order must be organized.

The musical program of the morning offered a fine setting for Brother Skinner's earnest discourse. The Stone Church Choir sang two anthems, "Jesus, the Very Thought of Thee," and "Gloria in Excelsis"; Robert and George Miller played an organ-piano duet; Gomer Cool contributed a violin solo, and the congregation sang the old hymn, "The Lord Jehovah Reigns."

A drama, "Law Enforcement," drew to the Stone Church on Sunday evening a large crowd of people, and presented to them in striking light the lesson of our great national need for right thinking, right voting, and law living. Action centered about a court scene, a trial which involved the question of responsibility of crimes committed by intoxicated persons. The production was made possible by Mr. Nathan R. Johnson, representative of the Anti-Saloon League, of Kansas City, who was assisted by a cast of local people, White Masque Players and their friends.

For two nights the Liberty Street Church has been the stage from which pupils of the Independence Branch of the Kansas City-Horner Conservatory of Music have made their bows to the public. On Monday evening the beginner and elementary pupils of Arthur H. Mills, in piano, and Mrs. Lyda Budd Robertson, in expression, presented the program. Tuesday evening's program consisted of advanced piano pupils of Arthur H. Mills assisted by Miss Opal Williams and Miss Joy Carpender, expression pupils of Mrs. Robertson. Tonight the concluding program of the series presents piano pupils of Esther D. Roepe, assisted by expression pupils of Mrs. Robertson.

Mrs. Laura A. Gard, fifty years old, died at her home in Independence May 25 of a complication of diseases. She has been ill for six weeks. Surviving are her husband, B. D. Gard; two daughters, Mrs. Hazel Curtis, and Mrs. Isabel Nunamaker; her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Totty; a stepson, Oscar Gard; one sister, Mrs. Addie Tignor; one brother, J. F. Totty, and many other relatives. The funeral service was conducted from the Stone Church May 28, and interment was in Woodlawn Cemetery.

Elder D. O. Cato, chief of police in Independence, was host to a dinner given the evening of May 29 to the members of the police force. Mayor and Mrs. Roger T. Sermon and Police Judge Byron A. Stewart and Mrs. Stewart were guests of honor. The dinner was served by the Laurel Club in the dining room of the Auditorium.

Mrs. J. Glenn Fairbanks was elected president of the Tuesday Club for the 1931-1932 season at its meeting on May 26, at the home of Mrs. Frank Hershey. Mrs. F. Henry Edwards presided. Action was taken by the club to sponsor one of the new Stone Church troops of Girl Scouts, troop 33 captained by Miss May Snead.

Enoch Hill

Members of this congregation listened profitably to a series of Sunday night sermons, preached by Pastor H. L. Barto, on the fundamentals of the gospel. His concluding sermon was delivered last Sunday evening, and as a result the Saints feel more established and hopeful in the faith and better prepared to meet with the members from the other branches at the Campus next Sunday night. We are eager to hear Brother McDowell's Sunday night sermons, to be given to the Saints of the center place during the summer.

Elder J. H. Miller spoke words of cheer and instruction to the congregation Sunday morning.

Recreation draws numbers of young people to the church grounds each Friday night. A definite program is being followed by those in charge. Enoch Hill's volley ball team is a unit of the volley ball league of the several congregations in Independence. Our players aspire to make a record for themselves during the season.

The helpful attitude of the local ministry and officers of the church school impel the district to go forward. Everyone is busy. We can see where progress is being made, and are happy, for there is much to be achieved. We pray that with the entire church we may grow in the spirit of brotherly love and consecration.

Thirty-fifth Commencement for Graceland College

The thirty-fifth college commencement attracted to Lamoni last week a large number of alumni and friends and relatives of present college students, who shared enjoyably in the numerous activities leading up to the climax, the graduation exercises at Zimmermann Hall, Friday night, May 29. At that hour the following program was given:

Processional March, "Pomp and Circumstance," Sir Edward Elgar, by Lamoni-Graceland Orchestra. #### Honors Chapel

The program of the Honors Chapel, held Thursday morning and one of the peaks of interest of commencement week, began with the presentation of men who were awarded the athletic G. Coach Gilbert presented each man in a unique manner. Mrs. A. R. Gilbert, director of women's athletics, next presented all girls receiving honors in athletics.

An interesting feature of the morning's program as far as journalists were concerned, came with the presentation of pins to those attaining regular membership of the Press Club. The president of the Press Club, Paul Utnehmer, had the pleasure of conferring this honor on the new regular members.

Mr. May, president of the Lambda Delta Sigma Society for the coming year, presented the new associates and regular members of the organization. Graceland's increase in the quality of production as to fine students is evidenced in the large group of students attaining the honor of Lambda Delta Sigma.

The student body and visitors of commencement week next had the pleasure of seeing the most representative Graceland Girls, as Miss Morgan presented the new and retiring members of the Crescent Club. This particular part of the program is always an annual feature in itself.

Miss Thompson, head of the Forensic department of the college, next presented those students receiving honors in forensics, Athenian Council, and College Players. At this time the outstanding honor was conferred upon the past student president, Noble Kelly, who has fulfilled the duties of his office with the ability of a fine leader.

Mr. Joseph Anthony took pleasure in presenting Miss Dorothy Prall as one having contributed outstanding work in the field of orchestra.

The Cousins Cup in Engineering was next presented by Mr. Roy Mortimore, to Rothbe Cook. This honor was conferred upon him by the outstanding work he has completed in the field of engineering.

The climax of the chapel came with the awarding of the highest honor the college can present, the Graceland Seal. At this time Miss Thompson presented Seals to Anna Lynn VanSike and Dorothy Elliott, who have contributed in an outstanding manner to the department of speech. Iris Butts, Irene Johnson, and Dorothy Prall were next given the great thrill of receiving the Gold Seal Award in Music. Miss Carlile had the pleasure of conferring this honor. Miss Elefson presented the Gold Seal in the field of journalism to the editors and business managers of this year's student publications. Eva Wallace, Paul Utnehmer, Albert Fisher, and David Morgan received this outstanding honor.

President Briggs concluded the program with the presentation of awards in scholarship. This year the three students to attain this achievement are: Aleta Jensen, Noble H. Kelly, and Lulu Romig.

Honors Chapel, in the eyes of the writer, seems to be the culmination of the year's activities when judgments are made, in all fields of study and extra-curricular activities. It is at this time that students who have spent a year of hard work and study receive the honor and satisfaction of their college year in the reception of recognition by the administration of Graceland.—Graceland Tower, May 29.

Commencement Functions and Festivities

Last week on College Hill was a round of society and class activities planned to make this year's commencement just as gay and enjoyable as it could be, welcoming back former students and bidding farewell to present Gracelanders. Here we have space to mention only a number of the attractions which made this year's finishing of school a high mark in the lives of many: Class Day exercises on Friday afternoon at which time the audience listened to Mr. Anthony's orchestra, the Graceland Quartet, and witnessed numbers from the girls' annual gym show repeated upon request. The dramatic production was "The Happy Man." The main feature of the program was the coronation of the G Queen, Miss Daisy Black.

Apostle F. Henry Edwards delivered the annual baccalaureate sermon at the Coliseum Sunday evening, May 24, basing his remarks on three pleas which he made to the graduates. He asked them to engage in worth-while tasks, to live courageously, and to cultivate spiritual realities. The service was in charge of President G. N. Briggs, while Elder A. R. Gilbert delivered the prayer. Special music was by the Oratorio Society and the A Cappella Chorus.

The Acacia, Graceland's yearbook, came out the afternoon of May 26. It is a true representation of 1930-31 Graceland life, beginning quite appropriately with an engraving of the "Old West Door," and continuing through with fine pictures of the campus and various phases of student life.

The Graceland College Players presented their last play of the year the evening of May 26, "What Every Woman Knows," by J. M. Barrie. Character parts of the production were well cast, and one of the interesting things about this play cast was the fact that three of the players were from Missouri, two from Iowa, one from Massachusetts, one from Australia, one from California, and one from Illinois.

Three recitals were presented by Mrs. Hunt. The first was the graduating recital of Miss Irene Johnson, voice, and Miss Dorothy Prall, piano. This occurred May 21. The freshman voice recital occurred May 20, and Monday evening, May 25, the last recital of the group was presented at 6.30 by sophomore and junior students. These recitals added much to the entertainment of the closing weeks of school.

The last prayer meeting of the school year was held in the reception room of the girls' dormitory May 20. Miss Loleta Johnson played the piano. Carl Ruoff offered the opening prayer. Elder R. A. Cheville then introduced the theme of the service, "What Shall I Remember of Graceland a Year, a Decade, from Now?" After the benediction by Elder Cheville all lights were extinguished but one, and a quartet sang, "God Be with You Till We Meet Again."

The last General Athenian of the 1930-31 school year occurred Saturday night, May 23. The first thing on the program was a one-act play, "Playgoers," given by the Dramatic Production Class. There was a vocal solo by Wilma Smith, then a reading, "Trifles," by Pauline Siegfried. Elizabeth Smith played the harp, and Madelyn Weegar gave one of her humorous selections. Bob Brown played a piano solo, and the program ended by reading the Athenian Mirror. The gavel was passed from the present Athenian Council president to the new one, from Noble Kelly to Paul Utneher.

The commencement concert was given at the Coliseum May 27, and the Lambda Delta Sigma banquet occurred Thursday noon, May 28.

The Hawaiian Mission

Main Branch, 1632 Mott-Smith Drive, Honolulu

May 20.—During the last month and up to the present, the Hawaiian Branch has enjoyed a very active program. Easter Sunday was ushered in by an early hour young people's prayer service. Brother K. Tsuji, priest, and Brother Elias Kaawakauo, teacher, conducted the service, which was attended by the young folks, who were happy and grateful for the opportunity to thank the Lord and praise his name. It was indeed a beautiful service, for the young had made proper preparations for the occasion. Realizing that it was sacrament Sunday and the day commemorating the resurrection of the Lord, they had come with prayerful and thankful hearts. The testimonies borne, the prayers offered, and the songs sung, showed that the young Saints sensed the significance of the day and that they have caught the true vision of the Living Christ! These monthly young people's prayer services are proving profitable; the young folks are being drawn closer together in Christian fellowship by a strong spiritual bond, and are being mutually inspired to press forward.

After the regular Sunday school session, the Saints once again enjoyed a joint sacrament service, the second this year when all three branches here in Honolulu (Chinese, Japanese, Hawaiian) have come together to sup at the Lord's feast. About one hundred and thirty-five renewed their covenants with the Lord, and received added strength and power to carry on. There were a number of visitors present, as well as many young children not yet baptized; including all, there were about one hundred and fifty present. Before the service, three young girls were baptized by Brother Macrae—Evelyn Yap and Florence and Muriel Voeller. It was a beautiful and impressive baptismal service, and everyone present was made to realize more fully the great significance of the day upon which he or she entered the waters of baptism. The beautiful decorations added greatly to the inspiring atmosphere and the peaceful spirit of the day. Sisters Helen Moore, Madelene Dowsett, and Winifred Piltz were in charge of the decoration for this special day. We feel thankful for the wonderful cooperation and the willingness with which our sister Saints have helped to decorate the church each Sunday. Brother Hoe, the active young deacon, and all the members of the priesthood, appreciate this wonderful spirit of "kokua" or service, being manifested by these sisters.

That evening the young girls of Sister Macrae's Sunday school class, together with the help of Queenie Piltz, who took the leading role of the evangel, gave the play, "The Challenge of the Cross." It was excellently rendered, and the cast performed better than the most hopeful among them expected. I believe they even surprised their fine director, Sister Macrae, to whom credit is due for the success of the presentation. The choir, in charge of Sister Gardie Thompson, rendered the song selections to accompany the play, and gave the right atmosphere into the performance. It was one of the best performances put on by the young people. These young people have wonderful talents in various lines; they are improving them right along, and they are happy to use them in the service of the Lord.

The Macraes Go to Hilo

On the eve of their departure for Hilo, April 6, the Department of Recreation and Expression gave a social in honor of Brother and Sister Macrae. An interesting program, in charge of Sister Gardie Thompson, was rendered. During the evening Brother and Sister Macrae were presented with a little gift, a contribution from the Saints. Refreshments in the form of ice cream and cakes were served, and everybody went home happy. Although we, in Honolulu, regretted very much to have our pastor and companion leave us so soon after coming here, and especially when things were just getting into fine shape, we realize that the Hilo Saints are our brothers and sisters and that their need, at the present time, of the help of a missionary is greater than ours. We are happy to know that the Saints there are making fine progress since the arrival of Brother and Sister Macrae among them.

The next day a number of Saints were down at the wharf to see Brother and Sister Macrae off. They were literally smothered with beautiful leis (flower wreaths), although they were only going a few hundred miles away, and for a very short period of time—we hope. It was good to see the girls of Sister Macrae's Sunday school class wish her God-speed. She has won her place in their young hearts.

Local Workers "Carry On"

Regular services have, as usual, been enjoyed by all. Brother Waller has occupied the pulpit during the evening services, and he has given some comforting and inspiring sermons. He is a very busy worker since our pastor's temporary leave; he not only has charge of the Main Branch affairs, together with Elders Mahi and Kelii, but also attends the services of both the Japanese and the Chinese Branches, besides making his regular calls, etc.

On the evening of May 6, the last Sunday before he left for Japan, Brother Etzenhouser delivered one of his best sermons—to the writer, his best so far. He spoke on "Fundamentals." No doubt it will be of interest and even of some surprise to many Saints to know that Brother Etzenhouser is now in the "Land of the Cherry Blossom." Sister Etzenhouser and Robert are here; they have rented the mission house while Brother and Sister Macrae are in Hilo. We trust that they also may in time be able to join Brother Etzenhouser in Japan.

The Book of Mormon historical playlets are being presented, one a month, and they are creating a greater interest among the membership to study more carefully the message of that "marvelous work and a wonder." Those who have taken an active part in the different plays have certainly enjoyed the work, and have felt the spiritual influence that results in linking their lives with the great characters of the Restoration movement.

The Women's Department continues to lead the way in keeping our treasurer, Brother Hoe, smiling and happy. On May Day, which, in Hawaii, is "Lei Day," our active sisters took advantage of the occasion and took some orders for leis. The result was something over ten dollars profit.

Over forty young people, nonmembers included, meet every Friday night on the church grounds during our recreational period. We have a great time playing volley ball and other games. Some keen competition has been afforded our regular team by the nonmembers, but as yet we have held our own and are still the "Friday-nite-champions." With the coming of summer, the Young People's League plans to expand its activities, as many of our young folks will be back in Honolulu from the other islands.

Observe Mother's Day

Mother's Day was another full day for the Saints. After the regular Sunday school period, the different classes took part in a short Mother's Day program. Instead of the regular morning preaching services, there were short addresses by Sister Winifred Piltz and Brother K. Tsuji. Sister Piltz spoke on "What Mother Now Means to Me." It was a wonderful tribute, not only to her mother, but to mothers in general; also a fervent appeal to the young folks to a better appreciation of our mothers. Brother Tsuji spoke on "The Influence that Christian Mothers, Latter Day Saint Mothers in Particular, Have upon Youth." The choir rendered some beautiful anthems, and Sam Kahanamoku sang a solo in honor of mother. Words can not describe the uplifting effect of the beautiful decorations, which were in charge of Sister Bernice Kahanamoku Fedar. It seemed that Mother Nature, in her simplest attire, which is her most beautiful, had been transplanted in the home and presence of her Lord. A large congregation was present and enjoyed the spirit of the day.

That evening a playlet, "The Young Mothers of Today," was presented by a group of young sister Saints. It depicts the young mothers of different nations, who, in answer to the message of "The Spirit of Mothers," bring her their hearts' offerings, and make known to her the longings and the aspirations of their hearts, that she may grant them their desires. The young mothers were dressed in the typical native costumes and made a colorful scene, especially at the very end when they appeared together on the stage. Sister Priscilla Piltz Kramer, as "Spirit of Mothers," played her difficult part very well. The young sister Saints likewise carried out their parts satisfactorily. The choir again rendered the song selections to go with the presentation, and deserves the high praise that it received. To Sister Queenie Piltz goes the credit for directing the whole thing so successfully.

The Chinese Branch (Morris Lane, Palama, Honolulu)

On Mother's Day this Sunday school presented a short program in commemoration of the day. All present, both old and young, wore the red or white flowers in memory of their mothers. Upon invitation extended to us by the Hawaiian Branch, we attended their morning and evening services that day. The beautiful singing, the interesting program, combined with the spirit of the day, made this occasion a happy one.

Brother and Sister Macrae, who have gone to Hilo to assist with the work there, have been greatly missed by the Chinese Saints, especially at our prayer services. Although the attendance at these weekly prayer services is small, due to our small membership, the majority being boys and girls of grammar and high school age, we have some very profitable times together. These young people, nonmembers as well as members, never hesitate to take part in the meetings, and they bear fine testimonies regarding God's manifestation of love and mercy to them.

Brother Lee, associate pastor, and his daughter, Emmaline, were participants in Rossini's Choral Oratorio, "Stabat Mater," which was presented on May 13 and 14. It was sponsored by the American Legion and was under the direction of Professor Joaquin Wanrell, a very talented musical leader.

Central Church

The sermon for the church school Sunday morning was by Bishop J. A. Koehler, whose subject was "The Hope of the Prophets." He affirmed that every prophet of the Christian religion has been a prophet of hope, and that the people are best served by prophetic leadership. Unfortunately, however, there are those who have not and do not respond to prophetic utterances.

Elder George Elbert Smith and members of his family of the Utah Church, worshiped with the Saints at the eleven o'clock service.

Several names have been handed to the pastor for baptism on Children's Day. The pastor would be glad to have a complete list of those who are to be inducted into the kingdom. A special class has been arranged to give these candidates an opportunity to talk about the gospel with the pastor.

The stake O. B. K. council is sponsoring a summer volley ball tournament for both girls and boys. Six teams have entered in each division, and the first round of games will be played June 16. Following this tournament, tennis will be featured.

Argentine Church

Evangelist U. W. Greene was the occupant of the sacred desk Sunday evening, talking on "Sainthood." The point about which he centered his discourse was that there is no comparison between the decoration of an earthly potentate and the honor of Sainthood bestowed upon an individual by the heavenly Father.

Bennington Church

This splendid congregation is not idle. Attendance of the members here at the special meeting conducted at Central Church by Apostle Gleazer awakened in them a new desire to go forward in the gospel work.

May 24 Pastor O. G. Helm was the speaker at the eleven o'clock hour, and in the evening Elder Samuel Twombly, of Fanning, Kansas, was the guest speaker.

Last Sunday night Elder Hugh W. Goold, former pastor, was announced as speaker.

Fourth Church

"Faith" was the theme of the family service the morning of May 24. Tyra Lueking related a beautiful story on the theme.

In the afternoon nine cars filled with Saints went from here to inspect the stewardship farms in the Atherton community. There the visitors were addressed by the pastor, Amos E. Allen. He gave the Saints a hearty welcome and explained the principles underlying the stewardship farm undertaking. The cars wound their way around the twenty-five hundred or three thousand acres of fields of potatoes, wheat, oats, and corn, and past several large chicken houses, and the inspection was thoroughly profitable to all visitors.

In the evening Pastor J. O. Worden preached a sermon centered about the last words of Moroni.

Fourth Church was well represented at the series of meetings lately conducted by Apostle E. J. Gleazer at Central Church.

On Mother's Day a good program honored the work of our mothers. The Saints, on the following Sunday, heard the songs and prayers of three little girls of Richmond, Missouri, who have been isolated from church privileges all their lives.

Speakers during the month of April were Patriarch Ammon White, Apostle F. Henry Edwards, Brother F. O. Branham, Brother Curtis Vernon, Brother Hale Bullard, Priest L. E. Babcock, and one Sunday Sister Tyra Lueking gave a short talk on "Loyalty."

Elder H. A. Koehler preached an earnest discourse Sunday evening, May 3.

Holden Stake

Holden

The annual election was held the first Sunday in May. W. S. Macrae was sustained as pastor, and F. A. McWethy and W. H. Eliason as his associates. Director of the church school, W. H. Eliason; church chorister, Floy McWethy; supervisor of the adult division, Mrs. C. A. Silsby; supervisor of young people's division, W. H. Eliason; supervisor of children's division, Mrs. W. H. Eliason.

Sunday, April 26, Elder J. A. Koehler gave an excellent sermon on the subject, "Counting the Cost." He pictured very plainly the need for further obedience, doing things in their order, and having more respect for office.

Mother's Day was observed by a special service in honor of mothers. The church was beautifully decorated with apple blossoms and spirea. The mothers, each with a daughter on her arm, marched to reserved seats to the music of the organ, played by Bernice Hampton. A boy's trio, Robert Baker, Robert Bixby, and Robert Kittinger, sang, "That Wonderful Mother of Mine." The interpretation of the picture "Ruth and Naomi" was given by Mrs. W. H. Eliason. After a short talk by Brother Eliason, and the dedication of a poem to his own mother, the daughters pinned a carnation on their mothers. Mrs. Ralph Baker and Floy McWethy sang a duet, "Hush a'Bye O." In tribute to mother, Francis Dillon sang a solo, "I Love the Name of Mother"; Max Dillon read the poem, "Only One." The scripture story, by Pastor F. A. McWethy, was based on one of Jesus' last acts, the committal of his mother to the care of his beloved disciple with these words, "Behold, thy mother."

Patriarch H. O. Smith, of Independence, delivered the morning and evening sermons Sunday, May 17. His advice was timely and helpful.

The mothers and daughters of Holden were guests to a mother-daughter banquet planned and arranged by the fathers and sons. Nearly one hundred persons were served. In compliment to the men waiters, it was said that they served in excellent style and efficient manner. It is feared that as a result of the proficiency of the men in serving this banquet, some of the wives will capitalize on this experience! Special guests were President F. M. McDowell, Mrs. McDowell, his wife, and Mrs. Krahl, whose husband, before his death, was president of the Holden Stake. Each of these three had part on the program. Brother McDowell gave a most excellent talk, charging the mothers and daughters with the responsibility of making the manhood of our land and raising the standards of morality. He asked them to build upon the foundation of love, faith, service, and purity. Holden feels grateful to Brother McDowell for his willing and helpful service.

Marshall

The Mother's Day program was a realistic and homey affair. The scene was a comfortable living room, where home life was well depicted. Solos were sung by Dixie Spohrer, Frankie Thayer, Zella James Stewart, Virginia Walton, and two duet numbers were by Dorothy Ridge and

Our Departed Ones

McCASLIN.—Thomas Omer McCaslin, son of Robert E. and Martha McCaslin, was born at Donaldson, Illinois, April 24, 1883. At Wakeeney, Kansas, on January 26, 1907, he married Phoebe Williams, daughter of David Williams, of Denver, Colorado, and to this union was born one child, a daughter. Seven years after the marriage the family moved to Denver and lived for a period of five years. In 1919 they moved to Illinois, where they lived until just one year ago, when they returned to Denver. His last months of life were months of almost continuous suffering, yet in the midst of his troubles he maintained a cheerful and hopeful spirit. He passed away at the Williams home in Englewood on Thursday, March 5, 1931, at 11.25 p. m. He became a member of the Reorganized Church in April, 1917, and although he was denied the privilege of having the association of the church members to any great extent, he was firm in his faith in God. His father, two sisters, and a brother preceded him in death. He leaves his mother, Martha McCaslin; two brothers, Louie A. and William H. McCaslin; four sisters: Mrs. Nellie Ellington, Mrs. Lulu Koontz, Mrs. Mae Traylor, and Mrs. Lillie White; his wife, Mrs. Phoebe McCaslin; his daughter, Audrey Fern McCaslin, and a host of other relatives and friends.

POTTS.—Elizabeth Jane Potts was born April 15, 1866, in Forest of Dene, Gloucestershire, England. She died May 10, 1931, in Valley Stream, Long Island, after a life of a few days more than sixty-five years. She was a patient, devoted, and loving mother and a Saint interested in all God's creatures. Her passing came with the peace and blessing of the Father. Left to mourn are her husband, two sons, two daughters, four grandchildren, and many friends. Interment was in Valley Stream, the funeral service being conducted by T. J. Elliott.

VAN DRAN.—George W. Van Dran was born April 10, 1853, at Kewanee, Illinois. He died at his home in Independence, Missouri, May 25, 1931. His parents died when he was but nine years old; one brother and one sister also preceded him in death. Mr. Van Dran was baptized by Elder H. A. Stebbins at Plano, Illinois, January 29, 1880. On December 21, 1881, he was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Comly. To this union three children were born: two sons and one daughter, L. W. Van Dran, Collins, Iowa; G. W. Van Dran, Clinton, Iowa; Mrs. Grace Reese, Independence, Missouri. One son, W. J. Van Dran, of Kewanee, Illinois, was born to him by a former marriage. August 6, 1890, Brother Van Dran was ordained a teacher, which office he held to the time of his death. He was a firm believer in the restored gospel and enjoyed talking on the subject with others. They lived in Plano, Illinois, for a number of years, and then for ten years in Chicago. Later they moved to Independence, where for some time they have made their home. He was a good man, who always spoke well of others, and held their respect and confidence. He lived a Christian life and was held in esteem by all who knew him. He passed away strong in the faith of latter days. Left to mourn are his wife, three sons, one daughter, eight grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren, other relatives, and many friends. The funeral sermon was by W. A. McDowell, assisted by J. M. Terry.

*An Official CommunicationAn Epistle to the Saints

We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; persecuted, but not forsaken; cast down, but not destroyed. For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.—2 Corinthians 4: 8, 9, 6.

The second year of the second century of our church life finds us witnessing almost unprecedented conditions throughout the world. On the one hand we see intelligent and powerful peoples having at their command the most amazing instruments of production; an over-supply of the staple commodities of life; articles of luxury, comfort, and convenience never before equaled in the history of the world; money literally piled in banks. On the other hand, we see unemployment, suffering, want, and misery over wide areas and in many nations such as have never before been evidenced in the records of relief organizations.

The church and her members have not escaped the distress and uncertainties of the present hour. From many centers in America as well as from foreign lands reports have been received of Saints who are in dire need. Missionary allowances are many months behind. A number of the brethren who were released have not yet been able to find employment. Their families are in actual need. The pleas which reach the Bishop's office in the current mail are pitiful. The want of these people is equaled only by their loyalty and devotion to the church, as is manifested in their appeals.

The difficulties of the present crisis are not the first which have beset the church. It is only necessary to mention our banishment from Jackson County in 1833, the extermination order of 1837, the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum, the trials of the dark and cloudy day, and the early struggles of the Reorganization as evidence of this statement. But the pages of history which record these events are also replete with examples of the blessings of God. He has never deserted his cause or his people. Sometimes they have hidden their faces from him. Then, learning through the things which they suffered, they have entered again through the gate of repentance to a life of loyal and consecrated devotion to their Maker.

A people with such a wonderful record as ours can have no thought of retreat. A cause purchased at such a price, witnessed to by the testimony of thousands of devoted men and women, a cause so in harmony with the principles enunciated by Jesus, with a message so vital to the needs of mankind today, can not fail. We can bring no word to the people of modern Israel but that they shall go forward.

Our difficulties are common to governments and industries of the present day. Witness the President of the United States making his chief concern the reduction of our national budget. Note the world-wide program of retrenchment in industry. It is certainly not surprising that the church, too, has had to retrench. If her liquid assets have become frozen, it is no more than has happened to many other people and organizations. In such times as these, those organizations depending upon the voluntary contribution of people are the first to suffer. Our church is no exception.

Notwithstanding these things, there must be no retarding of our spiritual endeavor. In fact, the time is ripe for a spiritual revival. Economic depression must not be allowed to produce spiritual depression.

The immediate task before the church is that of producing a spiritual rebirth among its officers and members. It is a time for reconsecration and rededication. The message of the hour is one of repentance and hope. We must be made to see clearly the mistakes of the past, but only to the end that true repentance and progress may follow. The presence of such mistakes must never be allowed to kill within us our confidence in the promises of God or our conviction of the divine potentialities of our fellow men.

It may be that we, like a certain ancient king of Sacred Writ, "have praised the gods of silver and gold, of brass, iron, wood, and stone, which see not nor hear nor know, and the God in whose hand are all our ways have we not glorified." If our hearts have been hardened with pride and avarice, if we have felt self-sufficient, if we have no longer sought the face of God, if we have worshiped at the shrine of the kingdoms of this world and contributed of our funds to gratify our own follies, then there is but one way back to God, and that way is marked "repentance."

The Presidency are setting apart the week of June 21 to 28 as a period of fasting, prayer, and sacrifice. Let us fast that we may prepare ourselves to seek the face of God. Let us pray that light and power shall be bestowed upon both leaders and people. Let us sacrifice that the obligations of the church may be met and the preparation for the kingdom of God go forward unimpeded.

Let each member of every family of the church search diligently his own soul. Let him ascertain the extent of his loyalty to the church, the reality of his conviction that it is indeed the church of God.

Let him make an inventory of God's blessings to him. Let him publicly testify of these blessings. Then from the store of the things with which he has surrounded himself, let him choose that which will in some way measure his love of God and devotion to his cause. And let that thing be his sacrifice offering. Can it be that a car or radio or an evening's recreation shall be allowed to obscure our vision of the kingdom of God that is to be?

As we said in a previous epistle to the Saints, so we will repeat: The times predicted are upon us when "Satan shall have dominion over his own and the Lord shall have power over his Saints."—Doctrine and Covenants 1: 6.

It behooves us to stand in holy places. So far as is possible, let each set in operation those forces which shall bring about a regeneration of his life. Let us make our homes and our places of work holy places by thinking of them in terms of God and his program. Let us be frugal, honest, clean, charitable. Let us cease contention. Let us look forward, not backward, reminding ourselves that "the foundation of God standeth sure," and that his resources are for those who undertake his work. Let us respond to the needs of the hour to the full measure of our ability and resources. Anything less would not be worthy of the example of the Master or the cause which we have espoused.

Let us remember the word of admonition given through the prophet of God: "Continue in steadfastness and faith. Let nothing separate you from each other and the work whereunto you have been called, and I will be with you by my Spirit and the presence of my power unto the end. Amen."

FLOYD M. McDOWELL.

Blue Pencil Notes

This is likely to be a very personal note. President Frederick M. Smith has been advised by his physician to take some months leave of absence from the office (not many months we hope). For a long time I have been slowly recovering from illness and am not yet back on duty. A very little computation will show you that this leaves the burden of the work of the Presidency on Brother Floyd McDowell. Just what that means I know perhaps better than you do—but use your imagination.

To the office of the Presidency comes a voluminous correspondence from various parts of the world bringing an almost inconceivable variety of problems. Then there is the administrative work with its problems in every field, including that of the large and numerous congregations and groups in Zion. A great many people visit the office constantly for consultation. There is editorial work to look after. There are board meetings of the Sanitarium, the Institute, and other organizations. There is departmental work with its problems. There is week-end field work to attend to personally. And finally, but not least, at this time the financial situation is to be reckoned with in conjunction with the bishops.

I visited the office recently and found Floyd wrestling with the problems of the day—how long his day is I can only guess. We discussed the sacrifice period. Floyd said: "I have been thinking what there might be in my own home that we can sacrifice. We can give up our radio. And the family has planned a little vacation trip—that can be canceled. I am sure that in most homes there are things that could be sacrificed—and perhaps we could build Zion as well without them as with them—possibly better. And I am sure—I am sure that when the Saints know of the very great need of the church today they will not fail us."

Well, I wonder—will we disappoint Brother Floyd? Or will we justify his faith in us? At least when you hear from him about the sacrifice period you may know that he is not asking you to do something that he is not willing to share with you. What will our answer be? It was heart-breaking some months ago when the church was forced to release faithful men from appointment in missionary and pastoral work. Let us all pray earnestly that it may not be necessary to make any further reductions in our too limited ministerial force. With prayers let us couple deeds.

At present the church is enduring affliction, and as Paul says no affliction is at the time pleasant to bear. But "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth." Like wayward children we must oftentimes be disciplined. The child that profits by discipline enjoys a great increase of the love and fellowship of the father. It is the history of the church that very often following a period of discipline she emerges chastened to a new era of divine blessing and increased success in her ministry. May that be our experience at this time.

I am in full accord with the epistle prepared by Brother McDowell for the Presidency, appearing in this issue. I pray that I may live to see two things wrought out: the church at peace within herself, and free from her present burden of debt. I pray that I may presently be restored and strengthened to enter more fully upon the work that so sorely needs help, and to labor with you toward the ends that I have mentioned. Given peace and unity within and among ourselves, being of "one heart and one mind," we can help the church over this hard portion of the road, and later free her from her load of debt: "loose her and let her go" with new life upon her divinely appointed mission.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Our Children

There is a poem, "The Children's Auction," written by an English poet and journalist, Charles Mackay, that I wish every parent, teacher, and friend of children in the world might read. Would that it might be emblazoned in every church, school, and home! Consideration of it would awaken the world from its lethargy of ease, selfishness, and satisfaction.

Children's Day, when we shall delight in the gracious little performances of our boys and girls, is almost upon us, and it is well that we consider honestly ourselves as parents and children's friends. How far do our interests extend beyond our own little group? Are we conscious of the call to parenthood and friendship which knows no bounds of race, color, creed, or social condition. As we sit contentedly in our churches Sunday morning, shall we think of the thousands of boys and girls who are not in church? who, for that matter, have never been in church?

Here I want to quote only two verses of the poem above mentioned, the first and the last:

"Who bids for the little children—
Body and soul and brain?
Who bids for the little children—
Young and without a stain?
'Will no one bid,' said England,
For the souls so pure and white,
And fit for all good or evil
The world on their page may write?"

This invitation, in the poem, receives eager response from Pest, Famine, Beggary, and Crime. It is the answer of Crime which should come home to all of us:

"Give me the little children,
Ye good, ye rich, ye wise,
And let the busy world spin round
While ye shut your idle eyes;
And your judges shall have work,
And your lawyers wag the tongue,
And the jailers and policemen
Shall be fathers to the young!"

In what class do we as the friends of children fall? Are we being the best friends possible—or are we too busy? How much do we know of our children's interest at school, at church, in the neighborhood? Are we quick to criticize and slow to help? Do we respond to the call for parent-teacher meetings, problem classes, round table discussions, or is it our girl who says in the Sunday school class or at Scout meeting: "My mother? Oh, she doesn't know. She isn't interested in the things I do." Are we shutting our idle eyes and allowing the world to spin on and hurtful forces to creep into the lives of our boys and girls? Are we letting slip from us one of the most cherished gifts of heaven, the confidence and respect of our children?

Children's Day should mean more to parents than to the children. It should be a time of special family celebration. What are you making it?

What of our children?

L. B. M.

The Sure Foundation of God

By Bishop L. F. P. Curry

(From a sermon at the Stone Church, Independence, Missouri, April 19, 1931.)

In acting as spokesman for the Presiding Bishopric in a discussion of the financial situation of our church, I do so in the belief that frankness and plainness are required to enable you to understand the position in which we are placed and to determine your own attitude in relation thereto. As participants in a common enterprise, as dear to you as to me, you are entitled to the facts about your church, and it is our purpose to lay them before you. Over-emphasis as much as understatement is to be avoided, for what all of us desire is to see the situation as a whole, and not be thrown out of balance by too great concentration upon a part. Frankness on my part calls for discretion on yours, inasmuch as the harm which may arise from thoughtless or uninformed comment upon what is presented will be apparent to everyone.

This depression through which we are passing is equal to, and may now be worse than, any experienced since the thirteen colonies became a nation. It is more extensive in its effect than that of 1920-21, which followed the Great War. Indeed, since 1920 we have had two major and two minor depressions, despite the hope that, through the control of the rediscount rate, the Federal Reserve System would control price movements. Doubtless the Federal Reserve has prevented the recurrence of the condition in money circulation which was so evident during the panic of 1907, when scrip was used in lieu of currency in many of the industrial centers of this country. The widespread effect of the "hard times" now upon us has been felt by workers in the factories, as well as by those upon the farm, and like many other institutions, both business and religious, our church has suffered. The depression has not been the sole cause of our present condition. Rather it has served to force sharply upon our attention certain trends in policy which must be changed. It is neither my purpose nor my business to discuss causes and assess responsibility, but only to call attention to where we are, hence I point out that during this period of 1920-1931, that of the approximately nine church fiscal years involved, five were lean years in which outgo was greater than income, and the deficit in total was greater than the total surplus. It is well, therefore, that at this time when the tide of industrial affairs is low, we stop and take stock of where we stand. First, then, I wish to give a brief and summary view of our financial situation; second, to show what is embraced in the way out of our difficulties, and then, finally, to point out those things which in my opinion should determine our personal attitude in this crisis.

The total debt as of December 31, 1930, excluding that owing on houses of worship scattered throughout the country and abroad, which are self-sustaining, and excluding that of the Development Association which has been of a similar character, approximates $1,165,700. This is of course subject to exact statement, as the audited balance sheet is placed before you. This debt may be distributed in two ways:

1. To nonmembers:
Mortgages—	On the Auditorium	$335,000.00
	On other Real Estate	90,600.00	$ 425,600.00
			<hr/>
Accounts and Notes Payable			54,800.00
	Total		$ 480,400.00
2. To Members:
Gen'l Church Bonds, Mortgages	$352,500.00
Notes and Accounts Payable	332,800.00		685,300.00
			$1,165,700.00

Or the total debt might be expressed in this way:

Owing for Bonds and Mortgages	$778,100.00
Owing on Notes and Accts. Payable	387,600.00	$1,165,700.00

The mortgages and bonds are largely of long-time, or installment maturity, and should not trouble us materially. A considerable amount of the notes and accounts payable may be renewed, or postponed. Some, especially including the allowances and bank obligations, are current and must be paid. All of these obligations must be paid eventually.

Having told the bad news, a remark about the assets will be more interesting. Exclusive of the investment in Graceland College, Sanitarium, Campus property, and Herald Publishing House, our resources total in round numbers, about $4,000,000. This total includes numerous assets which we will probably dispose of in time in so far as they are not vital to our church activities, but the liquid assets, or those which might be turned quickly into cash, are relatively small. This means that to get out of debt, and particularly to meet the current budget for church operations, we shall be for some time very dependent upon current income.

Disregarding any special projects in which the church has engaged during recent years, there have been certain encroachments upon the income of tithes and offerings, part of which if now averted, would make our position rather easy. One encroachment which we are proud to bear is that of the support of the warriors who have borne the heat of the battle and have now reached the point where others should relieve them of their burdens. This Honor List of ministers requires annually, with their families dependent upon them, from $30,000 to $38,000. The needy, in whose support Christ measures our love of him, have taken from $15,000 to $30,000 per year. From neither of these two items could we, or would we, turn away. This year's budget includes for interest the sum of $80,500, which if available for other purposes, would be ample to care for those missionaries who have been released. Then there has been a rising tide of cost for taxes, insurance, and maintenance for properties which have come to us by purchase or otherwise during these years. For example, an annual credit as tithes or offering has been given to those who have turned over their property to the church, running between $20,000 and $25,000. In five years this would amount to $100,000 or $125,000. Not all of that property, by any means, has been self-supporting, and since it did not represent money to be spent until the property was actually sold and paid for, it has been an encroachment upon instead of an addition to income. Finally, not to be tiresome in this analysis, there has been an encroachment because of what, for lack of a better term, I may call leaks. These represent a too easy spending of money, doing our church work perhaps too expensively, investing in projects deemed to be ultimately useful and profitable, but which have proved sources of outgo to save the principal originally contributed. Some of these might have been avoided, others may be classed as mistakes of judgment, some may yet justify themselves. In any event, all of us should remember that there are few people having the handling of personal or business income who have not made a step they would later retrace if possible. Therefore a charitable attitude must be assumed, together with a determination to profit by our experience. Some one has remarked that a mistake is not a mistake until the same thing has been done twice.

It should be plainly evident from the foregoing that it is a time requiring serious action and prompt help on our part, but there is no reason to become hysterical. We owe considerable money, we shall have to work hard and sacrifice to pay it, while at the same time maintaining the Cause. Let us turn to the way out of our difficulties.

This way out embraces two important things: One is the persistent and untiring application of the policy adopted February 12, last, and published in the Saints' Herald for the 25th following. The other is to just as persistently and untiringly build our work upon the "foundation of God" which is standing sure, the preaching of the gospel and the establishment of Zion. Our country celebrated on February 12 the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, the great emancipator. I trust that in years to come we may look back to February 12, 1931, as the birthday of a policy the following of which will have emancipated our beloved church from the burden of debt which now hinders or thwarts her work. There are four particularly important points in that policy: First, to expand or build in the future only as we have funds in hand for the purpose; and, may I add a clause of equal importance, as we have an income sufficient, even at its minimum point ample to support the upkeep of the expanded work without interfering with the preaching of the gospel, or the bread-and-butter aspects of Zion's establishment; second, to live within our income, a principle in the years of easy buying, and installment credit, more honored in the breach than the observance; third, to digest or assimilate or dispose of those assets not needed in our church enterprise, having in mind our purposes as given to us by God; and, finally, to stop the leaks.

The old policy was leading us in the wrong direction. Everyone seems eager for, not to say demanding, a change. Everywhere I go, people ask, "Will they stick to this policy?" I can only reply that each official and quorum in the front rank of church government has whole-heartedly subscribed to this policy and promised to support it. To do otherwise at some future day is to commit individual or church suicide. Moreover, the entire church is so sick of debt that taking any other course is inconceivable. More than these, let us not forget that God can not permanently be thwarted in his work. If perchance we so order our financial affairs as to in part tie our hands and prevent our carrying out his will, he will then turn and overturn to bring to pass his purposes. We stand at that point now.

The second important thing in the way out, I suggested, is building our work upon the sure foundation of God. In the closing hours of Christ's earthly ministry, he gave to his disciples the command to preach the gospel to mankind. Nineteen centuries later he gave to the Restoration that same command and added to it the direction to establish Zion. As important methods in carrying out these commands, he gave us these: first, "Prosecute the missionary work in this land and abroad so far and so widely as you may." (Doctrine and Covenants 119: 8.) I interpret this to mean that there must be a reasonable security accorded the missionary in his work, that we, having set his hand to the plow, will not call him back. Second, to avoid debt, or to incur it as God may direct. (Doctrine and Covenants 64: 6.) Third, to build Zion by the "celestial law." This "law," I apprehend, includes the Word of Wisdom for the salvation of our bodies; the financial law, a spiritual law in temporal things, which makes it unnecessary for each man to be his own bishop, as some have been, and lays down an intelligent plan for the accumulation of means for the conduct of God's work; the spiritual law, involving those fundamentals of faith, repentance, baptism, honor, mercy, love, truth.

As the thoughtful and earnest Saint considers these two extremely important phases of the way out, he will ask himself, In this crisis, what should determine my attitude towards the work? If I might reply, I should say, The answer lies in remembering the promises, the work, and the heritage of God.

Let our minds view again those promises which are written across the bosom of time in letters of light. There is that promise which is a part of the sure foundation of God, ". . . this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come. . . ." (Matthew 24: 32, Inspired Version.) Until the end comes, this promise is before us, and the duty that promise involves lies upon our shoulders. Again, there are those promises concerning Zion, given when faith was weak and hope burned low. ". . . Zion can not fall, neither be moved out of her place, . . ." (Doctrine and Covenants 94: 5); ". . . I have decreed that your brethren, which have been scattered, shall return to the land of their inheritances and build up the waste places of Zion." (Doctrine and Covenants 100: 3.) God's hand is set to redeem Zion, and those promises are for us today. God is not thwarted. His foundation stands sure.

God has displayed his power in other days, for let us not forget that his work has met and conquered crises before. Joshua faced the promised land from the eastern shore of the Jordan, leading a rabble against an armed host. Yet Joshua was victorious. Samson squandered his endowment, granted as a means of freeing Israel. Out of his very disobedience, blinded and a prisoner as he was, God used him in a mighty stroke against the enemies of his people. Paul and Silas, preaching their way through the cities of Asia Minor, were cast into prison. It seemed as though their work was over, but their task was unfinished. That night an angel gave them freedom. In 1844 the Prophet lay cold in death, his followers disheartened, defeated, beginning to scatter. By 1861 came the Reorganization, brought to pass with as much of a display of spiritual power and leading as the Restoration itself, and today we stand with over one hundred thousand. But we forget the greatest crisis of all, that of Christ on the cross. He hung there, deserted by his friends, scorned by his enemies, crying in the agony of his soul, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Today, his teaching stays the ebbing life of a dying world. Crises? Beside these, our own money crisis, however poignant its pressure at this moment may be, seems but a little thing, for these great events so clearly show that the "foundation of God standeth sure."

And we must remember that, however low our treasury may be, we have treasures not counted in the markets of the world. One is the legacy of the scriptures, proved by history, attested by the Spirit to any who listen for its voice. Another is the Book of Mormon, which came forth at a time and in a manner which can not be duplicated, bearing in its pages another witness to the divinity of Christ. We have the church, fulfilling prophecies unique, distinct, which can never be reenacted for another such movement. We know the unswerving purpose of God to put in the hands of man the means of salvation. Remembering all these things, our attitude takes care of itself, and our heart with new hope and fresh courage bows before the altar of our Father.

Here, briefly put, is the financial situation; here the way out. Let us serve as true disciples, standing unitedly, giving willingly, and not by measure, renouncing sin, and serving God, always remembering that "the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his."

The Social Road to Jesus

A few years ago I was teaching in a mission on the East Side in New York. Among other things, we started a basket-ball team and arranged to play another school. The first contest was to be held in our building, and a couple of days before I called the team together and said, "Don't you think we ought to treat that other team to ice cream after the game?" Quick as a flash, one little waif on the team asked, "What? Win or lose?" It took a second for it to sink in, and then it dawned on me—these boys were used to winning in a fist fight or stone-throwing contest if they lost the game they were playing, and to treat kindly the team that had just "licked" them was a totally new idea in their young minds. Here was my chance. "Sure," I said, "we treat them 'win or lose,' and not only that, but I want you to be good sports, and you must serve them with the ice cream, too."

The game came off, and I was really glad they lost, for it gave them a chance to win a greater victory. If such teaching is needed in our American cities, how much more in non-Christian lands! To teach the youth to play games, to mingle in friendly relations, to be "good sports" as we say, is surely a road to Christ not to be despised.—Howard K. Williams, in Young People's Leader.

The City of God

By S. A. Burgess

The hope of a city divinely built, in which there would be justice between man and man, is no new ideal. From the earliest history and before the time of history there have been men who have sought a holy city. The concept of this city takes many forms. To some the desire is to reform their present habitation and make of it a place where God may dwell. Another aspect of this immediate establishment of this city of God is the large number of cities of ancient times that claim to be his seat as holding the temple of God. Others look for it as a city to be established upon this earth at some future time. To a third class it is a city having no existence upon earth, but discouraged with conditions on this earth they seek in the life to come or in some other sphere for that which they failed to reach here.

The Bible contains many passages which indicate such a hope, one of which, the 11th chapter of Hebrews, we will take as an opening text:

By faith Abraham, when he was called to go out into a place which he should after receive for an inheritance, obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise; for he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God. For they that say such things declare plainly that they seek a country. And truly, if they had been mindful of that country from whence they came out, they might have had opportunity to have returned. But now they desire a better country, that is, a heavenly; wherefore God is not ashamed to be called their God; for he hath prepared for them a city.—Hebrews 11: 8-10, 14-16.

Also, the twelfth chapter of Hebrews:

But ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel.—Hebrews 12: 19, 22-25.

A Heavenly City

It is evident from this reading that it was no longer an earthly city they sought, but a heavenly; or rather, that established by the power of God. Hebrews 13th chapter and 14th verse also conveys the same idea: "For here we have no continuing city, but we seek one to come."

Also, Revelation 21: 3 and 4:

And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away.

This evidently is looking forward to a city to be established upon this earth at a future time, a city toward which we strive, here and now but which is to receive its perfection when the new Jerusalem comes down from God out of heaven to abide upon the earth. These are only a few of the passages which indicate so great a hope.

Enoch's City

Considering the subject historically, the Inspired Version is particularly clear concerning a city of Zion which was on the earth in the early ages and before the time of history, namely the city of Enoch from which the wicked fled because of its power.

And the Lord blessed the land, and they were blessed upon the mountains, and upon the high places, and did flourish. And the Lord called his people, Zion; because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness; and there was no poor among them.—Genesis 7: 22-24.

This whole chapter will repay a reading. Nor is the story of that holy city confined to the Inspired Version of the Bible, or even to the Bible itself, for there are old traditions in the east concerning a man Enoch who walked with God. There is a story of Lemuria which sank in the sea, and the story of the lost Atlantis. But the stories which clearly specify the life of Enoch are set forth in more particular.

In the Babylonian records in the cuneiform, the story is told of one whose name is very much like Enoch, and of his city. The traditions in India also preserve the story of that great city.

This story of a city of God is also confirmed by the claim of such cities as Memphis and Thebes in Egypt, Jerusalem in Palestine, and other cities of the ancient world which made in some form or other a claim to be a holy city.

In the record of the Hebrew people in the Old Testament, the plan which was established in the settling of the holy land was a social one. They were forbidden to cut the corners of their fields, were bidden to let some grain stand when they cut, so the poor might glean after them. The seventh year was a sabbatical year, when they were forbidden to cultivate, and all that grew of itself belonged to the poor. Then after the seventh sabbatical year came the year of jubilee. This was a second year of rest for the land, and of profit to the poor; also in this year the farm land returned to the original group, or family, which had first owned it. The land was originally divided between the tribes; then between families. There evidently was an effort made toward community ownership, but with individual possession. But on the year of jubilee all land returned again to its tribe and family. Also, all debts were canceled.

Hebrew Prophets

The prophets of the Old Testament: Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and others spoke often of a looked-for city, nearly always if not always with an urge for immediate social reform, but yet with the expression of a hope of a city that was to come in the time of the Lord. They were political to the extent that they hoped for a reform in Israel in their own day, and sought such social reconstruction, but they also possessed the further hope by which they looked forward to a time when God would move in power for the establishment of his city. This statement is by no means exhaustive of the life of the prophets among the Hebrews.

Then, if we turn to the surrounding nations, we find that they too were not left without a hope. We are not claiming that a whole people attempted thus to reestablish a city of justice, but there were many efforts made toward social reconstruction, even in Babylon, where some of the great manufacturers practiced profit sharing more than 2,500 years ago. The story of the city of Enoch, the hope of a city yet to come, with a desire for present reform, is found among many people.

Plato

But not to wander too far afield, of the record that has come down the most nearly complete account of a plan for a model city among the other nations of antiquity is found in the dialogs of Plato, especially in The Republic. This is not the earliest, but is the one most discussed today. Plato, as have those who followed him, laid his basis of reform in education. His plan provided that all should receive a basic education, both boys and girls, both rich and poor. The children should be brought up by the state. This is also an idea which has been much copied. At fifteen years of age there should be a test, and those who passed the test received another ten years of training. At twenty-five there was a second test, and the few who passed that more severe test received ten more years of training. Then these at thirty-five were given practical work of government. By the time they reached fifty there were a few chosen men who had stood both the theoretical and practical tests and who became therefore the governors of the people, as well as their philosophers. Because of their love for wisdom, they were the most capable. Their children were cared for by the state. The governors received only their just wants and needs. They were supposed to be above desire or avarice.

By this method the people were divided according to their fitness into the governing class, the military class, the commercial class, and the laborers. But the son of any man or woman might become a ruler in his generation. The plan was to secure the most able men and women for a temporary aristocracy. Government by them was for the good of all. Those who were able, consecrated their property to the social group, so there was a unification of effort. There was implied the modern concept of every individual developed to the utmost capacity of his particular powers, and everyone so developed working at that for which he was best fitted for the common good of all. This was especially true of the upper classes. All received training so far as capacity should warrant, but those of the lower classes were permitted, if they chose, to own property.

It is thought by some that Plato desired to establish such a city, but if so there is no record of such a persistent effort being made as would give hope of success.

Virgil spoke of the reign of peace, "when He should reign whose right it is to reign." In Rome, at the Christmas season, equality was practiced between man and man; and, if anything, the noble waited upon the man who was his servant, typifying that when He shall come all men will be brothers and all work will be for the common end. Gifts were given from one to another, and the practice continues to this day at the same season of the year.

There is evidence also in America that such ideas were held at different times, and our friends the Indians claim that they in fact practiced in the tribe stewardships, the interests of each being served in the interests of the whole. This is not unique, for among all savage people that merging of the individual into the group or tribe or clan is common.

Early Christian

Christianity gave to these movements a new impetus. The disciples of Jesus we learn did not consider what they had their own. They met in frequent love feasts. Something of the spirit of the movement was carried over into the Middle Ages into the various brotherhoods and sisterhoods of the monasteries. Where there had been before individuals, there were now groups and many individuals, who for a season at least sought to work in harmony and merge the interests of the individual in the hopes of the group.

Surely to this congregation it is not necessary to emphasize that Jesus and his apostles preached the kingdom of God. "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." "Love thy neighbor as thyself." "Sell all thou hast and give to the poor." "A man's life consisteth not of the abundance of the things which he possesseth."

Therefore, it is not surprising to read of Augustine and his City of God, nor to note in the fifth century of Savonarola's theocracy of Florence. These were only two out of many through what is called the Dark Ages. But these men increased to a multitude in the period of the Renaissance. Thus out of hundreds we may refer to Moore's Utopia, to Francis Bacon's New Atlantis, then Campanelli and The City of the Sun, to Harrington and his Oceana. To give an adequate review would require a series of lectures.

This leads naturally to the early modern socialists. Their hopes were to establish a model city. As another possible instance, there were the Brothers and Sisters of Free Spirit, though they belonged to an earlier period and continued in Prussia for some two hundred years before the Renaissance.

In these plans for a model city we find a quest for justice between man and man, especially justice for the poor. We see a desire that all should work together regardless of ability for the common end, and that all should receive according to their needs.

These movements were along the line of progress, of social ideals. Their leaders were leaders of society, and in addition to their ideals usually sought practical reforms within their own time. In their plans we find the beginning of eugenics and preventive medicine. Religious toleration and social religion were taught in terms that are rather startling to the young people of the twentieth century, or would be if they were acquainted with this literature of past centuries.

Recent Ventures

Then within recent times there have been indeed a host: Le Blanc, Fourier, Saint Simon in France, two or three in Germany, and many others. Robert Owen in England, though a property owner and the head of a factory, was in the foremost ranks in the early nineteenth century in seeking to establish modern factory conditions, moral and physical, in which there would be adequate education for children of all classes.

George Rapp came to America, settled in Pennsylvania, and later established New Harmony, Indiana; afterwards returned to Pennsylvania and established a colony at Economy near Pittsburgh, which attained great success for a season. Owen took over Rapp's city at New Harmony, Indiana. It is possibly as a result of Owen's original effort that many model cities have been established, as Jordan City in England in recent years.

Sidney Rigdon and others around Kirtland in 1830 were connected with "The Family" and were seeking social justice in having all things common, when Joseph Smith came by and gave them the better plan. The Shakers, The Oneida Society, the Separatists of Zoar, the Amana Community in Iowa, The Brotherhood of the New Life, and others have arisen in America; while from France there came Etienne Cabot, who settled in Nauvoo about 1850, after the members of the church had left there. They used much of the stone of the temple, after its destruction, in new buildings. An effort was made by him to rebuild the temple, but without success.

Zion

Even the very name Zion is not new, for these model cities are sometimes referred to as Utopias and at other times as cities of Zion. For this reason it is not surprising that when Alexander Dowie attempted to establish a model city north of Chicago, he gave to it this name, Zion. We have before us a leaflet issued by them with Zion's watchword for the year 1924: "Waiting. Waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Zion's Prayer, Even So, Come, Lord Jesus." Philosophical magazines such as Hibbert's refer to such model cities as Zions. It is a name frequently used to refer to the City of God, and attempts by mankind to construct such a city.

As to stewardships, other churches are working on the problem of stewardships and have written many books on the subject. Other people are seeking to establish a model city. Others are calling their city Zion. Should we, therefore, be discouraged? By no means, for it is our divine opportunity to accomplish where others have tried, if we will. Where individuals before their time have seen this vision, where groups have tried for a season and failed, we have the opportunity of learning from the experiences of others, their success and failure, or studying as fully as we can these efforts of the past and then after doing all that lies in our power, looking for the divine guidance which alone can make such success possible.

As we view these efforts of the past we note that religion has been a powerful element for success. We note that many have failed because they have ignored the family and have attempted to abolish private property entirely. We note that failure has resulted because the leader has centralized power so much in his own hands that at his withdrawal certain decline has set in.

Joseph Smith

Thus, we come to Joseph Smith and his better plan of stewardship to the Holy City, even the City of God, where dwell the pure in heart—great because of the righteousness of its people; wise because of divine direction; powerful because of knowledge and love, and faith, so that Zion again becomes great and terrible.

We have found no evidence that Joseph Smith was in touch with any of these earlier ventures or acquainted with them. When he first came in contact with "The Family" in Kirtland, he set forth the better plan, the plan better than communism.

One phase of that plan is that the family is made the unit. Family life is not destroyed, but on the other hand is emphasized, together with purity of life, one man and one woman to establish the ideal home for their children. It hardly seems possible that they would realize what modern research has just discovered, that children are best cared for in the home—far better than in the most ideal institution with trained nurses and physicians; that children need the love of father and mother, and especially a mother. The family in such units of father, mother, and children requires private property and inheritance. Then the community interest is protected in the storehouse and in the consecration of surplus to the common fund; in the paying of tithing on income and in the turning over again of surplus so that no man considers that which he has his own to spend for his own pleasure, but labors for the good of all, and then the excess proceeds go to the common fund for the blessing of all.

Pursuant to the plan of the church, a plat was made for Kirtland Temple in its ideal location high on the hill in its midst. Again, the plan was given for the City of Zion. Again a plan was laid out for the City of Far West, and finally the City of Nauvoo, leading up flat on up to the heights on which the temple was built overlooking the grand sweep of the Mississippi River around the city, but also far over into what was then the Territory of Iowa. Apparently the attempt was made in Zion at least for the establishment of stewardships. A milder effort was made in Far West, but there they were prevented by their enemies.

Headquarters of the Reorganization were for a time in Plano. Then the movement was made to Lamoni to an Order of Enoch by men who apparently had before their eyes the hopes of an ideal city. The Presidency and Presiding Bishopric were members of this Lamoni order and succeeded in building up a goodly town in Lamoni, yet did not accomplish all that they had hoped, and the order finally disbanded. But the ideals of Zion were not lost sight of.

Our Opportunity

When Jesus was parting from his disciples, he gave them anew that great command to love one another. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."—John 13: 35. "If a man love me, he will keep my words, and the Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him."—John 14: 23. Again, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him and sup with him and he with me."—Revelation 3: 20.

Before us rests that splendid opportunity to make real the community of God; a people pure in heart, who live fully the life that God intended they should lead. They are workers together for the common interest, and the common interest works for the good of each as well as for all. A multitude of homes in which dwells the Spirit of Christ; a city to which he may come and take it to himself.

We confess the hope of a city in the life to come, but that city upon this earth celestialized. It involves a city to be erected in which we may dwell in the millennial reign, if worthy. It gives to us a future city to which we may work, to be lived in by men and women hereafter, but it gives us also that ideal of perfecting the habitations in which we dwell today and of preparing now to make real that vision of the City of God here and now, and so be the better prepared for that celestial city.

"He has made of one blood the nations of men for to dwell upon the face of the earth."—Acts 17: 26. "He is the light which lighteth every man who cometh into the world."—John 1: 9. (Doctrine and Covenants 85: 1 and 2.) This should not therefore discourage us to learn that mankind has held this twofold ideal of better living conditions, better social conditions, of holding our property in trust for God, and also the establishment of a holy city. Rather is it confirming evidence of the truth of God, that his Spirit has moved upon men in all ages with this ideal and with this hope; individuals here and there, even though the people as a whole rarely seem to realize the true vision. And that vision has made for better practical social reforms, despite the difficulties of its idealism. It is a matter also rather for encouragement that men like Owen, Cabot, and others have attempted to build model or garden cities; that the churches of today are teaching stewardship as far as they understand it; that there is a great movement in the world seeking for better conditions, however crudely some of such efforts may appear and how imperfectly they may approach the ideal. There is a hope and perhaps never more clearly manifested than it is today, with the garden cities of England, with the Zion City in Illinois, with colonies in various parts of the United States, seeking to work out the problems of the community. This city did once exist in its purity in the Zion of Enoch. Yet it may be of interest to note that Enoch was called when he was sixty-five years of age. (Genesis 6: 26, seq. Inspired Version.) It would appear that he must at once have gathered a selected people for the City of Zion, for Genesis 7: 76 to 78 states:

And all the days of Zion, in the days of Enoch, were three hundred and sixty-five years. And Enoch and all his people walked with God, and he dwelt in the midst of Zion. And it came to pass, that Zion was not, for God received it up into his own bosom; and from thence went forth the saying, Zion is fled. And all the days of Enoch were four hundred and thirty years.

If all of Enoch's days were 430, and the days of Zion with Enoch were 365, and he began to preach when he was sixty-five years of age, he must at once have established a city and yet worked with his associates for three hundred and sixty-five years to perfect it for the presence of God, so that it became indeed Zion, because they were of one heart and mind, and dwelt in righteousness, and there was no poor. It became the city of holiness. (Genesis 7: 23-25.)

It is well for us to study carefully these efforts of the past to see wherein there were elements of success and where appeared the elements of failure. The same plans were tried over and over again. The same plans are being proposed today. It behooves us to consider carefully, and humbly pray that our heavenly Father may direct us by his Spirit and righteousness.

It is a hastening time. We may therefore expect the work to be done quickly. A task which formerly took a year, to cross America from one ocean to another, can now be done in four or five days. The task of communicating with the ends of the earth is very much simplified today. All the world can be reached today in the very hour. But if it is a time of hastening, it lies upon us the greater responsibility that we should strip ourselves of all that might hinder, of all worldly desires and so-called pleasures, as far as possible, but above all, of our personal peculiarities and hindrances, of jealousy and ill will toward any, that the spirit of truth and right understanding may abide with us.

That of which the world has long dreamed, that for which many are seeking today, the privilege is ours under God to establish if we will, to prepare a people for the inhabitants of that holy city, the City of God, where dwells power, with righteousness.

Report of the Department of Statistics

During the month of May the following numbers of the various types of reports were received, resulting in the indicated changes in the total enrollment of the church:

Total enrollment of the church May 1, 1931 .....	108,763

Gains from the unknown .....	17
Gains by correction .....	2
Total gain .....	193

The outstanding district during the month of May in the matter of baptisms was the Southern Ohio District, with a total of 26. Eight different branches in this district were credited with baptisms during the month as the result of missionary efforts, not only of General Conference appointees, but also on the part of the local priesthood. The Pleasant Valley Branch reported 6 baptisms, 5 by Missionary Jacob G. Halb and one by Elder Mark S. Crabtree. The Lancaster Branch had 5 baptisms, all performed by Priest Elmer H. Caldwell. Third Columbus had 4 baptisms, performed by Elder F. C. Welsh and Priest G. P. Myers; Dayton had 4 baptisms, performed by Missionary John R. Grice; The Plains had 3 baptisms by Missionary Jacob G. Halb; Nelsonville had 2 by Jacob G. Halb; Jackson had 1 by Brother Halb; and Limerick had one by Elder T. R. Beatty.

The Southern Ohio District this year has been exceptional in the degree of missionary activity being shown. For the first five months it has reported a total of 81 baptisms, which is more than has any other district or stake in the church. The priesthood, missionaries, and membership of the district are to be congratulated on the excellent showing which they are making along these and other lines. For they have not only been loyal supporters of the church along missionary lines, but in the financial way as well. Let us hope that the district will continue the fine work which it is now carrying on.

The following branches or district nonresident groups outside the stakes reported three or more baptisms each:

Australasian Mission .....	35
Holland Mission .....	2
Total .....	174

The gospel does more than bring home to us the conviction that we lack power to lead life as God would have us lead it; it brings to us the assurance that God can and will supply the power. Suppose that we took this promise of the gospel seriously. There would not be an occasion in life when difficulty confronts us, or our task bears too heavily upon us, that we should not draw upon God.

We have the assurance of Christ. If we ask in his name, he will do it. And yet often our last resource in difficulty is prayer! That is what we need, to take Christ and his promises seriously. That means more prayer, more of the courage and will to believe that life and strength and power flow into us from God through the channel of prayer.—Selected.

The Philosophy of Jesus in a Modern World

PART V.—A TWENTIETH CENTURY PENTECOST

By C. E. Wight

In the four preceding articles we have attempted an analysis of the philosophy of Jesus to see whether it may be applied to the problems of a modern world.

This investigation has led us to conclude that the teachings of our Master are basic; that although human conduct and customs may change, human need remains largely the same.

When Jesus said, "Whoso seeks to save his life shall lose it, and whoso loseth his life for my sake shall find it," he was expressing a truth which has grown more clear in the light of twenty centuries of experience.

Jesus' statement, "To him that hath shall be given, and he shall have in abundance; and from him that hath not shall be taken even that which he hath," can be definitely proved by biological experiment. It is quite satisfying to the human mind to know that these teachings have withstood the fires of adversity and derision and are today universally respected even where not accepted or practiced.

And while satisfying to the intellect of man, it is doubly satisfying to his emotional nature, which is often interpreted in terms of the heart. It is not our province to speak in terms of the expert who might tell us that all emotional response may be traced back to the same center as that from which thought emanates. What we are interested in is the acknowledged fact that men often feel things which they do not understand. They are thrilled by beautiful music which they can not interpret from the standpoint of knowledge of chords and harmonies. They merely know that there is produced in them somewhere and somehow a reaction which stimulates life upon a higher plane.

That the Christ did stimulate men to this higher life by his own life is admitted. That his teachings have come down to the present time as the purest interpretation of truth given to the world is also more generally accepted as time goes on. Surely a beautiful tribute to the power resident within the Christ, permitting such an enduring expression of right.

Whence came this power? Some say because of the unique relationship between Jesus and his Father, whereby he received a special grace and power beyond that given to others. It is not our object at this time to discuss the exact relationship between Jesus and God. Admitting that he was sent on a special mission, let us not overlook the fact that when he came to us in the flesh, he accepted all of the hindrances which are recognized as the limitations of our fleshly existence.

Therefore, it became necessary for Jesus to use the same means as those given to us to enter into communion with God. The preparation for his ministry was similar to the preparation that any one of us must make if that ministry is to be filled with spiritual insight and power. In meditation, in fasting, in prayer, he sought power to meet his great temptations. These temptations came to him, even as they come to us. Growing out of these experiences in his preparation, he gave to his disciples the authoritative words of the Sermon on the Mount.

On the night before the selection of his twelve special disciples, Jesus withdrew to the solitude of the mountain and throughout the entire night communed with God. This communion meant more than a temporary gain of spiritual power for immediate problems. It made possible the pronouncement of gems of spiritual truth, growing out of the intimacy of God with man.

We are told that he was the word made flesh. After having demonstrated how the doctrines he presented might be filled with meaning in meeting the problems of humanity, he recognized that something was yet lacking.

It was not merely his problem to show his disciples how to live, but to convert them to a similar way of living. It was not enough that they should admire him and his way of living, but that somehow they might become so enthused that they, too, would adopt his way as their own.

It is a remarkable fact that so long as he was personally present they did not appear to sense their deep need. They leaned too heavily upon him for support. They must be shown the real significance of this glorious message and make it in turn fire the lives of others. No person has really learned until he has sensed the responsibility of teaching.

When the great outpouring of Pentecost actually came, with the touch of this great Spirit which Jesus had promised would come as a guide to all truth, their eyes were opened. Their spiritual sight was quickened. Under its power, the transformed Peter fearlessly challenged the multitude:

"Ye men of Israel, hear these words; Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles and wonders and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as ye yourselves also know;

"Him, being delivered by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, ye have taken, and by wicked hands have crucified and slain."

Coordinate with the power which came to Peter on this occasion, enabling him to speak with so great conviction, came the insight to see that the designs of men could not frustrate the purpose of

God. As the climax to his sermon he therefore declared:

"Therefore let all the house of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ."

Just what was it that caused these people in so great numbers to be pricked in their hearts and to cry "men and brethren, what shall we do?"

It seems to me there is but one answer. They had now taken the place of the great teacher. Where before they had been disciples, now it was their task to teach. This responsibility, plus the tremendous power which the spiritual flood of Pentecost brought to them, enabled them to speak now with an assurance never felt before.

In bringing to you now and on succeeding Sunday evenings an appeal for a twentieth century Pentecost, let there be no misunderstanding. It is one of the fundamental weaknesses of humanity that we constantly look upon the spectacular events of life rather than those which are really fraught with the greatest elements of power.

It is evident that Jesus recognized this trait, for on the occasion of his performance of a great miracle, his caution to his disciples was, "Go and tell no man." He recognized that it would be a comparatively easy task to win thousands of followers who would be enthralled by his apparent power over life and death.

But Jesus knew there would be no more deadly element enter into the discipleship of his followers than their faith in him as a wonder-working magician. He wanted them to see the eternal elements of discipleship, of which healings and other spectacular demonstrations were but an outgrowth.

Unfortunately for the present-day religious world, there has been the same error on the part of men in their interpretation of Pentecost. The average summary of Pentecost stresses the spectacular demonstration which was but a secondary feature and overlooks the primary element — which was the transforming influence that entered into the lives of the disciples. The real power of Pentecost is to be found in the message of Peter and in the lives of the apostles from that day forward, just as the primary power of the master was in the Sermon on the Mount and his life thereafter.

It shall be our purpose now to investigate the outgrowth of this Pentecostal experience, to see wherein today we may be lacking in that real power which would touch the souls of men and cause them to be filled with the zeal to become teachers, rather than remaining satisfied to be merely disciples. For the end of discipleship is to pass on that which has been received, so that the spirit of power may go from one to another and bind all together in the rich fellowship of human brotherhood under divine guidance.

According to the graphic story told us by Luke in the Acts of the Apostles, almost the first act of Peter and John following the first great ingathering, was of miraculous import. A lame man was healed. The attitude of the people was such as we have just mentioned. They were ready to pay homage to those through whom this mighty work had been performed.

Peter was quick to place the emphasis where it belonged, for we are told:

"And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power we had made this man walk?"

"The God of Abraham, and of Isaac and of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus, whom ye delivered up, and denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go. But ye denied the Holy One and the Just and desired a murderer to be delivered unto you. And killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead, whereof we are witnesses.

"And his name through faith in his name hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know; yea, the faith which is by him hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all. And now, brethren, I wot that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers. But those things, which God before had showed by the mouth of all his prophets that Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled."

This stirring preaching on the part of Peter could scarcely pass by unnoticed. He and John were thrown into prison by the same group of men whose leadership had been placed in jeopardy by the teachings of the Master. Yet in spite of this we are told that many of the multitude of five thousand, believed.

When Peter and John were brought before the judgment seat, and were asked by what power they had done this, the answer of Peter proves conclusively that the change in his life had been complete.

"Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole.

"This is the stone which was set at naught of you builders, which is become the head of the corner. Neither is there salvation in any other. For there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved."

And so began one of the most interesting periods in the history of the church. These men of whom the rulers marveled—for they recognized them to be unlearned and ignorant men—somehow were pos-

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Sacrifice Week Program

This week should be a period of spiritual stock-taking and of rededication. The Saints are therefore urged to spend as much time as possible in prayer and meditation on the goodness of God and our rightful duty of response to him. In order to make this period of spiritual rehabilitation effective, the Saints are urged to fast from the noon meal Sunday, June 21, and at such other meals during the week as circumstances may permit. Daily prayer should be made for the church and its ministry and for the unconverted, and fast offerings, sacrifice offerings, and tithing should be contributed at the rededication service planned for Sunday, June 28.

The following program may be helpful, but it should be freely adapted to meet local needs:

Sunday, June 21:

Morning prayer service:

Theme: "Lovest Thou Me More Than These?"
(John 21: 15.)

Church school:

Center both worship and study around the sacrifice theme.

Morning preaching service:

Congregational singing of old-time gospel hymns.

Special sermon.

sessed of a power which was lacking in those who professed to have possession of authority to act in the name of God.

The authority of the rulers was purely a political and commercial authority, delegated to them by men. The authority of Peter and John was an authority of righteousness, delegated to them of God.

No wonder that the people flocked to their ministry. No wonder that they were thrown into prison and persecuted for righteousness' sake. No wonder that finally they, too, were forced to a martyr's death.

But what a glorious example have they left to us of the power and constancy which may come into lives that are weak, erratic, and vacillating, when the spiritual forces of Pentecost are permitted their perfect work.

Evening service:

- Congregational singing of gospel hymns.
- Special music.
- Special sermon or short experience talks.

Midweek Prayer Meeting:

NEWS AND LETTERS

Birmingham, England

May 24.—Progress is the keynote of the work in Birmingham. The blessing of healing has caused the hearts of many to rejoice.

Under the direction of Sister G. Allen, the musical director, a cantata, "Bethlehem to Calvary," was presented by the choir on Easter Sunday. The church was tastefully decorated with flowers on this occasion, and the performance was much appreciated by the congregation. A real Easter tribute was paid to dear ones who have passed away, and hope was centered anew in Jesus, "the Light of the world."

Anniversary services were conducted by the church school on two successive Sundays, May 10 and 17. Each service was well attended. Several times many stood at the back of the building unable to secure seats. The Saints were proud of the choir and of the sweet voices of the children. We trust that good seed was sown on those days.

The Women's Guild is doing a splendid work. The members visit and minister to the sick, and raise funds in various ways to beautify the church. They are helpful in creating a more social atmosphere in the branch, which is a good thing for all. They meet fortnightly under the direction of Pastor P. S. Whalley and are studying "The Women of the Bible."

Several rambles have been planned, and a garden party at the home of the pastor is the next feature.

A most generous gift was bestowed on the people of this branch not long ago. Each school worker received a new hymnbook, and a number were given to the branch for general use. In all nearly one hundred volumes were presented by Sister A. Meredith. This beautiful gift was much appreciated.

We are a happy band of Saints striving to lift high the banner of salvation. Let us pray for one another, that we may faithfully serve. Much depends on the Saints in every land.

"May light and truth and joy abound,
Our sins and errors be forgiven,
And we from day to day be found
Children of God and heirs of heaven."

Kirtland, Ohio

Friends of Bishop and Sister J. A. Becker, former residents of this place, were shocked and saddened when a telegram was received announcing the death of their daughter, Dana, Mrs. Daniel Snider.

Four young people of this congregation graduated from the Kirtland High School May 29, Sarah Booher, valedictorian, Catherine Booher, Paul Sheppard, and Howard Roberts. Patriarch A. E. Stone pronounced the invocation and benediction of the commencement service, and vocal solos were rendered by Elder George Neville, Sister Nola Roberts assisting at the piano.

Pastor J. L. Cooper was the speaker at the baccalaureate service at the school auditorium Sunday evening, May 24.

On Friday evening, May 29, Brother William Dyke, of Kirtland, was united in marriage to Mrs. Mildred Markell Johnson, of Mentor, Ohio. Brother Dyke is a former Grace-land student.

Sister Frances Baggerly, from Detroit, recently was married to Mr. Bruce Nickols.

On Mother's Day a short program by the church school was followed by a sermon, "The Spirit of Motherhood," by Pastor J. L. Cooper. There was special music. Sylvia Ann, the young baby of Brother and Sister Sylvan Manross, was blessed.

Elder D. H. Proper is improving after a siege of bronchial trouble. We are also glad to see Sister Lemuel Curry at church, after an illness of several weeks.

The guest speaker at the Temple on Sunday morning, May 31, was Elder W. C. Gault, of Detroit, Michigan. Brother and Sister D. P. Davies and son, William, sang a lovely number.

Sister Beatrice Gale will leave June 15 to attend classes during the summer at the University of Ohio, at Athens.

Apostle Clyde F. Ellis was a welcome visitor at the prayer meeting on a recent Wednesday evening.

Among the special musical numbers given during the last few weeks were a duet by Martha Parsons and Helen Williams, a solo by Mabel Thomas, a solo by William Householder, and a solo by Sister Fred T. Haynes, of Lakewood Branch. Brother Haynes was a recent speaker.

Members of the Kirtland Dramatic Club lately enjoyed a social evening at the home of the director, John Collins. Because of serious illness, one of the good players, Mr. Russell Barnes, was unable to be present. His friends hope for him a speedy recovery.

Hilo, Hawaii

"Previous to three months ago, life had been going on its regular course with not a ripple to mar the serene sea of church affairs, and the uneventful life became almost monotonous, especially to the younger people who had hitherto led such an active life," writes H. Kaniu Hapai. "One could almost hear the inaudible 'Ho-hum!' from this quarter of the branch.

"A sudden bomb dropped from the clouds in the form of an announcement that a Hawaiian luncheon could be had with the presentation of fifty cents. This momentarily stunned the older members of the branch, as the members of the intermediate class, who were of junior high school age, were in charge of the affair and had actually thought of it without the knowledge of their elders. A successful luncheon resulted in the carrying out of carefully laid plans, and the children were elated at the financial results of the affair, as it greatly exceeded the amount hoped for. No expenses were incurred, due to the willing donations offered by the different members of the class, and the whole of the money is to be turned over to the branch.

"Another stir occurred when news arrived from Brother Waller, in Honolulu, that missionaries were to be sent to Hilo. Everyone joyously bustled about preparing for the advent of the pair; and soon the day arrived when Brother and Sister Macrae stepped off the Waialeale into the eager arms of the Saints, who were down at the wharf to bid them "aloha."

"Friday night arrived, and the members of the junior choir who regularly attended rehearsals had arrived long before the specified time set for the practice. They stealthily peered around corners to see if the missionaries were in sight, and were finally rewarded when they arrived. Shy requests were extended them to join our choir, and now they are full-fledged members. At the termination of the choir rehearsal, everyone went to the playgrounds, where volley ball and other outdoor sports were indulged in under the bright lights of the ground. After this hot chocolate and sandwiches were served."

Sister Hapai resigned as chairwomen of the working committee in the women's auxiliary so that Sister Macrae could take the office in her place. The Women's Department is progressing splendidly, and they hope to be the means of assisting the branch to a greater extent than they have hitherto, and that does not tell how much they have already done, with their sewing and other means of raising money.

Due to the splendid success of the young people's luncheon, the members of the Women's Aid believed that they could apply the idea on a larger scale, and the announcement was made that another Hawaiian luncheon was in progress, and was to be given in the near future. Everyone was willing to help the women, and a full force of workers arrived at the Mission House to aid in the preparations. There were so many helpers that the young people were allowed to leave. The house was brightly festooned with gayly colored hibiscus and day lilies artistically arranged about the room, and the tables were strewn with ti leaves, ferns, and lily petals. A little before noon a few stragglers arrived, and prospects did not look very bright, but shortly after twelve an astonishing deluge of eager customers streamed into the luncheon room to be served, and a number had to wait for some of the crowd to disperse before they could find a chair to squeeze into. After the last customer had disappeared down the steps, it was a tired but happy group of women that met together to discuss the success of the day. The money received was very much greater than had been expected, and again, as in the last-mentioned luncheon, there were no expenses to be met, as everything for the luncheon had been donated by the members of the society—pipi kaula, opihī, dried opae, aku huau, and chicken with niu juice for the main course and candies, cakes, lemonade, and other eatables served as dessert. Bits of embroidery were also on display. A thankful lot of workers retired to their homes after everything had been cleared away.

Mother's Day was commemorated here on the second Sunday of May, as it was everywhere else. The choir rendered a few numbers, and solos and recitations and bits of reading were contributed by the other members of the branch. Sisters Shipman and Kanui, two mothers of the church, officiated for the morning. The morning was well spent, with here and there a tear and an appreciation for the mothers we know and have known.

The advent of the missionaries to Hilo has spurred the Saints to accomplishing greater things, and it is hoped that before the year is over we shall have accomplished those things nearest our hearts for the betterment of the branch.

Soldiers Grove, Wisconsin

This branch was happily surprised to have Brother Leonard Houghton, on his way home from visiting his aged parents, stop here for a few days. The Saints love Brother Houghton's kindly smile and encouraging words. Years ago he came into this region, preaching the nearness of the kingdom of heaven, and to his message he has been true. Through many years of toil and hardships, he has proved his worth as a servant of God.

Again he brought cheer to the Saints in this vicinity and preached some wonderful sermons. His sermons and his fireside talks stimulated all to go forward.

District President Amos Berve, who has been seriously ill, is recovering slowly. It will be some time before he is able to resume all his district duties.

Mallard, Iowa

June 1.—Branch President Benjamin Fish asked the young people to take charge of the Sunday evening service, April 19. Willingly they complied with his request, and under the direction of their leader, Sister Kolarich, prepared an interesting program. Mallard Saints are proud of their young people, and pray that God will help them to prepare for service as instruments in his hands.

Six members from Mallard attended the institute at Dow City, enjoying all sessions they attended.

Excellent sacrament services have distinguished April and May. The prayers and testimonies of priesthood and lay members have strengthened all in the faith.

A good Mother's Day program was presented under the directors of the divisions of the church school. Visitors were present on that day, and some of them took part in the program.

Two of this congregation graduated this year from high school, Edith Truog and Norman Kolarich. Sister Truog has fought a good fight and won the victory; after a number of years out of school, she returned to finish her four years of high school, besides keeping up her home and church work.

Mr. and Mrs. Kolarich, son Norman, Violet Hahn, and Velmar Fish, drove to Lamoni last week-end. Velmar and Norman expect to attend school there next year and were much pleased with the campus. Violet remained at Lamoni for a couple of weeks' visit with old Graceland friends.

This branch was made happy Sunday morning to receive its new songbooks. They are lovely.

Successful Young People's Convention for Saint Louis District

A two-day convention for the young people of Saint Louis District, held at Belleville, Illinois, May 30 and 31, resulted in the organization of an enthusiastic group of young workers, the kindling of a spirit of real fellowship, and an exchange of ideas beneficial to everyone.

Apostle John F. Garver, of Lamoni, Iowa, was present and acted as senior speaker of the convention. He was assisted by Elder Leonard Lea, of Independence.

Believing the truism that in order to work together a people must be able to play together, the committee in charge of the convention opened activities on Saturday afternoon with baseball games and other sports.

Then came the general business meeting, in which a bit of district business was cared for, the election of Elder G. S. Trowbridge as district president, to act as long as his business permits him to remain in the territory. Brother Trowbridge succeeds Elder Bruce E. Brown. It was at this meeting that the young people of the district effected definite organization, with "Eddie" Nicholson as president, supported by a good staff of officers.

At six o'clock the convention banqueted in the basement of the church at Belleville. Committees in charge had given the room tasteful decoration for the occasion. The meal served to the large throng of guests, some of whom were forced to wait until "second tables," was declared "excellent" by those who have sampled many church dinners. Elder C. A. Edstrom, Saint Louis pastor, proved an ingenious toastmaster, and seated with him at the speakers' table were Elders J. F. Garver, G. S. Trowbridge, Leonard Lea, Brother Wild, pastor of Belleville Branch, and others. After the banquet and speeches, the guests moved upstairs and found entertainment in a program given by young people from various branches in the district.

Sunday was a day crowded with services. The first, an early morning prayer meeting, was exceptionally well attended, and active participation encouraged the congregation.

A unique program of recitations and responsive readings made the worshipers remember with pleasure the Sunday school worship exercise conducted by Brother R. A. Hands.

During the class period Brother Lea talked to members of the senior and adult departments in the main auditorium of the church.

"Deepening Spiritual Wells," the theme of Apostle Garver's morning sermon, compelled the attention and interest of everyone in the congregation.

A priesthood meeting at 1.45 p. m. and a meeting of the women at the same hour took up other phases of active endeavor of the district.

Then everyone gathered in the main auditorium for a round table discussion on "The Organization, Activities, and Problems of Young People," conducted by Elder Lea. This meeting continued with deep interest for one hour and a half.

The evening service opened at six o'clock, and Elder Lea spoke on "The Needs of Our Young People." Following the sermon there were musical numbers and readings by young people from a number of branches.

The Belleville young people, hosts of the convention, are to be especially commended for their organization in preparation for the convention, and the work done by committees. Their plans were complete in almost every respect, and their execution was fine.

Columbus, Ohio

Second Columbus Branch, Rinehard and Twenty-second Streets

As the sun shineth upon the earth, so God shed the sunshine of his Spirit into our hearts May 3, as we met to commemorate the sacrifice he made for the human family, and we go forward with a determination to accomplish the task that lies before us.

The Sunday school on May 10 gave a Mother's Day program of recitations, dialogs, songs, and a violin solo. The efforts of the little folks were greatly appreciated, and each mother was presented with a red rose. G. H. Kirkendall and J. E. Matthews preached the sermons on Mother's Day, and both were splendid discourses.

The Women's Department met May 14 with 22 members present. Ruth Hamilton gave a short sketch of the life of Edgar A. Guest and read his poem "It Takes a Heap o' Livin' in a House to Make It Home." A variety program was given, each one taking part and endeavoring to make it a success.

At the morning preaching service of May 17, Chester Carey took for his theme "The Great Light." Our missionary, John R. Grice, preached in the evening, using for a theme "Religion and Its Place in the Life of Man."

The grim reaper has again entered our midst and taken one of our loved ones. Sister Margaret Horne passed away May 19, and the funeral was preached Wednesday evening, May 20, at Schoedinger's Chapel by J. E. Matthews. The body was taken to Kansas City, Missouri, for burial. We shall miss her, but she will never be forgotten, for her kind deeds will live on.

Edgar R. Kimball preached at the morning hour May 24, using for a theme "Repentance." John R. Grice preached in the evening on "The Plan God Gave."

The prayer meetings have been very good, and we feel that more interest is created by having a theme for each service.

C. W. Clark, pastor of First Branch, preached a splendid sermon the evening of May 31, his theme being "The Sons of God."

Rupert, Idaho

The minister of the Christian Church, of Rupert, Reverend Oren Orahoad, invited each of the ministers of all the denominations of the city to give an address at his church, setting forth the origin, history, and teachings of their respective churches. We had our turn on the night of May 27. Before going, we met at our own church for a short prayer service. Our missionary, Elder O. W. Okerlind, gave the address to a large audience. Much interest was manifest, especially with regard to the difference between our church and the Utah Church. Brother Okerlind's address was excellent, was well received, and we feel sure did a great deal of good.

Next Sunday night we start a week of services and hope many who heard the address will attend, to learn more about the latter-day message. Brother Okerlind will be the speaker.

Activities in Maine

Among the activities that had been planned for church work in Maine this season, we had two dedications, a conference, a young people's convention, and the reunion, all of which are now matters of history except the reunion, which will be held on our beautiful reunion grounds at Brooksville August 8 to 16.

At first we had planned on having Apostle R. S. Budd with us for the entire month of May, but received word from him that inasmuch as other duties were pressing he had prevailed on President F. M. McDowell to substitute for him in Maine. We were all built up with expectancy for the coming of Brother McDowell. The Stonington high school graduating class had sent him an invitation to deliver their baccalaureate address, and that, we thought, coming on the last day of May, would make a fitting close for his month's work among us. But a few days before his expected arrival came word that Brother McDowell would be detained at the office and that Apostle James A. Gillen would come in his stead.

Brother Gillen arrived the evening of May 2, in company with Bishop E. L. Traver and others from Boston. The next day being Sunday, May 3, he began his work by officiating at the dedication of the Sargentville church. This building was erected largely through the efforts of Elder Arthur Robbins, who passed away before it had been dedicated, and so it remained in use for a number of years without being dedicated. Through the efforts of Bishop Traver, in connection with those of the local Saints, it was made ready for dedication at this time, and the ceremonies were attended by many Saints and friends from the surrounding branches. All were well pleased with the services, and especially impressed with the three excellent sermons preached by Brother Gillen.

After preaching again at Sargentville on Monday night, Brother Gillen and the district president drove to Rockland on Tuesday, a distance of more than a hundred miles, arriving just as the Saints and friends were filling the rather inadequately small place of meeting. Here we were favored by the apostle with another inspiring sermon, and after a night's rest and a few hours of pleasant visit with Saints, we boarded the steamer Vinalhaven for the port of the same name, being located on an island about twelve miles out in Penobscot Bay. Brother Gillen delivered two sermons in the church at Vinalhaven, after which we returned to Rockland and took the car, via Bangor, to Stonington, where we were liberal enough to allow Brother Gillen one night of rest. He found a pleasant abiding place in the home of Sister Cornelia Shepard, in a fine upper room, from the window of which he could look out upon the waters of the bay with its numerous islands.

Then, May 9 and 10, came the conference at Stonington. Brother Newman Wilson, of Jonesport, was with us and contributed a beautiful Mother's Day sermon, which was very much appreciated by the large audience. Brother Gillen contributed three sermons at the conference and continued for three evenings afterward in the Stonington church. On Thursday morning we started for Corea, in the eastern district, and spent that night at the home of Brother and Sister Guy Francis, a lovely home overlooking the sea. We were joined by Brother Newman Wilson, and after Brother Gillen had given a rousing sermon in the Corea church, Brother Wilson and Archie Begg, who had come over from Vinalhaven and accompanied us from Stonington, went to Jonesport, leaving us to follow the next day.

The Young People's Convention opened in the opera house, Jonesport, Friday evening, with a fine crowd, and we were entertained with a play put on by the "Zion Builders," an organization of young people of Jonesport.

Among the other interesting things of the convention were class work, prayer meetings, lectures, and sermons, participated in by Apostle Gillen, Bishop E. L. Traver, Elders D. E.

There was also a ball game, in which the Zion Builders' team was defeated by a team from the Normal School of Machias, a banquet at which there were not less than two hundred present, and other much enjoyed features.

The baptism of the mother of our young brother, Walter Church, was impressive and beautiful, she having stated in the prayer meeting preceding that it was largely through the influence of her boy that she was moved to take the step at this time.

Following the convention, Brother Gillen preached at each of the following churches: Beal's Island on Monday night, South Addison on Tuesday night, and Kennibec on Wednesday night. At each of these appointments we found a following of the young people, and a few older ones, from Jonesport. Brother Gillen captured the hearts of the Saints of Eastern Maine District, came as near to becoming acquainted with all of them as was possible in one week, and left a warm place in their hearts when we returned to Stonington on Thursday, driving much of the time in the rain.

He rested in Stonington Thursday night and Friday; and Saturday the Saints of the three branches on the islands, Stonington, Little Deer Isle, and Mountainville, had planned a surprise for him, as his birthday would fall on Sunday. Accordingly, we repaired to a beautiful sheltered beach on Little Deer Isle, and there they had prepared baked clams and other delicacies, including ice cream, etc. At the proper time he was presented with a pretty birthday cake, in the center of which reposed a silken bag with appropriate streamers, containing a golden token of the warm regard he had awakened in the hearts of his fellow laborers in this district. The district president also came in for a share of the surprise, as his birthday had passed apparently unnoticed a week or two earlier. He, too, received a birthday cake, accompanied by sufficient money to secure a needed suit of clothes.

The dedication followed at Little Deer Isle on Sunday, the 24th. Although it was rainy in the morning, the house was well filled for the day. Brother Newman Wilson favored us with a most inspiring and hopeful sermon in the morning, Apostle Gillen delivered a masterpiece in the afternoon, and the service in the evening was all that could be desired. I felt that the apostle had reached the climax, or at least the high point of his work, that day. We went to our homes with souls inspired and with renewed determination to carry on.

Brother Gillen continued in the Little Deer Isle church Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights, then came to Mountainville for Thursday night, where he found many Saints from Stonington and Little Deer Isle, as well as the local group awaiting him.

Friday, through the kindness of Brother Dennis Eaton, Brother Gillen and the district president were permitted to go deep sea fishing, and didn't Brother Gillen have a time! He proved that in addition to being a fisher of men, he was a fairly competent fisher of fish. I think he must have had as many as two dozen nice codfish to his credit when he returned to the shore, all sunburned and tired, and with a blistered finger.

Sunday, May 31, Brother Gillen addressed an audience of approximately four hundred people at the baccalaureate service. One young man of the graduating class remarked to me that it was the most inspiring and beautiful discourse to which he had ever had the privilege of listening. From all sources came words of praise, and we heard not one word of criticism.

The apostle also spoke morning and evening in the Stonington church, and after the evening service went aboard the yacht, with Captain H. E. Billings, who had invited him to be his guest as far as Boston. E. F. ROBERTSON.

Independence

The young people of Independence have organized for a number of summer activities. One of these is that of taking trips to places of interest in church history. Last Sunday over ninety young people from Enoch Hill, Liberty Street, Stone Church, and Walnut Park congregations left in the early morning for Holden. There they met with the Saints in Sunday school and sacrament service.

An enjoyable time was spent on the lawn of the Saints' Home, where a basket luncheon was had. After luncheon the group went through the home, visiting and cheering the older Saints. A musical program was provided by the young people, which was much enjoyed by the inmates of the Home.

When the young people returned to Independence, they all agreed that they had had a happy time.

One hundred and seventy-five Boy Scouts held a two-day Camporee on the Campus Saturday and Sunday. Their camp received quite a drenching Saturday afternoon and evening, but there was plenty of sunshine Sunday morning, and the boys were up by 6.30. The flag was raised at 7, and following that a sunrise religious service was conducted. At nine o'clock the boys were all excused to go to the churches of their choice, so most of the churches had Boy Scouts for Sunday school and church.

The church service that was held at the Campus Sunday, June 7, at 11 a. m. was well attended. Some of the Boy Scouts from the Camporee were present. The sacrament service was opened by Brother Bollinger, and the scripture reading was read by Brother Cowan. He then blessed the bread; Brother Van Trump blessed the wine. Several songs preceded the social service, and at its close, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations" was sung. Brother Van Trump pronounced the benediction.

At the Stone Church the early prayer and devotional service Sunday morning was composed of members from the various branches in Independence. It was well attended for the first meeting of this kind, about 350 being present. President F. M. McDowell, Pastor John Sheehy, and Elders Dewey McNamara and Harry Barto were in the stand. The pastors from the different branches were also seated on the rostrum with the presiding officers. Brother McDowell gave a very timely talk, admonishing the Saints not to allow the economic conditions to detract from their spiritual life. He admonished them also to be diligent in prayers during Sacrifice Week, that the burden pressing upon the church might be lifted and the work again move forward.

Almost every seat was occupied when the sacrament service opened at eleven o'clock. Pastor Sheehy was in charge, and on the platform with him were Elbert A. Smith and Floyd M. McDowell of the First Presidency, Bishops G. W. Eastwood, R. T. Cooper, Elders C. Ed. Miller, Stanley Kelley, and Harry Barto. The opening prayer was offered by Bishop Cooper. The 22d chapter of Luke was the scripture selection read by President McDowell. Prayers were offered by Stanley Kelley and E. A. Smith, and there were brief talks by Brothers Kelley and C. Ed. Miller. The meeting was characterized by the usual reverence and devotion.

The evening of June 7 was the beginning of a series of meetings at the Campus which are to be conducted every Sunday evening throughout the summer. President Floyd M. McDowell will present this series and has chosen for his theme "The Way of Eternal Life." As a text for the first of these discourses, President McDowell chose Matthew the 19th chapter, verses 16 to 29, which tells the incident of the rich young man who came to the Master asking what he should do to obtain eternal life. In speaking of the economic conditions of the world today and the various ways in which it may be thought the difficulties could be solved, he declared that there was but one way out of the social dilemma, and that way was in the gospel of Jesus Christ. "Have we claimed too much prophecy, or have we believed too little in prophecy?" were pertinent questions.

He read also the 46th and 47th verses from the 32d chapter of Deuteronomy; the words which Moses spoke to the children of Israel: "And he said unto them, Set your hearts unto all the words which I testify among you this day, which ye shall command your children to observe to do, all the words of this law. For it is not a vain thing for you; because it is your life: and through this thing ye shall prolong your days in the land, whither ye go over Jordan to possess it."

The speaker then dwelt upon the thought that "complete living is the goal of the gospel." It is the thing that is paramount throughout the gospel of Christ. The living of the law in its completeness brings a fullness of life. We can not serve both God and Mammon and obtain a fullness of life. "Through this thing ye shall prolong your days in the land, whither ye go over Jordan whither ye go to possess it," declared Moses, and through this thing, our speaker believed, shall ye prolong your days in Zion whither ye go to possess it.

The entire discourse was an effective and powerful one.

Miss Blanche May Minton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Minton, of Independence, became the bride of James D. Craton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Craton, also of Independence, at eight o'clock June 4. The Stone Church was the scene of the ceremony which was witnessed by a crowd of guests. President F. M. McDowell officiated. Miss Minton was attended by Miss Kathleen Stephens, maid of honor, and the Misses Florence Hanson, Helen Bell, Nell Morgan, and Shirley Butler, bridesmaids. Oral Craton acted as best man for his brother, and ushers were Doctor A. V. Frisbey, Harold Morgan, Robert DeTray, and Harold Linden. The bride is a graduate of the Independence Sanitarium School of Nursing.

Saturday evening at 8 o'clock Miss Georgia McBride and Donald Johnson were united in marriage at the home of the Reverend Marshall in Lees Summit, Missouri. A few immediate relatives were present at the ceremony. The bride is a daughter of R. O. McBride, of Independence, the groom a son of Mrs. Monnie White Johnson, also of Independence. The young people will reside at 418 North River Boulevard, Independence.

A lovely lawn wedding took place Sunday afternoon at 4.30 at the home of George H. Hulmes on the Lexington Road when his daughter Helen Louise was married to Albert G. Baird. Evangelist Ammon White, uncle of the bride, officiated in the ceremony, and the bride and groom were attended by Mr. Orville Hulmes and Miss Joy Carpenter. Paul Carpenter sang "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly." About thirty-seven relatives and special friends were present. The groom is from Milan, Kansas, and after a honeymoon trip to the Ozarks, the couple will make their home in that city.

The announcement of the marriage of Miss Jennie P. Gunlock to Kenneth M. Cady, of Nauvoo, Illinois, February 28, was recently received in Independence. Miss Gunlock is also a graduate of the Independence Sanitarium, but for the past year has been head nurse in a private hospital at Milledgeville, Illinois. Mr. Cady has been teaching school near Muscatine, Iowa, and the marriage was kept secret until school was out.

Among those who have of recent days passed beyond are Mrs. Alice J. Hulmes, eighty-one years old, who died at her home. She was the widow of George H. Hulmes, who for some years had pastoral supervision of the Stone Church. Two sons survive her, George H. Hulmes, of Independence, and Alfred W. Hulmes, of Kansas City. The funeral was conducted the afternoon of June 5 at the Stahl Funeral Home. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Death claimed Miss Myra B. Lincoln on June 3 at the home of her mother, Mrs. Minnie A. Lincoln, in Independence. The deceased had been an invalid for two years. She was born November 1, 1896, at Marathon, Iowa. Surviving besides her mother are a sister, Mrs. Mary E. Lynch, Green Forest, Arkansas, and a brother, George A. Lincoln, Omaha. The funeral was held June 5 at the Latta Funeral Home in charge of Elder J. M. Terry. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Liberty Street

In the last local Sunday evening service for this season, Pastor J. R. Lentell chose to discuss on May 31 "The Restored Gospel." The thing which constitutes and gives significance to the restored gospel, he affirmed, is the restored power and authority of the priesthood.

Elder A. H. Koehler spoke to the congregation that morning.

Because it is June and because Liberty Street Church is one of the smaller edifices in Independence and is centrally located, a number of weddings are being solemnized at our altar. It is not unusual to have couples from neighboring branches ask permission to be married in our church.

The branch is rebuilding its playground back of the church, and its provisions include a volley ball court.

The junior-intermediate group of the church school has just completed a project. It has earned, purchased, and had constructed draw curtains for classroom purposes in the basement room. The sense of achievement which the children are experiencing is very helpful to the department.

An effort is under way on the part of the church school, to procure new hymnbooks for the congregation. Officers are conducting a drive toward the purchase of two hundred by the district, which, according to arrangements made, will place one hundred in the church auditorium. Members already have signed for one fourth of this number.

The junior-intermediate group, under Raymond Wrigley, and the primary-beginner group, under Mrs. McConnell and Mrs. W. H. Williams are rehearsing on a program to be presented on Children's Day.

One of our members, Mrs. Mary Richter, passed to the other life on Thursday last week. Sister Richter was the wife of Carl F. Richter, 219 West Kansas Street. Her death came suddenly, caused by a heart attack. The funeral was held Saturday afternoon at the Liberty Street Church, Elders F. A. Cool and John R. Lentell in charge, Elder J. M. Terry preaching the sermon. Music was rendered by a quartet, Mrs. Chester Young, Miss Lavina Long, Walter Curtis, and Harry Blake. Burial in Mound Grove Cemetery.

Sunday, June 7, a short prayer service was held during the devotional period just preceding the church school. It was well attended, and the spirit of reverence and devotion was present, preparing the Saints for the communion service which followed the class work.

A dozen or more of the Liberty Street young people joined the pilgrimage to Holden, Missouri, for the day. A wonderful trip and a good time are the comments of those who went.

About fifteen names have been handed in for baptism next Sunday, Children's Day. A fine program by the children and young people is promised.

Englewood

June 14, Children's Day, is always a red letter day in the Englewood Branch. This year it will be exceptionally so. There will be a special children's program in the morning, and at 10 o'clock the baptismal service. It is expected that there will be a large class of children baptized as a group. This class has been studying the doctrines of the church for the last month with special teachers. The church, and particularly the font, will be decorated very beautifully with many flowers donated by the members of the church.

Attendance at the sacrament service June 7 was a little above the average. Sixteen members of the priesthood sat as a body on the rostrum and directed the services. Elder D. S. McNamara, pastor of the branch, made the opening remarks, and the assistant pastor, Elder Perry Hiles, took active charge.

Sunday evening services at the church have been discontinued with the recommendation to the congregation that they attend the regular Sunday evening services at the Campus, with President Floyd McDowell as the speaker. Englewood was represented on that program Sunday evening, June 7, by the boys' chorus from the church. This chorus was started in Englewood under the direction of Sister Hazel McConnell.

Early morning prayer service will start at the church next Sunday morning at 8 o'clock. None was held last Sunday, and most of the regular attendants were at the Stone Church in Independence. Prayer service is being continued every Wednesday night at 8 o'clock with fair attendance.

The Hill's Park outing Friday night under the direction of Ad. Welch was enjoyed by about fifty.

An expression class has been organized with Mrs. Lyda Budd Robertson as the director. This is progressing very well, as is the choir. Choir practice is held every Thursday night. The girls of the young people's division of the Sunday school are practicing two or three nights every week for their baseball team for the girl's league in Independence.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The many spring rains Kansas City and vicinity have enjoyed during the months of April and May have brought forth a bountiful supply of flowers of all kinds, and their beauty has been unsurpassed. The lawns about Central Church have been very beautiful and have yielded abundantly in the way of decorations, both interior and exterior. Brother Furness, the caretaker, has given untiringly of his effort to make possible this beauty, and some of the church decorations have been beyond description. These beautiful settings, together with the reverential organ preludes, bring the congregation in close touch with the divine handiwork of God.

Sunday was an ideal June day, and the lower auditorium was well filled for the sacrament hour. A number of short, inspiring testimonies were given, and a marked degree of the Holy Spirit was very prevalent.

At 7.45 p. m. Bishop Mark H. Siegfried delivered a very fine discourse.

Next Sunday is Children's Day, and a special program by and for the children has been arranged. A part of this service will be the ordinance of baptism.

Brother and Sister Mark H. Dunn are the very proud parents of a daughter, to which they have given the name Eleanor. Also Brother and Sister Roy Thutchley announce the birth of a son, Joseph Elwyn.

The Stake O. B. K. Council is sponsoring a summer volley ball tournament for both girls and boys. Six teams have already entered in each division, and the first round of games will be played June 16. Following this tournament, tennis will be featured.

O Star of Truth, down shining
Through clouds of doubt and fear,
I ask but 'neath Thy guidance
My pathway may appear.
However long the journey,
How hard so e'er it be,
Though I be lone and weary,
Lead on, I'll follow Thee!

—Doctor Minot Savage.

Blue Pencil Notes

Cupid's handicaps: He has only a bow and arrow to use against the machine guns of modern temptations. He must pick them off one at a time and stick around until they are married. He does not have enough time for follow-up work.

Sometimes a man's countenance is his best protection against false accusations. When I was a boy I knew a worthless and dirty fellow who was charged with stealing a box of soap. His attorney simply presented him to the jury and said: "Take a good look at my client. Does he look like a man who ever stole a box of soap?" The jury brought in a verdict of not guilty. Can you get a moral out of that story?

"I never do have any luck," complained Deacon Goodentart; "here is a sure cure for rheumatism advertised, and I have just got over mine."

The preacher dabbling in business has long been ridiculed by business men—and generally with good reason. But now the business man in business is a tempting target. The wisdom and prescience and glory of our "super men," our "captains of industry," our "big men" in the business world have faded—we discover that though we idolized them, they have feet of clay, and heads of—what was it? The collapse of the stock market a year ago caught most of them between two holes of golf; some of them, perhaps, getting ready for a shower bath—and needing it. When they had caught their breath, they assured us with one voice that no real damage was done and the depression would be over in three months.

Speaking to the graduating students of Kansas University recently, the president of the University of Wisconsin said:

"It is incredible that the directing intelligence of the political and economic life of the United States did not sense in advance the onset of the forces of economic disruption, and yet only here and there were a few unheeded voices raised in warning. The political and economic leadership of the Nation, in the main, was speaking with unrestrained optimism within forty-eight hours of the market crash, which revealed the basic instability of the economic situation into which we had drifted."

It is true that when the present storm is temporarily past, a few financiers will have been found to have amassed new and titanic fortunes from the misery of the world; and some, it is only fair to say, will have evidenced wisdom as well as honesty in avoiding the rocks and bringing their crafts through safely. But now we know that, big and little, all of them face industrial problems that they are helpless to solve; tremendous forces are at work in the industrial world that they do not understand and are powerless to control. Truly, "the wisdom of their wise men shall perish and the understanding of their prudent men be hidden."

The great battle of the future will be between capitalism and communism; but neither will solve the problem of successful production and equitable distribution until it is undertaken in the spirit of Christ and in accord with his principles. His name remains in the industrial world, as well as in the spiritual realm, "the only name under heaven whereby men may be saved."

Letters for Sacrifice Week

The following letters, written especially for sacrifice week, express the faith, hope, and willingness to give which must sustain the church in times of difficulty.

LED BY THE LOVE OF THE LORD

As the church is entering upon sacrifice week, trusting that in this way means will come into the hands of the Bishopric to enable them to meet pressing demands, especially the allowances of the general appointees, now six months in arrears, it seems fitting that the Saints recall the fact that in every age of the world people have been called upon to make special sacrifices that the Lord's work might move onward. When the children of Israel were instructed to make an offering for the tabernacle, we read that "they came, every one whose heart stirred him and every one whose spirit made him willing, and they brought the Lord's offering to the work of the tabernacle . . . And they came, both men and women, as many as were willing-hearted, and brought bracelets and earrings and rings and tablets, all jewels of gold; and every man that offered, offered an offering of gold unto the Lord." (Exodus 35: 21, 22.)

Theirs was a willing offering brought because they loved the Lord. In the building of the temple the people rejoiced, for they offered willingly because with perfect hearts they presented their gifts unto the Lord.

In the early Christian church when grace rested upon all and they were of one heart and of one soul, nothing was withheld which they possessed, that would advance the work of the Lord. This was the spirit of entire consecration that has always characterized the church of the living God.

Those who are familiar with the work of the Restoration through the Prophet Joseph Smith, will recall the readiness of the Saints to sacrifice, in the building of the Temple in their efforts to establish Zion, and in the sending of missionaries to foreign lands and the islands of the sea. How they rejoiced and praised God for the privilege of doing for his work which they loved better than their own lives!

In the early years of the Reorganization, when their members were few, their enemies many and threatening, and their poverty known to all men, and the task greater than men could accomplish unaided by the strength that God alone could give, they sought that strength through fasting and fervent prayer, and it was given to them.

Today, as I am writing, my mind goes back fifty years when I first stood in defense of the latter-day work and learned how few were the members but how fervent their testimonies to the divinity of the work. How they loved each other! How they sacrificed for the work! The joy of service as they walked weary miles to find a home where they could tell the gospel story. A large number of men were engaged in local missionary work, meeting their own expenses in order to reach the people with the gospel.

The general church allowed fifteen dollars a month for the support of a missionary's wife and five dollars a month for a child. This had to pay for rent, fuel, clothing, and food. It required rigid economy. There were periods when even this amount was lacking because the treasury was empty, and the faithful ones were called upon to live by faith, and trust God to provide. Looking back over those experiences brings a feeling of joy and gratitude to God when we were able to see his hand in the timely provision that always came.

Today the church is passing through another period of financial depression, and many are being sorely tried. It is a time to exercise our faith in God, knowing that this is God's work and that it shall accomplish that whereunto he has set his hand. I am sure that every faithful member of the church will feel it a blessed privilege to sacrifice for the good of the work, as never before, that the burden now resting so heavily on the missionary arm of the church may be lifted, enabling them to go forth with glad hearts to the work assigned them by the church. To this end let us pray for the outpouring of that spirit which will manifest itself in the willing heart to bring their gifts unto the Lord, that this great work may move onward to success.

U. W. GREENE.

SACRIFICE

Sacrifice is "the offering of anything to God, a surrender made to gain something else." The great and essential command is to "seek first to build up the kingdom of God and establish the righteousness thereof"; this is the all important duty required of the church. This means the faithful performance of duty, which includes the self-denial of those indulgences which can be dispensed with, especially when such denial will be the means of blessing others less fortunate, physically and also spiritually.

After spending many years in the mission work, we are prepared to test the principle of sacrifice; and can say that the sweetest and most blessed time in our lives has been the result or aftermath of some supreme cross or sacrifice made for the welfare of others who were less fortunate; and in those sacrifices it was the giving up of cherished hope, and assuming duties and conditions which led us, because of love for others, to place in their hands the "pearl of great price," the knowledge which brings the greatest degree of pure pleasure in this life and an assurance of celestial pleasures in the next estate. The pure laws of life, the laws taught and exemplified by our Savior, permitted all that is necessary to health and peace in this life, and this law teaches the nobility of sacrificing, denying ourselves for the blessing of others, of those things which we can do without, that others who are less fortunate may have what to them is necessary for their physical and spiritual welfare. We used to sing, "Sacrifice brings forth the blessings of heaven." The principle is just as effective today, for it expresses a divine principle eternal in its nature. After many years of toil and sacrifice, we can truly testify, as we have made sacrifices for the cause, we have received manifold blessings in this life, and feel, because thereof we are ready to meet the results of life as given by the great Judge.

The most touching event in the Scriptures is related of our beloved Savior when one said to him, "I will follow thee." He said, "The birds of the air have nests, and the foxes have holes, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." Thus he taught a wonderful lesson of sacrifice made wholly for the good of poor, alienated humanity, by his supreme sacrifice that man might obtain the most precious of all gifts, an eternal life of supreme happiness in a redeemed and celestialized world.

Christian sacrifice does not call for the giving up of anything essential to life and happiness. The great command is: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. This great church work in which we are engaged is divine and will continue and stand at last as the bride of Christ, that portion who have followed in the footsteps of the Savior, and have woven for themselves a beautiful white robe, which is the "righteousness of the Saints."

In peace and assurance,

BROTHER AND SISTER J. M. TERRY.

I had once made the statement that in my opinion no one was sacrificing for the church, but was forced to change my mind when the following came to my attention:

A sister whose entire income was $40 per month was paying $5 per month tithing and $5 per month for local branch expenses.

Last December when a general letter was sent out asking for help, we received a reply from an elderly sister, who is in very poor health, stating that her daughter, who was the main support of the family, had been out of employment for many months and that the scanty income from other sources was hardly enough to keep them going, but she said, "I want to help with the Lord's work, and I have decided to do without one meal each day and give this amount to the church."

An elderly sister who does housework for a living handed in thirty dollars tithing on conference Sunday, saying she was sorry she could not give more but work had been very scarce this spring. The following Sunday she gave ten dollars more.

New York District Pledges Support

A telegram has just been received from the New York District in conference assembled pledging to the church and the officers the "moral, spiritual, and financial support" of the people. Apostle R. S. Budd has been present and active in the conference, which has enjoyed a fine spirit of unity and devotion. The officers at headquarters wish to express their appreciation of the excellent spirit that prompts this pledge.

The telegram follows:

To the First Presidency:

New York District in conference assembled pledged $1,023 at the morning service, as a special sacrifice offering, following sermon on sacrifice by Brother R. S. Budd.

We, by resolution, pledge the church our moral, spiritual, and financial support.

(Signed) NEW YORK DISTRICT.

Sacrifice Brings Reward

By R. S. Budd

"Why should I be asked to sacrifice?" was a question put to me by a person who had listened to me explaining the needs of the church and why we were asking for a sacrifice period in June. No doubt this question has presented itself to other members, who have not had the opportunity, nor the courage, to present it to those who may have been responsible to some extent for the calling of this sacrifice week. It is a legitimate question, therefore should be answered.

Like many other things, sacrifice is shunned because of our failure to understand its value in our lives. Many have thought of sacrifice as giving up something without thought or hope of reward, forgetting that God is a God of rewards as well as a God of sacrifice. "And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water—he shall in no wise lose his reward." "Abel offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained a witness that he was righteous." What greater reward could come to one than to be assured of his righteousness?

We should not make sacrifices expecting an immediate return or self-appointed reward, but we can be assured that the accepted sacrifice will without fail be followed by a reward appointed by God and suited to our needs. Jesus voluntarily sacrificed the presence of his father for thirty-three and a half years and his life on the cross, receiving as his reward a place at the right hand of God, plus the happy assurance that he had complied with the wishes of his father, which is the greatest reward that can come to a son. It was a sacrifice for the widow to bake for Elijah, a cake first, using the oil and meal that was needed for herself and son, if they were to live, but the reward followed. "The foundation of God standeth sure."

All of God's laws have to do with the needs of man. Beholding Adam's need in the garden God made for him woman. After the fall, because of his need he provided for him the gospel. As clearly set forth in the three books, sacrifice is a principle to be used in the building of character, the redemption of the soul. In issuing this call for a sacrifice week, not only has the economic needs of the church been considered, but also the needs of the individual members who are asked to make the sacrifice, for we are assured that those who comply will receive, as did Abel, a witness of their righteousness. "To him that soweth righteousness shall be a sure reward."

Sacrifice must be voluntary on the part of the individual making it, and he must have a purpose, a goal ahead. It must be a freewill offering, like the boy offering himself on the football team, doing all in his power to qualify. That which is given grudgingly will not be accepted and can not bring a reward in righteousness. He who shrinks and requires urging is not a martyr. Whole-heartedly must we make our offering, with real love for the cause we hope to serve. Jesus might have escaped the mob in the garden, but with a purpose and goal ahead, (the redemption of man,) and knowing it to be the will of his Father, he voluntarily offered himself a sacrifice for the sins of the world. And those who would be, what he through this act made possible, "sons of God," must, as Paul points out in his letter to the Romans, "present your bodies a living sacrifice."

Sacrifice demands self-denial, and self-denial is necessary if we are to follow the example set for us by Jesus our Lord, who said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me," and also explains in the following stanza that, "Whosoever will lose his life for my sake, shall find it." The poor widow cast her two mites into the treasury, and Jesus commented that hers was a greater gift than all others, not because of the amount, but because she gave "of her want." Her gift demanded the self-denial which develops character, and the statement of Jesus shows clearly that he was more concerned about the giver than the gift. The greatest gift to the group is not the gift itself but the strength that it develops in the giver, the part it plays in the development of character. Did I not believe the offering made during the sacrifice period would be of lasting value to those making it, I could not have courage to subscribe to it.

Sacrifice, like all other principles involved in the plan of redemption, is an individual proposition. The sacrifice of a mother will not develop a disposition nor build a character for her son. It will only offer a worthy example and place before him an opportunity. He must make his own sacrifice if he hopes to obtain the promised reward. The sacrifices of the Saints in Kirtland to build the temple, will have little to do with the building of the temple required of us, in which "the sons of Moses and Aaron shall offer an acceptable offering and sacri-rice." Each generation must make its own contribution, if the kingdom of God is to be established in the hearts of its people.

A good brother suggested that he was quite willing to sacrifice when the church used the money for the things God had directed. The question raised is pertinent. The money should be spent in the way that God intended, and every member should be concerned, and do all in his power to assure himself and others, that such is the case. However, I am sure this brother would not be pleased to have God say, "I will not accept your sacrifice until you live a perfect life." Would it be fair for the missionaries to say, "We will not represent the church until the Saints are perfect"; or for the church to say, "We will not send out missionaries until those applying can prove their perfection"?

Perfection is the goal for which we are all striving, and sacrifice is one of the great principles involved in reaching that goal. We can not therefore expect perfection in the men charged with one department of the work until we have all reached the standard. Our task is to put into operation in our own lives the principles that will make for perfection, bringing us into closer communion with God, that we may offer our brethren strength, not only through advice and council, in harmony with the law, but through prayer that may be effective, because of our struggle toward perfection.

If we are to obtain that more abundant life, if we are to enter that state of sonship, promised, if we are to take part in building the kingdom of God, we can not reject the principle of sacrifice which is followed by reward so surely as night follows day. May his Holy Spirit rest upon us and lead us forth as it led his Son, and those who have gone before, to make "a sacrifice acceptable, well pleasing to God."

An Early Missionary Who Sacrificed

By Inez Smith Davis

Glaud Rodger was going back to America after over five years as a pioneer missionary in Australia. That was cause enough for happiness, but that was not all. It was rather a wonderful thing, and it meant a home at last for Matilda! She was a city girl when he married her many years before in England, used to the comforts of a pleasant English home. He had planned to make such another home for her some time, but that time seemed always just ahead, and he had almost given up hope. He thought with some sadness of the scenes through which she had passed, the places where she had been forced to live!

First, of course, and best of all to think about, was the first year of their married life at 15 Wilton Street, headquarters of the English mission in Liverpool, where the happy young Rodgers had entertained all the dignitaries of the church that visited England from Salt Lake City, but after that came the crude log cabin in Council Bluffs (Mattie had never seen a log cabin before), the tent home in Salt Lake City, their longing in vain for some recognition from the great men of the church whom they had given such a warm welcome in their own home over the sea; after that the orders from Brigham Young to move south.

There was no alternative, so they made the journey. They had one baby, a son; he died on that trip south, early one morning as they camped by the roadside. There was not a sign of human habitation in sight, not a board to make a coffin. There was nothing to do but to drive on. He would never forget that awful day's travel over that barren land, with Mattie half-wild, clutching the dead baby to her breast!

That winter they slept in their wagon box. What a succession of unlovely places they had to call home; log, adobe, dirt floors, no windows. How vividly he recalled their breathless escape from Utah and Brigham's destroying angels; then the attempt to build a new home in California against floods and droughts.

At last they were succeeding, when the emissaries of the Reorganization came. How gladly the message was received in the Rodgers' home! But almost immediately he had been asked to go on a mission. How he longed to serve the Master, and yet how could he consent? How could he ask his wife with her little children to suffer more? She had sacrificed enough, and if he stayed at home now, he could give her what he had dreamed to give her when he asked her to be his bride in those far-off days in old England. He had told her what he thought, and with shining eyes she had answered:

"Well, Glaud, we have a cow, and enough money to buy flour for a year, so buy yourself a suit of clothes, and pay your fare to San Francisco; the Lord will provide for the rest." There was no missionary allowance in those days.

So now Brother Rodger had been in Australia for five years. The mission had been an arduous one, but there he had met two of his brothers from whom he had parted long years before in Scotland. When Glaud had joined the church as a youth of twenty-two, his stern old father had cast him out of his home. The father had died since, but, true to the convictions that brooked no compromise with what he considered evil, in his will he left no mention of the son who had so grievously disappointed him in joining the Latter Day Saints. The two sons in Australia were named as executors, and before Glaud left them they had told him of their determination to divide what they had with him. It was justly his, they told him. It was not much, but enough to help him buy a home in Zion! That was the pleasant surprise he was carrying home to his wife in America.

He had given up all hope of such a legacy long ago. He and his wife had often said they would gladly part with all they had for the sake of the gospel, and they had done so. Now the Lord in his kindness had supplied the means to replace that which they had sacrificed for the sake of the gospel.

The home-to-be was much in his thoughts during the joyful days of home-coming and getting acquainted with the little folks who could not remember him at all. Very soon he made a trip to Independence to look over the little city for the home of his dreams. And he found it there, almost as if it were waiting for him. Joyfully he sent for his wife. It was a brilliant moonlight night in November when he met her at the depot and they walked up the beautiful streets of Zion together. They were unusually gay and happy as they walked along, reminiscent of the days of their courtship in old England. A bright new quarter of a dollar glittered in the moonlight on the walk in front of them, and he picked it up and told her it was an omen of good luck in the new venture.

Matilda liked Independence, too, and the deal was almost closed when one day in the shelter of the walls that they thought were so soon to be their home, he told her of something that had worried him. Brother Joseph had asked him to go on another mission! Of course he would not go, he could not; he had for years known no regular income, except what their own industry and the kindness of the Saints provided. But the laborers were few, and the calls for preaching were many. "Are you satisfied," his wife asked softly, "that we have sacrificed enough?"

Glaud Rodger looked around at the little place he had already begun to love, and answered:

"Well, I just don't know"—then slowly, "perhaps I better go on just one more mission; then when I come back we will build a home in Zion together." So the little home was given up, and temporary arrangements were made for the courageous wife and her little ones. The mission was to Nevada and California. The little family did not care to start the new home alone in a strange place, so it was determined that all would wait until the father could again be with them.

In the fall of 1883 they all watched him depart once more on his mission of love. Somehow the parting was harder than ever. Three months passed, six months, and every letter was filled with love and longing and plans for the future together. Nine months, and still he could not come home—and then there were no more letters. Glaud Rodger was taken sick and died in his mission field, far away from his loved ones. The church was poor in those days; they could not even bring home the dead body of the missionary husband and father. So in a lonely grave in Nevada rests the missionary, who wanted love and a home, but who willingly gave up his boyhood home in Scotland and the pleasant English home of his early married life, all for sheer love of the gospel. Finally, on the altar of that love, he and his family had placed the home that was-to-be—their dream home in Zion.

Graceland Opening September 4

NEW COURSES FOR NEXT YEAR

For the past several years the first few days of the college year have been so successfully used as Freshman Days that the practice will be continued this fall. All new students will enroll Friday, September 4, and that day, together with Saturday and Sunday, will be devoted exclusively to freshmen so that when the upper class students return on Monday the new students will be well oriented and ready for the year's work. These three days are used in conferences between freshmen and faculty members in a discussion of the year's work, courses available, vocational opportunities open on the completion of definite courses, familiarizing new students with the library, laboratories, and other facilities of the college, physical examinations, and enrollment. They are three of the most profitable days of the entire college year.

The new catalog is now printed and available for distribution. It contains much valuable information for both parents and students and will be sent free to anyone interested.

Several new subjects in Education, Philosophy, English, History, and Secretarial studies will be offered during the coming college year.

Twelve different courses, with one hundred thirty subjects are available from which to select college work to some definite professional or vocational end. A wise choice of electives makes this possible.

The year just closed has been one of the most successful in the history of the college. The graduating class was composed of students from many States of the Union extending from Massachusetts to California and from Michigan to Texas, with Canada included.

The indications are that there will be a very large returning class next year from among the freshman and sophomores of last year. At this writing, the end of the first week in June, applications have been received from more than one hundred freshmen for the opening of the college year in September, and additional applications are being received almost daily.

A new catalog and application blanks for admission will be sent to anyone interested. Write to the President, Graceland College, Lamoni, Iowa.

A Friendship Interlude Project

The children and young people of the United States have now the opportunity of extending a hand of friendship toward the children of Porto Rico. Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, governor of the island, in his appeal to the American people, stated that 200,000 Porto Rican children are undernourished and starving. The Porto Rico Child Feeding Committee has been organized to meet the high moral challenge of this emergency situation.

Arrangements have recently been made for the cooperation of the Committee on World Friendship among Children with Colonel Roosevelt's Committee through an interlude friendship project during the months of March, April, and May. Friendship Treasure Chests are the good-will symbol. Each chest will contain articles for school use, toys for boys and girls, and friendship letters, and, in addition, a card indicating how many hot lunches have been provided by the sending group (at five cents a lunch).

An attractive folder giving full directions is ready and may be secured from the Children's Committee (289 Fourth Avenue, New York). Will friends please pass on this information to teachers in church and day schools and to leaders of young people's groups of all kinds? This is a project of love, and mercy as well as one making for friendship, good will, and world peace.

Every church school might well make one item in its program for observing Good-will Sunday (May 17), the sending of one or two chests with fifty meals each.—Church Management, May, 1931.

Man's religious sense of worth can not maintain itself except he develop in association with his fellows a way of life in which his own life is lifted above impulse and interest, and the life of his fellow man is recognized as having equal value with his own. Religion is a sublimation of vital energy but it is also a discipline of that energy in the interest of social harmony.—Reinhold Niebuhr.

The Light of the World

By Evan A. Fry

As our scripture reading tonight I have selected several verses from the 5th and 6th chapters of Matthew:

Ye are the light of the world; a city set upon a hill can not be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick, and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your father which is in heaven. The light of the body is the eye; if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light. But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

Did you ever sit down quietly in an easy chair and let your mind wander over the fields of thought suggested by the word light? In spite of all we know about it, light is still pretty much of a mystery. Like electricity, we know how to make it artificially, how to control it, and how to use it in many different ways, but the exact nature of it and the full explanation of all its wonderful powers is still, and probably always will be, one of the inscrutable mysteries of the universe.

If you were asked what light is, you would probably say that it is the condition which makes it possible for men to see; yet there is light which is invisible to the human eye. In the main, though, that would be a good definition, for light as we commonly know it exists primarily and preeminently for the sake of permitting men to see. From our earliest childhood the absence of light has served to stimulate our imagination so that we people the impenetrable darkness with all manner of terrors, all of which could be dispelled by one small ray of light which would reveal things as they really were. One small candle can change a haunting den of horror into a cheerful and harmless room—can lift the oppressive and stifling pall of darkness, and make the very air itself seem less heavy.

Light is the fastest-moving thing in the universe. Scientists tell us that it moves 186,300 miles per second, faster than its closest rival, electricity, and so far ahead of any man-made velocity that it is useless to draw comparisons. Probably because of this speed, light is universal in its scope. It travels in the trackless wastes of inter-stellar space and reaches into corners of the universe where the most powerful telescopes can never hope to find it. Like the love of God, it is so far-reaching that there is no corner of our world or of our universe where man can be very long hidden from the light which God has given to all his children.

In so far as man's knowledge goes, light is an essential factor in the production of all the energy available for our use in this world. The warm rays of the sun help to produce the vegetation that furnishes food and energy for man and beast. The same sun, in ages past and gone, stored its energy in beds of coal and pools of oil, with which we now heat our houses, light our cities, and turn the wheels of factories and automobiles. The same sun lifts water from the ocean to the heights from whence it flows downward through the great turbines which convert sun-energy in the form of water power, into convenient electric power. Man is dependent upon the light of the sun for his food, his clothing, for his warmth, for his energy, and the energy of the machines which serve him. In fact, it would almost begin to appear that man is dependent upon the sun for life itself! Perhaps the heathen of ancient times were not so far wrong in worshiping the sun as some of us modern Christians may have believed, for we are told that God himself is light; that he is always present in every remote corner of his universe; that he is the giver of all life and of all good; that he is the source of all strength and power. Of course the sun is only one of his creations—one of the instruments through which his boundless majesty and dominion and power are made manifest, but there is ample food for thought in the statement that God himself is light.

I would pause here to call your attention to another characteristic of light. We have said that it produces energy, but according to the invariable law of the conservation of energy, it must needs follow that all light is the product of energy—that energy must be expended lavishly in order that light may be produced. The candle that burns and gives light unto the house is consumed; its physical and tangible energy has vanished as heat and light. The lamp burns oil; the electric light draws energy from some source, which can eventually be traced back to the sun. Even the sun itself is constantly shrinking because of the lavish expenditure of its energy, and yet scientists tell us that we need have no worry about its adequacy for the needs of this world until several billions of years shall have elapsed. It is rather a staggering thought that God made our sun, whose power is so plentiful, whose light is so far-reaching, whose life span is so vast as to defy the imagination of men, and that the vast and limitless power of our sun is as nothing to the overwhelming power of a God who can create or destroy a thousand suns at a single word.

But we believe that Christ was speaking of light in a spiritual sense when he said to his disciples, "Ye are the light of the world." Shall we examine the subject a moment to see whether the analogy between physical light and spiritual light will hold good?

Spiritual light is the thing or attitude of mind—whatever you may choose to call it—which enables men to see spiritual things with clear and unobscured vision. It exists primarily in order that men might be enabled to see their way through the material obstacles as well as the spiritual obstacles of this world. It is that kindly light which leads us on amid the encircling gloom of human disillusionment and despair—that points the way through all the obstructions and allurements that hinder man in his search for God.

Like physical light, spiritual light is a mystery, so much so that many men who do not care to take the trouble to find out for themselves declare that there is no such thing, yet spiritual light is so tangible a thing that a scientist of the ability and reputation and coldly calculating attitude of the late Steinmetz predicted that the next generation would see its greatest development in the increase of spiritual light and spiritual knowledge. The very men who enjoy spiritual light can not understand or explain it, any more than you could explain to a man who had been blind from birth what physical light was. They know that it exists; they know to a degree how it can be acquired, and how it should be used, but back of it all is still the inscrutable mystery of the unknown and the unknowable. In a day when men are groping blindly among the material things of this world, when men are dazzled by the glittering lights of the great white ways of our cities, and yet blind to the light which cometh from God—in a day when men deny that there is any such thing as spiritual light, and deny that God reveals himself through that light to his children in this dispensation, there exists a challenge to the people of Christ's church in his statement, "Ye are the light of the world." If the light of Christ's church were shining as brightly before men as Christ himself would have it, men would no longer be in the abject darkness where most of them are struggling today.

Spiritual light is necessary and essential to spiritual life, just as physical light from the sun is essential and necessary to physical life in plant, animal, or man. Spiritual light is the source from whence comes our spiritual strength—the source of that spiritual food which enables us to grow from day to day until we attain to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ. Yet many a man who is meticulous about his diet of vitamins and energy-producing foods, and who haunts the bathing beaches in search of a healthful sun tan, utterly neglects to search after that spiritual light and spiritual food which will sustain the spiritual man and enable him to grow in grace and in a knowledge of the truth. Are you feeding your body and starving your soul?

Thus far our analogy seems to hold good. Physical light enables men to see physical things. Spiritual light enables men to see spiritual things. Physical light and spiritual light are both mysteries as far as their essential natures are concerned, and both are essential to life in their respective fields. The analogy will hold good in still another way: spiritual light can travel just as fast and just as far as physical light; furthermore it can go to places where physical light never penetrates, and it can be seen by the blind man whose eyes are forever closed to the light of the sun. The miner trapped a mile below the surface of the earth, far from any light of the sun, and perhaps denied even the light of a candle, can be just as near to the light of God as the aviator who soars abroad in the face of the sun a mile above the earth. No soul can penetrate hidden and vacuous corners of the universe so far that the light of God's love can not reach him if he seeks after it and receives it when it comes, for God is light in a spiritual sense, as well as in a physical sense, and from him has flowed the spiritual light which has guided men through all the ages of the past, and from him still flows the spiritual light which guides men in the straight and narrow way which leadeth to life eternal, which cheers them amid the darkness of sin and tribulation, and which strengthens them in the hour of despair and sorrow.

The analogy between physical and spiritual light holds good in still another way. Both are the product of energy. Spiritual energy must be expended if man is to receive or give to the world spiritual light. Something must be consumed; energy must be lavishly spent in the process if spiritual light is to go forth into the world. But just as God has a limitless store of physical light and physical energy, so his reservoir of spiritual energy is so vast that no thought can plumb it, and as unailing as God himself. But God gives his spiritual light only to those who are constantly spending it, whose energy is going out in a constant flow for the guidance and spiritual benefit of their fellow men. The full reservoir can not be filled; only the one from which pours a steady stream can receive a steady stream of renewal.

Our scripture reading contains the statement that "if thine eye be single thy whole body shall be full of light." In other words, if our every thought, every ambition, and every action in life have but a single objective—the glorification of God through service to his human creation—then in the carrying out of those thoughts, ambitions, and actions your whole body and your whole soul shall be filled with the light of God and with the enlightenment of his Spirit. The spiritual light which you receive as the result of your singleness of purpose will make you even better fitted for a continued glorification of God through continued service, and the continuous outpouring of spiritual light which you give to men along with your service rendered in singleness of heart will make it possible for God to bless you with a constant replenishing of your own store of spiritual light.

But if thine eye be evil; if it is seeking light for selfish purposes, or if it is trying to pay attention to all the attractions of the world as well as to the things of God, to that extent is the light of God obscured, and thy whole body shall be full of darkness.

The scripture says also that you should let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven. If you attempt to let your light shine so that men may glorify yourself rather than your Father in heaven, you will soon find that your light has ceased to shine at all. We do not light a candle and then conceal it under a bushel, because the primary object in lighting it is that we might receive light. We do not set the lighted candle on a candlestick in order that we may see the candle, but in order that we may see the room. We do not turn on an electric lamp, no matter how beautiful, so that we may see the lamp; its primary purpose is to give light to those that are in the house. There has recently been installed a gigantic searchlight on the tallest building in Chicago, which is to serve as an airplane beacon to aviators approaching the windy city. Chicagoans may brag about the distance at which this light can be seen, but after all they did not put the beacon up there so that men might see the beacon; they put it up in order that men might find Chicago in darkness and storm and fog. So it is with the spiritual light in us. If we attempt to use it to draw attention to ourselves, the light that is in us will turn to darkness, which will be all the blacker by reason of its contrast with the preceding light. It is only when we let our light shine with an eye single to the glory of God that our lives will be filled with light.

To all Christians and, we believe, especially to all Latter Day Saints, the statement, "Ye are the light of the world," carries a tremendous responsibility. Ye are the light of the world; not the light of Kansas City, or Independence, or Missouri, or of the United States, but of the world. Is our light shining before the world? We should bow our heads in shame under the scorn of what we term heathen Chinese and Japanese, who find little in our Christian civilization of crime and violence and political and moral debauchery which they care to imitate. We should take serious and anxious thought about the attitude of heathen India, which according to a recent writer is willing to accept the Christ of the New Testament, but not the Christ of so-called American Christians. Yet we pride ourselves that we are the light of the world!

As individuals and as nations we need more than any other one thing a return to the source of all true spiritual light—to our Savior Jesus Christ. We need to follow his example and his teachings more closely, and with an eye single to the glory of God. May the day soon come when he can truthfully say to us, as to his saints of old: "Ye are the light of the world."

A Twentieth Century Pentecost

NUMBER SIX

By C. E. Wight

The words of the Master to his disciples, "Wait until ye be endowed with power from on high," speak eloquently of the need of man. The entire purpose of the gospel plan with the life and teaching of the Master as its center, was to supply this something which is lacking in man.

Even as it was necessary for these men in close relationship with the Master to wait until this power should come into their lives, so is it necessary for every one of us to step aside from the rush of life to receive in our quiet meditation the power and inspiration which come through communion with God.

There never has been any reason for the idea prevalent during the last century that God had set the wheels of the earth in motion, then departed to allow it to run itself. Even less does such a philosophy appeal to the modern mind accustomed to the wonders of the radio. The transmission of spiritual messages to the soul of man is no less remarkable than the almost perfect projection of the human voice.

To bring to the sight of man the personal appearance of the Master following his resurrection is perhaps no more difficult to believe than that soon we shall see our friends through the process of television as we now hear their voices by means of the radio.

An unknown author has emphasized for us in a poem entitled "He Cometh Late" the need of humanity in this late age of the world's history:

The strings of camels come in single file,
 Bearing their burdens o'er the desert sands.
 Swiftly the boats go plying on the Nile—
 The needs of men are met on every hand,
 But still I wait
 For the messenger of God who cometh late.

I see a cloud of dust rise on the plain.
 The measured tread of troops falls on my ear.
 The soldier comes, the empire to maintain,
 Bringing the pomp of war, the reign of fear.
 But still I wait
 For the messenger of God who cometh late.

They set me watching o'er the desert drear,
 Where dwells the darkness, as the deepest night;
 From many a mosque there comes the call to prayer—
 I hear no voice that calls on God for light.
 But still I wait
 For the messenger of God who cometh late.

We have heretofore mentioned that following the remarkable sermon and conversions of Pentecost, one of the first recorded acts of Peter and John was the healing of a lame man. It is not strange that these events attracted many who were moved by idle curiosity, and others who assumed that this talent might be acquired by them in the same way they had acquired others of their possessions.

It is apparent that fundamentally men have not materially changed through the passing of the centuries. Then, even as now, the material measuring rod was used as a standard of value and worth. And it was assumed that by the simple expedient of the payment of money certain valuable characteristics might be acquired.

It is not surprising, then, that one Simon who had learned some of the tricks of the magician, should desire that he might also learn this wonderful art which permitted Peter and the other apostles to do so many mighty works. So he offered them money, saying:

"Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost."

But Peter had learned through the tragedies of Gethsemane and Calvary and the powerful baptism of Pentecost, that money sinks into insignificance when compared with the real values of life. So in no uncertain tones he rebuked Simon, saying to him:

"Thy money perish with thee because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter; for thy heart is not right in the sight of God. Repent, therefore, of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee. For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness and the bond of iniquity."

Was this too strong a rebuke to one whose greatest fault was perhaps ignorance of the better way? If we are thinking in terms of courtesy and tact, perhaps so. If we think rather in terms of meeting the vital need of humanity, then the end justified the means.

It is very unlikely that Simon would have been aroused without a shock. The very power of the denunciation precipitated a crisis and brought conviction that honeyed words would never have aroused. And with his heart touched by the appeal of Peter, he cried out, "Pray ye the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me."

Note the change which immediately came over Simon, when he was convinced of the truthfulness of Peter's message. After all, the real conviction resulted from a touch of that same power which had come to Peter on the day of Pentecost. Herein lies the real glory of Pentecost. Here is the proof that it was not the overflow of a single day, it was not to be an isolated experience, but it was a vital something that could be transferred from one personality to another.

Peter had drunk deeply—not of new wine as was supposed by some who heard his powerful sermon—but of the water of life which flowed from eternal springs. Not only was his own thirst quenched, but he could now lead others to these same springs of life. This eternal flow of the wellsprings of life from one soul to another, never robbing but rather enriching the one from whom it flows, is the real glory of Pentecost today. For the centuries have not lessened its power and its glory. Today, as then, the one who waits for the messenger of God who cometh late, shall receive of the same imperishable stream which flows from the eternal fountain of life.

What a contrast between the man Simon when still bound by the chains of ignorance, offering money that he might receive the power to heal, with the undoubted intention of using this power to increase his wealth; and on the other hand the story that the band of converts were brought to the position that they were willing to share one with another, that none might lack.

It requires a very powerful stimulus to bring about a condition that will cause a man to think in terms of his fellow as though he were thinking of himself. Straight, indeed, is that way, and few there are who find it. None shall find it except he be purged by the fires of Pentecost.

It is not our purpose tonight to discuss the wisdom of all of the economic acts of the apostles. Undoubtedly they erred in some regards. However, we have a present-day example of a man who without doubt received more joy from his life of giving than is possible to the average man. It is said of the late Russell H. Conwell that during his lifetime he gave away a fortune, so that at the time of his death he was a poor man.

Was he poor? Only in dollars. He left a tremendous legacy of friendships—and there is no standard of money that can be used to measure the joy and satisfaction that must have come to him in the realization of benefits he was bestowing upon those who had need.

Pentecost taught those who came within its gripping influence that heaven was theirs for the asking. That they could receive of the real values of life if they were willing to pay the price in kind. In other words, we spend money to make more money. If we would make friends, we must expend friendship, if we would have others serve us, we must first learn to serve them; if we would receive of the faith of our fellows, we must have faith in them; if we would be loved, we must first learn to love.

Often we pray, "Lord, lighten the burden. Protect us against suffering and hardship. Smooth our pathway that pain and trouble and distress may not haunt us."

If only our eyes could be opened and we could have our prayer interpreted in terms of the eternal, we should find that we were really praying for an important ministry. For a ministry of power can come to us only as we sense the values of life and these values are revealed in our hours of crisis.

Not long ago a young singer electrified the world by the beauty of her tones. But it was the almost universal criticism of the experts that her voice lacked a fullness and a richness that could come only as she understood better the meaning of her song.

When Schumann Heink was forced to pass through the bitter experience of members of her family arrayed one against the other in battle, there came to her bitter anguish of soul which permitted her to give real meaning to the words of "Home, Sweet Home." Through her suffering there came a registration of power which put new meaning into her song and touched the hearts of those who listened.

Yet as greatly as the world needs Pentecost today, it is not aware of its need. Neither was it in the days of the apostles. For we are told that through the inspiration which came to those holding the apostleship, there were chosen seven men for a special service. One of these was Stephen, a man who, because of his faith and power, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

And because he had the courage to say to them: "Ye do always resist the Holy Ghost, as your fathers did, so do you," they stoned him to death. The closing words of the story concerning this wonderful young man show how appreciative he was of the lack of knowledge on the part of those who stoned him. For he said, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." And then he fell asleep. Jesus said, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Without Pentecost we can not know. With its tremendous forces bringing to us a vision of eternity, we shall be able to see as did Stephen and as did our Master, that those are not entirely at fault who are bound by the chains of ignorance. Under its influence we may come to the appreciation which was given these recipients of Pentecost and know that though they may destroy the body there comes "to Love, at last, the Victory." So we join with David Starr Jordan in the words of his beautiful poem:

There was a man who saw God face to face.
His countenance and vestments evermore
Glowed with a light that never shone before,
Saving from him who saw God face to face.
And men, anear him for a little space,
Were sorely vexed at the unwonted light.
Those whom the light did blind rose angrily.
They bore his body to a mountain height
And nailed it to a tree; then went their way;
And he resisted not nor said them nay,
Because that he had seen God face to face.

There was a man who saw Life face to face,
And ever as he walked from day to day,
The deathless mystery of being, lay
Plain as the path he trod in loneliness;
And each deep-hid inscription could he trace;
How men have fought and loved and fought again;
How in lone darkness souls cried out for pain;
How each green foot of sod from sea to sea
Was red with blood of men slain wantonly;
How tears of pity warm as summer rain
Again and ever washed the stains away,
Leaving to love, at last, the victory.

Above the strife and heat and fever pain,
The squalid walk and talk of men,
He saw the vision changeless as the stars
That shone through temple gates or prison bars,
Or to the body nailed upon the tree,
Through each mean action of the life that is
The marvel of the life that yet shall be.

Earth's Major Secret

By Jewel Dortch Hoofman

A man went to Cumorah Hill
A sacred vault he made,
Obedient to his Maker's will,
A record there he laid.

A knowledge of the ancient saints
Who lived, and loved, and died,
All this the holy record paints—
Such did Moroni hide.

The holy grave he covered there,
And Nature hid it well.
The work he finished with a prayer,
For time the rest to tell.

He hid the Word from wicked men,
Until the time foretold,
When it should speak unto its kin
The message wrought in gold.

Preparing for Life

By J. E. Vanderwood

Perhaps the most common blunder that is made by mankind is the one in which they mistake the purposes of life, in that they think of preparing only for the next world. I say this is a serious mistake, and the best will never be achieved by man until he has come to think straight in matters of this kind. The one and important thing for man is to learn that life is a very important thing, and that a life that is worth living at all is worth living well. We must learn that life consists, too, of more than the abundance of material things that one may possess. And we must also learn that some men are possessed by their goods, rather than they being the possessors themselves.

The matter of preparing for life, then, involves the problem of becoming educated, for no one who lacks the essentials of education is prepared to live. True, he may exist, but it is only he who has become truly educated that has come to live in the manner designed by the great Teacher.

We are often misunderstood when we attempt to speak of education, for the short-sighted ones at once jump to the conclusion that we mean the attendance at school. Perhaps nothing could be farther from the truth, and this is the stone upon which many good people have stumbled. When we speak of education in the true sense, we speak of that which fits men for life and their relationships to those about them. The man who is able to make the right use of the knowledge acquired is really the educated man. True, school is a wonderful help if we will use it rightly, but one may become well-educated who has never seen school, and another may have had school and yet be far from knowing how to relate himself to life. Real education may be said to be training for the right uses of knowledge. Or in other words we may say that the man who is really educated is capable of relating himself properly to the circumstances of life.

"The age of enlightenment," says Elbert Hubbard, "will not be here until every church has evolved into a schoolhouse, and every priest is a pupil as well as a teacher." There is much truth in this statement that will undoubtedly help anyone who will consider it. In this connection we find these words of Elbert Hubbard quite fitting: "If your life is to be a genuine consecration, you must be free. Only the free man is truthful; only the heart that is free is pure." This is another way of expressing the idea of Paul when he said, "He who is free becomes Christ's servant." The man who is free is both true and pure, and by reason of these qualifications he becomes the servant of Christ, and in this only can he become the servant of Christ, for to be other than true and pure would be to fail in his qualifications. He would be lacking in the education necessary for him to qualify as a servant of Christ unless he is both true and pure.

Every educated man must be a pupil and a teacher. To teach, one must have first been taught. It is well, too, that we remember the need of a real and well-balanced life. I am sure every thinking mind can agree that to be the servant of Christ one must become the brother of men, for the Master himself was not ashamed to call men his brothers. This involves more than many of us have yet considered, and for that reason we are trying to bring it clearly into the issue that is before us. To prepare for life, it is necessary for me to prepare to serve others, and if I am to bring the best to men I must realize that brotherhood means concern for those who are less fortunate than I am. It means that I should be working out methods and means for the enlightenment of mankind. It means that I must be using in a helpful and in a constructive way the knowledge and the means I have acquired. It really means that I must be a brother to mankind, for he who is not prepared to be a brother to men is not yet prepared to live as he should live. Brotherhood means comradeship, it means mutual helpfulness, it means encouragement and uplift. The question that naturally arises in our life is, What are we doing to speed the day when the best shall be shared by all who are willing to abide the law of truth and purity?

Our sonship is to be determined by our brotherhood, and it is not a difficult matter to cause men to understand that if men are to be God's sons they must be each other's brother. To us the matter is of a vital nature, for we have made claims beyond other people, and it is therefore necessary for us to demonstrate beyond others. We must show by our lives that we have become educated in the things of the kingdom of God by revealing the spirit of true brotherhood in our lives. Not until I have come to reveal the Spirit of the Master in my association with men can it be said of me that I am prepared for life. Elbert Hubbard has again said: "But the brotherhood is extending its lines; and what think you the earth will be like when the majority of men and women in it learn that to be simple and honest and true is a part of wisdom, and that the work of love and beauty is the highest good?" Here we again have the elements of true education, here we have the essence of true and noble life. The same writer again says: "Saintship consists in getting busy at some useful work." Suppose we think of this, and in our endeavor to prepare for life we make the necessary effort to come into possession of that which will fit us for brotherhood and hence for saintship. A saint is not one who is cannonized, nor yet one who is so far removed from mankind that he can not be touched by their needs, but a saint is one who is so closely related to Christ that he is able to reach a helping hand to humanity, and under every circumstance is able to inspire them with hope and courage, and a determination to achieve the best there is.

He, therefore, who would prepare for life must make use of his most sacred privileges; he must lay hold upon opportunity and make it serve the best possible purpose. He must see that life consists in making alive the rest of the creation around him. It means qualifications for the highest and the best. True preparation for life is briefly stated in the words of the Master in which he said: "Learn of me." This involves much, and it stands before us as a golden opportunity; for to learn of him we must form his acquaintance, and to form his acquaintance we must come to him; and in this connection we should remember his further word: "He that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out." May we not therefore put ourselves to the task of preparing ourselves for life so that we may be able to make possible the early approach of the kingdom of God among men? I see no reason for delay; the time is opportune, and the demand is great. He who will put his best into it will without question receive in return multiplied benefits and blessings. May we therefore avail ourselves of every opportunity to prepare.

Labor Not for the Meat Which Perisheth

By Harley A. Morris

Curiosity seems to be a universal human trait. It is said that if two or three people were to stop on a conspicuous corner of one of our larger cities and begin pointing excitedly up at a tall building, in an incredibly short time a crowd would gather that would stop all traffic. Nor is curiosity confined to this day and time. The sacred record tells us that many times during Christ's ministry, multitudes followed him that they might observe his miraculous works. It must have been very discouraging to Jesus to see the people pass lightly over his life-giving teachings for these superficial things. I imagine one of the most disappointing of these occasions is that recorded in the sixth chapter of John.

The instance noted is one when Jesus, weary in body from the terrific strain of his ministrations, passed over the sea of Galilee to seek rest and quiet among the pleasant hills on the other side. But the great multitude that followed him would not be denied. No doubt when he first entered the ship and withdrew from the shore, they were checked. Then some one, noting the direction of his course, suggested that they go on foot around the little lake to meet him on the other side. Like wildfire the word spread through the throng, and at once they began moving. So hurried was their decision and the journey, that the Master had scarcely found his retreat before their arrival.

There is one incident in this singular pilgrimage that points out crystal clear the magnetism of that wonderful personality; and that is the fact that only one of the vast horde had brought provisions with him. That one, if the boys of Palestine may be judged by the boys of today, very likely owed the presence of a lunch to the thoughtfulness of a mother. There is one other bright spot among the incidents of the day, and that is the thoughtfulness of Jesus for the needs of the physical man and the loving-kindness which prompted him to fill that need. When we keep this event in mind, we have confidence to listen to him as he speaks to the people of Capernaum the following day.

"Labor not for the meat which perisheth," Jesus admonishes them, "but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give you."

There is more than a hint of disappointment in the Master's voice as he speaks this day. He had come that men might have life more abundantly, and he had come to these people especially. The wells of eternal truth had yielded liberally of the waters of life, and instead of drinking long and thirstily therefrom they have passed along to the stagnant pool of materialism.

Christ did not condemn them on the mountain for partaking of that which nature demanded. Indeed, he himself had provided liberally, by means of the power resident within him. The fact that they had followed him as he went hence did not blind him with its subtle flattery. His all-seeing eyes had immediately observed in them the cause of their apparent devotion; and he pleaded with them to evaluate.

"You're losing sight of the really big things," he tries to explain. "Life holds more than just eating and drinking." He isn't trying to make them believe that these things are not essential. He knows that they are; but because of his clearer vision, he sees them merely as a background for more important details.

It is said that traveling along a certain road approaching an eastern mountain range, the traveler becomes aware of a huge human head. From the misty distance only the outline of the lofty forehead is discernible, but as one draws nearer he can see other features, sharply cut, making up the recognizable human silhouette. Christ has led the people close enough to see every item, but they refuse to look at anything but the rough outline. No wonder he is discouraged.

"Labor not for the meat which perisheth." To do so is in itself ridiculous. No one in his right mind would labor hard all day to spend his meager earnings for food to lie on his shelves and decay. To warn people against such a thing in the literal sense would be to insult their intelligence. A true leader would never do that, and Christ is a true leader. Yet this passage does have a semi-literal meaning.

I am thinking of a story some one wrote which tells of a man who had spent his life hoarding together a mass of wealth. The tale continues that out of pity for him, God permitted him to see a vision of what his own death would be like, living as he had. During his spiritual experiences, he is brought near to a group of people who are discussing his death. "How much did he leave?" one of the group questions. And the answer comes loud and clear: "Every cent." So far as he was concerned, his wealth had perished with the separation of the chemical elements of his body. His entire life had been spent in pursuit of the meat which was perishable. There may be those today who need to remember the little story, lest they, too, labor in vain.

If you are converted to the unsubstantiality of earthly things, you may yet need to read again the words of Jesus. Note especially that there is no period after the second word of his message. Christ was not an apostle of laziness. He never commanded anyone not to work. Neither would he countenance for a moment any man spending his time at a pursuit that necessitated his family's going in want. In fairness to his language we can scarcely consider that for a man to labor all day to carry home necessary provisions which are consumed and go to build up healthy bodies and clear, active minds constitutes working for perishable things. The fact is quite to the contrary. The Master had in mind the law of surpluses. There can be no other interpretation. How foolish it would be to store the pantry full of food that would spoil before it could possibly be used. How equally foolish to line the pockets and fill the bank with gold in excess of that required for actual needs and just wants. He who would do that needs to look closer at life. He is missing the more important details.

"Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth until everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give you." The words may seem to hold a contradiction. The skeptic would reason, "Why labor for that which Jesus gives freely?" He needs to look back to the days of Moses, when manna fell. The food was given freely. But had it been left lying upon the ground, it never in the world could have supplied the human need. Some people would remain nestlings, and have an indulgent parent carry spiritual food, half digested, to their very mouths. Such shall never know the joyous thrill of flight.

Yes, indeed, there is labor to be done. In proportion to the reward it may compare with the simple gathering of manna. However small or great may be the prize, if it be held in the hand of Jesus there always will be a necessary effort to obtain it. We must work for that which Jesus gives. It is a principle of the law of recompense.

To those who would venture further into this laboring for Jesus, there may occur the question that puzzled the people of Capernaum: "What shall we do that we might work the works of God?" And still today the Master's answer echoes true: "This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." Just simple, unassisted belief? For shame. Devils believe and tremble. What a pity they don't utilize the wasted energy of trembling by doing acceptable works. It is to be hoped that no church people emulate the folly of the devils. It is far more restful to be doing the works of Christ by permitting him to live again his life in us; by making ourselves agents of mercy as he did; by carrying to hopeless souls the comforting hope of the gospel, by being sure that the meat which we purchase with our day's labor fills the needs of some hungry, helpless soul before it is decayed. Do this, and no doubt your bank account will dwindle pretty low, but somewhere you are storing a pantry full of eternal food, and that, of course, is the thing that really counts.

An old schoolmaster, beloved by his pupils and known to be the friendliest and happiest man in the village, was asked to tell the secret of his happiness. Pointing to a card which hung upon the wall of his cottage, the old man said, "It is no secret; there is the explanation hanging on the wall." There on the wall hung a card bearing these words:

"Jesus first,
Others next,
Yourself last."

On Easter Sunday the altar of the church was prettily decorated in white curtains, white and green crepe paper, and potted ferns and Easter lilies, with a huge white cross in the center just back of the emblem table.

At the eleven o'clock hour the priesthood were seated on each side of the cross, and the sacrament of the Lord's supper was spread. A spirit of reverence hovered over the entire congregation as quiet music, "Olive's Brow," was played, followed by a hidden quartet singing, "'Tis Finished." Every prayer and testimony seemed to be an inspiration; and a message given by the Spirit to the congregation was a blessing indeed.

At the noon hour, lunch was spread in the woods. The children enjoyed an Easter hunt in the afternoon. At 7.45 in the evening the church was filled with Saints and visitors who enjoyed a musical program, concerning the death and resurrection of Christ. At the close of this program the theme of the service was changed, as Etura Carrow sang "Sitting at the Feet of Jesus." B. F. Renfroe then told of Jesus blessing the little children and why we observed this ordinance in the church. Deveryle Skinner sang "The Sweetest Flower," after which Brother and Sister W. C. Feely came slowly down the center aisle, bringing to the altar their little four-weeks-old son to be blessed by Brothers E. B. Stafford and B. F. Renfroe. This was followed by a musical number, composed and given by Sister L. A. Carrow, "The Blessing of a Little Child," which she read with violin and piano accompaniment, finishing her composition by singing a song of blessing upon this little babe and its parents.

We were made happy to have with us again Brother E. J. Gleazer and Z. Z. Renfroe. Brother Gleazer has lectured each evening. He also informed us that Brother Renfroe had been assigned supervisor over the western districts, and in the eastern with Brother Bath, and that Brother Renfroe would locate his family at this place. Brother and Sister Renfroe were reared here and had made their home at this place until two years ago, when they moved to Oklahoma City to have charge of the branch there. With grateful hearts we welcome them home again.

Brother Z. Z. Renfroe preached the Mother's Day sermon, using as his theme "Mothers of Men."

On May 17 twenty-one relatives and friends of Brother R. J. Parker celebrated with him his ninety-first birthday at a noon luncheon in his honor held at the home of Brother and Sister Robert Skinner. He was presented with a basket of fruit and a lovely bouquet of flowers by the junior department of the church. Brother Parker is the oldest member of this branch. He holds the office of deacon.

The first Sunday of June was a happy day. The church was again attractively decorated with white coverings around the railing of the rostrum, on which sat potted ferns and baskets and vases of pink and white flowers. A large basket filled with white larkspurs had its place just in front of the emblem table.

At the eleven o'clock hour, eight of the priesthood took their places in a semicircle on the rostrum for the sacrament service. The marriage ceremony of Elva Mankins to Raymond Brady, both of Vernon, Texas, preceded the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. A chorus of six girls dressed in white, accompanied the bridal party into the church, taking their places behind the priesthood on the rostrum, singing "A Wedding Prayer," Mrs. Tray Parker at the piano. The ceremony was read by Elder Ernest Crownover, a young uncle of the bride. Miss Emma Carrow attended the bride, and the bridegroom was accompanied by Iral Parker.

Glenna Sue Burks and Illa Mae Hood were the little flower girls.

Following this was the ordination of Iral Parker to the office of elder under the hands of Elders E. B. Stafford, B. F. Renfroe, Mat Crownover, and Ernest Crownover.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was then observed. All of the ceremonies were made very impressive by their beauty and simplicity, together with the presence of the gracious Holy Spirit.

We were happy to have the Crownovers from Calumet, Oklahoma, with us. In the evening Brother Mat Crownover preached an inspiring sermon on the theme, "Worship the Lord with Action."

London, Ontario

During the past month our branch was favored with a visit by Apostle Clyde F. Ellis. His sermon and talks were very encouraging. Quite a number of Saints in the district were with us, and Brother Ellis spoke plainly of the condition of the church, earnestly urging the membership to seek a closer relationship with the Master, and as a natural consequence the temporal affairs of the church would be soon adjusted.

Doctor William Sinclair, of Boston, passed through here the other day, stopping for a short visit with Brother and Sister Tom Sinclair.

Sister Muriel Garfield, of the West Haven (Connecticut) Branch, is visiting with her parents, Brother and Sister A. Ridley. Also Sister Marjory Blodgett, of New London, Connecticut, is here spending a few weeks with her parents, Brother and Sister C. W. Alford.

Elder Percy Farrow, missionary, occupied our pulpit one Sunday evening recently, giving a forceful discourse. Sister Farrow's solo was well rendered.

Elder William Fligg, our district missionary, is with us again. Sunday evening he used as a basis for his sermon, "Seek the Lord while he may be found." Elder Fligg's daughter Mary came with him from Independence.

Portland, Oregon

At the regular branch business meeting held in Portland Tuesday evening, June 2, a budget termed "A Shaved Budget" was presented by our business manager, Brother Mark Yeoman. This budget set forth the least possible amount that could be allowed the different departments for an existence during the ensuing year. Under the present conditions it was thought advisable by the leaders of the branch to call for the smallest amount necessary to "carry on." Brother Yeoman also informed the branch that the present outstanding debt was smaller than it had been for several years past.

During the two weeks from May 10 to 24, Evangelist Richard A. Baldwin conducted a series of missionary sermons here in Portland, in which he earnestly exhorted the Saints as well as nonmembers to live Christian lives as nearly as possible, for "perilous times" are coming and are near at hand—times when men will not know which way to turn. He reminded us that we are living in a day when prophecies that were given hundreds and thousands of years ago are being fulfilled.

Brother and Sister Baldwin intended to stay longer in the Portland Branch, but were called upon to return to the State of Washington from whence they had just come. Before departing Sister Baldwin was presented the likeness of a rose carved in ivory, to add to her "Memory Chain," which she showed us was composed of small articles upon which she could look and be reminded of the different places she and Brother Baldwin had visited. The presentation of this rose was made by the pastor, Brother Sorden.

The musical part of the services has been greatly helped by the organ recently purchased, and which is being used to a greater advantage than was our piano.

Atherton

The Saints of Atherton were recently very pleasantly entertained by a number of the young people from Spring Branch who gave a play with an impressive message.

The following week the sisters from Spring Branch met at the home of Brother and Sister Walter Farley, who recently moved to Atherton. The Atherton sisters were also invited, and the day was spent in class work and a bountiful repast at noon. A very good time was reported.

The morning of May 24 Bishop R. T. Cooper was the speaker. At the close of his sermon Sister Holman played a wedding march, and from the side entrance Ted Snively entered, followed by Cyril Hancock, who took as his bride Sister Irene Custer. Isla Thompson was bridesmaid. Cyril and Irene were united in marriage by our pastor, A. E. Allen. A week later the Saints met at the home of Brother and Sister Snively, to congratulate the young couple and shower them with lovely gifts.

Paul Craig accepted an invitation to meet with all those of our branch who were interested in singing. We met in the church on the evening of May 22, and it was very encouraging to see the large number who attended and who responded with the closest attention. Brother Craig gave much valuable instruction and congratulated us on the large number who are taking active part in our music.

Brother E. Y. Hunker preached a memorial sermon the morning of May 31. J. A. Koehler preached in the evening.

Mother's Day was well remembered both morning and evening.

Lees Summit

Saints of the Lees Summit Branch miss Brother Gomer Wells, who has been our pastor for two years, although Grandview has shared part of his time the past year. He was always ready to give help and counsel. The church needs more such men to carry on the work.

We are thankful that God looks after his great work, and we still will move forward with Brother J. T. Smith as pastor, E. A. Brace and C. W. Childers, associates; director of church school, Genevieve Smith; supervisor of adult division, Mrs. C. W. Childers; supervisor of young people's division, Louise Haas; supervisor of children's division, Mrs. C. C. Brown; church chorister, Louise Haas; pianist, Ruth Haas; Willard Smith, church school secretary; Luscio Larsen, branch secretary; Mrs. C. W. Childers, branch treasurer.

It has been a pleasure to have the following brethren with us during the past year: W. S. Macrae, F. A. McWethy, J. A. Koehler, John Blackmore, J. T. Gresty, W. H. Eliason, C. J. Hunt, H. L. Barto, and C. V. Hopkins.

The church on Mother's Day was beautifully decorated in white and red flowers in honor of our mothers. A special program was given, consisting of a solo, double duets, young people's chorus, and readings; a light focused on the picture of "Ruth and Naomi," while the story was told, was effective.

On May 31, "Remembrance Day," the church was decorated in flags and flowers in remembrance of those who gave their lives for liberty, for righteousness, for truth, and for peace.

Children's Day will be an all-day service, consisting of a program by the children in the morning, with the picture,

"The Call of the Disciples," and a story; a basket dinner at noon; baptizing in the afternoon. At night a short play will be given.

The women have organized a work and study class called, "The Gleaners," their motto, "Service." Any service will be given where needed. They meet every Thursday for work and study; subject "Religion in the Home." At their meeting on June 4, at the home of Sister Haas, twenty-seven were in attendance. Work, play, and study were combined. The day was spent in a most pleasant way.

May we, the Saints of Lees Summit, be ever loyal to our church, and be real "workers together with God," willing to deny ourselves and take up our cross and follow the Christ.

Warrensburg

Warrensburg Branch is still carrying on, with two services and church school each Sunday. The attendance is very good, with the younger generation much in the lead. There is prayer meeting each Wednesday evening with few attending. We have from fifteen to twenty young people, ranging in ages from thirteen to seventeen, that need real leadership. Our branch membership consists chiefly of farmers or day laborers, with perhaps a dozen college students. Many of the students would be only too glad to give more time to the younger people of the church, but they do not have the time. Realizing the need for help among the children, it sometimes seems quite discouraging, but if the parents will make the effort to teach and help the children in their homes, and the older members live the exemplary lives they should, it will help much to guide our young people in the straight and narrow way.

We felt that we lost a very valuable asset to the work here when Brother Larsen left us last month. We had a farewell party for him and bade him good-bye with regrets, but there is still a bright star shining ahead. Brother Gomer Wells was elected pastor and branch president at our business meeting in May, and he will soon be here to help liven things up a bit. We hope he will find encouragement and willing helpers here.

Brother Hancock, who has labored faithfully as pastor here for a number of years, is very ill. Also a Sister Hartman has been in bed a patient sufferer for nearly two years. Those who read this, please offer up a silent prayer to the Giver of all good for this brother and sister.

Far West Stake

June 14 found almost all of the branches in the stake engaged in Children's Day activities, including baptisms in many places.

Brother Ward A. Hougas is at Richmond this week, conducting an institute June 15, 16, and 17. Classes are being held each night.

Intensive organization work has been completed for Sacrifice Week, June 21 to 28.

Priesthood Conference

A priesthood conference was held at Guilford Wednesday, June 10. There was a good attendance of the priesthood of the northern section of the stake. The conference opened at 10 o'clock in the morning, and classes continued throughout the forenoon and afternoon. Apostle F. Henry Edwards was the main speaker. A fine attendance again listened to Brother Edwards at night in the general preaching service.

This was the sixth priesthood conference to be held in the stake since October. These midweek, one-day conferences are proving exceptionally popular with the priesthood of the stake.

Ordination Ceremony

Thursday night, June 11, a special ordination and installation service was held at Cameron. Elder F. L. Hinderks, of Cameron, was set apart as counselor to Elder Ward A. Hougas, president of Far West Stake. Elders David Gamet, of Cameron, and Howard C. Timm, of Saint Joseph, were ordained to the office of high priest and set apart as members of the stake high council. Apostle J. F. Garver and Elder Blair Jensen, president of Lamoni Stake, were present and participated in the ceremony.

Trenton Home-coming

Bishop Milo Burnett and Elder John Hovenga spent Sunday, June 14, with Trenton Saints on their home-coming. There was a very fine attendance at the services both morning and afternoon. Work is progressing at Trenton both in spirituality and attendance.

Foraker (Oklahoma) Branch

Our branch has not reported for some time. We have been steadily holding on, although that is about all we have been able to do during the past two years, for the Saints of the Foraker Branch are widely scattered. We have been meeting in a little country schoolhouse six miles north of Shidler, Oklahoma, and about seven miles south of Foraker. The Saints have to drive from a distance of two and a half miles up to fifteen and twenty miles to attend services. This has made it difficult to get together as often as we should during the winter months. As a consequence there was a loss of interest in the Sunday school, the Religio became disorganized, and prayer meetings ceased.

Then Brother S. W. Simmons and his wife came here from Atwood, Oklahoma, to hold a few days' meetings. They were gladly welcomed, and his preaching was a great encouragement to the Saints. When the time came for them to go, we invited them to move in among us and assist in the branch work. They accepted the invitation and moved here the latter part of November. Since then Brother Simmons has preached for us almost every Sunday night that has been favorable for a meeting in our schoolhouse, with the exception of a few weeks when he held meetings elsewhere. He held a ten-day meeting at Washonga, Oklahoma, among the Indian Saints, with fine interest and good attendance. During this time he visited all the Saints, encouraging them, and building up new interest. The disadvantages of our meeting place were discussed, and a business meeting was held. All were in favor of providing a new place, but under the present financial depression it seemed that it would be difficult to raise sufficient funds to buy a suitable building. However, Brother Simmons preached and continued to arouse the faith of the Saints until they were willing to make the effort. Committees were appointed to raise money, and the work was soon carried out successfully, so that now we have a nice building bought and converted into a church, furnished with seats, lighted with electricity, and with a little more effort it will be completely furnished. A most satisfactory thing about it is, we have it all paid for and feel very much encouraged and happy. We met last Sunday for the first time in our new building with very good attendance and interest. Brother Simmons gave the invocation, and it seemed that God was very near us while he preached. We are now looking forward to Dedication Day, and a visit from our missionary.

Much of the credit for all this work is due Brother Simmons and his wife. He is a wonderful man, now in his eightieth year, in the best of health physically, and mentally alert. We are rejoicing in this latter-day work and giving God the honor for all our success. As Brother Simmons said in his sermon last Sunday night, we feel that we have killed a fear, have accomplished some good work, and our intention is to move onward.

Brother John Workman has been very ill for some time but is now improving. The condition of Brother Reuben Workman is very grave.

The enrollment of the branch has decreased some on account of several young married people moving away.

Oshoto, Wyoming

The past few weeks have been busy ones for the Oshoto Saints, as all are farming heavily this year. We have just been blessed with a good rain.

On April 19 Brother Fayette Cole was our speaker. Brother Fred Cousins was to have been our speaker on April 26, but was ill and we had no service.

On May 3 we enjoyed a fine sacrament service, and on May 10 the mothers in the Sunday school provided a program which was enjoyed by all.

The 24th of May was a lovely day, and a full house greeted Brother Cousins, who gave us a fine sermon, the subject being "How We Should All Give Our Time and Money to Help the Church." After the service there was a meeting of the priesthood. The Temple Builders also held a meeting, and the young people were called together to help organize a choir.

On May 31 Brother Fayette Cole was our speaker.

Brother and Sister John Stubbart are happy over the arrival of a baby boy, born May 24.

Brother and Sister Emory Dillon's son Keith is in the hospital at Hot Springs, South Dakota, where he underwent an operation for appendicitis. Latest reports are that he is doing well. We shall all be glad to have him home again. Thelma Dillon, daughter of Emory Dillon, graduated from the Moorcroft High School and expects to teach the coming year.

Charles Cousins, son of Brother and Sister Fred Cousins, is home from Chadron, Nebraska, where he has been attending high school.

Cameron, Missouri

It has been some time since Cameron has been heard from, nevertheless we are busy and active in all departments.

The Young People's Division is supervised by Brother and Sister Darrell Fiddick. They meet each Sunday evening at 6.30, at which time an enjoyable program and lesson study are presented.

The Department of Women have been enjoying a series of all-day meetings that are being held at the various houses every two weeks. Sister Lottie Daniel is leader. A covered-dish dinner is served, after which the time is spent in quilting.

The A Cappella Chorus of Graceland College, with Mabel Carlile, director, visited Cameron on May 5 and rendered a pleasing program at the high school auditorium. This was one of the most complete and artistic musical programs that many had ever been privileged to hear, and was a rare musical treat.

Our stake president, Ward A. Hougas, was with us on Mother's Day, and delivered a very fitting address at the eleven o'clock hour.

The fine pageant, "Mothers of Men," was postponed that evening, owing to the baccalaureate sermon, but on May 17 it was presented before a large and appreciative audience.

Our junior department is supervised each Sunday morning by Sister Florence Gamet, and they are busily engaged now in preparing a Children's Day program.

On May 29 Apostle F. Henry Edwards conducted class work for the priesthood. Visiting members from Richmond, Maple Grove, and Saint Joseph were present. On account of weather and road conditions our attendance was small, but those who were privileged to hear him were greatly helped. The evening session was an open meeting, many availing themselves of the opportunity to hear Brother Edwards, who preached a very powerful and encouraging sermon.

Pastor T. L. Hinderks occupied the pulpit Sunday morning, May 31, and in the evening we had with us Missionary G. T. Richards, who used for a text, "To obey is better than sacrifice."

Independence

Stone Church

Sunday was a very busy day at the Stone Church, for it was Children's Day. About seventy-five members were present at the eight o'clock prayer service in the upper auditorium, which was in charge of President F. M. McDowell and Apostle F. Henry Edwards, the latter giving the opening address on the theme, "The Pearl of Great Price."

At the same hour a beautiful baptismal service was held in the basement of the church, during which time twenty young children made their covenant with God. The font was beautifully decorated with baskets of flowers and ferns, which made an excellent setting for the children as they rose to newness of life. During the service the Simms Sisters sang a duet, "Jesus, I My Cross Have Taken." The names of the children who were baptized are Marion Herron, Katherine Kenty, Walter Wisemore, Jeanne Scott, Marjorie Sherman, Betty Jane White, Helen Louise Resch, Donald Higgins, Betty Jean McClanahan, Freda Meggars, Rachel Peck, Sarah Jane Short, Alvin Edwards, LeRoy Jepson, Junior Short, Betty Smith, Juanita Grapes, Howard Grapes, Alice Margaret Baldus, John Gillaspee.

The worship period of the church school was devoted to the learning of new hymns. Under the direction of Elder John F. Sheehy, the pastor, three or four new hymns were learned. Before singing, Brother Sheehy told the story of the hymn or else related some incidents that had direct bearing upon the hymns. Class work followed.

At the eleven o'clock service the congregation enjoyed a program given by the children of the junior and primary departments of the Stone Church school. One hundred and thirty-five juniors occupied the choir seats and platform and for half an hour rendered an excellent musical program. This part of the service was broadcast. The primary children also did well, showing that much time had been spent in preparation. It made the hearts of many people rejoice to see the children taking part in service to God.

At 2.30 p. m. a service of confirmation and blessing of children was held, at which time those who were baptized in the morning were confirmed. Three little children were blessed during this service: Charles William Mathews, Roy William Wilcox, and Robert Matthew Wilcox. Preceding the blessing of the children, Miss Elizabeth Okerlind sang "See Israel's Gentle Shepherd Stand," and at the conclusion of the service Miss Okerlind sang, "Behold Thy Sons and Daughters, Lord," in benediction. Mrs. Louise Hills Lewis was the organist during the service.

For several weeks past the women of the Stone Church groups have been furnishing flowers for the pulpit. These floral tributes are much appreciated by the congregation, and the women deserve to be commended for their work. Individuals have made contributions of flowers outside of the groups, and these are appreciated also. The flowers on Children's Day made the pulpit look like a veritable garden.

A heavy rain Sunday afternoon made it unfavorable for an open-air meeting at the Campus, so members of the various Latter Day Saint churches in Independence gathered at the Stone Church to hear President F. M. McDowell give the second of his series of Sunday night discourses on the theme, "The Way of Eternal Life." He gave first a brief review of his sermon of the Sunday night before, repeating the text, from Deuteronomy 32: "Observe to do all the words of the law, because it is your life," and stating that on the former occasion he had emphasized the latter part of the text, "Because it is your life," but on this evening he would emphasize, "Observe to do."

"Obedience to the law of life," he observed, "is the price of life. No law brings results in itself. It must be obeyed. The more complete our yielding and the higher the law to which we yield ourselves, the higher the quality of life which we shall obtain."

The speaker further stated that the one outstanding testimony of science is that this is a universe of law and order. All of its kingdoms are governed by law, and achievement in any of the kingdoms necessitates obedience to the laws of that kingdom. We must yield ourselves to obey that which we would make serve us, and among other examples cited that of electricity. If we would have it serve us, we must observe the laws that govern it; then will it become our servant.

It is the same in the moral order. God represents the moral order, and he is no friend of undisciplined living. The gospel is the perfect law of liberty. It is the law of life. Christ was obedient to that law, and his obedience resulted in higher life. Obedience to the higher laws of life will result in a more abundant life.

Special music for the service was furnished by the Auditorium Orchestra under the direction of Orlando Nace, and a solo, "The Heavenly Song," was rendered by Miss Lilly Belle Allen, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Paul N. Craig.

Second Church

To the Saints at Second Church, June the 14th seemed almost a foretaste of the millennium as they entered the beautifully decorated church and sat listening to the sweet voices of the children in songs of praise and prayer. There were also some instrumental selections, and prayer was offered by young Orison Murdock. The aged seemingly forgot the aches and pains that sometimes come with multiplied years, and joined happily and enthusiastically with the children.

An added touch of beauty and sweetness to the service was the blessing of the infant son of Brother and Sister D. C. Thomas.

At 2.30 p. m. Gudgell Park and Enoch Hill joined with Second Church in service, bringing their candidates here for baptism. The font had been beautifully decorated by Sister Bush and Sister Botts. Four from Gudgell Park were baptized, five from Enoch Hill, and seven from Second Church. Those from Gudgell Park remained with Second Church for confirmation.

At four o'clock sixteen candidates from Liberty Street Church came and received the ordinance of baptism.

Our branch joined with others at the Stone Church at 7.45 to listen to the instructions of our much beloved brother, President Floyd McDowell, which closed a happy and profitable day.

Liberty Street

Children's Day, Sunday, June 14, was a happy day, long to be remembered by many.

The eleven o'clock hour was given over to a very fine program by the beginner, primary, junior, and intermediate departments of the church school. Crepe paper costumes of varied colors were worn by about twenty of the children, and these, together with many floral decorations, a children's Day streamer, and a large twelve-foot flag, furnished an abundance of color and beauty to the service.

The most gratifying part of the day's experiences was the baptismal service, which was in charge of the pastor, Brother John R. Lentell. Fifteen children and one adult were inducted into the kingdom by Elders W. A. Stevenson, Walter Curtis, John R. Lentell, and Priest Ray Wrigley. The names of the candidates were as follows: Mrs. Lois Bridges, Mauseline Curtis, Mary McConnell, Howard Curtis, Margaret Horne, Ruth Harrison, Wilma Harrison, Dorothy Singleton, James Bennett, LaVerna Griswold, Charles Tignor, jr., Donald Zion, Harry Sellers, Floyd Warr, Doris McMain, and Leonard Bly.

Enoch Hill

In conducting the church school Sunday morning of June 7, E. H. McKean followed out the theme for the day, "Responsive hearts." His talk and the songs selected and sung by the school were in harmony with that subject.

The sacrament service was in charge of Pastor Herbert L. Barto and the local priesthood, Brother J. W. Brewer making the remarks. Quite a number of testimonies were given in a short space of time. All were brief, to the point, and very good.

Several of the young people from the Hill joined with the young people of other Independence congregations on a visiting trip to Holden, Missouri.

On Sunday, June 14, Miss Nellie Kramer was in charge of the school and used quotations from the Bible appropriate for Children's Day. A very pretty duet was given by Miss Margie Thomas and Mrs. Verla Waters at the close of the class period.

Arches covered with roses and an abundance of fresh green foliage formed a part of the artistic decorations for Children's Day. The program, in charge of Sister Charles Warren and Sister John Jones, was nicely rendered.

On Wednesday evening the Erodelphian Society of Enoch Hill's young people held their monthly program in the church, with Elder Leonard Lea as speaker. A very impressive program was given, one of the features being a reading by Elder Lea's wife. The young folks of Enoch Hill are appreciative of the splendid speakers which have been obtained the past few months.

Spring Branch

The speakers for the last few weeks were Elders D. R. Snively, Sam Andes, D. A. Whiting, and Robert Fish.

The sacrament service on June 7 was well attended, with the Bishopric in charge, assisted by Robert Fish, W. A. Smith, Al Tankard, and J. A. Bozarth. The infants of Brother and Sister Oscar W. Winslow and Brother and Sister H. P. Curtis were blessed.

On June 14 the church school hour was given to the Children's Day program. It was well rendered, and decorations were very beautiful for the occasion. At this service the infant of Brother and Sister Ward was blessed.

At the eleven o'clock hour, music was rendered by the junior choir, and we had the pleasure of witnessing several baptisms. Those baptized were: Harold Hartly Edwards, Edith Lloyd, Mary Jane Frisby, Floyd W. Curtis, Rolla W. Edwards, Mayme Frances Howe, Evelyn June Howe, and Wilda Florine Nelson.

East Independence

Sermons brought to the Saints here recently by Elders C. K. Green, A. H. Christensen, H. V. Minton, and Cornelius Edgerton have been uplifting and encouraging. The Saints attending the combined services at the Campus and listening to Brother McDowell feel that this summer will indeed bring a wealth of spiritual instruction sorely needed at this time.

A peaceful, quiet spirit prevailed at the sacrament meeting.

Children's Day was observed June 14. The church was beautifully decorated, and at the church school period the children engaged in a service that was particularly their own. All marched in singing "Onward, Christian Soldiers." They then told in story and song of the entrance into the kingdom of God, extending an invitation to the children who had not yet entered. They, in turn, responded by voice and song prayer their desire to comply with the invitation.

Nancy Anne, infant daughter of Brother and Sister Green, was blessed by Elders A. H. Christensen and Frank Minton. Our pastor then spoke directly to the children, continuing the theme and successfully holding their attention. Special music added to the enjoyment of the hour.

Immediately following this service the congregation repaired to a lake close by where six children and one young lady were baptized by Elders Harry Friend and Cornelius Edgerton.

A basket dinner was partaken of in the church, after which confirmation service was held, Elders A. H. Christensen, Frank Minton, and Harry Friend officiating. Those baptized were: Albert Tudor, Myrtle Crabb, Daniel Friend, Naomi Gaulter, Mildred Friend, Fred King, Wilma Gaulter.

Series of Priesthood Conferences

Friday, May 29, one of the three priesthood conferences was held at Cameron. Apostle F. Henry Edwards was the main speaker. On account of muddy roads the conference scheduled for Guilford Saturday was canceled. However, due to the fact that Apostle Edwards's message was of such vital importance, the meeting was scheduled for Wednesday, June 10. Sunday, May 31, Apostle Edwards brought a similar message to the priesthood of Saint Joseph at the Y. W. C. A. The evening service was a general preaching hour, at which time he delivered an outstanding message to the members as well as to the priesthood.

Tuesday, June 2, the Ul-lik-us Players, the dramatic club of First Saint Joseph Church, presented a three-act comedy-drama, "Mother Mine." Mrs. Olive McLean and her able cast deserve much credit for the success of this play, which was greatly enjoyed by all.

The regular monthly city-wide young people's devotional service was held Thursday, June 4, at the First Church. The meeting opened with a period of meditation, while Miss Muriel McLean played a medley of hymns on the organ. Everyone joined in singing "Guide Us, O Thou Great Jehovah," after which Brother Garland Snapp offered the opening prayer. Elder T. E. Hale gave a brief sermonet on "Divine Revelation," in which he called our attention to the fact that we are entitled to the advice and counsel of God in our own problems today.

The young people of First Saint Joseph Church named their organization O. T. Z., Onward to Zion, and selected the song of that name as their organization song. Each meeting is opened with this song, and at the close, "I Would Be True" is sung, followed by a short benediction.

Once every month an entertaining program is given. At the April meeting a Kangaroo Court was held, in which the defendant was tried for "Neglect in Watering the Goldfish" of the plaintiff, who was suing for a huge sum. Judge, lawyers, witnesses, and jury were all there. A verdict of "guilty" was given by the jury, and the penalty fixed at ten cents, provided the defendant gave a contribution to the next meeting. At the May meeting we enjoyed an indoor track meet with many novelty races.

A special ordination service will be held at Cameron the evening of Thursday, June 11, at 8 p. m. At this time Elder F. L. Hinderks will be installed as counselor to President Ward A. Hougas, and Elders David Gamet and Howard C. Timm will be ordained members of the high council. A fitting and impressive ceremony is being arranged. Apostles J. F. Garver and F. Henry Edwards and Elder Blair Jensen, president of Lamoni Stake, will be among the visitors at this ceremony.

An institute will be held at Richmond June 15, 16, and 17. Elder Ward A. Hougas will conduct two class periods each evening from 7.30 to 9.20. His subjects will be of interest to both old and young. His theme throughout the institute will be "Helping Youth at the Crossroads." A similar institute will be held at Trenton June 23, 24, and 25 on the same schedule of classes.

As the birds sang joyously at 6 o'clock in the morning and a glorious sun shed its rays over the park bowl, young people of many denominations gathered for the Fourth Annual Sunrise Prayer Meeting on June 7. An interesting feature of this service was that the young people themselves gave the call to worship, the prayer, and the scripture reading. One thought carried through the service was that in our hurried modern life we need "time out" to meditate and gain strength and courage to go back into the game of life and fight harder, just as a basket ball team needs it. The speaker, Doctor Gordon E. Bigelow, of Arlington, Massachusetts, stressed the fact that "religion is living," not just going to church on Sunday. He also said that one of the essentials was to ever live conscious of the Eternal One. He made the point that Christ chose young disciples and those from different walks of life.

Saint Joseph has reason to be proud of one of our young people who has carried off honors in her class. Miss Alma Hale was announced salutatorian of one of Central High School's largest classes. Miss Hale is the daughter of Elder and Mrs. T. E. Hale.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

In keeping with the suggestion of the general church officers, yesterday was Children's Day. After a short lesson period, the service was given over to the rendition of the program especially prepared for the children. The ushers at the service were boys of "The Helpers" class.

The program was very inspiring and educational, in that old Mother Earth called her helpers together, the Sunbeam, Rain, and Dew, and they glanced about to see the accomplishment of their work in the flower garden. The dandelions, apple blossoms, Johnny-jump-ups, forget-me-nots, water lilies, daisies, roses, tulips, pansies, irises, cosmos, and jonquils all blossomed forth in their lovely hues, and the little buzzing bees hovered about in joyous ecstasy, each contributing abundantly to make it a wonderful garden. And what a garden of promising boys and girls that will be, the men and women of tomorrow of this church! Each child bubbled over with joy at the service he was rendering, and what a lesson reached the hearts of the people! At the conclusion of this program, which was rendered by the primary, junior, and intermediate departments, the senior girls rendered an anthem, "Green Cathedral," under the direction of Sister Luella Wight.

Elder Cyril E. Wight talked to the children prior to the baptismal service which followed. Four little girls of the primary department, Roberta Thrutchley, Rebecca Downey, Wilma Lee Warren, and Betty Priest, received the ordinance of baptism by Elder George Mesley.

At the evening service, Elder H. A. Koehler was the speaker, and Sister Myrtle Wamsley rendered a soprano solo.

On Friday afternoon and evening, June 19, the Central Women's Club is giving a garden party on the church lawn. A special feature of the party will be a guessing contest as to the number of beans in a jar, and the winner will be the recipient of a very lovely cozy quilt, on which the ladies have been working for several weeks. The proceeds will go to the Central building fund to be paid on the church debt July 1.

Among the sick members of Central confined to various hospitals are Mrs. M. Clasby, Mrs. Julia Walburn, and Mrs. Marcene Murphy. All are showing some improvement. Also Sister Minnie K. Massey and her daughter Margaret are slowly recovering from an automobile accident which they sustained as they were returning from Graceland where Margaret finished the school year.

Funeral services for Mr. C. W. Mills, who passed away June 12, were conducted by Elder Cyril E. Wight on Monday afternoon at Rose and Henderson Funeral Home. Interment at Memorial Park Cemetery. Mr. Mills' death occurred very suddenly and is quite a shock to the people at Central. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Laura Mills, one son, Harry,

SPRING RIVER DISTRICT.—Conference was held at Webb City, Missouri, May 22-24. The Young People's Association began the meeting Friday evening with contributions from four branches. Three one-act plays, "The Most Precious Gift," by Carthage, "The Traveling Man," by Webb City, and "The Prodigal Comes Home" by Pittsburg, Kansas. Orchestra music was furnished between acts by Joplin. Saturday morning began with a prayer meeting at 8.45. Institute hour by Apostle J. F. Garver. Business session at 11. Practically all branches were represented at this hour, and those which were not were later in the day. At 2 p. m., round table discussion conducted by Apostle J. F. Garver. At 3 p. m., business session, which consisted of election of officers and recommendation of five men to be ordained. Next conference will be held in Joplin. A young people's prayer meeting was conducted at 8.15 Sunday morning. Fine interest was shown by many prayers and testimonies. Our financial standing was discussed by Apostle J. F. Garver at 9.30 a. m., and at the same hour junior church was conducted in the junior rooms. Apostle Garver spoke at the 11 o'clock service. At 2 p. m. five men of the district were ordained: James P. Miller, of Independence, Kansas, as priest, by Elders F. L. Freeman and A. J. Jones; Charles Anderson, of Independence, Kansas, as elder, by Patriarch F. A. Smith and Lee Quick; Floyd Martin, of Coffeyville, Kansas, as teacher, by Elders A. J. Jones and F. L. Freeman; Albert A. Cobb of Webb City, Missouri, as priest, by Lee Quick and Patriarch F. A. Smith; James Reynolds of Coffeyville, Kansas, as priest, by Patriarch F. A. Smith and Lee Quick. Priesthood and Women's meetings were held at 3 p. m. Musical entertainment by Joplin orchestra at 4 p. m., after which a young people's reception was held at the home of Mary Hobart. Approximately seventy-five persons were present. All were most enthusiastic to support the Tenth Legion, Vision magazine, and a contest of plays to be exhibited at next conference. Elder Lee Quick was the speaker of the evening service. Inspiration, recreation, and good fellowship was found by all present, and Webb City, as well as the other branches, was pleased with the outcome of the conference.

Our Departed Ones

MINK.—John M. Mink was born in Tama County, Iowa, January 2, 1863, and died May 31, 1931, at the home of his son, J. M. Mink, at Springfield, Missouri. He united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in Iowa, and remained a true member until death. He suffered a stroke of paralysis three years ago, which left him helpless, yet cheerful in his trials. On May 31, 1931, he suffered another stroke which took his life. He was a good and kind neighbor and a loving father. He served as a member of the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, police force for over fifteen years, and was highly respected as an officer. He leaves to mourn one son, J. M. Mink, and five grandsons: Morris J. Mink, Mark O. Mink, Walter Wayne Mink, Victor R. Mink, and Harry W. Mink, all of Springfield, Missouri. Interment was in East Lawn Cemetery in charge of Clinger Undertaker Company, Springfield. The funeral sermon was by Elder Henry Sparling.

WHITE.—Mary D. White was born February 4, 1863. Married William J. White November 29, 1882, and was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints October 24, 1887. She passed from mortal life March 25, 1931, at her home in Repton, Alabama, and the funeral service was in charge of W. J. Williamson. Interment was in the cemetery at Lone Star Branch of the church. She was the mother of three sons and three daughters and was a devoted wife. She passed away strong in the faith of latter days.

GARD.—Laura A. Totty was born July 9, 1881, at Manassa, Colorado. When she was three years of age she moved with her parents to Independence, Missouri. At the age of eight years she was baptized by Elder F. G. Pitt. She married Adam Tignor in 1895, and to them were born two children. Mr. Tignor passed away in 1899. May 9, 1906, she was married to B. D. Gard, and to them one son was born, who died early in life. She expired at her home in Independence May 25, 1931, after several weeks of suffering. Surviving are her grief-stricken husband, two daughters: Mrs. Hazel Curtis and Isabel A. Nunamaker, both of Independence; one step-son; her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Totty, Independence; one sister, Mrs. Addie Tignor, Independence; one brother, J. F. Totty, of Horace, Kansas; eight grandchildren; many other relatives and friends. The funeral was conducted at the Stone Church May 28. The sermon was by Elder J. M. Terry.

WILLIAMS.—Pheby Ann Dakins was born at Caredock, Canada, January 2, 1846. Married William H. Boomer in 1867, and to them were born eight children, four of whom preceded their mother to the beyond. The four surviving are Elsie Fowler and Clara Bowen, of Tawas City, Michigan; Sarah Lake, of Mikado, Michigan, and Cyrenius Boomer, of Saginaw, Michigan. Mr. Boomer died November 1, 1906, and Mrs. Boomer married James Williams February 9, 1911. He died February 22, 1916, leaving his wife and six children by a former wife. She became a member of the church June 12, 1889, and was loyal and faithful until her death, which occurred April 24, 1931. The sermon was by Elder J. W. Peterson in the Saints' church at Tawas City, Michigan. She was a peacemaker in the church and among her many friends.

RITCHIE.—Martha Wallace Thompson was born at Garafraxa Township, Dufferin County, Ontario, March 9, 1867. She was baptized a member of the church January 6, 1888, by John Shields. Married John Ritchie March 10, 1897, and to them six children were born, all of whom survive the parents: three sons, William J. and John, of Detroit, and Joseph, of Grand Valley; three daughters, Evelyn (Mrs. G. A. Woodward), Detroit; Freda and Catherine, of Grand Valley. There also survive five brothers: William, David, James, Robert, and Samuel, and four sisters: Mrs. William Dixon, Mrs. George Riley, Mrs. Madigan, and Maud Thompson. One brother, Joseph T., died six years ago. Mrs. Ritchie died May 26, 1931, at her home in Grand Valley, Ontario. The sermon was by Evangelist John Shields in the Grand Valley Church. Interment was in Greenwood Cemetery beside her late husband.

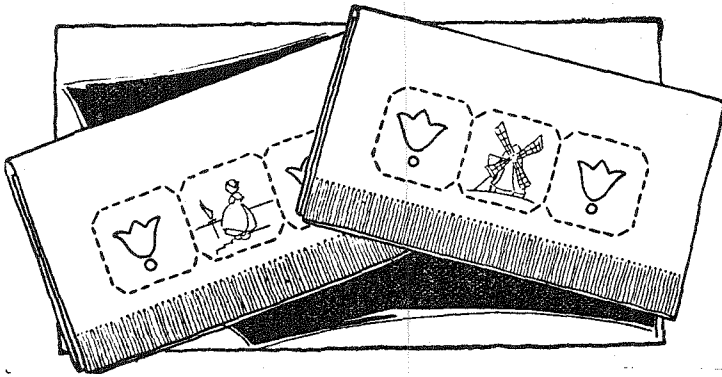

FOWLER.—Ethel May Fowler was born in Mercer County, Pennsylvania, April 25, 1880. She was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints May 28, 1890. Died May 22, 1931, at New Castle, Pennsylvania. She was a faithful worker in the branch there, and her good work will be missed. Left to mourn are her husband, two sons, two daughters, three sisters, one brother. The funeral service was in charge of Elder W. G. McCune, who was assisted by the Reverend Samuel Stimer of the Free Methodist Church. The service was conducted in the Book and Leyde Mortuary and was largely attended.

DELLER.—Clara Lovina Cleveland, daughter of Frederick and Amelia Cleveland, was born in Steuben Township, Steuben County, Indiana, November 11, 1859. Her father and mother were pioneer residents, and Clara attended the district school and grew to womanhood in the religious atmosphere of that period. March 18, 1877, she was married to Frank Deller, and since that time has lived almost continuously on the old farm home in Scott Township. With her husband she worked in clearing the land and building a home. Six children were born to them, all of whom are living: William, Lowell, Ella, Margia, Frank, and Wayne. She was baptized November 1, 1894, at South Scott, Indiana, by I. M. Smith, and since that date has been a member of the Clear Lake, Indiana, Branch. In 1927 she and her companion celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. She was indeed a mother in Israel. Her home was a shrine to which all her children were glad to come. Her love reached beyond her own family and embraced others, and for years she ministered to several children of friends and relatives with unbounded care. In deeds of this kind she found abundant happiness. She died May 23, 1931, at her home, after an illness of many months. Left to mourn are her husband, six children, twenty-four grandchildren, nine great-grandchildren, two sisters, and a host of other relatives and friends. The funeral was conducted from the farm home May 26, 1931, Elder S. W. L. Scott delivering a splendid tribute to her life in his sermon.

BUFFET SCARF SET

THE Buffet Scarf divided into three mat-like pieces is a justly popular plan, well adapted to the formal placings used on side-boards such as a large compote, flanked by candlesticks or an urn by bisymmetrical bowls.

The Buffet Scarf set we offer is on natural linen, two pieces each 9 by 12, and a center one 18 by 12. The design is of conventionalized grain heads with an interlacing stem that button-hole stitches around to make small cut work areas.

The set of three stamped pieces on linen with instructions is number 115. This set is readily worked in simple chain, button-hole and outline stitches using a dark brown and carmel tan three strand. Two skeins of dark and one of light six strand may be ordered as 115T for 10 cents. The set may be finished with a narrow lace edge or just a hand-done hem.

SACRIFICE AND TRANSFORMATION

I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. ## Blue Pencil Notes

"It is no pleasure to be sick," complained Deacon Goodentart. "When I am under the weather, every third man I meet has had the same thing that I have, only he had it longer and harder."

Five generations of the men in my line of the Smith family have taken their wives (one each, mind you) to Nauvoo for long or short sojourns. Three generations went there honeymooning (though mine was a year delayed). In Nauvoo recently I heard another romance: the story of an engagement ring. Some fifty-six years ago a young man from Nova Scotia was seeking his fortune in California, but his heart was in Nova Scotia. The best way to bridge that great distance seemed to be with a ring. But when he took the ring to the post office, Uncle Sam, for some reason, refused to receive it. Nothing daunted, the young man wrapped it in an old newspaper; and Uncle Sam, not thinking that Brother Layton would play such a trick on him, delivered the package to the little girl in Nova Scotia. When it came, she was experiencing a terrible toothache, but when she opened the old newspaper and saw the ring, the ache vanished. In due time the ring went back to California—on the finger of the girl—and was reinforced by a wedding ring. Today these two live in Nauvoo—"Uncle Wilbur" and "Aunt Ida" Layton, as the Saints call them. So that is the story of an engagement ring that reached across the continent and down a half century of time. And in all its travels it never came near Reno. Reno, where wedding rings are broken and marriage vows unspoken, have no charms for "Uncle Wilbur" and "Aunt Ida."

While in Nauvoo I received a letter from our Brother N. T. Chapman, of California. He had met a Mr. W. C. Orton, whose father had lived in Keokuk, Iowa, in 1844. This man (the father, W. C. Orton, sr.) in June, 1844, received a letter from Nauvoo, asking him to come to Nauvoo or vicinity and fiddle for a dance in celebration of the murder of Joseph Smith. "Bring your fiddle over and play for us, for a dance tonight. Joe Smith is killed deader than hell. . . ." The letter is in the hands of the Pioneer Society at Helena, Montana. It reveals clearer than any number of words today could reveal the savage ferocity of those who sought the lives of the Saints in that day. By contrast, our troubles and our sacrifices do not seem so terrible. The old hymn says:

"Why should we mourn, or think our lot is hard?"

'Tis not so; all is right!

Why should we think to earn a great reward,

If we now shun the fight?

Gird up your loins, fresh courage take,

Our God will never us forsake;

And soon we'll have this tale to tell

All is well! All is well!"

The Sunday that I was in Nauvoo two hundred people visited the old home of Joseph Smith and the tomb of Joseph and Hyrum and gave respectful attention to Brother James Page as he related the true story of their mission and message. That was a typical Sunday crowd of visitors from all parts of the country, and many came during the week. Though Joseph and Hyrum died, they still have their hearing, long after the fiddles that celebrated their murder are silent. Even their tomb is a pulpit. Their faith was vindicated. Shall we who live be faithless or slothful concerning the work for which they died?

ELBERT A. SMITH.

A Pastor Sets the Example

In the "Epistle to the Saints" published recently over the signatures of the First Presidency, attention was called to the needs of the men under appointment. The statement was made that the needs of these men and their families were equaled only by their loyalty and devotion to the church.

One of these brethren, a pastor in one of the larger cities, has written to the Presidency describing the success of the recent visiting campaign in his branch and the preparations for Sacrifice Week. He mentions the splendid meetings that have been held in their church during recent weeks and comments especially upon the high quality of the prayer services, and then adds a personal note, "As far as my wife and I are concerned, we will make every effort to set the example, for this church means more to us than anything in the world. I believe firmly that it will accomplish its purpose, for I have confidence in the Saints."

The encouraging thing about this expression of devotion and consecration is that it is typical of those received from many quarters in the church. The number of replies of this kind received at the Presidency's office far outnumber those that carry complaints. This especially refers to our pastors and missionaries. We join with this brother in expressing the conviction that this special week of sacrifice will accomplish its purposes. This conviction is based upon our confidence in the Saints and in their leaders, in the missionary and pastoral ranks of the church. It is with faith and conviction that we enter upon this period of sacrifice.

Charles E. Blair Passes

Last Sunday night at 9.30, Brother Charles E. Blair succumbed to his final illness. It was only the preceding Thursday that he was taken to the Sanitarium. Tuesday of the same week he was carrying on his work as deacon, and his last official act in that capacity was to convey to the Bishop a sum of $100 that he had collected from members of the church, in pursuit of his duties. It seems only a little time ago that he was seen in his office at work at his desk, and was about the streets engaged in the business from which he secured his livelihood. It may be said of him that he was active in all of his duties to the last.

Another column will later carry the facts of his life. Much could be written of it, and many lessons taken. His familiar figure, his friendly voice, and his cheerful smile will be missed.

Brother Blair was the last known survivor of that little group composing the Reorganization which met in Amboy, Illinois, in 1860, and received "Young Joseph" as its president and leader. To have lived over so long a span of years, and to have witnessed the changing order of events, the development of the country, the progress of the world, and the growth of the church, were privileges for which he was not ungrateful. He was a link with that past which is forever fading into the obscurity of history.

We must and will view with faith and hope the terminating of a life that has been so well filled with the work and joy of Christian living. If the virtues of human conduct count for something, if righteousness and worthiness have an eternal value, then we may view the passing of Brother Blair into that Beyond which shelters so many of his friends and comrades with trust in that power to whom he gave his faith to the very last.

To the Descendants of Pioneers

Of special interest to church people who are descendants of the very earliest members of the church, is the call received from Apostle F. Henry Edwards, editor of the Ensign. If you know any who are such descendants, you will be able to help by calling their attention to this notice. Brother Edwards's letter follows:

"I shall appreciate if you will please give prominent early attention to an announcement that the editors of the Ensign are very anxious to get a list of the names of the descendants of persons who were members of the church prior to August 1, 1831.

"Persons who are such descendants are urged to write to the editors of the Ensign, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri, giving their own names and the names of any other descendants with whom they might be acquainted. We want this information not later than July 5."

Harvest Home Festival

For some years Brother C. C. Koehler has carried the responsibility of managing the affairs of the Harvest Home Festival. Under present conditions he feels that he must be relieved of some of that responsibility. So I have asked Brother T. A. Beck to assume the management. Brother Koehler will, with his ever readiness to help in church matters, give Brother Beck what assistance he can, and his long experience will, I am sure, enable him to be of great service to Brother Beck.

To Brother Beck we have given the privilege of selecting his assistants, and in due time notice of his selections will be published.

THE FIRST PRESIDENCY,

The Vital Principle

By F. M. McDowell

(A sermon delivered at the Campus, Independence, Missouri, June 21.)

We began this series of sermons by asking again the question of the ages: "What shall I do that I may have eternal life?"

In the preceding sermons we have endeavored to point out the direction we expected to follow in our answer by using as a text the parting words of Moses to the children of Israel, "Observe to do all the words of the law—because it is your life."

In the first sermon it was pointed out that life is the goal of the quest of all men of all times; that it is the goal of the mission of Christ and the purpose of the gospel; that amid the peculiar conditions confronting the world today the call more than ever is for a way of life; and finally that it is the responsibility of the church that claims to be prophetic to lead men into the paths of life.

In another sermon it was emphasized that obedience is the price of life. Law of itself is helpless. It is utilized only through obedience. We must "observe to do" the law if we would find life.

But obedience alone is not sufficient. Men often obey the laws of death instead of life. Then, too, we find ourselves becoming servants of that which we yield ourselves to obey. As servants of gold, we have not found life. The way out is through obedience to the highest and best that we know. Since the gospel law is the supreme revelation of the law of God, it is the highest and best that we know. The degree to which we yield ourselves to obey the gospel law will be the measure of our attainment of life. The attainment of that quality of life which is found in celestial glory is made possible only through yielding ourselves to obey the celestial law.

Tonight we come to consider another of the principles of life—principles the authority of which rests not only in the word of God but in the very nature and needs of men. It is because God is the kind of a God that he is and men are the kind of beings they are that the laws of which we speak are the laws of life. Tonight we must come to know that he who would find life must travel the way of the cross.

The Cross Is the Way

The cross is the way of God. In John 3:16 we read, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

The cross is the way of Christ. In Isaiah 53:3, 4, 5, we read, "He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief:

... surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: ... he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed."

The cross is the way for men. In Matthew 16:25 we read, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."

Nothing is more certain than that the cross is the supreme revelation—not only of the nature and the purpose of God but of his method as well. Nothing is more certain than that men if they would find life—that quality of life which is the will of the Father that they shall obtain—they must walk the way of the cross.

On the tombs of the kings of Egypt is a symbol which is called the Key of Life. Strangely enough its form is that of the cross. The key to the meaning of life and the universe is God. The key to the meaning of God is Christ, and the key to Christ is his self-sacrificing spirit which culminates in the cross. Without it we remain in outer darkness.

My first example is furnished by Stanley Jones, in his Christ at the Round Table:

A missionary doctor goes to China. The people all about him are dying of a strange plague. He segregates the germ, tries to take some to America to get the help of specialists in discovering an antidote, but finds it impossible. He goes back to his station with a heavy heart. The people are still dying. He can stand it no longer. While the rest are at the church, he deliberately goes into his laboratory, swallows some of the germs, and then takes the first boat to America. He keeps a perfect record of his case and the reactions of the disease germs upon him. He goes to the hospital in Baltimore, turns over the record of his case to the doctors, is soon in a state of coma. But his plea was that even if he died they should find the remedy and send it back to save his people in China. He was saving others—himself he could not save.

I have already referred in these sermons to David Livingstone, who followed the way of the cross, giving his life to take the gospel of Christ into the heart of Africa. It is said of him that no servant of God was ever more fully persuaded that he was a chosen instrument for doing an appointed work than was Livingstone. See him penetrating the heart of Africa, where white men had never yet dared to go. See him press on day after day, half starved, weak and sick. See him laying away his wife, who died with jungle fever. See him undaunted, face the uncharted road ahead. Read in his diary the following comments: "In this journey I have endeavored to follow with unswerving fidelity the line of duty. My course has been an even one, turning neither to the right hand nor to the left, though my route has been tortuous enough. Also hardship, hunger, toil were met with the full conviction that I was right in persevering to complete my work. The prospect of death in pursuing what I knew to be right did not make me veer to one side or the other."

A few days later he wrote, "If the good Lord gives me favor and permits me to finish my work, I shall thank and bless him, though it cost me untold toil, pain, travail. This trip has made my hair all gray."

A few months later there was added to his diary this comment, "I am pale, bloodless, and sick from bleeding profusely. An artery gives off a copious stream and takes away my strength. Oh, how I long to be permitted to finish my work."

Nine days later he made his last entry, "It is not all pleasure in this exploration. I can scarcely hold my pencil now, and my stick is a burden." A few days later he died.

The Protestant missions opened by Livingstone in Africa now have a membership of more than one half million people.

With love, self-sacrifice, and courage, David Livingstone followed the way of the cross into the heart of Africa to carry the light of the gospel there.

Our own church history is not lacking in accounts of men and women who endeavored to follow the way of the cross. The Ensign of this week brings to us an outstanding example:

Men Who Have Followed the Cross

There have been many theories advanced as to the meaning of the cross. Undoubtedly many of them have been helpful. Perhaps no one of them explains all. An academic discussion of these theories is more suitable for the lecture room than for the pulpit. We can, we believe, come to an understanding of the cross if we approach it through an attitude rather than through a theory. To understand the cross one must have an attitude of mind and heart which is responsive to it, much as one who would understand art must have art within. It is achieved through an inner response to its sacrificial spirit. To the extent that your souls are stirred by the following accounts of those men who have endeavored to walk the way of the cross, to that extent you are coming to understand its meaning.

After the Saints had been driven out of Jackson County into Clay County, a meeting was held, and volunteers were called for to report the distress of the Saints to the prophet, who was then in Kirtland. Then, as always, there were many who might have gone but who excused themselves. Lyman Wight and Parley P. Pratt volunteered. When the bishop made some inquiry as to the circumstances in the Wight family, he found Sister Wight in the shelter of a log in the woods. By her side was a child only three days old. They had very little provisions and no money. Even under these circumstances Lyman Wight accepted his mission to Kirtland and in company with Parley P. Pratt set out to make the thousand-mile journey to Kirtland. The message they carried was not one of good news, but rather one of distress and suffering. They journeyed not by train or auto. There were no well-laid-out highways. The journey required not hours but weeks. It would involve separation, suffering, hardship. Yet these men of God volunteered. Such is the way of the cross.

Another illustration from our own history:

On July 23, 1833, the Saints in Kirtland were rejoicing. On that day the cornerstone of the Temple was laid—a temple that was to be built by sacrifice. That very day, July 23, a mob of over five hundred people gathered at Independence, Missouri, with rifles, dirks, pistols, clubs, and whips to drive the Saints from Independence and Jackson County. They came to demolish the dwellings of the Saints and destroy their crops and, as they said, whip every Mormon, every man, woman, and child, who would not instantly leave the country. This was avoided by Bishop Edward Partridge, who, with John Corrill, John Whitmer, W. W. Phelps, and A. S. Gilbert, courageously walked out and faced the mob, offering themselves a ransom for the church, to be whipped or put to death if only the women and children would not be called upon to suffer. Even the mob could not withstand such courage. A truce was declared, and further persecution, at least for that day, was avoided.

The Cross—Its Fundamental Elements

A careful analysis of the above will show that there are at least three fundamental elements in the cross. These are (1) love—the motive divine, (2) self-sacrifice—the "pain divine," (3) identification—sharing the cause divine.

Love—the Motive Divine

At its purest and best, love is a valuing of persons for their own sakes without any material benefit to ourselves in view. It is, according to Ellwood, a social attitude of unselfish, passionate devotion to the welfare of others. Drummond says, "The spectrum of love has nine ingredients." These are, as listed by the Apostle Paul: "Love suffereth long. And is kind. Love envieth not. Love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up. Doth not behave itself unseemly. Seeketh not her own. Is not easily provoked. Thinketh no evil. Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth."

Love is the only force that is kind enough to win the hearts of men and yet strong enough to continually resist the drag-down of their lower impulses and popular habits.

Love is the only force selfless enough to prove to mankind its utter sincerity and thus to win its whole-hearted allegiance.

Love is the only force courageous enough to pay any price for its ends without thought of personal gain.

Love is the only force with faith enough to keep on seeing the invisible in a world literally buried in material things.

Love is the only force that has patience enough to endure the frailties of men—patience to wait for the kingdom.

Love is the only force that can reach down to men and at the same time reach up to God. It thus becomes indeed the way whereby men may come to God. The cross is the supreme revelation to us of what God is like, the supreme example of what men may become.

The power of love in its highest form is the power of God, for God is love. Love is the power chosen by God to redeem the world.

Love even when it contains much alloy transforms lives and homes. It moves men to the greatest of sacrifices. It endures all things and continues to hope. In its final triumph it has made the resources of God available for men. It has melted the hearts of men and welded their souls together in perfect unity. It is the power that will ultimately usher in a world brotherhood. It is the very core of the kingdom. It is the cementing influence that shall yet make Zion a reality. Without it God, Christ, and life are meaningless. Without it men will cease to strive, and when men cease to strive they die.

The cross is the highest spectacle of self-sacrificing love. In the words of another:

Where love stands bleeding for other sins than its own, the ugliness of those sins appears never so repelling—to the sinner, also: and to the sinner, by the persuasions of this same love, the way back from his rags and his husks seems never so hopeful. The truth here is probably deeper, more essential, and more ultimate than any of us has even yet realized. Not love that waives the law or condones the wrong or sentimentalizes faults into virtues. No, but simply that which, by the grace of God, is so preoccupied in the interests of the loved that it is not conscious of its own wounds, that draws all men unto it, because it is really what all men are aching for.

Self-sacrifice—The "Pain Divine"

The second fundamental element of the cross is self-sacrifice. Here, too, is a fundamental law of life. In every phase of life the old must be sacrificed for the new, the partial for the whole, the selfish self for the larger self of communion with others, the lesser for the greater good.

It is easy to find evidences of this law on every hand. John tells us, "Except a corn of wheat enter into the ground and die, it abideth by itself alone." We know that the calyx must give way to the blossom and the blossom pass before we can have the fruit. The one-celled form of life literally gives a part of itself that new life might be formed.

It is in the higher forms of life that this law comes to have a richer meaning. The scientist often pays the supreme price, yielding life itself for the discovery of new truth. Business men have been known to deny themselves rest, leisure, pleasure, and even health and the association of their loved ones in their desire to attain "success."

Athletes submit themselves to the most rigid self-discipline in preparation for contests. The Apostle Paul speaks of those who have trained themselves to run the race, and adds the comment, "All this for a corruptible crown."

Livingstone in his travels in Africa noted the self-denial of the men who were engaged in the slave traffic, and one time when pressed to cease his arduous mission into the heart of Africa, hurled the challenge, "Can the love of Christ not carry the missionary where the slave trade carries the slaver?"

Of course the outstanding example of self-sacrifice is that of the mother who goes down into the valley of the shadow of death that a child may be born. The mother must sacrifice her school-girl complexion for the thrill of motherhood. The price of motherhood is universally recognized, its joy unequalled in our human experience.

Self-sacrifice is spoken of by the Apostle Paul as the "pain divine." His meaning is clear. Self-sacrifice is the pain suffered by God himself in the gift of his Son. It is the pain suffered by Christ in Gethsemane and on the cross. It is the pain we must suffer in a divine cause, the price we must pay if our lives are to take on the characteristics of the divine.

Here is evidence that self-sacrifice of itself and for its own sake is not sufficient. The monks of the Middle Ages practiced self-denial. They devised the most cruel means imaginable for torturing the body. They spent their lives on racks of torture, on the tops of pillars, or sat in unnatural positions until their bones were bent and twisted, and they could no longer stand as men. Such self-denial is not the "pain divine." It is negative and repulsive. It shirks the responsibilities of life. Instead of bringing men to a completeness of life, it denies the very essential elements of such a life. Instead of bringing men to God, it keeps them from him.

Again there is self-denial in self-indulgence. A selfish life is described by the philosopher Hobbs as "solitary, poor, nasty, brutish, and short." What a tremendous price such a man pays for his selfishness. He denies himself a big view of life, whole-mindedness, friendship, the satisfaction of helpfulness, the thrill of cooperation, and a share in making possible a realization of all human hope. Here is self-denial certainly, but not the "pain divine." This sort of self-denial is not the way of the cross. Self-denial to be justifiable must not be for its own sake. It must be made for a greater good. It must be gladly made.

The self-sacrifice of the cross involves the absolute rejection of positive evils. It costs to develop a character that shall have strength enough to continuously lift up against the gravitation of the evils about us. Self-sacrifice involves the abandonment of our scattered loyalties for a life dominated by our interest in the kingdom of God. It will cost to have an eye single to the glory of God, but the satisfaction of such single-hearted devotion will more than compensate for this cost.

The self-sacrifice of the cross will sometimes involve the yielding of the sweetest, wholesomest, and purest things in life. Some one has said, "There are times when saving others we can not save ourselves."

Self-sacrifice must be gladly made. Such was the sacrifice of Jesus. In Hebrews 12:2 we read, "Who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame."

The self-sacrifice of the cross goes to the limit, because great things are at stake. Men who have gone a long way in following the cross have suffered the pain and yet tasted the joys of self-sacrifice. Because of this, and because of the great goals that are at stake, such men do not like to speak of their own self-sacrifice. The Apostle Paul endured all things for Christ, and yet he said, "I count all gain."

Sir Wilford Grenfell, who completely identified his life with the fisher folk of Labrador, yielding a lucrative practice in London, public esteem, wealth, and prestige, for the sake of losing his life that others might find life in frozen Labrador, once remarked, "I dislike to speak of self-sacrifice, for I can not recall that I ever indulged in it." Thus Livingstone, who passionately desired the salvation of Africa, could write, "People talk of the sacrifice I have made in spending so much of my life in Africa. It is emphatically not sacrifice; say, rather, it is a privilege."

The cross evidences self-sacrifice at its best.

Identification—Sharing the Cause Divine

The cross not only involves love and self-denial. It includes the complete identification of Christ with the cause of God.

The story is told that once a soldier approached his general and kneeling before him literally heaped upon his leader words of praise and flattery. The general, so the story goes, waited patiently until the soldier had finished and then said, "My good man, stand up. I appreciate your words of praise. I ignore your flattery. I desire to ask you but one question, Just how do you stand with reference to the cause which I represent?"

A splendid example of the meaning of the cross from this point of view is furnished us by Stanley Jones in his wonderful book, Christ at the Round Table:

A student deeply perplexed said to a friend of mine, "I do not understand the meaning of the atonement." My friend illustrated as follows: Suppose there were a plague-stricken district and here was a doctor with medical skill; if love should be at the heart of his skill, would he not carry that skill down into the heart of the plague-stricken district to cure it? Here is an appallingly ignorant people, and here is a wise man; if love should be at the heart of his wisdom, would he not carry that wisdom down into the heart of that ignorance and bear with its limitations to cure it? Here is a famine-stricken people, and here is a man with wealth; if love should be at the heart of his wealth, would he not go down into that famine-stricken section to share it? Here is a section where impurity and sin has spread its pall, and here is a good man; if love should be at the heart of his goodness, would he not carry his goodness into the heart of the evil, bear with it, take on himself the shame of it, let it break his heart if necessary to save men from that evil? Here are we with the appalling plague of sin upon us, and here is God whose very nature is love. What will He do about it? To get into it to cure it will mean bearing it, and bearing it will mean atonement. "Oh," replied the student, "if you put it that way, I do not see how God could keep out of it. And moreover I do not see how I can keep out of it."

That is the meaning of the cross: We being what we are, and God being what he is, he could not keep out of it. And since God has gone into life as deeply as a cross, we too must catch the divine passion—we must know the cross by sharing it.

The cross of Christ demands that we shall completely identify ourselves with the cause of Christ. If we catch its meaning, we will not be able to keep out of the work of God or keep ourselves from sharing the needs of men. The cross demands of us that we shall no longer be content to be spectators but must become actual participants. It demands that we leave the side lines and take our places in the ranks of those who are playing the game of the ages.

When we take upon ourselves the way of the cross, when we come to appreciate the meaning of its life, when we come to answer the needs of men, and the love of God and Christ becomes our love and their purpose our purposes, then nothing less than our complete identification with that cause will satisfy us. When this happens, nothing else will matter. No price will be too great to pay, because we will know that great goals are at stake; the cause of God and of Christ and of mankind are involved.

During the past week the officers of a certain organization of women of our church came to my office—came to solicit my support for their cause. Their appeal was irresistible. Their very countenances radiated the conviction that their cause was identified with the cause of the church and that the cause of the church was the cause of God. The president of the organization recounted some difficulties that had been met, some trials she had passed through. At times the way had been hard. At times it seemed impossible to carry on for another week. Sometimes she had thought of resigning, yielding to the difficulties that held her down and yet as she said, "I kept saying to myself, 'The work of the Lord must go on.'"

When we come to sense fully the meaning of the cross for us, we will be able to say, "Come what may, the work of the Lord must go on."

The cross demands our identification with the work of God, but let us remember that the work of God centers in men, poor men, ignorant men, sinful men. Let us remember that that work must go on in the street, home, school, factory, in foreign lands. Identification will demand that we make common cause with all classes of men in all places where men are endeavoring to live. Christ took upon himself the sins of men, shared the sufferings of men, withstood the temptations that men must be called upon to withstand. The method of Christ was the only method which would win the allegiance of men. Only by identifying himself with men, could he lift them to God.

The Call of the Cross Today

We have already seen that the way out of the dilemma of the modern world is not through the optimism of the liberals, the pessimism of the modern press, or the peptomism of cheap sales talk. The cure of present-day ills is found in the hearts of men. Nothing short of a transformation will suffice. The cross, and the cross only, has power to bring about this rebirth. It will not cease to plead with men until they yield themselves to its influence and govern their lives with its spirit.

The Cross of the Prophetic Church

We have repeatedly stressed the responsibility of the church that claims to be prophetic. Such a church we have said must not only have foresight but insight; must not only interpret history but make history; must not only point the way, it must lead the way. Today our church is standing in judgment before men and God. The claims of a century are arrayed as witnesses, for they testify for or against us. Have we given evidence that we believe that God has spoken to us, that our church is the only church that has the fullness of the gospel, that to this church is committed the task of setting up God's kingdom, that it is given unto us to be the light of the world? We repeat, Shall these witnesses, the claims that we have made for a century, testify for or against us?

If such light as they had was sufficient to send Florence Nightingale to Crimea, David Livingstone to Africa, Wilfred Grenfell to Labrador, Stanley Jones to India, and Edith Cavell to unflinchingly face a firing squad, what will the light of the prophetic church not demand of us? If under the trying conditions of the early days of this church the light of the gospel could induce Lyman Wight and Parley P. Pratt to undertake that dreadful mission to Kirtland, if it could cause Edward Partridge and his brethren to offer their lives as a ransom for the Saints, if it could ask of Joseph and Hyrum that they give up their lives to its cause, if it could send Charles Derry to England and keep him there without money or news from home, if it could send Glaud Rodger to die in the West and Charles Lake to give his life in the South Seas, what may we not expect the greater light of the present day and the greater needs of men to ask of us?

Is it not to our shame that we have often endeavored to purchase the kingdom at a lesser price, and that sometimes we have even adopted the practice of bargaining that we might perchance find some easy way? For shame that we have thought that words of praise, petty bickerings, camouflaged service, cheap magic, flattery, superficial love, or some petty proportion of our money could purchase the kingdom. For shame that we should have at times thought that we could build the kingdom without God's help or at other times have been willing to let him do it all. For shame that we have at times evidenced the belief that the kingdom could be reached by building Babel towers of materialism, when we should have known that no one can help in this work save he is humble and full of love. For shame that we have endeavored to secure the kingdom for ourselves by yielding as little as possible, yielding anything other than the complete sacrificial love which is demanded.

If the light of the prophetic church does not bring us the kind of love that will pay the supreme price, then it fails as a redeeming force. Are you willing today to let the price that you are paying for the kingdom stand before the world as the measure of the light of the prophetic church?

The call of Jesus to this church today is in the present tense. In a communication given through Brother Elbert A. Smith to the priesthood a few years ago, this call was made specific:

I greet you as I did my disciples of old; though I am your Lord and Master, yet do I call you my friends and my brethren. Is there one among you who has aught of complaint to make concerning his ministry or the blessings he has received? Is there one among you who has been homeless, that he could say I have no where to lay my head? Is there one who has been scourged, or spit upon, or crucified? Happily, you have escaped many of these things, though in part you have tasted from the cup I drank from and have been baptized with the baptism that I was baptized with; but the day will come when you will be required to walk in the midst of perils—I have witnesses of my love for you, for I have evidence in my hands and in my feet and in my side, for did I not give the blood out of my heart for you? What evidence are you prepared to give in years to come that you love me?

It seems quite clear that one can reach God's standard in thought, word, and action just so far as he is motivated by the consciousness of his presence.—H. E. Westermeyer, in The Youth's Instructor.

Find out what God would have you do,
And do that little well;
For what is great and what is small
'Tis only he can tell.

Sentenced to Church?

By Evan A. Fry

Yesterday morning I went home and picked up the paper to read as I ate breakfast. It was only a very small headline on the front page, but it somehow attracted my attention. It read, "Thief Sentenced to Church." Well, well, well. This was a surprise. I knew that the churches were rather hard up for some one to fill their pews, but I didn't know that the situation had reached a stage where the ministers of the country had to appeal to the judges to send them recruits. Furthermore, I think that a clever lawyer could succeed in having that sentence set aside on at least two counts of unconstitutionality: First, it is an infringement upon the right of religious freedom, which is guaranteed to every man by the Constitution of the United States, for many men prefer to get their religion down at the pool hall or in the corner gang or at the baseball game, rather than at church. Second, the punishment of sending a man to church I think might fittingly be classed with the cruel and unusual punishments which are expressly forbidden by the Constitution.

Speaking more seriously, I can of course see the wisdom and the righteous intent behind the judge's sentence in this case. But still I am not sure that the sentence of church attendance was the best one either for the offender or for the church. I grant that the church should be willing and eager to undertake the rehabilitation and reclamation of social outcasts and offenders of various kinds, but I do not believe that this task can be successfully accomplished by resorting to legal compulsion. If that were the simplest way of reclaiming and converting the world, the church members should have taken out injunctions against all nonmembers many years ago, forcing them to come to church and eventually to unite with the church.

It has been obvious in all ages of the world that some people are eager and willing to hear the message of religion and of Christ, while others choose to follow the primrose path of present pleasure and future ruin. Some people in their attempts to explain this phenomenon, have formulated the doctrine of predestination. Personally I do not believe in predestination, for I can not see how a just God could condemn a man's soul to everlasting torment without giving that man a chance to make his decision and voluntarily live the kind of life that would lead him to condemnation or to glory. I believe that every man has his agency—his right to choose between right and wrong, every day and every hour and every minute. Some people deliberately and continually choose the ways of wickedness, harden their hearts against all reason and persuasion, and travel speedily but heedlessly the road to destruction.

If God had wanted a lot of mechanical toys following him around and obeying his slightest command, he could have made man that way. But he didn't want mechanical toys—he wanted men, and he created them a little lower than the angels, and endowed them with wisdom and power to choose for themselves. God's love is strong enough to break through the barriers of the hardest heart, but God never breaks down any doors, except perhaps in special isolated cases when he has a particular purpose in mind. The beginnings of true conversion must come from within—not from without. Christ stands at the door and knocks; we hear his call; and from inside the door we either reject him or bid him enter. Christ himself recognized that it was useless to appeal to some men who had their doors tightly nailed shut and sealed, and he warned his disciples that they should not cast their pearls before swine who would trample the pearls and turn and rend those who had proffered them. God could convert everybody, but because some people refuse to be converted, and stubbornly maintain that refusal, it is useless to appeal to them; the door to their heart is closed—and fastened from within.

For this reason, I doubt the wisdom of forcing a man by legal methods to attend church. It is to be hoped that the church will succeed in converting and rehabilitating the subject of this news dispatch in yesterday's paper, of course, but how much better for him if he had found and accepted the church of his own initiative and volition! Granted that the church can not be expected to convert everybody, will you not agree that if the church and its ministry had something so precious and so desirable to offer to the people that no inherently righteous man could afford to be without it, our churches would be packed each Sunday morning, and the church coffers would be full to overflowing, without the necessity of a never-ending appeal for money? If the churches were offering to the world a powerful and a regenerative religion, authoritatively taught and administered, and blessed with the unction of the Holy Spirit, there would need to be no campaigns for membership, or financial drives such as we have all too abundantly today. If the church has had to resort to modern high pressure salesmanship methods to secure converts and financial maintenance, it seems to my poor mind at least that the church has lost some of the powerful light which should be attracting the people of the world without coercion and persuasion.

The first commandment that Christ gave to his followers was that they should "love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." God wants willing workers in his kingdom, not drafted slaves cowering under the taskmaster's lash. It is impossible for a slave who is compelled to work for his master by fear of future punishment to have a very deep or abiding love for that master. God wants first our love; then that love will engender within us a desire to be of service. Compelling the service through fear is getting the cart before the horse, for the first commandment is that thou shalt love the Lord thy God; then, after you have loved him, you may serve him.

May the church of Christ ever be a shining light to the world, so that men will be drawn to the Christ, and may we always have willing hearts to serve him in joyfulness and thanksgiving and with the love that is his due.

In the Church; of the Church

By Peter Muceus

Undoubtedly many do not see the important difference between these two statements. People very likely think that when one is in the church he is also of the church; but this is not necessarily so. One may be in the home of a friend or a neighbor, but this fact does not make him one of that home. There is a difference between being in and of a church or an institution, and that difference is so great that the first mentioned condition has no real value without the other. The difference is so important, so valuable, so far-reaching, that no one should be ignorant of it or indifferent to it.

To be of the church is the closest relationship into which man may enter with his Maker, and with his fellows. It offers opportunities far greater than any other relationship into which man may enter; it is more durable, more secure, more satisfying. It brings one into contact with powers which are infinite, with intelligence and wisdom beyond human comprehension; it is the highest relationship of which man is capable.

To Be in the Church

Through the ordinances of baptism and the imposition of hands by the agency of an authorized servant of the church, one automatically enters into the church. If his apparent morals are not objectionable, he may stay in the church to the end of his mortal existence. Yet he may never become one of the church; he may never be known (recognized) by the Savior. Yet he has had legal membership right to take part in all business meetings of the church to which members are entitled.

To Be of the Church

The church of Jesus Christ is a living organism, a divine institution, composed of human beings of dual natures, bodies and spirits, and of this duality the church as a whole partakes. Being a divinely instituted living organism, just as the physical body is a divine organism, it is endowed with powers of life peculiar to itself, and this peculiar life is the factor that makes it so powerful and important. The potential powers of the natural body have been developed to produce all the wonderful works of man, which are being displayed all around us in this marvelous age in which we are privileged to live. Similarly, but infinitely more marvelously, the church is possessed of potential life powers beyond even modern scientific explanation, and of moral and spiritual forces for which society today stands in direst need.

In order to become identified with the church spiritually and morally, one must be born again, not only of water but—and specially—of the Spirit, the divine life medium which connects man on earth with its Creator in heaven. This divine dynamic was the power by which Christ performed his wonderful miracles and manifested his magnificent life, which has been admired by Christians, Jews, and so-called heathen. And this is the life he came to offer the human race. "I have come," he said, "that they might have life and have it more abundantly." Again he said: "It is the Spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing." And speaking to his disciples he made this encouraging statement: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father." And there is proof in the Scriptures that his disciples did greater works, for in one day, under the inspiration of this Spirit, they were the instruments in converting about three thousand prejudiced Israelites, whom the apostles accused of having killed Jesus. Such mass conversion is not recorded as ever having been performed by the Master; not, of course, because of inferiority, but because the Comforter did not come to abide till after his ascension.

His disciples in Jerusalem were few in number before his ascension, and even they were fearful and vacillating before the promise of the Comforter was realized. Before this spiritual power came as an Abiding Comforter, Peter thrice denied his acquaintance with his Savior, but after it came he fearlessly stood before thousands of the same class of people and accused them of having killed their own Savior. This Comforter had given him this more abundant life, which made him fearless and brave as his Master.

The fact that one has mechanically, or outwardly, identified himself with the church is no proof, or guarantee, or assurance, of being born, spiritually, again and possessed of divine power. Its manifestation must be realized, its power felt, its peace, love, and joy made a living reality in the soul, giving assurance of divine sonship. And to this divine life in the soul of man there must come a reaction of creative cooperation with divinity, in building up the kingdom of God among men. Under this spiritual influence of the Comforter, man's powers of body, mind, and means will be consecrated to loving service among men, doing the work of God in Christ's stead. This is the stewardship which God desires to impose upon all his children, that through them he may establish his kingdom among men, a social order of regenerated human beings, motivated by the spirit of divine love and carrying out the will of God in the uses of material possessions and thus manifesting the feasibility and desirability of the realization of the Lord's prayer: "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven."

Being of the church means being partaker of the spiritual life forces of the divine body for the purpose of carrying out the work, for which this body was brought into existence. It means the placing of one's powers upon the altar of service to this body, that all might be "workers together with God" for the accomplishment and consummation of his divine plan.

With these thoughts before us, each may judge for himself whether he is of the church or only in it. We may direct these questions to our "inner selves": Am I born again, or have I only been immersed in water? Have I received that peculiar quickening power that inspires with new zeal for increased activity, more earnest endeavor, greater desire for giving up all unnecessary self-indulgence, saving time and means, taking Christ for my example and not following the luxury-loving, pleasure-seeking world in our modern civilization? Am I really, sincerely, and honestly striving to follow Christ, sacrificing needless gratifications in order to become more abundantly a partaker of the "divine nature"?

A sincere consideration of these and similar questions which may readily come to our minds, may aid us in this self-examination in order to give ourselves a definite answer to the questions of divine relationship: Am I of the church or only in the church?

Are You Changing, and Is It for the Better?

AN EXHORTATION TO THE YOUNG

By Milburn H. Hull

As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts. —Isaiah 5: 9.

How many of you young men and women whom this writing will reach have had your attention called to the importance of measuring the years that stretch out before you, and of estimating the amount of efficient work that you expect to accomplish in them? How many of you have ever thought of mapping out some sort of a schedule to help you onward in your work? How many of you have ever been conscious of having a definite goal in life, something high and worthy to be and to do?

Perhaps some of you have not taken this forward look over life, yet would it not be well to have some plan for the use of the precious years to come? It is impossible for any of us to plan our life work in detail, but then ought we not be able to shape the bold outlines of our work?

Today you have more and greater opportunities than your forefathers had, to equip yourselves so that your energies might be devoted to the building up of Zion in these days.

There is a great demand in the church today for efficient workers. The Lord has spoken of the great and onerous burden that rests upon the leading quorums of the church; of the great work in which those men are called to engage; of the honor and glory that shall come to those who in uprightness, faithfulness, and diligence discharge their duties acceptably to God; and of the shame, contempt, and final great loss and destruction that shall come to those who in carelessness, slothfulness, or wickedness, shall fail in their calling and ministry. You who are sons of the men now occupying those responsible places of service have a reason to anticipate that service will also be required of you when your fathers shall have done their work and shall have vacated the places they now occupy.

And what of you, the sons and daughters, whose fathers do not occupy places of responsibility in the quorums of the church? Is there anything to which you may look ahead and for which you may qualify yourselves? The Lord has answered:

All are called according to the gifts of God unto them; and to the intent that all may labor together, let him that laboreth in the ministry and him that toileth in the affairs of the men of business and of work labor together with God for the accomplishment of the work intrusted to all.

You are all called to a higher calling. You are called to labor with God according to the gifts he has given you. You may not know the details of the service to which he may call you, but you do know that we are all called to serve, even the aged and the youth, to prepare ourselves to do our work efficiently. The question is, Are you looking ahead with the intention of giving valuable service, whether it be in the ministry of the word or in business affairs, or even in the work we regard as commonplace toil? Honor and glory come to those who serve "in uprightness, faithfulness, and diligence," no matter where the place of service may be. Uprightness, faithfulness, and diligence glorify the service that you render. These are the things that confer honor, and not the place in which you serve.

Are you looking forward to the time when you shall render service in the Lord's work, and are you measuring your time and mapping out its possibilities? Are you looking forward in the humble, earnest spirit that will permit the heavenly Father to use you where you can serve best?

No one ever makes a success of anything who does not think over his work. You can not make a permanent improvement in your work unless you think it over and make your plans accordingly. God has given you something that no other living creature possesses. What is it? The power of thought! How many times have you heard of that phrase, "If I had only thought of that!" But did you ever stop to see if you were really thinking? Thought has brought about all of the progress the human race has made in its civilization. All the changes that have accompanied its development, all the improvement that has been made, is the result of earnest thought.

No improvement has ever come except where men have been willing to change to the better conditions thought has revealed to them. Are you changing, and is it for the better? Are you improving? Are you making progress? Are you learning new and better things, and are you giving up that which is inferior for that which you, through your power of thought, perceive to be superior?

Is the real purpose of religion having its fulfillment in your life? Do you understand that purpose to be the development in you of a proper sense of values and of the disposition to make choices as they will affect your life in its entirety and not in the immediate present only? Are you a seeker after truth and, when you have found a truth, do you let go the thing that was not true and let the new truth you have learned have effect in your life?

It may have been a characteristic of your childhood to do things upon the prompting of emotion, to act impulsively and without deep thought, but as you grew out of childhood, you were taught the ways whereby you could be guided by the principles of truth, and this in turn necessitated the exercise of your thought and discrimination. This is one of the changes that should come as you grow out of the condition of childhood into the stronger and more capable period of young manhood and womanhood which you now enjoy.

You must not stand still. You must move, and I hope it will always be forward, onward, and upward. Change, and always into more perfect harmony with true things. For you must rise toward the higher things of God, and you must think his wiser thoughts.

The exalted aim which Jesus has placed before you in his gospel is life with God. Since he is so high above you, it is necessary for you to rise to be with him. It is necessary for you to change in order to be like him. The change must be in you, the imperfect one, not in him, the Perfect One.

It is my hope and prayer that when you strive in uprightness, faithfulness, and diligence to comply with this call, you shall grow into the likeness of the divine One in whom is no need of repentance, because his works are done in truth.

The Church School Handbook

There has just come from the press a most valuable help for all who have to do with the church school. This is a real worker's manual prepared for our own people.

The change from the former three departments to a single unified department of religious education has been effected in most of the branches of the church, in harmony with the resolution of last General Conference. In making the change, there are numerous questions bound to arise concerning organization and administration. These have been carefully anticipated in making up the Handbook, and the result of painstaking study and experiment has been gathered and made immediately available for all workers.

The new Handbook is not a constitution, and it is not a rule book. It does contain the most careful statement of advice that can be given, to date, by those whom the church holds responsible as directors of religious education. Its chapters cover every phase of church school organization and administration, study, worship, training, work groups, recreation, grading, promotion, junior church, junior stewardship, young people's organizations and activities, social gatherings, etc.

The Church School Handbook is a ready reference manual designed to unify the work of religious education in all the church. It should be in the hands of every pastor, director, teacher, and leader. By mail postpaid, 35 cents, The Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

CHURCH WORK AND SERVICES

Church School Worship Services for July

IMPORTANT NOTICE.—This is the last month that the program material will appear in the Herald. Programs for the month of August will soon appear in the July number of Vision, and will continue to appear in each issue of that magazine for the month following. Workers are requested to make immediate arrangements to subscribe for Vision, and they may, if new subscribers, take advantage of the special offer which has been advertised in the Herald.

Theme for July: "Building Christian Character."

JULY 5

"Truthfulness"

Prelude: "True Hearted, Whole Hearted"; or "I Would Be True," new Hymnal, 294.

Call to Worship: In the name of Him who said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life," we come today to worship. "Therefore, O come, let us worship and bow down, Let us kneel before the Lord our Maker."

Hymn Prayer: "Heavenly Father, We Adore Thee," verses 1, 2, 4, and 5, Hymnal, 30; new Hymnal, 65.

Responsive Reading:

Leader: "And the word of the Lord of hosts, came unto me saying,

School: "These are the things ye shall do;

L.: "Speak ye every man, the truth to his neighbor,

S.: "Execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates;

L.: "And let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against your neighbor.

S.: "Love no false oath.

L.: "For these are the things I hate, saith the Lord.

S.: "Truth is knowledge of things as they are, and as they were, and as they are to come.

L.: "He that keepeth my commandments receiveth truth, and light, until he is glorified in truth.

S.: "My spirit is truth.

L.: "Truth abideth and has no end, and if it be in you, it shall abound."

Hymn: "Look for the Beautiful," Praises, 147; new Hymnal, 209.

Theme Talk: Our theme for the month is "Building Christian Character." A most important, a most fundamental, factor in Christian character is truthfulness. Without it we can not approach unto God, for he is light and truth. God is intelligence, for he knows all things. Human wisdom is but a childlike groping after the wisdom of God who has created all things. Our science is but a human attempt to state the laws of God.

It is God's will that we seek information, and his Spirit gives us inspiration that we may have more light, for he would not have us walk in darkness. He would have us walk in the light of his eternal truth.

A lie is darkness; it is evil and bringeth destruction. Those who lie can not love the truth, can not come near to God, can not partake of his nature, for he is light and truth. The glory of God is intelligence. (See Doctrine and Covenants 90: 4, 5, 6.)

Choir: "God Send Us Men Whose Aim 'Twill Be," New Hymnal for American Youth, 255.

Story: "An Honest Man," Story Worship Programs, 52.

Hymn: "I Would Be True," new Hymnal, 294.

Sentence Prayer.

Offering: Quiet Music.

Concluding Thought:

"To thine own self be true,
And it must follow,
As night the day,
Thou can'st not then be false
To any man."

—Shakespeare.

Hymn: "Jesus, My Savior," Praises, 10.

Prayer.

JULY 12

"Faith"

Prelude: "Faith of Our Fathers," new Hymnal, 291.

Call to Worship:

"Ever be Thou our guide,
Our shepherd and our pride,
Our staff and song;
Jesus, thou Christ of God,
By thy perennial word,
Lead us where thou hast trod,
Make our faith strong."

Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers," new Hymnal, 291, or "O for a Faith," new Hymnal, 240.

Prayer: That we may have such a faith as our fathers, a faith that will stand the test of our modern age.

Reading:

The Blind Weaver

A blind boy stood beside the loom,
And wove a fabric to and fro,
Beneath his firm and steady touch,
He made the busy shuttle go.

And oft the teacher passed that way,
And gave the colors, thread by thread;
But to the boy the pattern fair
Was all unseen—its hues were dead.

"How can you weave?" we pitying cried,
The blind boy smiled, "I do my best,
I make the fabric firm and strong,
And one who sees does all the rest."

O happy thought; beside life's loom,
We blindly strive our best to do,
And he who marked the pattern out,
And holds the threads will make it true

—Author Unknown.

Choir: "My God, How Wonderful Thou Art," new Hymnal, 135.

Scripture Reading: Book of Mormon, Alma, chapter 16, verses 139, 140, 143, 144, 149, 150, and 151.

Theme Talk: Our theme for the month is "Building Christian Character." It would be impossible to build character without faith. Without faith we can do nothing; with sufficient faith in God, all things are possible. Faith is a gift of God; his greatest blessing to man, for with it we can be denied none of his other gifts.

May we magnify the wonderful heritage of faith that has come down to us as a church, and whether our call shall be to live, or die for our faith, prove true to our trust.

Story: "My Faith Looks up to Thee," Story Worship Programs, or the Bible story of Abraham and Isaac.

Hymn: "My Faith Looks up to Thee," new Hymnal, 281.

Sentence Prayer.

Offering: Music of "Faith of Our Fathers."

Concluding Thought: "Faith is the soul's intake, through it God's life comes in. Love is the soul's outlet, through it God's life pours forth.

Hymn: "With a Steadfast Faith," Praises, 21.
Prayer.

JULY 19

"Sympathy"

Picture: "The Good Shepherd." (Order from Herald Publishing House.)

Prelude: Medley of Hymns.

Call to Worship:

"The Lord is in his holy temple,
Let all the earth keep silence before him."

Prayer: That we may have understanding and sympathy with those around us.

Hymn: "It Was Spoken for the Master," Praises, 48.

Theme Talk: Our theme for today is sympathy. Sympathy is another very important factor in the building of Christian character. A sympathetic understanding will bring unity and cooperation to any group. Lack of sympathy produces selfishness, envy, jealousy, hate. One writer has said:

"Ask God to give thee skill in comfort's art,
That thou mayst consecrated be and set apart,
Unto a life of sympathy, for heavy
Is the weight of ill in every heart,
And comforts are needed much, of Christlike touch."

Scripture Reading: Luke 10: 25-38.

Hymn: "Have a Heart of Kindness," Praises, 118.

Story: "The House by the Side of the Road," Story Worship Programs, 122; or picture talk, "The Good Shepherd" (See July Vision).

Hymn: "Never Pass Them By," verses 1 and 2, Praises, 42.

Sentence Prayer.

Offering: Quiet Music.

Concluding Thought:

"O heart, that beats with every human heart,
O heart, that weeps with every human tear,
O heart, that sings with every human song,
Fill our slow hearts with flood-tides of Thy love,
That they may beat with every human heart,
That they may weep with every human tear,
That they may sing with every human song
And thus through Thee, unite with all mankind."

—Maurice Rountree, from Poems of Justice.

Hymn: "Carry Blessings with You," Praises, 25.

Prayer.

JULY 26

"Responsibility"

Prelude: "Holy, Holy, Holy," new Hymnal, 39.

Call to Worship:

"In his presence—
You can not come too often or too near,
The Son of God is infinite in grace,
His presence satisfies the longing soul,
And those who walk with him from day to day,
Can never have a solitary way."

Hymn: "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" new Hymnal, 202, verses 1, 2, and 4.

Prayer: For ability and willingness to see our duty, and for courage to accept any responsibility that will help advance the cause of Christ and the building up of his kingdom.

Scripture Reading: Isaiah 6: 5-8; John 12: 35.

Hymn: "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go," new Hymnal, 292.

Theme Talk: Our theme for today is "Responsibility." Responsibility is something we instinctively shun. But it is only by accepting it and bringing to our task a true consecration of self that we develop Christian character. There is a grave responsibility resting on our church, the church of Jesus Christ. And a portion of this responsibility belongs to each member. Have you accepted your share, or is some fellow member carrying yours? When the call to serve came to Isaiah, his answer was, "Here am I, send me." What will your answer be?

Choir: "Take My Life and Let It Be," new Hymnal, 307.

Story: "The Joy of Duty Well Done," Story Worship Programs, page 80, Stowell.

Hymn: "I Need Thee Every Hour," new Hymnal, 314, first verse.

Sentence Prayer:

Offering: Quiet Music.

Concluding Thought:

"Father, we bring to thee
Gifts of our love,
Wilt thou accept them now,
As thine above?
Thou hast so freely given,
All that we need,
Our gifts, our hearts and lives,
Are thine indeed.

Hymn: "Master, Use Me," new Hymnal, 214, verses 1, 3, and 4.

Prayer.

It Can Be Done

A letter received recently in the office of the First Presidency brings a most cheering message from a small rural branch in Missouri. A group of fifty Saints worship in a one-room church. The correspondent writes as follows:

"We have our church school fairly well organized for both Sunday morning and Sunday evening classes, in all divisions. During the week we have women's class work. Monthly social gatherings are held by the adult division, and a similar provision is made by the young people's division. Blue Birds, Orioles, and Temple Builders are organized for active work during the summer months.

"As we have but a one-room church, we have not developed a junior church, but we do have a junior choir, which often furnishes a song for the regular services.

"We have no intermission between the class work and the morning sermon, and we find the method very desirable. A music committee cooperates with the pastor in working out a schedule for the services, often making use of the suggestions offered in the worship programs published in the Herald."

These people find it not only possible to change their plans of work in harmony with the recommendation of the last General Conference and the advice given by the church, but they are happy in their work and gaining new strength and vigor as they learn to cooperate and build together most effectively.

Missionary Work in the South

I feel the urge of this missionary work. He that is warned should warn his neighbor. This is a pleasant task when the Lord so graciously blesses with the Holy Spirit. Recently I was called to meet new faces and make new friends in New Mexico while in the recent debate with Mr. Arceneaux, which has been reported. I feel quite well satisfied with the results. Brother George H. Wixom, of San Antonio, Texas, moderated for me. He is a big-hearted brother, and I am glad to be associated with him in such a wonderful cause.

While in that region of country we were entertained by Mr. Fred Hoelderle and his wife. I was acquainted with Sister Hoelderle and her brother, Steve Cantrell, years ago when they lived in Missouri, and was glad to renew our acquaintance. While there Brother Cantrell was passing through a severe trial on account of his wife's affliction, which made it necessary for her to be in the hospital at that time. I understand that since the debate Brother Wixom has baptized several close to the little town called Perico, a few miles from Sedan, New Mexico.

I came on to Wheeler, Arkansas, and commenced meetings in the union church building. It was a busy time, but the house was filled almost every night, and on Sunday night was packed. However, I did not baptize anyone this time, but hope to do so on my return next fall.

The next point was Eros, Louisiana. The brethren had the appointment well advertised, and for ten nights the old, old story was told. Last Sunday I had the privilege of inducting six souls into the kingdom of God. Nonmembers turned out to hear us. We closed with a full house.

From Eros I came to Dunn, Louisiana, and am here preaching in the Baptist Church. One family of Saints lives here, the family of Brother D. A. Byrd. Prospects look favorable, the house has been well filled each night, and interest is growing.

At the close of this meeting I expect to go to West Monroe, Louisiana, and hold forth for about ten days. In the retrenchment plan, Kentucky and Tennessee have been added to my territory also. Anyone interested in having preaching services, write me at my home address, Thayer, Missouri.

Dedication of the Lamar (Nebraska) Church

Saints from far and near gathered at the little town of Lamar, Nebraska, Sunday, June 7, for the dedication of the church building at that place. Ward A. Hougas, now president of Far West but a former pastor at Lamar, came from Saint Joseph, Missouri, to serve as the speaker of the day. The weather was ideal and the roads good. The building was crowded from the first service of the day throughout the entire program of the day's activities. Two hundred people partook of a bounteous basket dinner in the Woodman Hall at noon.

Distance means but little to Latter Day Saints in the prairie country, and Saints came by the carloads from Wray, Yuma, Holyoke, and other Colorado points, as well as from the Nebraska side. Lamar is located near the Colorado-Nebraska line near the northeast corner of Colorado.

"The church of tomorrow must face and solve problems which the church of yesterday ignored, and which the church of today refuses to tackle," declared Brother Hougas in his dedicatory sermon at the afternoon service. The usual presentation of the keys and the deed was made by Leslie Travis, of Imperial, in behalf of the building committee, to Brother Ralph E. Vincent, of Otis, Colorado. Brother Vincent is bishop's agent for Eastern Colorado District, of which the Lamar group is a part. Brother B. J. Peters, the present pastor, was the last one to receive the keys, and pledged the support of himself and the congregation to the furtherance of the work.

Preceding the dedicatory service, Brother H. E. Winegar had conducted a two weeks' series of meetings which had met with a very fine response from both members and non-members. One man was baptized Sunday afternoon in the Frenchman River.

The work at Lamar commenced about ten years ago, when active labor was begun by Brother Hougas in schoolhouses and the homes of the few scattered Saints. Gradually the work grew, and services were held in halls, schoolhouses, and wherever a place could be found. A branch was organized some five or six years ago. Over a year ago the Methodist Church was purchased at Imperial and moved to Lamar, a distance of twenty-two miles. After being remodeled, re-decorated, and well furnished, it is now one of the nicest little church homes in that section of the country. The main auditorium is about 38 by 42 feet, and is fitted with a corner pulpit and beautiful semicircular pews which make it very attractive.

With the entrance of the former pastor into general church work last year, Brother B. J. Peters was placed in charge of the work, and is producing some very fine results.

Bemidji, Minnesota

The Saints of this branch are still striving to do their part to carry on the work of the Restoration. We are enjoying the spirit of unity and good fellowship and are very confident the church will continue to accomplish the purposes of our Lord. All our people here find plenty to do. Crops are looking good.

Our annual business meeting was held June 7. Brother Day was reelected pastor; Brother H. Bosshardt, superintendent of the Sunday school. We are going out to Bagley next Sunday to meet with the Saints there.

Our people are planning on a Rally Day July 12, and are expecting a good crowd and a splendid social time. Brother Leslie Wight, of Minneapolis, our district president, and Saints from a number of towns and places will be here.

We shall continue to pray that the Lord may guide his people and that Zion shall in due time be redeemed.

Bozeman, Montana

Although the Bozeman Branch has not reported for some time, we are putting forth an effort to carry on. Elder A. J. Moore is our pastor. Recently we had a visit from our missionary, Brother George Thorburn and his wife. The latter is the director of religious education in this district. She made clear the importance of adopting the church school plan, and though few in number, we decided to fall in line and do the best we could. Sister A. J. Moore was elected church school director. She has been making use of the talent in the branch to very good advantage.

The men introduced the idea of a series of socials. These were held at the homes of members and were a success in several ways. A free-will offering was received each time, and the proceeds, totaling $22.50, were used for the buying of new hymn books.

The women's group meets once a month and is one of the dependable groups in helping to finance and support the branch.

Nauvoo, Illinois

A series of broadcasting programs of historic interest, sponsored by the Nauvoo Unity Club, over W C A Z Carthage, has brought many visitors to Nauvoo. Eight hundred and fifty registered at the Mansion House during the month of May. Twenty different States were represented, and there were two cars of tourists from Hawaii. A number of teachers have brought graduating classes from near-by towns, and members of the Hancock Ministerial Alliance held a picnic at the Tourist Park. Elder J. C. Page and wife were honored guests at the dinner, and in the afternoon Brother Page delivered a lecture on the church property.

A very pretty wedding took place at the Mansion House on May 9 when Mildred Lucile Salisbury and John W. Larson were united in marriage by Elder Page. Mildred is the second daughter of Brother and Sister D. S. Salisbury, of Burnside. The groom is a son of Mrs. Godfrey Larson, who resides east of Carthage, where the couple will make their home for the present.

Another wedding took place in this historic home on February 28 uniting Jennie P. Gunlock to Kenneth M. Cady. The latter was teaching near Muscatine, Iowa, and wished to keep the wedding a secret until school was out. Mrs. Cady is a graduate nurse of the Independence Sanitarium.

Our pastor, Brother Page, preached the baccalaureate sermon for the Nauvoo High School, and many favorable comments were heard. Those of our membership among the graduates were Paul Fusselman, David Lee, and Albert Sanford, jr. Soon after graduation Paul joined the Navy and is now stationed at San Diego, California. David and another classmate started out on a cross-country hike and when last heard from had reached Texas. Albert is working on the new hard road which is under construction between Warsaw and the county line south, and expects to enter Graceland in the fall.

Roberta Lewis and Mary Lee have returned from Graceland. Roberta will continue her studies again in the fall, while Mary is attending normal school in Warrensburg, Missouri, and will teach in Pontoosuc township the coming term. Mildred Sanford is attending normal school at Macomb, Illinois, and will teach third and fourth grades in the town school here.

Irene Layton has returned from Independence and is spending the summer with the home folks. She was chosen teacher of the senior Book of Mormon class, which meets every Sunday evening. This class has been very efficiently taught by Irene's mother, but on account of failing health she asked to be released.

On Mother's Day, Sister Layton, being the oldest mother in the branch, was asked to arrange the evening's program. Instead of the usual procedure of eulogizing mother, each mother was asked to contribute something, and a nice program of readings and musical numbers was enjoyed. A Mother's Day sermon was delivered in the morning by our pastor with appropriate musical selections.

Elder James McIntyre, of Fort Madison, spent two Sunday evenings with us recently, showing pictures of the marvelous ruins of Machu Picchu from slides which he had made himself, and which were beautifully colored. Brother McIntyre is the leading photographer of Fort Madison, so is quite an artist along this line.

Mr. Isaac Jemison suffered a stroke of apoplexy on May 4 and passed away a few hours later. He was in his 79th year and had lived in Nauvoo the greater part of his life, making his home in the old Lorenzo H. Snow house, which is one of the best preserved of all the old buildings. Mr. Jemison's parents and grandparents were members of the church during the early organization, his grandparents being at Haun's Mill during the massacre, from which they miraculously escaped. Mr. Jemison, however, was a member of the Catholic Church. His wife united with us a few years ago and is one of our most faithful members. His sister, Mrs. W. D. Marshall, is also a member.

Children's Day was observed with songs and exercises by the children during the morning hour, and in the evening Roberta Lewis outlined a pleasing program appropriate to the day. Sister A. L. Sanford gave a talk on the children of the Bible; Elmer Garrett on the childhood of our great scientist, Thomas A. Edison; Lloyd Buckert on Mendelssohn's childhood, and he played for us Mendelssohn's "Spring Song"; Irene Layton told of the childhood of the noted actor, George Arliss, and then played for us "The Dance of the Dolls"; Florence Ourth related some very interesting things about the Japanese children.

President Elbert A. Smith has been spending a few days recuperating in old Nauvoo.

Lincoln, Nebraska

Twenty-sixth and H Street

We are certainly in sympathy with the problems of the church and its leaders, caused by the world-wide depression and the hard times everyone is experiencing. Notwithstanding all, Lincoln Branch is gaining in every respect. There seems to be a closer bond of unity and fellowship, and each member is striving harder to do his part. We have no fear as to the outcome.

Our pastor, B. M. Anderson, 837 South Fifteenth Street, is very ably assisted by other members of the priesthood. Brothers Shakespeare and Lenox, although both have been released from their missionary appointments, have not at all ceased their activities in church work, but seem to be redoubling their efforts to make the work in Lincoln a success.

The Sunday school, under the direction of Brother Poague, has launched into a "cross country bus contest," between the various classes, which has created such an interest that the attendance increased from thirty to eighty-five in the last three Sundays. This seems remarkable to us for the summer months, as attendance is usually very low at this time. At present the young adults' class, under the leadership of Francis Schunk, is in the lead. They have taken as their class name "The Gleaners." The older adults, under the leadership of Brother Lenox, are giving them a merry chase. Their name for the contest is "The Pace Makers." The other classes are doing their best, and everyone is feeling assured of a very interesting church school this summer, as the contest will continue through July.

A little son came to bless the home of Brother and Sister L. W. Hale on April 19. He was given the name of Leslie William, jr.

Brother McWilliams is home from the hospital, where he had to undergo an operation which caused him to lose the sight of one eye. He has been very ill, but we are glad to see him progressing to health and strength.

Sister Bertha Tave, of California, is visiting in the homes of her sister, Muriel Zimmer, and her brother, Vernon Andrews. We are happy to meet her again at our church services, as she was a former member of the Lincoln Branch.

At the home of Mrs. Jennie Willar, in Spearfish, South Dakota, Saturday evening, May 16, occurred the marriage of Miss Elsie Hale to George W. Sutterfield, both of Lincoln. The double ring ceremony was read by Elder F. E. Cohrt. Miss Lucy Gilmore, of Valyrang, Nebraska, attended the bride. Dorothy Belle Miner and Patricia Douglas served as ringbearers. Miss Fanchon Cohrt and Miss Hazel Willard sang "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Mrs. Bertha Newton. Miss Cohrt also sang "Because." A waffle breakfast was served at sunrise Sunday to the bridal party by Miss Willard and Miss Cohrt. After touring the Black Hills and surprising friends at Lincoln, Brother and Sister Sutterfield left June 6 for a short wedding trip by way of Chicago, Niagara Falls, and New York, to Boston, where they will reside.

Brother Sutterfield graduated this year from the Department of Electrical Engineering at the University of Nebraska and will continue his school work at the Boston School of Technology. Sister Sutterfield also plans to continue her school work. We wish them success and a happy married life.

Union Branch

Clitherall, Minnesota

After the winter's nap, church services were resumed here in May, with Sunday school at 1.30 p. m., and prayer meeting and preaching services alternating at 2.30.

The business meeting of the branch was held June 6 with a fair attendance and good interest. Elder Lester Whiting was reelected president; secretary, Alta Kimber; chorister, Malcolm Whiting; organist, Norma Whiting; janitor, Frank Tucker; treasurer, Winifred Richards; publicity agent, Alta Kimber. The following officers were elected for the Sunday school: Superintendent, Sister John Murdock; assistant superintendent, Edward Christiansen; secretary, Winifred Richards; adult teacher, Frank Tucker.

It looks good to see the young people accepting and performing these duties in church work. We have two high school graduates in our branch this spring, Edward Christiansen and Norma Whiting.

We have been greatly encouraged and made to examine ourselves anew by the recent visit of Elder Ray Whiting and family of Council Bluffs, and his parents, Brother and Sister A. W. Whiting, of Independence. Vacationists may feel sometimes that they are the only ones receiving good from their vacation; but if they could realize the benefits in the way of cheer, courage, and renewed hopes and desires which they leave behind them, their joy would be doubled. A vacation, like mercy, is twice blessed.

Our church building has been rekalsomined this spring, woodwork painted, and broken windows repaired. We are starting the season with better crop prospects than for several years.

New York District Conference

Conference of the New York District held June 13 and 14 was well attended, and started out with a workers' conference Saturday morning. Talks were given by Brother J. E. Vanderwood and Apostle Roy S. Budd. Discussion on best means of obtaining cooperation of the young people in these sessions resulted in a decision to place in their charge the workers' conference which will precede the next district conference.

The outdoor program on Goat Island was a new idea, but met with hearty support, much to the Doctor's delight and also others who were interested. Games were played on schedule, and a sing was enjoyed under the leadership of Sister Catharine Lambert. Stories were told by Brothers Budd, Mesle, and Butler, and Sisters Lloyd and Kennedy, the two latter being members of the teacher training class of Buffalo, who with eight or more others received certificates Sunday during church school for their work thus far.

Supper was served in the church basement, as were all the meals, by the Niagara Falls Department of Recreation and Expression. They did a worth-while task in the interest of the visitors, though they did not realize much financially.

The business in the evening was followed by a varied program. Brother Budd's talk was appreciated by both members and nonmembers. Our Graceland students, just back from college, Sisters Madelyn Weegar and Dorothy Mesle, favored us with a reading and talk, respectively. The musical numbers were also excellent.

At the close of a very good prayer service Sunday morning, Sister Madelyn very feelingly read to us the call for pioneer courage today, "It Shall Not Fail," written by Inez Smith Davis.

Apostle Budd gave us a splendid sermon on "Sacrifice," after which the audience responded, under direction of the bishop's agent, in pledges for Sacrifice Week to the amount of over a thousand dollars.

The afternoon sermon by Brother Mesle was followed by a musical program. Four numbers were rendered by the district choir in which Sister Doris Weegar acted as soloist, a group of three songs by Sister Ada L. Davison, and three violin numbers by Ralph Weegar, Burrell Landes at the organ and Bernice Lambert pianist. The district chorister, Sister Lambert, is to be congratulated on the success of the venture.

Elder J. E. Vanderwood spoke in the evening. Brother Vanderwood has done some real work this year by way of teacher training. Brother Weegar will take up active work at head of the district again this year.

There were present at the conference Saints from Toronto, Niagara Falls, Ontario, Rochester, Syracuse, Johnson City, Wellsville, Sherrill, and Buffalo, and possibly other places. We consider it a splendid conference. We hope the day is not far distant when each group, however small, will be doing real work in the way of study and preparation.

Fifth Generation Baptized by Patriarch

G. T. Griffiths

On June 16 Brother G. T. Griffiths baptized Dorothy Cook, of Cleveland, in the Chagrin River at Kirtland. She is the fifth generation of the Hanna descendants to be baptized by him, he having baptized her great-great-grandmother, Flora Hanna. Her great-grandparents, Samuel and Margaret Hanna, who are both living, hale and hearty, residing in Nelsonville, Ohio, are the second generation to have been baptized by Brother Griffiths; two great aunts, Flo Hanna Nutter and Margaret Wallace, in the third generation; two cousins, Ellen Nutter and Elbert Sheppard, in the fourth generation. Dorothy, eight years of age, is the first of the fifth generation. The children of Brother and Sister William Patterson are also of the fifth generation of that family. Sister Patterson was Miss Ruth Wallace before her marriage.

Nowata, Oklahoma

May 17 was an outstanding day for members of the Nowata (Oklahoma) Branch because of our rally day services. District President Frank McDonald, of Joplin, Missouri, was our speaker.

The day was begun with a prayer meeting at 8.30, which was followed by Sunday school at 9.45.

The eleven o'clock service was opened with a prelude by Sister Lloyd Harding, of Bartlesville. A solo, "Come unto Me," was sung by Sister Harding.

In his morning's discourse Brother McDonald brought us a wonderful message, basing it on the text, "Is it I?" the question asked by the disciples at the institution of the Lord's Supper when Jesus apprised them of the fact that one would betray him. In a forceful manner the speaker impressed the Saints with the necessity of each asking himself the question, "Is it I who is betraying the Christ by the way I conduct my life?"

At the noon hour Saints and friends repaired to the city park, where a basket dinner was enjoyed.

At 2.30 p. m. Brother McDonald led in a very interesting round table discussion, the subject being the necessity of paying tithes, that the missionaries may be continued in the field.

In the evening service we had a half hour's song service, led by the chorister, Brother George Hayworth, followed by opening song and prayer. Sisters Mida and Vida Bly then sang a duet, "It Pays to Serve Jesus," after which Brother McDonald again brought us one of his wonderful messages.

Elder S. W. Simmons, of Shidler, Oklahoma, has also been with us, giving us a week of interesting sermons on the "Signs of the Times." Brother Simmons, by his earnest, straightforward sermons, caused some to see the necessity of accepting the gospel.

Nowata Branch is going forward under the leadership of Branch President Elder Oran A. Duncan and his efficient helpers, Elder A. J. Bly and Priest Lloyd Harding. We are entering upon the sacrifice period with a spirit of consecration and prayer that this, our beloved church, may go forward. It must not fail. It shall not fail.

Decatur, Nebraska

The children of Decatur Branch gave a very impressive Children's Day program at the eleven o'clock hour, after which one of their number was baptized. They entered into the spirit of the occasion in both program and practice.

Ministers from the Omaha Branch come and assist us in our preaching services. Their sermons have been very encouraging to us. Especially do we remember the one at Easter time, given by Brother Carl Self on the resurrection.

Brother and Sister Lewis, our local pastor and wife, are a great inspiration to us by their humble, helpful lives, and by his sermons, which are real spiritual food, so filled are they with wisdom and timely admonition.

The Lord speaks to us from time to time, admonishing us to come up higher. At our last sacrament meeting we were promised that if we were faithful, though our food might be scant, at no time would we hunger or lack for the necessities of life.

We have a large attendance of young people, many of whom have outstanding abilities, and we have great hopes for their future. They meet with the older members each Sunday evening for an hour of song service.

Madison, Wisconsin

Apostle D. T. Williams stopped here one Sunday morning and preached a very instructive sermon at the 11 o'clock hour. He also visited Brother Amos Berve, who at the time was seriously ill at the hospital with plural pneumonia and heart trouble. He and Brother C. B. Woodstock administered to him. Brother Berve has received great help and blessing through administration and prayers of the Saints in various places where he has labored. Medical skill had said there was no hope for his recovery, but surely the Lord attended while his Saints prayed. We wish for Brother Berve that he may be entirely healed and made strong again, that he may continue his church work.

On June 4 he left for the Sanitarium in Independence. He stood the trip well, and last reports were that he was getting along nicely.

A few days later Sister Berve's son, Arthur, took her to Independence by car. Before she left, the Saints gathered at her home for a farewell party, bringing lunch, and presenting her with a gift of money.

Elder Leonard Houghton was transferred to this district to serve in Brother Berve's place. He has visited Milwaukee and Soldier's Grove, holding services, and when here occupies the pulpit on Sunday evenings.

The young people have activities at the Park Friday evening of each week. Last Friday evening they sponsored a hobo-hike out to Sister Leah Miller's home, where they played games, told stories, and ate chili and crackers for lunch.

The women's group have chosen the name of Gleaners. They are busy rag sewing, giving food sales, and making their name quilt.

On Children's Day a special service was held for the children instead of the usual eleven o'clock sermon.

The new songbooks arrived, and we are very much pleased with them.

Independence

Kansas City, Missouri, will be celebrating the recent adoption of its ten-year development plan June 25, 26, and 27. Our Messiah Choir has with other choirs been invited to take part in this jubilee celebration, and will meet with them in Convention Hall one evening this week for rehearsal, and on next Sunday morning at 8.30 will take part in the celebration at the Liberty Memorial Shaft in Kansas City.

Young People's Activities

Tennis Tournament. Frank Good, chairman of the tennis committee, appointed by the general council of young people, announces that plans for a tournament are under way. The tournament will be held upon the Campus in July. It is anticipated that the young people from all the branches in Independence will enter this tournament. All those who wish to do so should submit their names to the young people's leader in their branches, and these in turn will send them in to the tennis committee. All entries must be in by July 5. If information is desired, call either Frank Good, telephone 882J, Dean Redfield, telephone 1258, or Ruth Bryant, telephone 1335W. Rules will be published later.

Employees of the Herald Publishing House, with their families and friends, enjoyed a picnic Saturday afternoon. Meeting near the office at two o'clock, they went in cars to Wildwood Lakes, where they found pleasure in such recreations as swimming, boating, shuffle board, miniature golf, and other games. Two teams chosen from the force contested in a baseball game that resulted in almost equal scoring. The children were delighted with the ponies and took some thrilling rides. There was an intermission for a basket dinner, after which everybody returned to the sports until darkness forced them to leave for home.

The wedding of Miss Irene Engstrom and Mr. Paul Shearer was solemnized at the Liberty Street Church Friday evening, June 5, at 8 p. m. The service was read by President Frederick M. Smith in a garden setting of palms, ferns, and rambler roses. Miss Margaret Chapman and Mr. Orrin Fry played a short program of music previous to the ceremony. Mr. Crawford, accompanied by Miss Chapman, sang "I Love You Truly" and "At Dawning." Miss Iva Shearer, a sister of the groom, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Fred Tellman and Miss Carol Crawford. Mary Morgan acted as flower girl. Joe Morgan was ring bearer. The groom was attended by Mr. W. Sheldon as best man. The ushers were Mr. Paul Gould, Mr. Raymond Fisher, Mr. Spurlock, and Mr. Fred Tellman. A reception followed at the Nurses' Home, 1413 Van Horn Road. On the return from their wedding trip they will be at home in Hutchens Park, Fairmount Station, Kansas City.

The many friends of Sister Editha Louisa Pope, of New Westminster, British Columbia, Canada, were saddened to hear of her death which occurred May 24. Sister Pope was the wife of Elder Samuel Pope. Her two daughters, Mrs. Lewis W. Cross, of Independence, and Mrs. Paul R. Rannie, are well known to Independence Saints. Both daughters were faithful attendants at the bedside of their mother for months during her long illness. Mr. and Mrs. Cross have left Independence to take up their residence with her father at New Westminster. They will be greatly missed by their friends here.

Stone Church

The juniors of the Stone Church gave an operetta, "Let's Go Traveling," Friday, June 19, at eight o'clock in the dining hall. It was a story of a group of boys and girls who were kept home from a picnic by a sudden rainstorm. Seeking for some means of entertainment, they decided to put on a play, with the aid of costumes from the attic of Mrs. Carstairs. The result was a fast-moving operetta, full of interesting choruses, solos, and speaking parts. It was under the direction of Mrs. J. R. Lentell, the junior music director. Mrs.

Hazel Moler, department superintendent, and Mrs. A. B. Phillips, a junior teacher, was in charge of the costuming, which added much interest to the operetta.

The church service Sunday at the campus was well attended. There was a playlet in one act, "History at Midnight," given by Ross Moore's class of boys, also a story, "Building the Kirtland Temple," given by Mrs. J. R. Lentell.

Assistant Pastor George G. Lewis and wife, Edith, are rejoicing over a small daughter, who arrived June 18. She has been named Alice June after her two grandmothers.

The early morning devotional service at the Stone Church, combining the Independence congregations of Saints, was very well attended on Sunday. Three quarters of an hour before 8 o'clock, several people began to approach the church. At 7.45 a. m. the organ began to play worshipful hymns that found a ready response in the hearts of the people. At 8 o'clock there were nearly five hundred Saints gathered together for worship. When time came to close to enable the assembled Saints to go to their own congregations, many expressed their regrets that the meeting could not have been longer.

The eleven o'clock service was also well attended. The choir rendered two anthems, "Seek Ye the Lord" and "The Lord Brings Back His Own," with Lilly Belle Allen and Albert Brackenbury as soloists. The invocation was offered by Elder J. Stanley Kelley. Pastor John F. Sheehy was the speaker at this service. He reminded his congregation that there have been sacrifices in the past which have been glorious, but there are many people living today who are making sacrifices for the good of this church which are also glorious. It is these sacrificing people who would bring the church through to triumph. The Presidency's epistle was read to the congregation, calling upon the members of the church to fast and pray and sacrifice. King Benjamin's advice from the Book of Mormon was given to those who had not—to sincerely admit to themselves that if they had they would willingly give to the cause. There was an excellent spirit of devotion hovering over this service, which service concluded by singing "Let Us Pray for One Another."

At four o'clock, a very pleasing little service of dedication was held on the east lawn of the church. Two "Wayside Ministers" in the form of bulletin boards have been presented to the church by an active group of young people known as the "To-Ko-Lon Class." These will fill a long-felt need for letting passers-by know of the services that are scheduled. Mr. Paul Tandy told of the manner of raising the finances for the project; and Mr. Charles Stover presented the bulletin boards to the church on behalf of his class. Pastor J. F. Sheehy fittingly accepted the gift, after which a few verses of Psalm 43 were read, and the dedicatory prayer was offered by George G. Lewis.

A large audience of some four or five thousand people gave the closest attention to the inspiring sermon delivered by President Floyd M. McDowell at the Campus Sunday evening. His discourse, "The Vital Principle," is published entire in another section of this issue of the Herald. The Auditorium Orchestra rendered some very beautiful selections.

Enoch Hill

Sister Agnes Hartman was in charge of the church school Sunday. The theme for the morning was "Service." After the class period a clarinet solo was played by Mr. Alfred Waters, accompanied by Miss Delta Nace on the piano. A vocal duet was given by Mrs. Hays and Mrs. Rilla Johnson, "Faith of Our Fathers."

A. K. Dillee was the speaker at eleven o'clock. At two o'clock in the afternoon teachers of the church school met with Brother C. E. Beal and discussed various problems, quite a number of helpful suggestions being made.

This meeting was followed by a special lecture on the Book of Mormon by Apostle Frank Curtis.

The junior services of Enoch Hill have been discontinued for the summer months. We think that the rest to the workers as well as the children will be beneficial. Sister Charles Warren, who is supervisor of all children's work, is in charge, and with Sister Nellie Kramer as assistant, will try to plan and arrange the programs this summer for the services that will start again after the summer is over.

We are very happy when Brother Charles Warren is able to meet with us. He visits home every two or three weeks over the week-ends. We are also delighted to have him back in his old place, leading the music, and trust he can continue to be with us often. We hear he is very active in church work wherever he goes, and so we feel our loss is some one else's gain.

Holden Stake

Knobnoster

On May 10 a Mother's Day program, in charge of Sister Florence Ward, took the place of the morning preaching service.

Our annual business meeting was held May 29, with Stake President W. S. Macrae in charge. Department heads as follows: E. E. Petre, Sunday school superintendent; Florence Ward, superintendent of Recreation and Expression; Sister Nellie F. Burgess, primary superintendent; Sister Mellie Petre, supervisor Women's Department; Ralph Ward, secretary; Brother J. T. Nutt, treasurer; Dortha Nutt, pianist.

Sister Fern Burgess, who has been confined to her home for several months, is slowly improving.

Grandpa Peery, who was stricken with paralysis, is in a critical condition.

Brother and Sister E. E. Moorman expect to spend most of their time in Kansas City this summer.

Our young folks have enjoyed two social features recently, one of which was held at Brother E. E. Petre's and one at Brother M. E. Norman's.

The Children's Day program, in charge of Sisters Florence Ward and Dortha Nutt, was rendered June 14 at 11 o'clock. A good program was furnished, the membership well represented.

Brother Macrae preached for us on the evening of June 14.

Our local priesthood has been organized to carry out the program of "Every family visited by June 21."

Marshall

Stake President W. S. Macrae was with us at our June business meeting. The following officers were elected: Thomas L. McCormick, pastor; Ralph M. Ridge, assistant pastor; Dixie Spohrer, secretary; George A. Thayer, treasurer; Walter E. Smith, Sunday school superintendent; Marion Johnson, assistant; Frankie Thayer, superintendent of music; Dixie Spohrer chorister and leader of Recreation and Expression.

The Recreation and Expression Department put on a fine little play Friday night. Two of our boys graduated with the large class of eighty-eight at the Marshall High School. They were Walter McCormick, who will continue his studies in the State Teachers' College at Warrensburg, and Garland Ticke-meyer, who came from Kansas City to join his class in graduation.

Utleyville, Colorado

Just a few lines from Utleyville, for we are rejoicing because of our good fortune in baptizing seven worthy souls. The confirming service was a very spiritual one, and we believe these new members will be much help.

Good interest is being manifested in the work here. Our new district president, Brother Glaude Smith, was with us a few weeks ago. We were glad to make his acquaintance and feel that he is well qualified to do much good.

Brother Vincent, bishop's agent, and Brother H. E. Winegar were here recently and preached good sermons. Brother and Sister Winegar are planning to return later and hold a Bible school. We look forward to a profitable time.

West Haven, Connecticut

The New Haven Mission was visited several days in May by our district president, Elder Patterson. We received much strength and instruction from him. Attendance at meetings is good, a portion of the Holy Spirit being enjoyed.

Sunday, June 7, our group visited the Norwalk Saints and partook of the sacrament with them. God's Spirit was there in abundance. After the service the entire gathering motored to the home of one of the Saints in New Canaan and ate picnic lunch together. The day was one long to be remembered. We are striving to keep the commands of God, and our prayers are for his people.

First Columbus Branch

Elder Wildermuth, wife, and two children, of Mansfield, Ohio, spent the week-end with the Saints of the First Columbus Branch. Brother Wildermuth gave us a talk on the law of tithing.

Mother's Day was very appropriately observed. The pulpit and choir loft were beautifully decorated with flowers. The program at the eleven o'clock hour consisted of a short play entitled "A Mother's Devotion," and several quartets, duets, and recitations. The Orioles acted as hostesses, giving carnations to all mothers in the audience. Our young sisters, Olive Westfall and Thelma Rison, are to be given credit for this program, which was highly complimented by many.

Our young elder, Charles Ferguson, gave a good sermon in the evening on the subject, "Mother Love."

On Entering a Chapel

Love built this shrine; these hallowed walls uprose
To give seclusion from the hurrying throng,
From tumult of the street, complaint and wrong,
From rivalry and strife, from taunt of foes—
If foes thou hast. On silent feet come in, Bow low in penitence. Whoe'er thou art
Thou, too, hast sinned. Uplift in prayer thy heart.
Thy Father's blessing waiteth. Read within
This holy place, in pictured light portrayed,
The characters of worthies who, from years
Long past, still speak the message here displayed
In universal language not to fade.

Leave then thy burden, all thy cares and fears;
Faith, hope, and love are thine, for thou hast prayed.

—John Davidson, in International Journal of Religious Education, May, 1931.

Our Departed Ones

ATKINSON.—Lester Robert Atkinson was born November 28, 1833, at Riverdale, Gratiot County, Michigan. He married Miss Lorena Amidon December 4, 1904. To them were born two sons and one daughter. He was employed as a locomotive engineer for a number of years. Was baptized a member of the church September 7, 1913, to which faith he was true till death. He was a member of the River Rouge Division of Detroit Branch. Passed away May 9, 1931, at the Henry Ford Hospital after an illness of four weeks. He was loved by all who knew him and his departure is keenly felt. Left to mourn are his wife, an aged mother, Mrs. William Pifer, Vestaburg, Michigan; a daughter, Alice Jahn, Napoleon, Ohio; two sons: Otho, of Lincoln Park, Michigan, and Kenneth, of Chicago, Illinois. A sister preceded him in death in 1918. The funeral service was in charge of Elder Kenneth Green, of Detroit, assisted by Elder R. E. Ulman, at the home in Lincoln Park, Michigan. Interment was in the Vestaburg Cemetery, where Elder Hubert Case was in charge. Masonic rites were held at the grave.

GARD.—Mary Edna Dwhigg was born in Omaha, Nebraska, December 8, 1894, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Dwhigg. She married Frank Gard September 7, 1913, at Nebraska City, and they moved to Independence in 1916. One daughter, Velma Ruth, preceded the mother in death February 9, 1929. Three daughters, Bertha, Mary, and Wilma, and her husband feel deeply their bereavement, also three sisters: Mrs. Maggie Lawders, of La Grange, Wyoming; Mrs. Annie Risendorff, and Mrs. Evelyn Thomas, of Omaha, Nebraska. She was reared a member of the Catholic Church, but on hearing the gospel was baptized May 18, 1924, by Elder J. V. Roberts. She passed to rest May 18, 1931, in Independence, Missouri. The funeral was held at the Liberty Street Church, Independence, May 21, the sermon being by Elder J. M. Terry. Interment was in Mound Grove Cemetery.

STANDAN.—Christena Standan was born at Ayershire, Scotland, September 21, 1855. Departed from this life May 27, 1931, at Santa Ana, California. She was baptized by J. Charles May June 6, 1918, at Burlington, Kit Carson County, Colorado. Four sisters are left to mourn her departure. Funeral was in charge of A. M. Starkey, the sermon by S. S. Smith. Interment was in the Santa Ana Cemetery.

GRAYBILL.—William Sydney Graybill was born in Pottawattamie County, Iowa, November 16, 1867. In 1886 he moved to Kansas, and three years later homesteaded in Eastern Colorado. Later he moved to Sherman County, Kansas, where he resided until his demise. In October, 1886, he was united in marriage to Alda Orsler. To them were born two sons, Ruthford and Ralph, both of whom now reside near Kanorado, Kansas. He became a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in 1916, which membership he retained with unflinching faith until his death, and he looked forward with a bright hope to a glorious resurrection in Christ. He was a son of Levi Graybill, who was an elder in the church in the early days. His death occurred May 17, 1931. Funeral services were conducted in the Christian Church in Kanorado May 19 by J. R. Sutton, of Genoa, Colorado.

TEMPLE.—Eva Mae Temple, daughter of Cornelius and Callie Newland, was born March 20, 1891, at Redding, Iowa. On November 30, 1902, she was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by Elder W. H. Garrett, and confirmed the same day by Elders Garrett and C. G. Gould at Independence, Missouri. She was a faithful member until her death, which occurred at Allendale, Missouri, June 9, 1931. Surviving are her son Victor, mother, two sisters, four brothers, and many friends. Funeral service was held June 11, 1931, at the Walnut Park Church, Independence, Missouri, in charge of Elder C. L. Olson; sermon by Evangelist Ammon White. Interment in Mound Grove Cemetery.

POPE.—Editha Louisa Pope was born April 17, 1868, at Aurora, York County, Ontario, Canada. She was baptized January 20, 1885, by Elder John H. Lake. In September, 1894, she was united in marriage to Samuel Pope. Her death took place May 24, 1931, at New Westminster, British Columbia, Canada. Left to mourn are her husband, Elder Samuel Pope, and two daughters, Mrs. L. W. Cross, of Independence, Missouri, and Mrs. P. R. Rannie, of Chicago, Illinois. She was very patient in her illness, which lasted over a period of many months. Because of the life she has lived, she leaves behind a host of friends who will miss her, but her memory will be an incentive to them to live for others as she did. She will be greatly missed in the New Westminster Branch, where she has been a member for many years. The funeral sermon was preached by Evangelist Richard Baldwin. Interment was at New Westminster.

INGRAM.—Silas W. Ingram was born in Frankfort, Kentucky, July 22, 1850, and died after a brief illness at his home in Ruleton, Kansas, June 6, 1931. When about a year old he moved with his parents to Mercer County, Missouri, where he grew to manhood. On July 20, 1873, he was united in marriage to Mary M. Kesterson, at Princeton, Missouri. To them twelve children were born, four of whom preceded him in death. Besides his wife, he leaves to mourn his passing, eight children: W. T. Ingram, Mrs. J. B. Light, Mrs. Florence Cister, B. A. Ingram, all of Ruleton; J. A. Ingram, of Kanorado, H. W. Ingram, of Goodland, L. D. Ingram, of Ponca City, Oklahoma, and Mrs. Sherman Wilcox, of Phillipsburg, Kansas; also thirty-nine grandchildren and sixteen great-grandchildren, many other relatives, and a host of friends. Mr. Ingram moved with his family to Sherman County in 1886, where he homesteaded, and except for short intervals has lived at this place ever since. He was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints November 16, 1921, at Ruleton, by J. D. Curtis, and was active in church work and in the development of his community. Funeral services were conducted in the Christian Church at Goodland by J. D. Curtis, of Colorado Springs.

BENNETT.—Albert Herman Bennett was born at Wolfe Island, Thousand Islands, Ontario, November 4, 1874. He was the son of the late William Bennett and Elizabeth Bennett (now Carrier). His death occurred at his home, 1226 Erie Street East, Windsor, Ontario, May 2, 1931. He is survived by his wife, Agnes Selman Bennett; his son, Keith S. Bennett, at home; and a foster daughter, Mrs. Ernest Berger, of Detroit, Michigan. He became a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints June 13, 1897, and was ordained a priest February 23, 1913. He was one of the group who brought about the founding of the Windsor Church in 1911. An active participant in all activities of the branch and district, his passing is indeed a great loss to the Windsor Branch. Funeral sermon at Windsor by Elders Isaac Andrew and Lawrence D. Campbell. Interment mausoleum Greenlawn Memorial Park, Oldcastle, Ontario.

PETRIE.—Marilyn Gayle Petrie was born at Little Fork, Minnesota, March 9, 1931. Died May 13, 1931. She was the daughter of Brother and Sister Thomas Petrie. The funeral service was held in town at the home of Sister Petrie's sister, the sermon being preached by Brother George W. Day.

Reduced to irreducible proportions the Christian faith is expressed in two great affirmations: that love is the ultimate principle of human relationships; and that the high worth of human personality which justifies the principle of love is in turn justified and supported by the character of reality itself. The Christian believes, in other words, that human character, whatever its lowly beginnings and obvious limitations, is potentially capable of moral integrity and on the whole will achieve its highest development by the inspiration of a faith and trust which has its eyes on the potentialities rather than the imperfect realities. The Christian believes, moreover, that this faith in personality is justified by the character of the universe itself, which, whatever its indifference to personal values in the immediate instant, is animated by a concern for the values it has created in human history.—Reinhold Niebuhr.

QUILTING PATTERNS FOR PILLOWS OR COVERLETS

THE feather circle perforated pattern in a ten-inch diameter is suitable for blocks from ten to fourteen inches square. It is Number 632 at 25 cents. The other quilting block is more quickly made and a bit more modern in feeling. It is an admirably spaced conventional flower and leaves which can be fitted on to a block nine inches square or larger. There is also a matching corner and running design for border or lattice strips to go with it on your quilt. The perforated block is Number 633 at 20 cents. Corner and section of border to repeat number 634 at 25 cents. Black stamping paste is Number 206 at 25 cents per box.

These designs could be grouped to make an exquisite silk slumber robe or puff for the chaise lounge. They may be used on pillows, a quilted negligee and still again on other quilts.

NUMBER 250, the "Dove of Peace," measures 13 inches from beak to tip on the diagonal. It will fit perfectly on blocks from 11½ to 14 inches square.

No. 251, the "Harp," measures 14 inches across. It spaces well on a block measuring up to 17 inches square.

No. 253, Feather circles, are available in 3, 6, 10 and 14-inch diameters. This means that they are great favorites—the smallest size is used as a flower, to repeat on the border or to use as lattice intersections. The feather circles come only one size to the order, so be sure to mention the size you wish.

No. 254, "Pineapple," is a quaint design which puffs between rows of quilting most beautifully. It measures 7 by 9 inches.

No. 255, "Lace Vein Feather," is the loveliest feather I have seen. It comes with both right and left designs and measures about 4 by 10 inches. It is exquisite on plain borders.

No. 256, "Peacock Fan," measures 7 inches high and is most beautiful on a wider border, with its base placed on the binding of the quilt.

STAMPING PASTE

WE SUPPLY black stamping paste under number 206 at 25c post-paid. This box of paste is very effective to use in stamping and there is enough of it to last for many stampings.

Blue Pencil Notes

Occasionally among the newspaper accounts of murders, divorces, and robberies there stands out a news item that is refreshing and wholesome. Recently a young man in Kansas City found a purse containing one hundred and one dollars. He had been without employment for nine months and had a wife and two children and a dependent brother to support. Inside the pocket book was the name and address of the owner. The finder, John Clem, took the money to the owner, a Mr. Samuels, himself a working man, and the owner promptly divided the money and gave the finder fifty dollars. There were two fine and worth while men. The news item very properly found its way into the pages of the Star—however, on the second page, whereas it should have been on the front page with display headlines. Why feature iniquity all the time and give virtue the second page?

Twilight melodies: Near at hand a radio is running full blast—it has the new fashioned, deep, bull-frog tone, but another joins in with the old time tin pan effect. Some one plays a piano. Some one is learning the saxophone. Some one practices a solo—so high. Autos roar down the street and dogs rush out to bark at them. Boys shout. An aeroplane goes overhead. Far across the city comes the shriek of a passenger locomotive's whistle at a grade crossing. A motor cycle "cop" goes by with siren wailing. And a little band of Saints sings: "A calm and gentle quiet reigns tonight."

A friend recently questioned me concerning the integrity of a former member of the Presiding Bishopric. I was happy to be able to defend the man under question. It set me to thinking: so far as I know, from the days of Bishop Israel L. Rogers (and including him) there has never been a dishonest man in the Presiding Bishopric as bishop or as counsellor. I think that I have known them all with the exception of Bishop Rogers and his associates, and believe that without exception they have been men of integrity, not one that I could not trust. I do not mean that I could invariably bank on their judgment (judgments differ) but I could always bank on their honesty. That goes for the present Bishops, Brothers Carmichael, Curry, and DeLapp, and no less so for those recently resigned, Brothers Becker and Siegfried. Moreover these men as a rule all down the line, have been men of kindness and liberality, generous to the limit of their means. Now, considering how the first man to carry the bag in the early Christian church went wrong, and the choice target the Presiding Bishops' office would be for embezzlers, defaulters, and grafters, I think that is a wonderful record for the Reorganized Church to hang up over a period of seventy-one years.

ELBERT A. SMITH.

Starting Next Week

Two excellent series of articles will make their first appearances in the Herald of next week. We take this means of calling them to the attention of our readers in order that the very first numbers may be used to the best advantage.

A "Weekly Health Letter" by our Church Physician, A. W. Teel, M. D., will appear regularly. We have previously suggested that these short articles would make a good basis for study courses for adult classes, particularly of parents or mothers.

A series especially for the priesthood by President Elbert A. Smith will also begin in the same issue. Every member of the priesthood will not only need to read and study these, but will actually want to in order to make the best possible development in his office and calling.

Other good features are in store for Herald readers. Coming soon is "Tom King; a Life History" by C. H. Porter, who is well known as the author of "The Battle Ax of Jehovah" and other works.

And here is a hint for those who would like to help the church publications: these coming issues of the Herald will be good numbers to show to your friends. If there are any who should be subscribers and are not, you may do them and the church a service by urging them to subscribe.

L. L.

New Features for "Vision"

The July number of Vision will carry a long and attractive assortment of hot weather health beverages made from fruit. Wives and mothers, as well as all who take charge of social entertainments, will find these recipes very useful, providing a good variety of delicious and inexpensive thirst-quenchers that are really good for the health.

The August number will feature meatless dishes of an interesting variety for those who seek to guard the health of their families through furnishing a diet of sensible fare for their families.

Then there are the contests for the coming year. The first of these is the "Word of Wisdom Contest" in which prizes are offered for the best menu of foods and recipes conforming to the Word of Wisdom. Other contests will follow, testing every kind of ability, domestic, imaginative, and literary. Keep up with these contests.

Vision is now a magazine for everybody. Its interests center around the home, the church, and the local social group. It will contain program and activity materials for local work. There will also be good fiction and articles of informative value.

We believe that these new features will recommend the magazine to the reading public, and that Vision will occupy an increasingly important place in the homes of the church people.

A Case of Real Sacrifice

We recently heard of a case of sacrifice that was so consistent in its devotion to the church, and so genuine in the spirit of consecration that governed it, that we thought it would be good to let our readers know of it. Accordingly we wrote to Elder R. E. Davey who was acquainted with the family that made the sacrifice requesting a statement. He, in turn, asked the family for a statement to which Brother Simpson wrote the reply printed below. Both letters together give a full explanation, and no further comment is necessary save to give high commendation to this example of Christian sacrifice.

L. L.

Dear Brother Lea:

I received your letter regarding a conversation of mine with Brother Edwards in which I had made mention of the family we have in the district that has sacrificed a meal a day in order to pay more into the church. Before replying I thought it best to get in touch with this family which I did. I am enclosing the letter I received in reply.

I am well enough acquainted with this family to know that he has very modestly stated the efforts they have put forth. You will notice he emphasizes that not only have they been able to pay more into church, but they have been blessed physically, mentally, and spiritually as well. Brother Simpson is very active in his church work and he is president of two branches, Rockford and Belvidere, district treasurer, and counselor to the district president. This is one family that certainly puts their church in first place.

Make whatever use of this you may see fit.

Fraternally,
R. E. DAVEY.

Dear Brother Davey:

At the time the wife and I were talking of sacrifices, we conceived the idea of doing without a meal a day and giving the equivalent to the church, which enables us to double our offerings locally to our branch treasury and to double our Christmas offerings, and to pay more tithing.

While we gradually felt more freedom of life's forces on the physical, mental, and spiritual planes, we felt better physically, and enjoyed much more our church meetings, so we have continued them now for two years; that is, doing without the noon meal.

The wife's health has been better than it has been for some time, so we continue this with very few exceptions, and find it rather easy to do, and we often talk about how we used to eat three meals every day and thought it was necessary, but we find it is not, and we have been benefited by it so much we shall continue to do so.

The time and energy used to prepare and eat this noon meal is also given over to the church work.

You are privileged to use this as you deem best.

May God bless you in your efforts outside the district.

Hoping to see you at conference, I remain,

Yours in Gospel Bonds,

C. C. SIMPSON.

Things Which Tell What You Are

Today the world is playing a great game of hide-and-seek. One hears often of masks. Men endeavor to appear as other than what they are. On every side there is pretense and sham. Some compare life to a great drama in which everyone wears a mask, or several of them. A man is supposed to have and use a business mask, a social mask, a mask of sportsmanship, and sometimes even a ministerial mask. Indeed masks are "the thing" in this season of the world's existence, and they cover much—deceits, deficiencies, sentiments, and many other characteristics which are liabilities or assets to human character. Behind these masks men laugh to themselves—they think they are fooling the world in appearing to be what they are not. They have forgotten that there are things which speak for them or against them more resoundingly than the words they utter.

A man can not always live on pretense. Sooner or later he will be found out. Daily he is writing his real self in the things he does, and these contribute toward the building of his character. Character, in turn, finds many avenues through which to cast its reflections. One of these avenues is the face. The other day I ran across this thought put into verse in Church Chimes:

You don't have to tell how you live each day,
You don't have to say if you work or you play;
A tried, true barometer serves in the place—
However you live, it will show in your face.

The false, the deceit, that you bear in your heart
Will not stay inside where it first got the start;
For sinew and blood are a thin veil of lace—
What you wear in your heart you wear in your face.

If your life is unselfish, if for others you live,
For not what you get, but how much you give;
If you live close to God in his infinite grace—
You don't have to tell it, it shows in your face.

L. B. M.

Be yourself; think your own thoughts; speak your own words; achieve your own destiny; do not make yourself a mere imitator of somebody else. Some one has said: "There are no two people alike; if there are, one of them is of no account."—Selected.

“Go, and Do Thou Likewise”

A parable of Jesus:

A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead. And by chance there came down a certain priest that way: and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side. And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side. But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him, and went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him. And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee. Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbor unto him that fell among the thieves?

I have a neighbor who is a neighbor in the truest sense of the word. It was he who observed one day, during the performance of a neighborly turn: “Do you know, I believe that this past winter of depression and want has taught the world a big lesson—the lesson of brotherly consideration. It seems to me that more people in the past few months have been concerned as to the state of their neighbor’s larder or coal bin than ever before. Generosity has marked their dealings with each other; if they have had blessings to share, they have shared them.”

There was no doubt in Jesus’ mind when he answered the lawyer’s question: “And who is my neighbor?” The parable is his answer, and I doubt not but that the questioner was considerably subdued by this answer. My neighbor’s observation made me think of this parable of Jesus.

If the world-wide business depression has torn away the top crust of selfishness from our souls, if it has made us go beyond ourselves and our puny needs to the needs of our neighbors, if it has checked our roustabout career of getting and gaining, and taught us the lesson of true happiness—giving—then the world has not suffered in vain. With my neighbor I believe that men, at least some of them, have learned this lesson.

Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbor unto him that fell among the thieves? And he said, He that showed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise.

L. B. M.

Money that goes into the making of character, the shaping of destinies, money that gives men hope and spells opportunity and lengthens days and wipes away tears does not “pass away.” Money that contributes to the onward sweep of truth is as imperishable as truth itself. Treasure that is spent for the kingdom of God is beyond the reach of moth and rust.—Jay T. Stocking, Federal Council Bulletin.

Fundamentals

Sometimes we grow impatient with the progress of the work. We wonder why people stay so close to the fundamental principles of the gospel; why they can not take these things for granted and heed the admonition of the apostle of old who said, “Let us go on unto perfection.” People seem to remain so close to the beginnings of Christian experience that they never even get started on the road to perfection, without considering a hope of arriving.

But life in general stays pretty close to the fundamentals. I had breakfast this morning. But this one breakfast has not done much to put me on the road to higher things. Tomorrow, I fear, my wife will have to arise and prepare another breakfast. Likewise with the other meals. Food is a fundamental, a very simple fundamental, and I never am able to get very far away from it. And it is my sincere hope that during this earthly existence I shall not come to circumstances in which I can not get it.

The same fact is true of the fundamentals of the gospel. People need to be made to repent, they need conversion, they need faith. Though they have taken steps to achieve these things many times before, they will need them many times again. Let us notice that this is the positive need of the people.

The lesson for the minister, the preacher, and the missionary is obvious. For a large part of his congregation he must stay close to the fundamental needs of the people. One sermon on faith in a year is good, but it may not be enough. These fundamentals of religion are the groundwork. If they are insufficiently strong, all the superstructure of teaching is likely to fail. The higher soaring of philosophy and oratory will be lost, like a house built upon sand, unless the foundation work is provided, abundant and strong.

There is one thing that kills the spiritual value of fundamental teaching. It is the perfunctory, hopeless and indifferent treatment that these subjects so often get. Faith is vital, but a vital faith can not be presented by a spiritless man. Repentance is necessary, but it can not be brought to the people by one who is self-satisfied. If the fundamental principles of the gospel are to be preached in a way that will make them the great character forming events in the lives of the people, they must be preached by men whose souls are on fire with the truth and the spirit of the message.

L. L.

I would like to suggest this: A rosary of words instead of beads. . . . I propose a “rosary” of seven key words: Self, others, God, health, truth, beauty, goodness.—Dilworth Lupton, the Christian Century.

Suggestions from Our Readers Have You Any Others?

YOUNG PEOPLE INTERESTED IN BIOGRAPHY

We read with interest the biography of Brother Leverton. We are isolated and feel that such testimonies from Saints in our day will increase the faith of our children. They looked for the coming of the next issue with as much interest as we did. For this reason we would be glad to read other biographies in the Herald.

MRS. R. E. GRAVES.

DECATUR, ALABAMA.

ISOLATED MEMBERS WORK FOR THE CHURCH

We are very much pleased with the Herald and enjoy seeing what other branches are doing. We are isolated as far as the church is concerned here, but drive about forty miles each Sunday in order to attend meetings. We have to be there at ten o'clock for Sunday school, so you see the effort it costs; but we are so anxious to see the work progress in this part of the country that we are willing to do anything for its good.

MRS. GEORGE A. JORDAN.

THE PREFERENCES OF OUR READERS

Editors of the Herald:

Some time ago you asked the readers for an opinion about the autobiography of Elder Arthur Leverton, and others. I want to tell you that here are two who enjoyed that series of stories so much that we could hardly wait from one paper to another, and when the Herald came that was the first page we turned to. We could not wait to read it separately, and one of us read it aloud, so neither had to wait.

Second in interest are the personal letters from different Saints. We can not express the joy we had in reading of the experiences of these hardy, godly, early missionaries. I suppose the young missionaries of today are godly and spiritual and full of zeal, too, or they would not be devoting their talents and time to the ministry; but when we read of these early missionaries' experiences and the terrible persecutions they underwent, and the hardships they endured for their church, our hearts are filled with gratitude to them, especially when we read this winter of the missionaries wading miles through snow to their knees to preach the gospel without salary. . . .

We have been reading the Church History this winter, and are now on volume 3. What wonderful blessings of the Holy Spirit were poured out upon the early Latter Day Saints! In one place we read where twenty-two young people (I believe that was the number) were disfellowshipped for taking part in a community dance. Oh, . . . where would our young Saints be today if the church stuck to its rules like that? Maybe that is why the gifts are not more pronounced as a part of the services in the branches today. . . .

Dramatics and poetry take up much more space in all the church papers, but there is not much space given to letters of personal experiences, and biographies of those who have done things, and that is what the isolated Saints enjoy. And I believe the isolated Saints are your best readers, too.

What we enjoy is biographies of elders who have had great trials and greater blessings, whom God has helped through personal manifestations. We like to read of Saints who have been healed through the ministrations of the elders, and of people who have been helped over the hard places and can know that God has helped them; of the miracles that have been performed, and of unusual conversions; of the "signs that follow the believers"; of progress in spite of trials and tribulations, etc. How we enjoyed reading Emma Burton's biography this winter, and the Church Histories. Give us more biographies of people who have accomplished something. We can feel that they are true, and to isolated members who have no church privileges—no opportunities to hear the gospel preached—the good gospel sermons and biographies are more than welcome.

We can find poems in the libraries if we want them, and find news in the papers, in the Literary Digest, and on the radio. We have heard about Big Bill Thompson in all the newspapers, without taking precious space in the Herald for him. In the church papers we want gospel, and lots of it.

Sincerely yours,

MRS. WALTER CALAHAN.

SAWYER, WISCONSIN.

Editors of the Herald:

In answer to your question in the Herald concerning biographies, I will say as pastor of this branch that, as far as I have learned, the account of Elder Arthur Leverton was fine. We wish you would continue to give more such material and believe that it will do the Saints good to read them.

I think the Herald is written quite well according to the preferences of myself and others here. Wishing you continued success in your work and believing you are doing the best you know how,

Respectfully,

GEORGE W. DAY.

A Message for the Second Century

(A sermon delivered during Centennial Conference. Reported by Mrs. A. Morgan.)

By William Patterson

I am going to read some scattered statements from the first section of Doctrine and Covenants, and a statement to be found in the same book, section 83. The full text is omitted for the sake of brevity.

And the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days, and they shall go forth, and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them. Behold, this is mine authority, and the authority of my servants, and my preface unto the book of my commandments, which I have given them to publish unto you, O inhabitants of the earth. Wherefore fear and tremble, O ye people, for what I the Lord have decreed, in them, shall be fulfilled. . . . Wherefore I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, jr., and spake unto him from heaven; and gave him commandments, and also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets; the weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh, but that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world; that faith might also increase in the earth; that mine everlasting covenant might be established; that the fullness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple, unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.

And the Lord confirmed a priesthood also upon Aaron and his seed throughout all their generations, which priesthood also continueth and abideth for ever, with the priesthood which is after the holiest order of God. And this greater priesthood administereth the gospel and holdeth the keys of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God. Therefore, in the ordinances thereof the power of godliness is manifest; and without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh; for without this, no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live.

Some years ago we came to this place, not because of its geographic situation, but because of deep religious experiences received in the distant land of Australia. Born of these experiences was a love for what we believe to be the land of Zion. Reevaluations have been made since that time, but I may assure you that I still have faith and confidence in God and his people, and the hope of Zion becomes more brilliant with the years.

In Psalm 102 David is inspired to speak to the generation in which we live. He intimates that before Christ comes in his glory he will establish Zion (verse 16). The entire statement is qualified by the 18th verse: "This shall be written for the generation to come . . ." Verse 14 states: "Thy servants take pleasure in her stones and favor the dust thereof"; and it is because of this prejudicial favor that we came to the land of America. Not because we believed that America had better soil, but because we believed, deep down in our souls, that God had designated this place for the gathering of his people and the building of Zion; and we tonight stand upon this platform crystallizing that faith, and representing the faith of the Australian people.

My subject, "The Message of the Second Century," is rather an imposing one, but I assume the task in the spirit of faith, for I have faith in this church and its accomplishment through the message which has come to it.

What shall be the message of the second century of this church? In this age of conflict of opinion and conjecture, it is most difficult for a man to envision the future, and say to this people what its message shall be in the second century; however, I believe I may answer that the message of the second century of this church shall be the message of the first century, because the message of the first century was the message of redemption through Jesus Christ. The church of Jesus Christ is brought into existence to carry on the work of the founder, and his whole life's work was predicated on the statement, "I will go and redeem man." The church stands on earth as the redemptive agency for Christ. The Apostle Peter said: "And the Lord added to the church such as should be saved." Redemption is a developmental progressive principle of life which urges men and women on to God. The Jews define their Zionism as "The Jewish State in the becoming." It is a process of life; and to me our Zionism might be defined as the Christian State in the becoming.

Beacons

I am reminded of an experience I had on a very tortuous river in Australia. One of our men had charge of a boat which conveyed logs to a distant mill. One day he permitted me to take the wheel, at the same time giving directions how to keep in the channel of this winding stream. Said he, "Look back and you will see a beacon on the bank at the curve of the river; now look ahead and you will see another one on the bank at the turn ahead of you. To keep in the main stream you must keep the boat on a line with the beacon before and behind you." Doing as he said I was enabled to keep in the channel of the river.

This is a very fitting analogy of the restored gospel. In order for this church to keep in the channel of its Christian experience, and to reach its Zionism destiny, it will have to look back constantly to the beacon of 1830—not that we shall live in the past, but that we shall keep our bearings for the future—and look forward to the Zionite beacon ahead. We must never lose sight of the experiences of 1830, nor of our Zionite destiny.

From the philosophy of some men, one would imagine that this is just another church come into existence, and that we are doing the same work done by other churches. If this be the case, then I think we owe an apology to churchdom. If this church has come into the world to duplicate the work of other institutions, we must needs apologize for this unnecessary duplication; and seek to become assimilated by these institutions. But I believe you will agree with me that this church was brought into existence for a definite purpose, a purpose that was not in view in the institutions that were extant in the days of its organization.

Our Ministry and Message

We have a distinctive ministry. We have a distinctive message, and when that distinctiveness is lost by compromise there will be an assimilation of this body, and we shall no longer be identified as a redemptive movement having in view the preparation of a people for the coming of Jesus Christ.

And what are some of these things that make us distinctive? First, an authoritative message. Today there is a tendency to get away from authoritative religion. We discern it in all church conferences. It is particularly manifest in the denominational disarmament conference meeting in London, England. There is a cleavage between denominations on the question of authoritative religion; and you will notice, those of you who have read the proceedings of the mentioned conference in London, that it is the Episcopalians with their belief in continuity of apostolic teachings and authority, in common with Catholics, who have caused the cleavage and failure of the conference. The unauthoritative Protestant churches are ready and desirous of assimilation; not so the Catholic churches.

Our belief in the restoration of divine authority will ever make us distinctive, and make imperative ecclesiastical isolation. Recently I was apprised of a lecture delivered over one of the radio stations of the East, by a representative of the Roman Catholic Church. In the course of his remarks he referred to authoritative religion, and very kindly placed the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in the authoritative fold. He felt that here was an affinity. Of course those who know the claims of this church realize that there is no authoritative affinity existing with Catholicism. One believes in the continuity of authority, the other in the restoration of authority.

This church stands out, then, with an authoritative message; and the second century must reemphasize the fact that the men of this ministry are "called of God as was Aaron," and that they are called to officiate for God and his people in those ordinances that make for redemption:

Wherefore, in the ordinances thereof the power of godliness is manifest; and without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto man in the flesh.

What shall we do with such a statement? The ministry of this church is charged with the responsibility of manifesting godliness among men. Perhaps there are those of the ministry who are not manifesting that life. If so, it is because we have not sanctified our ministry. It is the life that sanctifies priesthood and not the priesthood that sanctifies life. Priesthood gives a man the privilege to act for God and his people; but the power of the priesthood comes only to that man who by a life of righteousness is in touch with God and understands the needs of the people.

Jesus said, "For their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also may be sanctified through the truth." Jesus knew that to be the Savior of the world he must embody the message in himself. The conferring of the authority from heaven after his immersion by John in Jordan did not make him the Savior of the world. He became the Savior by virtue of the life that he lived, which made possible the death that he died. The ministry of the second century must embody the life and teaching of their Lord and Savior, that their very presence shall indicate their divine calling to a divine mission, and men and women will see them as distinctive men with a distinctive message.

The Divine Power

I recently heard of an experience one of our ministers had with a musician. This young man had reason to go to this musician's home for repair work on an instrument. When he went to get the instrument, after calling there several times, the following conversation took place:

"What do you do for a living?"

"I am a minister."

"I thought so. Do you know the very first time you came into my home you brought an influence with you?"

The influence of this man of the ministry opened up the way for a presentation of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

The greatest factor in the building up of the kingdom of God is the life and influence of its citizens. When we speak of the priesthood of the church, let it refer to that group of the ministry who are the message of the church; who are functioning for the church, and in whom are the ideals of the church caught up. For the man is the measure of his priesthood, the life of the saint is the measure of the ordinances, and the measure of the message of the church is the sum total of the life of its people.

This gentleman to whom I just referred is leading an orchestra in his city. He said to our brother: "We have a very eloquent man in our church. He delivers some fine addresses. He is a good business man; is a good mixer; is developing the church nicely; but he lacks the vital touch of the Spirit. He is merely developing an institutionalism." There is always a fear for an established church to develop an institutional attitude, and lose the spirit of developmental life. This shall not be so with this church.

The message of the second century shall be embellished and made more effective by scholastic and technical training; but that training shall never supplant the divine power of the priesthood, and the spirit of revelation as it shall find expression through the power of the Holy Ghost, for "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy" or of revelation.

I am heartily in favor of the education of our ministry. It is necessary. Jesus saw the necessity for it in that day when he took the Galilean fishermen from their nets and gave them three years of teaching under his superb tuition. Was that sufficient? No, said Jesus. I have taught you the things that God told me to give to you. But wait awhile; you are not prepared yet. "Tarry ye at Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high, and ye shall be witnesses of me in Jerusalem, and Judea, and in the regions round about." We can not witness for Jesus Christ unless we are endued with that power from on high which sent the men of the ministry of the New Testament church on their great work of redemption; and this church will never be a witnessing church for Christ unless endued by that power.

Do you think we should tarry at Independence until we are endued with power from on high? I have enjoyed the class work much. I need more education. I realize my deficiencies, but I realize, men and women, brothers and sisters, that we need more than all else the endowment of the power of God that shall send us forth from this conference as men and women with a divine power, enthused and infused anew. The message of the second century must be fraught with spiritual power.

The message of the second century will be the message of the first century made effective in the lives of the people of the church. An unconverted man can not convert a sinner, and an unconverted people can not convert the world. The message of the second century shall be the message of repentance.

Some time ago a man said to one of our ministers: "How is business?" The reply was made: "You haven't got me correctly, sir. I am not a business man." I think Bruce E. Barton made a very fine observation when he said that the modern minister is not distinctive. When a group of ministers get together, they are just like a group of business men. They wear the same apparel, use the same language, and talk about the same things. When Peter tried to conceal the fact, his very speech betrayed him as a disciple of Jesus. Peter had lived with Jesus only three years, but he could not conceal the fact that he was a disciple. I have heard people say they had been Latter Day Saints for many years, and if they hadn't said so you wouldn't know it. It is very difficult to distinguish some members of the church from those who are not.

The Standards

The second century should bring us a greater appreciation of the rich heritage we have in the three books of the church—they are standard. I don't say that we shall preach exclusively the three books of the church; but the three books of the church which came as a result of this divine message of these days shall be the basis of our message.

In the year 1921 there came to the ministry a message through a man than whom there is no greater in the church. Under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, President Elbert A. Smith said:

When you go forth to preach to the world, you are not to preach your own speculations or idle imaginings, and you are not to preach the philosophies of men. You are to preach the gospel as it is in the books that I have given unto the church, and you are to cry repentance unto this generation. And when you stand to teach the Saints you shall say to them as Moses said of old, that they shall go forward.

In this statement we have the mind of the Lord to the ministry. We must teach those things that have come to us as a church which makes for our distinctiveness. We are to cry repentance unto the world. But to the Saints that "they shall go forward." This does not imply a dual message, but a developmental message suited to the needs of all people. To the world a message of repentance; to the Saints a message of development. Paul had this in mind when he wrote, "Not laying again the foundation of repentance," etc., but, "Let us go on unto perfection." On unto that state of perfection—Zion the beautiful!

I have mentioned the ministry much, because we are called to lead and direct the people, and to bring salvation to them as conveyors of the message of Jesus Christ. We must assume the responsibility for the development and enrichment of the church and its people. In connection with this responsibility, permit me to quote the closing paragraph of the above prophecy:

If you are to be called leading men, you must become leaders of men—leaders and exemplars in all good works and Christian graces, showing forth all the fruits of the Spirit, that the Saints may observe you and be strengthened and comforted.

What a challenge to the ministry of this church! What a ministry this would be if we accepted the challenge! The ministry are to lead the way and bring fortitude and faith to the people.

There is a text which we Latter Day Saint ministers use very frequently. It is one of the most familiar texts of the Bible to us. Permit me to quote it:

Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.

I am afraid we have too frequently seen baptism only in that text, and not that statement which says after their baptism they should be "taught to observe all things." He is not a good teacher who merely imparts knowledge, but who can also inspire the student to make this knowledge a part of his life. This is where Jesus excelled as a teacher. He taught others to observe by the observation of his own life. And that is exactly what the Lord has told us in the closing of the first century; if we will teach others to observe all things, we must first observe all things ourselves. Quite a task for the ministry of the second century! But I feel confident when I think of some of the men of this church that we shall approximate the ideal.

Sometime ago I baptized a lady into the church who was very favorably impressed when she learned that the Latter Day Saints did not look with favor on the use of tea, tobacco, and coffee. One day she asked a minister of the church what he would have to drink, and he said, "Coffee." You may imagine the feelings of this woman, who had just been baptized. Now, I don't wish you to think I am a crank on tea and coffee; but I will say that a man who can not forsake his coffee or tea for the sake of example is a weak minister.

I am merely saying tonight that the message of the second century shall be a message of example above precept; a message of doing above saying; a message which shall cause others to exclaim as they did of our Lord, "He speaketh as one having authority, and not as the scribes and Pharisees"; the message of the Master of Men becoming "flesh and dwelling among us."

Personal Evangelism

By O. Salisbury

This subject of personal evangelism is considered in the light of winning souls to the church, from every standpoint except preaching in a public way.

For some months I have been inquiring of members of the church, all the way from recent converts to men of the priesthood, some of whom are members of the leading quorums. With one possible exception I have found no one who has become a member except through home teaching, the Sunday school, the church papers, the college, the cottage meeting, the radio, or personal teaching and influence of some member or minister.

We Have Overlooked Many Opportunities

So far as our investigation has gone, we are forced to the conclusion that as a whole we have been overlooking some of the greatest channels through which individuals may be reached and won to the church.

The success of individual or small group teaching is due first to the personal touch, which is increased when the listener has opportunity to ask questions and to discuss the question under consideration.

When we become interested in a certain person, family, or group, and show that interest in each person, that individual's attention is centered on our teaching.

The general public is not satisfied. They seek something. They want the pearl of great price; they seek it in the halls of pleasure; they have tried for it, possibly, in some church connection. Yet they have not found what the soul is longing for, although many are holding on to old associations, but have almost or altogether given up hope. It is not the few who are in this dilemma. They can be found in the millions.

The souls of men are crying out for what we have; and when we sympathetically touch them with the Angel Message, they listen; they eat and they drink to their soul's content.

Belief Comes with Acquaintance

It is a natural law of the human mind to disbelieve what it does not understand. It is, therefore, the natural thing for people to disbelieve the Angel Message when they have never had an opportunity to know its value.

To illustrate: As a salesman I call on Mr. B—; and as soon as he finds I am selling an article, Mr. B—, like ninety-five per cent of the prospective purchasers, tells me he is not interested. Why does he? He is following nature's instinct of self-preservation, and the natural law of his mind. Should I stop when he says he is not interested? If I do, I am a failure as a salesman.

My task is to approach my proposition from Mr. B——'s standpoint. Place myself in his shoes, leading him from the thing he is interested in to the objective I am seeking to reach. It behooves me to know my proposition so thoroughly and be able to enthusiastically present it in such a clear and comprehensive way that Mr. B——'s interest is not only aroused, but he is convinced that what I have to offer is worth while.

Developing Desire for What We Offer

When I have him convinced, he is still a long way from the point of acting, or purchasing. Yes, Mr. B—— finally says, "It looks all right," but he would not care to purchase. What is my trouble? I have not yet developed a desire in his mind to own, or to obey if I am teaching the gospel. I must make the next step by showing him the value that my article would be to him. Logic and reason must here be applied.

Finally Mr. B—— sees it would be a benefit; but he says, "I would like to have your article, but it is out of the question." As a sale is made in the mind and not in the pocketbook, it is necessary to lead Mr. B—— by the law of persuasion and develop a determination to own. This point is finally reached, but Mr. B—— follows a common law of human action and answers me as Felix said to Paul, "Wait for a more convenient season."

Here is the losing point for many a salesman.

Hundreds of times we have heard the old trite statement, "We had him interested but could not close." Did you ever hear a minister say, "I can interest the people, but I can not baptize." If you have, did it ever occur to you that in many cases it is the minister's fault? The facts are, he is weak on his closing argument. He has led his people to see, to feel, but fails to get them to act.

Deferred Decisions

We have been successful in getting Mr. B——'s attention, arousing his interest, convincing him of the value, creating a desire to own, and finally resolving to buy. But he says, "You see me next time."

I have heard that terrible phrase as a salesman so many times that it has been indelibly impressed on my mind. But should I quit there? Certainly not. I just have my second wind. If I am a real salesman I am offering Mr. B—— that which will be to his interest to purchase. If he as the buyer and I as the seller are to be mutually benefited, should I not gather for his benefit as well as for ours, all the mental force and persuasive power at my command?

If we were teaching, or selling, the gospel, should not we rally our best illustrations, use our finest arguments, to show how the gospel has benefited us? This should be done through personal testimony; and we should point out others who have been made happy when they have obeyed the gospel.

Special scripture texts may be sought to show the value of membership in the kingdom of heaven as represented by membership in the kingdom of God on earth. In business nothing equals the personal touch, the private or small group conference.

It is, therefore, apparent that our greatest success will be found by personal evangelism in the cottage preaching, in the home visit, the Sunday school, on the street, or wherever we come in personal contact with people; and if we set out with a determination to win and convert, say a Catholic, we must love, not hate a Catholic; not because of his particular church affiliation, but because he is our brother.

The Way That Seemeth Right

By Evan A. Fry

As a scripture reading this morning, I desire to give you some scattered verses from the book of Proverbs. Although they have been selected from several different chapters, I trust that you will not find the thought so disconnected that we can not find some basis in them for a little five-minute sermon this morning.

Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall. A wise man feareth, and departeth from evil, but the fool rageth and is confident. Every way of a man is right in his own eyes, but the Lord pondereth the hearts. All the ways of a man are clean in his own eyes, but the Lord weigheth the spirits. There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the ends thereof are the ways of death.

The writer of Proverbs probably never heard of the modern science of psychology, but he certainly had a wealth of knowledge about human nature, and after all, that is about what psychology amounts to. There is a way which seemeth right unto a man; every way of a man is right in his own eyes—how often have we seen that principle proved for us in our own lives and in the lives of our fellow man! Don't be too sure you have never been guilty yourself, for the art of excusing oneself in sin is as old as Adam and Eve. You will remember that according to the story, Eve had the alibi that the serpent had told her it would do no harm to eat of the forbidden fruit; and Adam had the alibi that Eve had offered it to him. The forbidden way seemed right to them, or at least they had kidded themselves (if I may use so common a term) into believing that the way they knew to be wrong was right. They were proud that they were so intellectual that they might partake of this fruit with impunity, even though God had forbidden them to touch it. Pride goeth before destruction, said the wise man of old, but in spite of the object lessons before our eyes every day, men still dabble in sin, then cast about for an alibi, and excuse themselves for their wrongdoing. Instead of being heartily ashamed of their sin, they swell with haughtiness and pride, and refuse to be corrected or to admit their sin until destruction brings them low, or punishment makes them remorseful and repentant.

You and I have excused ourselves in wrongdoing many times, and probably shall continue to do so many times more. When we lose our temper and fly all to pieces in our rage, with disastrous results to family and friends, we look about for some real or imaginary cause for our provocation, and excuse ourselves with the thought that even a saint could not have stood any more. All embezzlers take their ill-gotten money with the idea that they will some day put it back, and if their consciences remind them that it is wrong even to borrow the money, their proud and haughty spirit squelches conscience and proceeds in the path that seemeth right. The murderer who plots the death of a fellow man invariably excuses himself on the grounds of some real or fancied insult which he thinks gives him sufficient cause for taking the offender's life. The man or woman who spreads false stories about his neighbor excuses himself by saying that the story must be true because so and so told it to me, but never takes the trouble to check up on the original story with the man who is the subject for the story.

In short, it is a natural and a psychologically normal thing for a man to hunt for an alibi or excuse for every action he may perform, even though he may know that action is wrong. Every man is by nature—by inborn disposition—more than a little proud and stubborn. To admit that he is wrong even in a slight particular means humbling himself and making himself an object of ridicule, or at least of amused contempt, to most of his fellow men. Therefore, most men in their pride will defend an action even when they know it is wrong, and to prove that it doesn't bother their conscience any, they will make haste to repeat that action. The pleas of friends, the teachings of religion, and the promptings of conscience, all fall on deaf ears. They go on in the way which they have made to seem right unto themselves, but the end of the way leads to death.

One of the surest ways of overcoming evil is to face the evil in your life, if there be any, squarely and frankly, admitting that it is evil, and that it ought to be eradicated. If you can admit to yourself that it is evil, it may help you to admit to others of your acquaintance that you have decided to weed out this evil from your life. You may even confess your fault before the whole congregation of your church, and if the church be as loving and forgiving as the God they serve, they will help you with their faith and strength and prayers that the evil might be overcome. Yet how many of us lack the humbleness of spirit today that would enable us to do anything so humiliating? Instead of that, we continue in our foolish belief that our way of sin is right, merely because it is our way, and because to admit it was wrong would be to admit ourselves in error.

God help us to face our faults, large or small, in humility and contriteness of spirit as well as in frankness and impartial self-examination, that evil may always be promptly removed from our lives, and that we may be presented at the last day a perfect man, of the fullness of the measure of the stature of Christ.

“Vision” for Everybody

The Magazine to Reach More Readers

Under a new editorial policy, Vision is to expand to reach new circles of readers as well as the former clientele of young people. Vision is to be a magazine for everybody, from the 'teen age on up.

In its interests it will center particularly around the home, social activities for the people, and church work; in other words, it is to be a magazine for the church and home.

One of the first of the new features of the magazine will be some articles on the Word of Wisdom. There will be a “Word of Wisdom Contest” in which prizes will be offered for the best week's menu of diet based on the principles of the Word of Wisdom in Doctrine and Covenants 86. See the advertisement in the back of this issue stating the rules of the contest and the prizes.

There has been a need for a general magazine for everybody—for all readers of adult interests—between the ages of sixteen and sixty, centering around those two important institutions, the church and the home. But young people will continue to have an important share in it, and it will continue to present material that is of interest to them.

There will be stories—clean and lively tales of a wide variety. There will be articles on food, diet and

THEME TOPICS FOR SERMONS

Theme for the Month: "Loyalty"

First Sunday: "Loyalty."

This being Sacrament Sunday, we suggest that the juniors meet with the adults. If desired, "Loyalty" could be the theme of your service.

Second Sunday, "Loyalty to Duty."

Text: "Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong."—1 Corinthians 16: 13.

Our day demands faith, courage, strength. We are always forced to choose, and everything depends upon our choice and the manner in which we carry out our purposes.

One's duty is his obligation to render a service, or some form of conduct which his conscience tells him is right. It may also be one's duty to refrain from doing what one knows or feels to be wrong. Loyalty requires a prompt and hearty response in doing what is suggested by our sense of right, even when the task is not easy or pleasant.

Being loyal to one's duty means that you will see your task through to the finish, though it may require some sacrifice on your part. You may have to forego a picnic or a ball game. You may have to work out in the hot sun or stand the bitter cold, but such resolution and courage build character.

We recall the loyalty of Joseph to his sense of right in Potiphar's house. We remember the boy who saved Holland by stopping the leak in the dyke. And only last winter we had the splendid example of Bryan Untiedt, who courageously helped save his schoolmates from death in the blizzard in Colorado.

Third Sunday: "Loyalty to Friends."

Text: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."—John 15: 13.

The story of David and Jonathan beautifully illustrates this loyalty. (See 1 Samuel 18: 1-9; 19: 1-7; 20: 1-42.)

Even though we would be loyal to our friends, we may not always be able to shield them from the consequences of wrongdoing. It is our first duty to be loyal to the right. Would a real friend shield us in doing wrong, or would he try to discourage our act? Let the Juniors discuss the situation. "A real friend is one who loves the truth and you, but tells the truth in spite of you."

Our list of friends should include all of God's children. Tell the story of men who have counted mankind everywhere as their friends and have actually laid down their lives for them. Sir Donald Ross, of the Indian Medical Service, risked his life to discover the cause of malarial fever. Two soldiers actually gave their lives that the doctors might experiment upon them and thus learn how to save the lives of hundreds of others.

Discover ways in which Juniors may be truly loyal to their friends.

Fourth Sunday: "Loyalty to Home and High Ideals."

Text: "Honor thy father and thy mother."—Deuteronomy 5:16. "He was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him."—Daniel 6:4.

Expand the texts. Give reasons for statements.

There is beautiful suggestion in the song, "I Would Be True." Perhaps the verses may be read in unison and later sung. One plays fairly, is honest and true, is careful of his language and habits because he loves his parents and his home and the ideals for which the home stands. To do otherwise would grieve loved ones, offend God, and bring disgrace to his home.

There is inspiration in Van Dyke's poem:

"I turned an ancient poet's book,
And found upon a page:
'Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage.'
Yes, that is true, and something more;
You'll find where'er you roam,
That marble floors and gilded walls
Can never make a home.
But every home where love abides
And friendship is a guest,
Is surely home, and home, sweet home,
For there the heart can rest."

Christmas Offering Plans

By C. B. W.

A unique plan to stimulate interest in raising Christmas offering funds is reported as highly successful at Port Huron, Michigan. A "White Elephant" chart 24x39 inches is ruled off in 104 equal squares. With it is furnished 104 gummed squares, which when patched on to the sheet, change the elephant to a colored one. Each patch is numbered, and may be given out to an individual. Whenever a donor contributes his or her share of the required amount, a patch is placed on the elephant in the square marked for the patch. Patches may be issued for any uniform amount, depending on amount of money to be raised. Instruction and record book accompany chart.

This chart may be obtained from David C. Cook Publishing Company, Elgin, Illinois, for $1 postpaid.

At Port Huron the patches have been taken by individuals, classes, departments, and by the school as a whole, and on June 1 there were but eighteen patches left. Local interest was added by permitting the names of donors to be written upon the patches. Over $250 had been placed in the Christmas offering.

Organized Girls' Work

(The following question and reply which passed through our correspondence recently presents a church-wide problem. The suggestions may be helpful to others.—C. B. W.)

A district director of religious education writes:

"We wish to encourage organized work among our girls, similar to the Girl Scout plan, but we are anxious for our effort to be as closely centered in the church as possible. What provision is the general church making?"

Reply: Those who are responsible for the work of the young people's division are recommending as follows:

Where it is possible to carry out our own program of Blue Birds and Orioles, entirely under the direction of the church, this should be given first consideration. The Blue Bird Manual (25 cents) and Our Girls ($1.50) provide an abundance of activities and directions for organization of Junior age and older girls. The books may be had from the Herald Publishing House. Further help will be given local leaders on request.

In case Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, or Girl Reserves are already well established in a community, under good leadership, and those in charge consider it more desirable for our girls to participate with other girls of the community in these established organizations, it is recommended that affiliation be sought which shall make the outside program of activities available to groups of our girls. In most cases local church groups may be formed of Latter Day Saint girls and their friends, with leaders of our own choosing, working as units of these organizations.

Such affiliation should be effected and the work carried on under the direction of a supervising committee of whom the pastor, the director of the church school, and the young people's division leader at least should be members.

The programs of any of the above three organizations are commendable and have been elaborately prepared over many years and at great expense, by the best trained leaders of the country. They are maintained as nation-wide organizations with experienced executives, with well-developed literature and an extensive training program.

However, very much depends upon the local group leadership, and the ideals maintained by the organization in the community. Wherever adopted by our church, our people should insist upon the securing of group leaders whose local standing and ideals are worthy of the confidence and following of our church girls.

In localities where it seems impracticable for a local group to be organized under the direction and control of the local church, the above committee should carefully canvass the situation and advise girls and their parents as to the wisdom or danger in our girls joining with groups of girls in activities wholly outside of our church influence.

The above recommendations are given after serious consideration by those responsible for the girls' program in the church. Local church officials are responsible for the manner in which this advice is received and carried out. Our girls deserve the richest and most helpful program of activities which this community may afford. They also deserve wise counsel, wholesome associations, and the consecrated leadership of one whose example and precept is worthy.

A New Study Course

"THE TEACHING OF RELIGION"

The Department of Religious Education is happy to announce the preparation of a new study course well adapted to the need of teachers and leaders in the church school.

In the main, human nature responds to the teaching of religion just as it responds to any other type of teaching. The human product of religious teaching in Christian character and worthy conduct is the result of wise guidance and nurture in Christian ways of living.

For a number of years How to Teach Religion, by Doctor G. H. Betts, has been a standard text in the pedagogy of religious education, used by all denominations. We are fortunate in being able to use this book as the basis for a new subject in our training program.

To accompany the text as an aid to the student in appreciating the laws of the teaching and learning processes, especially as applied in our own church school program, a pamphlet, The Teaching of Religion, has been prepared in the office of the general department. This has been written in twelve lessons to accompany the twelve chapters in the text by Betts, introducing our own materials, stressing our own objectives, and making a definite appeal to our own church school leaders.

How to Teach Religion and The Teaching of Religion will be used as companion texts in Section II of the correspondence courses, taking the place of Gregory's Seven Laws of Teaching. The course will carry twenty-four points of certification credit.

The Teaching of Religion is a neatly arranged pamphlet of some sixty pages, containing in itself a most vital analysis of the principles underlying the teaching work of our church school program. It should be in the hands of every teacher in the church.

Order from the Herald Publishing House: How to Teach Religion, by G. H. Betts, $1.25; The Teaching of Religion, by C. B. Woodstock, 25 cents.

For enrollment in correspondence courses address, The Department of Religious Education, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Worship

Worship is like a breathing spell in a long and arduous foot race, or the hour of roll call in a prolonged and hard-fought battle. . . . It is altogether indispensable to sane and wholesome living—it is important enough in life to warrant the erection of classical temples and Gothic cathedrals. It is indeed so important that one finds oneself sometimes wondering how many of us can afford to do anything but educate ourselves in this art.—G. A. Tawney, in International Journal of Religious Education, May, 1931.

LETTERS TO THE EDITORS

"I like a man who can say something good in a few words. But let him stick to his subject, and harm no other man."—The Sage of Green Island.

Brother Lea:

Surely I for one was well pleased with the biography of Brother Leverton. I think it will do Herald readers a lot of good. I hope and pray that Editors of the Herald will have more and more good things to publish, and I surely believe they will.

C. J. SPURLOCK.

HOLDEN, MISSOURI.

SEES INSTRUCTIVE VALUE IN BIOGRAPHY

Editors of the Herald:

I am one who greatly enjoyed the biography of Brother Leverton. It is my opinion that as far as possible the Herald should present a continual series of biographies and autobiographies of the men of our faith. To my mind it adds concreteness to the abstract message. It illustrates how our message works out in the lives of our sincere men and women. And I believe I am one of many who get out of the true story that something that is lacking in fiction, enjoyable and profitable as the latter is.

Fraternally yours,

LEONARD S. RHODES.

DOWNEY, CALIFORNIA.

Joplin (Missouri) Branch

The Joplin Branch inaugurated Sacrifice Week with very appropriate services. Our people came together in fasting and prayer. The day was bright and beautiful.

At 8 a. m. a goodly number of young people met in a special prayer service. The Lord touched their hearts with his Spirit, and many and beautiful were the words spoken by them as they pledged their lives to Jesus.

The church school was well attended, and the attendance at the morning preaching service was the largest in many months. The Lord blessed the pastor abundantly as he discussed the needs of the church.

Immediately following this service, about twelve carloads of Saints drove to Fillmore's bridge to witness a baptismal ceremony. Eight new members were added to the kingdom of God: one entire family, consisting of the father, mother, and daughter, a very fine young lady who has been attending our services for some months, and four children. We are glad to welcome these new members. A basket dinner was held in Cunningham Park, after which we went to the church for a confirmation and prayer service. Although the day was hot, many were in attendance, and a beautiful spirit prevailed. A large crowd greeted the pastor at the evening service. While we have not reported to the Herald very much during the past year, the work in Joplin is moving ever onward and upward, and we look for some very beneficial and substantial results to follow this day of fasting and prayer.

Omaha, Nebraska

In these times of depression and discouragement we really can find much to stimulate us to push on, if we but direct our minds along the proper channels and strive to cultivate the spirit of cheerfulness. We are reminded of the words of the song: "Count your many blessings, name them one by one."

On Wednesday evening, May 6, a "fellowship dinner" was held at the Central Branch for the members of Greater Omaha. Apostle and Sister E. J. Gleazer were our guests. Immediately following the dinner a special business meeting was held in regard to securing pledges for the completion of another unit of our church home. With Brother Gleazer's encouragement and the application of his apportionment of the required amount to be raised, our task ought not be a difficult one. However, we do hope to have an adequate structure ere the year 1932 draws to a close. The reason for the delay is that, in harmony with the general church policy, we do not wish to incur any debts.

Elder W. T. Wellman was the speaker on the evening of May 31 and gave us a very splendid Memorial Day sermon. He brought to our remembrance those who died for their country's sake, those who died for Christianity's sake, and of our own heroes, Joseph and Hyrum Smith. "Today, as never before, our church needs good soldiers."

On Monday, June 1, our pastor and his wife, Brother and Sister Melvin Russell, became the proud parents of a baby daughter, whom they have named Rita.

We enjoyed a musical treat on Friday, June 5, when Nelle Atkinson Kelley, Anne Self, and William Hill, jr., presented a concert for the benefit of the choir fund.

The sacrament service for June was very well attended, and we were permitted to enjoy a degree of the Spirit. In the evening the choir, under the direction of Harry Greenway, gave its closing recital, and will have a vacation until September. Pastor Russell has been giving us a series of Sunday evening sermons under the general theme, "Essentials of Worship." He has pointed out that worship is essentially of the heart and can not consist of mere outward forms and ceremonies. His sermon of this Sunday evening was, "Music in the Worship Service."

The theme for our family worship period for the month of June has been, "The Assurances of God," and the subject for Children's Day was, "Of Such is the Kingdom of Heaven." The church was very beautifully decorated with garden flowers, and the pulpit hour was given over to the children for their songs and recitations. Brother E. W. Hull, our district missionary, directed his remarks to the children, but we could all very well profit by them. The National Flag Day was also recognized at this service, when the congregation was led in the flag salute by Billy Wren. Five baptisms were taken care of at the South Side Church in the afternoon, and the confirmation service was held at Central Church in the evening.

June 20 was the date for the annual branch picnic. A good ball game was in process of being played, when lo! there came darkening skies, dust storm, wind, and a deluge of rain. We were fortunate in securing shelter in the park pavilion, and as far as plenty of lunch and ice cream were concerned, the affair could be deemed a success.

The advent of summer on June 21 brought also the church-wide week of sacrifice. In this local we hope to do our part in helping to alleviate the burden of the church, and feel to say with the poet:

"Be strong!

We are not here to play, to dream, to drift;
We have hard work to do, and loads to lift;
Shun not the struggle, face it; 'tis God's gift."

Skiatook, Oklahoma

The Skiatook Saints are keeping the work going, with preaching service each Sunday evening at 8 p. m. Pastor T. P. Greenwood has secured as speaker for the fourth Sunday Brother Harry Robison, of Tulsa, and one of the priesthood from Sperry for the second Sunday. Brother Ellis Rathbun was with us last month. Brother T. G. Williams, the teacher of the branch, and Brother Greenwood fill the other appointments.

Elder S. W. Simmons and wife, from Shidler, Oklahoma, have been with us recently. He preached four sermons, visited in some of the homes, and encouraged and comforted the Saints, all of which was greatly appreciated by them. Brother Simmons is a wonderful man, one who strengthens the faith of the Saints in the gospel, and who admonishes them to stand by our prophet and leaders of the church.

We are preparing to work under the church school plan, and at our last business meeting voted to take up the duplex envelope system, electing the following committee to put it into effect: Brother Ralph Vickery, Brother Loyd Carter, and Sister Mozell Elliott. Brother Loyd Carter, our Sunday school supervisor, is endeavoring to make it a success in his work with the teachers and pupils. We have special day programs and others in the school. There are nonmember children taking part, which brings their parents out to the services. A picnic is being planned for the Fourth of July.

The membership of the Skiatook Branch consists chiefly of farmers and day laborers. The women members of the branch are planning on canning vegetables at the church basement for each other. They have four or five pressure cookers to help those who have none. They will exchange vegetables to help supply for the expected hard winter.

We are working to pay off our church debt, which is now about three hundred dollars. We hope to make another payment soon.

Sister Leona Wheeler has been a good worker in the branch, and we are sorry to lose her. She works in Tulsa now.

Southern Wisconsin Conference

The Southern Wisconsin conference convened at Beloit June 20 and 21. Business meeting was held at seven o'clock Saturday evening in charge of Apostle D. T. Williams. Only a small amount of business was transacted at this time. A summarized report of Bishop C. J. Hunt was read, stating the quota assigned this district for the year was $2,300, of which $665.23 has been raised during the first five months. Time and place of the next district conference was left to the district presidency.

After the business session Brother C. J. Hunt talked to the Saints along financial lines of the church.

Prayer service, in charge of Apostle Williams, Henry Woodstock, and C. J. Hunt, was held Sunday morning at 8.45. Church school at 10.45 under the supervision of Harry Wasson and Leda Colbert. At 11 a. m. and 2.30 p. m. Apostle D. T. Williams was the speaker, after which he left for Madison to preach there on Sunday night. At 1.30 Brother Leonard Houghton led five into the waters of baptism, all of whom were Beloit people. The Beloit and Janesville Saints served a bounteous basket lunch at the noon hour. Branches represented at the conference were, Madison, Janesville, Evansville, and Milwaukee.

An all-day meeting was announced for the 28th of June, to be held at the home of Sister Charles Hoague.

Successful Meetings at Jefferson City, Missouri

Many will undoubtedly be interested to hear of the recent missionary meetings conducted by Elder J. Charles May at Jefferson City. This series began May 23 and closed with the Children's Day program on June 14. There was a baptismal service the evening of June 13 by Elder May, and one on Sunday afternoon by Elder Wintermeyer, six in all uniting with the church.

We have a fine little band of faithful Saints in Jefferson City, whose hospitality and loyalty to the church is to be commended. Several families of Saints have moved here recently, and fourteen people have been baptized since last General Conference. Others are interested in the gospel to the extent that we feel the outlook for future missionary effort at this place is good.

Not many years ago three lone families of Saints met together in their homes in various parts of the city for Sunday school. The record attendance that was attained June 14, both at Sunday school and the evening meeting at the tabernacle, was a great encouragement to these faithful ones, who rejoice in the growth that has been made.

Pastor A. H. Wintermeyer and Brother Roscoe Moorman, his assistant, are faithful Saints. Brother and Sister John Dawson are the oldest members in the branch and, though between seventy-five and eighty years of age, attend all services. Being always there and on time, they are a real inspiration to the young people.

For some time our people here have been using the Jewish Tabernacle on South Monroe Street, which is one half block south of the courthouse, between High Street and Highway Number 50. Any of the missionaries passing through at any time will be made welcome.

Our capital city, on the banks of the Missouri River, in the very heart of the State, is a thriving one of about twenty-six thousand population. By many it is called the "City of Hills." It is also a city of fine schools, churches, and hotels, and has a street railway service. It has not suffered so much from the financial depression as many other places, owing to the fact that so many residents are Government employees.

The majestic capitol building stands on the river bluff, a mile or two from the east and west bends of the river. From the capitol tower a most wonderful view of the city may be seen. The surrounding country, with its fertile valleys and wooded hills on both sides of the winding river, presents a lovely picture.

Two-Day Meeting at Oslo, Norway

By V. D. Ruch

Our annual two-day Whitsuntide meeting was for the first time held this year in Oslo. We opened up the work in that city several months ago, have baptized a few, and have developed an interest among the people. It was fitting that our annual meeting be held there this year to help build upon the interest that had been aroused.

Saints from several different places were in attendance, among them being a sister who came all the way from Denmark to meet the Norwegian Saints and enjoy those two days with them. A very spiritual and uplifting time was had. This was our eighth annual meeting, and each year God has endowed us with an unusual degree of his Spirit, which has been very encouraging and strengthening to the Saints.

This year we had with us Brother P. T. Andersen, our missionary to Denmark, who has spent the winter laboring in Norway. His many contributions to the success of our meetings were very much appreciated and enjoyed.

Seven sessions were held during the two days. Sunday morning at 10.30 our sacrament service was held, at which a very beautiful Spirit was present. Many fine testimonies were heard. An elderly brother, who has been a member of the church for several years, was ordained to the office of elder. He is a kind, fatherly man, who is especially needed just now to advise and minister to the little, growing flock of Saints in Oslo. He is also a good speaker and will be a big help along that line.

At four o'clock in the afternoon it fell to my lot to preach the opening sermon of the two days. I felt blessed in presenting the subject, "When God Touches the Heart." In the evening, Brother P. T. Andersen brought us a powerful sermon, presenting the message of Pentecost.

Monday morning at 9 o'clock the priesthood met in a special service, to which all of the brothers who desired to attend were invited. Brother Andersen was the main speaker on this occasion, the writer occupying some time at the close. The Spirit was present in power, and we believe that the priesthood received much benefit from the instruction given, and will function better than ever before. This service alone should repay us for the effort and expense of holding this two-day meeting.

At 10.30, Brother Blom, who had been ordained the day before, preached a good sermon for us, which demonstrated the wisdom and divinity of his call to the priesthood.

The afternoon service was devoted to the interests of the Women's Department. Sister Ruch was the speaker, using as her subject, "Women's Heritage and Responsibility." She was blessed in the presentation of her subject, and many favorable comments were heard.

In the evening, Brother N. O. Nilsen of Kragerø, was the speaker and did exceptionally well.

Sister Ruch contributed much to the attractiveness of the meetings with her music and singing. Other Saints also assisted with some vocal numbers.

The two days passed altogether too rapidly, and when Monday evening came the Saints and friends were loath to part. Many expressed themselves as wishing they had several more such days to spend together under the influence of the Spirit. A fine attendance was had at all of the services, especially those in the evening. All were pleased that the meetings had been a success in every way. The members were confirmed in the faith, and friends were won to the cause. We have recently received two or three names for baptism, which will be attended to soon. We hope to be able to report some new members at Oslo in the near future.

We, the representatives of the church in Scandinavia, ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints in all the world, that we may continue to enjoy the blessing and direction of God in our work, that we may be able to win many souls for his cause.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Sunday was the last day of Sacrifice Week, and the Saints of Central Church observed it by contributing their gifts of money and service to the church.

The morning sermon was by Elder Leonard Lea, of Independence, and the choir, under the leadership of Evan A. Fry, sang "Turn Thy Face from My Sins," by Atwood. Pastor C. E. Wight offered the prayers.

Elder Amos Allen was the speaker at the evening service on the church lawn, and the musical part of the program was in charge of Eugene Christy.

Next Sunday evening the pastor will open a series of special open-air services for July and August.

Sister Florence Short presented her piano pupils in a program at Fourth Church Sunday evening from 7 to 7.45. A number of the children of this branch participated.

Quindaro Church

Sunday, June 14, was a busy Children's Day. Six children and one adult made a covenant with the Lord to serve him in the ordinance of baptism. At 9.30 in the morning a program was presented by the junior department in charge of Sister Higgins, superintendent. The eleven o'clock address of Brother Higgins was followed by the confirmation of those baptized. Then the members, one hundred and twelve in number, gathered on the lawn where a picture was taken by Brother Higgins.

In the evening Bishop C. A. Skinner used for the basis of his sermon Doctrine and Covenants 83. The Saints are always happy to have Brother Skinner talk and instruct, for his message encourages.

Officers appointed for the coming year, beginning July 1, are: Pastor, Elder H. A. Higgins; associate, Elder E. N. Palmer; director of Religious Education, Sister H. A. Higgins; senior supervisor, Sister Charles Scrivener; young people's supervisor, Sister Dora Halverson; children's supervisor, Sister Higgins; music director, Otis Swart. A busy year is anticipated under the direction of these leaders. One of the present undertakings of the sisters is canning fruit for the Harvest Home Festival.

Sisters Delpha Morrison and Thelma Fababy are convalescing in the Evangelical Lutheran Hospital from serious operations. Brother Leonard Hawkins is still in a critical condition.

The prize winning play, "The Valiant," chosen in the stake dramatic contest, was presented at Quindaro June 19. Much credit goes to the young people of Mount Washington who participated in its production.

Elder D. R. Hughes, of Atherton, Missouri, was the morning speaker June 21. His discussion dealt with the workings of the stewardship plan according to Doctrine and Covenants 128.

Armourdale Church

Elder Thomas Newton was the evening speaker the first Sunday of the month, and Elder George Mesley was here

June 14. The latter date was Children's Day and one of the Sunday school children was baptized.

The following week Stake President C. E. Wight spoke morning and evening.

Argentine Church

Four were received into the church through the waters of baptism on Children's Day. Elder John Davis, of Independence, Missouri, occupied the sacred desk morning and evening June 21.

The week which ended Sunday night closed the special sacrifice period in Argentine as well as in the fourteen other churches in the stake. The morning speaker was Pastor Roy E. Browne who gave a resumé of the effort and read excerpts from the church papers.

Bishop C. A. Skinner, the evening speaker, compared the sacrifices of the early church with those of the church today, the inference being that we hardly measure up as a whole to "the Saints of yore" in that quality of service. He seemed pleased, however, at the sacrifice offering tendered by the congregation, and gave it his blessing.

North Kansas City

Elder W. S. Brown preached on a recent Sunday evening, his theme being on Sacrifice Week and Father's Day. Elder E. P. Sanders began a series of services last Sunday night.

Kirtland District Institute

The Kirtland district accredited institute was held at Cleveland, Ohio, Branch Saturday and Sunday, June 20 and 21. Nineteen students enrolled for certification credit, and a number of others attended the several sessions. This was the first of two or three institutes which are being held in different parts of the district.

The institute opened at 3.30 Saturday afternoon with a prayer for the institute offered by Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley. Then Brother Gunsolley gave a splendid lecture on the subject, "Who and How to Teach." At 7.30 Brother Jerome E. Andes was an enthusiastic teacher on a subject essential to our well-being, "Factors Relating to Health."

Early Sunday morning a spiritual prayer meeting was held, which was followed by the unified plan of worship. The devotional period consisted of prelude, scripture reading, hymns, invocation, and the reading, by Brother Gunsolley, of an epistle to the Saints from the First Presidency. The class study period which followed found all of the young people and adults associated with those enrolled for institute credit, listening to Brother Gunsolley's excellent lecture on "When and What to Teach." The next feature was the presentation of gold seal certificates in religious education to District President James E. Bishop and Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley by the district superintendent of church schools. Appropriate responses were made by both of the men. The district list of certificate holders is now increased to four holding the gold seal certificate and one holding the first grade certificate.

In the sermon period an anthem, "I Was Glad," by McPhail, was sung by the Cleveland Choir, under the direction of Sister J. A. Gunsolley, and a soprano solo, "My Prayer," by Hathaway, was sung by Sister J. E. Andes. Brother Bishop then preached a short but convincing sermon on the subject, "The Sure Foundation."

At noon the congregation partook of a delicious dinner prepared by Cleveland Saints. Supper on both Saturday and Sunday evenings was also prepared by this group of devoted sisters.

The afternoon sessions opened with a song, and a prayer offered by Brother John Curry. The congregation then listened to two excellent lessons, the first "Social Implications of Slogans and Maxims," by Brother Bishop, and the second "Chemistry in Medicine," by Brother Andes. Brother Andes' lectures reveal his diligent study of matters pertaining to health and harmonizing closely with the Word of Wisdom. We feel that this series of lectures has been of value in helping us prepare for the consecrated leadership toward which the officers of the church are urging us.

Credit for arranging the musical numbers of the institute goes to Sister F. T. Haynes, of Lakewood Branch.

The Saints of the Kirtland District particularly appreciate the work of the three instructors. Brother Bishop's success as an institute instructor is already known to our people. Patriarch and Sister Gunsolley are indeed welcome additions to our district institute program. Brother Gunsolley's background of experience as a minister in the church makes his counsel of great value.

A word or two concerning Brother and Sister Jerome E. Andes should be of interest to all. Brother Andes is an instructor in the Biochemistry Department at the Western Reserve University Medical School. He has a degree of Master of Science in Biophysical Chemistry at Iowa State College, at Ames, Iowa. He is working on his PhD in Biochemistry at Western Reserve University. Brother and Sister Andes expect to be away for about a month visiting western points, spending a considerable part of their time at Bozeman, Montana. Sister Andes is a master of science in nutrition, and is a technician in the Blood Chemistry Laboratory of the Maternity Hospital at Western Reserve University. Brother and Sister Andes are loyal, consecrated Latter Day Saints.

Far West Stake Young People's Convention

The annual young people's convention at Cameron, Missouri, June 20 and 21, was a tremendous success, both in attendance and in the quality of the services. A large number of young people from all parts of the stake spent Saturday night and Sunday in Cameron. The Cameron Saints very graciously entertained the visitors Saturday night.

The convention opened Saturday night with an illustrated lecture on the Passion Play by President Floyd M. McDowell. The slides were very interesting, and Brother McDowell's lecture was inspiring to all.

Sunday was an extremely hot day. Nevertheless the church was well-filled for the morning lecture by Brother McDowell. The church gives us a heritage in common with other churches and a further heritage peculiar to ourselves. It gives us great convictions about God, about our fellowmen, and about ourselves. It offers us adventure and a great challenge. It gives us the fellowship of some of our best friends, and it gives us great promises. Brother McDowell set out some of the sacrifices in the past, and said that we are not all required to sacrifice in those ways, but we are all required to sacrifice for the church we love.

At 10.50 a very impressive communion service was conducted, with about three hundred people participating. This service moved smoothly along with the theme of sacrifice and its rewards. The more that is at stake, the greater sacrifice is required. Everything is at stake now, and everything is required.

At noon everyone partook of a bounteous basket dinner which was served by the women of Cameron Branch.

The largest crowd of the convention gathered Sunday afternoon to listen again to President McDowell. In a frank and straightforward manner, Brother McDowell set out what the church expects of us today. He said the big question which we must all ask ourselves is, "Do I believe in this church?" If answered affirmatively, it means that we will do all that is necessary for the church. The church needs people with faith; not a faith of forty years ago, but faith which includes vision and valor: vision to see into the future, and courage to start out even if we can not see the end. The person the church needs today must have repentance. Not a repentance of years ago, but a repentance now. We should look into our own lives and find those habits and things which obscure the kingdom of God from our vision, and set forth to remove them from our lives. There must come a complete rebirth in our lives, and finally a complete consecration of our powers.

Throughout his lectures Brother McDowell emphasized the beginning of Sacrifice Week, giving examples of the price which had already been paid by men and women in the past, and urging that we make our choice. If we believe in the church, then that includes the living of its commandments. Christ told his disciples to follow him, and Peter answered, "Anywhere, Lord, but not to Jerusalem." The Master said, "I go where my Father calls; if thou wouldst stay here, do so." If we answer Christ when he asks us to follow him, "I'll do anything but pay tithing," Christ will give us a similar answer. We must decide for ourselves.

The convention ended with an interesting program of stake talent in the evening following a basket lunch. The program consisted of musical numbers from the various branches throughout the stake and a brief sermon by Stake President Ward A. Hougas. The willingness and ability of the young people who rendered their splendid contributions through music throughout the day greatly helped to make the convention a successful one. The evening program was one of unusual merit.

Waterloo, Iowa

Recently Elder E. R. Davis called on this branch. Elder F. C. Bevan worshiped here June 21, and held services each night the following week. His able sermons did much to lift up the hearts of the members here.

Everyone is enjoying our tastefully renovated church building.

Children's Day was observed with a program and picnic dinner in Cedar River Park after which the following children were baptized: June, William, and Gilbert Michaelsen, Robert Meyer, John Alma Talley, jr., and Alma and Jennie Bender. Confirmation was had in the evening. Saints were present from Gladbrook.

The young people cleaned up the church yard one night not long ago, after which they went to the stone quarry for a wiener roast.

A meeting for outdoor sports was held on a recent Friday night at the home of Sister Lola Meyer. Kenneth Wood had the misfortune at this time to fall while at play and severely cut his leg. He is improving nicely.

H. M. Michels and family recently moved to Independence, Missouri. The branch here regrets to lose such consistently Christian people, but wishes them well in their move.

Moline, Illinois

Since the last report of this branch to the Herald, the Saints have been greatly helped in a spiritual way by the special services that were held, first in Rock Island for a period of four weeks and then two weeks in Moline. The new district missionary, F. C. Bevan, presented the gospel with such whole-hearted enthusiasm and power of the spirit that all were filled with a new testimony of the truthfulness of the gospel. We hope that the same spirit will accompany Brother Bevan to other parts of the district.

District conference was held in the Moline church the second week of June, with a good attendance especially on Sunday. It was a joy to feel the same spirit we enjoyed during the missionary services. We were glad to have Brother John Garver with us. Seeing these men who have so much of the burden of the church to bear, going forward and pledging their services anew to the Master, regardless of the discouragements they face, we see the spirit of the pioneers of the church. Brother F. C. Bevan and District President E. R. Davis were also present. Let us as members of the church do our part to make the burdens of these men lighter.

The church building at Moline has been re-decorated and with its abundance of flowers and plants presented a cheerful appearance during the conference.

Sister Eloise Cady and Herman Sutton were united in marriage in an impressive wedding ceremony at the church May 31. Elder F. C. Bevan officiated. Sister Nola Epperly was at the piano.

Independence

A special sacrifice service for the Saints of Independence was arranged for 2.30 p. m. Sunday at the Auditorium. Over fifteen hundred people gathered at that time to make their sacrifice offering. The Auditorium Orchestra contributed musical selections and accompanied the congregation in singing such hymns as "Take Time to Be Holy," "There's No Love to Me Like the Love of Jesus," "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Savior." Seated on the platform were Bishops J. A. Becker and G. L. DeLapp, Presidents Elbert A. Smith and F. M. McDowell, Elder J. F. Sheehy, and Guinn Bronson.

President Elbert A. Smith in his address brought out the fact that in many instances darkness and trouble are the forerunners of great events. When Christ was crucified, the disciples separated. Peter felt at a loss and said, "I'm going fishing." But the resurrection was about to burst upon them. After Pentecost, came the persecutions. Doubtless many left the church feeling that the end had come. When the Saints were driven out of Independence, doubtless the worst thing that had happened to the church in latter days, the following era was one of greater blessings—Kirtland. The death of the Martyrs was followed by the Reorganization. The world is under trial today, partly because of world conditions but mostly because of our own mistakes. If we rally, there is no reason why history should not repeat itself—an era of blessing follow the trials. Jesus said, "I have called you to be my friends." What kind of a friend are you?

Guinn Bronson, in a masterly manner, delivered an oration, "It Shall Not Fail," by Inez Smith Davis, and this was followed by the hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers." Bishop DeLapp received the contributions of the Saints and offered the prayer of blessing and thanks. "Guide Us, O Thou Great Jehovah," concluded the service.

The Independence Messiah Choir accepted the invitation to take part in the jubilee celebration in Kansas City June 25, 26, and 27, and sang with other choirs of the city at the 8.30 Sunday morning service at the Liberty Memorial shaft.

Tennis players fifteen years of age and older now have the opportunity of entering the tennis tournament, to open at the Campus July 13. Entries will close July 12. The entrance fees are fifty cents for singles and fifty cents for a team of doubles. Young people in the several branches of Independence should see their leaders concerning this event. For information call Frank Good at Independence 882J, or Dean Redfield at Independence 1258.

Stone Church

At the eight o'clock prayer service on Sunday morning President F. M. McDowell presented as the theme "Faith for the Tasks of Today." Goodly response was made by those present, each expressing his determination to do his part and praying for faith to carry on.

The Sunday school hour presented as its theme for the worship service "Sacrificing Today." The sacrifices of the past were reviewed, but we can not live in the past alone. Evidences of sacrifice on the part of young and old today were given, making the congregation realize that "this is a day of sacrifice and tithing of the Lord's people."

The choir contributed two anthems, "Incline Thine Ear" and "Holy Father, Great Jehovah," at the eleven o'clock service, and Mrs. Israel A. Smith sang a solo, "Repent Ye." Miss Lorena Kueffer played the organ voluntary. Bishop J. A.

Becker offered the invocation, and Bishop G. L. DeLapp preached the morning sermon to a good-sized congregation.

About thirty young people from the Stone Church congregation gathered at 6.30 to go to Grandview, Missouri, on a missionary expedition. At the same time three other groups from churches in Independence went to branches in Holden Stake to assist with the singing and service. The young people enjoyed the opportunity to serve.

The Wahdemna Choral Society, under the direction of Paul N. Craig, furnished a half hour of special music for the evening service at the Campus. A number of excellent selections were rendered by them, and a trombone and cornet duet was given by Fred Mollison and E. E. Moorman.

President Floyd M. McDowell's theme for the evening discourse was "Without Faith It is Impossible." Faith, he said, is one of the divine imperatives. Life is at its richest and fullest and best when men are found achieving, creating, and building. Certain qualities are always present in such lives—qualities of confidence and trust, buoyancy, and hopefulness; courage in the face of difficulties. These qualities really define faith.

Faith involves two things, insight and courage. On the side of insight is the appreciation of the deeper things of life, the ability to see the unseen. The other side involves the program of action, of going forward. Faith is not only looking forward, it is going forward.

Faith is necessary in every walk of life. Without faith it is impossible to do anything. Life without faith is impossible.

Religious faith believes great things about God and man, it expects great things of God and man, it dares great things for God and man. But some kinds of faith will not save man. Faith in unbelief will not save man. Faith in less than the best will not save man. Faith that is mere assent or temporary faith will not save man. A faith that must live on thrills will not save man.

We need to get an insight into the problems of the world and have the courage to live by our convictions in such problems of peace and industrial righteousness. What right have we today to be of little faith in the light of the commandments of God, in the light of the authority of experience? In the light of God's message to us? In the light of the claims we have made? In the light of the task that has been assigned to us? In the light of the needs of mankind today? In the light of the call for spiritual leadership within and without the church? What right have we to be of little faith?

About one hundred members of the Independence Sanitarium Patroness Society and their friends met at the Campus June 19, and enjoyed a good social time. At noon a covered-dish luncheon was served and then there were speaking and singing. President Elbert A. Smith, President F. M. McDowell, Pastor John F. Sheehy, Elder Leonard Lea, Miss Gertrude Copeland, and Mrs. Loosemore were speakers.

During the summer the society is taking a vacation from its quilting routine, but many pieces of fancywork are in the hands of members and will be turned in to the president when work is resumed in the fall. Since the 1930 General Conference thirty-eight quilts have been finished for the new hospital, and many beautiful tray cloths, dresser scarfs, tray table covers, and towels are ready for use. Several boxes of linens have also been received from units of the society in other States. The president, Mrs. Loosemore, works untiringly in the interests of the Patroness Society, and her associates, Mrs. Weston Grimes and Mrs. Edgerton, also give much time to advance the hospital work among the women of the church. It is the hope and dream of these officers that a unit will be organized in each branch. They invite the officers and priesthood to give consideration to such organizations in their local groups.

The Patroness motto is, "Service to God through service to humanity."

Jennie Lou Budd, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Budd, died at her home in Independence of acute pneumonia June 22. Surviving are her parents, four grandparents: Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Budd, of Independence, and Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Smith, of Butler, Missouri, and other relatives. The funeral was conducted June 24.

Liberty Street

A fine talk by Brother Cecil Walker was the principal feature of the 9.40 devotional service Sunday morning. "Sacrifice" was his subject and also the day's theme.

A special service was arranged for the eleven o'clock hour by the pastor. Prayers were offered by members of the priesthood in behalf of the needs of the church. They were followed by a sermon by Pastor J. R. Lentell in which he compared periods of depression of the past to the present. With power and clarity he made plain what our present duties are.

Early in the afternoon Liberty Street people gathered at the font in the Stone Church for a baptismal service, Brother Lentell in charge. Five young girls at this hour made the great decision to serve Christ in newness of life. They are Dorothy Hardacre and Georgia Hardacre, of Paola, Kansas; Viola Quillen, Mary DeLange, and Kathleen Baldus, of Independence. The confirmation followed the ordinance of baptism, Brothers J. R. Lentell, Ed. Fender, W. B. Paul, and W. A. Stevenson officiating. During the baptismal ceremony "The Old, Old Path" was played on the piano by Sister Lentell.

At 3.30 in the afternoon four cars of young people motored to Lees Summit, Missouri, in Holden Stake. They stopped at the Unity School of Christianity Farm and inspected the grounds and equipment. A picnic supper in the park, including a large can of ice-cold lemonade, made everyone ready for the evening service at the church in Lees Summit. A good sermon was delivered by Raymond Wrigley, of Liberty Street, and several musical numbers were contributed by our young people. They received a hearty welcome from the Lees Summit pastor and congregation.

Enoch Hill

The Enoch Hill Blues have reached the halfway mark of the season's volley ball schedule with a clean slate—fifteen games won and none lost. Each Tuesday night league volley ball games are played on the Enoch Hill court, and witnessed by large crowds of volley ball fans. Teams composing the league are the Liberty Street, Gudgeon Park, Walnut Park, Stone Church, Enoch Hill Reds, and Enoch Hill Blues.

The refreshment stand, operated by the young people on each Tuesday night, has gone far in furnishing money to wire the entire church grounds.

But ball is not the only activity which interests the young people on Enoch Hill. "Have you seen our garden?" is a question they invariably ask others. The garden, planted six weeks ago, and cared for by the Erodophians, is thriving, and promises to produce a good crop of vegetables for the benefit of the Harvest Home Festival. Enthusiasm over the project runs high, and meanwhile the garden grows.

Brother Joseph V. Merchant, seventy-six years of age, died at his home June 23. He was a retired farmer who had lived in Independence eleven years. There survive him his wife, Mrs. Maggie Merchant, of the home; one son, Doctor H. A. Merchant, of Omaha, Nebraska; two daughters, Mrs. A. G. Johnson, Los Angeles, California, and Mrs. R. E. Whitsitt, Independence; three brothers: A. L. Merchant and Milton Merchant, of Logan, Iowa, and C. D. Merchant, of Lone Mount, Colorado; one sister, Mrs. Mary Hardy, Logan, Iowa; five grandchildren. The funeral was conducted at the Enoch Hill Church, Elder W. J. Brewer preaching the sermon.

Elder Calvin H. Rich was the Sunday morning speaker.

Gospel Is Preached to Isolated Nebraska Saints

Through the efforts of earnest and generous church members the Saints in and near Paxton, Nebraska, are now having church services twice a month. On May 31 they enjoyed a prayer and testimony meeting followed by a sermon by Brother Kanndson, of Thune, Nebraska, a man who holds the Aaronic priesthood. Several members from North Platte attended. Sister Lillie M. Richards who is past her seventy-first birthday and frail in body, bore a testimony of great faith and hope. Her words went far in encouraging those who had long hungered for the testimonies of the faithful.

A number of members gathered at the home of Brother Ray Newberry on June 21, at two o'clock in the afternoon, where they enjoyed a prayer meeting. The sermon was by Brother Kanndson who is willing to travel a distance of fifty miles twice each month to help the members in this community organize themselves in the service of the Master. He is always present and on time.

"For some time," writes Sister Lillie M. Reneau, of North Platte who sends us the news of activities about Paxton, "I have had a desire to see the gospel taken to these isolated Saints. I am happy that they are now being remembered by our workers. I want to do all I can to carry the gospel to others and to serve my Master well."

Enfield, England

New Church, Lancaster Road

Church work in Enfield has continued to make steady progress, good spiritual meetings being enjoyed by all who have attended. Apostle Paul M. Hanson has been a frequent visitor as far as his time has permitted, and his discourses and advice have been greatly appreciated. He has endeared himself to the Saints.

The departments are functioning well under their respective heads: Church School, Sister E. Judd; Religio, Brother F. Judd; Women's Department, Sister E. Judd. In addition there are the choir led by Brother W. Butler, the orchestra, Brother D. A. Judd, Orioles, Sister M. Maloney, Blue Birds, Sister O. Cracknell, dramatic society, Brother F. Harmsworth, and health and strength junior and senior classes under Elder J. A. Judd. All these are well attended and financially sound. Several concerts and social evenings are given throughout the year to assist the building fund to clear the existing debt.

The Saints were saddened by the death of Brother David Albert Judd which occurred May 23 after a week's illness. He was the fourth son of Elder and Sister John A. Judd, and held the office of deacon in Enfield Branch. The funeral service was held on Friday, May 29, at New Church, in charge of Apostle Paul M. Hanson, assisted by Elders J. W. Worth and H. Hailstone. Interment took place at Enfield Cemetery. The memorial service was held on Sunday, May 31, in charge of W. T. Goullee assisted by Elder R. Goullee. Elder J. W. Worth delivered the address.

The Saints send greetings to all Herald readers.

during the morning sermon and the afternoon program.

At the early morning prayer meeting the home-coming spirit of good fellowship was felt throughout, and many splendid testimonies were heard from those who had accepted the gospel at Fairland. The Spirit of God was felt all through the meeting. Of the visiting priesthood were, Brothers Duncan, Harding, Hayworth, Sheppard, Smith, Simmons, May, Connor, and others.

The home-coming sermon was preached by Elder May at 11 o'clock. It was followed by a basket dinner on the shady church lawn. The program of the afternoon was rendered by the local members, assisted by Saints and friends from other places. The decorations were lovely and appropriate.

After the program addresses were made by several of the brethren, and at the close of this splendid home-coming day, the Fairland folks and their many guests reluctantly bade each other good-by, hoping that another year would find them all able to meet together again to enjoy the hospitality of this friendly band of Saints on another occasion of this kind.

Blair. He was confirmed by Elders Blair, Condit, and Gamet. He was ordained a deacon February 6, 1898, at Lamoni, Iowa, by E. L. Kelley and A. H. Smith. He was the last known surviving member of the Reorganization who was present at that important conference at Amboy, Illinois, to which "Young Joseph" and his mother, Emma, came, when the former, the son of the founder of the church, accepted the responsibility of the place prophetically indicated for him. Brother Blair was a man, and a church member, widely known and loved for his qualities of character and personality, and for his cheerful and kindly disposition. It has not been long since he was about his business duties in Independence, and he was nearly always to be seen at his office or on the streets up to the time of his last illness. Due to his advanced age his passing was not a great surprise, but his death was nevertheless a shock, and his familiar figure and friendly smile will be missed. His immediate death was due to the infirmities of age. The funeral was held at Lamoni, Iowa, and the sermon was preached by Elder Blair Jensen. Elder G. N. Briggs was in charge. His body rests in Rose Hill Cemetery.

KITCHEN CURTAINS AND A CLEVER PAIR OF HOLDERS

THESE prim marquisette curtains, while especially offered for the kitchen, would be strictly in keeping in bedrooms, the breakfast nook, or a small dining-room.

Chintz-print calico flowers (or are they fruits?) in yellow, red and green are stitched with black on cream marquisette curtains in either full or sash length. The marquisette is 48 inches wide, which means a single width makes a glass curtain for the ordinary window, or if you prefer a pair, the marquisette may be split and the edges bound with bias fold.

The order number for a single curtain length and materials for completing the finished curtain is No. 657A, and includes 1 yard of 48-inch French marquisette, 16 calico motifs, black boil-proof thread for applying them, and chart and instruction sheet. To secure 48-inch French marquisette for a full-length single curtain which is 2 yards 6 inches long and may be split if you like into a pair of curtains 24 inches wide, choose No. 657B. This number includes the same assortment of materials that are sent out with the sash curtain, and the difference between the two order numbers is in the curtain lengths.

Then we have designed a lifter, in that two-handed style so justly popular which has flowers identical with those on the curtain, blossoming from pots of green. These pots are really where your hands slip in, to lift a hot pie, drain boiling water from vegetables, or to move the pressure cooker about. This is number 659 which includes stamped muslin top, 20 inches long, green stamped pockets, all calico appliques and 1 2-3 yards of the yellow print calico cut on a true bias for binding all around. This is everything needed except a lining or padding for the ends.

EVEN VEGETABLES LIKE STYLE

AT THE best—or worst—an ice box will accumulate a considerable variety of foods. Even electric refrigeration does not guarantee order.

However, the celery and lettuce, being present almost 365 days these years, can be snugly stored to themselves and they will come out on demand as crisp and fresh as when bought. Muslin bags are the thing for keeping them and we are offering the two bags already cut and stamped with designs and letters so that they can be made and embroidered with very little effort.

The celery bag is cut to finish 6x14 and the one for lettuce 10x10. The two colors of embroidery thread and green material to face back the tops included with stamped muslin in order No. 618 at 25 cents for the two.

The Faith to Proceed

Not long ago it was my pleasure to undertake a trip to a distant city to help with some church work there. Working to the last at the office to complete some necessary tasks, I was not able to start until very early on the day that my services were needed. At one-thirty that morning we were on the road, under a heavily clouded sky. At two o'clock it was raining, and there was the light but treacherous slime of water and mud that makes even the best of slabs hazardous. At two-fifteen the rain, driven by a high wind, was falling in torrents, bending the trees, flooding the highway, and sweeping the windshield with a blinding spray. In a situation like that anyone who drives knows that the person at the wheel can see very little, and that he has to proceed by a combination of faith and hope, together with a sight of the ghostly appearing shadows that emerge out of the darkness. The smallest suggestions of light become extremely important. One must understand, when he sees a faint reflection of light, that he is heading for a rock, and veer away from it; he must accept the dimmest of lines as the edge of his road, beyond which it is dangerous to slip a single inch. For the time he is in a world of little shadows and half lights, which he must interpret correctly for the actual objects that are there, an endless source of peril. Sweeping round a curve come the blinding lights of another car; and then it is the wise driver's tasks not to look at the other driver's lights at all, but to watch the edge of the slab and keep on his own side of the road. He must proceed by faith: faith in the road, faith in the slight signs that he receives, and faith in the other driver.

On this road, at that ghastly hour of morning, there were the wrecks of cars whose drivers had been unable to interpret correctly the signs of the way. In a ditch, turned over on its back, with its headlights slanting weirdly upward across the road, lay a powerful car. Its owner was out signalling for help. He had been blinded by the headlights of another car; and he had not known how to watch and keep on his own side of the road. In the accident he had several ribs broken. A few miles beyond where he had been delivered for treatment, two more cars were found across the road, both of them with front wheels and radiators smashed, and with bumpers twisted like tin foil. The women were crying, and the men—well, they were not religious men, and you may judge what they were saying. Each driver had been caught in his attempt, on this bad road, to outwit the other. They did not know what would happen when they tried their usual tricks.

One needs faith to proceed, but one needs wisdom to guide him in what he does. If one had not that faith, he would never get anywhere; and if he lacks wisdom, he is likely to reach a hospital instead of his intended destination.

The difference between false lights and true lights, between the shadows that mean something and those that mean nothing, is not, in difficult times, very great. It is hard to distinguish right from wrong; the chances for mistakes are many, and the penalties of any mistake is likely to be very severe.

It occurred to me among the thoughts that were running through my mind as dawn broke through the clouds in the east that the circumstances of those early hours in the darkness afforded a parallel to the circumstances of the world, and the circumstances in the church. Our government sees other governments of the world go tumbling to ruin. The political wrecks are everywhere in evidence. It takes faith in such times to proceed, a country's faith in itself, faith in the road it is traveling, and the ability to interpret in the dark times the slight but exceedingly important signs along the way. But the future depends very much upon the fact that we have the faith to proceed. Some governments have failed because they did not have it.

The church, too, is traveling a difficult road in a dark time. It takes faith to proceed, and it takes a shrewd ability to recognize by even the most obscure indications the course of the right road and the dangers that lie at its side. It is imperative that we proceed. To stop would be fatal to all our hopes and aims. We need the faith and wisdom to proceed.

A Quarterly Correction

Students and teachers of the "Gospel Quarterly," Adult Grade, may be surprised to find an incorrect statement on page twenty-nine at the end of the paragraph under the heading, "Introductory statement," as follows: "Sprinkling and pouring are better substitutes for the ritual of immersion."

What the author, John Blackmore, actually wrote, as checked by his manuscript, was the following: "Sprinkling and pouring are later substitutes for the ritual of immersion."

The error is bad enough, but is made worse by its heretical appearance.

It is hoped that all who see this notice will make it a point to see that pencil corrections are made in the quarterlies in use in their branches. As this quarterly has a large circulation, the task of reaching all who have it will be difficult.

On Looking Up

There is a story of a woman and a child who were walking in the woods.

"There's a pretty violet," said the woman.

"Where, Oh where is the violet, auntie?"

"Close under the shadow of that log," replied the woman smiling at the child's eagerness.

The woods were clothed in summer's loveliest dress of green and gold, and the two, each in her own way, were enjoying the walk. Overhead the green boughs interlaced, leaving only alluring patches of blue sky peeping through.

"Blue, blue! Just like angel eyes!" cried the child in ecstasy, almost tipping over as she gazed upward.

"There's another flower."

"Oh, auntie, you see so many! I wish I could find as many violets as you do."

"You would see more of them if you would watch for them, but you scarcely look at the ground. Violets grow on the ground, dear, not in the sky."

"Yes, I know, auntie," regretfully murmured the little girl. "I do watch the ground sometimes, but I can't look at them both at the same time, and I just can't watch the ground for looking up!"

True we do see beauty if we look at the things about our feet, but if we confine our attention solely to that, how much beauty we miss! People, like flowers, must look up and lift themselves into the air and sunshine of higher things.

Deep within every human heart is the desire to grow, to climb, to commune with the stars, and the test of a man is: how far he grows and what obstacles he overcomes to reach his goal. Fortunate are we that the soul seeks its own realm—God.

The Deed—Reflector of the Thought

"Be ye diligent." This is a divine command given us in latter days. The Bible tells its readers that "the labor of the righteous tendeth to life." In fact, the wisdom of the ages teaches men that diligence is the mark of him who serves his fellows; that the diligent man is the happy man and that the idle man is one of the most to be pitied specimens of humankind. These truths assume greater significance when we consider that diligence and idleness in deed are the reflection of diligence or idleness in thought.

Idleness bears its own darksome fruits—discontent, disharmony, hurtful criticism, rudeness, jealously, gossip, and a hundred others. Among the most to be feared marks of idleness is an idle tongue, the tongue which does no good but deals constantly with trivial nothingnesses which by repe-tion grow into rumors to the wounding of those about whom they are concerned.

On one occasion the Savior told a group of Pharisees: "I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment."

It is a wise thing for every one of us to mark the extent of his idleness and to guard well his tongue. Millions of people today are suffering because an idle remark about them gained the attention and belief of the credulous masses eager to hear and repeat.

Gossip is society's garbage can. It spares no one. The rich, the poor, the influential, the obscure, the educated, the ignorant, the living, the dead—all are tarnished by gossip, the child of idle tongues. It is a two-edged blade, keen and piercing. It cuts those who spread it and those in whose affairs it deals. It is altogether abominable. It reflects idleness in thought—or worse.

To be diligent in deed we must be diligent in thought. It will, therefore, help us to remember Paul's admonition to the Philippian Saints: "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any parise, think on these things."

Happy is the man who diligently continues his course to Christ, not heeding the rumors which float about him.

Just Wants and Needs

A single sentence in an editorial in the Kansas City Times of July 7 arrested our attention. It was a quotation that we had often heard used by our bishops in their talks about the possibility of building an industrial Zion. The quotation follows:

"From each according to his ability, to each according to his need."

The writer of the editorial is evidently in sympathy with our present economic system in spite of its inequalities and in spite of all the suffering and misery that it begets; he is probably sympathetic because he has seen no better system in operation.

But we had better let the editorial speak for itself:

The whole Russian experiment is based on the classic Communistic idea, "From each according to his ability, to each according to his need." It has been assumed that men would work hard on altruistic grounds, simply for the joy of service, content to receive a mere living as the result of their labors.

But Stalin, the Soviet dictator, is discovering that this beautiful theory fails to produce the desired results. At the outset wages were left to the individual industries to be fixed in accordance with the needs of the workers. That was Simon-pure Communism. This proved unsatisfactory in getting production. The energetic worker, who found himself getting no more pay than the indolent man, naturally loafed on the job. So piecework was introduced into the wage system. The man who produced more, received more pay. The theory of Communism broke down before the actual realities.

Now Stalin has announced a third stage in fixing wages. There was much discontent and shifting about because every type of labor in industry was regarded as on the same basis in the wage scale. The shoveler was supposed to be as valuable as the machinist. So the dictator says: "We must destroy such equal wages. It is unbearable to see the locomotive driver receiving the same wages as the bookkeeper."

This recognition of the difference between various grades of labor marks a violent break in the Communist theory. If the process goes on the rewards will go increasingly to the men with the rarer types of ability. So the dead level of compensation will be broken up, and conditions will become increasingly like those in the western nations.

In time the Soviet rulers may learn that the system of private property is not arbitrary; it is founded on needs of human nature that persist in spite of all efforts to change them.

The writer's theory is that men will work only for rewards, and principally for financial rewards. It is true that the great masses of humanity, unregenerated by anything in the form of religious conversion or idealism, value nothing more than money and the things it will buy; although there are many known examples of unselfishness and sacrifice on the part of people who have given their lives for others, and doubtless innumerable unknown examples of the same thing.

To pay the unskilled worker the same wage as the trained technician is to put a premium on incompetence. To pay the slothful worker the same amount as the energetic worker is to put a premium on indolence. And to encourage these two is to build a weak foundation under whatever form of society fosters them. It is an old aphorism that every society will have as many parasites as it will consent to support. These are dangers that the practical establishment of a Zionitic order will have to avoid.

However, these are difficulties in the way of the establishment of the ideal, not arguments against it. The writer of the above editorial is mistaken in saying that "private property is not arbitrary; it is founded on needs of human nature that persist in spite of all efforts to change them." Private property is arbitrary in that it works on a competitive basis, and takes little account of human need.

No time more than the present has served to illustrate the failures of an economic system in a more glaring light. The system claims the best energies of men when it needs them, and when hard times come it turns them out to starve.

Perhaps the rewards of labor must always be measured according to quality of services. That is simply justice. But justice in society is not enough. We have also a tremendous need of mercy.

The world has not yet seen what an enlightened and regenerated society can do in the way of cooperation. It remains yet to be seen whether the discipline of religion and the conscience can be made to stimulate every man to the best possible achievement and service of which he is capable. We believe that it can be done. When men realize that individual welfare is utterly dependent upon group welfare, they will work together, and they will work for the group.

All ideals must of course be conditioned by human nature and human needs. But because conditions oppose the establishment of an ideal, we should not abandon the ideal.

The quoted statement is a high ideal. It is not impossible of accomplishment in the course of human progress toward a better state of society. We believe that men can be inspired to work for more than pecuniary reward, unselfishly, and at their best productive capacities. It is not yet known what men can be led to do under ideal social conditions.

"From each according to his ability, to each according to his need." We believe that it is not only possible, but a necessary principle of economic relations.

A Church-wide Organization Doing Great Good

Last week's Herald news columns carried the account of the work of the Independence Sanitarium Patroness Society. It is our purpose here not alone to call attention to the noble efforts of these devoted women in their church-wide organization, but to call attention to both the need and the opportunity for others who are not yet affiliated with the organization to give a helping hand in a noble work.

The Society has members all over the church, some of them working in branches as organized units undertaking such tasks as the complete furnishing of rooms in the new hospital buildings, and others who are isolated members working on linens and other articles that will be very useful and very much needed when the new building is opened for use.

Many lonely women have joined with the work of the Society, and have found happiness in helping, and in the correspondence that has grown out of the common goal and the common tasks. All who have not yet joined and who would like to do so would be welcomed, for helpers are needed.

Dignity and Beauty in Ministry

By Elbert A. Smith

I. DIGNITY OF THE PRIESTLY INVESTMENT

(Note: This series of articles was written over a year ago. An abbreviation, or synopsis, of the series has been prepared by Leonard Lea and will be published in a manual or handbook for the ministry, together with articles by other writers that will be helpful to the priesthood.)

The ordained man is commanded to magnify his office and calling. That does not mean that he is to magnify his own importance. It does mean that he is to seek for and retain a larger vision of the importance and significance and possibilities of his calling and work. In years gone by a prominent man in the councils of the church who had been involved too often in petty quarrels was admonished by President Frederick M. Smith to remember who he was and the nature of his office and calling. Shortly afterward he took an extended tour of the Pacific coast, during which he again fell into disgraceful squabbles, growing largely out of his own airs and assumptions of importance and authority. He returned to the Presidency's office and strutted about, saying, "President Smith, I remembered what you told me. I allowed no one to step on my coat tails." He had quite missed the spirit of the admonition.

As Representatives of Christ

If Christ were to appear to you today in person, my dear brother, and put his own hands upon you and command you to go in his spirit and as his representative to bear his word to the children of men, with what humility and reverence, yet with what dignity, would you go forth. In spirit, that is what has really happened to you. Through his church and by his spirit he has selected you and ordained you to go forth as his ambassador. And his conditional promise is, "Lo, I am with you alway." "Without me," he reminds us, "ye can do nothing."

It is necessary that every member of the priesthood should sense keenly and always the fact that he has thus been selected and set apart. Only from this inborn and everborne realization of the sacredness of his calling can there develop from within the soul of man a real dignity and beauty to adorn and characterize his person and his every ministrations.

No thoughtful minister would take a bottle of oil that had been blessed and consecrated for the healing of the sick and use it for ignoble purposes. How much more should the man himself, having been consecrated once for all time as a minister for Christ, hold himself above all that is unworthy of such a calling. The consciousness of "Christ in us the hope of glory" must abide with the ministry.

As Representatives of the Church

We are assured that Christ purchased the church with his own blood. How dearly then must he value it. Indeed he has said that if a man shall offend even one of the little ones in the kingdom it were better for him to have a millstone tied about his neck and be cast into the sea. This church so dearly bought and so highly prized sends forth the ministry as its representatives. Not only do you represent Christ; you also represent his church. Thousands of men, women, and children trust you. "I would be true, for there are those who trust me."

These men, women, and children can not themselves go abroad in the field to preach the gospel; neither can they stand at the altars of the home church to represent God. You are their representatives in such works, and they trust you to keep clean the honor of the church and hold high her banners. Many of them pray for you. You must not be recreant to such trust or unmindful of such prayers. As I finished a sermon one Sunday and came from the pulpit, a good brother said to me, "Brother Smith, every night in the year you are remembered in prayer at our family altar." I felt under renewed bonds and obligations to keep the faith. If there was only one family that trusted me and prayed for me, I could not afford to betray that trust.

Then there are those gone on before who, while living, gave all they had to give of money, service, and self to this cause. They died firm in the conviction that the men coming after them would in like manner carry on the work. Their investment of blood and spirit and material means must be preserved. They, too, trusted us.

All these considerations prompt the ordained man to refrain from that which would tarnish his calling and bring shame upon his church; more than that they prompt him to serve diligently and constructively with dignity and ability in his calling.

As Preachers of the Word

The minister is a preacher of the word of life. The Lord's words are "quick and powerful"; his words are "life and light." The gospel is literally the "power of God unto salvation." It brings to men and women a new way to live. It changes men's characters and makes them newborn men.

It is the only true basis of individual and social life. It is at once the true philosophy of life for the individual and community. To carry such a message is a calling as yet beyond our powers fully to evaluate. But it is a challenge to magnify our office and calling, or rather to magnify and enlarge our vision and understanding of that high and holy investment.

As Ministers of the Ordinances and Sacraments

Members of the priesthood handle heavenly things. They witness and administer the most sacred covenants: baptism, confirmation, the communion of the Lord's Supper, the marriage vows. These they are to administer according to both the letter and the spirit. They are to be administered in such dignity and beauty and vitality that they shall live always in the lives and memories of those involved in such covenants.

At the Crises of Life

The minister touches the lives of his people at every time of crisis, whether sad or joyful. He leads men and women into the waters of baptism and brings them forth to a new manner of life. He has his part in bringing them into the "new freedom under the law," through confirmation under his hands. He stands at the altar when men and women who have found the greatest joy of life in clean love come to that altar to have their union consecrated in marriage. The children of this union are brought to him as the most precious heritage Providence has given, that they may be blessed as Christ blessed little children. At the time of death he speaks the words of consolation and commits to earth the beloved form of the dead. Over that open grave he voices the prayer that contains the only hope left in life—the hope of the resurrection. To be worthy of such a calling must stir the best ambitions of every thoughtful man who has accepted ordination. "Men of God, arise."

A Message to the Ministry

During the General Conference of 1920, on the 4th day of April, the ministry of the church met in the Stone Church in Independence, for communion service. At that time a Pentecostal experience was had, and the following message was given to them under the spirit of prophecy:

"This is the message of your Lord and Master: I greet you as I did my disciples of old; and though I am your Lord and your Master, yet do I call you my friends and my brethren.

"During the year you have administered to others, and have carried the consolation of God to the people in far-distant places. But now it is your blessed privilege to be administered to and to receive consolation from me. And I say unto you, Open your hearts that you may receive the Holy Ghost.

"Is there one among you who has aught of complaint to make concerning his ministry or the blessings that he has received? Is there one among you who has been homeless, that he could say, 'I have not where to lay my head?' Is there one who has been without food, or naked? Is there one who has been scourged or spit upon or crucified? Happily you have escaped many of these things, though in part you have tasted of the cup that I drank from and have been baptized with the baptism that I was baptized with. But the days will come when you will be required to walk in the midst of perils. And you will knock at many doors that will not be opened to you until they are opened by the power and demonstration of my Spirit. I have witnesses of my love for you, for I have the evidences in my hands and in my feet and in my side—for did I not give the very blood out of my heart for you? What evidences are you prepared to give in years to come that you love me?

"I am not here to judge you or to condemn you. But I am here to warn you. You have been told in the past that in your public and private ministrations you should avoid sowing the seeds of distrust and division. That which a man sows he shall also reap. If any man shall sow discontent, he shall reap discontent and be unhappy. If any man shall sow doubt, he shall reap doubt in his own heart, and shall be fortunate if he shall not eventually deny the faith. But he who sows the seeds of faith shall reap faith, and it shall cause his soul to enlarge and expand. He who gives forth love—love shall come back to him. And he who is tender and merciful, to him will I be very tender and merciful. But if any man shall betray my cause, him will I judge. And he who puts the trust of my people in jeopardy for a little thing, he himself shall be in jeopardy.

"When you go forth to preach to the world, you are not to preach your own speculations or idle imaginings, and you are not to preach the philosophies of men. You are to preach the gospel, as it is in the books that have been given to the church, and you are to cry repentance to this generation. And when you stand to teach the Saints, you shall say to them as Moses did of old, that they shall go forward. If you are to be called leading men, you must become leaders of men—leaders and exemplars in all good works and Christian graces, and in showing forth all the fruits of the Spirit—that the Saints may observe you and be strengthened and comforted. If you will do this, and seek to work together in patience and love, and to obtain a common understanding of my law, I will be with you to bless and direct."

The Divine Law of Growth

By A. B. Phillips

We are so familiar with the physical manifestations of growth as seen in animal and vegetable life, abounding in unnumbered forms, that we usually pay little attention to them except for some extraordinary development which happens to hold our interest. But careful examination will reveal the fact that the law of nature, and not chance, controls the changes incidental to growth, and this law governs all the manifestations of the material world in this respect. They hold much that is quite mysterious to us, for we do not always understand the purposes concealed within them, though we observe their manifestations in a million forms. None of them is purposeless, which seems to be suggested in the sober lines of Thomas Gray:

Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathomed caves of ocean bear:
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

But life is constantly being renewed before our eyes. Objects that seemed dead and of no interest begin to unfold in symmetry of form and marvelous beauty. The unnoted seed expands, and glorifies itself before our amazed vision with an exquisite design that challenges our admiration. The seasons come and go, as the sun and wind and rain perform their mysterious work, and changing forms of life are created under the shaping hand of destiny.

And though there be mystery in these developments of nature, in them all is the working of an omnipotent Power producing instruments of usefulness and beauty for our benefit. The flower that blushes unseen today gives of its fertility to the desert that tomorrow shall blossom as the rose and rejoice the world with its fragrance. All over the pages of nature's book is written beneficent purpose in letters of glowing life. We do not now comprehend the divine plan, but our understanding of its wisdom grows with each passing age, and some day God will trust us with the secret—the secret of omniscience and immortality.

Nature Teaches Obedience to Law

In this way we learn from the marvelous laws of nature one of the greatest lessons of life. It is God's way of impressing eternal principles upon us for our guidance in life. We know not how these miracles are wrought, but they are performed in obedience to law. We know that obedience to the laws of health is essential to our proper physical growth and maturity. We know that the farmer who uses poor seed and neglects the cultivation of his soil must reap a scanty harvest for his carelessness. We have learned to our sorrow and loss that children who grow up under the influence of evil associates and bad examples find it doubly hard to follow lives of uprightness. How, then, can we afford to be careless of the laws which shape our endless destiny?

So far as our observations are permitted to extend, we have reason to believe that the laws of life are eternal, and that their effects not only are expressed today, but will be manifest through the ages in ever increasing degree. The Scriptures tell us that God made man in his own image and after his likeness, but until man becomes what his divine creator had in mind when he created him, the completion of that image is not apparent to us. Much of that likeness is designed to appear as a result of growth. Our potential powers are much greater than those we now use. What we may become is infinitely more important than the incidental accomplishments which mark our development. The right use of the powers within us are designed to manifest more and more the image of the Creator.

But when adverse forces have been permitted to rule the life and oppose the divine will, the image of the Creator becomes distorted, perverted, and finally almost obliterated. It is clearly as necessary for the soul to grow according to the moral laws of God as it is for the body to accord with the laws of physical life. Both laws are divine, and both are essential to our welfare.

Conformity to Type

Experience shows that we become like<sup>e</sup> our thoughts, which are the germs of moral and spiritual growth. This also is in accord with what we observe in physical development. The characteristics of the parents are transmitted more or less to their offspring, yet with capacity to modify the tendencies which affect the growth of character. So God has impressed of himself upon human beings made after his likeness, but has left them capable of modifying or developing this divine impress.

In this process of growth quality is without question of more importance than quantity. Bulk is of minor importance when the question of value is at stake. We have seen gourds which grew to enormous size and looked much like excellent pumpkins, but when opened they were found to be both bitter and empty. A friend once bought what he supposed was a delicious watermelon. In outward appearance no difference could be detected, but when it was opened it proved to be a citron. We have purchased apples that were a delight to the eye and gave pleasurable anticipations, but which were found to be coarse, dry, and of poor flavor.

An object's real value can not always be seen with the eye. Even a cherished picture is of worth because of something it represents or recalls to treasured memories. When you analyze these memories you learn why you prize the object that recalls them. We have learned to look more deeply than the eye can penetrate for the qualities that we most highly prize. This lesson was learned by the prophet Samuel when choosing a king for ancient Israel. We are told of that event:

The Lord said unto Samuel, Look not on his countenance, or on the height of his stature; . . . for the Lord seeth not as man seeth; for man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh on the heart.—1 Samuel 16: 7.

Our real selves may not be measured in inches or weighed in pounds. To grow into an eternal being who shall express the finished workmanship of God, this is our great privilege and the purpose of our existence here. It was for this reason that God made man in his own image and likeness, and gave him dominion over the things of this life.

Growing by the Pattern

In order to accomplish this growth it is necessary that we choose the divine ideals for our aims in life. But what our ideals shall be depends upon our own choice. The ideals manifested in Christ do not appeal to the outward or sensual nature, for they represent the beauty of the divine creation and the divine purpose. It was not the physical stature or form of Christ that has challenged the devotion of humanity. No one knows whether it was small or imposing, or what lines of expression were on his face, yet his greatness towers above all others in the world today, and grows constantly with each passing age. His glorious nature beams over all mankind as the great light which reveals the nature of God.

Jesus has become the pattern of the ages for those who respond to the inspiration of his great example. We all grow by some pattern, but our pattern is within, and it is that which flows out from us which reveals what we really are. This is shown in physical as well as in spiritual things, for the unnumbered forms of life development all around us are but expressions of that which is within and which molds them. Every species of the animal and vegetable worlds must grow according to the pattern within, which, though it is both silent and unseen, quickens, shapes, and directs with marvelous precision. Paul has given us his unrivaled expression of the power of the pattern within, for he tells us:

God would make known what is the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles; which is Christ in you, the hope of glory.—Colossians 1: 27.

This clearly proves that our hope of the glory which comes from spiritual growth may be realized only if Christ is in us. An outward acceptance of his divinity will not shape us according to his pattern. The reality of spiritual growth is dependent upon his Spirit within, and for this reason the sacred word informs us: "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

The Law of the Spirit

We are daily becoming more and more acquainted with the marvelous laws of our being. In the physical realm we can visualize and feel many of their great influences. We know that every tree, plant, and blade of grass must grow in conformity with the germ life within, and that every species of living thing remains in its own sphere of development, and in harmony with its own kind. This great secret may not be fully understood, but we do know that the same wonderful law applies to human beings. Thousands of years ago the truth was made known to Job that "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding." God has provided that the spirit within us may be inspired by the divine Spirit, and if we heed this inspiration we shall grow according to the pattern of Christ.

This is the law of spiritual growth, the means by which our spirits are attuned to the divine Spirit, and by which we make divine things our great objective in life. The potency of this law is demonstrated by the very lives of those who heed its requirements. It is just as true in spiritual as in temporal things that compliance with law is the only means of obtaining its benefits, and we must either live by the higher or spiritual law of God, or we shall find ourselves subject to the laws of a lower order. If we love our neighbor we shall not be placed under the criminal penalty of imprisonment for its violation. By complying with the law of the Spirit Paul was enabled to say:

For the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death.—Romans 8: 2.

Those who do not grow spiritually have not obeyed the law of the Spirit of life. The cause of such failure must be sought in the character of the individual, and not in the failure of the law within his service, but which he would not apply. Failure to grow is failure to become free from the law of sin and death, and he who neglects or fails of this duty trifles with the future of his own soul.

High Blood Pressure

By A. W. Teel, M. D., Church Physician

During the last general conference, I was frequently asked to deliver a lecture on blood pressure and hardening of the arteries, but unfortunately, I was unable to comply with the numerous requests, but promised, if the lecture was not delivered, that I would write a short article for the Herald.

Blood pressure is principally a strain on two tissues, the blood vessel wall and the heart muscle. It is one of the early symptoms of approaching old age and premonitory symptoms of Bright's disease. Everyone who reaches the age of forty years should have his blood pressure taken at least once a year.

The insurance companies pay out most of their money for wear and tear diseases of this kind. When old age begins, the blood pressure rises because of the narrowing of the smaller arteries, the burden being placed upon the heart on account of resistance. It must not be forgotten that the man is "as old as his arteries." Therefore, high blood pressure means old arteries, whether the individual is forty or eighty. The standard for normal blood pressure is always found in a healthy person twenty or thirty years of age, which varies from 100 to 120. It is gave me a little pig. Soon it learned to come running when I whistled, and would follow me about much like a dog. But as it became older it failed to grow, and I was told that it could not grow because it was hidebound. One day it disappeared, and I never saw it again. It was the tragedy of the hidebound pig. Since then I have found that, in a spiritual sense, the greater tragedy of this disease may invade the human species—the tragedy of the hidebound soul.

In all the world there is nothing so pathetic as the soul that never grows. It is quite opposed to the laws of nature that a child should fail of his normal functions, or that he should cease to grow. He who does not continue his proper functions is doomed to die, and this is just as inevitably true of the human soul. He thus violates the highest law of life, and must suffer the grim penalty that demands its compensation for broken law.

Jesus Christ is the only pattern that has stood the test of the ages. It is the only pattern that reveals our every need, and it has the cherished property of engendering growth in us according to the law of perfect and unending life, until our souls are purified and his glorious image is reflected there.

an abnormal condition whether the person is thirty or eighty years of age. If one has healthy arteries, the blood pressure should be the same as that of a person of twenty or thirty years of age. Blood pressure wears out the heart, causing it to dilate, and finally it gives out from the enormous amount of additional work placed upon it. If the blood pressure is 200, the heart is compelled to double the work required at 100.

When an uncontrolled, persistent high blood pressure continues long, there is a breaking down, at the same time, of the blood vessels and the kidneys. Such a condition is very grave and requires prompt and persistent treatment. When all these complications occur as a result of persistent high blood pressure, it is often spoken of as cardiovascular—renal disease. If this unfortunate condition is discovered in the early stages, much can be done by changing the habits of the patient. Those who have a persistent blood pressure with a kidney complication, are usually suffering from the result of constipation, meat diet, and the use of tea, coffee, alcohol, and tobacco. Early hardening of the arteries is found by the use of the ophthalmoscope. Hardening of the large vessels near the heart and parts of the arterial system may be detected by the X-ray. If much lime is present, the arteries may sometimes be felt at the wrist, the arm, the temple, and at other parts of the body. Auto-intoxication and syphilis are the most common causes of this unfortunate condition.

When the blood pressure is high, without any other complications, it is usually the result of bad dietary habits, the indulgence in alcoholics, tea, coffee, and tobacco. Some drugs have been found to give, at least, temporary relief. These should be prescribed only by a physician, but the best treatment is the removal of the cause. It is always an indication of poisons having gained entrance to the system. The systematic use of warm baths, rest, and moderate exercise has been found to be of much benefit in lowering the pressure. The bowels of these patients should move at least three or four times a day to prevent the absorption of poisons from the colon, together with the discontinuance of condiments, alcohol, meats, tea, coffee, and tobacco.

In the late war a young French soldier, very white and weak, lay on a hospital cot. The surgeon who had just amputated his arm looked at his drawn face and said, "I am very sorry you had to lose your arm." Then the soldier's eyes opened, and with an accent of protest, he said, "I did not lose it; I gave it." He was wise enough to see that his whole attitude toward the necessity that confronted him depended on what word he used.—Harry E. Fosdick.

Tom King: A Life History

By C. H. Porter

His Early Life

Tom King was born in one of the Midland Counties of England, about the middle of the nineteenth century—to be more exact, in the year 1851.

There was nothing unusual about his childhood. At an early age he was taken to the church and was christened by the Reverend Richard Young, his godfathers and godmothers promising for him to “renounce the devil and all his works, to believe in God, and to serve him.” This was an established custom in the community in which his parents lived.

The promises made for him were observed to the extent of teaching him to read the Bible, Pilgrim's Progress, and a few other good books, to attend Sunday school and church, and to conduct himself properly at all times, but especially on Sundays.

He was sent to the National School at an early age, and evinced a desire to excel in his studies. He stood well in his classes in both National and Sunday school, and absorbed more readily than some others the lessons taught. He became interested in books, and spent more time with them than at play.

His father was a gardener, and Tom was taught to be useful in many ways at this interesting occupation. His grandfather was a freeholder, and Tom was invited to visit at his home when his father would go there on special occasions, such as potato planting, harvesting, or fruit gathering. This was always a treat, especially for the fruit gathering.

He was, however, somewhat afraid of the old gentleman who was not only old, but different in many respects from his father. The grandfather was large, florid complexioned, with sandy hair, minus teeth, and wore glasses, while Tom's father was of medium size, dark complexioned, and did not wear glasses.

Tom asked one day why his father and grandfather were so unlike, and was told that his father resembled his mother who was a small, dark complexioned woman.

Tom Goes to Work

Tom's parents were poor and found it necessary to put their children to work as soon as they were able to earn wages. Soon after he reached the age of nine years an opportunity was offered by which he was enabled to secure work. His parents could not afford to neglect the opportunity and he was sent, in company with fourteen other boys, to work under the supervision of James Perkins on the estate of Lord St. John.

Tom was a quiet boy, and had not associated as freely as many others with boys of his own age, so he had many things to learn. The hours of work were from six o'clock in the morning to six o'clock in the evening, with thirty minutes for lunch from nine to half past nine, and with one hour for dinner.

The first morning at nine o'clock the man in charge left the boys together while he went on an errand to the mansion house.

The boys ate their lunch and then started a frolic. They had a lively time knocking off hats, etc. Finally one of the boys started a fight with Tom by resenting what he considered to be a cuff on the head rather than a knocking off of the hat. This caused some excitement for the boys and a lecture from their leader who returned in time to prevent any serious result. This was the only time the boys were left alone.

The wages Tom received were one shilling and nine pence (forty-three and three fourths cents) per week. The wages were small, but they were needed for the maintenance of the family of which he was a member.

Still later he worked on a farm for Henry Simpson. This was nearer home, and the wages were a little higher. While working there he had a fight with a boy about his own age, but of larger build. This was brought about by others. Neither Tom nor the other boy desired it, but an older boy brought it about by persuading Tom's companion that it ought to be decided who was the better man of the two, and he said, “You are larger than Tom, and I can just see you putting it all over him. Why don't you pitch into him and make him fight? He's afraid of you. You can beat him all right.”

A man working with them also rather encouraged the fight. Finally the other boy made a pass at Tom, who resented it by returning blow for blow while the larger boy cheered for Tom's opponent. The man also seemed to side with him. Tom was not so easily vanquished, however, and at last, with all the verbal aid given him, the other boy refused longer to fight. The result was not as expected, but Tom was satisfied so far as his work-fellow was concerned. He said little and thought much. The blame seemed to him not to rest with the boy with whom he had fought, but with the older ones who had brought it about.

Mr. Simpson soon heard of the fight, and came out to the field and sent Tom to a different part of the farm to work.

An Unexpected Encounter

One evening while on his way home from work, Tom found some cricketers had placed their wickets on the foot path in a field through which he had to go, and had just commenced to play. He had either to make a wide detour to avoid the players or go through the field by the foot path, thus passing close by the wickets. He knew that he had a right to use the path, as it was for public use. He unwisely stood upon his right and passed by the path as usual. All went well until he came to the farther wickets when he was roughly pushed aside by a boy two or three years older than he, who commanded him angrily to keep off the ground. Tom resented this by striking the boy over the head with his lunch basket.

This immediately attracted the attention of all the players who at once left their places, shouting, "A fight! A fight! Form a ring!" This was done at once, leaving Tom and his assailant in the center.

The cricketers stood by their own man, and Tom learned to his cost that it does not always pay to insist on standing upon your rights, especially when common sentiment is against you.

Tom was not an athlete, nor of robust build, but he did not flinch from the conflict, notwithstanding the difference in age, weight, and possibly other disabilities.

The battle was waged fiercely, considering the youth of the combatants, and attracted attention from the villagers a short distance away who gave vent to their feelings by calling to the boys to stop the fight.

The battle was fairly fought. No blow was struck while a fighter was down, but Tom found that his antagonist was more than a match for him. The contest was too unequal. He was tired from his day's work. His opponent was older and stronger than he, and he also had the encouragement of his companions, whereas Tom was alone. One big boy declared the fight was "a shame," and, though the fight went against him, Tom always remembered that at least one was not to blame for the defeat he suffered. His strength was not sufficient to win for him the fight, but he refused to say, "Enough," which would have ended the conflict at any time.

The fight continued until Tom, being completely exhausted, fell down and was unable to arise. This decided the contest in favor of the larger boy, who in the first place was the aggressor. The larger boy never in Tom's hearing, if at all, boasted of his victory.

It is possible that the cricketers later, all of them, felt that the older boy who called the fight "a shame" was right about it.

Tom was not much more than twelve years of age. He had done nothing wrong. He had a perfect right to use the foot path. If any trespassing was done it was by the cricketers. The cricketer was the aggressor. He had no right, and there was no reason why he should have pushed Tom roughly aside, or ordered him off the field. On the other hand, Tom could have avoided trouble by yielding the question of right and making the detour around the portion of the field used by the cricketers.

Tom often, for several years, looked his opponent over and thought he ought to even matters with him, but prudence taught him wisdom, and knowing that he was still the heavier and stronger of the two, the matter was never at any time mentioned between them.

A few years later Tom was in company with a party of boys when a controversy arose between the one with whom he had previously fought and another whom he knew well. The boys were about the same age. Tom's former antagonist was somewhat short of stature, but strongly built and strong of fiber as hickory is said to be. The other boy was taller, but their weight was about equal. They said little, but the fury of battle was brewing. They both realized that a fight meant heavy blows and severe punishment. They kept apart for awhile, but their faces showed that the conflict was seething within. Tom watched his chance and said to the other boy, "Go to it, Fred. You can beat him." He made no reply, but they gradually drew nearer together. When within striking distance one made a pass at the other. The conflict in all its fury was then on. No word was spoken by the combatants, but each fought with all the energy of which he was capable until Tom's former antagonist said, "Enough."

Tom congratulated the victor and felt sorry for the vanquished. The old sore ceased to trouble him, for he felt that what had been meted to him had in due time come home to the one who had administered it.

His early life was thus filled with work and with occasions on which he had to take care of himself. Being a boy in those times was a serious matter for him.

We can not have a world-conquering Christianity, so long as the Christian mind is divided against itself, and men try to keep their belief in God in a compartment of their mind, while with the rest of their nature they share in the activities of a society based on assumptions that leave no place for Him. If the church is to fulfill its world mission, it is necessary to meet far more boldly than is now being done the challenge of secular civilization.—J. H. Oldham.

Guiding the Nursery Child

STUDY HELPS FOR PARENTS AND WORKERS IN THE NURSERY DEPARTMENT OF THE CHURCH SCHOOL

LESSON SEVEN

How Children Learn (Part I)

A chubby four-year-old was heard to cry lustily. Investigation revealed that he had been trying to start a fire in a pile of shavings in one corner of the yard. He had thoroughly enjoyed trying to strike fire from the matches with some small success. Unceremoniously a stern parental hand had spoiled his fun and throttled with no uncertain emphasis his blossoming curiosity and love of adventure.

As his vociferous objections subsided the mother tried to justify herself in the eyes of her scandalized but secretly sympathetic neighbors: "He just will not let matches alone! I've whipped him and whipped him but it doesn't seem to do any good! But I'm certainly going to get it out of him or know the reason why!"

Poor little bewildered, disappointed lad! Poor harassed mother! What a problem it is in which we see such strong instinctive tendencies and impulses blindly battling for supremacy. How may these powerful factors be reconciled, diverted or sublimated into a constructive character-building force?

As our text indicates, all habit formation, all mental and moral development, indeed, all situations in which learning is involved proceed in an orderly way in harmony with well-established fundamental laws.

Many studies and investigations have occupied the thought and attention of scientists in the realm of psychology in their efforts to discover and make clear just what these laws are and how they operate.

In lessons seven and eight we shall consider the guidance of the little child in relation to these laws of learning.

It may be possible for many study groups to have the assistance, for these two lessons, of a specialist in this field, a person trained in the study and practice of psychological activities.

In lesson seven we shall discover something of the nature of the learning apparatus.

There are very many excellent books, any one or more of which will prove a helpful addition to the text:

Guiding the Nursery Child—pages 46-55, 90-92, 104-105, 111-116.

Psychology—Woodworth.

Psychology—Carr.

Psychology (Educational)—Gates.

Psychology of Childhood—Norsworthy and Whitely.

Any good standard psychology.

The following outline may serve as a guide to our study:

I. The equipment for learning:

1. Sense organs (Woodworth and Carr are both good here. See chapters on Sensation).
2. Brain, spinal cord, nerves.
3. Muscles and glands.

II. Other factors in learning:

1. Instinctive tendencies.
2. Emotions (See Watson Psychology from standpoint of a behaviorist).
3. Learning situations—environment.

Vacation Time

By Mrs. Tessie Smith, Independence, Missouri

Perhaps there is no combination of words which brings more joy to the heart and the imagination of small children than this, "Let us get ready to go to ..... somewhere."

The anticipation brings great pleasure, especially when the suitcases are brought out and the necessary dresses, shirts, hose, handkerchiefs, and suits are laid out in piles for each member of the family.

The realization brings greater joys and thrills as the trip is made to the station to take the train. The baggage is checked and each minute brings suspense until the clock in the station tells them the appointed hour has come and they hasten out to board the train.

Perhaps the trip is by auto instead of by train. Is there any less pleasure, and are there any fewer thrills attached to packing the car ready for departure? What then? To the surprise and sometimes disappointment of the child he finds that he must sit still, and sit still longer and longer, until his physical self rebels. Of course, in either case, whether he be on the train or in the auto, he can look out of the window and see all there is to see as he passes along. However that gives him nothing to do. It provides him with no activity unless mother suggests that they count the bridges, tunnels, white horses, red barns or prairie dogs, as they pass along.

If the child is too small to count, he might enjoy something like this. Before leaving home one mother filled a small box (perhaps a pint icecream box) with very small, smooth, clean pebbles. These helped to pass many an hour. A pebble was placed in a sack every time a white horse was seen. A pebble went into another sack for each bridge crossed. Very small children will enjoy simply picking pebbles out of one box and placing them into another and back and forth, over and over.

We hope that you have anticipated these inactive hours which your child will experience and have provided him with a little traveling case all his own, the contents of which you need not supervise. Let him put into it some of the simple inexpensive equipment which he enjoys all the time at home. A pair of scissors, a box of crayons, a tablet, some string, some sticks, a magnet, and some small nails, some marbles and whatever he may select.

If a long trip is to be made by train and there is more than one child to keep happy and contented it is well to put into your traveling bag a few more things. Puzzles. Cut up postcards into about a dozen pieces. Place each puzzle in a separate envelope in order to keep it ready to use at any time. Flower puzzles. Take from your seed catalogue the colored pictures. Cut the flower from the stem or plant and let the children place the correct flower on each stem or plant. Paper dolls or small penny dolls. Provide with many changes. These are especially interesting when mother has brought a box of ribbon and lace scraps which can be cut and sewed up. Very small automobiles. Secure these at most any variety store for five and ten cents. These cars run nicely on car seats and window ledges and provide the small boy much entertainment. It also adds a great deal to this play if a small piece of plasticine is brought to make head lights, spare tires, jacks, and tools.

When the child finds himself in situations where he can not satisfy his desire for activity by moving around, the most natural thing for him to want to do is to eat. This habit of eating continuously is bad enough when handled thoughtfully, and can easily cause a complete physical upset if the mother is not careful of the food eaten. At least one good warm meal a day should be eaten by every member of the family, and especially by the children. Avoid the fried foods which are so often indulged in when traveling by auto. Use fresh green foods such as fruit, lettuce, celery as much as possible instead of the canned sandwich spreads. Children will enjoy having a small box filled with puffed wheat and raisins, to which they can help themselves and eat as they please.

It is hard to believe that parents who profess to love their children will start from home either by auto or by train for an extended trip unprepared to meet the needs for activity and self-expression of their children. We have seen them scolded and slapped because they would not sit still and keep quiet when they were tired and fretful and nothing was done to divert them. Children are just as human when away from home as at home and can only be happy in their experiences when they feel comfortable and natural.

These suggestions of things to provide for the children's entertainment are of secondary importance in comparison with the real value they should receive from a vacation trip. In addition to the material things you should equip yourself with that which is far more significant, the ability to make the trip fundamentally educational as well as entertaining.

Happiness

By George W. Robley

Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help; whose hope is in the Lord his God.—Psalms 146: 5.

In our desire for the elusive state called happiness, we very often pass by and overlook the chances for happiness that are around us. Happiness must of course be a state of mind, a state of tranquillity, a something that after all is rather hard to define.

However, there must be some fundamental principle that underlies all of our feelings and that goes deeper than mere physical well-being and freedom from pain. The imagination plays quite a part in all our pleasures, and it is said that we take more pleasure in anticipation than we do in realization. All of this of course relates to the ordinary feelings one experiences.

It must be plain to all of us that no degree of happiness can come to us or remain with us unless our minds are in a hopeful or tranquil state. It is even possible to rise above bodily discomfort when the mind is in contemplation of the things of a divine character, and sometimes when the incentive is of an earthly character.

Happiness, then, must be based on law, and there must be a way to understand that law. Did God intend man to be happy in this life? According to our text it would seem that he did.

Happiness could not be complete in this life or there would be no incentive for one to strive for another and higher state. The human mind could hardly contemplate a state of development where there would be nothing to work for and nothing to expect. We learn by contrasts and experiences, and we enjoy the sweet things of life because we sometimes run against those things which are not pleasant.

It is evident that we have been placed in this world to become educated by our experiences. But the difficulty with most of us seems to be that we think life is too short to learn all of the lessons we would like to learn. The body and the mind are so closely associated that it is a difficult thing to separate them, so we will not try. It has been said by some that, "Man should have a sound mind in a sound body."

But who is to determine the soundness of one's mind? The atheist would say that a sound mind could not believe in a personal God, and the Christian would say that a sound mind could not help believing in a divine creation. So the soundness or unsoundness of one's mind would be, after all, an individual opinion.

There seem to be two rules to happiness that are used by the people, and one must judge for himself as to which rule is the true one: whether we shall go along the lines of least resistance to find happiness, or follow a law that calls for the sacrifice of some seeming pleasure of the present in order to gain some true and lasting pleasure in the not necessarily distant future.

After all the true law of happiness must rest with God. He is the creator of all intelligent beings, and he placed the spirit of man in the body and gave that spirit the chance for development. In order for the spirit of man to have true joy, the man somehow would have to understand God, and what the design of God was when he created him. It is quite evident this knowledge could not come to man without some kind of education, and the best of all education that could come to man was the experiences, the difficulties, and the trials of this earthly existence.

It is not God's fault if we do not take advantage of the opportunities that come to us here for our development. It is the same daisy of the field that some pass by without notice in which others see the beauty and power of an Eternal Mind. The potential power of two minds may be the same, but one may reach out to the great God for help and receive it, while the other, feeling self-sufficient, will not ask, and of course receives nothing. Happiness must be intelligent. That is, a man must know why he is happy, and how he got that way, in order to know how this most desirable state of mind can be continued.

Jesus Christ is the only direct representative of heaven, or at least the best representative of heaven that ever came to the earth, and he told the people just what they were to do to have a successful life here and a joyful life in the next existence. No doubt it seemed the height of folly to the people for the Savior to teach them that by sacrificing the doubtful pleasures of this life they would gain the only true pleasure that could come to them, and yet this was the truth. There are men and women everywhere that are suffering torments, both physical and mental, because they thought pleasure could be had outside of Christ and his work.

"Man shall not live by bread alone" has a far-reaching and wonderful meaning to the spiritually inclined. They realize that after all there must be something more in this life than a purely physical existence; that the spirit in man is capable of the greatest development and the most exquisite joy, provided the right law is applied to obtain it. Jesus, as we said before, came to earth to teach men that law; and it is just as potent today as it was when the blessed Master taught it. It can not change, and there can be no better way devised. It has been tried a million times, and a million times it has proved true.

The difference between the Christian religion and perhaps all others, is that a Christian may be happy in tribulation. Happiness is comparative in its character, and one need not look for or expect a continuation of exalted joy with no reaction. A continuation of anything without change would be negative in character after a while. The joy in spiritual things comes to one in spite of adverse circumstances, because that joy is within and can not be affected very much by surrounding conditions. Paul and Silas were happy in prison and sang praises to God. A man might have all that this world affords and be miserable, while another, having nothing, would be happy if he had God.

There is no use to look for the fountain of perpetual youth outside of oneself, for if ever found it will be found there in one's own spirit. Happiness is the power and ability to appreciate the really fine things in life that are all around us. As I look out of my window across the next roof, I see on an adjoining trellis a beautiful rosebush in full bloom, the dull drab of the roof is made beautiful by the contrast of the riot of red and green more startling than the brush of any artist other than nature herself. But what I see may not bring to others the same feeling. I feel that the flowers are alive, that they are a part of the wonderful creation of God. They have been caressed by his great love, and their beauty is a reflection of his divine mind.

An appreciation of what we have is happiness. I knew a good brother in Boston years ago who seemed always to be happy. I asked him one day the secret of his joy, and he said: "I am always happy, because I am always thankful for whatever

Fargo, North Dakota

Bungalow Church, 1423 First Avenue, South

In the Red River Valley where crops look fine and there has been plenty of rain the North Dakota district conference was held June 27 and 28. It was attended by Saints from North Dakota and Minnesota.

An institute of religious education and development of the church school was held Saturday morning. Papers were presented by Lauriel McElwain on "Music," by Irene Rotzien on "Textual Matter," and by Pearl McElwain on "Pictures." Discussion followed the reading of these papers.

The business session opened at 2.30 p. m. Elder C. J. Smith was re-elected district president. It was voted that the new plan of religious education be adopted by the district, and Elder Warren McElwain was elected district director of church school. Lester Anderson was elected district auditor. In the evening a program consisting of musical numbers and an entertaining talk by Apostle J. F. Garver was enjoyed.

Three preaching services were held Sunday and the theme for the day was "Sacrifice." Among the many good thoughts given expression on that day one by Apostle Garver stands out: "The church is first to feel depression and last to receive relief," and he asserted that he would be willing to sacrifice all his possessions to see the church relieved. "The more you give, the more you will have to give," declared Missionary C. J. Smith; "get ye up and give a living sacrifice, holy and pure. Faith is stimulated in the lives of Saints as a result of sacrifice."

These men revived the faith and courage of the members in Fargo, and impressed upon them anew their responsibility in the present situation.

Two babies were blessed, Charmine Phyllis Naomi Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Wilson, and Shirley Louise Ratcliff, daughter of Pastor and Sister H. E. Ratcliff, born June 1.

A community dinner was served at noon and a fine and happy spirit prevailed in spite of sweltering heat.

Children's Day was observed with a junior worship program at the eleven o'clock hour. The exercises were provided by the children with the open prayer by one of the juniors. A chorus sang, "Open the Door for the Children," and a solo, "I Would Be True," was sung by Willis Freeman. There were readings and a group of children sang "Happy Birds" and "Honey Bees." A story, "The Wheatfield," was told, and Elder Ratcliff gave a sermon on "Helpfulness." Since this blessings I receive. If it rains, I thank God for the rain. If it is cold, I thank God it is cold. If the sun shines, I thank the Lord for the sunshine." To enter into the scheme of things, to be a part of the great whole, to feel that after all man is the crowning point of all earthly things, and that God is our father, and has all necessary wisdom and power to perpetuate life under the most favorable circumstances, ought to be, and is, a joy in itself. Jesus came to make us acquainted with God; to take away from us the thing that would hurt us, and give us the power that would help us. Shall we accept the gift?

was also Flag Day, the flag was saluted and patriotic songs were sung.

The young people's class has finished the course on "The Pioneers of the Church" and anticipates studying church history more extensively.

Elder C. J. Smith used as a lesson on May 29, "Let Your Light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your father in heaven."

Priesthood visits are being made by the pastor and deacon. These encourage and help the saints to better understand the financial law.

The midweek prayer service was held during Sacrifice Week. Pastor H. Ratcliff and Elder C. J. Smith were in charge. This was a profitable hour.

Coldwater and Hibbard Branches

The workers in Coldwater Branch staged some spirited services preparatory to the Week of Sacrifice. As the Jewish prophet said: "They spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened." Appended is the city's paper report and estimate of the last service previous to June 21:

"A program consisting of essays, papers and readings, interspersed with anthems by the choir and songs by the congregation was rendered at the Saints' church last Sunday evening.

"A diversity of thought, educational and sacred, kept the mind on the watchtower, as to 'What Next?' It was the coordinating principle in religion and the pastor's prefatory remark gave the keynote, which was 'Religion can only be taught secondarily, because it must be taken in and absorbed firstly.' 'A bitter fountain can not send forth sweet water.' Some of those participating in the very interesting program were: Miss Grace Peer, who presided at the keyboard; Miss Dorothea Scott, in charge of the program; Elder S. W. L. Scott, who directed the choral numbers; Elder Starr Corless, Mrs. Alta Stroh, Mrs. Gladys Hawkins, Mrs. Martha Fish, Mrs. S. W. L. Scott, Mrs. Ethel Gallagher, Elder E. Peer, Louis Fiske, Mrs. Collins, Mrs. H. Corless, Mrs. Will Murphy, and others. Each number clustered around Zionie ideals of the kingdom of God."

The heat wave in this region was broken a few days ago by a severe storm which brought loss of life and destruction of property to this community.

Hibbard Saints held their annual all-day services June 21, and S. W. L. Scott and J. W. McKnight conducted four services in the new church there, assisting Brother Bennett, branch president.

This branch has in the past fifteen months passed through trial. The church and the community have given six persons to the grim reaper, yet those who are left move on with increased faith and courage. They sacrificed their trip to Lansing to attend the district conference, and gave as a sacrifice offering the price of gas and other expenses. And far away from the conference, they met together to worship, and were blessed.

June 13 Doctor Yergin, of Butler, Indiana, Temple Salatorium, and Miss Callie Lee Radfield, Saint Louis, Missouri, secretary of the Temple Salatorium, were united in marriage by S. W. L. Scott, in this city. Doctor W. Chandler Yergin is a member of the church, also chief of the Therapeutic Institute.

Brother Judson Corless, of Coldwater and Three Rivers, and Miss Nettie Allan, of Battle Creek, Michigan, were pronounced husband and wife June 21, the wedding occurring at the home of the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Maude Corless. Elder Starr Corless, uncle of the bridegroom, officiated.

Not only Coldwater Branch but the entire community was saddened June 24 at the death of Sister Eleanor Fay Johnson, wife of Brother Melvin Johnson. Her death followed a year of illness. She was held in high esteem here. S. W. L. Scott paid tribute to her character and life work in the funeral address.

These torrid days are calling many residents to their cottages at lake sides where they hope to rest in cool breezes. The season of vacation also is here and church and Sunday school attendance is falling off.

Monthly District Meetings for Notheastern Kansas

Numbers of the nonresident groups deem themselves very fortunate in being able to attend the monthly meetings held at various points in this district.

The first of these meetings was held in the church at Netawaka the first of May. The sacrament service in the forenoon was in charge of Patriarch Samuel Twombly, District Missionary W. A. Smith, and Elder B. F. Jackson. Those present enjoyed the opportunity to partake of the emblems. A basket dinner was eaten and a splendid spirit of fellowship prevailed throughout the day. The afternoon sermon was by Brother Twombly.

This order of service was again carried out at Centralia the first of June. The I. O. O. F. Hall was donated and a spirit of peace was present. The members of the priesthood mentioned above had charge of the sacrament service and were assisted by T. J. Christensen. Patriarch Twombly spoke in the afternoon, his sermon preceding a short talk by L. M. Pitsenberger, district superintendent of Recreation and Expression.

The next gathering will be at the home of Doctor and Sister Piper, at Seneca, Kansas, July 12. Missionary W. A. Smith will be the afternoon speaker. All Saints of the district, and especially the isolated members, are invited to attend and avail themselves of the opportunity to replenish their spiritual bodies.

Indianapolis, Indiana

Pratt Street and Chester Avenue

This Sunday school has observed all outstanding days of the year, Easter, Mother's Day, Children's Day, and Father's Day, and the children have shown marked improvement in willingness to serve and the quality of service. Two children, Joseph Nolan and Mary Jean McClellan, were baptized on Children's Day.

District Missionary Jasper O. Dutton has been preaching at Centerton where he baptized two young girls and an adult. Sister Mary A. Lehr has been an invalid for years, has used crutches for more than four years, but she believed the gospel, came into the kingdom through the waters of baptism, and is now rejoicing in the truth.

The Centerton group is presided over by Priest Arthur Bennett and is a part of the Indianapolis Branch. There are also a number of Saints at Greenwood, Indiana, who are cared for by Indianapolis Branch.

Sister Rebecca Nolan, assistant chorister, is wielding a new baton, a gift from her father, Elder F. M. Weld, of Lamoni, Iowa. The baton was made by him from a piece of wood salvaged from one of the doors of the Brick Church. Sister Rebecca was reared in Lamoni, and has many happy memories of the Brick Church. She prizes her father's gift.

Apostle Clyde F. Ellis was here June 21, Father's Day, and the beginning of Sacrifice Week. He preached a splendid sermon that evening. He is invited to drop in again on the Crossroads of America," where he will receive a real Hoosier welcome.

Patriarch Frederick A. Smith visited this branch during Sacrifice Week and gave timely advice. He helped the Saints honor Father's Day and in other ways strengthened the members here.

Plano, Illinois

A three-week series of special services was lately enjoyed by this congregation, speakers being Elders R. E. Davey and Cecil Schmidt. The sermons were fine and instructive, and interest on the part of the people was good. Saints from DeKalb, Wedron, Mission, Aurora, Sandwich, and other points attended as often as they could. The Plano Woman's Club Chorus gave a half hour of music one night, and the branch choir sang anthems. Special numbers were by Irene Johnson, and Burdette Heun assisted with his violin, guitar, and musical saw.

Special programs were presented on Mother's Day and Children's Day. On the latter date Brother Cecil Schmidt, of Chicago, addressed the congregation.

Elder Oliver A. McDowell and wife were here one Sunday, and he delivered a splendid sermon.

Sister Irene Johnson, home from Graceland College, proudly wears her gold seal. Her parents motored to Lamoni to see her graduate and bring her home. She will teach in New Providence, Iowa, next fall.

Apostle John F. Garver was here one morning on his way to the Mission conference. Several from Plano attended the conference which was held June 20 and 21.

A basement has been dug under the church building, and workers hope to complete the undertaking in the near future.

Sacrifice Week was thankfully observed in Plano.

Older Saints rejoice to work with the active young people of the branch.

Writes of Progress at Alafloa Church

Sister Laura Jerningan, of Brewton, Alabama, writes the Herald a letter of the activities in her home branch, and her story reflects her deep appreciation of the work of others. Hers is a letter of optimism. We quote it in full:

"I can not begin to tell you how much I appreciate reading the Herald. It should be read by every Saint, for it does much to keep them informed of the progress of the church.

"The new system of conducting the church school seems to me to be splendid, and the envelope system of accumulating finances is effective. It gives opportunity for those who have only a little, to give it without embarrassment.

"The gospel work at Alafloa Church is making progress. Sister Bessie McCall is teacher of the adult women's class, and is the right worker in the right place. Each time she comes to class with her face beaming with joy, and the students enjoy the lesson period.

"Brother Burt, district president, was here not long ago and held a series of meetings. And B. L. Jerningan, pastor, preached a good sermon last Sunday evening to an attentive congregation. Each Sunday we have Sunday school at ten o'clock, and preaching at eleven, except on the first Sunday of the month when sacrament is had. Prayer meeting is conducted on Wednesday evening.

"The district reunion opening July 10 is looked forward to by the Saints. We hope that we shall have ourselves prepared for a spiritual feast and that all which will be done will be guided by the Holy Spirit.

"We enjoy the adult quarterlies which give us much information. It is our ambition to take advantage of the opportunities we have to improve our minds and spirits, and we pray that every one of us will serve faithfully at his post of duty."

Independence

The Campus program for the Fourth, sponsored by the city and the church, opened auspiciously. Plans included a children's patriotic demonstration, ball games, picnics, a band concert, and in the evening the movie, "City Lights," featuring Charlie Chaplin. M. T. Williams, who has charge of the Campus, was the general manager of the day. The first half of the program went well; the children's celebration was pretty and well done. A good ball game was played in the morning between the Independence Merchants and Blue Springs. Large numbers registered for the races at one o'clock in the afternoon, and the awards donated by Independence business men were appreciated by everyone. The Auditorium Band gave a concert at 2.30 in the afternoon, then opened a game between the Harbin Brothers team, of Independence, and the Viking Refrigerator team, of Kansas City. Rain threatened but the game went well until the fifth inning, when the storm broke and dispersed the gathering picnickers as well as the crowd in the grandstand. Though the day ended damply at the Campus and for hundreds of others observing the Fourth in the out of doors, people welcomed the rain which lowered the temperature more than ten degrees.

Stone Church

It was fitting that the theme of the first sacrament service following Sacrifice Week should be "Zion the Beautiful Beckons Us on," and that President Elbert A. Smith should speak words of encouragement and cheer to the large congregation of Saints.

The scripture lesson for the morning was Doctrine and Covenants 57: 1, the revelation given to Joseph Smith in the land of Zion at the time of his first trip to Missouri, one hundred years ago. Upon the occasion for and purpose of this visit President Smith touched in his talk. "The purpose for which Joseph Smith came to Missouri," he said, "was to locate Zion, to set about preparing the people for the second coming of Christ. His quest is still our quest—Zion. We must not be overcome by trials, but must with courage go on seeking Zion. Zion, the beautiful, beckons us on."

Following a period of meditation, Patriarch F. A. Smith offered a prayer for the congregations in Zion and the church in general. G. L. DeLapp, of the Presiding Bishopric, used as the basis for his remarks concerning the use of the oblation Doctrine and Covenants 42 and 59.

Those in charge of the service were President E. A. Smith, Patriarch F. A. Smith, Bishops G. L. DeLapp, Stanley Kelley, and R. T. Cooper, and Elders J. F. Sheehy, G. G. Lewis, and H. G. Barto. Organ music was by Hazel Scott Withee.

Elder C. B. Woodstock made the opening talk of the sacrament meeting at the Campus Sunday morning, explaining to the junior congregation the place of the sacrament in helping us to be true to our covenant with Christ. The morning's theme was "Truthfulness." Pastor Will Bolinger was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder C. I. Carpenter and others. The singing of such hymns as "Dare to Be Brave," "Fairest Lord Jesus," and "Just as I Am Thine Own to Be," impressed the young worshipers with the solemnity of the service.

"Repentance is the law of growth of body, mind, and soul; it is the plan of God which assures to men salvation," asserted President F. M. McDowell in his sermon Sunday night at the Campus. "It is the means of getting in touch with God's plan of living." The theme of this fifth discourse of Brother McDowell's summer series to the congregations in Independence was "Except Ye Repent."

The evening's half hour of special music was provided by the Auditorium Orchestra, directed by Orlando Nace, and congregational singing was led by Pastor J. F. Sheehy who was in charge of the service, assisted by Elder G. G. Lewis.

Defining repentance, according to Paul, as a ceasing to do evil and a learning to do well, the speaker presented two aspects of the principle: (1) The turning away from one way of living; (2) the definite acceptance of a higher and better way of living; or (1) the transference of interest and loyalty from one plane of activity to another, and (2) the sanctification of that activity.

When Christ was on earth, he taught men the fundamental principles of living happily and peaceably together. His message was affirmative: This do . . . and live. The gospel is the life-plan he left for men, a plan which has been tested in all ages under all conditions. By adopting this plan of living, we make it possible to measure our lives by the Christ-pattern, but the adoption or incorporation of this plan in our lives demands the continuous application of the principle of repentance. If we would climb Godward, if we would live at peace with each other, if we would make Zion a reality, we must do that which is consistent with God's design and our own needs—we must repent.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

After fourteen days of mid-summer weather with the thermometer hovering past the hundred degree mark, Kansas City and vicinity obtained relief from the excessive heat wave on Wednesday afternoon of last week. During this period a number of heat prostrations were reported with seventeen deaths.

One hundred and seventy-five people gathered at the church on Wednesday evening for the "jubilee dinner" sponsored by the Woman's Club of Central Church. This dinner was to celebrate the club's accomplishments since early last fall. The meal, consisting of fried chicken and pan gravy, green beans, hash, brown potatoes, lettuce and tomato salad, parkerhouse rolls and butter, with a delicious desert of pineapple ice and wafers, was very much enjoyed. Following the dinner, community singing was led by Clayton Wolfe and short addresses were made by the officers of the club: Sister Mary Moats, President; Sister Vida E. Hull and Sister Estelle Moore, the Treasurer. Sister Moore made the shortest but sweetest speech of the evening when she presented Bishop Skinner a check for $1,660.29, to apply on the mortgage of Central Church, payment of which was due on July first. Every one rejoiced when the amount was announced and the gentleman gave three cheers for the ladies.

One of the interesting features of the dinner was the telling by the women of the club as to how they had increased their talent money. Sister Moats, the president, turned in $35.50, having made a coat, given aluminum dinners, etc. Sister Criley turned in $25.50, having made hers by washing curtains, baking bread and rolls, and Marion Young earned hers by washing and polishing motor cars. A marked degree of humility and love was found in the humble things that were done in order to increase their talent money. Members of this club sold various articles such as towels, washcloths, salted peanuts, furniture polish, etc., to help increase the treasury. One $300 profit was realized from the advertising in the stake directory after all expense of printing, etc., had been paid. The directory was placed in the home of each member of the stake, and will be of aid in locating members of the priesthood for ministration, etc. The women have enjoyed their work these past months, and the good fellowship of Saints has lived among them; they have worked together with the ultimate goal of making a substantial payment on the indebtedness of Central Church. Already they are laying plans for their work in 1932.

Sunday was a delightful day and a goodly number was present at the eleven o'clock hour for the sacrament service. Following the serving of the emblems, the spirit of testimony pervaded and a good service was enjoyed. At this service, Joseph Elwin, son of Brother and Sister Roy Thrutchley, was blessed by Elder C. E. Wight and Bishop F. B. Blair.

At 7.45 due to the moderation of the weather, the services were held in doors, and though a number of members were out of town over the Fourth, there was a splendid attendance. "The Conflict," a serial of eight reels, portraying the life of the early Christians was shown, after which Brother Cyril E. Wight gave a short and inspiring address. "The Conflict" was very interesting and will continue throughout the month of July, and plans have been made by the officers for the showing of other high class pictures in connection with the sermons.

Evelyn Curtis, daughter of Brother and Sister Samuel J. Curtis, passed away Saturday evening at the Evangelical Hospital. Funeral services were conducted by Elder C. E. Wight at the Blackman's Funeral Home on Tuesday morning, burial being in Mount Washington Cemetery. The sympathy of Central is extended to Brother and Sister Curtis at this sad hour. Evelyn was the only child.

Mobile, Alabama

Mobile has been busy the past few months observing various special days and occasions. The Mother's Day service was appropriately conducted. On Children's Day the morning service was devoted to a program for the children. It was presented by the children in the main auditorium of the church. In the afternoon seven children were baptized, and since then one other child has entered the kingdom, making eight in the month of June.

The theme of each service during Sacrifice Week was "Sacrifice." The total offering received from the members of this branch amounted to two hundred dollars. Ten dollars and thirty-seven cents of this was given by the children of the church school.

Special music for the summer is provided by individuals and groups of musicians, the choir having discontinued its work during the summer. The members are trying to obtain enough new Hymnals to start the new church school year with all new books. Two of the Sunday school classes have had entertainments and the proceeds have gone to the purchase of Hymnals. Other classes hope to follow their example.

A midget wedding was given June 23 by the children, directed by the women of the church. The money received from the entertainment amounted to fifty-two dollars and was donated to the building fund.

The reunion season in the South has begun again. This year there is to be no reunion in Mobile, but several members are planning to attend other reunions in Alabama. Pastor George E. Burt and wife will be missed the few weeks they are away doing reunion work.

Columbus, Ohio

Second Branch, Elnhard and Twenty-second Streets

On the opening Sunday of Sacrifice Week, we had two splendid sermons from Edgar R. Kimball and J. E. Matthews. The priesthood visited the different homes during the week, and it is the hope of the branch to see a splendid response made in sacrifice to the call of the church.

Sacrament hour on June 7 was a period of rejoicing. The Saints returned home renewed spiritually and with a determination to go forward. At 6.30 in the evening Annabell Traub was baptized by R. E. Madden, and confirmed at the evening service by R. E. Madden and G. H. Kirkendall. Brother Kirkendall's evening theme was "Sacrifice."

"The Need of the Church Today" was the topic of a special sermon preached by Apostle J. A. Gillen June 9.

Twenty-two members were counted at the meeting of the Women's Department the middle of June. In the program Sister Ethel Kirkendall gave a sketch of the life of John Greenleaf Whittier and read part of his poem, "Snowbound," and "Trailing Arbutis." A paper, "Living with a Purpose," was read by Mrs. Caslow. The women in their spring rummage sale netted more than fifty-five dollars.

The Children's Day program was appreciated by the congregation. In the evening Apostle Clyde F. Ellis preached on the text: "And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved."

Bishop H. E. French and C. W. Clark, pastor of First Branch, have been recent speakers, giving helpful discourses.

Beautiful Service of Baptism

Tacoma, Washington

The Saints met by pre-arrangement on the banks of a pretty stream where a small dam had made a pool which was surrounded by ferns and mammoth fir and cedar trees. The hour was eight o'clock on the quiet morn of Children's Day. Pastor J. B. Snyder led the candidates, one boy and three girls, through a flower-covered arch into the water. It was his first service of baptism and he carried it out with ease and grace.

The confirmation service was held during the church school service at ten o'clock. Brother Snyder was assisted by Brother P. P. Reed, of Puyallup. A wonderful degree of God's Holy Spirit was present throughout the day, and all were uplifted by it.

"Reading in the Herald of the many beautiful services of baptism on Children's Day," writes Sister Joseph T. McGuire, the Tacoma reporter, "has given me a desire to tell Herald readers the above. It was a service that we of Tacoma will long remember."

Denver, Colorado

Activities of the Denver Branch have been going on much the same as usual. With the coming of fine weather, the attendance has dropped off somewhat, the lure of the mountains being very strong in the summer.

The members of the Drama Club presented their play, "Granny," in the preliminary contest of the State Inter-church Tournament of Religious Drama on May 26. Although they did not receive the decision, they gave a very creditable performance. We were pleased to have the judges announce the part of Granny, played by Sister Bertha Black, as the outstanding character portrayal of the evening.

On the evening of May 26, Miss Virginia Jones and Mr. Ray Lucas were married at the church by the pastor, in the presence of close relatives and a few intimate friends. They will make their home in Denver.

Another very pretty wedding took place Sunday afternoon, June 7, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Williams in Denver, when their niece, Miss Audrey Fern McCaslin, was united in marriage to Mr. John Compton. The service was read by Elder E. J. Williams, uncle of the bride, in the presence of relatives. Fern is the daughter of Mrs. Phoebe McCaslin and the late Thomas O. McCaslin. These young people will live in Denver.

Mrs. Mae Manchester passed away May 25, at her home in Denver, after a long illness. She was the daughter of Sister Elizabeth Beardsmore, and had lived in Denver since 1887. She leaves, besides her mother, her husband, Louis Manchester, one sister, three brothers, and many friends.

The Young People's Group took their lunch to Washington Park after the service Sunday morning, held their regular monthly meeting, and spent a very enjoyable afternoon under the trees. About thirty young folks were present. They plan to hold their next meeting in the hills.

June 14 we had our Children's Day program at the church, which was enjoyed by all. There were several exercises and songs by the beginner and primary departments. Two babies were blessed—Dolores Alice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ament, and Margaret Viola, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Burrell. One child was baptized—the little grandson of Brother Freeman Bullard, who officiated.

Sunday, June 21, was a day full of good things. At 8:30 o'clock in the morning a prayer meeting was held as the opening service of Sacrifice Week in which much spiritual strength was gained. Indeed, at all services of the day a great degree of the Holy Spirit was evident. During the church school hour the pastor spoke to the young people with great earnestness and power. We had the privilege of listening to Bishop G. L. DeLapp, of Independence, at the 11 o'clock service, who gave us words of encouragement as well as of warning. The day closed with a splendid sermon by Apostle E. J. Gleazer. There was a good attendance at all services.

Hagerman, Idaho

Rally Day for this branch was held May 31 and marked by good attendance. All branches in the district, with the exception of Boise, were represented.

The purpose of this day was to make arrangements for the coming reunion, to be held at Hagerman, August 14 to 24.

Services of the day were: Prayer meeting at 9.30 a. m.; church school; sermon by Brother W. A. Connel, of Rupert at the 11.30 service; basket dinner at noon on the church lawn which was enjoyed by more than one hundred people. The afternoon was spent in round table and business meetings.

It was unanimously voted to have the reunion. Conference for the election of district officers will be held the last Saturday and Sunday of the reunion.

On Sunday evening District Missionary O. W. Okerlind was the speaker.

Toronto, Canada

The convention of the young people is over and the sermons by Elder R. D. Weaver are completed for a time, but we must go forward to other things. They say that stagnant water breeds malaria, so we must not stand still.

The baseball teams and tennis club representing the church are keeping the young people together. We have three baseball teams in the Toronto Interchurch League and they wear uniforms with the name of the church across the front. This gives us publicity that we would otherwise never have. It is a pleasure to pick up our daily papers and see reports of our coming leaders representing us in the field of good clean sport.

The Department of Women at its March quarterly business meeting turned over five hundred dollars for interest, on the church mortgage and at its quarterly business meeting June 25, the women again turned in over five hundred dollars for the same purpose. This is in addition to the many other things that they are engaged in, friendly visiting, catering for church conventions and conferences, and arranging lectures along educational lines. Mrs. James A. Wilson, the superintendent, with the other officers of the department, is ably assisting the branch.

The class on church history, conducted each Monday night by Pastor J. L. Prentice, held its last session for the season last Monday. There was a good interest shown by the attendance during the season, and they voted their desire to continue in the fall.

The officers of the branch tried to emphasize the importance of Sacrifice Week and on the closing Sunday, June 28, at the morning prayer service collected over seven hundred dollars for the general church. These collections made by the branch and departments are cash turned in at the time and not pledges. It is encouraging to see that, although there is a depression in the world today, the Toronto Saints are giving their hearty support.

The Toronto district reunion will be held from July 26 to August 9, and we are looking forward to it, when we expect to see Patriarch F. A. Smith, Elder George Mesley, and the others.

On Children's Day a special service was held by the junior department at which they had charge of the whole program. There were eight baptisms during the day, which makes ten baptisms for the month of June. The superintendent of this department is Mrs. Charles Marshall.

Pleasant Valley Branch

Lucasville, Ohio

June 7 was a day long anticipated by Saints living in the vicinity of Portsmouth and Lucasville, Ohio, and for it they had made very adequate preparations. On that day Saints of McDermott, Portsmouth West Side Mission, and Pleasant Valley Branches were to meet for union services at the Pleasant Valley Church. Wishing to give the meeting the best kind of a setting, men and women of Pleasant Valley Branch went to work renovating and cleaning the church edifice. The men painted the house inside and out. The women scrubbed the floor, cleaned the woodwork, bought a hall runner to reach from the door to the rostrum, and papered the lower window panes with pretty paper. Flowers in abundance were brought in for the rally day.

District President A. E. Anderton, of Columbus, arrived June 6 and preached a splendid discourse to a large congregation. Sunday morning at eight o'clock nearly all the priesthood from the three branches mentioned were present for a worship and sacrament meeting.

The Sunday school was called to order at 9.30 by William Altman, the assistant superintendent, and after preliminaries Brothers Anderton and O. A. Rexroad, of the missionary force, were called upon to speak.

The sacrament hour opened at ten o'clock, and all the elders of the congregation were on the platform. About seventy partook of the emblems, and a wonderful spirit prevailed. At noon lunch was eaten on the church lawn.

The day's services had been planned to include a sermon by Bishop H. E. French, of Columbus, and almost two hundred people were gathered to hear him. But Brother French was unable to be present and his place was taken by Brother Anderton who spoke on prophecy; then Brother Rexroad talked on baptism. It was four o'clock when this service concluded, and the members dispersed.

The spirit of this day still lives in the hearts of the people who were present at the services and causes them to hope for another day of reunion and meetings. This they will have in the home-coming day.

It is the hope of the members in this part of Ohio that the Saints in all the branches are enjoying the Spirit of the Master, and that they are striving to serve him.

Fort Sumner, New Mexico

Elder G. H. Wixom, on his way home to California from his Texas mission field, stopped in Fort Sumner and conducted a series of meetings. He began June 6.

The people of the Christian Church generously loaned the Saints their church except for the Sunday's services. More nonmembers attended the meetings than ever before, and every sermon was thoroughly enjoyed.

One girl, the daughter of church members, was baptized. Two little children whose parents are nonmembers were blessed by Brother Wixom.

The sacrament service June 7 was especially enjoyed, as it is not often the Saints can commune in this service of the church. Brother Wixom is the only elder who ever visits Fort Sumner.

New Philadelphia, Ohio

Father's Day was carried out with a well-arranged program. Glen Cramer gave a short talk on a young man's viewpoint of a father, Charlene Hensel gave a talk on a young woman's views of a father, and Sister Hazel Noble discussed the wife's viewpoint. Brother Charles Cramer preached a short sermon on "Father," and Brother Richard Watkins and daughter, Anna, sang the duet, "Beautiful Hands." A mixed quartet sang, "Faith of Our Fathers."

The Women's Department held a successful meeting June 18. Sister Nettie Bigler, who is in charge of the social activities, arranged a program, the theme being "The Church." A reading, "I Am the Church," was given by Sister Edna Howells; Sisters Dorothy Briggs and Ruby Angus sang, "Glorious Things Are Sung of Zion"; Sister Bigler gave a reading, on the eighty-seventh anniversary of the death of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. The meeting was closed by singing "Consecration." Members of the department plan to make articles for the Kirtland reunion. The church has been recently renovated with a coat of paint, and the Women's Department purchased a new carpet.

One new member has been added to our number, Brother George Vestal, who was baptized and confirmed some weeks ago by Elder John Carlisle. Brother Vestal, seventy-four years old, is a resident of Uhrichsville.

In honor of the perfect attendance for the first six months of Brother Charles Cramer's adult class, a special affair was arranged by the officers of the Sunday school. A short program included remarks by Elder William Goudy and Brother Cramer, and a dialogue by Edith and Joanne Rees. Then refreshments were served the guests.

Tucson, Arizona

Elder W. A. Brooner, pastor of this branch, is a splendid and considerate man. "I have known him for more than thirty-five years," writes W. P. Bootman, "and he is the same good brother he was when I first knew him back in the days when I did not belong to the church."

Sister Brooner is the Sunday school chorister and a true Saint in all her undertakings.

There are two other elders here, Brother McDole and Brother John Lamb, a priest, Brother Taylor, and a good group of members. The meeting place is a hall in the Consolidated Bank Building, fourth floor. Preaching is had at 11 o'clock on Sunday morning and 8 o'clock in the evening; Sunday school at 9.45. Sister McDole is superintendent of the Sunday school and branch chorister. The Saints are faithful in attending services.

"Two weeks ago," continues Brother Bootman, "I baptized five, a father and mother and two of their children and one boy of another family. Brother Brooner and I confirmed them and blessed three children. We had a nice day. Brother Cramer made a baptismal font at his home. It is of cement five feet wide, eight feet long, three and one half feet deep and has built-in steps. It is as nice and well finished as any I have seen in church buildings. We hope to use it many times."

The Saints in Tucson observed Sacrifice Week.

The Saints of Clinton, Missouri, hold Sunday school every Sunday afternoon at the home of Sister Roy Payne, 301 South Orchard Avenue. When all are present there are thirty in this little band. They seek the prayers of the church that they shall prove faithful and by their works bring others into the kingdom of God. Sister Ermina Perkins Kearney is their superintendent.

Pasadena, California

There are a few wide awake Saints living in Pasadena who meet, under the leadership of Jesse R. Johnson, on Tuesday nights at 96 South El Molino Avenue, the home of Brother and Sister T. E. Masters, for preaching services.

Such speakers are heard as Elder Eli Bronson, Apostle Myron A. McConley, Elder E. D. Chase, Elder Jesse Johnson, and occasionally Elder George Wixom when he comes to visit his daughter, Sister Green. He recently gave us a fine gospel sermon based on "And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation." (Acts 17: 26.) Doctor A. W. Teel gave a fine lecture on the Word of Wisdom a short time ago.

On Sunday evenings an alert group has been studying the Doctrine and Covenants at the home of Gertrude Lentz Kirkpatrick, S. C. Elliott and Elder Johnson instructors. Having finished the outline by Apostle Edwards, we are starting the study of the Book of Mormon.

Monthly prayer meetings are spiritual and uplifting.

The women are beginning to make things move by organizing a club to be known as the Pasadena La Da Sa Club. Its purpose is to study, visit the Saints, sew and raise funds in various ways to help carry on the work, under the leadership of Edith Wixom Green and Ednah M. Strong.

The school year having closed and vacation time having arrived, summer months are calling to different ones to go here and there to find a change and rest or on business. Brother and Sister Masters have left for their ranch in Wyoming, where they will spend the summer. They were kind enough to leave their home open and in charge of Brother and Sister Strong, for the use of the Saints in their absence. This is much appreciated.

Brother and Sister Wiseman have moved to Long Beach. We shall miss them, for our association has been very pleasant.

"I Will Call You Friends"

CAN A MAN BE A FRIEND TO CHRIST AND NOT BE A FRIEND TO HIS CHURCH?

An address by President Elbert A. Smith, to the Saints of Zion, delivered in the Auditorium, Sunday afternoon, June 28, 1931.

When the disciples stood on the Mount of Transfiguration where all was peace and joy they were filled with enthusiasm and said, "It is good for us to be here." But when they were storm tossed and in trouble on the sea of Galilee they seemed to lose, not only faith and hope, but even charity. They rebuked the Lord himself and said, "Is it nothing to thee that we perish?"

I suppose it is human nature that all of us should be blue some of the time and some of us seem to be blue all of the time. Most of us come occasionally to the Mount of Transfiguration but no one of us is permitted to abide there—not yet. It seems to be human nature that we should think of the present difficulty in the church, the present trouble in the church as the worst ever experienced and that it will never end.

IN OLD JERUSALEM

It is to be observed by the record that after Christ had been crucified the disciples lost all hope. Peter threw up his hands and said, "It is all over, and as for me I am going fishing." That was simply his defense against despair. He was not a man of thought. He was a man of action. He had to do something. And yet even in that dark hour the news of the resurrection was just about to break on their ears. Pentecost was only a few days down the calendar.

Later when the early Christians were driven and scattered from Jerusalem no doubt they thought it was a time of very great trouble, and it is almost certain, human nature being as it is, that some of them lost faith and departed from the church. As a matter of fact those who were faithful "went everywhere preaching the word" and the church entered on a great era of missionary and pastoral activity, building churches everywhere.

IN MISSOURI

When the Saints were driven from Independence, and later from Missouri under the edict of the governor that they should leave the state or be exterminated, no doubt they felt that was the greatest trouble that had ever come upon the people of God. Many of them turned away from the cause. And yet only a few years later the church entered upon the greatest period of development (under the endowment received at Kirtland) that it has ever known.

IN NAUVOO AND LATER

Eighty-seven years ago when Joseph and Hyrum lay slaughtered, eighty-seven years ago yesterday, it was a dark day. When I was in Nauvoo recently I heard of a man who lived in Keokuk at the time who received a letter inviting him to come to the vicinity of Nauvoo and play his fiddle for a dance in celebration of the murder of Joseph Smith. We can realize the feeling that surrounded the Saints in that day of their sorrow; and can imagine the feelings of despair of the people later in the "dark and cloudy day," but in a few years they entered upon the era of the Reorganization. It was a restoration and reorganization morally as well as physically and was made possible because there were those who endured the trials and did not lose their courage; and hence for nearly eighty years the Reorganization has gone forward with honor and with blessing.

UNDER THE ROD TODAY

Now, today, the church is under some difficulty. We must remember that when a child is disciplined and learns the lessons of obedience and turns to the father for help there is a reunion and a blessing and a fellowship that is worth the discipline. The church is under trial today, largely because of world conditions, partly because of our own mistakes. But if we will learn the lesson, make the sacrifice, draw near to our heavenly Father, there is no reason why history should not repeat itself and we enter upon a period of revival and blessings beyond our present realization.

But if we do this we must stand fast under this present situation. I remember how in 1915 when President Joseph Smith lay dead and President Frederick M. Smith was very ill with pneumonia in the East, not able to take his place, I was required to preside at the conference and there developed a great difficulty in that conference over conditions in the Bishop's office. (Some people think trouble just began yesterday or today, but as a matter of fact trouble is a very old citizen.) In the midst of our controversy a prominent elder stood up in the congregation and said, if thus and so is not done I will quit. That aroused me and I said, "I do not know what may happen to me before I die. I do not want to boast, because any man may fall away, but if I continue to feel as I feel now, when I voluntarily quit there will not be one plank left to stand on." That is the way I feel today. I do not know what may happen in the future, but that is the way I feel now, stronger for the church than I ever did before. I notice that other man long ago quit, because it was in his mind to quit; but the resolution that I made on that day has helped me in many a dark hour. I hope I will be able to keep it because I am sure there will never come a time when there will not be something solid to stand on: "On this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

WHAT SORT OF "FRIENDS" ARE WE?

Jesus said to his disciples, "I will call you my friends." We are to be the friends of Christ. What kind of a friend do you appreciate? Do you think a man can be a friend to Christ and not be a friend to his church? I doubt it. What kind of a friend do you appreciate? The one who stands by you when all is fair and your pocket is full of money and then when you are in trouble turns his back on you and says, "It is all your own fault anyway, I am through." No, you appreciate the friend who stands by you in darkness and in storm as well as in the period of prosperity and blessing, "A friend in need is a friend indeed." He may know that you have made mistakes and he will tell you about them at the proper time, but he helps you in the hour of need. Are we friends to the church in foul weather as well as in fair weather? If we are, there comes to us a certain admonition from the past. "Stand fast, quit yourselves like men."

I believe that the church has many friends and we receive today the evidence of their friendship and trust that God will receive and bless them and you. Because in the dark days of the past there were those who stood fast, today we can sing, "Faith of our fathers, living still in spite of dungeon, fire and sword." We think of the martyrs at Nauvoo: "In spite of dungeon, fire and sword," was more than poetry—it has been in the past and may be in the future. If our grandchildren sing that song it will be because we, today, in the midst of world confusion and conflict and in a time when the church is torn, stand fast, true friends to Christ and his church.

Encouraging Statistics

Indications of progress are always encouraging, and no report of progress is more satisfactory to a missionary church than news of the fact that additional members have been brought into the ranks.

The report of the Department of Statistics for the month of June, given in this issue, makes particularly good reading. Brother Olson's comment makes the month's achievement particularly clear: "It is better than the month of June last year and has been exceeded only twice in the past twelve years, in 1929 and 1921."

The Results of "Sacrifice Week"

There are two elements to be considered in measuring the results of any sacrifice. One of these elements is material, the other spiritual. The one measures returns in terms of actual money received; the other sets up as a standard the spiritual development of those who sacrifice.

It is perhaps unfortunate that in the present financial stress both in the church and in the world, we are compelled to place an undue emphasis upon the material side. As everyone knows, the work of the church lags because of the lack of funds. It is therefore not surprising that every loyal Saint is anxious for first-hand information as to the cash receipts resulting from the recent intensive period of sacrifice.

In the official column of this issue, our readers will find a statement over the signature of the Presiding Bishopric which gives us the assurance that as soon as possible, and that in the very near future, such detailed information will be furnished. Since we happen to know that the Bishop's office is doing everything within its power to hasten this work, and that it is their determined policy to keep the church membership informed, not only in regard to the results of the sacrifice period but in all other matters bearing on the financial condition of the church, we would urge that our readers wait patiently. A detailed statement of the actual facts is well worth waiting for.

In the meantime, what are the returns of Sacrifice Week in spiritual values? Such results are of course difficult to measure. Scores of letters reach the desk of the First Presidency each week. They come from all quarters of the church. They express the sincere convictions of both members and ministry. If we may judge from these, the "spiritual returns" of Sacrifice Week have been outstanding. Many branches and districts report a spiritual revival. Letters received indicate that men, women, and children have found within their hearts a greatly increased attachment for the church and a greater determination to give their all if need be that it shall triumph.

One of the general appointees reports that in eight or ten of the large branches which he visited during Sacrifice Week he heard not one word of criticism of the appeal that had gone out from headquarters for fasting, prayer, and sacrifice. Another reports that in his territory a greater percentage of the total church membership had contributed to the support of the church than ever before.

A number of personal testimonies of devotion and sacrifice—sacrifice that really costs—have reached this office. There is every evidence that hundreds of our people have gone without not only luxuries and comforts but sometimes those things they might legitimately feel were necessities, for the sake of the church. This list includes the wives of missionaries under appointment, widows of former missionaries, young men and women in college, some of whom are under the necessity of working for their expenses and need every penny they can get in order to pull through; children who unknown to their parents have caught the spirit of sacrifice and have willingly denied themselves some "thing" or pleasure that meant much to them, and older folks, too, who gave choice keepsakes which they had cherished for years.

The details of most of these stories will never be known except to the giver and to God. Our conviction that the "spiritual returns" of Sacrifice Week have justified its cost rests upon the assurance that self-denial for a cause such as this church represents, which is none other than the cause of Christ on earth, is bound to bring spiritual development. This assurance rests in the promises of Jesus himself. In Matthew we read: "Everyone that hath forsaken houses or brethren or sisters or father or mother or wife or children or lands for my name's sake shall receive an hundredfold and shall inherit everlasting life."

While waiting for a report of the "cash returns," let us not underestimate the "spiritual returns" which have come to each of us because we have found it within our hearts to yield something of our very selves that the cause which we love dearer than life itself shall yet triumph. May the "hundredfold" returns promised by Jesus be the blessing of all those who have thus shared, and may these spiritual values appear so beautiful and meaningful that those who have not sensed their worth or been willing to pay the price necessary to obtain them shall no longer be content to live within themselves and for themselves, having learned that he who "loses his life for my sake shall find it."

OFFICIAL

Most of the Saints are anxiously waiting for word giving the result of the sacrifice period. We had hoped to be in a position to make a report in this issue of the Herald, but find that some bishops and agents' reports for June have not been received.

The bishops and agents have given splendid cooperation, however, and we feel sure that the remaining reports will be received in the next few days, and as soon as received, information relative to the sacrifice results will be published. It is also hoped that additional figures bearing upon church finances will then be available.

The reports received thus far appear somewhat encouraging, and we are sure the Saints have responded in most instances according to their ability.

How One Group of Women Helped

What a women's club did to help their local church in a situation of financial difficulty may furnish both example and inspiration to others.

Last Wednesday night this editor was invited to attend a banquet at Central Church in Kansas City given by the women's club in what they called their "jubilee" for presenting to the local bishop, C. A. Skinner, the total proceeds of their activities.

The ingenuity displayed in finding ways to make money was truly astonishing. Some of the ladies made as much as thirty dollars apiece by furnishing "jitney service" to other members who attended church. These other members, instead of riding the street cars, rode to church with neighbors who had automobiles, paying the usual fare to the drivers, who turned the money into the fund. Some baked cakes, cinnamon rolls, and a fine quality of whole wheat bread. Others made dresses for neighbors and friends, and one sister even made coats. It was inspiring to sit and hear the frankness and humility with which the sisters related how they had raised their money. Some laughingly admitted washing clothes for sick neighbors, or for bachelor young men. And one enterprising woman made a director of the church members in the stake, selling advertising and making a profit of about three hundred and fifty dollars. Many other means of making money were employed.

At the close of the banquet a check for more than sixteen hundred dollars was presented to the bishop. This was from about half a year's work.

Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths Sees Sixty-sixth Year in Church Work

On the occasion of the sixty-sixth anniversary of his entry into the church work, Patriarch Gomer T. Griffiths wrote the following letter which we take pleasure in presenting to the readers of the Herald. Brother Griffiths, known everywhere and held in high esteem by the church people, looks back over a career that has been filled with activity in important positions in the organization. His faith, his strong testimony, and the strength that have all helped carry him through life are expressed in this letter:

UNIOPOLIS, OHIO, June 5, 1931.

Editors Saints' Herald,

Dear Brethren:

Sixty-six years ago today I was baptized a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Saint David, Fulton County, Illinois, by Brother Jeremiah Jeremiah. Brother Jeremiah was a Seventy and one of the first to represent the Reorganization in South Wales. At the time of my baptism he was president of the Saint David Branch; he was a very capable minister and greatly loved by all, old and young.

A few days previous to my baptism the late Joseph Smith paid a visit to our branch and it was through his influence and the preaching he did that I was moved upon to ask for baptism. A short time before this quite a number of young people had been baptized but at this time I did not feel so inclined. Soon after the visit of Joseph Smith, however, I met Brother Jeremiah on the street at which time I asked him to baptize him. I was ten years, one month and three days old when I united with the church. At that time the Reorganization numbered only a few hundred in all the world.

The Saints at Saint David had erected a small chapel which also served as a schoolhouse for a time; I presume this building was one of the first owned by the church. Very many of the leading ministers visited Saint David in those early days, among whom were W. W. Blair, who was one of the first Twelve; he was called the silver orator; David H. Smith, who was known as the sweet singer of Israel; I remember him very distinctly; he went to school or college at Canton, five miles from Saint David; he was a good musician and a lovely singer, and in my opinion, a poet and artist; Mark H. Forscutt, one of the greatest orators the church has ever had.

I surely had great respect and love in my heart for those men of God in the days of my youth and I truly thank God that I also had parents who inculcated in my heart reverence for God and his gospel.

At the time of the visit of the President of the Church to Saint David little did I realize that within ten years I would be traveling with him in the ministry and later associated with him in the high councils of the church. I surely did love him and can certify that he was truly a man of God, one who had the confidence of the ministry. I often think of him and the wise advice he gave me as a young man and inexperienced in the things of this world and the church.

Parents and the ministry should be very much concerned in the young people and take an interest in them, even go out of their way at times to gain their confidence as one never knows into what they may develop in their day and generation. One can not take it for granted that because some of them are seemingly indifferent that their future is a blank. I have seen very many such children develop to be bright lights in the world and in the church. There is an old saying, "One can never tell how far a toad can jump until he makes the leap." I often wonder when talking with small boys what use the Lord will have for them when they grow to manhood. Who would have thought that I would some day be a Seventy, High Priest, Apostle, Patriarch in the church? If Joseph Smith, at the time of his visit, had delivered a prophecy to the Saints in the Saint David Branch to the effect that I, a poor Welch coal miner's boy, would some day occupy in these offices, they would then and there have branded him a false prophet. We often sing, "God moves in a mysterious way His wonders to perform."

Nearly fifty years ago I visited the home of Brother Richard Baldwin; he was then quite a boy

Dignity and Beauty in Ministry

By Elbert A. Smith

II. MINISTERIAL DEPARTMENT

The people expect and demand more of the minister than of any other man in public life. Many people seem to go on the theory that a lawyer may be a very "good lawyer" and not necessarily be a very good man. A physician may be regarded as a very "good doctor" though his habits may not be considered so good as his pills. But people are generally agreed in their contempt for a minister who is a "good preacher" but not a good man. Here is one instance where practice must not be divorced from precept.

The Word Becomes Flesh

It is a part of the business of the ordained man to live his religion. In Christ, we are told, "the word became flesh and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth." Christ said, "As the Father hath sent me into the world so send I you." People demand, and rightly so, that in the minister the word shall become flesh and that it shall be full of grace and truth.

Both in the pulpit and out of it the minister should be a gentleman—and more than that term ordinarily implies. He should be a Christian gentleman, which means a gentleman plus. The cross of Christ is always the sign of addition.

Dignity is not stiffness, or rather stiffness is not necessarily dignity. Sam Jones used to say that there will be time enough for the minister to be stiff after he is dead. A minister may be affable, genial, a "good mixer," and yet retain his dignity. Dignity is consistent with humility; it is not consistent with arrogance or superior airs of any sort.

Time was when in the public mind the minister occupied a position exalted in some ways above that of all other public men. The minister, the lawyer, the doctor, the dominie, the magistrate—the minister had first place. That time is past. In the Protestant churches divisions and schisms, wranglings and disputations have helped to undermine that prestige. And the general decline of reverence for things religious has helped to change the situation.

Ours a Unique Position

Our ministry has occupied a unique position. At the first we had no share in the respect given to the clergy. We were looked upon with contempt and hostility. To a degree that situation has changed. While the stock of others has fallen in the opinion of the world, ours has risen. In some places it is higher than that of others of the clergy. An editor in one of our Western towns stated that he habitually gave preference to our ministers in his columns. In some places this is due to a feeling that we have had less of form and cant and more of real, old-time religion.

Among our own people, too, the position of our ministry has been unique. Our belief regarding the restoration of the gospel and priesthood authority has put our ordained men in an unusual position. A renewed commission brings the sense of divine authority nearer to our day and comprehension.

Our ministers should so deport themselves as to preserve the confidence and respect of our own people and win an ever increasing degree of confidence from observing and worth-while men and women of the world. It can be done. It must be done. Through the late President Joseph Smith the Lord promised us "grace and favor in the eyes of the people," contingent upon wise and righteous living. We have seen a gratifying fulfillment of the promise, but its full meaning yet awaits development.

What Place Has Humor?

The question of humor arises. It seems strange that there is no place found for humor in the Scriptures—that is, in the text of the Scriptures, unless it be, as some allege, that when Christ stooped to write in the sand on that occasion, he chuckled to himself as he thought how neatly he was to spring the trap (harmlessly to himself) that had been set for him when he should arise to tell the Pharisees: "Let him among you that is without sin cast the first stone." Irony and sarcasm we find, as when Elijah told the priests of Baal to shout louder—their god was probably asleep.

Yet it is difficult to believe that the apostles of old did not at times enliven their relations with humor. To do so is only human. Today humor is so much a part of our habit of life that it must be reckoned with by the minister; its advantages retained and its dangers avoided. It is "excess of laughter" against which we are warned (Doctrine and Covenants 85: 19). There may even be a place for humor in the pulpit—if there is not, then some of us are great sinners. Humor may serve betimes as a safety valve. We have seen very tense and dangerous moments in our General Conferences relieved and the feeling changed by a shaft of wit that like a ray of sunshine through a dark cloud reminded all that the sun yet shone.

But the minister should be sure that his humor is never of the kind that wounds. A joke that hurts some one is no joke. He should see to it that his jokes are not smutty. His stories should not be of the "smoky" variety, to quote Bishop Ellis Short. There is plenty of clean humor, the other kind is not needed; like a flake of soot on a fair cheek, it leaves its mark on the minister, no matter how lightly he may laugh it off. To change the figure: Sometimes memory is like a sheep's tail—it will gather up and carry the cockleburs from a field and leave all the wheat. A shady story may stick in the mind long after we have forgotten the rest of the sermon. I wish no one to remember me by such cockleburs of speech.

In the pulpit the minister who uses humor should be certain that it very aptly illustrates his line of thought; it must exactly fit the case and "point" the argument. In that way he may conserve the advantages of humor as a means of holding attention and firmly fixing an argument in the minds of his hearers. A story that is obviously just dragged in by the neck because it is funny, though it may have no proper relation to its setting, is an offense. The minister is not called upon to be a clown or an "end man" either in or out of the pulpit. The "king's fools" in the kingdom of heaven are a different sort of fool. Paul said he was willing to be "called a fool" for the gospel's sake; but he was not thinking of clown's tricks.

Personal Relations

The minister comes into very close relations with his people; but he must reserve a line over which he will not go in familiarity with men and women. This is particularly true of his relations with women. He is peculiarly exposed to dangers and temptations in that regard. A prominent figure in the public eye, often gifted in speech and in person, he wins admiration and interest and sometimes women flock around him like bees around a honey pot. Foolish ones may fairly throw themselves at his head.

He is often a guest in private homes on very intimate terms with the family. In the midst of all these relations he must determine to keep sacred the trust reposed in him by the church and the people and by his Master. He should never betray the trust of a home at whose altar he has worshiped and at whose table he has eaten. He should never betray the trust of man, woman, or child.

There are two dangers which threaten his ministry in this connection. First, he is always watched with a critical eye. Even though his intentions are entirely innocent, any undue familiarity with women not of his own household is at once noted and commented upon. A flame of scandal may be lighted by a very small spark and burn up his usefulness almost over night. The man who is warned of such a danger should not resent the warning, as some do, but should profit by it. Better to entirely forego the pleasures of an innocent friendship than to jeopardize one's whole ministry. To avoid "the very appearance of evil" was the advice given of old time; and it is still timely. The second danger is even more real: that the minister may actually yield to a temptation with which he has played in thoughtless moments.

A Timely Warning

The general priesthood were gathered together for communion service at the General Conference of 1926. At that time, under the spirit of prophecy, the following warning was given:

"You have done well, saith your Lord, to come unto me at this time and in this manner. You have come in obedience to your calling and your choosing, for you have not chosen me but I have chosen you and I have ordained you and sent you forth that you might bear fruit and that your fruit might remain.

"When my Son was upon the earth, he said to his disciples, 'Henceforth I call you not servants; but I have called you friends.' Have you within your hearts this morning the realization of what it must mean to be the friend of Jesus Christ?

"You have received of the emblems of his broken body and his shed blood; and some of you have borne the vessels that have contained those emblems. I would remind you that before time I have said unto you, 'Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord.' You must be clean in body. You must be clean in your thought. You must be clean in speech and conduct. I give this one word of warning to you at this time, that you should beware of the spirit of adultery that is coming into the world. You should beware even of allowing it to lead you into conduct that is frivolous or unministerial and unseemly. Some have failed in this matter and they have gone down into great tribulation and sorrow.

"You are admonished to keep yourselves clean and to resist and flee from temptation, that not even in your conduct shall you give the Saints cause to suspect you or to lose confidence in you. When you go into homes where you are trusted, and the women of the church impose every confidence in you, and the men of the church trust you with all that is near and dear to them, I admonish you to be on your guard and worthy of such trust that you may return to the house of the Lord pure in body and in mind."

Citadels of Rectitude and Reason

Not long ago one of the apostles said that when that word was given he thought the one speaking was somewhat over-exercised in his own mind; but events had convinced him that the warning was from the Lord and that it was needed. Sad tragedies have occurred. Men have yielded to the spirit of adultery which assailed them in subtle and alluring forms, and they have fallen, bringing shame and sorrow that can not be measured upon themselves, their families, and the church. Brilliant, capable men have been lost to us in that way. Let the minister be warned. The Devil is a powerful adversary. One who plays his game will be beaten—and then exposed.

The sexual appeal is the most powerful appeal that may seek to overthrow the citadels of rectitude and reason. Or rather it seeks to draw one from the safety of those citadels. One prominent physician says that there seems to be "a zone of sexual imbecility." One drawn into that zone loses his sense of values. All things worth while to him in life are thrown away for a moment of pleasure—afterward a lifetime of regret. Men who have set in judgment upon others and have ordered their expulsion for this very sin have themselves yielded at a later moment. There seem to be times, then, when it is the part of courage, or at least of wisdom, to "flee from temptation," to withdraw from its presence and into the citadels of rectitude and reason.

The total of 531 baptisms for June presents a very favorable showing. It is better than the month of June last year and has been exceeded only twice in the past twelve years, in 1929 and 1921. This year was well above the average for this period, exceeding the same by almost a hundred.

The total of 531 baptisms was distributed as follows:

Zion and the Stakes .....	146
United States and Canada outside Stakes.....	356
Society Islands Mission .....	27
Holland Mission .....	2
Total .....	531

Independence and the Stakes lined up as follows:

Holden Stake .....	14
Kansas City Stake .....	10
Lamoni Stake .....	7
Total .....	146

Among the districts outside the stakes the outstanding one this month was the Spring River District with a total of 28 baptisms, credited to six different branches. Joplin, Missouri, had 8 baptisms; Pittsburg, Kansas, 7 baptisms; Nowata, Oklahoma, 5 baptisms; Carthage, Missouri, 4 baptisms; Webb City, Missouri, 3 baptisms, and Fairland, Oklahoma, 1 baptism.

The Northern Saskatchewan District also did well, with a total of 19 baptisms. Ten of these were performed at Grand Plains, Saskatchewan, and 9 at Saskatoon.

From the above list it will be seen that the baptisms were performed in a wide range of places in the United States and Canada, and indicating that the missionary spirit is widely diffused throughout the country.

Weekly Health Letter

2.—Hardening of the Arteries

By A. W. Teel, M. D., Church Physician

Hardening arteries or arteriosclerosis is a very serious condition, and deaths from it are rapidly becoming more frequent in this country. Poisons circulating in the blood are the cause of this disease, and the most active of the poisons are lead, syphilis, alcohol, tea, coffee, and meat. It is always an indication of premature old age. The most prominent symptom is a high blood pressure, which is seldom noticeable, and causes very little inconvenience in the beginning. Outdoor life is essential together with moderate exercise, warm baths—not hot, and every possible means to suppress the development and absorption of the poisons. It is a progressive disease and those suffering from it must fight with great thoroughness and persistence. The final result is apoplexy, Bright's disease, heart disease, or a combination of all three. It is a life-long struggle which must be kept up if the individual wishes to live for any considerable length of time. The complications are cirrhosis of the liver, Bright's disease, and apoplexy.

The diet is of the utmost importance. All red meats should be absolutely forbidden, and much better and quicker results will be obtained if meats are eliminated altogether. Vegetables and dairy foods form a good substitute. Fruits are important in the dietary, and in most cases should only be eaten between meals without sugar or cream.

Whatever diet may be prescribed for any particular case must be carefully watched. Buttermilk, sour milk, cultured milk may be taken for variety, in place of fruit. Starchy or sweet foods should be taken very sparingly. Fresh vegetables, such as lettuce, celery, tomatoes, parsnips, corn, etc., should predominate. Water is very important and should be pure and one should drink as much as the system requires. It is beneficial to drink the juice of lemon, orange, baked apple, berries or fruit of any kind in water a half-hour before breakfast. Use as little salt and seasoning as possible. The food should be chewed well and not eaten unless the individual is really hungry, leaving the table a little hungry.

My advice is for you to keep your mind off your ailment, and discuss it with no one but your doctor; to shun irritating environments; not to brood, but smile; and to learn to relax both physically and mentally.

The Advantages of a Small Church College

By Mabel Carlile

Just as I sat down to write this article the postman brought a letter from one of our last year's students who lives in a large University city. She says:

"It seems good to be home again but I surely miss Graceland. My parents are very pleased with the progress I have made and I am so glad I went to Graceland this year instead of the University."

Why is this particular student sure, at the end of one year, that she has made a wise choice? What has Graceland to offer that a large university does not? Surely not buildings, laboratory equipment and many degrees. A great university has more of these than most small church colleges will ever have. But do these things really constitute an educational institution? Buildings and degrees have never educated anyone and they never will. William James says the greatest factor in education is personality. The only thing that educates men and women are men and women themselves.

We would not have you think that Graceland lacks good buildings, necessary equipment or even faculty members with degrees. It is a fully accredited three-year institution and the American Association of Colleges and Universities sees to it that their members maintain the same high standards of learning as the great universities. After all, a boy or girl who goes to college can listen to only one teacher at a time, can read only one book at a time, and can learn only so many facts in a day. Our students at Graceland perform the same laboratory experiments, study the same books, analyze the same chord structures and become acquainted with the same great names of history and literature as the university student does. Has Graceland, then, anything to offer that our boys and girls will not find in every school, especially the large university?

No one could be present at our recent Commencement, either as a graduate about to receive his diploma or as an "old grad" recalling his struggles with the curriculum and exams, without being impressed with the fact that Graceland consists after all of its fine spirit, its devoted faculty and its earnest students and not of its external equipment. These students who have just left our college may think that their education has consisted of the facts they have learned. They will know it is not so twenty years from now. Long after every fact is forgotten the memories and influences of certain personalities will still be bright.

The intimacy of personal contact between instructor and student is largely lost in the great university. We are expanding these institutions until they are becoming of mammoth size. It may even be necessary soon to install microphones in the classrooms in order to reach outlying students. Dr. Wiley, in an editorial in Good Housekeeping, concludes that, "The real specific benefit of the small college lies in the fact that its students are individuals. They know their professors. They are not simply a number in a huge herd without recognition or individuality. The whole benefit of personal contact with the professor, the advantage of his personal and sympathetic attention and his interest in each individual character as it is unfolded before him during the years of association are all lacking in this mass instruction. One dollar expended at Hanover, a small college in Indiana, gives as much culture as five at Harvard. As a graduate of both institutions, I can truly make this statement."

An educated person should be the kindest person, the finest person, the most honorable and the most considerate person in the world. If our college experience has not softened our hearts and made our spirits more refined, then we have gained nothing of culture. Where can we gain this priceless pearl better than in the small church college where faculty members teach, not for salary, ambition, or fame, but for sacrifice and love of the ideals they represent? In the small church college our young are guided by men and women who believe that the knowledge and light which will never die arose in Galilee. This, after all, is the supreme service and opportunity of our college.

What Is Sacrifice?

By C. L. M.

What is sacrifice? Is it giving something we don't need or have no use for? No, that is not sacrifice. Well then, what is sacrifice? As I understand sacrifice, it is giving something we value or need or want.

I am trying to think of something I can give up as a sacrifice. I don't go to picture shows or care to go, so if I give the price of a ticket to a show it would be no sacrifice. I don't drink soda pop and have no use for it for two reasons. It is spending money for that which contains no value, and it is harmful to the stomach; therefore, invites sickness, so to give the price of a dozen bottles of soda pop would be no sacrifice. I am puzzled to know what to give up as a sacrifice. I don't use tobacco in any form, nor do I drink tea or coffee. The only thing I can think of now is to go on two meals a day and give the cost of the other meal as a sacrifice. Which meal should I sacrifice, the one that costs the least?

No, that would be selfish. I will give up the most expensive one, which is the noon day meal.

One meal per day .20
Seven meals $1.40

My wife has solved the problem. She wanted a new summer hat, but she has decided to wear her last year's hat and give the money as a sacrifice. That reminds me, I need a light hat for summer, but I can wear my winter hat or go bare-headed. That would be sacrificing.

Come Saints, let us agree to deny ourselves, and take up the cross and make sacrifice week a bumper offering.

Tom King: A Life History

PART TWO

By C. H. Porter

A Serious Illness

When about thirteen years of age Tom fell ill. He was cared for at home for several weeks but his disability continuing, it was decided to take him to a hospital for treatment. He was kept there seven weeks and then sent home. He was still weak and the doctors gave but slight encouragement of ultimate recovery.

For many months he was totally unfit for farm labor or for active exercise. During this time it became apparent that Tom was a studious boy and a great lover of books. He read the Bible diligently, especially the stories and historical portions. He also learned to love many of the Psalms and was interested in the writings of Solomon.

Books were not so plentiful then as now, but the neighbors and others brought him what they could of their store, many of them thinking he had but a short span of life, hoping thereby to cheer him in his loneliness, he not being fit to associate with others in the activities of life.

In due course of time he became stronger and the doctor advised his parents that if work could be obtained that would not overtax his strength it would be better for him than too much study and not enough exercise. A position was found for him in which he had the oversight of fields of grain to protect them from destruction of crops by the birds.

This he was able to do. A gun was furnished him and he walked from field to field and wherever he found the birds working it was his duty to discharge the gun and scatter them. This gave him plenty of exercise in the open air and he gained strength so that when he was no longer needed there he was able to do other work.

After awhile he again felt his illness returning. He was determined, if possible, not to give up nor to yield to it, but one evening, long to be remembered, he could scarcely walk home. He reported himself ill, retired to his room, and for weeks was unable to leave his bed.

For months it was impossible for him to work and finally it was decided that he was not strong enough for farm labor. This decision was a matter of grave concern. His parents needed his help in the maintenance of the family. Tom was a reader and student but far from robust. He must, if possible, do something toward the family support. The question was, "What can we fit him for that will be suitable for him and profitable for the family?"

Tom Learns a Trade

It was decided that Tom must learn a trade. The question then arose of what trade and of whom. This was not easily answered. Tom was consulted, being now fifteen or sixteen years of age. It was finally decided that he should be apprenticed to George Tabron to learn to make shoes. Perhaps this was not a wise choice, but Tom's parents were anxious to keep him at home. Mr. Tabron was a neighbor and it seemed to be the best they could do.

Tom worked with a will. He tried to understand and to apply the knowledge acquired. He learned rapidly and became an expert workman in some portions of the trade, but after working with Mr. Tabron a considerable length of time it seemed that he was being held back from finishing his apprenticeship.

No definite time had been agreed upon, but Mr. Tabron was to advance him as rapidly as his ability would justify, and was to pay him wages according to what he was worth.

Tom felt that he was being held back from completing his apprenticeship so far as finishing work was concerned.

He was recognized as an expert in the work he did. Finally a competing neighbor asked him what wages he was getting. Upon being told he said, "You are not getting enough. You tell Tabron you want a raise. If he don't want to pay it you can come in the shop with me any day. I will pay you more to start with and will raise your wages in proportion to what you earn."

Tom had a talk with Mr. Tabron. He refused to discuss the matter or to give him any satisfaction, so he took his tools and moved to the shop of Charles Johnson.

He worked with him to the complete satisfaction of both for a year or two, then a new thought came to him which in time changed the entire order of things in his life.

As before stated Tom was a great reader. His work in the shops had also brought him in touch with men of freer thought than those with whom he had associated in his earlier years. The conditions of labor and opportunities in foreign lands were often discussed. Political news was read and comments made which took great and deep root in his mind, and finally he told his friends that he thought seriously of emigrating to the United States.

His parents and the family were surprised and tried to prevail upon him to change his purpose. They told him he was not strong and therefore ought not to leave home. They said he was doing well and ought to be satisfied.

Charles Johnson and others thought he ought not to run the risk of making his way among strangers, especially when he was doing well at home.

The arguments were good but seed had been sown on ground that was sure to produce a harvest; and in due course of time it was definitely settled that Tom's stay in Old England was to be of short duration.

Tom Leaves Home

In the early days of July, 1871, Tom bade his friends adieu and started on the great adventure.

His travel to Liverpool was devoid of special interest, except that the towns and cities, as also the counties through which he passed, were all new to him. He arrived safely at Liverpool on a Sunday evening and secured accommodations at a house for the entertainment of strangers. The landlord gave him some good advice and instruction in reference to travel, and the following day assisted him in the necessary preparation for his trip across the ocean. He also took him to the public library, museum, and other places of interest. Tom found many things to claim his attention in the city, and spent the entire day in sight seeing and preparation for embarkation on the morrow.

The second day after his arrival he boarded the vessel that was to take him to the land of promise. The ship was soon under steam, and as the shores of England slowly receded from sight Tom wondered if he would ever again see the land of his birth and the friends he had left behind. These thoughts he sought to push into the background and sought bravely to face the future.

On the vessel were emigrants from many countries and among them a goodly number of fine appearing young Germans who were returning to America after having taken an active part in the French and German War of 1870-1871. He soon became acquainted and on friendly terms with the latter and this made the voyage more enjoyable to him.

On Sunday he attended religious service in the forenoon. In the afternoon he noticed the deck being cleared, and asking for what purpose, was told that games were to be played.

He said, "Why this is Sunday." He was told that did not make any difference. He soon found there were plenty present who were willing to play.

This was something new in his experience. By training and observation he had been taught to "remember the Sabbath Day, to keep it holy," and it came to him as a shock to see people doing the opposite.

He learned later that the village in which he was raised was but a small part of the universe, but in all the years of a long life Tom could never enjoy seeing games played nor unnecessary work done on the day set apart for religious worship and for rest.

A few people were ill on board ship. One young man and one woman in particular. One morning the lady was so ill that Tom and some others could not comprehend why the doctor was not more interested in her case. She was on deck and apparently in a desperate condition. They concluded that something ought to be done so one of the men went for the doctor and insisted that the woman be given proper treatment.

The doctor came with the spokesman and surprised the men by making a speech, but doing nothing for the patient.

He said, "You people think this woman is going to die. You don't know anything about it. She couldn't die if she wanted to." He then went away and left her to the care of her friends.

The men were indignant. They wondered what the doctor was paid to do, but I presume he was right in saying, "You don't know anything about it." They thought an experienced doctor ought to know even though they did not. He did nothing except to make his little speech.

The young man was ill all the way across. The last Tom saw of him, the young man said, "America is all right for you boys, but I am going there to die."

They were then in sight of land. They tried to cheer him by telling him he would be all right as soon as he left the ship. They were hopeful but he was despondent.

Castle Garden was in sight and the Metropolis of the New World was spread before them.

Tom wondered what the future held in store for him. He did not possess second sight nor the spirit of prophecy so he could only hope for the good of which he had dreamed.

The Nature of Man Versus Progress

By L. W. Newcombe

The mystery surrounding the origin and nature of life, the birth of consciousness and mind, is but a part of the greater mystery attending the origin and nature of the marvelous powers which are admittedly resident in man.

We can not believe that the potentialities in humanity are solely the natural product of physical evolution. We must couple with nature a world of sensations and mind, somewhere existent, which by contact with matter has produced these tremendous powers, which manifest themselves in man. Further, we are adrift on the vastness of eternity without anchor, and there is but little hope unless we can vision one Supreme Mind in charge over all.

Man a Machine and Tool

Doctor C. Judson Herrick, of the University of Chicago, in his book, Man the Thinking Machine, explains how the organs of consciousness have arisen and that thought and emotions by a mechanistic process, are a product of such physical organs as the brain, certain muscles, glands, and nerves. He concludes:

We have not destroyed or impaired any of our finer spiritual values and appreciations by finding out how we do these supremely important and satisfying things, any more than a landscape painter impairs his esthetic appreciations by learning the rules of perspective and the chemical laws of the composition of pigments. These are tools of his spiritual life, so are his brains and his ductless glands.

We can agree with Doctor Herrick that the physical organism is the tool of the spiritual life, but Doctor Herrick has not explained who or what is the occupant of the machine which directs the manufacture of the spiritual life, thought, or character. He may successfully tell how we take outside materials and manufacture them into thought and emotions but he still leaves us ignorant of the real "we," who we are, whence we came, and whither we go. "Whithersoever the spirit was to go, they went, . . . for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels."—Ezekiel 1: 20.

Nature Alone Not Enough

Doctor Charles A. Ellwood believes that humanity has within itself the powers of conservation and reconstruction. He says, "Nature has given man the material with which to build a new world, and equipped him even with the incentives and the intelligence to build it."—Man's Social Destiny.

The undoubted powers of man, both active and potential, can not be ascribed to nature alone unless we dignify "nature" to include the "larger Reality" which permeates and impresses itself on organic nature. In a previous article I touched on the existence and nature of this greater Reality and tried to prove that in this only, could be found the source of man's real powers.

The author of the article "Evolution" in the Encyclopedia Britannica, volume 8, edition IX, speaking of "idealism and evolution," writes:

It may seem staggering to be told that evolution postulates vast periods of time in which there existed no mind to experience the sensations into which the world is, on the idealistic hypothesis, resolved. Yet this difficulty is only apparent, since past physical evolution stands for a projection, so to speak, of now existing minds, and for an order of sensations conceived as possible under other and imaginable circumstances." (A note at bottom adds): It may be added that the hypothesis of the uniform correlation of the physical and the mental enables us to assign an element of actuality (mental life) to the remote periods here spoken of.

There are wonderful possibilities here suggested: What a world of mind and sensation, of limitless powers!

Mr. John Cowper Powys, one of the ablest philosophers of the day, gives us a splendid definition of this unseen Reality, now admitted by scientists. He says:

Reality is a thousand times more subtle and complicated, more labyrinthine in its retreats and evasions than the dreamland of the recondite idealist. . . . It is both these, because it is the Protean offspring of the psychic embraces of every sensibility that exists with the original plastic life-stuff.—The Meaning of Culture, by Powys.

It would seem that another lesson could be drawn from the above quotations than that so eagerly absorbed by our materialistic generation. We can, I think, accept a world of sensation, mind, and intelligence as the basis of the present powers and attainments of men, as well as find therein the hope of the realization of the new world mentioned by Doctor Ellwood and others.

Basis of Spiritual Life and Immortality

Man is revealed by revelation as composed of two parts, body and spirit. And it is upon such a basis alone that we can hope for the completion of our hopes for an individual continued existence after the death of the body. If our individual spiritual life is but an acquirement or outgrowth of the physical organism arising in the early conception of childhood, its development contingent and dependent on physical organs, what possible assurance could we have that it will not pass out along with the body and leave its impress on posterity only. To rescue such a spiritual life from oblivion will require a miraculous manifestation of God's power at each death, which is inconceivable.

It is equally impossible to conceive that God miraculously creates a spirit entity every time a child is born into the world. The decline in belief in the doctrine of immortality can be, I think, attributed, at least partly, to the difficulties seen here. And the wisdom of God, is strikingly revealed in latter-day revelation, by showing the actual nature of man and the real basis for our belief in immortality.

The Spirit World

That there is an unseen world anteceding our present state is reasonable to believe, and that it is a very real and potent influence in the nature and affairs of men is full attested by divine revelation. A brief summary of the spiritual references relating to the nature of that spirit world and its activities will help us in our understanding of human nature and the purposes of God. I am using the Inspired Translation and for the sake of brevity, in many cases, giving references only.

Made in the Image of God

From Genesis 2: 6, Doctrine and Covenants 90: 4, 5, we learn that God created the spirits of all men before there was flesh of any kind on the earth. That these spirits were created in the image of God we learn from Genesis 1: 29 and also from Ether 1: 80-82. This vision of Jared's is remarkably clear:

Yea, even all men were created in the beginning after mine own image. Behold this body which ye now behold is the body of my spirit: and man have I created after the body of my spirit, and even as I appear unto thee to be in the spirit will I appear unto my people in the flesh.

The spiritual body and the physical body are then both made in the image of God. These spirits of men were intelligent and innocent in the beginning (Doctrine and Covenants 90: 6), but had their agency (Genesis 3: 4; Doctrine and Covenants 28: 10).

All truth is independent in that sphere in which God has placed it, to act for itself, as all intelligence also, otherwise there is no existence.—Doctrine and Covenants 90: 5.

Variation and Division Arise

Where an agency is effective there must be opposition (2 Nephi 1: 100), and with such a vast course of intelligent beings variation in standing and development arise. One third of the hosts of heaven chose to follow Satan in his rebellion and were cast out of heaven, being reserved "under chains of darkness until the judgment of the great day." (Doctrine and Covenants 76: 3; Jude 6.)

Spirits Desire Bodies

The rebellious spirits were not equally wicked we learn from Matthew 12: 39, and were not permitted to occupy bodies, which was likely one of their worst punishments, as notice the disconsolate picture Jesus draws of the bodiless spirit: "When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man he walketh through dry places, seeking rest and finding none."—Matthew 12: 37.

It is from among the remaining two thirds of heaven that are found the spirits which will be permitted to have the joy of occupying bodies on the earth. That it will mean joy is proved by Doctrine and Covenants 90: 5:

The elements are eternal, and spirit and element, inseparably connected, receiveth a fullness of joy; and when separated man can not receive a fullness of joy.

Among the Spirits

The first twelve verses of the twelfth chapter of Revelation picture conditions among the spirits in heaven and the struggle occasioned by the rebellion of Satan, while the thirteenth to seventeenth verses show the duplication of those conditions on the earth. Verses 1, 4, 6, 8, 11 definitely state that these events, as recorded, occurred in heaven, but as verse three shows that the man child was caught up to God and his throne, we are justified in believing that the story belongs not to the highest heaven but likely to the third heaven, or the telestial. These are definitely stated as occupying heaven at this time, first: the church of God which was likened to a woman, compare verse 1 with verse 7; second: the great red dragon, also designated as the Devil or Satan in verses 3 and 8, and his angels; third: the man child of the woman, which child was called the "Kingdom of God and his Christ" in verse 7. The natural product of the church organization is to bring forth a perfected people "till we all come unto a perfect man unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." Ephesians 4: 11-13. Or, as is called here, the true "kingdom of God and his Christ." In the struggle to destroy the child, this product of the church was caught up to God and his throne and Satan being overcome, was cast out to the earth.

Struggle Duplicated on Earth

The battle now carried on on the earth is in almost exact duplication of that in the spirit world. The same struggle between good and evil continues with the same participants under somewhat changed conditions of life and contacts. Satan, although not sensibly visible, being the leader of the forces of evil (verse 13). Michael, the leader of the forces of righteousness in heaven, is represented by Adam on the earth. Compare Revelation 12: 7 with Doctrine and Covenants 104: 28; 26: 2. And the woman and the child of the spirit world have opportunity of proving themselves under the new conditions on earth and completing the purpose of God, designed "before the foundation of the world."

The Man Child Duplicated on Earth

The faithful, obedient and loyal spirits in the church of the earlier world naturally take a leading place in the church on earth. Christ in his prayer recorded in John 17 says in verses 6, 12: "I have manifested thy name unto the man which thou gavest me out of the world. Thine they were and thou gavest them me, and they have kept thy word." "Those thou gavest me I have kept and none of them is lost but the son of perdition that the scripture might be fulfilled." Can this passage be explained in any other way than that God assigned to certain bodies, spirits of proven worth and integrity, and intrusted them to the care of Jesus for the opening work of that gospel period. Paul, writing to Timothy, says, "Who hath saved us and called us with a holy calling not according to our own works but according to his own purpose and grace which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began."—2 Timothy 1: 9. (See also Titus 1: 2.) Does not this passage clearly state that Paul and Timothy labored under a calling which was based on grace given them before the world began. Again, note the conclusive statement of Paul to the Ephesians in which he enlarges the bounds of the "called" to include "all the faithful in Christ Jesus." "According as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love, having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself according to the good pleasure of his will."—Ephesians 1: 4, 5. Of John the Baptist it is written: "There was a man sent from God whose name was John," the same came into the world for a witness, to bear witness of the light." (John 1: 6, 7.) Peter speaks of the "elect according to the foreknowledge of God." (1 Peter 1: 2.)

The above passages do not teach the old doctrine of predestination, which arbitrarily decided the number to be saved and that without regard to works, but simply states that the righteousness, integrity, and faithfulness of the pre-existent spirit is projected into the new life.

Council Bluffs, Iowa

307 West Pierce

We are glad to report activity, increase in spirituality, and growth generally.

In the period since the last letter from Council Bluffs missionary meetings have been held each week in various homes and most of these have been conducted by the members of the local priesthood. As a result of these efforts, twenty-four have been baptized, ten being children who were baptized on Children's Day. Cottage meetings are still being held in three or four homes each week.

The Department of Religious Education has been forging ahead, and the new plan of continuous church service is being carried out in each department with a large degree of success. We hope later to give a more detailed write-up of this department. The Orioles and Temple Builders are organized under the supervision of Sister Grace Kerns. This sister also has a church school class of twenty-two boys and girls of high school age which has just finished a course in church history and is now beginning a study of the Book of Mormon. We would be happy to report group activity among the boys, but we are still praying that God will work upon the heart of some consecrated young man, or older, who will be vitally concerned about our boys, and give them a chance to grow and develop as are the girls.

The morning service on Children's Day was in charge of the children's division, and an enjoyable program was presented by the three departments. At the close of the program, all went to the basement where ten children were baptized into the church.

The outstanding musical event was the Easter cantata, "Victory," put on by the choir with Sister Dorothy Stoff, of Omaha, as leader. It was a fitting climax to a day of activities which commemorated the one hundred and first anniversary of the church. The summer's work has in view a radio program, to be given July 19 over K F N F, Shenandoah, at 3 p. m.

Manchester Sunday School Anniversary

Mother's Day was the occasion for the Saints in Manchester, England, to celebrate the thirty-eighth anniversary of their Sunday school. Brother Robert Schofield sends the Herald the account printed in the Ashton Reporter. Following we re-print portions of the news story:

"The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Bradford, held its thirty-eighth school anniversary on Saturday and Sunday, commencing with a garden party on the Saturday afternoon, and continuing on the Sunday with a series of bright and intellectual services.

"The garden party was opened by Mr. G. W. Leggott, church pastor. The grounds of Park House, the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Schofield, in North road, had been loaned. A canvas tent had been erected by Mr. J. Pesagno, and it was gaily decorated with bunting and streamers. The tennis court had been laid out with all kinds of games, including treasure trove, hidden word competition, penny on the plate, clock golf, croquet, and ball frame.

"A concert was held in the tent and the following artists gave a splendid rendering of vocal and instrumental music: Mr. Harold Dewsnup, Miss Veda Bocking, Miss Edith Bocking, and Mr. Henshall.

"On Sunday the services were under the auspices of the church school, Mr. Harold Barrington being in charge. The lesson was read by a young scholar, Ronald Whittam, and the speaker was Mr. Abel Hall, director of the adult division of the church school, who spoke on "The Development of the Mind."

"The afternoon session was something novel in the way of teaching the message of life. It consisted of a dramatization of the story of Tolstoy, "Where Love Is, God Is." The scenery and effects were all built up by the scholars of the school themselves, and through the artistic abilities of Mr. James Waugh, junior, who painted an outside scene and also made a splendid window effect, the scene was most realistic.

"The artists were Mr. Harold Dewsnup (as the cobbler), H. Barrington (street sweeper), Mr. J. Waugh, junior (gentleman friend), Miss Ruth Schofield (an impoverished widow), Miss Leah Schofield (the apple woman), John Schofield (street urchin), G. Wilson ("the Voice"), and Baby Bryan Barrington (the child of the widow). The play was arranged under Mr. Dewsnup's direction. Miss Betty Schofield played suitable organ interludes.

"In the evening the newly-born daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sloane was taken in the arms of Mr. Leggott and Mr. Schofield, and blessed before the assembly. All the scholars of the junior and the intermediate classes were seated on the platform, and under the direction of Mr. Curtis Leggott rendered a musical service entitled 'Rainbow Tints.' Choruses, solos, and quartets were given, interspersed with recitals from the scholars."

Kirtland, Ohio

An impressive Children's Day service and program were had June 14. The Saints gathered at the Temple at 8.45 a. m. where prayer was offered. They then drove to the Chagrin River to witness the induction of seventeen children into the kingdom of God. Elder T. E. Thomas baptized the following: Virginia Thomas, Edith May Thomas, Elsie Ann Thomas, Frances Collin, Helen L. Cox, Margaret Parsons, Raymond Clough, Myron Lewis, John Collin, and Edward Thomas. Patriarch G. T. Griffiths baptized Dorothy Cook, Elbert Sheppard, Wilma Malkie, Rudolph Bertleff, Leonard Wilcox, Russell Thomas, and Francis Malkie.

The congregation returned to the Temple where the confirmations were given under the hands of seven elders. Donald Ray, infant son of Brother and Sister William Davidson, was blessed. Pastor John L. Cooper gave a brief talk on the importance of accepting the gospel in childhood, touching upon the responsibility which rests on the home and the church. Music was rendered by the young people's choir, under the direction of Sister Agnes Martin, and by the junior choir in charge of Sister Adelina Clough.

Brother Griffiths had the unique experience of baptizing Elbert Sheppard and Dorothy Cook, who are respectively the fourth and fifth generations of the descendants of Sister Flora Hanna who was baptized by him many years ago. In his evening sermon he related several early experiences for the children. Sister Marjorie Stiffler sang a pleasing solo.

A lovely wedding was solemnized at the home of Pastor John L. Cooper, June 24, at eight o'clock when Miss Delena Brunson, of Willoughby, Ohio, and Mr. Herbert Ebeling, second son of Brother and Sister Fred Ebeling, of Kirtland, took their vows under an arch of climbing roses. The ceremony was read by Pastor John L. Cooper. Sister Josephine Ebeling sang "The Sweetest Story Ever Told," and Brother Paul Ebeling sang "I Love You Truly."

A spiritual sacrament meeting was enjoyed the first Sunday of June, and in the evening the guest speaker was Elder

C. A. Silvers, of Wheeling District, who brought a helpful sermon.

Doctor Parke S. Cadman, radio pastor of the Federal Council of Churches of America, was a recent visitor to the Temple. He seemed delighted with what he saw but was concerned about the great fire risk we are taking with the present heating system.

The Kirtland reunion committee anticipates a successful reunion to open at Kirtland, August 6, and continue ten days.

Improvements on the Temple Auditorium grounds include a hedge of Norway spruce.

Sister Wiggins who has recently been with her daughter in Wichita, Kansas, is very ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Merle Wilcox, of Kirtland.

Henry Vincent, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Knight, of Detroit, Michigan, was blessed Sunday morning, June 28, by Elders Ernest A. Webbe and Joseph Biggs. Sister Knight is a daughter of Brother and Sister Vincent Schaar, of Orion, Michigan.

Lowbanks, Ontario

Nearly all the young people who attend the Sunday school classes are nonmembers, but they enjoy the study and the association, and the Saints welcome their support and attendance.

Visitors and district officers made church services for May 31 most attractive. Elder and Sister J. Wilson, District President Sam Clarke, and Bishop and Sister McLean were here. Brother McLean's sermon was deeply enjoyed, and the afternoon talk by Brother Clarke was very entertaining. The members lunched together in the basement.

A splendid sermon was delivered by Apostle Budd from this pulpit June 10. This day was the twenty-third anniversary of the marriage of Brother and Sister C. MacDonald, and the congregation surprised them with refreshments of cake and ice cream served in the church's basement. Elder D. Clatworthy presented Brother MacDonald with a Book of Mormon as a token of appreciation for his services in the branch.

Brother Clatworthy is here nearly every Sunday, and his wise counsel and willing assistance are much appreciated.

June 21 was a special day for this branch, the program commemorating the work of father. Good attendance marked the morning meetings and lunch was served in the basement. In the evening the program of Children's Day was presented to a large crowd. The children, supervised by Sister Bessie MacDonald, gave their drills and marches and recitations very well. Brother Clatworthy was the program chairman.

Atchison, Kansas

Ninth and Santa Fe Streets

Annual home-coming for this branch was June 21, a day long to be appreciated and remembered by Kansas Saints. Services opened at eleven o'clock in the morning with Pastor Gilbert F. Hedrick and Frank G. Hedrick, of the committee, in charge. Isabel Gildehaus played a piano voluntary, and Mrs. H. A. Higgins led the congregation in "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." The pastor welcomed the visiting congregation. William F. Bollinger called the roll of the departed members of the branch, then asked the congregation to bow with him in silent prayer. There were tears in the eyes of the Saints as they recalled those taken from this congregation by death.

Atchison Branch was organized by Davis H. Bays and David Williams August 26, 1868. After twenty years of organization, it was disorganized. In November, 1889, it was reorganized by E. C. Brand. At the 1931 service there occurred the presentation by the chairman, of the charter members of the branch of 1889. Only three remain, Sister Betty Twombly, of Fanning; Sister Sarah Thatcher, of Independence; Sister Ida Banks, of Netawaka. Sister Twombly was the only one of the trio present.

Delphe Gildehaus gave a flute selection accompanied by Merle Gildehaus. Kathalea Sprague, of Independence, read.

Twenty years ago Mrs. Flo McNichols organized and trained a choir at Atchison. Ten or twelve members of the choir were present and as a program number sang "My Savior Is Praying for Me," a favorite song of the departed director. "Reminiscences" was the theme assigned Patriarch Samuel Twombly. After singing "God Be with You Till We Meet Again," the congregation was dismissed by Elder H. A. Higgins.

Members of the committee, Frank G. Hedrick, Mrs. H. B. Sprague, and Mrs. H. A. Higgins, in charge of the arrangements for the meeting, were re-elected for next year's homecoming.

The church was beautifully decorated with flowers. Mrs. Lentz presented two large baskets of flowers, one in memory of the departed members, and one for the living charter members. At one o'clock the congregation drove to Jackson Park and ate a basket dinner. Deacons H. B. Sprague and Everett Bowser did their part in providing for the needs and comforts of the congregation.

Elder W. A. Smith held services during a recent week and on Sunday afternoon baptized Mrs. Robertson. She was confirmed in the evening by Frank G. Hedrick, W. A. Smith, and Gilbert F. Hedrick.

A welcome addition to this congregation is Brother Raines, manager of the Atlantic and Pacific Store in this city.

Brother Moroni Stewart and Brother Clark, of Omaha, worshiped with the Atchison Saints June 21. These brothers and their families will probably locate in this branch in a few weeks.

Dallas, Texas

Dallas Street and Third Avenue

July 1.—Dallas Branch has experienced a remarkable spiritual growth this year, due greatly to the efforts of our missionary, J. W. A. Bailey, who has been here much of the time for the past several months. Brother Bailey has held meetings in the church building and on the lawn and cottage meetings at the homes of Sister Everett and Brother and Sister Cooper, and with his enlightening gospel sermons has created enthusiastic interest among friends and neighbors. He baptized two members while here. He also held a series of meetings at Fort Worth, Texas, where he aroused much interest and baptized three children of Brother and Sister Wyninger.

We are pleased to say that Dallas went "over the top" in the Sacrifice Week drive for funds for general church expense.

A Mother's Day program was given Sunday, May 10, by the young people of Dallas. After the program, a picnic was held at Reverchon Park in honor of the Dallas Branch mothers.

The children have been working hard this year, especially the older ones, to learn facts concerning the Bible, and four of their number have received gold pins as a reward for their achievements.

A splendid Children's Day program was presented by the children, Sunday, June 14. The decorations were flags in commemoration of Flag Day. One child was baptized in the afternoon, with special confirmation services before the evening preaching service.

The Triangle Society, a young people's organization of the branch, has done very good work in creating interesting programs and social gatherings for the young people. The society meets every Sunday evening, with the exception of the first Sunday of each month, at which time the members assemble with the regular branch council meeting. The members of the society are planning to take up immediately the full year's Bible study course offered by the educational department of the church. Brother Herbert C. Bleil is in charge of the young people's activity at Dallas.

Sister Amy Wells, who has been director of religious education and director of music, and also for several years Sunday school superintendent, is leaving Dallas. We greatly feel the loss of her guidance, sympathy, and advice. Monday evening, June 29, a farewell party was held at the home of Sister Chattie Everett in honor of Sister Wells. Pastor W. R. Standifer presented Sister Wells with a gift from the branch members as a token of our love for her. The Saints' prayers and best wishes go with her.

Portland, Oregon

July 9.—On his way south from British Columbia, Bishop Albert Carmichael stopped in Portland for a two-day visit and occupied the pulpit both evenings. He brought to the attention of the Saints phases of the gospel which are near his heart, telling of the things which we must observe to be obedient Saints. He also emphasized the dire need of funds of the church at the present time, and impressed upon the members the duty of each one in filing financial statements and paying tithing. If we do these things, we put ourselves in a position to enjoy, in a measure, the blessings the Father has promised.

Close upon the departure of Brother Carmichael, came Brother and Sister Richard Baldwin, returning to Portland District. Brother Baldwin spoke one evening here before continuing his way to Bandon, Oregon, to attend a ten-day reunion held there. They plan to return to Portland.

About the middle of June a baptismal service was conducted at the church. Ten children, ranging in age from eight to twelve years, entered the kingdom.

Brother and Sister Albert Livingston have returned from Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where they visited with Brother and Sister H. L. Livingston. Sister Albert Livingston is director of the Portland Choir, and during her absence, Sister Fay Buchanan directed. Until the vacation period is over, regular choir work will be supplanted by solos and other musical contributions.

Oelwein, Iowa

The work of the church continues to grow at Oelwein, though the strides are not always greatly perceptible.

Children's Day was observed the second Sunday in June with a splendid program. In the afternoon three children, Aeric and Seeward Sims and Alberta Westendorf, were baptized by Brother George McFarlane. Confirmation took place the following Sunday.

During the first week in June, Mr. Charles Sims, husband of Sister Nellie Sims, became seriously ill and asked for administration. The doctors had given up hope for his life, and he placed it in the hands of the Lord. Wonderful results came from the administration, and though Mr. Sims is not yet up, he feels that he owes much to the Lord and has expressed a desire to become a member of the church. At present he is taking treatment at the State Hospital at Iowa City.

Sister Louisa Peck, of Lamont, passed away June 27. She was seventy-nine years old, and though she had been a member just two years, she was faithful and true to her convictions. She had been an invalid for two or more years, and during that time was cared for by her brother, Elder W. B. Weston. A tribute to Brother Weston would here be timely. He is seventy-seven years old and has been a member of the church for forty-five years. He has served as president of Oelwein Branch, though his home is in Lamont. He has endured many trials but at all times has been cheerful and faithful to his calling. Though his earthly possessions have not been great, he always has found it possible to pay his tithes and to give generous offerings to the church. For several years he had the care of his blind wife. When one sister approached him, telling of her joy in hearing so splendid a report of him, he said in a modest tone: "Let those things stop right where they are," showing that the good he has done was not done for the eyes of the world.

Sister Marie Shippy, of Anderson, Indiana, has been spending her vacation here much to the joy of her home town. On a recent Sunday morning, she performed in her former office, that of musical director.

Sister Ruth Smith, who taught in the public schools here last winter and plans to teach here again this winter, was recently in Oelwein and played the piano at the Sunday morning services.

The home of Sister Laura May Rasmussen and Carl, her husband, has been brightened by the arrival of a little daughter, born July 6. Her name is Margie.

Oelwein Saints take great pleasure in singing from the new Saints' Hymnal. These books are a source of inspiration for all services. The members realize the splendid effort exerted in compiling these hymnbooks, and are sorry for those branches which are not yet using them.

Sacrifice Week was observed with appropriate talks regarding the meaning of sacrifice. On the opening Sunday a prayer meeting took the place of the usual preaching service, and a splendid feeling was generated. A fair amount of money was turned to the bishop's agent.

The Beginning of the Early Sunday Morning Young People's Prayer Meeting

Herald readers will undoubtedly be interested in learning the beginning of the early morning prayer services of the young people in Independence, Missouri, which has spread throughout the church until the young people in many of the branches are enjoying the privileges offered them in the early morning worship hours. This account is written by one of the originators, Elder J. Charles May:

"The early morning prayers services had a very meager beginning. In the year 1904 a few of the young men of Independence, under the leadership of Brother Harry Hatty, would fast each Sunday morning and meet at the church at an early hour. From there we would go to some secluded spot in the woods for a season of prayer. Many times we enjoyed a great outpouring of the Spirit of God, which remained with us throughout the services of the day.

"In a short time this group began to meet in the southeast tower room of the Stone Church. These meetings increased in attendance until we were compelled to use the north room of the basement, where as many as fifty attended. Prayer services were often held in the homes of afflicted Saints and nonmembers who were not able to go to church. Many wonderful blessings were received and spiritual feasts enjoyed in our endeavor to comfort the afflicted. The gifts and the blessings of the gospel were with us.

"It finally became necessary to move the morning prayer service into the main auditorium room of the basement. At this time Brothers Hatty, Frank Criley, sr., James L. Gray, and others took the leadership of these meetings, and the influence for good received from them is still manifested in the lives of many of those who attended the services and whose hearts were stirred with a desire to go where the Lord would have them go, and to do what he desired at their hands; whose faith, humility, and consecration were indeed recognized of God.

"Brother Frank Criley, sr., long since passed to his reward, was a power for good as a leader, and as a father to the young people. His words of admonition and his influence for good still live in the lives of those who had the privilege of being associated with him in the early hours of prayer. One time Brother Criley had a vision in which he saw a large number of the young men, twelve to eighteen, called to the ministry, many of them eventually taking up the active ministry, serving the church in both missionary and pastoral work. This vision has been fulfilled.

"These meetings have continued from the time of the prayer meetings in the woods up to the present, and during this twenty-seven years, thousands of the young and old people of the church have been made to rejoice. Their souls have been inspired to greater activity and more faithful service as a result of these early morning prayer services.

"Sunday morning, July 26, has been set apart as a day to commemorate the beginning of the early Sunday morning prayer meetings, and several of those first associated in these services will have charge of the eight o'clock prayer service at the Stone Church."

Alexander, Kansas

July 3.—This branch, though its number is few, gave to the church in Sacrifice Week a sum of ninety-five dollars. This was certainly a sacrifice, for times are hard for the farmers of Kansas. A fine wheat crop brings only thirty-two cents a bushel. Members of the church here, however, are optimistic of the future. We remember that God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform.

Since our last letter to the Herald, eight candidates have been baptized into the church. Brother O. L. D'Arcy baptized "Grandma" Boese, Mrs. Alma Schadel, Inez Schadel, and Ilene Boese in the month of April, and on June 21 Brother Teeters baptized Mrs. Ola Schlegel, Viola Schlegel, Richard, her brother, and Mrs. Walter Boese. Two family circles are complete except for one boy who soon will be baptized.

The children presented a program June 21. Sister Emma Schaben gave a picnic dinner to her class and invited the junior class and teacher, Sister Versa Stephens, also the young people's class and their teacher, Sister Teeters, to eat with them. The children appreciate their teachers.

Wednesday night prayer meetings have been discontinued during the harvest season, but regular Sunday morning meetings continue.

Apostle E. J. Gleazer and Elder O. L. D'Arcy were here June 12. The former preached a good sermon, then hastened on to Goodland, Kansas. Always Brother Gleazer's stays are short; we wish he could remain longer.

After the harvest is over, the Saints hope to see Sunday school attendance increase. It is the prayer of this group that God will bless all who are allied with his work.

Savanna, Illinois

July 9.—Savanna Saints made a contribution of one hundred and fifty dollars to the sacrifice fund of the church, eleven families contributing. They feel that all Saints should curtail expenses as much as possible and save to give to the church, that it might be freed of debt. All should pray the Lord's help in directing their financial affairs and that avenues may be opened to make it possible for the church to accomplish its work in a manner pleasing to the Master.

"We feel," writes Sister A. R. Batcheller, correspondent, "that a greater effort should have been made to acquaint the membership with the mounting indebtedness of the church before the economic depression swept the country and we became so deeply involved. Now many Saints, like the church, spent ahead of income, are confronted with personal problems which seriously handicap their assistance in helping the church. This is a source of sorrow to us all.

"We know that we need to repent of many sins of omission, and learn to keep the financial law as well as the spiritual laws of the kingdom. If we want the Lord's help, we must do the things he requires of us, for then he is bound. Otherwise we have no claim upon him.

"We are glad that the church has adopted the policy of spending according to its income. Let us work together, and the Lord will bless our efforts and help us in time of great need. This sentiment was expressed at our sacrifice prayer service, and we hope to see the dawn of a brighter day when the burden of debt will be lifted."

Savanna Branch anxiously awaits reports on the results of the observance of Sacrifice Week throughout the church.

Holden Stake

Marshall

A peaceful sacrament service was enjoyed by the Saints the first Sunday of this month. The theme given for testimony meeting, "Sacrifice," brought out some good thoughts.

Sister Zella Stewart has the sympathy of this group in her bereavement. Her husband, Gerald Stewart, was drowned in the lake at Sweet Springs, June 28, being attacked by cramps while in swimming. All was done that could be done to resuscitate him, a pulmotor being used, but to no avail. He was twenty-two years old, and was employed by the airplane factory here. The body was sent to his parents near Newman's Grove, Nebraska. A party consisting of Pastor T. L. McCormick, R. M. Ridge, Joseph James, father of Sister Stewart, and her sister, Mrs. Walter E. Smith, accompanied the bereaved one by auto to Mr. Stewart's parents' home. The funeral took place from the home, and then at the Methodist Church at Newman's Grove. Elder McCormick assisted the local pastor. Parents, brothers, and sisters are left to mourn his untimely death. He was the youngest of the family. Sister Stewart will remain with her husband's parents for a time.

The ice cream social on the church lawn Friday evening, June 26, netted the Recreation Department a nice little sum which was applied to the sacrifice list. Our sacrifice offering has gone beyond our expectations.

A discussion of the first chapter of the Book of Mormon will occur Friday night, as the study of that sacred book is again taken up. A program will follow each session.

Blue Springs

Blue Springs Branch is growing. The business meeting was held the latter part of May. Brother Amos Allen, of Independence, and F. A. McWethy and W. S. Macrae, from Holden, were here. Elder O. W. Sarratt was elected pastor. By standing vote, thanks were extended Brother Harold W. Hatty, retiring pastor, who is pastor at Bates City. Brother Sarratt comes from Enoch Hill, where he served as pastor. Brother Harrison Curtis was elected assistant pastor and home supervisor; Brother Alma Campbell, church school director. He in turn nominated Brother John Stowell as adult supervisor; Brother C. A. Joice, young people's supervisor; Sister Roy Martin, supervisor of children's division. All were approved. Sister P. L. Tomlison is the director of music; Brother R. J. Stark, clerk, solicitor, and branch treasurer.

On the first Sunday in June we met for sacrament. We had a wonderful outpouring of the Spirit. In our midst was Mrs. Joe Underwood, of Los Angeles, not a member. After the service she testified that she felt God's Spirit was with us. She, her husband, and son heard Brother J. W. Davis, who is conducting a missionary series on Sunday evenings. The sermons of Brother Davis are very much appreciated.

June 28 nine precious souls were ushered into the fold by baptism. The three Armstrong brothers, nonmembers, were anxious to witness the baptism at their home, but a suitable place was not found. We went to Brother Harrison Curtis's place where a lovely pool was found. We felt peace and calm, and the assurance that God was indeed near us that day, granting protection and safety.

Only now and then we see nonmembers in our midst, but we rejoice to have them come. Many times we get discouraged as we seek to do missionary work for the Master, because so few heed, and the work seems to move so slowly; nevertheless we take courage and go forward with hope and patience.

Independence

The activities of the young people in Independence are being cared for by a young people's general council composed of representatives from Independence churches. Representation on the council is determined by the number of young people in each church. The council took as its first problem that of planning adequate recreation for the young people with the purpose of establishing friendly relations between the various church groups. A volley ball contest for boys has been in progress for a number of weeks, and there seems to be a very good spirit manifested by them in their good times. It was planned to organize the girls for recreation, but this has not been successful. Several committees were formed by the general council to sponsor various activities. One committee has the responsibility of planning historical trips. Already the young people have had a trip to Holden. Over ninety people went and gave a program to the old people in the Home. Another trip is planned for July 19, when the young people will go to Far West and other points of interest. In August the young people plan a good-will trip to Lamoni. This committee has also arranged for the young people to carry out some missionary projects on Sunday evening. Seven places have been visited, the young people providing the programs, and in some instances the speaker is a young man. Over one hundred young people have taken part in these activities. Another committee has charge of a tennis tournament which is now under way; still another sponsored a swimming party last week, which proved successful for one hundred young people and their friends. The council is planning other activities to carry through the fall and winter.

During the month of June and the early part of July, a summer school was in operation at the Campus. The school started with an attendance of one hundred and thirty, but the extremely hot weather affected the attendance near the close of the session. Supervised recreation, drills, and handwork constituted the main program for two mornings a week. Many of the children regretted the close of the term. An excellent staff of teachers made this work possible. Miss May Snead was in charge of the primary group of children, and she was assisted during the whole or part of the term by Esther Brockway, Kathleen Snead, Gladys Cato, Ethel Thomas, and Margery Sheehy. Mrs. Jalmer Nelson supervised the juniors, and she had the assistance of Mrs. H. G. Barto, Miss Lena Mortimore, and Mr. Almer Sheehy. The intermediates were cared for by Mrs. J. R. Lentell, assisted by Miss Veneta Cooce. The school was under the direction of the Department of Religious Education of Independence.

Beginning last week, the girls of the several Scout troops in Independence are joyfully attending the Kansas City Scout Day Camp, which is conducted each Tuesday and Thursday.

Stone Church

A new Sunday school class composed of college students on vacation was organized Sunday morning. There has been need for such a class. Over thirty people responded to the invitation to meet. Doctors G. L. Harrington and Charles F. Grabske are to lecture to this group.

At the eleven o'clock Sunday morning service a male quartet composed of Robert Crawford, Edward Cronenbold, Duane Swalley, and Roderick May sang "Ere You Left Your Room This Morning." The congregation sang "Redeemer of Israel," and Apostle E. J. Gleazer offered prayer. The organ offertory was by Robert Miller.

"Responsibility" was the theme of an excellent sermon preached by Bishop A. B. Phillips, and his text was "Occupy till I come," a command of Jesus. It was his endeavor to show what our responsibility is in obeying the command. Responsibility has two aspects, that of accountability and that of trustworthiness. Accountability involves the question of condemnation or commendation, depending on the attitude of the person towards his responsibility. There are some who assume responsibilities and endeavor to discharge them. There are other individuals who attempt to avoid the assumption of responsibilities. Some shirk them and try to pass them to others. But such people have forgotten that everyone must give an account to God. Bishop Phillips maintained that this church needs today a good old-fashioned "dose" of repentance and conversion. We must look down into the deep recesses of our souls and then try to solve our difficulties.

The junior church service at the Campus was well attended. Mrs. J. R. Lentell told the story, "The Dedication of Kirtland Temple." Songs by the congregation were "Jesus, My Friend," and "There Is a Green Hill Far Away." Helen Mader played a piano number, and Pastor W. L. Bolinger was in charge.

Rain on Sunday evening made it necessary for the large Campus congregation to assemble in the Stone Church auditorium. There President F. M. McDowell continued his summer series, giving attention to the theme of the evening, "Baptism."

Music was furnished by the Auditorium Orchestra, conducted by Orlando Nace, and the congregation sang favorite hymns, "Sovereign and Transforming Grace," "Ye Must Be Born Again," and "He Leadeth Me."

Warm weather sees no cessation of work in the Auditorium offices, and the present time, after the general rearrangement of offices and office forces, finds all phases of church activity being carried forward with efficiency. It will no doubt interest Herald readers to know the whereabouts of some of the officials whose headquarters are the Auditorium.

We are not surprised to learn that President Frederick M. Smith is "busy" in his summer's haven of rest, Hall's Island on the Maine coast not far from Jonesport. With an old friend, Brother Leon Crowley, he is industriously trying to make an "old sault" of himself.

President Elbert A. Smith spends a considerable part of his summer days in Independence writing for the church papers. President F. M. McDowell occupies the desk of the First Presidency at the Auditorium.

In the Quorum of Twelve office there is a hum of activity. In fact, the apostles are so occupied that they do not have time to keep the office well posted as to their whereabouts and work. At present Brother James A. Gillen is in the Northwest, Brother Paul M. Hanson is in Europe, Brother Budd in Canada attending reunions and special meetings. Brother M. A. McConley has his schedule arranged to attend the Northern California reunion the middle of this month and then the Seattle and British Columbia reunion.

Since early June Bishop Albert Carmichael has been on the western coast. He spent last week-end in southern California at the dedication of the San Bernardino church. His plans are to return to the Irvington reunion which opens July 17. Meanwhile Bishop G. Leslie DeLapp is at the desk of the Presiding Bishopric in Independence. Bishop L. F. P. Curry is expected from the East toward the latter part of the month.

Second Church

On July 5 the Saints assembled to partake of the sacrament, with Pastor A. K. Dillee in charge. A message came to the pastor summoning him to the Sanitarium to the bedside of his daughter, Sister Ford, who was seriously ill. Sister Ford is still at the Sanitarium, and the Saints are praying for her recovery.

Splendid sermons have been heard of late from this pulpit. Among the speakers were Elders C. Ed. Miller and A. K. Dillee. Brother D. A. Whiting gave the juniors a helpful talk on "Sacrifice."

We regret that his work makes it necessary for Brother Roy Conyers, junior pastor, to be out of town some of the time. His direction of the children is much appreciated by the little people and their parents.

Enoch Hill

An exceedingly well-planned and well-executed church school service began a good day last Sunday for the Saints of Enoch Hill. "The Bible" was the theme, and the program numbers were under the direction of Sister Nellie Kramer. Talks were presented bringing out the many useful phases of the Bible, and the classes were asked to read aloud certain passages. Musical numbers interspersed the readings and increased the appreciation of the members for the entire program.

Elder H. O. Smith, whose knowledge concerning the Book of Mormon is vast, talked to the boys and girls of the intermediate department during the class period. He discussed with them "The Three Nephites."

Elder John R. Lentell, pastor of Liberty Street, spoke to the congregation at the eleven o'clock hour.

During the month of July, union prayer services of the various groups are held at the church each Wednesday night. Attendance is good.

Liberty Street

Elder O. A. McDowell, brother of President McDowell, preached at the eleven o'clock hour Sunday, July 12. Every Saint in Zion should have heard him emphasize the great need of men and women actually living and demonstrating the Christ way of life.

About thirty young people, including the pastor and his family, motored to Grandview, Missouri, Sunday afternoon, had a picnic supper in the basement of the church there, and attended the evening preaching service. Several musical numbers were rendered by members of the party, and the sermon was by Brother J. R. Lentell. "Sanctification and Our Individual Religion" was the theme of his discourse, and, judging from the attention of the congregation, it was enjoyed by everyone. The Saints of Grandview gave the visiting group a gracious welcome and invited them to return again soon.

Group work of the women of this congregation has been discontinued until the first Thursday in September. The women are now devoting their individual time to fruit canning and other work for the Harvest Home Festival.

Sister Anna Blakesley was presented a wheelchair by groups 13 and 30, and this will enable her to attend Sunday services. Formerly an efficient worker in this branch, she has for some years been an invalid. Her wide circle of friends will be happy to once more see her at services.

Sugar Creek

Though progress in this small new branch sometimes seems slow, the hope of the Saints is strong.

About the middle of June the young people with their teachers took a truck ride to Lawrence, Kansas. With them they took lunch. They ate in the park, and in the afternoon visited the museum. This outing was an event long to be remembered.

Three candidates were led into the waters of baptism July 1, Wednesday evening. The ordinance was administered at the Spring Branch font.

They were confirmed on the following Sunday, and at that time three persons received administration. This was a spiritually profitable occasion, the gifts of the gospel being bestowed on the faithful. Everyone was encouraged to go forward, and do more in the future than has been done in the past.

Evening services regularly held are Religio at 6.30 and preaching at 8.

North Platte, Nebraska

Elder and Sister O. L. D'Arcy were here five days in June. The Saints greatly needed the help of some one like Brother D'Arcy, and his sermons were delivered with power and conviction. He preached at the home of Sister Richards four evenings and at the Advent Church on Sunday. With others he drove to Paxton Saturday evening and preached there.

The D'Arcys are expected to attend the reunion here, beginning July 24, helping Brother Arthur Oakman in the preaching and teaching. A new tent has been ordered for the reunion, and there will be more reunion facilities than ever before.

Sister Jessie Morant is conducting a Bible school at her home. There are thirty-four enrolled. Sisters Richards and Lillie M. Reneau are assisting in this school.

Kansas City StakeCentral Church*

The Sunday night series of sermons by Pastor C. E. Wight is being heard by a large congregation of members and friends. Each evening two reels of a high grade movie, "The Conflict," are shown.

Elder Stanley Kelley, of Independence, gave the Sunday morning sermon, and the choir, directed by George Anway, furnished the music.

Three rounds of the stake O. B. K. volley ball tournament have been played. The boys have won two matches and lost one. The girls' team has won one and lost one.

Every month hundreds of people visit the Auditorium at Independence. They are shown through the structure by Elder H. A. Koehler. As many of these visitors come from Kansas City, an attractive folder inviting them to Central Church services has been prepared. Brother Koehler will see that each Kansas Citian gets one of these invitations.

Central young people have organized to participate in the stake O. B. K. activities. To have charge of church-centered activities at Central, they have chosen the following officers: Councilor, Glen Falter; vice councilor, Ruth Arthur; secretary, Eleanor Sandy; treasurer, Ruth Sandy. Howland Koehler will represent the senior boys, and Doctor E. P. Nelson will serve as church school advisor.

The primary room has been redecorated and improved. The large partitions have been moved to the west wall, where they can be conveniently folded back when the room is used for dinners and socials.

Fourth Church

During the last month Saints of this branch have been favored with talks from some of the younger members of the priesthood, Marion Sneed, Julian Gough, Curtis Vernon, Norman Carter, Clyde Graham. At the young people's services excellent programs have been rendered. Other good sermons have been heard from Elders Carroll Olson, C. E. Wight, Ammon White, and J. A. Becker.

On June 11 Mr. H. L. Drake read a play by Makaye. This followed a program of music and song given by talent from other churches in the stake.

Sister Florence Wolfe Short's pupils presented a piano recital June 28.

The sacrament service for July was the best meeting of this kind for some time. Many were strengthened in their determination to be faithful and helpful.

Assurance

I go to prove my soul,
I see my way as birds their trackless way,
I shall arrive! What time, what circuit first,
I ask not. But unless God send his hail,
Or blinding fireballs, sleet or stifling snow,
In some time, his good time, I shall arrive!
He guides me and the bird.

—Browning.

Reunion Notices

The Wyoming and South Dakota reunion will be held at Spearfish, South Dakota, August 2 to 9. Apostle F. Henry Edwards and Elder Arthur Oakman are speakers assigned to this territory by the general church. Spearfish is a fine town on Highway No. 16, in the Black Hills, close to many places of interest. It has a fine park, plenty of cabins and camp grounds close to the church. Those desiring cabins or camp sites should write Mrs. Ella Fetch, Market Store, Spearfish. Saints planning trips to the Black Hills, National Park, and Devil's Tower, will do well to plan to attend our reunion. We hope to see many of the members in Wyoming and Chadron, Nebraska, make a special effort to come. The opening service will be a sacrament meeting at 10 a. m. The Saints are asked to come fasting and praying for God's blessings on this gathering.—Fred Cousins, Moorcroft, Wyoming.

Conference Minutes

SOUTHERN MICHIGAN AND NORTHERN INDIANA.—Annual district conference was held at Lansing, Michigan, June 20 and 21. District President William Osler presiding. It was voted not to hold a reunion at Indian Lake this year, this action being taken because of the financial condition of the district. Speakers during the conference were Elders O. J. Hawn, James Pycok, and William Osler. Though the conference crowd was not so large as in previous years, a fine spirit prevailed at all the meetings. Visitors were hospitably entertained in the home of Lansing members. No delegates were elected to the next General Conference, as this district plans to hold a special conference for that purpose prior to General Conference. Time and place of the next conference were left in the hands of the district presidency.

After Calvary

PILATE

"Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews"—

The crown of thorns I had them plat.

Mockery may uncover truth—

What is truth? . . . I asked him that.

His kingdom was not of this world, he said.

Funny—I half believed him, too.

There was something regal in his look.

He was a curious growth—that Jew.

Now that he's dead I hardly know

Whether his death was gain or loss.

I somehow feel that that look of his

Was royally throned upon a cross.

CAIAPHAS

I tell no secret when I say

That I despise the Roman worm,

But I did like to see the way

The people made him twist and squirm!

Then finally the sentence passed—

But passed with far too ill a grace.

And he must weasel at the last

And wash his hands—to save his face!

The Roman worm! . . . But still he gave

The sentence . . . as he should have done.

That other one, though, he was brave.

Aye . . . he was brave . . . that other one.

ISCARIOT

We dipped our hands in the dish together.

I kissed the face I had loved so well.

And here is a halter that will tether

Another ass in the fields of hell.

JOHN

Not when Moses and Elias talked with him upon the mountain,

Not at Patmos nor Golgotha was the time when first I heard
The apocalyptic whispers, learned the lesson of his teaching,
Knew the alpha and omega of the love that was his word.

In the shadow of his shoulders, in the breast whereon I rested,
Was the lectern where the Word made Flesh was spread for me to see.

Full of grace and truth I saw it, saw the Word and saw its glory,

For he gave the keys to Peter . . . but he gave his heart to me.

—James L. Duff, in "Poetry."

and one of the most bashful boys I have ever met; merely to look at him would cause him to run away. He had an older brother John who was just the reverse in his make-up. John would talk and seemed right at home when the ministry were around. But it was the bashful boy that developed into the active minister. I baptized his father and mother and they were very proud of their son Richard. Therefore, let us not pass by those children whose appearance, from our viewpoint, does not indicate a great future for them in or out of the church. Those boys who seem only to be concerned in baseball and the "movies" may surprise us some of these days. I have heard parents say in the presence of their children, "Oh, that boy has no spirituality; all he thinks about is good things to eat and to play." I have seen many parents who have so talked live to see that they were failures in reading human character. It is a good thing for some of our young people that the heavenly Father does not judge from outer appearances but from the heart.

I have always felt grateful that such good and noble men as the late Joseph Smith, W. W. Blair, Alexander Smith, Charles Derry, W. H. Kelley, E. L. Kelley, W. T. Bozarth, Uncle William B. Smith, and many other men in the church took an interest in me when I started out in the ministry ignorant and unlearned. We older folks should ever keep in mind that the boys and girls of today are the men and women of tomorrow upon whom will fall the burden which we one by one have to unload. I have tried my best to follow the example of these noble men referred to in my attitude toward the young and by the grace of God and through his divine help I shall ever be glad to give them the glad hand.

Conditions in the church are perhaps not as we would all like to see and doubtless many are somewhat discouraged and by reason thereof are resting on their oars, so to speak, and waiting for some other person or persons to bring about brighter and more prosperous conditions. God loves the individual who clings to the iron rod when called upon to pass through unfavorable conditions. Let us not forget that "The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble; and he knoweth them that trust in him." (Nahum 1:7.) The suffering and the shedding of the precious blood of Jesus Christ by which he purchased the church shall not have been in vain; hence, the church will triumph in the end. Blessed are those who remain true to Christ and His Church and woe to those who allow themselves to become castaways.

We think that the words of the poet as given below are applicable to the members of the church at this time:

Storms and darkness can not last,
Soon all the clouds are overpast,
And the longest nights done,
And nature seems calmer after her tears,
And brighter the face of day appears
In the smile of the sun.

O tearful one in sorrow's night—
Await in patience the morn's glad light
And cease to blindly grope.
Thou wilt be stronger for thy pain,
And thy pathway clearer, when again
In thy heart uprises Hope.

As Hope and Life together go—
White sisters twain of peace, so
Despair and Death are kin;
But when sweet Patience lends her power
Then over Grief's darkest, bitterest hour,
Hope and Life always win.

Your brother in gospel bonds,
GOMER T. GRIFFITHS.

Money Making for the Local Church

New and interesting methods of making money for the church budget constantly reveal the enterprise, imagination, and ingenuity of the people responsible for finances. The Latter Day Saints in Dow City, Iowa, found so unusual a method that the story was given space in the Council Bluffs Nonpareil. The story follows:

Gooseberries have added $40.70 to the treasury of the Re-organized Church of Latter Day Saints at Dow City.

Men, women, and children of the congregation turned out in truck loads during the last week and gathered the mouth-puckering berries. In the evenings groups took possession of the band stand in the city park and picked over the harvest.

The results were 622 quarts of gooseberries sold and $40.70 added to the church treasury.

"The road to the Golden Age runs through the schoolhouse. There is no reform however far-reaching, no establishment of justice however revolutionary, that might not better be accomplished by patience through the instruction of the children than through the schemes of politics or the violence of war."—Frank Crane.

Our life depends on our distinctiveness. So long as we bear witness for a church united on gospel grounds, we will thrive and grow.—S. S. Lappin.

Facing the Facts

We are happy to bring to our readers this week a statement furnished by the Presiding Bishopric which sets forth the results of Sacrifice Week in dollars and cents and discusses frankly the relation of such to the general financial condition of the church.

This statement deserves a most careful study. The sharing of facts means the sharing of responsibilities. Each member of the church is, under the present policy, furnished the opportunity of knowing the facts. It becomes his duty to fully inform himself as to the nature and significance of those facts, and then if he sincerely believes he must assume his full share of the responsibility of meeting the situation which those facts portray. Severe is the condemnation which rests upon those who know but are not willing to do.

The facts presented are both encouraging and challenging. The general economic condition throughout the world is undoubtedly far worse than it was a year ago, and yet the Saints have excelled their splendid record of June, 1930. Surely the spirit of sacrifice still lives. Our people have risen to meet a great need and have acquitted themselves as true Saints of God.

But the present situation is not one to be met with a single effort. Sustained devotion, loyalty, and sacrifice will be required. We are not yet out of the woods. We must catch up with ourselves, and the work of the church must go on. The degree of sacrifice manifested in June, 1931, together with the increased number of Saints who have found themselves willing to sacrifice, assures us that we shall emerge from our present difficulties and that the goals of the church shall yet be realized.

The present conditions of the world are both enlightening and challenging to every devotee of the restored gospel. The message of Christ must be preached throughout the world. Its light and truth must be made to permeate the heart and mind of the people of the world. Zion must be redeemed. Our example must demonstrate conclusively the utter folly of the endeavor to establish an enduring social order based upon the principles of paganism. This demonstration will be made only as this church shall furnish to the world an example of a society founded upon the eternal principles of the gospel of Christ.

This situation is so critical, the call of God to this church so urgent, that our sacrifices to date after all appear trivial. If we shall be called upon to pay an even greater price, let us remember that great things are at stake. Nothing that we possess, not even life itself, is too great a price to pay for victory. It is doubtful if ever before in the history of our church our people have been confronted with a more significant challenge than now. There can be but one answer to this challenge by those who sincerely believe this church to be the church of God.

F. M. McD.

Graceland Gives Opportunity

"Graceland College gave me my first chance." This statement has been made by many who have gone out into the commercial and professional world, better equipped to win a place in the competition for positions and employment. And many others who may not have uttered these particular words may well have done so. Graceland has always given young people an opportunity in life, and continues to do so today.

When this editor went to Graceland, there were many others like himself who would have been lost at the ordinary college or large university: who might, indeed, never have got inside the college doors.

No matter what happens, no matter what changes may come, this group will always be grateful for one thing: that when other doors were closed to them, and other opportunities denied to them, Graceland gave them a chance. And that chance was worth all of life to them. It opened the doors to a new world of development, of beauty, and happiness. They will never forget it; they can never forget it. They feel a debt of deep gratitude.

This fall the doors of Graceland will swing open once more. It is a new Graceland, with a splendid campus equipped with fine modern buildings, and a staff of instructors well qualified to give to increasing numbers of young people the first real opportunity in life. The Graceland faculty is there, ready to welcome them.

Will your son or daughter—perhaps a niece or nephew, or grandchild—be there? Is there anything that they lack in help or encouragement to take them there? Could you supply that little extra need that would open to them this opportunity? Perhaps you ought to do something about it, today.

The Sacrifice Week and General Church Finances

Information is now sufficiently complete to enable us to report, and we are sure the Saints will be glad to learn first of all that the total contributions for the month of June this year were in excess of those received during June, 1930. The total contributions for June were $66,057.10 as compared to $57,256.83 of a year ago. (Both figures are exclusive of gifts to elders by Saints and friends.) When we consider that general economic conditions are much less favorable than in 1930, we think the Saints have reason to feel encouraged. The figure of $66,057.10 is subject to some additional increase because of two or three reports not yet received. For example, the amount of $845 referred to in the statement below represents a part of such increase.

Brother Curry called attention to the financial need of the church in the Herald of May 20, and inasmuch as there was presented at that time the amount needed over a three months' period, it is well that we should consider the result for June in the light of the objective then set forth, which was that of $200,000 for the months of May, June, and July.

This may be clearly set forth as follows:

The amount needed for
May, June, July .....	$	$200,000.00
Less received—month of May .....	20,179.05
month of June .....	66,057.10	86,236.15
<hr/> Amount needed during July, if we are to attain our objective .....		$113,763.85

In connection with this, it is perhaps well that we point out one factor in particular which is causing us considerable concern and which has a bearing not only on the present situation, but will have to be dealt with in the future. It is that of the "carry over" of last year's obligations. It is quite evident that on the basis of our current income we shall not be relieved of this "carry over" from last year.

We would suggest a rereading of Brother Curry's article in the May 20 Herald, which clearly sets forth a number of points to which the Saints should give consideration. In harmony with the promise made at that time, we herewith submit a report of income and disbursements for the two months:

Cash Income

May (excluding $3,500 paid to elders by Saints and friends) .....	$	20,179.05
June (Cash received with reports) .....	66,057.10
(Cash received, report not in) .....	845.00	66,902.10
		$87,081.15

Distribution of Income

	Already Distributed	To be Distributed	Total
Interest .....	$18,880.43	$ 7,856.92	$25,737.35
Family allowances .....	13,261.16	25,925.22	39,186.38
Elders' expenses .....	3,576.08	800.00	4,376.08
Administrative expenses .....	3,226.26	2,123.00	5,349.26
Consecration Contracts .....	1,622.23	495.00	2,117.23
Aid .....	847.82	429.50	1,277.32
Church Institutions .....	1,350.00	750.00	2,100.00
Bishops and Agents' Exp.....	163.67		163.67
Real estate expense .....	784.42	319.68	1,104.10
Stake expenses .....	1,056.46		1,056.46
Principal payments .....		1,900.00	1,900.00
Chapel .....	800.00		800.00
Miscellaneous .....	182.10		182.10
	<hr/>	<hr/>	<hr/>
	$45,750.63	$40,599.32	$86,349.95
Balance available for distribution .....			$ 731.20

You will note that the disbursements have been divided into two classes—those which have actually been made and those which are in the process of being made at the time of this writing.

The allowance checks for $25,925.22, which make up the bulk of the $40,599.32, will probably be in the mail before the Herald reaches you. It will be necessary to disburse the balance of the $40,599.32 before the month is over. We wish to point out, however, that included in the total paid and to be paid allowances, which you will note from the statement is $39,186.38, there is $15,043.03 of 1930 allowances. This again illustrates the "carry over" from last year.

We have been fortunate during May and June in refinancing either through renewals or from new loans, the bulk of the principal items listed as payable during those months. However, any expense carried over from last year become principal items to be paid this year. This holds true with the allowances carried over from 1930. It has been necessary during the first half of this year to use over $50,000 of current income to meet obligations of such a nature.

We are presenting this phase of our situation so that the Saints may know just where we stand, financially, and act accordingly.

Further reduction in our budget seems imperative unless our income can be increased sufficiently to meet our present budget and also take care of last year's "carry over."

As already set forth, the amount needed now to effectively relieve the situation is $113,763.85. We appreciate the fact that the contributions for June came as a result of real sacrifice on the part of many. We do not feel that we can urge these to sacrifice further, but we do appeal to all who have not contributed to the utmost of their ability to do so now, that God's work may carry on.

THE PRESIDING BISHOPRIC,

By G. L. DELAPP.

Dignity and Beauty in Ministry

By Elbert A. Smith

III. DRESS

We may begin at the outside and work toward the heart of the man, reaching the more important part of the man as a climax. Dress may be superficial, yet it is that which first strikes the eye of the beholder and may be the factor in shaping first judgments. As a people we have enough prejudices to break down without creating unnecessary ones. Dress may be superficial, yet in a way it becomes a part of the man: it expresses his taste and individuality. So the observer may have some grounds for his judgments on that score: "The apparel oft proclaims the man."—Shakespeare.

Develop Good Taste

It is a part of the work of a minister to develop good taste and good judgment in all things, including his dress. For his dress is a factor to be considered in his ministry if he would be respected and heard and permitted to serve. A ragged and dirty book cover in no way vitiates the noble sentiments that may be within on the printed pages of the book; but most people will never read such a book; for them it might as well never have existed. Given a clean and decent binding, its message may reach those same people. One has suggested that had Cicero himself pronounced one of his remarkable orations with a blanket about his shoulders, more people would have laughed at his dress than admired his address.

Our ministers never did uniformly adopt the old custom of a distinctive dress for clergymen. Some of them habitually wore black, that is, the old-time ministerial black suit with long coat. Many of them wore such garb only on formal occasions. The number who habitually wear a distinctive garb has decreased until the vanishing point is about reached. Many of them never wear black excepting at funerals or weddings (why the two occasions should fall into the same class in this matter may be explained by custom, not by logic).

What Color?

The minister of today dresses quite like a business man, even in the pulpit. Many prefer a dark suit in the pulpit as being more dignified and appropriate; some choose gray; and in hot weather some of our men clad in white present a pleasing appearance. Elder X— dressed himself in white from head to foot of a hot Sunday morning and attended church. That evening he suddenly decided to drive to a near-by branch to attend service. The pastor of that branch had remarked to his wife that day that he presumed he must prepare to preach in the evening, as no outside help seemed forthcoming. She replied, No, that in a dream she had seen an elder come to occupy the pulpit that evening, and though she did not recognize him, he was dressed all in white. When Elder X— came into the meeting that night, she identified him as the man, and he occupied the pulpit.

Certainly, though we may not have a uniform garb, we should be uniform in one respect: the minister should present himself for service, whether in the pulpit or in other lines of service in the church building, with clean clothing that is well pressed and brushed, and with clean linen and decently polished shoes, with his hair properly brushed (if he still have hair to brush), and his whole person clean and presentable. To go into the stand, even in an informal atmosphere, as at a reunion, in disorderly attire, or into a country pulpit clad in dirty overalls, is a mistake.

Extreme Styles to Be Avoided

Some of our men, even those under appointment, have quite seriously injured their ministry by careless or slovenly dress. It is true, of course, that others have injured their ministry by foppishness. The minister should dress decently and well—and then forget his dress. The people should be able to take a just pride in his fine and dignified appearing and manner; but at the same time they certainly abhor a "dude" or a "sissy" in the pulpit. A sense of balance and good taste is invaluable. Clothing need not be expensive to be presentable. A freak or an eccentric in dress is often eccentric along other lines, and people mistrust an eccentric as one being in some way "off balance." The loud colors and extreme lines of the latest collegiate styles are out of place on the minister; so also is clothing, rusty, out of date, and outworn. John Wesley advised: "Never be first in fashion or last out of it." The middle ground in dress as in so many other things is likely to be safe ground. We are advised to be temperate in all things.

(To be continued.)

Publicity Agents, Attention

Publicity agents are requested hereafter to send all reports, for publications and other matters, to the Herald Publishing House, Independence, Missouri.

The general office of the Publicity Department has been discontinued, and its functions are now distributed among other offices of the church, until further notice.

Faculty and Courses at Graceland

By President G. N. Briggs

It has recently been said that "the rise of the American College is one of the most distinctive chapters in national history, a living record of the American passion for education. There is much in this story to inspire."

In speaking of the small college, an educational leader has written: "The most thrilling chapter of American higher education is that which tells the story of the intellectual leadership of the graduates of these small colleges."

Graceland is one of the most cosmopolitan small colleges in the United States. During the past year students came from thirty States and five foreign countries, thus bringing together the inspiration, culture, and ambition represented by very widely distributed centers.

If the student body is cosmopolitan, the faculty is equally so. The instructional force comes from the following educational institutions: ten state universities—Iowa, Minnesota, California, Washington, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Colorado, Wisconsin, Illinois; five endowed universities—Chicago, Northwestern, Western Reserve, Drake, Des Moines; five conservatories of music—American, New England, Northwestern, Chicago Musical College, Nebraska University School of Music; four state teachers colleges—Iowa, Colorado, Kansas, Idaho; two state agricultural colleges—Iowa, Colorado, and one foreign university, Edinburg.

It will thus be seen that the leading universities and colleges in the country are represented on the Graceland faculty, thus bringing to the students the best practices in the best universities of the United States.

To those interested in the selection of a college where the best opportunities are available, the scholastic attainments of the teachers are of importance. The Graceland faculty represents Bachelors' Degrees in Arts, Philosophy, Science, Divinity, Music, Didactics and Education, while Masters' Degrees have been attained in Arts, Sciences, and Education, with Doctors' Degrees in Philosophy and Law. These attainments represent practically every field of human learning, thus enabling the student by a wise choice of courses and electives to prepare for some definite professional or vocational career.

This possibility is very evident from the fact that twelve different definite courses covering one, two, or three years' study are provided. These are Liberal Arts, Teacher Training, Public School Music, Business Administration, Home Economics, Nursing, Engineering, Pre-Law, Pre-Dental, Pre-Medical, Secretarial, and Religion.

In order to make possible these twelve different courses, over one hundred thirty subjects representing nearly three hundred semester college credit hours are offered. Thus by a wise choice of electives one is fully able to secure those subjects which will best equip him in preparation for his life work.

Because of Graceland's accredited standing in the State, Regional, and National Standardizing and Accrediting Associations, graduates are able to transfer Graceland credits for advanced standing in the leading universities of the United States.

Within the past few years our graduates have entered the following universities for advanced work, thus evidencing our standing: University of Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Maine, Northwestern, Miami, Ohio, Chicago, California, Illinois, Minnesota, Harvard, Iowa State, Kansas State.

From the standpoint of faculty, courses, library,

NOTICE

To all those who are interested in becoming College Players. Try-outs for Apprentice Players will be held next Monday and Tuesday in Room 111, Briggs Hall, from 4:00 to 5:30 and 6:30 to 8:00 P. M. Play books on reserve in the Library. Everyone invited.

This notice, followed by more complete instructions as to methods of try-outs, will appear on the bulletin board in the Administration Building the second week of school in September. It will not be an unusual thing if half the student body respond to this notice. Many come to try out and remain to listen to the others.

These try-outs are of vital import to the director of the College Players and to the old members whose ranks are to be repleted. What a joy it is to find unexpected talent which will insure the success of the plays for the coming year. One thing is sure, talent will be found. Perhaps no one will appear to take the place of some favorite actor who has just been graduated, but some new candidate will show promise of winning for himself an equally important place on the Coliseum stage.

The Apprentice Players who are chosen from these first try-outs will later have to prove their worth to the group by actual play work of merit or back stage work before they are initiated as Graceland College Players.

These players really work, perhaps not so seriously in the first play or two in which they participate as do the "old-timers" who have learned the joy of earnest teamwork.

When the play is cast, the actors make practice a regular part of their study schedule—a duty which is really missed when the play is over. After the drilling hours of memorization, come the fascinating hours of fine interpretation of character and critical timing of the movement of the play. Room 111, with its blackboards fantastically decorated with drawings of windows and doors, mirrors, rising suns, etc., with its classroom chairs serving for set-laboratories, and accredited standing, Graceland has all that can be desired. From the viewpoint of other desirable qualities, student activities, good environment, social and religious opportunities, forensic, musical and athletic activities, Graceland has all that any educational institution can offer or that any student can hope to have.

tees, tables, beds, wheeled chairs, and what not, finally becomes inadequate, and rehearsals are taken to the Coliseum. At last, when the actors have almost completed their work on the play, the stage crew appears on the scenes with such a pounding and sawing and painting and scurrying about town for props that the actors fade into insignificance for a short time. The final result of all this activity, if all goes well, is a quiet, orderly back stage, with actors costumed, painted, and powdered, stage hands guarding their particular properties, all waiting in various degrees of excitement for the crowd to assemble so that the front curtain may ascend; and all of them, even the director, taking furtive peeks through two little holes in the curtain bored just eye level by some curious and daring actor of past days. A final peek through the curtain, a signal to the orchestra leader, a scurrying off stage, and the play is on.

Weeks of preparation—two hours of entertainment for the audience. Has it been worth it? Ask the players. These weeks of preparation have for them been weeks of voice and body training, weeks of making social contacts, weeks of fun as well as work. Their reward—a richer life, an added self-confidence, a deeper appreciation and understanding of the folks living in this world with us.

Influence

Let the weakest, let the humblest remember that in his daily course he can, if he will, shed around him almost a heaven! Kindly words, sympathizing attentions, watchfulness against wounding men's sensitiveness—these cost little, but they are priceless in their value. Are they not almost the staple of our daily happiness? From hour to hour, moment to moment, we are supported, blessed, by small kindnesses.—F. W. Robertson.

Graceland—A Cosmopolitan College

By A. R. Gilbert

Just one short week after Charles Cromway left his home in Washington on a morning early in September, he was a full-fledged student at Graceland College.

At first everything seemed a little strange, but after the rush of the first days was over, he settled down to find himself one of a congenial and friendly group that seemed to come from all corners of the United States. The daily practice of the football squad had just ended. That afternoon Cromway had discovered he was catching punts kicked by a boy from Illinois who had received the ball from an Ohio center. Four players representing the States of Utah, Iowa, California, and Missouri, ran down the field to tackle him. He tossed the ball to a candidate from Nebraska, and took his place behind a player from New York. The Graceland Yellow Jackets were just beginning to whip into a unified team, and well they might, for the game with Iowa Wesleyan College was to be played in just two weeks. In another week or so, Cromway discovered that the thirty-two boys comprising the squad had come from fourteen different States and foreign countries.

Representatives from Thirty-three States and Foreign Countries

At the end of the third week, Cromway received an invitation to join the A Cappella Chorus. He accepted immediately, since membership in this organization was considered a very great honor. The chorus was made up of selected musicians from the college, and a glorious good time was anticipated. The group was one of the jolliest in school, and the twenty-five members came from ten different States.

The first two thirds of the year was spent in a routine of practice, drill, and rehearsal that resembled the grueling football season, but the last third was such a delight the compensation was complete. The chorus was constantly called upon for entertainment, and everyone seemed to enjoy it. A number of trips were made, among them a concert on the Iowa Artists' program at Des Moines, Iowa, an evening's appearance at the Bedford County Musical Festival, and an entertainment for the Rotarians at Saint Joseph, Missouri, and Kansas City. The Rotarians seemed especially appreciative, extending invitations to return next year.

Of course school life would not be complete without social contacts. Cromway joined one of the social clubs and came to know intimately a group of fine fellows. There were sixteen in the club, and they came from nine different States.

These brief glimpses into the school life of Charles Cromway indicate one of the unique characteristics of Graceland as a small college—its cosmopolitan nature. The 1930-31 student body represents thirty-three States and foreign countries. Thus Graceland offers its young people a distinct opportunity to develop in a cosmopolitan group representing personalities, viewpoints, and breadths of experience that can hardly be duplicated.

The outstanding and extraordinary feature of this college group gathered from so many different States and countries, however, is not its diversity but its unity. A visitor to the campus remarked:

"The thing that strikes me is the simplicity of your college life and the friendliness, pleasantness, and happiness that your students radiate. Why, everyone seems to be happy."

The explanation is simple. Gathered from different places, the students, nevertheless, come with common ideals and common purposes. The matter of blending into a unified, happy group is therefore simple. And when Graceland days are over, a little army of students marches out from the "Hill" toward colleges, universities, and vocational tasks throughout the length and breadth of our United States—going again into different places but carrying with them common purposes, common goals, and a common faith.

The Lambda Delta Sigma Society as a Goal for Graceland Students

By G. A. Platz

Ten years ago this last spring, a friend of Graceland and the church, who has devoted his entire life to the furtherance of education and the development of scholarship in young people, conceived the idea of founding the Lambda Delta Sigma Society. He saw in it an opportunity to encourage education and culture among Latter Day Saints. This ideal became the constitutional purpose of the society, and through the study and discussion of problems pertinent to the welfare of mankind, truth is being disseminated.

The society began with the establishment of the Alpha Chapter at Graceland, December 3, 1921. It was composed of twenty-four charter members selected from the faculty and those students of the 1921-22 sophomore class who had ranked especially high in their scholastic attainments during the freshman year. To this membership, seven more faculty members were added, March 7, 1922, and eighteen more students became members June 6, 1922, on the basis of their high scholastic achievements during the year. Such was the beginning of the Alpha Chapter, and at the close of each school year since then, students have been elected as new members in the society according to their merits. Some are selected from the freshman class as associate members on probation during their sophomore year, and these, if they have made good during their period of probation, together with others of equal merit, are elected to regular membership at the close of their sophomore year.

Who are these students, selected each year from the entire student body of Graceland to constitute the new membership of a society whose purpose is to encourage education and culture among Latter Day Saints? Possibly we can best answer this question by reviewing the lives of some of those who have become members during the past ten years. One of the charter members of the Alpha Chapter holds office in the First Presidency of the Church, ever interested and active in the education of the youth. Another is a patriarch, placing his blessing together with God's on the heads of many of our children. Five are at present members of the faculty at Graceland, and four are members of the faculties of other colleges and universities. One is in editorial charge of some of the church publications, and another is making a success of a large business enterprise, operated on the stewardship basis. One of the young women of the group is the wife of a successful missionary, himself a member of the society, and one the wife of a successful farmer and the mother of two happy children.

At random, now, as I recall their faces and what they did on the campus, I wish to select the careers of some of the students who became members of the society more recently. Here is a young man who came from a mining district of central Iowa. He developed into one of our ablest college debaters on social problems and is now in the upper ranks of the faculty of sociology in our State University. Another boy came to Graceland from a farm near Lamoni. He was one of our most successful bookstore managers and is at present on the faculty of economics in the university of a neighboring State. At the head of the band and orchestral work in one of the high schools of Ohio is a young man who was always found capable and willing to help in the musical part of Graceland programs. Another young man who promises to become of national repute as a baritone singer, first saw his vision during his persistent efforts to train his voice while at Graceland.

Then, too, there are the electrical engineers at work in a large electrical-supplies house and the chemical engineer doing research work in an eastern varnish manufacturing plant. Their assignments in mathematics, chemistry, and physics were never too difficult to master when they were students on the "Hill."

And so, in whatever field of human endeavor we find them, members of Lambda Delta Sigma, by the very lives they live, are demonstrating the values of worth-while education. They are, by the success they are making in their respective careers, fulfilling the purpose of the society—encouraging education and culture among Latter Day Saints. Who, then, are the students elected to membership in Lambda Delta Sigma? They are those who become scholars in the broadest sense of the term; who develop wholesome habits of industry; who, with Abou Ben Adam, may be recorded as those who love their fellow men.

When you come to college next fall, what will be your goal? When you register in the Liberal Arts, Home Economics, or Engineering Course, are you planning on more than "getting by" in the subjects of your course? Possibly you are planning to have an industrial assignment and work your way through college, at least in part. Will you do your work each day with a sense of responsibility to your task? You will, no doubt, engage in some of the extra-curricular activities of the school. Are you going to do your level best in every activity you enter?

When you come to college next fall, do you want to become a scholar? Do you really want to master the subjects of your course? Then form regular habits of study. Seek learning and gain wisdom. Do you actually wish to work your way through college in your industrial assignment? Then be honest with your job. Do you earnestly desire to accomplish something worth while in extra-curricular activities? Then enter the activity with zeal and learn to love it. To students who develop such habits of industry, Lambda Delta Sigma offers her membership. She is looking for young men and young women who master their tasks by becoming masters of themselves.

We are writing a Gospel,
A chapter each day,
By deeds that we do,
By words that we say;
People read what we write
Whether faithless or true,
Say! What is the Gospel
According to you?

3.—The Nose and Its Relation to Health and Disease

By A. W. Teel, M. D., Church Physician

The eye, ear, nose, and throat are closely related in location and function. Especially is this true of the eye, ear, and nose. For convenience of description and study, we shall consider them separately, making reference to their relation to each other, which might help in clarifying the subject under discussion.

The outside structure of the nose is made up of cartilage and bone, covered externally by skin and lined internally by mucous membrane. It is divided internally by a partition called the nasal septum, into two passages or chambers. These chambers have important functions to perform, which will be taken up later. On the outer wall of these passages are important bones, openings, and nerves, the most important of the bones being turbinal or turbinated bones—three in number—situated on the outer wall of the nasal chamber, on each side. The inferior is the largest separately curved bony plate, horizontally placed and separating the meatuses. The middle and superior turbinate bones are merely processes of the ethmoid bone, which forms a more or less greater part of the septum, containing numerous sinuses which frequently become involved when other parts of the nasal cavity become infected.

Closely related to the turbinated bones are hollow cavities called sinuses (L. "gulf"), which open into the nose and furnish drainage. If these openings become injured by acute or chronic inflammation, a serious condition of an inflammatory type will be produced in the sinuses, which is then called sinusitis. This, if improperly treated or neglected, is often fatal. It may affect the eyes and cause total blindness, or some severe constitutional disease.

The three turbinated bones have very special, important duties to perform. The turbinated bones extending out, as they do, into the nasal chambers, produce groove-like passageways beneath them, called meatuses (L. "going passage") named like that of the turbinate bones—inferior, middle, and superior. Just below the lower or inferior turbinate, in the inferior meatus, is where the tear duct opens, which is located on the floor of the nose. Frequent cold, acute inflammation, or chronic catarrhal inflammation will often stop the drainage of this duct, which may become infected throughout its entire course and produce a serious eye complication. The upper sinuses are drained just below the middle turbinate, in the middle groove or meatus, and if for any reason, like that of the tear duct becoming occluded by infection or inflammation, then inflammation of the sinuses results, which frequently extends to the eye, ear, or throat, and unless properly treated in the beginning, may result in a severe constitutional disturbance and terminate in death. Influenza and the common cold are, most frequently, the cause of these inflammations. Unfortunately, the sinuses have very low recuperative powers and when once inflamed are very hard to cure and frequently require surgical intervention. It seems needless to say that all such cases should be treated by a competent specialist. Symptoms, pathology, and treatment of sinusitis has greatly improved in the last few years.

A single sinus is seldom infected; usually two or more become inflamed, with the exception of the maxillary, which is much more frequently infected from the teeth. The root of the infected tooth is often found extending up into this cavity, but the other sinuses nearly always become infected from the nose. On this account, the other sinuses, having a more common source of infection, and being more intimately associated, are more simultaneously diseased.

We will have more to say of practical importance concerning these important structures in some of our later letters.

Tom King: A Life History

PART THREE

By C. H. Porter

A New Country

It was about five o'clock on Saturday afternoon, July 15, 1871, when Tom and several of his young companions were released from Castle Gardens. They all went to a rooming house together for the night. The next morning separation came. Most of them had an objective point which they wished to reach.

Tom and a young Englishman who had been to the United States before spent the day together. They took walks in the city, visited Wall Street and Broadway, went to Central Park and other places of interest, making a full day. Monday they did what was necessary, such as changing English for United States money, etc., then visited the business streets, markets, and so forth, until time to separate for their respective journeys to the interior.

Tom had decided to go to Cayuga County, New York, where an elder brother, also a brother of his father, lived. He took an evening train for Syracuse, where he had to change for Auburn.

He fell asleep on the route, and when he awoke the conductor asked him where he was going. He said, "To Syracuse." The conductor replied, "We passed Syracuse some time ago. You must get off at the next station and go back on the first train." This was a disappointment, but it was the only way to correct the mistake. Tom waited with what patience he could for the return train, and upon arrival at Syracuse found that he had to wait there several hours for the train to Auburn. While at Syracuse he was offered work but decided to keep to his original plan and proceed to Cayuga County.

The journey was finally made and Auburn reached in the middle of the afternoon of a hot day, July 18. Soon after leaving the depot, he inquired the distance and direction to the village of Owasco. He found the distance to be seven or eight miles. This did not seem far, and he decided to make the trip by walking. He had two grips which held all his belongings. He was warmly clad, the temperature was much higher than he had been accustomed to, and before he arrived at his destination he was exceedingly tired. He stopped to rest in the shade of two large poplar trees near the home of Throop Martin. From thence he continued his travel until he came to a house near the road. Being very thirsty, he set his grips by the gate and asked a young lady if he might have a drink of water. She said, "There is the well; help yourself."

He went to the well and found that water was drawn with a chain pump. He had never seen the like before and wondered for a moment if he could manipulate it without exposing his ignorance. The lady saw his hesitation and hastening to the well said, "Why, you silly thing, don't you know how to draw a bucket of water?"

Tom felt chagrined but thought it possible that he might know some things of which the lady was ignorant.

A few years later he went to the same school with her and wondered if she recognized him as the weary stranger, hot and dusty, who had been called, "a silly thing" because he failed to understand the use of a chain pump at first sight.

As he drew nearer to his destination, he inquired for the home of his brother, and being properly directed reached there in the dusk of the evening, to the great surprise of his brother and family, although they had been apprised of his intention to visit them and to locate in the vicinity if things seemed favorable.

Soon after his arrival, his brother's landlord called on a matter of business, and Tom was introduced to him as "a new arrival from the Old Country." Tom and the newcomer sized each other up by swift glances of appraisal and entered into conversation.

The visitor soon evidenced decided anti-English sentiments, and Tom set him down as a narrow-minded man of strong national prejudices.

After he had left, Tom's brother cautioned him to be careful in conversation with people, for, said he, "You will find that you are not in England, and many of the people here do not like the English."

This was a surprise to Tom who had thought of the English and Americans as being very much alike in manners, customs, and friendly feelings. He found later that his brother was right, also that his appraisal of his brother's landlord was correct.

The man had a superficial knowledge of the War of Independence and delighted in telling Tom how the "Yankee boys beat the British soldiers," and seemed to relish anything calculated to make sore the feelings of the newcomer.

Tom did not resent this as he would like to have done, for he found his brother's words of caution were born from the germ of wisdom.

Work in the New Country

Tom inquired of his brother about work and found that so far as his trade was concerned there was nothing he could do unless he went to the city, but said he, "Harvest is now on, and if you care to work on a farm you can get work at once. George Ellsworth wants to hire a man by the month and will be glad to hire you."

Tom made inquiry about wages, home, etc., and was told that Ellsworth was a good man to work for and would furnish him a home and everything found and pay him fair wages according to his ability to make good.

This was satisfactory, so the next day he interviewed Mr. Ellsworth and was set to work with other men binding wheat, with the understanding that wages were to be determined upon later.

After working a few days, Mr. Ellsworth offered him seventeen dollars per month for his time from the date he commenced until the farm work was finished for the season.

He accepted this with an understanding that he would neither be required nor asked to do any work other than the necessary chores on Sunday.

This surprised Mr. Ellsworth, but he agreed to it. This seemed to Tom to be necessary, because his brother had told him that Sunday made but little difference to them in the busy season, or when there was anything they cared specially to do.

Tom told his brother of the bargain they had made. He said, "That is all right, but the boss will want to stack wheat on Sunday just the same."

Tom replied, "I have never worked on Sunday and have always had a living, and I shall not work for George Ellsworth or anyone else on that day."

His brother advised him not to be too particular, but Tom was fully determined not to yield on this point.

Sure enough, the very next Saturday Mr. Ellsworth said, "Well, I think we had better stack wheat tomorrow." Tom reminded him that the next day was Sunday. "Yes," said he, "but the wheat is in good condition, and it ought to be put in the stack." "Well," said Tom, "I can not help you tomorrow." "I will pay you extra for your time," said Ellsworth. "Pay makes no difference," said Tom; "the agreement was that I was not to be asked to work on Sunday." "Well," retorted the other, "I didn't suppose I had hired a deacon."

Tom was annoyed and felt that he was being imposed upon. He said, "I shall work for no one on Sunday, and if this is not satisfactory we shall have to quit right now."

Ellsworth yielded the point but was very sarcastic about it. Tom was almost at his mercy, but was not prepared to be coerced into doing something at which his conscience rebelled. He related the circumstance to his brother and got but little sympathy. His brother's contention was that it was necessary for him to earn all the money he could in the working season, because in winter he might be on expense and out of funds.

His father's brother also sided against him, and the people generally said that he was too religious for common use. Some ventured the opinion that winter might bring him to his senses.

Time went on, and Tom proved himself to be a capable and willing worker and in a general way gave satisfaction to his employer.

As winter approached and corn gathering was at hand, his employer, one Sunday morning, surprised him by requiring that he do some work that was unnecessary. Tom replied, "I had rather leave that until tomorrow." The other retorted, "The one that will not work on Sunday ought not to eat on that day either."

Tom was taken completely by surprise. He turned from him, went to his room, gathered up his few belongings and left.

He went to his brother's home and related the circumstance. His brother said, "I have been afraid something of the kind might occur. What are you going to do now?"

Tom said he was going to work, for he thought there was enough work that he could get to do. His brother reminded him that corn shucking was about the only work now, and after that was finished winter would be there, and it would be long and cold.

The prospect was not bright, but Tom had saved

The Nature of Man Versus Progress

Indifference and Other Traits Carried Over

The effect of the unseen world is strikingly noticeable in the attitude of humanity toward religious matters, some eagerly drinking in the gospel message with joy and gladness; others, equally intelligent, manifesting a cold or indifferent attitude. God can not be blamed for this failure to respond, but rather it is probably a reproduction of the disposition maintained in the former state. "And they that dwell on the earth shall wonder, whose names were not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, where they behold the beast that was and is not, and yet is."—Revelation 17: 8. Here it is definitely stated that many have not written their names in the lamb's book of life in those early days and still maintain the same attitude of indifference on earth. They are not arbitrarily denied the benefits of the gospel, but freely and of their own choice continue to neglect the laws of advancement along spiritual lines in this life as they did in the former.

nearly all his wages and could not think it possible that he could not earn a living.

His brother asked if he would be willing to work for Ellsworth at shucking corn by the bushel. Tom said he would. "Then," said he, "if he cares to hire you, you had better do that and you can live with us. We will charge you for your board, and you can probably earn enough to save some money, but not seventeen dollars a month."

The next morning Tom went to the home of his late employer and asked for a settlement for the work he had done.

This was had and Ellsworth asked him what he was going to do. Tom told him he would make his home with his brother for the present and would take any work he could find to do.

"Well," said he, "do you care to shuck corn for me by the bushel?" Tom told him he was willing, so the price was agreed upon and the work was commenced at once, and he continued to work on the same farm until the snows of winter stopped farm operations for the season.

Because of Satan and his agents being denied bodies, we are relieved from having this class among us in the flesh save as some, such as mediums, give over command to these evil spirits.

Scientists have never been able to account for the musical and mathematical prodigies which have arisen along the course of human progress. Who can explain the arrival of an Enoch, Abraham, Paul, Joseph Smith, Shakespeare, Keats, Lincoln, or Edison save on the ground of an impress or projection from an unseen world or the greater Reality.

Further, as all spirits were created, therefore numbered, before there was flesh of any kind on earth and as the number of bodies depends on human caprice while death in infancy, early mortality, idiocy, harmful environment, would deprive some spirits of equal chance in body environment and experience, is it not inconceivable to expect that some, perhaps many, spirits have more than one chance in bodies? (Read 2 Kings 2: 15; Matthew 11: 15; 17: 14; Doctrine and Covenants 26: 2, which states John the Baptist was "filled with the spirit of Elias.")

We believe that the spirit uses the body as a medium of expression, a tool or machine, and therefore that the adaptability of the body, its efficiency as an instrument of expression, greatly affects the progress and capacity of the whole man. We can not expect science to give us much information as to how the spirit operates through the body since only certain attributes of the spirit are recognized. As "the body without the spirit is dead," we are safe in saying vital energy is one of the characteristics of the spirit, and the following from Doctor Frank McCoy on "Vital Energy" may help us to understand how the spirit operates:

This energy in the bodies of animals and man does not seem to come from the same chemical changes taking place in plant life: it appears to be something inherent at birth which leaves the body at death. . . . After many years of observation and experimentation with both the sick and the well, I am convinced that vital force, and the mind, may function through the organism without regard to food material. A diseased body interferes more or less with the expression of this energy. When a person is said to be of low vitality, it is really only because there is considerable obstruction to the normal flow of vital energy, and not because of the lack of it. When encumbrances are removed, the energy seems to increase, but this is only in the same way that a criminal is able to use his strength to better advantage when the ball and chain are removed from his ankles.

Family Resemblances

This quotation from Doctor McCoy illustrates quite well, I think, the effect which physical characteristics probably have in assisting or retarding the action of the spirit and thus explains family traits and dispositions which may not be fully accounted for by like environment and family association. The spirit being an entity, independent and individual, it could have no family relationship with any other spirit. Therefore family traits and dispositions must be due to the necessity of the spirit expressing itself in terms of the capacities of the occupied bodies, which capacities may be of like nature in related bodies.

Human Nature Does Not Change

While, then, physical and mental characteristics may be similar in related families, it should not be supposed that human nature itself is subject to change through hereditary influences. If the spirit occupying the body is an intelligent entity of well-developed character before its advent into the flesh, it follows logically that only changes of the physical organism are subject to hereditary laws, and therefore human nature itself remains fundamentally the same from generation to generation. It should also be clearly noticed that changes which occur in living conditions, society, and organizations, are a bequeathment from one generation to another, but are changes of environment only and not of human nature itself.

That humanity remains fundamentally the same can be easily proved by abundant evidence, but I am confining myself to a quotation from Doctor Albert Einstein taken from a recent interview. Professor Einstein is a great if not the greatest living authority in the world today. He is quoted as follows: Question. "Is there," I resumed the conversation, "such a thing as progress in the story of human effort?" Answer. "The only progress I can see is progress in organization. The ordinary human being does not live long enough to draw any substantial benefit from his own experience. And no one, it seems, can benefit by the experience of others. Being both a father and teacher I know we can teach our children nothing. We can transmit to them neither our knowledge of life nor of mathematics. Each must learn its lesson anew."

Question. "But," I interjected, "nature crystallizes our experiences. The experiences of our generation are the instincts of the next."

Answer. "Ah," Einstein remarked, "that is true. But it takes nature ten thousand or ten millions of years to transmit inherited experiences or characteristics. It must have taken the bees and the ants æons before they learned to adapt themselves so marvelously to their environments. Human beings, alas, seem to learn more slowly than insects."

If it takes so many years to transmit one acquired characteristic, we can safely conclude that for all practical purposes human nature does not change.

Religious Instinct the Result of Spirit Experience

Before leaving this quotation from Doctor Einstein we should notice the argument he provides in support of the existence of the spirit so many ages ago. One of the most universal instincts in humanity is that of worship and belief in a higher power. If instincts are the result of experiences ten thousand or more years ago, then have we not reason to believe that in those distant ages we must have had an experience with our Creator which has crystallized into this, the most important instinct in mankind? Whether we believe this experience occurred to our forefathers in the flesh or to ourselves personally in the spirit world makes no difference in the fact that this universal feeling after God exists as the result of some experience in the past, and that that experience must have been very potent and vital to produce such far-reaching effects.

Modern Philosophy Defined

Modern philosophy is built around the doctrine of "automatic progress" as propounded in evolution. The "blunt, brutal, downright realism of the present time" places culture as the great goal of mankind and argues that society is steadily forging ahead to the attainment of that goal. Under such a system of philosophy, religion is gradually (perhaps I should say rapidly) becoming regarded as superficial and unnecessary, culture being sufficient for all purposes of development. Doctor Charles A. Ellwood says, "There are no limits to cultural developments that are yet visible." Again he says, "Therefore the feelings and emotions of man are entirely controllable by culture." While Doctor Ellwood does indicate Christianity as a phase or department of culture, yet he gives it but little place in the development of the future. Mr. John Cowper Powys, speaking of culture, believes it is "broader than religion and may in due time supersede it." "The lofty issues to which religion in its manifold forms is dedicated could be appropriated by culture without the bigotry and intolerance which go with organized propaganda." He says:

In the midst of the turbulence of modern life, it (culture) offers a calm refuge, a patient, skeptical, but not cynical standing-ground from which we can survey the track of our journey through the years without too much self-abasement and without too many regrets.

Humanism, the new religion originated in New York by Doctor Potter, is founded on the principle that man has within himself all the elements required for development and that self-culture is the highest aim and end of man. Humanism is but the expression of views held by a steadily increasing number of writers.

Failure of Religion

If religion had been maintaining an efficient leadership and inspiration in its particular field it would not now be open to the charge of being unnecessary to the further development of society. The very fact that culture can be even suggested as a substitute for religion is a grievous indictment against present-day religion and reveals its impotency. Science has been able to lead religion around by the nose, so to speak, for the last fifty years and is now ready to discard it altogether.

True religion was expected to deal with the Spirit of man and his temporal and eternal salvation. It was expected to effect a change at the very roots of his life, the foundations of character, the motives by which he acted. It was expected to deal with authority with man's relationship with his God, from which relationship would have grown a solution of the more practical issues of life. The religion which could do this would be distinguished by the power of the priesthood of God actuating it.

Therefore, in the ordinances thereof the power of godliness is manifest; and without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto man in the flesh; for without this, no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live.—Doctrine and Covenants 83: 3.

Dangers in Modern Philosophy

Doctor Einstein's statement that the "only progress" in human effort is "seen in organization" and that "each generation must learn its lesson anew" points unerringly toward the weakness at the heart of modern philosophy. No matter how rapid or extensive may be the advance in human society and living conditions, the real progress of humanity can be gauged only by the changes in human nature itself. The structure of civilization and society can be founded only on the basic fundamental qualities in humanity itself, and hence is no firmer or more stable than is the foundation upon which it rests, and I see little evidence that culture or even the accepted religions can hope to change that foundation. A new generation is arising that does not know the horrors of war by experience. A new generation is here whose morals are lower and whose philosophy of life lacks much of the higher standards of twenty-five years ago.

The standards of conduct accepted by many of the younger people come as a shock to some of us who accept divine law as a standard, and before the word sin tended to become obsolete. A distinct sense of loss is felt when divine authority is removed from the marriage covenant and laws of general conduct.

In addition to the decline in religious life and faith and its concomitant ideals in morals and general standard, there are exceedingly grave dangers threatening the progress of industrial life. The centralization of business in immensely powerful organizations and the introduction of specialized machinery as a substitute for man power in manufacture and agriculture have produced a steadily decreasing demand for labor, and the army of unemployed is increasing so rapidly as to become a problem of dangerous possibilities. In Canada and the United States the number of unemployed is now the worst known, while in Europe, Germany alone has some 2,000,000 cared for by contributions from the public funds. England for years has carried from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 idle laborers. It is estimated there are 50,000,000 unemployed in the world today. Deferred payment purchase plans and the consequent rush into pleasures and luxury spending has inflated business to the saturation point and depleted the saving of many to the danger line.

In 1929 over 1,000,000 people died of starvation in China and today 2,000,000 are in dire need, while desperate conditions among the "willing to work" in our own country and Europe, in the midst of plenty, indicate something radically wrong with the structure of society and our so-called culture.

The strongest motive force in mankind generally is that of preservation of self and loved ones, and hunger and desperation can lead to anarchy and overthrow of law and order. I would not be a prophet of gloom, but it appears we are building our structure of society and civilization over a seething volcano of immense destructive power, and we are treading on the edge of the eruption.

The latter-day Prophet has given us warning in no uncertain tones:

Ye hear of wars in far countries, and you say that there will soon be great wars in far countries, but ye know not the hearts of men in your own land.—Doctrine and Covenants 38: 6.

For verily I say unto you, that great things await you; ye hear of wars in foreign lands, but, behold, I say unto you, they are nigh, even at your doors, and not many years hence ye shall hear of wars in your own lands. . . . And it shall come to pass, among the wicked, that every man that will not take his sword against his neighbor, must needs flee unto Zion for safety. And there shall be gathered unto it out of every nation under heaven; and it shall be the only people that shall not be at war one with another.—Doctrine and Covenants 45: 11, 13.

I, the Lord, . . . have sworn in my wrath and decreed wars upon the face of the earth, and the wicked shall slay the wicked, and fear shall come upon every man, and the Saints also shall hardly escape.—Doctrine and Covenants 63: 9.

The Solution Provided by Jesus

The teaching and laws of Jesus contained in the gospel are the only real hope for a realization of the ideal society, the "new world," and the concrete instructions for the erection and maintaining of this society as given in present-day revelation are but another evidence of the divine inspiration which actuated the prophet of latter days.

It is wisdom in me; therefore, a commandment I give unto you, that ye shall organize yourselves, and appoint every man his stewardship, that every man may give an account unto me of the stewardship which is appointed unto him; for it is expedient that I, the Lord, should make every man accountable as stewards over earthly blessings, which I have made and prepared for my creatures. I, the Lord, stretched out the heavens, and builded the earth as a very handiwork; and all things therein are mine, and it is my purpose to provide for my Saints, for all things are mine; but it must needs be done in mine own way; and, behold, this is the way, that I, the Lord, have decreed to provide for my Saints: that the poor shall be exalted in that the rich are made low; for the earth is full, and there is enough and to spare; yea, I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves. Therefore, if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor, and the needy, he shall with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment.—Doctrine and Covenants 101: 2.

This is not an arbitrary ordering of man's affairs, but was to come from the desire of the heart, the expressions of the real worth-while motives of life. Service and sacrifice are the ideals of Jesus' philosophy and are the spontaneous result of the new birth which can only be consummated through the gospel of Jesus and the agency of the priesthood of the church of God.

Inner Change Necessary

John explains why this change is according to necessity, "Whoso hath this world's goods and seeth his brother hath need and shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him, how dwelleth the love of God in him?"—1 John 3: 17. The natural man can never progress to a realization of such an ideal standing as this: Certainly the "love of God" must be added to humanity to produce such results, the Spirit of God must have effect in men. This is a change at the very roots of life and can be accomplished only by divine power. Therefore, while we rejoice in any progress humanity may make, we believe that the ideal world can be brought completely to pass only when "he shall pour out of his Spirit upon all flesh." (Acts 2: 17.)

The Importance of Right Environment

Whether man has inhabited earth for 6,000 or 1,000,000 years makes no difference to the fact that until there was a conception of God and Christian ideals, he made but little advancement. Progress was preserved and continues only when the Spirit of God enlightened the individual and individual development became incorporated into society sufficiently to improve the environment in which the coming new generation should move and act. The environment in which the new generation lives and moves is the biggest factor in the nature and degree of its development, and this environment is a bequeathment from preceding years so we are brought back to the necessity of the gospel standard among men.

The Task of the Church

Of the three elements making up environment, home, church, and state or society, the church is the most important, for by it the other two are preserved and enabled. Faith in God, with its attendant ideals of service and sacrifice, preserves the home and makes it a proper agency in the training of the young. The church, when properly functioning, by reaching into the heart of humanity can produce individual character of the highest possible type, and it can collect this superlative type into a society of the very purest environment for use of future generations. From such an organization must emerge the rays of spiritual life which can produce the idealistic "new world." It is the "salt of the earth," the leaven that shall "leaven the whole lump."

We need not be discouraged because the world at large is not yet ready for such a development as this. Our duty is clear—we must demonstrate the practical value of such a kingdom in society, and this is the big task of the church of latter days. Is the standard too high and the task too hard for us? The same Power which clothed the church at Pentecost and in its inception in this later day is still the basis of our hope and faith, and if we cooperate with Him, success is assured.

The Department of Religious Education Announces a New Nursery Department Leaflet

Parents and children's workers who are interested in the nursery (cradle roll) age children will welcome this valuable help. The nursery is a vital part of the local church school, and this leaflet discusses in detail the purpose, plan, and methods of nursery department work. A copy should be had in every branch for the use of nursery workers.

Twenty-four pages, 8x11, mimeographed, post-paid, 25 cents. Order from The Children's Division, The Auditorium, Independence, Missouri.

Oh, the bigness of mind and heart and soul man can express in the little things! It is not the big philanthropic movements but the little things which test and try a man's religion. Meeting with fortitude the daily temptations, patience always with those little interruptions, kindness shown to the erring brother, these, practiced daily, give us the religion of everyday life.—Selected.

A Week of Prayer, Fasting, and Sacrifice in Zion

By John F. Sheehy

The City of Zion observed the week set apart by the general church in prayer, fasting, and special services for sacrifice offerings. A special devotional service was held the morning of Sunday, June 21, at 7.45. President F. M. McDowell was in charge of the service, which was a joint meeting of the nine congregations of Zion.

The Saints were urged to enter into Sacrifice Week in prayer and fasting. A special sacrifice envelope and letter were mailed to every family in Zion a few days before Sacrifice Week. We received some replies to these letters. The first reply was from an aged brother and sister, and they wrote:

"I just received your letter and circular the church is sending out, asking the Saints to rally to the support of the church and its needs in this most depressing time the church and world at large have had to face in years. . . .

"My prayers are for the success of the church and the program of the church, which I know can not be carried out without means. I don't want the church officials to think we were slackers, so decided to write this letter. I ask the prayers of the Saints in our behalf, that if God wills we both may be restored to health, and again be able to help carry the load that is resting on the shoulders of the head officials. I sense the great responsibility and feel the great need of all doing all they possibly can to help."

The spirit of that letter is the spirit of the latter-day evangel. It is in perfect accord with the beautiful philosophy of old King Benjamin, who in speaking to his people when he resigned the throne, said:

"I would that ye say in your hearts, that I give not because I have not; but if I had, I would give. And now, if ye say this is your hearts, ye remain guiltless, otherwise ye are condemned, and your condemnation is just."—Mosiah 2: 40, 41.

The spirit of this letter from our aged brother and sister expresses the feelings of the vast majority of the Saints in Zion. We knew from the time of this letter that the week of prayer, fasting, and sacrifice was on in earnest in Zion. We knew the Saints were taking the call of the church seriously. Then came another letter from a superannuated missionary. This brother has spent his life in service, and is always ready at the call of the church. We quote from his letter:

"I am happy to send my sacrifice offering to you. It is my determination to make the rest of the year sacrifice year, instead of just one week."

We do not have to go back to the yesterdays for examples of devoted men and women who sacrificed for the church. There are thousands living today who are always ready to evidence their love and devotion by their sacrifice.

As I was about to enter the pulpit for sacrament service the first Sunday of this month, a sister came to me and handed me a special sacrifice envelope. I noticed tears not only in her eyes but on her cheeks. Instantly I knew this was a sacrifice offering indeed. Briefly she told me her story. Her husband gave her a gift eighteen years ago, just before he died. All these years she had been a widow. All these years she has treasured her gift. Sacrifice Week—and she had no offering to give. She must give something. Then she thought of her husband's gift. No, she felt she could not give her treasure. But a week after Sacrifice Week she gave the treasure nearest her heart. A sacrifice offering indeed!

We know that many of the Saints of Zion came to the altar at the close of Sacrifice Week with their offering which indeed was made by sacrifice.

Sunday afternoon, June 23, another special service was arranged for the nine congregations of Zion. Over fifteen hundred people gathered at that time to make their sacrifice offering. The Auditorium Orchestra contributed musical selections and accompanied the congregation in singing such hymns as "Take Time to Be Holy," "There's No Love to Me Like the Love of Jesus," "Pass Me Not, O Gentle Savior." Seated on the platform were Bishops J. A. Becker and G. L. De Lapp, Presidents Elbert A. Smith and F. M. McDowell, Elder J. F. Sheehy, and Guinn Bronson.

President Elbert A. Smith in his address brought out the fact that in many instances darkness and trouble are the forerunners of great events. When Christ was crucified, the disciples separated. Peter felt at a loss and said, "I'm going fishing." But the resurrection was about to burst upon them. After Pentecost came the persecutions. Doubtless many had left the church feeling the end had come. When the Saints were driven out of Independence, doubtless the worst thing that had happened to the church in latter days, the following era was one of greater blessings—Kirtland. The death of the Martyrs was followed by the Reorganization. The world is under trial today, partly because of world conditions but mostly because of our own mistakes. If we rally, there is no reason why history should not repeat itself—an era of blessing follow the trials. Jesus said, "I have called you to be my friends." What kind of friends are you?

Guinn Bronson in a masterly manner delivered an oration, "It Shall Not Fail," by Inez Smith Davis, and this was followed by a hymn, "Faith of Our Fathers." Bishop DeLapp received the contributions of the Saints and offered the prayer of blessing and thanks. "Guide Us, O Thou Great Jehovah," concluded the service. The offering received at this service was $3,162.

The offering of the Saints in Zion to the general church for the month of June was $6,730.71. This is a very encouraging offering. No large amount was contributed by any one person. A great many responded to this call of the church for a sacrifice offering.

With such love and sacrifice manifested by the Saints in Zion we know "It Shall Not Fail."

Eastern Michigan Reunion Is Over

Old friends met old friends, and new friendships were formed at the reunion of Eastern Michigan District, held at Cash, for a period of eight days. It closed July 5. Some who had lived in the district in former years returned for the gathering, and others who had been in various parts of the State seeking employment were present. Together they met to enjoy the spirit of fellowship which pervaded the varied program of meetings—worship and song services, church school discussions, recreation periods, and preaching hours.

"The social services were spiritual and uplifting," writes Mrs. Myron A. Carr, who reports this reunion, "and the sermons delivered were highly instructive. The hours for church school work were beneficial to all, especially to the young."

Five persons were baptized and confirmed the morning of July 4.

Apostle D. T. Williams was present four days and gave much instruction as to the needs of the church. Elder O. J. Hawn, of the missionary arm of the church, was present throughout the reunion and delivered good sermons. Elder A. C. Barmore, of Port Huron, also delivered splendid sermons. Others of the local eldership did admirable work. All seemed to think the time well spent, and a unanimous vote was taken to hold a reunion again next year.

Far West Stake

Cameron

On June 28 Stake President Ward A. Hougas began a series of illustrated lectures on the story, "Ben Hur." For four Sunday evenings at 8 o'clock Brother Hougas has given a fine lecture on this well-known story. In spite of the intense heat, there has been good attendance, and much interest has been shown.

On June 2 the Oriole Girls were entertained by their leader, Sister Esther Simpson, at her home two miles south of town. The afternoon was spent in social good time, and at 6 o'clock a bounteous luncheon was served and much enjoyed by all the girls.

On Sunday evening, June 7, Cameron Saints enjoyed a rare privilege, that of listening to the boy preacher, Brother Howard C. Harpham, of Seiling, Oklahoma. His subject, "Truth and Its Affiliation," was handled in a remarkable manner, and it was an inspiration to the young people and also older ones to see this boy of fifteen years utilizing his best efforts for the building up of God's kingdom here on earth. Surely he is an instrument for good in the hands of God.

June 14, Children's Day, was fittingly observed. At 9:30 o'clock a baptismal service was held in the basement of the church. Seven children were baptized, Elders Thomas Fiddick and John Constance officiating. At 11 o'clock confirmation services took place. In the evening a fine program was rendered by the junior department. There were given a short pageant, readings, and exercises. The church was prettily decorated with flowers and green foliage; and that, with crepe paper costumes worn by the children, furnished color and beauty for the occasion.

Saint Joseph

Sunday, July 5, found Saint Joseph Saints gathered together at First Church for the regular quarterly amalgamated sacrament service. A general theme of patriotism was carried out.

On Monday night, July 6, the regular branch business meeting was held at 8 o'clock, at First Church, with fine attendance. Following this at about 8:30 President F. M. McDowell gave his illustrated lecture on the "Passion Play." The lecture was intensely interesting and was appreciated.

The O. T. Z.'s held their regular monthly meeting in the form of a picnic at Bartlett Park on Thursday, July 16.

All regular services on Sundays and Wednesdays are continuing, although people are suffering from the intense heat.

Southern New England Ministerial Conference

The Onset reunion grounds was the scene of a successful ministerial conference July 4 and 5. Despite the pyrotechnical allurements of this day of patriotic days, a large gathering of the priesthood and laity assembled in the large tabernacle to express their loyalty to the work of the church.

We were fortunate in having Elder C. Ed. Miller, of Independence, Missouri, as a welcome guest, for the guest proved a veritable host to the gathering. Elder Miller endeared himself to the people of the district during a period in which he labored as district president.

A faith and confidence-inspiring spirit was evidenced at the sacrament service in the morning. The Lord reassured the Saints of the divinity of the restored gospel and of the final consummation of his work through the instrument of his choosing. "God is speaking, Saints," declared some one, "but we are tinkering so much with the 'receiving set' that we fail to 'tune in.'"

Elder Miller addressed the conference at eleven o'clock in the morning, and in his uniquely illustrative style portrayed the effectiveness of a life of faith, righteousness, and service.

At 2:30 p. m. the district president, William Patterson, presided over and addressed the priesthood, using as his theme:

"Personal and Organization Efficiency of the Priesthood." Doctor W. A. Sinclair read a well-written paper, "The Indispensability of Priesthood in Zion's Redemption." The author stressed the point that the priesthood by example and precept are chosen to develop the Zion condition in the soul of the people, irrespective of geographic location. "It is the condition, not the place, that determines Zion," maintained the speaker.

Bishops M. C. Fisher and E. L. Traver were in charge of the 3:30 p. m. service, and again the services of Elder Miller were requisitioned to the satisfaction of all present. The subjects discussed at this session were: "Why We Must Not Fail," "How We May Succeed." The speakers pictured the struggles, sacrifices, and triumphs of the past and pleaded for an observance of the spiritual and financial laws, without which we can not succeed.

By unanimous vote two hundred dollars was sent to the Presiding Bishop as a sacrifice offering of the district from its treasury, this to take the place of arranging an exhibit at the Harvest Home Festival at Independence, Missouri, according to previous district action. The conference also unanimously expressed itself in support of the present administration of the church, and loyally pledged support to the church in its present crisis.

Burlington, Iowa

July 14.—The interior of the church auditorium has been redecorated, and the woodwork and furniture revarnished. This has added much to the appearance and beauty of the church. New purple silk velvet drapes edged in gold, have been hung before the font, and a narrow curtain of the same material is along the front of the rostrum. Above the font in the church colors—gold letters on purple velvet—is the motto, "Onward to Zion," which we feel is a splendid slogan to always keep before us. We feel greatly indebted to one of the faithful sisters, Lucy M. Dixon, for her generosity and kindness in standing the expense of this work, and appreciate her interest in the promoting of the work in Burlington.

The sacrament service held the first Sunday in May was an outstanding event for the branch, as the Spirit was there in abundance, and several were spoken to in prophecy. The Saints of the branch were told that if they could continue to have love in their hearts as they did at that time, the Lord would be able to open the windows of heaven and pour out his blessings upon them.

Mother's Day was celebrated with a special program during the Sunday school hour, the service being opened with a prayer by one of the mothers, after which special songs and recitations paying tribute to "Mother" were rendered. At the preaching service, Elder Mussell delivered a fitting address on "Mother," during which time all the mothers of the branch were seated together in one group.

District conference was held on the first Sunday in June. There were present a great number of visitors from all over the district. Dinner and supper were served in the basement of the church by the sisters, and they deserve much credit for the splendid meals. We feel that special mention, too, should be made of the wonderful floral display and decorations, which were in charge of Sisters Elmer Bierman and Lucy M. Dixon. Many remarked that it was a most fitting setting for an elaborate wedding.

We were fortunate in having, during the conference, Brother Salyards, of Ottumwa, Iowa, and Bishop DeLapp, of Independence. We were greatly benefited by the wonderful discourses these two brothers delivered, and were able more conscientiously to enter into the sacrifice period set aside by the general church the latter part of June.

Sacrifice Week, we feel, was a decided success, considering that the thermometer registered over one hundred degrees practically every day, with little relief in the evenings. Special programs were held throughout the week. Monday night the program was in charge of the priesthood; Tuesday, the Sunday school; Wednesday, the Ladies' Aid; and Thursday, the S. Chapter of the Temple Builders. Each program consisted of readings, talks, music, etc., pertaining to the theme of the week, "Sacrifice." The priesthood deserve much credit for the success of the week, as they visited each home of the branch, urging the Saints to respond to the call of the church. Their efforts were not in vain—we far surpassed the contemplated quota.

Children's Day was held the second Sunday in June in charge of the Sunday school superintendent, Sister Emma R. Bromann. Over thirty children took part. A group of the children occupied the choir loft and made a fitting background among the many flowers used for decorations. One child was blessed during the program, following a fitting exercise and song, "When Jesus Blessed the Children."

We were pleased to have here recently Brother and Sister John Blackmore. Sister Blackmore told the children a story on sacrifice during the Sunday school hour. She is the daughter of our pastor.

A picnic was given by the Senior Chapter of Temple Builders July 14 in honor of Sister Earl Cummings, formerly of Burlington and now visiting here with her two children.

Holden Stake

Holden

Twenty-four members of the Auditorium Orchestra composing a band, from Independence, gave a fine concert on the streets of Holden Saturday night. Business and professional people subscribed to a fund to be presented to the band. A large crowd, reminding one of "circus day," was in attendance. The musicians received many compliments. The band remained overnight with Holden Saints, and its Sunday program included a musical entertainment at Knobnoster Church at eleven o'clock in the morning, at the Holden Home at three in the afternoon, at the Holden church at eight in the evening. The energy and devotion of the leaders, Orlando Nace and E. E. Moorman, are to be commended, as also is the response of the players.

Much time and attention were given to this day by Stake President W. S. Macrae, who interested the business men of Holden in the band's visit.

The women's section of the adult division of the church school, under the supervision of Sister C. A. Silsby, served ice cream and secured a neat sum to be applied on the fund for repairing and redecorating the church. Members of the congregation are doing the janitor work for six months and applying the monthly janitor's pay to the same fund.

Bishop and Sister J. A. Koehler and daughter, Mrs. Altha Belscamper, spent July 12 in Holden. Bishop Koehler preached two good sermons.

Those willing to help at the Square Deal Dining Hall, conducted every year by Holden Stake members at the State Fair, should write W. S. Macrae, Holden, for information. The fair this year opens August 22 and continues to the 29th.

Atherton

Brother Almer Sheehy occupied the pulpit here the evening of July 5. With him there came a large group of young people from the Stone Church. Special songs were sung by Irene, Mildred, and Evelyn Shupe. These visitors were made welcome and invited to return. One year ago, almost to the day, Brother Sheehy preached his first sermon in the Atherton Church, his subject being "Courage." The Saints were glad to have him again and to observe that he has had the courage to keep on. This time his message was one on "Trust."

Sister Joe Pichler has been a constant sufferer for many months and still is in a critical condition. Brother Otho Clark is recovering from a brief illness.

On a recent Sunday Brother W. E. Shakespeare was the morning speaker. Elder J. Charles May, laboring in Holden Stake, came with him, and favored us with his talent of music and song. In the afternoon Brother Shakespeare talked to a large and attentive audience of young people.

Children's Day, as usual, was observed the second Sunday in June. One of the children made his decision to comply with the ordinance of baptism. In the evening the service was given over to the blessing of the infant daughter of Brother and Sister Guy Hanson and the confirmation of Gerald Curtis, son of Brother and Sister C. Ray Curtis. Appropriate music interspersed the service.

June 28 the young people from Atherton, under the auspices of the glee club, went to Holden and spent the day. In the afternoon a musical program was given by them to the inmates of the Home for the Aged.

Mallard, Iowa

July 13.—This region of Iowa has felt the effects of the world-wide depression, and yet the people have received many blessings from the Master. Though June was a very warm month, there were good rains, and as a result the crops and gardens look fine.

Elders L. G. Holloway and E. Y. Hunker visited Mallard Branch a couple of days during the month, preaching three excellent sermons. In these they brought out plainly the love God has for us, how much we love him in return, and the ways in which we show our love.

Sacrifice Week was observed by these Saints, who trust that much good was done during that period. It is their ambition to continue to sacrifice until the church is out of debt and the missionaries, who a few months ago were released, are again in the field. They pray for the day when this gospel shall be preached to every kindred, tongue, and people.

Church Moves Forward in Wisconsin

Madison, Wisconsin, July 16.—On the rolling prairies and hill lands of southern Wisconsin, about forty miles southwest of the present site of the city of Madison, capital of the State, was located the pioneer settlement of Saints, called by them, Zarahemla. It was in this vicinity in that early day—1852—and in later years that the Lord very greatly blessed the Saints who sincerely sought divine direction in reestablishing the church. He was with them when designing men took advantage of the settlement and tried to make themselves leaders of portions of the original church.

We are glad that the truth as taught by earnest men in the early days of the Reorganization, still shines as the light of God to the world. Notwithstanding the trials that have come to the church in the passing years, God has maintained his cause. In its time light and revelation have been given to guide the church. We fully believe such will be the care of our heavenly Father over his work in years to come.

The church goes onward in Wisconsin. Notwithstanding the severe financial depression, which has been greatly felt by the Saints, financial assistance given the church by the members in tithes and offerings for the month of June, just past, nearly doubled the amount given at that time a year ago. The Saints have responded generously.

The conference of Southern Wisconsin District was held at Beloit, June 20 and 21. There was splendid attendance, and very good meetings were held. Five were baptized.

The annual all-day meeting, held at the home of Sister Minnie Hoague, at Evansville, was June 28, and Saints attended from Madison, Janesville, Beloit, and other points. A generous noon lunch was served free, and a happy social time was had. Memories and events of the years past were recalled, and kind wishes were expressed for all those not present. Some whose names were especially mentioned as former workers in this vicinity are W. A. McDowell, J. O.

Dutton, E. J. Lenox, P. Muceus, and Amos Berve. All these and others have the kindly remembrance of Wisconsin Saints who will welcome their return at any hour.

After the passing of a number of years, the writer is pleased to work with Saints of Southern Wisconsin, and to meet many who are long-time friends in the Master's work. I have visited and held meetings in Lancaster, Flora, Soldiers' Grove, Madison, Beloit, Janesville, Evansville, Milwaukee, and Appleton. In all these places it was my pleasure to see the faith and devotion manifested by Saints of long standing and others of more recent years of service.

LEONARD HOUGHTON.

Akron, Ohio

Good meetings have characterized the activities of this branch during the spring and summer. The young people are taking a great interest in the prayer meetings. Though attendance is small, everyone seems to be alert to the needs of the church.

Brother Cecil Neville, of Willoughby, gave a series of good talks on the parable of the vineyard. Some nonmembers are interested, and we hope to see the results of these talks in the near future.

Brother E. M. Knight was in charge of a good sacrament service July 5. He was assisted by Patriarch A. M. Manchester. Brother Manchester spoke at the early prayer meeting, admonishing the Saints to come up higher. He cited them to the temple at Jerusalem, which was built upon the high hill, also to the Kirtland Temple on the hilltop, the place designated. In this connection he mentioned the site for the Temple at Independence. His advice was for the Saints to keep their lamps trimmed and burning, and to find and walk in the narrow way.

Akron Saints desire the prayers of the Saints in behalf of Sister Cunningham, who is seriously ill. No hope for her recovery is held unless God sees fit to give her a special blessing.

The church picnic was held Saturday afternoon, July 18, at Crystal Lake. All who had looked for a good time were not disappointed. We remember that it is a wise thing to play as well as work and worship together.

Mikado, Michigan

The newly organized branch at Mikado is happy to report a two-week series of slide lectures on "The Life and Parables of Christ," held in the new church building, which, though not yet completed, has brought much rejoicing to the Saints of Mikado and near-by places. These members have been deprived of a church home for many years. The series was conducted by Elder Marshall J. McGuire, former Northern Michigan missionary. Each evening the pictures were followed by a short but very instructive sermon.

The audiences were composed of a large per cent of young people, and we were happy to have them. It is the hope and prayer of Mikado Saints to be able to build up cleaner moral and religious standards in this community, and we must start with the children and young people.

The organization of Mikado Branch on June 12 was conducted by the Central Michigan district president, Elder Hubert Case. Elder E. S. White was also present. Elder M. J. McGuire was elected pastor; Elder Richard Stewart and James McGuire, priest, were appointed counselors. Sister Clara Stewart was elected clerk; teacher Lyle Hickey, superintendent of church school; Clayton Harmon, leader of young people; Sister Fowler, superintendent of women; Sister Jennie Proconior, organist; Sister Edith Hickey, chorister, with Sister Alice McGuire, assistant; Sister Bertha McGuire, librarian, and Edith Hickey, publicity agent.

Brothers Case and White made short talks, and at the conclusion of the meeting were given a rising invitation to return at any time to hold a series of missionary meetings.

An all-day meeting was held Sunday, June 14, Elder S. A. Summerfield and wife and several from Spruce being present. Dinner was served in the dining rooms upstairs. About forty ate together, the rest of the crowd having to go home to care for chores. The sermons on that day were helpful.

The church school is doing well, and the young people are especially to be congratulated for their unity and willingness to help in church work.

The women gave a bazaar and lunch together with a varied program on a recent Thursday.

The Wednesday evening prayer services are much enjoyed by everyone. One Friday evening is given to the young people for recreation and expression; the next to the Doctrine and Covenants class. It is not unusual to have the young people play indoor baseball and then follow with hymn singing and lunch.

Pastor McGuire believes that everyone should be busy in the gospel work. He leaves local members of the priesthood in charge at Mikado and goes frequently to other branches and communities. He held two weeks of meetings at Tawas City with his pictures, and is acting as pastor there also. He has the cooperation and prayers of Saints in both pastorates.

Brother Amos Guy, of Hillman, has been here several times of late. His presence and talks are much appreciated.

Independence

Early Sunday morning young people began to gather at the Auditorium in anticipation of the trip to Far West and other places of historical interest to the church. When the time came to start over one hundred and ten people had found transportation. Under the direction of Elder John F. Sheehy the line of cars headed for Richmond, Missouri, Brother Sheehy's car heading the procession while Brother Clarence Savage's car brought up the rear. In this way provision was made for cars to receive attention from Brother Savage in case of blow-outs or other trouble.

At Richmond several stops were made by the party. Oliver Cowdery's grave with its beautiful granite monument was silently viewed. On this monument which was provided by the Utah Latter Day Saints is inscribed the testimony of the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon. From here the group moved to the statue of Colonel Alexander Doniphan in front of the courthouse at Richmond. Elder Sheehy paid a tribute to this noble man who was a friend to the Saints of early days. In the cemetery near the town lies another witness to the Book of Mormon, David Whitmer, and to this place the young people went. Reverently they listened to the story of David Whitmer and his solemn declaration that "Truth is eternal."

The procession then drove to Far West, a distance of fifty miles, where they arrived at about twelve o'clock, an hour late for the service which had been planned there. The local Saints had waited for the group to arrive, and the service was held. After singing some of the hymns that were dear to the early Saints, Elder Sheehy delved into the history of the movement of the Saints into and out of Missouri from 1831 to 1838. Many of the young people were touched by the story of the Saints, and the appeal of Brother Sheehy for the young people to carry on and build up "the waste places" in fulfillment of the prophecies of Joseph Smith will not go unheeded. After the service, the young people visited the spot where the foundation stones for the temple at Far West had been laid. Then the group went to a near-by grove and spread a bounteous basket dinner. Those who went on the trip agreed that it was enjoyable and very worth while.

"The spiritual life of man," asserted Elder Leonard Lea at the Campus Sunday evening, "has its foundation and beginning in obedience to law, its development in work and service, its culmination in the perfection of life and character, and its reward in a happiness so wholesome and strong that nothing can harm or destroy it." Presenting his topic, "The Fruit of the Spirit," Elder Lea chose a fine scriptural background for his text, Galatians 5: 22, 23, and spent a considerable portion of his time discussing the relation of law and the spiritual life. Citing his hearers to a number of incidents in the life of Christ, he summed up his discourse with the following statement: "The fruit of the Spirit is the measure of the quality of your attainment. It is cumulative. It is the life, always reaching for more and always enriching."

Special music for the evening was furnished by the Auditorium Band, directed by Sanford Downs. The hymns sung by the Saints at this open-air meeting, "Rejoice, Ye Saints of Latter Days," "We Come With Joy the Truth to Teach You," and "Be With Me, Lord, Where'er I Go," filled the night with moving melody. Pastor John F. Sheehy was in charge, and Elder Stanley Kelley assisted.

Stone Church

"Are we sacrificing?" Patriarch Frederick A. Smith asked the congregation in his Sunday morning sermon; "what do we expect to receive from the service we are rendering to God? We want the world purified, glorified, made beautiful, stripped of everything that is carnal, and, most of all, we want eternal life." Brother Smith read for a scriptural background Romans 12 and for a text the first verse: "I beseech you therefore, brethren, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Delineating the viewpoints of sacrifice and the elements involved, he bent his effort to convincing his hearers that the things we do in the service of the Lord, when weighed against the good we gain therefrom, are not sacrifices; they compose our "reasonable service."

A beautiful musical accompaniment for the morning sermon was furnished by a chorus of girls directed by Mrs. H. C. Burgess; the organist, Miss Lorena Kueffer; the soprano soloist, Miss Mary Lois Williams, who sang "The Earth Is the Lord's." Miss Williams was accompanied at the piano by her brother, Joseph Williams. Elder H. G. Barto presided over the service.

For the juniors at the Campus Sister J. R. Lentell continued her story of "The Dedication of Kirtland Temple." "Peace on Earth," a reading, was given by Alice Blake, and Emerald Hoisington sang "Come, Sweet Comforter."

Sixty Girl Scouts and their officers of the four Stone Church troops organized in April, held their first powwow in the Y. K. T. classroom Monday evening. Rain made the outdoor camp fire they had planned an impossibility, and the program had to be rearranged to fit the indoors. The girls spent a happy evening learning camp songs and giving stunts, ranging in character from the acrobatic to the dramatic. Three girls of troop 46 were invested with the rank of tenderfoot by their captain, Mrs. Don Cox; and another, Ency Jamison, also of Troop 46, was awarded the rank of Second-class Scout. Ency is the first girl in the four new troops to receive this rank. At nine o'clock the Scouts sang "Taps," and the powwow was over.

Two-day Reunion for Northern States

The Northern Wisconsin and Minnesota two-day reunion, conducted on the Saints' beautiful reunion grounds at Chetek, Wisconsin, July 4 and 5, will linger in memory as one of the bright spots of district activity.

Apostle John F. Garver was present and gave excellent spiritual counsel. He was assisted in his work by the teachers: Lydia Wight, Vernon Lundeen, and Bishop C. J. Hunt.

A fine spirit of fellowship and determination to carry on under handicap prevailed.

The reunion unanimously voted for another gathering of longer duration for next year.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

The Harvest Home Festival is not far off, and one group in the stake has promised to furnish six hundred cans of fruit and vegetables for the exhibit and use of the Sanitarium and homes in the church. In this season of canning, when fruits and vegetables are to be had in abundance, the Saints are requested to set aside at least a tithe of their fruit for the use of the church institutions and unfortunate ones who will need assistance next winter.

Elder Arthur Oakman gave the sermonet at the morning church period, and the choir sang "Festival Te Deum," with George Anway directing.

The stake priesthood met for their regular study hour Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. The stake president was in charge.

Elder C. E. Wight continued his Sunday evening series of sermons last Sunday to a large and attentive audience. Next month it is planned to show several good films. They are: "The Rich Young Ruler," "Forgive Us Our Debts," "By Their Fruits," "Blind Bartimæus," "Prince of Peace." Evan A. Fry directed the evening's music.

Next Sunday morning the young people's division of this congregation will meet at the church at 6.30 for an excursion to Excelsior Springs. The pastor will be the special speaker at the Sunday school hour.

The Stake O. B. K.'s will sponsor a lawn social at Central Church July 31. All are invited to make plans to attend.

Elder George H. Wixom Chronicles His Activities in the Southwest

San Antonio, Texas, July 8.—At the close of the Baker-Arceneux debate, held at Sedan, New Mexico, April 27 to May 9, arrangements were made for me to hold a series of preaching services in the Bunkerhill Schoolhouse, not far from Sedan and between Dalhart and Perico, Texas. Brother A. B. Hienrichs, a priest who lives at Dalhart, assisted me in holding this series. At the close, I baptized his wife, Sister Sarah Hienrichs, and Brother J. C. Ferris's daughter, of Dalhart.

We have a membership of twenty in that part of the field, and Brother Hienrichs is doing what he can to care for them. He holds regular services at this schoolhouse each Sunday. This is not far from the Colorado line, and the missionaries in Colorado are invited to come over and help out this little band of Saints by holding a series of services for them. You are welcome.

After a short visit with my home folks in California, where I preached a number of times and made many calls at the bedside of the sick, to officiate in the ordinance of administration, I was soon on my way back to my mission field. I stopped over at Bisbee, Arizona, and preached a few times, and was pleased to see the work progressing nicely under the wise and able leadership of Elder S. D. Condit, with the assistance of Brothers Raymond Ratteree, Henry Goldie, P. O. Puckett, and W. D. Roe.

On arriving at Fort Sumner, New Mexico, I was told that arrangements had been made for me to speak that same evening in the Church of Christ building, where I was greeted by a splendid crowd. While there I baptized one and administered the sacrament to the little band of faithful Saints who are trying to let their light shine out to all their neighbors. Sister S. A. Duncan and her family have lived at Fort Sumner for a number of years and have won the confidence and respect of all who know them. It is hoped that Elder S. S. Smith will be able to follow up this fine interest some time this fall.

On arriving at Portales on Saturday, June 13, I was informed that the courthouse had been secured for me and that I was announced to speak that same night. Feeling somewhat weary after my very strenuous efforts in my last series, I decided to sit in the park near the courthouse and rest until the evening services. While sitting there and enjoying the beautiful park with its lawns and large trees, a crowd of men surrounded me to ask me questions and to hear what I had to say. This gave opportunity for me to announce my message and invite all to attend the services which I was to hold. When I began to speak the crowd began to increase until I was surrounded by a large audience, and before I realized it I found that I had been preaching for over two hours.

The Nazarenes were holding a revival service and conference and had in attendance one hundred and forty of their ministers. It was thought that this would interfere with our services; but instead, it only helped me out, for many would come and hear my message and then go to attend the other services, as they would continue long after the close of our services.

Some who attended told me that they became interested in my sermons after hearing me in the park, and they were present every night. During this series we held a sacrament service which was very much enjoyed by the isolated Saints. Brother and Sister C. L. Beard, of Elida, and Brother and Sister H. H. Henson, of Kenny, New Mexico, attended. We have nine members now at Portales, and they are glad to welcome any of the missionaries that come their way.

I arrived in Lubbock, Texas, June 19, and was met at the train by Sister O. W. Sumner and her daughters. We went to New Home, not far from Lubbock, where her father, Brother P. H. Renfroe, resides. There arrangements had been made for me to preach.

I preached there Saturday night and Sunday morning and Sunday night to full houses and interested listeners. The Baptist Church, which is situated near the schoolhouse where I was holding services, dismissed their morning and evening services in order to come and hear our message. Brother and Sister Renfroe and Sister Sumner were elated over the splendid attendance and the friendly attitude manifested.

Two were baptized at this place, Sister Willie Merle Sumner, daughter of Sister O. W. Sumner, and Sister Alice Peol, of Amherst, Texas. Many friends were made to our cause, and I received invitations to return. A number of the business men invited me to stop with them in their homes at any time I might be in that locality.

Brother and Sister Renfroe drove me in their car to Lamesa, Texas, fifty-six miles south of their place. There I was met by Brother E. C. Riebold, who took me in his car to their home at Lenorah, Texas, where arrangements had been made for me to speak in the Wolcott Schoolhouse. I preached for three nights to splendid audiences, some driving for long distances to attend. I was pleased to meet two other families of Saints living near that place.

While there, arrangements were made for me to meet a gentleman by the name of Cline, seventy-nine years of age. Mr. Cline has been an active worker in different Protestant churches for the past forty years, but had become discouraged because the ministers of the popular churches no longer preach the gospel of Jesus Christ as set forth in the New Testament. He said he could force any preacher he ever met to abandon the plain teachings of Christ and the apostles, in ten minutes' time. Mr. Cline told his friends that he would like to talk with me and ask me a few questions, and that he could soon tell whether he cared to talk further with me or not. After a discussion that lasted three and one half hours, Mr. Cline remarked that I was the first minister he ever met that stood one hundred per cent for the teachings of Christ and the apostles and New Testament writers. I told him that I did not take the credit for being able to set forth the message of Christ in such a clear and concise manner, for it was God who restored the ancient gospel and sent his angels to make the message plain, and that I was only one of the humble servants of God, whom he has called and sent forth to tell the gospel as revealed in this age of the world. I learned, after this conversation, that this gentleman is related through some of his ancestry to the tribe of Israel, through his son Joseph that was sold into Egypt. He is willing to read the Book of Mormon and to study our message carefully, and I shall help him all I can in this regard.

This was my first visit to this part of Texas and I am eager to return at some future date and if possible follow up this splendid interest, for the people in these isolated places are hungry for the gospel message.

I arrived in Houston early Sunday morning, and was met at the train by the pastor, Elder C. W. Tischer. I was the speaker both morning and evening, and was pleased to meet the Saints at that place. Some of them I had met at other places, among that number being Brother and Sister W. B. Root, who resided in Colorado Springs, when I labored in that field several years ago.

This was Sunday, June 28, the last day of the Sacrifice Week, and all seemed to be happy in the thought that they had gladly done what they could for the Master's cause. Houston Branch had raised over one hundred dollars, but other points had not as yet been heard from.

I came on to San Antonio and was pleased to hear that the workers here had been busy and that the Saints in the city had raised one hundred and sixty dollars, with no report from the other parts of the district.

When Jesus was here, he said: "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." While traveling over this great State, to Dalhart on the north, El Paso on the west, San Antonio on the south, and Houston on the east, and noting the many opportunities that are opening up for the preaching of the gospel and the presentation of this great latter-day work, I am led to repeat the Master's words.

In closing I wish to urge all the missionaries and pastors and local workers to reread the splendid article by O. Salisbury on "Personal Evangelism," in the Saints' Herald for July 1, 1931. The hastening time is here, and we should all be alert and ready to improve every opportunity to present our message to the people. While the warm weather is here, we may arrange for outdoor meetings, in parks or out on the lawn, supported by good music and lively singing.

Let us forget ourselves in the service of the Master, and rejoice that we are permitted to live at this time and to take part in a wonderful work.

Side Lights

By C. J. Hunt

Catholicism—Number of Popes

The Vatican at Rome, where the Pope resides, is reported to have 1,100 rooms. In a recent issue of The Pathfinder, a reporter says the Catholic Encyclopedia records Pius XI, the present officer, as the two hundred and sixty-first Pope in succession to that high office. The late Cardinal Gibbons, a noted lecturer and writer of the Catholic Church, made some very interesting statements regarding the office work of Popes in his book, The Faith of Our Fathers, and I take the liberty of quoting two or more of his sayings. On page 132, the Cardinal states, "Peter, it is true, besides the prerogatives inherent in his office, possessed also the power of working miracles, and the gift of inspiration. These two latter gifts are not claimed by the Pope, as they were personal to Peter, and by no means essential to the government of the church." Continuing the subject, he says on page 148: "The Pope, therefore, be it known, is not the maker of the divine law; he is only the expounder. He is not the author of revelation, but only its interpreter. All revelation came from God alone through his inspired ministry, and was complete in the beginning of the church."

The above statements by Mr. Gibbons are of unusual interest to Latter Day Saints; and at the risk of being called uncharitable, I will approach the subject of divine communication by assuming that all religious people, including Catholics, believe that before Columbus discovered America in 1492, the Eastern and Western Hemispheres were dead to each other, noncommunicative. That being true, and accepting the universal belief that heaven is an organized dominion where God, Christ, and holy angels reside, and that this earth on which we live belongs to God, and that he did converse with the religious leaders he called and set apart to have general charge of church work as noted in Old and New Testament times, and that during those historical periods the leaders of other churches were not favored with divine revelation, hence dead to the heavens, our deduction would be that any religious organization having a recognized leader that does not receive specific revelation directing in church polity, counseling its membership, foretelling coming events, as in Bible times, is assuredly dead to the heavens in these respects. It is our belief, however, that the Almighty is gracious, loving, kind, and bestows many precious blessings upon all people who devotedly seek him, yet that does not signify that all organized churches are acknowledged as the Lord's and are alive to him in a complete sense. I am truly pleased to say that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, with headquarters at Independence, Missouri, is fully organized in harmony with Bible instructions, and the church is alive to the heavens, being favored with revelations from time to time harmonizing with Holy Writ. Dear reader, invest your time, talents, and money in a church that has a living prophet, through whom the Lord directs by revelation.

The Profitable or Unprofitable Use of Our Vision

Unfortunately, some people in a strenuous effort to prosper financially make a fatal mistake of placing pennies so close to their eyes that their vision of dollars is largely obscured. The same principle is true with some church members desiring to walk in the straight and narrow way; they fail because the enlightening vision of the glorious gospel is more or less diminished by their allowing the mistakes, real or imaginary, of certain ones to engross their minds. This marvelous work with its spiritual insight and clearness of vision is God-given, unchanged and is awaiting your return. Do not waste your time and talents by talking about, or even thinking of the wrongdoings of others. Always enrich yourself with noble thoughts and acts, adding to your life's vision "faith, hope, and charity." One faithful Saint is reported to have thus interrupted a certain church member who had begun to gossip unkindly about others: "You are welcome to visit me, but I will not listen to unkind things about anyone." It is possible that your Christian fortitude and good prospects of a life of usefulness may be endangered by talebearers. Keep your spiritual vision clean and pure. Do not release a thought made into words for which you will be sorry. Elder F. C. Bevan has well said, "Whether consciously or unconsciously, men are warmed, chilled, lifted, or lowered by us."

The Utah Church Historian on Independence Temple

Joseph Fielding Smith, church historian and member of the Utah Council of Twelve Apostles, wrote in The Improvement Era for May, 1930, that the Lord's temple to be built at Independence, Missouri, "will not be built by those who say that Joseph Smith (the Seer) was a fallen prophet, and who have failed to accept the fullness of the word of the Lord as it came through him."

A sermon's length is not its strength. It may be very much its weakness. In this case brevity is a virtue. It is a pity to weary the head when we should win the heart. Some divines are long in their sermons because they are short in their studies.—Selected.

Our Departed Ones.

PARRISH.—Stevie Fleming Parrish was born February 1, 1907, at West Monroe, Louisiana. She became a member of the church March 1, 1926, at West Monroe, Louisiana, being baptized by J. T. Riley. Died April 12, 1931, leaving her husband, Orgha Parrish, two children, J. H. Parrish, four years old, and Dorha Parrish, fifteen months old.

HANSEN.—Lars Hansen was born in Denmark, March 29, 1853. He came to America in 1904. Prior to that date he had united with the Utah Church. He later moved to Santa Barbara, California, where he united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ August 21, 1927. He never married, but lived alone during his residence in America, so very little is known of his life's history. He continued with the church until the end of life, June 17, 1931.

POTTER.—Newell James Potter was born March 1, 1872, at Potter Brook, Pennsylvania. He was united in marriage with Miss Emeretia M. Finch August 20, 1892. To this union nine children were born, eight of whom with their mother survive him, and there is also one adopted daughter living. On November 30, 1910, he united with the church and was a devoted and faithful member as long as he was able to get about. On June 26, 1929, he suffered a paralytic stroke which so impaired his health that he was unable to recover. From that time he grew weaker and suffered much until the final stroke came June 24, 1931. The funeral was from the home in Scio, June 27, the sermon by J. E. Vanderwood. Interment was in the Wells-ville Cemetery.

LOVELESS.—Bessie Sandage, daughter of Isaac and Rose Ann Sandage, was born December 3, 1887, at Dexter, Indiana, and departed this life July 3, 1931. She had been in poor health for some time, and at last submitted to an operation. Following the operation she seemed to improve for a few days, but the heart gave out, and she was released from all suffering. She leaves to mourn, her husband, Hovey Loveless, and their only child, Ralph Loveless; five sisters and one brother. She united with the Reorganized Church August 4, 1912, being baptized by Elder Jacob G. Halb. She remained true to her covenant, and was beloved by all who knew her. The funeral was held from the farm home south of Petersburg, Indiana, the sermon by J. O. Dutton. Interment was in Walnut Hill Cemetery, near Petersburg.

CRANE.—Jane Amanda Crane was born in Herkimer County, New York, September 4, 1844. She married Thomas Crane December 25, 1863, and to them several children were born, all of whom survive their mother: George J. and Herbert M., of Stoutland, Missouri; Thomas, of Santa Ana, California; Walter I., of Marble Rock, Iowa; Mrs. Ida Horn, of Albert City, Iowa; Mrs. Cora P. Miller, of Hinsdale, Illinois; Mrs. Ellen Whiting, Independence, Missouri. There also survive twenty-one grandchildren, thirty-eight great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren, two brothers, and two sisters. Mrs. Crane was a faithful member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints for more than forty-six years. She passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Horne, at Albert City, July 7, 1931. The funeral was conducted at the Saints' church at Mallard, Iowa, the sermon being preached by Benjamin Fish. Interment was in Pleasant Grove Cemetery, near Marble Rock, Iowa.

DAVIS.—Bethell Faye Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Davis, was born November 6, 1903, at Thayer, Missouri; passed away July 2, 1931, at Thayer. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in May, 1917, and lived a life worthy of others to follow. Her chief desire was to be doing something for the Lord's work. She leaves to mourn, her parents, one brother, Frederick, of Thayer, and one sister, Mrs. Fern Mayo, of Kansas City, as well as a large number of other relatives and friends. A great part of her life was spent under the hand of affliction, but she bore it well. The funeral was conducted at the Saints' church in Thayer by Elder Haden. Interment was in Davis Cemetery under the direction of Leo Carr.

JOHNSON.—Eleanor O. Fay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Fay, was born in Newark, New York, August 27, 1873. When a child she moved with her parents to Quincy Township, Branch County, Michigan. She was baptized into the Reorganized Church June 17, 1888, at Coldwater, Michigan. Received her education in the schools of that community and qualified herself to teach in the rural districts of Michigan. At the same time she was doing secretarial work in the Saints' Sunday school at Coldwater, was chosen delegate to district and general conferences for a number of years, and was a fine church worker. April 13, 1898, she married Melvin Johnson, of Batavia, Michigan, and for thirty years was a resident of that township. Four children were born to them, three sons and one daughter. Mrs. Johnson was loyal to the gospel of Christ through the years. Her final illness was of more than a year's duration, and though in the latter part of her illness she suffered much, her passing was peaceful. She died June 24, 1931, leaving her husband, three sons: Howard, of Batavia; Maurice, of Benton Harbor, Michigan; and Don, of Coldwater; one daughter, Mrs. Sylvia Kelley, Batavia; besides brothers and sisters of the faith and numerous other relatives and friends. The funeral was conducted from the farm home, North Batavia, June 27, Elder S. W. L. Scott officiating. Interment was in Lakeview Cemetery, Quincy, Michigan.

Goodness is one's intrinsic worth, not his value in the market of public opinion. It is the crown and glory of life. It dignifies every station, exalts every position in society, and commands the confidence and respect of mankind. It constitutes real aristocracy. It is human nature in its best form and its achievement should be the chief aim in life.—J. T. Weit, Young People's Leader.

Leadership and Service

By C. B. W.

We find many helpful articles in the Bethany Church School Guide, an exchange which comes to our desk regularly. We wish to quote several paragraphs under the above heading from the July issue. Our own emphasis upon leadership training in recent years may have resulted in some types of leadership decried in the article, though in most cases we know it has been exceedingly helpful. The granting of certificates in religious education and leadership on a basis of credits earned, has been designed to encourage the beginning of systematic study in preparation for qualified leadership. It is recognized that neither the training subjects, alone, nor the receipt of a graded certificate will go far in making efficient teachers and leaders. With the training there may go the development and enrichment of personality, the broadening of human sympathy, the deepening and clarifying of spiritual vision, a definite growth in ability to use materials with skill, and a personal consecration of time and talent, unselfishly, in the service of leadership. For these our certificates must stand.

"E. Stanley Jones, in one of his books, remarks that there should be less talk about leadership and more about service.

"The word leadership has been used too frequently of late, and it represents too great a reality to be easily discarded. The need for it is too urgent to cease talking about it soon. But the emphasis should be at the point suggested by Doctor Jones. The spirit of service is necessary to save leadership from becoming a pathway to personal preferment or autocratic dominance.

"Leadership at its best means thorough preparation for the task to which one is chosen. It costs something to be a leader. One should not take a place of leadership lightly.

"Young people are prone to exalt their prerogatives as leaders rather than emphasize their service. While this is largely due to the shortsightedness of youth, it nevertheless calls attention to the need for a stressing of leadership as an opportunity to serve.

"Leadership is going to be increasingly promoted in the coming years. Our complex church life will require more, not fewer, leaders. But these leaders must be motivated by the desire to serve if they would save themselves from the sin of inadequate preparation and the thirst for personal preferment. And a proper stress upon service in our promotion of leadership training will save our leaders from this sin.

"Leadership that glories in itself is not born of service. It has not the spirit of the Master who said, 'For their sakes I consecrate myself.'"

THE COVENANT

And as they were eating, Jesus took bread and brake it, and blessed it, and gave to his disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is in remembrance of my body which I give a ransom for you. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it. For this is in remembrance of my blood of the new testament, which is shed for as many as shall believe on my name, for the remission of their sins. And I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall observe to do the things which ye have seen me do, and bear record of me even unto the end.—Matthew 26: 22-25.

Prophecy—Human and Divine

People are always strangely surprised when they see that prophecy is fulfilled, no matter how much they may have expected its fulfillment.

The events of recent years and the situation of the present times show us the difference between the prophecies of God and those of men.

Before 1914 there were men who were saying, "The world will never see another great war. The treaties of peace, arbitration, and international agreements will prevent it. And the sentiment of the world is against war." This, in substance, is what men who were supposed to know were telling us.

And then the great conflagration which was to burn half the world as with fire burst upon us. And the scars and ruins of that debacle mark the face of the earth today as its poison embitters the hearts and darkens the thoughts of men.

It is but little more than two years ago that the wise men of the earth, economists, statistical experts, and such, were solemnly predicting a long period of unbroken prosperity. The wheels of commerce and industry were meshing perfectly, and under their power the economic world was progressing rapidly, it seemed, toward a condition of uninterrupted financial welfare.

In the very midst of these fine and glowing predictions there came a lull, which lasted but a short time. Some foolish ones were frantically buying securities at peak prices, but the wise ones held their breath. Then the crash came. And since it occurred other crashes have come. We have been suffering a severe depression ever since.

Thus has much human prophecy gone astray.

But there is another kind of prophecy which does not fail. Jesus, near the height of his career and just before the time of his crucifixion, uttered a prophecy which is finding its fulfillment today:

And ye shall hear of wars and rumors of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom: and there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes, in divers places. All these are the beginning of sorrows. . . . But he that shall endure to the end, the same shall be saved.—Matthew 24: 6-8, 13.

Some have advised us to believe that this prophecy found its fulfillment in the World War. But indications are that we may be asked to believe that it also will find its fulfillment in yet other world catastrophes which will afflict humanity before men learn obedience and wisdom.

At a peace meeting in London on July 11, Prime Minister MacDonald described what might happen if the world is involved in another great war:

The great Armageddon struggle would come at last, and the end of it will not be defeat, but the uniformity of exhaustion. Mankind would be almost wiped out. Mankind would be exhausted by another war, and all his works and his civilization would be obliterated. That is the end which awaits those who say we will trust our national security to the accumulation of armaments.

This is a terrible warning of the end toward which the militarists of the world are blindly leading the nations of the earth; and they are trying to lead us to just that end, according to the words of David Lloyd George, the war-time Prime Minister of England. He said:

The next war is inconceivable, yet the world is going on steadily, stolidly, stupidly toward the catastrophe, singing the songs of peace and preparing for war.

Great international problems can be settled in one of two ways: by force of arms, or by arbitration. Although the United States has participated with great credit in many arms parleys, and has done much to advance the cause of arbitration of international disputes, our Nation is still committed in large measure to the barbarous expedient of force of arms as a final resort. Confident of our power, we remain aloof from all plans of real world government which may lead to the final abolition of war, such as the League of Nations and the World Court. If we wish to remain aloof, it is our privilege; but we endanger the peace of the world and our own security by doing so. Former Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin expressed the fact in these words:

It is not for us to cajole or advise the United States to get into the league, yet I tell you that every international problem since Versailles has been made imponderably more difficult because of the absence of the United States from the league.

Thus, the world faces at present a somewhat dark future.

Words of Abraham Lincoln

"I would be willing to give my life, if I could write just seventy-nine words on the tablets of the heart of every consecrated young man in America." They are the words of Abraham Lincoln.

"I like to see a man proud of the place in which he lives. I like to see a man who lives in it so that his place will be proud of him. Be honest, but hate no one; overturn a man's wrongdoing, but do not overturn him unless it must be done in overturning the wrong. Stand with anybody that stands right. Stand with him while he is right, and part with him when he goes wrong."—George W. Coleman, formerly Business Manager of the "Christian Endeavor World."

Sacrifice Receipts for 1931 and 1930

We are sure that many of the Saints will be interested in a comparative statement of income for June, 1931, and June, 1930. We are submitting such a statement below, showing such a comparison for the stakes and districts. The figures are complete except for Northern California, Central Oklahoma, and possibly one or two others where partial reports only have been received.

It should be noted that the sacrifice period for Independence in 1930 was held in October instead of June, hence the increase during June for this year over last does not altogether represent a fair comparison.

Other factors undoubtedly have some bearing upon the general church income for June this year, among which has been noted in a few instances the apparent necessity on the part of some of the branches to give preference to local needs rather than the general church needs.

A close scrutiny will undoubtedly reveal many facts to those who are particularly interested in the financial progress of the church, one of the most important of which is that though the total receipts for June, 1931, was greater than in 1930, the per capita amount of those contributing was less, showing that more people contributed in 1931 than in 1930. This may be interpreted to mean that the Saints are whole-heartedly behind the policy adopted by the Joint Council in February this year.

Dignity and Beauty in Ministry

By Elbert A. Smith

IV.—LANGUAGE

Dress clothes the man; slovenly dress may cost him his audience. Language clothes the thought of the man; and again slovenly speech may cost him his audience.

Ofttimes language is the tool with which the minister works. That is true of the preacher, the visiting officer, and even the teacher bent upon effecting reconciliation between estranged members. A good workman desires to keep his tools fit. We are told that "the word is the sword of the Spirit." Keep the sword sharp and clean.

We are frequently reminded that "stammering tongues" may praise the Lord, and that he sometimes chooses the weak and the simple to do his will. That may be true. It is true. And yet the Lord does not choose a man because he has a stammering tongue and faulty grammar or is weak and simple, but because of other qualities that more than overbalance the defects. Evidently he has no wish that one should continue to stammer or to remain ignorant or to mutilate the particular language that is his native or chosen vehicle of expression.

Dignity and Beauty of the Bible

The Bible stands out from all ages and every language as an example of dignity and beauty in expression. To it the greatest orators and thinkers have turned as a model to help them in the development of their style of expression. From Genesis to Revelation it is wonderful, even considered just as literature. Yet these master writers and preachers over such a long period of time were God's selected servants. They may have stammered at one time; if so, he cured them of their impediment. They may once have been weak and simple; if so, he made them wise and strong.

The Lord desires no man to remain ignorant and uncouth. Joseph Smith was considered illiterate when called to his ministry; but very soon he was led to study diligently many subjects, and "even languages." He mastered a style of writing and speaking excellent for his day and time. It is not the style of today, but in his day it served his purpose well and won him a wide hearing.

At one time he offered this prayer, as recorded in his diary for December 22, 1835: "O may God give me learning, even language; and endue me with qualifications to magnify his name while I live."

With the Bible as a model and an example, we need not cherish the fear that we shall offend God by cultivating a good working knowledge of language and its uses. No man with the Bible in mind need conclude that the Lord wishes him to continue to stammer or will be estranged from him if he shall perfect his speech in beauty and dignity.

Avoid Vulgarity and Bombastry

The ministry should avoid vulgarity in speech, whether in pulpit work or in private conversation. Of a different class but to be avoided are the stiff and stilted style, the bombastic style, and the too flowery and gushing style. A generation or so ago oratory was heavy and loud. It was literally "bombastic." Small thoughts were often clothed in such big and abounding words, and so many of them, that the hearers sat spellbound, never grasping the thought at all, only dazzled by the ability of the speaker to bombard their ears with such language. Even those men of truly giant intellect who thundered forth great truths did so in the prevailing style. That style is outworn today. So, too, is the ultra-flowery and sentimental style. The Gettysburg speech may have marked the turning point in oratory; the funeral sermon of the old school. Today people prefer clarity and directness. Say what you have to say, briefly, simply, yet with dignity and power.

What Place Slang?

The use of slang is an ever-present problem. This age has gone to another extreme and endeavors to cram a great deal of meaning into some newly coined and greatly overworked word or phrase. There is always a temptation and perhaps sometimes a show of justification to use such a slang word that is well understood at the moment and will not only catch the interest of the audience but will also carry to it the desired meaning. Such a temptation has its dangers. Good taste and good sense may forbid the use of the word, especially in the pulpit.

Some years ago slang was considered an outrage—perhaps not a major crime, but at least, we might say, a major minor crime. Today from our sermons and more dignified utterances we may manage to screen out the objectionable particles of slang; but it has generally percolated pretty well into our speech. Yesterday's slang is a recognized part of today's conversation and has a secure place in the dictionary alongside the old aristocratic and exclusive polysyllabic purveyors of psychic intent of Latin or Anglo Saxon origin. This is no new thing. Each generation creates its own slang—at least coins its own new words—which it understands; but the slang of today would have been incomprehensible yesterday. Had Priscilla said to John, "Please do step on the gas, John," he would have thought her a bit daffy. But it may have been about then that some one first said to him, "You have a hard row to hoe," and he understood it perfectly. Men use that expression today who never did use any sort of a row. In fact, one can scarcely talk without using expressions that were once slang. In the recent negotiations in Paris regarding President Hoover, a program touching war debts and reparations, our distinguished ambassadors in their telephonic communications with Washington resorted freely to the use of American slang phrases. They did this on the ground that the slang phrases were brief and concise and yet could not be easily understood by international listeners in.

The moral may be: Permit these uncouth and untutored barbarians, these outlandish new words and phrases fighting at the door of the dictionary, to settle a few preliminary bouts among themselves. Do not open your vocabulary and invite them to tumble in and take possession. When the fittest have demonstrated their right and ability to survive and have become somewhat civilized—if ever—it will be time enough for them to serve you.

Beauty in Simplicity

After all, as in dress, so in speech, the minister will find beauty in simplicity. He may well avoid the extremes. The constant reading of good literature will help him greatly to perfect his own personal style. And it is his own natural style and not a borrowed style that he should seek to polish and perfect. Again, it will help him greatly to put his thoughts into writing. Let him write for the church publications, or even for his own edification and benefit.

It is easy for some people to stand up and talk, once they have caught the knack. It is especially easy for one who is somewhat verbose and loquacious. Such a man is in more danger than a taciturn man: "When words are scarce they're seldom spent in vain."—Shakespeare. It is too easy for the loquacious man to talk. Words may roll forth abundantly, yet without much order or discipline or significance.

Writing is a different sort of exercise. The very labor of it tends to promote economy. Also there is time afforded to carefully arrange the thought in an orderly form and make it concise, pointed, and easily comprehensible. The habit thus formed will carry over into pulpit work or other forms of public speaking, in ways helpful to the man and to his hearers.

President Joseph Smith's Example

No one need despair because of the lack of college or university training. J. J. Cornish, at the beginning of his ministry unable to read his text, developed a very excellent command of language in his pulpit work. Others quite deficient in early training have studiously and laboriously striven to overcome their defects, with final gratifying success.

President Joseph Smith was a great reader of good literature. He was a student of the poets as well as the philosophers, historians, scientists, and biographers. Blessed with a naturally fine literary taste, he developed a strong and beautiful style, both in speaking and writing. His constant writing for the church publications over a long period of years helped him greatly in his pulpit work. He set us a good example in his endeavor to make language a fit tool to help him win, hold, and teach his audience.

How Much Do We Mean What We Say?

By L. B. M.

It is not infrequent that we hear people express themselves: "Oh, I want to help. I want to do all I can for the church." Such a spirit is commendable, very commendable, and the savior of our common undertaking if—and here is where the difficulty arises—it is given more than vocal expression.

No one is expected to serve without certain reservations. Reservations are, in a measure, wise. We know more than anyone else our physical strength, the extent of time we have to devote to activities other than our daily work, and our inclinations. Nevertheless, when we have publicly expressed a desire to help, we must exercise care not to turn down an opportunity just because it appears not to suit our convenience. We should remember the scriptural sayings: "Faith without works is dead." And here are some of the excuses which must be promptly dismissed from our minds: "I can't." "I'm not prepared." "I don't want to." "I want to study some more before I take up that kind of work." "I don't have enough time to myself as it is." "I couldn't do it without sacrificing."

When we are asked to help, it is well to remember that we learn to do by doing and to resolve to continue to study and fit ourselves for the task we are assigned. We must realize that real service requires willing sacrifice on the part of the one who serves.

People are daily listening to what we say and watching what we do. We can not live to ourselves, and our activities cast their shadows on the lives of others. The situation assumes more gravity when we think that in the group which hears us vow loyalty and willingness to serve, there may be some who note our inaction. Such a failure on our part to seize upon opportunity may cause the faith and confidence of others to waver, their vision of the common goal to become blurred. Let us not talk idly of helping and then pass up opportunity. It hurts us and those who know us. Let us mean what we say.

A Twentieth Century Pentecost

By C. E. Wight

The men of the past who indelibly impressed their lives and philosophy upon the pages of religious history were men who were moved by great emotional experiences. So it was that Moses turned aside to see a great sight—a bush that burned yet was not consumed—and from the midst of the bush there came to him the words of God.

So it was that following the experiences of Pentecost there came a man as an enemy to the church—one so filled with hatred that he willingly consented to the death of Stephen and then sought the special privilege of bringing the disciples of this new religion bound into Jerusalem.

The great spiritual experience which came to Paul on this occasion is familiar to every student of biblical history. It was so powerful as to completely change the currents of his life and cause him to exclaim, "The things I once loved I now hate, and the things which I once despised I now love."

Moses became the great leader of the Old Testament scriptures. Paul has left, more than any other man except the Christ, his stamp upon the scriptures of the New Testament.

Both of these men, and all others whose memory is revered today, are remembered because of their testimony as to the powerful working of God in their lives.

The voice of God speaking to Moses through the burning bush; the voice at the baptism of Jesus saying, "This is my beloved Son, hear him"; the voice crying out, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?"—it was this same voice which on the day of Pentecost spoke through the disciple so that every listener was permitted to hear the word of God in his own language.

Has this voice grown still through the passing of the years? Is it no longer possible for men to be stirred to righteous endeavor except as we shall read of the stirring times when men of the past were permitted to come close to God?

It is wonderful to read of the Apostle Paul creating such a stir among the people that we are told in the 13th chapter of Acts that on the following Sabbath almost the entire city came together to hear the word of God. We are profoundly stirred when we read of how Paul stood before rulers of his day and so moved them that one was led to exclaim, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian."

There is no indication of bravery greater than that exhibited by Paul when he relates that he was not disobedient to the heavenly vision, but when confronted by possible imprisonment or death he still told, simply and completely, the story of his conversion.

But with all of the power and conviction that comes through a study of the working of God with men of old, let us be fair to the God we love and admit that his power is not less today than it was in the days of Moses or of Paul. To live in the reflected glory of the past can not bring us a ministry of power today. That power can come only through the closeness of association with God which permitted of the stirring experiences of the past.

A present-day return of the Pentecostal power would without doubt lead us in direct opposition to many of the currents of our present-day life, and even in opposition to many religious beliefs and practices. It is by no means proof of prophetic leadership to be in opposition to current methods and practices. But it is of interest to notice that there never was a prophet who did not find it necessary to oppose many of the tendencies of his day.

When the Prophet Amos received the call of God to leave his sheep herding in the humble province of Tekoa and go to the city to rebuke the people for their iniquities, it meant a life fraught with danger and personal humiliation. For one individual to warn an entire nation is a task of such stupendous proportion that none would accept the responsibility without a fairly definite assurance of the call of God to the task.

By a very adroit presentation of his message, Amos was able to bring conviction to the hearts of many of his hearers.

All down through the line of history do we see it—Amos rebuking Jerusalem for her wickedness—Jesus accepting the contumely of the leaders when he sought to teach the people that the traditional ways of their religious leaders were not the ways of God; Peter under the fire of Pentecost rebuking his people; Paul leading his followers away from the teachings which he had once zealously upheld; Lincoln despised for setting up his influence against practices which were to him clearly outside the pale of justice and right.

What reason have we to believe that a present-day Pentecost would be a more popular cause than it has been in any previous age of the world's history? With all of our boasted civilization, men have not changed materially.

When Moses came down from the mount, he found Aaron leading the people in the making of a golden calf. How strangely must this sight have come to one who had just returned from an intimate communion with God!

Paul recognized the quick tendency of men to leave the clear teachings of God, and with all the assurance which grew out of his experiences, following his conversion we are told that he disputed in the synagogue with the Jews and with the devout person and in the market daily with them that met with him.

Note the ridicule with which these leaders among the Epicurians and the Stoics met the challenge of Paul to their ordered religion. Some said, "What will this babbling say?" Others, "He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods," because he preached unto them Jesus and the resurrection.

It appears that the Athenians were very much like our people of this present age, for we are told that they spent their time in nothing else but to tell or to hear some new thing.

Note the bold effrontery of Paul to stand before a group who were entirely unsympathetic with his doctrine and hurl at them the challenge, "Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. For as I passed by and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, 'To the Unknown God.' Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." The earnest declarations of Paul concerning this God whom he had come to know through vital experience, produced a differing effect upon his hearers. We are told that some mocked, while there were certain who believed.

If we are to bring conviction today to men who are careless and indifferent concerning the things of God, it shall be necessary to rekindle the fires of Pentecost and put a little more of the divine fire into the ceremonial and ritual of ordered religion. Suppose Jesus had been content with the teaching of the Pharisees? Suppose Paul had decided that the problem was too great, and that after all it was of little consequence if men preferred to walk in the careless road.

We would have been bereft of the fiery denunciations coming from the Master and directed toward the hypocritical practices of political fortune hunters. We would be without the stirring challenge of Paul as he indicated that real religion needed no synagogue to bring true communion. For, said he:

God that made the world and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands; neither is worshiped with men's hands, as though he needed anything, seeing he giveth to all life, and breath, and all things; and hath made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on all the face of the earth, . . . that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us; for in him we live, and move, and have our being.

We have suggested previously that we need Pentecost today. This we repeat. But it is not sufficient for us to strictly say that we need Pentecost and offer no reasons for its need. Frankly, we have always needed that spiritual touch which brought such a transformation into the lives of Moses, of Amos, of Peter, and of Paul. We recognize the value of this influence in olden times. If we are to correctly interpret the religious influences of the past in the world of today, we need that same spiritual baptism which was responsible for the original outpouring of power.

We need Pentecost today that our hearts may be softened. We claim to worship the same God, and we who go under the guise of Christian are trying to follow the same Christ. But we separate ourselves from his leadership because of our heartless differences. Thus is the power of his Spirit shut out from our lives, and we become mere formal worshipers, spirit-blind.

We need Pentecost today to clear our vision. Many of us have not yet learned the meaning of the church. To some it is but a place for the carrying through of spiritual setting-up exercises. The clarifying of our vision will cause us to see it as a great and moving force, dynamic and challenging to the best that is in us.

We need Pentecost to increase our courage. When there has been brought to our vision the values of life that are ennobling, then every ounce of our energy is required to defend that vision against the aspersions of those who are yet blind.

We need Pentecost to help us make the physical subservient to the spiritual; to teach us that it was no idle word the Master was presenting when he said, "Seek first to establish the kingdom of God, and all of these things shall be added unto you."

Finally we need Pentecost to bring us freedom. The history of the world records a constant struggle for freedom. It is not the fault of God that freedom has not come to humanity. It is rather because of the hardness of our hearts and our determination to work out our own program in our own way. But God still stands ready to bring freedom to every soul that is willing to take him at face value and believe. For said Jesus, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed. And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

Of all of the ringing challenges to put the way of right to the test and prove the power of God, none

The Nose and Its Relation to Health and Disease.—2

By A. W. Teel, M. D., Church Physician

A young medical student, upon learning the importance of the nose, improvised the following:

"Oh save me my ears for life's cadences sweet,
And preserve my vision to gaze at the swells;
But if of any Thou must deprive me,
O Allah! please save me my sense of smell!"

The sense of smell is of far more importance to the human family than most of us realize. Unfortunately, since man has become civilized, he has lost the keenness of sense for detecting odors, as compared with the lower animals.

It is necessary that the specialist have a knowledge of the location and distribution of the olfactory nerves for successful treatment. It frequently leads to the proper diagnosis, prognosis, and treatment of disease of the nose and brain. Infection of the sinuses leading to the brain is very frequently hopeless.

When the sense of smell is lost, it is attended by considerable inconvenience, for by its aid we are warned of the presence of decaying matter and other foul-smelling and unsanitary conditions. It has frequently been the means whereby lives have been saved by the detection of the presence of gas, ammonia, etc. It is of extremely great utility to the lower animals in seeking food and detecting the approach of an enemy. In addition to these important functions, the digestive processes are frequently interfered with on account of its intimate relations with the sense of taste. The common practice of holding one's nose when disagreeable remedies are swallowed, illustrates the connection between the sense of taste and the sense of smell.

Physiologists have discovered the fact that our sense of taste is in truth sense of smell, on account is greater than that found in the poem of James Russell Lowell, entitled, "The Present Crisis":

New occasions teach new duties; time makes ancient good uncouth;
They must upward still, and onward, who would keep abreast of truth:
Lo, before us gleam her camp fires! we ourselves must Pilgrim be,
Launch our Mayflower, and steer boldly through the desperate winter sea, Nor attempt the Future's portal with the Past's blood-rusted key.

of our tasting power being limited to salt, sour or acid, sweet, alkali, bitter and metallic.

It may seem strange to some that there are probably as many odors as there are sounds and colors. It has been positively demonstrated that the sense of smell can be educated far beyond that which most people realize. Practical demonstration of this is the power of scented plants. The tobacco dealer, the manufacturer of drugs, the epicure of things savory, the wine merchant, the distillers of perfumes, and many others, have, by long experience, educated themselves to distinguish the various differences which are indistinguishable to your uneducated and unpracticed nostrils, however acute they may be by natural endowment.

Ancient and modern civilization, especially the ancients, attached much importance to the use of perfumes. The ancients used them in every sacred ceremonial and lavishly expended them in all religious services as well as at the solemn rites of the burial of the dead.

Doubtless their sense of smell was more greatly educated than that of any modern people, and it differs quite markedly from modern civilization, because at this age we do not use perfumes so lavishly. It has been pointed out, and is undoubtedly true, that the delicacy of the sense of smell is lost to the same degree that the sense of taste is abolished. This is illustrated by the familiar fact of the partial loss of taste during a severe cold in the head, and the well-known experiment of tasting wines with the nostrils plugged and the eyes blindfolded.

The interference of the function of the nose, which is partly psychic, may increase or decrease the digestive secretions. Under favorable conditions, the odor of certain sapid substances will produce an abundance of saliva and gastric juices. This has been abundantly proved by the experiments of research workers along these lines. Other examples of effects of odorous impressions are sufficiently familiar to the public without further elaboration.

The loss of smell is frequently called anosmia.

God, Make Me a Man—

Give me the strength to stand for right
When other folks have left the fight.
Give me the courage of the man
Who knows that if he wills he can.
Teach me to see in every face
The good, the kind, and not the base.
Make me sincere in word and deed,
Blot out from me all sham and greed.
Help me to guard my troubled soul
By constant, active, self-control.
Clean up my thoughts, my speech, my play
And keep me pure from day to day.
O make of me a man!

Tom King: A Life History

PART FOUR

By C. H. Porter

Tom Goes to School

The snows of winter fall early in central New York, and when cold weather sets in it sometimes continues cold for several months. Tom had no prospect for work during the cold period. He had discussed the situation with his brother and had been told that he might possibly get a place to do chores for his board. Other than this he could expect nothing.

He inquired about school privileges and learned that he was eligible to attend the district school. This interested him, and he finally determined to do this, provided proper arrangements could be made. He had saved nearly all his wages earned at Ellsworth's, but desired to make the money go as far as possible and hoped to get a place to do chores and also go to school. Such opportunity not being available, he made arrangements with his brother for board and then asked about books. A neighbor said he had plenty, such as they were, and suggested that he take one of a kind and let the teacher decide what he might use.

He did this. He took a copy each of Brown's Grammar, Thompson's Higher Arithmetic, Sawnder's Sixth Reader, and some others. Being thus equipped he presented himself one morning to the teacher, a young man, at the Brinkerhoff schoolhouse near Owasco Lake.

The teacher was not much older than Tom. The following conversation ensued:

"You wish to attend this school as a pupil?"

"Yes, sir."

"What is your age?"

"Twenty years past."

"Where do you live?"

"With my brother in this district."

"Let me see your books. Have you studied these in school?"

"No, sir."

"What books have you studied from?"

"Not any."

"Where did you last attend school?"

"In England."

"How long ago?"

"About eleven years."

"How far did you go in arithmetic?"

"To the Rule of Three."

"What can you do in arithmetic now?"

"Anything in the fundamentals."

"How far have you learned numbers?"

"To hundreds of millions."

"What do you know about grammar?"

"Nothing."

"How about geography?"

"I have studied the geography of England and Wales, and have learned some from reading and the study of maps."

"Let me hear you read."

The teacher gave him a lesson from the book he had brought. He pronounced it good, but said he, "You will need a fourth reader here, and I think it will be good exercise for you to read in class, but I have no classes in which you will fit for the other studies, so I shall let you do all the work you can do well in the other books." He cautioned him not to attempt too much, but to learn thoroughly the ground covered.

The younger pupils had some sport with Tom, but he did not mind this. The teacher was kind to him and was pleased with the advancement made. It soon became known that he was a good student, and altogether Tom enjoyed his first schooling in the country very much. In a few weeks a change came. The "young Englishman" was talked about. Soon an opportunity was presented for him to get a place to do chores and go to school. Isaac DeGroff offered to furnish him a home and board for choring for the winter.

This was in another district, but DeGroff's home and place of business were close to a schoolhouse, and the opportunity was too good to be refused. Tom reluctantly bade the pupils and teacher good-by and left with mutual expressions of regret. At the new school Tom was placed in regular classes. He had studied from books fully up to the standard, had learned rapidly, and was prepared to do regular work.

His efforts were more or less crude and caused some careless remarks from the advanced pupils, but he worked hard and soon proved that he was a good student. He attended this school the remainder of the winter and felt that the time was well spent.

Toward spring he had several offers of a place to work by the month the coming season. He was somewhat undecided what to do on account of the experience of the previous year. His brother said he could probably get all the work he could do by the day. "But," said he, "there will be rainy days and Sundays when you will be on expense. If you want to try that, you can make our place your home."

One day his previous employer said to him, "Well, what's the program for this year's work? Do you want to work for me by the month?" Tom said, "No, we couldn't agree in regard to Sunday." He said, "Well, how about working for me by the day?"

Tom said, "That would suit me better, but I am afraid I would be on expense for too many days when I couldn't work."

"Now look here," said he, "I will pay you a dollar a day for the entire working season, with extra pay for harvesting and haying, you to work for me whenever I need you, or can use you, and you can do chores for me for your board whenever you can not work for wages."

Tom accepted this and put in a full season's work for his employer to the mutual good understanding of both.

Late in the season Grover Ellsworth, a brother of his employer, made the family a visit. He was a student and soon became interested in Tom, being almost of the same age, probably a year or two older. He found that Tom, although a good worker, was a reader and a student and more ambitious than the ordinary farm hand. He asked him one day what he intended to do when the season's work was ended. Tom said he intended to go to school. He asked him where, and Tom said he expected to go wherever it was most convenient.

"Well," said he, "let me give you some advice. Don't put in any more time at district schools, but go to some good higher school, where you come in touch with pupils of your own age. I am attending an academy at Skaneateles and you had better go there this winter."

Tom said he would be delighted to do so but did not think his education was sufficient, nor did he think himself financially able. Grover was insistent and tried to meet all of Tom's arguments. Finally he said, "I'll tell you what to do. You write to Professor W. C. Bowen, Skaneateles, and tell him exactly how you are placed and that you would like to attend his school. I will also write to him recommending you, and you come down for the opening session of the term. I will look around for a room where you can board yourself, and you can earn some money by doing work for people, such as sawing and splitting wood, etc. You needn't tell the professor how little schooling you have had, but tell him you want him to try you out in some of the higher grades. When he has put you in the classes, it will be up to you to make good."

Tom wrote to the professor and was invited to visit him prior to the opening of school. He did so, was courteously treated, was given a place in the grades desired, and made good in them.

Does Graceland Offer Real Preparation?

By Roy A. Cheville

What do you offer that really prepares young people for "church work"?

This question has been asked so repeatedly and in so many ways that it has almost become classic. Both friends and dubious supporters join in it. Usually one is at a loss to know what to say. It is one of those questions the response to which requires some knowledge concerning what is in the inquirer's mind.

Short Roads to Training

Often it seems that some custom-made process is desired. There are short courses of nine to twelve weeks in the industrial field, whose graduates are equipped to go out and manipulate electrical devices, give salesmanship speeches, or operate a beauty parlor. In a similar way college students might be expected after a few weeks of training to preach sermons, direct choirs, or edit series of quarterlies, etc. At times it seems to mean facility in quoting scriptural quotations or stating dates from church history.

Such specialized short courses have their place and are not to be discounted. The college does not seem to have just that sort of function. It should go back a little farther and introduce the growing youth to the world—the civilization of his day, with its many phases and problems in economics, artistic, political, domestic, and other fields. Besides this it should open his soul to glimpses of what the world may be and stimulate him to help make it so. Graceland endeavors to add this latter, weaving in a loyalty to the church as the institution that should lead in remaking the world. It takes more than a few weeks to open up this vista of life and see the principles and possibilities. "Real" preparation requires this long view.

Things Expected by Patrons

Conversations with those whose comments show the best insight into the purpose of a college indicate that these things are expected of Graceland:

1. General training that will give breadth of outlook and ability to take one's place in current civilization. This is the purpose of any college. Our own educational institution must take no second-rate position in this respect.

2. Promotion of the spirit and practice of religious living. This is upheld as a major reason for retaining the denominational college.

3. Acquaintance with the theory, history, and program of Latter Day Saintism. Those who know youth's reaction to life and are close to present trends, think of this not as an indoctrination of memorized platitudes, but a survey and study in the light of present thinking and living.

4. Development of specific abilities that enable young men and women to take places of constructive leadership in the days ahead. Those who are familiar with educational systems do not expect this last to be accomplished in a six weeks' course or even in a year of study. They are aware that specialization must rest on a broad foundation.

Specific Wants

After learning this last expectancy, I sometimes inquire just what might be termed as specific abilities. Usually the following fields are mentioned:

1. Church Music.
2. Religious Education.
3. Ministerial Training.
4. Social and Recreational Leadership.

This represents an enlightened opinion. Certainly a church has the right to expect such from an institution it supports. Unless some definite returns come back to the church that fosters the college, it need not be expected to give of its moneys and energies.

Church Music

This request is not the most insistent, but it certainly is very prominent. He who would be a leader in choral or orchestral direction or composition or would be a vocal or instrumental artist must go through the years of musical training for which there is no short-cut. Participation in the oratorio society and other musical organizations brings one in touch with the best of music and gives contact with the musical leadership of the church. In literary societies and college activities there are opportunities for the willingly disposed. Many hope that at no too distant day specialized work in church hymnology, worship, and the like may be offered. There is a difference between merely training musicians and developing musical leaders for the church.

Religious Education

Developments in recent years have brought an increasing insistence for offerings in this field. Previously there have been offered courses in church history, Bible, and religious thought, but not until last year was there a course in religious education. The first semester, a two-hour course in Principles of Religious Education was offered, and for the second semester another in Organization and Administration of Religious Education. Students were required to do definite projects for investigation and practice in the Lamoni church school.

Opportunities in Extra-curricular Activities

The student who engages in chapel, literary societies, athletics, dormitory life, school societies, and all those activities that make up Graceland life, finds himself in possession of a fund of usable materials. The student who really mingles with his college group should find himself socialized for church participation. Many a branch has woven into its programs the fruits of Graceland prayer meetings, vesper services, literary societies, club socials, and methods of the local branch. They are present in abundance for those who will receive.

Studies in Latter Day Saintism

In the first place, Graceland seeks to offer the general training which lifts the student out of narrowness and "preconceptions" into a creative outlook. Then should come more specialized work. In the field of church history an attempt is being made. For some time a basic course in general church history has been presented. This fall a new course is offered to those who have completed this general study—a course in American Church History. It is hoped that by another year there can be an offering in Latter Day Saint History. But here one is confronted with the absence of a single book that would be acceptable as a college text. Consequently outlines and briefs must be prepared.

Additional courses in religious education should be developed—courses that require actual practice in method and technique so that this department may become an investigative laboratory with returns flowing back to the church. What is true of this ought to be equally so of fields of pastoral and missionary ministry.

Our Common Answer

"What do you offer that really prepares young people for church work?"

The first offering must be in the general spirit of the church. This is a prerequisite. If the loyalty is unintelligently or wrongly based, there may result a temporary waning. Graceland must attempt to radiate this vital spirit.

The answer to the rest lies with Graceland's administrators and faculty, also with the support of patrons and the type of students enrolled. Its offerings must be characterized by academic dignity and thoroughness and permeated by the atmosphere of scholarship and service.

A cliff wall is often just another form of ladder—but only the brave soul finds it out.—Selected.

Does the World Need Zion?

By Eugene and Julia Closson

(The following appears as discussion material in a quarterly lesson prepared for older young people entitled "Studies in the Restoration." It is a type of the lessons prepared for the year beginning October, 1931.)

Doctor Ellwood, in The Social Problem, sums up his argument thus:

1. The greatest problem of the world today is the social problem; it is a problem of human contact, the problem of getting individuals to adjust themselves to each other for harmonious living together.

2. Throughout the ages there have been two mighty forces contending for supremacy. In the throes of the conflicts between them, the welfare of man has often been jeopardized and trampled underfoot. These forces are Society and the Individual. Every social order will have to find some relation between them. No social order has yet found the proper relation, for there has always been trouble between them.

3. The two greatest evils which have harassed and oppressed mankind from the beginning are Ignorance and Selfishness. These two things have always stood as the great obstructions in the path of progress; they have been the cause of man's many sorrows and his centuries of affliction. They stand in the way now. But it will be a long time before man will even see that they are the cause of his trouble, and we shall have done much for people if we can even get them to see it. So fundamental are they in man's nature that it will be hard indeed to root them out. They must eventually be supplanted with knowledge and unselfishness.

The Work of Zion

From the above, Latter Day Saints can gather certain facts concerning their Zion which is to be:

1. We must start to shape a new society on a different basis from any in the world today; we must build a new social order, for the old one has failed to give us either peace, liberty, security, or any of those things for which mankind has striven.

2. We must harmonize society and the individual. Society must protect her people, must be made stable, must be founded on righteousness, must make a place for the development of the powers and talents of its individuals. This will be Zion—the individual having a chance to develop for the good of society, for the benefit of his fellow beings, and not only for selfish ends. This will be the true citizen of the kingdom of God. He must be consecrated to righteous living. Society and the individual must be harmonized in a way that will work for the maximum good and development of both, for neither can develop or, indeed, exist without the other.

3. Zion must be established for the express purpose of breaking down ignorance and selfishness, and of putting knowledge and altruism in their places. We will become more powerful, for we will know more of God, of his laws, the world, the universe, of all truth. The love of God and our fellow men must reign in our hearts. The hearts of men must be changed until this is accomplished. This is the first and greatest task of Zion.

What Will That Zion Be?

Are you satisfied to think of Zion only as the "pure in heart"? Are you satisfied to think of it as a place for the Saints to fly to safety when they can no longer find security in the pastures of the world? Are you satisfied to think of gathering with a few others in some little spot, and there waiting for Zion to be let down from heaven as a mantle to protect you?

It is said that in the times of Enoch they "had all things common" and that their enemies feared to come against them. Can our Zion develop a new social order if we do nothing? Will the enemies of good fear us if we are not strong? The Zion of the time of Enoch was not an ethereal affair. They did not wait for Zion—they built it. And when it was done it was not a matter of the heart alone. It was built of brick and mortar; it was conducted on sound economic principles, so that everyone could find a way to earn an honest living; it must have had physical and material strength, for other nations stood off and were afraid; it established a social order where men could live in peace and security, and where justice was assured.

Taking their example, and our own common sense, as well as the commands that have been given us in these latter days, we can see that their way was a good one.

The world has nothing similar to our Zion ideal today. True, they have seen the need of a reconstruction of the social order, but no plan has been presented of such far-reaching social power and scope, combined with the leadership and direction from a divine source, such as the Zion ideal presents.

But what the world wants, and what Latter Day Saints need to show, is a practical operation of Zion, not merely talk about a theoretical one. When we can show that practical demonstration, then the world will be able to see our "faith by our works."

History records many failures of men to create a stable social order. But the teachings of Jesus have not yet really been given a fair trial.

Even if Christianity has not brought man peace, it has brought him a long way up on the ladder of progress. In striving towards the attainment of the principles of Christianity, man has cast off oppression and fear and secured democracy and enlightenment; he has a greater sensitiveness to evil, a keener appreciation of good, a more vital sense of his social responsibility.

Under this heading we shall be glad to receive and publish articles and letters of interest to our readers on the doctrine and work of the church. Writers are responsible for their own views. Other views on subjects discussed here will be received if of sufficient interest.

Zion

By J. W. A. Bailey

Zion is the highest form of government which our heavenly Father designed that man should live under here on the earth; it is the church or kingdom of God operating under the celestial law.

From the beginning of the world the Lord has tried to establish the Zion form of government among men, but because of the influence that Satan obtained and exercised over the hearts of the people, the government of God has been hindered; but the time will come, and is near at hand, when it will prevail above every other form of government.

About six hundred and eighty-seven years after the creation, the Zion form of government was established, and under the leadership of a great man by the name of Enoch it was brought to perfection. In his day the people of God dwelt together in righteousness, and they were of one heart and of one mind, and there were no poor among them. They had all things equal according to their just wants and needs. They were not divided into classes, but every one loved his neighbor as himself.

Under such conditions as it took to make Zion (pure in heart), the spirit of selfishness, which is the root of all evil, could not exist, for Zion is founded upon the spirit of love, mercy, truth, and justice. Operating upon such divine principles, the people reached perfection, and in time were translated.

It is only under such eternal principles of righteousness that Zion could, or ever shall be, built up. Anything foreign to these principles will destroy the very purpose of Zion.

Many years after Enoch's city was translated, the government of God was again established among men, this time under the leadership of a great high priest by the name of Melchisedec. Under his leadership the people of God reached such a fine degree of perfection, so like the people of Enoch, many of them were translated; and because of the peace and harmony that existed among them, Melchisedec was called the King of Peace, or King of Righteousness.

From the beginning of the world, the majority of mankind have been against the government of God, and have set up governments of their own.

When God brought Israel out of Egypt into the land of Canaan, where Melchisedec formerly presided over Zion, God tried to reestablish his government among them but they were too stiff-necked and unrepentant of heart, so they rejected the theocratic government and set up a human monarchy. Samuel felt very bad about it, for he thought the people had rejected him, but the Lord informed him that it was not he whom the people had rejected, but that they had rejected the Lord; they had substituted human government for God's government.

Again, in the days of Jeremiah, the Lord called unto the people to return to him, unto his form of government. Following are God's call and their reply:

Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein.
—Jeremiah 6: 16.

To have walked therein would have brought them rest, but because of their selfishness they would not. But the time is coming when men and nations will be glad to walk in the Lord's way, to live under his form of government. It is Satan who was and is behind this rebellion against the government of God; he set up his opposition at Eden, and has kept it up ever since. But the time is coming, and that not far away, when his oppositions will have to give way for the Zion form of government.

When Christ came to earth to set up his church and reestablish Zion, Satan got busy and stirred up the kings and rulers of the earth against him, that he might prevent the government of God from being established.

From the gates of Eden down to our day, we can plainly see the works of darkness working against the government of God, but the government of God will prevail; it can not fail, for it is founded upon the great principles of love and truth, which principles make for righteousness and peace. On the other hand, the kingdom of Satan is based upon selfishness and hate, which in their very nature are self-destructive, and in time must fail.

The inspired apostle, Paul, clearly understood the main issue of this great conflict. He said:

We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.—Ephesians 6: 12.

The whole fight is between two powers, the power of God and the power of Satan, which has been from before the foundation of the world, and will be until the satanic power has been destroyed.

Jesus exclaimed to the rulers of the people at Jerusalem, "If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day the things which belong unto thy peace!"—Luke 19: 42. Yes, had they only known the principles of the Zion form of government, it would have brought them peace, and rest to their souls.

Well indeed that the angels sang the night of his birth: "Peace on earth, good will toward men." For he is the "King of Peace."

Apostle Paul speaking of this matter, said, "Had the princes of this world known these things, they would not have crucified the Lord of glory."

It was because of the great love that God has for fallen humanity, that he sent his dear Son into the world to establish the kingdom of peace among men. This same love filled the great heart of Jesus for them, and when they rejected him and his government, he wept, saying: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how oft would I have gathered thy children together, but ye would not." No, just as it was in the days of Jeremiah, they said, "We will not."

Though Jesus set up his great church, the full Zion government was not fully established at that time. But he instructed the apostles to pray, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven."

When Jesus stood before the Roman tribunal, Pilate asked him if he was a king, and Jesus answered, "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth."

From the above we can plainly see that Jesus came to establish a kingdom founded upon "Truth," for truth contains all the elements of righteousness.

In John 14:6, Jesus says: "I am the way, the truth, and the life." How true, for his way (government) is the only true way. It is founded upon truth, and obedience thereto will bring life and peace. It is written, "Of the increase of his government there shall be no end." All the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto him.

The Kingdom of God Set Up in Latter Days

Speaking by inspiration, Daniel said that God was going to set up his kingdom in latter days. But God had to make preparation before he could set up his kingdom and reestablish Zion among men. The kingdom of God could not exist among or in any of the kingdoms represented by the image that God showed to Nebuchadnezzar (Daniel 2), so the Lord raised a special government in which he could set up his kingdom in these latter days.

Here is what the Lord said in regard to this special government:

For this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land, by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose.

What purpose? The purpose that every man might enjoy religious liberty, the right to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience (this last clause to be understood to mean as long as their worship does not interfere with the rights and liberties of others). It was here in the United States Government and here alone that the agency of man could be fully enjoyed.

It was out of this great government, "mountain," that God cut the "little stone kingdom," which shall roll forth and fill the whole earth. Here is what Daniel has to say in regard to the coming forth of the stone kingdom:

In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall not be left to another people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.—Daniel 2: 44.

The statement, "It shall break in pieces," does not mean that the kingdom of God will use carnal weapons. Where carnal weapons are used, they will be used by these kingdoms among themselves. The weapons used by the kingdom of God will be love, mercy, truth, and justice, the most powerful weapons that can be used against the satanic powers.

The Apostle Paul says, "It is the goodness of God that leadeth men to repentance." Zechariah says, "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."

In the latter-day revelations the Lord says that he will thrash the nations by his Spirit. The following inspired verse explains how it is to be done:

"Thank the Lord for the plan he has given,
That will render us pure as a child,
That will change this cold world into heaven,
By his Spirit so holy and mild."

Zion will be redeemed by the spirit of love manifested through the gospel, and not by force.

Jesus said unto Pilate, "My kingdom is not of this world, else my servants would fight." The kingdom of God is different from the kingdoms of men; it is a kingdom of peace and righteousness, based on love and truth.

It is written, "No one can assist in this work except he shall be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity."

Shortly before the kingdom of God shall accomplish its great mission among men, there will be a great tumult among all nations; men's hearts shall fail them for fear of the things coming upon the earth.

It seems that we are getting near that time; even now men's hearts are beginning to faint. There are thousands of men who are heartsick. They are wondering what next is going to happen. Millions of men are out of employment and know not what they shall do to provide for their families. Even some of the great rich are becoming alarmed over the conditions, wondering what the outcome of this world's financial depression will be.

The Apostle James saw this day, and prophesied thus concerning it:

Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days. Behold, the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of sabaoth. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and have been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts, as in the day of slaughter. Ye have condemned and killed the just; and he doth not resist you. Be patient therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord, . . . for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh.—James 5: 1-8.

If the Apostle James had lived in this day, he could not have told the conditions more plainly than he did. This prophecy is being literally fulfilled, and the end of its fulfillment is drawing near. Then will come to pass that statement about fleeing to Zion—when he “that will not take up his sword against his neighbor must needs flee to Zion for safety.” (See Ezekiel 38: 21; Zechariah 14: 13; Doctrine and Covenants 45: 13.) All these prophets saw the same day and condition.

When this awful day shall come, it will be the breaking down of the kingdoms spoken of by Daniel, and at that time the government of God, Zion, will be the only stable government on the earth. Then and not until then, shall the nations of the earth learn that God's government is the only true form of government. Then will they say:

Come and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of Jacob, and he will teach us his ways, and we will walk in his paths, for the law shall go forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.—Micah 4: 2.

What a change has come over the nations! Up to then, they have always refused to walk in the Lord's way, to submit to his form of government; but at last they have learned that his way is the right way, his government is the true government that will bring peace and rest to the souls of men.

If we had only had Zion in operation when this awful world's depression came on, it would not only have been a great blessing to us, but it would have served as a great demonstration of our “faith.” But as yet, Zion is only in theory. However, I have faith that the day is near at hand when Zion shall be a reality, and when the glory of God shall rest upon it.

Then shall Zion be as a light set upon a hill, and nations shall flow unto it. It will be the only government on earth where social justice shall be enjoyed. For it is by the principle of social justice that Zion shall be built up, or redeemed. It can not be redeemed any other way.

It is because of the lack of social justice that all the earthly kingdoms and governments shall fail.

No government or organization of men can finally succeed without the pure gospel of Jesus Christ, which gospel is based upon love and truth.

When we get Zion in operation as the Lord has designed, then we shall be able to fit into its ordained program all the people that are converted to the gospel, as fast as they are converted. But as it is, we hardly know what to do with the converts we make. Many times, and especially so nowadays, when we make new converts to our faith, they are thrown out of employment and in some cases are, to a large extent, ostracized by their associates and even by their relatives.

We are commanded to go out and invite the honest in heart to come out of Babylon; invite them to come into the kingdom of God. We need Zion to invite them to, a place where they can fit in and be happy in their work. This is the purpose of the kingdom of God.

There are many honest people that will come out of Babylon, into the church, when they see the light of God shining out of Zion; for out of Zion, the beauty of God hath and shall shine unto the regeneration of the whole world.

Free Leaflets for Parents and Workers in the Children's Division

By Bertha Constance Woodward

To assist both parents and workers with children in selecting well-graded, adequate teaching materials and supplies, the following leaflets have been prepared, and will be sent free upon request:

- Leaflet No. I, Nursery (Cradle Roll)
- Leaflet No. II, Kindergarten (Beginner)
- Leaflet No. III, Primary
- Leaflet No. IV, Junior

The teaching materials and supplies advertised have been chosen carefully from a large field of possible material. Helpfulness toward the furthering of our church program for children has been the basis of choice.

Parents should have the leaflets which were prepared for the departments in which their children are enrolled. The children's division supervisor in each local church should request the Herald Publishing House for enough leaflets to enable each parent and teacher to have the help which the children's division of the Department of Religious Education is attempting to give through these leaflets.

Rock Island District

Rock Island District has been doing intensive work the past month, beginning with the young people's convention and conference at Moline in June, and carrying the spirit of sacrifice into the following weeks, to make our faith produce works. Apostle John F. Garver met with us Saturday and Sunday; and he, together with District Missionary F. C. Bevan, supplied a full measure of interest and inspiration to the convention.

On Friday evening, June 12, the opening service was greeted by a large audience which enjoyed an interesting program. Musical numbers were contributed by the Gray family Orchestra, of Davenport, Sister Nellie White, Ethel Spengler, Marion White, and Brother and Sister A. J. Gray, of Rock Island, and Leslie Davis and the branch choir of Moline. Each number was of superior merit and highly enjoyable. Sister Josephine Frutchie, of Savanna, who has recently won county honors in humorous declamation, gave two excellent readings, and little Doddie Mercer read a poem about the recent Red and Blue contest, which had been composed by Sister Nellie White.

Saturday morning F. C. Bevan and Harry Ekright, pastor of Moline Branch, were in charge of a spiritual prayer service. This was followed by a study class in "Personal Evangelism," with Lesile Davis in charge and Brother Bevan as instructor. The value of enthusiasm was stressed as an important factor in winning others to the church, and in winning others we prove our discipleship. If each member could convert one new member each year, how great our increase would be! Our greatest source of opportunity is in children, for nine tenths of all Christians are converted before the age of twenty.

After a delicious luncheon served by the Women's Department, who furnished excellent meals throughout the conference, we reassembled for business session at 2.30 p. m. with Apostle J. F. Garver and the district presidency chosen to preside.

The financial reports of L. A. White showed a total of $1,104 in tithes and offerings remitted to the Bishop for the months of March, April, and May. Receipts to the district fund for the same period totaled $55.39, with a balance on hand of $387.79, which included $131.58 in the building and loan fund. Waterloo has recently received a loan of $50 to help them meet the payments on their building. The total membership of the district as shown by the statistical report is 1,662, with a net gain of twenty-seven since February.

The report of District President E. R. Davis is a record of service which we highly appreciate. Traveling eighteen hundred miles since February, visiting 13 places, preaching 45 sermons, attending 93 services, baptizing 6, and mailing out 616 letters, besides performing various other ministerial duties, are the fruits of constant labor and untiring devotion.

We were sorry to receive the resignation of Elder L. A. White from the office of district treasurer and bishop's agent, and that of Sister Nellie White from the office of historian. A vote of thanks and appreciation for their faithful work was tendered them by the conference, for we realize that it is only because they feel the call of other service more urgent that they have deemed this necessary. Elder John C. Stiegel's recommendation for the work of treasurer and bishop's agent was approved, and the selection of a historian was left in the hands of the district presidency.

Apostle Garver occupied Saturday evening with an effective sermon on the great milestones which have influenced our work. He preached again Sunday morning to a large and attentive audience and conducted the round table priesthood meeting which was highly interesting and instructive. Brother Bevan was in charge of the Sunday morning prayer service and occupied in the evening with a message truly inspiring. Since completing his series of meetings at Rock Island and Moline, Brother Bevan has been laboring at Waterloo and Cedar Rapids.

With the quota of six thousand eight hundred dollars as the goal for our district for 1931, we have been doing some intensive campaigning. During Sacrifice Week a special effort was made to have outside speakers occupy in the interests of the urgent needs of the church. Elder Edward Jones, of Kewanee, spoke at Galesburg; Elder C. A. Beil spoke at Rock Island and Savanna; Elder Leonard Stiegel, of Moline, at Kewanee and Davenport; Elder John Stiegel at Joy and Muscatine. Perhaps other changes were also made and with good results, for many of the branches have responded nobly, bringing the total receipts for June to more than one thousand dollars in tithes and offerings. If we shall continue to work together in this spirit of sacrifice and devotion, we shall surely "go over the top" financially, and in the meantime, increase our spiritual wealth, for truly it is more blessed to give than to receive.

Alliance, Ohio

Alliance, Ohio, July 21.—This branch has never been in a better spiritual condition than at present. Some of the members have suffered because of the unemployment situation. We are thankful that the pastor of this branch is absolutely loyal to the church, its program and to those whom God has placed in charge.

Three have been added to our number this year. On February 28, a young woman was baptized. She has attended this Sunday school since a child. She is the first of her family to enter the kingdom and is very eager to see others come in, especially her young companions. On May 31 two others joined, another of the Sunday school scholars, a girl ten years of age, and a young woman who came in contact with this work through Ensigns which were passed from door to door after she had lived here only a short time. Her testimony is that previous to coming here she had prayed to God that the next position to which her husband should be sent would be in a place where she would come in contact with the true church. Having united with several faiths and finding none teaching what she believed to be the true love of God, she was still searching for the truth. Now we are rejoicing together.

Sister Erma Greiner, twenty-six years of age, and wife of Brother Albert Greiner, was taken away by death in May. Both she and her husband united with the church in 1929. She leaves her husband and four small children, two sons and two daughters.

In April Elder Erwin Pyle and Mrs. Hannah Dickey were united in marriage at the home of Pastor R. A. Smith.

In May Elder J. C. McConnaughy, of Barberton, held a series of meetings for one week at the church, much good being done in building up the faith and zeal of the Saints. Since then attendance at services, especially the Wednesday night prayer meeting, has had a marked increase. At the Sunday services there is a splendid attendance of young people.

Elder John McDonald, of Saginaw, Michigan, is visiting his son Floyd, who lives here, and they are regular attendants at all services. He has been the Sunday evening speaker for some time, giving us the old-fashioned missionary type of sermons. He left for Rock Creek, Ohio, July 19, where he will conduct a series of meetings. We pray for his success.

On Sunday morning, June 28, we were visited by district officers, Elder William Goudy, of New Philadelphia, Ohio, and Elder E. Guy Hammond, of Akron, Ohio. Brother Hammond was the speaker. He used Doctrine and Covenants 1: 6, showing that Satan is to have dominion over his own and that God will have dominion over His Saints. In his forceful manner he made it plain that every Saint will be tried to the limit in a real battle, that he may be approved in the courts of heaven, and that only by putting on the full gospel armor will he be enabled to stand.

As teacher of the young people's class, Brother Alba Smith entertained the young folks at his home last month. Singing, games, and contests, not to mention the refreshments, made the evening a very pleasant one.

Kirtland Will Be Tented City at Reunion

Reunion time is the best time of the year, and it is here again. It is the time when friends meet friends and all enjoy the blessings which the Lord showers on his people. Happy is the Saint who is planning to attend reunion.

The reunion committee of Kirtland District hopes that this year you are planning to come to Kirtland to the reunion from August 6 to 16. This is an ideal place for a reunion, twenty-three miles east of Cleveland, three miles southeast of Willoughby, three miles southwest of Mentor, and fifteen miles north of Chagrin Falls, on paved roads. Tents and other camp equipment are to be had at reasonable rental rates, and of this part of the work John L. Cooper, R. F. D. 2, Willoughby, Ohio, is in charge. Meals and rooms are obtainable at low cost.

Among the officers present to help will be Apostle Clyde F. Ellis, Apostle F. Henry Edwards, Bishop Lemuel Curry, District President James E. Bishop, Patriarch J. A. Gunsolley, and others.

The reunion program of events includes morning prayer meetings, class work, lectures, and sermons. The classes will be conducted by Apostles Edwards and Ellis and a representative of the Presiding Bishopric. Sister Auverne Proper will have charge of the educational activities of the children, and daily junior services will be conducted. Each afternoon recreational features will be cared for. Song service, preaching, or special features will fill the evening.

Many who have never visited historic Kirtland will find this a good opportunity to do so. All of the principal services will be conducted in the Temple. Surely those who worship this reunion in the shadow or shelter of that monument to the consecration of the early Saints—the Temple—will not lack, as they return home, in appreciation of the love of our heavenly Father and the work of his children of a former day.

Duluth, Minnesota

Sixtieth Avenue, West, and Bristol Street

Out-of-town speakers have been much enjoyed this summer. On April 26 Elder George W. Day, pastor of Bemidji Branch, spoke twice. May 17 it was the pleasure of Duluth members to meet with a group of elders from Minneapolis, Elder Vernon Lundeen, pastor, Elder Leslie S. Wight, president of Minnesota District, Elder Wesley Elvin, district secretary, and Elder Charles Johnson. Elder Wight was the morning speaker, and Elder Lundeen was in charge of the adults during the church school hour. That evening Elder George W. Day was the speaker.

A priesthood meeting was held Saturday evening, Elder Leslie S. Wight, district president, in charge. Elder A. C. Bundy resigned as pastor of Duluth Branch and as a member of the district presidency. Elder George W. Day was always chosen pastor of Duluth, to work under the supervision of the district presidency. Elder George W. Day was appointed a member of the district presidency to take the place resigned by Elder Bundy.

Other speakers in May were Pastor E. J. Walters and Brother W. C. Stauty, whose theme was "The Unfinished Task; God Is Depending on Us."

Among the many who have spent their vacations out of town were the Stauty family, who early in July began their vacation with Minneapolis Saints, were with Bemidji Saints at their two-day rally July 11 and 12, and met with a number of isolated members during their tour.

Brothers George W. Day and Samuel Case lately held services at Little Fork, Minnesota, where they baptized nine young souls into the kingdom.

Brother A. C. Bundy and family visited at McGrath, Deerwood, and Aitkin, Minnesota, holding services at the two latter places.

Brother E. J. Walters and wife attended the two-day meeting at Chetek, Wisconsin, July 4 and 5.

Services during the month of June, opening with a good sacramental service, did much to encourage the members. Elder Leslie S. Wight, Missionary C. J. Smith, Pastor Walters, Elder P. G. Schnuckle, and others delivered stimulating and helpful services. And the Saints gave ready response to Sacrifice Week.

While many at present are on vacations, those who are left strive to move on toward the goal of Zion conditions. Every member realizes that God is depending on us as members of his church to go forward, being watchful, careful, and prayerful, and living in harmony with his perfect law. Our prayers are for those who carry the heavy burdens of the latter-day work, that God will help and direct them. Saints, Zion is our goal; we can not stop short of it.

Missionary Teaches Value of Church Publications

Elder William H. Chandler, president of Northern District, England, writes a letter to President F. M. McDowell regarding the use of the church publications by the Saints. From his letter we quote:

"I am of the opinion that there is a splendid opportunity to incorporate the work of helping the Saints to use the church publications with the work of the missionary. Not enough is known among the Saints of the value of the church literature, and to have some one handling this, I am sure, would develop a greater love for the church and the work it is striving to do.

"Saints here buy the papers every day to learn how the world is going on, but very few buy the church papers to learn how the church is faring. This is because they have not been taught the value of being acquainted with the church books and papers. I have always found in my own work that when a definite appeal is made to the Saints, they respond to the best of their ability.

"I had the opportunity of visiting an isolated Saint, an aged cripple entirely deprived of church association. With me I took a supply of Ensigns and other church papers, the sacrament, and the anointing oil. After talking with her, administering to her, and helping her to feel that God ministers to her through the ordinances and the priesthood representing the church on earth, I met her needs. Then I taught her that if she wants to extend help to others, the church needs her support. She was so blessed with what she had received that she wished others to share with her, and she at once gave two dollars and a half to the sacrifice fund. I wonder how many more isolated Saints need the bread of life and would be more than thankful if they could have it broken for them by some one who loves the Lord. I felt indeed how valuable was my right to minister to those who are in need. This sister is a Sister Barlow, who lives at Harrogate, Yorkshire, England. She is known to some who live in Independence."

Independence

"The church exists because God commanded its establishment, but God commanded its organization and establishment because of man's need for it," stated President F. M. McDowell in his Sunday night sermon at the Campus, "The Purpose of the Church."

The purpose of the church is stated in the command: "Seek ye first to build the kingdom," and Paul writing to the Ephesian saints, gives the purpose of the church in these words: "For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God."

"The church is the custodian of truth and values," continued the speaker after a clear explanation of the necessity for church organization, "and brings to the world the gospel of good news, but that gospel, because of the very nature of its good news, must be lived, shared, demonstrated. Because of its gift of the gospel, the church's task is to evangelize the world. It must build Zion."

Music was furnished by the Auditorium Orchestra, and congregational singing was led by Elder J. F. Sheehy. Assisting Brother Sheehy in charge, was Elder H. G. Barto.

For the next three Sundays Brother McDowell will be attending reunions. During his absence from the Campus pulpit, a dramatic production and sermons by other members of the ministry will be Sunday night features.

The tennis tournament, sponsored by the young people's council, is over. Miss Ruth Bryant was awarded the champion woman player's medal, and Mr. Dean Redfield received first place among the men players.

A three-man team composed of finalists in this tournament has scheduled a match with the finalists of the interchurch tournament now in progress. The three challengers are Guinn Bronson, Albert Nigh, and Dean Redfield.

Stone Church

A special service of prayer and testimony in the main auditorium of the Stone Church early Sunday morning commemorated the commencement of the early morning prayer meeting in Independence twenty-seven years ago. The five men in the stand were leaders in the beginning of the movement, Brothers Paul Craig, Harry Hattey, Jesse Roberts, J. Charles May, and J. R. Lentell. With a large congregation of worshippers, they recalled how back in 1904, under the leadership of Brother Harry Hattey, a group of young men assembled on Sunday mornings for prayer, how they were blessed with the Spirit in their meetings, how they were told in prophecy that several of them would be sent on foreign missions.

It was fitting on a July morning in 1931 that these same men should gather to discuss the fulfillment of the prophecy given years ago concerning their work for the church.

Hymns, prayers, and testimonies combined to produce the spirit of true worship.

Let your acquaintance with the faith and testimony of the Saints of early days increase your own faith. Be loyal to the program of the church. Do your share of the work. Be a Latter Day Saint. All these were thoughts given expression in the Sunday morning message of Pastor John F. Sheehy to the Stone Church congregation. Skillfully he related the faith of the past to the faith of the present, the program of the past to the program of the present, and appealed to the loyalty of the Saints.

Music for the morning was supplied by Albert Brackenburg, bass, who sang, "Like as the Hart Desireth," by Alister, and by Robert Miller, organist. Elder S. A. Thiel presided over the service, assisted by Elder O. A. McDowell.

(Follow morning church service—Stone Church)

Junior church at the Campus opened Sunday morning in charge of Brother David Van Trump. Pastor Will F. Bolinger was absent, and his pleasant smile was very much missed. Ruth Harder played a piano solo, "Coquetry," by Rienhold; Roy Christy sang "Growing." Brother Van Trump talked about the priesthood and the organization of the church.

The heat of summer has done little to discourage attendance at the regular Sunday afternoon general prayer meeting. In charge of Brother J. M. Terry and other elders, the Saints here find opportunity to strengthen each other with songs, prayers, and testimonies. All members in the district are invited to worship with the Saints at 2.30 each Sunday afternoon.

On last Thursday afternoon the Stone Church women met to make further preparations for the Harvest Home Festival. It was decided that all the districts of the Stone Church should combine for the occasion, to make a worthwhile display. The space this year assigned to the Stone Church is the platform of the lower assembly room of the Auditorium. Mrs. W. A. Page was appointed to take care of the decorations of the booth, being empowered to choose her assistants.

Bishop and Mrs. Mark H. Siegfried kept open house Friday afternoon and evening in celebration of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. A large number of friends availed themselves of this opportunity to call on the Siegfried family and wish them well. Twenty-five years ago July 24, Miss Madge Craig and Mr. Mark H. Siegfried were married in the house which is their present home. Their family of three sons, Craig, Cedric, and Charles Mark, and one daughter, Pauline, assisted them in their silver wedding celebration.

Summer days present opportune times for the groups and districts to picnic on the Campus. It is not an infrequent thing to see on the grounds large groups of picnickers almost any week-day evening.

Walnut Park

Church work in Walnut Park District has not lagged at all during the past weeks when no news has been written. In fact, many are overworked. Pastor S. C. Smith has more calls than he can fill, with home cares pressing, and the assistant pastor, Carroll Olson, now being absent for a needed rest. However, all services are kept up regularly and interestingly by utilizing the officers in the local groups, each group responding on the Sunday designated.

The choir is on duty unless other special numbers are arranged for, and the Walnut Park Orchestra is constantly faithful in service at Sunday school, where Sanford Downs serves as chorister and Rosamond Sherman and Mrs. Joseph Countryman as pianists.

The eleven o'clock speaker Sunday, July 26, was Elder G. G. Lewis, who spoke on the assurance we have that what God has spoken will surely come to pass. Without such assurance we have no grounds for existing as a church, but with it we have great reason to rejoice in what we may yet accomplish.

Other speakers recently have been Apostle J. F. Curtis, Bishop G. L. DeLapp, and Elder C. Ed. Miller.

Elder W. T. Gard, who has general oversight of the early Sunday morning prayer meetings, calls on all the available members of the priesthood to share in the responsibility of presiding and has many supporters. After constant endeavor he feels encouraged because of the goodly number of Saints who now attend and who arrive on time. The service is always fully occupied and well worth an effort to be present. While fear is sometimes expressed that our people care too much for worldly pleasures, a recent prayer meeting was almost filled with testimonies of those who receive so much more abundant pleasure from church services and from performing religious duties that all the world can offer is but a trifle in comparison. They feel that in seeking too much for good things among outside sources, we are losing much that the Father is anxious to bestow upon his church.

The Walnut Park unit of the Sanitarium Patronesses gave a successful ice cream social on the church lawn the past week to raise money for material with which to work. There are twenty-six women in this unit, with Mrs. Elmer Pennell president, all sewing in their homes in preparation for furnishing a room in the new Sanitarium and Hospital. They have a nice supply of linen finished and expect to be ready when their room, No. 7, is completed.

Conference and Reunion for Eastern Montana

The Eastern Montana district conference and reunion took place at Fairview, in the extreme eastern part of the State. Apostle James A. Gillen, Patriarch George W. Thorburn, and Elder L. O. Wildermuth represented the general church. The time was shortened to three days, with what we believe to be good results. The remaining days were used to give more of the Saints a chance to hear Brother Gillen by having two and three-day meetings in two other strategic points in the district.

Business conditions are very poor in this district, only two inches of rain being recorded so far in 1931, and prices for farm products were never lower. Nevertheless all expenses were met, a fine spirit was maintained throughout, and provisions were made for a reunion next year if thought advisable by the committee.

The business session of the conference resulted in the election of Elder A. R. Ritter, district president; Elders W. R. Hillman and L. O. Wildermuth, counselors; Elder W. R. Hillman, bishop's agent and treasurer; Joe Barry, secretary; J. A. Reynolds, district Sunday school superintendent and recreation leader; and Mrs. J. A. Reynolds, Women's Department superintendent.

Coeur d'Alene, Idaho

Since our last letter to the Herald, this branch has been moving steadily onward. We have recently had the privilege of listening to Evangelist Richard Baldwin, Bishop A. Carmichael, and Apostle J. A. Gillen. These men brought inspiring messages which created within the members a greater desire for service and a desire to follow more closely the pattern given us by our elder brother, Jesus Christ.

Our place of worship is a humble little building, but the Spirit of God is with us. We are thankful for such blessings, and hope later to have a more suitable building in which to worship. Recently we built an addition to the rear of the church building to be used for classrooms and other purposes. This addition is so constructed that a part of it becomes a part of the main assembly room when not in use by classes. It greatly improves the appearance of the interior of the building, and gives much more seating capacity. We had planned to build a new building, but because of the financial depression we thought best to wait until more favorable conditions exist.

The Young People's Dramatic Class has accepted the responsibility of furnishing drapes for the rostrum, which is used for a classroom, and for the side openings which lead to other classrooms. Their play which they recently gave was a decided success and netted a nice little sum which is to be used for the above purpose. Some of the most talented members in the Young People's Dramatic Class are not members of the church.

The women's club has helped in creating funds for building purposes. Just now the women are making a friendship quilt. They requested the Saints and friends of Spokane District who desired to help them create a building fund to send them their name and ten cents. The club promised to embroider the name of each donor on a block. Two hundred and eighty-five names were received, some sending one dollar for one name. It will be a very pretty quilt when finished, and a quilt that will surely be appreciated by the one who buys it. The club wishes to thank all who contributed to its fund.

On July 12 the children's division of the church school entertained the school with a very interesting Children's Day program. Two of the children have given their names for baptism, which will take place in the near future.

During Sacrifice Week the spirit of sacrifice was manifested to a considerable degree. The results of its workings enabled the branch solicitor to send to the bishop a very good financial report.

We expect missionary Elder A. C. Martin to be with us soon to hold a series of meetings.

Spokane, Washington

This summer the Saints have been greatly helped in a spiritual way by the visits of Apostle J. A. Gillen, Bishop A. Carmichael, Patriarch Richard Baldwin, and by the special services held by Elder A. C. Martin during April and May. These services were well attended and good in every way. At the conclusion ten persons were led into the waters of baptism, Nathaniel and Ruth Barker, Irene and Arthur Bagley, Arlene Evens, Ruth Carter, Roselee Hunt, Edith Swanson, Margaret Kinne, and Ruth Silver. Pastor Alma Andrews assisted Brother Martin with the baptisms.

In June Brother Andrews baptized Jewel Ward and Jack and Marion Carter, being assisted in the confirmation by Brother Baldwin. July 19 George Quiggle and Joe Sage were baptized and confirmed by the pastor. This makes a total of fifteen baptisms in four months. Spokane Branch is proud of this record.

While in Spokane, Bishop Carmichael gave several good talks along financial lines, and the Saints should now be awake to the situation of the church and world as they have never been before.

In June, Beulah Garrison was married to Walter Story, both faithful workers in the church.

The heartfelt sympathy of the Saints goes to the Riley family, who recently lost their baby, Gerald Alva, three months old. Elder George Leach, who had blessed the baby, preached its funeral sermon.

"Uncle John" Buchanan, father of Sister Mary Anderson, passed away July 3 at the age of eighty-two years. We miss him.

Brother Albert Shippy died July 10 as the result of injuries sustained while working with logs.

The services held by Brother Gillen July 1 to 4 were instructive and well received. The Saints love Brother Gillen.

The national holiday was spent at a near-by lake where about one hundred Saints and friends enjoyed the boating, swimming, fishing, games, and picnic lunch included in the program. Brothers Gillen, Carmichael, and A. C. Martin and family were visitors.

A special sacrifice service was arranged for June 28, at which time many gathered to make their offering.

Sacrament Sunday, July 5, was a happy and beneficial day. The tiny daughter of Sister Audrey Archer was blessed by Brother Gillen at this meeting. Then Brother Carmichael gave a talk in which he said that we had just witnessed two of the most beautiful ordinances of the church, the blessing of a babe and the serving of the Lord's Supper.

We are glad to welcome back to this branch Brother and Sister Lloyd Whiting, who have spent the last year in Canada; and we regret to lose Brother and Sister Dave V. Coleman, who have moved to Tacoma. The branch has sustained another real loss. The organist, Sister Grace Nichols, and family have moved to Everett, Washington. Everett Branch will now benefit by Sister Nichols's musical talent.

All departments of the church school are functioning under able leadership. The adult division, under W. W. Wood, has given splendid programs for special occasions. The Mother's Day program was impressive. Bouquets of white carnations and ferns were presented the eldest and youngest mothers present. Grandma Ells, age eighty-three years, Julia Gunter, eighteen, and Eva Coleman received the bouquets. Every mother present received tulips. Father's Day, too, was given proper recognition by songs, readings, and the presentation of ribbons to every father.

Friday evening is reserved for social functions, and the young people have had some happy evenings with wiener roasts, hayrack rides, swimming parties, lawn gatherings, and fish fries.

The young women and girls have an active volley ball team which plays twice a week. Sister Ona Andrews is captain.

The choir, under the leadership of Muriel Whiting, is planning a vesper service to be given the evening of July 26. This will be the first of a series of entertainments, the proceeds of which will be used for new Hymnals.

At present the thermometer hovers between ninety-eight and one hundred and six degrees, but on the whole the Saints have reason to rejoice. There is little sickness, and few of the members are unemployed. All are striving to do the will of the Lord.

Kansas City Stake

Central Church

Sunday evening concluded the serial picture "The Conflict," and next Sunday begins the series of short subjects, the first being "The Rich Young Ruler." Pastor Wight will continue his talks in connection with the pictures during the month of August.

The choir is on vacation until September 1. Brother George Anway will be with this congregation, helping with vocal solos and providing other special numbers.

Elder George Mesley is in Canada for a few weeks while his immigration status is being put on a firmer foundation. He is having his student's vise changed to a ministerial vise. This will allow him to remain in the United States without the necessity of attending school.

The O. B. K.'s of the stake are sponsoring a lawn social at Central Church this Friday evening. Games and entertainments are promised for all, and there will be refreshments. The organization is trying to be self-supporting, and some of the Saints are planning to make this occasion family night. Miss Ruth Arthur is chairman of the committee in charge.

Bishop A. B. Phillips spoke to the Central congregation last Sunday morning at the church period. His words of instruction were much appreciated.

Argentine Church

The Religious Research Class is sponsoring a band concert and ice cream social on the church lawn, Thirty-seventh and Powell Avenue, the evening of August 4. The Independence Auditorium Band has offered its services. The proceeds of this undertaking are to be turned over to the Bishop for the missionary allowance fund.

H. W. Goold was the evening speaker lately, his theme being "Workers Together With God."

Visitors to California a few days ago met Sister Roy E. Newkirk in her home in Santa Barbara. She desires to be remembered to her many friends in this part of the country. For several years Sister Newkirk was in charge of the girls of Kansas City Stake.

Second Church

Brother Cyrus Edward Robertson is serious ill. His condition shows gradual physical weakening during the past month. Mrs. Edna Miller, his daughter, of Mount Vernon, Washington, reached his bedside last week. Brother Robertson is a brother-in-law of Bishop J. A. and Elder H. A. Koehler.

London, Ontario

The London district institute was conducted at London Branch, June 27 and 28. Saturday afternoon was devoted to recreation, a variety of games being thoroughly enjoyed. In the evening a good musical program was given, Elder William I. Fligg acting as chairman.

Sunday's activities were begun by a splendid prayer meeting in charge of Bishop Dent.

At eleven o'clock the church school program was announced, the main feature being an able lecture, "The Church School," by Brother William Andrews, of Essex. An inspiring sermon was given by Elder Percy Farrow, of Sarnia, in the afternoon, and in the evening Elder William Fligg gave one of his characteristic discourses, which was much appreciated by the large crowd present.

Elder James Winegarden is the district president, and is assisted by Elder J. E. MacGregor. By the centering of the efforts of district officers, the work in the district has improved this year.

The branch picnic this year was held at the old picnic grounds, Springbank, on the first of the month. In spite of excessive heat, it was very successful. The usual program of races was carried out by the classes and proved exciting. Tug-of-war and baseball were also in the list of sports and greatly enjoyed by everyone. Sister Vashbinder, supported by the Women's Department, had charge of the tables, and a large crowd did justice to the sandwiches, pies, etc. "Uncle John" Vashbinder was chairman of the general committee.

An impressive baptism took place the other Sunday morning, one of the church school pupils being the candidate. Elder Frank Gray officiated. Two children were also blessed, Brothers J. E. MacGregor and Frank Gray in charge.

Sister Maggie Simpson had the misfortune to fall and break her arm. Administration of the elders helped her to begin a quick recovery.

A reunion picnic was greatly enjoyed by Brother and Sister Thomas Timbrell and family last week. With immediate friends an enjoyable day was spent on the lawn in the shade of the trees. The lunch and evening refreshments added enjoyment to the occasion.

Oshoto, Wyoming

This little branch is moving along fine with good sermons and spiritual prayer meetings. Speakers for the last month have been Brothers Hartshorn, Cousins, and Cole. Each left with the hearers many good thoughts.

The children presented a pleasing program on Children's Day. Two children were blessed by Brother Fred Cousins, William Vaughn McElroy, son of Brother and Sister Vaughn McElroy, and Grace Louise, daughter of Brother and Sister Horace Hartshorn.

The Father's Day program was given by the fathers, their first attempt. Both speeches and music were fine. Two numbers require special mention, the solo by Brother George Redding, and the wedding march by Brother Horace Hartshorn. Brother Sherman Hartshorn, sr., was in charge.

The Fourth of July was celebrated with a picnic characterized by a good crowd and fine dinner. The Sunday school furnished ice cream and orangeade, a free treat to the crowd. There was a short program followed by a ball game and horseshoe pitching for the men. The weather was pleasant, cool and cloudy in the morning.

Brother Cousins and family and Thelma Dillon spent the fourth at Belle Fourche and Sunday with the Saints at Spearfish, South Dakota.

Sister Gladys McKim is attending summer school at Spearfish.

Brother and Sister T. J. Watkins, of Independence, Missouri, visited with Sister Watkins's nephew and family, Brother and Sister John Stubbart, July 12, and attended church. They were on their way to Yellowstone National Park.

This region is passing through a devastating drouth. There has been no rain for weeks, and the winds have been so hot that the small grain is burned up, also alfalfa, corn, and gardens. People are shipping out their stock, and water is very scarce, many having to dig wells. These conditions affect the Saints as well as others, but they are trying to be cheerful and trust the Lord to provide.

The sacrament meeting for July was a fine service. All the young people and most of the older ones took part.

The reunion of this region will be held at Spearfish August 2 to 9, and a good crowd is hoped for. Attendance will mean a sacrifice for every Saint who goes from this branch.

Sister Fred Cousins had a birthday the last of June. The Saints took their dinners June 28 and surprised the Cousins family. A happy get-together was experienced by a large crowd of friends.

Ava, Missouri

July 20.—District President W. E. Haden and his daughter Juanita arrived here Saturday, July 11. On the following day he began a series of meetings which ended July 19. On the closing day three people were baptized. They were confirmed by Elders Haden, James Dobson, and F. V. Elliott.

A good crowd was present each night of the series, and there are others besides those who entered the kingdom on Sunday that are deeply interested.

Several have also been added to Ava Branch this year by transfer. Saints who during the last few months have purchased homes in this vicinity are Brother and Sister D. A. Fuller, of Dallas, Texas; Brother and Sister Samuel Simmons, of Shidler, Oklahoma; and Brother and Sister F. V. Elliott, of Red Oak, Iowa. These new members are of great assistance to the branch.

July 4 the Sunday school had its annual picnic at the church grounds. Elders C. B. Freeman and Grant Burgin, of Ava, gave splendid talks on independence, and all enjoyed the day.

God's work in this place is steadily progressing.

Pueblo, Colorado

There are only thirty-seven members of the church in the group living at Pueblo, but they are active and wish the church to know about their work.

There have been nine baptisms since January 1. Not having a church building of their own, the Saints conduct Sunday services at the homes of Brothers Day and Morgan; prayer meetings are held from house to house.

Brother R. E. Vincent was in Pueblo May 20 and gave a good talk on the coming Sacrifice Week. Then District President Glaude A. Smith was here the first week in June. Brother Smith is very busy looking after all the territory under his care.

Most of the group motored to San Isabl National Forest June 14. There an early morning prayer service was enjoyed, there being almost one hundred per cent participation. Following the morning classes, basket dinner was eaten; then recreational activities gave the group exercise. Evening classes again called the members to study.

On June 21 a five o'clock morning prayer meeting was held in the city park, the Spirit of the Father blessing the group of worshippers. Prayer services were also held Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings.

The group is now organized under the new plan of religious education. Brother Stewart Mapes is director of this department.

The women, with Sister Davis as teacher, are working. They are studying the outlines of the Book of Mormon. Their group is called the Zion Boosters, and they are doing all they can to help. It is their ambition to have a house of worship other than some one's home.

There are no elders in Pueblo and only one priest and teacher. A hearty invitation is extended to church members, and especially to members of the priesthood, to hunt up the Saints and help at the services.

Brother Reuben Ard, writer of this report from Pueblo, lives at 214 East Abuando Avenue, and his telephone is 3211M. He will gladly meet anyone.

"I certainly like to read the letters from the Saints," comments Brother Ard, "especially from old friends around Saint Joseph and Stewartville, Missouri. It has been thirty-two years since we left there. There are probably people there who remember my wife, Rhoda, and me as young folks. I am happy to be able to tell you that we are working for the redemption of Zion."

Santa Barbara, California

The Women's Department of Santa Barbara Branch has taken the name of "La-Da-Sa" Circle, meaning Latter Day Saint, and is doing much good work. The women give a monthly supper and entertainment for their husbands and are working on articles for the Christmas bazaar. The Temple Builders also are active. They have assisted in the programs of the branch and given flowers to the sick.

The Children's Day program was postponed two weeks owing to the death of a much-loved member, "Grandmother" Lytle. She had been a member of the church for seventy-two years; was mother, grandmother, and great-grandmother to most of the branch. She was loved by all.

The Oriole Girls recently gave a box supper to help meet the expenses of the branch. Everyone had a good time, and a small sum of money was turned into the treasury.

This branch did its part during Sacrifice Week and is now definitely going forward.

Bloomsburg, Pennsylvania

July 25.—We are glad to report that since our last letter to the Herald, the dimes given to the members by District Patriarch G. W. Robley were put to work and brought in an increase of almost seventy dollars.

Any Saints visiting Bloomsburg would be proud to see our neat and trim church building. The lawns and hedges are nicely kept by the deacon, and the building is painted. The interior of the building is newly painted and decorated, the work of the men of the branch assisted by Brother Robley.

While busy with the decorating, Brother Robley suffered injuries in an accident. He stepped from a ladder to a step, which broke and let him fall down the stairs. This caused him to suffer some weeks and held up his plans.

Two souls have been brought into the kingdom by Brother Robley. They are Brother and Sister Fritz. Others are also interested. Members and nonmembers have learned to love Brother Robley for his noble and industrious example.

The Sunday school is growing. Most of the children are nonmembers. The picnic July 1 was declared a great success.

Children's Day was observed with a fine program by the school.

A business meeting was conducted July 19, ways and means being suggested for carrying out the missionary work here. We find the cottage meeting very successful; it helps to get our message to our neighbors and friends. We are also going to try the church school plan of continuing the morning service without intermission.

The missionary spirit prevails here. All want to cooperate. The work is onward, and the new members are taking part in the meetings, helping as they can to forward the gospel.

The Saints gave willingly during Sacrifice Week. They

Our Departed Ones

CRAIG.—Mary Jane Craig was born in Clayton County, Iowa, December 5, 1860. She departed this life at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Oscar Linebarger, Joplin, Missouri, with whom she made her home, Saturday morning, July 18, 1931. She moved with her parents to Baxter Springs, Kansas, when a child. She was united in marriage to John A. Craig, at Joplin, Missouri, in September, 1880. To this union were born seven children. Mr. Craig and four of the children have preceded her to immortal realms. There remain of her children, Mrs. George O. Pearson, and Mrs. Oscar Linebarger, of Joplin, and O. E. Craig of Spring Valley, Arkansas. There are seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Mrs. Craig was the mother of Dee Preston Craig, who was killed in Siberia while in the service of his country. His body was that of the first overseas soldier to be returned to Joplin. Mrs. Craig was a charter member of the American War Mothers. She was a member of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints for over thirty-one years. She was a noble woman, loved and respected by all those who knew her best. The funeral service was held at the First Community Church in Joplin, in charge of Elder Frank McDonald, pastor of Joplin branch.

PECK.—Louesa Weston was born at Birchville, Michigan, April 19, 1852, and moved with her parents to Iowa, in 1865. She united with the Baptist Church in 1872. Married Albert Peck December 5, 1872. They moved to Kansas in 1879, from there to Illinois in 1903, to Colorado in 1906, and back to Illinois in 1913; then to Lamont in 1915. Her husband preceded her in death in June, 1922. She united with the church in June, 1929. After a lingering illness, she passed away at Lamont, June 27, 1931. Surviving are one sister, Mrs. Olive Rich, of Camas, Washington, two brothers, William and Charles, of Lamont. other relatives and friends.

presented a sum of one hundred and six dollars to the bishop's agent. Labor conditions here are bad, but all felt the need of the church, and helped.

Prayer services have been good, and on Wednesday night we had a spiritual feast, the gifts of the gospel being present in abundance.

For a time we were much concerned regarding the work here, because the Saints were moving to other points, but through the inspiration of the Twelve, Brother Robley was sent here, and his coming has been a blessing. Sixteen souls have been brought in to help us, and God will surely add such as should be saved. Members passing through Bloomsburg will receive a welcome. Brother Budd, come and visit us whenever you are able.

We are praying for the good of God's people and the redemption of Zion.

Are the Minds of Men Turning Again to God?

The following is taken from the editorial page of "The Toronto Globe" of June 3, 1931. Both the editorial and the text of the declaration drafted by the business men are of striking interest. Our readers are sure to be repaid by a careful perusal of the article.

IS IT A TOWER OF BABEL?

Does God ever bring judgments upon individuals, or nations, or even the human race as a whole? There are men who tell us he does not. They say that earthquakes, cyclones, epidemics are the result of natural causes, and that God has nothing to do with them except in so far as he establishes natural laws which may have their outworking in disaster.

The Bible tells a different story. When sin began, judgment began. This is recorded early in Genesis; we are told of the fall of the human race in its first parents, and of God's judgment upon them and upon the race. But that did not end sin or judgment. A few chapters later we find the record of the flood, with the wiping out of the entire race except for one righteous family through whom mankind was given a new start. It would take a long study to trace the judgments of God throughout the Scriptures; but there is another outstanding instance recorded early in human history. It is that of the tower of Babel.

Civilization was flourishing. We read that "the whole earth was of one language, and of one speech," and that men came together for the purpose of forming a great world-wide merger or combine. They said: "Let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth."

It was an ambitious plan for the exaltation of man. There was no recognition of God, no mention of his name, no divine worship. Evidently it was displeasing to God, for the inspired record tells us of the Lord's comment that "this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them which they have imagined to do."

God broke up the plan represented by the city and tower bearing the name Babel. Something supernatural happened, which only God could have brought to pass. He confounded the language of men. Instead of speaking one language, which all understood, they now spoke different languages, "that they may not understand one another's speech." Babel, man's ambitious plan, was a failure.

Is there any danger that men and nations today are attempting to repeat the spirit and purpose of the original Babel? What has been the chief interest of the civilized world in the past twenty years? Has it been the worship of God and the evangelization of the lost, or the exaltation of man and the worship of mammon? There can not be much argument about the question: it answers itself.

And there can be little doubt, among thoughtful Christian people, that the astounding economic condition in which most countries of the civilized world find themselves goes beyond any merely natural explanation. Many theories have been offered; the wisest minds, trained and disciplined by years of experience in the world of business, finance, commerce, economics, and government, have done their utmost to explain what is happening: but those who know most are readiest to admit that they are baffled.

A group of business men in Lethbridge, Alberta, have recently drafted an extraordinary declaration addressed to Canada and the United States. The declaration has been signed by a long list of Canadian and United States nationals doing business in that city; other copies with other signatures are in circulation. The declaration explains itself, and is worthy of careful reading. It is as follows:

We, the undersigned, managers and senior members of business and professional enterprises in the City of Lethbridge, Alberta, hereby declare:

(a) The following undisputed facts:

1. That there now exists a world-wide and prolonged business depression for which no natural or necessary cause can be given.

2. That this depression is accompanied by an overproduction of most of the world's staple products.

3. That coincident with this overproduction is the distress of unemployment and individual want seriously affecting millions of families in all the great civilized and producing countries of the world.

4. That the world as a whole, and especially its so-called civilized nations, have at their disposal everything needed to produce the highest degree of prosperity ever conceived by the mind of man.

5. That the best intellects the world possesses confess their impotence either severally or jointly to find a solution for the problem which has thus presented itself.

(b) Our belief:

1. That the foregoing facts constitute the most astounding phenomenon in the history of the world.

2. That this phenomenon calls for an explanation which divine wrath alone can give.

3. That it is for our sins that this distress has been brought upon us.

4. That God Almighty has allowed us to erect this, our Modern Tower of Babel, to the end that he may show forth his power.

5. That we shall find no relief until we confess our sins to each other and humble ourselves before him and ask for his forgiveness and his wisdom.

6. That relief will come promptly and fully whenever we do so humble ourselves.

(c) Our confession:

1. That we business and professional men, both individually and as a class, are responsible for this distress and this punishment.

2. That we have not loved our neighbors as ourselves nor considered their distress as our distress.

(d) Our desire:

1. To have our respective governments appoint a day of prayer and fasting.

2. To have our respective national leaders lead us to humility and prayer, for grace and wisdom, to the end that we may find the divine solution of our problems and relieve distress the world over.

3. To have our brethren throughout our land join us in this declaration and its promulgation.

(e) Our promise:

To do our part heartily as unto the Lord as our respective national leaders may appoint for us to do to accomplish fully the purposes for which this Declaration has been made.

God's Messenger

By Winifred Milner

He stood behind the sacred desk
Speaking gentle words of love,
And into many a hungry breast
Came words from God above.
He did not speak of lonely hours,
Of toil and bitter tears,
Ambitions thrown among the flowers,
And struggles through the years.

He spoke of living clean and grand,
Of doing good each day,
Of scattering sunshine through the land,
Of helping children play.
He spoke of homes where peace and joy
Eternally will bind
Each parent to the girl and boy,
Securing peace of mind.

He spoke of earth, united, true,
Cities of brotherhood.
He spoke of hearts again made new,
Workers for common good.
And never once did he reveal
An unkind word or thought,
That could in any measure steal
What the Holy Spirit brought.

Is It Fair?

The pastor of one of our large city branches writes of conditions which have quite discouraged him. The crux of the difficulty seems to center in the indifference and inactivity of the priesthood of his branch.

He says in part:

"The priesthood are not active. There is no use trying to fool ourselves; either this is the work of God or it is a sham, either the calling of the priesthood is of God or it is of man. If from man, they had better tear up their credentials and forget about it. If it is of God, then there is no excuse for complete failure to function. This people is slowly dying because of the failure of the ordained men of this branch to work as God intended them to work."

Undoubtedly this brother has pointed out one of the outstanding weaknesses of our church life. His sentiments are in entire accord with those which have been recently expressed by other pastors and district presidents. Just what is wrong, and what is the remedy?

It might be well for every inactive man of the priesthood throughout the church to ask himself the following questions:

Do I sincerely believe that my call to the priesthood is of God?

Is my record as a member of the priesthood worthy the cause I purport to represent?

Are the excuses which I have offered for not functioning justifiable? Are they fair to God, to the Saints who need my ministry, and to myself?

Do I really intend to serve, or am I just content to hold my license as a mark of distinction which I do not really merit?

If I do not intend to function in my office, should I not, in all fairness, surrender my license to the proper officials, thus making my status clear.

There is a growing feeling that something is decidedly wrong in the attitude of a number of our local priesthood. Just what is it, brethren? Is not neglect one of the greatest of sins? F. M. MCD.

Support the Harvest Festival

We call special attention this week to an article which appears in this issue under the title, "What Will the Harvest Be?" written by C. C. Koehler. Brother Koehler was an enthusiast years ago when the "Harvest Festival" was in its infancy. As the years have passed, his enthusiasm has grown even more rapidly than the festival itself. It is beyond C. C.'s comprehension how any loyal Latter Day Saint can be indifferent with respect to such a worth-while cause. If losing oneself in a good cause is a certain recipe for happiness, then here is at least one happy man.

The Saints will do well to respond to this plea for support. There is yet time for each district to be represented in the festival, but let it be remembered that October 6 will soon be here. Better act at once.

Fill the storehouse out of the abundance with which the Lord has blessed you. Undoubtedly the number of poor and unfortunate who will call upon the Bishop for aid during the coming winter will be greater than ever before in the history of the church. Giving that is motivated by divine love is thrice blessed. Through it one serves God, feeds his hungry neighbor, and develops his own soul. Support the Harvest Festival. Remember the dates, October 6 to 11 inclusive. F. M. MCD.

Dignity and Beauty in Ministry

By Elbert A. Smith

V.—IN THE PULPIT

The matter of dress, language, and deportment has already been discussed to some extent. Certainly the minister in the pulpit should not score below his best on all those points. He has the pearl of great price to offer to his hearers and should give it the best setting possible.

Pulpit Mannerisms

A reasonable but not finicky attention should be given to the avoidance of objectionable pulpit mannerisms in speech or posture. It is easy to fall into habits that one may not notice at all himself. When I came to read the transcript of the first sermon that I ever had reported, I discovered that I had begun about every third sentence, "Now then." Those words stood out in the stenographic report like the proverbial sore thumb—and all my fingers seemed to be thumbs.

One of our men had the habit of overworking one certain word. I kept tab on him during one sermon, and by chance noticed Bishop Carmichael near at hand with pencil and paper making check marks. He, too, had noticed the word. It was used eighty-five times in that one sermon. But the preacher was quite unconscious of its oft repetition. A friendly critic may help one very greatly in such matters. The minister should welcome rather than resent criticisms that point out such mannerisms and errors.

Elder Orman Salisbury sat behind the writer during one sermon and kept count on the number of times that I thrust my hands into my pockets and withdrew them. The score was very large. He was good enough to turn in his score card, and it broke me of the habit—for a time at least. There are occasional relapses. I may have to ask Brother Salisbury to sit in on a sermon again presently. There are many such unconscious but objectionable pulpit habits, such as boring at one's ears, running one's hands through one's hair, etc. (The last-named habit is cured by time.) Do not pound the pulpit or Bible or stamp the feet or shout. Do not constantly pace back and forth restlessly. Power is best expressed under control. Reserve emphasis for use when needed. Do not on the other hand hold to a dead level or monotone in speech. Use gestures sparingly.

The minister should not slouch in the pulpit, either in posture or in address. He should endeavor to tell the gospel story, clearly, forcefully, boldly, impressively, and appealingly. To do this he must have consciousness of the divinity, dignity, and beauty of his message. Only so may he put real dignity and beauty into its delivery.

Style of Delivery

A discussion of style of delivery crept into our previous articles. We may repeat that the day has past when the average audience cares for the old-time bombastic oratory, and the same is true of the ultra flowery style. Tricks of speech are much below par today. The tendency is toward simplicity and directness—and properly so.

On the other hand the present tendency to limit pulpit utterances to the classroom or pedagogic style is not altogether to be approved. Such style is now quite generally in use, especially before small congregations. True, the preacher is a teacher; and the classroom manner may be admirable for many occasions; but the preacher should be something more than a teacher—the spirit of the prophet should rest upon him betimes as he declares the will of the Lord. Peter at Pentecost crying repentance was bigger than a teacher in a classroom and no doubt delivered his message with fire and force.

Jeremiah said: "His word was in my heart as a burning fire shut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and I could not stay."—Jeremiah 20:9. The minister should know the Lord's word and will as it is in the Scriptures, and he should be close enough to the Lord to know his will as it is today touching the people to whom the sermon is addressed. If he is to be a real preacher and not merely a class leader, he should put into his message some of the fire, the force, the passion that Isaiah felt when the message was like a fire in his bones.

An Affirmative Message

Our men should present an affirmative message from the pulpit. There are enough men in the world today preaching doubts and uncertainties and idle speculations; we do not need to add to their number. Christ said, "I will build my church." He also said, "For this cause came I into the world, to bear witness of the truth."

We should build. We are not sent out to tear others down. We should affirm. True, at times one must deny and negate. But the great body of a man's ministry should be affirmative. It can not be otherwise if he is awake to the importance of his own message. I picked up a monthly periodical some time ago. It had twenty pages, twelve of which were devoted to attacks upon the Reorganized Church. Eight others were only in part affirmative. I said, "The editor of that paper is not even fifty per cent converted to his own message." Another periodical of monthly appearance was even worse; its twelve pages were entirely negative, with the exception of occasional passages. If the publishers really believed their own message, it would demand of them affirmative expression very largely to the exclusion of negative matter.

So with us: if we are alive and alert to the importance of our own gospel, we will not devote too much time to attacks upon Brighamites, Methodists, Catholics, what not. "I will build," is a good motto. The minister must be thoroughly converted to the truth and eternal significance of his own message or he had best remain silent. No half-hearted affirmation—half belief and half doubt—uttered with reservations, will justify a man in his ministry for this church.

A Positive Message

One of our most brilliant men of years gone by said, "When I write my creed I desire a large piece of soft paper, a soft lead pencil, and a big eraser, so that I can write what I believe today and tomorrow rub it out and write it all over again." The sequel was that he erased himself from the ministry and the church. Contrast that with Job's declaration: "Oh, that my words were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever." Job believed his message to be eternally true.

The gospel must be preached with conviction and power. A man's heart must be in his message; and the message in his heart. "To me," said Longfellow, "a sermon is no sermon in which I can not hear the heart beat." People must feel the sincerity and consecration of the preacher if his ministry is to have power and dignity.

A good brother went to hear one of our elders

The Balance Sheet

Herewith is presented the audited balance sheet of the church. Before attention is drawn to it, a summary of the assets and liabilities of the general church and subsidiary institutions should be helpful to form a picture of our condition as a whole. This picture may discourage some because of the total debt shown. We must remember, however, that the policy adopted February 12, last, will operate to pay this debt, and the amount must be known to clarify our task. Audited statements are not yet available for any institution except the general church, but as audits are made the complete balance sheets will be printed. The unaudited figures, therefore, may be subject to later adjustments, which will be apparent as the figures given are compared with final audited balance sheets. It is regrettable that the details below do not all bear identical dates. Plans are being made to produce balance sheets in the future as of the same date as far as possible.

The general church audited balance sheet has been separated to show assets and liabilities of houses of worship, scattered throughout this and other countries, in the name of the Presiding Bishop or other agent as trustee, apart from the assets and liabilities of a general character. Our reason for doing this is that houses of worship, although assets of the church as a whole, are not available to the Presiding Bishopric in the operation of the church, as are the balance of the assets, because of the nature of their use.

As of December 31, 1930, the Presiding Bishopric was contingently liable as endorser on a note of $30,000 borrowed by the Sanitarium in connection with its building program. On January 26, 1931, the Presiding Bishopric borrowed $45,000 additional for the Sanitarium, and took over the previous $30,000, in turn taking a mortgage note from the Sanitarium for $75,000 for the amount thus advanced. This mortgage and other collateral is pledged at the bank against the loan.

The accounts and notes receivable and investments have been carefully inspected and revalued, with the result that the book value has been reduced in the amount of $240,000. With respect to the receivables written down, many of which are very old, there may be collections in the future, and, of course, efforts to insure that will be made. The investments, ultimately, may be found to have value, but realization therefrom seems so indefinite that the above action is advisable. As realization is made, the amount involved will be placed on the books. Our action was submitted to and approved by a group of Bishops residing in and about the "center place," and also by the Standing High Council. This is stated because we do not wish the action to be considered arbitrary. All available facts were carefully weighed. That our credit standing will not be harmed thereby has already been proved by the renewal of the $75,000 Sanitarium loan for six months, by which time a more permanent arrangement may be made.

There is a large volume of assets consisting of farm lands and city property which could not be re-

(1) The general church balance sheet shows the new worth of the three Development Associations, although this tabulation lists the debts separately for the sake of convenience. These debts are being paid according to terms by the Associations. The debt shown is as of December 31, 1929, for the Holden Association; December 31, 1930, Central Development Association and December 31, 1930, for Lamoni Development Association. Interinstitutional charges could not be eliminated; if they were, the total debt would be slightly less.

(2) Because of not having available assets and liabilities for the Development Associations and Standard Publishing House, it will be noted that the difference between assets and liabilities is less than the net worth shown.

AUDITOR'S CERTIFICATE

July 27, 1931—Having made periodical and continuous audits of the books of account kept by the Presiding Bishopric from July 1, 1926, to December 31, 1930, I hereby certify that the balance sheet presented herewith is in accordance with the books and in my opinion represents the true financial position of the church at December 31, 1930, subject to comments and probable slight modifications to be presented upon completion of audit of real estate holdings.

Church Auditor.

The Search for God

By A. B. Phillips

One of the mysterious things about life is the fact that though millions of people have experienced it in various ways and degrees throughout the ages, and we have its many manifestations all around us today, no one is able to completely understand it. The most careful analysis of the chemist fails to find it, though evidence of its pervading influence overwhelms him on every hand. He knows it is present, though he can neither see it nor hear it. It has never been explained, because it is greater than those who try to understand it and explain it.

As no one possesses it in fullness, we may understand life only to the degree that we possess and enjoy its manifestations. Our possession is very limited in degree, in duration, and in the variety and scope of its expressions. It is, therefore, a hopeless task to give an explanation of life that would be comprehensive and equally understandable to all. Our efforts to do so would closely resemble the definitions of the elephant given by the six blind men of Hindustan. One grasped the tail, and declared the elephant was like a rope. Another took hold of a leg, and exclaimed: "The elephant is like a tree." A third felt of its side and became convinced that the elephant was like a wall. Thus they all argued stubbornly, fiercely, and persistently without result.

Why We Can Not Explain God

He who endeavors to explain God to the comprehension of all men is limited by the same restricted capacity and experience. And every definition of God must be founded either upon our own experience or our interpretation of the recorded experiences of others. It is for this reason that we draw upon the Scriptures when we seek to give an explanation of God. Even with the richness of experiences revealed to us in the sacred book, it is necessary for us to interpret them to a great extent by our own experience and observation. God has revealed himself in many ways to mankind, but all of them together do not reveal him to us completely.

We have no reason to suppose that it is possible for us in this life to obtain more than a very limited knowledge of God. We know very little concerning the many wonderful things in our physical universe, though what we do know of them is so marvelous that we are constantly trying to learn more. So also our limited knowledge of God inspires us to search for richer experiences of contact with him, by which he may be revealed to us beyond anything we have ever known.

Before we can expect God to reveal himself to us completely, we must develop complete appreciation for the divine attributes which he possesses. The nature of God is best comprehended in the things that have given us our ideals, for our ideals are but more or less imperfect reflections of the divine character. They are doubtless to some extent distorted by the willfulness of our own preferences, yet they call us to higher and holier ground. A distorted mirror can not reflect a perfect image, neither can our imperfect minds comprehend the perfection of the supreme Creator, but as we grow in the divine likeness our understanding of his supreme excellence will become more enlarged and clear.

The Attributes of God

We occupy such an insignificant part of this great universe, with its unnumbered stars and its limitless space, that we can readily conceive of God as a Being infinitely more powerful than all the combined forces of nature as we see them manifested. This supreme power is an attribute of God which might cause us to be in terror of him. But he also possesses the attributes of justice, mercy, wisdom, and love, and he therefore does not employ his marvelous power injuriously toward any of his creatures. It is true that we experience many things which we would avoid, and we do not always understand why we must suffer them. But it is also true that God has designed our experiences in life for eternal rather than temporary ends.

Let me explain this by a simple form of illustration. When we were very little children we could not easily understand why our parents would not permit us to eat all we wanted of candy, green apples, and anything else our hearts desired. When we ate too much of such things we became sick, and in time we learned to control our appetites and desires. These experiences taught us valuable lessons to be applied as we became older, and they helped us to discipline ourselves and become stronger in character than we would have been without them. So these temporary experiences in this life help to fit us for the associations to be enjoyed in the life to come, if we are willing to profit by them.

Many of the attributes which God possesses in fullness and perfection have been made known to us sufficiently to induce us to appreciate and acquire similar traits. But it seems entirely possible that he possesses other qualities of which we have no knowledge, for our experience is limited to a physical world and such spiritual and natural forces as may be manifested in a physical world. What God has revealed of conditions in the heavenly or spiritual world is interpreted by us in the light of mental processes growing out of what we have learned, which is not sufficient to make all things clear to us.

The Eternity of God

One of the things which we can not clearly understand is the eternity of God, though it is not difficult for us to recognize the fact itself. Some of the things which have been taught concerning him, however, are entirely without warrant in the Scriptures, and are contrary to common sense. Years ago a religious primer was published which declared, "Once God was all alone in heaven," and so he decided to make the angels. Such notions as this are not found in the Bible, which clearly tells us that Christ was with God from the beginning. John tells us:

All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made that was made.—John 1: 3.

The book of Genesis agrees with this statement, for it shows that God counseled with another before the creation which is there recorded. Paul is quite explicit concerning the part which Christ had in the creation, informing us that:

By him were all things created that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible.—Colossians 1: 16.

The Scriptures inform us that before the physical creation all things had existed in the spiritual world. It was a vast concourse of spiritual beings that witnessed the work of creation, for God declared to Job that on that wonderful occasion:

The morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy.—Job 38: 7.

In one of the statements to which I have referred, John clearly implies that there are some things that were never made. This accords with the conclusions of science that the essential substances of the universe are eternal, and their changing forms and materials are but endless expressions of God's creative work. The marvels of his wisdom and power have had no beginning, as they shall have no end. He measures his accomplishments by an eternity of ages, and not by threescore years and ten. Things that seem immeasurable and endless to our poor vision are in his sight but incidental moments in the infinite circle of time.

The Invisible Made Visible

Our concept of the divine Being has grown out of his manifestations to mankind. These not only include the works of nature through the usual operation of her laws, but also those extraordinary events in which he has revealed himself by more direct or personal means. Just as there are laws which regulate our physical world, so we may understand that there are laws in the spiritual world; and when these two worlds of law are brought into reciprocal operation, it becomes possible to behold or understand the spiritual things which are thus manifested to us.

It is very largely by such processes that God has revealed himself to the human race, or to such as have been receptive and responsive to his will. By these means we have been able to understand something of his nature and the qualities and powers which he possesses. In this way we have learned that we possess traits of character and the capacity for traits of character which are our imperfect and partial expressions of qualities which God possesses in fullness and perfection. With this knowledge we can recognize the meaning of the glorious truth declared repeatedly in the Scriptures, that man was made in the image and likeness of God.

In harmony with this thought we can also begin to realize why the creative powers of God have been in some degree transmitted to us who are in his image and likeness. Ever since that creative morning so long ago, we have sought to follow the divine example by producing in great variety every conceivable thing to beautify the world and make it a delightful place in which to live. The invisible God is being revealed in a thousand ways through man who was made in his image, but these revelations are imperfect and incomplete, because men choose to do things which cause them to be perverted. Therefore, we have only one perfect and dependable revelation of God in his fullness, the revelation of Jesus Christ, concerning whom Paul testifies:

For in him dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily.—Colossians 2: 9.

God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory.—1 Timothy 3: 16.

The Presence of God

When we consider the significance of the fact that Christ was the manifestation of God in the flesh, and the further fact that man is declared to have been created in his image, the conclusion is irresistible that Jesus intended us to think of God as a Personage of Spirit in much the same way that we think of a man as a personage in the flesh. This agrees with the prayer in which he taught us to say: "Our Father who art in heaven." It also vitalizes and makes sublime our relationship with him to know that Paul uttered a most wonderful truth when he proclaimed:

For we are also his offspring. Forasmuch then as we are the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone.—Acts 17: 28, 29.

Those who have held that there is no God except what we find of him in the substances of the physical world, and as expressed in nature, should remember that man is the highest expression of nature known to us. No other living thing possesses the wonderful reason, intelligence, and powers of accomplishment with which man is endowed. Man is God's highest expression, and therefore most like himself. Nothing else of all his creations was made in his own image and likeness.

In the sense that by his Holy Spirit he is present in all his works, he is too marvelous for us to understand him completely. But when we learn that he appeared to Moses, Abraham, Christ, and others as a distinct personage who could be seen, and that he has repeatedly manifested himself and his love for man, our faith goes out to him with an abiding assurance that becomes an anchor to the soul. He is not only the supreme ruler and lawgiver of a mysterious universe, but he is the universal and personal God who manifests his nature to us.

Many learned attempts have been made to define and explain the Supreme Being in order to bring him within our comprehension. Others have attempted to describe how entirely incomprehensible he is and must be. Both of these attempts signally fail, for he is neither entirely understandable nor is he wholly beyond our understanding. We do not know in what manner he moves from place to place, yet Moses tells us that God came and stood before him and talked with him face to face. Paul informs us that Jesus was in the form of God and in the express image of his person (Philippians 2: 6; Hebrews 1: 3), and the Revelator declares that on the new earth, when his people become immortal, God shall dwell with men and be with them, and they shall see him as he is, and shall be like him.

When we attain the glory of the celestial place, through the redemption of Christ, we shall understand the marvels of the eternal world. We shall have power to comprehend celestial things, and the perplexing problems of this life shall disappear as dew before the morning sun. In that day the Lord has promised that the mystery of God shall be finished.

What Will the Harvest Be?

By C. C. Koehler

We are rapidly approaching the time of harvest and the season of Thanksgiving, when the storehouse of the Lord must needs be filled with the good things of the earth, that there may be food in the hands of the Bishop to supply the needs of the poor and unfortunate till another year rolls round. There promises to be many such needy ones this year.

The Master said, "Inasmuch as ye do it unto the least of these, my disciples, ye do it unto me." "Enter into the joys of my kingdom."

Latter-day revelation reiterates the injunction of old: "Thou shalt keep the feast of the harvest and of the first fruits of thy yield." "Thou shalt bring them into my storehouse."

Blessed are they whose feet stand upon the land of Zion, who have obeyed my gospel, for they shall receive for their reward the good things of the earth; and it shall bring forth in its strength; and they shall also be crowned with blessings from above; yea, and with commandments not a few, and with revelations in their time; they that are faithful and diligent before me.—Doctrine and Covenants 59: 1.

Continuing in this section we find:

Inasmuch as ye do this, the fullness of the earth is yours: the beasts of the fields, the fowls of the air, . . . the herb, and the good things which cometh of the earth, . . . in the season thereof are made for the benefit and the use of man, both to please the eye and to gladden the heart; yea, for food and for raiment, for taste and for smell, to strengthen the body and to enliven the soul. And it pleaseth God that he hath given all these things unto man; for unto this end were they made, . . . and in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled save those who confess not his hand in all these things and obey not his commandments.

Again there comes to us that appeal of old: "Give us this day our daily bread." Who is there under present conditions who has been blessed with the good things of life, the things that God has so bountifully supplied and caused to increase, that when the widow and orphan cry for the bare necessities of life, will say within his heart: "I have not been blessed of God, nor am I my brother's keeper. I will not give of my substance that he may be filled"? We repeat, "Inasmuch as ye do it unto the least of these, ye do it unto me." If ye do it not, remember: it pleased God that he has given all these things unto man, and against none is his wrath so kindled and against none is he so displeased, as against those who confess not his hand in these things, and impart not of their portion (in tithes, offerings, sacrifice) according to the law.

To the Saints not living in Zion, we as local organizations pledge ourselves to assume the responsibility of making the 1931 Harvest Festival the biggest and best yet, but we feel more confident when the regions round about and the distant points send in their offerings to the festival. When we see the

The Nose and Its Relation to Health and Disease.—3

By A. W. Teel, M. D., Church Physician

It is impossible to achieve any great success in singing or public speaking if there is any obstruction in either side of the nasal chambers, for where obstruction exists there is a disagreeable twang to the voice. Even if only slightly obstructed it is easily perceptible to the trained ear.
